Athletes urged to shun tobacco money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan urged athletes and sports associations to turn aside the "blood money" of tobacco company sponsorships Friday.

Having cigarette companies sponsor sporting events implies that smoking is healthful and lures young people to take it up, said Sullivan, the nation's top health official, who has repeatedly denounced smoking and cigarette makers in recent weeks.

"An athlete or sports figure should not allow his or her good name, hard-earned image or integrity to be exploited by the tobacco industry to push a product that when used as intended causes death," he said.

"This blood money should not be used to foster a misleading impression that smoking is compatible with good health."

Sullivan called on universities and other institutions to refuse to host events sponsored by tobacco companies, and he urged advertisers to "shun the temptation of this tainted money, stained by addiction, disease and death."

Sullivan spoke at a news conference called by a coalition of health groups to protest sponsorship of women's tennis events by Virginia Slims cigarettes.

Virginia Slims has sponsored such events for two decades. It is sponsoring 14 events on the women's professional tour this year, including a tournament at George Washington University in Washington this week.

Steve Weiss, a spokesman for Philip Morris Cos. Inc., manufacturer of Virginia Slims, rejected the criticism and said "we intend to be a sponsor of women's tennis for a long time into the future."

"We don't ask the players to smoke, or to endorse smoking, but we do ask them to get out on the court and play some great tennis ... and that's what they do," he said.

Players on the tour also defend the company. Zina Garrison, one of the top-ranked women players, said "Philip Morris has always been a classy organization, real good to us. ... They've done a lot for women's tennis and as they say, women's tennis has come a long way and they've been the reason."

Sullivan has become the federal government's most outspoken opponent of smoking since he took on the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. last month, condemning its plan to test-market a cigarette brand aimed primarily at blacks.

The next day, Reynolds canceled the plan.

Now, the company intends to test-market a cigarette called Dakota. Reynolds said that late last year it discarded a plan to target the new cigarette to women and decided instead to aim for all smokers of rival Marlboro with the new product.

Sullivan said cigarette advertising that is "designed to lure young people, women, minorities or blue-collar workers, is dishonest, irresponsible and unconscionable."

Man sentenced to 16 years in nation's worst DWI crash

Larry Mahoney

CARROLLTON, Ky. (AP) — A man convicted of killing 27 people in the nation's worst drunken-driving accident was sentenced Friday to 16 years in prison. He could be eligible for parole in eight years.

Carroll County Circuit Judge Charles Satterwhite denied a defense motion to place Larry Mahoney on probation, and instead imposed the sentence recommended by the jury that convicted Mahoney on Dec. 21.

As Mahoney's relatives wept, Satterwhite said the community wouldn't stand for probation in such a serious crime. Probation, he said, would "unduly depreciate the seriousness of the offense ... the number of lives lost."

One survivor of the crash, 18-year-old Tammy Darnell, said Mahoney should have been sent to prison for life.

"Sixteen years does not take the place of the friends I lost," she said, before breaking down in tears.

Mahoney, a 36-year-old chemical plant worker, was driving the wrong direction on Interstate 71 on May 14, 1988, when he crashed into the front of a school bus packed with teenagers on a church outing. Twenty-four teens and three adults died.

He was convicted of 27 counts each of second-degree manslaughter and first-degree wanton endangerment, 12 counts of first-degree assault, 14 of second-degree wanton endangerment and one of drunken driving.

The recommended sentence totaled 611 years, but the jury said the terms should run concurrently. That effectively gave Mahoney 16 years. He is classified as a violent offender under Kentucky law and must serve at least half his sentence before being considered for parole.

Defense attorney William Summers urged Satterwhite to make something positive out of the bus crash tragedy. The defense recommended a probation plan under which Mahoney would have lectured to schoolchildren about the dangers of drunken driving, served volunteer time in hospital emergency wards, and spent one year in a work release program.

"Judge, we must do as much good with this as we possibly can. His punishment has already been death. He already has been given a life sentence," Summers said, referring to Mahoney's suffering since the crash.

Midland College team spells success at bee

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND

A bout with sciatica proved to be the downfall of United Bank's team.

No, their backs weren't acting up. The tricky eight-letter word tripped up the bank's three-member spelling team at the First Annual Corporate Spelling Bee for the benefit of Midland Need to Read Inc. Friday.

Seizing the opportunity, three women from Midland College calmly spelled sciatica — defined broadly as pain in the lower back — and followed it up with a brisk "r-h-y-t-h-m-i-z-a-t-i-o-n" to clinch the title.

United Bank just moments earlier had gotten a reprieve when the MC spellers — Janice Hastings, Jan Tonroy and Nancy Hart — left the "h" out of gymkhana. The bankers also had missed the word, meaning a meet featuring sports contests.

Earlier eight teams fell prey to words like froufrou, intarsia, disseverance and regisseur as the teams took their turns at the Midland Center podium.

The talented spellers breezed through the early rounds before NCNB became the first victim of the judges' dreaded bell. The teams quickly worked their way through all the words prepared by pronouncer Maridell Fryar, director of secondary instructional services for Midland Independent School District.

Special bee rules allowed teams to "buy" a word for $100 and forego spelling it. Ironically, all four teams who took advantage of the rule wound up missing the replacement word they received.

The 10 teams — representing banks, oil companies and other local firms — each paid a $500 entry fee.

GOP attorney general candidate endorses Williams for governor

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Tex Lezar, a Republican candidate for attorney general, has broken with political protocol by throwing his support behind Clayton Williams Jr. in the GOP gubernatorial race.

Lezar unveiled a new round of television commercials containing the Williams endorsement during a Friday news conference at Midland International Airport.

He said he doesn't want to ride Williams' political coattails, but backs the Midland oilman's commitment to criminal justice reform.

"I'd rather have criminals busting rocks than have them out on the street busting heads," he said.

Lezar, a Dallas attorney, has reportedly spent between $75,000 and $100,000 on campaign advertising, including the commercial that features the Williams endorsement.

The ads will begin airing across Texas, including the Midland-Odessa area, next week, he said.

Williams' spokesman Bill Kenyon said the campaign staff welcomes the endorsement.

"It's unusual for a candidate in a contested primary race to endorse a candidate in another contested race, but we welcome it just the same," Kenyon said.

Lezar said the final days of the GOP contest for attorney general have boiled down to one issue: his proposal to abolish the state parole system as the federal government did.

As an assistant U.S. attorney general in the Reagan administration, Lezar helped end parole for convicted criminals at the federal level.

"It's time to abolish parole in Texas, at the very least, for those who commit the most serious of crimes," Lezar said.

He defined the most serious crimes as rape, murder and drug dealing and use, saying he favored stiff penalties for drug offenders.

"Drug kingpins deserve to die. Drug dealers deserve to be put away for life," said Lezar, who helped draft Reagan's anti-drug program.

He said he wants to make better use of assets seized through drug property forfeiture laws in financing Texas' fight against drugs.

Lezar said he also would form a "strike force" on his staff to assist local prosecutors in drug cases.

New Mexico to pay Texas $14 million in water dispute

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Texas will receive $14 million from New Mexico on March 1, resolving a 16-year legal dispute between the two states over the use of Pecos River water.

State Engineer Steve Reynolds will transfer the money from the Irrigation Works Construction Fund on March 1 to Attorney General Hal Stratton, who will then pay the money to Texas.

Texas filed a lawsuit against New Mexico in the U.S. Supreme Court in 1974, alleging New Mexico had violated the 1949 Pecos River Compact.

Its original claim was that between 1952 and 1972, New Mexico's under-deliveries of Pecos River water to Texas under terms of the compact amounted to more than 1 million acre-feet.

In 1987, the Supreme Court determined the delivery shortfall was 340,100 acre-feet. Texas sought repayment of this amount of water with 34,000 acre-feet delivered annually over a 10-year period or, in the alternative, damages of up to $900 million.

An acre-foot is the amount of water it would take to cover one acre to the depth of one foot.

Negotiations between the states were conducted in early 1989 and Stratton announced in August that Texas had made an offer to accept cash instead of water.

The negotiated settlement obligated New Mexico to pay Texas $14 million by March 1 for violations of the compact. In exchange, Texas agreed to drop all legal claims against New Mexico plus claims for legal fees.

House Bill 2, the General Appropriations Act passed by the 1990 New Mexico Legislature, appropriates $4.5 million from the general fund to the Irrigation Works Construction Fund.

The bill also appropriates $14 million from the Irrigation Works Construction Fund to the attorney general.

A question arose earlier this week as to whether Gov. Garrey Carruthers would be required to sign HB2 before March 1 in order to make the money available for payment to Texas.

EPA reviews West Texas concerns over landfills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is reviewing the concerns of West Texas communities worried about the costs of complying with proposed stringent rules on municipal landfills, an official said Friday.

The agency is empowered to allow flexibility in some of the rules governing operation of municipal solid waste landfills, but it is attempting to determine whether it can offer more flexible regulations for monitoring groundwater contamination, said Bruce Weddle, director of the EPA's municipal solid waste program.

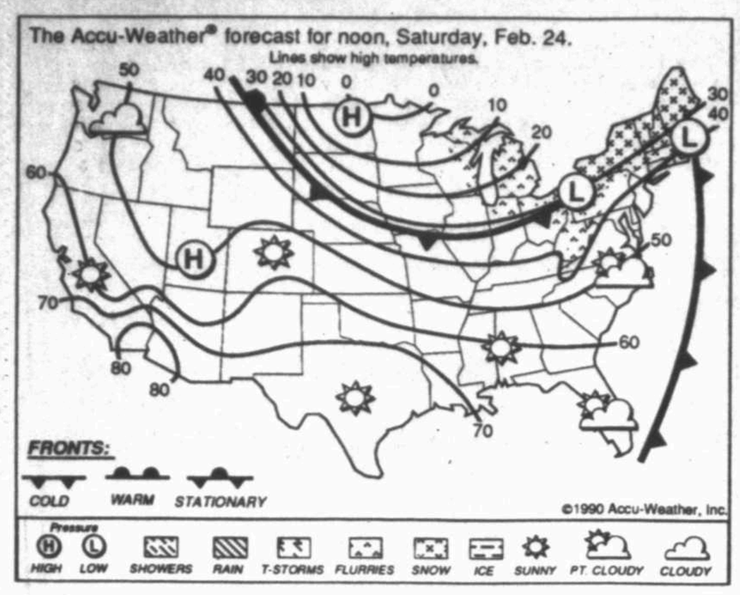
The proposed rules on groundwater monitoring have generated much concern in West Texas and in communities across other remote, arid areas, where officials say it would be extremely costly to drill monitoring wells into the deep water table.

"There are a lot of ... suggestions we back off from groundwater monitoring requirements in arid climates where the groundwater is very deep. And the response is yes, we are looking at that," Weddle said.

Weddle said officials in remote areas say they need more flexibility to comply with the proposed regulations. The law gives the agency the ability to give communities more flexibility in certain areas, such as design of the landfill, location of groundwater monitoring wells, or how much cover is needed.

"The law clearly allows flexibility in every area but groundwater monitoring, site location, and clean-up of contaminants," Weddle. "What's not quite as clear is if we have flexibility in those areas. We may or may not be able to provide flexibility."

WEATHER SUMMARY



Sunny skies in forecast

Staff Report

An area of high pressure centered over northeast Mexico means sunny skies for most of the Permian Basin through Sunday, said forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Today will be sunny with the high in the lower 70s. Winds will be out of the north at 5 to 15 mph, becoming southeasterly after noon.

The forecast tonight calls for clear skies with the low in the mid-30s.

Sunday, skies will be clear with the high near 70 degrees.

Friday's high of 69 was 15 degrees cooler than the record of 84, set on that date in 1982. The low of 34 was 20 degrees warmer than the record of 14, set on that date in 1965.

STATE

Sunny, mild and dry conditions prevailed across Texas late Friday thanks to an area of high pressure centered in northeast Mexico.

A dry northwest flow of air in the upper levels of the atmosphere combined with sinking motion associated with the air mass in place over Texas was preventing any clouds from developing anywhere in the state.

Winds were out of the northwest ranging from 10 to 15 mph.

Late afternoon relative humidity levels were generally around 20 to 30 percent across the state.

Under sunny skies temperatures Friday had warmed into the 60s and 70s except in the extreme northern Panhandle where snow on the ground held temperatures in the 50s.

Extremes at 3 p.m. ranged from 51 degrees at Dalhart to 72 degrees at McAllen, Corpus Christi and Alice.

Fair skies are expected Friday night with mostly sunny skies statewide on Saturday. Lows Friday night were expected to be in the 30s and 40s except for 20s in the Panhandle. Highs Saturday will be in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Rain moved across many of the Atlantic states Friday, and 21 storm-torn counties in Alabama and Georgia were declared federal disaster areas after two weeks of drenching.

Before skies clouded over and temperatures dropped, record highs were recorded from Georgia and South Carolina to Portland, Maine.

Rain and thunderstorms extended from Florida across eastern New York state and much of New England. Parts of Kansas, Arkansas and Missouri also received rain, while the upper Great Lakes states got snow.

Snow fell in portions of Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa.

Drier, cold air began to replace soggy warm air in the Deep South, where a dozen Alabama counties were added to an earlier emergency relief declaration because of recent storms. Nine Georgia counties were declared disaster areas because of tornadoes and floods.

High water continued to threaten Mississippi's Gulf Coast, and residents in lowland Indiana helped seal off neighborhoods from flood waters with sandbags.

Houston racing interests sue state officials

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Turf Club, spurned in its bid to win a license to build a horse racing track in Harris County, filed a $1 billion federal lawsuit Friday against several top state officials and private individuals alleging they conspired to control the potentially lucrative racing industry in Texas.

"They broke both federal and state laws, manipulated the system, planned to steal billions of tax dollars, in addition to costing the state of Texas thousands of much needed jobs," said Leslie Vallone, turf club president and board chairperson.

"We charge, and are prepared to prove, that they entered into a conspiracy to totally control the racing industry in Texas," Ms. Vallone said at a morning press conference.

The suit names more than 20 defendants, including the entire Texas Racing Commission, Gov. Bill Clements, Attorney General Jim Mattox, State Comptroller Bob Bullock, Secretary of State George Bayoud, the executive directors of the Texas Horse Racing Association and Edward G. DeBartolo Sr., whose family is involved in the horse racing industry in several other states.

According to the suit, several of the defendants contributed directly and through lobbyists to the election campaigns of several political candidates, including some of the other defendants. The candidates, the suit adds, then actively supported parimutuel wagering legislation, which was approved in 1987.

The suit also claims the defendants have since embarked on a plan to create an atmosphere of statewide discontent over the 5 percent tax on pari-mutuel wagering to try to convince legislators to lower that rate to 1 percent of 2 percent.

Clements, Bayoud and others, the suit claims, "are unfazed by the prospect of the exposure of this conspiracy ... and continue to perpetrate their conspiracy, scheme or plan to make parimutuel wager in the State of Texas their personal fiefdom."

