Facility given to Industrial Foundation

Staff Writer

Big Spring Industrial Team members learned yesterday that a 32,000 square feet business facility recently was donated to the Industrial Foundation and were treated to a tour of Fiberflex Products Inc.

Saunders Company, a plumbing fixture and supply dealer, has donated its four building-32,000 square foot facility to the Big Spring Industrial Foundation, said Clyde McMahon Sr., president of the Industrial Foundation Board.

Ralph McLaughlin, the company's president, told industrial team members that the buildings and grounds — located on the 100 block of Lancaster — were donated in the "hope of bringing business to Big Spring." Saunders is constructing new facilities on Interstate 20 east of town after having worked from the Lancaster location for 36 years.

The donated site — worth $125,000 to $130,000, McLaughlin said — consists of about 32,000 square feet of grounds with access to the railroad, "a scarce item" in Big Spring, McMahon said.

Also, industrial team members were taken on a tour of the Fiberflex plant after they signed an affidavit promising not to reveal industrial secrets or manufacturing processes.

Fiberflex — a manufacturer of sucker rods — recently initiated suits on at least two companies, seeking an injunction against the companies for patent infringement, a company representative said. Fiberflex has "won the first round" in closed hearings in a Denver, Colo. court, company vice-president Russ Rutledge said. Rutledge declined to give any other information, saying publicity could harm court proceedings.

The team members were told that the four-year-old corporation's sales had skyrocketed from $700,000 two years ago to $8 million last year and that it "took away five percent of the domestic sucker rod market."

"We're hoping to have 60 to 70 percent of the market in three to four years," the tour guide said. The company is capable of increasing construction from 300 rods per day to 1,500 or 1,800 per day, he said.

Bentsen visits Big Spring

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

U.S. Sen Lloyd Bentsen landed in Big Spring yesterday afternoon at the Big Spring Air Park and was immediately greeted by the Runnels Jr. High band and about 50 supporters waving signs emblazoned with Bentsen's name.

"The races looks good," Bentsen said to the crowd. "The polls show I'm out in front, but those polls don't elect you so I'm working right on through election day."

During his brief stay Bentsen spoke out against grain embargoes saying the U.S. should stand by its long-term grain contracts. Bentsen said the farmer should not be the one bearing the burden of U.S. foreign policy. "The farmer is the one penalized in an embargo," he said.

Bentsen touched on social security, interest rates and natural gas deregulation as he responded to questions from those gathered.

The 61-year-old Bentsen is facing stiff competiton from U.S. Congressman Jim Collins. Bentsen has several choice words for his opponent.

"Collins hasn't passed one bit of legislation in his 14 years in office. He says it's because the Democrats control the House. I would like to remind him the Republicans control the Senate and I'm still passing legislation," Bentsen said.

Bentsen said a good turnout was essential for a victory. He estimated a 45 percent turnout on Nov. 2.

"I'll need help from people like you putting out yard signs and contacting people.

Make safety a priority on Halloween

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Police Department doesn't discourage parents from letting their children trick or treat, however, school liason police officer Ron Wood said if parents and children follow a few rules, Halloween can be both fun and safe.

"Normal rules don't apply at Halloween," Wood said. "Any other time people would be suspicious of cars driving near the curb with their lights off, or of kids being dragged, screaming, into a car. But at Halloween it all seems normal"

"I'm going (trick or treating) with my own kids ... There are a few dangers possible, but I wouldn't keep kids home because of it," Wood said.

Wood suggests that parents let their children read the six trick or treat rules and then discuss the rest of the precautions as a family.

- Don't eat anything until your parents check all the goodies.
- Watch out for parent's cars driving near the curb with headlights off.
- Don't talk to strangers.
- Don't go in anyone's house for anything, even for candy or to have pictures taken.
- Stay away from jack o' lanterns. Costumes can easily catch fire.
- Only go to houses with porch lights on.

Before children take even one bite, parents should check every piece of candy or other items gathered from door to door. Any fruit or homemade items should automatically be thrown away. Wrappers should be checked for needle or syringe punctures and candy unwrapped and sliced into chunks to check for inserted needles or razor blades. If anything looks unusual, even a badly wrinkled wrapper, that item should be thrown away.

Don't follow your children down the block in your car. Park at the end of the block and watch from there. You can keep a closer eye on them and not be bothered by watching for other traffic.

Drivers should keep a close watch on trick or treaters. Children will be preoccupied, examining their treats and talking and will not pay close attention to traffic.

Parents should have their children carry some kind of light source, such as flashlights. Children often find it fun to carry fluorescent lights.

Those who want trick or treaters to visit their homes should turn on a porch light.

It's a good idea to take children only to the homes of people they know or stay in your own neighborhood.

Try to trick or treat before dark.

Organize a party of seven or eight children and trick or treat together. The more eyes to watch, the better.

Light jack o' lanterns with a flashlight rather than candles. Children costumes can easily catch fire. Place jack o' lantens out of the way of trick or treaters.

As a public service, Shaffer Ambulance will have three ambulances staffed with emergency medical technicians throughout the city on Saturday night. The ambulances will act as first aid stations and technicians will check candy for children if so requested.

Shaw, Cockerham sport endorsements

Both candidates for the 69th District seat in the Texas House of Representatives has announced they have been endorsed by U.S. congressmen.

State Representative Larry Don Shaw has received the endorsement of Congressman Richard White of El Paso, according to a press release from the Shaw camp.

In a letter, White said Shaw "is one of the more emerging young leaders in Texas; he will be a good influence on Texas politics for many years."

White said Shaw "enjoys an excellent reputation among West Texas officials." Shaw's growing list of endorsers includes Congressman Charles Stenholm and Congressman Kent Hance.

At a Wenesday reception in Crane, Congressman Tom Loeffler lent his endorsement to Jerry Cockerham in the District 69 race for the House of Representatives.

"Cockerham is a conservative having been rated as one of ten most consistent conservatives in his firt session as well as one who is well respected by his colleagues in the legislature."

"I think Jerry is right for West Texas because of his conservative philosophy and effective record as a State Representative. Let's keep a conservative West Texan in Austin working for West Texas."

Federal prison announces employee of the quarter

Don Cobbs, cook foreman, has been selected as Employee of the Quarter at the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp.

According to officials at the camp, the award is presented to an employee who has demonstrated above average or outstanding performances or who has provided a special service or contribution to a special program.

Cobbs was selected for Employee of the Quarter ending September 1982. He is employed in the Food Service Department of the camp.

During the quarter, he was acting Food Service Administrator for approximately one month. During his tenure in that capacity, he carried out the operation of the department in an exemplary manner. This is supported from the positive feedback from staff, administration and inmates and the review of operations by the Food Service Administrator upon his return.

Long distance rate split approved

AUSTIN (AP) — A new method of splitting long-distance revenues among Texas telephone companies could cost ratepayers up to $98 million, a Public Utility Commission spokeswoman said today.

The increase could result from a PUC decision Tuesday in favor of a request filed by non-Bell telephone companies which divide long-distance revenues with Bell, said the commission's Ronna Martin.

The independent companies want a bigger portion of the toll revenues.

In testimony before the commission last December, Bell witnesses said the new formula could mean $48 million to $98 million in added rates.

However, Dale Johnson, Bell spokesman today said the actual increase — if any — could not be calculated until the commission sets the rate on which the division of revenues would be based. A hearing examiner will listen to testimony on that as part of the current Bell rate case. The company is looking for $471.5 million in increased rates.

"It's possible that what we are asking for will take care of what we need" to cover Bell's increased payments to the other companies, said Johnson.

Government passes halfway point in Judge Wood assassination trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The government passed the midway point in its case against three people charged in U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.'s assassination as workmen began equipping the courtroom to play secret tape recordings of the defendants.

FBI agents have brought to court 10 "composite" tapes containing the crux of jailhouse conversations of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra which prosecutors deem most important to their case.

Joseph Chagra, Jimmy's brother and an El Paso attorney who was recorded in the tapes, could also testify as early as today, said attorney Warren Burnett.

Prosecutor John Emerson said he was not sure whether the tapes would be played today before the weekend recess.

The composite tapes were boiled down from hundreds of hours of conversations contained in 914 reels of tapes brought to court in 11 cardboard boxes.

Police Beat

Suspects arrested for shoplifting

Two female juveniles and a 61-year-old woman were arrested yesterday at Furr's Super Market, 900 11th Place, police said. The two girls, one 15-years-old and the other 13-years-old, were arrested after a store employee said he saw two white female juveniles take two Bic lighters and make-up from the store without paying.

One of the girls, from out-of-town, was released to her mother and the other referred to juvenile probation officer Margie Thompson, police detective Pat Dunham said.

The other suspect, Hope Gonzalez Rios of 1111 N. Goliad, was arrested about 8:20 a.m. after an employee said he saw her put two paperbook books into her purse and walk out of the store. Ms. Rios was released after paying a $60 fine.

Police offense reports also showed the following:

- A 15-year-old boy was arrested last night at the Ritz Theater parking lot on suspicion of auto burglary. The boy was still in police custody this morning, Dunham said.
- Joe Torres, 28, of 1600 E. 16th was arrested last night on suspicion of driving while intoxicated at 7-Eleven, 11th and Johnson. He was released after posting a $1,000 bond set by Peace Justice Bobby West.
- Morris Littlejohn of 1510-A Wood said someone stole two plastic containers filled with $90 in dimes and nickels from his residence between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. yesterday.
- Mike Hecker, a 17-year-old student, said someone stole a pocketknife and two cassette tapes and broke a pair of wire rimmed prescription glasses that were in his car parked in the Big Spring High School parking lot between 8:20 a.m. and 12:45 p.m. yesterday. The car keys were left inside it and the car had been moved from its original parking space.
- Fred Bishop of 2407 S. Scurry was treated and released from Malone-Hogan Hospital after his vehicle rolled over him on the 200 block of E. 24th. Bishop had released the parking brake and was pushing the vehicle out of the street about 10:45 a.m. yesterday.
- Vehicles driven by Inez M. Petty of 1014 Bluebonnet and Colleen D. Ament of Gail Route Box 2 collided at 10th and Owens about 8:20 yesterday. Police cited Petty for a defective turn signal.

Pill reportedly put in brownies

FRANKLIN, N.H. (AP) — Officials, distributors and store owners cleared Peggy Lawton Fudge Brownies from shelves in four states today after a woman discovered a pill embedded in a brownie she was eating.

The maker of the brownie, saying he is a victim of hysteria, ordered all of one batch distributed to stores in Massachusetts and New Hampshire bought back.

Police said Doreen Valley, 26, of Franklin, found the 50-milligram pill of Demerol, a synthetic painkiller, Thursday evening, hours after she had eaten half the brownie. She was given a medicine to make her vomit and was released from a hospital.

"We have no idea whether this is an isolated incident," said George Prescott, chief of police in Tilton, where the Peggy Lawton Fudge Brownie was purchased. "We have no way of knowing whether in fact it was done at the manufacturing stage ... or whether someone at a store may have gained entry to that one package."

Police found fragments of a white substance in a Peggy Lawton Fudge Brownie taken from a store in Concord early today. A doctor at Concord Hospital agreed the fragments looked out of place, and removed them for analysis.

In Connecticut, Deputy Consumer Protection Commissioner Joseph M. McDonough ordered a statewide "voluntary recall" of Peggy Lawton Fudge Brownies. He said it appeared doubtful that any of the brownies in Connecticut had been tampered with, but, "I just couldn't afford to sit and wait."

One distributor said he would remove the brownies in two towns in Maine, and in the Massachusetts town of Greenfield, just south of the New Hampshire border, police officers responding to news of the discovery began taking the brownies from store shelves and vending machines today.

New Hampshire State Police at first asked local police to have store owners remove from their shelves all Peggy Lawton Fudge Brownies with expiration dates between Oct. 28 and Nov. 9. A state police message transmitted around New England said the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had suggested removing the brownies from store shelves.

But the FDA later said it had neither suggested nor ordered a recall, and police sent a follow-up message "telling them what happened in Franklin and they can make their own decision based on that," said Maj. Richard Campbell, state police executive officer.

Fred Carlson, regional FDA director in Boston, said, "All indications are that this is a case of tampering, not a manufacturing problem," he said.

In East Walpole, Mass., Lawton Wolf, who with his wife, Peggy, owns Peggy Lawton Kitchens Inc. of East Walpole, Mass., said all brownies dated Nov. 9 — the date on the tampered package — would be bought back from distributors who were ordered to collect them from stores and vending machines in New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

Deaths

Dee Bennett

Dee Bennett, 72, died at 12:30 a.m. Thursday at his home in Childress following an illness of several months.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in Schoolner-Gorden Funeral Home in Childress.

He was born Oct. 10, 1910 in Bay City, and married Annette Smith, a native of Big Spring, in Vernon in 1931. They ranched in Vernon until they moved to Big Spring in 1950 to ranch and assist with the operation of Smith's Tearoom at 1300 Scurry Street. In 1963, they added the Downtown Tearoom at the corner of Sixth and Main streets. They were members of the Fourteenth and Main Church of Christ and he was a member of the Evening Lions Club. He acquired ranching interests in South Dakota, and sold the Tearoom in 1973 to devote fulltime to ranching. At the time he became ill, he was still active in ranching at Stinnett.

He is survived by his wife; two sisters, Joy Lyday and Lorena Duncan of Dallas; one son, David of Susanville, Calif.; four daughters, Dorothy Rothwell of Childress, Nancy Bunn of Newport Beach, Calif., Marilyn Dolan of Fremont, Calif. and Martha DeVore of Tulia; 17 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

Annie Baeza

Services for Annie Lou Baeza, 67, of Coahoma who died Wednesday morning in a local hospital were held today at Trinity Memorial Chapel of Memories.

Burial followed in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Baeza was survived by her husband, Ben; one daughter, Lena Mae Ellison of Abilene; one son, Bennie Baeza of Olathe, Kan.; one stepson, Albert Baeza of Fayetteville, N.C.; 11 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers were Price Morris, Bill Spears, Bill Darden, Tommy Wyrick, Mike Baeza and Bennie Baeza.

W.T. Boadle

W.T. (Bill) Boadle, 81, died Wednesday evening in a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 3 p.m. Saturday in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with Monsignor Andrew Marthalar, the V.A. Chaplain, officiating. Burial will be in Mount Olive Memorial Park.

