Pipeline progressing by way of slave labor?

By DAVID MASON
Chief European Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — Several West European governments are investigating charges by two human rights groups that the Soviet Union is using thousands of political prisoners as slave laborers to build the Siberian gas pipeline.

But the governments, which have a large stake in the pipeline and oppose President Reagan's sanctions against it, say they have not confirmed the charges.

The United States opposes the project for commercial and political reasons and has tried to delay or halt it by preventing European firms from using U.S. technology in fulfilling pipeline contracts. Britain, France, West Germany and Italy have condemned the U.S. embargo and their firms are proceeding with deliveries.

The London-based human rights organization Amnesty International said it had received no information to suggest any prisoners known to it are working on the pipeline.

But two other European human rights groups will hold a hearing next month to air their charges that forced labor or slave labor is used on the 3,600-mile pipeline designed to bring natural gas to Western Europe by 1984.

The International Society for Human Rights in Frankfurt first raised charges in June that as many as 100,000 political prisoners were working on the pipeline, forced to labor in sub-zero conditions without adequate clothes.

In July, the International Sakharov Committee in Copenhagen, named after Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, made similar charges. Committee chairman Feldsted Andresen estimated the pipeline workforce at 100,000, of which he said 10,000 were slave laborers.

Andresen said in letters to French President Francois Mitterrand and then-West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt: "The Western democracies that will eventually purchase the natural gas cannot with a clear conscience ignore these flagrant violations of international human rights."

On Sept. 21, U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said "in recent weeks the evidence has been mounting that the Soviet Union may be using slave labor" on the pipeline. Weinberger said "the evidence is not conclusive. I hasten to say that."

Brian Crozier, a British consultant on international affairs, wrote in The Times of London on Sept. 7:

"I have been struck by the readiness of certain commentators to accept on face value the Soviet denials of reports that forced labor is being used in the construction. Yet there is nothing inherently improbable in the reports ..."

Crozier said according to reports reaching him, the Soviets "plan to use half a million Vietnamese political prisoners on the pipeline" and "some 110,000 Soviet prisoners are now at work on the pipeline, about 10,000 of them political detainees."

The Soviets have said there are about 7,000 Vietnamese in the Soviet Union on training programs, but Moscow denies they work on the pipeline.

Crozier's account was sharply criticized by professor Alec Nove of the University of Glasgow department of international economic studies:

"How many workers does he think are engaged on this controversial pipeline-laying project? I doubt if it is more than 50,000 in all. A few of these may be prisoners. But talk of a 'half million Vietnamese' and '110,000 Soviet prisoners working on the pipeline' is just plain ridiculous."

Mitterrand said the charges "deserved to be examined."

Cuthbert confusion

Pinpointing problems and concerns of residents living on Cuthbert Avenue between Ward and Garfield streets is Rebecca Smith, 2603 W. Cuthbert Ave., during the City Council meeting Tuesday. Part of the residents' confusion came, she said, when the council had traffic going three ways at the Sept. 28 meeting. Ms. Smith and her neighbors were but one of the groups attending the session. Council takes new direction on Cuthbert

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland City Council decided there might be more than two ways to look at a situation and on Tuesday — after colliding head-on with some residents — chose to keep a four-block stretch of Cuthbert one-way westbound.

The one-way designation on the blocks between Garfield and Ward Streets will remain until 90 days after Louisiana and Michigan streets are turned into one-way thoroughfares. That switch becomes effective Nov. 1. After 90 days, the council will look at data to see if any traffic problems have arisen on Cuthbert, Storey and Kansas streets from the Louisiana-Michigan pairing and what action should be taken to correct the situation.

The collision with residents who wanted Cuthbert to retain its status and Storey Avenue citizens who wanted to see it two-way again started at the council's Sept. 28 meeting. It was then that the council decided first to change the traffic to one-way eastbound and later to two-way. Being considered at the Tuesday meeting in City Hall Council Chambers was an ordinance to make Cuthbert two-way on Nov. 1.

Before opening up the issue for discussion from residents, Mayor G. Thane Akins said the council knew before it made any changes that there was no way to please everyone.

"THERE DOESN'T appear to be any clear-cut, easy solution. I think maybe it's worthwhile to try something different. I also realize we may create a monster and have to change it back," he said of the proposal to put two-way traffic on the street.

Heading the parade of residents from Storey who wanted the street reverted to two-way was Mildred Saye, 2401 W. Storey Ave. Speaking on behalf of 13 residents, she recalled the citizens had protested three years ago when Cuthbert was turned into a one-way segment. Because of that change on Cuthbert, she said, traffic increased on Storey.

Running in behind Ms. Saye was James Chude, 2510 W. Storey, who presented a petition signed with 100 names of residents wanting Cuthbert turned two-way. "Every map I've seen has designated Cuthbert as a major thoroughfare. You would expect it to be a busy street. No one forced these people to buy homes on Cuthbert so why should we suffer?"

In addition, some residents living on Mogford complained about the circuitous route to get home since they can't take Cuthbert eastward.

When the mayor asked how many citizens in the Council Chambers wanted to see Cuthbert made two-way, about half of the people in the audience stood up.

HEADING THE arguments the other way was Donald Smith, 2312 Cuthbert, who presented petitions with signatures of 481 registered voters. Looking back at the meeting two weeks ago during which the council first changed the way of the traffic and then made it two-way, he remarked, "This, gentlemen, is no way to run a railroad and no way to run a City Council."

Following his lead was Rebecca Smith, 2603 Cuthbert. She recalled that three years ago when the council changed Cuthbert from its two-way status, members had cited reasons of safety, traffic congestion and traffic flow. "Priority was given to those issues. Why change now?"

The council's proposed change to two-way traffic, no left turns from Cuthbert onto Garfield and a four-way stop sign at Lanham would mean difficulty for emergency vehicles to get someone to Midland Memorial Hospital and a longer response time to get emergency vehicles to businesses such as Gibsons and Albertsons, she added.

Signatures on their petitions "show it's not just Cuthbert" residents wanting the one-way street, she said. "The citizens of Midland do want Cuthbert left alone. The names collected equal 10 percent of the people who voted

Asphalt plant denied a permit

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The city of Midland may find itself in the middle of a court battle with a developer on one side and county residents on another after rejecting Tuesday a request from Clyde White and Richard Moise for a temporary use permit to operate an asphalt plant.

The decision came during a regular meeting in City Hall Council Chambers in which the developers were charged by residents with flagrantly violating a city resolution. At the core of the fight is an asphalt plant that has been constructed midway between County Roads 1160 and 1150. Directly west of that is Skyview Addition, whose residents joined to fight the plant.

At the conclusion of the public hearing, Moise said Petroplex Land and Development Co., which owns the land and is putting up the asphalt plant, probably will continue with construction and fight the permit rejection in court. And he warned the city about getting involved.

Related story, Page 7A

But residents Jim Logan and Neil Hall said they were ready for a court battle to stop the plant from polluting their neighborhood.

DURING THE HEARING, Moise said the application for the plant was filed July 13, and the city didn't approve annexation of that land on a first reading until Aug. 24. A permit for the plant was granted by the Texas Air Control Board on Aug. 11, he said.

Moise contended that construction on the plant had started by the Aug. 24 meeting, and therefore falls under a grandfather clause in which existing uses will continue after annexation.

Asked about time of operation by Mayor G. Thane Akins, the spokesman said it would be running six days a week and for at least three years.

Looking back to a resolution passed by the City Council on Sept. 21 which called for a halt on all construction in the proposed area for annexation — with the exception of single family residences — Councilman Tom Sloan asked if construction on the plant had continued past that date.

"Yes, construction continued because there's a question of any jurisdiction the city may have over the plant," Moise answered.

"So the notice from the city didn't mean a damn thing to you," added

MISD trustees act to reduce crowding

By HALLYE JORDANS

In an effort to alleviate overcrowding in two elementary schools and to serve the growing number of new students, Midland Independent School District trustees authorized the addition of six permanent classrooms, a portable building and the purchase of 11 diesel school buses during their regular meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Following lunch at Travis Elementary School, where evidence of overcrowded conditions was apparent, trustees voted to purchase an additional portable building for the school.

According to Assistant Superintendent of Administration Garland Chapman, adding the portable building for locating a third or fourth grade class which now meets in the librarywill open up the library and, "in essence, we'll have two additional classrooms."

Cost for the building was added to bids received April 8 for 10 other portable buildings. Low bidder, Industrial Laminates Corp. of Austin, was awarded the contract at $18,479, which reflects an increase of $1,754 from their 10-building bid. Construction of the building is scheduled for completion Nov. 5.

Trustees also approved an addition of six classrooms for Rusk Elementary. According to Dr. James. H. Mailey, consultant for school planning and construction, the permanent additions will include four rooms for primary grades and two for intermediate grades.

Board president Parker Humes pointed out the additions to Rusk would take care of the excess numberof students in that area. Original plans for building one of two elementary schools passed in the April bond election near Rusk will be changed and another location will be chosen, Humes said.

Cost for the classrooms, which will be the standard size of about 760 square feet, was not yet available, Mailey said.

Purchase of 11 school buses, at a price below the budgeted figure, also was approved by board members. Two of the five 71-passenger buses approved will be used for the new school cluster and three are replacements for units that are over 10-years-old with between 120,000 and 124,000 miles. Four of the six 35-passenger buses approved will

Polish shipyard militarized

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Martial-law enforcers militarized the Gdansk shipyard to prevent more strikes after two days of protests and bloody riots by thousands of Poles demanding restoration of the outlawed Solidarity union.

Under the militarization decree enacted Tuesday after more walkouts, two riots and scores of arrests, shipyard laborers at Solidarity's birthplace who strike again face stiff penalties by a military court with no appeal.

The Communist government's edict threatened to provoke a major showdown because many members of the V.I. Lenin Shipyards crew told reporters they would violate plant rules today by showing up but refusing to work.

Martial-law spokesman Jerzy Urban told reporters in Warsaw the uprising will not affect plans to release 308 more interned unionists, but he declared that Solidarity chief Lech Walesa and about 780 others will not be freed.

Militants who organized strikes Monday and Tuesday demanded Walesa's release and the reinstatement of Solidarity, banned Friday by Parliament under a tough new labor law that erases reforms won by the independent union before martial law was decreed 10 months ago.

The militarization of the shipyards where Solidarity was born in August 1980 came after riot squads battled with an estimated 10,000 shipyard workers and supporters in two cities.

Police fired tear gas, sprayed water cannon and lobbed smoke bombs at an angry mob of about 1,000 protesters who surged toward Communist Party headquarters after authorities dispersed their mass rally Tuesday outside the Gdansk plant, witnesses said.

An "underground committee" called for a general strike throughout the Baltic coast region, said some workers leaving Lenin Shipyards. The report could not be independently confirmed.

Eight-thousand Lenin workers struck for the second day Tuesday, joined by 2,000 in the nearby port of Gdynia.

Salvadoran troops battle rebels

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Troops backed by U.S.-made warplanes and artillery battled leftist rebels holding a northern town today in fighting that has killed at least 40 people nationwide, cut telephone service in the east and snarled highway traffic.

Military spokesmen said 1,300 soldiers were pushing to retake Las Vueltas, a town of 5,000 people 50 miles north of here, which 700 guerrillas seized Sunday night after overrunning a 100-man army post.

Maj. Armando Aviles, the commander, said some units Tuesday were led by officers recently trained at Ft. Bragg, N.C. under a U.S. program to help the Salvador government smash the 3-year-old leftist rebellion.

Military officials called the latest fighting the fiercest in months and predicted more violence elsewhere in Central American country.

Aviles also said U.S.-made A-37 attack planes dropped 500-pound bombs throughout Tuesday and field artillery pounded guerrilla positions in preparation for a counterattack.

At least 40 people were killed and dozens wounded in fighting Tuesday after guerrillas staged stinging attacks in different parts of this war-torn country.

Witness can place Harrelson at scene

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two women testified they saw a man lurking nearby shortly before U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. was assassinated, but only one said she could positively identify the "suspicious man" as convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson.

Both witnesses were residents of the Chateaux DiJon Townhomes, where the 63-year-old Wood was shot in the back in what prosecutors charge was a $250,000 contract killing. Harrelson is accused of firing the shot from the high-powered rifle that killed Wood.

Attorney Chrys Lambros earlier picked Harrelson, 44, out of a lineup as the man she literally bumped into about 40 minutes before Wood was slain on May 29, 1979.

Chrys Lambdos

"I will never forget Mr. Harrelson's eyes," she said shortly before leaving the witness stand Tuesday. "The face of the man I saw the morning of the shooting made such an impact on me, I will never forget it."

But the other witness, Mary Wilkinson, chose a Houston policeman from the same lineup as the man most closely resembling the man she spotted skulking in the parking lot the day of the murder.

She picked Harrelson's picture from a five-photograph display shown her by FBI agents in November 1980 as "the one that most nearly looked like the person I saw."

The government today was to call its eighth witness as it continued to build a case against Harrelson, his wife — 41-year-old Jo Ann Starr Harrelson — and Elizabeth Chagra, 28.

Mrs. Chagra is the wife of 39-year-old Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, an El Paso drug trafficker charged with paying Harrelson to shoot Wood. Chagra will be tried for murder separately later. Prosecutors say he hired Harrelson to kill Wood to prevent the tough judge from presiding at Chagra's 1979 narcotics trial.

Miss Lambros, 28, and Miss Wilkinson, the middle-aged manager of the townhome complex, both used a pointer and a scale model of the parking area Tuesday to show jurors where they saw a suspicious man skulking.

Miss Lambros underwent hypnosis at the FBI office here two weeks after the murder and gave a detailed description of the dress and face of the man.

She identified Harrelson from an FBI picture display on Nov. 6, 1980 and then from a Nov. 20, 1980, police lineup in Houston. In a dramatic courtroom scene Monday, she confronted Harrelson and told jurors he was the man she saw the morning of the murder.

Miss Wilkinson demurred Tuesday when Harrelson's attorney — Tom Sharpe Jr. — asked whether she could say the man she saw was in the courtroom. She also answered "no" when prosecutor Ray Jahn asked whether she could definitely say definitely the man was not in the courtroom.

But despite nearly a day of interrogation by Sharpe and attorney Charles Campion, representing Mrs. Harrelson, Miss Lambros adamantly stuck with her identification of Harrelson.

Sharpe told jurors in his opening statement he would show the Harrelsons were 300 miles away in Dallas when a news bulletin about Wood's assassination interrrupted the television program they were viewing.

The defense attorney told the jury he would name the "real killer" during the trial, expected to last up to eight weeks. He began laying the groundwork for his defense Tuesday by posing questions about suspicious automobiles and two men in white overalls allegedly seen near the murder scene.

Texas Democrat says he'll consider Republican affiliation if he's ousted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, President Reagan's most vocal supporter among congressional Democrats, says he will consider becoming a Republican next year if his own party ousts him from his seat on the House Budget Committee.

"If I were deprived of my committee assignments it would be a very serious provocation," Gramm, a two-term House veteran, said Tuesday. "If and when that ever happens...I would have to look at all my options," including "serving out the two years and going back to Texas A&M or switching parties."

Several Democrats have called for party discipline against Gramm and other so-called "Boll Weevils," the conservative House Democrats who generally are faithful supporters of Reagan's economic program.

One House Democratic aide, who asked not to be identified by name, said there probably will be a move in the party's caucus to deny Gramm his seat on the House Budget Committee next year. Gramm's re-election is a certainty, since he is without a Republican opponent in the Nov. 2 election.

"I can't imagine that he will go unchallenged. There's likely to be a separate vote on him," this aide said.

In addition, Rep. William Brodhead, D-Mich., told a meeting of businessmen Tuesday that Gramm "certainly will not be elected" to the Budget Committee when the Democratic Party caucus meets later this year.

Brodhead, who is retiring at the end of his current term, said Gramm has "gone about as far as you can go" and still claim affiliation with the Democratic Party. "I would expect that within a year or two you would see him become a Republican," he concluded.

Gramm, interviewed by telephone from Wichita Falls, Texas, retorted: "I haven't turned over my political planning to Mr. Brodhead."

But he said conservative Democrats in the House met recently and agreed to fight within the caucus to protect their committee assignments.

"There has been some talk that I might be thrown off the Budget Committee," said the Texas Democrat, who has been on the panel for both of the terms he has served in Congress.

Gramm, 40, and a former economics professor at Texas A&M , conceded that House Democratic leaders probably have the votes to deny him the committee assignment if they choose.

But he said that would be a decision the leadership would make because he "has not done what they want him to do."

Police keep hoping for leads on arsonist

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Police say an arsonist who is terrorizing a northside neighborhood here with a string of fires dating to March 1981 has bullied residents into keeping quiet about his identity.

Fire Capt. W.E. Dunkin said authorities have canvassed the Diamond Hill area asking witnesses who have seen the man for help.

"We just keep working and hoping that somebody will either get mad enough or brave enough to come forward and give us some information," he said.

Residents have told investigators a man who lives in the area has bragged of setting the fires, but Dunkin said no one will identify him out of fear he will see them talking with officers and torch their houses.

"Once you determine a fire's cause, you work it just like any other police matter," Dunkin said. "But if people in the neighborhood don't help, it's very difficult."

One neighbor who asked not to be identified said her neighbors are beginning to get "desperate."

"We have watched house after house burn," she said.

Five of the fires, which date back to March 5, 1981, were "definitely arson," Dunkin said. Several other house fires in a 10- to 15-block area also may have been set, though investigators have not determined the exact causes of the blazes, he said.

All the fires but one were in inhabited houses, but so far, no one has been hurt in any of the blazes.

The latest fire caused about $20,000 in damage to a house Sunday night.

"We've got a suspect ... but at this point that's all he is — a suspect," Dunkin said. "All we've got is some hearsay."

The fire investigator said burglary apparently was the motive for at least one of the fires, but investigators so far have been unable to establish a definite pattern or discover solid links.

The word around the neighborhood, residents say, is that the man, whom they describe as "strange" although they have never spoken to him, has threatened to "wipe out" the block of 3100 Hutchison.

Several of the fires, including the latest one, were set on that block.

Dunkin said no one who actually has heard the threats has come forward, and a police canvass of the area unearthed no solid information.

If neighbors are afraid to have investigators come to their homes, "we'll be glad to meet with them anywhere, anytime," he said.

Austin woman escapes her abductor after deliberate head-on collision

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A woman forced at knifepoint to drive a man around the city escaped from him after deliberately crashing her car into a truck, authorities said.

The woman managed to get out of the car after the crash and explain her predicament to the truck driver, who pulled out a garden hoe and ordered the abductor to drop his knife, Travis County sheriff's Deputy Curtis Weeks said.

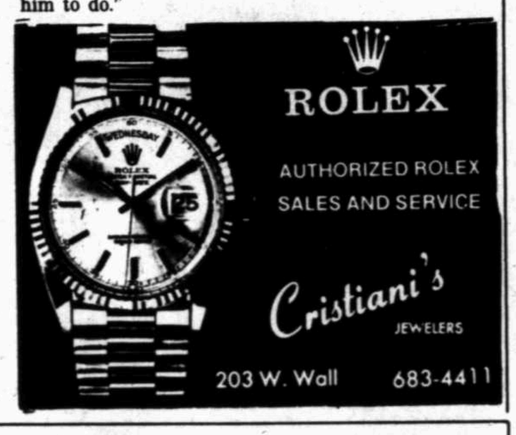

The man disappeared into a wood, and may have been injured in the collision, officials said.

The University of Texas employee was abducted from a parking lot as she left work Monday and forced to drive the man around East Austin for about 30 minutes.

Authorities said she told them she thought he intended to rape her.

The driver of the pickup truck was not injured in the head-on crash, but the woman was treated for cuts and bruises. Investigators said the abductor may have facial cuts and internal injuries suffered when he slammed into the windshield.

"As far as the end result is concerned, yes, she did the right thing," Sgt. Hal Caldwell of the sheriff's office said.

Galveston to honor boy who saved girls from dog

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The sheriff's department is preparing laurels for a quick-thinking 7-year-old boy who needed 1,000 stitches after he saved two girls from a marauding half-wolf.

Galveston County sheriff's deputies have arranged for Scott McKenzie and his family to be flown to Houston on Oct. 20 for four days of festivities to honor the youngster.

And Sheriff Joe Max Taylor has already made Scott an honorary deputy.

When the fierce half-wolf, half-malamute named "Hombre" broke its chain and leaped a 4-foot-high fence March 21 near Scott's home in Ferguson, Mo., the resourceful youngster scooted the two girls out of danger onto the upper part of some monkey bars.

His action saved his sister, Carrie, 3, and her friend, Kyle Naes, 4, but he did not have time to save himself. The dog turned on him, "eating him alive," according to his father, policeman Charles McKenzie.

The 100-pound animal knocked Scott down and began slashing his face, chest, back and arms. While Scott was being attacked, Carrie scrambled down and got her father. McKenzie came to his son's rescue and shot at the dog six times with his service revolver.

Scott underwent 4½ hours of emergency surgery. His ear had to be taken from the dog's stomach to be reattached. Since then, Scott has had seven operations to repair damage to his face and body.

"I can't imagine why he chose Scott," his father said. "He's nothing to eat. He's the scrawniest kid, all muscle and bone, and he doesn't weigh more than 50 pounds.

"If it hadn't been for Scott, the two smaller kids would have been killed. And if Carrie hadn't been brave enough to crawl down the pole, Scott would have been dead," McKenzie said.

Galveston Sheriff's Lt. John Leonard and other deputies read about the incident more than 700 miles away in the newspaper and were impressed by accounts of the boy's action. They sent Scott a letter of commendation and a commission from Taylor making Scott an honorary deputy.

In later correspondence, the McKenzies expressed interest in visiting Galveston, Leonard said. The sheriff's department arranged to have the family flown to Texas for four days, officials said Monday.

Upon arrival at Houston Intercontinental Airport, Scott, his parents, brother and two sisters will be flown to Galveston, 60 miles away. Detailed plans for the four days were still being finalized.

Man released after running down officer

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — A motorist was released on $20,000 bond after being charged with injuring a police officer who was directing traffic at the scene of a fatal nursing home fire, authorities say.

Jack T. Curtis, 52, of Pampa was arrested Sunday night after his car ran over officer Rod Bishop on a street crowded with people trying to see the blaze at the Pampa Nursing home, police said.

Pasadena schools renew hemline war

HOUSTON (AP) — The opening skirmish in what may be Miniskirt War II has been fought quietly this fall at a school district here. The battleline has been drawn at the top of the kneecap and, so far, the score is School Administrators 13, Miniskirts 0.

Administrators at the Pasadena Independent School District first fought the miniskirt war in the 1960s when styles sent the hemline over the knee and up the thigh.

"This business of measuring skirts is something we don't want to get into," said assistant superintendant Elmer Bondy. "But we did it once and we can do it again."

School leaders won the first war, with the treaty line drawn at five inches above the knee. They remained vigilant until, eventually, styles changed, hemlines dropped to a less startling level, and the war was forgotten.

But this fall, Paris designers — or whoever decides such things — sent the hemlines creeping upward again. And when school started, the Pasadena school leaders found themselves once more in the battle of the hemline.

Two or three female students at each of the district's 13 secondary schools have shown up in miniskirts this year, Bondy said.

School administrators once more manned the barricades and cracked down on the district's dress code. Some of the offenders were sent home and others had different skirts brought to them. It was a decisive loss for high fashion.

Bondy admitted the hemline issue is not as extreme as it was in the 1960s. Hemlines then had only a distant acquaintance with the wearers' knees. School leaders battled back with rulers used to measure hemlines, and with letters and public comment.

In neighboring school districts, female students in questionable skirts were required to kneel and hemlines could be no more than five inches from the floor.

At Pasadena, Bondy said, women administrators would talk with girls whose fashion was too high. Sometimes, he said, the girls were instructed to reach over their head or to bend over and pick up something from the floor. If the exercise showed too much student, she was sent home to change.

"It was a question of modesty," recalled Bondy.

Now, he said, it's a question of interpretation.

The school district's dress code does not spell out the precise proper height of the hemline, but states only that dresses cannot be "revealing or excessively tight."

This year, he said, anything generally an inch above the knee fails the dress code test.

More warrants due in alien smuggling

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Federal authorities plan to issue additional arrest warrants naming "co-conspirators" in an alien smuggling operation that caused the deaths of five Salvadorans, a U.S. Border Patrol official says.

"We'll issue warrants and get them (the suspects) when we can," Border Patrol assistant chief E.J. Vickery said Tuesday, after a third man named in warrants issued earlier surrendered.

Larry D. McCoy, 39, surrendered about 2 p.m. Tuesday at the McAllen Border Patrol office and appeared before U.S. Magistrate Susan Williams on a charge of conspiring to transport illegal aliens. Bond was set at $500,000, court clerk Olga Sauceda said.

Vickery said his office will "take a closer look" at the case and then issue more arrest warrants in the failed smuggling scheme. He said he could not estimate how many additional warrants will be issued.

Four Salvadorans were found dead about late Oct. 4 in a tractor-trailer rig abandoned near Edinburg, 15 miles north of the Mexico border. Autopsies showed the three men and one woman died of suffocation compounded by heat stroke.

The body of another Salvadoran man was discovered Saturday partially submerged in a drainage ditch near an orange grove where 10 Salvadorans had been left by smugglers.

Teen says stepmother should get life sentence

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The teen-age son of Fort Worth gynecologist Darwin Fielder says his stepmother, sentenced to two years in prison, should have been incarcerated for life for the slaying of his father.

Pamela Fielder was given the minimum prison sentence Tuesday for her voluntary manslaughter conviction after a jury deliberated the punishment for almost eight hours over two days.

The 37-year-old woman had contended Fielder's strange, sometimes violent, sexual behavior led her in 1981 to shoot him to death in self-defense.

Drew Fielder, the doctor's 17-year-old son by a previous marriage, called the sentence "unfair."

"She not only killed my dad, she told a bunch of lies about him," he said. "She killed him. She should have gotten life."

MISD acts to alleviate crowding replace four vans which do not meet Texas Education Agency bus safety standards because they are 5-years-old and have mileage between 70,000 and 94,000 miles. Two other 35-passenger buses will be used to replace 5-year-old special education vans with mileage ranging from 90,000 to 116,000 miles.

Administrators have been phasing out van purchases since 1978 because the expected life of a van is five years, while that of a bus is 10. Small groups, such as cheerleaders, can travel in school station wagons, Chapman said.

Trustees approved the recommended option of buying the 11 diesel-powered buses at $299,000 instead of the same number of gasoline-powered buses, priced at $244,000. According to Chapman, the diesel-powered buses will get about twice as many miles to the gallon as the gasoline-powered buses.

He also requested trustee approval to purchase storage units for diesel fuel, adding that the diesel buses currently in use by MISD are being filled at pump prices, which are about 70 cents per gallon higher. Cost for the storage units would cost approximately $16,000.

In other action, trustees approved a MISD philosophy statement needed for Southern Association of Colleges and Schools accreditation and a request from choir director Marilyn Jones to allow the Lee High School choir to miss three days of school in order to attend the American International Music Festival in Washington, D.C. in April.

Trustees also accepted gifts of a $2,655 Xerox machine and a $1,185.75 25-inch laminator for Crockett Elementary School from the Crockett PTA. A request for continuation of a contract allowing Northwestern Baptist Church to use Goddard Junior High School facilities was approved.

A $5,044.80 bid submitted by Carrousel Floors of Midland for mini-blinds at San Jacinto Junior High School was accepted as was a $5,088 bid from Snyder Janitorial Service in Snyder for a 19-inch floor machine.

Trustees heard several appeals for transfer denials and met in executive session to discuss matters pertaining to real estate and personnel. No action was taken.

Rita Clements pushes female appointments

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Gov. Bill Clements' establishment of "a number of firsts" with his appointment of women to state boards and agencies and the sound Texas economy spawned by his reign were stressed by his wife Rita at the Ada Carter Johnson Award Banquet Tuesday night at Odessa Country Club.

Sponsored by the Odessa Business and Professional Women's Club, the affair also saw Narita Holmes, wife of District Attorney Mike Holmes, receive the Ada Carter Johnson Award for outstanding endeavors in the community and in the professional world.

Stressing Clements' positive attitude toward women, Mrs. Clements said he has appointed "the first women to 15 state agencies and boards" and that a 33 percent increase in the employment of such women on those boards has occurred during his term in office.

"More and more we are giving women the opportunity and they're taking the opportunity," she said. She added that Clements' creation of the Governor's Task Force for Equal Opportunity for Women and Minorities reflects his concern, as it examines current state laws and practices concerning females.

On the subject of the Texas economy, the Texas first lady noted that if Texas were an independent nation it would rank 13th in the world economically.

"Texas still has the lowest unemployment rate of the 10 largest industrial states," she said. "Since 1978 30 percent of the new jobs in America were created right here in Texas."

The economic outlook in Texas, she said, "is strong because we have managed our economy well." She added that she believes the time has come to amend the Constitution of the United States to prohibit deficit spending — a law already on the books in Texas.

"We are weathering the national recession better than any other state," she said. "There is no better place than Texas for a woman to work and fulfill her potential. Let's recommit ourselves to working harder to open the doors of opportunity for all women."

Garry Mauro

Government efficiency is Mauro's point

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

During a friend-making appearance before about 50 Midlanders at the Petroleum Club Tuesday night, Democratic candidate for state land commissioner Garry Mauro shook hands, slapped backs and stressed what he called the key campaign issue — efficiency in government.

"Probably the basic tenet of my entire campaign is state government has to run efficiently," said Mauro. "I'm a nuts and bolts man; I like to dot Is and cross Ts."

Mauro, 34, a former campaign manager and deputy state comptroller, said his management and government background will enable him to run the General Land Office "aggressively."

"I'm one of those that believes you can run government efficiently and you conduct it like a business," said Mauro, adding that maximizing revenues generated from about 22.5 million acres of state-owned land will continue to be essential in order to avoid further state taxes.

An Austin lawyer and former state Democratic party executive director, Mauro explained that in 1983 state lands managed by the General Land Office will produce more than $1 billion in 1983 revenue from oil and gas leases, mineral development and surface grazing rights. He said much of the money funnels into the state's Permanent School and University funds, which help support primary and secondary public schools.

Mauro said he would also pursue a long range development plan for natural gas reserves and mineral development on state lands. He also favors expansion of the Veterans Land Program so that veterans borrowing up to $20,000 may have the option of spending the money toward purchasing a home or land instead of the money being automatically earmarked for buying land.

Mauro, who received his law degree from The University of Texas after graduating from Texas A&M, said a recent poll conducted by his campaign staff shows him leading his Republican opponent, former Hondo mayor Woody Glasscock, by 42 to 17 percent. He said a previous poll showed a 37 to 17 percent lead, and the Austin lawyer expressed confidence that a Nov. 2 victory is assured.

When asked if his campaign was in trouble anywhere within the state, Mauro chuckled and quickly replied: "Hondo."

Mauro said that although his candidacy is moving smoothly and recently received endorsement from several newspapers, including the Dallas Times-Herald, he will continue to campaign aggressively until election day.

He said Glasscock's campaign "basically hasn't got off the ground," and estimated that while his campaign has spent about $1 million, Glasscock has perhaps spent only about $200,000.

Mauro said that although the land commissioner is basically an administrative position, he is not opposed to the political spending and speech-making necessary to land the job.

"It's a political office in the sense that you report to the people," said Mauro. "I'm a Jeffersonian. I think it's just fine that people have to go out and work hard to become a public servant."

Mauro said the candidate who demonstrates an aptitude for running a strong campaign, generating both support and money, may be at the same time demonstrating his ability to manage a government post.

He declined comment on other statewide races, except to say that he expects to work well with other elected officials, Democrat or Republican. "Once I get in office, what we're talking about is efficiency in government," he said.

Midlander reports theft of watch

In a theft complaint to city police, Bryan Watson of 4201 N. Garfield said a Rolex watch worth $3,500 was taken from his locker at a downtown health club late Tuesday afternoon.

Police Roundup

A rash of recent motorcycle thefts has prompted police to advise residents to take extra precaution in securing their bikes. "We've probably had more motorcycle thefts in the past three weeks than in the previous six months," a detective said this morning.

Asphalt plant denied temporary permit

Sloan.

"We're here to avoid a court battle. I'm going on the advice of my counsel," Moise said.

Councilman Steve Davidson told the developer's spokesman "it might have been wiser to call a halt until the air was cleaned up."

"What assurance do we have that you'd operate under requirements or under an ordinance?" continued Sloan. "Or is it just a track record that you don't cooperate."

"I DON'T FEEL we've done anything that's not within our right to do. Additionally, we've asked that land to be taken out of annexation," said Moise.

The land now owned by Petroplex Land and Development Co. had been owned by Goodrich Hejl, who asked last December that the city annex it. But at the Sept. 21 meeting, the current developer had filed a request that the tract be exempted.

Representing some of the opponents to the plant was Jerry Prothro, who contended that the plant isn't appropriate for this area, which is residential and agricultural.

"People are concerned about their health and safety," he said, citing sulfur emissions as a major problem.

He also pointed out mistakes in the company's application to the state Air Control Board, including one which listed the plant as being 10 miles from Midland. The TACB is considering a public hearing on the issue, but no date has been set, added Prothro.

In concluding his statements, the attorney said he couldn't see a need for an asphalt plant in that area, claiming that the Loop Road and other streets were to be delayed.

And the plant's construction already has caused housing prices to drop in Skyview Addition. People haven't been able to sell houses, he said, with potential buyers citing the asphalt plant as a reason not to locate in that area.

Jim Logan, 309 Irvin Drive, pointed out inconsistencies in the application for the plant and what Moise had said. The application listed a two-year time of operation while Moise said three; the application said it would operate five days a week, Moise said six.

"THEY'VE ALREADY proven they aren't going to listen to you," said Logan. When the council passed the resolution on a Tuesday to halt construction, "they built that entire weekend. It took six days for them to stop."

Continuing that thought was Neil Hail, 205 Irvin Drive. "I am flabbergasted that these men so flagrantly flaunted themselves against the wishes of the council. I heard they were sorry the hearing wasn't earlier in the day so they could throw the switches."

Referring to the environmental book by Rachel Carson, "The Silent Spring," Hail said, "I don't want my land covered with sulfur dust. I want my flowers to bloom. I want my garden to grow. I don't want the smell and stench of oil sprayed on the roads and sulfur dust."

Another area landowner who opposed the plant was Jim Mauldin who lives on County Road 1150. "These people putting in the plant have no regard for anyone in the area," he said, noting that his house lies in direct line for emissions during the winter.

And Don Hail, 307 Irvin, said he is highly allergic to sulfur and might have to move if the plant goes into operation.

Moise argued the plant is more than half a mile from the nearest residences. Nor would the emissions kill plants since the plant is regulated by the state board and Air Quality Act.

"IT SHOULD BE allowed to operate. We haven't tried to flaunt anything in the face of the council. There's still a question of y'all having any jurisdiction," he contended. And the orders for asphalt have demonstrated a need for the material.

"Did I hear you say you're trying to cooperate with the city?" Sloan asked.

"Yes," said Moise.

"That's hard for me to believe," the councilman stated.

Councilman Gordon Marcum II advised the opponents that if the city rejected the permit and the case goes to court and wins, then the city has no control over the plant. By issuing a permit, the council could retain some controls over the plant.

"That would be the only reason the council would consider issuing a permit...to get more control of the plant. You should be aware of these risks. We wouldn't want it in our neighborhood," Marcum said.

"The way I see it, we're not going to have much say because they're going to do what they want. They've done everything they could to defy us. If they hadn't been this way, I'd be willing to work with them," said Sloan, adding that he didn't think the city would lose the court battle.

"We're going to have a fight anyway; we might as well take them on from the beginning," he said.

After the council voted to deny the permit, Prothro remarked, "They've laid the groundwork; the fight is on."

BUT EVEN WITH the council's rejection, the developer's spokesman was talking of finishing the plant and starting production of asphalt.

Moise said the permit granted by the TACB was not temporary and the developers could operate the plant "as long as it meets the standards."

"Our attitude will be to go ahead and prepare ourselves for a court suit. We were maligned on not cooperating with the city. We will do everything in our power to have the courts agree with us. Absolutely, we will take it to a higher authority," he said after the hearing.

Although the plant could have been in operation two weeks ago, Moise said the plant could be finished in three days. "We'll go full speed ahead."

Logan said if the plant does begin operations, "we'll tell the city and it can get an injunction."

But Moise warned if there is an injunction it could be costly for the city. If the developer wins in court, the city would have to pay damages, he said, "and we can estimate damages by the day down to the penny."

Council delays decision on Cuthbert's one-way status

in the last election."

Councilman Jesse Hatfield answered her charges of special interest by saying he had voted to change Cuthbert only in accordance with what Traffic Engineer Van Cook had recommended.