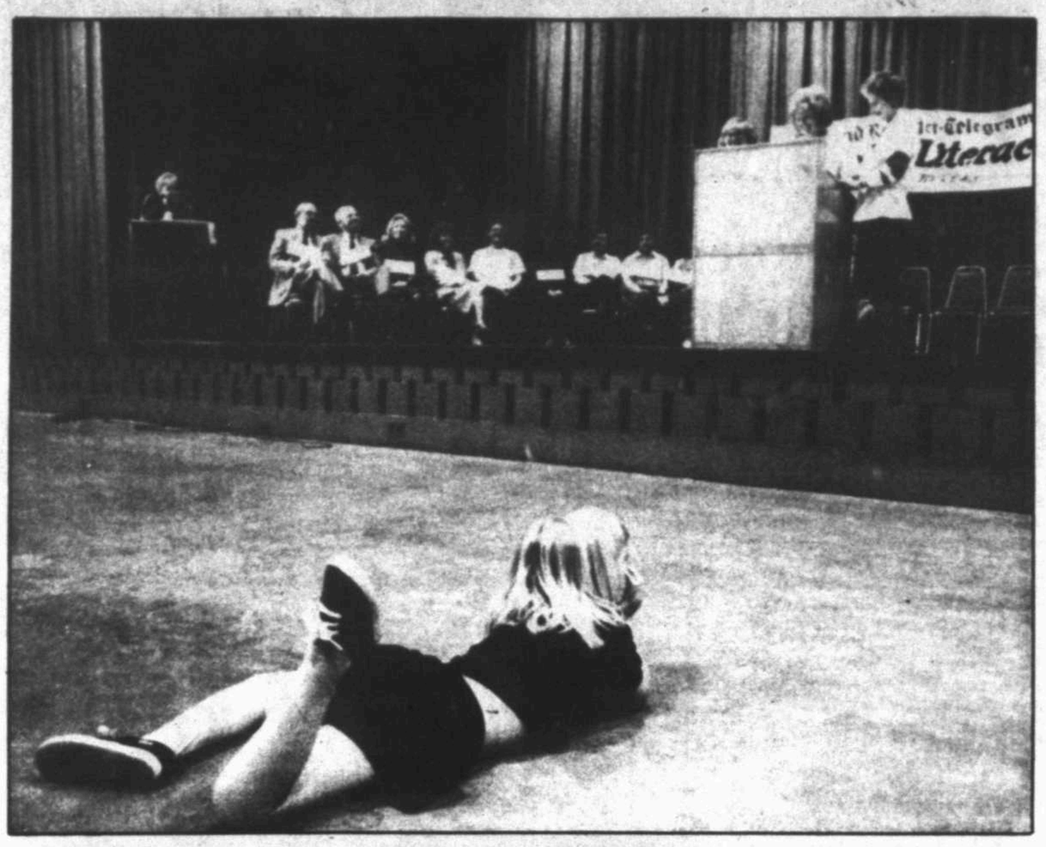
"That is absolutely ludicrous and baseless," said Clements spokeswoman Rossanna Salazar, who was with the governor in Washington D.C.

Added Mattox spokesman Ron Dusek, "He did not conspire with anybody over horse racing, especially Gov. Clements."

"We haven't even seen the suit, so it's a little hard to comment," said Tony Proffitt, spokesman for Bullock, who is named in the suit because he is an ex-officio member of the racing commission.

"But it sounds like some unfounded complaints from some sore losers," Proffitt added.

The suit, filed in federal court in Houston, came one day after the racing commission agreed to wait until May before accepting applications for major new horse race tracks in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and in San Antonio and postponed indefinitely taking applications for a Class 1 track in Houston.



Spelling it out

The bee, sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, raised more than $6,000 according to Need to Read executive director Patty Groce.

"We had nothing but positive response to the event," Ms. Groce said. "Everyone had a great time and I think one reason is because they were supporting a good cause."

Other highlights of the midday event were master of ceremonies William Dingus of Exxon, who kept the proceedings light-hearted, and transcontinental skater Toni Cordell.

Ms. Cordell, who addressed the 150 spectators before the spelling began, applauded the Need to Read efforts supported by the bee.

A former adult low-level reader herself, Ms. Cordell is roller skating from coast to coast to attract media attention to the issue of adult illiteracy.

Her 12-wheeled caravan — eight on her skates, four on the van that accompanies her — will be back in Midland on March 3 as her west-to-east sojourn rolls through the Permian Basin.

tion, Lezar also served as chief of staff for the Department of Justice under Attorney General William French Smith.

Lezar also served as general counsel to former Texas Secretary of State George Strake and as a member of U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's Federal Judiciary Evaluation Committee.

He resigned as a partner in the Dallas law firm of Carrington, Coleman, Sloman & Blumenthal to enter the race for attorney general.

Lezar is running against State Rep. Pat Hill of Dallas and State Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson for the Republican nomination.

Vying for the Democratic nomination are: State Rep. Dan Morales of San Antonio, and Houston lawyer John Odam, a former aide to Gov. Mark White.

Lezar received his law degree from the University of Texas, where he was editor-in-chief of the Texas Law Review.

12-year-old liver recipient back on respirator

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doctors treating Stormie Jones following her second liver transplant placed the 12-year-old Texas girl back on a respirator Friday evening and downgraded her medical condition, according to a Children's Hospital spokeswoman.

Stormie, the world's first-ever recipient of a heart-liver transplant, was returned to the breathing apparatus at about 7 p.m., after doctors discovered fluid was collecting in her lungs and other areas, said Lynn McMahon.

"Rather than put her through the stress of labored breathing, her doctors decided to put her back on the respirator for a little while," she said.

Ms. McMahon said Stormie probably would be on the respirator for several days. The girl's breathing was assisted mechanically following the transplant.

Stormie's condition also was changed to critical, a step down from critical but stable, which is how she had been listed since the transplant Tuesday and a subsequent operation Wednesday to halt internal bleeding.

Surgeons were not worried by the development, Ms. McMahon said.

"We're not talking about a very serious setback here," she said. "Complications like this are not uncommon with transplant patients."

vehemently opposed probation.

"He alone is responsible. He alone brought us to this place today," Richwalsky said. "Regardless of statements the defense would make, it's time for punishment."

Russell Baldani, one of Mahoney's three attorneys, said earlier this week that Satterwhite's decision would be appealed.

Parents of some of the 24 children killed in the crash held a news conference after the sentencing to urge passage of a package of stiff drunken-driving laws pending in the Kentucky General Assembly.

"This is not over today," said Gary Atherton, whose daughter, Cynthia, died in the fiery wreck. "It's not over for the rest of our lives."

During testimony, jurors learned Mahoney was upset over financial problems brought on by expensive medical bills for his daughter, who suffers from a spinal birth defect, and that he spent most of the day of the crash visiting friends and drinking beer at several taverns.

He testified that he only occasionally drank beer and abhorred hard liquor. He said he didn't remember drinking hard liquor at a party later that evening.

He said he had no recollection of getting into his pickup and driving the wrong way on the interstate. The collision punctured the gas tank of the bus, sending a stream of flaming gasoline into the passenger compartment.

The 27 deaths were attributed to smoke inhalation, but Mahoney's attorneys contended that toxic smoke emitted from the plastic seats had poisoned the passengers.

When Mahoney took the stand, he publicly apologized for the tragedy.

Richwalsky said earlier this week that he didn't expect Friday's hearing to be the last of the Mahoney case.

"It's not over and done with," he said. "I'm sure there will be an appeal and so we change gears and go into another arena."

NTSB report cites danger of offshore pipelines

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A lack of regulation and surveillance of offshore pipelines pose an increasing danger to marine vessels, according to a National Transportation Safety Board report made public Friday.

The report follows an NTSB investigation of an explosion near Sabine Pass in Texas in October that killed 11 people after a fishing boat struck a submerged natural gas pipeline.

The NTSB recommends in the report that the U.S. Department of Transportation, with the assistance of the Department of Interior, develop effective methods of inspection and maintenance of pipelines in the Gulf of Mexico.

"Despite regulatory requirements to bury certain portions of offshore pipelines during their construction, the absence of regulations that require surveillance to verify that pipelines remain buried subjects the operators of marine vessels to potential danger, particularly in depths of water comparable to the draft of the vessel," the NTSB report says.

A spokesman for the Department of Transportation said a formal response to the recommendations would be issued after they are reviewed.

Today there is no practical way to closely inspect the pipelines, said Ted Kinne, vice president for safety, environment and operations for the Interstate Natural Gas Association of America in Washington, D.C.

Other than air surveillance to check for bubbles and leaks, Kinne said the only way to inspect submerged pipelines in the muddy gulf waters is with divers.

The water is so unclear that divers can't see and must use probes to find their targets, said Kinne, adding the use of divers is both expensive and time consuming.

The operational practices of certain elements of the maritime industry have been a contributing factor to uncovering lines, he said.

The 168-foot Northumberland was backing up in 9 to 11 feet of water when it struck a pipeline near Sabine Pass at 5:50 p.m. Oct. 3, according to the NTSB report. Eleven of the 14 people aboard were killed.

The NTSB report did not determine a cause of the accident, but it does suggest that natural erosion may have been a contributing factor.

The report says the potential for an accident may be increasing because of continued erosion.

East German dissent may speed unification

BONN, West Germany (AP) — East Germany may be too divided after the March elections to agree on a government and could opt for immediate union with West Germany, a Cabinet minister said in a newspaper report published Friday.

Die Welt of Bonn said Interior Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble expressed his theory to U.S. officials. Ministry officials confirmed the account.

East Germany's economic crisis has accelerated in recent weeks, forcing the government to end food subsidies and prompting speculation it is near bankruptcy.

German reunification, and the economic and political questions it poses, are expected to dominate discussions this weekend when Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany meets with President Bush at Camp David, Md.

According to Die Welt, Schaeuble told Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser, that East Germany's first free elections may not produce a leadership that could agree on an economic rescue plan.

"It is conceivable that there will be no more (East German) government after March 18," he said.

Several recent polls, however, have indicated East Germany's Social Democrats will win more than 50 percent of the vote.

Communist candidates are expected to fare badly because of the once-omnipotent party's role in creating the economic crisis. Premier Hans Modrow, the most trusted Communist politician, has not decided whether to lead the party ticket.

Pro-democracy opposition parties are numerous, poorly organized and inexperienced, which has led to a near-takeover by sister parties in West Germany.

The 400-member parliament to be elected March 18 vote is supposed to choose a government to succeed Modrow's transitional administration. If the seats are spread too broadly among the many parties, members may be unable to agree on a leadership that could work with Bonn on an economic recovery plan.

Schaeuble said he considered an inconclusive vote the "more probable" outcome of the elections, Die Welt said.

Interior Ministry spokesman Willi Hausmann, who confirmed the account, said Schaeuble outlined several possible unification plans during a visit to Washington.

'Father of Salvadoran democracy' dies

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Former President Jose Napoleon Duarte, whose quest for democracy in a society ruled by the privileged few was thwarted by a disastrous civil war, died Friday of cancer. He was 64.

Duarte died at his home in the capital's fashionable San Benito neighborhood, said Dr. Jose Luis Saca.

Doctors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington diagnosed the cancer in May 1988 and removed 60 percent of Duarte's stomach, but the disease had spread to his liver. They gave him from six to 18 months to live.

Duarte was president from 1984 to June 1989, when he was succeeded by Alfredo Cristiani of the rightist Arena party, who was supported by the oligarchy Duarte so long had fought.

Nearly a generation ago, Duarte was arrested, beaten and exiled for his fidelity to democracy. He called his inauguration in 1984 "a light in the long night of horror," and likened himself to Moses delivering his people.

His role in replacing an authoritarian, semifeudal system with the beginnings of democracy was critical, but he finished his term, and his life, burdened by failure, compromise, frustration and dashed hopes.

The war with the leftist Farabundo Marti Liberation Front is 10 years old. Poverty remains endemic in this small Central American nation of 5 million people, whose economy depends on U.S. aid.

In Washington, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater issued a statement saying, "President Duarte was the father of Salvadoran democracy, a dedicated servant to the people of El Salvador, and a firm friend of the United States."

The White House said Vice President Dan Quayle will fly to El Salvador to lead the U.S. delegation at Duarte's funeral Sunday.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III said, "There could be no more fitting tribute to his memory than for his countrymen to follow his lead and to ensure that human rights and democratic institutions grow and strengthen in the country he loved so deeply and to which he gave so much."

A high-ranking U.S. diplomat who served in El Salvador during most of Duarte's term said of him: "He didn't work miracles, but he must be credited with instituting the democratic system itself. His great legacy is the transition. The rest pales by comparison."

Opponents criticized Duarte's bombast and messianic attitude; supporters praised his idealism and fighting spirit. Both agree his role in El Salvador was historic.

"One must acknowledge President Duarte's democratic vocation," Cristiani said just before taking office June 1. "He has, with his aptitude and positions, promoted the advance of democracy."

Duarte was born in San Salvador Nov. 23, 1925, the second of three sons. His father was a tailor and his mother a dressmaker.

Later, his father started a candy-making business that became prosperous enough to put all three boys through college.

Jose Napoleon became a Boy Scout and remained active in the organization throughout his life.

He was graduated from the University of Notre Dame in 1948 with a degree in civil engineering, married childhood friend Ines Duran, and worked in her family's construction business. They had six children.

The barrel-chested engineer joined half a dozen other Roman Catholic professionals in 1960 to found the Christian Democratic Party. Most were young liberals hoping to put the church's social doctrine into practice through government.

After three terms as mayor of San Salvador, Duarte ran for president in February 1972. He was winning handily when the army stopped the count and declared its candidate the winner.

A few weeks later, he supported a coup by a dissident military faction. It failed. Duarte was arrested, beaten and told he would be shot.

He was allowed to leave the country instead and spent more than seven years in Venezuela.

Reform-minded military officers seized power in 1979 and Duarte returned. He joined the junta in 1980 and became its president.

Civil war began and the army and police embarked on a brutal repression in which tens of thousands of people were killed, many by "death squads" officially sanctioned or tolerated.

ELLA BARNETT ENDORSES
NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

As an independent business woman, I want a Judge who has broad legal experience both in and out of the courtroom.

Nick's background in business and civil law is second to none. He will reduce the backlog of civil cases and save the courts and the litigants time and money.

The Midland City Council appointed Nick to head the Midland Crime Prevention Commission. While serving on that board, Nick worked out a plan to reduce crime. Our police tell us that 90% of crime in Midland is drug related. Nick plans to test probated criminals for drug use. If they stop using drugs, they stop robbing our homes. It's that simple.

Nick knows the law, but he also knows crime. He has the leadership that will make a great judge for Midland.

Panhandle birdwatcher wings it with sanctuary

By RON BATES

BORGER (AP) — Generally, it's the rooster that wakes up the folks in the farmhouse. In Borger, Frank Smith Jr. wakes the rooster.

The rooster's cousins, anyway.

Long before the sun peeks over the Hutchinson County horizon, Smith is in Huber Park. He's walking — maybe a mile, maybe two, maybe three. Depends on how early he gets there.

"When the sun comes up, then I take care of the birds," the 63-year-old insurance man said.

Seven days a week, Smith is checking in on the park's bird sanctuary, a facility he designed and helped build almost a year ago.

There are 17 species of upland and water birds sharing the 65-by-130-foot structure. More will be added in the future, as well as tropical birds. And there will be other changes, Smith said, like covering the top of the fenced refuge.

"Great horned owls have eaten about 65 birds," Smith said, listing quail, chukar and pheasants in the sanctuary as their victims. "We can cover it and that's what we're going to do."

The cover, he said, should protect the birds from the three owls that live in the area. Great horned owls, Smith said, pose a peculiar problem because they are an endangered species.

"There's a $15,000 fine to kill a great horned owl," he said. "They can put you in jail. We don't want to think about that."

Not that Smith would be likely to think about that, anyway. He's a 40-year bird watcher, taking up the pastime after taking a course in ornithology in college. Smith majored in biology.

"My dad raised birds," he said. "He raised pheasants and chickens." Smith, too raises birds, but he also studies them in their native environs. He counts eagles for the Parks and Wildlife Department when the birds gather around Lake Meredith.

"We've had as high as 60 and as low as 10," he said, noting that 24 golden and bald eagles were counted this year. "And we've got jillions and jillions of Canadian geese and snow geese."

These days, Smith doesn't have to go far for his fill of birdwatching. His business is located across the street from Huber Park. The sanctuary was built last March after Smith lobbied city commissioners for the right to build it.

