Three local races require run-off June 7

8 incumbents elected

Voters in Deaf Smith County elected eight local incumbents Saturday and caused three run-off elections to be held on June 7.

Democrats cast 3,725 ballots, according to the Deaf Smith County Clerk's office. Although, only one local race had a Republican candidate—Ronnie Hathaway for county commissioner drew 49 votes—421 Republican ballots were marked in the county.

The 4,146 voters represent about 47 percent of the eligible registered voters in the county.

Runoffs will determine the races of county judge, justice of the peace, and county commissioner for Precinct 4. To avoid a runoff, a candidate must receive over 50 percent of the vote. The two top contenders in those three races will be on the June ballot.

Dempsey Alexander and Tom Simons are in a showdown for the county judge seat. Alexander drew 1,589 votes and Simons got 1,516 votes, thus requiring a runoff. Joe Zepeda had 504 votes.

Johnnie Turrentine received the plurality in the justice of the peace race with 1,409 votes over incumbent O.K. Neal's 1,343. Ruben Gutierrez rounded out that race with 876 votes.

Incumbent James Voyles edged out with only 6 votes ahead of his runoff candidate, Johnny Latham, in the race for county commissioner, Precinct 4. Voyles had 328 votes to Latham's 322.

Other Democratic candidates and their tallies in that race were, Kenny Donathan, 42; and Pete Lafuente Jr., 164. The lone Republican candidate, Hathaway, drew 49 votes.

County Treasurer Vesta Mae Nunley was victorious over Herb de la Rosa for that office, 2,734 to 767.

Incumbent Austin Rose kept his position as county commissioner for Precinct 2 with 492 votes to Fidel Reyna Jr.'s 324.

Dale Messer again was elected as the county Democratic party chairman with 2,276 votes. Al Dzuik trailed with 805 votes.

Uncontested races kept several incumbents in office.

Judge David Wesley Guiley, of the 22nd Judicial District, received 2,709 votes.

Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul got 2,709 votes.

47 percent turnout

David Ruland, County Clerk, received 2,890 votes.
Lola Faye Veazey, District Clerk, received 2,903 votes.
County Surveyor Kenneth Hagar had 2,619 votes.
In Precinct 1, Nancy Hill received 485 votes as precinct Democratic chairman.

Hance gets 20 percent of GOP vote

Former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance was a popular vote getter in the Panhandle and South Plains, but he didn't come close to the runoff race he predicted with former Gov. Bill Clements.

Hance polled only 20.2 percent of the votes statewide, and Clements easily defeated both Tom Loeffler and Hance in the Republican primary for governor. That sets up a showdown in November between Clements and Gov. Mark White.

Hance drew 334 votes in the Deaf Smith GOP primary, compared to 134 for Clements and 13 for Loeffler. The GOP primary here attracted 421 voters, about twice the normal turnout. The one local Republican candidate—Ronnie Hathaway, drew 49 votes for the Precinct 4 county commissioner post. He will face either James Voyles or Johnny Latham, the Demo nominees, in November. Voyles, the incumbent, and Latham will be in the Demo runoff June 7.

Local Republicans favored Aaron Bullock for lieutenant governor over three other candidates. Bullock, Kingwood attorney, will face former preacher David Davidson of Austin in a runoff for the statewide nomination. The winner takes on Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby in November.

In the attorney general's race, State Dist. Judge Roy Barrera of San Antonio, seeking to become the first Hispanic elected to statewide office, will be in a runoff with former Williamson County district attorney Ed Walsh. The winner takes on Atty. Gen. Jim Mattox in November.

In the Republican race, Bill Powers won the nomination for Texas Ag Commissioner. Powers is executive vice president of the Texas Poultry Association. He takes on the Democratic incumbent—Jim Hightower—in November.

Hance, 43, has now lost statewide races in two parties in the past two years. He declined to say whether he is through with politics.

"I don't know," Hance replied when asked if he would seek another post. "For the next few weeks, I may sleep late, take off a few days and relax."

State GOP Chairman George Strake said Hance attracted new people in the party. "I'm going to sit down and put on my thinking cap and come up with as an important assignment as I can give to him. I just don't know now what it might be," Strake said.

Texas Demo Party chairman Bob Slagle said Hance appears to be finished as a candidate for statewide office. He said the GOP apparently doesn't want Hance as a candidate and that he apparently wasn't able to convert a significant number of Democrats.

White, Clements rematch highlights election

DALLAS (AP) — It's been called "Rocky II," the gubernatorial rematch between Democratic Gov. Mark White and Republican Bill Clements, the incumbent whom White beat in 1982's upset.

Clements, on the comeback trail, launched his November election campaign by saying White must win the November election to keep his national political ambitions alive.