Pallbearers will be Ross Boykin, Jim Bill Little, John Roemer, Mark Lightfoot, Luther Coleman and J.W. Hughes. All retired carpenters are considered honorary pallbearers. The family asks that any memorials be made to the Westside Community Center at 1311 W. Fourth or in care of Mrs. Clyde Thomas, 400 Washington.

Banker strapped to bomb; family hostage

BEAUMONT (AP) — The FBI has joined the hunt for two gunmen who strapped a fake bomb to a bank president after abducting him and tying up his family in a $50,000 extortion attempt, police said.

The banker escaped after the gunmen botched the kidnapping attempt Thursday, police said. The bomb turned out to be a back vibrator, wrapped with duct tape so that it appeared to be an explosive.

Police have few leads on the stocking-masked gunmen, who forced their way into Lamar State Bank President Lonnie Weir's home in an affluent westside neighborhood about 7:45 a.m, Police Lt. Bruce Thomason said.

One of the men was waiting beside the door when Weir's 13-year-old daughter Margaret opened it to leave for school. He stepped inside and was joined by the other man, both armed with pistols, Thomason said.

"They were very polite at all times, but they told Weir they would kill his wife and daughter if he didn't cooperate," Thomason said.

The men buckled the battery-operated vibrator around Weir — telling him the device would explode if he tried to remove it — after binding him, his wife, Vita, and the family's maid, who was not identified.

The men told Weir that would hold his family hostage when he went to the bank and picked up $50,000 in ransom money.

Weir grabbed $169,500 in cash from the bank and left to find a ransom note the gunmen said they had placed at a neaby intersection.

"That's how much he grabbed in the bank," Thomason said of the cash. "He just grabbed wads of money until he was sure he had enough. He grabbed handfuls of bills, and he only missed his calculations by about $119,000."

Weir was told he had only 4½ minutes to get in and out of the bank, apparently so that he would think he was being watched, Thomason said.

"When he walked in, he said, 'I have a bomb on me; stay away from me, I don't have time to explain,'" Thomason said.

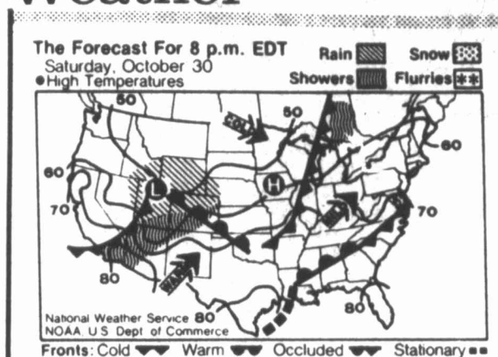

Although authorities called the extortion attempt "very well-planned," Weir did not find a Frito bag the gunmen said would contain a note telling him what to do with the money. He drove home to find that his family had freed themselves and that the gunmen had left in his second car.

"They messed up with the bag. We found it after it was all over," said Thomason.

Weir called police from the bank chairman's home about 8:45 a.m.

Fort Polk munitions experts blew up the fake bomb after examining it, police said.

Showers hit Southeast Texas

By The Associated Press

Showers and thunderstorms covered wide sections of East and Southeast Texas today as a cold front continued its march across the state.

Cloudy to partly cloudy skies were the rule statewide, except for fair skies in the Panhandle and West Texas.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from the 30s in the Panhandle to the 70s in South Texas ahead of the front.

Winds ahead of the front were southerly at less than 10 mph and northerly at 5 to 10 mph behind the front over North and East Texas. Light and variable winds were noted across the rest of Texas.

The forecast called for showers and thunderstorms to continue over East and South Texas. Fair to partly cloudy skies were expected across other sections of the state.

A BAND of showers and thundershowers stretched from Texas to Illinois and rain dampened the Pacific Northwest early today, with snow in mountain areas.

Rain also fell in much of the upper Mississippi Valley.

Cloudy skies spread from the central Pacific Coast to Montana and Wyoming, and over the northern Appalachians. A few showers lingered over southern Florida.

Skies were fair over over the rest of the United States.

Scattered rain showers were forecast for later today from the central Gulf Coast through the lower Ohio Valley to the Great Lakes. A few thundershowers were expected over the central Gulf Coast states.

Rain also was predicted from the northern and central Pacific Coast across the northern Rockies and into the northern Plains. Sunny skies were forecast from the southern Rockies to the central Plains and along the East Coast.

Temperatures around the nation early today ranged from 27 degrees in Laramie, Wyo., to 77 degrees in Key West, Fla.

FORECAST

West Texas — Fair and a little warmer through Saturday. Highs 65 to 78. Lows 35 to 52. Highs Saturday 72 to 85.

EXTENDED FORECAST

West Texas — Mostly fair. Cooler sunday. A little warmer Monday and Tuesday. Highs near 60 Panhandle to mid 70s Big Bend valleys Sunday warming to the upper 60s Panhandle to the low 80s Big Bend valleys Tuesday. Lows mid 30s Panhandle to the upper 40s Big Bend valleys Sunday warming to near 40 Panhandle to the low 50s Big Bend valleys Tuesday.

Party makes comeback after Franco

Spanish Socialists celebrate election victory

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Chanting "Viva Espana!" tens of thousands of joyous Socialists celebrated a momentous election victory that returned their party to power for the first time since fascist dictator Francisco Franco drove them into the political wilderness 43 years ago.

The shouts of "Long Live Spain" rang out across Madrid's 17th century Plaza Mayor Thursday night to mark the Socialists' capture of majority control in Parliament, which put the premiership in the hands of their 40-year-old champion, Felipe Gonzalez.

"Democracy and the Spanish people were the winners," Gonzalez, a Seville-born labor lawyer, told cheering supporters at a rally at the Plaza Hotel across town.

Extending an olive branch to his political foes and a military still wary of democracy, Gonzalez said no Spaniard should feel "left out of the beautiful task of modernizing Spain."

In announcing the final result, election officials said 79.5 percent of 26.6 million registered voters went to the polls Thursday. That total eclipsed the exuberant 68 percent turnout in the 1977 elections, Spain's first democratic balloting after the death of Franco.

Campaigning on a moderate platform that turned away from Marxism and shunned industrial or commercial nationalization, Gonzalez' Socialist Workers Party won 46 percent of the vote, earning 198 of the 350 seats in the lower house of the Cortes.

The party's nearest rival was the right-wing Popular Alliance, led by Manuel Fraga, 59, a hardline Cabinet minister in the Franco government. The rightists took 104 seats and 25 percent of the vote, underscoring a left-right polarization.

Popular Alliance, part of a tiny bloc that held nine seats in the last Cortes, emerged as the principal opposition party. Fraga vowed it would provide a "loyal but effective" counterfoil to the Socialists.

The results were disastrous for centrist parties.

The ruling Union of the Democratic Center led by outgoing Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo — who called the elections five months early as his coalition began to fracture — gained only 7.2 percent of the vote, according to the official tally.

Calvo Sotelo was swept away in the Socialist tide and the centrist union was reduced to 13 seats from 168 in the 1979 election, the second post-Franco ballot.

The other main centrist faction, the Democratic and Social Center, led by Spain's first popularly elected premier, Adolfo Suarez, won only two seats.

Election results also were a sharp disappointment to the Communists, whose share of the vote fell from 1979's 10.8 percent and 23 seats to 3.8 percent and five seats.

An assortment of regional parties divided the remaining 28 seats.

Thursday's vote followed a tense, three-week campaign which began inauspiciously with the government's announcement that a group of right-wing army men had been caught plotting to seize power on election eve.

A series of explosions in the independence-minded Basque country added to campaign tensions. Two more blasts on election day injured two policemen.

Social Security haunts Reagan in campaign

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — President Reagan, trying to counter a Democratic attack that he says represents "sheer demagoguery," is ending the midterm congressional campaign back on the volatile Social Security issue that dogged him throughout the 1980 presidential race.

The president was trying to protect Republicans from the potential political damage of a GOP fund-raising letter that mentioned the possibility of a voluntary Social Security system.

Campaigning for Republican Senate candidates on a Western swing Thursday, the president jumped into the politically sensitive Social Security fray twice.

He is winding up his campaign tour today, with appearances in Salt Lake City for Sen. Orrin Hatch, and in Roswell, N.M., for Sen. Harrison Schmitt. Both Republicans are in close contests for second terms.

In remarks prepared for a Utah Republican rally, Reagan returned to his focus on the economy and said, "We're not out of the wood yets, but I think we can see daylight beyond the trees. We've got to find jobs for our people, balance the budget, protect the tax cut and whittle away at the national debt."

The distribution of the Republican letter and the Democrats' readiness to focus on it led the president on Thursday to deviate from the economic theme that he has trumpeted at campaign appearances in 13 states since Labor Day.

"I can predict that our opponents are going to broadcast widely one of the most dishonest canards that has ever been fostered in a political campaign," the president said at a rally in a high school gymnasium in Great Falls, Mont., before flying Las Vegas for the final stop of a 12-hour day.

"They're going to tell you that we, and I really include myself because I am kind of a target of that, that, in some way, we're on our way to changing or reducing or doing away with Social Security," Reagan said.

"Now, that is sheer demagoguery and it is an outright falsehood."

He said the fiscal problems of the Social Security system must and will be solved, but "not at the expense of taking anything away from the people who are presently dependant on Social Security."

White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said it was decided to tackle the subject because, "You can't just let it sit there in the last four days" of the campaign.

Ever since suggesting nearly 20 years ago that Social Security be voluntary, Reagan has had political problems with the issue. It came up repeatedly when he sought the Republican nomination in 1976, and then when he ran for the presidency in 1980.

He nearly abandoned all talk about the subject more than a year ago when an outcry greeted administration talk of cutbacks. Dropping out of the debate, he named a bipartisan commission to study Social Security and to report shortly after next Tuesday's election.

Aware that the issue was bubbling again, Reagan inserted fresh comments on Social Security into a five-minute television speech that was taped Tuesday for broadcast this weekend as part of a $500,000 GOP advertising blitz, White House aides said.

News stories about the fund-raising letter, signed by Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, brought the issue to the fore on Thursday.

'Blood and Money' author dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thomas Thompson, who wrote the best-selling 1977 book "Blood and Money" about the death of a Texas socialite, has died at at the age of 49, according to a nursing supervisor at St. Vincent's Hospital.

Thompson died Thursday of undisclosed causes, said nursing supervisor Mary Carroll.

Suzanne DeVito, a spokeswoman for Doubleday and Sons in New York, declined to comment on the cause of death but said he had been ill for some time. Robert Lantz, his agent, was with him when he died, Ms. DeVito said.

The tall, lanky Texan, a former entertainment editor of Life magazine and city editor of the old Houston Press, recently published a new book, "Celebrity," that was on best-seller lists for several months, and last year wrote the screenplay for the TV movie, "Callie and Son," the story of a woman who gives up her illegitimate son.

Thompson was born in Ft. Worth in 1933 and graduated from the University of Texas in Austin with a degree in journalism.

From there he went to work for the Houston Press and at 23 was named city editor. He was the youngest city editor in a metropolitan U.S. daily at the time, said Ms. DeVito. Later, he went to work for Life and held a variety of jobs, including Paris bureau chief, before concentrating on novels and screenplays.

"I worked with him very closely on a lot of books," said Heather Kilpatrick, an attorney for Doubleday. "He was one of the most outstanding researchers. He was a pleasure to work with.... He knew what was required for his publications to be legal and he had it."

"Blood and Money," billed by Doubleday as a true story about the mysterious death of a Houston socialite and a father's efforts to have her physician-husband prosecuted, never was made into a movie, although Paramount studios holds the rights.

Court remedy

Dear Editor,

I have read with interest your editorial headed "Justices feel overworked" in your paper of Oct. 4, 1982.

If the appeals docket contained more than 5,000 cases, it is impossible for nine justices constituting a Bench and each writing a separate opinion, to hear and finish them. Much of the time can be saved if one justice writes the majority judgment of the Court and the dissenting Justices another judgment.

What is the remedy? Enlarge the Court by appointing three or four more justices. It must be remembered that the number of member justices was set by statute according to the conditions prevailing at the time the constitution was drafted. I agree with you that the "society is growing more complex and so are challenges to the society's laws." In my opinion, the Executive, the Legislature and the Judiciary will be courageous enough to enlarge the Court, by amending the statute.

A layman thinks that the annual vacation is too long and if a part of it is cut down, more work could be done, little knowing that judicial work is very enervating and shortens life. The American judicial system has imbibed a lot from the British judicial system, where one finds that the Judicial Committee of the House of Lords (the highest court of appeal), the Privy Council and the High Court of London are closed for long periods of annual vacation.

Republicans more principled

Dear Editor,

Does your party really represent you? Do you even know what the party platforms say? Face it, the days of conservative Democrats like Charles Stenholm are numbered. This election the Democratic party has come up with a whole slate of Ted Kennedy/Ralph Nader-type liberals, and right here in conservative Texas! Naturally, they all claim to be conservative, at least until they can get elected.

But ask yourself these questions. Do you favor big unions that compel membership? (The Democratic state platform does while the Republicans continue to support right-to-work laws). Do you favor legalized homosexuality? Do you support murder of innocent unborn babies? The Democrlatic party does.

The Democratic platform avoided many issues that the Republican platform was courageous enough to confront. Republicans support voluntary prayer in schools, more stringent legislation relating to the display of pornographic materials, and restricting potential abuses of the insanity defense. They opposed forced school busing and gun control legislation.

What have we heard the Democrats talking about? Not moral issues by pay raises for teachers, more subsidies for farmers and in short, more money for everybody! Now if that's not buying votes what is?

Voters should understand that economic blessing comes from God as we obey the biblical precepts of morality He has given us. We cannot insure national economic prosperity by selfishly voting out of a false hope for personal gain. We must vote for men who are not afraid to take a stand on the moral issues facing our country and then, and only then will God prosper us economically.

Like the God-fearing men who founded this great Republic I am voting for principle. I'm voting for themen of character, and it sure seems like they're all Republicans.

Sincerely,
PASTOR DAN WENNERLIND

Candidates views are most important

Dear Editor:

I was born here in Texas, so naturally, my first voting was as a Democrat. But, as the years passed and I saw the moral decline in our Nation, I realized that the philosophy of the person running for office was more important than the Party.