The idea, he said, came to him while attending a wedding in California. He visited a large creekside sanctuary that had fallen into a state of disrepair.

"It looked bad, but it attracted lots of people. When I got back, I sold the city commission on letting us start a bird sanctuary. I thought it would be a tremendous draw."

Smith said he expected a favorable reaction from the public, but the popularity of the facility has surprised even him.

"On pretty days, we have a tremendous amount of people out here. ... People tell me they come here from Amarillo just to see the birds."

The facility features a pond for waterfowl, perches and hay bales (to keep the birds warm), an aviary and an interpretive sign describing the birds. It was built with private donations.

Smith said the facility can be maintained for less than $10,000 a year — far less than a zoo or animal attraction.

"Animals are too dang expensive," he said. "Every town could have one of these. We're doing it slowly and taking it easy and learning from it and trying to get something good from the mistakes we've made."

Cavazos not backing down on providing loans for trade schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos says he will continue supporting federally guaranteed loans for students in private vocational and technical schools even though their default rate is 37 percent.

"I want to make it clear that in no way does the Secretary of Education advocate stepping away from support of guaranteed student loan programs for proprietary schools," Cavazos told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee earlier this week.

However, Cavazos said the administration was determined to crack down on institutions with high rates of default.

Proprietary schools are privately owned institutions that teach trades such as electronics or auto repair.

Overall, counting loans for regular college attendance, there were 1.9 million defaults in the guaranteed student loan program in 1989, and the projected number this year is 2 million.

Cavazos was testifying on President Bush's educational budget request of $25 billion, up more than $500 million from the 1990 budget. He noted the federal contribution is about 6 percent of the nation's total expenditure of $353 billion for the current school year.

Computer access made simple for executives

AUSTIN (AP) — Many corporation presidents cannot use a computer. Yet, many now have on their desks a small computer monitor screen with a remote-control instead of a keyboard.

The simplified system gives executives fingertip access to company data, says Execucom Systems Corp., which developed and markets the software.

About 15 minutes of instruction is needed to operate the system, which includes "artificial intelligence" that helps interpret raw facts and figures.

'Khaki parachute' bills would ease soldiers back into civilian life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is mobilizing for the possibility that large numbers of troops will be mustered out as a result of growing world peace.

At least two lawmakers have introduced proposals providing a "khaki parachute" to soften the landing of soldiers into civilian life, and a law that took effect in January could lay the groundwork for making readjustment easier.

Among the measures:

—A package of veterans' benefits legislation that was enacted late last year set up a pilot program to provide employment and training services to members of armed forces preparing to leave.

"Oddly enough, this was not in anticipation" of the budget or events in Europe, said John V. Meyers, deputy assistant secretary of labor for veterans' employment and training. "However, the timing of the pilot program couldn't be better."

The program now is borrowing staff from other functions. A report on the operations is due in May 1992, but Meyers says large-scale troop reductions could hasten full implementation.

The program helps members of the military within 180 days of leaving the service. The help includes economic profiles of regions, wage rates in areas, resume preparation and help in applying skills acquired in the military to civilian jobs.

The pilot program is underway at San Antonio, Texas, among other bases nationwide.

—Legislation introduced by Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., to restore unemployment compensation benefits to ex-military personnel to the same number of weeks available to civilians.

Veterans now must wait four weeks to start 13 weeks of benefits instead of one week to start 26 weeks of benefits. The current formula for veterans dates back to the beginning of the 1960s when an effort was made to cut off eligibility altogether.

"In an era when we are cutting defense spending at the same time we expect our fighting men and women to risk their lives in Grenada and Panama, the least we can do is provide them with 26 weeks of benefits after the coming reduction in force," Downey said.

—A bill introduced by Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., that would entitle enlisted personnel and non-commissioned officers to separation pay if they have completed five or more years of active duty before being involuntarily discharged. Officers already receive up to $30,000 in severance pay, Slattery said.

"Many men and women join the service expecting to spend their entire career serving their country," Slattery said. "I think that it is unfair for the government to release them without some kind of compensation."

An estimate prepared by the private Non-Commissioned Officers Association says the cost would be $58 million to $105 million, depending on when in the fiscal year the soldiers are separated.

The NCOA says that money would be offset by savings of $126 million in unemployment compensation. Those 5,000 officers were earning $9.6 million a month.

Slow sales mean layoffs for 4,200 GM workers

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will shut down parts of three assembly plants Monday, laying off 4,200 people as part of the wave of cutbacks by major automakers attempting to weather a season of slow sales.

"There's an air of despondency," said Guy Messina, an autoworkers' union officer at the GM plant in Linden, N.J., where Chevrolet Corsica and Beretta cars are made. "It finally sunk in that these are their last days."

The layoffs have been planned for some time, but the workers' last days coincided with the gloomy announcement Friday that the Big Three automakers' sales slumped in mid-February.

GM, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. said North American sales of cars and light trucks during the Feb. 11-20 period ran 15.8 percent behind last year's pace.

GM will eliminate one of two shifts at each of its car assembly plants in Doraville, Ga., and Linden, N.J., resulting in 1,900 and 1,600 layoffs respectively. The nation's largest automaker also is reducing production effective Monday at its assembly plant in Fairfax, Kan., causing about 700 layoffs.

"Of course there's concern," Bud Carroll, president of United Auto Workers union Local 31 in Fairfax, said Friday. "Nobody likes to lose their job."

Despite impending layoffs at the three GM plants, there was some hopeful news for the company's employees in an Atlanta assembly plant and for Chrysler Corp. workers in two assembly plants.

GM spokeswoman Sharon Hines said the planned mid-March shutdown of the company's Lakewood assembly plant in Atlanta was being pushed back to between April 1 and July 1. That is because sales of Buick Estate station wagons and 1990 Chevrolet Caprice cars picked up.

Chrysler spokesman Doug Nicoll said Friday the company had put off indefinitely the planned layoffs of 750 employees at a luxury car assembly plant in Belvidere, Ill., and 780 layoffs at a Newark, Del., factory that assembles Dodge Spirit and Plymouth Acclaim cars are assembled. The layoffs originally were scheduled to take effect March 19.

> "Of course there's concern. Nobody likes to lose their job."
> — Bud Carroll, president, UAW union Local 31

Automakers close plants and slow production when unsold cars back up on dealers' lots.

Ford Motor Co. has largely stayed out of the current round of layoffs, which are in part an adjustment of workforces that swelled during the boom years of 1985-88. Ford increased production then through overtime at existing plants rather than by opening new factories.

Automakers have said they expect slower sales through at least the first half of this year with a rebound later.

Predictions of the number of cars and trucks that will be sold in 1990 range from Chrysler's estimate of about 14.2 million to GM's 14.5 million, to as much as 15 million.

Sales tumbled in October as the 1990 model year began. In January, the pace picked up, mainly because Chrysler dealers offered cash-back incentives on the company' popular minivans. Those offers expired Jan. 31, and sales have since slowed.

In January, the Big Three automakers shut down dozens of their plants for at least a week at a time to cut inventory. The move apparently worked as inventory levels fell from around 90 days' worth at the end of December to about 70 days at the end of last month.

Like GM, Chrysler is shutting down entire plants this year — its Jefferson Assembly factory in Detroit closed Feb. 2, resulting in 1,700 layoffs, and its St. Louis car plant cut a shift earlier this month and will shut down Sept. 21. In all, 3,700 St. Louis employees will be laid off.

Girl whose mom spent two years in jail located

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven-year-old Hilary Foretich, whose mother spent more than two years in jail rather than let her visit her father, reportedly has been found safe in the custody of her grandparents in New Zealand.

The girl was found at a motel in Christchurch with her maternal grandparents, WRC-TV first reported Friday.

The girl's mother, Dr. Elizabeth Morgan, a plastic surgeon, was jailed for 25 months from August 1987 for civil contempt of court for failing to obey a judge's order to produce the child.

District of Columbia police spokesman Quintin Peterson said that police were attempting to confirm that Hilary was in New Zealand.

But, the detective on the case in Christchurch, Sgt. Russell Hawks, told the television station she had been living in the city "for some time."

"She's fine, in a healthy state, no problems there at all," Hawks said.

Another police official, a Sgt. Peyton, told The Associated Press that the case was already before a family court judge and that the girl was in the custody of the grandparents. He declined to be specific about the case, and would not confirm that the girl in question was Hilary.

Morgan maintained that Hilary's father, Dr. Eric Foretich, had sexually abused the girl. On those grounds, she refused to give him court-ordered visitation rights.

Foretich, a 46-year-old oral surgeon, has strongly denied ever abusing the child.

There was no answer at the homes of Morgan and Foretich and his lawyer did not immediately return telephone calls.

Hilary's court-appointed guardian, Linda Holman, and one of Morgan's attorneys, Adrian Roe, had no comment.

A reporter for Radio New Zealand, Jill Gallop, told the television station that police confirmed Hilary and the grandparents, Morgan's parents, had been in Christchurch for three years.

Businessman buys bankrupt black college

Businessman Comer Cottrell sheds tears of joy after he purchased Bishop College with a $1.5 million bid at a bankruptcy liquidation sale in Dallas Friday. Cottrell says he plans to reopen the Dallas school as a black educational institution.

AP Laserphoto

DALLAS (AP) — A prominent black businessman purchased bankrupt Bishop College Friday in a liquidation auction, calling the acquisition of Dallas' only predominantly black college his "moral duty."

"What happened to the school is criminal," said Comer Cottrell, after buying Bishop's entire 130-acre campus for $1.5 million. "As the past vice chairman of the school, I had to go through the agony, pain and heartache of the demise of the college."

Cottrell said he will reopen the 108-year-old school as soon as a board of trustees is in place and construction crews clean up the decaying campus.

"We will turn the institution around to benefit the whole of the community — especially the black youth," he said.

Cottrell, who sobbed with joy, owns Dallas-based Pro-Line Corp., the nation's 18th largest black-owned company.

Pro Line sells more than $30 million a year in hair-care products for blacks.

Cottrell, 58, opened the bidding at $1.2 million Friday afternoon and said after purchasing the college that he had been willing to go even higher.

"I was prepared to pay $5 million, so 1.5 (million dollars) is quite a bargain," he said.

The auction, which officials had expected to take hours, lasted less than five minutes. Cottrell was one of two bidders, but officials refused to release the name of the other bidder.

State senator Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, said last week state school officials are investigating whether the institution should be resurrected as a teacher's college.

Cottrell, who received an honorary degree from Bishop, said the school will maintain its name, but he was unsure if the school would become a teacher's college or remain an undergraduate institution.

"As long as it serves the black community, that's all that matters," he said. "We have a lot of work to do. But this is a commitment to the blacks in Dallas that we are trying to build them a better quality of life."

The school, which suffered from bungled management for more than a decade, was closed in August 1988 by a federal bankruptcy judge after the school failed to raise enough money to subsist.

In 1979, the school was rocked by the indictment of three administrators amid charges of financial mismanagement.

"We are going to install a board of directors that will run the school with pride and dignity," Cottrell said. "The school was in the wrong hands the first time around."

The school drew international attention last year when a mysterious Sri Lankan woman made a bid to buy the school for $10 million and posted $75,000 in jewels as a deposit.

Panditha Sujatha Nadarajah was later jailed in her native country on suspicion of fraud. Ms. Nadarajah denied the charges, saying she was the "victim of a big conspiracy."

Bob Mottern, an attorney representing Duke Salisbury, the trustee appointed to oversee the liquidation of Bishop's assets, said the money from the sale Friday will go to pay legal fees and salaries of employees released when the school closed down.

"It is not clear how much will be paid to former employees," Mottern said. "A lot of the money will go for the legal bankruptcy expenses and to some creditors."

"I waited until the last minute for someone or some group to come through and buy it," he said. "But no one floated to the surface. It would have been a real blow to the developing black community here if the school was dissolved. Now we need a commitment from the blacks that they will help make it work."

Tigua will see tribal artifacts in the Netherlands

EL PASO (AP) — Tigua Indians who have long heard about tribal artifacts that were taken to Europe by a Dutch anthropologist will get a chance to see them next month at the Dutch museum where they have been kept in storage rooms.

After years of on-again, off-again research, artifacts that Dutch ethnologist H.F.C. Ten Kate collected from the El Paso Pueblo del Sur were located in Leiden, the Netherlands.

"These items were taken from here by Kate by 1881 and '82, while he was doing research here in the Southwest," said tribal Gov. Ray Apodaca. "Some items were sold to him, some were loaned to him and some were given to him by tribal members. Regardless of how he acquired them, he apparently took great care to send them back to the Netherlands."

A Tigua Indian reservation is located in south El Paso in what used to be Ysleta before it was incorporated by El Paso.

Apodaca said the artifacts were located through a collaborative research effort by him, historian and anthropologist Nick Houser and Bill Wright of Abilene, a businessman who is working on a book about the Tiguas.

Doomsday Clock's hands measure danger of world conflagration

CHICAGO (AP) — Keepers of the Doomsday Clock say the world is moving drastically away from the threat of nuclear war.

For years the Doomsday Clock on the cover of The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists has been ticking back and forth toward midnight, an indication of the state of superpower relations.

After standing at six minutes before midnight — or the threat of nuclear war — for two years, the Bulletin's April edition may turn the clock back, reflecting recent reforms in the Soviet Union and its Eastern European allies.

Nobel laureate Leon M. Lederman, director emeritus of the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory outside Chicago and one of the scientists whose opinions influence the clock's movement, said, "I wanted the hands to move back the most. The danger of military confrontation between the superpowers and the credibility of that threat is lessening every hour."

The clock first appeared on the June 1947 Bulletin to evoke the image of the apocalypse — universal conflagration bursting forth at the darkest hour — and of military attack, with the countdown to zero hour, Ackland said.

The clock was closest to midnight — two minutes away — in 1953, after the United States successfully tested the hydrogen bomb.

It was farthest from midnight — 12 minutes — in 1963, after the signing of the Partial Test Ban Treaty, and again in 1972, when the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty was signed.

It last moved in 1988, shifting back from three minutes before midnight to six minutes away, due in large part to the U.S.-Soviet treaty eliminating intermediate-range nuclear missiles, Ackland said.

The Bulletin was founded in 1945 by scientists who worked at the University of Chicago on the Manhattan Project — the successful U.S. effort to build an atomic bomb during World War II.

Progress reported at talks

Negotiations to continue in hopes of resolution

Associated Press

NEW YORK — There was no breakthrough Friday in the baseball talks and exhibition games were being canceled, although owners and players agreed to meet through the weekend in hopes of reaching a settlement.

The 28th bargaining session produced some progress, both sides said, and Saturday's meeting will be their first during a weekend. But the owners' nine-day lockout remained and union chief Donald Fehr said: "Make no mistake, we still have a very large chasm on the central issues."

One small matter on free agency was resolved and the union proposed a minimum salary of $112,500, $27,500 more than management's offer. No headway, however, was made on the union's demand for salary arbitration after two years.

■ Related Story, Page 4B

"I'm not sure it can get done this weekend," said New York Mets pitcher David Cone, who attended the meeting. "It's more than a black-and-white issue of two years or three. There's got to be more slack on the leash."

Fehr spoke during a briefing at the Helmsley Palace hotel, across the street from the commissioner's office. Hotel queen Leona Helmsley, recently convicted on tax charges, walked into the ballroom hours earlier and offered her opinion.

"I just hope they settle it," she said. "I want to throw out the opening ball."

Meanwhile, the exhibition openers will not start on time Thursday — the first delay since the 1976 lockout.

"Clearly, we've lost a number of spring-training games," Fehr said. "But I think it was clear from the start that the owners intended to blow off some of those games."

The Atlanta Braves' game against the University of Georgia was called off. Three other openers, including the San Francisco-Oakland World Series rematch to benefit earthquake victims, are scheduled. However, team officials, speaking on the condition they not be identified, said those games won't be played either.

