Flea-market find

NEW YORK — An Atlanta investor paid $2.42 million Thursday for a copy of the Declaration of Independence that a flea-market buff had found stuffed in a picture frame. Donald Scheer, president of a fine arts investment company, bought the document during bidding at Sotheby's. The document, discovered by an unidentified Philadelphian who paid $4 for a painting because he wanted the frame, had a pre-sale estimate of $800,000 to $1.2 million. The copy was one of about 200 printed on July 4, 1776. It is one of 24 in existence and one of three privately owned.

Call to duty

AUSTIN — People with Texas driver's licenses and identification cards will face the prospect of being called for jury duty under a bill signed into law by Gov. Ann Richards. Jury wheels now are compiled from current voter registration lists. The new law expands on a 1989 measure, which allowed some counties to broaden their jury wheel to include licensed drivers.

Powers expanded

WASHINGTON — The increasingly conservative Supreme Court expanded police powers of interrogation on Thursday — the 25th anniversary of its landmark Miranda ruling on the rights of criminal suspects to keep silent and have a lawyer present during questioning./5A

Too much cash

NEW YORK — David Merrick, the producer of "Hello Dolly" and other Broadway hits, was charged with currency violations after allegedly trying to take too much undeclared money out of the country, authorities said. Merrick, 78, had about $95,000 in cash and $40,000 in money orders when he and his girlfriend, Natalie Ting Teresa, were stopped at Kennedy Airport on Wednesday, said Ann Driscoll, spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney's office. Customs agents ordered him to appear in federal court next week. Americans taking money out of the country must declare amounts over $10,000; Merrick had reported only $5,000, Ms. Driscoll said.

Yeltsin elected

■ Boris Yeltsin becomes president in the first popular election in the history of the Russian republic.

By Serge Schmemann
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Boris N. Yeltsin, the Soviet Union's leading political and economic reformer, swept to victory on Thursday in a presidential election in the Russian republic, becoming the first popularly elected leader in Russian history.

In another direct rebuff to communism, voters in Leningrad called for restoration of the city's original name, St. Petersburg.

With the bulk of votes counted from Wednesday's elections, Yeltsin tallied about 60 percent of the ballots cast, easily achieving the simple majority needed to win the newly created executive presidency of the Russian Federation outright. Like-minded reformers easily won as mayors of Moscow and Leningrad.

And in probably the most emotional of the races, an unexpected 55 percent of the voters in Leningrad favored the original name given to their city by its builder, Czar Peter the Great.

The referendum is not binding, but the challenge to a name held sacred by old Bolsheviks and war veterans in favor of a name evoking imperial splendor and a westward orientation turned the vote into an emotional contest of ideologies and beliefs.

All in all, the elections in the Russian republic were a a major defeat for the Communist Party, which waged a strong campaign to block Yeltsin, and, indirectly, a defeat for President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, whose leadership of the Soviet Union and whose policies are the major target of Yeltsin's coalition.

Gorbachev did not endorse any candidate, though he did speak out against renaming Leningrad. After voting on

A big, new Midland "Old Glory" got a head start on Flag Day early this week outside ReMax Realty's new home at Mission Square on North Big Spring Street.

It's been banner year for U.S. flag manufacturers

By Bob Dart
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — At the Capitol, where a new flag normally flies every minute or so, the skyrocketing popularity of Old Glory has created a shortage of Stars and Stripes.

Indeed, all across America, Flag Day 1991 finds manufacturers struggling to catch up with backlogged orders.

"It has been a banner year in the flag business," said Jeff Christman, sales manager of Valley Forge Flag Company. "We're just beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel after months where we had more demand than we could produce flags to meet."

City sets timetable for airport terminal

■ Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor says construction will begin in February 1993 and is to be completed by mid-1995.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City officials have set a timetable for replacing the Midland International Airport terminal, starting with wading through federal applications.

Speaking at a Permian Basin Airport Board meeting Thursday, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said construction will not begin until February 1993. The facility will be completed by mid-1995.

Until then, city officials will spend time making about $25.5 million worth of applications to the Federal Aviation Administration, McGregor said.

The $30.9 million terminal project, he said, will be paid through a combination of FAA assistance, certificates of obligation and enplanement fee profits.

The first step will be applying for FAA permission to let the city collect a $3 enplanement fee, known as a passenger facilities charge.

The fee would be added to flight tickets and collected through airlines. It would be imposed on all enplaning passengers, regardless of whether they board originating or connecting flights.

A federal law enacted last year allows a city, with FAA approval, to collect either a $1, $2 or $3 enplanement fee.

McGregor said Midland could raise an estimated $1.8 million annually through the $3 fee and use the revenues to pay off certificates of obligation issued for airport improvements.

Officials propose landing fee increase

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City officials have proposed increasing the landing fee for commercial flights into Midland International Airport from 50 cents per 1,000 pounds of aircraft to 60 cents.

Earlier this week, city councilmen argued over the increase, which soon will be reviewed by the airlines that would pay it.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the city also must seek approval from the Federal Aviation Administration. Target date for the fee increase is January 1992, McGregor said.

City officials said the increase, which would produce an additional $90,000 a year, needs to be done in advance of expected operating cost increases at the airport.

The airport received $445,530 in landing fee revenues during the 1989-90 fiscal year, city figures show.

Census Bureau increases estimate

■ Richards says Texans were undercounted by more than 500,000 people.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Census Bureau's 1990 count missed tens of thousands of blacks and Hispanics in Texas' biggest cities and border communities, according to a new estimate that pushes the state's population from 16.9 million to 17.5 million.

Gov. Ann Richards said the new estimate, released Thursday, is further evidence Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher should adjust the 1990 census for an undercount. An adjustment would have profound implications on federal spending in Texas and the distribution of political power.

"How can you admit you made a 560,000-count error and not make a correction? That's not possible," said Richards.

According to the Census Bureau's latest estimate, there are 17,551,000 people living in Texas — 564,490 more than the bureau counted in April 1990.

More than half of the undercount — or 343,573 — was in the state's biggest cities and largest counties on the border, according to Census Bureau figures.

Nationally, the Census Bureau estimated that its most significant undercount occurred among blacks and Hispanics.

Liberal group roasts Richards and raises $300,000

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A casual observer could not have been blamed for thinking it was Republican Clayton Williams who was the subject of a liberal Democratic roast here Thursday night. Instead, the target of the witty barbs was the politician who bested him last November, Texas Gov. Ann Richards.

The flavor of the evening was symbolized by a pointed reference by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., to a well-known Williams' campaign gaffe. According to Bradley's wry rendition, Richards called her Republican opponent on election night and said: "Clayton, I just wanted you to know that when defeat seems inevitable, just sit back, relax and enjoy it."

During the campaign, Williams offered the same advice to women in reference to rape.

Bradley also jibed: "I can't think of anything to say about Ann Richards that Clayton Williams hasn't already said."

The Richards' roast was the entertainment at the 10th anniversary black-tie dinner of the national liberal political group, Independent Action, at a Washington hotel. About 1,000 guests paid $500 each to dine on chicken, rice and ice cream.

ELECTION: Leningrad voters opt to rename city St. Petersburg

(From 1A)

Wednesday, he said: "I am ready to cooperate with anyone who will be elected by Russians."

Officials said that more than 70 percent of the republic's 104 million registered voters had cast ballots.

The vote was also a ringing endorsement of Yeltsin and the broad anti-communist, pro-reform democratic coalition of which he has emerged as the leader. He was once a close ally of Gorbachev in the Communist Party Politburo, but resigned from the party last year.

The republic's presidency also gives Yeltsin a hefty new lever in his dealings with Gorbachev, which should prove especially important as they move toward a market economy and negotiate a new agreement binding Russia and the other 14 republics that make up the Soviet Union. Gorbachev has never faced a national electorate, and now must reckon with tangible evidence of Yeltsin's authority.

One immediate proof of Yeltsin's new standing was a personal invitation from President Bush to visit the White House next week.

The popular, burly chairman of the Russian republic's Parliament drew strongly in virtually every Russian city, taking Moscow with almost 72 percent of the vote.

By contrast, the candidate actively backed by the Communist Party, former Prime Minister Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, failed to take a single major city and garnered less than 11 percent in either Moscow or Leningrad. Other candidates trailed far behind, none winning more than 4 percent of the vote.

The leaders of the two largest Soviet cities, Gavriil K. Popov of Moscow and Anatoly Sobchak of Leningrad, who are both politically close to Yeltsin and like him seek to bolster their authority by demonstrating popular support, won easily in their respective cities. Each took more than 65 percent of the vote.

Election officials said results from the 98,000-odd polling stations, where paper ballots are painstakingly counted by hand, would not be final before June 22.

Neither Yeltsin nor Ryzhkov had any immediate comment on the results.

Yeltsin criss-crossed the republic energetically and worked at a statesman's image by traveling to France and Czechoslovakia. He also reached for some of the Communists' military supporters by taking a popular Afghanistan war hero, Col. Aleksandr Rutzkoy of the air force, as his running mate.

As president of the Russian Parliament, Yeltsin was already the chief executive and in effect the leader of the Russian republic, by far the largest in the Soviet Union with three-quarters of its territory, just over half its population, and the bulk of its resources and industry.

His campaign for a strong, executive presidency was interpreted as a reach for a direct mandate from the electorate and for authority independent of the sharply divided Parliament, whose strong communist minority has often tried to block Yeltsin's actions.

For the fledgling Soviet democracy, the election was the first nationally important vote in which individuals, and not slates, were contested. The platforms and backers behind the main candidates suggested that the country was beginning to move toward broad political coalitions as it sorted out the many groupings that emerged in the first flush of democracy.

In some ways, however, the Leningrad referendum posed a more fateful question.

The vote was not likely to change the name anytime soon, since Sobchak has agreed that so important a step must ultimately be endorsed by the Russian and national Parliaments, where it could still be blocked.

But the debate during the campaign moved far beyond the question of a name to the very identity of the Soviet state as it wanders in the vacuum left by the disintegration of communism.

Russian people give Yeltsin place in Soviet history

By Deborah Seward

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris N. Yeltsin rose from a provincial Communist bureaucrat to the Russian republic's first president, winning a place in Soviet history and a mandate to pursue radical reform.

Preliminary results Thursday showed Yeltsin, 60, easily won the race to become Russia's first popularly elected leader, adding legitimacy to his power and magnetism.

He has won what Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has never faced — a direct election.

The election has brought the Soviet Union's largest and most populous republic into the tradition of Western democracy.

Like those of many of his countrymen, Yeltsin's life was turned upside down when Gorbachev came to power in 1985 seeking to open up and reform the Soviet political and economic system.

Yeltsin's career has been rocky. He soared to dizzying heights, only to lose power and start over. All along he has had the Russian people's faith and support.

His appearances draw crowds enchanted by the Siberian's blunt speech, thick silver hair and lumberjack physique.

Tales of Yeltsin's mischief-making as a boy, hard living as an adult and powers of persuasion have created a myth among Russians that he can emerge from the worst calamities even stronger.

While some Russians see him as a savior, some Western countries prefer dealing with Gorbachev and worry that Yeltsin could threaten the Soviet president and his reforms.

Yeltsin came to Moscow in 1985 as a member of the Communist Party's Central Committee after more than two decades as a party bureaucrat in the central Siberian city of Sverdlovsk. He quickly became one of the most vocal supporters of perestroika, Gorbachev's term for social, economic and political reform.

He was named Moscow party leader soon after his arrival, but was bumped from the prestigious job in 1987 for criticizing the pace of reforms. He lost his non-voting membership in the Communist Party Politburo in 1988.

He won election to the national parliament in 1989 by appealing to the people rather than party apparatchiks.

His victory stunned Communist Party officials, who had written Yeltsin off.

In 1990, Yeltsin was elected to the Russian legislature and became its chairman. He quit the Communist Party, taking along many reformers.

In his yearlong tenure as parliament chairman, Yeltsin has been a tireless campaigner against the privileged lifestyle enjoyed by senior party and government workers.

Rookie DA JFK Jr.'s no law pro, yet

NEW YORK (AP) — John F. Kennedy Jr., who took the bar exam three times before he passed, was tentative when asked on the witness stand about a famous Supreme Court ruling that requires police to advise suspects of their rights.

The case, Miranda vs. Arizona, makes it illegal for police to question suspects without letting them know they have the right to remain silent and the right to an attorney.

Kennedy, 30, an assistant district attorney in Manhattan, was testifying Wednesday against an immigration agent accused of illegal searches and seizures when the agent's lawyer asked if he knew what Miranda warnings were.

"These so-called Miranda warnings are an offshoot of the famous case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court called Miranda against Arizona, is that correct?" asked the lawyer, Norman Mordkofsky.

"I don't know them in that context, particularly. I know them as a card that we read defendants," said Kennedy, the son of the late president.

Mordkofsky asked: "Don't you know where or from whence the Miranda warnings emanated?"

Kennedy said: "Yes, roughly. But whether from Miranda vs. Arizona, I wasn't sure what state it was."

One legal expert said he was surprised a lawyer would seem unfamiliar with the case that gives Miranda warnings their name.

"I think it would be fair to say that the Supreme Court decision in the case entitled Miranda against Arizona is basic to any course in criminal procedure or constitutional law," said Columbia University law professor Richard Uviller.

Man proves that drugs kill

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — A man died after choking on a plastic bag containing marijuana while he was chased by police, but he was not the one police sought, officers said.

Alvin C. Euell, 33, of Auburn, died Tuesday at Seattle's Harborview Medical Center of lack of oxygen to the brain, the King County medical examiner's office said.

Police records in this suburb between Seattle and Tacoma said Euell tried to swallow a plastic bag of pot when officers arrested him Saturday.

An initial report indicated he threatened to stab someone outside a tavern, but later interviews with witnesses showed he was not the man with the knife, officer Bill Waldroop said.

By that time, Euell had been chased on foot, handcuffed and taken to the police station, where an officer noticed he had stopped breathing. The plastic bag was found in his airway during emergency surgery at Harborview.

Thieves hit paydirt

NEW YORK (AP) — Crooks using a tractor equipped with a front payload bucket smashed through the wall of a jewelry store early Thursday and stole a safe containing $500,000 worth of jewelry, police said.

"They were not very adept with the equipment, because they ruptured a gas line in the process," said Sgt. Tina Mohrmann, a police spokeswoman.

The thieves left an 8-by-12-foot hole in the exterior wall of Little Neck Jewelers, in the borough of Queens.

They escaped with the safe in another vehicle.

The gas-line rupture did not cause a fire or explosion.

TEXANS: Richards says census should be adjusted

(From 1A)

Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, said the new estimates point to large undercounts of minorities in Texas' major cities. If the undercount is adopted, he said, it could result in significant shifts of power to blacks and Hispanics on school boards, city councils and county commissions, as well as in legislative seats.

The Census Bureau said the greatest undercounts were in the state's most populous counties. It estimates it missed 120,801 people in Harris; 77,190 in Dallas; 42,897 in Tarrant; 35,606 in Bexar; 19,390 in El Paso; and 17,593 in Travis. Significant undercounts were also noted in border counties: 15,455 in Hidalgo; 9,880 in Cameron; 4,761 in Webb.

While the new numbers would not be enough to give Texas another seat in the House — it is already boosting its delegation from 27 to 30 — the increase would result in millions more federal dollars being spent in Texas, Frost said.

Richards said she had been worried that the undercount would not be acknowledged "because it would mean the federal government would not be responsible for producing the money that they owed Texas based on its population.

"But that is really good news to hear that they have acknowledged that undercount," she said.

Frost said that if Mosbacher decides to adjust for an undercount, Thursday's numbers would most likely replace the initial estimate of 16.9 million Texans.

"I think this (17.5 million) would be an adequate figure if an adjustment is made by the secretary of commerce," Frost said. "I think we need to have the most accurate census possible ... we ought to have the best and fullest opportunity possible both for representation and allocation of funds."

Mosbacher, a Texas Republican, has until July 15 to decide whether to adjust the 1990 headcount. If he refuses, the matter goes to federal court, where several states and cities.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales called Thursday's report good news for Texas.

"We are grateful that the secretary of commerce recognizes the inaccuracy of the initial Texas census count," Morales said. "We are hopeful and expectant that the final adjustment will reflect this more accurate count of Texas."

FLAGS: Companies have trouble meeting demand

ers but overall sales were slow, said Bob Kengla, a representative of the Dettra Flag Company. "Nobody was prepared" for the tremendous demand for flags brought on by Operation Desert Storm.

"We got wiped out," he recalled, "and we've been just trying to catch up since then."

The flag-flying system at the Capitol is an assembly-line affair that supplies members of Congress with flags that have flown over the domed building that is the international symbol of democracy. Members can then give constituents these flags that have flown over the Capitol.

The flags are run up the pole, flown for seconds, then pulled back down and folded and boxed, explained Bill Raines, a spokesman for the Architect of the Capitol. But lately, the flag-fliers have been unable to keep up with demand.

"We have a backlog of requests," he said. "We've never experienced the kind of delays we've seen since Desert Shield and Desert Storm when the shortage became so pronounced."

At Valley Forge Flag Company, a Spring City, Pa., firm that is the government's largest supplier of flags, Christman said this is usually a slow season for flag manufacturers. "Normally orders pick up before Memorial Day" but by now dealers have stocked their Stars and Stripes supplies for Flag Day and the Fourth of July, he explained.

"But orders are still coming in at a higher than normal rate," he said.

"We haven't been this busy since the Bicentennial in 1976," said Joan Lawrence of Flags, Banners and Pennants, a major retail flag supplier.

Requests from Ohio constituents have escalated in recent months, said Lisa Cutler, a spokesperson for Sen. John Glenn (D-Ohio). "Currently, we're experiencing quite a backlog in requests (about 350)," she said. "We're filling them as fast as we can, but the flags simply aren't available."

Helicopter crashes near day care center

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A police helicopter crashed in a parking lot and burst into flames Thursday, killing three people and narrowly missing a day care center, police and witnesses said.

The crash killed both officers in the helicopter and a person on the ground, authorities said. The pilot reported mechanical problems just before the late morning crash, police said.

The helicopter took off just before the crash and was on patrol when the pilot radioed he was having engine trouble, Police Chief Daryl Gates said.

The craft clipped a light pole, then crashed into the parking lot across the street from Normandie Avenue Children's Center, a day care center on an elementary school campus, three miles southwest of downtown Los Angeles.

Dozens of children were evacuated from the preschool.

TERMINAL: Architect to begin design work in July

(From 1A)

At least $15 million in enplanement fee revenues, he said, would go toward paying for the new terminal.

McGregor said airport officials will meet with Southwest and American airlines officials before levying the fee. The airlines would begin collecting the fee on June 15, 1992.

Other funding for the terminal replacement would come from about $10.5 million in FAA grants, which could take more than a year to secure, McGregor said.

The city will have to spend an estimated $5.4 million of its own money for the terminal, he said, with that money coming from certificates paid off by airport revenues.

Designs for the new terminal represent a mixture of architectural traits from six other U.S. airports that city officials toured this year. Airports studied were the one in Harlingen, two in southern California, two in Florida and one in Tennessee.

Architects from Parkhill, Smith and Cooper Inc. and a Denver-based firm, which has designed airports nationwide, will draw plans for the new Midland terminal. The design phase is expected to begin in July and take about 16 months to complete.

The design will include eight gates — only six with finished jetways — a larger restaurant and more driving room in front of the terminal, airport officials said. Construction also will include an expanded baggage claim area.

City estimates show that the cost to replace the terminal will be $22.3 million, while it will cost $2.3 million for parking lot renovations. Another $6.1 million will be spent on demolition, access roads, ramps and other construction items.

It will be the first major airport renovation since the fall of 1987, when about $2 million was spent to remodel the roof and refurbish the gift shop and restaurant area.

The current terminal, which is 30 years old, has plumbing and electrical problems, officials said.

Airport Director Ken Day said the city is neither rushing into the upcoming project nor spending liberally on it.

"We don't just snap our fingers and say we're going to do these projects," Day said. "We're very conservative. We're not overbuilding. We don't want to end up like Lubbock, where the airport has empty gates."

Melvin Olsen, Dallas-based vice president of capacity planning for American Airlines, said Midland International's expansion will blend in with the growing aviation industry.

"A lot of our plans in the next five years center around international expansion," said Olsen, who attended Thursday's board meeting. "There will be quite a bit of international expansion."