"This incumbent ... has a real burden to carry here, that if he's going to realize his political ambitions, he's going to have to win this election," Clements said.

Mark McKinnon, White's campaign press secretary, referred to White's upset of Clements four years ago and said, "We're ready for 'Rocky II.'"

With 100 percent of the vote counted, White received 588,365 votes, or 53.8 percent, followed by Andrew Briscoe III with 247,448 votes, or 22.6 percent; Don Crowder, 120,632, or 11 percent; Bobby Locke with 58,971, or 5.4 percent; Sheila Bilyeu, 39,406, or 3.6 percent, and Ron Slover with 39,065, or 3.6 percent.

In the Republican race, Clements got 317,469 votes, or 58.4 percent; Tom Loeffler had 117,521 votes, or 21.6 percent, and Kent Hance had 108,182, or 19.9 percent.

In other races, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower won renominations easily. Fellow Democrats Attorney General Jim Mattox and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro were unopposed.

Former minister David Davidson of Austin will face Kingwood lawyer Aaron Bullock in a runoff for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor.

Bill Powers, executive vice president of the Texas Poultry Association in Austin, won the Republican nomination for Agriculture Commissioner.

Final vote tallies Monday ended the "Chinese water torture" for potential runoff election candidates to the Texas Railroad Commission.

Results from the secretary of state's office showed P.S. "Sam" Ervin, a Dallas oil and gas consultant, edging out John Poulard of Dallas by less than 5,000 votes to grab a runoff position against state Sen. John Sharp for the Democratic nomination to the Railroad Commission.

In the Republican race for the job, state Rep. Milton Fox of Houston beat Ed Emmett by less than 3,000 votes to grab the runoff spot against John Thomas Henderson, an Austin real estate developer.

"It's been kind of like Chinese water torture, sitting around waiting to know," Fox said. "This runnerup spot is more desirable than it may look to the casual observer."

Fox, an engineer, said now he hopes to make his qualifications better known.

Ervin could not be reached for comment. There was no answer at his Dallas office Monday.

The final results in the GOP primary showed Henderson had 116,041 votes, or 29.9 percent, to Fox's 100,071 votes, or 25.8 percent. Emmett was third with 97,369 votes, or 25.1 percent.

In the Democratic primary, Sharp had 414,023 votes, or 45.2 percent, to Ervin's 187,889 votes, or 20.5 percent. Poulard had 183,410 votes, or 20 percent.

In Supreme Court races, Sears McGee, an 18-year veteran of the high court, ran third in the Democratic primary. A June 7 runoff will match state Sen. Oscar Mauzy against Shirley Butts, an appeals court judge seeking to become the FRIONA — A dairy accident claimed the life of a Hereford man Sunday as nearly a ton of ensilage caved in on top of him, according to Farmer and Deaf Smith county sheriff's deputies.

Stuart W. Huff, 44, died sometime between 7 and 9 a.m. Sunday on the Long Corral Dairy Farm about 10 miles northeast of Friona on U.S. 60.

According to Deaf Smith County paramedic Donnie Lauderback, Huff was working on a front-end loader when apparently he got off to check the load when it fell on him. Lauderback said Huff was buried by about four feet of ensilage. The accident was discovered by the manager of the dairy.

Man charged with mom's suicide

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — An Amarillo man has been charged with aiding the suicide of his 75-year-old mother in what could be the Panhandle's first incidence of a "mercy killing," authorities said.

Charles Emmet McIntosh, 58, was arraigned Monday before State District Judge Don Emerson on a third-degree felony charge of aiding suicide. Bond was set at $5,000. He remained in custody Monday night at Potter County Corrections Center.

McIntosh is accused of providing his mother, Elva McIntosh, with sleeping pills and failing to seek medical assistance for her. She died early Monday.

The filing of the aiding suicide charge is believed to be a first for the area, District Attorney Danny Hill said. He said the law came into effect in 1974.

McIntosh met police at the front door of his residence as they arrived in response to a report of a dead body, officers said. They said McIntosh led them to a bedroom where they found Mrs. McIntosh.

Paramedics were unable to revive the woman, police said. Handwritten and typewritten notes were found at the residence, but authorities had not confirmed late Monday who had written them, officers said.

McIntosh told investigators that his mother had asked him to help her, police said. He said his mother had been suffering from arthritis and eye problems and had difficulty walking.

Children write Reagan

BORGER, Texas (AP) — President Reagan had the support of most Americans when the United States bombed Libya, and Becky Fish's fourth-grade class at Gateway Elementary School is no exception.

The students wrote letters to Reagan as part of a current events project, and most supported the air raid on Libya.

Ms. Fish, a social studies teacher at the school, said the use of Borger News-Herald clippings as part of her current events program prompted the children to write letters to the president.