Black Saturday revisited

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — One year ago, the NFL witnessed an apocalypse of the Dallas Cowboys.

After the "Saturday night massacre" on Feb. 25, 1989, the only thing that didn't change was the name of the team.

Tom Landry, the only coach in the team's 29 years of existence, was fired. Club President Tex Schramm, rendered powerless and dispirited by the change of ownership, eventually left.

Personnel director Gil Brandt, the last of the Cowboys' "Big Three" who accounted for 19 consecutive winning seasons and five Super Bowls, was sacked.

Front office staffers, secretaries, and assistant coaches were released.

Veteran players such as Randy and Danny White were encouraged to retire. Others were cut. Running back Herschel Walker, the only offensive star left on the team, was traded.

Owner Jerry Jones brashly predicted his good buddy and new head coach Jimmy Johnson would win more games in the first third of the season than Landry had (three) in 1988.

But Jerry and Jimmy found it wasn't that easy in the cannibalistic NFL.

One-victory football is all they managed and all they have in the trophy case one year after the upheaval of what once was "America's Team."

Now the team is the butt of jokes after a 15-loss season. The most popular wisecrack: "Landry wanted to get as far away from pro football as he could, so he decided to visit Texas Stadium."

Landry is more popular than ever. He has done a smash television commercial (sings in it, no less) and recently was chosen on first ballot as an inductee into the Professional Football Hall of Fame.

Landry will be playing golf this weekend just like he was last Feb. 25 when the axe fell.

"I've been so busy I haven't given it (the anniversary) much thought," Landry said. "Things could certainly have been handled better at the time, but I've had a very enjoyable year. I miss football but probably not as much as I thought I would."

Schramm is biding his time and biting his tongue about the upheaval at Valley Ranch as he awaits the start of the World League of American Football in the spring of 1991. Jones and most of the NFL teams are partners in the undertaking.

"It (the weekend) was one of the most difficult in my life," Schramm said.

Brandt has been keeping a low profile as he plots his next professional move. He appears at basketball games and is critical of the way the new regime has done business.

Former public relations director Doug Todd is involved in numerous freelance projects as he starts a new career.

Valley Ranch is expected to be sold within the year, although several prospective buyers have pulled back in recent months.

Mansfield's Rachel Hunter (40) tries to scoot past Amarillo Tascosa's Angie Wilson.

Monterey, Tascosa advance

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Editor

The one thing that came out of the Region I Class 5A girls basketball tournament at Chaparral Center Friday night was the fact that District 3-5A is going to Austin and the Final Four.

Amarillo Tascosa spilled Mansfield 50-44 while No. 6 ranked Lubbock Monterey slapped No. 5 Lewisville 53-45 in Friday's semifinals, and since both Tascosa and Monterey hail from District 3-5A, the loop will have a Final Four representative.

The determination of which 3-5A power advances to Austin will be decided early today when the two meet at the Chap in the 11 a.m. final.

Monterey, now 31-1 on the season, has beaten 21-12 Tascosa twice this season by margins of five and 24 points.

Friday's Monterey-Lewisville match was considered by many as the real championship match of the tournament since both were highly ranked in the state. And Monterey dominated this game even more than the score would indicate, leading by as many as 14 points in the fourth quarter of play.

Class 5A Regionals

"I like the way the team is playing right now," said Monterey coach Dale Pectol. "We can still play better, but Lewisville is the No. 5 team in the state and was well deserving of that rating."

Monterey is now 6-0 at Chaparral Center this year, winning all three of their state playoff games here.

"This is our home away from home," said Monterey scoring star Janice Farris, who had 18 points against Lewisville and 60 points in the three playoff games. "We like playing here. It's like our second floor."

Pectol used only five players in the victory as sophomore Tabitha Shewmake had 11 points and Diane Kersey 10. Kersey ignited Monterey to a first quarter lead with eight of her 10 points. Farris had eight in the second period for a 28-19 halftime lead.

Rebs, 'Dogs face off in vital match

Mere words can't describe how crucial today's District 3 showdown between Midland High and Midland Lee is to playoff hopes for both teams.

Both teams need a win in the second round of the crosstown rivalry set for 2 p.m. at the Lee field. Midland High, 4-2 and tied for second place in district play, needs to win because the Bulldogs can't count on Abilene Cooper knocking Abilene High out of a share of second place.

Lee needs a win just to stay in the playoff hunt after a disappointing tie with Odessa Permian last Saturday and a loss to Cooper on Tuesday. The Rebels are alone in fifth place with a 2-3-1 mark and realistically need to win five of their last six to maintain any playoff hopes that they still had.

In the other District 3 match today, Odessa Permian battles winless Odessa High.

The Rebels have gone four matches without a win since starting out the district schedule with wins over Midland High and Odessa High. Coach Eddie Bull said his team just hasn't been able to capitalize on scoring opportunities, especially in overtime losses to San Angelo and Abilene High.

"We've outshot our opponents every time, but we're just not converting," Bull said.

The Rebels have also left something to be desired defensively, at least in their coach's eyes.

"We're not where we should be," he said. "There are things we need to work on, and we're making an improvement there."

Mason returns in time to lead Tors by Clint

By BILL GRIMES

PECOS — It was like he had never left.

Lamesa senior Dwight Mason celebrated his return to the active roster by coming off the bench for 20 points during the Golden Tornadoes' 79-73 win over Clint in Class 3A bi-district action here Friday.

The Tors will face Dalhart in the area round Tuesday, probably at Hereford, though final arrangements were incomplete at press time. Dalhart eliminated the possibility that the Tors would face a repeat with Dimmitt — last year's area champion — by knocking off Dimmitt 70-67 Thursday.

The Tors earned bi-district championships in both of their years in Class 3A. Lamesa returns to Class 4A next season.

Mason was academically ineligible the past six weeks, but received the go-ahead to practice with the team Thursday in preparation for his return. The 6-1 forward immediately made his presence felt with 11 first-half points.

Despite his first-half success, Mason said he didn't feel totally comfortable on court until well into the second half.

Major league ball ...who needs it?

Used to be the term "spoiled rotten" applied only to babies and bad eggs. But today, we can apply it to sniveling major league baseball players and their lovable partners in crime, the owners.

The funniest thing about this whole baseball lockout is being able to wander down to the neighborhood newsstand and skim through all the preseason magazines on the rack. The magazines have been written as if nothing is even happening.

San Diego, St. Louis, Oakland and Toronto are the favorites by one publication.

Another magazine is entitled "Spring Training." It's a healthy sized magazine complete with news from Florida and Arizona. Too bad nobody's in Florida or Arizona.

Odd, but these magazines don't seem to be selling too well this year.

Probably has something to do with the fact that most players are scattered across the country, most of them not even daring to take a shower unless Donald Fehr tells them its OK.

The latest rage is to side with the players this season and voice your feelings on how ridiculously tight the owners are being with their money and proposals.

I don't like stoppages of play. And when they happen, I don't care for either side involved. Because of their petty differences, the owners and players are denying me — or threatening to deny me — with not being able to watch a game on television I've loved since I was a little guy. (Well, littler guy.)

People tend to get angry and defensive when you take something from them they've always taken for granted. Nobody wins in a lockout or a strike or whatever they're calling it this week.

Latest word is the two sides are nearing an agreement and will work throughout the weekend to get it solved.

True the owners are not being fair with their proposals, but that the players feel the need to ask for more just shows the sort of intellectuals we're dealing with in baseball's jockdom. (Never confuse your favorite centerfielder with a rocket scientist.)

Never fehr, though, baseball does not face extinction. At least not here.

The high school version of the game begins Tuesday at 4 p.m. when Lubbock Monterey and Midland Lee play a doubleheader at Angels Stadium. (Midland High opens its season Monday at Lubbock Coronado, also playing a pair.)

The Tournament of Champions, with teams from El Paso to Fort Worth, begins Thursday and runs through the weekend. The Bulldogs and Rebels will both be participating.

And the Angel season is around the corner. Midland starts its season Tuesday, April 10, in San Antonio. After five games there and five more in Wichita, the Angels return for their home opener, Friday, April 20 against El Paso.

The Famous Chicken will return for two more visits this season and the Angels come equipped this season with virtually an entire new front office staff as well as Eddie Rodriguez, who replaces Max Oliveras in the dugout.

The only thing lacking this season as opposed to 1989 is that there will be no exhibition game with the California team. Fortunately.

So, a baseball strike or lockout, or whatever, will not be felt here. We'll have baseball. Just not the multi-million-dollar, spoiled-rotten kind.

GIRLS

Monterey never trailed after falling back 8-7 in the first period.

"We never plan how we will use our substitutes before a game," noted Pectol, "but in this one, we didn't use our press, so fatigue wasn't a factor in the game."

Lewisville got 18 points from 5-11 senior Mechelle Chambers and 13 from Brandee Rabe.

Tascosa didn't nail down its victory until late in the game. Dottie Lanier sank two free throws for a 46-44 Rebel lead with only 30 seconds left in the game. Cristina Uzzolino got two more charity shots for a 48-44 margin and Keisha Chatman stole the ball for a layup and the final 50-44 margin and that was the Lady Rebs' biggest lead of the night.

Tascosa trailed the Lady Tigers of Mansfield by as many as nine points in the third period, but Chatman ignited Tascosa down the stretch, scoring 10 of her 14 points in the fourth period. Holly Ridings had 10 points for Tascosa.

Mansfield was led by 14 points from junior Stephani Gray, but no other Tiger hit in double figures.

Tascosa won, despite hitting zero of 14 three-point shots on the night and a total 20 of 60 shots from the field .

"We haven't been a good shooting team all year," said Rebel coach Mike Miller, "but we've been down by as many as 17 this year and came back to win, so we felt we were always in the game."

Miller seemed to be a little more anxious to meet Monterey today than Pectol likes the idea of a third game with the Rebels.

"I don't ever want to play a team three times," said Pectol. "You can bet we won't be taking Tascosa lightly. We had a tough time beating them both times. They are a great team.

"But one thing is for sure. Our district is going to Austin and that speaks well for our district."

Miller said, "Monterey beat us twice this year, but we still feel we can beat them. Still, Monterey and Lewisville were considered the top seeds in this tournament. They are two great teams and it will be a job to beat either one of them."

Lady Horns' long streak comes to end

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Juliet Jackson hit six free throws down the stretch Friday night to give No. 25 Arkansas a 82-77 victory over No. 6 Texas, ending a 132-game Southwest Conference winning streak held by the Lady Longhorns since 1982.

Arkansas' victory also snapped Texas' 183-game winning streak against SWC opponents dating back to January 1978, before the league sanctioned women's sports. The Lady Longhorns lost to Texas A&M 59-52 on January 23, 1978.

Coach Jody Conradt's team had not lost a league game since the conference began sponsoring women's sports in 1982.

Delmonica DeHorney led the Lady Razorbacks with 26 points, eight rebounds and four blocked shots.

Arkansas, 21-3, relied on a patient offensive attack, picking apart the Lady Longhorns' defense to get shots in close to the basket.

Texas missed several key layups in the second half and shot only 42 percent from the field for the game.

"I'm just kind of stunned," said coach John Sutherland. "I feel like never lost our composure on offense.

The game drew 11,608 fans to the arena, which already has been selected as a site for the NCAA regional tournament.

With two minutes left to play DeHorney shot over Anderson to give Arkansas a 74-72 lead.

MC places four in San Antonio Invitational

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — As the only junior college participating in the Texas-San Antonio Tennis Invitational Friday in San Antonio, Midland College put four players into today's final round.

Playing without its top four players — women Sharla Barone and Janneke Garos and men Amine Kadiri and Mohamed Ridaoui — the Chaparrals went up against competition from Texas-San Antonio, Baylor, Southwest Texas State, Pan American, Texas-Arlington and Abilene Christian.

MC's four premiere players took the weekend off after competing in the Rolex Small College Indoor Championships two weeks ago in Minneapolis.

Pepe Garcia was the first MC player to advance to the final round after posting two wins Friday. Other Chaps earning their way into today's action were Richard Patte, Maria Vago and Missy O'Neill.

LAMESA

"I started posting up and getting rebounds," he said.

That's just what Lamesa head coach Wayne Roberts wants him to do. Roberts is obviously pleased to have Mason back, even though sophomore Brandon Sheppard continues to start at forward.

"Dwight did a tremendous job for being out so long," Roberts said. "He just has the athletic ability to make the shots in tough situations."

Mason averaged about 18 points a game before failing a government class in January.

The District 3-3A tri-champions needed all the athletic ability they could muster after letting Clint back into the game in the second half.

Lamesa led by as much as 19 points in the third quarter, but the Lions roared back with outstanding long-range shooting by senior John Vasquez and sophomore Navin Navidowskis.

Clint also started rebounding more effectively in the second half, against a Lamesa five that admittedly thought they had the game well in hand.

"We kind of dug ourselves a little hole," Mason said.

"We got a big lead and then we let up a little," guard Bert Butler said.

After Mason's layup gave the Tors a 64-47 lead with 6:50 left in the game, Clint put together a 17-5 run that cut Lamesa's lead to 69-64 with 3:36 left.

"Our kids never quit," Clint mentor David Moore said. "They just kept coming."

The Lions pulled to within four at 77-73 with 42 seconds left on a pair of free throws by Roy Hudson, who led the Lions with 23 points.

Clint got a chance to cut the Tor lead to two after Butler threw the ball out of bounds with 33 seconds left, but point guard Keene Hunter stole the ball near the top of the key with 25 ticks left.

Hunter's theft forced Clint to foul, but Sheppard missed the front end of a one-and-one — one of five missed by Lamesa in the fourth quarter — but Hudson's subsequent three-pointer bounced off the rim and Lamesa got the rebound.

Vasquez fouled Butler with seven seconds left, but Butler proved immune to whatever ailed the Tors at the free throw line in the fourth period by canning both ends of the one-and-one opportunity to put the game away.

Roberts said the Tors won't be able to afford the luxury of missing free throws in subsequent playoff appearances.

"We may have to make those free throws in another playoff game," Robert said.

But the Tors had enough cushion, thanks to a tough full-court press and solid offensive rebounding by Mason, Dewayne Hall and sophomore Tyrone Lewis, who started in place of Lavert Hawkins, who stayed at home with the flu.

The Tors opened up an eight-point lead in the first quarter, and led 44-28 at the half.

Butler led all scorers with 27 points, while Hall added 14 and sophomore Tyrone Lewis 10 for the 24-5 Tors. Lewis started at post in place of an ill Lavert Hawkins.

Vasquez added 22 points for Clint, while Navidowskis had 18 for the Lions.

Lamesa (79): Tyrone Lewis 4 2-2 10; Dane Bethel 1 0-0 2; Bert Butler 9 7-9 27; Dwight Mason 8 4-6 20; Keene Hunter 1 0-1 3; Brandon Sheppard 1 1-2 3; Dewayne Hall 3 7-8 14; Jody Blake 0 0-0 0. Totals 27 21-30 79.

Clint (73): Navin Navidowskis 7 1-2 18; Angel Reyes 2 2-2 6; Jose Hernandez 0 0-0 0; John Vasquez 7 8-8 22; Jorge Flores 1 0-1 2; George Inostroza 1 0-1 2; Roy Hudson 7 8-9 23; Reynaldo Hernandez 0 0-0 0. Totals 25 17-23 73.

Minor leaguers have futures put on hold

New York Times News Service

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Third baseman Stan Royer has spent the last two days at Scottsdale Community College improving his job skills. He is getting close attention on batting and fielding from the Oakland A's instructional staff during a special minicamp the club is holding for its top minor-league prospects.

Royer appreciates what this camp is doing for him, but he would clearly rather be doing something else.

