Higher Cigaret, Gasoline Tax Proposed By Shivers

Asks For Re-Study Of Taxing Method

AUSTIN, Jan 12 — UP — Gov. Allan Shivers called for an increase in gasoline and cigaret taxes Wednesday to meet the expanding revenue requirements of a growing state and to balance the state's budget.

Shivers told a joint session of the House and Senate $135 5 million will be needed over the next two years. He proposed a two-cent-a-gallon increase in the gasoline tax and a one-cent-a-package increase on cigarets.

The governor also proposed drastic revision in certain phases of the state's financing which he said would provide additional revenue ease the new tax load and help keep Texas in the black.

Need for Re-examination

"We need to re-examine the entire field of taxation to determine who pays state taxes and who doesn't who pays too much or too little. Whatever tax or taxes you pass, I trust they will be upon as broad a base as possible population-wise geographically and from the standpoint of business economics," he told the law makers.

"Working together we can and will solve these problems. We will have, I know, the support of the thinking people of this great state as long as we use common sense and good judgment in trying to solve them," he added.

Water was tagged by the governor as Texas' No. 1 problem.

"We must learn how to prevent economic paralysis in time of drouth as well as economic disaster in time of flood," he said.

Lauds Water Proposals

The governor commended recommendations of the Texas Water Resources committee, and as a step toward solution of the water problem urged "revamping of the board of water engineers" and expressed hope the legislature will "provide this board with adequate financing and authority."

In brief, the governor also said:

Approximately $2 billion will be needed for capital improvements on Texas highways and roads during the next 10 years. "Texas has lagged principally in developing the main trunk highways system... the farm-to-market road program is in excellent shape."

Increased public school enrollment means "more than $21 million additional money will be needed" under the Gilmer-Aikin education program during the next two fiscal years.

The college building fund provision should be altered by constitutional amendment to allow "all state senior colleges" to tap the multi-million dollar fund.

Would Await Court Mandate

No changes should be made "in our system of public education until the United States Supreme Court gives us its complete mandate banning segregation in public schools."

New tubercular hospitals should be built at Harlingen and San An-

U.S. Keeps Silent On Latin Violence

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 —UP— President Eisenhower said Wednesday the United States will have nothing to say in the dispute between Costa Rica and Nicaragua until a special inter-American commission has made its on-the-spot investigation.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Jan. 12 UP The government of President Jose Figueres sought Wednesday to repel an invading force from Nicaragua, apparently composed of Costa Rican refugees and "mercenaries" from other Latin American nations.

Figueres sent a force of 300 Costa Rican troops to Villa Quesada, 30 miles northwest of San Jose, where the invaders established an "airhead" Tuesday with the reported collaboration of disloyal townsmen.

Nicaragua, calling the disturbance a revolt instead of an invasion, said in radio broadcasts that other Costa Rican towns also had fallen to anti-Figueres forces.

Break Relations

Costa Rica, ignoring denials that Nicaragua is supporting the attack, broke relations with that country Tuesday. El Salvador has been asked to look after Costa Rican interests in Managua.

An official Costa Rican statement said a transport plane landed 80 to 100 invaders on a field near Villa Quesada, where two trucks were waiting to take them into the town.

Two clashes were reported between the invaders and Costa Rican forces in the Villa Quesada area, resulting in one wounded Costa Rican and "possibly several" casualties on the other side.

A special commission, representing the United States, Brazil, Mexico, Ecuador and Paraguay, left Washington by plane Wednesday morning to investigate the situation.

To Call Meeting

The council of the Organization of American States voted Tuesday to call a meeting of the foreign ministers of the United States and Latin America to decide whether the situation here threatens the peace of the hemisphere. No date or place was set for the meeting.

Reports that the invaders were re-inforced by landing parties that traveled by boat down the San Juan and San Carlos Rivers from Nicaragua could not be confirmed.

Officials here said the invaders had not been positively identified, but added "Nicaragua was the only possible source" for the attack.

(Nicaraguan officials in Managua and Washington scoffed at invasion reports, saying Costa Rican President Jose Figueres was trying to blame Nicaragua for "the well-known fact that the people of Costa Rica are tired of his misgovernment.")

Russ To Free Third Yank

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 UP — U.S. officials said Wednesday unceasing American pressure apparently forced Russia to its sudden decision to free the last three Americans known in Soviet hands.

They said Russia probably would have left the trio in Soviet labor camps much longer if Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen had not hammered at the Kremlin door repeatedly during the past year.

The Soviets agreed Tuesday to turn over to American authorities in Berlin Army Pvt. William A. Verdine, 28, of Starks, La., who is believed to have been held by the Russians almost six years. The date for the transfer was not fixed but Russia said in a note that it would advise the American embassy in Berlin when to expect Verdine.

He had been listed by the Army as AWOL in Europe since Feb. 3, 1949.

Last Saturday the Russians returned John H. Noble of Detroit, held by the Soviets almost 10 years, and Army Pvt. William T. Marchuk of Brackenridge, Pa., held about six years.

American authorities have been questioning the two in Berlin in an effort to find out whether they know any other U.S. citizens to be in Russian hands. Unless they have seen others, the United States will have to assume the trio to have been the last Americans in Russia against their will.

First firm word that Noble, Marchuk and Verdine were held by Russia came more than a year ago from other returning prisoners. Bohlen began last Feb. 5 to insist that the Soviet Union return them. He sent six notes to the Kremlin and called at the Soviet foreign office personally several other times in his campaign to win freedom for the trio.

The Russians never bothered to answer until Dec. 29 when they agreed to return Noble and Marchuk.

Veterans Land Probe Opens

AUSTIN, Jan. 12 —UP— Senate investigators were to resume Wednesday their inquiry into the multi-million dollar Veterans Land Board that Tuesday lost three employes through resignations.

The resignations were termed "voluntary" but in the "best interests" of the land program.

Land Commissioner J. Earl Rudder said the three Austin men who quit were Lawrence C. Jackson, executive secretary; U. S. McCutcheon, assistant executive secretary, and H. Lee Rickey, appraiser for the South Texas area.

Rudder, who was named last week by Gov. Allan Shivers to succeed Bascom Giles as land commissioner, said the resignations were "accepted" with the approval of the other two members of the board for what we consider the best interests of the veterans land program."

Rudder said none of the resignations were requested, and when asked, "were they entirely voluntary?" he answered, "so far as I know, they were."

Meanwhile, the Senate General Investigating committee received its inquiry toda yinto the program.

Campaign Tactics Hit

Ike Defends Nixon Against Dem Blast

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—UP—President Eisenhower is firmly recorded as endorsing Vice President Richard M. Nixon's 1954 campaign tactics and feels now that informed Republicans should defend them against Democratic charges of a smear.

Mr. Eisenhower's endorsement was in a campaign wind-up letter to the vice president expressing admiration "for the tremendous job you have done since the opening of the present campaign." The President's feeling that other Republicans familiar with Nixon's campaign tactics should rise in their defense has been expressed privately since Speaker Sam Rayburn and numerous other Democrats started a hot fire as the 84th Congress convened.

It is understood that Nixon intends to leave his defense to others unless their efforts prove inadequate. In that event, Nixon probably would utilize his high station in government to seize the attention of a nation-wide TV audience in aggressive self defense comparable to that which dramatically interrupted his campaign for election back in 1952.

That was the occasion when the Republican vice presidential nominee, supported by Mrs. Nixon and Checkers, made a TV reply to inquiries about the source and use of his funds. Meantime, the defense of Nixon has begun with a Senate speech by Sen. Everett Dirksen (R-Ill.) and a sharp statement by Republican national committee Chairman Leonard W. Hall.

To some of Nixon's associates the present Democratic attack looks like a double barreled program:

1. To discredit one of the two men who sought to make the most

Envoy Still Silent About Peiping Talks

TOKYO, Jan. 12 - UP - UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold briefed America's two top officials in Japan Wednesday on the outcome of his free-the-fliers mission to Red China and then took off for New York to give a full report to the United Nations.

Hammarskjold conferred with Gen. John E. Hull, supreme UN commander in the Far East, and U.S. Ambassador to Tokyo John Allison for 15 minutes after landing in Tokyo from Hong Kong at 4 p.m. (1 a.m. est).

The short conference took place in the forward section of Hull's personal "Constellation" plane which will take Hammarskjold to New York with only brief stopovers at Honolulu and near San Francisco.

An hour after Hammarskjold had landed in Tokyo, he and his party left in Hull's plane for New York, still withholding from the American public the results of his talks with Red Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai on the fate of 11 American airmen jailed by Peiping as spies.

Nor would he comment publicly on reports from London that the mission had failed in that Hammarskjold failed to win freedom for the imprisoned fliers. Highly-placed diplomatic sources in London said the most optimistic aspect of Hammarskjold's talks was his leaving the door open for further conversations on the fliers.

TOT Rodeo Men Elect

The newly elected members of the executive board of the Top o' Texas Rodeo Association met this morning to make personnel assignments to the 19 committees which will organize the 1955 show in Recreation Park.

Officers re-elected Tuesday night at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce offices in City Hall were Paul Crouch, president; Bob Andis, first vice-president; George Neef, treasurer, and E. O. Wedgeworth, secretary. John Pitts, was elected second vice president.

The executive board voted to donate $100 to the Pampa Oiler baseball fund, according to Crouch.

Summerfield Is Politely Called 'Liar'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 - UP - A Senate Appropriations committee staff report accused Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield Wednesday of "gross deception" in his economy claims for three-cent mail carried by plane.

Summerfield said last week the experiment is saving the government $154,000 a year on the New York-Washington-Chicago - Florida phase. The staff report charged that the program actually is losing at least $100,000 annually.

The report, containing such phrases as "glaring misrepresentation of facts," said the committee's request to the Post Office Department for full details on the cost of transporting three-cent mail by air was answered by a "meager report" that "appears only as an attempt to adjust the overall figures to lend substance to the department's contention that flying three-cent mail is actually cheaper than surface transportation."

The staff's findings, which still must be approved by the appropriations committee itself, said "the attitude and actions of the Post Office Department in this and other matters does not meet with the committee's approval."

Police Guard Solons' Homes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 UP— Police guarded the homes of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) and Rep. Dewey Short (R-Mo.) Wednesday after a man calling himself "Bimbo" telephoned that the lives of the two lawmakers were "in danger."

The call was made to Capt. William Broderick, head of the Capitol police force. McCarthy's next-door neighbor, Mrs. George W. Ennis, also received a call from a man with a "foreign voice" who threatened to blow up the senator's house.

Capt. Broderick said "Bimbo" sounded like a crackpot and that police were not particularly alarmed. Such calls are not uncommon, other police officials said.