Mike Ramsey wrote: "I am only in the fourth grade, but I am deeply concerned in the affairs between the United States and Libya."

Janna Poston wrote: "...I have watched the TV and have seen all that has been going on with us and Libya. I think that what we have done is right. Even though I don't like war, something should be done to stop Libyan terrorists."

Trey Gillman asked Reagan if he plans to attack Libya again, and if so, where. He concluded his letter with: "I might be president some day. Is it hard to be one?"

Some of the students asked about the drop in oil prices and what the president might do to help. Borger relies heavily on the petroleum industry.

Ms. Fish said, "They really worked at it. I hope one of the letters reaches the president and he reads it. The kids worked very hard on them."

Executions can proceed

AUSTIN (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing death penalty opponents to be barred from capital murder case juries means Texas executions should proceed at a quicker pace, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

Among others, the decision applies to the case of Jay Kelly Pinkerton, who is scheduled to die by lethal injection on May 15, Mattox said.

The high court, voting 6-3 on Monday, decided an Arkansas case which had raised questions about dismissal of such jurors. Texas and 37 other states had filed written arguments on Arkansas' behalf.

In its ruling, the Supreme Court said the Constitution doesn't prohibit removal for cause of prospective capital murder case jurors who state they oppose the death penalty.

That argument had been raised in appeals filed by several convicted murderers in Texas, said Assistant Attorney General Paula Offenhauser.

"The question has been raised in virtually every request for a stay of execution that has been filed," she said, including Pinkerton's.

Pinkerton was sentenced to die for the 1979 mutilation murder of Sarah Donn Lawrence in Amarillo. An apprentice meat cutter, Pinkerton also was convicted of the mutilation slaying of Sherry Welch in Amarillo.

Strangers deal with mental patients

AUSTIN (AP) — Staffs are so short at some state mental hospitals that it is not unusual to pull personnel from one unit to another to deal with patients they have never seen, says a review panel.

"This sets up a situation where staff are unfamiliar with patients and in essence, strangers are dealing with strangers. The Review Panel is concerned that this is at the best a poor situation in that patients do not get optimal care and at worst it is a potentially dangerous situation," said the report of the three-member panel.

The panel appointed by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders said Monday that state hospitals at Rusk, San Antonio, Austin and Wichita Falls transfer an average of four to eight workers from one unit to another per shift each day.

"Staff members have told us that they withdraw from dealing with patients because they are either afraid of them or simply are not comfortable carrying out their duties," the report said.

The panel, which is reviewing whether hospitals are in compliance with court orders, filed a special report with Sanders, of Dallas, and recommended that hospitals with surplus staff transfer employees to hospitals that lack sufficient personnel.

The report said there had been a number of complaints about the use of therapy technicians. It noted that technicians are primarily being used at Austin State Hospital — 48 — and at Terrell State Hospital — 11.

The Review Panel recommended that therapy technicians and Licensed Vocational Nurses not be counted in achieving the staff to patient ratio of 1:5 in a stipulated agreement of August 1985. The panel said it was an error to accept the compromise of technicians-LVNs "in the first place."

Three more arrested

BERLIN (AP) — A newspaper said today that West Berlin police had arrested three more people in connection with last month's nightclub bombing that killed two people and injured 230 others.

The Berlin Morgenpost identified one of the three as Farouk Salameh, who it said is married to a German woman. It did not identify the other two people.

Police declined to confirm the newspaper's report, but scheduled a news conference for later in the day.

The April 5 bombing sparked the U.S. bombing raid on the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi 10 days later. The United States claims that Libya was behind the bomb attack.

City approves street light, opens two bids

The Hereford City Commission Monday night elected to install a street light in the 300 block of Hickory St. during a regular meeting of the commission.

Residents of Hickory Street presented a petition to the commission asking for the light. Under city policy, a street can not be installed unless the area is 75 percent developed. The area in the 300 block of Hickory is only 62 percent developed. The commission elected to install the light in order to conform to future development scheduled for that area.

In other business the commission denied a request by J.G. Financial Corporation to have an area at 441 Ave. B be rezoned from "C-Multi-Family" to "E-Central Business."

Commissioners also accepted a bid from Water Industries of Hereford to drill a new water well for the city. The bid was for $86,400. The city had budgeted $100,000 for the project.

"It is great see a local company submit such a bid," said commissioner Tom LeGate. "And it is even better that we can award the bid to a local company."

A bid submitted by The Appian Corporation of Hereford was accepted for the annual seal coat street program. The project will cost the city $70,000.

Commissioners also elected to allow the Hereford State Bank to handle the city's bank depositories. This contract will be for a two-year term.

In other business the commission allowed City Manager Darwin McGill to transfer $550,000 from the water and sewer fund to the general fund. McGill said that the general fund does not pay for itself and it needs subsidization from the water and sewer department.