Thursday marked the first meeting of the expanded Permian Basin Airport Board, whose membership was doubled earlier this year.

The cities of San Angelo, Abilene, Fort Stockton, Seminole, Sweetwater, Pecos and Carlsbad, Roswell and Artesia, N.M., were asked to name a board member.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said officials from those cities were eager to take part in the advisory body, which was created in February.

The new representatives join members from Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Snyder, Lamesa, Andrews, Monahams and Hobbs, N.M. There are 10 Midland representatives, three Odessa members and one member apiece for the other cities.

The board, will have its third meeting in September. The entity's purpose is to generate ideas on how to improve and market Midland International. The board solely acts as an adviser to airport authorities and city management.

Among other functions, the existing Midland Airport Planning and Development Board still will control airport hangar leasing at Midland International and Midland Air Park.

LANDING: Officials want fee increased by 10 cents

(From 1A)

At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth said the city should wait on the fee increase until a $30.9 million Midland International terminal replacement project begins in February 1993.

Faircloth argued that the increase would make Midland International less competitive with Lubbock's airport, which recently raised its landing fee from 45 cents to 50 cents.

"We have to stay competitive," Faircloth said. "We have to stay even more competitive with Lubbock. I don't want to see us shoot our feet off."

He said the revenue increase from a 60 cent fee could be insignificant compared to the business that might be lost because of the hike.

"I propose we might want to cut our landing fee in half," Faircloth said.

Melvin Olsen, Dallas-based vice president of capacity planning for American Airlines, said he does not see the fee increase as a large financial burden to his airline.

Olsen, who was in Midland on Thursday to attend a Permian Basin Airport meeting, said the fee would be passed on to customers.

As for Midland International's attempts to lure more air service, Olsen said the increased fee would not cause airlines to balk at the idea.

"I don't see it as a roadblock as long as we're treated the same by all competitors," he said.

The last landing fee increase here was in 1985, when the city moved it from 45 cents to 50 cents.

ROAST: Richards target for wit

(From 1A)

Larry L. King, the novelist, served as master of ceremonies.

Another speaker, former San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein, told the crowd that she wanted to thank the person most responsible for Ann Richards' presence at the roast.

"Unfortunately, Clayton Williams couldn't be here tonight," she said.

Independent Action, founded in 1981 by former Rep. Morris Udall, an Arizona Democrat, has contributed more than $1 million dollars to liberal candidates for Congress.

Thursday night's dinner raised more than $300,000, organizers said.

The new Texas governor, known for her sharp tongue, came under some tangy barbs herself Thursday night.

Lena Guerrero, appointed by Richards as the first woman to the Texas Railroad Commission in almost a century, said the "real miracle" of Ann Richards isn't that "she beat Clayton or is the first Democrat to carry Dallas County since the earth cooled — she singlehandedly brought back bouffant hair" into style."

Added Guerrero: "What's the difference between Ann Richards and God? God doesn't think she's Ann Richards."

PULSE: Many oppose restrictions

said Jan Foust.

Among the 123 callers who favor cutting off funds to any agency mentioning abortion in its counseling was Joy Irving, who said, "I don't want my tax dollars going to a counselor counseling a young woman and encouraging her to have an abortion."

Most callers supporting greater restrictions on funding said that withholding money for counseling is an unsatisfactory first step toward the ultimate goal of outlawing abortion altogether.

"I don't think abortion should be tolerated at all or encouraged in any manner," said Steven Hale.

Opponents of the Supreme Court decried it as a "restriction of free speech."

"I think women need all the help they can get from anybody, particularly from our government," said caller Murray Fasken.

Supreme Court increases police powers of interrogation

The Nation

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The increasingly conservative Supreme Court expanded police powers of interrogation on Thursday — the 25th anniversary of its landmark Miranda ruling on the rights of criminal suspects to keep silent and have a lawyer present during questioning.

In a 6-3 decision, the Court said a suspect who is being represented by a lawyer in one criminal case can be questioned about another crime without the attorney being present.

Writing for the majority, Justice Antonin Scalia said the Sixth Amendment right to be represented by a lawyer in court is separate from the so-called Miranda right to an attorney during police questioning. The 1966 Miranda v. Arizona ruling was based on the Fifth Amendment right against forced self-incrimination, he explained.

If a suspect waives his Miranda rights, he does not automatically pick up a Sixth Amendment right to have a counsel present if police question him about a separate case, Scalia said.

Adding ever-more stories to the structure of constitutional law will cause an eventual collapse, he said. "We decline to add yet another story to Miranda."

The ruling illustrates the conservative majority's "inability to recognize the difference between an inquisitorial and an adversarial system of justice," charged Justice John Paul Stevens in dissent.

"The court's opinion demeans the importance of the right to counsel," he said.

The case decided Thursday centers on Paul McNeil, a Wisconsin man charged with armed robbery in 1987 and represented by a public defender at a bail hearing. While in a Milwaukee jail on that charge, he was questioned by police about a murder and robbery in Caledonia, Wis. Advised of his Miranda rights, he waived them and admitted he had been involved in the Caledonia crimes.

He was eventually convicted of armed robbery and second-degree murder in the Caledonia crimes and sentenced to 60 years in prison. On appeal, McNeil's lawyer said the courtroom appearance with an attorney on a bail hearing invoked his Miranda right to counsel and O'Neil could not be questioned by police about any crime without his lawyer being present.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court disagreed and the Supreme Court affirmed that decision.

"Requesting the assistance of an attorney at a bail hearing does not satisfy the minimum requirement of some statement that can reasonably be construed as an expression of desire for counsel in dealing with custodial interrogation by the police," Scalia said.

Stevens was joined in dissent by Justices Thurgood Marshall and Harry Blackmun — the liberal-moderate wing of the court.

Operators begin WIPP readiness checks

CARLSBAD (AP) — Operators of the federal Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near here have begun a walkthrough of checkout procedures designed to show the plant's readiness to receive radioactive shipments for testing.

"The process is designed to demonstrate every activity pertaining to the management of the test phase, enabling us to be declared ready by the end of July," said A.L. Trego, general manager for the Westinghouse Waste Isolation Division, the operating contractor of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

The walkthrough of the so-called integrated systems checkout began June 3 and is expected to be complete by June 21. That's when the checkout itself begins. The checkout is to be complete by July 18, Westinghouse spokeswoman Beth Farrell said Thursday.

"We are going to be going through every single procedure that we have in connection with our first receipt of waste for the test phase," Farrell said.

The walkthrough, she said, encompasses procedures for checking:

— The monitoring systems of the underground bins.

— The Unloading of TRUPACT waste containers.

— Health physics, including radiation protection activity, such as taking smears of the bins and the TRUPACTS once they come in.

— Continuous air monitors, which detect any type of radiation that might be released.

Trego said WIPP employees will go through each policy and procedure, check out each piece of equipment and demonstrate that key workers have received the necessary training.

The process will run concurrently with an operational readiness review which Westinghouse said is being conducted by a team of largely independent experts assembled by the U.S. Department of Energy to assess WIPP's readiness to begin testing.

WIPP is a U.S. Department of Energy project designed to bury plutonium-contaminated waste from the nation's defense industry 2,150 feet below the surface in salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad. The repository has yet to open, pending resolution of safety and environmental concerns and the withdrawal of land around the site from public use.

Public tours of WIPP will be limited in June and July while the review is under way. Officials said 200 people a month normally tour the facility.

And the General Accounting Office reported Thursday that because of delays and technical problems, the U.S. Department of Energy "will not be ready to dispose of wastes for several more years."

Senate approves 185,000-mile National Highway System

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a change of direction, the Senate Thursday night approved President Bush's proposed National Highway System, endorsing the creation of a 185,000-mile network of Interstate and key feeder highways.

Ratifying a compromise reached after weeks of off-the-floor bargaining, the Senate by voice vote called for the creation of the new highway system to be composed of the 43,000-mile Interstate network and other primary highways connected to the Interstates.

It earmarked about $7.6 billion over five years for maintenance of the new system, requiring that states spend 17.5 percent of discretionary highway aid for that purpose.

The bill sets a spending ceiling of $110 billion for transportation programs over five years.

The bill, which sets a spending ceiling of $110 billion for transportation programs over five years, originally would have done nothing about the new system proposed by Bush.

It still does not incorporate the president's financial proposals.

In general, Bush proposed that 80 percent of construction and maintenance costs of the national system should be paid by the federal government and 60 percent of those costs of other highways eligible for federal aid should come from the federal government.

The Senate bill, though, lays down an 80-20 federal-state sharing for all eligible highways, except for a 75-25 split for construction costs of highways likely to attract new traffic.

"It is our view that 50 good state transportation plans don't add up to a good national highway transportation plan," said Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., in introducing the amendment for the National Highway System.

"In the fifties, inadequate secondary roads were the problem; so we built the Interstate," Durenberger said. "In the nineties, the problem is congestion on the feeder routes to and from those Interstates. This amendment guarantees the states will pledge the resources necessary to address today's problem."

Several senators said Senate approval for the plan would represent a welcome birthday gift for the President. Bush, who turned 67 on Wednesday, scolded Congress in a speech Wednesday night for not bringing the transportation and crime bills to final passage within a 100-day deadline he had set.

The compromise sets up a system where the federal government and the states will select highways for inclusion within two years.

FCC to allow local cable control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission voted Thursday to allow local governments to regulate the prices charged by more than half the nation's cable TV systems.

The cable industry criticized the decision, saying it focused on "price to the exclusion of quality." Members of Congress, city officials and consumer groups said it failed to give consumers relief from rapidly rising cable prices.

"If anyone thought the FCC would do the job of protecting consumers, they just need to look at today's ruling," Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said at a news conference attended by several lawmakers who said the FCC vote demonstrated the need for legislative action.

The Bush administration-backed revision in commission rules would allow only systems facing competition from at least six over-the-air broadcast stations or another multichannel operator to avoid local price controls.

The commission voted 5-0 to overhaul the rules, under which about 97 percent of the nation's 9,600 cable systems are exempt from regulation. The changes will give local governments control over the prices charged by about 60 percent of cable systems.

The commission stopped short of forcing cable companies that escape regulation to carry the TV stations, instead voting to seek additional public comment.

Under the revised rules, an alternative multichannel provider would be considered a competitor only if it was capable of reaching half the homes in the primary cable system's service area and if at least 10 percent of the area's households were subscribers.

The change in the rules will inject "a healthy dose of reality" into the FCC's rules of competition, said Commissioner Sherrie Marshall.

But James Mooney, president of the National Cable Television Association said the decision would hamper the ability of cable systems "to provide diverse programming, up-to-date technology and first-class customer service."

NIMBY syndrome has to be solved

They call it the NIMBY syndrome, NIMBY being the acronyn for "Not In My Back Yard."

It represents the attitude, prevalent in much of America today, that says we should treat those in our society who have drug problems, but "Not In My Back Yard."

In a way, it's similar to the public attitude about prisons. They're necessary, we all admit. But many cities don't want one located near them. Put them off in some other part of the state. Huntsville, perhaps.

The NIMBY syndrome is a problem that must be overcome if drug abusers are to obtain the treatment necessary to free them from the stranglehold of drug abuse.

Dan Schecter knows the depth of the problem. As one of the officials with the Office of National Drug Control Policy, he says, "I think it's a problem that ultimately has to be solved at the community level by changing people's attitudes toward drug treatment."

A poll conducted in late April by ICR Survey Research Group found that 53 percent of those surveyed would support putting a drug treatment center on the block where they live, 42 percent would oppose it and 5 percent said they didn't know or gave no answer.

Opposition to the centers stems primarily from fear. Will the center bring an undesirable element into the neighborhood? Will crime increase? Will youngsters be exposed to the drug culture?

They're all valid concerns. Yet if there is to be hope for those "hooked" by the insidious chemicals known as illegal drugs, the treatment centers are virtual necessities. The centers provide a way of giving drug users effective treatment and getting them back into the mainstream of community life.

In effect, those who are opposing the treatment centers are resigning the drug user — perhaps someone in their own family — to a life of hopeless addiction or worse. That is not an acceptable solution in a society that prides itself on being understanding and compassionate.

The NIMBY symdrome has to be conquered — for the good of the nation.

Lithuanian leader turns to inner spirit

VILNIUS, Lithuania — Support for President Vytautus Landsbergis remains strong here, but a growing minority, secretly stoked by the Soviet KGB, is trying to stick him with the label of "new dictator."

Vice President Bronius Kuzmickas warned us that the KGB, using ethnic Russians and former Lithuanian communist leaders, was attacking Landsbergis personally in an attempt to bust up the nascent Lithuanian democracy that elected him president in March of last year.

Anderson

The more democratic Lithuania becomes, "the more we hear voices that the Lithuanian Parliament is implementing dictatorship," Kuzmickas said. "Some people think democracy is anarchy, that all is allowed and all is possible." But he said democracy needs strong leadership, and some Lithuanians interpret strong leaders as dictators.

He and other sources say the disinformation campaign by the KGB has fed off of Landsbergis' unyielding personality.

Landsbergis remains stoic and nonplussed. His office is inside a barricaded Parliament building guarded only by a few men with hunting rifles, but this rumpled music professor is combative, not defensive with Moscow.

In an interview with us, Landsbergis made it clear that he needs all the personal strength he can muster to stand up to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and the Red Army.

His answers were clipped and to the point. We asked if he thought it was time that the United States recognized Lithuania's independence. "This could have been done before January," he responded, referring to the Jan. 13 massacre of 15 unarmed Lithuanians who were crushed by Soviet tanks and shot to death when they tried to prevent the takeover of a Lithuanian television tower.

Could the deaths have been prevented with U.S. recognition of Lithuanian independence?

"Yes," he replied bluntly. This is the same man who, despite a personal friendship with George Bush, accused Bush one year ago of appeasement on a par with the pre-World War II Munich agreement. At the time, Lithuania was in the middle of a 10-week economic blockade by Gorbachev who wanted to strangle the independence movement. "Iron will melt to wax and water will turn to stone before we retreat," Landsbergis proclaimed.

Landsbergis has that spirit in his genes. Both of his grandfathers worked for Lithuania's independence from the Russian czar at the turn of the century. His paternal grandfather published an underground newspaper and was imprisoned and deported.

After World War I when Lithuania achieved independence, Landsbergis' father served in the republic's army and later fought in the underground battle against the Nazis. Landsbergis' brother was arrested by the Nazis for organizing demonstrations.

Awaiting the call to greatness, Landsbergis became an accomplished pianist, music theoretician and professor at the Vilnius Conservatory. When Gorbachev encouraged reforms, Landsbergis took him at his word and quickly rose to the top of the Sajudis reform movement. He led Lithuania to a declaration of independence and successfully withstood Moscow's economic blockade.

We asked Landsbergis if music gives him any comfort now. Others had told us they occasionally hear him playing the piano in his office.

"Unfortunately," he sighed, "I have no time to listen to music or dream anymore." Lest we feel sorry for him, he continued, "Work is not a sad thing. I just have lots of work."

Hale's 'mistake' made by choice

After reading the statements of Mrs. Bryan Allen Hale in the Midland Reporter-Telegram of June 8, I had to write my objection.

Mrs. Hale said that her husband had hurt no one by his actions. I wonder if the little 10-year old girl who was raped by her father would agree with Mrs. Hale. Hale participated in that little girl's agony by purchasing a videotape of her rape. And how long would it be before Hale's addiction which Mrs. Hale referred to as a "way of handling stress" become an excuse for acting out his fantasies on some innocent child? Killer Ted Bundy said that watching and reading pornography was the one and only reason for his madness. How many more Ted Bundys does this world need before we see the correlation between pornography and the foulest crimes against society.

Mrs. Hale said a "compassionate society" would see that Hale was given treatment and not punishment. How interesting it is to me that so many people accused of crimes against society cry out for treatment from that society . . . a revelation of need that seems to come only after arrest. If anyone should know of the aid of treatment, Mr. Hale certainly should. Why then, did he not seek treatment before he was arrested? I think the answer is obvious. He enjoyed his lifestyle and did not want it interrupted.

Mrs. Hale was right about one thing, however. What Mr. Hale did was because of a "disease." A disease called sin, which is "caught" by choice and not by chance.

New World Order just a sprig from old root

To those who have been fooled into believing that the proposed new world order is a new or good thing for mankind, stop — look again! Not only have the communists been blowing the horn for the new world order for many decades, warnings against its repressions have been made long ago.

G.K. Chesterton, noted poet and writer, died in 1936. Before he died, he left these words of warning which should be heeded by all Americans who desire to be free:

"Beware of men and movements that speak the language of Babel. Regardless of whether they are Communists or Fascists, Universalists or Deists, Socialists or Capitalists, Alchemists or Templars, Liberals or Conservatives: beware of their New World Order; beware of their Peace in our Time; beware of their New Age; beware of their Novus Ordo Seclorum.

"It is merely part and parcel of that same Tower of Babel impulse which God cursed so long ago. It is merely a new sprig from the primordial root of humanism; man seizing his own destiny and making a name for himself in history." (G.K. Chesterton, as quoted from "The Blood of the Moon," by George Grant, 1991, p. 9)

Beware good citizens! The New World Order is a trap of tyranny. It may sound good, but the curse on it can only bring misery!

Civil rights revolution brings discrimination

The current brouhaha over civil rights legislation — regardless of what form it takes — illustrates how demagoguery and political opportunism is pushing the United States toward racial divisiveness.

It began in 1989 with some Supreme Court decisions that were, in fact, of minor importance to anyone except lawyers. The principal decision was in a case called Wards Cove Packing Co. versus Antonio.

Reese

An old Reconstruction law, unknown to most people and used rarely, allows unlimited monetary damages to a racial minority who is the victim of discrimination.

All the court said was that if a plaintiff contends that certain hiring or promotion practices indirectly result in discrimination, then the plaintiff must prove that the practice is not necessary to the conduct of the business.

Sounds like a reasonable ruling to me. If I'm going to contend that the requirement of a college degree for a certain position amounts to indirect racial discrimination, then I ought to be able to prove that requiring that college degree is not necessary for the conduct of the business. Otherwise, the logical presumption is that the requirement was not designed to discriminate.

Democratic demagogues in the House and Senate, however, leaped on the decision to falsely claim it was setting back civil rights and rushed in with the bill that would not only reverse that decision — a bad practice in any case — but go far beyond it.

They hoped, in doing so, to paint Republicans as uncaring about civil rights and thus keep black voters in the Democratic column.

Republican demagogues, however, not to be outdone, saw a political opportunity of their own — to raise the issue of law-imposed racial quotas. As evidence of Republican opportunism, this is the very issue they condemn when it is raised by David Duke, a Louisiana legislator and former Klansman.

The bill would have the effect of imposing quotas, regardless of language to the contrary, because about the only way a business could prove that some simple requirement was not indirectly discriminating would be to point to enough minority faces on the payroll to match the local population mix.

Bear in mind that earlier civil rights legislation explicitly forbade the busing of children to achieve racial balance, but the practice was carried out anyway. We have already had, in effect, for years racial and other minority quotas, though they are not spelled out in writing and not spoken about honestly and openly.

This has come about because it is difficult to prove racial discrimination, except in the most blatant cases. It's also difficult for the employer to prove he is not guilty of discrimination. The law cannot deal with intangibles, so whether it was a bureaucrat or judge, when it came time to decide if racial discrimination was being practiced or eliminated, they just counted heads.

This, of course, is a stupid practice because one cannot logically infer from either too many or too few heads whether that result is based on bigotry or other circumstances.

The consequences have been cumulative and negative. Where the civil rights revolution sought a color-blind society, where opportunity is equal and achievement is based purely on one's merit, the demagogues, judges and bureaucrats have constructed a color-conscious society where race or sex or ethnic background is a decisive factor.

This has resulted in double standards — one set of requirements for whites and another set for minorities. The latest sophistry is called race-norming, where scores are averaged by racial groups. Not surprisingly, this is producing bitterness and resentment. But that is another column.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Presbyterians hold the line on morality

American Presbyterians have decided for now to remain part of a religion. A religion, you might have noticed, is different from a social movement or a political party. Or maybe you hadn't noticed, which would be understandable. Plenty of religions today function as political and social movements.