McCarthy Undisturbed

McCarthy was not disturbed by the threat.

"The left-wingers, screwballs and crackpots couldn't murder me politically," he said. "I am not worried about anybody doing it physically."

He talked with reporters at his home in northeast Washington three blocks from the Capitol.

Short also was unperturbed. He entered the Bethesda, Md., Navy medical center Wednesday for minor surgery.

Mrs. Ennis, a middle-aged, red-haired woman, told reporters that a person with a "strange, foreign voice" called her at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday and said:

"We are going to blow up Senator McCarthy's house tonight and want you to vacate your premises."

LOS ANGELES —UP— Mrs. Beulah McClanahan ended her 41-year marriage to former city councilman Meade McClanahan Thursday on the grounds her husband learned too much from television.

She told a judge that when she objected to her husband's "continually" watching wrestling matches he bolted out of his chair, grappled with her and applied a "judo" grip to the back of her neck.

Congressional Pay Increase Approval Seen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 UP Battle lines began forming in Congress Wednesday on the issue of pay raises for its members, for government workers and for the military.

There were these developments:

1. Most Republican members of the Senate were reported ready to approve a hike in congressional salaries.

2. Opposition mounted to the President's renewed proposals that mail rates be increased to finance a raise for postal workers.

3. The President prepared to send Congress Thursday a message giving details of his proposal to grant salary increases to military men with more than two years of service.

Sen. Eugene D. Millikin (R-Colo.), chairman of the Senate Republican conference, said the question of raising congressional was discussed at Tuesday's conference and no opposition was voiced. He said the consensus of the conference appeared to be that members of congress should get raises boosting their salaries in the $22,500 to $25,000 range.

Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson said there should be "some increase" in the present $15,000 salary for congressmen but he would not commit himself to a specific figure.

15 Are Dead In Two-Plane Mid-Air Crash

CINCINNATI Jan. 12 UP Two twin-engine planes, one a Trans-World airliner with 13 persons aboard, collided in flight and crashed 12 miles south of here Wednesday and Kentucky state police said "it looks like everybody is dead."

TWA in New York confirmed there were no survivors aboard its plane.

Detective Robert Gordon of the Kentucky state police, one of the first to reach the crash scene, said that parts of the planes and bodies were scattered over a wide area.

TWA officials indicated their plane had left the Greater Cincinnati airport about 8:30 a. m. est and was enroute to Dayton, Columbus, and Cleveland.

CAA officials at Lunken airport in Cincinnati said the second plane was owned by Mrs. Francis Dodge who operates Castleton Farms famed Lexington, Ky., trotting and pacing horse racing establishment.

A spokesman for Castleton Farms said the private plane, DC-3, was enroute from Battle Creek, Mich. to Lexington.

The spokesman said she "assumed" that pilot Arthur Werkhaven and a co-pilot were aboard. She identified the co-pilot only as "Eddie."

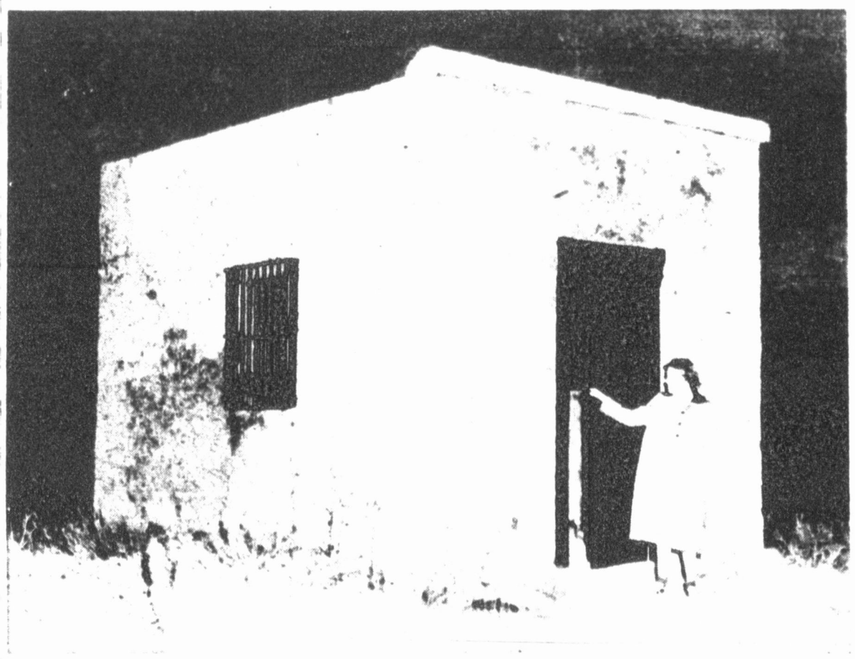
Poll Taxes Due Jan. 31

Only one-fifth of the number of Gray County residents who paid poll taxes or received exemptions to vote in 1954 had made themselves eligible by today to vote in 1955.

An estimated 1,000 persons have paid poll taxes and 400, receive exemptions in the office of County Tax Collector Jack Back. The exact figures are 935 and 385, but the McLean totals are not complete.

The deadline for poll taxes and exemptions is Jan. 31. If residents have not taken care of the matter by that date, they cannot vote this year.

In 1954, there were 5,845 who paid poll taxes and 1,208 others who got exemptions — a total of 7,053. It has been estimated there are 10,000 persons in the county who could vote if they paid poll taxes or got exemptions.



OLD JAIL IS GLAZIER LANDMARK

This 46-year-old jailhouse in Glazier stands as a grim reminder of one of the great tragedies to hit the Panhandle—the tornado of April 9, 1947, which killed nearly 60 Texans, 16 in Glazier, and flattened the town of 200 population. Today, there are about 18 houses in Glazier and the jail where about a dozen folks sought refuge during the storm, is no longer used. Leona Wilson, 12, stands beside the Panhandle landmark. 32 Paratroops Jump From Disabled Plane

MILES CITY, Mont., Jan. 12 — UP — Thirty two paratroopers from the Air Force "Snowbird" project bailed out safely from their disabled plane west of here early Tuesday after one of the aircraft's twin engines caught fire in midair.

One of the plane's four crewmembers landed the ship, a C-119 Flying Boxcar, safely a few minutes after the last man had bailed out. The flames were extinguished by firemen.

The plane was landed in the Fort Keogh area, site of an old Indian fort.

Police said the pilot, who was unidentified, told them the troops were from Fort Campbell, Ky., and were enroute to Edmonton, Alta., when the engine caught fire about 20 miles northwest of Miles City.

The pilot ordered the 32 soldiers aboard to bail out. All of them were picked up a short time later by Miles City sheriff's officers and police.

They were taken to a hotel until another plane can be flown here to continue the flight to Edmonton.

New York Legislator Trying To Help Job Seekers Over 45

Editor's Note: The unemployed who are over 45 claim they are "first to be fired, last to be hired." This is an exaggeration, but federal and state labor departments recognize a special employment problem involving the older worker. This dispatch, the third in a series, describes how labor, management and the government are going to bat for the senior citizen.

By ROBERT ZIMMERMAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 UP — A New York state senator is asking the Legislature for $200,000 for relief of the aged. But not a penny of it would be doled out as "relief." It would be used to help men and women past 45 get jobs so they can support themselves.

State Sen. Thomas C. Desmond, chairman of the joint legislative committee on problems of the aging, regards the 45-plus age group as the "hard core" of the unemployed in New York.

The program he is sponsoring would provide for retraining of older workers who need to adopt old skills to new machines, for special counselling to help them find jobs, and for a permanent "educational" campaign to help drown the prejudice against older men and women in the labor force.

Recommendations Cited

The plan embodies some of the recommendations put forth recently by a U.S. Labor Department "committee on the older worker," which urged that both labor and industry pay more heed to the special problems affecting senior citizens.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell has warned that the 45-plus, who represent an increasing proportion of the population and a potential political group of enormous power, will force an expensive welfare program into existence if they are not relieved of the discrimination which keeps them out of work.

In Detroit, which is on the government's list of "critical" unemployment areas, the Employers Association representing a cross-section of local industry has recognized the problem of the older worker as a "grave" one but one not easily solved.

Association Manager Speaks

"It isn't the inhumaneness of the employer that prompts him to say "no" to an older job applicant," Wayne Stettbacher, general manager of the Association, said. "It is the general complexity of the picture and higher unit costs."

He said the most significant factor is the cost of pensions. This is a field which the labor department committee recommended that a conference of industry leaders explore.

Desmond's New York committee has found that special counselling has boosted the placement of older workers in new jobs by 50 per cent. But this requires more counselors. While it takes about an hour to find a job for an under-45 applicant, 10 hours is sometimes required to line up employment for an oldster.

Committee Plugs for Oldsters

The committee is plugging for more "job engineering" in industry to help the older worker. A survey of 250 companies in New York showed that only 40 could cite cases where plant routine or equipment had been adapted to allow older workers to stay on jobs they might otherwise have been forced to quit.

The Desmond program also would include a "technical advisory service" aimed at convincing industry that in many types of jobs age is an asset rather than a liability.

In a recent report the committee described Hollywood as "the archfoe of the nation's senior citizens," and said movie-makers are possessed by a "youth mania" that fosters prejudice against anyone with gray hair.

They will be tried together with Thornton, who formerly was general manager of the Galveston Wharves.

THE STORY: Although Riverboat Captain Crotch has contracted to haul ore from the Colorado River town of La Paz, the ore company for political reasons has turned Crotch's bargos over to his competitor, Captain Jamison. At Castle Dome, Crotch has found two of Jamison's boats and the barges. A fight brewes as Captain Maddix, pilot of one of the boats, moves forward to ram Crotch's ship, General Heath.

XVI

THE San Diego struck shallow water. Her sea-rotted bottom shuddered as her thrashing paddles drove her over the bar. Goss was hacking away at his straining lines. The last rope parted with a snap, letting the flat-bottomed General Heath shoot backward like a plate skimming the surface.

Maddix caught her just aft of her blunt prow, driving his sharp bow deep into Crotch's timber. The General Heath shook to her keel, heeled toward the low river bank. But the backward power of the Heath's engine was now drawing Maddix's boat with her. The San Diego was hard aground with half her hull.

Under full power Crotch was dragging her, the gravel tearing all the time against her rotten bottom. When he felt the pressure of the hooked ship ease off in deepening water he rang Melott again for slow speed forward to hold both packets engaged.

Goss was now charging across the deck. At his heels raced the Cocopahs armed with firewood. Some passengers were following, armed with whatever weapons they could lay hands on. He saw Goss strike the foremost wave of San Diego crewmen, swinging his sounding pole against their heads.