CONCERNING THE council's change-of-heart at the Sept. 28 meeting in which it reconsidered the matter and suggested two-way traffic about 8 p.m. after the public hearing closed at 5 p.m., the mayor said what had been done was "legal and proper. We expected people to be here this time on the two-way ordinance. Don't anyone leave here thinking we did anything illegal and improper. I don't think anyone has a personal bias on this," he said, denying an allegation from Ms. Smith that Hatfield may have had a conflict of interest because his store — Stadium Sports Center — is located on Cuthbert east of Garfield.

"It's very confusing for anyone living on Cuthbert when in a four hour period it changes position three times," replied Ms. Smith.

Nancy Betts, 1002 Lanham, pointed out that "traffic all over the city has reached peak capacities. All the streets in Midland carry more traffic now. I live north of Cuthbert and I don't have any problems making a few extra turns to get home. If something works, it doesn't make sense to chuck it."

Mrs. Jim Schroeder, 2609 Cuthbert, reminded the council it was her house which a car rammed at 12:30 one morning before the switch to one-way traffic.

"It knocked me out of bed. Bricks were falling on both sides of my bed," she said. And she voiced her concern about the house at the intersection of Ward and Cuthbert. When Cuthbert was two-way, the yard had been run into by cars at least six times. When it was changed to one-way, the mishap has occurred once.

QUESTIONED BY Councilman Gordon Marcum II about the cause of the accident at her house, Mrs. Schroeder said it was due to two-way traffic. One driver was weaving on the road and the other driver hit the house to avoid hitting the car, she said.

Another off-Cuthbert resident, Andy Houghton of 1003 Mogford, said he didn't mind the inconvenience of circling to get home. "I don't think making it two-way will be progress. I don't suggest the way it is now is the best solution, but it is an improvement over what it was previously.

"Why not wait and evaluate the situation after Louisiana and Michigan become one-way, rather than go trial and error at the risk of loss of property and maybe loss of life?" he said, the first one to toss out this idea.

And when the citizens were asked to stand if they supported the present system, about half the audience stood up.

Cook, called upon by Sloan to answer traffic engineering questions, said one-way streets usually are implemented in pairs and there is an increase in traffic on those streets.

He agreed with Sloan's recommendation to make Cuthbert two-way and eliminate left-turns onto Garfield. However, he opposed the idea of a four-way stop. "I'm not a believer we can make cars stop at stop signs or obey 20 mph speed limits."

Asked about the effects of Louisiana and Michigan going one-way to Andrews Highway, Cook said he couldn't predict the effects.

"IF THAT'S TRUE," interjected Akins, "wouldn't it be better to wait and see what happens after Louisiana goes one-way?"

"I think we could analyze the impact of Louisiana and Michigan on the street system after the one-way is implemented," agreed Cook.

"One of the problems is if it doesn't work, we've got them trained to go two-way. If we can make a better decision after we gather data, would not it be better?" Akins continued.

"Yes," answered Cook.

A Cuthbert resident, Martha Gould, asked about a traffic counter she had seen on her street recently and requested the figures. Cook said it showed about 4,000 vehicles a day used Cuthbert.

Fred Baker, public works director, added that by turning Cuthbert two-way, not only would the 4,000 vehicles still go down that street, but the thoroughfare would pick up traffic going east. The count could go up to 6,000 to 7,000 cars a day. Storey Avenue, he added, has about 1,700 vehicles a day.

But the council still disagreed on the course of action to take and this was reflected in the split vote on two motions. The first motion, made by Sloan and seconded by Hatfield, was to initiate the two-way system on Cuthbert. The other three councilmen voted it down.

"IT COMES DOWN to if we're going to do something, let's do it one time and do it the right way," remarked Davidson.

"You're suggesting creating a bottleneck," said Sloan.

"You might be creating a problem doing this," replied Davidson. "I could tell you the same things you're telling me."

Baker said he couldn't advise the council to "jump in right now" and switch Cuthbert to two-way traffic. "The unknowns are too high as to what will happen to Cuthbert" with the pair of one-way streets south of it.

In deciding 3-to-2 to leave Cuthbert alone for the time being, the council instructed the staff to take traffic counts on Cuthbert, Kansas and Storey streets before and after Louisiana and Michigan are made one-way.

"If the numbers show it's not working, it'll be back on the agenda," Davidson told the audience. "We should have the numbers to make a more intelligent decision."

Federal budget cuts hurt emergency services, study indicates

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of 55 cities showed that more than half of the people who needed emergency services in the past fiscal year did not get them because of federal budget cuts, according to a report released today.

The report by the U.S. Conference of Mayors — on programs relating to health, unemployment and other human services — said things are likely to get worse this year.

"Across all cities submitting information, officials reported that an average of 43 percent of the overall demand for emergency services was met in fiscal 1982," the report said. "In not one of the human service areas examined was even 50 percent of the eligible population served in fiscal 1981 or 1982."

The report said that health, employment and training and senior service programs were hardest hit by the federal cuts.

"Employment and training and social service programs reached the smallest portion of the eligible population — 6 percent and 7.4 percent respectively in fiscal 1982," the report said.

The city officials reported that reductions in money available for programs ranged from a 56 percent cut in employment and training programs and a 42 percent slash in health programs to a 5 percent loss in senior services.

The survey was conducted since the 1982 fiscal year ended Sept. 30.

"In cities across the country, human service officials operated during fiscal 1982 within the constraints of drastically reduced federal budgets, limited state and local revenues, and worsening economic conditions which contributed to client loads," the study said.

"The same operating conditions are expected in fiscal 1983," the report continued. "In addition, further cuts totaling $16.9 billion for fiscal 1983-85 have been enacted in major entitlement programs including food stamps, medicare, medicaid, and welfare."

Two injured in unrelated accidents

ODESSA — Two people were injured, one critically, in unrelated traffic accidents here Tuesday.

Susan Cook, 27, of Odessa, was in critical condition at Medical Center Hospital this morning, according to police, after her 1981 Volkswagen left the road and struck a telephone pole in the 3000 block of East University Avenue about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

She suffered head and internal injuries and a broken arm and leg in the crash. She was alone in the car and was westbound on University at the time.

Listed in stable condition at MCH with multiple cuts, internal injuries and a possible broken right leg, said police, was Richard Boling, 25, of Green Rock, Ill. He was walking in the 900 block of West 42nd Street about 8:15 p.m. Tuesday when he stepped in front of a 1980 AMC Sprint driven by 30-year-old Nancy Marus of Odessa. No charges were filed.

70-degree temperatures should end coolness

There has been an air of glee about our gloomy, gray weather. But the unseasonable 50- to 60-degree temperatures should slowly get back to normal with the high Thursday reaching near 70.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the average temperature this time of year should be about 81 degrees with the low about 54.

"We really shouldn't be experiencing these temperatures until the latter part of the month," a NWS spokesperson said. "Temperatures should climb back up in the 70s, but in a couple of weeks they will rapidly decrease for an early frost."

It is expected to be fair and cool tonight with the low dropping into the low 40s and the mercury Thursday should climb to near 70 with light and variable winds. Clear skies should continue through Friday.

"But, there's some stuff out on the West coast...that's where this other system came from, so we're expecting more this weekend," the NWS said.

Tuesday's drizzle topped .05 of an inch, totaling 1.01 inches of precipitation for the month. And Tuesday's high of 54 was a far cry from the record of 98 set in 1979 while the overnight low of 41 wasn't too far off the mark of the 34-degree record low set in 1969.

Lobsters rustled from sea

SAN DIEGO (AP) — They strike by moonlight or mid-day sun, then slip away underwater in scuba gear, on pleasure boats or even surfboards.

Lobster rustlers are plundering the state's treasured shellfish — often robbing the royal delicacy from fishermen's traps within sight of California's crowded beaches.

"They're plain out-and-out thieves," said Bob Culbertson, a commercial lobsterman who operates an 18-foot skiff out of San Diego's Mission Bay.

Each year, thousands of spiny lobsters are taken illegally and resold for lucrative black market profits, according to the State Fish and Game Department. Officials say it's impossible to know exactly how many of the coveted crustaceans are hijacked annually.

With only 335 game wardens to patrol the entire state, including the 1,100-mile coastline, Fish and Game officials admit they're fighting a losing battle.

Facing lost dollars now and the possibility of a drained spiny lobster population in the future, lobster fishermen are hoping strong penalties will stop the crimes.

Between July and late September, 75 people were arrested along San Diego County's coast for closed-season fishing violations involving 313 lobsters, an official said.

Capt. Gorden Cribbs, a supervisor at the state Fish and Game office in Long Beach estimates that fewer than one out of 10 poachers is prosecuted, he estimated.

A year ago, four people were fined a total of $3,500 in San Diego when game wardens discovered 115 lobsters in secret boat compartments. Only three of the lobsters were of legal size — at least 3¼ inches long from behind the eyes to beginning of the tail.

The thievery "can be big business," said Lt. Bill Powell, supervisor for San Diego County's coast. Spiny lobsters sell for up to $10 a pound retail.

Surveillance is often necessary to catch the thieves, who use sophisticated gadgetry to hide their illegal hauls.

"You name it, we've seen it," Powell said. "One boat had a compartment wall controlled by an electromagnetic lock. Another had a huge compartment hollowed out under the seats. We found it when a warden spotted a lobster antenna sticking out of the seat."

Grooming can be expensive

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — State Rep. Pat Harris is all for keeping America strong, but he draws the line at spending more than $309,000 to teach female recruits at Fort Jackson how to put on makeup.

"I totally favor defense spending, but as a fellow downtown said, 'They ain't going to kiss nobody to death,'" said Harris, a Democrat who chairs a joint legislative committee which reviews the state's spending of federal money.

The Army, which wanted to spend about $20,000 on the new one-year grooming and cosemtic program, isn't too happy either about the offer from the University of South Carolina's Center for Lifelong Learning.

Thomas Cooper, the fort's chief of procurement, told the Anderson Independent-Mail he is trying to avoid awarding the contract to USC — the sole bidder — because the bid "is far beyond our estimates and expectations."

The USC 400 bid is about 15 times greater than what the fort planned on spending for the program. Cooper said the fort's legal department is reviewing the contract to determine whether it has to be awarded.

Odessa cable TV company files suit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Cable TV of West Odessa, which alleges it was thwarted in its efforts to develop its cable television system in Odessa and to compete with the 12-year-old established cable system, has lodged a $10 million lawsuit in federal court in Midland against Cablevision of Odessa and 23 co-defendants.

Cable TV seeks treble damages — $30 million — under the Clayton Act, which deals with local price discrimination, and claims that Cablevision and its joint venturers violated the Sherman Antitrust Act by conspiring to monopolize cable television in Odessa.

Defendants, who are cited as joint venturers in Cablevision, include Midessa Television Co., which operates KMID-TV, Channel 2, at Midland Regional Airport, and The First National Bank of Midland, which is trustee under the will of Veda Wells Hodge. The suit alleges that certain named Midland, Odessa and Winters residents are partners in the H.J. Hodge Co. or the N.T. Hodge Enterprises, and therefore are part owners of 24 percent interest in Cablevision.

THE fledgling cable system, which has been operating in the West Odessa community for a year, earlier this year tried to expand into Odessa after it "became aware of extensive dissatisfaction" in Odessa with the cable services provided there by Cablevision, which has about 20,000 subscribers, according to the suit's petition, which was filed Tuesday.

"Cable TV sponsored a community survey which revealed that more than 70 percent of the citizens of Odessa were in favor of having a second television system operating in Odessa," says the petition.

In April of 1982, Cable TV began efforts to obtain a franchise from the Odessa City Council. On the first of two readings for that franchise, the Council approved the measure by a 3-2 vote but denied the franchise in a 2-3 vote on the second reading, the petition says.

Cable TV claims the vote was influenced by conflict of interests: that Councilmen John Mason and Richard Sivalls have financial links to Cablevision. "There are significant financial and other relationships between joint venturers in Cablevision and Odessa City Council members Mason and Sivalls," the petition alleges.

CABLEVISION was granted a 20-year franchise in Odessa in 1970 and has been operating there since Nov. 20, 1970.

"Throughout the 12 years during which it has had the Odessa franchise, Cablevision has provided minimal cable service in Odessa, relying on a 12-channel system at a time when many systems have a capacity for 50 or more channels, and refusing, at various times, to carry even a certain local television broadcast station operating in the Midland-Odessa region," the petition says. "This refusal was in clear defiance of applicable rules of the Federal Communications Commission."

CO-DEFENDANTS named in the suit are:

—Midessa Television Co., which operates KMID-TV and which has 25 percent interest in Cablevision. The suit claims that FCC's cross-ownership rules forbid television broadcast stations from acquiring ownership of any cable television system in the station's broadcast area." The reasoning behind that rule is that "the development of the cable system is likely to be retarded in order to protect the market of the broadcaster."

—Doubleday Broadcasting Inc., a diversified communications company which owns 25 percent of Cablevision.

—Capital Cities Cable of Delaware, which owns 26 percent of Cablevision.

—The First National Bank of Midland, trustee under the will of Veda Wells Hodge. The Hodge family interests own 24 percent of Cablevision.

—Homer J. Hodge Jr. of Winters, part owner of H.J. Hodge Co.

—Floy Hodge of Winters, partner in H.J. Hodge Co.

—Frances H. Collins of Odessa, partner in H.J. Hodge Co.

—T.A. Collins of Odessa, partner in H.J. Hodge Co.

—Argene Hodge of Odessa, partner in H.J. Hodge Co.

—Laveta Hodge of Odessa, partner in H.J. Hodge Co.

—Faye C. Ohnemus of Odessa, partner in N.T. Hodge Enterprises.

—Robert T. Hodge of Odessa, partner in N.T. Hodge Enterprises.

—Norma Jean Springer of Midland, partner in N.T. Hodge Enteprises.

—H.J. Hodge Co.

—N.T. Hodge Enterprises.

—Nancy R. Anguish of Midland, part owner of joint venture with Hodge.

—W.O. Shafer, an Odessa lawyer, attorney for W.D. Noel, Texas Electric Service Co., and Midessa. Noel "is or was" vice president of Midessa Television Co. and owned 12 percent of voting stock in Midessa. Noel owns El Paso Products and Odessa Natural Co.

—Texas Electric Service Co., which owns or controls 50 to 60 percent of Odessa's utility poles to which a cable-system coaxial cables may be attached. TESCO "acted in furtherance of the conspiracy" to shut Cable TV out of Odessa by refusing to allow Cable TV to use the standard "stand-aside bracket" to affix the coaxial cables to the poles and instead imposed $800,000 in "make-ready" charges, which is eight times the cost of the standard set-side brackets.

—City of Odessa.

-Mayor Robert Bryant.

—City Councilman John Mason, who allegedly led opposition to grant the franchise to Cable TV and who is vice president and general counsel to Noel's El Paso Products and Odessa Natural Corp.

—City Councilman Richard Silvalls, who allegedly joined Mason in opposing the franchise and who is owner of Sivalls Inc., a metal tank and oil-field related equipment Co. which has "close links to and derives a major part of its income from El Paso Products and Odessa Natural.

—City Councilman Keith Weddell.

IN THEIR alleged conspiracy to prevent Cable TV from entering the Odessa market, the defendants and co-defendants "disparaged" the services offered by Cable TV, and made mispresentations in trying to renew Cablevision's franchise eight years before it is due for renewal, and "without a reasonable basis" maintained that "Odessa would best be served by a single cable system."

According to the petition, Cablevision and its co-defendants violated the Sherman Antitrust Act by conspiring to monopolize trade in Odessa and violated Cable TV's U.S. constitutional rights. The freedom of expression in communications in the media is protected by the Constitution's First and Fourteenth Amendments.

If allowed to moved into the Odessa market, Cable TV claims that it would "make available a diversity of programs from a wide variety of sources, including local, regional and national programming and satellite-delivered programs which would include news, religion, sports, public affairs, feature-length films, ethnic-oriented features, educational and foreign-language and cultural programs.

Gay rights' political image less tarnished

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two potential presidential candidates have taken a step that a few years ago would have been regarded as an invitation to political disaster. They have spoken at gay rights' fund-raising dinners.

"We did not regard it as a political risk," says a spokesman for former Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

"The senator made the decision to go, and I think that speaks for itself," said an aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Tonight, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., also a presidential contender, will follow suit.

Cranston will speak at a dinner in Philadelphia sponsored by the Human Rights Campaign Fund, a homosexual rights political action committee contributing to candidates in this fall's congressional elections.

Mondale spoke to the New York affiliate of the group on Sept. 29. Kennedy addressed the Municipal Election Committee of Los Angeles at a gay rights fund-raiser April 23.

Steve Endean, treasurer of the Human Rights Campaign Fund, said Tuesday he believes this is the first time presidential aspirants have spoken at fund-raising affairs on behalf of civil rights for homosexuals.

"There definitely is a move in that direction," Endean said. "I don't think they felt the need to address it before."

Reagan enacts legislation to help find missing kids

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, parents can call the FBI and ask whether the names and descriptions of their missing children are recorded in the agency's national computer.

If the names are not listed and local police refuse to ask the FBI to enter the statistics, the parents can ask the FBI to do so, under a law signed Tuesday by President Reagan.

The Missing Children Act is aimed at helping some of the thousands of parents across the nation whose children have been abducted or have run away.

"God bless the president," said Capt. Ron Hawskley of the South Kingstown, R.I., Police Department.

Hawskley headed the seven-year search for Jason Foreman, 5, who disappeared May 18, 1975, in the tiny village of Peace Dale, R.I. A neighbor was charged in the case this year.

Reagan called the problem of missing children a national "tragedy" and said that parents have faced "frustration and anger" in trying to locate their missing children because of overlapping jurisdictions and lack of centralized information.

"The Missing Children Act attempts to lessen these problems by mandating a system to allow parents access to a central computer file designed to help trace missing children," Reagan said.

Council commends crash action

Midland City Council strayed from its agenda Tuesday to give special recognition to the numerous people who had assisted at the Sept. 24 plane crash at Warwick Apartments.

Although five persons were seriously injured and one apartment building was gutted with fire, Mayor G. Thane Akins said, "The bright spot was the way these people worked together in a very dangerous situation."

After reading the list and handing each person a "Resolution of Commendation," the audience in City Hall Council Chambers applauded.

"We want you to know how much we appreciate your day-to-day efforts," the mayor added.

The resolution reads: "...While the tragedy and resulting fire left five injured and many without homes and personal possessions, the efforts of these groups and agencies helped to see that no lives were lost and the needs of the injured were met with prompt attention. The community dedication on the part of those involved discouraged further suffering, brought comfort to those less fortunate and helped restore order to their lives."

Commended were individuals including Dino Zande, Mal Staples, Beth Ann Broughton, John Verscher, Janet Basil and Zane Phiffer; youth groups such as Explorer Scouts Law Enforcement Post 714 and Medical Post 68; public utility companies including Southwestern Bell and Texas Electric Service Co.; local volunteer groups including Texas State Guard, American Red Cross and Salvation Army; and agencies whose assistance was comprised of on- and off-duty personnel including Midland Fire Department, Police Department, Midland County Sheriff's Department; Texas Department of Public Safety and the city street department.

In other action, the council decided to place a four-way stop sign at Kansas and McDonald streets to slow down traffic for students crossing to Bonham Elementary. Parents argued that too many vehicles travel those streets without slowing down.

Key Construction was approved to do the work on a water line project along Wadley Avenue. The council was told this firm formerly was Klaus Construction, which had the contract on the Garfield and Ward street bridges. It took them 300 days past the projected completion date, and the council at its last meeting reduced the final payment because of the delay.

Fred Baker, director of public works, said the firm "is more adept at water and sewer lines than building bridges." In approving the contract, the mayor remarked, "One more act like that (bridge delays) and I don't care what they change their name to."

Council members disagreed on how to handle a drainage problem north of Loop 250 and what landowners should be assessed for cost of eliminating the problem. Instead of levying assessments, the council took no action and told the staff to look at a Lubbock ordinance which prohibits any construction in a playa lake.

The council agreed to come up with matching funds to buy two additional police dogs to replace some aging dogs. A fund has been established that has enough money to purchase two dogs.

A zone change to Planned District for lots on the southeast side of Mariana Street was approved. The area is being planned as a housing development for senior citizens.

Board names county appraiser

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Roland Wilkinson, the 34-year-old director of administration for the Lubbock County Appraisal District, today was hired as chief appraiser of the Midland County Appraisal District in a unanimous vote by the five-member board.

He succeeds Virgil Jones Jr., 52, who submitted his resignation Aug. 18.

"I'm looking forward to it; I really am," Wilkinson said of his new job, which he will fill Nov. 15. "You have a very good staff on board..., an outstanding staff. I'm not bringing a headman's ax with me. I'm here to provide direction and to determine short- and long-range goals."

Wilkinson, who in 1978 was state-certified as a Registered Professional Appraiser and as a Certified Texas Appraiser, cited what will be his principal function: to ensure an equitable tax base.

"That's the most imperative thing," he said. "It's required by state law." And, too, as had Jones, he will "make sure" that all people, businesses and corporations which are levied taxes will "pay their fair share."

In bringing in Wilkinson to head up the 25-member staff, which includes eight appraisers, Chairman Gil Tompson noted that the board was "unanimous in the choice of Mr. Wilkinson." The board screened 25 applicants and interviewed four prime choices. "We all came out with Mr. Wilkinson at the top of the list," Tompson said.

The chief appraiser's job, which pays $45,000 this year, will be paying $50,160 in 1983.

Wilkinson, a native of Carlsbad, N.M., was assistant tax assessor-collector for the Lubbock Independent School District and the city of Lubbock for two years before he was named director of administration for the Lubbock County Appraisal District a year ago. Earlier in his career at Lubbock, he was collections supervisor and senior appraiser for the school and city.

His higher education was at New Mexico State University and Texas Tech University.

The board expressed appreciation to Jones for his service as the chief appraiser since January 1981.

"He's the one who has come up with this dedicated staff," said board member David Grimes.

"We're very indebted to the work you've done," Tompson told Jones, who, he said, was "always ready and available" to assist the board and the public. "All of us are very much indebted to you."

Jones, who will stay on the job until the end of November, will assist Wilkinson in his transition to the chief appraiser's job. In his resignation, Jones cited the health-endangering pressures of the job, "and there are some things I want to do."

What Jones plans to do after leaving office is open his Property Tax Consultants Inc. and Virgil Jones Jr. Property Insurance Co. businesses.

The chief appraiser is responsible for setting property values throughout the county. Those values, based on 100 percent of the fair market value, are used in computing taxes for the Midland Independent School District, Greenwood Independent School District, Midland College, Midland County, city of Midland and Midland County Hospital District.

Victim-oriented law signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation requiring judges to consider the harm done to the victims of a crime before sentencing the criminal has been signed into law by President Reagan.

The Victim and Witness Protection Act signed Tuesday also protects the relatives of witnesses from intimidation and retaliation.

Under the new law, a federal court is authorized in certain situations to require that victims be compensated for property loss, medical expenses, lost income or funeral expenses.

In addition, the attorney general must set up guidelines to ensure that victims of crime are treated fairly.

"It is high time the legal system showed the honest citizen as much concern as it does the criminal," Reagan said. "Today, it is not the wrongdoer who falls through the cracks of our criminal justice system. Too often it is the innocent victim and the dutiful witness."

The president signed the bill in the White House Rose Garden and thanked sponsors of the legislation, Sen. H. John Heinz III, R-Pa., Sen. Charles Mathias, Jr., R-Md., Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y., Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., and Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J.

Without the cooperation of victims and witnesses, Reagan said, the criminal justice system would cease to function.

Peace prizes awarded

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Alva Myrdal of Sweden and Alfonso Garcia Robles of Mexico, two veteran fighters for world disarmament, were jointly awarded the 1982 Nobel Peace Prize today.

The 80-year-old Mrs. Myrdal, a sociologist and former diplomat, and Garcia Robles, 71-year-old former Mexican foreign minister, "for many years have played a central role in the United Nations' disarmament negotiations," the Norwegian Nobel Committee noted in making the award.

Mrs. Myrdal's husband of 58 years, Swedish economist-sociologist Gunnar Myrdal, shared the Nobel Economics Prize in 1974.

Other husband-wife teams winning the prestigious Nobel awards have been Frederic Joliot-Curie and Irene Joliot-Curie of France, who jointly won the 1935 chemistry prize, and Carl and Gerty Cori of the United States, who shared the medicine prize in 1947.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee said it hoped the selection of the two disarmament advocates "may be interpreted as a stimulus to the climate of peace that has emerged in recent years, first and foremost in the Western world."

"If this climate of opinion is only allowed to gain in strength and vigor, surmounting still more boundaries, it might well provide our best hope that realistic and factual negotiations, culminating in mutual disarmament, may one day be crowned with success," the committee citation said.

Mrs. Myrdal and Garcia Robles were among a record 79 candidates — 60 individuals and 19 organizations — nominated for the peace prize, which carries a stipend of 1.15 million Swedish kronor, equivalent to $157,000.

Last year's peace prize was awarded to the office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees for its work with the world's millions of homeless.

Reagan applauds parents

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Nancy Reagan says parents ought to take more responsibility for drug abuse by their children because, "After all, government doesn't have children."

Mrs. Reagan, speaking Monday before a conference of the National Federation of Parents for Drug Free Youth, commended the group for increasing the number of its local organizations from about 1,000 two years ago to more than 3,000.

"I'm so proud of what you're doing on your own," she told an audience of about 400 people. "You spontaneously began to form parents' groups. I think that's really just so great. Anything done spontaneously, without the urging of government, is wonderful."

She said parents shouldn't give up on their youngsters who turn to drugs.

"You lay out what advice you can and hope for the best. But you have to try, and that seems to me to be the key," Mrs. Reagan said.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse recently estimated that 15 million teenagers smoked marijuana daily in 1980 and one out of every 11 high school seniors smoked an average of 3.5 marijuana cigarettes each day in 1981.

It said there also are an estimated 3.3 million American teen-agers who are alcoholics.

Board receives protests

HOUSTON (AP) — A 30-member appeals board reviewing new property tax values has received twice as many protests as expected, forcing the panel to change its procedures.

George Wyche, chairman of the Houston Appraisal Review Board, said Monday new procedures were needed to help the panel complete the process by Nov. 19. The changes become effective next week.

The board has received more than 26,000 protests, Wyche said. A formal tax rate will be set by the City Council after all appeals have been reviewed and the tax roll has been certified, he said.

Professor commended

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Angelo Miele, a Rice University professor of astronautics and mathematics, has been cited by the Journal of the Astronautical Sciences for his contributions to the theory of space flight.

Miele, who has taught at Rice since 1964, is "a scientist and educator who has become one of America's foremost authorities on astronautics," said journal editor Herbert E. Rauch.

"He contributed original thoughts on the calculus of variations and its application of rocket flight" before the Soviets launched Sputnik in 1957.

Man dies in accident

HOUSTON (AP) — A car rammed into the back of an 18-wheel tractor-trailer rig, killing a 24-year-old San Antonio man, authorities said.

The driver of the car, Rogelio A. Gonzalez Jr., was pronounced dead at the scene early Monday, investigators said. The truck driver was not unjured.

Investigators said Gonzalez was traveling west on U.S. Highway 290 when his car hit the truck at a busy intersection in northwest Harris County.

Gun fanciers meet

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Merchants dealing in ammunition and other military gear expect to do a brisk business this week during the third annual Soldier of Fortune Convention.

The convention, sponsored by Soldier of Fortune magazine, opened Monday and was expected to draw as many as 5,000 enthusiasts who paid up to $100 each to attend such events as military seminars, a gun show and a shooting competition. The convention ends Sunday.

About 35 people protested the opening. One, the Rev. Beth Johnson of Queens College, said Soldier of Fortune publisher Robert K. Brown "anticipates a positive reception in Charlotte; we'd like to show him he's wrong."

Possible arsonists charged

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The principal of a high school, a substitute teacher and a 16-year-old student have been charged in four arson fires at the school two months ago, officials say.

Dr. Eliott C. Willard, principal at Booker T. Washington High School, and teacher Joseph H. Jacques were booked Monday on charges of falsifying a police report. The student, whose name was withheld, was arrested Saturday and booked on four counts of aggravated arson.

Police said the school officials lied about the fires in statements to investigators and had three students do the same. Only one of the students was charged, and no motive was established.

Abortion law OK'd by judge

NEW ALBANY, Ind. (AP) — A federal judge has upheld a state law that makes it a felony for a doctor to perform an abortion on a young woman under age 18 without notifying her parents.

U.S. District Judge Cale J. Holder ruled Monday that the law, which does not apply to young women who are married or live alone, does not violate their right to privacy. Violation is a Class C felony punishable by up to eight years in jail and $10,000 in fines.

"Constitutional rights of minors cannot be equated with the constitutional rights of adults, and the state may validly limit the freedom of children...in the making of important...decisions...," Holder ruled.

Boston blazes suspect

BOSTON (AP) — A spate of suspicious fires in Boston's older sections is "a classic example of what's been going on in this city," according to Deputy Fire Chief Leo Stapleton.

Three fires, two of them suspicious, broke out in vacant buildings Monday morning, one spreading to six other structures, including an 18th century landmark home. Damage estimates reached $140,000.

A series of early-morning fires in the same areas during the summer severely taxed the fire department. Since 1979 arson fires have jumped 50 percent from 437 to an expected 633 this year, while the number of fires overall declined about 30 percent, from 4,478 to 3,062.

China sets conditions for normalization of ties with U.S.S.R.

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — China has set three conditions for normalization of relations with Russia — a rapprochement of far-reaching significance which Moscow is seeking to counter President Reagan's tough policy toward the Soviet Union.

This information was brought to Washington this month by one of Asia's most astute statesmen who is in close contact with both Peking and Moscow.

The three conditions which the Chinese communist government has, according to this well-informed source, set are:

1 — A very substantial "thinning out" of the 45 Soviet divisions on the 4,000 mile Sino-Soviet frontier;

2 — Soviet pressure on Hanoi to force the withdrawal of Vietnamese military forces from Cambodia, which China considers its sphere of influence;

3 — Sharp reduction of the Soviet naval presence in the American-built Vietnam naval base at Cam Ranh bay — a presence which Peking considers an encirclement threat to China's security.

The Asian statesman, who preferred to be unidentified publicly because he has to maintain a delicate balancing act between east and west, said Peking has made clear to Moscow that its willingness to start negotiating normalization of relations with the Soviet Union will depend on prior and clearly evident "movement" by the Soviets on one or more of these conditions. The Chinese leadership believes Moscow's willingness to meet Peking's conditions will depend on how concerned the Kremlin is about the Reagan administration's hardline policy toward the Soviet government.

CHINA'S LEADERS, THE SOURCE ADDED, believe the Soviets are genuinely frightened by President Reagan's call this summer for an ideological "crusade for freedom" to assist "democratic development" throughout the world, and for his attempt to persuade the European allies to join in virtual economic warfare against the Soviet Union in retaliation for its indirect crushing of the Polish freedom movement and its military occupation of Afghanistan.

With the collapse of detente, with the loss of influence they have suffered in the third world because of the invasion of Afghanistan, and with growing fear the United States wants to achieve strategic superiority, the Soviets are seen in Peking as feeling cornered.

Peking's anger with the Reagan administration for its military support of the Chinese nationalist regime on Taiwan is thought to have led the Soviets to think the time might be opportune to play the China card against the U.S. by seeking a rapprochement with the chinese communist government. This, Peking, believes, is what prompted Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev's recent public overture to China for "normalization" of relations "on a basis of common sense, mutual respect, and mutual advantage." His olive branch was quickly followed by arrival in Peking of a Soviet delegation to discuss the matter, and it was to this delegation, the Asian source said, that the Chinese set forth the three conditions. If the Soviets meet these conditions, it is believed the Chinese government would be willing to move toward improvement of relations with Russia but would not become subservient to Moscow or join in re-creating a monolithic communist world bloc.

IF THE CHINA GAMBIT FAILS, detente remains in the doldrums, and there is no marked improvement in relations with the United States, the danger of Soviet recklessness must, in the opinion of the Asian statesman, be taken into account, especially if the ailing Brezhnev should be succeeded by a "hawk" in the Soviet hierarchy. There is no doubt in the mind of the Asian observer nor in the minds of his Chinese friends that the Soviet regime, regardless of who leads it, is likely to continue its struggle for world supremacy by measures short of nuclear war.

If, after Brezhnev, hawks control the Kremlin, the danger is foreseen that the Soviets might attempt to grab Turkey or move into Iran.

Fort Wayne, Ind., will survive, mayor says

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Fort Wayne survived the March floods that forced 9,000 people from their homes. It will survive the loss of an International Harvester truck assembly plant and its 2,100 jobs, says Mayor Winfield Moses.

The Harvester workers, who will be out of work when the company moves its heavy-duty truck facility to Springfield, Ohio, remain on the assembly line, waiting for the layoff notices to arrive.

"It really hasn't sunk in yet," said one 28-year veteran of the Harvester assembly line who asked not to be identifed. "It won't 'till it's all over — when the gates close. It's like living in a nightmare. Tomorrow you wake up and it's not there."

Layoff notices aren't new. In the past two years, 5,000 workers have been laid off at the plant, which at its peak in 1979 employed 10,500.

Terry Henline, 41, who just sold his house and is facing unemployment after 18 years with Harvester, says he and his co-workers are "just hanging on until the last day."

He's not sure what he's going to do now. "Just about any decent job around here is already taken," he said.

Harvester announced Sept. 27 that it would consolidate over a 15-month period the truck manufacturing operation at Springfield's 17-year-old plant and shut down the older Fort Wayne facility.

The decision ended a two-month battle between Ohio and Indiana over which state would get the plant. Indiana came up with a $31 million package; Ohio's was about $1 million less.

But Harvester officials said the age of the plants — the Fort Wayne facility is 43 years older — played a key role in the decision. Moses isn't worried.

Last week he announced a multi-purpose, four-story renovation and construction project that will provide an estimated 2,000 jobs.

"On the heels of the Harvester announcement, that confidence in our future is a critical step in our recovery," Moses said. "You're going to see a city that is punching its way back very nicely."

Moses also says that more than half of the $31 million package pieced together to keep Harvester in Fort Wayne will be used to drew new business to the city.

"I am absolutely convinced we can develop more new jobs than will be lost by Harvester leaving," he said. "Change is the American way."

'One-man show' changes hands

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

For 29 years the nation's largest black church body was practically a one-man show run by the Rev. Joseph H. Jackson, a Chicago pastor whose conservative social views incongruously spanned the height of the civil-rights era.

But last month the Rev. Theodore J. Jemison, a Baton Rouge, La., minister more in the activist mold of leading black clergy, soundly defeated Jackson for the presidency of the National Baptist Convention USA Inc. in Miami Beach, Fla.

Jemison, 62, who regarded himself the heir apparent, and his prominent supporters said they could no longer wait for the octogenarian Jackson to announce his retirement.

In one of the first interviews since his election, before a small dinner party with Los Angeles pastors, Jemison outlined plans to take the National Baptists into the black church mainstream and described the background to his convention victory.

"I always said I would never run against Dr. Jackson as president but it appeared that Dr. Jackson was not going to ever retire," Jemison said. "I wanted to be president while I was still young enough to have energy to do a job."

Jemison said he hopes to lead the National Baptists on matters ranging from voter registration to evangelism and generate a higher public profile befitting the church's claimed membership of 6.8 million.

"I don't believe that the voice of National Baptists has been heard loud enough in...unemployment, politics and the whole matter of civil rights," Jeminson said.

Although Jackson spoke out against racial discrimnation and encouraged minority self-help programs, he emphasized patriotism, civil order and support for the U.S. presidency. He opposed most civil-rights protest tactics over the years.

Length of life increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The life expectancy of an average American has risen to a record 73.7 years, the government says.

It said women still have longer lifespans than men, and whites have longer lifespans than blacks.

The National Center on Health Statistics released data Tuesday showing average life expectancy rose .4 year to set a new record in 1979.

The life expectancy for females is 77.6 years while for males it is 69.9

Women now live an average of 7.7 years longer than men, the data showed. By contrast, in 1960 women lived 6.5 years longer than men, and in 1950 they lived 5.5 years longer.

Although the disparity between blacks and whites narrowed a little, whites still can expect to live 6.1 years longer than blacks. Life expectancy is 74.4 years for whites and 68.3 years for blacks.

In the period 1969 to 1971 it was 71.6 years for whites and 64.1 for blacks, a difference of 7.5 years.

Infant mortality dropped to a new low rate of 13.1 deaths per 1,000 live births. It was a decline of 5.1 percent from the rate of 13.8 per 1,000 in 1978.

The leading causes of death continued to be heart disease, cancer and strokes. They were responsible for about 70 percent of the 1.91 million deaths in the United States in 1979.

There were 13,947 fewer deaths in 1979 than in 1978, possibly because there was no influenza epidemic, the center said.

The death rate for 1979 dropped to 883.4 deaths per 100,000 population from 869.5 deaths per 100,000 in 1978.

Heart disease, the leading cause of death, accounted for 733,235 deaths or nearly four out of 10 which occurred in the country in 1979.