In the last two years, at least, we have seen the Republican Party, both State and National, take a stand FOR moral values while the Democratic Party seems to be moving away from the moral stand which has made our Nation the greatest Nation of our time.

For this reason, I am thankful for those who let us know the voting record of our elected officials. Others have sent out Questionnaires to incumbents and those seeking election, to ask their views on moral issues.

Sincerely,
LOUISE PAULGER

ACLU opposes Religious Right

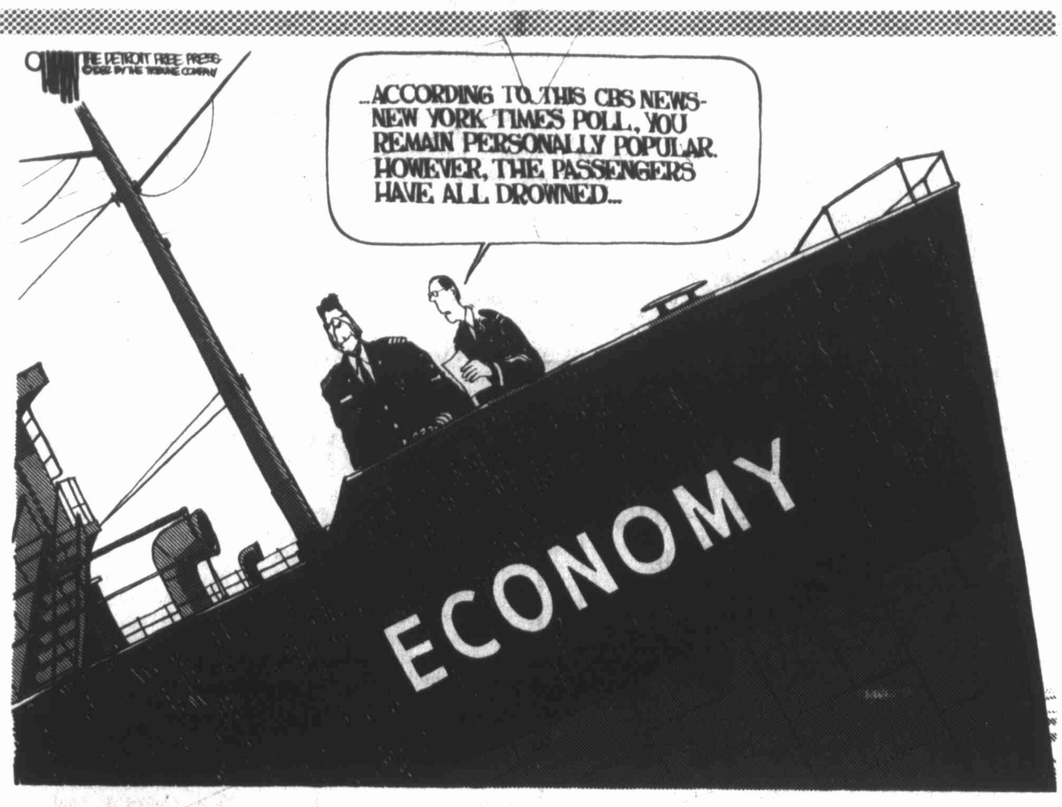

Dear Editor,

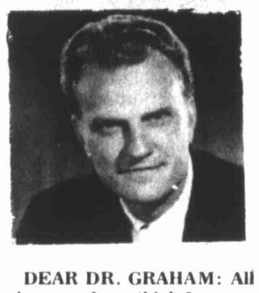

The American Civil Liberties Union sent out a flier to raise money for the causes they are against. Here are a few on their list of the New Right and Religious Right goals to which the ACLU is so bitterly opposed.

"The New Right wants to bring back prayer and Bible reading in public schools. The New Right wants to teach biblical story of creation in public schools. The New Right wants no pornographic and a moral sex instruction in public schools. The New Right wants to oppose homosexuality because it is anti-family. The New Right wants to give less power to the federal government and more to state and local governments. The New Right wsants to stop indulgent judges from coddling hardened criminals. The New Right wants to allow police to investigate and arrest lawbreakers with a minimum of red tape ad bureaucratic meddlinig. If you want to oppose all these New Right goals, you can send your money to the ACLU."

The man who holds the most powerful state elected position in Texas apparently did just that. Two years ago Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby raised $60,000.00 for the ACLU in his home. The Dallas Times Herald quotes Strake as saying, "Hobby appointed the darling of the ACLU to be chairman of the committee that deals with drugs, pornography and crimed." Hobby said, "State govenment is not a place for brass-knuckled extremism." Then why, oh why, has Hobby alined himself with the extreme left? Lieutenant Governor Hobby needs to be retired from public office and sent home to Houston.

Sincerely,
WILLIAM WADE SMITH
Colorado City

Laughing on the outside

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: All the people around me think I am a very happy person, but down inside I am miserable. I am so lonely I don't know what to do. Even God seems so far away. Why is that? — L.E.

DEAR L.E.: I want you to think of your loneliness the same way you would think of a physical pain. God has made us so that when we feel pain in some part of our bodies, we know something is wrong that needs to be healed. And in the same wsay, we may have what might be called emotional pain, which often tells us that something is not as it should be and needs to be corrected.

But what is God trying to show you through this experience of loneliness? For one thing, I believe he is trying to show you your need of him. Frankly, I am thankful that you are already sensing your need of God — this is far better than if you simply did not care. There is, however, a very important point I want you to see: You may feel that God is far away, but in fact he is very near you and he wants to enter into a personal relationship with you. God loves you, and he wants you to experience his love and accept his love.

How can you come to know God? First, realize that he loves you so much that he sent his only Son into the world to bridge the gap between us and God. Sin has separated us from God, but Christ died on the cross to take away the barrier of sin. Now God offers you eternal life — a life which begins right now — a life of personal commitment to Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. I invite you to step out in faith and accept Jesus Christ into your heart. Then grow in your relationship with him through prayer and through his Word, the Bible.

Also, reach out to those around you. Your mask of happiness may well be a barrier between you and other people, and you need to be honest in your relationships. Also, as you come to Christ you will find yourself as part of the family of God's children. Get in a church where Christ is preached, and ask God to help you find fellowship with other believers. God wants to help you and use you in other lives as you begin to love others for Christ's sake.

Death of a holiday

R.I.P. Halloween, died Oct. 31, 1982.

Halloween, once a good-natured holiday, has taken on a sinister air this year — an air which could be the death of a holiday.

With recent news headlines reading like a manual on how to poison your neighbor, it is doubtful that Halloween 1982 will resemble years past in any way.

Apparently the years when bands of decorated young urchins roamed the streets at will, collecting candy from friendly neighbors are over, perhaps forever.

And that's sad.

But even sadder than the end of Halloween is what the holiday had become.

In recent years, the collecting of treats had become a neo-terrorist activity — a form of ransom whereby homeowners hoped to avoid pranks that often became vicious, expensive acts.

And, instead of cute, costumed children asking friends for gifts, youths who were too old for trick-or-treating vented pent-up destructiveness on unsuspecting persons and unprotected property, believing that the auspices of Halloween would protect them from criminal prosecution. Most of the time it didn't.

Unsupervised children, wandering through city streets on their own in poorly fitting and cheaply made costumes, occasionaly met with tragedy when they accidently stepped in front of cars.

Treats for the children have been spiked with razor blades, needles and drugs. One man, who had been scheduled to die this Halloween, even went so far as to apparently poison his own son in an effort to collect insurance money.

With the recent Tylenol murders being mimicked with devastating imagination from coast to coast, who can blame parents if no child is allowed to trick-or-treat unsupervised or at all?

Hospitals in the Houston area have volunteered to x-ray candy in an effort to locate metallic objects before harm is done, but caution the x-rays won't reveal poisons or drugs. And visual inspections for foreign substances may not reveal potentially harmful contents, either.

Trick-or-treating would certainly seem to be on the "out" list for this year. Even if a parent carefully monitored every piece of candy, checking for indications of tampering, who could be sure that nothing would slip by unnoticed? And who would want to take that risk?

Halloween block parties would seem to be the best alternative to the traditional trick-or-treating. A group of neighbors could produce a supervised party which would retain some of the fun of Halloween, but still ease parents' minds somewhat in these frightening times.

In the face of the risks that seem so apparent today, it will be hard to justify Halloween's existence.

Vote for money

I was sitting on an airplane when the man in the next seat took out his briefcase and started arranging $100 bills in neat piles.

He was talking to himself. "This goes to Nacos, this goes to Arcose, this goes to Kernite, this goes to Kerinci, and this goes to Longspeak." Then he threw the packets in a canvas bag, and started the process all over again.

He noticed I was watching him and he said, "Did you notice if I made a pile for Jitters?"

"I don't think you did."

"Jitters really doesn't deserve any," he said. "But we're going to give him one more chance. If he forgets who his friends are the next time around, he gets zilch."

"Is it too indiscreet to ask what kind of business you're in?"

"I'm with the Tofu Growers Political Action Committee, and I have to get this money out to the congressional candidates before Election Day. TOP-PAC supports people who favor a strong American bean curd policy, and we also try to defeat candidates whose voting record on tofu is a national disgrace."

"Isn't it late in the day to be contributing to politicians' campaigns?"

"It's just the right time. Most candidates are all tapped out, and they're desperate in the last week for anything they can get. If we gave them TOF-PAC money early in the fall they wouldn't be half as indebted to us as they are now."

"You're not doing anything illegal?"

"Of course not. Political Action Committees are the heart and soul of the American democratic system. It's the best way of letting candidates know where the special interest groups stand on the issues. PAC money accounts for half the contributions spent in a political campaign. If it wasn't for our generosity politicians couldn't afford to run for office."

"But aren't you buying a congressman's vote when you give him PAC money?"

"We're only buying his vote when it comes to tofu. We don't care how he votes on Medicare or health insurance. That's the American Medical Associaton's PAC problem. We don't even keep track of which side he comes down on with interest rates. That's the builders' PAC worry, or the bankers' PAC job."

"But," I said, "if a candidate accepts money from every PAC organization, he won't have any votes left for his constituents."

"We just don't give money to a candidate to WIN an election. Many PAC groups work to defeat an incumbent who is against their special interest. We may go into a district where a congressman has voted against every tofu price support bill ever proposed. Well, that person doesn't deserve to be in office. So we'll use our PAC funds to smear him from here to Cucamunga."

"That sounds like dirty pool."

"Every Political Action Committee is doing it now. You see, we have our choice of ether giving $5,000 directly to the candidate or spending an unlimited amount to defeat the other guy."

He took out a large stack of bills and started counting them. "This m oney is going to destroy Senator Adolph Hasse, who tried to keep bean curds out of the school lunch program. He's number one on the TOF-PAC hit list."

I said, "I guess from what you say, the Political Action Committees are calling the election shots this year."

"Why shouldn't we? It's our money."

Jobless rate feeds fear

WASHINGTON — The story behind the unemployment statistics — which are expected to get worse in the year ahead — is a gut story that will affect the quality of life in America.

I sent reporters to the outer edges of unemployment to talk to the people who have lost hope of finding work. The despairing talk of suicide; the desperate have turned to crime.

God-fearing, middle-class family men, believing their first duty is to provide for their families, are willing to steal to put food on the table, to meet car payments, to maintain their lifestyle. Others have been sucked into the underground drug trade.

My reporters spoke to pushers who said they are peddling drugs because there are no other jobs. One churchgoing Richmond, Va., man has already participated in a shootout with rival drug dealers.

What happens to a community with chronic high unemployment? I sent my associate Bob Sherman to two cities that appear to be polar opposites: Gary, Ind., is a typically depressed Northern industrial city. Dallas, Texas, is a Sun Belt boomtown. Yet both have spawned smoldering slums where the social order is breaking down.

Gary is an aging company town. Its economic life depends on U.S. Steel. But rising prices and foreign competition have forced massive layoffs at the corporation's Gary Works.

During the day, Gary is listless and depopulated. At night, it is occupied only by the police and those on the far side of the law. Crime in Gary has reached epidemic proportions.

Trapped in an industrial society that is changing from labor-intensive to high-technology, Gary's once-solid citizens aren't yet able to understand how they wound up on the scrap heap after years of productive, reliable prosperity.

Mayor Gordon Hatcher spends 70 percent of the city's annual budget on public safety. Yet crime continues to rise, and visitors avoid the place.

My reporter stayed four days in the only hotel in downtown Gary; he was the lone guest in this 13-story mausoleum. Surrounding stores were shuttered, abandoned by their owners. He also noticed that motorists no longer heeded the most fundamental rule for an orderly society; they didn't bother to stop for traffic signals.

Life is not much different in South Dallas, just a few blocks from the skyscrapers where cowboy-booted businessmen wheel and deal. The community is a mixture of aging one-story private homes, public housing projects and rundown rental properties.

Crime is rampant; it's part of the daily scene. Drug dealers conduct their business openly on the streets.

Bill Stoner, a tough black activist in South Dallas, issued a grisly warning that was echoed by less militant leaders. Blacks in South Dallas may not have much, Stoner warned, but they intend to hang onto what they do have.

He put the situation in ominous terms: "There are a lot of angry black Vietnam veterans out there ready to take to the streets ... They're gonna start taking some of those skills they learned in Vietnam and start applying them in the streets."

But the violence won't be confined to the inner city. Black activists and social workers alike say to the upper classes that "violence is coming to your side of town."

Footnote: I have received thousands of letters from people who have been hurt by the economy. It is more mail than my staff can possible handle, but I have submitted some letters to the White House and other proper authorities. Those who want to write to me under these circumstances should send their letters to Jack Anderson, P.O. Box 2300, Washington, D.C. 20013.

A LOST CAUSE WINS: Fidel Castro's recent decision to free Armando Valladares surprised no one more than the prisoner himself. After 21 years in brutal confinement, the sick and crippled Cuban poet had resigned himself to death in prison.

"I don't think I will leave the prison alive," he wrote in a message smuggled out to me last February. "I know there are plans to kill me .... Now they are waiting for my health to worsen so it would seem an accident."