Murchison

Hitching up its Geneva gown, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) rejected — on religious grounds — this week a proposal that would have refashioned the historic Christian norms on sexuality. It is cause for wonderment and celebration.

A Presbyterian committee had suggested affirming relations between homosexuals and unmarried heterosexuals, provided those relations were based on "justice-love." Critics detected the odor of something, well, un-Presbyterian emanating from this enterprise.

Sure, the Progressive-Reactionary Party or the National Committee to Save the World or any of thousands of organizations enjoyed the right to clamor for the acceptance of new insights into human behavior. But the organization actually entertaining such a proposal was none of these. It was the Presbyterian Church. Presbyterians were different.

Well, weren't they? Because they claimed authority from a Higher Source. The standards they professed were not their own. These standards were received, not confected. They could be found written down in a certain Book for which Presbyterians expressed official reverence.

Thus, when the roll was called up yonder at the General Assembly meeting in Baltimore, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) held firm, by a 14-1 margin.

Gay rights advocates, who would have benefited from the proposed rewrite of the moral canons, find the vote upsetting and promise to renew the struggle. They have no scarcity of options. Other churches are dealing with the similar proposals, though none goes quite so far as that which the Presbyterians turned back.

The Episcopal Church, meeting in Phoenix next month, is first up to bat. A proposal to let bishops ordain practicing homosexuals to the priesthood is on the agenda. Whether the Presbyterian vote advances or retards the proposal's chances is guesswork at best.

Yes, it gets tricky when you're unsure whether you belong to a religion or a political party.

One thing that both enterprises have in common is open enrollment. Nobody can make the members stay or go. Presbyterians, Episcopalians and other erstwhile "mainstream" Christian bodies have been declining sharply in membership since the 1960s. The decline is frequently linked to these various churches' increased willingness to jettison purely religious criteria of belief and dabble in politics. The less like religion religion becomes, the fewer people want to belong, it seems.

The moral disintegration of the '80s and '90s has plenty of secular witch doctors scratching their heads for ideas. How to minimize violence, business corruption, general dishonesty and growing lack of respect between man and woman? Changing the standards is part of it. If people aren't going to do as they're supposed to, why, tell them they're supposed to do the very thing they're doing already. This will please them no end. Essentially that is what the Presbyterians were asked to do — coddle members whose conduct was at odds with traditional Presbyterian standards.

What the churches have forgotten, ironically enough, is that they uniquely hold the key to moral recovery. Churches believe — at least they say they do — in revelation — in truths that remain true whether people like them or not. How come, then, they fear to invoke revelation — the idea of truth as imparted from a God who gives and directs according to his will?

Churches in the last decade of the second millennium of the Christian era grow afraid to assert the Christian, or even the distinctive denominational, characteristics they profess. Their light they cunningly hide under bushels. Wearier and wearier modern people get of upending those bushels on the off chance of uncovering something truly spectacular.

U.S.: Volcano will change talks on Clark Air Base lease

MANILA, Philippines (NYT) — American officials warned Thursday that an erupting volcano may shut down Clark Air Base in the central Philippines for months, if not years, and will alter negotiations with the Philippine government over a new lease for the sprawling and now largely deserted base.

Volcano scientists say 4,800-foot Mount Pinatubo could easily continue to erupt beyond September, when the current American lease expires both for Clark and for the U.S. Navy base at Subic Bay.

The volcano is about 10 miles west of Clark, one of the largest American military installations outside the United States, and has threatened to overwhelm the base with a torrent of molten rock and ash.

"It's going to be months before we're clear on the state of the danger to Clark," said the U.S. ambassador to the Philippines, Nicholas Platt. "And it's hard for me to envision regular operations resuming until people are satisfied that there is no danger from the volcano."

In an interview, Platt said it was too early to tell how the eruption of Pinatubo, which had been dormant for more than six centuries when it sprang to life Sunday, might affect what have been the often contentious negotiations with the Philippines on the terms of a new lease for Subic Bay, Clark and several smaller American military installations.

However, another American official in Manila said the volcano would "obviously have a big impact on the negotiations. Past a point, how much do we need to hold on to Clark if it's under threat from a volcano for years?"

Other officials said they believed that, even if new scientific evidence indicated Pinatubo would continue to erupt for years, the United States would want to retain its right to use Clark once the danger had passed.

They suggested the eruption could affect the base negotiations by reducing the amount of compensation — direct payments and other financial incentives — that the United States was willing to provide to the Philippines for use of Clark and Subic Bay.

Despite what had been the American desire to retain control of Clark, military officials have acknowledged that many of the essential functions of the base could easily be transferred to other American installations in the Pacific.

The last American jet fighters assigned to Clark were pulled out earlier this month, before the eruption of Pinatubo, and the air base is now used primarily as a refuelling and logistics center.

Subic Bay is another matter. It is a principal maintenance, support and storage base for the 180 ships of the Pacific Fleet, and the most convenient full-service port for Navy vessels in most areas of the Indian Ocean. Moreover, its large force of skilled Filipino shipyard workers make repairs at Subic Bay less expensive than in American yards.

Philippine negotiators also appear to understand how the negotiations may now be influenced by the unpredictable temperament of a volcano.

Philippine Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus was overheard at a reception Wednesday joking about Pinatubo's impact on the base talks. He seemed to suggest the volcano had accomplished what many Philippine opponents of the American bases had failed to do — get the Americans out.

"The U.S. forces showed that they could withdraw in three hours," he was reported to have said.

Pinatubo continued to give evidence Thursday of its fury, unleashing a 15-mile-high mushroom cloud of swirling gases and ash as it erupted again at 8:41 Thursday morning (7:41 p.m. Wednesday, central time).

Thursday morning's eruption, the third since the eruptions began Sunday, unleashed what Philippine seismologists described as a giant mud flow down the ash-covered western slope of Pinatubo and into nearby rivers.

Major invites Gorbachev to Seven talks

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the seven leading industrial democracies will meet with Mikhail Gorbachev after their summit next month, Prime Minister John Major said Thursday, but British officials reiterated the Soviet president shouldn't expect major aid.

Gorbachev wants Western financial help to transform the Soviet economy to a market system, and has been lobbying for months to be invited to meet with the Group of Seven leaders after their July 15-17 economic summit in London.

Major said the decision was made after consulting with members of the group, which is made up of the United States, Britain, Japan, Canada, Germany, France and Italy.

Western leaders have been cautious about extending loans to the Soviets, but President Bush on Tuesday granted $1.5 billion in credits to buy U.S. grain.

Major met Wednesday with the chairman of the Supreme Soviet legislature, Anatoly Lukyanov.

"He brought with him a message from President Gorbachev reaffirming his commitment to political and economic reform," Major said.

British officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, stressed that the Soviet president could expect encouragement and economic advice, but no financial handouts.

One senior source indicated the Group of Seven leaders might agree on increased technical assistance based on strict monitoring of the implementation of Soviet economic reforms.

He said Gorbachev would be pressed on three issues: privatization of state-owned enterprises, private ownership of land, and agreements to allow foreign investors to repatriate profits.

"We want to examine the commitment of the Soviet Union to economic reform — not just words but putting it into practice," said the source.

Sri Lankan army massacres 150

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Government troops angered by the death of three of their comrades "ran berserk" Thursday and shot, hacked and beat to death more than 150 Tamil villagers, according to survivors.

A Defense Ministry official said he had been told the civilians died when Tamil rebels used them as human shields in an attack on government troops near Batticaloa, in eastern Sri Lanka.

"I don't know how many, but we have received complaints of a massacre," said Air Chief Marshal Walter Fernando, deputy secretary of the ministry. "If this is true, the strongest action will be taken against the miscreants."

Accounts of the massacre from local residents and clergy who have been reliable in the past indicated the troops ransacked two villages southwest of Batticaloa in revenge for the deaths of three soldiers a day before.

"Troops ran berserk and killed innocent Tamils," said Pararajasegaram Joseph, a Tamil.

Under U.S. pressure, Baghdad to help Kurds with harvest

DOHUK, Iraq (AP) — Under pressure from the United States, Iraq has agreed to help the Kurds harvest 120,000 tons of wheat growing around the allied-occupied zone, an American official said Thursday.

It was the first agreement between the government and the Kurds since the Kurdish rebellion in March.

A Kurdish official said meanwhile that Saddam Hussein's government had presented a proposal for a Kurdish autonomous zone and that its leaders planned to meet to discuss it.

"We must meet very soon, in a week I hope," said Fadhail Merani, a top official of the Kurdish Democratic Party. "We must grasp the time and make peace with Baghdad."

Iraqi deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz, visiting Turkey, said an agreement on an autonomous Kurdistan was not ready, however.

"We made great progress," Aziz said. "But there are remaining issues and we need some more time to reach an agreement."

Fred Cuny, an official with the U.S. State Department's Disaster Assistance Relief Team, said Baghdad only agreed to help with the harvest after the United States threatened to gather the wheat itself and give it all to the Kurds.

Iraq faces a severe food shortage and wheat is a staple of the Iraqi diet. Without the agreement, the Kurds might have sold their wheat to Syria.

Iraq faces a severe food shortage and wheat is a staple of the Iraqi diet.

"The Iraqis had no other choice," Cuny said. "It was consent to our demands or lose it all."

If the agreement had not been negotiated, the Kurds might have sold their wheat to another country, such as Syria, officials said.

About 120,000 tons of wheat, or one-third of Iraq's total crop, is growing in fields around the allied-controlled security zone in northern Iraq, according to State Department and United Nations figures.

The area is Iraq's breadbasket, and agriculture is second only to the government in the number of people it employs.

Iraq's Board of Grain will buy the wheat for 800 dinars, about $150 on the black market, per metric ton — a good price, Cuny said.

Arab absentee landlords will get half the profits, Kurdish farmers 40 percent and the Kurdistan Front, a coalition of Kurdish political parties, 10 percent, said Merani, who helped negotiate the plan.

He said the agreement means Baghdad was ready to accept Kurdish demands for a return of their traditional lands.

During the 1970s and '80s, the Iraqi army destroyed scores of villages in the Zakho and Dohuk valleys. The Kurds were either killed or resettled as part of Saddam's policy to crush opposition by the ethnic minority.

Woman gets death sentence

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — A young Lebanese mother was sentenced to death Thursday by a martial law court that convicted her of turning her Kuwaiti husband over to the Iraqi military, who executed him on their second wedding anniversary.

It was the second death sentence handed down by the court since it started hearing cases May 19, and the first against a woman.

The woman, 26-year-old Fatima Ramez Tafla, stayed silent for a moment after the judge read the sentence, then burst into tears. Unable to walk, she had to be supported by police as she was taken out of court.

She testified that her father-in-law fabricated the story that she had denounced her husband, Walid, as a member of the resistance after a marital dispute. The couple and their son had lived with his relatives.

The Iraqis targeted military and police officers, especially those believed active in the resistance, for execution.

Mrs. Tafla said she last saw her husband after a quarrel Sept. 18, and Iraqi police told her the next day he was imprisoned. She said her husband was shot Sept. 29. Friends said Walid had not been in the military but smuggled guns for the resistance.

"During the occupation I had no idea why they captured him. Why did they accuse me of collaboration?" she said.

U.N. sets 30 percent cap for Iraq

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States failed to persuade the rest of the Security Council that half of Iraq's oil revenues should be used to pay for war compensation, diplomats said Thursday.

Even Britain, that staunch American ally, is unwilling to demand that half of the Iraqi revenues — possibly worth $10 billion if oil prices stay around $21 a barrel — should be used to pay war damages.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar recommended on May 31 that no more than 30 percent go toward compensation, and diplomats said that top figure was the one the United States would have to accept.

The 15 Security Council nations will form a board of trustees to handle the compensation fund and decide on the percentage. No country will have veto power on the Geneva-based U.N. Compensation Commission. Decisions must be made by a nine-vote majority.

Western diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States will not be able to rally the nine votes needed to have its way.

Publicly, the State Department is adamant. Spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said June 3 that 30 percent "is too low." John Bolton, assistant secretary of state for international organizations, said Wednesday the U.S. position is unchanged.

U.S. Ambassador Alexander Watson said after private Security Council consultations on the subject, "The U.S. position is that we ought to be focusing first and foremost on the people who are victims of Saddam Hussein's unparalleled aggression."

In the council meeting, however, only Romania leaned toward the U.S. position, diplomats said. Except for Britain, all other members sought a top figure of 30 percent or less. Yemen and Cuba argue for 10 percent.

Kuwait says its damages total at least $60 billion.

Sister Solteris Ebers, Sister Mathea Dahloff and Sister Urbana Steffenkock have been called to New Jersey by their order, the Missionary Sisters of the Immaculate Conception.

Nuns' departure marks end of era

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

St. Ann's Catholic School will be the site of a bittersweet reunion Saturday night when about 500 church supporters gather to bid farewell to the last three nuns in their convent.

Sister Solteris Ebers, Sister Mathea Dahloff and Sister Urbana Steffenkock have been called to New Jersey by their order, the Missionary Sisters of the Immaculate Conception.

The sisters, all in their 80s, are looking forward to retirement.

"We've all passed our Golden Jubilee and are ready to retire," said Sister Urbana, who has been with St. Ann's church for 22 years.

"There will be a sense of loss of the spirit they brought to the community," said Pat Stanley, chairman of Saturday's event. "But the convent chapel will be dedicated to the sisters as the Immaculate Conception Chapel."

Pastoral assistant Sister Regina Decker, who is from a different order, will remain with the church.

"Missionary sisters have been with St. Ann's since the school was founded in 1950," Ms. Stanley said. About 26 sisters from the order have served St. Ann's Church during the 41 years, according to Sister Jean Amore, who lived in St. Ann's convent in the 1970s.

Sister Jean is in Midland for the celebratory dinner. An additional 10 nuns are returning to Midland for the reunion.

Richards to Congress: End antitrust immunity for insurance industry

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Texas Gov. Ann Richards told lawmakers here Thursday that the overhaul of a 1945 law exempting the insurance industry from federal antitrust restrictions would be a "long overdue" antidote forcing the industry "to learn the joys of competition."

Richards, who last week signed into law a major revision of her own state's insurance system, including the repeal of Texas' antitrust exemption for the industry, told a House Judiciary subcommittee that similar federal action is needed.

"Your effort to modify the antitrust immunity the insurance industry enjoys is long overdue," she said. "No other industry in this nation receives the type of immunity, or implied immunity, that is provided through McCarran-Ferguson."

She was referring to the 1945 law that exempted the insurance industry from provisions of the Sherman Antitrust Act and enabled the industry to share data and information that critics charge has led to price-fixing, "carving-up" of markets and other anti-competitive practices.

Consumer watchdogs have long sought a rollback of the McCarran-Ferguson exemption, but the complexities of insurance regulation and the fact that the industry has had relatively few crises have largely blunted such efforts.

However, the liability insurance crisis that unfolded in the late 1980s, which saw the cancellation of insurance for many businesses and small cities, coupled with the soaring cost of health and auto insurance in many states, has rekindled calls for reform.

Insurance industry representatives, however, warned lawmakers Thursday that scaling back the antitrust exemption would damage the industry and harm consumers by unleashing a flood of litigation and regulations.

Richards argued that the $2 trillion-a-year insurance industry needs few federal immunities from antitrust laws.

"These are hardly people that are in need of our protection. These are people who need to learn the joys of competition," said Richards, borrowing a phrase from the 1990 Texas gubernatorial campaign in which her Republican opponent, Midland oilman Clayton Williams, often spoke of forcing drug criminals to "learn the joys of bustin' rocks."

Richards said the antitrust overhaul would be in the insurance industry's best interest.

"This is an industry that is very eager to clean up its act and its image," she said.

George W. Sampson, New York State's assistant attorney general, joined Richards in urging removal of the antitrust exemption.

"The McCarran-Ferguson Act effectively handcuffs our offices, taking away a large part of our antitrust arsenal," Sampson said.

Passage of the overhaul measure, known as H.R. 9, "would once again subject this key industry to competitive forces, putting it on a level playing field with all other businesses in this country," Sampson contended.

Police write 218 tickets to local motorists for lacking restraint

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

As part of a crackdown on motorists who refuse to buckle up, Midland police have issued more than 200 citations in eight days, police said.

On selected days between June 1 and June 12, officers assigned to STEP (Selective Traffic Enforcement Program) have issued 218 "no safety belt" citations. During those days, two officers have put in a combined eight hours a days specifically to catch unrestrained motorists.

As a result of STEP, eight citations were also issued for no child-restraint device, 13 for no driver's license, and one each for running a stop sign, running a red light, failure to yield and inspection sticker violation.

Citations written as part of the STEP program are in addition to tickets issued by regular patrol.

The added enforcement was implemented on June 1 and will continue until Sept. 31.

"Our function is to increase the compliance rate with buckling up, not punishment," said Lt. Clint Lovejoy with the Midland Police Department traffic

Head of professional group raps coverage of 'Bookgate'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A local television station's coverage on Permian High School's yearbook presented "a chilling picture of half-truths," according to a representative of a state educators association.

Andy Drewlinger, president of the Texas Association of Journalism Educators, said recent media criticism leveled at Permian High School journalism teacher Flo Lambeth prompted him to call a news conference Thursday afternoon.

Ms. Lambeth attended the news conference, which was held in her home.

The news coverage in question concerned 600 student portrait pictures allegedly missing from the PHS yearbook.

In a prepared statement, Drewlinger lambasted a news station for its "refusal to air factual material explaining the non-news that has been blown into a story of such scandalous proportions that 'Bookgate' is the only appropriate term, and a shocking lack of

Bunton sentences Midland man for possessing porn

By David Morris
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III sentenced a Midland man to five years in prison Thursday for receiving child pornography and violating his federal probation.

Ernest Schmeltzer, 41, told Bunton that severe depression led him to order a magazine entitled "Lolita," which contained pictures of minors engaging in sexual activity.

Schmeltzer, arrested in January after FBI agents discovered the magazine at his house, had been serving a five-year federal probation term for a 1987 child pornography conviction in Oklahoma.

He admitted Thursday that he violated the conditions of his probation by purchasing "Lolita."

Bunton sentenced him to 21 months in prison for the probation violation. He also sentenced him to 39 months on the pornography possession charges, to which Schmeltzer pleaded guilty April 25. Schmeltzer will serve the sentences consecutively.

Schmeltzer, of 3509 Park Lane, faced a maximum of 10 years in prison for the child pornography conviction. However, federal sentencing guidelines called for a 21- to 27-month prison term.

Bunton said he "departed upward" from the guidelines because Schmeltzer had committed the same offense in Midland for which he'd been placed on probation in Oklahoma.

"You absolutely have no respect for federal courts or any courts," Bunton told Schmeltzer, who must

Man to serve time for drug transaction

By David Morris
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III sentenced Robert Shane Jenkins, who pleaded guilty in April to using a telephone to facilitate an LSD transaction, to four years in prison Thursday.

It was the maximum sentence allowed for the offense, and it came despite written pleas on Jenkins' behalf from law enforcement personnel in Texas and New Mexico.

Although Bunton acknowledged that Jenkins had "turned his life around," he said the seriousness of Jenkins' crime warranted the maximum sentence.

"This particular madness that you were involved in involves principally children," Bunton told Jenkins. "You knew better than to get involved in this, and you did."

Investigators said Jenkins, 20, was involved with two other men in a scheme to smuggle "acid" into Midland from Albuquerque, N.M., last September.

The other men, 21-year-old Kyle Lee Harris and 19-year-old Kirk Thomas Morrow, already have been sent to prison in con-

Festivities begin

Juneteenth '91 began Thursday night at Midland's Washington Park, where clothing adorned with the likeness of Malcolm X, above, was among items on sale at booths. Juneteenth festivities — which commemorate the week slaves in Texas learned of their emancipation — continue tonight at Washington Park with a basketball tournament. At 10 a.m. Saturday, a parade steps off from Nobles and Lamesa roads, and on Sunday, an all-city gospel music program begins at 6 p.m.

Nesting kites on defensive at local park

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Falcon-like Mississippi kites nesting in the Grafa Park area of west Midland this week have been swooping in on people, cats and other birds protecting their tree-nesting young.

State and federal laws prohibit tampering with kites, a predator which feasts on frogs, snakes, lizards and insects.

Parents of fledgling kites are protective of their offspring, said Midge Erskine, a federally licensed Midland bird rehabilitator.