Cancer claimed 403,395 lives in 1979, nearly two out 10; strokes caused 169,488, nearly one in 10.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Employers will accept your plan if you give them the right answers. Bite your tongue and stay away from a co-worker who likes to argue. You receive support from top people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Rely on your own business sense. Someone influential will be very impressed by your ability to think fast when under pressure. Long-distance contacts play an important role in your success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Business transactions are favored. Consider innovative ways to conserve your earnings. A strange event affects your romantic inclinations this afternoon.

Opening lead: King of ♡.

It was a 3-to-1 chance that one of two obvious finesses would succeed. But declarer made his contract because he found a third finesse!

The auction was routine. South started with one spade on a hand worth 20 points, then jumped to game when his partner mustered a simple raise. As the cards lie three no trump would have been a laydown because of the even break in hearts, but the spade game was the superior contract.

West attacked with the king of hearts, and the defenders raked in their two tricks in the suit before declarer ruffed the third round. He drew trumps in two rounds and it seemed that all he needed to do for his contract was to take a finesse in each minor suit. If East had either minor-suit queen, declarer would be home.

To everyone's surprise, however, declarer continued with the king and ace of diamonds and, when the queen did not drop, he exited with the jack. West won the queen but he was end played. No matter what he did, the defenders could get no more tricks.

Purists might argue that the end play stood far less chance than two finesses. But they would be overlooking the nine of clubs in dummy! Suppose that East won the third diamond—declarer would still have a 3-to-1 chance for his contract! If East has either the queen or ten of clubs, declarer will make his contract by letting East's shift to a low club run to the K-9 in dummy. If West comes up with the ten, declarer takes dummy's king and still has a finesse for the queen available. But look at the extra chances declarer has provided for himself. He can drop a doubleton queen of diamonds, or claim his contract any time that West has the queen in that suit.

GEORGE B. IRISH, PRESIDENT AND PUBLISHER
JIM SERVATIUS, EDITOR

Welcome, Mr. Kiker

There are more than a few Midland County residents who regretted to see county agriculture agent Charlie Green resign recently from the position he had occupied for 33 years.

We're certain that everyone of those residents will want to extend a hearty welcome to Earnest Kiker, who was hired Monday as the next agricultural agent. In looking over Mr. Kiker's credentials, we feel confident he will be most capable of filling the void created by Mr. Green's departure.

Midland County may not be the most important agricultural region in the state of Texas. It may not even occupy a place in the top 10. But agriculture accounts for $13.5 million here each year, mainly in beef cattle, hogs, sheep, cotton, sorghums and other small grains. Over 12,000 acres in Midland County are irrigated.

But the economic situation facing farmers and ranchers in Midland County, as elsewhere in the nation, makes it imperative that the county's agriculture extension agent be well versed in agribusiness. Earnest Kiker's credentials indicate he is just such a man.

A graduate of Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Kiker has served as an assistant county agent in Swisher County and senior agent for Borden County. Most recently he was senior agent for Briscoe County in the High Plains.

Briscoe County is more agriculture-oriented than Midland County, with agriculture interests generating around $32 million each year. That income is primarily derived from wheat, grain sorghums, cotton, hogs, livestock, beef cattle and cattle feeding operations. In addition, Briscoe County boasts some 70,000 acres of irrigated land.

We believe Mr. Kiker's agriculture background will serve him well in his new position as Midland County's agriculture extension agent. We join all those with interest in the county's agriculture future in welcoming him to Midland.

The president's temper

Good for President Reagan. He has one of the world's toughest jobs, and when he makes public appearances he does his best to explain what's going on, bringing the American people up to date on problems and solutions. He doesn't deserve any back row brashness.

Almost always Mr. Reagan's personal demeanor is above reproach. He demonstrates warmth and control in his appearances as only a person with professional stage presence can. He comes across with honesty and forthrightness.

But everybody has a breaking point. Mr. Reagan reached his recently in Washington, when he told a heckler, "Shut up!" The audience, made up of Republican candidates for office, approved and later gave the president a standing ovation.

It wasn't the first time Mr. Reagan has blown his safety valve. While campaigning in San Diego for the presidency in 1980, he offered the same instruction to a harasser during a speech.

It may be a shock for some to find national leaders letting their hair down. But it happens from time to time.

Remember President Truman's pithy remark about the music critic who gave his daughter, Margaret, a bad review? Or Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's gesture of utter defiance to a pesterer? And how about Jimmy Carter's pronouncement on the chances of Sen. Edward Kennedy running against him in Carter's bid for a second term — "I'll whip his ass!"

No, we can't blame Mr. Reagan for his outburst. The heckler was rude and out of line. He got what he deserved. More power to the president.

Another View:

A harvest of shame

There is no more dismal reminder of the slow progress of civilization, even within the most advanced of countries, than the continuing plight of this nation's migrant and seasonal farm workers. For over two decades, innumerable media exposes have reminded America that the hidden cost of its plentiful and varied food is the degradation of fellow human beings, many of them working and living within easy reach of major cities.

Mechanization has reduced the number of agricultural workers, and many migrants have been displaced by "day-haul" workers from cities, illegal immigrants and contract workers from the Caribbean. But exploitation of all these types of field workers continues to be a prevalent condition. Some progress has been made. Lawsuits and legislation have tried to secure minimally adequate wages and wipe out the worst sorts of squalor and abuse. Farm-worker organizations have won contracts with some major food processors that ensure better pay and benefits. And every now and then — when a baby dies of dysentery or workers held in bondage are murdered — some of the most despicable situations are remedied, at least temporarily.

The latest attempt to improve legal protections for field workers is a rewriting of the legislation that governs farm-worker contracts. The legislation is supported by the agricultural industry, which had complained that growers were being subjected to registration requirements — such as fingerprinting and proof of integrity — that were designed to crack down on itinerant crew leaders and contractors. But farm-worker groups also support the bill because it makes it clear that liability for abuses — such as wage skimming, misinformation to workers about pay and other conditions, substandard housing and dangerous transportation — extends beyond the crew leader, who does the hiring, to growers and agricultural associations, the actual employers.

The legislation — which was passed by the House without apparent opposition — is a reasonable compromise of a long-disputed issue, and it deserves quick passage in the Senate when it reconvenes after the election. But there is plenty of history to show that laws are far from self-enforcing, especially when the opposition — in this case, the growers — is powerful and the beneficiaries are not.

The Department of Labor, which enforces the law, has cut back its investigative staff, and farm workers claim — and the record of persistent abuse suggests — that the department steers away from politically powerful targets and possibly dangerous situations, preferring to make its visits with ample notice to the grower and often failing to look behind the "facts" as the grower presents them.

The surest sort of continuous protection would come from strong worker organizations. But farm workers are difficult to unionize because they are easily intimidated by growers and because they face stiff and growing competition from foreign contract workers and illegal immigrants. Cutbacks in legal-service organizations will also diminish what has probably been the workers' most effective source of help. As long as the public confines its indignation to the occasional shocking expose it is likely that America will continue to harvest shame along with its bountiful produce.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Panel probes CIA-link to arms shippers

WASHINGTON — Two intriguing questions remain to be answered in the curious award of an exclusive, multi-million-dollar contract to ship U.S. arms to Egypt:

Jack Anderson

How did the company, Egyptian American Transport and Services Corp. (EATSCO) hit upon a former high-level CIA official, Thomas Clines, as its president? And was the former Egyptian defense minister and head of intelligence, Kamal Hassan Ali, now foreign minister, correct in saying that high-level CIA and Pentagon officials pressured the Egyptian government to choose EATSCO as the shipping contractor?

A federal grand jury in Virginia is looking into these very questions. My associates Dale Van Atta and Indy Badhwar have been chasing this story for more than a year. I sent Van Atta to Egypt, Israel and Lebanon to follow up leads.

Our investigation makes one thing clear: Questions about EATSCO's previous incarnation, a Geneva-based firm with no previous experience in shipping, were raised in Congress, the Pentagon and Egypt. As a result, the company's Egyptian president, Hussein Salem, transformed it into EATSCO.

Salem, a former military intelligence officer, asked an American with important connections to join him as a partner, buying in for $50,000. The offer was turned down, and somehow Clines became Salem's next choice. He accepted.

A former Salem associate said Clines was chosen because the Egyptian was impressed by Clines' background as director of training for the CIA's clandestine services. "I think foreigners all believe our movies about the CIA," the former associate explained. "They think the CIA is twice as powerful as it is — can do a lot of things that the newspapers say."

Another source, a businessman who was riding in Clines' "old rattletrap car" in September 1979, shortly after the former CIA official had become EATSCO president, recounted Clines' own puzzlement at his sudden good fortune.

"When we were driving down the street," the businessman recalled, "he said, 'I don't know how I got this job. All of a sudden, you know, I'm offered this job.'"

The businessman, who has ties himself to the intelligence community, said: "I know how he got the job. It was that CIA thing and they (Salem) pull him into the deal."

According to the first source, after my columns on EATSCO a year ago, Salem considered Clines so much excess baggage. "He bought him out and got rid of him," the former Salem associate said.

As for the second question, Egyptian sources said that both the late President Anwar Sadat and then-Vice President Hosni Mubarak were told by Ali that the Egyptian government had no choice but to give the arms-shipping contract to EATSCO.

"The minister of defense (Ali) insisted that the American authorities were pushing and pressing on getting the contract for Clines," one Egyptian source said. Asked exactly what "American authorities," the source said Ali alleged that "the Pentagon and CIA were insisting on getting the contract for this CIA ex-agent, Mr. Clines ..."

Mubarak, incidentally, is regarded as personally incorruptible, and apparently was not involved in the contract award. As for the then-defense minister, Abu Ghazala, and Mubarak's brother-in-law, Gen. Mounir Sabet, who heads Egyptian military procurement in Washington, they were following Ali's orders when they helped EATSCO's predecessor company get the shipping contract.

After repeated attempts by my associates to interview EATSCO officials, a company spokesman produced a statement that said, "The customer (Egypt) is satisfied with EATSCO's performance and charges, including all profits, which are below the limits permitted by its contract." The company's costs were less than "private sector competitors performing similar services," he said.

"EATSCO believes that at all times it has complied with applicable U.S. laws," the spokesman said. "EATSCO has cooperated in this matter and is confident it will be favorably resolved."

CARTOON CUDGELS: Right-wing political-action groups have used comic books to belabor Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. Now the liberals are apparently about to strike back on the same simpleminded level. Bob Lawrence, a free-lance Washington writer, has clients who want him to develop political comic books.

Lawrence refused to comment on his assignments, but Dick Hafer, the Maryland cartoonist who perpetrated the Kennedy and Byrd books, says Lawrence approached him about illustrating the liberal propaganda efforts. Hafer, who says he's motivated more by ideology than money, declined to be Lawrence's artistic hatchetman. He said Lawrence responded to this rejection by saying, "I thought you were only in it for the money."

Hafer said Lawrence discussed Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Rev. Jerry Falwell as possible comic-book targets.

WATCH ON WASTE: Like everything else connected with government, presidential libraries grow bigger and fancier with each new entry. Herbert Hoover's presidential papers required only 25,000 square feet to house; Franklin Roosevelt's 12-year trove needed only 39,000. But Lyndon Johnson's library is 100,000 square feet, and Gerald Ford's is composed of two buildings, a library and a museum — a total of 80,000 square feet. The seven existing presidential libraries will cost the taxpayers $15 million this year just to operate and maintain. Richard Nixon's and Jimmy Carter's memorials to their tenures have yet to be built.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Talk of war surfaces in Central America

WASHINGTON — Reports are rife here and there that war will break out between Honduras and Nicaragua in December, but some analysts doubt it.

William Giandoni

Both countries are relatively heavily armed but, to put it in layman's terms, they cannot easily get at each other.

Honduras has a long lead in military aircraft, while Nicaragua has a fivefold edge in ground forces.

According to Stephen W. Bosworth, deputy assistant secretary of state, Honduras' air force now includes "a few (U.S.-built) A37s and a squadron of (French) Super Mystere aircraft, the latter purchased in 1969."

Nicaragua's air force, up to now, consists of mostly propeller-driven private planes, although Bosworth says, "Nicaragua is rumored to have ordered a squadron of MiG jets."

Nicaragua's ground force, "with its increasing mobilization of reservists and militia, has some 75,000" men under arms. Honduras' armed forces total only 13,500.

However, John H. Buchanan, a retired Marine Corps pilot, pointed out in recent statements to the House subcommittee on inter-American affairs, Nicaraguan air defenses are so strong around Managua, its capital city, that Honduran aircraft probably could not penetrate them safely.

At the same time, Buchanan, who served in Vietnam both in the air and on the ground, said that any attempt to move sizable Nicaraguan army units out of Managua toward Honduras would expose them to enemy air attack.

Although he foresees a stalemate, Buchanan says that Honduran military officers say the war will start in December, "because the rainy season will be over and the Rio Coco (which forms part of Honduras' long border with Nicaragua) will be down." Buchanan indicated rather that "by the middle of December the skies have cleared and provide ideal weather for air operations."

He also says that Gen. Gustavo Alvarez, Honduran armed forces chief, "seems to be under personal pressure — from some of the Honduran military and the U.S. government — to engage in a war with Nicaragua in the near future."

Buchanan's is the version of developments in Honduras and Central America that opponents of the Reagan administration's policies voice.

Now director of area studies for the Center for Development Policy, Buchanan says that the administration's policy toward Central America is "misguided." He protests "creation of a military crisis between Honduras and its neighbor, Nicaragua, and (U.S.) sponsorship of a military buildup in Honduras, a move which will only encourage increased repression in that country."

On the other hand, Bosworth insists that the threat comes from Nicaragua.

"Nicaragua is the source of many of the problems confronting Honduras, directly by its menacing and subversive initiatives, and indirectly by its open support for the armed insurgencies in El Salvador and Guatemala," Bosworth says. "During 1982 terrorist incidents have increased dramatically, border incidents with Nicaragua have escalated, and tensions have increased."

The most spectacular, perhaps, took place the evening of Sept. 17, when some 15 terrorists shot and blasted their way into the Chamber of Commerce building in San Pedro Sula and seized a number of hostages, including two Cabinet ministers.

The terrorists' chief demand was the release of several score "political prisoners," including one of the leaders of the Popular Revolutionary Army (ERP), described as "the most violent of the violent factions" in El Salvador.

In any case, there is a growing impression here that the conflict between Honduras and Nicaragua will be limited to occasional border skirmishes along with some terrorist activity encouraged by Managua and Havana.

Georges Fauriol, a specialist in Caribbean and Central American affairs in Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies, said recently that fears of "open war" in Central America appear "exaggerated."

He doubts that either the Soviet Union or Cuba would be willing, or is in a position, to provide more than "moral support" for the Sandinistas were they to take overt action against one of their neighbors. Another dissuading factor would be Nicaraguan fears of possible U.S. involvement.

ART BUCHWALD

KTW bullet's problem is — it's there!

"Did you hear the good news?" Colt, a handgun-loving friend of mine asked.

"What's that?"

Art Buchwald

"They now have ammunition that can penetrate any lightweight bulletproof vest. It's called the KTW and it's coated with Teflon."

"Fantastic," I said. "That's the same stuff the vests are made of."

"That's right. An ammunition company figured out if a Teflon vest was strong enough to stop an ordinary bullet, then a Teflon-coated bullet could penetrate one."

"You have to hand it to the person who thought that one up. He must be a genius. Wait a minute. Don't law enforcement officers and public officials wear Teflon vests to protect themselves? Won't they be endangered by the KTW?"

"Of course not. The KTW costs $1.50 a round, and the price is much too high for your run-of-the-mill trigger man. Besides it's only sold by better gun dealers."

"The police can't be too happy about the KTW."

"They aren't, but you can't just stop selling ammunition because it can penetrate soft body armor."

"Why not?"

Colt said angrily, "Because when you start talking about armor-piercing ammunition you're getting yourself into a very complex and subjective area. There is no simple dividing line between bullets that will go through Teflon vests and those that will go through a deer, an antelope or an elk. If you ban something like the KTW you have to also ban other ammunition that is used for hunting and target practice."

"Who would try to ban a bullet that could go through a policeman's vest?" I asked.

"Congressman Mario Biaggi of New York, for one. He has proposed a bill that would ban all soft armor-piercing ammunition."

"What does he hope to gain by that?"

"Who knows? But it's bottled up in committee, and I doubt if the NRA will let it get out. Even the Justice Department thinks it's a lousy bill."

"What's their objection?"

"There are a lot of other kinds of handgun bullets that can go through a Teflon vest, and they feel the Biaggi bill is so broad it would hurt the sale of them as well."

"Maybe instead of worrying about ammunition, Congress should concentrate on developing a safer garment for policemen to wear," I suggested.

"That's the way we feel about it. It's the responsibility of the bulletproof vest people to keep up with the times. The KTW is alive and well and you don't solve the problem by banning it, just because it can splat through Teflon."

"I imagine the handgun control nuts are supporting Biaggi."

"Of course they are. They figure if they can ban bullets that kill policemen, they'll eventually be able to ban all ammunition used in handguns."

"But that would hurt the law-abiding people who use armor-piercing bullets for sport and target shooting."

"That's why we're making such a big issue of it. Let me read you this letter from Wayne Lapierre, the NRA lobbyist, which was sent to all congressmen. 'The most clear and present danger to law enforcement and public officials is not the presence of one type of bullet. Rather it is from the unwarranted and irresponsible publicity surrounding this or other means of defeating soft body armor.'"

"That says it all," I told Colt. "It's the media and not the KTW which is threatening the lives of our policemen. Biaggi would be doing a much better service to the country if he proposed a bill forbidding the press from talking about ammunition that can blast through Teflon. By the way, why would somebody want to buy a KTW bullet in the first place?

"Because," Colt said. "It's there."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 13, the 286th day of 1982. There are 79 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 13, 1775, the Continental Congress ordered the construction of a naval fleet, thereby launching the U.S. Navy.

On this date:

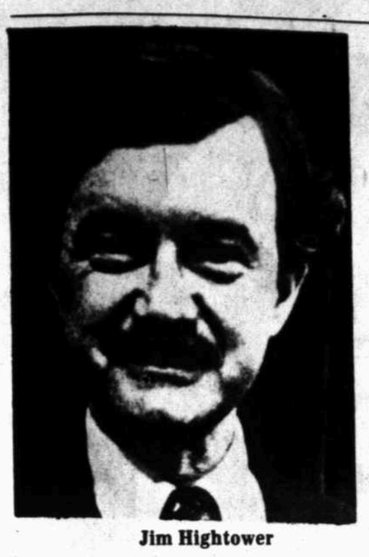

—In 1792, George Washington laid the cornerstone of the executive mansion in Washington, D.C.

—In 1845, Texas ratified the U.S. Constitution.

—In 1943, Italy declared war on Germany, its former Axis partner.

—In 1960, presidential candidates John Kennedy and Richard Nixon appeared in a televised debate.

Ten years ago: Congress completed action on President Richard Nixon's revenue-sharing plan, a new system for providing federal aid to state and local governments.

Barnyard campaign anything but boring

By KATHY BAKER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Republican Fred Thornberry calls his opponent, Jim Hightower, a "charlatan" backed by "liberal agitator groups." Hightower responds that Thornberry is "seriously dumb."

Harsh words in a campaign for agriculture commissioner, by all accounts one of the most boring jobs in the Texas state government.

But the race to determine who gets to calibrate gasoline pumps and inspect sweet potatoes has produced the best campaign rhetoric, faux pas and one-liners of an otherwise routine political season in the Lone Star State.

Democrat Hightower, 39, former editor of the liberal weekly Texas Observer, has emerged as a kind of born-again redneck and standup comic. He says things like, "If you were to lay all the experts end to end, it would be a good thing."

His staff calls him "Whole Hog."

Thornberry, 45, is a Texas A&M alumnus and chicken expert who quotes German philosopher Nietzsche in his campaign press releases. He entered the race after Hightower defeated state Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary on May 1.

Brown was no slouch at making headlines, either.

He once accidentally cut off a finger with a chain saw while building a "Safety on the Farm" exhibition booth. He battled the fire ant with such religious fervor that he stuck his hand in an ant hole so television cameramen could get footage of him being stung.

Just before the primary, Brown stumbled before TV cameras when he referred to renowned educator Booker T. Washington as "that great black nigger."

In the primary campaign, Brown traveled the state charging that Hightower's support came from "socialistic punks up East." But Hightower soundly defeated Brown by promising to save family farms and reduce supermarket prices.

"There's a lot more to being agriculture commissioner than putting a straw in your mouth and humming 'Thank God I'm a Country Boy'," Hightower says. It's a line he used against Brown, and he likes it so much he has revived it for the campaign against Thornberry.

Hightower says he wants to use the job to influence farm legislation in Washington, but Thornberry — as Brown did in the primary — warns that Hightower is a "political opportunist" who is seeking a steppingstone to higher office and who would turn the state agriculture department into "a training ground for political radicals."

Hightower, once an aide to liberal former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas, ran a losing campaign for state railroad commissioner four years ago as a "populist." He has written two books on agricultural policy, "Eat Your Heart Out" and "Hard Tomatoes, Hard Times."

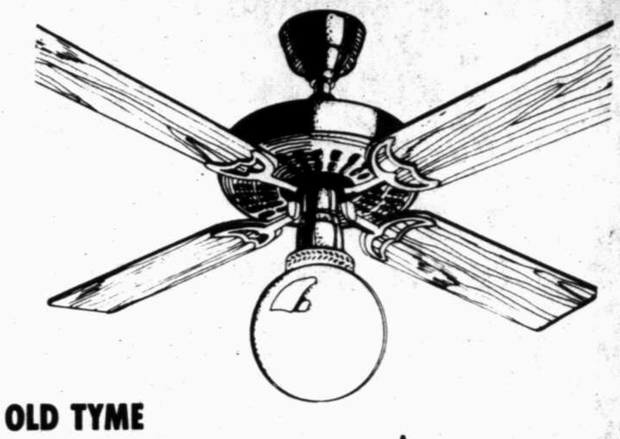

This year, Hightower is believed to be the beneficiary of voter discontent over record farm bankruptcies, idled grain elevators and low farm prices, and is regarded as a shoo-in to succeed Brown.

"It's time to raise less corn and more hell," Hightower says, as he lambastes President Reagan and Republican economics.

"Old Ronnie Reagan is sitting up there eating caviar and sipping Cabernet Sauvignon," he tells farm audiences. "We've had about as much Reaganomics as we can stand. 'Reaga-mortis' is beginning to set in out there in the countryside."

Thornberry accuses Hightower of using false or misleading statistics to exaggerate the plight of farmers and consumers. He is, says the GOP candidate, "a charlatan who uses the populist label to camouflage his strong ties with the AFL-CIO and with liberal agitator groups on both the East and West coasts."

Farmer Cryts acquitted of interference charges

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Wayne Cryts, the farmer who got into trouble when he removed soybeans from a grain elevator that had gone bankrupt, has been acquitted of interfering with a law officer.

A U.S. district court jury deliberated about two hours Tuesday afternoon before returning the verdict.

Cryts has been in and out of the courts in Arkansas over the past year in the complicated bankruptcy case.

The latest charge against him stemmed from an encounter with Deputy U.S. Marshal Chuck Papachio in Gravette on Aug. 14. Cryts was in the northwest Arkansas community to serve as grand marshal of a parade when Papachio tried to seize the van Cryts was driving as partial payment of a bankruptcy court claim.

On June 7, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Charles Baker had ordered Cryts to pay $287,000 to cover losses suffered when Cryts took 33,000 bushels of soybeans from the bankrupt elevator. Baker had ordered the soybeans sold to satisfy the elevator's debtors.

Cryts, of Puxico, Mo., has refused to pay the money, saying the soybeans rightfully belonged to him. He also is appealing the ruling.

The beans were among the tons of grains farmers had stored in 11 Missouri and Arkansas elevators owned by James Brothers Co. of Corning, Ark, which filed for bankruptcy in August 1980.

Another record year expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are headed for another record year for total crop production, including new highs for corn and wheat.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday that the corn harvest will yield more than 8.31 billion bushels this fall, 1.4 percent more than in 1982 and virtually the same as forecast a month ago.

Based on the most recent available figures, only about 7.6 billion bushels of this year's corn crop will be needed for domestic and export use.

With production now estimated at more than 8.31 billion bushels, that means the excess of about 715 million bushels will be added to the already bulging U.S. grain inventory.

The latest report, based on Oct. 1 field surveys also included revised production estimates for a number of other key 1982 crops:

—Soybeans, a record 2.3 billion bushels, up 15 percent from revised 1981 output but down fractionally from the September forecast.

— Cotton, 11.4 million bales, down 27 percent from 1981 but 3 percent more than indicated last month.

—Total wheat, a record 2.81 billion bushels, up 1 percent from last year's high but down fractionally from the September forecast.

—Fall potatoes, 307 million hundredweight, up 4 percent from the fall harvest in 1981. It was the department's first forecast of this fall's potato crop.

The department's Crop Reporting board said that 1982 crop harvests, overall, were rated at a record of 118 percent of the base year 1977, which is used for comparison. That was up one point from the previous high of 117 per cent set in 1981 and matched in the September forecast.

Corn is the largest and most valuable farm crop grown in the United States. As livestock feed, it is an essential element in the production of meat, poultry and milk for Americans.

Moreover, along with wheat, cotton, soybeans and a number of other crop, corn is a top item on the U.S. export list for scores of foreign markets, including Japan, the Soviet Union and European countries.

Grain prices at the farm have been generally depressed since last year's record harvests. Corn, for example, averaged $2.17 per bushel in mid-September, compared to $2.55 a year earlier.

West Texas Premiere for "Waltz Across Texas" set

The Oct. 22 Midland premiere of the movie "Waltz Across Texas" will be shown as a benefit for High Sky Girls Ranch. The full-length movie, shot last year in Midland and Odessa, will be given a West Texas Premiere, Hollywood-style, complete with stars in limos, guests in "tux and boots," and a post-screening breakfast dance at the country club. All proceeds from the West Texas Premier will go to the High Sky Girls Ranch, located between Midland and Odessa. After the premiere, the movie will be open to the public at the Howard Hodge Theatre (Hodge Cinema II) in Midland.

The High Sky Girls Ranch offers a safe environment for young females who, for variety of reasons, are unable to live with their families. The Ranch is completely community-supported.

The money raised by the premiere will go the the building fund at High Sky — it is hoped that the $100 per person premiere will put the building fund over the $1 million mark.

Many of the girls who live at the Ranch will be helping at the premiere and are looking forward to meeting some of the stars who will be coming to Midland for the celebration. Among those attending will be Josh Taylor, who plays Chris Kositcheck in "Days of Our Lives," and Mary Kay Place, who has appeared in "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," "Private Benjamin," and "Modern Problems."

Ticket information is available at the High Sky Girls Ranch, 694-7728. All checks for tickets can be sent to The High Sky Girls Ranch, 902 Harvard, Midland, 79701.

The premiere will begin Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hodge Theatre. The stars will arrive at 7:45 p.m. and the movie will be shown after their arrival. Following the West Texas Premiere of the movie, there will be a reception and dance at Midland Country Club. Pepper Martin and the Fox Band, the band featured in "Waltz Across Texas," will play, and a breakfast buffet will top off the evening.

"Waltz Across Texas" stars Anne Archer, former Midlander Terry Jastrow, and co-stars Mary Kay Place, Josh Taylor, Richard Farnsworth and Noah Berry. Also featured are over 300 Midlanders and Odessans, in such familiar places as The Bar, The Stardust and in front of the Midland Court House. Several area residents even had feature speaking parts.

Papaya ice delicious

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

PAPAYA ICE

3 ripe papayas (each about 1 pound)
¾ cup sugar
1-3rd cup orange juice
¼ cup lemon juice
Garnish: peeled slice kiwifruit (if desired)

Halve papayas lengthwise; remove seeds, peel; cut in fairly large pieces. Puree a batch at a time in a food processor, electric blender or food mill — there should be 3 cups. Stir in sugar, orange juice and lemon juice until sugar dissolves. Turn into a 9 by 9 by 1¾-inch pan. Freeze until firm but not hard — about 2 hours. Process briefly in appropriate amounts in a food processor just until smooth; or spoon into a bowl and with an electric beater beat just until smooth. Turn into a shallow freezer container, cover tightly and freeze. At serving time, let stand at room temperature to soften slightly. Scoop into individual serving dishes. Add the garnish, if used. Serve at once. Makes about 1 quart.

Fiends are featured in this year's Halloween greetings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Ghosts, gnomes and witches had better beware — their happy haunting grounds will be invaded by vampires and werewolves this Halloween, warns an expert on ghoulish greetings.

Thanks to television shows and movies like "Love at First Bite," "An American Werewolf in London," and many new Dracula films, the 1982 Halloween cards mirror the country's hang-up on horror, says Hallmark's John Dinardo.

"Halloween is mostly for kids, and what they like best are monster cards accompanied by even more monstrous puns," he says. "Young people these days are irreverent about just about everything and they see the funny side rather than much horror in what they consider imaginary menaces."

Hence, Dracula is a very big on cards this year, reports Dinardo, citing as an example one displaying a tearful Dracula in front of his moonlit castle weeping: "Without you on Halloween" .... and inside, "everyone tastes the same!"

Typical of other modern-day messages is a card asking "What would you get if you crossed a washing machine with a Halloween monster?" The answer: "A wash 'n werewolf!"

Serve cobbler for dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

BLUEBERRY COBBLER

At this time of year, dry-pack frozen blueberries are great in this dessert.

½ cup (¼-pound stick) plus 2 tablespoons butter
1 cup plus 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons (about) water
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
4 cups dry-pack frozen blueberries, rinsed

In a medium bowl, with a pastry blender, cut ½ cup butter into 1 cup flour until butter is the size of small peas. Sprinkle with 1 tablespoon of the water at a time, mixing with a fork, until the pastry can be pressed into a ball. Cover and chill for at least 30 minutes. Stir together sugar, 2 tablespoons flour and cinnamon; add blueberries and mix well. Turn into a 1½-quart (10 by 6 by 1¾-inches) baking dish. Dot with 2 tablespoons butter. On a pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out pastry to an 11- by 8-inch rectangle. Place over blueberry mixture; press against sides to seal; cut six 1-inch vents in center. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until golden brown — about 30 minutes. Serve hot or warm. Good topped with vanilla ice cream. Makes 6 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Hungry band members expensive

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I hired a six-piece band for our daughter's wedding reception. Naturally we expected to offer refreshments to the band, but we didn't plan on feeding their wives, girlfriends and teen-aged children. (I counted 15 extra!)

We had an expensive catered affair for which we were charged by the head. When we saw all these extra people heading for the buffet table, we asked them to please leave as we had ordered only enough food and liquor for the invited guests. One of the band members got upset and left!

A spokesman for the band informed me later that the musicians always take their wives, girlfriends and kids along, and we should have ordered extra refreshments for them! Was he kidding? Or is an apology in order on our part? — TORQUED IN TORONTO

DEAR TORQUED: According to a spokesperson for Musicians Union Local 47 in Los Angeles, unless the contract specified that their families should be fed as part of the agreement, the band members had no right to bring their wives, girlfriends and children. In fact, the host and hostess were under no obligation to feed the band members unless it was agreed in the contract.

DEAR ABBY: I've been dating a very attractive fellow for a couple of months, but something is wrong. I feel a certain "distance" between us. When we kiss, nothing happens. (For HIM.) He seems to be going through the motions, but he doesn't react like he's feeling anything.

I have a genuine interest in him, but this lack of reaction on his part bothers me. When I asked him about it, he said he was getting over a broken heart and couldn't really get "close" now.

OK, I accepted that and didn't get my hopes up. But I have another theory. I think he is a "closet gay" who is trying to go straight but is having difficulty. I don't want to date him anymore but don't know how to break it off without lying to him.

Should I tell him about my suspicions and give him a chance to tell me the truth? Of course, I could be wrong, but I strongly suspect I'm right. — JANE (NOT MY REAL NAME)

DEAR JANE: If you don't want to see him anymore, tell him so, but don't tell him of your "theory." To suggest that he is gay — even if you are correct — would be presumptuous and prying.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know where to turn. My daughter just turned 11, and she tells the most outlandish lies for no reason at all. She told her teacher at school that I hit her on the head with a lead pipe, which is absolutely untrue! (I don't even have a lead pipe!) She tells the neighbors that she is hungry because there is never enough food in the house. Not true! There is always plenty of food here, and she eats well. These are only a few of the lies this child has told that I have heard about. Lord only knows what other lies she's told!

Please tell me what to do. Punishing her doesn't seem to help. She is not a stupid child, and she knows wrong from right. — END OF MY ROPE

DEAR END: Your child's lying is a bid for attention. It could also be symptomatic of a deeper emotional problem. She needs to see a specialist who counsels children. If there is such counseling at her school, please take advantage of it. If not, talk to your pediatrician. The child needs help.

DEAR ABBY: Should the mother of an illegitimate child send out birth announcements? I am the great-grandfather. Sign this ... CURIOUS OKIE

DEAR CURIOUS: She should if she's proud to make the announcement. And by the way, there are no "illegitimate children," only "illegitimate parents."

(What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

AT WIT'S END

Are research rats for real?

By ERMA BOMBECK

Americans don't make a move anymore without checking first with research rats.

If coffee makes those little suckers jittery, we stop drinking it.

If they feel better when they jog, we start to run.

If loud noises make them sterile, we turn our radios down.

I find myself reading every scrap of research I can on them. After all, with their affinity for paralleling human biology, they are shaping my entire life.

The other day, I read how a drug used in the treatment of high blood pressure was injected into a rat who was "severely depressed" and lo and behold, his stress disappeared.

I must have reread that article three times before I realized what was bothering me. Then it hit. How in the world can you tell when a rat is depressed?

Does he schlepp around the cage all day in his bathrobe, watching television and refusing to shave? Does he let the kids run over his tail with their bicycles and never suggest they play outside? Do you tell him he's going to have steamed broccoli with boiled onions for dinner and he says, "I'm not hungry"? (People who don't eat have to be severely depressed.)

Maybe it's because I'm a non-medical person, but I honestly can't tell when animals are happy or sad. I knew our dog and our kids were happy when their noses were wet and cold, but beyond that I couldn't venture a guess.

It got me to thinking. You don't suppose all this rat research has been a hoax, do you? Is it possible there never was a rat who wore lipstick and licked his lips and red dye No. 2 was responsible for making him sick? Is there a possibility a teenage rat never went to all those rock concerts and went deaf? What if a rat didn't make a decision to drink soda with saccharine and die thin?

My husband came by as I put the article down. "Do you think research rats could get depressed?" I asked.

"Sure," he said. "It happens all the time."

I was still suspicious. "What would they have to get depressed about?"

"How would you like to be transferred from the Alcohol and Sex Research division to the top ten disease unit?"

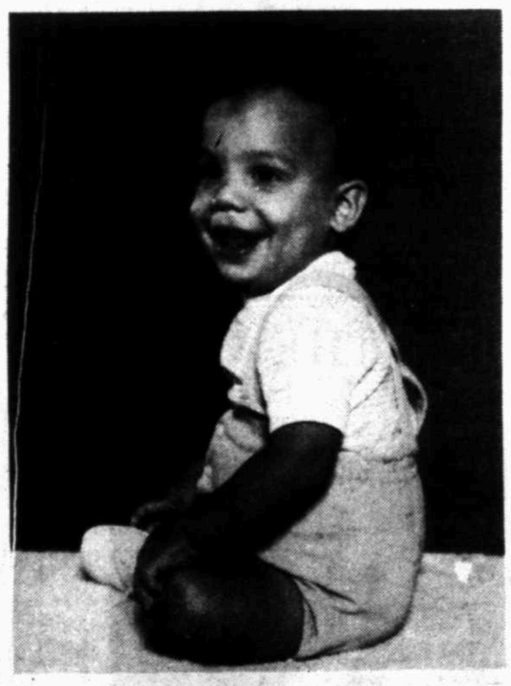

I'm a believer again.

1½ cups water
¼ cup canned cream of coconut, at room temperature and stirred before measuring ½ cup 80-proof white rum, chilled
1 cup unsweetened pineapple juice, chilled

Fill an ice-cube tray (with dividers) with the water, freeze to make ice cubes. In an electric blender whirl together ice cubes, cream of coconut, rum and pineapple juice until ice has melted and mixture is very frothy. Pour into large wine glasses and serve at once. Makes 3 cups — 4 servings.

THE BUTCHER

Enjoy sausage, Old World style

By MERLE ELLIS

We North Americans have been living in the dark ages as far as sausage is concerned. In every marketplace in Europe there are dozens — if not hundreds — of different varieties of sausage to choose from. We are not so blessed.

With a few notable exceptions, such as the justly famous and century-old Usinger, Inc., of Milwaukee and the equally good, but half-as-old Saag's of the San Francisco Bay Area, most of the sausage that has been widely available here has been of the hot dog and bologna variety. Don't get me wrong. There is absolutely nothing wrong with a good hot dog — I love 'em — but there is so much more to sausage. We are just beginning to appreciate that fact.