"All winter I was looking forward to being in the big-league camp," said Royer, the A's 1988 first-round draft choice. "I think anybody would rather be there. It's a chance to be seen by the major-league coaching staff and (manager) Tony La Russa. They don't know that much about me."

Royer, a stocky 22-year-old from Eastern Illinois, was invited to the A's major-league camp this spring, then was locked out, along with the big-league players.

"It's good that he's here and getting the individual attention, which he wouldn't be able to get in the big-league camp," sympathized A's head instructor Keith Lieppman.

"But there is nothing like the feeling of being able to show your stuff to the big-league staff. And it is good for somebody to be in that atmosphere, to see how those players work."

And it would have been the early days of the major-leauge workouts that Royer and his ilk would have been watched by the big-league coaching staff. As the regular season approaches, players like Royer are sent back to the minor-league camp and the emphasis on readying big-leaguers increases. Unless the camps open almost immediately, Royer's time with the elite will be limited.

"I don't know exactly what the issues are. It doesn't affect our minor-league season," said Royer. "I just wish they'd get it settled."

Royer has indicated that the time with the big boys would not be wasted on him. He spent most of last season with Class A Modesto of the California League. But when the A's Triple-A, Tacoma team encountered a rash of injuries, Royer was promoted. He stayed just a week, but apparently put the time to good use.

He hit .263 in six games and impressed everybody with his attitude. "All my life I've done better when I play against older guys," said Royer. "In high school I did it a lot. That is when I get everything out of what I have."

When he returned to Modesto, he was "a different player," said A's director of player development Karl Kuehl.

"In the last three weeks of the season, I put 30 points onto my batting average (to .252)," Royer said. "The first three-fourths of the year I was horrible. I finished on such a high, and that's what I wanted to keep going in the big-league camp this spring."

Others at the instructional camp who would otherwise be with the major-leaguers include outfielder Darrin Lewis and reliever Joe Slusarski. These players will all be in the minors when the season opens.

There is another category of non-roster player whose prospects are damaged even more by the lockout. This is the chance on which several players counted to win a major-league job. Pitchers Dave Leiper, Guillermo Hernandez and Ed Wojna and outfielder Bruce Fields have only so much time to make an impression. Every day off the job is critical to their chances.

NBA ROUNDUP

Rockets finally win one on road

Robinson has second straight triple-double to lead Spurs

Associated Press

Otis Thorpe scored 20 of his 24 points in the first half when Houston raced to a 22-point lead, and the Rockets snapped a seven-game road losing streak with a 125-115 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

The win was the Rockets' fifth in 27 road games and ended a three-game losing streak overall.

The loss was the 17th in 19 games for the Nets, who on Wednesday broke the league's longest losing streak of the season — 14 games — by defeating the expansion Minnesota Timbervolves 95-93.

Houston snapped an 8-8 tie with seven straight points en route to a 24-4 run that gave them a 32-12 lead. Thorpe led the burst with 11 points.

Sleepy Floyd gave the Rockets their biggest lead of the half at 37-16 by hitting a 3-pointer to open the second quarter, but Purvis Short, who led the Nets with 22 points, scored nine during a 15-1 spurt that cut the deficit to 38-31.

Moments later, the Rockets reeled off 10 straight points, including six by Mitchell Wiggins, for a 52-33 advantage. Floyd then scored six points in a 10-3 burst and Houston went to the locker room with a whopping 65-43 advantage.

Houston's biggest lead of the game was 106-79 early in the fourth period. The closest the Nets came in the final 24 minutes was the final score following a late 13-2 spurt.

Floyd and Buck Johnson each added 19 points for the Rockets, while Akeem Olajuwon added 16.

Rookie Derrick Gervin added 17 points for New Jersey, all in the second half. Jack Haley had 13 points and 14 rebounds.

Spurs 105, Timberwolves 95

David Robinson had his second straight triple double with 24 points, 12 rebounds and a career-high 12 blocked shots as San Antonio beat Minnesota.

San Antonio went on a 22-4 run to take a 66-48 lead early in the third quarter. The Spurs increased their lead to 22 in the fourth quarter and the Timberwolves never got closer than 10 the rest of the way.

Terry Cummings scored 22 points for the Spurs, who now trail Utah by two games in the Midwest Division. Willie Anderson added 17.

Robinson's triple-double followed his 23-point, 16-rebound, 10-block performance in an overtime loss to the Los Angeles Lakers on Tuesday.

Tony Campbell scored 20 points for Minnesota, which fell to 2-23 on the road. Donald Royal and Pooh Richardson had 18 apiece for the Timberwolves.

Rod Strickland, making his debut for San Antonio, triggered an 11-0 spurt in the second period that gave the Spurs a 53-44 lead.

Strickland, traded from New York for Maurice Cheeks, finished with eight points and nine assists.

Cavaliers 123, Magic 96

John Williams scored the first eight points of a 12-0 Cleveland run in the second quarter, and the Cavaliers started the second half with an overwhelming 28-4 surge to put away the Orlando Magic.

Orlando, losers of five straight, trailed only 41-37 after Sidney Green hit a 15-foot jumper with 6:50 left in the first half. Williams, however, scored the next eight points on a layup, a dunk and four free throws. A follow shot by Brad Daugherty and Mark Price's two free throws completed the spurt, making it 53-37.

Orlando's Terry Catlidge spins inside Cleveland's Larry Nance (22) on a drive to the basket.

The Cavaliers led 61-45 at halftime, then scored the first 14 points of the third quarter, starting with Price's fast-break layup and finishing the flurry with two 18-footers by Larry Nance.

Bucks 104, Hornets 100

Ricky Pierce scored 31 points and the Milwaukee Bucks hit seven of 10 free throws in the final minute to beat the Charlotte Hornets.

Jack Sikma hit a pair of free throws with 41 seconds left to give the Bucks a 99-96 lead, and Alvin Robertson, Pierce and Jay Humphries all contributed free throws to hold off the Hornets, who have lost 15 of their last 16 games.

Newly acquired Randolph Keys scored 10 straight points for the Hornets early in the fourth quarter and gave Charlotte an 88-79 lead with a 16-foot jumper with 8:13 to play.

But Sikma, who scored 24 points, and Pierce led an 11-2 run to give the Bucks the lead. Pierce's three-point play with 2:41 to play gave his team a 95-92 advantage, and the Bucks went to the foul line to maintain the lead.

Charlotte tied the score at 95 on Kenny Gattison's two free throws and a foul shot with 1:56 remaining by Armon Gilliam, who led the Hornets with 23 points.

The Hornets were cold from the field in the last 4½ minutes, missing three of four shots. The Hornets' only field goal in that stretch was a dunk with 17 seconds to play by Rex Chapman.

Keys, who came from Cleveland in a three-way deal hours before

Mavericks 102, Pacers 91

Sam Perkins matched his season high with 24 points, 13 of them in the third period, leading Dallas over Indiana Friday.

Perkins scored all the points in an 8-0 run late in the third quarter, giving the Mavericks their biggest lead, 85-67, with 2:10 left in the period.

The Pacers trailed 61-54 at halftime, but shot just 28 percent in the third quarter, a 5-for-18 effort, and went 6:10 without a field goal.

Indiana rallied in the final period behind center Rik Smits, reserve point guard Ricky Green and Reggie Miller. Green's 15-footer closed the gap to 93-87, the closest the Pacers were behind since late in the second quarter.

After James Donaldson threw in a hook for Dallas, Miller missed a 3-pointer and Indiana got no closer than eight points again.

Smits led the Pacers with 21 points, and Miller finished with 19. Chuck Person scored 10 of his 12 points in the first half, but hit only one of six shots after intermission.

Roy Tarpley added 20 points for Dallas, which won for the sixth time in its last seven games, and Derek Harper had 17.

Hawks 112, Pistons 103

Moses Malone led a balanced attack with 20 points and 10 rebounds as the Atlanta Hawks snapped the NBA's longest winning streak of the season at 13 games with a victory over the Detroit Pistons.

The Pistons, losing for the first time since a 107-97 loss to the Los Angeles Lakers on Jan. 21, fell behind in the second quarter when they scored only 10 points — tying the second lowest one-period total in franchise history.

The Hawks, who surged to a 99-81 lead on Dominique Wilkins' 3-point basket with 4:56 remaining, snapped a four-game losing streak in winning for only the third time in their last 14 games.

The Pistons built a 33-26 lead in the opening period, but Alexander Volkov keyed a 12-0 Atlanta burst in the second quarter that erased a 37-33 deficit and gave the Hawks the lead for good.

Volkov had six points and Kenny Smith four in the run, with Volkov breaking a 37-37 deadlock with a rebound layup six minutes before halftime.

Heat 128, Knicks 121

Miami set a franchise record for points in regulation and Sherman Douglas scored 28 points to lead four Heat players with 20 or more in a victory over the New York Knicks.

Despite hitting a record 62.4 percent of their shots, 53-of-85, and leading by 26 points midway in the fourth period, Miami had to withstand a late rally by the Knicks, who scored 45 fourth-quarter points.

A 16-3 New York burst that featured seven of Mark Jackson's 27 points enabled the Knicks to close the gap to 113-100 with 3:38 left in the game.

The Knicks followed with three 3-pointers, including two by Jackson, who scored 18 of his points in the fourth quarter, but could come no closer than the final margin. Douglas, who also had 12 assists, scored five points in the final 1:23 to keep the Knicks from getting back into the game.

The Heat, whose previous record in regulation was 126 points, never trailed, hitting 17 of their 24 first-period shots, 70.8 percent, to lead 38-23. Rony Seikaly, who finished with 21 points, and Tellis Frank, who had 20, each scored 10 in the quarter.

Bulls 113, Trail Blazers 102

Michael Jordan had 35 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists, leading the Chicago Bulls to their fourth consecutive, victory, over the Portland Trail Blazers.

The Bulls improved their home record to 21-2 with the win, while Portland's road mark dropped to 13-12.

Jordan scored 12 of Chicago's 16 points during a span of 4:28 in the third quarter, and his two free throws with 5:12 left gave the Bulls a 77-60 lead, their biggest of the game. The Bulls shot 55 percent in the quarter to 36 percent for Portland.

The closest the Trail Blazers came in the final quarter was nine points as the Bulls controlled the game the rest of the way.

Jerome Kersey led the Trail Blazers with 20 points, and Kevin Duckworth had 19 points and 12 rebounds. Chicago's Scottie Pippen scored 17 points, and John Paxson 16.

At the outset of the second quarter, Chicago went on a 13-6 run to grab a 39-33 lead, which the Bulls increased to 45-38 when Paxson sank a pair of free throws at 3:37.

SuperSonics 97, Kings 85

Quintin Dailey scored 20 points in his first start and Michael Cage had 15 points and 20 rebounds as the Seattle SuperSonics rolled over the Sacramento Kings.

Dailey was signed to a contract for the remainder of the season Thursday and responded by making 10 of 17 shots from the field.

The NBA and the Olympics

Copley News Service

NBA players in the 1992 Olympics are like Larry Bird at the free-throw line. He hasn't shot it yet, but you know he's going to make it.

There are still some shoelaces to untangle, but recent hints are strong that you will see Magic Johnson and the rest of the NBA in Barcelona in three summers.

"I can't say definitely, but we're optimistic it will happen," NBA commissioner David Stern said, flashing a smile that tells you it will. "It's my anticipation it will happen."

Perhaps the biggest recent hint was the appointment of six NBA-types to USA Basketball's Games Committee, which will decide who plays where and when. The committee has 22 members; eight are from the NBA now.

There are four major tangles now: the coach, player selection, trials and endorsements.

Since the team figures to be a mixture of college and pro players, should a college or pro man coach it?

Stern's response: "It would be my anticipation that a coach familiar with NBA players will coach the team."

Translation: Hello, Don Nelson. Or Pat Riley. Or Larry Brown.

As for selecting the team, the mass national tryout of the past will be a thing of the past.

"That's not something we think is fair to our players," said Russ Granik, deputy commissioner of the NBA and vice president of USA Basketball. "There will have to be some system where the players will be selected in advance."

Losing the gold in Seoul cost the United States an automatic bye into the '92 Games. Now it has to wade through Pan-American zone trials, which currently are scheduled for June 1992.

Problem is, the Olympics are two months after that, making participation on the team a 10- or 12-week commitment — too long by NBA preferences. The United States could have separate qualifying and Olympic teams, but, as Granik said, "I hate to have one team qualify and brush it aside."

A more likely solution is that FIBA, basketball's international governing body, will move the Pan-American qualifying tournament into July.

The last-but-not-least snag is endorsements. Players under contract to different shoe companies could not wear them in the Olympics.

But the way things have gone so far, you get the feeling that, too, will be resolved.

COMBINED COMPENSATION

How does Stern get an annual salary higher than his counterparts in the NFL, NHL and major-league baseball combined?

The prevailing theory in NBA circles is that the NFL was interested in Stern, who is largely responsible for pro basketball's incredible resurgence in the 1980s. Stern's $1 million-per-annum contract, incidentally, was due to expire this year.

As Orlando Magic president Pat Williams told The National: "Face it: The NFL would have sucked David up in a minute. They wanted him. Our board (of governors) believed he was their first choice."

Five years, $27.5 million.

SCRIBE EJECTION

You've heard of players and coaches being ejected from basketball games. And then there's the occasional unruly fan who is removed. But have you ever heard of a newspaper reporter being tossed?

It happened the other night at the Forum in the second overtime of Portland's 132-128 victory over the Lakers. Dwight Jaynes, Blazers' beat writer for The Oregonian, the state's largest paper, was ejected for orally protesting officiating.

The situation: The referee was sent tumbling under a baseline press table after becoming tangled with two players on a Portland fast break in the second overtime. No foul was called on the play.

As the referee got up, Jaynes yelled: "Make a call. If you had made a call, that wouldn't have happened."

Moments later, a red-faced official was poking Jaynes in the chest and telling him to leave.

HE'S MY CPA

Clippers forward Danny Manning was married recently at the Little Chapel of the West in Las Vegas, but apparently wanted no one to know about it. The marriage was announced by the bride's parents in the Wellington (Kan.) Daily News.

When Manning and his bride arrived in a limousine, a chapel employee reportedly asked the driver if the 6-foot-10 passenger was a famous basketball player.

"No," the driver said. "He's my CPA."

And when Clippers public relations director Bill Kreifeldt asked Manning about the Wellington report, Manning replied, "No comment," three times.

OVERTIME

What's going on in Denver? Pete Babcock was stripped of his general manager powers when the new ownership took over late last year. John Spolestra took over as GM, but resigned. Babcock was reinstated, then resigned to become GM at Atlanta. Who has power to negotiate trades now? None other than assistant coach Allan Bristow. Should be interesting ...

Michael Jordan wore No. 12 in a 135-129 loss at Orlando because his usual No. 23 jersey was stolen.

At last check, Danny Ferry was averaging 22.6 points and 6.7 rebounds for Il Messagero Roma. Teammate Brian Shaw's numbers: 25.1 and 9.4.

The rest of the NBA is trying to figure out what Sacramento was thinking by sending, in essence, 24-year-old starting guard Kenny Smith to Atlanta for 28-year-old backup forward Antoine Carr. Any ideas?

Metcalf taking retirement in stride

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Shelby Metcalf spends his days taking care of two cats and a dog and reading a shoe box full of mail.

He recently beat what he called "flu from hell" and has watched numerous basketball games on television "trying to figure out how I fouled up."

Metcalf may be down, but you couldn't kill his sense of humor with liquid edger.

"I'm just waiting for the weather to get nice so I can get after the fish on Lake Gig 'Em," he said. "I'd probably make a pretty good fishing guide except I don't like fishing when the weather is bad."

Metcalf, as the British would say, is keeping a stiff upper lip.