"This is a common practice for the city," McGill said. "We have been transferring funds ever since 1980."

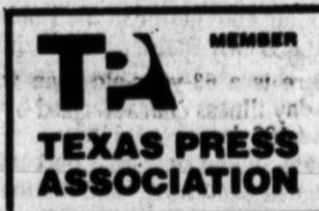

This transfer will be for the 1985 and 1986 fiscal years.

In state legislative races — in which 150 House and 16 Senate seats were up — three Democrats and one Republican in the House failed to win their party's nomination.

Wester quoted Bible passages that pertained to worry and also said that every 19 days of one's life is in a high or low cycle. "Drop yesterdays worries and forget them," she explained. "Sort out and do the things you can today and discard thoughts of tomorrow for they may never come. Only live today."

She concluded by saying, "Make a list of your worries and then ask yourself questions about them and then forget them."

Others in attendance included Argen Draper, Virgie Duncan, Beverly Jesko, Camelia Jones, Ethel Logan, Pet Ott, Louise Packard, Esther Thuet, Clara Trowbridge, and Laverne Worley.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Lawyers, who orchestrate patients' million-dollar malpractice suits, say that doctors must place greater emphasis on telling their patients about the limits, extent and complications of medical testing and treatment. Plaintiffs' attorneys point out that the basis for many negligence claims is simply that the doctor did not give the patient sufficient information about the potential consequences of a medical or surgical act; that is, the physician did not give "informed consent."

I do not know a single M.D. who does not agree with this principle. We try to explain things. However, like many issues in life, the question is one of degree. I'll give you an example:

Here is a 63-year-old man with a two-day illness characterized by a fever of 102 degrees, achiness, scratchy throat, headache, sore joints, upset stomach and occasional hacking cough. He is usually in good health and has no history of ulcer, lung problems or heart disease.

I have talked to a least two dozen adults with similar symptoms in the past week. It is the flu season and I suspect that my patient has a self-limited virus infection that will run its course in about three days. Nonetheless, because of his age, I make a house call. He has a fever. His nose is runny and his throat is blotchy red. There are no signs of arthritis, heart failure, pneumonia or meningitis. I say: "Look, Harry, I think you've got the flu. I doubt that you have a serious condition. Stay quiet, drink lots of fluids, take a couple of aspirin every four hours if your fever goes above 99 degrees, and call me on Thursday."

This sounds like a reasonable approach to me, and Harry seems content with my analysis. I think I have done my job: established a diagnosis by exclusion, suggested a conservative approach and arranged for follow-up. The transaction appears satisfactorily complete. I have fulfilled my role as a physician and addressed the problem with minimal expense.

I'm taking a big risk in doing this, though, because I've based my actions on clinical judgment instead of extensive testing. If I were practicing "defensive medicine," an increasingly prevalent abhorrence, I would do more. Not for Harry's sake, you understand, but for my own. I'd have to cover any liability that could arise and anticipate unusual contingencies so I wouldn't end up in court. I would order a blood count to make sure that Harry had enough infection-fighting blood cells. After all, he could have leukemia. I'd obtain two chest X-rays (front and side) to rule out a small area of pneumonia. I might insist on a urinalysis to cover the unlikely possibility of kidney infection. I'd get a throat culture to see if he had a strep infection. I might even go further, with a cardiogram and a complete blood-chemical screening battery. Harry might have diabetes, liver disease or electrolyte imbalance.

All of a sudden, a $24 case of gripe balloons into a $200 extravaganza. Is the purpose of this fishing expedition to discover the unusual disease? Partially, primarily, it is to protect me from being sued.

Even if the tests are normal, I'm not off the hook. You see, I didn't give Harry a thorough rundown about the possible consequences of taking aspirin. Had I done so, here is how my comments would be revised: "Harry, I think aspirin will bring down your fever and make you feel better. However, there are potential dangers of aspirin that are listed by the manufacturer. The drug can cause fatal allergic reactions that may cause you to go into shock. It may affect the coagulation of your blood so that you could bleed to death. It may give you heartburn, gas, vomiting, ulcers, stomach bleeding and massive gastrointestinal hemorrhage. It can trigger asthma. You may experience ringing in the ears."

"Keep this and all medicines out of the reach of children. In case of accidental overdose, consult a physician immediately. The medicine is to be used only for temporary relief of discomfort and fever resulting from colds and flu; sore throats, muscular aches and pains, arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, toothache, neuralgia, menstrual pain, sleeplessness and pain accompanying immunizations. You may experience nervousness, dizziness and sleepiness. Do not use in the presence of high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes or thyroid disorders."