"But what's interesting," she said, "some kites protect the eggs and nest, and others protect the young birds. They are quite individual about that. They are protecting their young."

The mockingbird, the Texas state bird, is renowned for its aggressiveness in protecting its nests and babies by pouncing on threatening animals, especially cats.

Pamela Papasan, a Midland teenager who on Thursday afternoon was lounging around Grafa Park with her sisters, Amber, 11, and R.J., 6, and their mother, had not seen the kites around the city park.

But she has seen other birds, particularly mockingbirds, launch attacks in protecting their young ones from perceived threats. Mockingbirds live in her family's yard and in her neighbors' yards.

"Our next-door neighbor had little, bitty ... birds," Pamela recalled. "The mother chased us to

"I have seen the classroom sizes change," Sister Urbana said. "There are so few nuns and so many lay teachers now."

The sister said she remembered when the original St. Ann's convent — which comfortably housed a dozen sisters — was torn down. "It was just all in a big heap," she said.

Sister Jean said that she saved a few bricks from the old convent. "They started demolishing it on Christmas Eve," she said. "I put away a few bricks in an attic."

She said, "What I remember most about the convent in the 1970s is the sense of hospitality it brought to Midland."

Sister Jean said the convent has served as a shelter for the elderly, foreign exchange students and families in need.

Four members of one family stayed in the convent following an accident in 1975 which resulted in the death of one teenager. A framed keepsake from the family reads: "A friend doubles our joy and divides our grief."

Because of the strong sense of hospitality the convent provided, Sister Jean said, "the hospital would call us if someone was stranded there."

The nuns will make their new home in the West Paterson Immaculate Conception Convent in New Jersey. Their international order serves churches in Brazil, Namibia, Taiwan, Germany and the United States. It was founded in 1910 in Brazil by Sister Immaculata.

"There are fewer and fewer nuns available to teach," Ms. Stanley said. "A lot of lay people are doing their jobs. There just are not thousands of women going into convents like there once was. We have one priest for a congregation of 2,000 families. That is unusual in itself."

Ms. Stanley said the church offices will expand into the convent. "The changes are part of the times we are living in," she said. She also said the reunion dinner will honor the church's three departing nuns and "all that has gone before them." She commended the charity of the missionary sisters.

"They have offered warmth and hospitality to those who are in need and even to those who are not," she said, laughing. "They will be missed."

A catered dinner is to follow a 5:30 p.m. Mass Saturday. The Midland Community Theatre cast of "Nunsense" will perform excerpts from the musical production at the dinner. About 500 are expected to attend.

Missionary sisters who formerly served St. Ann's Church who are scheduled to attend follow: Sister Jean, Sister Urbana, Sister Mathea, Sister Solteris, Sister Patricia Blostic (formerly Sister Damian), Sister Irene Couget (formerly Sister Francis de Sales), Sister Martha Ginaine (formerly Sister Benedicta), Sister Eleanor Goekler (formerly Sister Michael Marie), Sister Marcia Huber, Sister Sheila Madden (formerly Sister Clarice), Sister Aniceta Marie Redmond, Sister Stephana Whitleigh (a kindergarten teacher with St. Ann's for 23 years) and Sister Saundra McKeta, the provincial coordinator of the U.S. province.

our yard. We had to get away. We went inside. That's just normal," she said of parents' protective ways.

Just off Ma-Mar Court near Grafa Park, Jamie Clifton enjoys the East Texas-like flavor of her neighborhood: the trees, the birds, and the frogs when it rains.

"It's like being in East Texas when we wake up in the morning — like living in the country," she said. "We've got mourning doves, mockingbirds, hummingbirds."

The Grafa Park neighborhood off Midkiff Road is site of a Texas-shaped grove of trees that is a prime nesting area.

By law, its inhabitants are best left alone.

Texas law prohibits the chasing, catching, injuring, and killing of most birds that are not game birds and outlaws the possessing of "any part," including the feathers, of most any bird that is not a game bird. Disturbing nests and eggs of protected birds is illegal. The fine for violating any one of those state laws may be up to $500.

Exceptions to those state laws, according Texas Park & Wildlife Department Game Warden Raymond Custer, are seven unprotected birds — European starlings, English sparrows, ravens, red-winged blackbirds, cowbirds, crows and feral-rock doves or common pigeons.

However, Ms. Erskine said federal laws, which can be quite severe when threatened or endangered species are involved, protect more birds than do Texas laws. Of the seven non-game birds unprotected by Texas laws, the U.S. government protects four — ravens, crows, red-winged blackbirds and cowbirds.

"Federal laws may be more stringent (than state laws)," Custer noted. "State laws may be as stringent as federal laws but can't go beyond federal laws."

division.

The goal of the crackdown is to reach a 70 percent compliance rate in conjunction with a nationwide campaign led by the federal government. Before STEP, Midland was about 67 to 68 percent in compliance.

To help boost the compliance rate, the city of Midland accepted a $15,000 grant provided by the federal transportation department and distributed through the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The grant money is being used solely to cover officer overtime costs.

So far the program has netted more violators than expected, Lovejoy said.

"It's definitely higher than we expected and hopefully four months from now we won't find anybody not wearing them," Lovejoy said.

"I hope the compliance rate will come up and as that goes up, tickets should go down," he said.

In comparison, Midland police, between January and March of this year, issued 200 tickets for seatbelt violations and 50 for unrestrained children. From September to December of last year there were 600 no seat belt citations and 150 unrestrained child tickets.

As part of the campaign, Lovejoy said motorists need to be made aware of the seat belt law. As a result, drivers stopped during STEP will be given pamphlets outlining the program's goal and the law.

Not wearing a seat belt or having an unrestrained child is a Class C misdemeanor carrying a fine up to $200.

State law requires front-seat riders to wear safety belts. Children 2 years old and younger must be strapped into a child-safety seat. Youngsters between 2 and 4 are required to wear seat belts regardless of where they sit in the vehicle.

professionalism as a result."

Drewlinger and Ms. Lambeth both said that a student interviewed in a television news broadcast claimed his picture wasn't in the yearbook. He was in fact in six yearbook pictures, according to Ms. Lambeth.

The journalism teacher said one man claimed on the air that his daughter wasn't in the yearbook and she was in three yearbook photos.

"Our complaints are leveled at one television news station," she said. "I am receiving legal counseling."

Drewlinger said that he has written the Texas Association of Broadcasters in Austin, requesting that they "make an inquiry" into the situation.

The TAJE president said that 151 seniors out of a class of 549 did not have their pictures in the OHS yearbook. Out of a class of 638, PHS lacked photos of 152 seniors.

"I doubt that you can find a yearbook in any school in this state that has 100 percent portraits," Drewlinger said. "Some kids don't want to get in front of

Burglary

ODESSA — About $48,000 of high-voltage line hardware was taken from a TU Electric warehouse, police said.

According to police, a representative of the electric company reported that the hardware was taken between May 12 and June 12 from the storage yard at 310 S. Dixie Blvd.

Among items taken from the fenced area were 40 copper double-bladed switches valued at $40,000.

Assault

A 21-year-old Midland woman reported to police that she was sexually assaulted at north central apartment shortly after midnight on Thursday.

According to police reports, a man entered the apartment — through a locked front door about 12:40 a.m. He then threatened the woman with a knife and raped her, reports stated.

The woman was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital where she was treated and released.

The man was described as black in his 20s wearing dark-colored shirt and pants.

Abduction, assualt

ODESSA — A 12-year-old girl was abducted and sexually assaulted Wednesday evening, police said.

According to police reports, the girl was in the 800 block of East 8th Street about 10 p.m. when her hands were grabbed from behind. The girl told police her hands were bound — maybe with a belt — and she was forced in a white four-door Chrevrolet.

She was then driven around the city before she was sexually assaulted in the car. The assailant let the girl go near 23rd Street and Muskingum Avenue.

The girl was transported and treated at Medical Center Hospital.

The man was described as Hispanic in his mid- to late-20s, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 120 pounds with collar-length black hair, a moustache and brown eyes. He was wearing a white T-shirt and blue jeans.

Indictments

A federal grand jury handed down indictments against 11 people in Midland Thursday. Those indicted and the charges against them:

- Don L. Clay, making false statements to a U.S. government agency, two counts.
- Mario Nieto Mendoza, conspiracy to distribute cocaine and distribution of cocaine, two counts.
- Edilberto Quiroz Leyva, conspiracy to distribute cocaine and distribution of cocaine, two counts.
- David McGruder, Terrence Donnell Rivers, Joe Roy Cockerham, Jason Gardner, Roy James McCoy and Bruce McGruder, possession of crack cocaine with intent to distribute, conspiracy, and distribution of crack cocaine.
- Jeffory Scott Lloyd, credit card fraud, two counts; use of a false social security number, two counts; mail fraud, one count.
- Heriberro Carillo-Valdez, failure to appear, one count.

Fish are hooked on getting an adequate oxygen supply. If the supply becomes too short, the results are dramatic — sick or dead fish.

Kiker

Dr. S.K. Johnson, a fish disease specialist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, said a number of fish kills have been reported recently following periods of overcast days in much of Texas.

"The major cause of occasional fish losses in Texas farms and ponds and lakes is reduced oxygen levels of the water during cloudy days of warm, humid months," Johnson said.

"Recent climatic events have increased oxygen shortages in many ponds," he said. "Two factors: frequent overcast days and rains that have washed in degradable material that also uses up oxygen, have resulted in fish losses."

Johnson said a pond may reach oxygen depletion in one night and the entire pond may be covered with dead or dying fish within a day or so.

"Because pond waters tend toward oxygen shortage at greater water depths, events that cause a mixing of deeper water with the more oxygenated surface also contribute to a condition of oxygen shortage," he said. "Mixing is triggered by strong winds, rain, human and animal disturbance."

Johnson said many fish ponds may be loaded with algae and aquatic weeds.

"If these die or use up more oxygen in darkness than they can produce in light, an overall oxygen loss results," he said. Oxygen concentration in such ponds of water is lowest at dawn, the end of the dark night hours. A downward trend in oxygen levels over several days will cause fish on prepared diets to cease feeding, and within a day or so dead fish will be seen."

He said as the water approaches a state of oxygen depletion, the fish will swim and gape at the surface, trying to force oxygenated water across their gills.

"When losses occur, the larger fish generally die first because they have a greater oxygen need," Johnson said. "Often, one may first observe several large dead fish, and a few days later see extensive losses of smaller fish."

Johnson said even if the oxygen does not become totally depleted, a shortage often will cause the stressed fish to lose resistance to disease.

"Ponds with environmentally stressed fish typically have a few individual fish that show reddish skin sores, produced by normally harmless water bacteria," he said. "While unsightly and damaging to the fish, such infections are not a human health threat."

Johnson said people often produce oxygen shortages in ponds.

"Attempts of people to control dense pond plant growth with herbicides during warm months may cause excess oxygen removal as the plants decompose," he said. "Overstocking and overfeeding fish also cause oxygen shortages."

The fish expert said it is important to get a line on the oxygen shortage problem early.

"Early recognition is essential for solving the problem. If pond owners or fishermen see fish gaping at the water surface, refusing to eat pelleted food, observe a murky green color in the water and see several large dead fish, the problem is well advanced," he said.

Testing of the water for oxygen may be done with a chemical kit available from fish-farming suppliers, he said.

In addition, checking the vitality of one fish can be useful. For testing in this manner, place the fish in a basket and suspend it at a three-foot depth from a pier to determine its vitality, Johnson recommended.

"In small ponds, correction of the oxygen content can be achieved by methods that aerate the top two feet of water," he said. "A pump or other mechanism that exposes water to the air and causes a current at the water surface will aid in getting oxygen from the air. But a person should not pump up deep water, since this may further decrease the oxygen content."

Johnson said one way to help oxygenate the water is with an outboard motor, but the motor boat should remain in a stationary position and not run all over the pond.

He said larger ponds are more difficult to implement emergency aeration.

"A small area of the large pond, however, can be a aerated to serve as a refuge for some fish," he said.

Texas expects juicy peach harvest

By Worth Wren Jr.
Associated Press Writer

TEAGUE, Texas — When former oilman W.R. McSwane reminisces about his childhood on his family's farm during World War II, he recalls 1-gallon syrup cans.

McSwane and his sister — each carrying two empty cans — hauled water daily from a spring to the farmhouse for their family here in east-central Texas.

But today on land that includes the old homestead, McSwang, 53, his wife, two sons and their wives are busy with a different kind of task — harvesting peaches from more than 5,000 trees on over 50 acres.

For the McSwanes and hundreds of other Texas peach farmers, the tasty fruit represents a growing and profitable business.

And this season the family — echoing virtually all Texas peach growers from the lower Rio Grande Valley to Weatherford in the north — are reporting their biggest crop in at least a decade.

Some experts predict that Texans will harvest their largest peach crop ever and perhaps reap record sales as well, said Charles Hall, an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"We had what we called a good year last year," said John Lipe, an extension horticulturist in Gillespie County. "This year, you can call it a bumper crop pretty much statewide."

Lipe said this year's Texas peach crop, estimated by experts at 1 million to 1.7 million 48-pound bushels, promises to be at least the largest since 1981.

He said his own estimate of 1.2 million bushels probably is higher than the official state forecast, scheduled for release on June 11 by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service. Many farmers don't report their harvest estimates to the statistics service, Lipe said.

Texas farmers' peach sales have ranged from about $10 million to $25 million annually, depending on volume, quality and demand, Hall said. This year the crop could exceed $25 million, he said.

"Barring a disaster, we'll have twice the peaches we had last year," said Charles Hutton, one of the family operators of Hutton Fruit Farm near Weatherford. He owns one of the largest peach farms in the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex.

> 'Barring a disaster, we'll have twice the peaches we had last year.'
> — Charles Hutton, Hutton Fruit Farm near Weatherford

"It's probably the best crop I've ever had," said Gary Marburger, who in late April began harvesting some of his 19 peach varieties from his orchard near Fredericksburg.

"(But) we've"always got the chance for hail," he said.

Despite their success, Texas peach farmers can't compete against growers from the big peach producing states of California, Georgia and South Carolina.

"We're small potatoes when it comes to peach production compared to some other parts of the nation," Hall said.

During the 1980s, Texas ranked from sixth to 15th among the nation's peach producing states. Texas' ranking fluctuated due to dramatic changes in weather each year.

Last year, the Texas peach crop placed eighth among U.S. states, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Agriculture Department said that Texas farmers harvested 427,000 bushels in 1990. But experts in Texas say that figure is understated by about 50 percent because it doesn't include farmers' direct sales to consumers at roadside stands, or direct sales to retailers.

Most Texas farmers don't sell their peaches to the large supermarket chains.

Even at the peak of Texas' peach season — late June or early July — a Dallas-Fort Worth resident probably has less than a 25 percent chance of finding a Texas peach in a local supermarket, Hall said.

"Most of the local growers can't get (peaches) into those (large supermarkets)," said Larry Stein, an extension horticulturist in Stephenville.

The chains often want farmers to cool their peaches in a quick water bath, and then box and chill them for longer shelf life. But the additional costs usually exceed the potential returns for owners of small orchards, Stein said.

"If you can't offer them consistent volume," Hall said of the supermarkets, "you can't even play in the ballgame."

About half the Texas crop is delivered wholesale to retailers, said Calvin Lyons, state extension horticulturist based at Texas A&M University in College Station.

The farmers, Lyons said, market a large portion of their peaches by selling them at the farm, at cooperative markets in cities or from their trucks or roadside stands. The growers also deliver their fruit directly to grocery stores, supermarkets or other fruit stands.

Peach orchards dot virtually every region of the state.

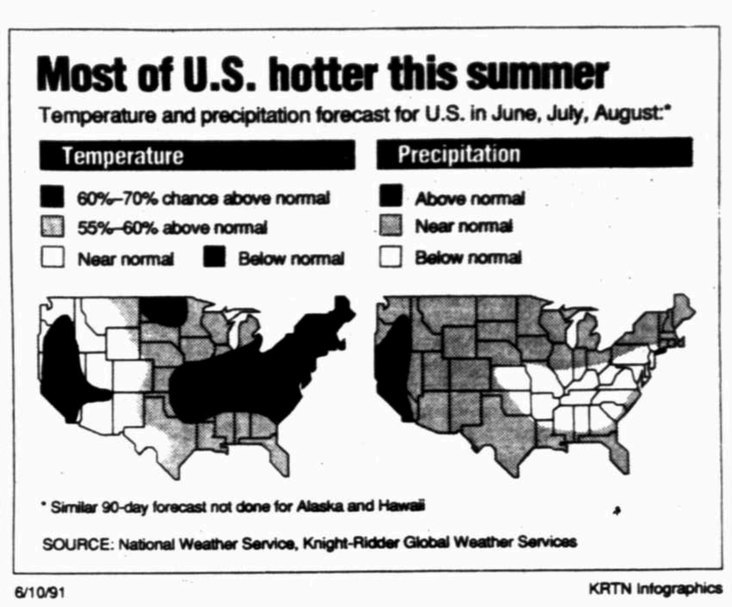
The concentrations of peach farms are scattered from the lower Rio Grande Valley — for early season varieties only — to counties around the towns of Cuero, Fredericksburg, San Saba, Comanche, Weatherford, Montague, Charlie (near Wichita Falls), Groesbeck, Mexia, Fairfield, Teague, Lufkin and Pittsburg.

The McSwanes reside in one of the state's bigger concentrations of peach farms that inclues McLennan, Freestone, Limestone, Cherokee and Angelina counties, Lyons said.

W.R. McSwane said Nancy McSwane, one of his daughters-in-law, and Brenda Smart, a friend, will be selling peaches at the Fort Worth Farmers Market in Benbrook this summer.

The McSwane family and a handful of employees sell almost all their peaches, as well as plums and fresh vegetables, directly to consumers at points as far away as 200 miles.

McSwane's peach sales this year are expected to exceed 10,000 bushels and could top 15,000. Sales could exceed $200,000.



Sulphur Springs to host history of dairy industry

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Gene Dunham's dream of a museum that would preserve the history of the dairy industry didn't have an expiration date.

So if the speed in which the Southwest Dairy Center was developed didn't impress Dunham, then the size of the venture did.

"There were two or three of us who got together and thought we wanted to create a dairy museum for artifacts and historical documents," said Dunham, who retired from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Milk Marketing Office.

"Later, we expanded our goals to an educational agency and to create the dairy education center and the dairy mobile classrooms."

While the center houses artifacts, its sister fleet of mobile classrooms will be available to travel the state carrying the milk message. A third program, an exhibit that will be available to museums on a loan basis, also is in the works.

"I envisioned having a museum, but nothing like this," Dunham told the Sulphur Springs News-Telegram.

The center's dedication will be held Saturday afternoon in conjunction with the Hopkins County Dairy Festival. The $750,000 facility was built with money obtained from the dairy industry through individual producers.

Officials at the dedication will cut a rope instead of a ribbon to promote the agricultural theme.

Dunham, who is president and director of the Southwest Dairy Museum Inc., said he believes the role of the facility and its educational programs will serve as a vehicle to carry the story of the dairy industry to the public.

Children's choir to perform free concert tonight

Staff Report

The Children's Choir Victoria, Texas will present a free concert at 7:30 p.m. today in the sanctuary of First Presbyterian Church of Midland, 800 W. Texas Ave.

The touring choir recently performed the treble choir role in a production of "Jonah" composed and conducted by the Welsh composer, William Mathias, at the Presbyterian National Music Conference in Montreat, North Carolina.

In March, the children's choir of Victoria gave the world premiere of a children's opera by Dr. Richard Wienhorst based on a libretto by the English Author, Sylvia Pick.

The one-act opera is one of very few major works written specifically with the young voice in mind. The opera was commissioned and produced with grants from the Troll Foundation and the Texas Commission on the Arts.

The choir's concert is part of an eleven day tour through New Mexico, Colorado, and Texas, highlighted by singing two services at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs and a noontime concert at Santuario de Guadelupe in Sante Fe.

Tony Norris serves as accompanist for the choir. He graduated from Indiana University with bachelor and master of music in organ degrees.

Sammy Cowen is the director of the children's chorus. She holds Bachelor of Music degrees from Baylor University with post graduate work in Music Education completed at North Texas State University and SMU.

Both high schools take their upperclassmen pictures in three days during summer registration and again during "retake" days, according to Ms. Lambeth.