The job of his life as Texas A&M University basketball coach was over as suddenly as a game when the opponent hits a winning three-point shot at the buzzer.

On Monday, Jan. 23, the 59-year-old Metcalf was given the gate after 27 years as head basketball coach.

Just like that, the winningest coach in the history of the Southwestern Conference was gone, gone despite his six SWC championships, gone despite his 438 career victories.

The combination of the sudden firing by athletic director John David Crow and lingering influenza put Metcalf in his own personal twilight zone.

He had nowhere to go; nothing to do.

"I'd been coaching since 1955 and then it was over just like that," Metcalf said."Coaching and fishing. That's about all I knew how to do."

Metcalf was to be reassigned within the athletic department until his contract runs out in 1991.

An idea is being kicked around to have Metcalf speak to students at junior and high schools about the evils of drugs and dropping out of school. Metcalf is considering it.

"I want to be productive," Metcalf said. "I appreciate the fact A&M is giving me plenty of time to look things over."

Metcalf said Texas A&M President Dr. William Mobley "has been real nice."

Metcalf hasn't been back to G. Rollie White Coliseum to see his Aggies play but has caught some games on television and the radio.

He follows with interest the reports about who will replace him.

Asked about Idaho coach Kermit Davis, Metcalf said "I coached against his dad at Mississippi State. He and his dad are both good people. Kermit is a very personable guy. Of course, I guess that will kill him since I said something nice about him."

Metcalf doesn't want to talk about his possible successor because of his fondness for John Thornton, a loyal assistant, who has been the interim coach since Metcalf was ousted. Metcalf is pulling hard for Thornton.

Metcalf has almost become an information central about the open job. Other coaches call him looking for information.

Former Arkansas and Kentucky head coach Eddie Sutton has called three times.

"Eddie didn't call me when he left Arkansas, and now he calls me all the time," Metcalf quipped.

Metcalf welcomes callers.

His cats and dog are good friends, but they don't talk basketball.

And you can tell basketball is something Metcalf really misses.

SOCCER—

Still, the Rebels have been in the hunt against the district's best, something that Bull hasn't forgotten despite recent woes.

"We've played well against everybody we've played," he said. "We just haven't converted."

Silva had been a standout on the Rebel junior varsity in the early going.

MHS coach Tom Esikhati is at a loss to predict anything about today's match.

"I don't know what to expect. I haven't seen them the past three or four weeks," Esikhati said.

The Bulldogs have gotten hot on the feet of left forward Shane Barden and right forward James Woolsey, who have scored nine and six goals, respectively.

Arkansas looking for another title

Associated Press

DALLAS (AP) — Notes from spring sports programs of SWC schools as compiled by the league office:

ARKANSAS — After capturing its 11th straight SWC Indoor men's track and field title last Saturday in Fort Worth, coach John McDonnell's squad eyes a seventh straight (SWC record) NCAA Indoor crown when the Razorbacks compete in the national meet at Indianapolis on March 9-10. All-America Reuben Reina of San Antonio paced the Hogs in last week's SWC meet with wins in the mile and 3,000 meters.

BAYLOR — Sophomore forward LaNita Luckey of Tulsa, Okla., continues to lead the SWC and the Bears in women's basketball scoring with 18.8 points per game. The former Central High School star has paced the conference since Week One and has been above the 20-points-per-game mark for almost half the 1989-90 campaign. Luckey closes the year on Saturday, March 3, when the Bears host SMU at 2:30 p.m.

HOUSTON — Senior distancewoman Nanette Garcia of San Jose, Calif., pulled "iron women" duties last week in the SWC Indoor Championships. She ran in the women's 800 meters, mile and 3,200-meter relay while helping UH to score in each event. The multi-meet scorer in SWC activity has one of the SWC's five fastest clockings in the 800 meters at 2:13.79 in the preliminary heats of last week's conference joust.

TEXAS TECH — Expected to garner points in the NCAA Indoor Championships on March 9-10 in Indianapolis, Ind., soph pole vaulter-hurdler Brit Pursley of Merkel is one of the school's most versatile athletes. He has the second-best pole vault clearance in the conference in 1990 at 18 feet, one-half inch.

Summer camp has been moved from traditional Thousand Oaks, Calif., to Austin. California Lutheran College has dunned the Cowboys for $250,000 to settle the contract.

The purge of the old regime continues. Strength coach Bob Ward was the latest to be dismissed. Jarrett Bell, editor of the Cowboys Weekly, was told to clean out his desk.

Jones has tried to make peace with the fans and his critics.

He readily admits he made mistakes, from the way he handled the Landry firing to his fiasco quote about the Cowboys cheerleaders being the "pick of the litter" to expecting too much too soon on the scoreboard.

"I handled the Landry situation poorly," he said. "But there wasn't an easy way to handle it. Jimmy was going to be my coach."

Jones also slaps his own hand for being too bold.

"I would have never thought we would win just one game," he said. "I felt our enthusiasm could create an advantage, but I underestimated the effect that a lot of the changes we made in the early part of the season might have had on the continuity of the team.

"I was excited about being a part of the Cowboys. That excitement came out and certainly if I look back on it, I might have hedged more."

Johnson, accustomed to the heady success of national championship teams at the University of Miami, was stunned the Cowboys didn't perform better.

"The players we have now love football and have a winning attitude," he said. "Replacing the veteran players hurt us more than we thought. We thought we'd win more games."

As the one-year anniversary of the Cowboys' apocalypse passes, Johnson has already run some 40 Plan B players through camp trying to find some free agents that will help the team. Green Bay signed 20 free agents last year and it helped the Packers to their best season in a decade.

Quarterback coach Jerry Rhome recently left for the Phoenix Cardinals, and Johnson has decided to take charge of the offense and quarterback Troy Aikman.

He'll have headphones and suggest plays. Last year Johnson was locked in on the defense.

So, 1990 heads into March with Johnson now the club's head coach, general manager, offensive coordinator and in charge of all the player personnel moves.

And Jones is still trying to convince the fans and the media to give him and his former Arkansas Razorback teammate a chance.

When you visit Jones' office — formerly Schramm's — the first things you notice are the Cowboys' two Super Bowl championship trophies.

A year after the "Saturday Night Massacre," the Cowboys have never been farther away from another one.

Longhorns blank Gophers, 3-0

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mike Bradley scattered seven hits, allowing only one runner past second base, and David Lowery got three hits for the seventh-ranked Texas Longhorns in a 3-0 victory over the Minnesota Gophers Friday.

Texas, which was ranked No. 1 before dropping three games to the Miami Hurricanes last weekend, improved to 11-4.

ANTICIPATION

As February draws to a close, we begin to tire of winter . . . . the cold weather, stalled cars, lingering patches of snow. We anticipate rebirth. We dream of tiny green buds, with their translucent skin, springing from bare limbs. We picture tulip bulbs planted in the fall magically pushing through the thawing earth to form a colorful kaleidoscope of color. On rare unseasonably warm days in February, the sun teases us, glistening on ice which has yet to surrender. But spring is on the horizon. We can survive just a few more weeks of winter.

As we anticipate spring, consider God and the warmth of His love. Learn to know Him. Visit Him in His house of worship this week.

You can anticipate spring in your life all year round.

Event's genesis couple's love for Israel

By JANINE GREEN
News Editor

When Midlanders gather March 2 for an Israeli-flavored evening of food and song, they will be joining in an event that found its genesis in a love for the Holy Land.

"A Night to Honor Israel," the third local event to bear that name, will feature "Christians and Jews coming together again to affirm their common biblical heritage and love for the Land of Israel," said organizer Judy Stone, who with husband Jack inspired the celebration.

"Christians involved in bringing this program to the community are acting out of their belief in the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who gave the land known as the Holy Land to the Jewish people to be their homeland forever," she said. "Christians have a responsibility toward Israel and the Jewish people because the Christian faith did not begin in the first century. It began with the first chapter of Genesis and encompasses the entire Bible."

While vacationing in Jerusalem in 1986, the Stones were so touched by both the people and the land, they determined to do something in their home community to express their supports of Israel.

"First, Permian Basin Jewish leaders were approached. Then, a joint planning meeting with interested members of the Christian community was held," Mrs. Stone recalls. A volunteer choir was organized, local and visiting musicians were coordinated, a guest speaker was secured, and the consul general of Israel came to give greetings.

THE FIRST event, in May 1987, attracted more than 900 persons. A similar event — with the addition of a Jewish dance troupe and the serving of a Middle Eastern sandwich — in May 1988 drew more than 1,000.

The format for the event to be staged at the Holiday Inn Convention Center, 4300 W. Highway 80, Monday, March 2, will be somewhat different.

Mordekhai Artzieli

The doors will open at 6:30 p.m. so participants may browse through exhibits on Soviet and Ethiopian Jewry, examine satellite photo posters of Israel, purchase souvenirs from the Holy Land and sample felafel, a Middle Eastern pita.

Entertainment will begin at 7:30, and music with an exciting Israeli beat will be performed by an interfaith choir and local instrumentalists.

Featured performer will be Randall Bane, whose authentic Hebrew and historical interpretive dances have been included in the Feast of Tabernacles.

Bane, based in Kansas City, Mo., has been in full-time faith ministry since 1978. Through interpretive movement and pantomime concerts, dance during worship services and as a speaker, Bane says his work has three purposes: "to praise and worship the Lord Jesus Christ, to edify (encourage and educate) believers, and to present the gospel to non-believers."

HIS PROGRAM contains songs, stories and Scriptures expressed in a unique and powerful style of movement, often with full audio backgrounds.

Bane's career began with training as a method actor in the late 1960s, with work in avant garde and experimental theater following. He traded a career in improvisational, summer stock and touring theater, modeling and TV commercial work for a degree in therapeutic recreation. After settling in Kansas City with his wife Share and conducting creative therapies drawing heavily on his dance and drama experience, Bane had a salvation experience in 1974.

Since that time, he has returned to the stage and began full-time Christian work in 1978. His first European tour was in 1983 and, since 1984, he has directed dance and drama for the Christian celebration of the Feast of Tabernacles in Jerusalem.

Presenting the keynote address will be Polly Grimes of Redondo Beach, Calif.

Ms. Grimes, director of Exodus, a multi-service ministry serving the Jewish and Christian Zionist communities, has presented "Salute to Israel" programs throughout the United States. She includes in her biographical sketch letters of commendation from both former Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and current Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

She also serves as president of Gospel Concerts International and Tours Through the Book.

The concert production and promotion company focuses on booking and staging Christian artists like Sandi Patti, Larry Gatlin, Andrae Crouch, the Imperials and the Bill Gaither Trio. The organization also promotes authors and speakers.

TOURS THROUGH the Book is a travel company with major focus on Israel.

Ms. Grimes has visited Israel more than 50 times and has spent three summers in residence in Jerusalem, and has produced a number of concerts in the Holy Land. She is on the board of directors of the Gospel Music Association (GMA) and twice has served as vice president. In that capacity, she has assisted in booking and coordinating GMA presentations at the White House. She is on the board of directors of the California Christian Committee for Israel, is co-founder and co-president of the first Jewish and Christian chapter of Technion and travels for AIPAC.

She and her daughter, Lisa, received the 1985 "Golden Star Award" by the Southern California Motion Picture Council for their production of the off-Broadway musical "Cottonpatch Gospel."

Bringing greetings from Israel will be Mordekhai Artzieli, Consul General of Israel to the Southwest U.S., based in Houston. He assumed that post in July 1988.

Artzieli is a career diplomat in Israel's Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Before coming to Houston, he held senior positions in the ministry, domestically and abroad. He was consul general to the U.S. Pacific Northwest, based in San Francisco, from 1977 to 1982, and also has served in the United Nations, Nigeria and Turkey.

Prior to joining Israel's Ministry of Foreign Affairs in 1961, Artzieli had an academic career at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem as a lecturer on modern history of the Middle East.

THE PUBLIC is invited to "A Night to Honor Israel" at no charge. A free-will offering will be accepted and donated to two causes: adding trees to the Permian Basin Grove, located near Jerusalem and dedicated in July 1988 by the Stones, and aiding new Soviet and Ethiopian Jewish immigrants to Israel.

Randall Bane, who interprets Scripture in dance, will present a program of songs and stories in interpretive movement. Based in Kansas City, Mo., Bane as been in full-time faith ministry since 1978 and now directs dance and drama for the Christian celebration of the Feast of Tabernacles in Jerusalem.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your career goals come into clearer focus. You are ready to adopt a new strategy. A family reconciliation will put you in a happier mood. September will bring a new partnership. Be sure you and your allies are on the same wavelength. Special benefits will be heaped on you in November. Your creativity impresses someone with outstanding contacts. Do not reject an unusual offer out of hand. There is more than one route to the top.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: TV host Sally Jessy Raphael, Beatle George Harrison, author Anthony Burgess.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You learn something about yourself that you never suspected. Get your work under better control. Find a more subtle way of saying "no" to people. Your mate or partner is your strongest ally.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An unreasonable older person may be doing you a big favor. Take a spur-of-the-moment trip. Parents find that their children are sympathetic once they know all the facts. Protect your privacy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Doubts linger. Conduct your own investigation. A scholarship may be possible for the fall semester if you apply now. You respond poorly to ultimatums. Give romance higher priority. Call an old friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Although payment for past work is delayed, it will arrive. Money from a relative could tide you over. Those in electronics, computer technology make substantial progress. Romance blossoms.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Study a message carefully before going out on a limb. You get an unusual opportunity to increase your income. Resist the temptation to invest in a questionable enterprise. Keep your romantic options open.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A retirement plan could need revision. Consult with someone who has had more experience. A jealous member of the opposite sex could deliberately misinterpret something you said. Clear the air.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are better at matching up business colleagues than romantic partners. Avoid questioning grown children about every facet of their lives. Offer reassurance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try a suggestion immediately and watch the money roll in. Travel lifts your spirits while boosting sales. A bonus is possible. Your intellectual curiosity makes you very attractive to a newcomer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The way in which you present a new idea will determine its chances for success. Build a better work wardrobe. Be willing to make sacrifices to give a teen-ager a better life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You find a novel solution to a financial problem. Refuse to put up with a co-worker's or child's unreasonable demands. You will be pleasantly surprised if you become more flexible about romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Postpone an important meeting until you can prepare a stronger case. The principals will understand. You need to weigh career choices more carefully. Review a co-worker's recent actions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Innovative proposals win widespread approval now. Those at the top may bypass middle management to get your ideas moving. Protect your flank. A blind date can be a terrific ego-booster.

Rocky Balboa verse-us Poe: A knockout

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Suddenly there came a tapping, as of someone gently rapping, rapping at my chamber door." Yo.

Edgar Allan Poe, meet Sylvester Stallone.

Stallone took a detour during filming of "Rocky V" to visit the Edgar Allan Poe National Historic Site, a house where the poet and short-story writer lived for two years.

Park ranger Joelle Wagner said Thursday she answered a knock at the locked front door Feb. 12 to find the creator of movie hero Rocky Balboa on the doorstep with co-star Talia Shire and a bodyguard.

"I was flabbergasted," she said. "I had to take a few moments to compose myself."

As the group toured the three-story structure, one of four houses Poe rented while living in Philadelphia from 1838 to 1844, Stallone told Ms. Wagner he had written a movie script about the author of the poem "The Raven."

"He's just in awe of Poe," Ms. Wagner said. "He said he really admired him."

Stallone, the lead in such action movies as "Rambo" and "Tango and Cash," did not say if he wanted to portray Poe, she said.

Ms. Wagner said the trio viewed the park's slide show, which describes Poe's life from his childhood in Richmond, Va., his time at West Point and his literary life in Philadelphia, where he was most successful as a poet, short-story writer, literary critic and editor.