Valladares broke with Castro soon after the revolution, when te Cuban dictator's subservience to Moscow became obvious. In the message he smuggled out last winter — written, with poetic irony, on margins torn from the official Castro newspaper, Granma — Valladares sounded a note of hope for all those oppressed by the Soviets: "The communists forget that a diamond, the strongest of all precious stones, is made from a humble piece of coal under great pressure. And so is my body, when facing their attacks, made of diamonds."

BEST BUREAUCRATS: Threatha Bennings, a 50-year-old mother of three, is an employee of Veterans Administration medical center in New York City, but her warm heart led her far afield last winter.

Bennings was doing her job when she notified the 78-year-old mother of a veteran that he had died in the VA hospital, and when she helped make the funeral arrangements. But she went above and beyond the call of duty a short time later when a cold snap hit the Northeast. Bennings remembered the grieving mother, Jewel Ealey, living in poverty in Philadelphia.

So she paid her own way to Philadelphia, where she found the old woman ailing and without heat. Bennings called city hall and arranged for emergency heat. "I know I'm exceeding my job," she said. "But she's old, and I have elderly parents in North Carolina. I know I would want somebody to help them. I was raised that way."

O'Neill resurrected

Rumpled House Speaker a hero again with Democrats

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., once an easy target for mocking Republican television ads and backbiting House colleagues, is back in fashion on the Democratic fund-raising circuit.

"President Reagan took him on, coming on like Mr. Smoothie against this rumpled politician. But now Tip's been vindicated. He's almost a hero," said Martin Franks, executive director of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

In the final weeks of the midterm election campaign, the burly, white-maned party veteran from Cambridge, Mass., has been traveling the nation speaking forcefully on behalf of Democratic candidates and lambasting President Reagan's record on unemployment and a stagnant economy.

Leaders of both parties are predicting a potential Republican loss of 15 or more House seats in balloting next Tuesday.

O'NEILL HAS made eight major campaign swings outside his New England base, including forays into California, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

"I've been in as many places as I could possibly be," the speaker said in an interview.

"I've been getting a tremendous response. The reception is so different than it was a year ago. 'You're doing a great job,' people tell me."

Not long ago, some members of his own party dismissed O'Neill as ineffective and politically over the hill, as he lost one budget battle after another to Reagan. Today, the speaker seems to have reclaimed his status as the Democratic Party's chief spokesman.

He is making more radio and television appearances, and his enlarged press staff is cranking out almost daily O'Neill attacks on Reaganomics. One was a poster that carried this message: "Voodoo Economics: Stay the Curse."

"He's certainly our biggest draw at fund-raisers," said Franks. "Last year must have been very difficult for him with all the criticism. But the old man obviously knew exactly what he was doing."

O'Neill seemed powerless to prevent Reagan from getting his tax- and budget-cutting bills through the Democratic House in 1981.

SOME MEMBERS grumbled privately that O'Neill, an old-line, backroom politician, was out of touch with the new political realities. Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., pronounced O'Neill "on the ropes."

Republicans gleefully poked fun at the speaker in television ads featuring an overweight, white-haired actor in baggy pants.

Then things started changing. Joblessness became a major economic issue and budget-cutting suddenly began losing popularity, even among many Republicans.

O'Neill began winning battles: an override of the president's veto of a stopgap spending bill Reagan had deemed too costly, rejection of the president's proposal for a constitutional balanced-the-budget amendment, House approval of a bill providing 200,000 jobs repairing highways and bridges.

What turned it around for O'Neill?

"I think that's because people are realizing that I was coming up with the truth: that Reaganomics wouldn't work," the speaker responds.

"I'm very comfortable. I'm drawing good crowds everywhere I go. And I'm doubling the amount of money that's coming in when I speak."

Says Chris Matthews, an O'Neill aide: "He's speaking about the same things as before — jobs, bread and butter concerns.

Justice offers glimpse of Court's workings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice John Paul Stevens says that in the old days every case reaching the Supreme Court was discussed by the justices. Now, he says, an appeal must be on a special list to be talked about at all.

Stevens offered some rare official glimpses of the non-public side of the nation's highest court while again urging a reduction in the court's growing workload.

"In 1925, every case was discussed," Stevens said. "In 1947, every case was discussed unless it was on the dead list. Today, no case is discussed unless it is placed on a special list."

The Supreme Court justice made his remarks in a lecture at New York University Law School on Wednesday. A copy of his talk was made available here on Thursday.

Stevens said the special list of cases to be discussed at the court's closed-door conferences is circulated by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, and that other justices may add cases to it.

More than 5,000 appeals make it to the Supreme Court each year, but the justices fully decide only about 150 cases annually.

Since last August, five of the justices have engaged in an extraordinary public debate over the workload of the nation's highest court. Stevens, for example, already has suggested publicly that Congress should create a new court with power to tell the nine justices what cases they should — and should not — decide.

"I think it is clear that the court now takes far too many cases," Stevens said.

He said the court's own, longstanding rule requiring the justices to give full consideration to every case four of the nine justices vote to review is a key factor in increasing the workload.

Stevens named 36 cases from the high court term that began in October 1979, as well as another 26 cases from the term that began in October 1946. Each gathered only four votes for full review.

In a "surprisingly large" number of those 62 cases the Supreme Court would have done just as well to let the lower court's decision remain intact, Stevens said.

Stevens said he would prefer the "temporary, or even possibly even permanent, abandonment" of the four-justice rule for full review over other proposals for cutting down the court's workload.

He added that for more than the last 50 years "any mismanagement of the court's docket has been in the direction of taking too many, rather than too few, cases."

'All-Savers' interest drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The interest rate on "all-savers" certificates will drop to a record-low 6.66 percent Sunday, nearly half what the rate was when the tax-exempt notes were first sold in October 1981.

The new rate was established Thursday when the government held its monthly auction of one-year Treasury bills. The yield on the one-year notes was 9.51 percent, down from the 10.68 percent of Sept. 30. Interest on "all-savers" is set at 70 percent of the one-year rate.

Thus, people who want to purchase all-savers certificates should buy them today or Saturday while the rate is 7.48 percent — the low point until Thursday's auction. The 6.66 percent rate will be effective through Nov. 27.

The interest rate on "all-savers" certificates was 12.61 percent for the first few days of sales after they were introduced last October. But it has never reached that level again, and sales declined sharply after the first month.

Certificate interest up to $1,000 for individuals and up to $2,000 for married couples is exempt from federal income taxes.

POSTER CONTEST WINNERS — Moss Elementary School held a poster contest to promote its school carnival, which will be held Saturday. Contest winners were (L to R) Jerry Trevino, 1st grade; Shandie Casey, 2nd grade; Michelle New, 4th grade; and Kent Minchew, 5th grade. Not pictured is Julie Winnik, 3rd grade. The carnival will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Door prizes, snack booth, sponge throws, cake walk, plant walk and a fish pond are a few of the many activities that will take place.

PTA hosts Halloween carnival

The Kentwood PTA will host a Halloween Carnival Saturday from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Carnival-type food will be available in the cafeteria, which opens at 6 p.m. Every room in the school will have a theme. Games begin at 7 p.m. Each game may be played for the price of one ticket, except for the Spook House, which will cost two tickets.

Among themes at the carnival will be Frankenstein's Laboratory, Robin Hood's archery darts, Pac-Man's toy walk, Smurf's fishing pond, ET's spaceship bean bag throw, the Snoopy and Woodstock coke toss, Strawberry Shortcake's cake walk, Mogley's Jungle plant walk, Dumbo circus, the Sesame Street post office and Road Runner's car races.

A special activity is planned for the adults and the Country Store will be open. Advance tickets are on sale at the school for 30 cents each. They will be sold at the door for 35 cents each.

Christina Lawrence, carnival chairman, said Darth Vader, Chewbaca, Captain Hook, Peter Pan, the Twinkle Dust Fairy and other surprise guests will be on hand. A costume contest for grandes one through five is scheduled, and the kindergarten group will host a costume parade.

Dr. Donohue

School scoliosis checks helpful

Dear Dr. Donohue: Can you enlighten us as to the cause of scoliosis and the cure for it? — Mrs. R.D.

..There are three words used to denote various abnormal bends in the backbone. One, lordosis, is used to describe a backbone that bends inward too much, as in swayback; kyphosis means a backbone that bends outwardly, as in hunchback; and scolosis refers to a bending to one side.

Scolosis (SKOH-lee-OH-siss) is one of the common spine problems that can be corrected or arrested if detected early enough. This is why schools conduct scoliosis-detection programs. One hip higher than the other, a roundness of shoulders, or one of them being higher than the other, a peculiar gait, all these can be important signs of scoliosis. Often, you can tell by using a yardstick and placing it horizontally against the backbone to see if it does follow a true line. If scoliosis is suspected from such an examination, it can be confirmed by a doctor.

An X-ray of the spine will show the exact degree of sideward bend and follow-up examinations will determine if it is progressing. If there is a serious bend, the treatment would vary depending on the age. At times, a brace will be needed, and at other times, only surgery will correct the deviation.

One of the many kinds of surgery, a newer one involves use of an electrical stimulator under the skin of the back — sometimes like the way an artificial pacemaker is used. It's hoped that by stimulating certain back muscles this way, they will be strengthened, thus arresting the curvature process. Again, the technique used depends much on the individual case.

I can't be very helpful in answering your question about cause. In about eight of 10 cases, no cause can be found. In some it may be traced to bone or muscle problems — polio, for instance. Sometimes, having one shortened leg can lead to scoliosis.

The screening clinics in school can be valuable, not only in detecting scoliosis but those other two major backbone deviation problems mentioned, as well.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am concerned about use of ultrasound and its effects on a fetus. I had an ultrasound test for gestation while pregnant. Now I am questioning this procedure. I have concerns now that I may have damaged my child. What can you tell me about this procedure as it relates to the unborn child? I do realize that in cases where there may be suspected problems that this procedure would be a great help, but, as you know, it now seems to be a rather routine test. — C.S.

..Ultrasound is a way to examine the uterus (and other tissues as well) with soundwaves. It is a relatively new procedure, and as such can expect to be subject to continuing evaluation. All I can tell you is that to date no harmful effects have been reported in humans. Yet, as with any new medical technique, when we are not totally certain, when there is some laboratory evidence indicating the smallest potential hazard, we must be cautious.

So I cannot let your statement to the effect that ultrasound has become a routine test stand. It hasn't. It is used only when medically required.

Dear Abby

Jokes hurt more than disease

DEAR ABBY: I am an innocent victim of herpes II — the genital kind. It's an epidemic now, so my kind of misery has a lot of company, but that doesn't make me feel any better. What really infuriates me, Abby, is the way some comedians are now making herpes jokes! Can you believe it? Every time I hear a herpes joke I want to cry. Deo people really think an incurable disease is funny? I am a 40-year-old divorced mother.

Please print this. It may help.

HURTING ENOUGH

DEAR HURTING: I'll print your letter, but I doubt if it will help. From time immemorial people have been making jokes about every conceivable human misery. For every tragedy there is a joke. There are jokes about death, rape, cancer, hunger, poverty and impotency. Without thinking, people repeat jokes about fat people, ugly people, the mentally disturbed, the blind, deaf and elderly.

..It's perverse to say the least, but there must be just a tad of perversity in all of us.

..The late Dorothy Parker wrote this witty little poem using as her theme a tragic and painful subject — suicide:

..."Razors pain you;
..."Rivers are damp;
..."Acids stain you;
..."And drugs cause cramps.
..."Guns aren't lawful;
..."Nooses give;
..."Gas smells awful;
..."You might as well live."

DEAR ABBY: On Monday, a good friend of mine called and invited me to her home for a small dinner party on Saturday. On Friday she phoned to say that the dinner was off because one of the guests was sick and couldn't make it. Then she said, "I hope you don't mind, but I don't feel like cooking a big meal just for you."

Should I feel hurt? Angry? Insulted? Resentful?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: None of the above. Feel flattered that she considered you a close enough friend to have been perfectly candid with you.

DEAR ABBY: My 19-year-old daughter is in love with a 20-year-old fellow I'll call Mel. Both are in college, and neither wants to marry until they graduate. They had a lovely relationship until Mel's mother told him that if he had any contact with my daughter (calling or seeing her) before he graduates — which is two years from now — he cannot live at home or get one dime from his family.

Mel has told my daughter that he loves her, but he can't afford to give up the comforts of a nice home or his parents' financial support until he graduates.

Please advise this confused girl, Abby.

NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: With a mother as smart as you, your daughter doesn't need any adviced from Dear Abby.

Canterbury has thrills and treats for spooks

With Halloween approaching, a safe place for children to go trick or treating is at Canterbury Retirement Center. Pat Johnston, administrative assistant at the center, invites all area kids to come to the center from 7-9 p.m. Halloween night for lots of thrills and treats.

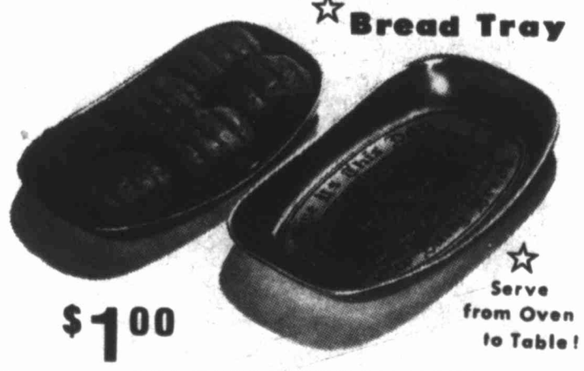

Friendly clowns will greet the spooks at the front entrance, and friendly witches will be making their brew with white clouds of steam emerging from their black pot. The witches and clowns want children to enjoy Halloween with them.

Former BSHS students inducted into Hall of Fame

A hall of fame induction ceremony Oct. 23 at Big Spring High School honored all ex-students from BSHS who participated in track, tennis, golf, swimming and literary events at the State University Interscholastic League Spring Meets in Austin.

Special recognition was also given to the eight first place winners in these meets and two sponsors, Mrs. Elizabeth Johansen and John Dibrell, who died recently after a long illness, were remembered with a moment of silence.

Janice Rossen presented special certificates to the following exes: Ester (Leach) Spencer of Yuba City, California, from the class of 1924, was honored as the ex-student coming the longest distance to attend homecoming; Elizabeth (Haller) Davidson, from the class of 1917, was recognized as the oldest ex-student to attend homecoming; and Ted Phillips of the class of 1931 was the ex-student with the most descendant who have attended BSHS — eight of Phillips descendants have attended the school.