The high school annual initially came under scrutiny because of the controversy surrounding a pie graph, which indicated the number of times students on campus heard a particular racial slur.

Ms. Lambeth and yearbook staffers said the poll was intended to debunk racism charges leveled by H.G. "Buzz" Bissinger in his book "Friday Night Lights."

Minority leaders and some PHS students found the survey inappropriate.

Ms. Lambeth said there were no complaints from the students at the time of the survey. "The epithet was in quotes to indicate it was offensive," she said. "We used the word the same way the Associated Press had used it to show it was a slur."

Although some minority PHS students said the pie chart was inappropriate in a yearbook, Ms. Lambeth said, "When people look back in 20 years they want to see the issues of the time."

Drewlinger said student publications have the "unique ability to show how young people in a small geographical area feel about these issues."

"I am absolutely amazed the yearbook has caused this problem — that it was perceived that the survey was racist," Ms. Lambeth said. "I am doubly amazed a news station tried to make news out of non-news about the portrait pictures. We just want to put this behind us."

SENTENCE: Schmeltzer faces 5-year prison term

also serve a three-year term of supervised release after his prison term is finished.

Schmeltzer's attorney, Thomas Morgan, promised to appeal the sentence. He had argued that Schmeltzer, a local businessman, is "the type of person who would give you the shirt off his back."

"He has harmed no one," Morgan said.

Schmeltzer himself described his purchase of "Lolita" as a "victimless" crime.

"I did not hurt anybody, and I don't intend to," he told Bunton.

But Bunton was not swayed. He said Schmeltzer hadn't accepted responsibility for his crime, and expressed concern over evidence that Schmeltzer engaged in sexual activity with a minor while on a recent business trip to Taiwan.

In other action Thursday in Midland's federal court, Bunton:

- Sentenced Jim Wayne Hubble, 45, of Odessa to five years probation for embezzling $5,000 from the Odessa Housing Authority. Investigators said Hubble, the housing authority's former assistant operations director, stole the money between June 1985 and June 1990.
- Sentenced Robert Rodriguez Villareal, age unavailable, to 15 years in prison and three years of supervised release for conspiracy in January to distribute heroin.
- Sentenced Manuel Hernandez-Sanchez, 40, to two concurrent 33-month terms for possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and illegal possession of a firearm in January.
- Sentenced Juan Manuel Maldonaldo, 26, to 18 months in prison and three years of supervised release for distribution of heroin in January.
- Sentenced Martin Ray Tucar, 44, to 15 months in prison and three years of supervised release for possession of marijuana with intent to distribute in January.
- Sentenced Thomas Eugene Hollowell, 42, to five years probation, a $2,000 fine and up to 180 days in a halfway house for possession of marijuana with intent to distribute in October, 1990.
- Sentenced Isolda Longuria Garza, 50, to three years probation, 100 hours of community service and up to 120 days in a halfway house for concealing a conspiracy to distribute heroin in January.

nection with the scheme.

Bunton sentenced Harris to five years in prison March 13 for possession of LSD with intent to distribute. Morrow received a four-year sentence on May 10 for using a telephone to facilitate a drug transaction.

Midland police officers arrested Harris on Sept. 22, 1990, at Midland International Airport as he attempted to smuggle 389 hits of LSD that he had purchased in Albuquerque.

Jenkins paid Harris' plane fare from Albuquerque to Midland, investigators said.

Jenkins' attorney, Thomas Morgan, said his client has become a model citizen since his arrest and his three-month stint in the Midland Restitution Center on a state LSD possession charge last fall.

Arguing for probation, Morgan pointed to letters written on Jenkins' behalf by Midland County sheriff's deputies, Midland police officers, Midland District Attorney Al Schorre, and Albuquerque police. The letters were in response to Jenkins' help in shutting down the LSD source in Albuquerque where Harris obtained the 389 hits of LSD.

"If ever there was a case for probation, this is it," Morgan told Bunton.

Bunton, however, said Jenkins was lucky that a plea agreement had led to the dismissal of more-serious LSD possession charges against him.

Morgan said he may appeal Bunton's decision.

Jenkins, who also must serve one year of supervised release after his prison term is finished, is one of several people netted in an ongoing state and federal investigation of LSD use in Midland.

The Department of Public Safety, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the U.S. Attorney's Office and the Midland County District Attorney's Office have been cooperating in the investigation, which began last fall.

In addition to Jenkins, Morrow and Harris, the probe also has netted 19-year-old Chris Davidson, who pleaded guilty in May to concealing the smuggling scheme from authorities. He could face up to three years in prison for his role in the operation.

Others nabbed in the probe include Clayton Wade Williams, son of former Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams Jr. He pleaded guilty to LSD possession last December; in February, Bunton sentenced him to 12 months in federal custody, six of which was to be spent in a boot-camp style prison in Pennsylvania. Williams has appealed the sentence.

The probe also has led to three convictions in Midland's state district courts.

MC adds class to summer lineup

Staff Report

An introductory pottery class has been added to the Midland College summer schedule. The non-credit course will meet on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m., beginning June 18 and ending Aug. 13.

Boyd Harris is to teach the class, which will focus on both hand-built and wheel-thrown objects. The finished items will be low-fire and non-functional, not stoneware, Harris noted.

"Although the class is designed primarily for beginners, those with experience could benefit from the instruction in Raku and primitive pitfiring techniques," he said.

Students should wear old clothes and be prepared to work with clay during the first class. A ceramic tool kit should be purchased from the Midland College bookstore prior to the class. Students also should bring several plastic trash bags to the first class meeting.

Cost of the course is $37, plus ceramic tools. Persons wishing to enroll should register in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, not later than 8 p.m. Monday, June 17.

Workaholics' vacations differ from those of non-fast-trackers

By Jenny Vogt
N.Y. Times Service

If you're an uptight workaholic, it might be unrealistic to expect that a vacation soaking up sun on a deserted island will leave you refreshed and rarin' to meet a new day.

Rather, spending vacation doing a lot of nothing will likely only frustrate such fast-trackers, according to Dr. Paul Rosch, president of the American Institute of Stress in Yonkers, N.Y.

Driven personalities "are apt to feel guilty on vacation or while doing nothing because their mind is always on their work," Rosch said. "But if you can combine some type of activity that allows you to feel productive and that still allows some relaxation, then that's a proper blend."

This summer, Americans are expected to take 326 million trips at least 100 miles from home, according to the Washington, D.C.-based U.S. Travel Data Center, a private, non-profit travel and tourism research firm. Stress experts say a large number of those traveling qualify as workaholics.

A good vacation approach for these people is to come up with a game plan before embarking, Rosch said.

"If you have some well-defined purpose before you go and you come back from your vacation with a sense of accomplishment, then I think your vacation qualifies as being productive," he said. Goals might include reading a book, fulfilling a fast-paced travel itinerary or making some business calls.

Rosch, a self-proclaimed workaholic, followed his own advice when he recently vacationed in Atlantis, Fla., where he has a winter home. He spent a lot of time golfing, but did some work on his computer and returned work-related telephone calls.

Vacation plans are equally important for stressed-out individuals, says Dr. F.J. McGuigan, executive director of the International Stress and Tension Control Association in San Diego.

"You don't have to be compulsive about it. It may be as simple as setting a main goal of 'I'm going to relax and have a good time and nobody's going to dissuade me from that.' "

Physicians often advise workaholics or stressed-out individuals to relax and take a vacation, but they don't tell them how to do it, McGuigan said.

"I recall a man who had been forced to take a vacation to Florida from Wall Street and his family couldn't find him one day and they finally found him down at the local broker's office, sitting there just as tense as he ever was in New York," he said.

This is why it's important to come up with ways to relax before the vacation arrives, McGuigan said. "What this method is, essentially, is learning to feel the tension in your muscles and then relaxing it away."

For example, he said, rather than allowing a traffic jam to get you down while driving to your vacation site, relax and enjoy the extra time.

"Tell yourself, 'I'm not going to get involved in this craziness. There's nothing I can do about it anyway. I'm just going to relax and listen to the radio.' "

The bottom line, McGuigan said, is that everyone — workaholics and stressed-out individuals notwithstanding — can learn to relax.

"But some people," he admitted, "just have farther to go than others."

Calendar features Lamesa child's art

Staff Report

Sonya, a 9-year-old foster child from Lamesa, designed the cover of the "1991 Tribute to Foster Parents" calendar. This calendar, which features artwork by Texas foster children, received the prestigious "Best of Texas Bronze Award" from the Texas Public Relations Association.

The calendar, in its third year of production, includes quotes from foster children, parents of children in foster care, and others who have benefited from contributions of foster parents.

Sonya described her feelings about her featured artwork: "When I was coloring the picture, I was happy and sad; happy because I knew I was safe and sad because I missed my mom."

L.J. Nelson, Sonya's caseworker, said, "Sonya doesn't express her feelings very well, so doing this picture helped her focus on those feelings. She's a survivor."

Of the 14 children whose art appears on the calendar, four have returned home, five are still in foster care and five have been adopted.

The first year the calendar was produced, the cover was designed by a foster child from Odessa. The month of January in last year's calendar featured the youngest artist to date, a 4-year-old from Midland.

Backpacks are for work, play

N.Y. Times News Service

Sometimes you just want to sit down, right where you are. But in the middle of the woods or in a crowd at a subway station, finding a place to sit can be a problem. Two New York-area companies have an answer — backpacks with seats.

And for those who already have a seat waiting in an office, another company offers a carryall made of a backpack-like fabric that offers a casual yet polished look.

Three of four backpacks made by L.A. Sack of Manhattan offer fold-out seats that are padded and made of lightweight tubular steel. The seats are detachable.

The company's basic backpack with seat, called Carry/Tarry, is $44.95 and comes in black, navy, red, camouflage, purple and yellow.

The company also offers two backpack-seat combinations for use by photographers and tennis players and another that includes a raincoat.

The Photo/Pack Seat has a padded module to protect cameras and an adjustable compartment inside to store heavy but fragile equipment like camcorders and laptop computers. The backpack sells for $49.95 and is available in navy, brown, purple, red and black.

For tennis lovers, L.A. Sack designed the Tennis Pack/Seat. In addition to space for a tennis racket, there are compartments for tennis ball containers, a water bottle and a change of clothes or towels. It is $44.95 and comes is in a multicolor version and in a black and tan combination.

The company's Rain Pack has no seat but includes a concealed, nondetachable, full-length hooded raincoat. When not in use, the coat zips into a pocket. The bag is $39.95, comes in bright red and orange and in sizes small, medium and large.

All of the backpacks are made of waterproof tearproof nylon. The detachable seats can hold up to 200 pounds.

L.A. Sack's backpacks are available in local sporting goods and department stores. For more information call the company at (212) 477-4300.

Overview Ltd. of Wood-Ridge, N.J., also offers an outdoor multipurpose carryall with a nondetachable, collapsible seat. The bag is made of waterproof nylon.

The seat, which is on top of the bag, folds flat when not in use and holds up to 300 pounds. The bag comes in olive green, is $24.95 and is sold through Overview Ltd.: (201) 438-9089.

Manhattan Portage's casual carryall comes in several models that range from $55 to $95. The shoulder bags are made of nylon and are lightweight, waterproof and tearproof.

Each style is available in teal, gray, navy, red and black. The bags are sold in luggage and specialty stores in Manhattan. Manhattan Portage: (212) 594-7068.

NOTICE OF ANCILLARY CONSERVATORSHIP OF MUTUAL SECURITY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-0818, effective June 10, 1991, placing Mutual Security Life Insurance Company, Fort Wayne, Indiana, in a state of ancillary conservatorship. This company is a Indiana domestic insurance company authorized to write life insurance in Texas.

The Commissioner finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 6, of the Texas Insurance Code, the company has been in rehabilitation in the State of Indiana since October 5, 1990.

Under the order, the Ancillary Conservator will assume control and operation of the company's business in Texas and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect and recover the assets and property of the company in Texas. Efforts will be made to rehabilitate the company for the protection of its Texas policyholders and the public.

If you are a policyholder of this company, your insurance coverage continues in effect for as long as you pay your premiums due in the same amount and manner as in the past. If the company is rehabilitated, your coverage will continue as though nothing had happened.

If the company is not rehabilitated, it may be placed into receivership or its business reinsured, and you will be notified. In either event, contractual obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in Article 21.28-D, Texas Insurance Code.

Policy provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed. Claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Policyholders will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, State Board of Insurance rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required of policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-0818. If any action should be required in the future, policyholders will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, of the Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

DEAR ABBY

Man wonders about ex-wife's intentions

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am having a problem with my ex-wife. During our marriage, I caught her cheating four times. She swears she still loves me and only me. (We still see each other.) She comes over and spends the night with me every once in a while, and we have sex together, even though she has been engaged to a man in Florida for more than a year. He has money and buys her very nice gifts. (He just bought her a '91 Camaro.)

Van Buren

The problem is, I still love her and would like to get back together if she would only let go of the "money man." Should I let her go or keep trying to get her back? — A TOUGH DECISION

DEAR TOUGH DECISION: Let her go. She's using you (for sex) and using the man in Florida for whatever she can get out of him. If you were to get her back, what would you have? A promiscuous gold digger who can't be trusted.

DEAR ABBY: I am an intelligent 35-year-old professional woman. Trying to recover from the shocking discovery that my 7-year-old son had been sexually molested repeatedly by a former live-in lover has left me and my son scarred and bitter.

After the bizarre revelations of my 7-year-old began to surface, subsequent investigation revealed that the man was on parole from prison for repeated sexual molestations. Now my son is likely to face years of therapy and counseling. I have great guilt that, as a single parent, I was not more aware.

Perhaps your warning single parents of this peril could prevent more of this awful danger. As a single parent, what should (I) we be on the lookout for? — HEARTSICK

DEAR HEARTSICK: You obviously did not know the man well enough to be aware of how dangerous he was. No one (man or woman) should leave a child (boy or girl) with a person one knows only superficially.

A good way to judge a person's character is by the company that person keeps. Beware of the new friend who has no friends, relatives or co-workers.

Also, how good is that person's word? If you catch him in a little lie, chances are he will lie about more important things.

Before living with someone, you should know that person very, very well.

DEAR ABBY: Just a few more words on the dangers of wearing headphones while jogging. Joggers, especially females, need to realize how many abductions involve cars. I was recently in a personal defense class. We collected newspaper articles concerning abductions and rapes. More than half of those we found involved women being pulled off the sidewalk into cars.

Headphones keep a jogger from realizing that a car has pulled up beside her until it is too late to react. Listening to music also can take the jogger's mind off her surroundings. A car that is "stalking" her may have passed her four or five times, and she wouldn't notice.

Along the same lines, I would encourage anyone, male or female, who walks or jogs alone — especially at night — to take a personal defense course at the local community college, YMCA, or wherever it is offered. You will learn many tips on how to minimize the risk of being abducted and/or raped, as well as some physical defense techniques. — A DEFENSIVE WALKER, NOVATO, CALIF.

DEAR WALKER: Another tip for anyone who walks, runs or jogs on a road or street where vehicles also travel: Walk, run or jog facing the oncoming traffic on the LEFT side of the road — never in the same direction the cars are moving.

DEAR ABBY: Twice recently, my daughter (the eldest and married) asked me to intervene in her behalf concerning some disagreements she has been having with some of her siblings.

My answer was, "No, please try to work it out yourselves." She then told me that it was my duty to intervene. I disagreed, saying I was not going to take sides — I wanted to be on friendly terms with all my children and their spouses.

Her husband then sent me a nasty letter calling me "ignorant and selfish," and saying I could no longer write to — or speak with — my daughter!

Abby, was I wrong in refusing to intervene? — PROBLEMS ON THE HOME FRONT

DEAR PROBLEMS: No, I think you used good judgment in remaining neutral. Now, about your name-calling son-in-law: He does not speak for his wife — unless, of course, she has authorized him to be her representative. Has she?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are happily married. We both agree that our family is complete and we do not want any more children. We use birth control, but nothing is foolproof, and just the thought of another pregnancy makes me shiver in my boots!

The reason my husband hasn't gotten a vasectomy is because we haven't been able to find out if such measures are right in the eyes of the Lord. We are members of the congregation of a very small Christian church, and I just can't bring myself to ask our minister. Can you please help us? — SHY IN COLORADO

DEAR SHY: Perhaps you would feel more comfortable consulting a clergyperson of your faith in a neighboring town. Or you could write to the district office of your church and inquire.

DEAR ABBY: Reading in your column that you put your glasses on when you answer the phone prompts this letter.

Even if it's dark, when we need to hear, we put our glasses on. Regardless of how strange it may seem, we hear better with glasses. This theory has been tested, and it's true. — R. KAY IN L.A.

Professor works to perfect polution detecting device

BOSTON (AP) — On a quick glance, Harold Hemond could be taken for an actor in another "Ghostbusters" sequel. But Hemond, backpack gadget and all, is the real thing.

His target is not ghosts, but ghastly chemical spills.

Hemond is the brains behind the backpack spectrometer, which ordinarily weighs hundreds of pounds and has to be operated out of an automobile.

The machine Hemond recently developed weighs 70 pounds.

"We had to reduce the volume and weight to where you can backpack it, and reduce the power consumption so you don't have to carry a generator around with you," said Hemond, a professor of civil engineering in the Parson's Laboratory for Water Research and Environmental Engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Hemond's main objective, he said, is to look at the rate at which methane is increasing in the atmosphere and causing changes in the climate.

His portable mass spectrometer, which resembles a small, open refrigerator, should cut costs and lessen the risk of alterations in the makeup of the sample when it is transported from the site to the laboratory, he said.

He now has just one machine, but said general distribution could see use in detecting chemicals from gasoline to degreasing solvents used in drycleaning.

The machine works by maneuvering a flexible metal probe into the contaminated area and vacuuming up vapors emitted by the chemicals, Hemond said.

The vapor is then bombarded by an electron beam and separated into electrically charged fragments separated by a magnetic and electrical field. The intensity of each of the fragments is measured to determine the type of chemical and the amount present in the sample.

Hemond's next step is to develop a software program for laptop computers to analyze the data.

Some environmental advocates feel the modified size and weight could make it easier for residents of industrial neighborhoods to locate chemical spills.

"They're very reliable in terms of determining what chemicals are present. If the public could get ahold of it I think it would really work to keep industries in the neighborhood honest," said Rob Sargent, toxics program advocate for the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group.

But simple tests such as an analysis of tap water may be hindered by the technology, said Marco Kalpofen, laboratory director of the National Toxics Campaign Fund in Boston.

Students swap old trades for cooking school

By Kelly P. Kissel

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Five of the 25 aspiring chefs in the Culinary Arts School's freshman class came to the kitchen the hard way: Via the coal mine.

After years in the underground caverns, the five are trading their picks and shovels for whisks and spoons, their helmets for toques. This is not necessarily their choice; the mines are closing, and they need jobs.

But they are embracing their new careers.

"If I had never gotten laid off, that would have been sad. I would have never heard about the school," said Mary Yaworski, as she completed her first semester. "I never want to go back to coal mining. Never."

Yaworski spent 11½ of her 43 years underground, supporting her four kids. Then, last fall, nearly half the 1,000 employees in the BethEnergy No. 33 mine in Cambria were laid off, and she was one of them.

"I thought, 'OK, Mary, you've done what you had to do to raise your family. Now, what do you want to do?'" she said.

The answer for Yaworski and three of her coworkers was the Culinary Arts School, established in 1989 by the Indiana University of Pennsylvania. The two-year program trains cooks certified by the American Culinary Federation.

A RETRAINING program administered jointly by the United Mine Workers union and the coal industry under their 1988 contract will pay the two-year tuition of $17,000.

"Before I came here, I thought I could cook, but it's entirely different," Yaworski said. "It's classical cooking. In some classes, there was so much French I thought I was going to have to quit."

"When they first arrive, we treat them all as if they don't know how to boil water," said Kevin Duffy, a former chef for Intercontinental Hotels in Europe, Africa and Asia and the acting director of the school.

First-semester coursework includes an introduction to hot foods, cold foods, baking and soups, stocks and sauces. Students are expected to be able to identify meat after the first semester and seafood after the second.

In the second year of the two-year program, students branch out into regional cuisine, wine and advanced table service.