A recent issue of Meat Industry magazine — a trade journal for the meat industry — contained an article on "the gourmet sausage boom." Several small sausage processors around the country were profiled in it. One of these was Sonoma Sausage Co. in Sonoma, California — only a beautiful 40-minute drive from our home.

We drove up one Saturday to visit Herb Hoeser Jr., who started the company only two years age. "I didn't realize it when I opened," Herb said, "but I think this country is finally coming to the place where Europe has been for centuries. Sausage is the mainstay. Europeans have very little fresh meat. They make the highest quality sausage they can and the variety is tremendous. That is what I'm aiming for — quality and variety."

There was plenty of both in the little shop on the square in Sonoma the day I was there. Herb makes 78 Old World-style sausage products. The variety is almost overwhelming.

We sampled only a few: English bangers, hot Hawaiian Portugese sausages, Weisswurst (a fresh veal sausage poached and flavored with fresh leeks, parsley and onions) and hot beer sausage, which is a hearty sausage made of beef and pork and flavored with a perfect balance of cayenne pepper and paprika to produce a soft subtle afterflow of heat that does, indeed, go well with beer.

Everything is made by hand in small controlled batches by a sausage maker who knows by the "feel" when the emulsion is just right and ready to be hand-stuffed into natural casings, then hand-linked and hand-tied. The whole process is done with great care. That's nice to see in a world where more and more of our food is churned out by huge machines and "watched over" by computers.

Sausage may be the meat of the future in this country.

It offers good value for your money (there is absolutely no waste) and an almost endless variety of good eating to anyone who is willing to explore the world beyond bologna.

Search out the small independent sausage companies in your area, there probably are several. Here are a few to be on the lookout for; I haven't tried them all, but they come highly recommended. If they are half as good as Sonoma Sausage Co., they are well worth the search.

Winchester Packing Co., Hutchinson, Kan.; Ted Jaeggis Continental Sausage Inc., Denver, Colo.; Lodi Locker, Lodi, Wis.(specializes in summer sausages); Stoppenbach Inc., Jefferson, Wis.; Essen Packing Co., Lawrence, Md.; Kowalski Sausage Co., Hamtramch, Mich.

The fall flavors of pumpkin and spice get a tasty nutrition boost from nutty good almonds.

Celebrate pumpkin season with Autumn Almond Muffins

Pumpkin and spice are a popular duo in traditional pumpkin pie, but you don't have to wait for dessert to enjoy the flavorful combination. Here the fall flavors of pumpkin and spice are paired with crunchy toasted almonds and cream cheese for a quick-to-prepare nutritious muffin that's a perfect after school or any time snack.

Totable, healthy snack foods are hard to come by, but this go-anywhere muffin is deliciously different. It's loaded with the flavor of good tasting almonds and pumpkin, as well as valuable nutrition. Versatile almonds contain a storehouse of nutrients, such as protein, riboflavin and Vitamin E. A one-ounce serving has only 170 calories, but provides at least 15 percent of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowace (RDA) for the important trace minerals phosphorus, magnesium and copper. Better yet, almonds have no cholesterol and are naturally low in sodium. So you can rely on the almond to improve a standard muffin batter with both intriguing texture and high nutrient value.

And the almond's many convenient forms make them easy to add to any meal for a good tasting nutrition bonus. For instance, wake up to the nutty flavor of sliced almonds sprinkled over cereal. Or add toasted, chopped almonds to chicken salad for a crunchy lunchtime treat. To dress up dinners, add a sprinkling of toasted slivered almonds to vegetable dishes. Any way you serve them, almonds can transform simple fare into appetizing, nutritious meals.

Celebrate the brisk days of pumpkin season with a fragrant batch of Autumn Almond Muffins. Whether you team them with soup for lunch, milk for a snack or a casserole at dinner, watch your family reach for these taste-tempting, wholesome treats and smile.

Delicious ducks make dining delight

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Winging their way overhead or milling about the pond, ducks are delightful birds with one big drawback so far as they are concerned — they are delicious.

This savory setback saw the last Labrador duck blasted from existence in 1875. Today wild ring-necked ducks are beginning to make a comeback after over-zealous hunters nearly eliminated them.

Fall heralds duck hunting season and many an eager nimrod will be out wading through the wilderness in an attempt to bag an innocent, unsuspecting mallard or brightly plumed wood duck. Once these fowl are gunned down, there are a number of ways to prepare them a la microwave. The flavor of these most taste-tempting ducky dishes could be almost enough to erase the guilt of shooting a wild and free spirit out of the sky.

If you can't bring yourself to hunt wild duck, you may want to turn to Long Island for the bird. Long Island, N.Y., supplies more than half of the marketable quackers to the country; they're not ones to fowl around.

DUCKS SOMETIMES MAKE an appearance in the supermarket, hanging around with chickens and other poultry, but if they are unavailable there and you can't bear the thought of another day without a melting morsel of duck meat caressing your palate, try hitting up a friendly farmer or even a local butcher and/or meat processor.

All domestic ducks, with the exception of the Brazilian Muscovy, the female of which is quackless, are descended from the wild mallard. The most prominent meat duck raised in the United States, ask any Long Islander, is the Pekin, a large white breed that originated in China. These unfortunates can often be seen plucked and dried and hung by the beak in many a Chinese meat market.

Duck eggs serve little purpose on the American market and are rarely found on the supermarket shelf, but if you possess some backyard quackers who keep you well stocked whether you like it or not, take heart. Duck eggs are great to bake with. They render a richer cake than chicken eggs and are good in breads and cookies as well.

A microwave and a duck go wave in wing, as the meat cooks quickly, retaining its juices and flavor. Since browning does not occur in the cooking process, the various glazes and gravies to accompany are perfect to color the bird or utilize a browning skillet.

WHEN ROASTING A DUCK, a general rule holds that a 4- to 6-pound duck takes six to seven minutes per pound. If it is stuffed allow six minutes per pound extra. Tie down the legs and wings, close to the body, and place the bird breast down in a shallow glass baking dish.

Cover the protruding parts and cook, covered, for half of the cooking time. Remove shielding, place breast side up, turn the dish one-quarter turn around, cut string binding wings and legs and baste the bird with its pan drippings, while removing the excess juices. Cook uncovered for the rest of the prescribed cooking time, or until a meat thermometer placed in the breast of the bird registers 180 degrees. Let rest for 15 mintutes or until the thermometer reads 195 degrees.

Mix marmalade with soy sauce. Reserve ¼ cup mixture. Use remainder to baste duckling. Arrange all duckling quarters in browning skillet and cook 20 minutes, turning dish every five minutes. Cover and let stand while preparing sauce.

Melt butter. Stir in flour and then remaining ingredients. Cook one minute. Add remaining marmalade. Cook an additional 1½ minutes until smooth. Spoon over duckling. Serves 4.

Place duckling pieces on paper towels. Return 3 tablespoons reserved fat to skillet. Cook 45 seconds. Blend in flour and paprika. Stir until smooth. Gradually stir in sherry. Blend in chicken bouillon. Mix well with wire whip. Cook sauce three minutes. Stir after two minutes.

Japanese prime minister announces his retirement

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's ruling conservatives began jockeying today for what could be a bitter struggle to decide a successor to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, who shocked the nation by announcing he will retire next month.

In a nationally televised news conference today, the 71-year-old prime minister explained his Tuesday decision not to seek the presidency of his ruling Liberal Democratic Party in November, saying he wanted to to restore unity among its divided members. In Japan, the president of the majority party is assured of being elected prime minister by Parliament.

"The domestic and foreign affairs issues surrounding the country require a strong, fresh and united party," Suzuki said.

Suzuki had been assured of re-election at the November party caucus. But his public standing dropped to a favorable rating of only 16 percent in one recent opinion poll because of his government's failure to lift the economy out of a recession.

The leadership change next month is not expected to significantly alter Japan's long-standing Western alliance or its commitment to free trade.

Suzuki told reporters he was not backing any one candidate, although news reports have speculated he would support Yasuhiro Nakasone, 64, director of the Administrative Management Agency.

Nakasone is said to be the favorite to become Japan's 16th postwar prime minister. He is known for hawkish views on defense and his tenacious political ambitions.

But Nakasone faces strong opposition from LDP forces that helped bring about Suzuki's downfall, including Economic Planning Agency chief Toshio Komoto, International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe and Science and Technology Agency chief Ichiro Nakagawa.

LDP executive officers planned to meet Thursday to discuss selecting a new leader. Suzuki is said to favor letting party leaders decide on a suitable choice, while Komoto and Abe are pushing for a preliminary election among the party's 1.5 million members.

For an open primary to occur, four candidates would have to declare by Saturday. Balloting by mail would be completed Nov. 24 and the top three vote-getters would face a run-off election by the party's parliamentarians the following day.

There also could be a vote by party parliamentarians on Nov. 25, without a primary, if there are fewer than four candidates.

Nakasone, who pledged his faction's support to Suzuki's re-election several days before Suzuki bowed out, has held top government posts for the past 15 years. As Defense Agency chief in 1968-70, he took the controversial position that Japan should significantly increase its small military force, a stand officials said was "unchanged today."

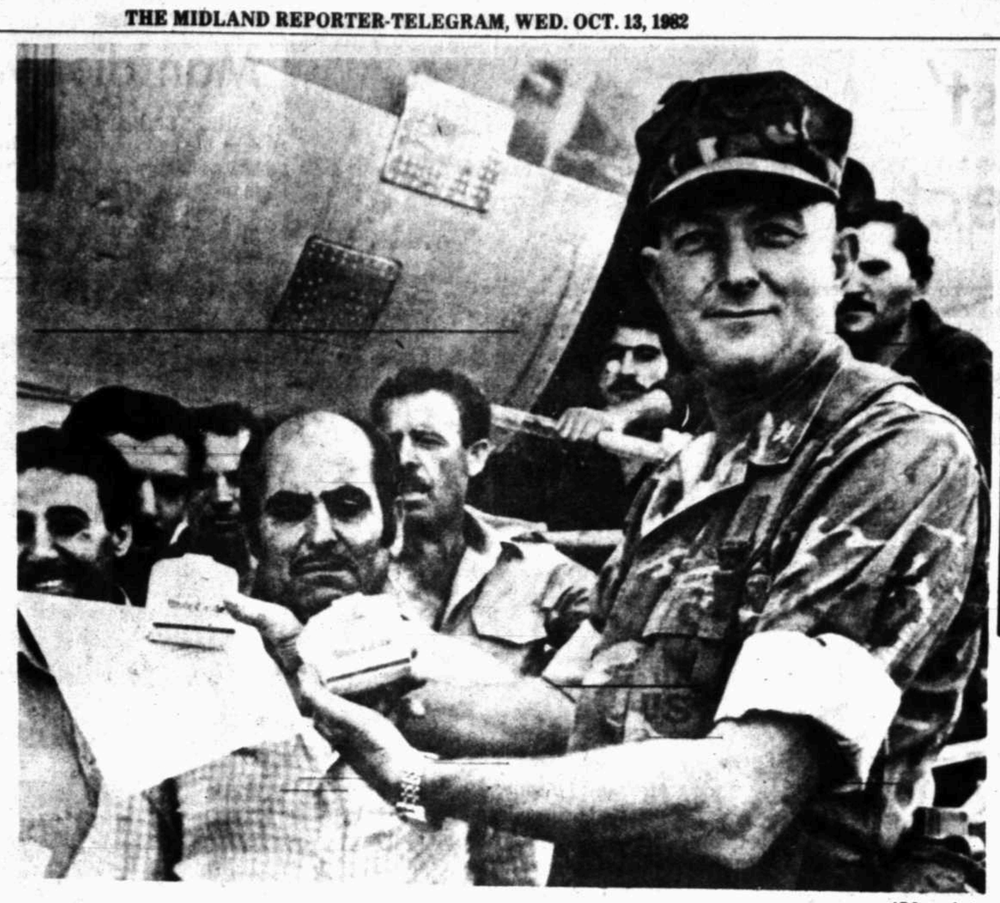

He has been a central figure in Suzuki's drive for administrative reform and is reportedly one of the most influential members of the Suzuki Cabinet. He declined comment on his chances to succeed Suzuki, telling reporters today he will watch developments "calmly and with humility."

Suzuki's downfall was viewed largely as the result of a power struggle between rival LDP factions, notably those headed by Kakuei Tanka and Takeo Fukuda, both former prime ministers.

Fukada and former Prime Minister Takeo Miki had criticized Suzuki's economic policies and his reliance on backing by Tanaka, implicated in financial scandals before and after leaving power in 1974. Tanaka is still an influential political boss, heading the LDP's largest faction in Parliament.

Suzuki rose from political obscurity to become the LDP's compromise choice for prime minister in July 1980 following the death of his predecessor Masayoshi Ohira.

He took office by promising to reducing bureaucracy and eliminate deficit spending by fiscal year 1984. But in fiscal 1982 deficit bonds are still needed to cover 20 percent of Japan's almost $192 billion budget, and an economic slowdown has created a revenue shortfall expected to hit $23 million.

Israeli minister to meet with Shultz

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir is coming to the United States armed with Israel's proposals for a withdrawal of Israeli and other foreign forces from Lebanon.

"He will be carrying Israel's ideas on how to settle the whole situation in Lebanon," an Israeli diplomatic source said Tuesday.

Shamir, who is scheduled to arrive tonight, will meet with Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Thursday and with Vice President George Bush and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on Friday.

On Tuesday of next week, Lebanon's new president Amin Gemayel, will meet with President Reagan and Shultz to discuss the outlook for peace in Lebanon. Gemayel also will address the United Nation's general assembly in New York.

Morris Draper, Reagan's special Mideast envoy, is returning to Washington to report on progress of his mission aimed at obtaining a withdrawal of all foreign troops from Lebanon. He also will help prepare for the meetings with Shamir and Gemayel.

However, a senior State Department official cautioned against expecting a major breakthrough toward resolving the Lebanon crisis. The talks with Shamir and Gemayel are part of "an ongoing, piece by piece, diplomatic exchange," he said.

He said Draper may return to the Mideast after the Shamir visit to discuss the outcome of the Israeli foreign minister's trip with Gemayel before the Lebanese president comes to the United States.

The Israeli diplomatic source said Shamir's proposals for Lebanon include a security agreement between Israel and Lebanon that Israel says it must have before it will withdraw its troops. The Israeli plan also provides for a phased withdrawal of Isralei, Syrian and Palestinian trops.

The diplomatic source, who did not want to be identified, said Israel would withdraw in a first stage to within 45 to 50 kilometers north of the Israeli-Lebanese border, at which time Syrian and Palestinian troops would have to leave the country.

The source said Israel wants the Lebanese army to guarantee security along Lebanon's southern border and that this might require Israeli training for the Lebanese troops. He said Israel opposes an expanded U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon, which the Reagan administration favors.

The independent Israeli-supported forces of Major Saad Haddad, head of a Christian militia in southern Lebanon, would be left intact under the Israeli plan. Haddad's troops would provide an additional element of protection for Israel, the official said.

Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman, declined to comment on Israel's demand for a security agreement with Lebanon before it withdraws its troops. Israel says the agreement is necessary to protect its borders.

But Romberg said insuring Israel that it would be safe from border attacks "has been fundamental to our position for a long time."

He said that while there is "no 'made in America' plan" for obtaining a withdrawal of Israeli and other foreign troops from Lebanon, Washington has some ideas.

Meanwhile, a delegation from the Arab League, headed by King Hassan II of Morocco, is scheduled to meet with Reagan on Oct. 22 to discuss both Reagan's and Arab peace plans for the Middle East.

Swedish Navy suspects Soviet submarine crippled by mine

BERGA NAVAL BASE, Sweden (AP) — Navy patrollers found an SOS buoy and yellow distress dye floating in Mysingen Bay, raising fears that a suspected Soviet submarine lay crippled on the seabed after tripping a mine, Sweden's national newspaper said today.

Patrol boats prowling since Oct. 1 for the submerged sub spotted the distress signals Tuesday in the southern part of the frigid bay, rocked by an explosion the day before in a minefield guarding one of the approaches to the top-secret Musko Naval Base, the Dagens Nyheter daily said.

It said the distress signals in the area 35 miles south of Stockholm were the most solid evidence of a lurking sub in the 13-day-old hunt, and probably meant the vessel was badly damaged and unable to surface.

The commmander in chief of the armed forces, Gen. Lennart Ljung, later said in a radio interview he had received "no information" about the distress markers reported by Dagens Nyheter, but that he could not deny the report.

Earlier, navy spokesman Lt. Col. Ewert Dahlen said new evidence emerged late Tuesday that established "a possible foreign submarine" in Mysingen Bay. He refused to elaborate.

It is generally believed the vessel is a Soviet-bloc sub, although the navy has refused to publicly confirm that speculation. The Kremlin has suggested there is no sub, and that Sweden concocted the hunt to stir up anti-Soviet hysteria.

Neutral Sweden has become increasingly sensitive to alien subs prowling its coast. Ten foreign subs have been spotted off Swedish shores since last October, when a Soviet sub believed armed with nuclear torpedoes beached near the Karskrona Naval Base 240 miles southwest of Stockholm. The Swedes dislodged the sub after nine days and sharply protested to the Kremlin.

Navy officials said they were analyzing oil slicks and other information gathered by frogmen, sub salvage ships, helicopters, sonar equipment and magnetic devices after the Monday explosion.

'Closet chemist' possible suspect

CHICAGO (AP) — Police questioned a "closet chemist" who says he worked for a grocery chain linked to four of the seven Extra-Strength Tylenol cyanide deaths, but authorities said he wasn't a strong suspect in the case.

Roger Arnold, 48, was arrested late Monday night after police received a tip that Arnold was "known to have cyanide in his house," said Police Detective James C. Gildea.

Arnold, who is charged with five counts of failure to register guns and one count of aggravated assault and being held in lieu of $1,000 bond, is not a "strong Tylenol suspect," Gildea said.

The assault charge stemmed from "a completely separate incident," he said.

A search of Arnold's South Side apartment turned up five unregistered guns, ammunition, a plastic bag containing an unidentified white powder and literature on poisons and explosives, police said Tuesday.

"He is one of a myriad of leads we had to check out concerning the Tylenol case, and when we searched his apartment, the guns and other substances came to light," said Gildea.

A task force of more than 100 local, state and federal investigators has been working to crack the mystery of who placed deadly cyanide in capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol, killing seven people in the Chicago area between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1, officials said.

Contacted at home late Tuesday night, Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, the head of the task force, refused to comment on Arnold's arrest.

"It's another one of those things that is best handled at a briefing," Fahner said, adding he would say more today.

Sgt. Monroe J. Vollick, a member of the task force, said he considered Arnold "...one of those macho types who is into guns and making poisons, but not into the Tylenol murder."

Arnold is "another lead that's being handled routinely" by Chicago police, said FBI spokesman Thomas Tresslar, who said the agency had no immediate plans to question Arnold.

Arnold "may be remotely connected to the case but there is nothing firm," Tresslar said.

The powder found in Arnold's apartment was turned over to the Chicago Health Department laboratory Tuesday and test results were expected sometime today, Gildea said.

Police were trying to determine whether Arnold, who told authorities he was a loading dock worker at a Jewel Food Stores warehouse, was in fact employed by Jewel, police said. Four of the seven people who died after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules packed with cyanide bought the pain reliever at Jewel Food Stores.

Arnold admitted that "some months ago" he had cyanide for unspecified "projects," but he said he had since discarded it, police said.

"He was originally being sought in connection with the Tylenol case," Gildea said. "We wanted to speak to him because we were told that he, at one time, possessed cyanide."

Gildea said that among the books found in Arnold's apartment was one that explained how to put poison into a capsule and that Arnold "said he was a closet chemist." Arnold had "a knowledge" of chemicals and compounds, he said.

Strychnine capsule 'victim' submits to lie detector test

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — The man who reported becoming ill after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules laced with strychnine has taken a lie detector test and officials are examining the results.

Gregory Blagg, 27, voluntarily took the test at police headquarters Tuesday, answering questions put to him by an FBI employee, Blagg's lawyer said.

Attorney Joseph VanDervoort did not attend the session. But he said the questions included, "Did you tamper with the capsules?" "Do you know who did it?" and "Are you covering up for someone?"

VanDervoort said if he wasn't satisfied with the conclusions reached by federal officials, he would conduct his own polygraph test.

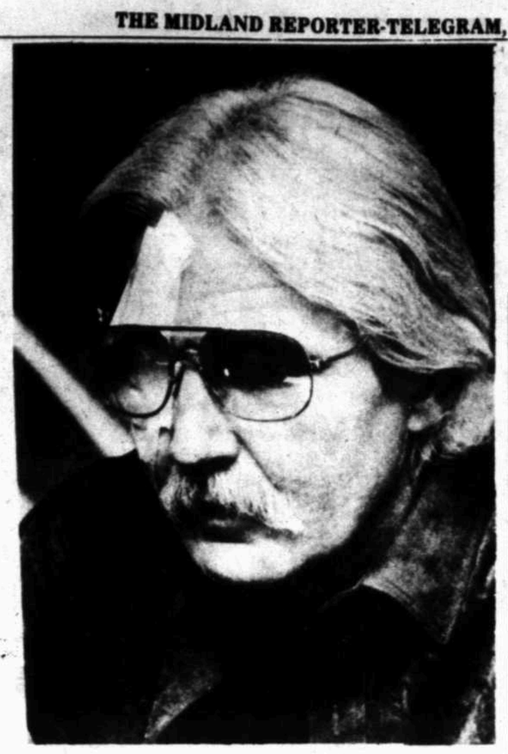

"My client is fed up with all the implications and innuendos which have been circulated and wants to clear himself. I expect the test to clear him of any suspicion," the lawyer said.

Police detectives would not say whether they consider Blagg a suspect in the tampering. They have said they believe the poisoner is someone local.

Blagg reported becoming ill after taking Tylenol on Sept. 30, the same day that deaths from cyanide-packed Extra-Strength Tylenol were reported in the Chicago area.

Tests showed strychnine in Tylenol capsules from three bottles in Oroville.

Blagg and his wife said they bought two of the bottles over a two-week period. The third bottle was found by investigators at the same Longs Drug Store in Oroville where the Blaggs reported buying their bottle.

Larry Michael Tingley, 39, said he felt fine Tuesday after his discharge from the Veterans Administration Hospital in Grand Junction, Colo. Tingley's corneas were burned Monday when he used some Visine A.C. eye drops containing hydrochloric acid. Visine manufacturer Pfizer, Inc. says the incident is a local one.

Officials say acid-laced drops local incident

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — The acid contamination of Visine A.C. eye drops that injured a hospital patient here was "purely local" and there is no need for a wider recall of the product, says the manufacturer, Pfizer Inc.

Officials inspected thousands of bottles of Visine pulled from store shelves Tuesday and searched for a "copycat" culprit who may have been imitating whoever tampered with Extra-Strength Tylenol in the Chicago area, causing seven cyanide poisoning deaths.

"With any terrorist activity like this, we always see people imitating," said Dr. Barry Rumack, director of the Rocky Mountain Poison Control Center. "People need to be very, very careful."

Police Chief Gary Leonard conceded he had no leads and no suspects in the case. A Veterans Hospital patient Monday suffered burns to his eyes after using Visine contaminated with hydrochloric acid, and a second acid-laced bottle was found later at the same store where the patient had purchased his bottle Saturday.

Pfizer called the incident a "clear-cut case of tampering with the product after it reached the retail shelves."

"The bottles were crudely tampered with. This strongly suggests that the Colorado incident was the work of a sick person," said a statement issued in New York by Pfizer.

"Even a superficial inspection should have revealed to any buyer that the bottles had been tampered with."

Authorities said they hesitated Monday on whether to tell the public about the acid-laced Visine bottles found in the city.

"We're in a Catch-22 situation here," Leonard said.

Man dies when bullet severs dialysis tube

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A man with kidney disease bled to death when his gun accidentally discharged and the bullet severed a dialysis tube inserted in his leg, police said.

Clinton Williams, 65, got the .32-caliber pistol from his room in an attempt to stop the latest in a series of arguments between his wife and stepson on Tuesday night, said Detective Cpl. D.E. Stevens.

The bullet grazed Williams' right leg and severed a tube known as a gortex graft.

One end of the tube is connected to the circulatory system; the other is connected to a dialysis machine, which purges the blood of impurities.

California pathway toward federal aid cleared by plans

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency has approved California's air pollution control plans, a decision which frees hundreds of millions of dollars in federal aid that was denied the state because of clean air violations, sources said Monday.

The state became ineligible for as much as $850 million in federal aid when the previous administration ruled that California violated clean air laws by not having an inspection program to ensure that cars and trucks met pollution control standards.

Under the ban, imposed two years ago, California has been the only state blocked from receiving federal grants for highway and sewer construction because of failure to comply with air quality rules.

Two months ago, the California Legislature enacted a law requiring cars and trucks in the state to undergo pollution-control inspections every two years. It goes into effect in January 1984.

The EPA, led by the persistent efforts of its leader, Anne Gorsuch, approved the plan, even though some agency officials and environmental groups objected that the law was too lax.

Retiring Japanese find few saving graces

TOKYO (AP) — As the Japanese worker approaches retirement, his thoughts rarely turn to leisure. Instead, he starts reading the want ads in hopes of finding another job.

The average Japanese "sarariiman," or salaried worker, retires between the ages of 55 and 60. The government has been trying to persuade companies to raise compulsory retirement ages, which were established when lifespans were much shorter. But most employers have resisted change because seniority-based wage and promotion scales make older workers more expensive.

In the past, a retiree could expect to live on his pension and savings for his remaining years. But a longer life expectancy — 73.8 years for males and 79.13 for females — has forced many Japanese retirees to turn to re-employment in order to stretch resources over several decades.

A Ministry of Labor survey in 1979 showed that 77.4 percent of retirees took up new forms of employment, mainly for financial reasons. In addition to money, a deeply ingrained work ethic and fear of boredom led many to continue working.

"Few of the people approaching retirement age are ready to quit working and take it easy. Everybody still has the desire to work," said Takeji Takamura, a 65-year-old engineer who retired from Nippon Telegraph and Telephone six years ago.

Takamura, who spent 39 years with the public corporation, found work as a guard at a public library near his home in southern Tokyo.

"Because of the lifetime employment system, the company is the center of the worker's life. Employees don't think of anything outside the company. They get into the habit of putting aside hobbies, travel or golf. Then when they are retired, they don't know what to do without the company," he said.

Most high school and college graduates seek employment with the intention of working for a single company until retirement. If it is a large company, the employee may be able to serve as a consultant or executive with a subsidiary after retirement, a practice called "amakudari," or descent from heaven.

Most retirees, however, must look for lower-paying jobs with smaller companies that are shunned by young people seeking places in prestigious banks, insurance companies and trading houses.

Anxiety about post-retirement life has given the Japanese one of the world's highest savings rates — about 19.4 percent compared with 5.6 percent in the United States and 12.4 percent in Britain. Once the Japanese worker retires, however, he is reluctant to spend his nest egg.

"People save because they are worried they might get sick in the future or their children might need help financially. Without money in the bank they feel insecure. They don't want to spend their savings unless they have to," Takamura said.

Government pensions vary but statistics from the prime minister's office show they average 40 percent of monthly salary at the time of retirement. The retired couple gets by on about $7,692 a year, around half the national average.

Almost half of that comes from saved income.

Although some private companies have their own pension plans, most cut ties with workers with a lump sum payoff — in the range of $38,460.

The situation is similar in all levels of employment. Blue-collar workers, like their office counterparts, depend on retirement payments and the government-operated pension plan. The self-employed, including farmers and fishermen, have their own government pension programs, differing mainly in that full benefits cannot be received until age 65, compared with 60 for company-employed men.

"Those who must rely only on their pensions are just barely making it," Takamura said.

Mariko Sugahara Bando, a deputy councilor in the Prime Minister's Policy Office for the Aged, said "people are worried about their old age. They cannot be sure that their children will take care of them." About two-thirds of Japan's elderly live with their children, but crowded urban conditions make the extended family system increasingly hard to maintain.

The high percentage of job-hunting retirees will also go up with the rapid "graying" of Japan's work force. Almost one-fourth of the nation will be 65 or older in 2025, more than double the present 9 percent.

But as the number of young workers shrinks because of a declining birth rate, older workers could fill the gap in the work force, economists say. In order to reduce the strain on company resources, however, pay and promotion policies would have to be modified to stress ability over seniority.

Some companies, feeling the pinch from the worldwide recession, reportedly are giving less-competent employees the "tap on the shoulder" earlier than the usual retirement age, letting them know that raises and promotions will not be forthcoming and that perhaps the worker would like to take an "early retirement" to look for a job elsewhere.

Broadcaster honored

Safir is vice president and general manager of KCOR and KQXT, two Spanish-language radio stations.

The award is presented annually to a Texas broadcaster who has been in the industry for at least 25 years and "who has added stature to the profession through his work in the industry and community."

Safir is president-elect of the Spanish Radio Broadcasters of America. He took his first radio job in 1937.

Greater arms outlays make world increase world danger, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — By spending vast amounts of money on arms, countries are making the world a more dangerous place to live while fueling global economic problems, says a study sponsored by several arms control organizations.

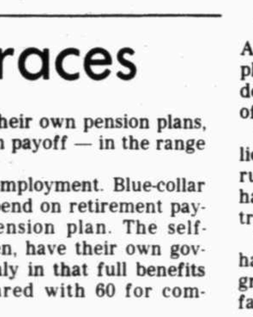

"Far from making the world a safer place, the race to arm for 'defense' has undermined security. A nuclear Frankenstein is the most terrifying of its creations," said the report, entitled World Military and Social Expenditures.

In addition, the report said, "The military burden undermines the growth that is essential to sustain an increasing population. It slows civilian investment and productivity, stimulates inflation and widens the gap between rich and poor."

The report was sponsored by nine organizations, including the Rockefeller Foundation, Arms Control Association, Institute for World Order and British Council of Churches.

Winds of economic change appear to be light, variable

By The Associated Press

Interest rates have fallen to their lowest level since September 1980 with some bankers saying they'll go still lower, but a presidential adviser cautioned there are no signs the economy will improve immediately.

President Reagan, meantime, scheduled a "non-partisan" speech on the economy tonight at 7:30 EDT, to be broadcast by two television networks. Democrats charged the networks were giving Reagan free time for a political speech only two weeks before the November elections.

Four major banks cut their prime lending rate to 12 percent on Tuesday, and the government said it was lowering the interest-rate ceiling on certain federally-backed home loans to 12.5 percent.

Meanwhile, the average rate paid on new six-month Treasury bills auctioned to the public plunged nearly 1½ percentage points, to 7.734 percent.

That means people buying six-month savings certificates sold by banks and savings institutions in minimum denominations of $10,000 will earn 9.15 percent interest starting today, down from last week's 9.643 percent.

"If things continue at today's pace, I think we can see consumer rates coming down sooner than within the next 60 days," said John Morrison, vice president and director of consumer loans at First Union National Bank in Charlotte, N.C.

But Alan Greenspan, a member of the President's Economic Policy Advisory Board, told real estate developers in Boston that despite the drop in rates, there is no indication of improvement in the overall economy.

"The economy itself shows no signs of change," he said.

High interest rates over most of the past three years have undermined the financial stability of many industries, leading to a surge in bankruptcies, layoffs and factory closings. Lower rates, if they are sustained, would provide some relief for business and could help lead the economy to recovery.

A growing number of investors apparently think such a turnaround will come sooner rather than later. Activity in the stock and bond markets has been extremely heavy in recent days, although stock prices turned mixed Tuesday after several days of spectacular increases. Bond prices were moderately higher.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, measuring the performance of major corporations, fell 9.11 points to 1,003.68. On the New York Stock Exchange, 932 stocks advanced, 318 stocks were unchanged and 776 stocks declined.

After the four major banks cut their prime lending rates Tuesday, the government announced that home buyers also would be getting a break.

The interest-rate ceiling on Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration loans for single-family homes was cut 1 percent from 13.5 percent, the lowest rate since August 1980.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said retail sales rose 1 percent in September from August, led by a 4 percent gain in automobile sales.

In other economic developments:

—International Harvester Co. lost a $28.5 million patent suit in federal court in Rock Island, Ill. In a lawsuit filed in 1976, Deere & Co. had charged Harvester infringed on its patent for a device that cuts cornstalks and feeds them into combines.

—Chrysler Corp. and the United Auto Workers announced they will return to bargaining Friday in the face of overwhelming rejection by the rank-and-file to a tentative contract settlement.

T-bills yields now lowest in two years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities have fallen to their lowest levels in more than two years, officials say.

The government reported that at its weekly auction Tuesday about $5.6 billion in new three-month bills were sold at an average discount rate of 7.429 percent, down from the 8.102 percent of last week.

The government also sold about $5.6 billion in six-month bills at an average rate of 7.734 percent, down from 9.229 percent.

Tuesday's yields, a measure of the cost of government borrowing from the public, were the lowest since the June 23, 1980, levels of 7.077 percent for three-month bills and 7.108 percent for six-month bills.

The yields had been around 13 percent as recently as the first week in July but have been falling in most recent weeks along with interest rates in general.

The discount rate on the new T-bills auctioned Tuesday understates the actual return to investors. That return, or investment rate, came to an average of 7.68 percent on three-month bills and 8.16 percent on six-month bills.

Beginning today, in private accounts linked to federal securities:

—Banks and savings and loan associations may pay as much as 9.15 percent interest on $10,000-minimum six-month money market certificates, down from last week's 9.643 percent.

The ceiling is one-quarter percentage point above the higher of two figures: the new discount rate on six-month T-bills or the average for such bills at the four most recent auctions — 8.9 percent in this case.

—Banks and S&Ls may pay as much as 7.429 percent on $7,500-minimum three-month certificates compared with last week's 8.102 percent.

In other rates that don't change today:

—S&Ls may pay as much as 11.1 percent and commercial banks as much as 10.85 percent interest on 2½-year "small-saver" certificates. Those rates change in two weeks.

—New tax-exempt, one-year "all-savers" certificates issued by financial institutions pay 7.48 percent when held to maturity. The rate changes Oct. 31.

Dollar decline reversed, gold down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar reversed a decline of several days today, rebounding in early European trading amid speculation that U.S. interest rates might halt their slide. Gold prices were lower.

Dealers said investors were returning to the dollar partly in response to U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan's prediction that American banks' prime interest rates would level off at 12 percent.

The dealers also noted predictions of a large U.S. money supply figure for October — which could signal a firming of interest rates. They also attributed the dollar's rebound to a decline in interest rates paid by European banks, making European currencies less attractive to investors.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing of 265.90 yen from 264.25 Tuesday. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 266.13 yen.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.7132, compared with $1.7238 late Tuesday.

Unemployment highs and lows

Unemployment rates increased in 48 states and the District of Columbia between July 1981 and July 1982. Nineteen states and the District of Columbia had rates of 10 percent or more. The highest rates again were in Michigan and the lowest in South Dakota.

Note: Unlike national unemployment statistics, state-by-state figures are seasonally unadjusted and they follow the national report by about six weeks. Nationally, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for July was 9.8 percent, August's remained the same.

Rally has little effect on local stocks

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Stock prices of locally-based energy and manufacturing companies have not responded to the recent rip-roaring stock market rally in any clearcut fashion. Perhaps true to form, they are following in the footsteps of their brothers elsewhere in the nation, as energy stocks as a whole have not participated in the rally to any great degree.

A spot check late Tuesday of prices per share for 19 local stocks on the New York and American stock exchanges or over-the-counter market shows their reaction to the rally has been mixed. Six local stocks have remained the same, six have gone up slightly and seven have fallen slightly since Friday, Oct. 1.

The market rally began Friday, Oct. 8, in reaction to falling interest rates and contagious optimism among investors. It continued Monday, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average broke the 1,000 mark, hitting 1,012.79, the highest its been since April 28, 1981.

One local stock, that of Adobe Oil and Gas Corporation, had a field day late Friday and early Monday, but no one seems to know why.

About 10 minutes before the close of the business day on the American Stock Exchange, the floor specialist halted trading of Adobe stock, which had surged almost four points during the day to close at 20 1/2.

The move was made on the advice of the Amex Board of Governors and with the approval of Adobe, because there were so many buy orders coming into the exchange and no one was willing to sell.

Monday morning, the buyers were back again in full force, and Adobe stock didn't open for trading until the rest of the market had been open for about an hour and 10 minutes, according to Pat Welch, Adobe vice president and corporate secretary.

"It was just an influx of buy orders with no sells available," Welch said. He had no explanation for the stock's sudden extra popularity — the Midland company has made "no material public announcements" that would cause an upsurge.

The company did report a major discovery confirmation well in Campbell County, Wyoming, about 10 days ago, but Welch said it's a little late for any major market reaction to that news to be reflected in Adobe trading.