Dying baby girl stays cheerful; father searches for liver doner

By KARREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Little Jamie Fiske grinned hesitantly as she batted her long eyelashes and focused her big dark eyes on the nurse checking the tube running into her arm.

For Jamie, a cheerful 11-month-old, the most serious thing in the world appeared to be whether her mom would give her another Cheerio.

But her entire body is yellow from jaundice, her doctor says she faces death within a month unless she gets a new liver, and Jamie is waiting at University of Minnesota Hospitals on the chance that a donor might be found for a transplant.

"Basically, we're racing against time," her father, Charles Fiske, told a doctors' group in New York on Thursday.

Making a plea for his daughter to 400 physicians attending a meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics, he asked them "as the one group of people who see trauma before anybody else, to keep your eyes and ears open for the possibility of a donor for my daughter."

Because a large liver wouldn't fit into a small body, the organ must come from a 15- to 17-pound baby, said Jamie's mother, Marilyn Fiske. "There can be nothing diseased about the baby and the blood type must match," she added, sitting at her daughter's side.

"The fact that it's somebody else's tragedy that saves Jamie, that makes it hard to appeal to the public," Mrs. Fiske said.

Jamie was admitted to the Minneapolis hospital on Sept. 15 after two operations for biliary atresia at Children's Hospital in Boston.

Neither operation corrected the disease, in which bile backs up into the liver due to malfunctioning ducts. The victim dies from an inability to digest food, a buildup of toxins in the blood or clotting failure.

The disease occurs once in 10,000 births and usually kills by the end of the first year. Jamie was born last Thanksgiving Day.

Dr. Harvey Sharp, her Minneapolis doctor, told the Fiskes that Jamie could die within a month without a transplant.

At first, the yellowing in the whites of her eyes was the only evidence of jaundice. Now the yellow has spread and her abdomen has swollen as her liver enlarged and fluid built up inside her body.

Because liver transplants are relatively rare, Mrs. Fiske said, doctors and the public often don't think about the need for livers as donor organs. There is a well-established system for finding kidney donors, but not livers.

"Something like this could only be done for someone we love as much as Jamie."

Katherine Hepburn hospitalized

NEW YORK (AP) Actress Katharine Hepburn has been hospitalized for an undisclosed ailment at Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital here, a spokeswoman says.

An official of the hospital, who refused to identify herself, confirmed today that the 72-year-old actress was at the facility but refused comment about her illness, condition or treatment.

The New York Post reported Thursday that Miss Hepburn's ailment was poor circulation in her arms and that she "has been hospitalized before with the same problem."

The paper also said she was in the hospital's Harkness Pavilion with a guard posted by the door of her private room.

She lives in a townhouse in mid-Manhattan.

Actress Eileen Brennan injured in traffic accident

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Work has been suspended on episodes of the television series "Private Benjamin" in the absence of actress Eileen Brennan, who was hospitalized in critical condition with injuries from a traffic accident.

Miss Brennan, who plays the perpetually harried Army Capt. Doreen Lewis, broke both her legs and suffered skull and facial fractures when a car hit her Wednesday night while she was jaywalking across a street temporarily darkened by a street light blackout, officials said.

The actress was listed in critical but stable condition today at Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital in Marina del Rey.

"She does not appear to have internal injuries and no surgery is scheduled at this time," hospital spokesman Jeff Merkow said in a statement. "Her prognosis looks good."

Merkow said initial fears that Miss Brennan's pelvis was fractured were dispelled by tests. He described her as "alert," saying, "She knows where she is."

EILEEN BRENNAN
...critical condition

Meanwhile, "We have stopped production," said Mike Casey, spokesman for Warner Bros. Television, which produces "Private Benjamin."

"We were on hiatus this week, but we were supposed to start again Monday," Casey said. When asked when production might resume, he declined comment.

Casey said 11 episodes of "Private Benjamin" have been filmed for the current season, and 11 more are on order from CBS. Four of the new shows already have broadcast, and the fifth is scheduled to be shown Monday.

Miss Brennan, 48, and actress-producer Goldie Hawn, who starred with her in the 1981 film that inspired the series, had just left a restaurant in the beachside Venice area and were on their way to their cars when Miss Brennan was hit.

Police Sgt. Harry Ryon said Miss Brennan had waved goodbye to Miss Hawn and turned around to finish crossing Washington Boulevard when she was hit by a car that apparently tried unsuccessfully to avoid her. She was not at a corner or crosswalk at the time, he said.

She played the title role in the off-Broadway production of "Little Mary Sunshine," in 1959.

Accused inmate smoked pot before killing, witness says

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON — Texas prison inmate Eroy Brown said he had had been smoking marijuana the day Ellis Prison Unit Warden Wallace Pack was killed during a fight with the convict, a witness testified.

Testimony opened Thursday in Brown's retrial on a capital murder charge in the death of Pack, who was drowned in a creek that flows through the grounds of Texas' toughest lockup.

Brown, who says he killed Pack and prison farm manager Billy Max Moore in self-defense, is on trial for a second time in Pack's death. His first trial ended in a mistrial last March when jurors deadlocked 10-2 for acquittal.

Prosecutors say Brown will be tried later on a capital murder charge lodged in Moore's shooting death.

Brown, 31, caused a disturbance and was being taken to another part of the Ellis prison farm when the killing took place on April 4, 1981, according to William Allens Jr., 54, an agricultural supervisor at the Ellis unit.

Allens said he was supervising a group of inmates doing agricultural work when Brown flew into what he called a "tantrum."

The supervisor said he asked Brown what his problem was and quoted Brown as saying he had been smoking "a weed."

Allens said he put Brown into a pickup and drove to a pond nearby, where Moore was fishing.

Moore took the wheel of the pickup and drove to a farm shed, Allens said.

Allens said he asked Brown several times where he got the marijuana and quoted the inmate as saying it was growing near one of the farm buildings.

Another witness, Richard Bustka, an assistant warden in the Coffield Unit who was fishing with Moore and Moore's brother, Benny, said he saw Moore drive away with Allens and a black inmate.

Arnold introduced several photographs of the scene where the bodies of Pack and Moore were found, including closeups of blood spots on the bumper of Pack's car.

Suspects in Gulf Oil extortion extradited

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two men being held for allegedly trying to extort $15 illion from Gulf Oil Co. will be extradited to Houston to face charges in the case, while a Tucson man charged with a copycat attempt involving Texaco remains jailed in Tucson.

U.S. Magistrate Richard Gormely on Thursday granted the government's request to have Michael Allen Worth, 34, and Theodore Duane McKinney, 45, taken to Houston, where they and three other Durango, Colo., residents were indicted last week.

The five men were accused of threatening to blow up a Gulf Oil Chemicals plant at Cedar Bayou unless they were paid $15 million.

In Tucson, meanwhile, U.S. Magistrate Raymond Terlizzi set bond at $1 million Thursday and a hearing Nov. 5 for Carl Barksdale, 51, of Tucson, charged with writing an extortion demand and making a bomb threat against Texaco Inc. of Houston.

Barksdale was arrested Wednesday by FBI agents. FBI spokesman James Ader said the oil company received the bomb threat last Thursday.

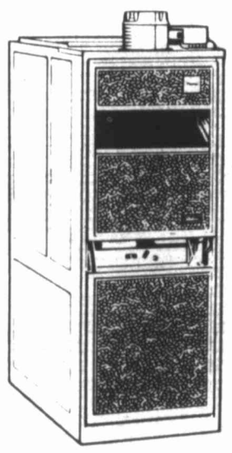

McKinney and Worth have been held in lieu of $1 million bond each following their arrests Oct. 1 in Apache Junction, 35 miles east of Phoenix.

Bombs were found at the Gulf refinery but not in the Texaco case, Ader said.

Barksdale, a car mechanic, filed an affidavit listing credit card debts of $2,800 and assets of a 1978 pickup truck and a home valued at $18,000 to $20,000.

The One Place Where Freedom and Super Prices Meet

Attorneys scamble to raise bail for De Lorean

By [illegible] BEN FOX
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES — Attorneys worked "diligently" to raise $5 million bail for John De Lorean before the weekend as a federal grand jury mulled evidence in the case of the auto executive who was arrested on drug charges.

The grand jury's deadline for returning an indictment in the case was today, according to a government statement released Thursday.

"We do not know when or if Mr. De Lorean will be released on bail," the brief statement added.

The grand jury heard testimony Tuesday, said Joseph Bell, De Lorean's chief defense attorney.

An indictment from the panel would supersede the charges of drug possession with intent to distribute which were filed against the 57-year-old auto innovator last week. He was arrested Oct. 19.

De Lorean, once an executive with General Motors Corp., quit GM to create his stainless steel sports car with gull-wing doors. The British government announced just hours before his arrest that the De Lorean Motor Co. plant in Northern Ireland would be closed because of financial insolvency.

Ball and another De Lorean attorney, Bernard Minsky, spoke with their client for about 30 minutes Thursday afternoon at Terminal Island Prison.

De Lorean was in good spirits, but anxious to get out of jail, Minsky said.

"We're working diligently to put together bail for Mr. De Lorean," Ball said. "I hope he will be released by the weekend. That's all I can say."

"There's nobody on the weekend to accept bail," Minsky said.

However, the attorneys had not filed any papers Thursday necessary for his release, according to a clerk at the U.S. marshal's office who would not give her name.

To make bail, De Lorean must post $250,000 in cash and put up unencumbered property equaling the $4.75 million balance.

De Lorean was hoping his Park Avenue townhouse in New York and a 48-acre estate in Escondido, 90 miles southeast of Los Angeles, would be enough collateral to get him out of jail.

Ball has said difficulty in finding the titles to the property held up De Lorean's release.

FBI agents, who allegedly participated in the De Lorean "sting" operation, said in affidavits that they videotaped the auto executive receiving delivery of a package of cocaine.

The government says De Lorean met with undercover agents posing as drug dealers, and videotapes of the meetings would be key evidence against De Lorean.

Charged with De Lorean were William Morgan Hetrick, 50, owner of a Mojave, Calif., aircraft service company, and Stephen Lee Arrington, 24, of San Diego, an associate of Hetrick. Hetrick is being held on $20 million bail and Arrington on $250,000.

Meanwhile, in Detroit, a lawyer was trying to avert the repossession of 649 stored De Lorean sports cars, saying the company would be out of business if the creditor seized the autos.

Consolidated International Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, says it is entitled to the cars, 470 of them in California and 179 in New Jersey, because De Lorean Motor Co. defaulted on a $14.6 million loan agreement.

"If they get the cars, the business is over," Louis P. Rochkind said Thursday in asking federal bankruptcy court in Detroit to prevent the cars from being seized.

Consolidated, a liquidating firm, loaned De Lorean money in April to pay off most of a debt the auto company owed to the Bank of America. The bank had a revolving credit arrangement with De Lorean which permitted the automaker to ship its cars to America.

In Belfast, Northern Ireland, a liquidator is to be appointed Nov. 10 for the car company. The firm moved into formal liquidation proceedings in Belfast High Court, and Master of Bankruptcy John Hunter heard the petition for a liquidator Thursday at the request of De Lorean's biggest private creditor, the Renault Motor Co. of France.

Proposition 3...

will be on the ballot for the upcoming election. We urge its passage for several reasons.

1. Assessment is done on an arbitrary basis. Only a few counties tax agricultural equipment.
2. The tax is targeted to a few individuals.
3. Assessment of equipment is prohibitably expensive for the revenue it generates.

Election year politics has made it necessary for voters to address this situation, and we urge everyone to VOTE for Proposition 3!

Join Three Governors, Four Attorneys General And Your Neighbors In Re-Electing Governor Clements.

Because of Governor Clements' record, three former Governors–Allan Shivers, John Connally and Preston Smith–and four Attorneys General–Gerald Mann, John Ben Shepperd, Will Wilson and Waggoner Carr–are supporting him for re-election.

This is the first time in history so many elected state Democratic leaders are backing the Republican candidate for Governor. They served Texas in public office for a combined 54 years and know what the job of Governor takes. Although elected as Democrats, when they examined Mark White's record, they found it lacking.

Man called Racehorse

Famed lawyer insists career is closing

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH — As always, he sat stoking his pipe and grousing lightly about the splendid miseries of a criminal trial lawyer and the glamour and gloom of life on a fast legal track.

"This is the hardest part," he sighed, glancing across the courtroom at the sign on a closed door. It said:

"Jury Deliberating."

At 54, Richard Haynes, the Racehorse to friend and foe, was again sweating out a jury's verdict, the climax of another lengthy and unusually lurid murder trial.

On this occasion, he had tried to persuade jurors not to imprison his attractive blonde client for pumping seven bullets at point-blank range into her philandering husband.

So the stubby Houston lawyer was not in unfamiliar surroundings.

A writer once said Haynes looked like a floor safe and was just as tough. And with his pinstripe suit and ostrich boots and curved stem pipe, he seemed no different now than a decade ago.

But the man often described by adversaries as a "master of illusion" did indeed sound different.

"I used to believe fervently that I would not die unhappy, if I in fact died," he said with a mischievous grin.

HE LONG envisioned a final impassioned plea to some phantom jury after which he would collapse dramatically on the courtroom floor.

"I would lie there and say to the jury, 'This is my last act, but I want it to be on behalf of the accused.' And then I'd die right there in front of 'em."

The scenario then called for the jurors to turn to the bench and say:

"We don't even need to go back into the room, Judge... we're ready to vote!"

The Haynes humor remains intact, but there may be something more important now than winning high profile criminal cases that command big headlines and even bigger bucks.

"When you get long in the tooth, life does get to be more precious," he said. "The moments you get to be with your family and friends and books."

That hardly sounds like someone who would swap his wife, kids, boat and country club membership for a favorable jury verdict on behalf of the "citizen accused."

"How long," he asked himself, "do you want to stay in the fast lane?"

He noted the "high stress" incumbent upon his profession and mourned the colleagues who had succumbed to heart attacks, high blood pressure and the devil's grog.

"I don't know if I want to be an old trial lawyer sitting on a bench smelling of vodka and thinking of yesterday," he said with the smile that had melted jurors' hearts from Amarillo to Houston to Fort Worth.