"Do you have any questions? Good. Please sign this consent form in which you acknowledge that you fully accept the risks of aspirin therapy and that these consequences have been fully explained to you in understandable terms. Mrs. Miller will witness and notarize this document."

Kite exhibition opens at Discovery Center

Man has wanted to fly since the beginning of time and from this dream the kite was born. Kites have enjoyed a longer continual history than any other toy except dolls. Yet kites have been instrumental in advancing technology, aeronautical research and military strategies.

"Sculptures in the Sky" is a lively, colorful exhibition of kites and kite history at the Don Harrington Discovery Center, May 3 through Sunday June 22.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday through May 30. Beginning June 2, hours are 12 to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Kites from the stable of Fred Ochs, Amarillo kite collector and enthusiast, include a 45 foot Chinese Dragon/Centipede of blue, red, green and white, brought from Weifang, China; a sculptured butterfly of silk and bamboo; a 15 foot Delta-Conyne in black, red and yellow; and Navy Target Kite featuring a Japanese Zero with red insignia used in WWII as a practice target for ship gunners.

Others include a 150 foot multi-colored Giant Serpent/Dragon Kite; an English Roller Kite and a Cody War Kite, a reduced size version of Cody's man-carrying kites of the turn of the century.

"Colorful Kite Tales," a Smithsonian exhibit mounted in conjunction with the Ochs collection, captures the fascination and diversity of kites. The panel display explores the history of kites, how kites fly and describes the diverse styles of kites from the simplest flat kites to the latest parafoils.

The Discovery Center exhibition also includes "Kite Rites," a kite activity corner featuring kite building materials and instructions, kite-search questions, bibliography for students and teachers and kite thoughts and poems.

Amarillo medical school begins fund-raising drive

The panhandle-area phase of a fund-raising campaign for Texas Tech University and Health Sciences Center began last month with almost 62 percent of the goal already received or pledged.

Tech Regent Wesley Masters of Amarillo, chairman of panhandle-area effort, announced $3.7 million of the $6 million area goal during a reception at the Amarillo Country Club recently to launch the local campaign.

"There are some things you have to do and some things you get to do," Masters said in making the announcement. "This is something we get to do for your university."

The three-year national capital funds effort, called the Enterprise Campaign, is seeking $60 million in all. "Our area unofficially is committed to 10 percent of the total campaign goal," Masters said.

According to Lauro Cavazos, Tech president, $43 million will be used for endowment funds and $17 million for immediate needs for the university and its regional academic health centers.

Top priority for the Amarillo campus is a vivarium, said Dr. Walter Dickinson, dean of Texas Tech University School of Medicine at Amarillo.

"A first-class animal housing facility, with an environment corresponding as closely as possible to the animals' natural environment, would cost about $2 million," he said. "Another $3 million will endow chairs, with the remaining used for equipment."

When the national campaign first was launched in February, Cavazos said Tech, like many other institutions, no longer can depend solely on legislative appropriations and student fees.

The U.S. Congress outlawed duelling in 1839.

Ann Landers No bedroom furniture

DEAR ANN LANDERS: How many of your divorced women readers still sleep with their ex-husbands? I'm not talking about a one-night fling for old times' sake, but an ongoing sexual relationship that lasts for months, even years.

How do these women break this last tie with their ex-husbands and establish a relationship with a new man?

For more than a year I have relied on my ex for sex. I've gone out with other men but I cannot allow myself to sleep with any of them.

Why do I hang on? Why does he accommodate me so readily? How do I stop this foolishness and get on with my life? Let's hear some answers. I have girlfriends with the same problem and they would like to know too.—IN A HOLDING PATTERN IN N.J.

DEAR HOLDING: Divorced couples who continue to sleep together are taking the path of least resistance. It's easier to fall into a familiar pair of arms (and a familiar bed) than to stake out new territory even though there may be hostility, anger and hurt. When the juices start to flow, a lot is overlooked, forgotten and forgiven.

The only way to quit is to stop seeing the guy in your home. If you must get together for business reasons, meet at a public place where there are no couches or bedroom furniture.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You printed a letter from a woman who reprimanded working mothers who do not pick up their sick children at school. Twice she referred to "mothers who do not or will not pick up their sick kids." To top it off, in your answer you said, "If any woman wonders if 'Frustrated' is talking to you, she probably is."

Annie, this is 1986. Where are the fathers? Why does the burden of child care, housework, bill paying, entertaining, etc., fall solely on the women? We have enough guilt on our backs just having to leave our children every day. Please don't load on more.

It's time the men in America learned what child care is all about.

My family is the most important thing to me. I wouldn't hesitate leaving work to take them home when they're ill, but they also have a father who will do the same. From now on, say PARENTS!—BUM RAPED IN LANSING, MICH.