"Advanced Culinary Skills" in the final semester includes spice usage, timesaving devices and "intensive review of vegetable cuts." "Supervisory Management" teaches how to run a kitchen.

"There's no room for loners," Duffy said. "We're getting them ready for teamwork."

The coal miners who have entered the school brought teamwork experience with them — no one mines coal alone. But the miners say there are other parallels between work in a mine and work in a kitchen.

"Cooking is not an easy profession," said Larry P. Mondi, who still works underground when he's not at school. "It's time-consuming and can be laborious. There can be similar skills. You need to be a good worker. You can't be a loafer. Otherwise, people aren't going to hire you."

MONDI, A MINER for 18 years, lays cinder blocks for ventilation passages in the Greenwich Collieries South Mine near Ebensburg. The company plans to close the 525-person operation next March, he said.

"The union won't pay the tuition because I haven't been laid off yet, but I decided I wanted to try to get a jump on it," said Mondi, 36.

Mondi figures he will do various jobs in a kitchen.

"I like the variety that it's going to offer me," Mondi said. "I'm not going to just stand in line all day long and make the same things.

"I couldn't stay in one field in the mine, either. I ran the continuous miner, shuttle cars, roof-bolting machines. I've been laying block 6½-7 years, partially because it was a steady day-shift job."

But mining jobs — day-shift or otherwise — are in short supply.

Statewide, the number of coal mining jobs fell from 117,000 in 1950 to 26,000 in 1985 — an 84 percent drop, according to The Atlas of Pennsylvania.

By comparison, many of the 250,000 food-service jobs that opened last year were not filled, said Ron Wolf, a certified working chef and spokesman for the American Culinary Federation.

Four times retired but still hard at work

By Jerry Nachtigal
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Fern Cobb has retired from her job as a nurse's aide four times over the past 20 years.

Each time she got bored and went back to work.

"I could never be happy doing nothing," she said. "I can't stay in. I have to meet people, be with people. I couldn't be a recluse in any sense of the word."

Fern Cobb is a 77-year-old dynamo, a fast-talking, fast-walking bundle of energy with an iron handshake who exudes optimism and looks far younger than her years.

She works five-day, 30-hour weeks providing home health care to three patients in the Ozarks.

"You are as old as you feel, and I don't think Fern thinks she's more than 20," says her supervisor, Barbara Pittman of the Visiting Nurse Association in Springfield.

Three of Mrs. Cobb's short-lived retirements were voluntary.

The fourth, when she worked for the state health department in her hometown of Ozark, was mandatory when she turned 65.

"I told them I didn't want to retire, but they said that's the law," she said.

NOT CONTENT TO be idle, she found her own patients to care for and then went back to work for the state at age 70, when federal retirement laws were revised. Four years ago, she joined the non-profit Visiting Nurse Association.

One of Mrs. Cobb's patients is 101-year-old Jim Todd, who lives with his granddaughter in Highlandville. She cares for him for four hours a day, four days a week while Todd's granddaughter, Sally Geiger, is at work.

Mrs. Cobb gets his breakfast, bathes him, shaves him, dresses him, does his laundry and reads to him.

"She's part of the family. We could not get along without her," Geiger said.

Added Todd: "She's pretty nice. I kind of miss her when she doesn't come. She takes good care of me. She's pretty good to everybody."

Often, Mrs. Cobb's patients are younger than she is.

"I'll be scrubbing the floor on my hands and knees and these people are about 15 years younger than me," she said with a laugh.

MRS. COBB SAYS she moved with her family from North Dakota to Montana in a covered wagon at age 2, because her farm family did not own a car.

She wishes people her age would "get out and enjoy life, maybe exercise a little."

She walks and jogs, and has been seen doing a mean two-step with the cowboys at a popular Springfield nightspot.

When her husband, Rex, who is 17 years her junior, doesn't want to go out, she simply leaves him behind at their 94-acre farm near Ozark.

"I can outdo him any day of the week," she boasts.

In the future, more people will be working into their 70s — not always by choice, said Allen "Jack" Edwards, former director of the Center for Gerontological Studies at Southwest Missouri State University in Springfield,

"Given the fact that the baby boomers are beginning to age and the fact that there's been such a low birth rate for many years, there could be severe economic problems" for older Americans in the future, he said.

MANY ECONOMISTS AND experts on aging believe that the traditional retirement at age 65 may become a luxury, Edwards said.

"You may be forced to work because society can't afford your right to retire," he said.

For Mrs. Cobb, retirement can only come too soon.

"I'll go until I can't do my patients justice," she said. "When I can't do right by my patients, I'll quit. But then I'll have a good reason to retire."

Maybe then she can go back to the senior citizens center in Ozark and try to persuade the folks to give aerobics one more try.

"I learned aerobics in Springfield and went back to Ozark and none of the senior citizens would do it," she said, somewhat miffed. "Sometimes I wonder about myself. I'm so out of whack with everybody my age."

Pageant seeks Ms. National Senior Citizens

Staff Report

The Ms. National Senior Citizens Pageant is looking for contestants to represent Texas at the pageant to be 3 p.m. Oct. 6 at Rialto Square Theater in Joliet, Ill., 35 miles southwest of Chicago.

The goal of the pageant is to recongize the potential of seniors across Amercia. It emerged from a successful state pageant that began in Illinois in 1983, the National Pageant is a not-for-profit event spotlighting seniors and focusing on fun for the contestants.

The senior selected Ms. National Senior Citizen will win an expenses-paid trip-for-two to a destination of her choice in the continental U.S., $1,000 spending money, a fur jacket and other prizes to be announced.

All contestants must be 55 years of age or older by Oct. 6, and be current residents of the United States. However, anyone who is presently a professional entertainer is not eligible for competition. Contestants will be judged on poise, fashions and talent.

There is a $295 sponsor fee for each contestant which must be received by Aug. 15. Each contestant must provide her own sponsor and there can be only one sponsor per contestant. Sponsors may be clubs, businesses, family, friends of the individual contestant.

For more information, contant the Ms. National Senior Citizens Pageant 215 N. Ottawa Street, Joliet, Ill., 60431, or call the pageant office at (815) 740-3314 or (815) 722-2952.

Menopause troubles lead to 'A Friend in Need'

NEW YORK (AP) — Janine O'Leary Cobb was a career woman and mother of five who considered herself well-adjusted. So she was "outraged" when menopause caused her problems.

The result of her anger was "A Friend Indeed," a newsletter for women going through menopause, published in Montreal since April 1984 by Cobb. It looks at medical, emotional and social issues such depression, sexuality, nutrition, stress, hysterectomy, and anger. Readers also contribute.

A college English teacher and author of the book "Understanding Menopause," Cobb began putting out her newsletter in her spare time. Now, with a circulation of 4,000, mostly in Canada, "A Friend Indeed" has become a full-time job. It is published monthly except July and August.

A free introductory copy is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: A Friend Indeed Publications Inc., P.O. Box 515, Place du Parc Station, Montreal, Canada, H2W 2P1.

UT's no dummy

AUSTIN (AP) — Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds of the University of Texas said the UT athletic department supports holding all five state high school championship games at Memorial Stadium, home field of the Texas Longhorns.

"Memorial Stadium is an ideal facility for the games," Dodds said in a letter to Victor Rodriguez of San Antonio, chairman of the University Interscholastic League Legislative Council. "Any school that comes to Austin for a state championship leaves with great memories."

Christopher Knepp, chairman of the Greater Austin Sports Foundation, told Rodriguez in a separate letter that "we would love to add" the football title games to the list of UIL championships held in Austin.

"The university's Memorial Stadium sits waiting to be filled with the fans of Texas' favorite sport — high school football," Knepp said. "Just imagine the festivities that could be arranged with all of the UIL high school championships in one place."

Astros on hold

HOUSTON (AP) — At least three National League club owners say they will not support any move by John McMullen to sell his Houston Astros to out-of-town buyers who could move the team to another city.

"I can't see going along with that," Pittsburgh Pirates owner Doug Danforth told The Houston Chronicle.

Bill Giles of Philadelphia said he would not approve of moving the Astros from the Astrodome "unless they could prove it was an extreme situation."

Fatal storm hits Open

■ Nolan Henke and Payne Stewart share U.S. Open lead that became secondary to a killer storm.

By Bob Green
AP Golf Writer

CHASKA, Minn. — Golf became an after-thought Thursday when tragedy and death scarred the opening round of the 91st U.S. Open.

"All those people with no place to go. I feel real bad," a subdued Nolan Henke said after taking a share of the lead in the round that was delayed by a killer storm and, eventually, postponed overnight.

With 33 players stranded on the course by darkness, Henke shared the top spot with Payne Stewart at 67, five under par.

But the tournament standings were made secondary by the brief, powerful, violent storm that lashed 40,000 confused, exposed spectators, injuring five and killing one.

"It was almost like we weren't playing the U.S. Open. People were hurt and killed out there. So how can you be upset or concerned about a bad hole or a bad score," said Tom Byrum, who was one shot back of the leaders.

Lightning kills Open spectator, injures five others

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) — Lightning killed one spectator and injured five others Thursday as they stood near a tree during a delay at the U.S. Open golf tournament at Hazeltine National golf course.

"I just felt something and then my legs went entirely numb and I went down," said Glenn Engstrom, 36, who was in stable condition at Ridgeview Medical Center in Waconia.

"Then guys behind me started yelling for help and I joined in and hollered for help," he said in a telephone interview, adding that paramedics arrived "fairly quickly."

William John Fadell, 27, of Spring Park, died of cardiac arrest, said Dr. Dale Bohlke, director of emergency medical services at St. Francis Regional Medical Center in Shakopee.

In serious condition at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center was John James Hannahan, 42, of the St. Paul area, said hospital spokeswoman Robin Rainford.

Also in stable condition at Ridgeview Medical Center were Ray John Gavin, 49, of Mendota Heights; Scott Aune, 29, of Spring Park, and Jeffrey Skalicky, 32, of Waite Park, a spokeswoman said.

The lightning struck near the 11th tee about 10 minutes after play was suspended with just 24 players in the 156-man field having completed the first round.

"With that amount of lightning, there could have been a lot more injuries," said Dr. Bob Nordland, co-medical director of the tournament. "We feel lucky there weren't."

Mark Pollich, a tournament official, said all six were within 15 feet of each other, clustered under the same tree. Pollich was within 20 yards when the lightning hit.

The storm struck shortly before 1 p.m.

Angels assault Diablos with four home runs

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

The El Paso Diablos put the squeeze on Juice the Moose prior to the start of Thursday night's game at Angels Stadium, trussing up the Midland mascot just outside the left-field foul line.

But if Juice's dilemma was symbolic of the Diablos' 1991 hold over the Angels, his escape was a proper prelude to the fourth game of the series because like the Moose, the Angels broke free.

The Haloes amassed 16 hits — four of them home runs — and brought first-place El Paso a shade closer to earth with a 13-5 rout of a Diablo team that won 11 of 13 games versus Midland this year, including the first three games of the present series and 10 in a row.

Mark Howie hit two home runs for Midland, and Kevin Flora and Tim Salmon provided solo shots to help back the second-straight complete-game effort of left-hander Todd James, who became the Angels' first seven-game winner.

"I'm not really a home run hitter. I just happened to get a couple of pitches out over the plate and just had the swings to get them into the air," said Howie, who enjoyed his first two-homer game as a professional.

Howie, who hit just two round-trippers in the Angles' first 48 games, has collected five dingers in the team's last nine outings.

"This team (El Paso) is so powerful that we knew we had to come out and score a lot of runs to beat them," Howie said. "But when we get a few hits then everyone joins in on the parade."

It was a long parade as every Angel either scored or hit safely while Midland upped its record to 26-34 in the Western Division.

James, 7-2, came into the contest with a string of 19 innings in which he had not given up an earned run, and he stretched that number to 24⅓ before John Byington scored on a ground ball in the top of the sixth.

Damion Easley's two-out error in the third led to four unearned runs off the southpaw, with Jim Tatum's two-run triple and John Jaha's league-leading 13th homer doing the damage. But James, who scattered 11 hits, faced just six batters over the minimum after El Paso's four-run third as the Halos produced three double plays.

Mark Ambrose had no such luck. The Angels pounded the El Paso starter for 12 hits and 11 earned runs through 4⅔ innings, and they started doing it early.

■ Midland's Bobby Hillin Jr. gets a ride with NASCAR's Sabco team after Kyle Petty breaks a leg.

Associated Press

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Midland's Bobby Hillin Jr. is no stranger to Pocono International Raceway. He just has to hope he's no stranger to his own team — his third of the season as he starts subbing for the injured Kyle Petty.

Hillin opened the season with Dick Moroso, drove the last two races for Jimmy Means and, except for one remaining road-course event, will take over Petty's spot with the Sabco team until Petty can drive again.

"Going into this situation with Sabco is probably going to be the easiest of all," Hillin said. "They're so far ahead of any team I've seen as far as their organization."

He gets his chance beginning today, in pole qualifying for Sunday's $619,000 Champion Spark Plug 500 race.

Despite his familiarity with the 2½-mile Pocono triangle oval, Hillin would do well to improve his relationship with the track, where he has never finished higher than 10th.

Even so, he says he got along with it from the start.

"I really like to race Pocono. One of the first races I ever ran was at Pocono," said Hillin, the 27-year-old Midland native.

The track features three straightaways of varying length and three turns of varied banking and radius.

"Pocono is a really big short track," he said. "It takes a combination of everything. We were running pretty good there last year when I blew up."

Hillin was introduced to Pocono the day after his 18th birthday, in June 1982. It was the only race he didn't finish that year out of the five he drove for Harry Hyde.

He has finished on the lead lap only twice in his 17 races at Pocono, though those came in two of his last three tries.

By contrast, Petty has raced at Pocono 19 times and has eight top-10s, with a third-place showing in June 1987. Only once, last July, did he not finish.

But a crash May 6 at Talladega, Ala., spoiled Petty's season. He suffered a broken left leg and doesn't expect to race again until late in the season.

That has given Hillin a place behind a steering wheel — a temporary job, but one that lets him protect his 14th spot in the driver standings. The Sabco duty, he said, is "something I've been working hard for all my life."

Unemployed after splitting up last year with the Stavola Brothers, his team for six seasons and parts of two more, Hillin found help from Moroso. He put Hillin in a second car for the season-opening Daytona 500, and kept him on.

Franco, Sierra explode

Associated Press

AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Julio Franco hit a three-run homer and Ruben Sierra added a two-run shot Thursday night, leading the Texas Rangers past the Chicago White Sox 8-4.

Franco went 3-for-4 as Texas won its third straight game. The Rangers took advantage of three Chicago errors to score five unearned runs.

Gerald Alexander (4-1) gave up three runs on seven hits in five innings. It was his second straight start after beginning the season with 14 relief appearances. Kenny Rogers pitched four innings for his first save.

Franco hit his sixth home run in the third, connecting with two outs off Greg Hibbard (4-5). Texas added another run in the inning when second baseman Joey Cora threw wildly while trying to complete a double play.

Chicago pulled to within 6-2 in the fourth on Robin Ventura's two-run single. Sierra hit a two-out two-run homer, his ninth, in the bottom of the inning after first baseman Dan Pasqua, normally an outfielder, made an error on Rafael Palmeiro's grounder.

Mariners 6, Tigers 5

SEATTLE — Alvin Davis hit his 100th career homer in the Kingdome, a two-run shot in the eighth inning Thursday night that helped the Seattle Mariners rally past the Detroit Tigers 6-5.

The Mariners trailed 5-3 when Ken Griffey Jr. led off the eighth with a double against Paul Gibson (2-3). Pete O'Brien hit an RBI single and Davis followed his sixth home run of the season and his 154th lifetime.

Bill Swift (1-1) pitched 1 1-3 innings for the victory.

Twins 10, Yankees 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Minnesota broke a team record with their 12th straight victory and Scott Erickson set a club mark with his 10th consecutive win.

Chili Davis hit two home runs as Minnesota snapped the team record of 11 straight wins set in 1980. The Twins have won 15 of their last 16, including a three-game sweep of the Yankees.

Erickson (10-2), leading the majors with a 1.60 ERA, broke the Twins' record for consecutive wins in one season, held by Frank Viola and Stan Williams. Bert Blyleven and Ray Corbin each won 10 straight over two seasons for Minnesota.

Davis hit two home runs in a game for the third time this season. His solo shot in the third inning was his 13th homer of the year, surpassing last season's total, and he hit a two-run, 459-foot drive in the eighth.

Blue Jays 1, Indians 0

CLEVELAND — Jimmy Key pitched his second two-hitter of the season and the second in a row by Toronto as the Blue Jays blanked Cleveland.

Key (10-2) retired the final 20 batters and moved into a tie for the American League lead in wins. He struck out five and walked none in his second complete game, both shutouts.

Key allowed consecutive singles by Joel Skinner and Felix Fermin with one out in the third inning, but was otherwise unscathed. The left-hander is 16-3 in his last 19 decisions, dating to last year, and he has not allowed more than three earned runs in any game this season.

On Wednesday, Toronto rookie Mike Timlin of Midland combined with three other pitchers to limit Cleveland to two hits in a 1-0 Blue Jay victory.

Royals 6, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Kirk Gibson's ninth-inning homer helped Kansas City beat Baltimore and made him the 13th player in history to hit 200 homers and steal 200 bases.

After Brian McRae beat out an infield single off Paul Kilgus (0-2), Gibson hit his eighth homer of the season to break a 4-4 tie and give Kansas City its first three-game sweep of the Orioles since August 1988.

Phillies stop Astros' streak

Associated Press

NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Philadelphia, scoring all of its runs without benefit of a hit, took advantage of four Houston errors and two bases-loaded walks to beat the Astros 5-4 on Thursday.

The Phillies managed only two hits off Houston starter Darryl Kile (0-2) and three overall, but made the most of four errors, seven walks, a balk and a wild pitch.

The Phillies, who snapped a four-game losing streak, were hardly perfect in the field, committing three errors in the first four innings. The seven errors were the second-highest total of the season in a game, exceeded only by the eight committed by Atlanta and San Diego on May 23.

Jose DeJesus (3-2) struck out five and walked two over seven innings, and Mitch Williams went the rest of the way for his 11th save to snap Houston's four-game winning streak.

Dodgers 3, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Lenny Harris reached base when home plate umpire Ed Rapuano changed his call and ruled he had been hit by a pitch, then scored the winning run on Alfredo Griffin's single in the ninth inning.

With the score 2-2, Stan Javier singled to start the ninth. Harris, trying to avoid a high-and-tight Randy Tomlin pitch, was struck on the right hand and dropped to the ground in pain.

Rapuano initially ruled the ball had struck Harris' bat, then changed his call when he saw Harris was hurt. That prompted a lengthy argument by manager Jim Leyland, who finally was ejected by crew chief Bruce Froemming. Second baseman Curtis Wilkerson was ejected a batter later for reigniting the argument.

Tomlin threw out Javier at third on Mike Scioscia's bunt, but Griffin singled to left, scoring Harris. Former Pirate Jim Gott (1-1) got the victory by pitching a scoreless ninth.

Braves 3, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Pete Smith combined with Juan Berenguer on a four-hitter to win for the first time in a year, and Sid Bream had a decisive two-run homer.

Smith (1-0), 0-4 in seven previous starts against the Mets and decisionless in his first four starts this season, allowed two runs in the first inning. He permitted only two hits over the next five before giving way to Berenguer, who pitched three hitless innings for his eighth save.

Cubs 4, Giants 3

CHICAGO — Andre Dawson caught Mike Kingery's bases-loaded, one-out fly ball to right, then threw out Tony Perezchica at the plate to give Chicago a victory over San Francisco.

Ryne Sandberg put the Cubs ahead 4-3 with a two-run single in the seventh inning. George Bell and Dawson homered on successive pitches in the fourth inning to account for the other Chicago runs.

Cardinals 12, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Ozzie Smith tripled, doubled and drove in four runs as St. Louis benefited from errors by each San Diego starting infielder.

Half of the Cardinal runs were unearned as St. Louis fell two short of a season scoring high. Even pitcher Bob Tewksbury got into the action, hitting two singles and driving in a run. Felix Jose had two hits and three RBIs.

Reds 3, Expos 2

MONTREAL — Pitcher Chris Hammond — helping himself with an RBI single — broke a personal five-game losing streak, and Glenn Braggs got the winning hit.