Poe died in 1849 in Baltimore as he was traveling to New York. Stories at the time said he collapsed in the street of an alcohol or drug overdose.

While touring the house, Stallone discussed Poe's life and literary works with his friends, according to Ms. Wagner.

"There wasn't much I could tell him" about Poe, the park ranger said.

She said Stallone bought a book on the writer.

Movie publicist Dave Fulton said Stallone wrote the script because he believes the writer "gets within the soul" of people and poetry.

"He's a big fan," Fulton said.

Poe also wrote "The Fall of the House of Usher," "The Black Cat," and "The Murders of the Rue Morgue," which established the mystery or detective short-story form.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Clint Eastwood has sued a weekly supermarket tabloid, alleging that it falsely claimed extremists threatened to kill him for refusing to speak at a convention of white racists.

Eastwood

The lawsuit, filed Thursday in federal court, alleges the Jan. 2 article in The Globe, headlined "Nazi Thugs Put Bounty on Clint — But Dirty Harry Won't Lay Low," was false, inflammatory, and constituted invasion of privacy.

The story, attributed to unidentified sources "close to the actor," reported that Eastwood became a target after turning down a speaking invitation by the Aryan Nation.

Eastwood ignored the threats, saying, "I've never shied away from a fight and I won't start now," according to The Globe.

Court papers filed on behalf of the 59-year-old actor and filmmaker say he never received such an invitation, never received any death threats and never uttered that quote.

Eastwood is asking for $2 million in general damages and $20 million in punitive damages for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress through incitement to violence and for invasion of privacy.

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Impressionist Rich Little is seeking custody of his 1-year-old daughter, whose mother is fighting him over child support.

Little

Little's lawyer, Gerald Z. Berkowitz, says he succeeded in having the child support argument heard in Delaware, where the mother, Lalette Cottrell, and child, Lindsay, live, rather than in California, where the comedian lives.

Little is willing to pay support but wants an amount "consistent with the needs of the child," his lawyer said. If the case were heard in California, Little would have to pay from $5,000 to $10,000 a month, he said.

"I don't think the Delaware courts would give her that," Berkowitz said. "And I don't think a child needs $5,000 to $10,000 a month."

Little, of Los Angeles, also filed for custody because Cottrell has "resisted permitting him to visit his daughter," Berkowitz said.

Cottrell and her lawyer, Daniel F. Kelleher, would not comment.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dancer Judith Jamison told 60 children from 35 countries Friday that she achieved what she has by following the advice of her parents — to love life.

Speaking at a Black History Month celebration at City Hall in her honor, she said, "You don't have to be a dancer, but enjoy what you love to do and be committed to it."

The artistic director of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater was given a proclamation by City Council President Andrew Stein who said, "She proves that with a dream — and lots of hard work — you can be anything you want to be."

Ms. Jamison said her key to success was to do "what my mom and dad told me to do. 'Love it. Dedicate yourself to it. Be committed to it. Know where your gifts are coming from — and, please, have a sense of humor'."

She said one way to grow in life is through dancing. "That can be your road map, a discipline you can take into any area of responsibility," she said.

"You can study dance and be an architect ... a doctor ... a dentist. Anything you wish. It opens up large, large areas of your life — of enjoyment, of being around people, of working for the same goals," she said.

The children attend a public school that specializes in teaching children from abroad.

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Tammy Faye Bakker has renewed her South Carolina driver's license, a right reserved for state residents, but refuses to say whether she is moving back from Florida to the state where PTL was based.

Bakker

Mrs. Bakker told reporters she did not want to talk about why she got the license renewed Thursday. The state requires that a person get a license within 30 days after moving to South Carolina, but it must be returned if the person establishes another residence.

Mrs. Bakker has been conducting a ministry in Orlando, Fla. Her husband, Jim, is serving 45 years at a federal prison in Rochester, Minn., for fraud in his raising funds at the PTL television ministry in nearby Fort Mill.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

World Day of Prayer set

World Day of Prayer, Friday, March 2, is a global event that once a year unites women of faith in 170 countries and regions of the world to share in a common worshop experience and pray the same prayers for peace.

In Midland, the World Day of Prayer observance will be held at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., at 1:30 p.m. Friday.

Since its founding in 1941, Church Women United has been the official sponsor of World Day of Prayer in the United States and has assumed the responsibility for preparation and distribution of World Day of Prayer resources to more than 6,000 U.S. Communities and churches where the event is observed.

CWU is the ecumenical movement that brings Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox and other Christian women together into one community of prayer, advocacy and service.

The 1990 service, written by Christian women in Czechoslovakia, brings Christ's message of equality as it was brought to that country over a thousand years ago. The theme, "A Better Tomorrow: Justice For All" reflects the positive changes towrad justice being felt in Czechoslocakia and in other countries.

All interested parties are invited to attend the local service.

Vocal seminar planned

Kelview Heights Baptist Church is hosting a Vocal Freedom Seminar with Ray Holcomb Monday and Tuesday.

Holcomb

Holcomb is the former chairman of the Church Music department, School of Music, Ouachita Baptist University, Arkadelphia, Ark. He has two degrees in music and 30 hours of doctoral studies, including Juilliard, Westminister, Conservatory of Midland at Kansas city and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth.

"At the seminar you will learn how to improve your vocal technique effectively without any apparent effort," says a release from the chruch. "You will learn how to better control breath management, how to create attractive mature sounds and how to consistently sing with a rich, resonant quality."

Fee is $25 per person for those registering in advance and $30 at the door. For more information call Russ Hale, 682-3842.

Petra will give concert

The Christian rock band Petra will appear in concert at 7 p.m. March 26 at Midland's Chaparral Center.

The tour is called "Who Do You Listen To" and features a special appearance by Josh McDowell, a well known youth speaker.

Tickets, priced at $13 the day fo the show, are available to groups for $10 each and individuals for $12 each if purchased in advance. Ticket outlets are Chaparral Center, The Lighthouse, Midland, and The Scripture Shop, Odessa.

In addition, McDowell will hold a parent seminar entitled "Why Wait," which helps parents to relate to their children regarding sexual issues, at Kelview Heights Baptist Church, 402 W. Scharbauer Drive, from 2 to 5 p.m. March 25. The three-hour session will cover "Where Youth Are Today," "Helping Your Child Say No" and "How To Build Bridges of Communication." Group rates are $3 if purchased in advance and $7 at the door. For more information call 682-3842.

For more information on the concert call Street Level Ministries, 1-915-362-8195.

'Oh, Jonah!' to be staged

The junior and carol choirs of First United Methodist Church, Main Street and Illinois Avenue, will present "Oh, Jonah!" at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Fellowship Hall.

The musical, by Allen Pate and Carol McCann, allows the audience to have a "whale of a time" as the children bring to life the story of the prophet Jonah in music, mime and merrymaking, says a release from the church.

"It's more than a story about a whale swallowing a man; it's a story about listening for the word of God in our lives and believing that there is mercy and compassion for all who turn toward God," the release says.

The progran is directed by Jane Kisner, associate director of Music Ministries. Dacia Lust will be the accompanist.

The church's senior pastor, the Rev. Russell Parchman, invites the public to attend. No admission will be charged. Child care will be provided for infants.

For more information call the church office, 682-3701.

Drug abuse seminar set

A drug abuse prevention seminar will be presented by the Family and Youth Ministries of Golf Course Road Church of Christ, 3500 W. Golf Course Road, from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday.

John Featherston, presently a minister, will share his story of what drugs did to his life, family and what he has learned through recovery.

"Teens, parents and interested adults will benefit from this practical lecture," says a release from the church.

Bob Savage, director of Midland's Palmer Drug Abuse Program will talk about what adults and teens can do to prevent drug abuse in their lives and the lives of people they care about from 6 to 7 p.m. Thursday and again March 11, 18 and 25.

Child care is provided for the Tuesday session by pre-registration at 694-8836, and nursery and Bible Hours will be available on Sunday evenings.

The public is encouraged to attend. No offerings will be taken.

Nuns allowed to officiate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vatican has granted permisssion for Roman Catholic Archbishop Francis T. Hurley of Anchorage, Alaska, to designate religious sisters and lay persons to officiate at marriages when priests or deacons aren't available.

Hurley, who pilots his own aircraft in order to travel the long distances between parishes, says that the Vatican permission currently applies to five religious sisters and one lay woman now serving as parish administrators.

Bishop critical of ordination of gay priest

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — After two months of official silence, the Episcopal Church's presiding bishop said a Newark colleague was wrong to ordain a practicing homosexual who later made embarrassing remarks about Jesus Christ and Mother Teresa.

The Rev. Edmond L. Browning, who has refrained from comment on the ordination of J. Robert Williams, released a statement to church officials critical of the ordination handled by Newark Bishop John S. Spong.

In the statement made public this week, Browning, the top Episcopal official in the United States, said he and his Council of Advice "disassociate" themselves from the ordination, but not from "the many members of our church who are gay and lesbian."

Williams raised controversy five weeks after his Dec. 16 ordination by belittling church teachings on celibacy and monogamy in a speech.

He has told reporters he believed Christ had a gay lover and has implied that Mother Teresa would be better off if she had sex.

Williams, 34, told a Detroit church panel in January that monogamy and celibacy are "unnatural" and made the remark about Mother Teresa, a Roman Catholic nun, in response to questions from a church official.

The remark about Christ was made to a church group in Texas.

Conservative church critics have demanded Spong's resignation, saying he violated a church resolution against admitting practicing homosexuals to the clergy.

Conservatives kept out of Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The red carpet is out for sympathetic celebrities invited to observe the general election, but Friday observers from the most conservative group still awaited visas from the leftist Sandinista government.

The Washington-based Center for Democracy, which acted for the U.S. Senate in observing the 1986 Philippines elections and the 1989 Panamanian elections, says it has become an outsider in the monitoring process.

Insiders include people like actor Ed Asner, a longtime critic of U.S. policy in Central America, and British singer Billy Bragg, whose latest album is "Workers' Paradise."

"It would be our job, if we were satisfied with the results and the procedure, to go back and do our best to counteract the negative media that continually occurs vis-a-vis the Sandinistas in the United States," Asner said as he trotted toward a bus in the sweltering afternoon heat.

Asner, a former president of the Screen Actors' Guild; Bragg, singer Jackson Browne and actor Robert Foxworth had just finished an hour-long meeting with Vice President Sergio Ramirez and were late for a meeting with the interior minister.

But Allen Weinstein, president of the Center for Democracy, could only gaze out his window across the street to the Foreign Ministry, which hasn't issued visas for 25 Americans on the center's team.

The center learned Thursday that visas for three Costa Rican congressmen in its delegation had been denied.

"There they are, right across the street. But they won't answer our calls, they won't answer our letters," Weinstein said.

Former President Jimmy Carter is greeted on arrival at Augusto Sandino Airport in Managua Friday. At left is his wife, Rosalynn. Carter is heading a delegation of international observers to monitor Sunday's elections in Nicaragua.

Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Mercedes Borge said the ministry didn't know anything about the visas and referred inquiries to the Supreme Electoral Council. The council spokesman was not available for comment, a secretary said by telephone.

Weinstein has issued a statement saying the "integrity of the entire international observer process" has been jeopardized by the visa problems and electoral council refusal to let his observers watch the votes being counted.

He had been hoping to field 100 observers but will end up with fewer than 30.

Sunday's election will still be one of the most closely watched in history, with one observer for about every 850 voters.

Every morning, hordes of observers spill out of the doors of the Intercontinental Hotel, a pyramid-shaped Managua landmark. They clog restaurants and roam the aisles of the dollar store, virtually the only place in Nicaragua for supermarket-style provisions, Ray-Bans and Reeboks.

The Sandinistas expect a favorable verdict from voters and count on the observers to give the election a credibility the Bush administration cannot ignore.

President Daniel Ortega, whose main challenger is publisher Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, says he will propose a political truce with the opposition and the United States, which has financed the Contra rebels and kept an economic embargo on Nicaragua.

The government has worked closely with the three main observer missions: the United Nations, the Organization of American States and former President Jimmy Carter's Council of Freely Elected Heads of Government. The three will deploy more than 700 people in all and they will issue the definitive verdicts on the election.

All three groups have said they believe conditions exist for a free and fair election.

Carter arrived Friday with a group of observers that included five U.S. senators, seven congressmen, three former state governors, Prime Minister George Price of Belize and former Presidents Raul Alfonsin of Argentina, Rafael Caldera of Venezuela and Daniel Oduber and Rodrigo Carazo Odio of Costa Rica.

"We will observe but only Nicaraguans can vote," Carter said, reading a statement in Spanish. "Choose well, and we will work to ensure that the results reflect your decisions and are respected."

The Center for Democracy was one of the first groups invited here and has been monitoring the campaign since last fall, as have the three major observer groups.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ivory Coast police beat demonstrators

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Riot police beat hundreds of student pro-democracy demonstrators Friday but held off attacking other students protesting inside the capital's Roman Catholic cathedral. About a dozen students were arrested.

The weeklong student protests in Abidjan have posed the strongest opposition in years to President Felix Houphouet-Boigny's conservative government.

Houphouet-Boigny has refused recent calls for a multiparty state in this West African nation, which is struggling through a recession that has brought unemployment and salary cuts to one of Africa's richer countries.

As night fell Friday, police attacked more than 400 students gathered opposite St. Paul's Cathedral in downtown Abidjan.

The students did not retaliate or cry out as they were beaten with truncheons and fists. Some spectators were caught in the melee.

It was not known how many students were injured.

Shadows of protesters could be seen through the large stained glass windows and doors of the cathedral late Friday night, eight hours after 200 students moved in.

Tugs try to cool tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A flotilla of salvage tugs worked Friday to prevent a flareup of fires that could touch off another blast aboard a U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tanker crippled by an explosion.

U.S. Navy warships warned other vessels to keep at least four miles away from the fire-ravaged Surf City. The U.S.-flagged tanker was en route to Italy loaded with naphtha and diesel fuel when a blast ripped through it Thursday in the Persian Gulf, 20 miles off the United Arab Emirates coast.

U.S. military officials identified the two people killed in the explosion as the ship's master, Derrick F. Linardich, 38, of Norfolk, Va.; and the first mate, Steven P. McHugh, 34, of East Bridgewater, Mass.

The other 23 crew members scrambled to lifeboats as flames raced across half of the 700-foot ship. The crewmen, including four with minor injuries, were rescued by the American missile frigate USS Simpson.

Spokesmen at U.S. Central Command in Tampa, Fla., the headquarters responsible for U.S. operations in the Gulf, said they were told that the Surf City's chief engineer was "British-Canadian," but others said all 25 crewmen were American.

Mandela meets opposition

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela met Friday with liberal white and mixed-race members of Parliament who have been shunned by some black militants because they take part in a legislative body that excludes blacks.

Aides to Mandela, meanwhile, said the African National Congress leader will leave next week on an 18-day, four-nation trip, his first abroad since his release Feb. 11 after 27 years in prison.

par'e-shoot'

parachute (noun or verb) — The umbrella-like parachute depends on a simple principle — air resistance — to slow down the speed of a falling object. Pilots and drag racers also use special "drag chutes" to slow down high-speed planes and cars when stopping. Leonardo da Vinci designed the first model back in 1495, but the first successful parachute jump was made from a tower in 1783 by Sebastien Lenorman, an adventurous French physicist. Modern parachutes are used to make emergency jumps from aircraft, and parachutes as big as 1000 feet across are used to drop food, medicine, and even trucks.

Richards accuses Mattox of planting rumor

DALLAS (AP) — Accusations intensified Friday between Democratic gubernatorial opponents Ann Richards and Jim Mattox about allegations that Ms. Richards made a racial slur in a speech 14 years ago.

Ms. Richards, the state treasurer, denied saying or writing the word "wetbacks" in a speech to a labor group during her successful 1976 campaign against an incumbent for Travis County commissioner.