DEAR RAPPED: You'd better believe I will. I'm digging myself out from under a load of letters written by angry mothers who let me have it. My apologies to one and all.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a "Blefro." That probably doesn't mean anything to you, but it means a lot to 4,000 people in this country who have blepharospasm. This is an eye disease that causes the lids to close involuntarily. The reason is unknown and there is at present no cure.

I cannot drive. I cannot read or watch TV very long. I must wear dark glasses because the light bothers me. It's awful to have one's eyelids shut down without warning. But those of us who have this disease try to carry on and lead a normal life in spite of the problem.

We want to help our fellow sufferers by uniting them. Please print the address of our organization: BENIGN ESSENTIAL BLEPHAROSPASM RESEARCH FOUNDATION INC., 755 Howell St., Beaumont, Tx. 77706. Thanks, Ann.—C.L.J.

DEAR C.L.J.: Here's your letter and the address. I hope I've helped.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex—Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11996, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Illustrators help find missing children

Janet Hicks cried when she saw the drawings of her two daughters. They had been missing for more than seven years after being abducted by their father, Philip Caruso, who had lost custody of the girls in divorce proceedings.

The drawings were special. Scott Barrows, a medical illustrator and former faculty member in the Biomedical Communications Department at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas, had used old photographs of the sisters and data for predicting facial development to sketch what they might look like—seven years since their mother had last seen them.

Within hours after the illustrations were shown on a television program—"Missing: Have You Seen This Person?"—Kathy and Debbie Caruso were identified and returned to their mother.

The anthropological data Barrows used in "aging" the photographs of the Caruso sisters has been compiled over a five-year period by Lewis Sadler, associate professor of biomedical communications at UTHSCD.

Sadler first became interested in predicting cranial facial growth in 1980 when he was a senior medical illustrator in the Department of Medical and Biological Illustration at the University of Michigan. A plastic surgeon asked him to attempt drawings predicting the appearance of young patients following surgery aimed at correcting abnormal cranial development.

Sadler says current data is limited to Caucasian children between the ages of three and 18 because these are the populations most widely studied by anthropologists, orthodontists and others. Broadening and lengthening of facial features as a child's face grows can be predicted with surprising accuracy using the data compiled by Sadler.

"Trained in the anatomy of the bones and muscles beneath the skin, we understand the graphic presentation of changes in profile, the prominence of facial features and can describe the effects of skin wrinkles and smile line," Sadler says.

Barrows, a freelance illustrator based in Chicago, and Sadler are working in their spare time with the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children to "age" photographs of children who have been missing for five to eight years. Of more than 30 children sketched by the illustrators, seven have been found.

The medical illustrators refuse to take money for the sketches they do of the missing children; but they are looking for funding to establish a center with computers to speed up their efforts. Sadler says the start-up cost of such a center would be about $300,000, and it would take about $100,000 a year to keep it operating.

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR MARTHA — The lint and dust will accumulate in the bobbin mechanism of any sewing machine. However, I've found that a brush is about the best tool for cleaning it out. An old toothbrush is handy for this purpose. Many machines come with a small brush for this purpose. Accumulations of dust and lint in the space under the machine can be vacuumed out quickly and easily. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Recently I have had to use a cane to assist me in walking. It looked so dull and negative to me that I have decorated the cane with artificial flowers which I change with the seasons or for special occasions. I just tape them on.

When I needed cold compresses for my knee, I substituted bags of frozen vegetables for the usual ice cubes in plastic bags. The veggies molded to the knee with much greater comfort than the ice cubes. — J.M.S.

In season finale last Saturday

Herd whips Palo Duro, 13-3

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

A pair of five-run innings enabled the Hereford Whiteface varsity baseball team to overcome a 3-0 Palo Duro lead last Saturday, and Hereford went on to score a 13-3 victory.

The victory came in the 1986 season finale for the Whitefaces, who closed out the District 3-5A season at home.

Hereford's final season record is 15-11-1, including an 8-8 district record.

After Saturday's game, Whiteface Coach Don Long said, "I want to think everybody, the players and the fans. They've all been a lot of help. 'There's been a lot of support to build the program, and I appreciate that.'"

Palo Duro gained its 3-0 lead over Hereford Saturday with one run in the first inning and two runs in the top of the second inning.

The first-inning run was scored on an RBI groundout. Two singles and two errors led to the runs in the second inning.

The Hereford second inning began with Doug Watts hitting a single, and Rodney McCracken reaching the base paths with a walk. A wild pitch advance pinchrunner Bill Ruckman to third base and McCracken to second base.

Bobby Martinez then narrowed Palo Duro's lead to 3-2 by hitting a two-run single. Martinez advanced to third base on a throw to home plate.

Martinez moved to third base on a groundout by Rex Baxter, and scored when Rodney Torres hit a single.