The battle was fierce and furious while they wove back and forth across Maddix's broken foredeck.

Crotch felt the warm pride of his own battling crew lace through him. They had Calhoon licked, and Jamison and Maddix aloft on the texas realized this.

Then while froth at Clyde Maddix's stern told Crotch San Diego had had enough. He yanked his whistle cord sharply, calling Goss and his Cocopahs onto their own decks. Slowly, the heavier packet backed into the channel.

Maddix rang furiously for his engineer to beach her below the regular landing. Her bilge was taking water badly.

Presently Crotch signaled his packet into the channel. By the time he reached the main deck Goss was heaving fresh lines around the mooring stumps.

"We broke her back. That devil-ship will never sail again."

"You may have a point there," Crotch grinned.

Goss came back caustically, "Crotch, let's you and me climb aboard the other scow and scuttle her!"

Crotch's tight eyes held a wicked gleam as he said to Melott, "Jim, hold your steam. We'll go after the barges before dawn."

• • •

IN the furious pace of their battle with Maddix he had completely overlooked Linda Wong. Whatever unfastened crates and odds and ends were stored on the cargo deck had gone careening when the Navigation boat crashed them, and he felt disturbing fear for Linda Wong.

The pine box of Chung Wong had traveled clear across deck, coming up hard against the port rail and breaking open. The corpse had rolled from its casket and now lay face up on the planking, waxy and stiff in the lantern light. Linda's trunk had spread forth its contents, and this was spread over the deck. A few feet from the corpse lay Linda Wong. Across her temples stood the ugly welt of a bruise.

Crotch's eyes skimmed the passengers. "Give me a hand. We'll slip the Chinaman back in his box before she comes to!"

Miners were already gathering her clothes and replacing them in the teakwood trunk. Two prospectors helped lift the corpse into its casket. Then they hammered the nails down with an iron bar one of them had swung in the fight.

Below the stairs Crotch recognized his Chinese cook, still carrying a pick handle which he had used as a buidgeoning weapon. "Keep your mouth shut about the way her husband died. If you don't I'll cut off your ears!"

• • •

JIM MELOTT had maintained a full head of steam, with his pressure valve ready to pop at any moment. In order to kill most of the glow from the boiler they had hung a blanket around the engine pit. Behind this screen Melott worked with his Cocopahs in a drenching sweat.

"They'll have riflemen watching from the Amador," he said. "Good luck, Irv."

Moored fast as she was, the General Heath's slashing paddles would lift tons of water against the ore-laden barges, hurling them into the Amador's stern. Foolishly, Jamison had allowed those barges to remain between the two steamboats. But success depended chiefly on whether they could hack loose the mooring lines so that the barges floated free.

He went over the rail with Goss in silence. Each carried an ax, each had a pistol thrust through his waistband. Goss's bruised face and dark beard were hard-set in the murky light. In each man lay the accumulated anger that Navigation trickery had built into a festering sore. Navigation had started the play with the ramming by the San Diego; now, since Jamison had asked for this, they would go all the way and ruin him completely.

The Top o' Texas show now includes six counties. When organized it served as a one-county show.

The constitution should be amended to ban sanity trials by jury in county court. "Admission to the mental hospitals should be based on medical examination, with proper safeguards for the rights of the individual. Our current system makes a mockery of the civil rights of aged citizens, many of whom are 'convicted' by juries of nothing more than being old."

The governor's address on state finances and other activities came on the 54th regular session's second day of business and followed closely on the heels of a comptroller's report warning of a dire money shortage.

State Comptroller Robert S. Calvert said Tuesday Texas will dip temporarily into a deficit, possibly by next month, and will need $26 million in additional revenue during the next two years if it is to continue operating on the same level as currently.

It was believed that up to $80 million in additional money would be required if all proposals for state improvements were passed.

Secretary of State C. E. Fulgham, who called the House of Representatives to order Tuesday, said it was "doubtful that any previous Legislature has borne heavier responsibility."

Lawmakers settled down Wednesday to regular business, after Tuesday's colorful and sometimes confused opening-day activities.

Rep. Jim Lindsey of Texarkana was elected unanimously as House speaker. The action gave the most powerful job in the lower chamber to the second youngest presiding officer in Texas history.

Senators, meanwhile, chose Sen. Crawford Martin, tall 38-year-old Hillsboro attorney and cotton gin operator, as president pro tempore of the upper chamber. Martin assumed the honorary position that is next in line of succession behind Lt. Gov. Ben Ramsey, who presides over the Senate.

Primary Senate action coming out of Tuesday's brief action was a vote to continue in force an investigation, by a five-member Senate General Investigating committee, into the $100 million veterans land program. They were ordered to report their findings back to the upper chamber not later than Feb. 25.

Near Tragedy In Air Mishaps

By UNITED PRESS

One hundred and 39 persons, including 69 paratroopers and Air Force men who bailed out of Flying Boxcars, have escaped death in four near plane tragedies.

The most spectacular of the widely-scattered mishaps Tuesday occurred near Nashville, Tenn., and Miles City, Mont., when the air was dotted with paratroopers drifting down from stricken C-119 Flying Boxcars.

In another near crackup, a giant United Airlines DC-7 blew all four of its tires as it landed at Chicago's Midway airport, but the 54 passengers and five-man crew were not injured.

At Rhinelander, Wis., a private twin-engine DC-3 carrying 11 persons made an emergency landing in a farm field when both of its engines failed.

There were some fatalities in the rash of air accidents, however.

Two men were missing in the crash of the C-119 at Memphis and two Navy TV-2 jet trainers collided near Corpus Christi, Tex., killing a student pilot.

At Tucson, Ariz., hope faded for four persons aboard a private plane which has been missing five days.

Both of the C-119s were helping to ferry 3,000 troops of the 503rd Regimental Combat team, 11th Airborne Division, from Fort Campbell, Ky., to Alaska for "Operation Snowbird."

Near Memphis 37 of the 39 men aboard—five crew members and 34 paratroopers—bailed out before the twin-engined transport crashed and burned.

The plane developed trouble at 10,000 feet shortly after taking off from Sewart Air Force Base.

The mass jump was conducted so calmly that several of the paratroopers thought they were going through a practice drill. The plane was 6,000 feet over the ground and above the clouds.

NW Texas Due Mercury Drop

A Canadian air mass rolled across Texas Wednesday to bring more frigid weather to Northwest Texas while Gulf winds helped promote light rain along the coast and inland as far as Austin.

The front dropped temperatures to 15 degrees at Dalhart Wednesday morning, only a couple of degrees cooler than Tuesday's minimum, and at 8 a.m. was approaching the Wichita Falls-Lubbock area.

Early indications were, however, that the front wouldn't send the freezing line much deeper into Texas than the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Other early morning lows included 22 degrees at Salt Flat, 24 at Amarillo, 26 at El Paso, 32 at Midland and Lubbock, 35 at Childress, 36 at San Angelo, 38 at Junction, 39 at Wichita Falls, Abilene and Presidio, 44 at Fort Worth, 46 at Dallas and 64 at Brownsville.

The rainfall was very light—.06 inch at Brownsville, .03 at Cotulla, .02 at Victoria and San Antonio, .01 at Houston and Laredo and traces at Galveston, Beaumont and Austin.

The rain was expected to continue Wednesday and Wednesday night in Southeast Texas, but generally the cold front was expected to be a dry one for the remainder of the state.

Tuesday, the mercury climbed into the upper 40s and low 50s in central West Texas to just about wipe out the last signs of the weekend snowstorm which had piled up to seven inches of snow in some sectors.

Visitations in the home consumed 76 hours of Gray Lady time, with Mrs. H. O. Darby topping the list with 10 hours credited. Service to ill and shut-ins contributed 54 hours to the total. Mrs. Mark Heath contributed the most hours in this service with 11 hours.

Other Gray Lady services to the community totaled 29 hours.

effective campaign use of the charge that Democrats in office had been soft on communism.

Some observers suggest that the campaign against Nixon is a natural supplement to the successful strategy which laid low Wisconsin's Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy. The methods of McCarthy and of Nixon were decidedly different and the senator zoomed in and out of areas never approached by the vice president. But they were the pair who had been counted on by a substantial element of the Republican high command to raise most effectively during the 1954 campaign the soft-on-communism charge.

Father Kills 3 Children, Then Self

LANCASTER, Tex., Jan. 12—UP—An aged Negro father who had said he would rather see his children dead than with their mother, killed his three youngsters and then committed suicide, authorities said Wednesday.

Justice of the Peace W. E. (Bill) Richberg said Arthur Field, 72, "was getting old and he figured he didn't have anything to leave the children."

Richberg ruled the deaths of Arthur Jr., 10; Preston Nathaniel, 11, and Jessie Mae, 9, were homicides and that of Field, a railroad laborer, was suicide.

Police Chief Pete Playford said there was no sign of a struggle and "the children evidently were killed swiftly before they could awaken."

Field was separated from the children's mother, Effie Field, 42, and Playford said Field told neighbors four or five days ago he would rather see the youngsters dead than with their mother.

The mother said Wednesday that Fields had been sick and despondent for some time and his only income was railroad retirement pay and an old age pension.

Jury Of Fathers To Try Man Charged With Killing Baby

FORT WORTH, Jan. 12—UP—A jury of fathers and grandfathers will try Pvt. Carl George Malloy of Aliquippa, Pa., on a charge he crushed to death with his hands his seven-week-old son.

Testimony was scheduled to start Wednesday after selection of a final juror.

The baby died last Oct. 11. Assistant District Attorney Randell Riley described the murder as "the most cold-blooded crime in the history of Tarrant county," and said he would seek the death penalty.

Malloy, a 22-year-old Army private stationed at Carswell Air Force Base, Fort Worth, said he had an "uncontrollable urge to hurt" the baby, George Michael Malloy, and admitted that on at least 10 different occasions he squeezed the infant until he "went limp and started turning blue."

His defense attorneys contend that Malloy is suffering from schizophrenia, or split personality, and was not responsible for his act.

But deputy sheriff E. N. Buie, an officer who investigated the baby's death, said the soldier "was a party boy and the baby tied him down."

Riley said Malloy "is the most intelligent prisoner I've ever questioned."

The indictment returned against his infant son "voluntarily and with malice aforethought" by using his hands for "crushing, breaking and fracturing the ribs" and thus puncturing the baby's lungs and heart.

Seven jurors to hear Malloy's trial were selected Monday and another four were chosen Tuesday afternoon. There was only one woman on the jury panel and she was excused.

Of the first 11 men named, all but one were either fathers or grandfathers.