That was precisely the path he took to what he called his own special Olympics, a kind of Super Bowl known intimately only by the Foremans, Bellis and Baileys of the legal universe.

It was a journey that would make him richer and more famous than he ever dared dream and elevate him from crown prince to king of the Texas courtroom.

And the man whose fortune and foibles would help make this all possible was a moody millionaire industrialist from Fort Worth.

His name was Thomas Cullen Davis.

AT THE TIME, 1976, Racehorse Haynes' star was on the rise, due in part to a celebrated DWI case and a subsequent murder trial in which he torpedoed a state case based almost solely on scientific evidence.

But it was the Abilene bribery trial of Texas House Speaker Gus Mutscher that introduced the Racehorse to Texans outside the Houston area.

The year was 1972 and Texas was reeling from a bank and stock fraud case known widely as the Sharpstown scandal and later as Watergate West.

Though Mutscher and two associates were convicted, no one went to prison, and Haynes' recognition level was mightily enhanced. But the case was pivotal for other reasons.

"The Mutscher case had a great impact on me," Haynes said as he awaited word from the Fort Worth jurors. "Having a jury return a guilty verdict in a case where a man I knew to be innocent really disturbed me.

"It put me in a deep snit. It caused me to double my efforts. To train harder. Even though we worked hard on that case, when you see that happen, it takes something out of you."

He left Abilene, he recalled, convinced that a 16-hour work day was insufficient.

"I was bound and determined not to let tht happen to me again, to let an innocent person suffer that sort of verdict for lack of work, energy or preparation."

And it didn't.

TWO EVENTS occurred in 1976 that wuld accelerate Haynes' climb toward the Texas criminal law kingdom ruled for so long by Houston's Percy Foreman.

The first was publication of Thomas Thompson's "Blood and Money," the compelling account of the John Hill murder case that was destined for the bestseller lists.

Though his client, Hill, was himself murdered before the case was resolved, Haynes could not fault the generous space afforded his own role in Thompson's account of the Houston drama.

Nor did he disapprove loudly of such passages as this:

"Haynes was the archetypal criminal lawyer, possessing a cunning mind with just enough deviousness to sniff out chicanery from the other side — the take-one-to-know-one principal...

"Moreover, Racehorse was witty, charming, good-looking and a splendid actor, able to summon rage, grief, scorn or the wrath of the Almighty if it seemed necessary to move a jury."

While the book did much for his reputation, Haynes to this day is unhappy that the legal phase ended in a mistrial.

"The Hill case was never really resolved," Haynes said as he reloaded his pipe. "There was no final verdict from a jury and that leaves you a little bit unfinished."

Haynes said he is convinced Hill would have been acquitted had he not been killed before the case could be retried.

Even before "Blood and Money" began ascending the bestseller charts, a second fateful episode unfolded in Fort Worth.

On Aug. 2, 1976, a gunman dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig invaded the secluded, hilltop mansion owned by Cullen Davis. The intruder wounded Cullen's estranged wife Priscilla and killed her lover and her 12-year-old daughter.

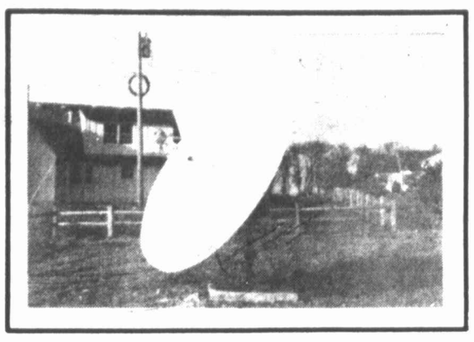

A chance mansion visitor was also critically wounded but his date escaped unharmed.

Three survivors, including Priscilla, identified Cullen as the gunman. Once jailed and denied bond, the wealthy oil heir summoned Haynes.

He accepted the challenge and $250,000 and embarked on the case of his career.

Jury misconduct aborted the first trial attempt in Fort Worth and the case was moved to Amarillo in the summer of 1977.

Friday Night Specials

Sterling City (6-2) at Garden City (5-3)

Garden City played Eden tight last week, driving in for the tying or go-ahead points when the Bearkats were stopped inside the five...Sterling City has been strong all season, rated among the state's top 20 and losing only to Eden in district play...Bearkats tough running and passing...Eagles has size advantage and boats solid players at the skill positions...question here is how well will home play after disappointing last week...Sterling City may be too much to handle so quickly. (Game time is 7:30 p.m.) STERLING CITY 20, GARDEN CITY 18

Colorado City (3-5) at Sonora (3-5)

Colorado City has played good football in recent weeks but faces a team that is probably still hot over one-point loss to Coahoma...Broncos have toughest defense this side of U-Pittsburgh, giving up only 45 points in eight games...Wolves had both facets of offense shut down last week and will have trouble recranking against this defensive unit...should be a close game none-the-less. (Game time is 7:30 p.m.) SONORA 14, COLORADO CITY 7

Sands (6-2) at Loraine (1-7)

Sands has the best football team in its 11-man history but lacks just a little to make the playoffs...size and experience disadvantage has hurt against Roscoe and Forsan...Loraine has battled the lack of numbers all year although the players they do have are very competitive...running back Robby Creswell will once again get over 100 yards after two week layoff and the Mustangs will win No. 7. (Game time is 7:30 p.m.) SANDS 30, LORAINE 6

Paint Creek (0-8) at Grady (5-2)

Grady plays winless Paint Creek which has been back in football competition for just three years...Grady will probably work on new plays, test its newcomers and give the benchees a chance to play...next week comes big road game against Lueders-Avoca...Grady will be thinking ahead but still have a field day here. (Game time is 7 p.m.) GRADY 56, PAINT CREEK 18

Lamesa (1-6) at Fort Stockton (3-4)

Lamesa played its best all-around game in several weeks...that's probably because the Tors played a team more in their league besides Sweetwater, Lake View and Monahans...Fort Stockton is average in defense and offense...Tornadoes are last in offense and defense...sophomore Gilbert Arrendondo is leading rusher with 258 yards...times are tough but Lamesa keeps learning...again this week. (Game time is 8 p.m.) FT. STOCKTON 24, LAMESA 12

Forsan (5-2-1) at Roby (3-5)

Forsan is in good shape for the playoffs but can't afford to let up against a speedy Roby team...the Lions have had internal problems but regained a few players lost a few games back...the Buffs will try to do what they do best...that is, control the football and keep it away from Roby's rockets in cleats...a closer game than it should be. (Game time is 7:30 p.m.) FORSAN 21, ROBY 8

Ozona (6-2) at Coahoma (3-5)

Coahoma is still the big mystery team...two good weeks in a row and a big win against Sonora which keeps a flickering playoff hope alive...Ozona defeated Colorado City 26-21 while Wolves whipped Bulldogs on Coahoma's off-night of the year...Coahoma should give Ozona a run for its money but the visitors have too much offense for Coahoma to stay up with...but I could be wrong again. (Game time is 7:30 p.m.) OZONA 20, COAHOMA 14

Wall (6-2) at Stanton (4-3)

The Buffaloes haved herded up and are ready for the big charge...this week they'll charge straight into a brick Wall, the Hawks that is...Wall has good football tradition and lost by just a tad to McCamey...while defense has played consistently all year, Stanton offense has come on especially with Rocky Barnes burning it up from his newfound fullback slot...a tight game but the Buffs keep rolling. (Game time if 7:30 p.m.) STANTON 13, WALL 10

Eden (7-0-1) at Greenwood (4-4)

Riding a four-game winning streak, the Rangers have stayed in the district race despite losing league opener to Sterling City...Eden is a class team with a lot of different offensive weapons and a stout defense...this race involves four teams and Greenwood hopes to run with Bill Franks and throw with Stu Burleson to stay in it...Eden, however, is too solid and will clinch playoff spot with victory here. (Game time is 7:30 p.m.) EDEN 21, GREENWOOD 18

Klondike (5-2-1) at Roscoe (6-2)

Klondike is in a mystery condition after last week's loss to Forn...Cougars are hurting (Mike Barkowsky and Ray Arismendez may be out for this one) and so may team's mental state...Roscoe is plowing right along, proving that tough non-district schedule is a good way to prepare for the games that count...not flashing about the home team...they just play solid football...too solid this week for the Coogs. ROSCOE 20, KLONDIKE 15

HE CAN CATCH STANDING ON HIS HEAD
...Steer tight end John Roemer catching on

Receiving some notice

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

Big Spring Steers tight end John Roemer has been catching on to things. Literally.

Coming off his best game of the season with three crucial receptions against Midland Lee, the senior receiver is planning to continue his current trend tonight when the Steers tackle the Permian Panthers.

"We're real excited about having a chance to knock the number one team out of its place," Roemer says. "I think we have the people to do it."

Roemer and the rest of the Steers have been preparing for this game all week but Wednesday, took a side trip to massive Ratliff Stadium to test out the new artificial surface they'll be playing on tonight.

"It's good for making cuts and helps our speed a lot but," he grins, "it's sort of hard. The stadium is real nice. It took me back a little bit. I couldn't believe they had something like this for just a high school team."

What's the rest of practice been like preparing for Permian?

"It was worse trying to get off the other (Lee) game and get up for this game," he admitted. "But we did a great job of getting up and prepared. The Mojo stuff just makes me work harder."

Big Spring announced its arrival as a legitimate 4-AAAAA football team against Lee, pushing the Rebels around all night before falling in the closing seconds on a long run and controversial two-point conversion. What did the game do for the Steers?

"I think we were down that night but Saturday we came out and said we played our best game of the season all-around," Roemer said.

Roemer is one of several Steers newcomers this season. After playing football his freshman year, Roemer disappeared from the gridiron for two seasons before showing up at spring drills.

"I just wanted to get into more social life but boy that was a mistake," he laughed. "I really missed football. Last spring, coach (Ralph) Harris asked if I'd like to come back and I said I would. The roughest part was getting back into shape after sitting around for two years."

Roemer, a running back his freshman year, was moved to tight end and began the catching-up process. After a good spring, he was listed as the No. 2 tight end behind fellow senior Scott Griffin. "I thought I had a good spring, especially for not having played in two years. It was just a matter of learning the basics all over again."

During the summer, Roemer continued his comeback with weightlifting and running. Fall workouts progressed well and when Griffin went down with a knee injury, it was Roemer's chance to play some football.

"I had butterflies real bad," he says of his first game. "I was pretty excited about playing again."

Roemer came into his own against Lee, catching three passes for 62 yards. His routes usually take down the middle and into heavy traffic. But that doesn't bother him.

"I used a lot as a primary receiver but also on deception routes to get the safeties away from the other receivers," he explains. "I try to used my speed. Whenever they try to hit me, I use my speed and some moves and my leg strength to keep on going."

Why are the Steers causing headaches this year in 4-5A circles?

"I think it's the team unity we have," he answers. "Plus we have a bunch of guys that want to go out and win. We're trying to get some respect."

Fan support hasn't hurt either.

"I've really enjoyed it, especially that homecoming crowd. It was the largest I've ever seen here and I've lived in Big Spring all my life." He also gets a boost from home where his father and grandfather are his biggest fans.

"They usually tell me I did a great job but they also tell me what I missed, too," he smiles.

Permian may not miss Roemer at all after Friday night.

BSHS tries magic on Mojo

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

ODESSA — Playing the No. 1 team in the state. Not every team has a chance to do that but the dream comes true for the Big Spring Steers tonight.

The opponent is the Permian High School Panthers — Mojo to some, awesome to everyone. Year-in, year-out, not a team in District 4-AAAAA can boast the success ratio of the Black Cats. Already the dominant team of the 1970's, Permian opened 1980 with a state championship, won a district title last year and has already clinched a playoff berth this year.

Entering tonight's game, Permian has gone 37 straight without aloss, with three ties in the streak. Already in the school's 23-year existance, the Panthers have three state titles (1965, 1972 and 1980).

This year, Permian has won eight games. Well, not just won. Let's say, administered lessons in the basics of football to eight different opponents. Mojo has outscored its opponents 294-27 this year, displaying perhaps the offense-defense combination in the school's history.

In district play, the Panthers wrecked Midland 37-0, blasted Abilene 30-0, bombed San Angelo 31-0, spilled Lee 27-0 and outscored Cooper last week 56-14. The Cougars led that game at one point, 14-7. But don't make Mojo mad.

Odessans are so proud of the Mojomania, they have built Ratliff Stadium, a sports creation that holds 19,000 fans and features an artificial playing surface. It's like a giant display case for what may be the ninth wonder of the world.

So you're beginning to think Big Spring has its back against the wall? Consider more facts.

Permian averages 384 yards a game on offense. It gives up just 154. Running back Mike Troglin has 829 yards despite missing parts of several games with injuries. Backfield mate Britt Hager — just a junior — has 381 yards. Taking just Troglin by himself, he has rushed for just 67 yards less than the entire Big Spring team.

The defense is No. 1 in the league, ranking ahead of runner-up Big Spring. But here's an interesting note — both Permian and Big Spring have turned the ball over just 17 times this year to rank as the most possessive teams in the district.

Quarterback Brent Kelley has hit 47 of 87 throws for 668 yards and seven touchdowns to lead the league. Behind him is Steer Adam Rodriquez who has completed 47 of 122 passes for 632 yards without a TD strike.

Big Spring has a pair of top-rated receivers in juniors Dale Crenshaw and Robert Porras. Crenshaw has hauled in 15 catches for 261 yards while Porras has pulled in 10 throws for 207 yards to give Big Spring the best receiving tandem in the league.

Kickingwise, Permian's Bobby Knott is the class of the league. He defeated Lee last year with a last-second field goal and this year and has 31 extra points and kicked seven field goals. Big Spring's Carl Green has boomed four field goals to rank behind Knott.

Punting edge goes to Big Spring with sophomore Jay Pirkle hitting each kick for a 39.5 average while Knott kicks for a 35.7 average. Pirkle has had to punt 47 times, Knott just 24.

Big Spring has scored seven touchdowns this season on offense. Troglin has scored 12 by himself.

The cards stack up in favor of Permian, no doubt. But Big Spring coach Quinn Eudy and his team are still anxious to test Mojo and see if it's for real.

"The kids were real excited about working out over there," he said of Wednesday's bus ride to Ratliff for a practice sesssion. "In the three years I've been here, this is by far the best team they've had."