Robby Collier boosted the Whitefaces into a 4-3 lead with a triple that scored Torres. Collier later scored on a wild pitch for a 5-3 lead.

Palo Duro had runners at second and third in the top of the third inning with one out, but did not score. A double play by Hereford ended the inning.

Rightfielder Philip Webster caught a fly ball for out No. 2, fired a perfect throw to catcher Doug Watts, and

There was Olympic ice hockey competition in the 1920 Games at Antwerp and the rules allowed seven men on a side instead of the six used today.

Ty Cobb holds the major league baseball record for hitting one or more homers the most consecutive seasons, 24, during his career from 1905 to 1928.

Watts tagged out the runner attempting to score from third base for out No. 3.

Hereford started off the third inning in a most unusual way. Curtis Cotten walked, and Philip Webster singled into centerfield. Cotten scored all the way from first base to make Hereford's lead 6-3, and Webster went on to second base on the throw to home plate.

The Whitefaces loaded the bases when Doug Watts walked and Bobby Martinez hit an infield single. Torres increased Hereford's lead to 8-3 with a two-run single, scoring Webster and pinchrunner Ruckman.

Collier's turn to bat came next, and he stroked his second triple of the game to bat in Martinez and Torres for a 10-3 Hereford lead.

An attempt was made to turn Collier's triple into an inside-the-park home run, but Collier was thrown before he could get to home plate.

Still another triple was hit by the Whitefaces, in the same inning—this time by Keith Anderson. Anderson then scored on a wild pitch to increase the Whitefaces' lead to 11-3.

Palo Duro had runners at first and third in the fifth inning, but once again could not score.

In the bottom of the fifth inning, Ruckman walked for Hereford and scored on Baxter's RBI double.

Paul Maes was at bat. The Palo Duro catcher was unable to handle a pitch that was a called third strike. Maes easily reached first base, Baxter raced all the way from second base on the bad pitch to score the game-ending run.

When Baxter crossed home plate, the Palo Duro catcher made a desperation dive toward Baxter for a putout attempt, but it was too late. Baxter was able to advance in the first place because the Dons' pitcher failed to cover home plate on the wild pitch.

With Baxter scoring, Hereford gained a 13-3 lead, and the game ended because of the 10-run rule.

Bobby Medina pitched a complete game for Hereford, allowing four hits and striking out three Palo Duro batters. He walked three batters.

In 1905, Jim Tobin of the Boston Braves not only pitched a no-hitter against the Brooklyn Dodgers, winning, 2-0, but also hit a home run in the game.

Louis Meyer won the Indianapolis 500 in 1928, 1933 and 1936. Though it's in the record books that "Louis Meyer" won the 1933 race, it was reported in one newspaper, the Walsenburg Colorado World Independent, that the winner's name was "Will Overhead." This happened when the editor of that small newspaper asked the Associated Press for a special message on the winner of the Indianapolis 500. Keeping with the usual AP policy, the Denver bureau telegraphed this reply: "Will Overhead Indianapolis race winner," which meant that the result would be sent "overhead" by Western Union facilities. But the editor was unfamiliar with that term and misinterpreted the message. He concocted a story from information on the first half of the race and headlined a story across the top of page one, "Will Overhead Wins Indianapolis Race."

In first primary

Hispanics lead statewide races

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White will face "unmitigated disaster" in the November general election if Democratic voters turn their backs on two Mexican Americans in statewide June 7 runoff races, says the chairman of Mexican American Democrats.

"All bets are off" if Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez and George "Jorge" Martinez are not nominated by Democrats, "and the Republicans will reap the harvest," Ruben Bonilla said Monday.

In complete returns, three Mexican Americans — Gonzalez, Martinez, a candidate for the Court of Criminal Appeals, and Republican Roy Barrera Jr. — led their races in Saturday's primary elections.

Each candidate is seeking to become the first Mexican American elected to statewide office in Texas.

Barrera, a San Antonio district judge, was first in the GOP race for attorney general with 210,099 votes, or 45.99 percent. On June 7, He will face Ed Walsh, a former Democratic district attorney in Williamson County, who got 150,625, or 34.72 percent.

Gonzalez, an appointee to the court, polled 390,544 votes, or 41.14 percent, and former state Rep. Jay Gibson of Odessa was second with 271,797 votes, or 28.63 percent.

Martinez, a Dallas lawyer, led Denton lawyer M.P. "Rusty" Duncan III 259,671 to 245,270 votes, or 29.08 to 27.46 percent, for the criminal court.

"The Republicans obviously are going to nominate Barrera," said Bonilla. "And because of Barrera's extraordinary showing, it has become incumbent for Democrats to jump on the bandwagons for Gonzalez and Martinez today with unqualified endorsements and support."