Malloy told authorities the baby was conceived when he seduced his bride-to-be, and that he married her after learning she was pregnant but before he was "ready" for marriage.

Teen-Age Dilemma

Did you ever stop to think of the dilemma faced by today's young men and women of school age? It is little wonder there is so much juvenile delinquency when the age old values and verities are being swept down the drain in the rushing current of pragmatism.

Here is a young man of 14. He attends a government high school. There he is told that the British government is the best government because it is the most efficient. He is told stories of the heroism of the Russian peasants as they built a railroad line across the ice of Lake Ladoga, in an effort to turn the tide of aggression emanating from Hitler's Wermacht.

He is told that these countries are very progressive because they have recognized the limitations of capitalism. He is warned that profit is nothing in the world except an unpaid wage.

He is informed that fortunately in this country at long last awakened to the decadence of the laissez-faire system of enterprise, that our government has seen the light, and by taxing those bloated profiteers is helping to distribute those profits made by Wall Street and the munitions makers who are in reality warmongers.

He goes home and begins to pass on some of this wisdom to his father.

But father knows better. He knows that the slim margin of profits he manages to eke out of his business are what is being used to buy the 14-year-old his food, shelter and clothing.

Father bellows: "That's a lot of d--- nonsense!"

But he doesn't explain. Father is in no position to explain. Father is worried about meeting the payments on the mortgage. And taxes are getting bigger. Business isn't what it should be. And father is on the firing line. He knows that he has to pull himself, his business and his family through, come what may.

If he does manage to squeeze a few minutes out for junior he tells him that this is a pretty great country. That it was founded on the ideal that men should be free and work out their own destinies.

But father is fundamentally inarticulate in this area. He's not a propagandist. Much less equipped to handle counter-propaganda.

The 14-year-old is faced with a cruel choice. He must decide that father and family are wrong. They are "old fogies" who have just failed to keep up with the times. He concludes that their opinions are pretty dreary.

If he fails to make this decision then he must of necessity decide that the school is wrong. If he does so, he runs the risk of separating himself from his classmates and his fellow students.

He becomes an iconoclast, an out-cast. His instructors sneer at him. His fellow students hate him.

He has to be made of sturdy stuff indeed to decide that school is wrong and father is right.

But this pitting of school against family cannot help but produce psychological problems in children. A choice as deep seated as this is cruel, even for adults. With teen-agers it is world-shaking.

Is it any wonder that many of our youngsters today are growing up with a pink haze covering their outlook? It is only the occasional genius or rugged individual who defies the tax supported government instructor and stands by the truths which are admittedly inadequately presented by parents.

The normal desire of the youth of today is to integrate his world. He wants parents and school to have a consistency of view-point. He needs that unification of aims and beliefs behind him for himself to have a solid foundation on which to erect his life and his life work.

Let's make the matter crystal clear.

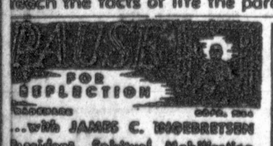
The old fashioned virtues of capitalism, the profit system including the profit motive, thrift, self-responsibility, integrity, these are all on father's side.

These, furthermore, are facts directly related to reality. Father knows the kind of a world we live in. Junior is being sent to school to learn.

But in today's tax-supported government institutions he does not learn. Instead he is taught a vast amount of communist and socialist theory. The old fashioned virtues and verities are ridiculed. He is made to believe that our government is best, only where it is interfering with the economy.

And in the end he emerges from school clutching diploma or degree and is hurled headlong into the buzz-saw of reality without grasping, until it is too late, that father was right all the time.

In this conflict between parents and schools, it is not the parents who are at fault. The assault against the children is being made by the government schools. The parents are paying for the schools. Why shouldn't the schools teach the facts of life the parents know?



There are still pilgrims — fleeing from political and religious tyranny. However, today's pilgrims, instead of boarding the Mayflower for a perilous journey across stormy sea, often board the subway from East Berlin to West Berlin. But they can take with them on less than the Mayflower pilgrims took — they leave behind anything except the clothes they are wearing.

Istvan Rabovsky, 24, and his wife, Nora Kovach, 23, ballet dance team from Hungary, took this route to freedom in May, 1953, and arrived in Los Angeles to fill a ballet engagement a few days ago. Interviewed by reporters, Rabovsky said he and his wife were considered rich in Budapest. They owned a house, had money in the bank.

"But we gave up these material things without any hestitation when we had a chance to escape from Communism," he explained.

Only those who have lost freedom know what it is worth. Will we Americans have to lose ours before we wake up to the fact that everything else ceases to be of value when liberty is gone?

As Clarence Manion, noted professor of law, warns us, "We need to remember that there is no permanently habitable middle ground between American freedom and and Communist slavery. Between the two there is only a path of transition leading from one to the other."

Will A Limited Government Cause Depressions?

Probably the reason we have depressions is because too many people believe that if the government were limited to only using force to stop the use of aggressive force, we would have long periods of unemployment and there would be great suffering and poverty.

Those people who will answer questions without evasion believe that the cause of depressions and unemployment is the government doing things that interfere with an unhampered market for labor and the products of labor.

Leonard E. Read, president of The Foundation for Economic Education, Inc., in his new book "Government — An Ideal Concept" has considerable to say on what causes booms and busts. Under the subtitle of "Depressions" he has this to say:

"What about 'booms and busts'? Wouldn't we be in a boom or a bust most of the time if people could act as they pleased, except for defrauding or otherwise doing violence to others? Aren't the great depressions of the past positive proof that freedom won't work?

"A conclusion consistent with this thesis can be stated categorically at the outset: Booms and busts have not been caused in any single instance nor to any degree by the release of creative energy and the exchange thereof. On the contrary, they have been caused by perversions of liberty—by aggressive, political interventions in the market place, by government's failure to perform its proper function, and by government's insistence on indulging in improper functions.

Liberty Never Wholly Accepted

"Liberty, like Christianity, has been tried but never wholly adopted. It isn't that these ways of life have been found wanting. It is that they have been found difficult and rejected by many. The relations between liberty and government as outlined in this essay have been practiced only partially. To the extent that government takes sides among the citizens — plundering some for the 'benefit' of others, granting special privileges —to that extent has government become incapable of performing its legitimate function of protecting the life and livelihood of all citizens equally. It is a self-evident fact that no person or agency can protect the honest fruits of one's labor while at the same time forcibly taking the fruits of one's labor. In short, the more government acts aggressively, the less it can act protectively or defensively.

"The history of government's acting aggressively coincides with the history of government. Is there a single instance where government has been limited to the defense of creative energy and its uninhibited exchange? Even in America in 1789 — the nearest known approach to strict limitation —slavery and tariffs were acknowledged as appropriate aggressive acts of government. The principle of aggression, once admitted, had either to be denied and destroyed or approved and expanded. While Negro slavery was later denied and destroyed, the principle of government aggression was not stamped out. Some of the aggressive seed remained in embryonic stage; and by 1900, governmental actions were taken which led to the development of the embryo. By 1913 this perverse principle was so thoroughly established that we inscribed on our American banner—proclaimed and adopted as national policy — the Marxian ideal. This Marxian ideal, the Sixteenth Amendment — the progressive income tax — legalized a new slavery in lieu of the Negro slavery earlier disposed of.

" 'What is essential to the idea of a slave? We primarily think of him as one who is owned by another....That which fundamentally distinguishes the slave is that he labours under coercion to satisfy another's desires ... What ...leads us to qualify our conception of the slavery as more or less severe? Evidently the greater or smaller extent to which effort is compulsorily expended for the benefit of another instead of for self - benefit.' (from Herbert Spencer's "The Man Versus the State")

"This new slavery advances in direct proportion to the application of aggression by government. It is not intended in this essay to outline or statistically to verify the tremendous growth in government encroachment since 1913. There are many excellent readings on this phase of the problem. Aggressive intervention by government has a thorough historical record. Booms and busts cannot logically be blamed to the free market and limited government for the simple reason that no such arrangement has ever been more than approached. It has never been wholly practiced.

Unemployment

"The severity of busts or depressions is usually measured by the degree of unemployment or the contraction of business activity. Unemployment is a phenomen of the partially rigged market. A minimum wage law, for instance, that would make illegal the payment of less than $100 per week for department store workers would throw out of employment all marginal workers — that is, all workers worth less than $100 per week to the employer. Other economic rigidities — there are literally millions of them in America today—such as $3.00 per hour for carpenters aggressively established by a labor union, will disemploy carpenters whenever the demand for the carpenters at this rate declines.

"Full employment exists and always has existed in two types of situations and is assured in a third:

"1. Full employment exists in primitive societies — foraging and exclusively agricultural — where division of labor and exchange are minor and where there is no perfection of a societal agency devoted to the protection of creative energy and its exchange. The American Indians did not, and the Mayans do not, have unemployment problems.

"2. Full employment exists in slave labor societies, where the government acts aggressively to a high degree. There is no unemployment problem in Russia.

"3. It is inconceivable that there could be other than voluntary unemployment in a free-market society were government is limited to restraining all inhibitions to creative energy and its exchange, assuming, of course, that government performed this function effectively.

"Involuntary unemployment, except for acts of God and total disability cases, originates with man-made obstacles to creative energy and its exchange. Free the market and remove all marauders, and there will be as much work to do as one wants to do. What one will obtain for the work will be determined by what others will willingly exchange for it."

Dixon-Yates Opponents Will Get No Labor Vote

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Congressional opponents of the Dixon-Yates TVA-AEC contract will receive no support from the powerful union labor bloc as a result of the Federal hydroelectric agency's practice of paying "scab" rates for purchases of coal.

The growing undercutting system, which was winked at by such pro-labor figures as F.D.R. and Harry S Truman, has destroyed morale among John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers. Many local unions, in order to obtain work for its members in TVA territory, have torn up or violated the wage agreements which Lewis laboriously won over 20 years.

The bargain buying of coal has also precipitated squabbles among the operators, and many side with Lewis in a unique alliance for these ancient enemies. Producers paying the standard union rate of $18.25 a day cannot compete with firms which pay only $8 or $10 a day in order to obtain TVA business.

Other government agencies, according to Lewis and the operators, are following TVA's example with respect to commodities besides coal. In short, the idealistic experiment undertaken in the Roosevelt era now operates to break down many of the gains achieved by organized labor.

TVA officials maintain that their position is logical. The authority, according to its Capitol Hill critics, can justify itself and sell power at low rates largely because it is tax-free, and also enjoys many other advantages over private competitors. Legislative demands for its geographical limitation have been based on these factors.

Now, if it can buy coal and other supplies at lower prices, it can make a better showing in its operating and financial reports to Congress. But it will do so only at the expense of both the unions and producers, not to mention taxpayers and industries in other areas.