Hammond (4-5) allowed only two hits in six innings, one of them Mike Fitzgerald's two-run homer that tied the game in the fourth. Hammond, whose single gave Cincinnati a 2-0 lead, had gone six starts without a victory.

Alliance talks fail to add fourth bowl

DALLAS (AP) — Representatives from two conferences, three New Year's Day bowls and Notre Dame tried to hammer out a New Year's Day bowl alliance by conference call Thursday night without coming up with a fourth bowl to join the group.

The Cotton, Sugar and Orange bowls and the Big East, Atlantic Coast Conference and Notre Dame have "agreed to agree" on the alliance, which would match the highest-ranked teams from the Big East, ACC and Notre Dame against champions from the SWC, Big Eight and SEC.

But the alliance still would like to add a fourth bowl, possibly the Fiesta, Citrus or Holiday. The fourth bowl would allow the alliance to cover more national title possibilities and allow for two at-large teams.

"We are not ready to identify Bowl 'X' right now," Jim Brock, executive vice president of the Cotton Bowl, said after Thursday night's conference call. "We are just not ready to do anything."

Brock said the alliance had not set its next meeting, but that the group would meet in soon. "But each time we meet, we move a little further along," he added.

"We are all intent on moving forward with due diligent speed," said Harper Davidson, Orange Bowl president. "We've got this thing this far. We want to do everything correctly. We're all on the same track. We want all this resolved."

The proposal matches the highest-ranked team from among the ACC and Big East champions and Notre Dame against the top-ranked conference champions from the Southwest in the Cotton Bowl, the Southeastern in the Sugar Bowl and the Big Eight in the Orange Bowl.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your determination and hard work will payoff handsomely. A class reunion could reignite an old romance. Influential people recognize your special qualities in early fall. A positive attitude will carry you to new career heights in October. A financial windfall is a distinct possibility at Christmastime. Romance introduces you to a new social circle early in 1992. Modifying your lifestyle next spring will make you healthier and happier.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: tycoon Donald Trump, tennis champion Steffi Graf, journalist Pierre Salinger, singer Burl Ives.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Utilize morning hours to get in touch with important clients. Influential people will demand your time and talents later in the day. Monitor your spending but do not scrimp on the basics.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spend some time investigating a new field or career. Cottage industries prove especially lucrative now. An investor is open to practical suggestions. A special project will succeed!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A financial proposal could arouse strong emotions. Talk calmly with everyone involved, emphasizing the benefits of cooperation. Spend more time communing with nature.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep your feet planted firmly on the ground. Refuse to be distracted from your work. A career change or new home will bring good luck. Dress up if going out this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Jealousy can harm a personal relationship. A child's needs should not take a backseat to anyone. Teamwork brings new financial success. Past mistakes are forgiven by higher-ups.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A financial backer may try to dictate what you should do in regard to other business opportunities. Gratitude should not cancel out common sense. Avoid putting all your eggs in one basket.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The investment picture looks promising. Speculate within reasonable limits. Real estate offers may sound better than they really are. A false accusation will be disproved. Keep a tight rein on your temper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Lighten up in your approach and you will gain more cooperation from your co-workers. Banish doom and gloom! A college student is motivated by encouragement from loved ones at a distance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your healthy optimism will take you a long way. Plan a romantic weekend getaway for two and see if you can leave work early. You need to spend more quality time with mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A great day to tie up loose financial ends. An investment deserves closer scrutiny. Defer to an expert's judgment. Good luck and romance come your way. Update your appearance and wardrobe.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Act on an idea before someone else does. A whole new career is possible! Loved one goes along with your plans. Romance is somewhat predictable but not boring. You appreciate the stability.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Re-evaluate your financial goals. A close friend has an idea that will benefit both of you. Be open-minded. Give a loved one the benefit of the doubt. Your love can work a miracle.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are sociable but subject to mood swings. One moment these Geminis are down in the dumps, the next moment happy-go-lucky. Science and foreign languages will hold special appeal for these children. Their nervous energy will undoubtedly help them stay slim and trim. They are unlikely to remain in one place or job for long. The ideal mate will understand and sympathize with their need for frequent change.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

A single clue is all that a competent declarer might need to come up with a winning line. Consider this hand from a recent team game.

Experience shows that it pays to compete rather than let the opponents play unmolested at the two-level; hence, North's repeat takeout double. With slightly better spade spots South would have passed. Even on this layout, two spades could have been set a trick had the defenders collected everything they were due, but we cannot fault South's decision to remove to three clubs.

Prospects for the 4-3 fit didn't look promising when West attacked with the ten of spades. East won the ace and cashed the ace and queen of hearts, West echoing to show encouragement. Declarer, Art Crystal of Norwalk, Conn., needed no more information to come up with the only line that offered a chance for the contract.

East reverted to a spade at trick four, ruffed in dummy to make sure of scoring the low trump, while keeping control of the suit. West was marked with the king of hearts and probably one club honor, yet had not responded to the opening bid. Therefore, West could not hold the queen of diamonds as well. So declarer led the jack of diamonds from the table for a backward finesse!

After capturing East's queen with the ace, declarer finessed the eight of diamonds and cashed the king, clearing the suit. When a heart was led from the table, East could not ruff profitably, so declarer was able to score a low trump. To prevent West from discarding a heart when declarer tried to ruff on the board, South continued with the king of spades. Whether East ruffed high or low, or did not ruff at all, the defenders could get only one more trick and the contract rolled home. Try it.

Madonna negotiates to get own entertainment company

LOS ANGELES — When Michael Jackson cut his latest deal with Sony Corp., he got his own record label. So what's Madonna worth to Warner?

Madonna

The flamboyant superstar and her advisers met in New York three weeks ago with Time-Warner Inc. chief Steven J. Ross and Warner Bros. Records head Mo Austin to discuss putting her at the reins of her own media company, officials said Wednesday.

Bob Merlis, director of publicity for Warner Bros. Records, said Madonna is "contemplating an entertainment company that might do business with Time-Warner Inc."

Additional meetings are expected, Madonna spokeswoman Liz Rosenberg said.

Madonna signed with Time-Warner's Sire Records unit in 1983, a deal since renegotiated as she sold 23 million albums in the United States and made several high-profile movie appearances.

Forbes magazine estimated she earned $39 million in 1990, placing eighth on its list of high-paid entertainers — the kind of performance guaranteed to toughen a negotiating stance.

"Warner is a very fair company, but if you sign a contract early in your career it isn't on a par with a superstar," said entertainment lawyer Jay Cooper.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Coretta Scott King will be on hand for the dedication of a civil rights museum at The Lorraine Motel, where her husband was slain.

Mrs. King will speak at a July 2 banquet honoring the foot soldiers of the civil rights struggles of the 1950s and 60s, museum organizers said Wednesday.

The National Civil Rights Museum is to open Aug. 31 and dedication ceremonies will be held July 1-4.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was shot to death at the motel in 1968 while in Memphis to lead a strike by city sanitation workers.

The small, deteriorating motel was bought at foreclosure auction in 1982 by a group now called The Lorraine Civil Rights Museum Foundation.

The foundation led a movement to persuade the city, county and state governments to appropriate $9 million for the museum.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Civil War writer Shelby Foote will be delving into some familiar material when he serves as a narrator for the opening concert of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's summer season.

Foote will read from speeches and writings of Abraham Lincoln to narrate a performance of composer Aaron Copeland's "Lincoln Portrait."

Foote, 74, of Memphis, gained national attention as a commentator through PBS's "Civil War" miniseries.

"Mr. Foote seemed a natural for this part," said Paul Marotta, a spokesman for the orchestra. "He's one of the foremost historians and a Lincoln scholar."

Foote said he looked forward to the concerts Friday and Sunday.

"Lincoln was the greatest of all American presidents," he said. "I suppose that one of the reasons they chose me to do it is because it helps prove that Lincoln's words have become the possession of all of us."

MADISON, Wis. — Actress Kate Jackson says she's planning to spend part of the year in the state capital after she marries a onetime Madison resident.

Jackson has been in Madison for a few weeks, visiting with the parents and friends of her fiance, Tom Hart, 40.

"I'm real anxious to be part of the community," Jackson, 41, said. "I like everything about Madison. Especially the people I've met."

She said she became engaged May 15 to Hart, who owns a ski lodge business in Utah. They met a couple of years ago at a restaurant in Aspen, Colo., while eating breakfast.

NEW YORK — The death of his wife nearly ended Lionel Hampton's musical career, but the jazz great says he now uses her memory to keep on playing.

"I don't ever intend to retire. Music keeps me happy, and I want to keep playing for her," Hampton says in Sunday's Parade magazine.

Gladys Hampton died of a heart attack 20 years ago. At the time, Hampton was so depressed he almost stopped performing.

"I didn't want to live. ... I didn't want to play for a long time. For a year, I was just lost," said Hampton, who was married for 34 years.

"Gladys is still here. Not a day goes by I don't think of her ... I miss her," he says.

NEW YORK — Actor Nicolas Cage, saying he was getting soft, bald and stagnant, has taken to the road in the style of Beat Generation writer Jack Kerouac.

The star of such movies as "Moonstruck," "Raising Arizona" and "Wild at Heart" retraced some of Kerouac's steps in a Los Angeles-to-New Orleans trip that he wrote about for the July issue of Details magazine.

He said he took to the road with a friend in a rented Lincoln Town Car because he had "been in one place too long."

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recorded some scattered gains today, still struggling with interest-rate and inflation worries.

The Labor Department reported that the producer price index of finished goods rose 0.6 percent in May.

Analysts said the number was enlarged by statistical quirks and didn't necessarily signal any major new inflation problems.

Nevertheless, it helped to extend the recent rise of bond-market interest rates, posing uncertainties for stock traders about the prospective staying power of the budding recovery from the recession.

The NYSE was scheduled to embark today on an experiment in electronic after-hours trading, providing for two extra "sessions" of activity beyond the 4 p.m. EDT close.

The sessions, which are to conclude at 5 p.m. and 5:15 p.m. daily, are designed to win back business in U.S. stocks that now takes place in London.

NEW YORK: in London.

By preliminary calculations, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.13 points to 2,965.12.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume through 4 p.m. totaled 144.87 million shares, against 165.72 million in the previous session.

Prices drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell Thursday on news that more Iranian crude will be coming to the United States.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $19.71 per barrel, down 34 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The market had opened higher in a follow-through to Wednesday's buying on a rumor of Iranian and Iraqi border tensions. But oil later started dropping, after the market learned that Chevron Corp. had reached an agreement to become the second U.S. oil company to buy a purchase of Iranian crude.

The deal struck Thursday with the National Iranian Oil Co. still must be approved by the U.S. government, but Chevron said it foresees no difficulties and hopes to get between 1 million and 3 million barrels from the Iranians this summer.

Natural gas prices rebounded a bit on Thursday. Gas for delivery in July settled at $1.293 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 2.2 cents.

Fina sued

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Dangerous gases are escaping from the Fina Oil and Chemical Co. plant and threatening people living near the plant, the Texas Attorney General's office says in a suit filed against the company.

Fina could face fines up to $25,000 for each violation and for each day the Texas Clean Air Act was violated.

The lawsuit filed Tuesday in state court in Beaumont seeks a range of penalties against Fina, including an order to shut down the refinery if harmful gases continue but a Fina spokesman believes the company will resolve its problems before the case goes to court.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar continued its advance on world currency markets Thursday, posting additional gains against the German mark on the heels of favorable U.S. economic data.

Gold prices were mostly lower worldwide. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $370.20 a troy ounce, unchanged from Wednesday.

The dollar continued to perform solidly against the German mark, advancing to 1.7985 marks from 1.7905 marks on Wednesday. The level is a 19-month high.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 141.75 Japanese yen from 141.50 yen on Wednesday.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.6380 from $1.6463 late Wednesday.

Analysts view decline in jobless rate as favorable

By Martin Crutsinger
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Big increases for gasoline, vegetables and tobacco pushed wholesale prices up a surprising 0.6 percent in May, the government said Thursday.

But in more favorable economic news, retail sales rang up a broad-based gain last month while Americans' new claims for unemployment benefits posted a fourth straight weekly decline — developments seen by some economists as proof that the recession is over.

Analysts were especially heartened by the large 38,000 decline in the number of Americans filing for jobless benefits, dropping the total to a seasonally adjusted 401,000 for the week ending June 1.

The last time new unemployment claims had fallen for four consecutive weeks was in October 1982, just before the end of the severe 1981-82 recession.

"If there were any doubts that the recession ended in May, today's jobless figures should put them to rest," said Irwin Kellner, chief economist at Manufacturers Hanover Trust in New York.

David Berson, chief economist at the Federal National Mortgage Association, added, "It's looking more and more like the economy has turned the corner on the recession and we're starting to turn up."

Other analysts were more cautious, however. While agreeing that rising spending by consumers and fewer job layoffs were hopeful signs, they said it was too soon to declare with certainty an end to the recession.

Richard Rahn, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said it appeared that overall economic activity, as measured by the gross national product, was growing in the current April-June quarter after two consecutive quarterly declines.

But he predicted this would be just a brief pause with GNP turning negative again and the recession dragging through the rest of the year.

Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, also expressed caution in interpreting the new reports, though he said it was "quite possible" that the recovery had started.

The administration's official economic forecast, issued last February along with its budget to Congress, predicted a short and shallow recession lasting only two quarters with positive GNP growth resuming in the current April-June quarter.

Southwest celebrates anniversary

By Evan Ramstad

DALLAS (AP) — Check your socks and coins and bone up on airline trivia if you fly Southwest Airlines next week.

The Dallas-based discount carrier turns 20 on Tuesday and will celebrate all week long in its cut-loose, get-hip style.

"Southwest Airlines has succeeded for 20 years because we are high on fun, love, service and people," said company chairman Herb Kelleher.

Flight attendants next week will be allowed to wear any uniform from the past 20 years, including the infamous hot pants-and-cowboy boots of the mid-1970s and sportswear and sneakers in vogue now.

Southwest planes will be decorated with party favors and passengers will be given cookies and cake. Free cocktails and champagne will be served Tuesday.

Contests for the sock with biggest hole or pantyhose with the longest run, which have become rare on Southwest flights in recent years, are being revived. Passengers with 1971-dated coins may win $20 off coupons for future trips, said Southwest spokeswoman Ginger Shearburn.

Passengers may also win prizes for knowing that Kelleher was dressed like Elvis for an appearance on the cover of Texas Monthly a few years ago or that Southwest's stock ticker symbol is "LUV," after Love Field, its Dallas base.

There will be special meals and events for employees at Southwest's 34 airports, four reservations centers and Dallas headquarters. Employees will also prepare meals for Ronald McDonald houses in Southwest cities.

On Saturday, the airline will give Lone Star One, its jet painted in the colors of the Texas flag, for a day to a Dallas businessman who won a 20th anniversary contest for essays that reflect pride in Texas.

Gary Kusin, president of the computer software retailer Babbages Inc., plans to take his family and about 100 other children to Sea World in San Antonio.

Kusin won the use of the plane for a day and will take his family and about 100 other children to Sea World in San Antonio. With Kusin is his wife Karleen, sons Benjamin, 12, and Eric, 9, and daughters Elizabeth, 5, and Caroline,3.

"My kids were very excited to go on a plane ride," Kusin said. "Their excitement led me to think the right thing to do with this trip would be to take children."

Kusin first invited the 35 students with the highest grade-point average from the I Have A Dream Foundation's program at Maynard Jackson Elementary School.

He also invited 25 students with high grade-point averages from the private St. Mark's School of Texas.

Fourteen teachers, seven from each school, will chaperone the trip. The I Have A Dream Foundation also recommended 14 Dallas-area teen-agers to serve as junior chaperones and Kusin invited them.

"I think it's going to be a blast," Kusin said. "I know how my kids are when they fly on planes. I think it's going to be a day the kids never forget."

SEC charges auditing firm compromised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators accused the big accounting firm of Ernst & Young today of certifying the books of a Texas bank while some of the firm's partners had received more than $20 million in loans from the bank.

In a lawsuit, filed at federal court in Washington, the Securities and Exchange Commission charged the accounting firm's predecessor, Arthur Young & Co. with failing to disclose its status as an independent auditor had been compromised by loans from RepublicBank, the Texas bank it was auditing.

The lawsuit comes just as a major accounting organization, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, proposed a rule barring members from taking loans from audit clients.

The allegations concern Arthur Young & Co., which merged with Ernst & Whinney in 1989 to form Ernst & Young.

Telephone messages for comment left with the company's public relations office at its New York headquarters weren't immediately returned.

The complaint alleged that starting in 1983, Arthur Young violated SEC rules against conflicts of interest because more than 50 of the firm's partners belonged to tax shelter and real estate partnerships that received at least $15.8 million in loans from RepublicBank.

At least 27 Arthur Young partners received more than $5 million in personal loans from the bank, the SEC said.

In 1987 RepublicBank merged to form First RepublicBank Corp. which failed less than 14 months later.

The SEC charged that at least 10 of the Arthur Young partners who received personal loans worked directly on the RepublicBank account, including three senior members of the audit team.

The complaint also charged that many of the loans were unsecured and "were not made under normal lending procedures, terms or requirements."

The complaint also alleged that Arthur Young maintained non-interest bearing accounts at RepublicBank with an average daily balance of $400,000.

As a result of the accounting firm's lack of independence, the SEC charged that the bank's annual reports for the years 1983 through 1986 were false and misleading.

The SEC said the case had been referred to it by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the investigation was continuing.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor banks on good luck to make profits

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am a single woman, 57, and participate in a tax-sheltered annuity (TSA) through the hospital at which I am employed. My investment in the annuity plan can be moved back and forth daily, at no charge, among the guaranteed account, a stock account, an aggressive stock account and a balanced account.

Doyle

I feel I have done quite well doing just that. By watching the stock market and reading a lot, I have been moving my investment with the ups and downs of the market. Last year, I made more than $26,000 — sometimes as much as $900 a day. For example, on March 15, 1990, I had $36,500 in my TSA. On April 26, 1991, I had $91,000.

I understand I could lose much by making wrong decisions. However, being able to get back into the guaranteed account daily, I see no reason for losing an amount I can't live with.

As I near retirement, I feel I have to invest very aggressively to acquire an amount to see me through old age. I am planning on semi-retirement at age 59 1/2, when I will leave what I have in the TSA there and live on the profit I will make. Hopefully, that will be $2,000 to $3,000 a month.

What do you think?

A. Assuming you are not a great spinner of fairy tales, you are either one of the smartest people who every played the market or just plain lucky.

Your method is similar to that used by "market timers" who move investments from one type of mutual fund to another, with the intention — "hope" would be a better word — of being in a fund holding common stocks when stock prices are headed up, in a bond fund when bond prices are rising, in a money market mutual fund when stock and bond prices are going south and goodness knows where else their elves tell them to go.

But the results you cite are far superior to anything timers have been able to accomplish for any sustained length of time. Based on your track record, you should be running a mutual fund or other large pool of capital.

If you can continue to pull that off, Godspeed. However, in a straight reply to your four-word question, I don't think you can. Nor is it likely anyone else can produce investment results that good over the long term.

Rather than invest aggressively as retirement time nears, the wise thing is to turn conservative. That means getting out of the aggressive account and paring down on the stock account. A balanced account, which holds both stocks and bonds, and a guaranteed-income account are better suited as retirement time nears.

Q. My husband and I both have individual retirement accounts in a mutual fund. He is my IRA beneficiary; I am his. The fund pays 10 percent annual dividends, which we receive monthly. The original IRA investments have not been touched.

We are both past 70 1/2 years of age. Is it necessary for us to withdraw any of our original investments to comply with IRA regulations?

A. First off, no mutual fund pays 10 percent annual "dividends." If your fund is paying out 10 percent, that total is made up of both dividends and capital gains distributions — and, most likely, return of capital.

If the dollar amounts in your fund accounts have not declined, it's because the value of the fund's shares has risen. That's good. However, it does not mean your original investments have not been touched. When you receive a return of capital, you get part of your original investment back.

As long as the total distributions you receive are at least equal to the required IRA withdrawals, which are based on your joint life expectancy and shown in tables in Internal Revenue Service Publication 590, you need make no additional withdrawals.

For example, if you both are now 71, the withdrawal you are required to make this year is the January 1 balance in each account divided by 19.8. Any mutual fund organization worth its salt should do the calculation for you.