Even better the 1980 state championship team, coach?

"It looks better than the state championship team," he nods his head.

Even though Permian lost a lot of starting faces from last year's team, Eudy says the program picks up the slack — as it does every year. "The program is never depleted. There are plenty of guys ready to step in and perform."

Permian will outnumber Big Spring almost 2-1 tonight, suiting up 56 to the 32 Steers.

Permian runs a Wing-T offense, throwing the ball and running with equal success. "They run power plays and use a lot of misdirection," Eudy says. "They utilize all of their options and you have to able to defend them all...not only the student body left and the student body right but the whole field."

The defense plays out of a basic 4-3 but is very aggressive on early downs. "They like to force you early and then drop back in the 4-3. What they do extremely well is run to the football. They are an extremely quick team."

What is the Big Spring game plan?

"We're going to run our basic offense at them and see what happens," Eudy smiled. "That's all we've done all year. We'll try not to fumble the ball or get it intercepted deep in our end of the field."

Eudy is confident his defense will play tough. "We're going to make them drive it and not give up the long play. That's another thing they have this year that they've haven't is the ability to throw the long pass."

Now, all that's left is finding out which team will win the ballgame.

WW II—Walton, Worthy duo headline NBA's 37th season

Bill Walton, whose brittle feet apparently had ruined his spectacular career years ago, begins another comeback attempt with the San Diego Clippers tonight as the National Basketball Association opens its 37th season.

Walton, who has played only 14 regular-season games since 1978 because of feet susceptible to stress fractures, plans to play one game a week between law school classes at Stanford University. He is expected to be in uniform tonight for the Clippers when they host the Phoenix Suns.

"If he continues as he has in exhibitions, after the first of the year he could be up to two or three games a week," Clippers General Manager Paul Phipps said Thursday. "We still have to meet with him again to iron out his schedule."

"He has played very well in exhibitions, just outstanding," Phipps added. "We're hoping he will progress to more frequent activity. Right now, all signs indicate he can play more as the season wears on. By the All-Star break, we hope he can play on regular basis."

The Clippers won only 17 of 82 games last year, so any contribution at all from the 6-foot-11 center who led UCLA to two NCAA titles and Portland to an NBA championship in 1977 would be welcome.

"He will make us more competitive and help the league as well," Phipps said, "because he is a team player and has so much enthusiasm. The other players feel he is an asset whenever he's been able to play."

The opening-night schedule also includes Chicago at New Jersey, Philadelphia at New York, Boston at Cleveland, Atlanta at Detroit, Washington at Indiana, Portland at Kansas City, Dallas at Denver, San Antonio at Utah, Golden State at Los Angeles and Houston at Seattle. Milwaukee, the only team that doesn't play tonight, opens Saturday night at home against he Knicks.

JAMES WORTHY
...No. 1 Lakers pick

BILL WALTON
...starts new career

The Lakers hope to become the first team since the 1968-69 Boston Celtics to win the NBA title two years in a row. The defending champion Lakers, who won in 1980 and last season, will have much the same cast of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Earvin "Magic" Johnson, Jamaal Wilkes, Norm Nixon and Bob McAdoo.

But one major addition, top NBA draft pick James Worthy of North Carolina, might be enough to push the Lakers over the top again.

"I don't know if we have any real, glaring weaknesses," Coach Pat Riley said. "But there are some things we can improve on. Specifically, our overall team defense, allowing teams to shoot a high field goal percentage. I think we can get better there."

The Lakers lost only two games in the entire playoffs last season, but Riley doesn't forsee an easy road to another title.

"There are two major ingredients that contribute to the fact that an NBA champion has not repeated since 1969," Riley said. "First, everybody plays much harder against you every night. Games in December become like championship, games, and it's difficult to sustain that through playoffs.

"Second is the mental attitude. The team has to grow closer, because it will be challenged like never before. The team must form a solidarity."

At least three teams — Seattle, Denver and Utah — planned to open the season with 11 men on the roster, one less than the limit. Of the three, only Seattle was among the one-third of the league that made money a year ago.

Attorneys, legal wars now rule NFLPA talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League players' strike has moved into its 39th day with attorneys replacing players as the key figures in the dispute that has left the 1982 season in jeopardy.

Jack Donlan, the club owners' chief negotiator, met with National Labor Relations Board General Counsel William A. Lubbers for nearly five hours Thursday to explain the owners' refusal to negotiate on the union's demand for a wage scale.

Donlan was accompanied by Sargent Karch, chief counsel for the NFL Management Council, the league's bargaining agent, and Betty Southard Murphy. Murphy, an NLRB chairman during the administration of President Gerald Ford, is considered an expert on how the Board operates.

On Oct. 21, Lubbers said he would seek an injunction to force the management council to bargain on the union's demand for a wage scale. Lubbers said the league's insistence that the union drop its demand for a wage scale as an alternative to individual bargaining was a violation of labor laws.

Negotiations for a new bargaining agreement are scheduled to resume Saturday in New York, ending a seven-day recess.

"We gave Lubbers an update on the talks," Donlan said. "The meeting was to give us an opportunity to give our side of the story concerning the complaint."

If Lubbers proceeds with his plans to seek an injunction in federal court and it is granted, management presumably would be bound to bargain with the union on the wage scale. In arguing against the injunction, Donlan has said the proposed wage scale would end a team's right to enter into individual negotiations with its players.

Last week, Karch said the council was prepared to battle Lubbers, if necessary, to the Supreme Court.

The injunction, if sought, would have no effect on a hearing before an NLRB administrative law judge on Nov. 15.

The hearing's purpose is to determine if the management council's failure to negotiate in good faith with the union, as the NLRB has charged, has caused the strike to be prolonged, as the NLRB has further charged.

If an administrative law judge agrees with NLRB regional director Daniel Silverman, who filed the complaint, the league would be barred from hiring permanent replacements for the striking players.

The players have been on strike since Sept. 21.

League officials have said that two of the six weeks affected by the strike could be rescheduled by canceling the first round of wildcard playoff games and by rescheduling conference playoffs into the open week just prior to the Super Bowl.

Union officials have contended the season can still be played in its entirety by moving the Super Bowl, now slated for Jan. 30, back into February or March.

"The length of the season is negotiable," Donlan admitted Thursday. "But there are an awful lot of practical and economic reasons why Jan. 30th is pretty dear to us. While the length of the season is a bargaining issue, you have to take a hard look at what you can do."

The resumption of talks Saturday has increased speculation the owners are prepared to deliver a new financial offer in a last-ditch effort to end the strike.

A widely circulated rumor calls for the owners' proposal to include an across-the-board wage increase with the clubs and players retaining the right to individual contract negotiations.

If the club owners were to offer a 20 percent increase, wages would increase this year from $145 million to $174 million, with the average pay rising from $90,000 to $108,000.

"You just can't come up with a big money offer that's as phoney as a carrot on a stick," said Doug Allen, assistant executive director of the players' association.

Under the first year of the union's proposed four-year, $1.6 billion financial package, the average salary would rise to $150,000 this year.

In a resolution approved unanimously by the player representatives Sunday night, the union reaffirmed that any agreement must must contain: an immediate and substantial wage increase, protection for older players from being cut for economic reasons, performance incentive bonuses, elimination of wage inequities, and a guaranteed share of the league's future television revenues.

On the prospect of progress in this weekend's bargaining session, Donlan said: "Hopefully we will get some movement and end this dispute and get back to playing football. Hopefully they can see their way clear to make some kind of adjustments which would allow us to make some kind of adjustments."

Red-hot Peete shares Disney lead

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Calvin Pete, noted by his peers as golf's most accurate player, holed out a 148-yard 6-iron shot — the ball hit the cup on the fly — for an eagle 2 that helped him into a share of the first round lead in the season-ending, $400,000 Walt Disney World Classic.

"Playing good like this for the last few weeks, I'm fired up. I'm pumped up as much as I can be. My confidence is way up. I feel good about my game, about the way I'm playing," Peete said after his 6-under-par 66 at the Palm course, one of three resort layouts being used for the first three rounds of this event.

"I just hope I can continue to play well," said Peete, who scored his fourth victory of the season — no one has won more — last week in Pensacola.

Peete shared the top spot with Jay Haas, who has won two of his last three starts, and Terry Diehl.

Haas hit 17 greens, all the fairways and didn't make a bogey in his near-errorless effort at the 7,150-yard Magnolia course, the longest and toughest of the three tournament courses. Diehl also played without at bogey at the 6,655-yard Lake Buena Vista course. The format calls for the 132 pros to lay one round, each day with a three-man amateur team, on each of the courses before the field is cut for the pros-only finish at Magnolia on Sunday.

One shot off the lead at 67 were J.C. Snead, Bob Murphy, Howard Twitty, Barry Jaeckel and Steve Hart. Snead and Twitty played the Palm course, with Jaeckel, Hart and Murphy at Lake Buena Vista.

Hoop officials meet

An organizational meeting for local basketball officials is scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The meeting will discuss the upcoming season. All officials and those interested in becoming officials are asked to attend, using the northeast door for entrance said organizer Terry Robertson.

Central slips by BSHS

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

It takes 15 points to win a set in volleyball. Twice against San Angelo, Big Spring reached 14 but was unable to score the one point needed for victory. And so, the No. 1 Bobcats staved off potential upset in the BSHS gym Thursday night.

Playing a scrappy brand of volleyball, the Lady Steers pushed the visiting Bobcats to the limit in the season finale before falling 16-14, 16-14 in the last match for four senior starters.

The double come-from-behind win gave the Bobcats a 13-1 district record, matching that of Midland High. The two teams swapped wins in league play. Big Spring won six of its last 10 district matches after an 0-4 start to finish 6-8 overall and 4-3 in the second half.

The match was the last for seniors Sharon McCalister, Leslye Overman, Sylvia Randle and Shell Rutlege.

The evening began as a tentative start at best for both teams. Seven points were exchanged before Big Spring won two straight to get on the scoreboard first. It was San Angelo that had to rally back into the first set while Big Spring had to follow the same act in the second.

Ahead 14-8 in the first set, Big Spring watched the Bobcats keep their cool and rally to win with eight straight points. The prime reason for the comeback was inserting Yvette Guerrero into the lineup as server. She hit three winners herself as SAC tied the set 14-14 on a netted set by McCalister. After McCalister again set the ball into the Steer side of the net, Guerrero lined another good serve and the Bobcats had won 16-14.

San Angelo ruled the second set but saw the Lady Steers rally from a 7-1 deficit into a 14-12 lead. A good hit by Teresa Harrington tied the match and a misdirection shot by Shawn Clark away from three BSHS spiker on the net won for Central.

Except for a sluggish start at the beginning of the second set, Big Spring showed its best hustle of the seson on the court. Several rallies remained alive was a girl would keep the ball in play with a dive, lunge or leap.

When a spark was needed, Rutledge or Paul Spears would be at the net for their famed "reject" shots, slapping back Central floaters hanging on top of the net.

"We just couldn't get that one point," moaned Lady Steer coach Becky Holliday. "It was a pretty emotional night for us and the seniors. We played a heck of a lot better than we did when we went down there."

The junior varsity closed its season with a 15-6, 10-15, 15-5 victory over San Angelo, improving to 5-2 in the second half. The only losses came to Cooper and Midland High.

Tammi Green scored seven points in the first set while Vickie Halfmann had 11 in the final two. Sheri Graham was both the offensive and defensive standout for the Lady Steers while Jana Matthews also had a solid offensive game.

Reese sentenced to prison term

MIAMI (AP) — Telling the former National Football League player he had "blown it," a judge ordered ex-Miami Dolphin Don Reese to prison for at least six months for violating his probation by using cocaine.

"I don't know whether this is right or wrong," Dade Circuit Judge Ellen Morphonios Gable told a courtroom packed with reporters, television cameramen and spectators. "But I have to do what I think is right."

Reese revealed his drug habit in a cover story in Sports Illustrated magazine last June.

The judge Thursday gave Reese an indeterminate sentence of six months to five years. Under the rarely-used law, the Florida Department of Corrections will determine how much time the former defensive lineman serves.

Mrs. Gable also ordered Reese to be enrolled in a prison drug program. She allowed him to remain free until Jan. 11, when he is to report to her courtroom.

Prosecutor George Yoss, who said Reese could be paroled after serving three months, told the judge he was impressed that Reese had pleaded guilty without making any deals, knowing he could go to prison for as long as 34 years and that the decision would be made by a judge with a tough reputation.

"He pleaded guilty and he wanted to face the medicine," Yoss said. "That impressed me more than what anybody else said about Don Reese."

Reese, who will testify against former Dolphin Mercury Morris next week, and ex-teammate Randy Crowder were sentenced to one year in jail and four more years of probation in 1977 after selling cocaine to undercover police officers.

In June, five weeks before his probation ended, Reese told the magazine of cocaine use in jail and after his return to the NFL with New Orleans and San Diego.

The first-person cover story alleging widespread cocaine abuse in the NFL created a stir and triggered an investigation by Dade County authorities.

THE LIGHT TOUCH

By Sherry Wegner

The recent Tylenol tragedies alarmed me enough that I immediately threw tablets & all away and replaced them with ... you guessed it ... Excedrin. I realize the purpose of these products is to be used for "pain killers," and they aren't supposed to have such "breathtaking" side effects! Personally, I prefer "temporary" relief!

I'm really thankful that I didn't replace my Vitamin C with orange juice or that my eyedrops didn't contain acid.

What if the villian works in the packaging department, where they are repackaging these products with tamper-proof seals?

Seriously, it is hard to be humorous when you think of how sick our society has gotten.

HANDS

What do our hands tell us?

A child's hands—smooth, pliable, soft and beautiful—speak of innocence.

The hands of youth—restless, finger-snapping, rhythm-beating—are searching for answers.

A mother's hands are firm, capable, yet gentle. Dad's hands are big, strong—they represent authority. Grandmother's hands are wrinkled and veined—they tell us about kneading bread . . . and praying. An old man's hands are gnarled and crippled, crossed on a cane, waiting.

Praying hands, working hands, little hands, old hands all grapple with the problems of life.

Some problems are too great to solve alone. It takes a helping hand . . . outstretched to your hand.

With outstretched hands the Church welcomes you, seeks you, extends a joyous invitation to worship God.