Several pro-Ike operators recently joined with Lewis to voice their protests at a meeting with Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell. They included two of the mine union leader's worst enemies — George Love, president of Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., and A. R. Matthews, president of Pocahontas Coal Co. The Pittsburgh firm is the nation's major coal producer, while Pocahontas is the largest in the South.

Although not present, another operator fiercely critical of TVA's methods is Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers. In periodical clashes over wage contracts, Moody and Lewis frequently came near the fist-fighting stage. Their agreement on this issue illustrates its serious nature.

Secretary Mitchell promised to try to intervene under authority given him in the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act. This statute authorizes him to fix a minimum wage floor on all Federal purchases over $10,000.

Thus, the U.M.W. figure of $18.25 a day might become the prevailing minimum, unless TVA and its undercutting union and nonunion producers dare to bring court action against such a ruling. That would, of course, expose them publicly.

This controversy has numerous aspects, both ironic and humorous. It will place socalled "liberals" on Capitol Hill in an embarrassing plight.

The Humphrey-Lehman faction profess keen sympathy for union labor. But they also regard TVA as one of the New Deal's most noble experiments, and seek to duplicate it in other sections. And they look upon the Dixon-Yates deal as a "giveaway" of natural resources. It will be difficult for them to reconcile these politically conflicting loyalties.

Naturally, the probusiness bloc, especially in the Senate, favor the Dixon-Yates proposal as establishing a thou-shalt-not-pass line to government expansion and competition with private industry. For these previously undisclosed reasons, it is expected that Ike's first major action in favor of private enterprise and against government ownership will be approved.

The CRACKER BARREL

In his book, "Crusade in Europe" (page 459) Mr. Eisenhower says he is for world government. World government can not be achieved without the loss of American independence. In 1862 America came very close to losing that independence when three justices of the Sureme Court held (in the case of Truman's effort to seize the steel industry) that the United Nations' charter superseded the Constitution. Since then, it is said the internationalists have picked up one vote on the tribunal. This means that they only have to pick up ONE more to end American sovereignty "without recourse to the people." Now Mr. Eisenhower has selected Judge John Marshall Harlan to fill the seat left vacant by the death of Justice Jackson. Justice Harlan is a Rhodes scholar and a member of an international law firm of which Tom Dewey (an internationalist) is about to become senior partner. The membership of the U.S. Senate should consider very carefully his nomination. Upon his loyalty to the Constitution our survival may depend.

Attempt To Muzzle Pegler Is Political Group Action

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

My colleague and stablemate, George Sokolsky, recently came upon and wrote about an indiscreet admission by a writer in an obscure New York Socialist paper that in 1950 a political element undertook to quarantine Pegler. I will quote a few lines from Sok's article and from the essay in the socialist propaganda paper and then go into my act.

"The word quarantine is used to cut off a person or a place from contact with others," George wrote. "Usually the function of quarantining lies with a government agency. When persons join together for such a purpose they are most often snobs who prefer not to associate with their inferiors or they enter upon a conspiracy to boycott the quarantined person."

He then pounced upon the admission that "around 1950, sophisticates began to dismiss Westbrook Pegler as a faded menace" whose "stuff was old hat."

"The only trouble with this modified form of quarantine," the Socialist paper said, "was that it didn't work. Pegler lost some papers but he gained others."

Now Sokolsky asked, "who are these sophisticates who began to dismiss Pegler? Did they attend a meeting? Did they telephone each other? Did they start a whispering campaign? By what means did they operate this 'modified form of quarantine'?"

In asking these questions, of course, George was just being rhetorical. He knows the answers and so do I. The purposes of this organization are not charity nor philanthropy but political action. To achieve such political action it resorts to persecution of law-abiding Americans for "non-conformity" and for independent thought and expression and to systematic book-burning. These methods, strangely enough, are high on the list of evils which these mock-intellectuals pretend to abhor and to oppose.

George knows who they are and so do I. He knows where their main office is and so do I. He knows that they do hold meetings and do telephone each other and so do I. And he and I know other means by which this "modified form of quarantine" was and continues to be operated clear across the United States.

I have had professional advice that this attempt to muzzle criticism of the deity of a pagan theocracy and members of the, as it were, holy family, by the means which they use in some cases, is actionable as a conspiracy. I have not rejected the idea of calling them to account but have deferred decision because the job in hand is more immediate. I take quite seriously my duty to enlighten to the limit of my ability and the facilities available to me a public which has expressed confidence in me and paid me well for a long time.

Many journalists have submitted. I never have submitted and I never will because I simply can't do it. However, I have tried to reason with some individuals and to persuade them that this impudence is inciting resentment among persons of the gentlest and most charitable instincts who nevertheless stand by their political principles.

This cult has tried to sanctify Eleanor Roosevelt and to condemn as blasphemers whosoever fails to uncover at mention of her name. It is equally horrid to disbelieve in the United Nations, public education directed from a federal bureau in Washington, the infallibility of Eisenhower and the unforgivable perfidy of Joe McCarthy. These are not all the articles of a creed and code but they are high on the list which, altogether, amounts to proscription of the true republican party and the constitution of the United States.

As I look back to the start of the New Deal and survey the field of my profession, I realize that I could have had a much less troubled career had I renounced principle and joined the opposition. Other reporters did this and fared very well, some of them on less professional ability than mine. I could have planted relatives on the payrolls, as others have done, wangled contracts, dined often at the White House and traveled over in army and air force planes at nominal expense, if any.

But it just wasn't born in me to do that. The "quarantine" through the whispering campaign which Sokolsky knowingly refers to, may ultimately succeed. But if so I will go down knowing that I did not die on my knees.

Trip To Modern Grocery Far Cry From Old Store

By HENRY McLEMORE

By PHILIP LOVE
(Pinch-hitting for Henry McLemore)

Until the other day I hadn't been in a grocery store for years. Then my wife — who should have known better — asked me to stop by the supermarket on my way home and pick up an item she'd forgotten to get.

"It'll take only a few minutes," she assured me — "and I'll give you the money when you get home."

Perhaps I should explain that my wife long ago forbade me to shop for groceries because, as she pointed out at the time, "You're not to be trusted. You buy every thing in sight." And, I must admit, there was a certain amount of justice — and even a mite of wisdom — in her indictment.

She has never been able to keep me out of five-and-dime stores, however, and, as a result, the Loves have probably the finest collection of unused and useless gadgets in all Christendom.

Anyway, the last time I broke loose in a grocery store, shopping was simple. You just asked the clerk for what you wanted, he got it for you, put it in a bag, took your money, and that was that. At the meat counter you could see the beef, pork, veal, lamb, and other items on display, and you could tell the man: "I want a steak off that sirloin there — about two inches thick, please — and let me have the suet." Huge bolognas hung from hooks on the wall, to be sliced to order, and there was a mammoth cheese on the cutting block, ready to be cut any way you wished.

But the supermarket to which my wife sent me wasn't like that at all. It was a huge place, bigger than 10 ordinary grocery stores put together, and almost as crowded as Times Square on New Year's Eve.

All my wife wanted was a pound of lard. It might just as well have been an ounce of uranium.

The last time I bought lard I just walked up to the meat counter and asked for it. But in this store, there was no meat counter. I went up one aisle and down another, up and down, up, down — I must have walked at least three miles, but still no meat counter. And all this hiking was done, mind, at considerable risk to life and limb as determined housewives pushing shopping carts bore down on me from all directions. One of them ran over my foot; another snagged my topcoat and dragged me all the way from powdered coffees to canned soups before I was able to break free.

Finally, I discovered a row of freezers along a wall in the next county. Surely, I thought, this was where the lard would be.

But no. There were cheese shortenings, milk, cream, frozen vegetables, meats and seafoods, but no lard. At the meat freezer, I found all kinds of steaks, chops, roasts and the like, but no lard. These items had all been cut and packaged in some netherland, and if you wanted a steak, say, you took one of the packages with out being able to tell for sure how thick it was or if the suet was with it.

I had just about concluded that groceries no longer sell lard — that maybe I'd better try the drugstore — when I discovered a little window and a sign which said: "Ring bell for butcher."

I rang — desperately.

The window slid open, and a white-clad man appeared. Do you sell lard?" I asked. "Of Course," was the answer. "About the middle of the fourth aisle, just beyond the canned beverages. He looked disgusted. I was.

Sure enough, the lard was where he said, and, after a few minutes wait in one of the checking lines, I paid for it and escaped.

The experience had a profound effect on me. It made me forget to collect the quarter from my wife.

Pampa News Women's Editor

IF YOU'VE BEEN WONDERING why it is hard to find a maid or housekeeper, statistics from a recently published study by the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, indicate why. Entitled "Changes in Women's Occupations, 1940-1950," it shows a decline during that period of almost 300,000 in the number of women performing general household duties in private homes.

THE REPORT is interesting in many ways. It shows that women have made gains in fields previously considered for "men only." More women than ever before are architects, chemists, dentists, engineers, lawyers, judges, physicians and surgeons.

The report shows there are women working as guards, doorkeepers, watchmen, attendants in automobile service stations and parking lots, as furnacemen, smeltermen, pourers and factory operatives in heavy industry.

Some were even listed as canalmen, boatmen and lockkeepers. Although the report didn't list them, I've even seen them working as taxi drivers.

I, personally, think it is sort of interesting to learn of the different and varied jobs women over the nation are performing. It's even more interesting when you consider that it wasn't too long ago. . . . in the span of history . . . . that women weren't allowed in the field of business.

WITH MORE and more television sets apearing in homes, more and more interest is being shown in the type of programs it presents. Parents have been and are especially interested in this subject. Parents' Magazine recently came out with an article on television which rapped parents for using their sets as baby sitters. Here is a synopsis of what the article contained.

"Because most parents use their television set as a baby-sitter, children are failing to develop good taste about the programs they watch. That is the criticism of television's effect on the home given by a group of prominent social welfare authorities.

"Children are not to blame for choosing poor television entertainment, the experts declare. If parents would watch children's programs and discuss them in the family circle, the youngsters would soon become more viewing conscious. Eighteen experts contributed to the survey on television and children prepared by Dr. Robert M. Goldenson, assistant professor of psychology at Hunter College.

"Are television programs responsible for juvenile delinquency? No, according to the majority of answers. However, some programs, the authorities reported, would be overstimulating to children already mentally disturbed.

"All felt that though no one program is disturbing to all children, nevertheless it is best to steer them away from anything unduly anxiety - provoking. Westerns were found generally acceptable, but many thought that children were seeing too many crime and detective programs. It was suggested that the latter be programmed later at night or taken off the air entirely.