"It becomes obvious that to win in November Democrats must have a very strong following and mandate from Mexican Americans ... and the high turnout necessary for Gov. Mark White's re-election depends largely on the visibility and electability of Mexican Americans statewide," Bonilla said.

"It would be unmitigated disaster for the governor and Democrats if Gonzalez and Martinez were rejected while Roy Barrera is embraced (by Republicans)," Bonilla said in a telephone interview.

Bonilla said Gonzalez, the first Mexican American to sit on the Supreme Court — as an appointee of White's — "ran a magnificent campaign on a shoestring budget."

But now, he said, "It's time for the business community to step forward and lend support to Gonzalez, Martinez and MAD to ensure that the Democratic leadership remains in office for another four years."

Bonilla said despite a crossover vote by some Mexican American

Democrats for Barrera, "this does mean we will abandon" Attorney General Jim Mattox. "He (Mattox) will still win and will have the overwhelming support of the Mexican-American electorate," Bonilla said.

He described Saturday's primary as a "magnificent day" for Hispanics, but Gonzalez said, "I wouldn't go that far. I've been pounding the pavement seven days a week, and I'm ready to leave and get back to work and to my family."

"What would be even better would be 50.1 percent of the vote."

Gonzalez said it would be "very difficult in the future for either party" not to have an Hispanic on the statewide ballot.

"The Democrats for years have been the party of inclusion," said Gonzalez. "Well, we have an opportunity in the next 30 days to find out if that's true or not or if it has been lip service."

On March 5, 1770, several American colonists were killed in a Boston street fight with a squad of British soldiers in what became known as the Boston Massacre.

Radiation in air, ground, buildings

BOSTON (AP) — Radiation falls from the sky and rises from the ground. Granite buildings emit it, as do the elements in human bodies. Like the wind and the rain, radiation is an inescapable part of our environment.

On Monday, fallout from the Soviet nuclear power plant disaster was believed to have hit the West Coast and Midwest during rainfall, said Lester Machta, head of the division of the Air Resources Laboratory of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and a member of an interagency task force dealing with the Chernobyl reactor fire.

He said there was no detection of extra radioactivity at ground level. During a typical year, most people receive as much radiation from natural sources as from things like nuclear reactors and X-rays. Even extra radiation that fell in West Europe after the Chernobyl disaster was relatively small.

the Bronx Veterans Administration Hospital in New York City.

Yalow, who won the Nobel Prize in medicine in 1977 for development of the radioimmunoassay, which uses radioactive isotopes to measure hormone levels, said people flying at 39,000 feet get one millirem of radiation an hour — assuming there are no sunspots, which increase it.

"Airline crews who fly across the ocean on the average receive as much or more radiation exposure as do nuclear power workers," she said.

Absorbed radiation is measured in units called rem and millirem. A millirem is one-thousandth of a rem.

Generally, people receive about 100 millirem of radiation a year from natural sources. U.S. guidelines for employees at nuclear power plants limit radiation exposure to 3,000 millirem per three-month period.

The sources are divided about equally between cosmic rays, material in the soil and rocks and radioactive elements like potassium-40 in the body.

However, the exposure differs from place to place, depending on the altitude and variations in the natural sources of radiation in the Earth. For instance, people living on the Atlantic seaboard get about 65 millirem a year from natural sources, while in Denver they receive about 150.

Another source of radiation is diagnostic X-rays. The average annual dose from medical X-rays is 77 millirem, while dental X-rays add one more.

Some radiation is left over from nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere in the 1950s. This adds four or five millirem a year.

Power plants and other nuclear operations contribute less than 1 millirem a year for the average American.

If radiation exposure is high enough, it can cause cancer and genetic damage. But cancer takes time. Thirty or 40 years may elapse before a high dose of radiation causes this disease. No one knows whether ubiquitous low-level radiation does any harm.

"We can't be sure it doesn't have some effect," said Dr. Warren K. Sinclair, president of the National Council on Radiation Protection and Measurement. "But we've lived with it for a long time, and it's certain that we can't see its effects if, indeed, it has any."

New York's Governor Cuomo was called by an irate citizen who told him the mandatory safety belt law "was silly." But after surviving a crash where his car skidded 80 yards and hit 12 guardrails, the now contrite gentleman called a press conference to proclaim his change of heart, saying "There is no doubt in my mind I wouldn't have lived had I not worn my safety belt."

Art restorers cleaning Michelangelo's frescoes in the Vatican's Sistine Chapel found underneath centuries of grime, astonishingly bright colors, and have concluded that much of the smoky gloom associated with his paintings was nothing more than dirt.

The longest bridges in the world are the Lake Pontchartrain Causeways I and II from New Orleans to Lewisburg, La. Both are over 23 miles long.