Joe Liberty, manager of the Midland office of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc., believes the brief upsurge in Adobe stock was just part of a general response to the market's overall jump upward Friday and Monday.

"The oils haven't participated in this recent rally, but they were up strong (Monday) morning."

Monday and Tuesday turned out to be a fairly normal days for Adobe, with an average volume of shares changing hands. The stock opened Monday at 20 7/8 and closed Tuesday at 18 5/8 after what Welch called "a bit of a sell off" with less volume traded.

Even at that price, it's still up from Oct. 1, when it closed at 16 1/8. According to Welch, "It's still cheap."

Seven out of ten will receive pensions

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven out of 10 middle-age Americans will get pensions by the time they quit working, an insurance industry group says in an upbeat assessment of the nation's retirement system.

The sum of the pension and Social Sequrity payments to those retiring in the year 2004 will give most retired people a major part of the income they had been receiving while working, according to a study commissioned by the American Council of Life Insurance.

"We see the study as an important one for the immediate insights it offers and as a starting place to stimulate debate on national policy," G. David Hurd, vice president of Bankers Life Co. and head of a council task force, said in releasing the report.

He said the finding by a private economics research firm "contradicts some widely held beliefs and erroneous assumptions on the subject."

The study, prepared by ICF Inc., used pension participation of workers in 1979 and assumed a standard retirement age of 65. It concluded that the proportion of Americans who receive pension benefits will rise dramatically by the turn of the century.

The study focused on workers between the ages of 40 and 44 who were vested in pension plans, noting that presently only about half of all workers have some kind of pension coverage.

The insurance industry council said it had the study done because it wanted to find out what proportion of workers will obtain pension coverage as they move through their working years toward retirement at the turn of the century.

Among the findings of the ICF study were:

—By the year 2004, approximately 85 percent of all married families and 66 percent of all married individuals can expect pension benefits. A married family is one that will receive more than one pension. A married individual's family will receive only one pension, regardless of the number of members who worked.

"This means that there will continue to be a dramatic growth in the proportion of retiring people who get pensions, even on the conservative assumption of no future growth in percentage of participation of the work force in pension plans," Hurd said.

—About half of all married couples should draw benefits from both spouses' employment.

—Pension and Social Security benefits combined will replace more than three-quarters of pre-retirement income on an after-tax basis.

—Almost half of workers who were in the range of age 40 to 44 during the 1979 study period — but who were not covered by a pension plan — can still expect to receive pension benefits at retirement.

—Of those who will not ultimately receive pension benefits, nine-tenths either will be unemployed before they retire or will have worked fewer than 10 years.

Despite pessimistic forecasts about its future, the Social Security system will provide more than 60 percent of total retirement benefits for those receiving both Social Security and pension benefits, the study said.

It said that Social Security payments in the year 2004 will account for over half of all total benefits, even for those who had salaries of $30,000 or more a year — and nearly 80 percent for those who earned $15,000 or less annually.

Mexico wants to pay debts with stock

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government is suggesting that foreign debtors of dollar-short Mexican private companies accept shares in them instead of cash payments.

The private share of Mexico's massive $81 billion foreign debt — the largest in the developing world — is estimated at $20 billion. A large part of it is held by American banks.

The official El Nacional newspaper reported Tuesday that new resolutions "open the possibility" that the $20 billion owed by the private companies would not leave Mexico.

The strength of the resolutions published in the federal register was not immediately clear, but they appeared only to suggest and not require the exchange of debts for company shares.

They were approved by the government's National Committee on Foreign Investments, which oversees the amount of foreign investment allowed in Mexican companies. The Mexican Constitution forbids foreigners from owning a majority share.

El Nacional quoted Aurelio Tamez, spokesman for the National Chamber of Industry, as saying that talks with foreign debtors were going well and the first agreements covering about $1 billion would be announced within 15 days.

Foreign banks were eager to lend money to the government and to private companies here during the past few years of oil-fueled prosperity.

But a drop in worldwide oil prices helped plunge the economy into a severe recession this year, and there is a scarcity of dollars needed to pay the accumulated debts. Unprecedented currency exchange controls were enacted in August.

The troubled Alfa group, which is the largest conglomerate in Latin America, alone owes an estimated $2.3 billion to foreign creditors.

Last August, Mexico won a three-month moratorium on repayment of its foreign debt.

Accountants to hear president

Carroll W. Phillips, president of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants (TSCPA), will address members of the organization's Permian Basin Chapter. The meeting will be held Thursday, October 14, at 7:00 p.m. at the Midland Petroleum Club.

Phillips, a Houston CPA, will comment on the impact of future mandatory continuing professional education for Texas CPAs. He will also stress the need for members of the profession to be informed on and active in the legislative process. Long-range and immediate TSCPA goals will also be reviewed.

TSCPA is dedicated to the maintenance and strengthening of high professional and ethical standards in order that CPAs might better serve in the public interest. The voluntary professional organization, with more than 18,000 members, is the third largest statewide CPA group in the United States.

The Permian Basin Chapter with more than 650 members plays and integral part in TSCPA's 20-chapter network. Chapter president Horace Robb, CPA notes that the local organization encompasses an 18-county region, including: Andrews, Borden, Crane, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Loving, Martin, Midland, Mitchell, Reagan, Scurry, Sterling, Upton, Ward and Winkler.

Frito buys land

DALLAS (AP) — Frito-Lay Inc. has bought 205 acres in the Dallas suburb of Plano for a new corporate headquarters complex, company officials said.

The campus-style office project will be part of a 2,500-acre commercial and residential development, located 21 miles north of downtown Dallas, the company said Tuesday.

The headquarters, which will take three years to complete, will employ 1,000 people at first, although that number could double, said D. Wayne Calloway, Frito-Lay president and chief executive officer.

Frito-Lay employs 2,300 people at its current headquarters in Dallas, said Calloway.

The contract still must be approved by the board of directors of Frito-Lay's parent company, PepsiCo Inc., he added.

What the Lone Ranger Didn't Know about Silver.

The Lone Ranger probably would have used normal bullets just like everyone else if he had realized the tremendous investment opportunity offered by silver.

With the demand for silver greater than mine production, its intrinsic value as a precious metal exceeds its face value in silver coinage. No longer in circulation in the U.S. economy because of this, silver also has become an indispensable component in modern technology, further increasing its value.

As an investment, silver has an outstanding performance record. While inflation levels over the past 15 years have averaged more than 10%, silver's value has increased dramatically.

Call today to find out more about silver. It's enough to break the Lone Ranger's heart.

U.S. Supreme Court overload means justice for some Carry-over cases increase at each session...

The Supreme Court schedules 160 hours of argument for each annual session. Cases that cannot fit the schedule are carried over to the next term. The 111 carry-over hours from the 1981-82 season means only 49 hours worth of new cases can be heard in 1982-83.

...and the number of cases filed grows

The increasing number of cases filed and the unchanging number of argument hours scheduled mean the Court now accepts for decision less than 5 percent of all cases, leaving a large number of important legal issues unresolved.

Tax breaks for certain schools under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fight over tax breaks for racially biased private schools is raising some difficult questions in the Supreme Court about the power of federal tax collectors when it comes to social policies.

"Where do you draw the line on the policy-making authority of the Internal Revenue Service?" Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell asked during Tuesday's oral arguments.

The Reagan administration's announcement early this year that it intended to grant federal tax exemptions to Bob Jones University and other racially biased schools turned the dispute into a major political controversy — and an embarrassment for the president.

But as Tuesday's oral arguments on the IRS ban on such tax breaks showed, the legal issues are wide-ranging.

Powell asked William T. Coleman Jr., who was defending the IRS ban, whether the IRS also has the power to deny tax breaks to non-profit groups discriminating against women on the grounds that such bias also violates social policy.

Does guilty plea preclude later claims?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is considering whether criminals who plead guilty in state court can later file a federal suit claiming police illegally searched them.

The court said Tuesday it will decide if such suits are banned in cases where the criminal defendant fails while he is being prosecuted to claim the search was illegal.

In the case, John F. Prosise pleaded guilty to manufacturing the illegal drug phencyclidine — commonly known as "PCP" or "angel dust" — after his 1977 arrest at his apartment in Arlington, Va.

Prosise, who was sentenced to 12 years in prison, never challenged in state court the validity of the search in which police discovered the drug.

The Supreme Court will decide whether Prosise can sue Arlington County Police Department officials under federal civil rights laws and collect monetary damages for what he now alleges was an unconstitutional search.

In other action Tuesday, the nation's highest court:

—Said it will decide whether employers can give women smaller retirement checks each month because they are likely to live longer than men.

—Listened to arguments over the Internal Revenue Service's 12-year-old ban on federal tax exemptions for racially biased private schools. The Reagan administration claims the ban has not been approved by Congress, forcing the Supreme Court to appoint a special advocate to defend the prohibition.

—Heard arguments on the power of law enforcement officials to stop, question and even search air travelers whose behavior fits a "drug courier profile." The court's final decision in the case from Florida will figure heavily into the nation's efforts to ban illegal drug smuggling.

In the Prosise case, the Supreme Court said it will review a federal appeals court ruling that would allow Prosise to pursue his suit under a much-used civil rights law.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in its opinion last Dec. 30: "We do not think that the state conviction based on a guilty plea should preclude litigation" of Prosise's lawsuit.

County officials said in their appeal to the Supreme Court:

"Even though this court and the Virginia Supreme Court have established the principle that a guilty plea essentially waives the right to later seek one's freedom based on an alleged (illegal search and seizure), the result of the circuit court's Prosise decision is that the same person can nonetheless seek money damages under the (federal civil rights law.)

The Supreme Court on Tuesday also:

—Agreed to determine the scope of a union's right to urge a consumer boycott of businesses with which it has no dispute.

—Said it will decide whether the federal government may require utilities to buy electric power from small producers and accomodate them in other ways.

Supreme Court considers 'drug profiles'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall interrupted the Florida prosecutor who insisted that a criminal suspect voluntarily accompanied drug agents who later arrested him.

"Do you know anyone who would not go along with two armed men?" Marshall asked Tuesday.

Foremost in the minds of several high court justices, it appeared, was the question: Just how "voluntary" was Mark Royer's cooperation with the two Dade County narcotics detectives who arrested him at Miami International Airport on Jan. 3, 1978?

THE court's eventual decision in Royer's case could determine the fate of a national law enforcement effort to deal with the nation's drug-smuggling boom.

The court is expected to use the case to decide whether drug agents can stop, question and even search air travelers whose behavior fits a "drug courier profile."

Florida courts said the "profile program," begun by the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in 1974, is unconstitutional.

Florida courts said the practice of stopping airline passengers who fit some kind of pre-determined characteristics is impermissible because it is not based on the constitutional requirement that there be "probable cause" to believe a crime is being committed.

Two recent Supreme Court decisions have left the legal status of the DEA-inspired airport program in doubt. Under it, DEA agents or local police look for passengers displaying "characteristics and behavioral traits which...have tended to distinguish drug couriers from other passengers."

FLORIDA Assistant Attorney General Calvin Fox urged the justices Tuesday to reinstate Royer's drug conviction, saying Royer had consented to accompany the detectives to a room where he later agreed to a search of his suitcases. They contained 65 pounds of marijuana.

"This transaction was totally voluntary," Fox said. "This was by no means an arrest."

When Justice Byron R. White asked whether the detectives would have let Royer go free if he had refused to accompany them, Fox said yes. White did not appear to be convinced.

"Did they tell him that?" Marshall asked. Fox conceded that they had not.

Royer's lawyer, Theodore Klein of Miami, argued that his client was victimized by "an illegal arrest" after he was coerced into accompanying the detectives and allowing them to search his suitcases.

"No reasonable person would feel free to walk away," Klein contended.

FLORIDA courts used Royer's case and subsequent rulings to bar use of the profile program at that state's airports — a significant development because drug enforcement officials point to Florida as the country's most active drug-trafficking state.

Milwaukee turns 'Whitey Ball' against St. Louis

AP Laserphoto

Milwaukee pitcher Mike Caldwell raises his arms in victory as he watches a fly ball by St. Louis' George Hendrick end the first game of the World Series Tuesday night. Caldwell tossed a three-hit shutout as the Brewers won the game 10-0. The best-of-seven series resumes tonight.

Power hitting Brewers produce singles attack

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Surprise, surprise. The Milwaukee Brewers can play "Whitey Ball" too.

The American League champion Brewers charged into the World Series with an image of sluggers who thrive on the long ball, as evidenced by 216 home runs in the regular season.

St. Louis, on the other hand, got here on speed and defense, a bunch of singles hitters assembled by Manager Whitey Herzog and conditioned to zip around the bases at breakneck speed.

So in Tuesday night's opener, the Brewers put together 13 singles, three short of the World Series record, in a 17-hit attack and rode the three-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell to a lopsided 10-0 victory.

HERZOG CALLED it an old-fashioned, back of the shack, rump-kicking. "I'm glad it only counted as one game," he said. "I'm glad we didn't have a doubleheader."

The jackrabbits at the top of the Brewer batting order drove the Cardinals to distraction.

Leadoff man Paul Molitor set a World Series record with five hits, all singles. Three were infield hits and one, driving in a key run, came when he shattered his bat and looped the ball beyond the infield.

"It's the first time I've had three infield hits," Molitor said. "They weren't very pretty."

No. 2 man Robin Yount had four hits, three of them singles. Molitor and Yount drove in two runs apiece as Milwaukee punished four St. Louis pitchers.

"I just hit the ball where the fielders weren't," explained Yount.

How's that for Whitey Ball?

JUST TO make sure their long-ball image wasn't forgotten, the Brewers also had a towering home run by ex-Cardinal Ted Simmons and a two-run triple by Jim Gantner.

"It's nice to score 10 runs," said Molitor, "but we still didn't swing the bat as well as we're capable of. The Cardinals know we can hit the long ball."

What St. Louis might not have known, though, was the kind of performance Caldwell had in his 33-year-old left arm. Shelled in his last two starts, he was passed over by Manager Harvey Kuenn in the decisive fifth game of the American League playoffs. But he came back with an airtight, workmanlike game against the Cardinals.

"I was getting ahead of the hitters, throwing mostly sinkers and a backdoor slider," Caldwell said. "I felt strong and when I got three ground balls in the first inning, I got a lot of personal confidence."

Simmons, the Brewers' catcher, knew early that the veteran lefthander was on his game.

"I could tell right away," he said. "There was no question in the first inning. He was throwing the sinker at three-quarter speed and we were getting the ground balls. I said to myself, 'This could be nice for a while.'"

It turned out to be nice all night long. Caldwell surrendered a double to Darrell Porter in the second inning, a walk to Tommy Herr in the sixth, singles to Porter and Ken Oberkfell in the eighth, and nothing else. He retired 17 of the first 18 batters he faced and threw first-pitch strikes to 22 of the 31 Cardinal batters, including 10 in a row at one point. He retired 14 hitters on ground balls.

"That's as good as he can pitch," said Simmons. "You're not going to see him any better."

BEFORE CALDWELL ever took the mound, he had a two-run lead thanks to an error by usually sure-handed Cardinal first baseman Keith Hernandez.

St. Louis starter Bob Forsch had opened by getting Molitor to ground out to second baseman Herr, the only time all night the Cards would retire the Brewer leadoff man. Yount singled and Cecil Cooper walked. After Simmons struck out, Ben Oglivie hit a bouncer at Hernandez' feet. The ball got by for an error, scoring one run, and Gorman Thomas followed with an infield single for another.

"I didn't have time to move," said Hernandez, who has won four Gold Gloves for his defensive ability. "The ball was hit very hard. I just booted it. I'm not going to offer any excuses."

Herzog knew Forsch was not himself.

"He threw 39 pitches in the first inning," the manager said. "I don't know if it was World Series jitters or what. He didn't get the ball where he wanted to."

In the fourth, the Brewers were back for more. Charlie Moore opened with a double, moved to third on a perfect Whitey Ball sacrifice by Gantner and scored on Molitor's broken-bat single.

AN INNING later, Simmons smashed Forsch's first pitch deep into the right field seats, but foul. Then he got into a little guessing game with the Cardinal pitcher and came up a winner.

"They are going to throw me slow stuff," he said. "That's what the scouting reports say and I was seeing screwballs and slow changes prior to that. The ball I hit foul was a slider up. I was geared to take the gamble that they would throw me a fast ball down and it was right there."

Simmons hit it over the right field wall, making it 4-0. Then in the sixth, the Brewers pushed across two more runs with two out. Gantner and Molitor singled and Yount dropped a double just inside the right field foul line, making it 6-0.

Meanwhile, Caldwell was breezing through the St. Louis batting order. He occasionally has been accused of doctoring baseballs, but there were no complaints from the Cardinals.

"I didn't think he had to the way we were swinging," Herzog said dryly.

"He kept the ball where he wanted it and he had good motion on his off-speed pitches," said Gene Tenace, who was the Cards' designated hitter. "He kept the ball down on me and when a pitcher can do that, he's tough to hit. If he throws a spitter, it doesn't matter to me. If he gets it over more power to him."

Ozzie Smith agreed.

"What can you do about a spitter?" he wondered. "Hit the dry side?"

The Cardinals weren't hitting any side.

Brewers close eyes and go with Mike

By WAYNE LOCKWOOD
Copley News Service

ST. LOUIS — Given a choice, the Milwaukee Brewers would have pitched almost anyone other than Mike Caldwell. But they didn't have a choice.

Because they had bypassed Caldwell's turn in the deciding game of the American League playoffs, the Brewers were left with a gap in their rotation for which there were no other candidates with credentials in order.

So they closed their eyes and sent Mike out to pitch the opening game of the 1982 World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals. Somebody has to do it, right?

The omens were not good, to say the least. The Cardinals were hot, having won their division championship earlier than any other playoff team and having swept the Atlanta Braves in the National League Championship Series.

CALDWELL WAS not. His last three starts, all important games, had resulted in Brewer defeats. Two of them, at the hands of the Baltimore Orioles, forced Milwaukee to go to the final day of the season before edging the Orioles in the American League East.

The third was the opening game of the playoffs, in which Caldwell let slip a 3-1 advantage against the California Angels and wound up an 8-3 loser.

By this time, Mike had become more of a liability than anything else.

"The last three games he pitched were games we had to win, and he didn't pitch very well," acknowledged Brewer pitching coach Pat Dobson.

"He has a tendency to overthrow when he's trying too hard, and when he does that he gets the ball up. When he gets the ball up, he gets killed."

Oh, good. Well, he'll probably be a lot more relaxed in the World Series.

Nor was the site of this game a particularly encouraging one for the well-traveled Milwaukee lefthander, or his teammates.

Caldwell is a sinkerballer and the Cardinals are a team that loves to beat the ball into the artificial turf so that they can use their speed on the bases while the thing bounces around the park. In his National League career with the Padres, Giants and Reds, Mike never won in Busch Stadium. His record was 0-3.

WHAT DID Caldwell do in the face of all these negative vibrations? Oh, not much. He merely pitched one of the finest opening games in the history of this competition.

Although his work was somewhat overshadowed by the Brewers' 17-hit, 10-run assault on St. Louis pitching, it was an effort worthy of being mounted and hung on the wall of Caldwell's Raleigh, N.C., den.

"What you saw was the very best Mike Caldwell can pitch," said his catcher, Ted Simmons. "Mike cannot pitch any better than that. As well, maybe, but no better."

Any better and the guy would be receiving a phone call from Don Larsen, the only man to pitch a perfect game in the World Series.

Caldwell retired 21 of the first 23 batters he faced, permitting only a double to Darrell Porter and a walk to Tommy Herr. By this time, the Brewers were on top 6-0.

For the evening, Mike finished with a three-hitter and permitted the Cardinals no runner beyond second base. He threw first-pitch strikes to 22 of 31 batters, including 10 in a row during one mid-game stretch.

"Until we started to go to right field in that one inning (the eighth), we hadn't hit a ball hard off him all night," said St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog.

Lee-Permian game is near sellout

Chances for a complete sellout of the Midland Lee-Odessa Permian District 4-5A football game Friday night at Memorial Stadium is almost certain after an early rush of ticket sales Tuesday night in Odessa and this morning in Midland.

All of Lee's allotted reserved tickets were gone by 10:45 a.m. today and Odessa reported that they still had tickets left to sell after opeing sales Tuesday evening at 6:30 p.m.

Midland fans arrived as early as 6 p.m. Wednesday to get in line for the opening of sales at 8 a.m. at Memorial Stadium. Reports from Odessa indicated that many Permian fans waited in line all Monday night for the 6:30 p.m. Tuesday sale, but they did not sellout their reserved seat allotment.

Although there are no reserved seats left for Midland Lee fans, over 200 end zone seats remain to be sold as of noon today, according to Ed Nixon, Midland's assistant athletic director. Sale of tickets will continue through Friday in both Odessa and Midland as long as seats remain unsold.

If Permian does not sell all of the tickets given them, the remainder of the seats will be sold at the gate Friday night. All tickets are $4 each. Student tickets can be purchased for $1.

The winner of the Permian-Lee contest will have the inside shot at winning the District 4-5A championship.

A similar game was played at Memorial Stadium in 1978 between the same two teams and that game produced a sellout the first 30 minutes the ticket office opened. The same crush was absent this year, but a sellout of the 12,500 seat stadium still looks good.

Permian will bring a perfect 6-0 record into the game and has not been scored on in three district outings. Lee owns a 5-1 record, losing to district foe Odessa High. A victory over Permian, however, would place the Rebels ahead of Permian in the standings by virtue of having beat Permian. A Permian victory would almost insure the defending district champs of a repeat title.

Chambers gives Bulldog defense something to fight for

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Last Friday in Abilene's Shotwell Stadium, I sat in my pressbox perch, spouting off at the mouth as is my usual custom prior to any District 4-5A football game.

"What kind of team does Midland High have," asked an Abilene writer.

I replied smugly with past experience as my guide, "They play pretty good defense, but getting a first down is tantamount to scoring a touchdown for the Bulldogs."

It wasn't long before I was rubbing my eyeballs to make sure I wasn't seeing things in a foggy dream. MHS coach Pat Culpepper sent his team on the field against Abilene Cooper in the I Formation. Tailback Raymond Chambers went for eight yards off the block of Jimmy Essman. Chambers again for one and Chambers again for two and a first down.

THEN CAME Alex Mata for seven and Chambers for 10 — chalk up first down No. 2 in lightning fashion.

"Something's wrong," I said to anyone who might be listening. "I haven't seen Midland High make two first downs in a row this year. This is already an upset in my book."

Suddenly Midland High's Allan Foret is behind the Cooper defense inside the 10-yard line. Quarterback Mark Page is throwing, but Foret can't quite hang on and the touchdown is by the boards.

No score came out of the 58-yard march, but Midland High had produced an honest-to-goodness drive, including four first downs and had held the ball 16 plays. It almost made me cry with joy.

Cooper ran three plays for three total yards and punted. The quarter ended 11 plays later with MHS at the Cooper 13 yard line. Count them. MHS 27 plays without a punt, Abilene Cooper three. The Bulldogs stalled at the Cooper four and settled for Chuck Dickenson's 21-yard field goal and a 3-0 lead in the second quarter.

THE LEAD should have been more, but no one seemed to care. The "Junk Yard Dawgs" were moving the ball and the defense — those little tykes with the big hearts — were demolishing the 245-pound Michael T. Royals and the 212-pound Allen Gunter.

The score ended up with Midland High on top by a narrow 9-6 margin, thanks to a 74-yard march in 11 plays in the fourth quarter. The play that set it up was a 32-yard run by Chambers, who ended the night with 188 yards rushing on 39 carries. Chambers hadn't carried that many times all year.

Essman, John David Munn, Chad Hughes (145 pounds), Tommy Davis and Clifton Hines were opening up holes for Chambers that the Bulldogs hadn't seen since 1981.

The Bulldogs rushed for 203 yards and 52 more passing, most coming on Page to Todd Shiplet connections. That's not overly great yardage, but it came against the biggest team in 4-5A and the defense gave up nothing. The offense did give Cooper its only touchdown when Chambers fumbled at the three after Gary Russell had kept Cooper off the scoreboard by blocking Dan Worsham's 31-yard field goal attempt.

COOPER ENDED up with 58 yards rushing (six in the second half) and 61 passing. Chambers had outgained the entire Cooper offense.

With Hines, Bobby Hillin, Russell, Davis, Boynton Smith and Terry Hannon coming up with play after play on defense, Cooper appeared offensively confused and frustrated.

It was never any secret that MHS could play defense, but no one expected offensive domination. Chambers at tailback makes the difference and Culpepper comes out as this week's resident 4-5A genius.

Entering the game with a 1-4 record, including a loss to Big Spring, many felt the Bulldogs would give up the ghost and slide to the end of the year with a miserable showing. I guess it could still happen, but the fact that this team continues to try is amazing in itself. The Bulldogs could have died and few would have thought twice about it. Most of us expected it.

IT IS too much to say that the Bulldogs are back in the thick of the 4-5A race after a win over Cooper, but they are no longer a pushover.

Bulldog Pride now has a new meaning. It's easy to play well when things are rolling in your favor, but playing hard when you are down for the 10-count is the true test of a football team.

And a win over Odessa High this Friday? Momentum is something the Bulldogs have only heard other teams talk about, but if they do win — well — anything can happen. Chambers and MHS hope arrived at the same time.

MHS keeps volleyball hopes burning

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Midland High used a tough serving game to earn their first second half District 4-5A volleyball victory with a 15-3, 15-13 win over Big Spring.

The victory kept the Bulldogs in the thick of the district race, improving their record to 7-2, one game behind San Angelo and tied with Abilene Cooper. For the season Midland is 19-6.

Following the game, MHS coach Linda Jolly said she was hoping for some help from the Lee Rebels, who were on the road against the league leading San Angelo Bobcats. But the Rebels were no help as they dropped their match 15-1, 1-15, 15-5.

After gliding to the first set win, Jolly juggled her lineup to give everyone some playing time.

"Our juniors need experience and they got it tonight," Jolly said. "As a team we need to be very agressive and move a lot. Tonight the girls did a fantastic job."

BIG SPRING kept the second game close, never allowing Midland more than a four point lead.

The breaking point came midway through the game when the Steers took a 9-7 lead but then gave up six straight points, five on mishandled serves. Two of the serves hit the rafters, two were misplayed and one was allowed to drop in for a point, giving Midland a 13-9 lead.

Big Spring scored the first point in the game before Midland reeled off four unanswered points. Senior Penny Griffin led the short charge placing a dink shot in no man's land, followed with a smash that was blocked out of bounds.

But the Steers fought back, taking a 7-5 lead, with some tough defense that was aided when Midland was called for hitting the net on two occasions.

Big Spring held the two-point lead until the disaterous serving errors that saw a six point swing in the score.

DURING THE rally Midland was twice able to take advantage of the home court when Big Spring sent the ball into the rafters off Griffin's serve.

The Bulldogs final two points came off tough serves by Griffin and Denise Lanz that were misplayed. That made it nine of the last 10 Bulldog points that were scored on the serve.

Big Spring pulled within one at 14-13, but appropriately enough they mishandled a serve allowing the winning point.

The Bulldogs will travel to Abilene Tuesday to break the two-way deadlock for second place with Cooper. In their last meeting the Bulldogs beat Cooper 15-7, 15-7.

Earlier the junior varsity won their matchup against Big Spring 15-7, 18-16.

AFTER LEE lost the opening game 15-1, coach Janice Baulch inserted Wendi Sommers into the lineup and the Rebels were able to reverse the score in capturing the second game.

With the loss, the Rebels fell to 1-8 in district play and San Angelo improved to 8-1.

In the first game, it appeared the Rebels were going to be blown off the court but Lee took advantage of a Bobcat letdown, forcing a third game to decide the match.

The Rebels kept rolling as they took a 5-2 lead in the final game before the Bobcat onslaught began. Led by Bonnie Smith's 10 points the Bobcats scored 13 unanswered points to take the match.

Lee's junior varsity suffered a similar fate, losing to the Bobcats 15-9, 7-15, 15-8.

Lee's next game will be at home against the Eagles of Abilene High, Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Midland College hosts golf tourney

If playing on the tough Midland Country Club course can be considered an advantage, the Midland College men's golf team should gain some ground on the conference leaders Friday.

The Chaparrals host the six-team Western Junior College Athletic Conference tournament on the demanding MCC layout. It's the Chaps' only home appearance of the year.

"It's hard to tell what advantage we might have this week," admitted MC golf coach Delnor Poss. "Midland Country Club is a professional-quality course and it's always hard to score well on it. Our players have had some practice on it this fall and a few good rounds. But it's not the type course where you can get hot and collect a lot of birdies. Mainly, it's a matter of not making any bad mistakes and just trying to shoot pars all the way around."

Utilizing all freshmen in the first two conference tournaments, Poss has seen the best and the worst happen. In their first conference tourney in Levelland, the Chaps surprised a lot of players with their results. Midland Lee's Emil Hale came in with the low round of 68 and noe of the Chaps were above 75. It gave the Chaps second place behind host South Plains College.

But the following tournament saw the wheels fall off the Chaparral Express as Hale soared into the 80s and none of the Chaps played particularly well. They dropped into a tie for fourth as Western Texas College took the tournament title on their own course. WTC and South Plains are tied going into Midland College's event, which is the last of the fall series.

Three more tournaments in the spring will determine the conference champion.

"One thing about Midland Country Club is that on one team should run away with it. The team which is the most consistent for all four players will get the victory," Poss pointed out.

At this time, Poss still is watching qualifying rounds to determine which six players will be competing Friday.

WTC and SPC lead the pack with nine points each while Odessa College follows with eight points. MC and New Mexico Junior College own seven points and New Mexico Military Institute has two.

Cal-Stanford game gets nod

NEW YORK (AP) — Saturday's college football game between Southern California and Stanford will be televised nationally by CBS-TV, the network announced Monday.

The Pacific-10 Conference game will begin at 2:45 p.m., CDT, with the pregame show airing at 3:30.

Southern Cal, 3-1, was ranked 15th in last week's Associated Press poll.

ACU athletes draw honors

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Abilene Christian University running back Anthony Thomas and linebacker Mike Funderburg have been named Lone Star Conference offensive and defensive players of the week.

Thomas, a 5-foot-10, 195-pound sophomore from Jasper, carried the ball 35 times to rush 203 yards and score three touchdowns in ACU's 34-18 victory over Texas A&I University Saturday.

Thomas is second in LSC rushing, averaging 96.6 yards a game, and leads the league in pass receiving with 19 catches for 151 yards and a 3.8 catch-per-game average.

Funderburg, a 6-foo, 220-pound junior from Breckenridge, led the team with 21 tackles — 14 of them unassisted — in the A&I game. He also recovered an A&I fumble eaerly in the first quarter to set up the Wildcats' first touchdown.

Florida needs to rebound

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida coach Charlie Pell said Tuesday that this Saturday's homecoming contest against West Texas State is "the most important homecoming game since we've been here."

The Gators, 3-2 after two straight Southestern Conference losses, have been decimated by injuries, suspension and resignations.

Milwaukee Brewers grab the gusto in Suds Series opener

By BARRY LORGE
Copley News Service

ST. LOUIS — The Milwaukee Brewers grabbed all the gusto in the opening game of what Midwesterners regard as the Suds Series.

Inevitably, people have decided that the 79th World Series of baseball is also a — pardon the expression — brew-haha between the rival beer capitals of America. It is Anheuser-Busch, which produces Budweiser and owns the Cardinals, against Milwaukee-based Schlitz and Miller and Pabst Blue Ribbon. Whoever loses might blame it on bad hops.

The media here have brought this notion to a foaming head.

"The true, classic confrontation may be between two basic, beer-drinking, blue-collar towns," concluded Tuesday's St. Louis Globe-Democrat in a front-page story. "... Both St. Louis and Milwaukee are beer-making towns, where the white wine drinkers get pitying looks in downtown hotels and are lucky to escape without a punch in the nose in neighborhood bars."

Rivals? Well, the same story quoted a St. Louis businessman familiar with both towns describing Milwaukee as "the only city in the country where they have a bowling show on the educational television station."

There is a Midwestern flavor to this series, and the high-proof Brewers got in both a shot and a beer Tuesday night, amassing 17 hits in a 10-0 victory at Busch Stadium. This is especially impressive since the Atlanta Braves — the second most powerful team in the major leagues this season — got only 15 hits in three games off the Cardinals in the National League Championship Series.

Whitey Herzog, manager of the Cardinals, summed up the contest in blunt terms the guys at the bar could understand: "We just got a good old-fashioned rump-kicking, that's all. There's nothing you can say about it."

The Brewers are known as Harvey's Wallbangers because Manager Harvey Kuenn stocks his lineup card daily with fellows who can hit the ball against or over the outfield fences. But Tuesday night their attack didn't really resemble a rumble at the Hofbrau House.

Five of their hits didn't leave the infield. Of their four extra-base hits, only Ted Simmons' home run reached the wall. Charlie Moore scorched a grounder inside the third base bag and into the left field corner for a double; Robin Yount blooped a ball down the right-field line for a two-run double, and Jim Gantner laced a grounder that scooted along the AstroTurf into right-center for a triple.

Paul Molitor, the first man ever to get five hits in a World Series game, had three infield hits and a looper to center. For that, his bat goes to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown.

Essentially, the Brewers — who got a three-hit shutout from lefthander Mike Caldwell — took advantage of the artificial surface the way the Cardinals usually do.

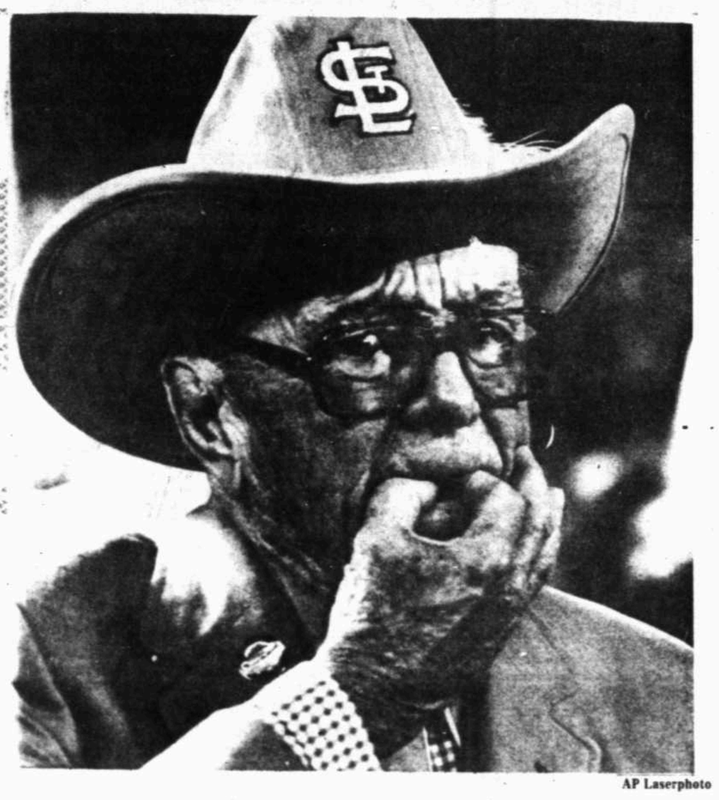

"It was just one of those nights," said Herzog. "They're a good ballclub. We didn't play well. We didn't move well. They had a lot of scratch hits off of us, balls off people's gloves, and they hit the ball good, too, when they had to. We're lucky that it only counted one game. I'm glad we didn't have a double-header."

Most people figured the Cardinals had a decided advantage on the fake grass in their spacious ballpark.

"I don't know much about the Milwaukee club, except they hit 216 homers this year, but I think it'll be like Atlanta — their power guys won't be able to hit balls out of here," Los Angeles Dodgers' Manager Tommy Lasorda said before the game. "The Cardinals are tailor-made for this ballpark. They've got speed, they run like jackrabbits, they make contact, they've got a lot of lefthanded hitters and they play great defense. People underestimate the importance of defense, but these guys make you cry."

So, who's crying now?

"I think our club surprises a lot of people," said Simmons, stressing that there is more to the Brewers than the power hitters in the middle of the order.

Cardinals in awe of Brewer pitcher

ST. LOUIS (AP) — To a man, the St. Louis Cardinals gave credit where credit belonged following their 10-0 drubbing Tuesday night by the Milwaukee Brewers in Game One of the World Series.

"They have a great team and they showed that tonight," said shortstop Ozzie Smith from the losers' clubhouse. "They did the things that it takes to win."

Milwaukee's victory featured a barrage of 17 hits, but the Cardinals were more in awe of the Brewers' lefthander, Mike Caldwell, who pitched a three-hitter.

"I'd only seen him in an exhibition game before," said St. Louis designated-hitter Gene Tenace. "Whatever he was throwing he was getting over the plate. You just have to give him credit."

To Tenace, playing in his fourth World Series, the contest before 53,723 at Busch Stadium "just got totally out of hand."