"In reply to a question about the effect of television on school work, one of the respondents pointed out that television seems to be stimulating classroom interest among children of high ability while those of lower intelligence are falling down in their school work as a result of watching it too many hours a day.

"The panel was unanimous in its feeling that parents should control the amount of time children spend on television, but most felt that children should have freedom in the choice of programs. That does not mean, one expert declared, that children should be turned loose to a steady diet of crime programs. But they should be permitted to sample a wide variety of programs and should be helped to choose discriminatingly."

MATURE PARENT

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

George's shyness recently provoked such "bossiness" from an older boy that his mother ended their friendship. Now he's being "bossed" about by a little girl his own age who's moved into the neighborhood.

The first time Lida came to play with him, he showed her his Indian chief's headdress. Instead of admiring it, she grabbed his paintbox, spat into it, and rubbing red and yellow smears on her face, yelled, "No, I'm the chief! See me dance my war dance? Look at me!"

She has ignored George's skill with his electric train system, insisting that he play train her way. With helpless admiration, George submits to this "bossiness." Contentedly, he sits on a porch step in his role of passenger while Lida runs up and down shrieking the names of stations.

His discouraged mother wonders whether she'd better put an end to this friendship, too.

I hope she won't. George needs his admiration for enterprising Lida to help him overcome his shyness. Already it has begun to stimulate initiative in him.

The other day, for example the two children were coloring Christmas pictures in the living room. True, when Lida demanded George's green crayon, he surrendered to her as usual. But having yielded his crayon, he didn't just wait until she'd finished using it.

Instead, he went and got his can of modeling clay — and from it fashioned a nose which he affixed to his Santa Claus picture. Lida was deeply impressed by the effect. Indeed, she was so impressed that she demanded some clay for her own picture.

Unfortunately, George's mother noted only that he had again yielded to Lida's demands. And later, she chose to scold him for his submissiveness, instead of commending him for the initiative he'd shown when deprived of his crayon.

Why didn't she see the initiative Lida did? Her demand for his clay was her respectful tribute to it.

Well, maybe George's mother doesn't want to see evidence of initiative in him as much as she thinks she does. Occasionally, if we're parents of a shy child, we don't. We may want to keep him shy. For as long as we can convince ourselves that his shyness exposes him to "bossy" abuse by his friends, we can keep him to ourselves and away from the friends.

RUTH MILLET

Even if true there are some things it isn't wise for a woman to admit to a man:

That marriage is usually the woman's idea, even when she sells that idea to a man so subtly he thinks he swept her off her feet.

That the reason a woman appreciates a man's efforts to help with housework is purely a matter of sentiment. Any competent housewife can clean a house quicker than with the good-intentioned help of the average man.

That knowing what not to tell a man is one of a woman's greatest assets in getting along with him.

That though she may complain about a man's "helplessness" — a wife wouldn't for the world have her husband able to get along without her. When a wife goes away from home she is happy to hear that her guiding hand is sorely missed.

That she isn't capable of having as good a time at an all-woman gathering as he is of enjoying himself at an all-male get-together.

That she is fully aware that he is as dependent on her strength as she is on his.

That the hobbies she shares with him are more the result of wanting to share his interests than in her being interested in the hobbies as such.

That for all of her efforts to reform him, she would have little respect for him if she could turn him into exactly the kind of husband she thinks she would like him to be.

That no matter how understanding he is, if she really wants someone to understand her point of view she talks a matter over with a close woman friend.

Defense Discussed At B&PW Meeting

A panel discussion on civil defense highlighted the meeting Tuesday evening of the Business and Professional Women's Club. Mrs. Dorothy Statton served as moderator, and panel members were Mrs. F. W. Shotwell, Mrs. Flossie Anderson, Fire Chief Ernest Winborne, Sheriff Rufe Jordan, Aubrey Jones, Vernon Pirkle and Paul Skidmore.

The discussion centered around the need for a civil defense program in the community. Main points brought out were that Pampa should have one, and the suggestion was made that all clubs in town meet to get one underway.

The panel discussion was part of the club's program entitled, "Building Positive Americanism." Vernon Pirkle and Paul Skidmore also demonstrated and told of the use of the fire department's resuscitator. Program director was Mrs. Homer Doggett.

Following the program, a business session was led by Mrs. D. C. Ash, president. It was announced that the club will sponsor a game night Jan. 25, in the City Club Room as a March of Dimes benefit. The event will be open to the public.

Higher Bosoms And Wider Waistlines Next Fashion Change For Americans

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press Fashion Writer

Higher bosoms and wider waistlines are the next fashion change facing American women.

It's anything but the flat look, fellows, so don't be nervous. Picture, if you can, a bustline raised two inches above the present level and a neckline cut down to the current off-shoulder level.

The effect is electrifying.

However, many of the new spring and summer dresses, which are being previewed publicly for the first time in New York this week, have modestly high necks, so the change is less startling.

As one man who is an executive of a leading foundation garment company explained it:

"We have raised the bust as much as two inches, distributed the flesh a little more to the side so it doesn't protrude and extend away from the body so much and given the American woman a new softness at the top of the bosom that French women have long known was very feminine."

If that doesn't explain it, here's a specific illustration, although hypothetical, from the same executive.

"With a woman built like Jane Russell, for instance, we could raise her bustline two inches, make her look one and one-half inches smaller in the bust—and give her a lovely figure."

Designers have cut dresses and suits to fit a higher bust. Darts in the bodice extend an average one and one-half inches higher, so that with an old-style brassiere the dart would extend up over the curve of the bustline.

Besides the softer line, designers say, this gives a girl a longer, leaner look from the ribs to the hips. Many of the new dresses and suits have loosened waistlines. So while a girl is supposed to look willowy, she's not supposed to look wasp-waisted.

Many of the new foundation garments that achieve this redistribution of a woman's curves are one-piece, strapless combinations that can best be described as "half girdle, half bra." The girdle extends only a few inches below the waist. The brassiere covers only the lower half of the bosom, but that half of the bra is firmly designed to suport the new raised bustline. The bare-topped bra also emphasizes that top softness mentioned earlier.

Christian Dior is the man who started it all with his "H-line" dresses erroneously described as flat-fronted. The Paris designer kept insisting all along that he only wanted a raised, less-exaggerated bustline.

AROUND THE WORLD

WINTER IS HERE—With sleeves raised in a gesture of supplication, this frozen shirt in Kansas City, Kans., seems to be pleading with Mother Nature to undo her cold magic. Shirt, slacks and some socks were frozen in this position on a back porch clothesline when high winds and icy temperature battered a considerable portion of the Middle West.

A MOMENT'S REST—Ballerina Alicia Markova got some assistance during a rehearsal in London from Anton Dolin, who is adjusting one of her shoes. Miss Markova and Dolin, her partner, are dancing in a new production in the British capital and may tour the U. S. in it later in the year.

ROYAL ATTENTION—A kitten, mascot at an airport in Rome, got into the act by suddenly jumping onto the shoulder of the Begum Aga Khan, the wife of the ailing Moslem ruler. Typical of cats, however, the little feline moved off the royal shoulder before the Begum had an opportunity to get more than a fleeting stroke of the scurrying cat.

WINTER CLEANING—When Congress opened in Washington, the Capitol Building was all spic and span for its members. Two Senate secretaries, Jennie O'Neill, left, and Ellen Wyvill appear to be brushing the building with whisk brooms, but they're quite a distance from the Capitol. It's the camera angle that is making them do the sweeping.

TROUBLE IN PARADISE—Part of 500 unmarried Buddhist monks marched through the streets in Seoul, Korea, to protest against the married monks in the temples. The bachelors want their married associates to give up either the temples or their wives and start their religious lives anew. These determined demonstrators had a short clash with the police.

SWEET TASTER—Luscious Maria Luz added some authentic Spanish beauty to an opened cask of olives as she tasted one and registered delight in Chicago. Maria escorted one of the first batches of the new pack of stuffed olives to the Windy City from her home in Seville.

NORTHERN ORANGES — Sunshine and citrus fruits aren't limited to Florida and California, and pretty Connie Basnett proves they can be found up north—North Carolina, that is. The Gulf Stream tempers the climate near her home, Buxton, on Cape Hatteras.

WHAT A LIFE!—Shanti, an elephant in the Zoological Garden in Berlin's British Sector is wading into his private swimming pool as an envious neighbor watches. The next cage houses Arusha, a hippo, who would love to plunge into that water, too. This zoo was almost totally destroyed in World War II, but is now almost completely restocked and rebuilt.

TO SING HERE—After her singing triumphs in Europe, soprano Mattiwilda Dobbs is shown arriving at a New York airport. She'll sing her first New York recital, then Miss Dobbs will begin her first coast-to-coast tour under Sol Hurok's management.

SHORE PATROL—Three men with a walkie-talkie are patrolling the Netherlands coast near The Hague, to keep check on the heavy seas whipped up by the worst storm in many months. They were trying to prevent a recurrence of the disastrous floods of February, 1953.

PAMPA'S SUPREMACY IN schoolboy boxing circles in the Panhandle the past few years apparently will carry on as strong as ever this year despite the loss of several key performers from last year's team.

The manner in which the locals dominated action on opening night of the Borger District Golden Gloves tournament Monday purely stamps the Pampans as the team to watch in the future Golden Gloves tournament in the Panhandle this year.

Thirteen of the 17 Pampa boys stepping into the ring Monday emerged victorious which is about the best single night a Pampa team has ever enjoyed.

Then last night the locals registered seven more wins and qualified 16 boys for tonight's finals.

This record is remarkable in that coaches of the Pampa Optimist Boys Club teams were faced more or less with a rebuilding job this season.

Many of the estimated 75-100 boys competing in the boxing program here this year are out for boxing for the first time.

Most of these youngsters already are performing like veterans. Give them another year or two and they'll be stepping into the shoes of Bobby Wilhelm, Duggie Jameson, J. N. Wright, Bob Prigmore, et al.

Local ring fans will get a chance to see these fellows in action next week when the annual Pampa District Golden Gloves will be unreeled.

Dates of the tournament next week will be Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

If you can't wait until the GG tourney here, you can journey over to Borger tonight for the finals there. You'll probably feel at home in Borger, what with so many Pampa boys in the finals.

Tickets for our tournament here are now on sale at Richard's Drug, B & B Pharmacy and Miller Drug.

NL To Play 250 Arc Tilts Next Season

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 12—UP—The National League will play an all-time high of at least 250 night games next season, led by the St. Louis Cardinals who scheduled a record 86 games, it was revealed Wednesday in the official 1955 slate of games.

The 1954 schedule showed the previous high of 239 night games but because of postponements and rescheduling, the actual total was 250. Invariably, the original total goes up each year.