She accused Mattox, the state attorney general, of planting the story in a Hispanic-oriented weekly newspaper.

Mattox campaign officials denied the charge and said Ms. Richards was trying to shift the blame.

Ms. Richards, in a news conference Friday, said Walter Timberlake, an Austin union official, was at the speech in question "and he will tell you that I did not use that word in my remarks."

The Associated Press contacted Timberlake Thursday evening and read the speech to him, and he said, "I do not remember that specific speech."

Friday, Timberlake, a Richards supporter, said he remembered the speech and said she did not use the term "wetbacks."

"I'm positive," he said. "In fact, I'll take an oath to it. She did not say it."

Meanwhile, a statewide Hispanic organization said the allegation that Ms. Richards wrote the slur or said it hasn't been proven.

"I'm sure Ms. Richards is concerned that a rumor — and that's what it is at this point — will affect her candidacy," said Edna Campos, secretary of the Mexican American Democrats of Texas.

"It's still going to be an issue that will be discussed, but I think people are going to want the facts and not to accuse her without any evidence," Ms. Campos said.

Gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards talks with delegates of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association after a candidates' forum in Dallas Friday.

STATE IN BRIEF

Woman convicted in dancer's killing

DECATUR (AP) — A Wise County jury Friday convicted Sharon Green of murder, then sentenced her to 10 years' probation in the slaying of an Amarillo topless dancer.

Mrs. Green, 29, had claimed that she was a battered woman who was too frightened to defy her abusive husband, Ricky Lee Green, when he ordered her to help stab and beat Betty Jo Monroe, 28, in 1985.

The jury deliberated more than two days before returning the guilty verdict. Jurors deliberated for about 1½ hours Friday afternoon before returning the sentence.

Mrs. Green sobbed as the guilty verdict was read. At least one juror appeared visibly shaken and raced away from reporters after leaving the courtroom in the morning.

"I was sad. I was real sad when I heard that (verdict)," Mrs. Green told reporters. "I was kind of in shock, too.

"I still don't feel guilty myself. I know I was forced to do what I did." she said.

Mrs. Green's attorneys contended she was a battered wife who was powerless to disobey her husband, Ricky Lee Green, when he ordered her to stab Ms. Monroe and hit her with a hammer in the bathroom of the couple's trailer.

Prosecutors contended that Mrs. Green willingly participated in the killings and changed her story several times both before the trial and during it. Wise County District Attorney Pat Morris said during closing arguments that the "battered wife syndrome" defense should be discounted.

Mrs. Green said the probated sentence was "what I needed to get."

And, she added, "I feel I want to get help to for the way that I am."

Battalion's role recalled

DALLAS (AP) — Eddie Pratt was 19 years old when he stood on the volcanic island of Iwo Jima and watched American Marines raise the flag on Mount Suribachi, site of one of the fiercest battles of World War II.

Pratt, 64, can still hear the cheers of the soldiers as the American flag was raised at the historic moment — a moment that he said forged a special link between blacks and his country.

Friday was the 45th anniversary of the taking of Mount Suribachi.

Every year at this time, Pratt said he takes out his collection of Iwo Jima memorabilia and recalls the role the black battalion played in the battle.

"I have read hundreds of papers that talk about the experience of Iwo Jima," Pratt told The Dallas Morning News. "But nothing has ever been said about us. I try to tell everybody I can that blacks were a part of it. We did a great job. I want to let the world know."

Pratt was an assistant driver in the U.S. Army's 1,000-member, all-African-American 43rd Amphibian Truck Battalion. The non-combat battalion was attached to divisions of the 5th Marine Amphibious Corps, the integrated corps that captured the island.

Americans invaded the Pacific island, about 800 miles south of Tokyo, on Feb. 19, 1945. Four days later, Mount Suribachi was taken, but resistance continued until March 26.

More than 6,000 Americans and 20,000 Japanese died.

The flag-raising on Feb. 23 was immortalized in a Pulitzer Prize-winning photograph by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal. The photograph was used as a model for the U.S. Marine Corps War Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Pratt recalled waiting on board a ship behind an ammunition amphibian truck preparing to head for the island. In the scramble to disembark, the ammunition truck crashed into the ramp and sank, killing the two occupants. Pratt said his vehicle, carrying about 25 Marines, barely made it to shore.

"I saw a lot of men die," Pratt recalled. "I wasn't too scared, except for one time. I made up my mind that I went there to help win the war."

Glorieta may be honored

GLORIETA, N.M. (AP) — A bill that would designate a Civil War battle site near here as a national battlefield has been introduced in Congress by Rep. Bill Richardson and Sen. Jeff Bingaman, both D-N.M.

The legislation introduced Thursday would help promote and protect the site, which is being threatened by increasing popularity and development, the two lawmakers said in a news release. They had introduced similar bills three years ago, but the measures died in committee.

Union forces defeated Confederate troops, many of whom were from Texas, March 8, 1862, at Glorieta Pass.

"The battle of Glorieta, fought at an important pass on the Santa Fe Trail, marked the turning point of a Confederate drive to occupy and control the New Mexico territory and larger areas of the southwest beyond Texas," Bingaman said.

"It is imperative that these lands and buildings be secured before deterioration renders them valueless."

Girl declared adult for trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 16-year-old female "skinhead" member charged with killing another teenager because of "bad blood" between the two has been certified to stand trial as an adult.

Mardie Swartz, a self-described member of the white supremacist skinhead group, is charged with murder in the November shooting death of Lori Ann Forrest. The 19-year-old was shot in the left side of her head at near point-blank range.

State District Judge Tom Rickhoff ruled Thursday that Ms. Swartz will stand trial as an adult, making her the first girl in Bexar County to be tried as an adult for murder.

U.S.S.R. food crisis

'Good old times of caviar gone'

Butchers in a private market in Novosibirsk, in central Siberia, above, present their skinned rabbits with the feet intact to prove that they aren't selling cats. Shoppers crowd the meat counter of a state-run store on Moscow's Gorky Street, right. Officially, only sugar is rationed in Moscow, but with the city facing the worst food crisi since World War II, most stores limit customers to about two pounds of meat.

AP Laserphoto

MOSCOW (AP) — Long lines snake down Gorky Street, a bustling thoroughfare leading to Red Square and the Kremlin, as Moscovites wait silently for hours to buy enough food to see them through another few days of a cold, gray winter.

Nearby on Pushkin Square, the world's largest McDonald's opened its doors to a predicted 15,000 customers a day. The hamburgers and french fries will be like fast food elsewhere in the world, but no one expects them to dent Moscow's worst food crisis since World War II.

Sugar is rationed at 4.4 pounds per adult monthly and stores limit customers to about two pounds of meat and a pound each of cheese, butter and sausage. Coffee, caviar and wine disappeared from the nearly empty shelves of state-run shops long ago, and now even tea — as Russian as the long winter — is hard to find.

"We are not starving here," a Moscow journalist told National Geographic with some pride after buying an 8-pound Hungarian turkey for his New Year's dinner. "But it is for sure, the good old times of caviar are gone."

From Moscow to Vladivostok, the Soviet Union is struggling to feed itself. Prime Minister Nikolai I. Ryzhkov recently told the Soviet parliament that 70 per cent of the country is suffering from serious food shortages.

While no one predicts famine, malnutrition is a growing danger. "There will be places where workers cannot do their jobs because their diets are deficient," says economist Alexei Kunitsin of Moscow's Institute of the U.S.A. and Canada.

Disillusioned with President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts to rebuild the Soviet economy, consumers have resorted to panic-buying. Economists also blame the empty shelves on habitually low agricultural output, inflation and racketeering in the railroad and trucking industries.

Spoilage and a primitive road network result in a loss of at least 25 percent of the grain crop before it reaches market — an amount equal to the $4 billion Moscow spent on grain imports in 1988.

At the Yaroslav Street Station here, a heavily laden woman boarding the Trans-Siberian Express for the 2,000-mile trip to Krasnoyarsk shrugged at her parcels of cheese, sausage, tea and soap.

"There is nothing in Siberia," she said, "only perestroika," using the Russian catchall phrase for nearly every economic and political change sweeping the country.

In Vladivostok, on the Pacific coast, sugar, tea, soap and laundry detergent are rationed, while in Novosibirsk, in central Siberia, meat and sugar are sold only with a ration card.

"For a holiday like New Year's," says Novosibirsk housewife Yana Stepanova, "we'll go to the private market. Beef is three times as expensive there, but easier to get."

A young government official in Vladivostok says there is a noticeable difference between food available today and last year. He blames local authorities for trying "to build popular resentment toward a free market economy" by creating artificial shortages.

Russians have been taught that inexpensive food, despite the long lines and frequent shortages, is a birthright. Last year, the Soviet Union spent 60 billion rubles (about $97 billion at the official exchange rate) to subsidize food prices. That is almost 15 per cent of the state budget.

For example, the state pays about $3.20 for a pound of beef and sells it for half of that. But the wait is likely to run more than a hour during the evening rush.

To reassure the restive nation that Gorbachev's reforms are working, Moscow is importing huge amounts of food this winter, including 500,000 tons of potatoes from Poland and East Germany. The Soviet Union's food-import bill last year was nearly $8 billion.

But in a country where too many rubles are chasing too few goods, consumers are increasingly turning to private and cooperative markets to put food on their tables.

In Novosibirsk's private farmers' market, beef, veal, mutton, chicken and rabbit are readily available — but at prices up to 10 times higher than in state stores. Melons from Central Asia, always rare in the winter, cost as much as a week's pay, while oranges from the Caucasus sell for the equivalent of $2 each.

But in a country where long lines are part of the landscape, the mentality of the ration coupon is hard to escape. In the village of Pokhodsk on the Kolyma River in northeast Siberia, the mayor's secretary took a visiting American aside.

"Tell me," she asked, "What is on the ration card in Washington?"

Soviet lawyers being briefed by U.S. firms

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty-one floors above midtown Manhattan, worlds away from his home in the Soviet Union, Sven Papp walks with ease through the paneled corridors of White & Case, a bastion of U.S. corporate law.

The offices are filled with the fruits of capitalism — plush carpeting, flower arrangements and antique furniture, but Papp is more impressed with the word processors. At his modest law practice in the Estonian capital of Tallinn, Papp types his own documents on an old-fashioned typewriter.

But the 27-year-old lawyer is learning more than modern technology at White & Case, where he is part of an American Bar Association program that for the first time has brought Soviet lawyers into the American legal community.

He hopes his study of free-market ventures will mean new clients at home.

Papp is one of 17 Soviet attorneys in the midst of seven months of visits to law firms, law schools, corporations, prosecutors and public defenders.

Steven Raikin, the ABA attorney coordinating the program, has gotten only positive response in monthly reports from the Soviet lawyers and their hosts.

VLADIMIR ZAKHVATAEV, of the Ukraine, worked with federal and state public defenders in San Diego and spent time in the U.S. attorney's office. "He has impressed everyone with his insightful observations about ways to transfer some of what he has observed in criminal law and protection of rights," Raikin said.

Tatiana Zaharchenko, a teacher at Kharkov Law Institute in the Ukraine, has been studying environmental law at the University of California, Berkeley. She also toured toxic waste dumps and met with officials. "Coming from an area near Chernobyl, she will be a real pioneer in environmental law," Raikin said.

The desire to contribute to legal reform in the Soviet Union emerged as a common theme in interviews with several participants.

Papp wants to establish a cooperative law practice, patterned after American firms, that specializes in representing foreign companies in business ventures in the Soviet Union. Soviet lawyers now may share office space, but they don't work together on cases. "It's not enough for one attorney to work with a client. We need teamwork, like it's done here," he said.

In the academic setting of Cornell University School of Law, Olga Djujeva has been studying family law. Djujeva, a Moscow State University law teacher, plans to write a book about U.S. protection of children's rights and to lobby Soviet officials to expand programs in adoption and foster care.

Her most rewarding experience has been doing volunteer work with handicapped and Down syndrome children. "I see these kids and they are not miserable at all. They are happy. In our country, handicapped kids are in hospitals or at home and nobody sees them."

In Nashville, Tenn., Valentin Blueger is cultivating contacts just like any other entertainment lawyer seeking a record deal for a client. Blueger, who is working at the law firm Farris, Warfield & Kanady, which represents the Grand Ole Opry, has so far been unsuccessful in negotiating a U.S. record contract for a Latvian rock singer. "The market is so tough here and the acts are so professional. I do hope something will come of my efforts."

THE SOPHISTICATED U.S. music industry cannot be compared to the system in the Soviet Union, where there is only one record label, which doesn't even pay royalties, said Blueger, who hopes to be a frontrunner as the industry expands.

"Up to now there have been much more complicated problems to solve before the entertainment business, but someone has to start," he said.

The learning experience for the Soviets has gone beyond the profession.

Papp ruefully admits he's developed a new habit of starting his day with two cups of coffee. He also speaks like a native when asked about his host city: "It's something that you love and hate at the same time."

Moscow attorney Leonid Kheifets, who has been with the Washington firm Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy, celebrated Halloween in Georgetown, where thousands of costumed partygoers filled the streets. The 36-year-old former professional basketball player met up with a group of Australian rock musicians that night and sent pictures of the revelry to his family in the Soviet Union.

"My wife wrote back asking, 'Who are those strange people surrounding you?' " Kheifets said with a laugh. His excitement about his experience was still evident. "To be absolutely free and independent and to have the opportunity to express oneself as you want was amazing."

Kheifets also tells of being approached on the street by a panhandler. His initial reaction was to walk on, but he decided to ask the man what he wanted. What ensued was a discussion about U.S.-Soviet relations.

"We both were very happy. He didn't receive any money from us. We just had a little chat. I found that it was right that I stopped. If we can speak to each other without any anger...it works."

Kheifets said his theory can be applied to the lawyers' program and the larger issue of U.S.-Soviet relations. "Now they know 17 Soviet lawyers they can trust and under the program, every year they will know more. This is the work for the future. To work together, you must trust your counterparts."

LEASE A VOLVO WITH THE MOST ATTRACTIVE TERMS YET. YOUR OWN.

MONTHLY PAYMENTS AS LOW AS $246*

No matter what you're looking for in an automobile lease, look no further than your participating Volvo dealer. Where right now, during our special leasing program, you can choose from a wide variety of options to get the lease that's right for you.

You can lease for two to six years. Lease with no down payment, or put some money down to reduce your monthly costs. You can also lease with the option to buy.

Better still, your dealer is offering especially low monthly payments on every leasing arrangement. Whether you choose the legendary Volvo 240, the luxurious 760, the limited edition 780, or any other Volvo model.

See your participating Volvo dealer soon. Because while his leasing terms are flexible, the deadline for this offer isn't. VOLVO A car you can believe in.

*Offered by participating Volvo dealers to qualified and approved customers through February 28, 1990 in conjunction with Chase Manhattan Services Corporation. Customer must take delivery out of dealer stock by 3/5/90. Price shown based on a 60-month closed-end lease of a 1990 Volvo 240 DL Sedan. Subject to availability. 60 monthly payments equal a total of $14,760.00. Down payment of $2,000 required. First monthly payment required in advance in this example. Customer responsible for taxes, registration and title fees. Excess mileage charges will apply if contracted mileage is exceeded. Purchase option price established at time of lease inception based on projected fair market value of vehicle at full-term maturity. Other conditions and fees may apply. Lessee responsible for maintenance and repairs not covered by warranty. Other lease terms and down payment options available. Individual dealer prices may vary.

PART-TIME JOB$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. AS a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- adults who have full-time jobs, jet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- youths who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although currently none are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW! APPLY IN PERSON TO:

PART-TIME JOB$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. AS a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- adults who have full-time jobs, jet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- youths who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although currently none are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