"If you lose a ball game in the ninth inning, you're going to think back," he said. "This game, we were never in it. It's better forgotten."

Rendered inconsequential by the Milwaukee offense was an error in the first inning by Cardinals' first baseman Keith Hernandez.

"I blew it," said Hernandez, usually reliable at his position, referring to a drive by Ben Oglivie which he booted to give Milwaukee two unearned runs. "I'm not going to offer any excuses."

Hernandez acknowledged Caldwell's deliveries were baffling to both right-handed and left-handed St. Louis hitters.

"He changed speed on the right-handed hitters. With the left-handers his curveball was working well," Hernandez said. "He moved the ball in and out. He was always on the corners."

Catcher Darrell Porter, who doubled for St. Louis in the second and singled in the eighth, also was complimentary to the winning pitcher.

"I got a couple of hits, but I didn't really sting the ball that hard," said Porter. "He pitched a pretty fair ball game. It was just one of those games, I think. They got out in front of us early."

In contrast to Caldwell, Cardinals' starting pitcher Bob Forsch was in trouble almost from the outset.

"He threw 36 pitches in the first inning," said St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog of Forsch. "Even though Hernandez let in a couple of runs, he just wasn't getting the ball where he wanted it."

Tommy Herr, the Cardinals' leadoff hitter, coaxed the lone walk off Caldwell in the sixth inning.

"If you're a right-handed hitter you try to lay off low pitches," said Herr, but they were being called strikes. He just turned over his fastball and he got it over. We hadn't faced a left-hander for a while. I think that was part of the problem."

Referring to the margin of defeat, Herr said, "It's a good thing they don't count total runs (in the Series)."

Herzog, said he was unable to recall when his team, which swept the National League playoffs in three straight games over the Atlanta Braves, had suffered a worse licking.

"I don't remember, really," said Herzog. "We got beat two or three ball games when we were blown out, but I don't know when we lost by 10 runs."

Smith said the Brewers' speed was also a factor in the final margin for Milwaukee.

"When you get to this stage, I think you can do a number of things," he said of the Brewers. "Obviously, they did many things tonight. We can do a lot of things, too, but we didn't do them tonight."

Expos' Raines enters clinic

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal Expos left fielder Tim Raines has entered a Tustin, Calif., medical clinic for treatment of drug abuse, the team announced Tuesday.

A statement released by the team said Raines met with Montreal General Manager John McHale over the weekend and agreed to undergo a 30-day program for treatment of "chemical dependency" at the Orange County CareUnit.

Expos medical advisers contend the Raines has made subsantial progress since his problem was revealed to the club three months ago, the release said.

"However, Raines has agreed that his best chance for complete recovery is in entering the (clinic), the same clinic that has helped several other professional athletes with similiar problems," the advisers were quoted as saying.

"My goal is to report to spring training ready to give my best effort every day of the 1983 season," said Raines, who led the National League in stolen bases with 78 this season. "I realize that I've had a problem for some time now.I just want to solve it once and for all and put it behind me."

McHale said Raines "has come to a mature decision in recognizing his need for help. He has the talent for a long and exciting career."

Raines established a modern major league record for most stolen bases by a rookie with 71 in 1981 despite being relegated to the role of pinch runner the last month of the season because of a hand injury.

The Sanford, Fla., native hit for a .304 average in 88 games in the strike-shortened 1981 season, but fell to .277 this season.

Marvin Barnes becomes millionaire in 22.2 ticks

ADA, Okla. (AP) — The Old West abounds with stories of men who became instant millionaires by finding the mother lode of gold or tapping a continuous flow of oil.

Marvin Barnes didn't become an instant millionaire — it took him 22.2 seconds — and he did it with a horse. Actually, he did it with two horses, but the second was just the icing on a cake that had been a long time arriving at Barnes' table.

"It really took me 23 years," the Ada-area horse breeder said. "That's how long I've been racing quarter horses."

Barnes made his million when his stallion, Mr Master Bug, romped home three-quarters of a length ahead of his nearest opposition in the All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs in New Mexico. And the nearest opposition was Miss Squaw Hand, Mr Master Bug's half-sister, also owned by Barnes.

There was a $1 million check for Barnes for the win and $343,500 for second — plus the increased value of both horses for their Labor Day showing in the world's richest quarter horse race, a 440-yard run with a total purse of $2 million.

Add to that the extra money for the nominator's awards and the breeders' awards and Barnes walked away with $1,369,000, the largest amount ever won by anyone in one horse race.

For years the All-American has featured a total purse in excess of $1 million, but this year the pot was kicked up to $2.5 million, with the winner collecting an even $1 million.

The win also made Mr Master Bug the richest 2-year-old among all horses this year with earnings of $1,138,798. He had run nine times before the All-American, and had a record of seven wins, one second and one third.

"Nobody ever ran one-two in the All-American before," Barnes said. "I don't know what the odds are on doing it, but it's got to be at least 1,000-to-1."

And, he said, he was approached before the race with an offer to syndicate Mr Master Bug for $10 million, but turned it down. Other sources place the horse's value after the All-American win at about $30 million.

Barnes leaned back in an easy chair in the bright den of his Lady Bug Ranch, watched a videotape replay of the race and reflected.

It was the first time that Barnes had a winner in the All-American. His Top Ladybug ran third in 1966; Barne's Ladybug was third in 1967, and Lady Bug's Moon was second in 1968.

NBC drops CFL Sunday coverage

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC-TV announced Tuesday it was dropping Canadian Football League games as substitute programming for the striking National Football League for at least the next two weeks.

"Basically, the CFL just hasn't been productive in terms of ratings," an NBC spokesman said. "We're not cutting the cord permanently. We're keeping our options open. We can still get back for the CFL playoffs and the Grey Cup."

NBC has televised CFL games each Sunday that the NFL Players Association has been on strike. But this Sunday, the network will show "NFL '82" from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., CDT, followed a sports special featuring boxing, taped highlights of last Sunday's Charlotte '500' stock car race and a women's gymnastics meet held last summer in Peking, China.

"The first Sunday we showed the CFL, there was a lot of media attention and a lot of curious people watched, but the ratings just haven't been supportive," the NBC spokesman said. "In addition, every game we showed was an uncompetitive contest."

In a Sept. 27 doubleheader, British Columbia trounced Toronto 46-14 and Edmonton defeated Calgary 36-17 after leading 36-1 in the fourth quarter. Those games received a 5.1 rating and a 15 share, meaning 5.1 percent of all the nation's TV sets and 15 percent of those sets in use at the time were tuned to NBC's CFL games. The Super Bowl replay on CBS received a 5.6 rating and a 16 share.

The next week, NBC showed Calgary at Saskatchewan, with the home team winning 53-8. The game received a 2.4 rating and a 6 share, while the final regular-season baseball game between Milwaukee and Baltimore on ABC received an 11.9 rating and 32 share and CBS' Division III college football games received 4.9 and 3.6 ratings and 17 and 9 shares.

Bill Virdon, former manager of the Houston Astros, tries on a cap of the Montreal Expos Tuesday after being hired to replace Jim Fanning as the Montreal manager. Virdon becomes the sixth manager of the Expos.

Montreal scratches Fanning for Virdon

MONTREAL (AP) — The baseball cap Bill Virdon donned was too tight, but Montreal Expos President John McHale expects him to be a perfect fit as the new manager of the National League team.

The Expos Tuesday named Virdon as the sixth manager in their 14-year history, signing him to a two-year contract. The club also has an option on a third year.

"We think Bill is the right man for the job," said McHale. "I've admired his work for a long time.

"I've watched him develop as a manager. He's a winner, and as a player he was a hustler, a great defensive player, who unlike many others, chose to go pretty deep in the minor leagues to become a manager."

VIRDON, 51, began his managerial career in 1966 at Williamsport, Pa., in the Class AA Eastern League. He eventually managed the Pittsburgh Pirates, New York Yankees and Houston Astros in the majors, compiling a career won-lost record of 849-781.

The Astros fired Virdon Aug. 10, in the middle of the second year of a three-year contract. When McHale requested and received the resignation of Expos Manager Jim Fanning on the last day of the 1982 season, he turned to Virdon.

"We had several calls for the job, but when we put it all together, the answer came out Virdon," said McHale. "This is not an easy club to manage.

"We have a club where the majority of players need to look at the manager with respect and know he's been through the wars. That's why I thought experience and getting the right guy were the major qualifications."

The Expos assumed the final year of Virdon's Houston contract and added one year. The contract should pay Virdon in excess of $200,000 per season.

Often referred to as a disciplinarian who stresses fundamentals, Virdon offered his own character analysis.

"I'm not a flamboyant person. I'm not looking for headlines. The players deserve the headlines. If there is a problem, I'll be happy to assume the responsibility."

Joe Niekro, who pitched for Virdon with the Astros, said Montreal players have something to look forward to.

"The players are going to like him. He has his way. He doesn't say too much, but if he wants to talk, he'll call you into his office. He insists you execute fundamentals. If the Expos need to work on bunting, I'm sure the players will be bunting 1½ hours a day in spring training."

Virdon, however, said it was premature to make general statements about his new team because he wasn't totally familiar with the Expos personnel. He plans to discuss the roster with Fanning, who has returned to his former job as vice president of player development and scouting, during the World Series.

"The talent is here, or close to being here," he said.

But the Expos won't necessarily be molded into the Virdon image, which in Houston reflected speed, pitching and defense.

"A manager has to adjust to the talent," said Virdon. "It's not a case of the players having to adjust to the manager.

"A manager's job is to find the assets he has and go with it. There's a strong running game here and home-run ability. There's enough offense to win."

FANNING, WHO managed Montreal to the 1981 NL East title after replacing the fired Dick Williams near the end of the season, described Virdon as the perfect man for the job.

Pitts' Foge Fazio misses camaraderie

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

On an ordinary practice day, the Pitt football team does its flexing and stretching exercises and Coach Foge Fazio calls them together for a brief chat. Then, Fazio blows his whistle and the team breaks up into separate groups — the backs here, the linemen over there, the defense somewhere else.

"That's the most lonely time," says Fazio, who is in his first season as Pitt's head coach after 15 years as a college assistant, most of them as a defensive coach. "The team scatters and I start to run down with the linebackers. It can be a lonely place with action going on all around you."

FAZIO ISN'T complaining, mind you, but some of the camaraderie is missing. A head coach, of course, must keep a chasm of some size between himself and the rest of the players and coaches.

"The other assistant coaches and I used to jog together or we'd run down and get a sandwich at lunchtime. They do all that without me now," he says. "The demands on my time are unreal, but it's nothing I can't handle. It's a pain in the neck sometimes, but I'm always happy to allot time for anything that will benefit the University of Pittsburgh and give us the spotlight in other parts of the country.

"The biggest change is that the players' personal problems, family problems, academic problems may be more magnified in my eyes. I throw myself into it more. Before, my principal concern was with the game plan, how we were going to stop the other team. I wasn't too worried about the other things. I always felt the offense would take care of itself. Now, I always ask, 'Are you prepared for this or for that?'

"I NEVER spent as much time as I do with (placekicker Eric) Schubert and (punter Greg) Ganzer. I use a little bit of psychology and some terrorist tactics."

The changeover from Jackie Sherrill to Fazio, who was Sherrill's top assistant, was a smooth one, always a big help.

"I was very fortunate that as the assistant head coach here I had a lot of responsibilities," Fazio says. "I grew up here, I went to school here, all the assistant coaches stayed with me, so I didn't have to spend a lot of time coaching them. Our philosophies are about the same."

When Fazio picks up the Sunday newspaper, he first looks to see how Pitt's future opponents made out and then looks at how his buddies in the coaching ranks did. That category includes Sherrill, whose Texas A&M club is 2-3, starting with a 38-16 thumping at the hands of Boston College.

"I was going to call him after that game, but I didn't because I felt kind of bad," Fazio said. "But he called me a couple of days later before our opener. My first reaction was that I couldn't believe the score. Then I said I'm glad we don't play B.C. this year."

One reason Penn State is throwing the ball so much is that "the potential for the passing game is greater than it's ever been," according to Coach Joe Paterno. "It may have been that way for 10 years and some of us didn't exploit it.

"With the new pass protection rules allowing an offensive lineman to use his hands right away, the game has changed dramatically from a few years ago. Plus there are so many great people in the skilled positions. The passing game is being exploited a little more than the old-fashioned running game and it's just as safe as the old option game."

ALABAMA'S BEAR Bryant delivered one of the great putdowns at a news conference last week. Someone asked the Bear what keeps him motivated after being in coaching so long.

"The same thing that has always kept me going — I love football," Bryant replied. "I love to be involved. I love the game. Talk about me getting motivated ... well, heck, put on a different color than red and it motivates me, but I'm not going to play, thank heavens. I don't think I gave you a good answer ... but I don't think you had a good question."

The College Football Association may be back in the television racket before long. At the annual fall meeting of its board of directors in Atlanta last Sunday, the CFA activated its TV committee, which had been dormant since the CFA's $180 million deal with NBC-TV fell through last December.

LAST MONTH'S ruling by U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga that schools were entitled to sell their TV property rights on an individual basis has put the NCAA out of the football television business, although an appeal is scheduled to be heard Nov. 18 before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th District in Denver.

"We have asked the TV committee to explore some alternatives," said Dr. Joab Thomas, president of the University of Alabama and the CFA. "We don't know what is likely to transpire regarding the court ruling, but we feel we should do some preliminary work."

The seven-man TV committee consists of one member each from the Atlantic Coast, Big Eight, Southeastern, Southwest and Western Atlantic Conferences, plus two from independent schools. The chairman is Dan Gibbens, Oklahoma's faculty representative to the NCAA.

Odessa's Ruben Munoz to get TV shot on CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — James Broad, a ranked heavyweight contender, and seven other unbeaten fighters will appear in four scheduled 10-round bouts to be nationally telelvised Sunday by CBS, Top Rank, Inc., announced Tuesday.

Top Rank also announced that a 12-round title defense by Ruben Munoz of Odessa, Texas, the United States Boxing Association lightweight champion, against Roger Mayweather of Las Vegas, Nev., will replace the WBA junior middleweight title bout between champion Davey Moore and Gary Guiden Oct. 23 at Convention Hall in Atlantic City. Moore was cut while training.

Broad, of Wildwood, N.J., ranked 10th by the World Boxing Association, will meet Donnie Long of Columbus, Ohio, on the card, which begins at noon, CDT.

Also on the Oct. 23 card will be a 12-round welterweight fight between Don Curry, the North American Boxing Federation champion, and Marlon Starling, the USBA champion.

Chicago Bulls overwhelm San Antonio, 150, 131

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Reggie Theus and Dave Corzine each scored 23 points Tuesday night as the Chicago Bulls overwhelmed the San Antonio Spurs 150-131 in a National Basketball Association exhibition game.

Corzine, who had 17 of his points in the first half, was traded to the Bulls from San Antonio during the off-season.

Longhorns won't appeal NCAA probation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The University of Texas at Austin will not appeal a decision by the NCAA placing the Longhorn football program on probation for one year, according to the school's president.

The NCAA announced the penalty Tuesday, which does not include sanctions. The football team remains eligible for television appearances and post-season play, officials said.

Dr. Peter T. Flawn, university president, said today the school is "pleased that no unethical conduct was found or any sanctions imposed" and would not appeal the findings.

One of the violations involved recruitment of a football prospect in January 1982, the NCAA said. The prospect was given a pair of boots by two members of the football coaching staff, the NCAA said. He later enrolled at another school.

The other violation involved the sale of 14 complimentary football tickets by a student athlete in August 1978, officials said.

The NCAA said a representative of the university's athletic interests bought the tickets "at a price substantially in excess of the face value of these tickets."

"The NCAA conducted an investigation of the university's complimentary ticket policies," said Harry M. Cross, acting chairman of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, "and the available information indicated that the 1978 transaction was an isolated incident that did not involve institutional personnel.

"The recruiting violation in this case, however, did involve two assistant football coaches who arranged for a prospective student-athlete to receive a pair of new boots during the young man's official visit to the university's campus," Cross said.

Cross said the committee decided to assess Texas probation "to ensure that diligence is exercised by the coaches in the recruitment of prospective student athletes and to emphasize the institution's responsibility to avoid further involvement in violations of NCAA legislation."

Flawn said he expected the finding regarding the ticket incident, since it was reported to the NCAA by university officials, but was "disappointed" by the NCAA finding regarding the boots.

University officials retained a Houston law firm to investigate the prospect's allegation and found "there was considerable evidence contradicting the recruit's story," Flawn said.

Kagel has five decades of experience to offer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sam Kagel, the man chosen Tuesday to mediate the 23-day National Football League player strike, is a feisty West Coast lawyer who has spent five decades settling stubborn labor disputes.

The 73-year-old Kagel, who says he likes to get right to the heart of the matter in negotiations, has settled disputes involving nurses, newsmen, transit workers, longshoremen and dozens of other unions.

He says he doesn't know how many disputes there have been; he stopped counting at 10,000.

A source close to the football negotiations told The Associated Press that Kagel would be in Baltimore to rekindle talks Tuesday night. Kagel has worked with both owners and players in the NFL before as an arbitrator in grievance proceedings.

A San Francisco native who grew up selling peanuts in ballparks and unloading freight cars in Oakland, Kagel was a buddy of Harry Bridges when the famous labor leader organized West Coast docks in the 1930s.

Kagel has a reputation for fairness, and that has kept him in demand as an arbitrator and mediator since he started his own law firm in the late 1940s.

"I won't play footsie with either side," Kagel said while explaining his philosophy in a 1971 interview with the San Francisco Examiner.

"I try to find out what each side wants — not what they think they want or what they say they want, but what they really want and need — and then I try to get it for them," he said.

In a 1980 interview, Kagel said, "What I have learned in 51 years of labor relations is you have to know the cast of characters. If there's a change in the cast, it becomes a bull ring."

The son of a junk man, Kagel's early memories of labor disputes include the vision of a streetcar tangled in chicken wire during a San Francisco transit workers strike in 1916.

He graduated from the University of California at Berkeley in 1929 and worked with the International Longshoremens and Warehousemens Union and other labor organizations from 1933 to 1941.

During World War II, he was the Northern California director of the Warren Manpower Commission. He returned to UC Berkeley in 1948 for a law degree.

Among his toughest assignments as an arbitrator was a dispute involving the Bay Area Rapid Transit District's use of television cameras to beef up security. Workers complained that the cameras would cut the workforce. Kagel ruled for BART.

In 1968, he ended a 41-day strike by San Francisco newspaper workers. A year later, an 18-day strike at eight San Francico Bay area hospitals ended after Kagel was brought in to arbitrate.

In 1972, he helped to end the lengthy West Coast dockworkers strike, a dispute that idled more than 10,000 workers and prompted then-President Nixon to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act.

He now shares his practice — Kagel and Kagel — with his son, John, who was tied up on business in Oakland on Tuesday and was unavailable for comment.

Private mediator hopes to break strike

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — A private mediator who says he hopes to outlast the adversaries in the National Football League strike was listening to both sides spell out their positions amid a news blackout he ordered shortly after taking a seat at the negotiating table.

"My tactics are to tire them out before they tire me out," San Francisco attorney Sam Kagel said Tuesday night after holding an introductory session with representatives of the club owners and striking players whose walkout 23 days ago has resulted in four weeks of no pro football.

Kagel, named earlier Tuesday to mediate the NFL Players Association's contract dispute with the NFL Management Council, said he asked both sides to be ready to start intensive negotiations today. He also announced an immediate news blackout.

"I HAVE ordered all parties, players and owners throughout the league, to make no public comment while the mediation effort is ongoing," Kagel said following the meeting at a site in a suburb of Baltimore.

Three weeks of games already have been bypassed, and earlier Tuesday the NFL announced the games of Oct. 17-18 would not be played as scheduled.

The 73-year-old son of a junkman, Kagel came to the talks with a reputation as a tough, no-nonense mediator.

The choice of Kagel was announced Tuesday by Kay McMurray, chief of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

McMurray discussed the selection Monday evening with both Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the Management Council, and Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFLPA

Kagel, who served as an independent arbitrator in three cases involving NFL players in non-injury grievances, was quickly agreed upon by both sides as a logical candidate to mediate the dispute.

While both sides welcomed the selection, union officials were quick to add that Kagel's participation was no sure sign of a quick settlement.

"I don't think the fans or the players should get too excited at this point. This is just the beginning of the bargaining process, and management has still not addressed the basic issues placed on the table by the players," Garvey said.

"WE CAN'T be lulled asleep by just thinking because we are going to mediation there will be an instant cure," said union president Gene Upshaw.

"People think mediation is like going to the doctor who gives you medicine and all is well," he said.

The players' concern that the strike would continue was underscored by their continued plans for a series of union-sponsored games.

The first two games are scheduled for Sunday in Washington and Monday in Los Angeles.

The first game had been billed as featuring teams representing "all-stars" from the AFC and NFC eastern divisions. Revised rosters, released late Tuesday, indicate as many as 15 players from other teams in the NFL are now scheduled to play in the game because players originally committed to appear have changed their minds.

The substitutions are extremely evident at quarterback where Joe Theismann of Washington Redskins and Neil Lomax of St. Louis have been replaced by Detroit's Gary Danielson and Chicago's Bob Avellini.

New York Jets' quarterback Richard Todd is another player who has withdrawn from the game leaving the American team with one quarterback, New England's Steve Grogan.

"I lost my starting job in New England earlier this year. I am just glad I am finally getting a chance to get on the field and play," Grogan said.

Danielson, a six-year veteran of the NFL, said he was disappointed the big-name quarterbacks were not playing in the game.

"I HAVE some animosity toward players like (Terry) Bradshaw and Theismann. They will take all of the benefits of these games without risking the injury," Danielson said.

Union officials have guaranteed winning participants in the game $3,000 and $2,500 for the losing side.

"I am one of the few players who is probably getting a raise by playing in the game," Danielson said. "I played out my option three times and never got a raise. The current system needs to be changed."

Meanwhile, the league's announcement that another week of the season had been lost did not sit well with Garvey.

Players still plan to hold All-Star games

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite the strike by the National Football League Players Association, it appears there will be competition involving NFL athletes next Sunday afternoon and Monday night.

A game matching players from the Eastern Divisions of the American and National Conferences is set for Sunday afternoon at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington, D.C.

It was announced Tuesday at a news conference that a contest involving AFC and NFC Western Division players will be held at the Los Angeles Coliseum the following night.

The contest at the home of the Los Angeles Raiders is scheduled to start at 9 p.m. EDT. Union officials said rosters would be announced today.

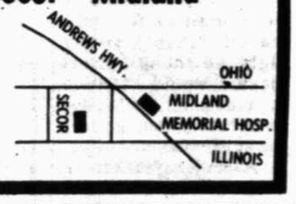

"We're pleased that we're able to continue playing football," said former San Francisco 49ers' defensive back Kermit Alexander, a one-time NFLPA president who is now a union consultant. "This is an alternate means of producing income for the players.

"We believe this matter (the players strike) will be settled. We will have NFL football, it's just a matter of when."

Alexander said players who will take part in next Monday night's game would arrive in Los Angeles Tuesday night and today.

"We're still in the process of contacting players," he said. "We're having no trouble getting players to agree to play."

Alexander would not comment on the identity of the competing players until a roster is announced.

'Air McIlhenny' keeps SMU rolling

DALLAS (AP) — With savvy Southwest Conference teams starting to gang up on "The Pony Express," unbeaten and No. 5-ranked Southern Methodist is having to resort to "Air McIlhenny" to get the job done.

Junior quarterback Lance McIlhenny, known more for his ability to pitch the ball to tailbacks Eric Dickerson and Craig James, is being forced to pass.

He had his biggest game Saturday night, completing seven of 16 passes for 134 yards, three touchdowns, and a two-point conversion in SMU's hard-earned 22-19 victory over the Baylor Bears.

The performance earned McIlhenny The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week award.

The AP SWC Defensive Player of the Week laurels went to Baylor end Charles Benson, whose tremendous play stopped the SMU ground game cold.

"They (Baylor) were forcing us to throw with an eight-man line," McIlhenny said. "We proved that we are a team of character. We did what we had to do to win."

SMU now is 19-2 in games that McIlhenny has started at quarterback.

"Lance came along at SMU when Mike Ford was the quarterback and he got compared to Ford as a passer," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "This wasn't exactly fair. Lance just didn't fit into that category.

"He (McIlhenny) has a strong arm and is a very good college passer," Collins said.

McIlhenny is listed as six-feet tall and Collins admits that being shorter than defensive linemen hurts the quarterback at times.

"Being short is something of a problem so we have to use a lot of play action fakes and sprint-out passes," Collins said.

He said McIlhenny has a strong arm.

Landry says there will be a season

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry said on his radio show Monday night that he believes there will be a 1982 National Football League season.

"I don't think we will lose the season," Landry said. "There are too many people who want to see the season played."

Landry also said on his KRLD radio show that all conference games would have to be made up to keep the divisional champions from being watered down ones.

"My thought is that you have to make up all the conference games so there is creditability in the conference winners," he said. "It would be foolish for us not to play those games."

Dallas already has missed National Conference Eastern Division games against the New York Giants and Washington Redskins.

The Cowboys are scheduled to play the Philadelphia Eagles on the road this Sunday.

Cowboys' player representative Robert Newhouse told The Associated Press Monday night he thought most players would abandon their demand for a wage scale before they give up the entire season.

"A lot of players are not too gung-ho on sitting out all year for the wage scale," Newhouse said. "But we still are not ready to go back until something better is offered."

Newhouse said 27 Cowboys players attended a meeting Monday to plot strategy.

"We discussed all the issues, including (team owners) opening the camps, and we all still had thumbs down on going back."

He said the turnout for the meeting was light because he called it at 10 p.m. Sunday.

Schramm says owners still strong

DALLAS (AP) — Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys, said Tuesday that the National Football League owners have a $150 million line of credit which has not been used and are more solidified than ever in their standoff with the NFL Players Association.

"We have the line of credit with several banking institutions in the country which we established several months ago and it has not been touched," said Schramm. "The owners knew what the cost of a strike would be and we made provisions for that eventuality."

Ed Garvey, the executive director of the NFLPA, had predicted the owners would soon feel a pinch from the 22-day strike.

"We're more solidified than we've ever been," Schramm said, adding "that's saying something for the owners of the NFL."

Schramm said, "Instead of listening to what Garvey says, maybe the individual players should ask themselves what their owner is going to do...is their owner going to say 'I can't stand the pinch, you win, if you come back we will give you anything?'

"Maybe if the players ask themselves that it might put the financial situation into better perspective."

Notre Dame joins conference

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame sports officials confirmed Tuesday that the Fighting Irish have joined the Midwest Cities Conference in five sports.

Notre Dame's teams in baseball, cross country, indoor track, tennis and golf will play in the conference, according to Notre Dame athletic director Gene Corrigan.

Other schools in the St. Louis-based conference are: Butler, Evansville, St. Louis, Oral Roberts, Oklahoma City, Loyola of Chicago, Xavier of Cincinnati and the University of Detroit.

Howser, Colavito sentenced

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City Royals Manager Dick Howser and batting coach Rocky Colavito were sentenced Tuesday to 90 days in jail for interfering with a police officer after a traffic accident Aug. 19 outside Royals Stadium.

Judge Leonard S. Hughes also fined Colavito $250 and Howser $100 after a Municipal Court trial. The guilty verdicts will be appealed, said attorney Michael Waldeck.

Both Howser and Colavito declined to comment.

Colavito's car was hit by a second car about 11 p.m. on Aug. 19 as he and Howser left the stadium after a game with the Chicago White Sox.

A Kansas City police officer, Michael Paschal, testified at the trial that he saw Colavito approach the second driver with his fist raised as he arrived to investigate the accident. Paschal said he grabbed Colavito by the arm and told him to return to his car.

A second officer, Michael Callahan, testified Colavito was "highly irate" when he arrived seconds later. He said he grabbed Colavito after the coach raised his arm in what looked like an attempt to strike Paschal.

Callahan said Colavito jerked away, clenched his fist and swung at him. The officer testified Colavito became "violent, irate and combative" when he was told he was under arrest.

Callahan said Howser jumped on his back after he wrestled Colavito to the ground and pinned his arms.

As other officers arrived to arrest the two men, Callahan said Howser "was screaming ... that he was the manager of the Royals and that they couldn't do this to him."

Both Howser and Colavito denied interfering with the officers and said they were victims of police assault. Colavito testified Callahan held him in a chokehold and continued choking him even after he said he wasn't offering resistence.

Howser testified, "There's no way I'd ever put my hands on a police officer."

The driver of the second car, David L. Roach, 19, had been charged with driving while intoxicated.

Cavaliers trap Cliff

CLEVELAND (AP) — The National Basketball Association's free-agent system has trapped forward Cliff Robinson into playing with a team he openly dislikes — the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Robinson said Tuesday he'd rather be anywhere else.

"It's a privilege to play in the NBA, but I would rather be on another NBA team," the 6-foot-9 forward said. "I feel there were a lot of unnecessary hassles I was put through as a player (last season). Some promises were not kept. It's up to me to be honest."

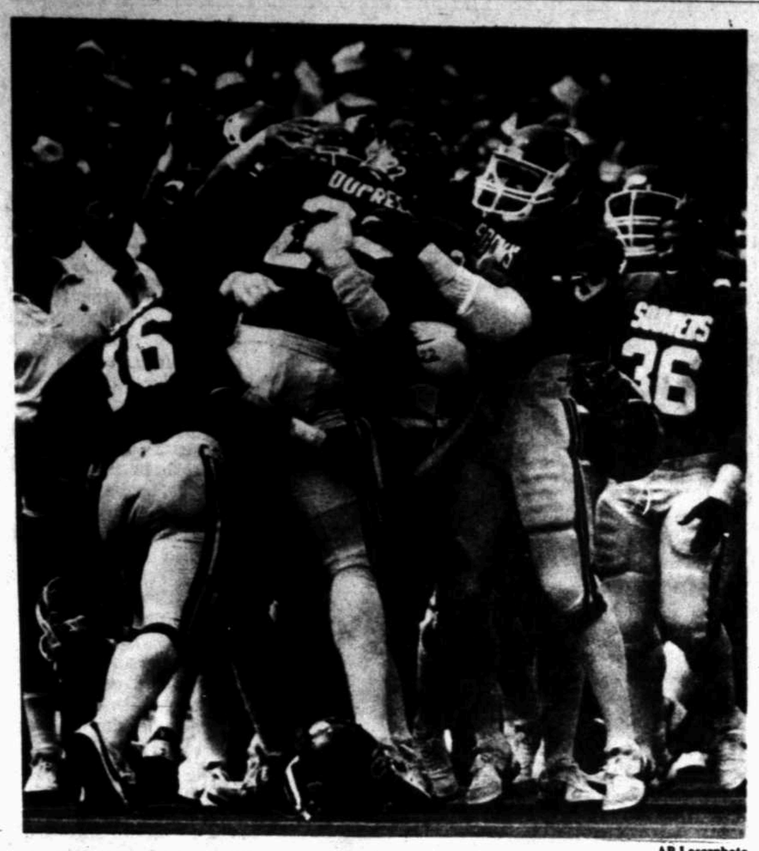

Robinson has committed himself to a five-year contract with Cleveland worth about $2.4 million. He had signed an offer sheet for that amount with the Houston Rockets, but Cavaliers' owner Ted Stepien exercised his right under the free-agent rules to match the Houston offer and keep Robinson.

The 22-year-old forward was traded to Cleveland by Kansas City last season.

Robinson said his problem was not with the length or value of his contract, but with playing for the Cavaliers, who were 15-67 last season and who had been unable to reach an agreement in summer negotiations with Robinson's agent, Harvey Lakind.

"I'm very satisfied with my contract. I couldn't get this kind of money doing anything else," Robinson said. "I'll give 110 percent on the court. I feel I've gained weight and I'm stronger, and I'll play hard."

Stepien and Coach Bill Musselman said they were not surprised by Robinson's candor.

Switzer thinks Sooners can win with intensity

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma could finish the season without another loss if the Sooners play the rest of the fall with the same intensity that spurred them to beat Texas, 28-22, Coach Barry Switzer said Tuesday.

After reiterating that his 1982 team is not extraordinary this year, Switzer told reporters in a press conference that the Sooners could end up battling Nebraska for the Big Eight title if they keep their spirits up.

"We're not the type of team that'll win on form. If we go play like id's a Texas every week, we've got a chance to win every game," he said.

Before beating Texas, Oklahoma was off to its worst start since 1968 at 2-2 and Switzer's mailbox was filling with advice and criticism.

But with the high-intensity win in the annual grudge match, Switzer said the Sooners can end up 9-2.

The team's best weapon is how well it can psych itself up, he said. "It's hard to get pumped up. Everyone gets pumped up for us. They've got to respect every team."

Switzer said his pep talk to the then 1-2 Sooners before their Oct. 2 game at Iowa State included the military metaphor that their backs were to the sea and their feet were in the sand.

Texas ends legal action against cable company

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The University of Texas has ended legal action against a Tulsa cable television firm over the televising of the Oklahoma-Texas game last Saturday, the school's general counsel said Tuesday.

Jim Crowson told The Daily Oklahoman that attorneys for the school will not pursue action in their case filed against United Video Inc., but are still studying possible action to keep the situation from happening again.

United Video, a Tulsa common carrier, provided the game telecast to cable television systems in Oklahoma outside the authorization of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The cable firm picked up the television signal originated by a Fort Worth, Texas, television station at the request of several of its cable television system customers, United Video officials said.

As a common carrier licensed by the Federal Communications Commission, United Video can "pick a signal off the air" from any station and offer it to cable companies without the permission of the originating station.

Under pressure from the NCAA, the University of Texas had gone to court in Dallas Saturday and obtained a temporary restraining order from a state judge, an order that barred United Video from carrying the signal.

Texas officials said they read the order over the phone to a United Video employee, but did not have time to serve it personally.

"We decided not to pursue this action because we did not get personal service," Crowson said. "If we had, we would have asked the court to hold United Video in contempt."

After networks decided not to pick up the game at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas on Saturday, the NCAA gave its approval to stations in Dallas, Austin and Oklahoma City markets to air the game as "exception telecasts."

No Oklahoma City station picked up the telecast because it would have been forced to purchase the unsold tickets from the Oklahoma State-Kansas matchup also in its viewing area.

The NCAA said it was the University of Texas' responsibility to see that the rules against unauthorized telecasts were carried out; and if they weren't, Texas could be penalized a regional network TV appearance or barred from future exception telecasts.

Players risk losing romance of football

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Wait a minute, you momzers! You're the Game?! Oh, no, you're not!

Let me tell you something. Howard Cosell is the Game. Monday Night Football is the Game. Instant Replay is the Game.

You think any interior lineman in the history of the game meant one-millionth to the success of the game that Instant Replay did?

You think all of the players who ever played the game meant a patch on what the invention of the vacuum tube did?

You know something? The Spread is the Game. The "over-and-under" play with the books is the Game. Football cards are the Game. Not some schnook punting on the 20-yard line.

You know what the Game is? It's George Halas and Joe Carr sitting on the runningboard of a Huppmobile in a showroom at Canton, Ohio, in 1920, drawing up a league on the back of an envelope. That was the Game. It's the Nesser brothers making more money in the roundhouse all week but playing for bloody noses on Sunday anyway.

You know where the Game started? Some wretch in a leaky pressbox in Illinois in the '20s watching a shifty, redheaded hurdler with a built-in change of pace running over, through and around Michigan, and coming up with the inspired sobriquet "The Galloping Ghost." That was the Game right there, cousins. Halas latched onto Red Grange and they proved the American public believed in ghosts. At least carrying footballs, they did.

In New York on a cold Saturday, an overcoated old romantic with a typewriter who had just seen Rudolph Valentino in the flick "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" pecked out the deathless lead: "Outlined against a blue-gray October sky, the Four Horsemen rode again..." He was describing a pony backfield of 170-pound scatbacks, none of whom put ou in mind of Charlie Paddock or Paavo Nurmi, but pro football knew what to do with those headlines.

The Game is a broken-nosed old gaffer from Norway, the coach of Notre Dame, telling a locker room full of weeping youngsters of the deathbed wish of an old teammate that they go out and "win one for the Gipper." The Game is the Gipper. The Game is the Rock.

The Game is Walter Camp and Pop Warner. It's "Boola Boola" and "Cheer-Cheer for Old Notre Dame." Even if you never went to high school.

It's Frank Merriwell. It's "Mr. Outside" and "Mr. Inside." It's Army-Navy in Philadelphia with the President there.

You know something else? The Game is a cantankerous laundryman out of Washington, D.C., who owned the Redskins. George Preston Marshall didn't like that push-and-shove game the colleges were playing. He decreed you could pass the football anywhere behind the line of scrimmage. Bet you didn't know you had to be five yards behind the line of scrimmage in the college game.

Bet you didn't know that, two incomplete passes, and you were penalized five yards. Bet you didn't know that a pass, incomplete in the end zone, and the ball went over to the other team on their 20. Bet you didn't know that, prior to George Preston Marshall, a "good" football game was 6-0. Or 0-0.