A breakdown of the schedule revealed, in addition to the 250 night games, a total of 142 Sunday contests including a number of double headers, 198 weekday games exclusive of the eight opening day engagements, and 28 holiday games.

Season Opens April 11

The season opens officially on April 11 when Cincinnati will have its traditional "day ahead" starter with Chicago. On April 12 Pittsburgh will be at Brooklyn, New York at Philadelphia, St. Louis at Chicago, and Cincinnati at Milwaukee. The secondary openers on April 14 will find the World Champion Giants entertaining Brooklyn, with Philadelphia at Pittsburgh, and Milwaukee at St. Louis.

Almost all of the clubs increased their night game schedules except Chicago, which still is the only stronghold of day baseball. There are no lights in the Cubs' park. Next to St. Louis with 86 was Philadelphia with 46, Cincinati scheduled 26, Milwaukee 25, Brooklyn 30, Pittsburgh 28, and New York 20.

Weekday baseball in St. Louis will be a novelty. Except for the April 14 opener with Milwaukee, the Cardinals have only two weekday afternoon games. Both are getaway day dates, May 13 on Friday against the Giants and Sept. 15 on Thursday against Brooklyn.

Breakdown Given

A club-by-club breakdown on the schedule:

DODGERS—30 night games, 17 Sunday, four holiday, 26 weekday.
GIANTS—20 night, 16 Sunday, four holiday, 27 weekday.
PHILLIES—48 night, 20 Sunday, two holiday, 16 weekday.
PIRATES—28 night, 21 Sunday, two holiday, 26 weekday.
CUBS—No night, 18 Sunday, four holiday, 38 weekday.
REDLEGS—36 night, 21 Sunday, two holiday, 13 weekday.
BRAVES—35 night, 16 Sunday, two holiday, 24 weekday.
CARDINALS—56 night, 13 Sunday, three holiday, five weekday.

Fans To Shower Ameche With Gifts

KENOSHA, Wis., Jan. 12—UP—Wisconsin's "Horse," Alan Ameche, will get both a horse and an automobile Wednesday night at a home town celebration to honor its most prominent citizen, but it was questionable Wednesday when he'll actually take possession of either prize.

Ameche, the Badger fullback for four years, won the Heismann Trophy this year, was named Player of the Year, set a new ground gaining record for college competition, was picked to the All American team, and made the all Big Ten team for the third time.

His awards Wednesday night begin with the new car, which he will receive for the third time, a palimino stallion, dozens of roses, clothing, a wrist watch, and cash expected to exceed "a buck a yard" for the 3,212 yards he gained in 36 college games.

Both the car and the horse were humorous aspects of the celebration. In fact probably neither will be on display, because the banquet, for which 1,000 tickets were sold in less than 48 hours two months ago, will be held on the third floor of a lodge building.

Definitely the car will not fit in the elevator so Ameche will be welcomed on a fire truck and transported by it to the banquet.

It was expected that the horse too would exceed the elevator capacity and be presented outside the building.

Pan-Am Coaches Named

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 12—UP—Leo Johnson, Illinois track coach, Dr. Lloyd Olds, director of the physical education department of Michigan Normal and chairman of the AAU track and field committee, and Frank Potts, trach coach at the University of Colorado, have been appointed to handle the U.S. track team in the Pan-American games at Mexico City, March 12-26.

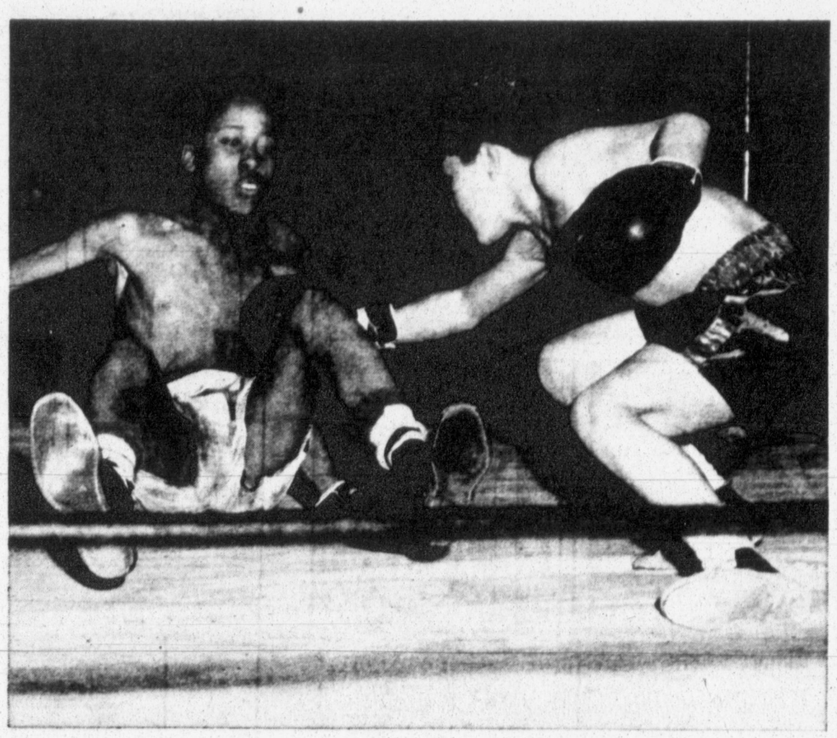
PCL Holds Meeting

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12—UP The Pacific Coast League has called a meeting for 12:30 Wednesday at which it will announce a new League president. Speculation centered on the name of Jerry Donovan, president of the California League.



SNEAKING ONE IN seems to be the intent of Dickie Wills, 80 pound Pampa scrapper but actually both he and Jerry Oliver, also of Pampa, were on their way to the canvas. The action occurred in the Borger Golden Gloves Tournament Tuesday night. Wills won the decision over Oliver and will advance to the finals tonight where he will meet James Morse, another Pampan, to decide who is the champion. (News Photo by T. D. Ellis)

14 Pampans To Fight In Borger GG Finals Tonight

By BUCK FRANCIS
Pampa News Sports Editor

BORGER, Jan. 12 — Fourteen members of the Pampa Optimist Boys Club boxing team will appear in championship finals of the fifth annual Borger District Golden Gloves tournament tonight.

Pampa edged out Borger in qualifying the most boys for the finals. Borger will have 13 fighting in tonight's finals.

Both Pampa and Borger already have one champion in the bag. Gary Wills of Pampa was the only entry in the 90-pound division and will win this weight without lifting a glove. The same holds true with Barny Ward of Borger in the 160-pound division.

The total finalists by each club are as follews: Pampa 15; Borger 14; and Dumas five. Guymon, Okla., and Stinnett, the only other clubs represented in the tournament, failed to land a boy in the finals. Stinnett, however, only had one entry.

Sixteen championship bouts will be unreeled tonight. Four of the title bouts will be all-Pampa affairs. Three others will be all-Borger matches while Dumas will furnish both boys in one match.

Feature bout of the 16-bout championship card will possibly be the Gary Green of Pampa and Scooter Darden of Borger duel in the 126-pound division.

Darden is the "pride and joy" of the Borger team and many rate him as the best high school boxer in the Panhandle.

Green has just recovered from a broken nose. He is unbeaten this year. He's given a good chance of "upsetting" the dope-bucket in tonight's scrap.

Both Darden and Green are vicious sluggers and fans are in for a real treat when these two lads crawl in the ring.

Another top-notch bout that rates high on the card is the Kenny Powell of Pampa and Durwood Williams match in the 70-pound division. Wililiams ranks behind Darden as being the most popular among Borger boxing ranks. Williams has eliminated two fine Pampans already, Joe Dunn and Paul Edwards.

Powell packs a wicked left which has been dangerous in both matches he has fought in the tournament thus far.

Tommy Richardson of Pampa will be making his first appearance of the tournament tonight when he goes against Earl Young of Borger in the 175-pound division.

Richardson already holds two wins over Young this year but Young is capable of pulling an upset.

Most all of tonight's final matches will be slam-bang affairs with a majority of the bouts rated a "tossup."

Eighteen matches were unreeled last night. Borger led the winning parade with eight followed by Pampa with seven and Dumas with three.

Pampa winners were Dickey Powell, Kenny Powell, and Larry Powell, all brothers; Dickie James, James Webb, Dickie Wills and Gary Wilhelm.

Wilhelm wasn't originaly scheduled to fight last night but was added to the card when Borger officials accepted a late entry from Guymon. Wilhelm scored a technical knockout over Gerald Mallard of Guymon in 1:18 minutes of the second round.

Two of the Powell brothers, Kenny and Larry, also scored TKO's, giving Pampa three wins by this method for the night. Kenny won by TKO over Bill Fesler of Dumas in 1:28 minutes of the first round while Larry scored a TKO over Jim Sherrill of Dumas in 1:20 minutes of the second round.

The other four Pampa victories last night were by decisions.

Tonight's finals will start at 8 p.m. at the Borger Sports Arena.

Last night's results were:

60 — Dicky Powell, Pampa, dec. John Ironmonger, Pampa.
65 — Grasshopper McLain, Dumas, dec. Mike McMurray, Guymon.

Nebraska Coach In 'Hot Water'

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 12—UP—A group of 160 Nebraska football fans have sent a petition to the State Legislature calling for the resignation of Husker Football Coach Bill Glassford.

It was the second straight year that Glassford was under pressure to resign. Last year team players and University officials called for Glassford's resignation, but he refused to quit and led Nebraska to second place in the Big Seven Conference and a trip to the Orange Bowl.

Sen. George Syas, Omaha, said the signers of the petition wanted Glassford to resign because of the Huskers poor showing in the Orange Bowl. Duke defeated Nebraska in the bowl contest, 34-7.

Nebraska sports writers have blamed the Huskers' poor showing on "inadequate training" in preparation for the game with Duke.

But Syas said the Legislature would take no action on the petition, and that it wouldn't even be read to the Legislature.

The fans presented their petition to Syas.

Glassford and Athletic Director Bill Orwig refused comment on the petition.

Rosen Signs For Estimated 30 Gs

By UNITED PRESS

Third-baseman Al Rosen reported his injured finger in fine condition Wednesday after coming to terms with the Cleveland Indians for an estimated $30,000.

"The doctor tells me it's going to be fine," the American League's most valuable player of 1953 said. "It feels much better and I don't think it will give me any more trouble."

Rosen, 29-year-old, prematurely-graying slugger, suffered a broken right index finger last May 25. He was out of the lineup more than two weeks and could not properly grip his bat the remainder of the campaign. He completed the season with a .300 batting average, 24 homers and 102 runs batted in.