"Rainbow Project" explained

By CAROL HART
Church Editor

Members of the Howard County Minister's Fellowship are continuing work on "The Rainbow Project," a proposed shelter for abused children in Howard County.

Heading the project are Victor Sedinger, pastor of the First Christian Church, and Tim Winn, pastor of Knott Baptist Church. The two discussed the project and what they hope to accomplish during the coming months.

Winn said a needs study compiled by the Department of Human Resources shows an average of three children per day are in need of such a shelter in Howard County. Each child would spend an estimated week in the shelter, Winn said.

Howard County now places children from questionable home environments into protective surroundings during the day, such as the West Side Day Care Center. However, "they are put back at night" into their homes, Winn said.

"We don't have the foster families available in Howard County," he explained. The county now has two families operating as licensed foster parents. Ten other families have "talked about becoming foster parents, but none have done it."

Because of the shortage of homes to place needy children in, Sedinger and Winn "presented a study to the Fellowship in September. They responded very positively. We appointed a committee to look into what it would take to sponsor the shelter."

Members of the committee "talked to Don Childers, who operates the Odessa Youth Shelter." The group also talked to others familiar with operating shelters for abused or neglected children.

At the October meeting, "The Fellowship appointed a provisional board of directors, empowered to set about developing the shelter."

Serving on the board are Sedinger, Winn, Dixie Robertson, Dr. Rick Davis and Keith Gibbons.

Sedinger said the Fellowship hopes to find a "low or no-rent space" to house the shelter. Two buildings matching the specification would be Northside Day Care Center and Fire Station No. 6, a facility which once housed the Howard County Detoxification Center.

Sedinger said Fellowship members plan to make presentations to news media, city council and county commissioners. Support for the concept also is being sought "in our own congregations," Sedinger said.

"We want to present a proposal to the city council that we be given some consideration as a non-profit organization," the minister said.

The Fellowship also voted to "approach the Buckner Benevolences of Texas, to ask them to administrate the facility," Winn said.

Buckner Benevolences of Texas is an agency of the Baptist General Convention of Texas. In explaining the organization, Winn said "they are multi-faceted. They sponsor emergency child care shelters, a children's home, and geratric care" in several areas of the state.

Weldon McElreath is administrator of the Buckner Children's Home in Lubbock, and members of the Fellowship "have been in contact with him." McElreath is being considered as an administrator for the local facility, should the shelter become a reality.

Lubbock is also the home of Buckner-sponsored project called "Harmony House," said Winn. Harmony House is a child protection shelter similar to the one being proposed locally.

Buckner's aid is being sought because "They are in the business, and they know how to run it," Winn explained. He stressed that the local facility would be "funded through Howard County, and will not be a Buckner facility," but that Buckner employees may be "retained to administrate."

Thus far, members of the Fellowship have received "very positive" feedback on the shelter, Winn said. Several churches, including Midway Baptist Church, have indicated that they plan to budget a monthly allotment for the facility should it become a reality.

"Essentially, we will ask every church to allot a certain dollar amount each month to run the shelter," Winn said.

Employees at the shelter would work "with the Department of Human Resources." The DHR is "required to remove a child from the home for his own protection," Winn explained, if case workers feel there is a problem within the home. But in Howard County, placing these children has posed a problem.

"If you don't have a place to go with a child, you can't take them out," Winn said.

In talking with DHR caseworkers, Winn said he was told abuse in Howard County is not worse than that found in other counties, but is a problem. He said he was told that "as the economy worsens, and the holidays come on, we may see an increase" in abuses.

Also, the South has been plagued with the problem because "transients are looking for a good job, and they've heard there's a pot of gold in the South." When their dreams are not realized here, "it creates an abusive situation."

The shelter would be a place children could be placed while caseworkers work with parents and guardians, trying to work out the abusive situations, Winn said. He added that caseworkers do not "snatch children out" of homes, never to return them. The goal is to rehabilitate the family and solve whatever is causing the abusive situation.

Fellowship members hope to see a facility which will be able to house 15 to 18 children at a time, from ages infant through 18. "We don't anticipate filling it up, but that would be its capacity," Winn said.

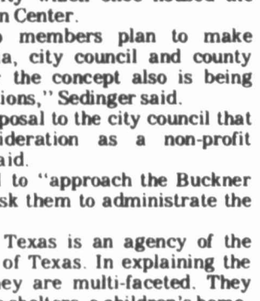

Anyone interested in the project may contact members of the provisional board by writing "The Rainbow Project," P.O. Box 2825, Big Spring, Texas, 79720.

Guest speaker slated

The Rev. Vernon Cooper, administrative director of the Highlands Child Placement Service, Kansas City, Missouri, will be the guest speaker at the First Assembly of God, 4th and Lancaster, at 11 a.m. Sunday, the Rev. Rick Jones, pastor, said.

REV. VERNON COOPER
...guest speaker

Active in the assemblies of God since early youth and ordained into the ministry in 1966 in the Arkansas District of the Assemblies of God, Cooper's first pastorate was in North Little Rock, Arkansas, from 1967 to 1968. In 1968 he was named associate pastor of First Assembly of God, Russellville, Ark., where he served until assuming his present position.

He attended Arkansas Polytechnic College, Russellville, Ark., where he received a bachelor's degree in sociology and psychology in 1962. He received his master's in social work in 1966 from the University of Tennessee, and was elected to the Academy of Certified Social Workers in 1968.

He was employed with the Arkansas State Welfare Department from 1962 to 1967, and has served on the faculties of Arkansas Polytechnic College, Central Missouri State College, and Johnson County Community College. He served as a consultant to Gov. Rockefeller's committee on "Early Childhood Development," represented Arkansas in the "Rural America" conference held in Washington, D.C., and has served on numerous other committees. He is listed in "Who's Who in Religion."

He began service at Highlands in 1969, a ministry of the Assemblies of God Benevolences Department.

Church observes Reformation

The Rev. Kenneth Holdorf, pastor, Trinity Lutheran Church, San Angelo, will be the guest speaker at St. Paul Lutheran Church Sunday.

Both the 8:30 a.m. and 10:45 a.m. services will be conducted by Rev. Holdorf. Special Reformation hymns will also be part of the service.

Reformation is the ecclesiastical revolution in the 16th century, by which a number of European states severed themselves from the Roman Catholic Church and adapted some form of Protestant belief and organization.

By the middle of the 16th century, Protestantism had produced two well-defined and distinct church organizations, the Lutheran and the Calvinist or "Reformed" church.

Member to be honored

Clarence Hawkins, long-time treasurer, Sunday School teacher, and Church board member at the First Church of the Nazarene, will be honored Sunday at the church, according to Dr. Carl Powers, pastor.

Preceding the special event will be a concert by the Glory Heirs, a gospel music group from Abilene, beginning at 10:40 a.m. The Glory Heirs have performed in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Florida and at Six Flags.

A sermon will follow. Following the activities there will be a basket dinner in the Fellowship Hall with Hawkins as the special guest.

At 6 p.m. the quarterly "Sounds of Music" singspiration will begin. There will be about an hour and a half of varied music, readings and instrumentals provided by local talent interspersed with music by the sanctuary choir directed by Jerry McGuire.

Youth choir to sing

The youth choir of Hillcrest Baptist Church will present the musical "Branches of the Vine," by John Lee at 7 p.m. Sunday at the church.

The choir has presented the musical once locally and will be aided this Sunday by a brass and woodwind ensemble.

This presentation by the 40-voice youth choir is in preparation for the annual summer choir tour. During a week each summer the choir travels to various places in the southwest to present musicals as well as to share in mission activities.

On last summer's tour, the group traveled to Texas and New Mexico. This summer they plan to visit points further west, Randy Anderson, choir director, said.

"The purpose of the musical is to encourage Christian youth to live in a way that shows their faith and Christian committment," Anderson said.

The public is invited. A nursery will be provided.

Dallas Holm to perform

Dallas Holm and Praise will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Chaparral Center, Midland.

Tickets for the concert, which will consist of gospel and contemporary music, are still available at the Abundant Life Bookstore in Big Spring, according to concert promoters.

The show is being brought to this area by the Morning Star company. Company officials said tickets sales in the local area have been brisk.

Hazel Family to appear

The Hazel Family, a group of singers from Lubbock, will present at concert at 11 a.m. Nov. 7 at the Knott Baptist Church, according to the Rev. Tim Winn, pastor.

The singers are well-known in the West Texas area, Winn said. The public is invited to attend.

"Dinner on the ground" will follow, Winn said.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, OCT. 30, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There could be delays and obstacles in the path of your desires, so accept the extra time afforded you and build a better set of circumstances. Try to be more enthusiastic.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Analyze your personal aims and then you will know how to proceed in order to gain them. Engage in favorite hobby.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan the best way to remove hurdles in the path of your progress. Take needed health treatments. Visit a friend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take care of routine chores that provide easier living. Attend a social event with congenials that is pleasing to you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) One in high office can be of assistance to you, if asked. Do nothing at home that could start an argument.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Put that ideas to work that could bring greater income in the days ahead. Exercise good judgment in travel.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't run off on some trip that could bring headaches. Engage in a practical activity and get excellent results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Think about your past relationships and try to revive those that are worthwhile. Sidestep one who is jealous of you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find more modern ways of doing your work and it becomes easier and brings in more benefits at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A good day to get caught up on all that work you have neglected to do. Make practical plans for the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study your property and make plans for improvement. A good time to engage in your favorite recreation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Put more zip and sparkle into your activities today and gain more benefits. Don't spend more money than you can afford.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take steps to improve your surroundings. A very successful person can be most helpful with new ideas.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to comprehend difficult tasks and should have the advantage of a college education for best results. Teach to specialize in whatever field is chosen. Religious training should not be neglected.

Longer songs are a hinderance on Dire Straits' fourth album

● "Love over Gold" — Dire Straits. Warner Brothers

The chances are good the five songs on the fourth album by Dire Straits will never be heard on the radio.

The shortest cut clocks in at nearly six minutes while the longest — the ambitious "Telegraph Road" is almost 15 minutes long.

This decision for such long songs detracts from the overall quality of the album. Only two of the tunes — "Industrial Disease" and "It Never Rains" — are arranged well enough to stand.

Musically, the album, produced by lead singer-guitarist Mark Knopfler, continues Dire Straits' dense yet sinuous sound. Knopfler's guitar expertise, ranging from quiet classical guitar on "Private Investigations" to biting electric cries on "Telegraph Road," blends well with stirring keyboards.

The overall sound of the album is cloaked in the drone of machines, the background rumbling with ominous hisses and roars. Whatever human feelings exist, Knopfler seems to be saying, are in danger of being overcome by technology.

"LOVE OVER GOLD," despite its title, is less concerned with relationships and romance as the group's previous album, 1980's superb "Making Movies." Knopfler seems more interested in the pitfalls of civilization: technological oblivion, societal ennui and historical obsolescence.

Records

The complex "Telegraph Road" builds a masterful context composed of piano and organ with only a touch of tasteful guitar through the first five or six minutes. The last lyrical section touches on the central issue of a job driven useless by progress.

"I got a right to go to work, but there's no work to be found," Knopfler sings in a bitter voice. His disenchantment with a dissolving relationship is hauntingly framed by his remembrances of his love as he swears to "run all the red lights down memory lane."

The bitterness is accentuated by a long, biting solo that is diametrically opposite the soaring leads Knopfler is famous for. As Knopfler snaps off chords, seemingly driven by the relentless drumming, the song fades into the hollowness of a cavern.

The only problem is the song cries out for editing of its repetitiveness.

My favorite cut on the album is "Industrial Disease," an absurd, funny and scary depiction of technology and its effects. A wonderful pipe organ leads the music that barrels along at a pace similar to 1978's "Sultans of Swing."

Knopfler fills the song with surrealistic images of industrial pollution in a factory, then jumps to black humor as a victim goes to a Dr. Parkinson who narrates his diagnosis. He notes he has "smoker's cough from smoking" and "Bette Davis knees — everybody has industrial disease."

The bizarre world continues as an ill protest singer sings about everybody wanting to have a war to keep the factories going. He sings they even "wanna have a war to stop the spying Japanese." Two men claiming to be Jesus argue and the singer asks "How come Jesus gets industrial disease?"

OTHER TUNES are not as successful. The title cut sounds somewhat like the Dutch group Focus with its dreamy solos and quiet air although Dire Straits does not have enough talent to match the quirky stylishness of Focus. The jazzy gauziness of "Love over Gold" even features a xylophone.

"Private Investigations" is seven and a half minutes of tedium with vague lyrics and opaque music. Classical guitar and a throbbing bass pulse throughout the song, but mostly it just sits there emotionless.

The one cut probable to get some airplay is "It Never Rains." A powerful statement unfortunately degenerates into some uncomfortable soloing at the song's end that sounds out-of-place and detracts from the rest of the tune.

Knopfler despondently sings a few epigrams like "the bigger they are, the harder they fall on you," and "the faster they are, the faster they get out of town." A backstabbing friend brings the warning: "With friends like that, good friends you gotta do without."

Instead of wallowing in despair, the song builds in anger as the drums pound louder and the organ swells higher. Knopfler cries about "your roller-coaster memory ... saw you make a date with destiny." The singer ties himself to losers everywhere with the line "we could have been major contenders."

However, the powerful finish dissolves into atonal guitar wailing and desultory drumming that destroys the feel of the song.

Dire Straits continues to map a unique path in contemporary music. However, their latest excursion may not garner any new fans or add another classic album to "Making Movies." Like their debut in 1978 and 1979's "Communique," "Love Over Gold" has some great sounds and songs, but fails as an complete album.

CONSIDER THIS

- Did you realize that the Republican Administration paid $76 million dollars of our hard-earned tax money last year to New York City banks to pay the interest on the debts that Poland, a Communist government, actually owed these banks? And yet, we paid the Communist government's debts to these New York banks while our farmers and small businesses were going broke in record numbers.
- Did you realize that the Republican Administration has started buying oil from the Ayatollah Khomeni in Iran after all he has done to our people?
- And did you realize that the Republican Administration tried to increase foreign aid by 32% in two years while our nation was being squeezed by tight money policy and record unemployment?

That's not conservative government . . . that's special interest government.

It's not fair . . . but it is Republican.