NEW YORK (AP) — He's slumped in an easy chair at daybreak with the baby finally asleep in his arms. He's watching the kids while his wife works late. He's changing diapers.

Admakers are serving up a new vision of the thoroughly modern Dad, whose day is celebrated Sunday.

They have devised a family-focused guy comfortable with his kids, a marked departure from the self-absorbed executive climber of the money-driven 1980s. The new Dads are showing up in advertising for products ranging from decaffeinated coffee to telephone services to baby wipes.

Admakers say they are reflecting changed realities of family life.

Economic necessity is driving some fathers to share more family responsibilities with their working wives. But researchers say many young couples prefer to share the load more than their parents did.

"This generation has grown up with a different view of men and women and their relationships with each other," said Barbara Feigen, head of strategic services at Grey Advertising Inc.

US West, the regional telephone company based in Denver, demonstrates the contrast in a recent commercial that starts out with the family gathered at the Sunday dinner table when Dad gets a call from the office.

He must go to work, the father explains to a disappointed child who had hoped to play catch with the old man.

But the sepia tones of the commercial that suggest an earlier era are soon replaced with a full-color view of a modern Dad with a football, tackled by children in the back yard.

Dad takes the call from work on a portable cellular and faxes the requested papers to the office. He doesn't even have to remove his barbecue apron and he's back at the grill in plenty of time to serve a plateful of hamburgers and hot dogs.

Jane Fitzgibbon, an Ogilvy & Mather ad executive who follows consumer trends, said the increasing number of couples in their mid- to late-30s having their first children has created a rapt audience for ads with nurturing Dads.

"This is coming at a time in these fathers' lives when they know they are not going to be president of GM. They are real family members who are as much a part of the family as mothers," she said.

In a commercial for Folgers decaffeinated coffee, Mom finds Dad catnapping in an easy chair with a sleeping baby in his arms. "The baby was up all night, you've got to make the morning bright," a narrator sings.

Dad is on the telephone with his working wife in an ad for New York Telephone, assuring her that the twins have not watched too much TV, took their baths and brushed their teeth. Before the two boys sack out for the night, they insist on phoning Mom to say goodnight.

"I'll be home in half an hour," she says in a closing line that New York Telephone advertising executive Jamie Depeau said was designed to show traditional parental stereotypes have not simply been reversed.

"It shows she is involved with the family, too," Ms. DePeau said.

Showing Dads caring for the kids is still novel enough to draw attention.

An ad for Scott Paper Co.'s Baby Fresh wipes shows fathers pretending to converse with newborn babies. One Dad demonstrates how to use the wipe as he changes a diaper. The ad has been appearing mostly in daytime programs.

"Mothers like to see fathers being involved in baby care," said brand manager Glyn Harper. But he said simply casting fathers in such roles insures that his commercial will be noticed.

New Mexico to research pipeline

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — Land Commissioner Jim Baca said he's excited about the idea of building a pipeline to Texas to transport natural gas from New Mexico to markets in the East.

Baca said Wednesday the state should go ahead and begin legal research to plan for the pipeline, which could mean millions of dollars in sales.

Currently, there is no eastbound natural gas pipeline from New Mexico, and much of the state's natural gas goes to California.

The Legislative Revenue Review Committee voted Wednesday for the state to research how it could build a pipeline from Belen to a hub in Amarillo, Texas, through a joint venture with a pipeline company, state bonds or a combination of the two.

"We need to do something because I'm afraid we're selling a lot of gas awful cheap" in California, Baca said.

Bob Bayless, a natural gas producer in the San Juan Basin of northwestern New Mexico, proposed the pipeline.

He said natural gas producers in New Mexico are selling gas as low as 75 cents per thousand cubic feet at the wellhead. The wellhead price between May 1989 and July 1990 was $1.60 to $1.70 per thousand cubic feet, according to the state Department of Finance and Administration.

Ron Merrett, director of the state Interstate Gas Markets Division, told the committee natural gas prices in the basin have dropped because of limited pipeline capacity.

"There's limited capacity to get their gas out of the basin, therefore they sell low to get their gas out," Merrett said.

J.C. Penney swaps advertising agencies

DALLAS (AP) — J.C. Penney Co. Thursday moved its $75 million advertising account to Dallas-based Bozell-Southwest Inc., stunning the Madison Avenue agency that for eight years helped transform the image of the nation's sixth-largest retailer.

"It's a total surprise. As close as a week ago we do know we had produced new work that was loved by everyone there," said Victoria Horstmann of NW Ayer Inc., which handled J.C. Penney's advertising since 1984.

Ayer opened a field office with 45 people in Dallas to stay close to J.C. Penney when the retail chain's headquarters moved here from New York three years ago.

J.C. Penney vice chairman Robert B. Gill said the change reflects Bozell's resources in Dallas. The account will give Bozell-Southwest annual billings in excess of $380 million, making it the largest ad agency in the Southwest.

Bozell-Southwest Inc. senior vice president Russell Mack said the agency would likely hire more people to its 450-person staff to serve J.C. Penney.

Fuel economy overrated, Energy secretary says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary James Watkins said Wednesday his national energy strategy was not getting the credit it deserves for encouraging conservation.

Watkins, speaking to local government officials from Michigan, said conservationists exaggerate the importance of government fuel-economy standards in saving energy.

"It is one of a hundred issues, and yet it has become the linchpin of the cry for efficiency and conservation," Watkins said.

He predicted the defeat of pending legislation to toughen the standards, including a bill awaiting Senate floor debate that would require automakers to improve new-car efficiency 40 percent by the year 2001. Under current law, new-car fleets are required to average at least 27.5 miles per gallon.

The automobile industry opposes the legislation, saying it would force companies to make cars smaller and less safe.

"We're ... not going beyond what's technologically feasible, not going beyond what's economically feasible, and certainly not going to ridiculous levels that would close down the automobile industry in the United States," he said.

'We're ... not going beyond what's technologically feasible, not going beyond what's economically feasible, and certainly not going to ridiculous levels that would close down the automobile industry in the United States.'

— James Watkins, Energy Secretary

Some critics have portrayed the industry as "the villains of the nation," ignoring its importance to the national economy, Watkins said.

Political reality also figures in the energy debate, he said, describing an encounter with a senator who asked why President Bush didn't take the "bold" step of proposing a $1 gasoline tax increase to encourage conservation.

"I said to him, senator, why aren't you bold and you introduce the dollar gasoline tax," Watkins said. "That ended the conversation."

He said, "You're dealing with a democracy in which people have the vote. And they believe that the Bill of Rights gave them the right to $1.06 per gallon of unleaded gas and 2.7 cars per family and that's the way it is."

A spokesman for Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., the Senate bill's sponsor, said administration policymakers "made up their minds before the evidence was in" that they would fight tougher fuel-economy standards.

"It would be more productive and in America's long-term interest for the secretary and the Department of Energy to propose more real conservation efforts than simply recommending that Americans inflate their tires," said the spokesman, Jim Mulhall.

He was referring to television commercials sponsored by the department that urge people to keep the proper amount of air in their tires.

ECONOMY: Most signs are favorable

(From 8C)

That view, which is held by many private economists, is being endorsed by the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office, according to an official who spoke on condition of not being named.

According to preliminary projections, the official said, the budget office expects the economy to expand at an annual rate of 0.2 percent in the current quarter followed by GNP growth of 2.7 percent in the July-September quarter and 4.4 percent in the final three months of this year.

The numbers, which won't be released until mid-August, could be changed before they become final, the official said.

One of the encouraging signs in Thursday's economic statistics was May's 1 percent gain in retail sales — led by a 1.7 percent advance for autos — following a 0.4 percent drop in overall sales in April. Analysts said the increase provided fresh evidence that the consumers, who account for two-thirds of total economic activity, were beginning to spend again after the uncertainty caused by the recession and the Persian Gulf War.

In further good news, automakers reported Thursday that their sales were up 8.9 percent in early June, only the second time this year that sales have gained when compared to the same period a year earlier. A pickup in car buying is considered crucial to ending the recession.

On Wall Street, bond prices closed higher after recovering from an early plunge on news of the worse-than-expected wholesale inflation rate. Investors, however, still expressed a belief that the growing signs of an economic rebound have made it less likely that the Federal Reserved will move anytime soon to cut interest rates further.

Boskin and private economists both agreed that the 0.6 percent rise in the Producer Price Index for May was not cause for inflationary concern. Private analysts said the number was skewed by a host of temporary factors from higher energy prices to a big jump in the price of tobacco and commercial aircraft.

May's increase in wholesale prices was the largest since a 1.2 percent jump last October. It followed a 0.2 percent April increase and two straight months of declines.

The May gain was led by a 2.4 percent rise in energy prices, reflecting a jump of 5.2 percent in gasoline costs. It was the first time energy prices had increased since last November.

But analysts noted that gasoline prices have started to come down again and they said these declines will be reflected in price moderation in coming months.

The government was scheduled to release its May survey of consumer prices on Friday and analysts said they were expecting a moderate gain of 0.3 percent in the Consumer Price Index. They forecast that consumer prices for the whole year will rise by between 3 percent and 4 percent, far below last year's 6.1 percent jump.

Food prices at the wholesale level rose by 0.2 percent in May even though vegetable prices continued to skyrocket, reflecting adverse weather in many farm states. Vegetable prices shot up 22.7 percent in May following a record 34.3 percent April increase. Lettuce prices more than doubled from April to May and prices for tomatoes, celery and cabbage also were up substantially.

These price gains were offset somewhat by declines in the price of fruits, meat and eggs.

The underlying core rate of inflation, excluding the volatile energy and food categories, rose a moderate 0.4 percent last month. The biggest price pressures in the core rate were from a 4 percent jump in tobacco prices and a 3 percent rise in the cost of civilian aircraft.

Gramm taps 10 Texas attorneys for judgeships

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm has recommended 10 Texas attorneys and judges to fill newly created judgeships across the state.

The judicial posts were created last year by Congress, expanding the number of federal judgeships in Texas by 11 and by 85 nationwide.

Jane Akin Brasch of Harlingen, a former judge of the 103rd State District Court, was the only person chosen from the Rio Grande Valley.

"I'm deeply honored and I am just very pleased," she said. "I think Sen. Gramm was very fair with the way he handled the whole process."

In addition to Brasch, Gramm's other choices for the four remaining spots in the Southern District were three attorneys and a state district judge, all from Houston. They are Andrew Hanen, state District Judge Russell Lloyd, Lee Rosenthal and Ewing Werlein Jr.

Leonard Davis of Tyler got the nod for the Eastern District slot. The Northern District recommendations are state judges Joe Kendall and Carolyn Wright, both of Dallas, and Corsicana attorney Terry Means.

In the Western District, Gramm nominated Terral Smith, an Austin attorney.

The recommendations complete the first stage of a formal selection process for new federal judgeships.

"I am sure I will always be proud of the job they will do as federal judges," Gramm said. "They each believe strongly that Congress, not the courts, should make our laws. And they are concerned about the rights of victims, not just criminals."

Gramm's picks go to President Bush's desk then to the U.S. Justice Department and the American Bar Association for background checks.

Those investigations will be followed by presidential nominations and confirmation hearings before the full Senate.

Bush is expected to nominate state District Judge Jorge Solis of Abilene for the 11th Texas vacancy.

Police search for suspects in golfer's death

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A man killed on a municipal golf course Wednesday may have pursued and caught two teens attempting to steal his golf clubs before being shot to death, police said Thursday.

A search continued Thursday for two teen-age suspects in the shooting death of Paul M. Beaty, said Corpus Christi police Lt. Rocky Vipond.

Beaty, 51, was found near a brushy area at the Gabe Lozano Sr. Golf Center in this South Texas city.

"We're checking into possible leads in that area," Vipond said. "We're looking more at it now as them trying to steal his golf clubs.

"He may have caught up with them. When he was found, his golf bag was next to him and he was several feet from his golf cart."

Beaty, who was playing alone, was shot twice in the chest with a small-caliber weapon. He was unconscious and bleeding when he was found and died about an hour later at Memorial Medical Center.

"Although Beaty still had money in his pockets, his golf clubs were scattered at the scene, as if someone had tried to steal them from him," Vipond said.

Several persons heard the gunshots, but no one saw the incident, he said.

■ Purchase of confidential files prompts change

HOUSTON — The Resolution Trust Corp., which has discovered several confidential files from a failed thrift were sold in a public auction, plans to implement new security measures nationwide.

The Houston Chronicle reported last week that it had purchased a box of microfiche records for $100 at an RTC auction of property belonging to the now-defunct Ameriway Savings. Another man reported he found at least 30 computer diskettes loaded with the thrift's confidential records inside a file cabinet he, too, bought at the auction.

RTC officials said the records were erroneously loaded into a truck bound for the auction when a contractor oversaw the dismantling of the failed thrift's assets. Another truck was loading items bound for an RTC warehouse at the same time.

■ Witness reveals details of alleged fraud

AUSTIN — The son of a Houston insurance fraud defendant testified that he installed a command in a computer system that would delete traces of an investment plan created by his father.

Bud Skillern, 56, former financial consultant to the insolvent American Teachers Life Insurance Co., has pleaded innocent to accusations that he stole funds from an investment plan involving the firm.

Earlier, witnesses outlined Skillern's plan, which used ATL to sell $100,000 single-premium annuities.

The buyers acquired the annuities and an accompanying life insurance policy by signing promissory notes.

A single-premium annuity is a contract bought from an insurance company by a person who pays its full value with one lump sum of cash. The company invests the cash, and the buyer receives income from the investment.

Prosecutors say that Skillern's method of having buyers acquire the annuities through promissory notes — simple IOUs — is highly questionable.

The son said he built a command into the program that would delete all traces of the plan.

■ RTC reviews ex-lawmaker's bankruptcy filing

AUSTIN — A former state representative who is involved in bankruptcy proceedings is under investigation by the Resolution Trust Corp. for his role in a failed real estate venture, an RTC official said.

An RTC attorney questioned Jim McWilliams, a Democrat from the East Texas town of Hallsville, during a brief bankruptcy hearing on Thursday.

The RTC, which disposes of failed savings and loans, is investigating McWilliams and his involvement in Caney Creek Estates, a development in Hallsville that has been plagued by poor services, said Teresa McUsic, spokeswoman for the Dallas-based Southwest regional office of the RTC.

In addition, residents of the development say they are having trouble obtaining titles to their homes.

Last year, McWilliams chose not to seek another term in the Texas House. His wife ran in his place as a Republican. She lost to Paul Sadler, a Henderson Democrat.

■ El Pasoan named to radioactive-waste post

AUSTIN — El Paso lawyer Carmen Rodriguez has been appointed to the board of directors of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive-Waste Disposal Authority.

Ms. Rodriguez, 41, will replace James Allison of Austin, whose term expired.

In making the appointment, Gov. Ann Richards said the she was "confident that El Pasoans will now have an increased role in the decision-making process" at the waste authority.

■ Commission adopts tougher water standards

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission announced it has adopted more stringent water quality standards for all surface waters in the state.

"Clean water is imperative to both a good standard of living and economic growth," TWC Chairman John Hall said Wednesday.

The new standards will require higher levels of wastewater treatment in many areas, and establish new criteria for five additional toxic substances in order to protect aquatic life, Hall said.

The TWC also appointed an advisory panel to assist the agency with developing future policies for hazardous waste.

The first job for the member task force will be to help the commission set new regulations on hazardous waste permits.

Mexico ready to sign debt-for-nature swap

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican environmental organization Pronatura will sign a $3 million debt-for-nature swap with the government this week, the Treasury Department said Thursday.

Pronatura will be able to buy the debt over 3½ years. Lorenzo Sada Ramos, director of the organization, said the money will be used to create a trust that will produce interest to finance Pronatura's conservation projects.

Mexico signed its first debt-for-nature swap several weeks ago with Conservation International, based in Washington. Pronatura is the first Mexican organization to arrange a swap.

The organizations buy discounted Mexican foreign debt and exchange it for the debt's full value or close to full value in local currency on condition that the money be invested in specific projects in the country.

Newswoman's own story is her best one

By Karla Lansford
Associated Press writer

HARLINGEN — Harlingen television newswoman Hilda Sullivan has been reporting Lower Rio Grande Valley news since the 1960s, but no story she told is as intriguing or as inspirational as her own.

Diagnosed with multiple myeloma in 1985, Mrs. Sullivan was given only two years to live by medical experts.

Now, six years later, she continues to battle the disease with an inner strength not always seen.

A terminal form of cancer in the blood stream and bone marrow, multiple myeloma debilitates the bones and weakens the immune system.

Mrs. Sullivan's first symptoms were back pains. First she consulted a chiropractor who treated her with adjustments for a year.

In March 1986, during a treatment, the KGBT-TV newswoman felt a sharp pain. The chiropractor explained that some cartilage had separated, nothing more.

'This is part of living. You can have cancer, but it's part of living. You live above it. You use it.'

— Hilda Sullivan, suffers from multiple myeloma

Mrs. Sullivan, whose work ethic is, "If you can stand up, you can go to work," continued with her rigid schedule as a newscaster.

Once weighing 130 pounds, Mrs. Sullivan dropped below 100 pounds.

Finally, unable to breathe, she consulted a thoracic surgeon. He diagnosed her as having three broken ribs, and told her the cartilage connecting the sternum to the rib cage had broken.

In May, Mrs. Sullivan said her back "froze" one morning as she woke up.

Unable to move, she was taken to the hospital where she remained for 11 days. Mrs. Sullivan said that during that time, she had to relearn walking, sitting, and other motor skills.

Mrs. Sullivan next contacted a friend, Dr. Charles Pascal, who ordered blood tests.

Pascal informed her that she had multiple myeloma and severe anemia, a symptom of the disease.

Though most would find this news devastating, Mrs. Sullivan said she was glad to finally have a certain diagnosis.

"I had felt like I was slipping further and further into a black hole, and I couldn't catch hold." Finally, Mrs. Sullivan said, she had a handle on her illness.

Pascal referred her to doctors with experience in multiple myeloma — Drs. Tom MacDermaid, Darvey Fuller and Allan Cass, who continued her treatments.

On medication, Mrs. Sullivan has gone through years of chemotherapy and radiation treatments. Although most patients find this process devastating physically and mentally, Mrs. Sullivan used it to grow spiritually.

"I believe that healing is a two-step process, you take the outside treatments and work on the insides and clean yourself out — get rid of the anger. You must cease being judgmental," she declared.

"I didn't consider what happened in illness or any other kind of disaster. I was going to use it to stretch, to grow. This is part of living. You can have cancer, but it's part of living. You live above it. You use it."

Mrs. Sullivan said her only pain came from hurting her husband, veteran KGBT-TV news anchorman Frank Sullivan, and her five children.

AP Laserphoto

Six years after being told she would not live for another two because of multiple myeloma, Hilda Sullivan continues to fight the cancer-type illness.

She added that they have all come to terms with her condition and have the same optimistic outlook: "What you believe in is what you are."

She said she doesn't profess to be a member of any particular religious denomination. She explains the origin of her faith as, "I am of the spirit."

Mrs. Sullivan is not afraid of death. She has never succumbed to the pain of her condition, she said.

"That is something to be dealt with, but not dwelt upon," she said.

Her disease is not in remission, nor has it ever been. But today, she is an attractive, healthy-looking woman.

Mrs. Sullivan still has many things she would like to accomplish. Her work is her passion, and she hopes to return to the TV station as soon as she gathers enough stamina to do so.

Mrs. Sullivan is also making final revisions on a book she has written, "Good Noontime, Everyone." In it, she discusses her own battle with the disease and tries to inspire all other cancer patients with the message, "Don't be afraid."

Mrs. Sullivan's book, she said, is her way of reaching out to other cancer victims. She has a strong message to send to them.

"What is the greater miracle?" she asks. "The quick fix? Or taking it, using it to expel meanness, pettiness, narrowness?

"To use it to impel you to find a peace within yourself? To bring you to a realization that this moment is all there is? To bring us to a realization that this moment is all anybody has.

"And that in this moment, we can accept healing, abundance, and enjoyment."

Before she was diagnosed, Mrs. Sullivan's only request was to know what was changing her life so drastically. Now, her desire reaches further.

"I want to be a window that lets the light come through. I want to shine with that light. I want to be a blessing."

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