The Game was announcers and writers and analysts building up the mystique by coating it with code words like "reddog," "blitz," "misdirection," "zones," "overshifted," "stunts." None of that was new. It was just public for the first time.

Bartenders began to sound like Amos Alonzo Stagg. Bartenders were the Game. So, don't give me that shmontses about your being the Game. You just came downstairs one Christmas morning and there it was all wrapped up for you with pink ribbons and "have a happy" written all over it.

You're not the Game, you're the beneficiaries. Now, I hope you get all the money you can out of the owners. Don't misunderstand me on that. They're not the Game, either.

Not when a guy gets the Baltimore Colts for a promissory note and the stadium rent in 1953 and sells for $19 million less than 20 years later and then gets half of downtown Anaheim seven years after that.

Just remember the networks aren't paying $2.1 billion for this TV show because you run nice with the football or the owners add nice with the machines. They're buying tradition and legend and myth and mystique and folklore. They're buying Show Biz, baby. They're buying what Barnum would buy.

But, you're not the Game, babes. Any more than the elephants are the circus. We the People are the Game. We bought the hype, then bought the tickets, bet the game, built the stadiums. A lot of good people with holes in their shoes built your game for you. You got in on a good thing. Just in time for most of you.

If you're not careful, the romance will go out. Old No. 77 on your program or Crowley, Stuhldreher, Miller, Layden, Rockne, or none of you will be the Game anymore. Ed Garvey will be the Game. Or Jack Donlan. Try selling that to ABC.

JoAnne Carner given LPGA top player award

HOUSTON (AP) — For the second consecutive year and the third time in her 13-year career, JoAnne Carner has been chosen the Player of the Year by the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

Patti Rizzo, 22, of Hollywood, Fla., was named the 1982 Rookie of the Year by the LPGA, it was announced Tuesday.

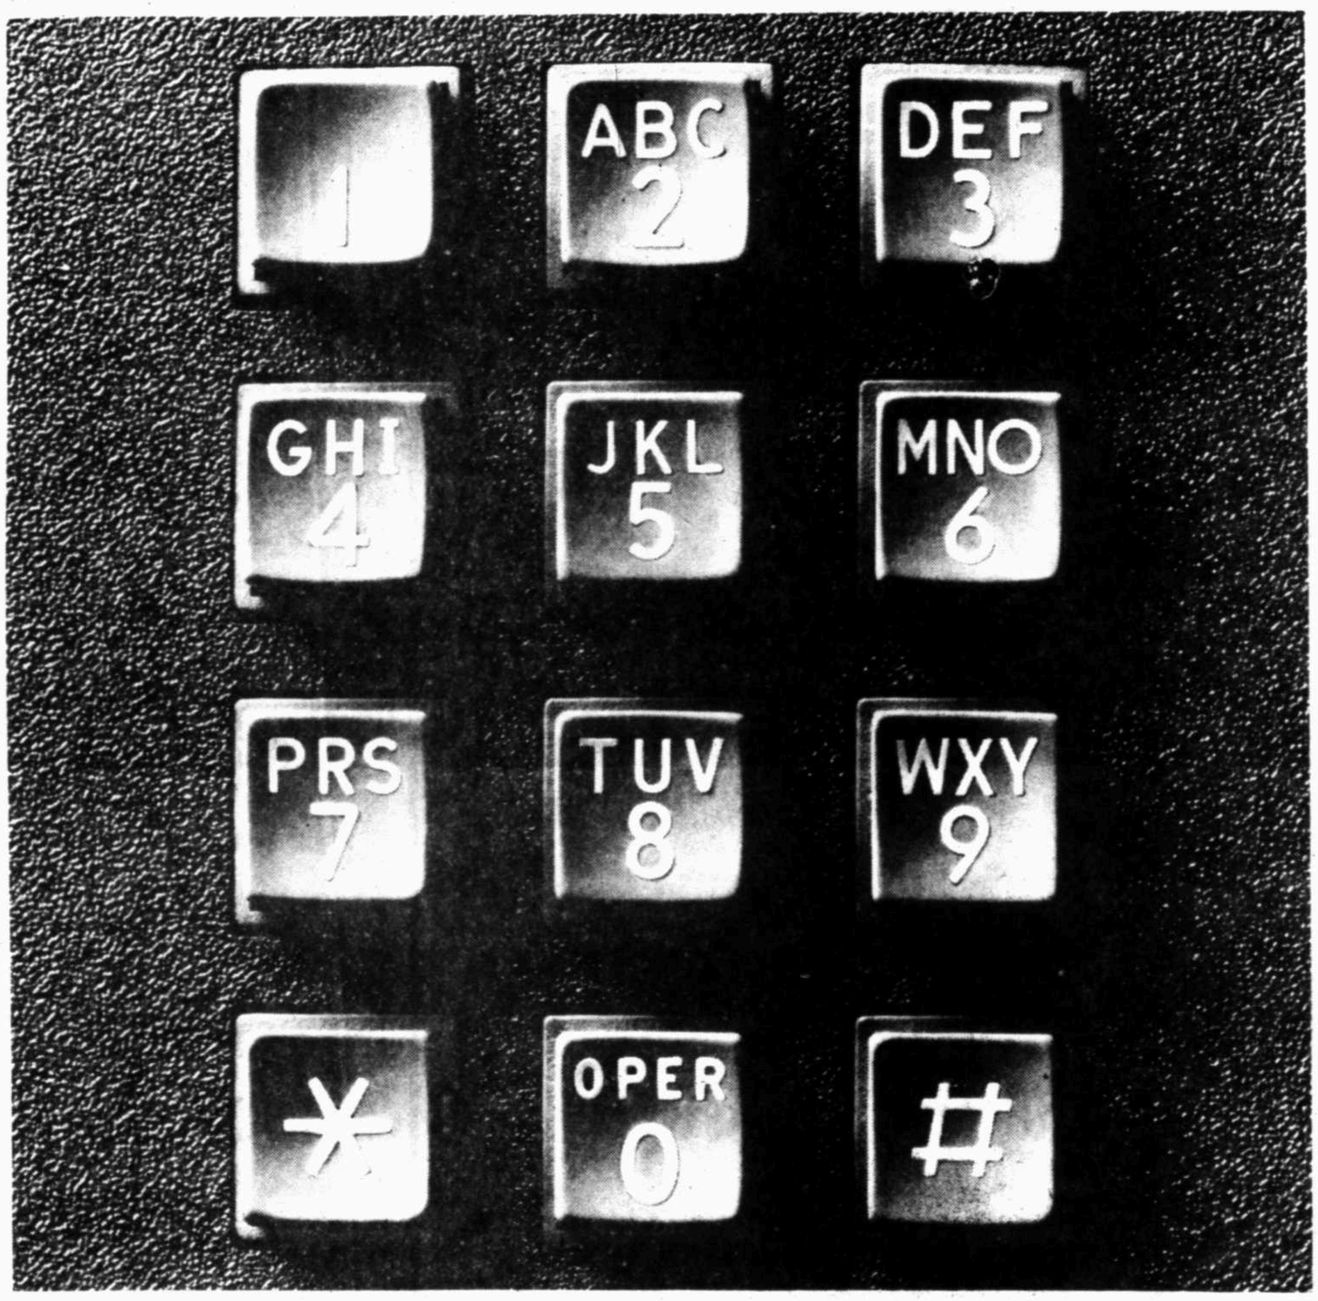

With the Mazda-Japan Classic remaining, the 43-year-old Carner leads as the LPGA's career money winner with $1.35 million.

So far this year the Palm Beach, Calif., native has earned $308,759. She is the first woman golfer ever to top the $300,000 mark.

Carner, who calls herself "Big Mama," has won five tournaments this year and finished second in the LPGA championship. She was the 10th golfer to qualify for the LPGA Hall of Fame.

Rizzo, a former All-American from the University of Miami, has finished in the Top Ten five times this year.

Already some consumers are using the telephone to dial up news and weather maps. Shop from department store catalogs. And compare supermarket specials, right on their own television sets.

Soon, local utilities will be able to monitor a home's energy usage, taking remote readings of gas and electric meters.

What would happen if Americans could vote by phone? Only half of American voters went to the polls in 1980.

What would happen if almost everyone were to vote at home by phone?

What if you were able—just by touching a few buttons—to get information from computers located anywhere in the world?

Tomorrow all these services may be an everyday reality. And the telephone network is the key.

As a result, Southwestern Bell will become more important than ever before. Simply because Southwestern Bell is the gateway to The Information Age—the link between your telephone and a whole world of knowledge and services that will be at your disposal.

We know you have questions about what's happening in our industry. We want to make it easy for you to get answers. So call us. And let's talk.

How are we to remember cantankerous Little Napolean?

By RICHARD HOFFER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BALTIMORE — How to remember Earl Weaver? As the manager who finally brought a semblance of science to baseball, charting statistics with the spectacular efficiency of a CPA? Or as the cantankerous Little Napolean who drove umpires and players to distraction? Or do we remember him as the man who answered the fans' cheers on the last day of his career, appearing on the field to physically form the letters O-R-I-O-L-E-S, tears in his eyes?

Who knows how best to remember Weaver, except to remember him well and often. After 14 1-2 seasons of managing the Baltimore Orioles, Weaver, 52, has retired. He says he wants to stay in Florida when the big club moves north next spring. Wants to play golf in Hialeah, play cards in the clubhouse. Wants to bet the dogs at Biscayne. He wants, he says with some conviction, not to work, except maybe part time as a TV baseball commentator.

So no longer will we see this 5-6 figure bolt onto the field, standing up to umpires with a theatrical fury. No longer will we see him build dirt castles on home plate, physically steal third base or, in the best turnabout-is-fair-play fashion, eject umpires, whole crews at$a time.

No longer will we read of his feuds with players — his own. No longer will we read of the miracles he performs with his 3 x 5 index cards and his lucky pens, creating one-of-a-kind lineups day after day. No longer will we read Earl's Pearls, delivered more often than not in strings. "You should walk with the Lord, Skip," he was once advised. "I'd rather walk with the bases loaded," he replied.

All that is gone, at least for now. Weaver, who has observed the comings and goings of managers for a long time now, recognizes the possibility of un-retiring. Too many others have done it before him. There will be an opening, it will pay a lot of money and he will have become bored beating the hapless "sunbirds" at golf. And he will come back. But, for now, his career is baseball's legacy. So thanks, Earl, for the memories.

It is difficult to pick and choose from those memories. It goes back to how we want to remember this man — manager, maniac or simply a man, the kind of fellow who would stock his wife's kitchen with appliances from a cigarette maker's gift catalogue. But it couldn't hurt to start with his achievements as manager, which are sizable enough to have kept him in the game with one club for nearly 15 continuous years.

As you might expect, Weaver's hiring, like everything else about his career, is not without a story. According to the legend, Weaver, then a third base coach with the Orioles, nearly turned down the manager's job when Hank Bauer was about to be replaced. "It amounted to a cut in pay," says Weaver, still incredulous. "I was managing in Puerto Rico winters and, with the two jobs, would have made more than managing the Orioles." He is still amazed by the offer.

The pragmatic Weaver just couldn't see the advantage of managing a big club for little money. Besides, what job security did a manager have. "I knew I couldn't be a major league player," says the man whose biggest thrill in baseball was being called off a pop fly by former major league standout outfielder Enos Slaughter in a Class AA game, "and I wasn't sure I could be a big league manager. But I was a great third base coach."

The Orioles, to the everlasting enrichment of baseball lore, improved the offer and secured Weaver as manager. He soon proved to be every bit as good a manager as third base coach.

Weaver's genius is really a kind of common sense. All managers are supplied with statistics — who hits whom, how and when. But Weaver was the first to apply them, day in, day out. During his reign there was no such thing as a set lineup. And it wasn't exactly platooning either. Example: Kiko Garcio is hitting .240 but is replaced in the lineup by Mark Belanger, who is hitting .127. Reason? Belanger had a better percentage (.244) against that day's pitcher, Nolan Ryan.

Weaver goes by his cards, little index cards he updates and files. He's never at a loss for the correct matchups. That's what a manager does, after all, find the most advantageous matchups. "Get the guy up there you want," he says. That's managing.

But his managing job hardly ends after he's scrawled out a lineup with a lucky pen (he recently interrupted an interview to compulsively check his drawer — "just wanted to make sure I hadn't lost my lineup pen"). He continues to update the lineup as the game progresses. An Earl Weaver game is a scorekeeper's nightmare! He tinkers endlessly to produce the big boom, that one inning every game where the winner scores more runs than the loser does all nine.

This rather unappreciated genius has allowed Weaver to lead the Orioles to six first-place finishes in the American League East and six second-place finishes.

Poor little 205-pound Joey

By SCOTT OSTLER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Joey Browner was the runt of six brothers, three of them older and two younger, so he not only got hand-me-downs, he got hand-me-ups.

Not that Joey, a star safety on the Usc football team, is small. He's 6-3 and 205, and in most families those numbers would rate you a nickname like Moose or Sir.

But consider, for instance, Joey's baby brother, 18-year-old Gerald, a red-shirting freshman defensive lineman at Georgia.

Gerald is 6-4 and 320 pounds, and runs the 40 in 4.8. Joey says his baby brother is solid as a rock and bench-presses 500 pounds.

By the time Gerald was 13 or 14, he would occasionally assist stranded motorists by lifting their cars out of small ditches and snowbanks. We're not talking about big Cadillacs or Chryslers. Mostly mid-size and compact models, but hey, the kid was only 13. By now he can probably shotput a Volvo.

And even Gerald wasn't the biggest guy in the family. Grandfather Browner on mom's side was 6-6 and 330, and an uncle on the same side checked in at 6-7 and 300.

The Browner Brothers' starting lineup goes something like this (current sizes and ages): Ross (6-4, 260, 28), Jim (6-3, 215, 26), Willard (6-3, 235, 25), Joey (6-3, 205, 22) Keith (6-6, 215, 20) and Gerald (6-4, 320, 18).

This isn't a family, it's a franchise. They should hang a neon sign over their front door: "Over 50,000 tackled."

Alongside the Browner's old house in Ohio was a big field where the boys would play football. Tackle, of course. And other sports. Mom was the coach.

"My father never played any sports," Joey said, "and he died when I was 17. But my mother is about 5-10 and she can still shoot a basketball. When we were young, she'd go out and hit the ball to us. You should see her swing a baseball bat and throw a football."

And run a family of eight kids (two daughters).

"She had us under control," Joey said. "She was tough. My father, too. They really disciplined us. Now, I'm very thankful I was brought up that way. I see people with no sense of direction, and I'm glad I had it."

The six brothers excelled in everything from swimming to karate to basketball, but football is the family game.

The three older brothers played football at Notre Dame. Ross was one of the greatest college defensive linemen of the '70s, and now stars for the Cincinnati Bengals. Jim was a three-year starter in the defensive backfield. Willard was a fullback for Notre Dame and then Utah.

When Joey broke tradition by signing with USC instead of Notre Dame, it wasn't a decision, it was a defection. It became a double defection a year later when Keith followed Joey to USC, and now he's a starting junior linebacker.

USC coach John Robinson probably loses sleep thinking about the one that got away, Gerald. With three Browners on defense, the other teams' offenses might not have been able to get out of the lockerroom, let alone off the line of scrimmage.

As it is, the Trojans' defense isn't exactly a sieve. It has allowed one touchdown in the last 14 quarters, and that one was given up by the third string. This group has given the opposition 2.8 yards per rush and 7.8 points a game.

Joey Browner? He has switched to safety after starting at a cornerback the last two seasons, and he seems to like the spot. He is second on the team in tackles (31), has two interceptions and, for good measure, is second in the nation in punt-return average. The USc coaches are comparing him to Ronnie Lott, the school's standard of defensive backfield excellence.

"He's the type of player you just can't run or pass away from," said Nate Shaw, the Trojan defensive backfield coach and former USC All-American defensive back. "He has an extraordinary sense of where the ball is. Joey will end up where the ball is no matter where it goes. Every game he makes a big play for us."

He's doing real well for a guy who might be playing the wrong sport.

"If Joey had played basketball, he'd be a starting guard (for USC)," Shaw said. "We have a basketball team in the offseason, we go around and play games, and Joey is unbelievable. What does he do? Name it. Rebounds, brings the ball up the court, stuffs, everything."

Keith was a reserve forward on the Trojan basketball team last year, a tough rebounder. But his best sport might be baseball.

The best basketball player in the family might be Gerald, the baby. Joey says Gerald can really play the game.

Strike produces thousands of losers

By NANCY YOSHIHARA
and
ALAN GREENBERG
Los Angeles Times

This fall's professional football season, which has been on an extended time out due to the ongoing players strike, has produced thousands of losers who have never worn a pair of shoulder pads.

There is Kristina Sherman, a Marina del Rey, Calif., cocktail waitress who has been temporarily laid off partly because of slow Monday Night football business at Shanghai Red's.

The three major television networks face potential losses of an average $4 million in advertising revenues each time they cannot broadcast a National Football League game. And then there is Las Vegas where the strike has disrupted football betting which pours an estimated $3 million to $4 million into the desert city each week.

Three weeks into the strike by the National Football Players Association business losses are estimated to be in the hundreds of millions of dollars ($70 million alone during the first weekend of game stoppages).

Each fall week 14 NFL games are played. Broken down, the revenues these games generate are estimated at:

—About $29 million for team owners from television revenues and gate receipts.

—Approximately $9 million in salaries for the striking 1,500 players.

—For the 14 cities hosting the week's games, about $2 million in stadium rentals, taxes, parking fees and transportation fares usually generated.

—Another $28 million is generated from hotels, restaurants and other leisure time businesses in the host cities.

"It's big business," said Clint Page, an associate editor for a monthly publication of the National League of Cities, a Washingotn, D.C.-based group which represents municipal governments. "It (the strike) has a bigger (economic) impact than any of us would probably think at first. We don't see it immediately because we think of it as a game rather than in economic terms."

As in any football contest there is a winning side and a losing side. So far, in this economic battle no one yet is believed to be on the brink of disaster because of the strike. But there are definite losers.

Take the 1,000 part-time employees at RFK Stadium who won't earn their $6 an hour until the Redskins resume playing in the Washington, D.C. stadium. In Foxboro, a suburb of Boston where the Patriots play, each canceled home game costs the Church of Emanuel about $1,800, the fee it earns for taking care of post-game clean up.

None of the 81 employees at NFL Films headquarters in Mount Laurel, N.J., has been laid off, but last week two idle cameramen used the time to paint a wall inside the company's building.

"Things have been cut down pretty drastically, but we're not at a standstill," said John Mullen, vice president and general manager of NFL Films, a private company separate from the league. "But if the strike goes all the way through (the season), it'll be a financial disaster. . . .We'll lose $2.5 million to $3 million."

At the Los Angeles branch of NFL Properties, editorial headquarters for the league's monthly Pro magazine and weekly game programs, there is little worry over the magazine because subscription sales are not dependant on the games.

But if the strike lasts much longer, the company may be stuck with tens of thousands of already printed Game Day programs, which normally would sell for $2 each.

So far, the real victims are the cities whose empty stadiums yawn at the sky every Sunday. Of the 28 stadiums, only the Orange Bowl, the municipally owned home of the Miami Dolphins, has strike insurance. What's more, the Dolphins are the only NFL team contractually obligated to pay their full stadium rent, $45,000 for a scheduled home game whether it is played or not.

"The Miami Dolpins do not have an escape clause," stadium manager Walter Golby said.

For a $12,000 premium, the Orange Bowl received $300,000 strike insurance with a $10,000 deductible. The stadium ordinarily takes in about $42,000 for parking and a percentage of concessions at each of the eight Dolphin regular home games. So the strike insurance, Golby points out, will just about make up for 100 percednt of its customary revenues if the strike wipes out the 1982 season.

The only other NFL facility being compensated by its striking occupant is the Metrodome, the new indoor home of the Minnesota Vikings, which must pay $38,000, half its usual rent each scheduled home game not played.

Even with that payment, Don Poss, executive director, estimates the facility will lose $172,000 in revenues for each canceled game.

Most cities, however, gambled and did not take out any strike insurance because it was simply too expensive. An informal September survey of NFL facilities indicated that the biggest losers will be the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., which will lose an estimated $275,000 in revenues per canceled game, and Veterans Stadium (Philadelphia Eagles) and Mile High Stadium (Denver Broncos), with projected revenue losses of $200,000 per game for each.

The City of Anaheim, Calif., set aside $640,000 from its budget for a strike fund that will cover the loss of revenues of three Los Angeles Ram home games. Luckily, the California Angels won a berth in the American League baseball playoffs, bringing in extra revenue to the Anaheim facility. Still, it will take five post-season baseball games to make up the revenue of one Rams game.

The Los Angeles Coliseum, home of the Raiders, estimates it loses $120,000 in revenue for each lost game.

Ironically, the networks, which help set off the football strike with their generous TV rights contracts with the league, also are suffering, but less than one would expect. Industry sources say that before the strike, ABC had expected to gross $7 million to $8 million from each telecast of Monday Night Football. Similarly, NBC and CBS each was expected to gross $5 million to $6 million from each Sunday game.

Now, however, the networks can only command half of the $80,000 to $150,000 per 30 seconds of commercial time they were asking — and getting — from advertisers eager to reach football's primarily male and affluent audience.

Student nurse files against Dailey

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A student nurse who says she was sexually assaulted by basketball All-America Quintin Dailey filed suit Tuesday against Dailey, the University of San Francsico and the university's security chief, her lawyer said.

Attorney Joe O'Sullivan said he believes "someone very high up" at the school was involved in trying to cover up the Dec. 21, 1981 attack on Victoria Brick in her dormitory room. However, he said an alleged coverup would not include school president Rev. John Lo Schiavo.

In the suit, Ms. Brick, 22, accuses Dailey of sexual assault, battery, false imprisonment and intentional infliction of emotional distress. She also accuses the university and its agents of civil conspiracy and attempted coverup of the incident.

Although O'Sullivan did not specify the damages he is seeking, he said the the amount might be very large. He said he understands Dailey has signed a five year contract worth more than $1 million with the Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball Association.

Dailey, who was a student at USF at the time, is now a rookie guard for the Bulls.

George Walker, who represented Dailey in the sexual assault criminal case brought by the state, said he had no comment on the filing of the civil suit by Ms. Brick. Dailey, 21, eventually pleaded guilty to aggravated assault and received three years probation in a controversial plea bargain arrangement.

Prosecutors dropped three other charges, including attempted rape, in exchange for his plea.

When asked how the case might be settled without going to trial, O'Sullivan said, "The first thing Mr. Dailey's got to do is come up and apologize and take responsibility."

Dailey, who claimed the woman had misidentified him and said later in Chicago that he felt no remorse, has explained that he agreed to plead guilty to an assault charge in order to "keep my career going."

"I would say Mr. Dailey's mouth facilitated the filing of the lawsuit," O'Sullivan said.

In June, USF dropped its NCAA Division I basketball program, partly because of revelations from Dailey that he had been paid almost $5,000 for a no-show job provided by a school alumnus.

The suit was filed in San Francisco Superior Court.

The Bulls were scheduled to play an exhibition game in Texas and Dailey could not be reached immediately for comment.

A spokesman for the university denied there was an attempted cover-up.

"We don't really feel there has been a cover-up," said Al Alessendri, vice president for university relations. "If we did, we would have agreed to a settlement when they came to us."

Scientists make new discoveries with 'Wasp'

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A cross between a diving suit and a submarine is taking scientists into parts of the ocean where they've never gone before — cold, dark regions where luminous fish sparkle like stars on a moonless night.

"The lights are very vivid and bright and the sea is very dark. It's like looking up into the sky on a very clear night, when you're very far from the city, up on top of a mountain," said oceanographer Bruce H. Robison of the University of California-Santa Barbara.

The cause of Robison's enthusiasm is called "Wasp" — a deep-sea diving suit developed eight years ago for the offshore oil industry and being used for the first time by scientists in a pilot program 10 miles out from Santa Barbara.

Wasp looks a bit like a giant yellow insect or a legless, humpbacked robot and works like a one-man minisub with arms. Its pilot fits snugly inside the fiberglass and aluminum canister, his head looking incongruously small within the clear plexiglass dome, well over a foot across, that tops the 1,000-pound machine.

SUSPENDED BY a winch cable from its mothership, Wasp "is very, very maneuverable" through a system of foot-operated thrusters that lets its occupant chase after fish or "motor off to look at something interesting," Robison said. It can work down to 2,000 feet.

Conventional scuba diving has made oceanographers familiar with the first 100 feet or so of ocean. Expensive research subs are opening new worlds on the sea floor. But in between is a vast region that's scarcely visited by researchers, said Robison, chief scientist for the program financed by a $290,000 grant from the National Science Foundation.

Submersibles work best on the bottom, usually offer very limited visibility through portholes a few inches wide and "the scientist never gets to pilot them," said Alice Alldredge, a marine biologist at UCSB and co-principal investigator for the 25-day program.

In the past, she said, scientists probed the depths from ships, hauling up whatever they could catch in nets or in bottles lowered over the side.

"It's been like studying a forest without being able to walk among the trees and pick the flowers," she said. "With nets, you only catch animals that are not very fast and not very fragile."

Worst of all, scientists rarely saw the animals in their environments.

SINCE THE dives began in mid-September, Robison said, "We've been able to answer questions we couldn't answer before and really to frame new questions we didn't even know enough to ask before."

Among the discoveries is a dense, discrete layer of tiny crustaceans called copepods spread across the Santa Barbara Basin about 1,500 feet down. The layer — "nothing like it has ever been reported before" — is about 25 feet thick with the quarter-inch creatures packed 100,000 per cubic yard, Ms. Alldredge said. "What are they doing, just sitting there? We're trying to figure that out."

"In the deep, dark ocean, where there are no rocks or trees or anything to hide behind," living features become the basis of whole communities, Robison said.

He cited the discovery that siphonophores — thin gelatinous creatures up to 20 feet long with stinging tentacles — provide a drifting habitat for colonies of smelt that find refuge among the threatening tentacles.

The most distinctive feature of the lightless depths, Robison said, is bioluminescence, fishes' chemical lights that dot the darkness and are far more than just organic flashlights.

Robison said the lights vary by species and sex and almost certainly helps fish identify each other. "We assume it's used to attract prey or to let the animal see its prey."

Midwater biologists Bruce Robison, left, James King and Alice Alldredge, all from the University of California at Santa Barbara, make last-minute preparations for the descent of atmospheric submersible suit "Wasp" during recent dives in the Santa Barbara Channel. "Wasp" is a cross between a diving suit and a submarine, and according to Robinson, "...just a tremendous improvement over any other submersible..."

WEARING A jump suit and ballet slippers, for better control of the foot-operated thruster buttons, Robison, 39, recently pulled himself out of the suit and climbed down a paint-spattered step ladder after spending about four hours more than 1,500 feet down in the crystal-clear Pacific Ocean.

On the deck of the New Horizon, a research ship owned by the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, Robison said, "This is an amazing machine. I don't ever want to come up."

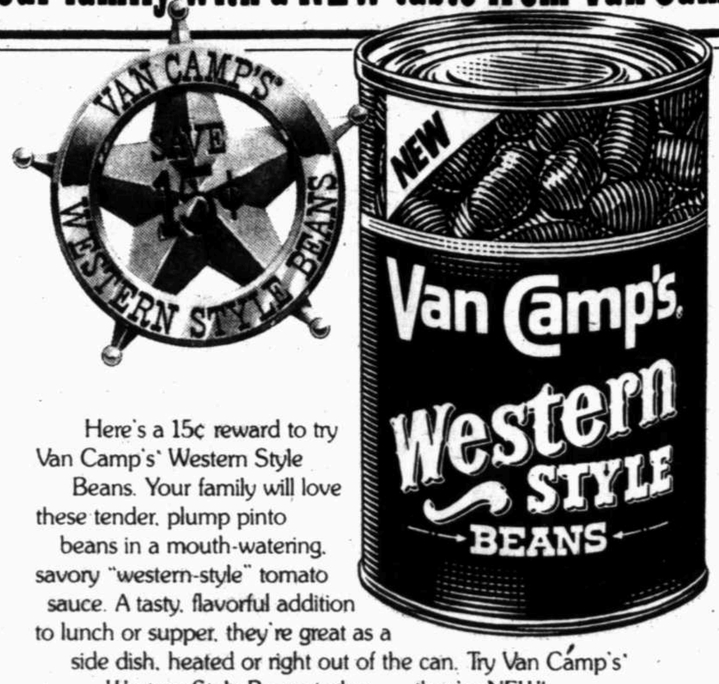

The pilot's arms slip into and manipulate Wasp's oversize limbs and levers open and close the suit's claw-like hands. Scattered about the suit's surface are lights, television camera, strobe lights for a hand-held still camera and an assortment of gear, tanks and ballast.

It carries a 72-hour supply of oxygen, although a maximum dive is considered about six hours. Ms. Alldredge said that in an emergency, weight can be quickly jettisoned and "you pop up to the surface like cork."

Wasp was developed by Oceaneering International, a Houston company that leases a complete package of two suits and all support equipment and personnel for about $10,000 a day.

Papers are all in the family

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The chances of survival for a newspaper that reaches only 15 households and carries no advertising are usually pretty slim.

But for Katherine Raehl, publisher of the Dickey Dispatch, they're pretty terrific. She says reader response to her newspaper has been positively overwhelming.

The Dickey Dispatch is an offshoot of the Raehl Reporter. If you haven't heard of either, don't feel alone. You're probably not a member of the Dickey or Raehl families.

Both newspapers are family affairs designed to strengthen ties between family members who have become scattered across the country.

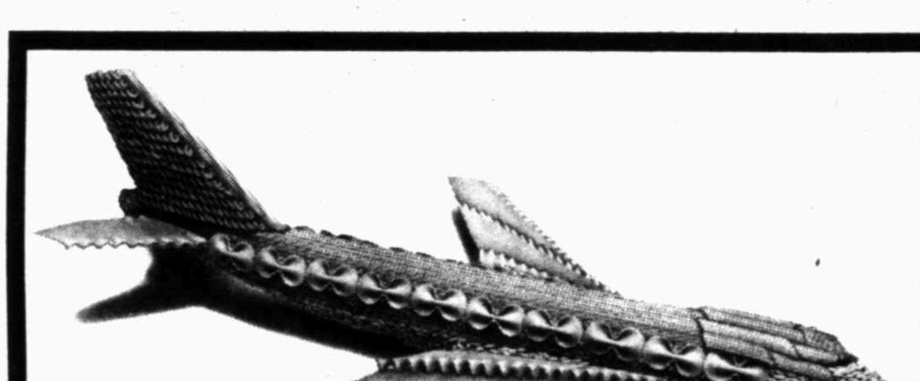

Iris Beattie of Salt Lake City started the Raehl Reporter last winter. Almost immediately, her sister-in-law in Tucson, Mrs. Raehl, began the Dickey Dispatch. Mrs. Raehl's maiden name is Dickey. Mrs. Beattie's maiden name is Raehl.

The papers differ somewhat. Mrs. Beattie's consists of information gleaned from letters from various family members, while Mrs. Raehl's is designed mainly for children.

"Mine is mostly to get cousins to know each other," said Mrs. Raehl. "I usually include games and a little joke contest, or a drawing contest, and sometimes a picture to color. I thought I would just do this for kicks, but everyone really enjoys it."

She relies on her nieces and nephews for many of the stories that appear in her newspaper.

Mrs. Raehl began her newspaper in February and she says it has already achieved its purpose of bringing families a little closer.

Serene Mammoth Lakes created by violent volcanic activity

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. — Geologist C. Dan Miller of the U.S. Geological Survey is as awed as anyone by the beautiful steep-walled mountains and royal blue lakes of this eastern Sierras region but, more so than most, he is acutely aware of the fact that it is a natural beauty created by natural violence.

This is, pure and simple, an active volcanic area — one whose surface has been periodically punctured over at least the last 3 million years by blasts of steam, gases, rock, ashes, pumice and lava. Indeed, Long Valley — of which this popular resort is part — is a 19-by-10-mile, oval-shaped caldera, or depression, that was formed in the aftermath of a stupendous eruption some 700,000 years ago.

For two months, Miller and his USGS colleague, Roy A. Bailey, scrambled up and down the slopes of the area, digging trenches and collecting samples. A trench is to a geologist what an ancient artifact is to an archeologist or an old tome is to an historian: A glimpse into the past.

There, in the layers of the trenches, Miller and Bailey found the evidence of a variety of past volcanic eruptions.

IN A PINKISH-BROWN, SAND-LIKE LAYER, one of almost two dozen widely varying strata in a particular trench, they recognize the tell-tale sign of a pyroclastic flow — an avalanche of scalding ash, gases and rock fragments, superheated to more than 500 degrees Fahrenheit, that can burst from some volcanoes and race across the countryside at speeds of up to 100 miles per hour, incinerating everything in their path.

In another, Miller and Bailey see the gooey little blobs of molten rock that were once so saturated with gas that, now cooled and solidified, they are as lightweight as popcorn. Indeed, these fragments of pumice will float on water.

There, in still another layer, one that resembles nothing so much as pearl-gray talcum powder, Miller identifies an eruption in which water and magma mixed together so violently that the resulting explosion pulverized everything to the consistency of a fine powder.

And besides these layers, the two men point to the irregular rim surrounding Long Valley, of which Mammoth Lakes is but a small part. The rim is the perimeter of a caldera, or depression, created 700,000 years ago when a stupendous volcanic eruption here disgorged 400 times more matter than Mount St. Helens ejected.

Miller's specialty is stratigraphy — layering — and his trained eye quickly took note of the structured regularity in every one of the 25 trenches or so he hacked out of roadside embankments, mountain slopes and ravines this past summer. The layers lay one upon the other like pancakes.

WHAT THIS TOLD MILLER WAS that successive eruptions have followed so closely upon previous ones that the last layer has barely been exposed to 200 or 500 or 1,000 years of wind and water erosion before it was smothered by the ejected material from a new explosion.

It has been somewhere between 250 and 400 years since the last blow-up around here — an interval that seems typical of the region's eruptive history over the last 1,200 years or so. But although Bailey has suggested that a major eruption could occur anytime during the next 50 years, both he and Miller shied away from making a specific prediction about the likelihood of the next volcanic event here.

"We can't do that," Bailey said. "Volcanoes by their very nature don't behave in a regular way. They seem to become active for a few hundred years and then go dormant for a few thousand. That's why it's so hard to put any probability figures on an eruption: You never know where you are in the current cycle of activity."

What makes the present situation here so disquieting is a series of events over the last several years. The resurgent dome, the blister-like swelling that develops inside a volcanic depression after an eruption, that occupies the western corner of Long Valley rose 10 inches between 1978 and 1980 and another three inches between October 1980 and last July. The dome also expanded horizontally.

SWELLINGS LIKE THIS HAVE BEEN observed in other volcanic structures prior to an eruption.

In addition, a string of eight bursts of small earthquakes has taken place under the Sherwin Creek campgrounds, less than two miles southeast of the center of Mammoth Lakes village. Moreover, when Geological Survey scientists have plotted the epicenters of these tremors, they have discovered that the earthquakes are occurring ever-nearer to the surface, suggesting that a tongue of magma is rising from the old underground chamber.

Critics claim Mitterand regime economically indebted to Arabs

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — Longstanding fears that Arab financial power might be able to exercise strong, even decisive sway over the political actions of Western governments have broken to the surface again in Socialist France.

Critics of left-wing President Francois Mitterrand claim his economically squeezed regime has allowed itself to become dangerously vulnerable to that kind of pressure through loans to sustain the reeling franc.

At least one newspaper, le Depeche de Midi, even has voiced charges which have been whispered in Paris political salons in recent months: that threats by large Arab financial institutions, including those handling the fortune of the Saudi royal family, to withdraw funds from France has helped to switch the Mitterrand government early in the Lebanese war from a posture of mild support for Israel to one of vociferous condemnation.

The Paris newspaper Figaro, highly critical of Mitterrand, asserted that an unprecedented four-billion franc loan launched last month on the Eurodollar market put the government in an even more exposed position. The paper pointed out that Arab and Japanese banks were among the loan's main subscribers while many major Western financial houses, including the Chase Manhattan, Citicorp and Morgan Guaranty banks, had kept hands off what they judged a questionable risk.

Opposition politicians said the Socialist government could have gone to either the European Economic Community or the International Monetary Fund for a loan on more favorable terms. They alleged it preferred the Eurodollar commercial market because, by adopting that course, the government avoided outside surveillance of its economic policies which an IMF or EEC loan would have entailed.

"Instead of submitting to the non-political but sound economic oversight of the IMF," said Figaro, "the government put itself in a position of submitting to the effective political pressure of people like Colonel Qaddafi."

A Libyan bank was among the leading subscribers to the loan. The loan is intended to reduce the onslaught on the franc by demonstrating that the government has the means to prevent a devaluation of its currency for the third time since it came to power.

Insiders allege that the Socialist regime made itself vulnerable to Arab financial pressure from the moment it took office in May, 1981, by embarking on a free-spending program designed to heighten domestic demand and thus revitalize industrial production. In a climate of worldwide recession and intense foreign competition, the policy backfired. What it mainly achieved was to put France in the forefront of Western inflation while the French trade deficit soon climbed to an historic high.

The franc lost 40 percent of its value against the dollar and fell substantially against most other currencies. How much the Banque de France has spent to shore it up against a further plunge is a state secret. Estimates range as high as 60 percent of the treasury's hard currency reserves.

Throughout this period, the French are believed to have been quietly borrowing from Arab sources to avoid a larger depletion of their own cash reserves. In a swiftly worsening situation starting last spring, borrowing is thought to have intensified.

One theory is the September loan was undertaken partially to lessen financial dependence on the Arabs. Ironically, it may have led to the opposite result.

Joint custody of children doesn't have to be tug of war

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Dr. Robert Fay, separated from his wife, drove 80 miles to attend a PTA meeting at his children's school only to find the lights out and the doors locked.

Nobody had told him the meeting was postponed. Although he had joint custody of his two children, the school district refused to mail him PTA notices without a specific court order.

"An interest in a child should be nurtured, not obstructed," the pediatrician complained later. "I exist and I care and so do thousands of other fathers."

Joint custody remains a rarity that has not been accepted fully by schools, family courts, lawmakers and, in many cases, divorcing parents. Now, some experts see a tide turning.

"The discussion of pros and cons is getting hotter and hotter," said Dr. Doris Jonas Freed, chairwoman of the custody committee of the American Bar Association.

"WE WANT to humanize the adversary process in child-custody cases. What we're interested in is getting the kids out of the fight," she said.

California's strong joint-custody law, passed in 1979 and since strengthened, has become a model for similar legislation in such states as Nevada, Hawaii, Montana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Idaho.

The laws generally direct judges to give preference to joint custody. If that is not sensible, the judge is advised to award custody to the parent who seems most likely to allow the other to have frequent access to the child.

The law eliminates the motivation for bruising, winner-take-all custody fights by giving parents an incentive to cooperate. If they behave vindictively, sole custody could go to the other parent.

There are more than 1 million divorces annually in the United States, and two-thirds of the couples have children under the age of 14. Ninety percent of all divorcing mothers gain sole custody of their children, and most of them hold jobs.

Effects on children are often economic as well as emotional. U.S. Census Bureau Director Bruce Chapman recently reported that single parenthood "is almost a prescription for poverty, especially in urban areas."

"FATHERS WOULDN'T pay child support so grudgingly if they felt like parents instead of just like wallets," said Fay, who has been divorced from his wife and has joined Equal Rights for Fathers Inc. "The trauma of losing one's children is really not appreciated."

Under the no-fault divorce laws that most states passed in the 1970s, women who sue for divorce get it automatically. Their former husbands find themselves losing not only their wives but their children as well.

Visitation rights are not enough, joint-custody advocates argue. "You can't have frequent and continuing contact when you're a 'zoo' father, or a 'movie' father when it rains," Mrs. Freed said.

Dr. O.C. Coogler of the Family Mediation Association in Bethesda, Md., said his toughest job is convincing couples that joint custody does not mean a tug of war between parents.

Children are usually quick to accept that their divorced parents have different rules on things like when to go to bed and what to eat, Coogler said. They shift between households the way they might shift between home and school.

Coogler and his ex-wife, who live in different states, each have remarried and have kept their young children one full year at a time since their divorce.

"WE RECOGNIZE that there will be changes as there are changes in the needs of the children," he said. "This has not been easy, but on the whole I think it has worked out rather well."

"You don't have to love your ex-spouse in order to work out a businesslike arrangement in the best interests of the children," argues Ellen Kimball, a former Boston radio talk-show host who founded Mothers Without Custody Inc. in Sudbury, Mass., last year.

"Joint custody doesn't work, though, unless the parents are willing to look at it as a situation that will go on forever," she said.

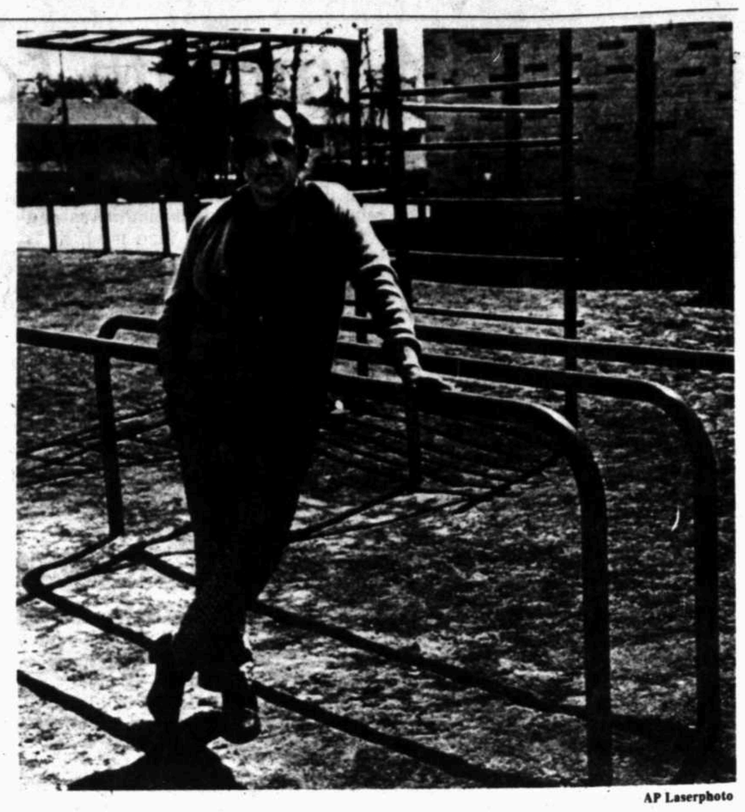

Ms. Luepnitz' study of 91 children from the Buffalo, N.Y., area found that children in the custody of their mothers often treated their fathers like distant uncles.

"The children either devalue or idealize their fathers, and usually it's a strange mixture of both," she said, adding that children of joint custody appeared to have normal relationships with both parents.

A measure of joint custody's success in California was a study of 414 cases in a Santa Monica, Calif., court that found couples awarded joint custody returned to court to resolve disputes only half as often as those awarded single custody.

EVEN IN California, judges continue awarding single custody in most cases. In states like New York where joint custody is merely an option, and not the "preferred" one, joint-custody decrees are rarer still.

"You've got a generation of judges who decreed all the sole custody cases, and now we're questioning the morality of their decisions. They're scampering to defend their decisions," said James A. Cook of Los Angeles, a divorced father and president of the Joint Custody Association.

Arms, armor on exhibit

CINCINNATI (AP) — An exhibition of arms and armor dating back to the 14th century and including items used by royalty is on loan from Great Britain's oldest museum.

The exhibit at the Cincinnati Art Museum includes a sword that once belonged to Oliver Cromwell, a pistol made for Henry VIII and armor used by Maximilian I of Germany.

The oldest piece on display is a visored battle helmet, from Germany or northern Italy, believed to be made in 1370-80. One of the more ornate is a silver-mounted sporting gun believed to have been a gift from Louis XIV of France to Charles Lennox, first Duke of Richmond.

For centuries the pieces never left the Tower of London.

The Tower of London was built by William the Conquerer in the 11th Century, shortly after he invaded and conquered England. It has been a royal arsenal, residence and prison.

William built the tower as a place to store weapons. Later kings of England used it for minting coins, storing royal jewels and as a zoo.

It has housed political prisoners over the centuries and was used as a prison during World War I and World War II.

Over the past 200 years, the tower primarily has been a national showplace, where long lines of tourists wait for hours to see the priceless crown jewels, implements of torture and ornate armor.

The collection includes hunting garniture — riding stirrups, powder flask and flintlock pistols — of Empress Elizabeth of Russia, combat armor worn by Henry VIII and field armor made for Charles II when he was the 14-year-old Prince of Wales.

The military dress sword of Arthur Wellesley, the first Duke of Wellington and victor over Napoleon at the Battle of Waterloo, is part of the collection, as is the tournament armor of Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I.

A military backsword, circa 1640, believed to be Cromwell's, lacks complete verification but Tower officials are convinced it did belong to the leader of the Commonwealth government that ruled England from 1653-59.

"We are tremendously pleased to have the only United States showing of this internationally important exhibition," said Millard F. Rogers Jr., director of the Cincinnati Art Museum. "The Tower has one of the world's two or three finest arms and armor collections, and the exhibition will be a splendid representation of that quality."

Museum spokeswoman Jane Durrell said the museum sold 25,000 advance tickets for the exhibition, which runs through Jan. 9.

Mrs. Durrell said museum officials consider it a major coup to have secured the exhibit.

Democrats are demanding equal air time

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the autumn of even-numbered years, a president's fancy often turns to thoughts of national television. President Reagan is going on the air tonight, with what the White House calls a non-partisan progress report on the economic situation.

The Democrats, predictably, protest that there is no such thing as a non-partisan, nationally televised address by a Republican president three weeks before congressional elections.

That is exactly what Republicans said when Democrats held the White House and roles were reversed.

The opposition party always demands, and usually gets, broadcast time to respond to the president. But it is not equal time, no matter what the hour or the duration. No rebuttal commands the attention or the audience a president can muster.

An Analysis

Reagan's economic progress report was scheduled after the unemployment rate hit 10.1 percent, highest since the last days of the Great Depression. Larry Speakes, the deputy White House press secretary, said the purpose was to report to the nation on where things stand, not to announce any new administration action.

In every address, at every news conference, and in off-the-cuff comments in between, the president points to declining interest rates and to an inflation rate that has dropped to 5.1 percent, while acknowledging that unemployment remains an agonizing problem.

"The toughest, most urgent priority we have is to create more jobs," he said after the double-digit unemployment rate was announced last Friday.

Those themes certainly will be part of his progress report, just as they are part of his set campaign speech and his Republican campaign commercials.

That context, and the fact that Reagan usually gains support with his television appearances, led congressional Democrats to argue that he shouldn't get TV time for the address. They asked for response time, and they warned that stations broadcasting the Reagan report might be subject to demands for rebuttal time from supporters of Democratic congressional candidates in their viewing areas.

It is a dispute politicians have been rehearsing for years. Whenever the president speaks as president during a campaign, the other party insists he really is speaking as a politician, trying to influence the outcome.

That is standard procedure, even when the issue is an international crisis. After the Cuban missile crisis, which erupted during the 1962 congressional election campaign, Republicans said they had been warning for months that the Soviet Union was shipping offensive missiles to Cuba and suggested that President John F. Kennedy might have timed his response for political advantage.

That response was a naval blockade of Cuba, which Kennedy announced on Oct. 22, 1962. Moscow backed off, and on Nov. 2, Kennedy was on national radio and TV again, with word that the Soviet missile sites were being dismantled.

More frequently, late-campaign presidential reports and initiatives have been on the topic Reagan is addressing: the economy. Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson, Republican Gerald R. Ford and Democrat Jimmy Carter all announced major anti-inflation moves during prime campaign time.

Carter outlined his anti-inflation drive in a nationally broadcast address on Oct. 24, 1978, invoking voluntary wage-price guidelines with the threat of sanctions if they were not observed. "If there is one thing I am asking of every American tonight, it is to give this plan a chance to work," he said in that address.

Republicans called his address blatantly political and too little, too late. Whatever the politics of it, the program didn't work.

When presidents ask for broadcast time or, as in the case of Reagan's address tonight, announce that they're speaking and that it is available for radio and TV, they usually get the time. But not always.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Cocaine use can harm cardiovascular system

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have seen a number of stories in which cocaine is called a recreational drug. To my way of thinking, recreation is something good. I personally don't have the money to use cocaine, but if it's so good, what's the fuss all about? — Gerry, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Dear Gerry: You start out with an incorrection assumption, and then treat the assumption as if it were a fact. The fact is that cocaine has the potential for serious harm, including changes in cardiovascular performance and emotional status.

According to Dr. Charles R. Schuster, of the department of psychiatry and of pharmacologic and biologic sciences at the University of Chicago School of Medicine, a cocain overdose can lead to respiratory arrest, coma, seizures, and cardiac arrest. If that's "so good," I don't know what you consider bad.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I saw an article in the paper and it listed the reasons that women should have amniocentesis — for example, those of a certain age. What I would like to know is why they don't do it for everyone. You can't be certain that the fetus is healthy and if it's so simple, all women should have the benefit of it. You opinion would be appreciated. — Mrs. F.J., Portland, Maine

Dear Mrs. J.: Amniocentesis is not a particularly risky procedure, but it is not completely risk-free. Even if it were, however, why perform a procedure that the large majority of women do not need?

Amniocentesis should be reserved for older women (at least 35 years of age) as you suggest in your letter, and for others who are known to be at risk of giving birth to a child with some genetic abnormality.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is 78 years of age. He always seems to be tired lately and when I ask him about it, he says he doesn't sleep very well. Then when I ask him why he doesn't see a doctor, he says that all older people have trouble sleeping and that what he really needs is a sleeping pill. What would you recommend? — Sam, Tampa, Fla.

Dear Sam: A person who doesn't sleep well and is always tired should be checked by a physician, whether the patient is 78 years old or any other age.

Dr. William C. Dement, of the sleep research center at the Stanford University School of Medicine, says that the idea that older people need less sleep is a myth. And if people accept this myth, it is likely that specific sleep disorders will be overlooked. These disorders can be quite serious.

Sleeping pills are no solution to the problem either. Your father should be receiving medical attention, and the sooner he gets it, the better.

For Carmen, Great Neck, Long Island, N.Y.: Some studies have suggested that the consumption of alcohol and diet high in animal fat appear to be associated with increased risk of breast cancer.

Lile makes knives for celebrities

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Look closely in the next Sylvester Stallone movie and you'll get a glimpse of the handiwork Jimmy Lile prides himself on — his knives.

Lile, who says he couldn't afford to buy a good knife when he was young, regularly creates $1,000 custom-made cutlery. In addition to Stallone, the knifemaker's customers include U.S. presidents, European royalty and other actors. Collectors in Japan, Belgium, Sweden, Denmark and Germany own Lile knives. One design is in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C.

Prior to 1970, when his construction contracting business fell through, Lile made knives just for fun. Now, it is his profession.

He said in a recent telephone interview that he has sold his designs to Presidents Nixon and Ford, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and the King of Sweden, Karl Gustaf. That knife, he says, was valued at $2,500 and was made of gold bolsters and Mother of Pearl handles with engraving.

Actors John Wayne, Peter Fonda, and Hank Williams also bought Lile knives. Stallone uses a Lile creation in his upcoming picture "First Blood."

Stallone's movie, to be released Oct. 22, is about a Vietnam War veteran who finds civilian life difficult. Lile, who says he hasn't seen a movie in a long time, plans to go to this one. The action, he says, revolves around his knive.

Lile says he's known Stallone for some time. "I met him through a mutual friend in the Los Angeles area. He was going to do a movie called "First Blood" and he called me and he asked me to design a knife for him."

Lile says he only intends to make 100 of the model. "The first 13 have the movie's name on one side and my name on the other. Sly got the first six and I kept the next seven. Numbers 14 through 100, we plan to sell."

Most of the others, he says, probably will be sold overseas. Lile says most of his customers are acquired by word of mouth. As president of the knife-makers guild, he says he has found plenty of buyers for his product. "I have probably 12 to 15 different models. At the moment though I'm not taking any custom orders, I won't allow myself to get more than a year behind," Lile says.

Lile makes his knives in a workshop outside his home on Arkansas Highway 7 South between Russellville and Dardanelle. Spending about 12 hours at it daily, Lile takes about 35-man hours to design a knife.

The idea for the the First Blood design came from imagining what he would need if he was in a downed aircraft. That is why the knife features a compass in the handle, fishing wire, hammers and screwdrivers and milled saw teeth for cutting small trees.

Cosby to be on Temple's Board of Trustees

Bill Cosby

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian Bill Cosby, who dropped out of Temple University in his junior year but started his career joking about its football team, has been elected to the school's Board of Trustees.

Cosby wasn't present for the election Tuesday, but he is expected to attend the inauguration of Temple's new president before the end of the month, said William Seyler, secretary of the board.

Cosby left Temple in 1962 to go into show business. He soon included jokes about the pain and suffering of playing college football — especially against a tough team from Hofstra.

"He was an outstanding track man," said his former track coach, Gavin White, who was appointed Temple athletic director over the weekend. "He called me today and we congratulated each other."

Cosby, who won four Emmy awards for his television performances, eventually received his bachelor's degree in 1977 from Temple's School of Communications and Theater.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has refused to throw out a studio lawsuit seeking $45 million from two former stars of the "Dukes of Hazzard" television show, Thomas Wopat and John R. Schneider.

The action by Warner Bros. Inc., a counterclaim to a suit filed by the actors, contends they failed to turn up in June to begin work for the 1982-1983 television season in June. The court, in an order processed Tuesday, denied without comment the actors' request to dismiss the action.

The two stars filed suit in May, claiming they were being "defrauded out of substantial merchandising royalties" stemming from the TV series. They claimed Warner Bros. had breached their contract, thus excusing them from having to appear for the season's start.

Tom Wopat

The following month, Warner Bros. filed a counterclaim, alleging the actors had breached their contract. The suit asked for $45 million in damages and threatened to seek an injunction barring the pair from working for anyone else.

In July, Warner Bros. signed two virtual unknowns — Byron Cherry and Christopher Mayer, as additions to the "Dukes" cast. They beat out more than 2,230 applicants in a nationwide talent search.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hu Na, the teen-age Chinese women's tennis star who is seeking political asylum in the United States, has been granted a work permit.

David Ilchert, regional director of the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Tuesday he approved the 19-year-old's application for a permit because she "demonstrated economic need."

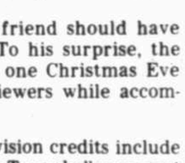

The agency has "given her permission to work if she can find employment," he said.

Ilchert will make the final decision on Miss Hu's asylum request after weighing an upcoming State Department advisory opinion on the application. He could not say when the opinion would be issued.

Miss Hu has not appeared in public since she vanished July 20 from the Federation Cup tennis tournament in Santa Clara, 50 miles south of San Francisco. She applied for political asylum on July 26.

Carson won't fight drunken driving charge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson has changed his mind about fighting a drunken driving charge and has decided to plead no contest in order "not to prolong the matter," his publicist says.

According to a statement released Tuesday by publicist Jim Mahoney, attorney Robert Shapiro had "urged Carson to proceed to trial, having accumulated evidence and testimony in his favor."

"The entertainer has, however, concluded that it is in everyone's best interest not to prolong the matter, which has taken on the proportions of a media event," Mahoney added.

Shapiro will enter the no-contest plea Thursday in Beverly Hills Municipal Court, Mahoney said. A no-contest plea is virtually the same as a guilty plea, except that it may not be used against a defendant in any subsequent civil action.

Carson was stopped by Beverly Hills police Feb. 27 while driving home from a restaurant. Police gave him a test that showed the comedian had 0.16 percent blood-alcohol. The legal limit in California for driving is 0.10 percent.

Shapiro has said, however, that he believes the equipment may have malfunctioned because it had only recently been returned to service after repairs.

"There are a tremendous number of independent witnesses who observed Carson over a period of five hours and they are adamant that he wasn't intoxicated," Shapiro said after a hearing in July.

He had said he was sure he could get Carson acquitted as he had done for trial lawyer F. Lee Bailey in a similar case in San Francisco.

Carson, who celebrates his 57th birthday next week, observed his 20th anniversary as host of NBC-TV's "Tonight Show" last week and announced to his staff he has signed a new long-term contract with the network to continue as host.

Jastrow's dream of 'Waltz Across Texas' ends with Dallas premiere

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

DALLAS — Tuesday night's "Waltz Across Texas" world premiere had for its setting the plush Loews Anatole Hotel here. For two of the 900-plus gathered at the hotel's theater, the premiere marked the completion of a dream.

Two years ago, former Midlander Terry Jastrow and his wife, actress Anne Archer, announced their plans to star in and film a romantic comedy set against the search for black gold. The movie would be filmed on location after the necessary funds were raised to begin shooting. A year later the production company of Aster Corp., was in Midland filming "Waltz Across Texas."

Filmed entirely in Midland, the movie employed about 300 locals — behind and in front of the cameras. For many of them, it was their first experience in the movie business. Local faces who will be easily recognized when the movie premieres in Midland Oct. 22 include Herb Wales, Robert Underwood, Jim Salners, Bill Shaner and Darrell Ward. Familiar locations include The Midland Hilton; the inside of the Stardust, the Bar, the Petroleum Center, Midland's skyline and inside shots of Commercial Bank and Trust and Midland National Bank.

Now, $6 million later, Miss Archer and Jastrow have the opportunity to see their dream come true. Tuesday's gala stretched from a pre-premiere party in the Monte Carlo Room, a screening in the Anatole's theater, to the post-premiere party in the hotel's grand ballroom. (It also included a private pre-pre-premiere for the investors at the Mansion Hotel.)

PERSONALITIES ON hand for the affair included Morgan Fairchild of "Flamingo Road," Ed "Too Tall" Jones and Butch Johnson of the Dallas Cowboys; Preston Pearson, retired from the Cowboys; Darrell Royal of the University of Texas coaching fame; Dan Jenkins, writer for Sports Illustrated and author of "Baja Texas" and "Semi-Tough;" athlete turned sportscaster, Dave Marr; golfer Byron Nelson; Joel Smith, executive director of the Texas Film Commission; and Sam Drogg, president of the USA Film Festival.

The fact that many of the celebrities came from the sports world is not incongruous with Jastrow's background. After all, Jastrow, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. K.M. Jastrow of Midland, was at age 22, the youngest producer in ABC Sports history. Jastrow continues to direct ABC's most complex sport event, the U.S. Open, a project he has been in charge of for the past eight years.

Sponsored by the USA Film Festival in conjunction with Atlantic Releasing, the event was billed as an optional tux and boots affair.

The evening's attire ranged from boots and cowboy hats to the latest in formal wear. Midland will have its own tux and boots premiere Oct. 22 at the Howard Hodge Cinema. The Midland premiere is presented by High Sky Girls' Ranch in conjunction with Aster Corp., with all proceeds going to High Sky Girls' Ranch.

By the time the 80-minute movie began Tuesday night, the Anatole's 1,000-seat theater was almost full.

OF THE USA Film Festival's sponsoring the Dallas premiere Drogg said, "We wanted to pay some attention to Texas films. This was a film made in Texas, by Texas, with Texas money and I have a feeling there's going to a lot more of these. We hope to use the USA Film Festival series as a catalyst to make Texas a film center financially, creatively and culturally."

Hosting the premiere ceremonies was the voice of the Dallas Cowboys, Vern Lundquist. Lundquist and Jastrow have been friends and working associates for a number of years.

Perhaps one of the high points in the presentation of personalities immediately prior to the actual screening were the comments by a sportscaster personality, who was not on hand in person, but in voice. The voice was immediately recognized.

"I wish I could be waltzing across Texas with you and the USA Film Festival," Howard Cosell began.

After identifying how well he knew Jastrow and Miss Archer, Cosell said of Miss Archer, "I've been in love with her for many years and have been obsessed with the notion that Anne could have made a better marriage."

Laughter followed with applause and more laughter greeting Lundquist's quip, "One of the advantages of having Howard on tape is we can control how long he talks."

Lundquist also introduced the stars as well as the film's director Ernest Day and producer Martin Jurow. Not present but also starring in the movie were Mary Kay Place, Richard Farnsworth, Josh Taylor, Noah Beery and Ben Piazza.

Day is best known as David Lean's camera man, serving as cinematographer on "Lawrence of Arabia," "Doctor Zhivago," "Ryan's Daughter," "Exodus," "Becket" and "Lord Jim."

A Dallas-based producer, Jurow is known for producing, among others, "Breakfast at Tiffanys," "Pink Panther," and "Shot in the Dark."

JUROW DREW A resounding applause when he said, "With the increasing intensity of film development in Texas we are truly bound to be the third coast." Jurow will begin his next film, "Terms of Endearment," in February.

Perhaps Dan Jenkins best summed up the attitude of Jastrow's friends and associates who were on hand for the premiere when he said, "Anne's a very good actress and he's (Jastrow) a make-it-happen guy. It took more energy, talent and ability to make it happen than it did to say a line 30 times. I don't care if it's a good or bad movie, the thing is he got it made. He went up against the studios. He went up against the system. I think it's fantastic."

ENTERTAINMENT

Turn on TV and turn on fireplace, gurgling fish

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Turned off by the same old television shows? Tired of losing at video games? A California entrepreneur suggests relaxing in front of a crackling fire or gently swimming fish — on your TV screen.

Steve Siporin believes he has an answer for television viewers burned out by the video explosion of the past few years. He thinks people tired of staring at Pac-Man, adult movies and all-news networks will be natural customers for his Video Fireplace and Video Aquarium, recorded on home video cassettes.

"Hopefully, it will be a fun thing for Christmas," Siporin said. Anyone lacking a fireplace can have a Yule fire anyway — without hauling logs, sweeping ashes, or dumping hot embers on the carpet.

The cassettes, priced at less than $40, also are much cheaper than real exotic fish. About 25 of the colorful creatures cruise calmly through Siporin's video waters. And, he notes, the fish never die.

Are televised flames anything like the real thing?

"It's wonderful," Siporin, 49, claimed. "It's crazy. You put it on and the first thing you do is stare, just like with a real fire. Then you realize you're staring at a fire on TV."

The flaming logs — California pine, eucalyptus, oak and walnut — come complete with the sounds of crackles and pops. The gurgle of water complements the gliding fish.

Siporin said he got the idea for the cassettes two years ago as he sipped cocktails with friends in New York City one cool night.

Gesturing to the television, he jokingly suggested his friend should have a videotape of a fire to take the chill off the evening. To his surprise, the friend produced a cassette of a burning Yule log, taped one Christmas Eve from a television station that broadcast the fire for its viewers while accompanying it with Christmas carols.

Siporin, an assistant director who says his movie and television credits include work on "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and "Guyana Tragedy," says most people are overwhelmed by "directed" images that bombard them.

Movie and television scenes have been so zoomed, tilted, panned and edited that they overwhelm the viewer, demanding constant attention, he said.

His hour-long fire and fish tapes, produced by an unmoving camera, make no such demands.

"Nothing will be missed if the mood created by these cassettes causes the viewer to relax, perhaps even daydream," he said, adding that anyone who buys the fire cassette will also have a new place to hang Christmas stockings.

Andrew cuts vacation short

LONDON (AP) — Dashing Prince Andrew jetted home today, alone and reportedly angry about shortening his holiday with erotic movie star Koo Stark because of nosy cameramen and reporters who invaded their Caribbean hideaway.

British press reports said Queen Elizabeth II's 22-year-old son "hijacked" a light plane chartered by photographers and was flown off the island of Mustique on Tuesday to Barbados.

Counsel may help juveniles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Counseling and home placement programs can reduce the number of juveniles locked up for minor status offenses, but they don't cut down on re-arrest rates, according to a federally-funded study.

Status offenders are young people whose acts would not be criminal if committed by adults. The acts include such behavior as incorrigibilty, truancy and running away from home.

The study, done by University of Southern California researchers, evaluates a program undertaken at eight sites where programs were implemented to help juveniles stay out of detention facilities. The study and the evaluation were funded by the Justice Department.

The evaluation concluded that subsequent arrest rates of status offenders after participation in the program were approximately equal to a comparison group that had received traditional court treatment.

Safety policies advised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has recommended safety procedures that would require some nuclear plants to strengthen their walls against the possibility of cracks.

While saying no immediate danger exists, the NRC concluded that safeguards are necessary to prevent a future accident. Studies have shown that radiation can make reactor pressure vessels brittle.

NRC spokesman Frank Ingram said the NRC recommended that a screening procedure be set up to review all 40 pressurized water reactor plants in the country.

'Attack' scares listeners

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — Listeners of a Sheffield radio station panicked after hearing a phony broadcast of an imminent nuclear attack on London.

Keith Kues, program director for the commercial station Radio Hallam, said Monday he started an internal investigation of the station's Sunday broadcast, which he called "an irresponsible piece of journalism."

The fake warning was used as an introduction to a nuclear debate on its public affairs program. After saying Russian missiles and bombers were heading for London, the announcer said there was "no need to panic" and went on to explain the announcement was meant to focus attention on the importance of the debate.

Rescuers continue hunting

LONDON (AP) — Rescuers in Liberia, hampered by torrential rain and knee-deep mud, intensified their search for nearly 200 people feared buried last week in a landslide at a iron mine.

Forty-six bodies have been recovered and 34 survivors found, an Information Ministry spokesman said Monday in a telephone interview from the west African nation.

The victims were buried when a dam broke, sending tons of mine tailings down a hillside into a camp run by the state-owned National Iron Mining Co. The camp is on the Mano River, near the Sierra Leone border, the spokesman said.

IT'S PEOPLE THAT MAKE NEWSPAPERS GO!

National Newspaper Week October 10th- 16th

...And at The Reporter-Telegram that means people working in a dozen different departments with one common goal: To produce and deliver to you the best daily newspaper possible.

To help us do a better job we're taking a close look at ourselves, how we do things and how we could do them better. We're examining all the possiblities and looking at all the angles that could result in a better Midland Reporter-Telegram for you.

And our people are deeply involved in helping us make those changes. This week we'll be letting you know who some of them are and the role they play in producing your daily paper.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

People still produce your newspaper

Modern Technology aids Process

From setting type on a video display terminal connected to the most modern computerized equipment to assembling a page in its finished form, employees of The Reporter-Telegram's Composing Room perform a wide variety of functions.

It is in the Composing Room where all parts of the newspaper editorial and news content, display and classified advertising come together. Advertisements are transferred electronically to special Raycomp terminals where operators compose the ad on a display screen just as it will appear in the newspaper.

Classified ads telephoned to the newspaper, or received in person in the classified office, also are entered into the computer system and each day they are typeset through our computerized photo-typesetters.

Editorial and news copy, produced locally by the newspaper's staff and that received over the Reporter-Telegram's many news wires, is also entered into computers, typeset and placed on the pages according to layouts provided by Editorial Department copy editors.

And these are only a few of the steps through which advertising and news must go before becoming the finished product delivered to readers.

To do the job, a total of 18 employees make up the Composing Room staff while four others are employed in the computer room.

More than a regular eight-hour shift is necessary to produce the newspaper's advertising and compose both advertising and news columns in the seven-day-a-week-Reporter-Telegram. Night crews take over when the regular day staff completes their work.

The procedures utilized in composing a newspaper require a variety of skills, many of them result of the Electronic Age and its emergence in modern newspaper production.

New system of composing

Susan Edington and Mike Braunschweig compose advertising copy on the Raycomp terminal, a new feature in the Reporter-Telegram Composing Room

Typesetter now computerized

George Ramsey and Ronald Hall prepare the Autologic typesetter for operation. It is only one of several computerized machines used in the composing room.

The final step

Virginia Duran applies the finishing touches to a front page. The assembly of the page is the final step in the composing room.

While a newspaper's task is to keep citizens informed on what's happening throughout the world, and The Reporter-Telegram utilizes five national news services to do that, we believe you also want thorough, timely, comprehensive local coverage...news and features about people, places and events here at home.

To obtain and produce that news we have enlarged our staff to its present size... 32 editors, reporters and photographers. We're proud of them because we know "It's PEOPLE that make newspapers go!"

Karen Shortridge heads Organizers Unlimited, specializing in cleaning up other people's messes. Her idea is to help those potential geniuses find themselves by first finding the hidden treasures resting atop their messy desks. She goes further than that, however, helping folks figure out why they're messy and how they can stop being that way. Ms. Shortridge sorts through clutter for a client, above; the neat, finished result, below.

Sorting out geniuses

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

SAN DIEGO — Perhaps you're one of those sad cases whose desk top looks something like thebble in West Beirut.

You rationalize by telling yourself you're creative, maybe even bble in West Beirut.

You rationalize by telling yourself you're creative, maybe even a genius, and geniuses always have messy desks.

But you can't find your paycheck or your W-2 form or the deed to your house.

You're not alone.

Karen Shortridge of Organizers Unlimited — Shortridge is Organizers Unlimited — meets people like you all the time.

They're her job.

SHE FORMED Organizers Unlimited earlier this year to help those potential geniuses find themselves by first finding the hidden treasures resting atop their messy desks. She goes further than that, however, helping folks figure out why they're messy and how they can stop being that way.

Ms. Shortridge is a lanky woman of 35 with a deep, dark tan and a mop of frizzy blond hair. OK, it's even a bit messy. But she doesn't care. She's the first to admit she's hardly the most organized person in the world. She's just concerned that you aren't either.

For the last several months, Ms. Shortridge has been involved in a new and rare career, one that flirts dangerously close to the category, "Well, everybody's got to do something..."

As the holder of a master's degree in counseling psychology and as a "people person" and a former business manager, she wanted a new job that brought together as many talents as possible and allowed her to be her own boss.

And, she said, one that gave "strokes" in a way the sterile environment of a large corporation no longer could.

She said she acquired a trace of rebelliousness by being so organized she got all of her work done and had nothing to do.

EFFICIENCY AND idleness seemed to work in tandem with Ms. Shortridge, so she searched for a line of work in which one wouldn't necessarily interfere with the other.

"I ran the dorms at the University of Florida," she said, "and I had a system so well put together that after I left they didn't need to hire anyone for six months. The system ran it all.

"I used to get through with business after only a few hours, and then I wanted to talk. The bosses couldn't give me enough work.

"Nowadays, I measure my job by the satisfaction of my clients. In a large corporation, it's been my experience that people don't know how to say, 'Hey, you've done a good job.' Why should I or anyone else wait for them to stroke me? We all have to find it from within, anyway."

The same holds true for a messy desk. It's only a problem if you think it is," She said "I see people who are so frustrated. They can't find something and they almost go crazy. After a while, that sloppiness overwhelms them, and they have no earthly idea as to what to do."

Ms. Shortridge the psychological counselor doesn't believe her clients are beyond hope. In most cases, they simply haven't developed a system or a work space capable of handling the clutter in their lives.

"THE QUESTION people ask me the most," she writes in her business brochure, "is, 'How can anyone else organize my mess when I can't do it myself?' The answer is that most people don't know why they're disorganized. They need a diagnosis, similar to the one they'd get from their family physician.

"For example, a client might think the problem is a messy desk top when actually it's lack of an effective filing system. Once you get their files in shape, the incoming mail automatically goes in the right drawer. You don't start with the desk and work backwards, as many people think."

On the subject of work space: "If, for example, paper, pencil and supplies are across the room from the desk, telephone and files, the result is considerable duplication of motion and wasted time."

Her clients range from sales representatives to artists to writers to teachers to interpreters to the computer programmer whose work space she totally redesigned to the man's sheer delight.

"Maybe it's a little like ESP," Shortridge said, "Knowing what's going to work for what person. It's more a perception of understanding people's needs.

Sometimes, it comes to me instantly. But with each of my clients (who now number more than a dozen), I talk to them, get to know them, try to find out what those needs are."

On one recent afternoon, Shortridge entered one home intent upon overhauling a small study. She charges $5 an hour and rarely needs more than two to five hours on any project.

SHE QUICKLY cut and filed newspaper clippings, rearranged magazines and books, stacked personal correspondence and unpaid bills and gave detailed instructions on how to enliven an otherwise drab atmosphere.

By the time she had finished, she had accumulated three large plastic bags full of trash and had given the room nothing less than a full face lift.

In her organizing experience, Shortidge has observed horrors that afflict those who seem to be the most creative.

"The worst is unpaid bills. People amass late charges, or bounce checks like crazy. Or they never go to the bank. Or they can't find their checkbook. Or their checks. Or in the case of one real estate agent, he misplaced the deed to his house."

"She's a real mover and shaker," said Alee Alger, a teacher-interpreter and one of Ms. Shortridge's clients. "She immediately perceived some of my particular problems and got things going. She set up a filing system and one for accounts payable and receivable.

"I had reached a point where papers were all over the floor — what a mess! I had unpaid bills, class work that was hopelessly disorganized. I was so behind that I had almost begun to ignore it. She forced me, finally, to sit down and file things. Now, it's much easier to teach."

HONDA
We make it simple.

It's not often a car like the 1982 Honda Prelude Sport Coupe comes along.

A sleek, responsive automobile designed for uncomplicated sportive handling and fuel-efficient fun.

Equipped with front-wheel drive, 4-wheel independent suspension, a 5-speed transmission and rack and pinion steering.

And a car to be enjoyed for many moons. Both because of the attention to quality engineering that goes into all our cars, and the Prelude's standard power-operated moon roof.

The moon and stars come standard as well.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 9.5% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 14.5% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent timonths Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7.5% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 16.5%