Rookie pitchers Joe Margoneri and Jim Constable and outfielder Bill Taylor signed Tuesday bringing the New York Giants' contended list to 13 players.

TCU, SMU Keep Win Ways In SWC

By UNITED PRESS

Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, rival powers in the Southwest Conference this season, Wednesday widened their leads in the title basketball race with lopsided victories Tuesday night over weaker opponents.

TCU plastered Texas 79-64 in a contest that saw sensational sophomore center Dick O'Neal score 42 points to break one conference and two individual school records.

It was TCU's second victory without a loss and Texas' third consecutive conference defeat.

Meanwhile, SMU retained its top position on the standings with a 3-0 record as it whipped Texas A&M 93-69 on a 26-point spree by Jim Krebs. The big sophomore scored on hook shots and tip-ins after passes into his pivot spot.

O'Neal Hoops 40

But the big gun of the night was in Fort Worth, where TCU's O'Neal scored more than 40 points for the second time this season. He previously hooped 45 points against Austin College. His 18 free throws broke his own loop record of 16 set last week against Arkansas.

The 79 points TCU collected was the most ever scored against a Texas team, a new team record. And O'Neal set up two school records, the most scored by a TCU player in a conference game and the most points scored by a TCU sophomore.

The conference record that he couldn't quite reach is 49 points scored in 1949 by Slater Martin of Texas, against a TCU team in Austin. Tuesday night's game might have been even more of a push-over than the score indicated, had not the Longhorns frozen the ball with four minutes to go. It was a desperate, and successful, attempt to protect Martin's old record.

Krebs Shares Scoring

SMU's Krebs shared school scoring honors Tuesday night with forward Larry Showalter, who kept the Aggie defense loose with outside shots and hit 14 points. A&M's high man was forward Bill Brophy, with 24 points. SMU, ragged the first half, started rolling the last two quarters and made good on 42 per cent of its field goal attempts, compared with 39 per cent for A&M.

The next conference game on tap is Friday, when Texas (0-3) plays Rice (1-2) at Austin.

Saturday sees a full round of games with A&M against Houston in a non-conference affair, Arkansas (1-2) against Baylor (1-0) at Fayetteville and SMU against TCU at Fort Worth in an early "showdown" battle.

Castellani, Mims In TV Bout Tonight

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 12—UP—Rocky Castellani and Holly Mims, a couple of serious-minded family men with only one thought in mind, tangle in a 12-round nationally - televised fight Wednesday night with the prize the answer to their single thought—a crack at the World Middleweight championship.

"It's something I've been dreaming of and aiming for ever since I started boxing pro seven years ago," Mims said. "Now that I've finally got this far, I'll be ready."

The winner will fight Champion Carl (Bobo) Olson here within 90 days. It would be the first chance for Mims, a Washington, D.C. Negro. Castellani, the Luzerne, Pa., 160-pounder, now fighting out of Cleveland lost a unanimous 15-round decision to Olson in August. The balding Olson, who Thursday receives the Fighter-of-the-Year award from the Boxing Writers Association in New York, will be at ringside to see who will be the next person to challenge his crown.

The record favored Castellani for Wednesday night's bout, but the odds were even. The Clevelander has been in 65 fights since he turned professional, winning 57, six ended in losses, and two in draws. Of the victories, 14 were by knockout.

Mims over a shorter period, has compiled a 36-11-5 mark, including nine kayoes. He hasn't been beaten since October 1952, although Bobby Dykes held him to a draw in mid-1954.

Sooner Ags Knock Wichita Off Top In MVC, 69-53

By UNITED PRESS

Walloping victories by 20-points-plus kept North Carolina State and Southern Methodist atop their respective conference standings Wednesday, but Wichita was blasted out of the lead in the Missouri Valley Conference by the defending champion Oklahoma Aggies.

North Carolina State outshot record-smashing Furman, 105-81, to remain unbeaten through five Atlantic Coast Conference games. And Southern Methodist romped over Texas A&M, 93-60, to push its Southwest Conference record to 3-0.

But Wichita, ranked 16th nationally, visited the Aggies and suffered a 69-53 trouncing.

It was only the second loss in 11 games for Wichita, but it evened the Shockers' League record at 1-1 and left St. Louis (1-0) alone in first place. The result caught the experts by surprise, for the Aggies—supposedly washed up a two-year reign in the Missouri Valley—went into the game with a 4-7 overall record.

Furman had rolled up a new major-college record of 154 points in crushing The Citadel last Saturday night, but just couldn't match North Carolina State's fire power.

Behind Southern Methodist, Texas Christian moved into second place in the Southwest Conference at 2-0 by beating Texas, 79-64.

Niagara Nips Canisius

Niagara highlighted non-conference play Tuesday night by nipping local rival Canisius, 68-64, at Buffalo, N.Y.

In other leading games Tuesday night: St. Louis set a school scoring record in beating Drake, 102-82, in a non-league game despite 31 points by Drake's Willie Cerf; Nebraska upset Kansas State, 69-59, to tie State for second place in the Big Seven; Wake Forest handed Seton Hall its second loss in 11 games, 71-63; Syracuse took a 91-85 win over Pittsburgh; Connecticut beat Boston University 84-70, for its 12th victory in 13 games; Duke nipped Clemson, 75-66; and Westminster defeated West Virginia, 102-80.

Four nationally - ranked teams are scheduled for action Wednesday night: LaSalle (No. 3) vs. Muhlenberg, San Francisco (No. 5) vs. Santa Clara, Dayton (No. 11) vs. Cincinnati, and Louisville (No. 19) vs. Marquette, the team with an 11-game winning streak.

BINGO — Gary Wilhelm of the Pampa Optimist Boys Club boxing team has just delivered a knockdown punch to Gerald Mallard of Guymon in last night's 118-pound scrap in the Borger Golden Gloves semi-finals. Mallard got up from this blow but the fight was stopped moments later by referee Dean Webb who is shown in the background. (News Photo)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—UP—Sen. Frank A. Barrett (R-Wyo.) Tuesday introduced legislation which would require that all passenger cars sold for interstate travel be equipped with safety belts. French Newsman Has A Yen To Wear Cowboy Boots, Hat

GREENVILLE, Tex., Jan. 12—UP—A French newspaperman cycling across the United States on a bicycle said Tuesday he hopes he'll have a 10-gallon hat, cowboy boots and a leather jacket before he leaves Texas.

The newspaperman is Guy Chassagnard, 19, who worked for France Soir before he decided to bicycle across the United States. He started his trip five months ago in Montreal.

Chassagnard is earning his way by speaking before civic clubs and selling articles to local newspapers. He is also being paid by France Soir for part of his expenses.

He stopped in Greenville Monday because his legs began cramping from propelling 150 pounds of clothing, books and other paraphernalia along on his bicycle. He stayed three weeks in Paris, Tex. before he resumed his trip.

Chassagnard said he wants to "see how (Texas) people live and get dressed up in cowboy fashion."

He said Texans brag too much, but added he already about halfway believes the comic map which shows Texas taking up the greater part of the United States isn't far wrong.

Baptists To Train Million Evangelists

HOUSTON, Jan., 12—UP—A program to mobilize and train 1 million Southern Baptists as laymen evangelists was outlined here Monday night at the South Texas Baptist Evangelistic Conference.

One of the speakers at the opening session of the three-day meeting was Dr. Baker J. Cauthen, executive secretary of the Southern Baptist Convention's foreign mission board. He said:

"Every Christian in the United States must become a type of world evangelist if the Communists' goal of gaining world domination is to be overcome."

Dr. C. E. Autry of the department of evangelism of the SBC told the 2,400 delegates attending that "if our laymen will assume their part of the Lord's work, there will be a minimum of 1 million new Christians affiliating themselves with our churches this year."

Dr. Autry suggested that every minister train at least 25 per cent of his church membership this year for personal evangelism work.

Dr. Cauthen said the success or failure of this nation's international influence depends directly on the evangelistic enthusiasm of its people.

The conference will continue through Wednesday.

Senterfitt Bows Out Of Public Life

AUSTIN, Jan. 12 —UP— Reuben Senterfitt of San Saba bowed out of public life Tuesday after serving two consecutive terms as speaker of the House, the second man in Texas history to turn such a trick.

"I feel pretty relieved and quite happy," said Senterfitt as he finished a career of 14 years' service in the legislature.

Senterfitt did not run for re-election to the House last year. He had been a prospective candidate for governor a year ago, but decided not to make the race.

He turned the leadership of the House over to 28-year-old Rep. Jim Lindsey of Texarkana, who has been unopposed for more than a year.

Senterfitt was the only man in the state's history outside of former Gov. Coke Stevenson to hold the gavel-wielding post for two straight sessions.

A graduate of the University of Texas law school, Senterfitt served seven sessions as a member of the lower chamber.

While serving as a member of the legislature—and also as a naval officer in World War II—he flew 8,000 miles from the South Pacific to take his seat in the 49th Legislature in 1945.

An "irrigation district" is a private or state water development project which is administered under state laws; also, the lands embraced within such a project.

Multi-Billion Road Program Approved By Ike Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 —UP— President Eisenhower's special highway advisory committee Tuesday recommended a 10-year $101 billion nationwide roadbuilding program.

The proposal represented a boost of $54 billion over what would be spent on road development during the 10-year period if the current program were continued without change.

The report of the special committee, headed by retired Gen. Lucius D. Clay, is expected to provide the basis for a special message on highways needs which Mr. Eisenhower will send to congress on Jan. 27.

The committee recommended that the federal government pay about 30 per cent of the total cost of the entire program. States, cities, counties and other agencies would share in paying the remaining 70 per cent. It proposed the creation of a Federal Highway Corp. with power to issue bonds to finance the federal share of interstate highway construction.

Over the long run, the committee said, the total proposed federal outlay would be approximately the same amount that the government will take in from federal excise (sales) taxes on gasoline and oil—provided these taxes are held at their present levels.

The gasoline tax is scheduled to drop April 1 from two cents a gallon to one cent, but Mr. Eisenhower has already served notice he will ask congress to maintain the present rate.

"We are indeed a nation on wheels," the committee said, "and we cannot permit these wheels to slow down. Our mass industries must have moving supply lines to feed raw materials into our factories and moving distribution lines to carry the finished product to store or home."

Wayne Morse Given Juicy Senate Post

WASHINGTON, Jan 12 —UP— Sen. Wayne Morse (Ind-Ore.), who has been going steady with the Democrats, took title Tuesday to a highly-prized seat on the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

As a Republican, in years gone by, Morse had sought long and unsuccessfully for the committee post. His assignment to it by the Democrats was viewed as another sign that their friendship soon will blossom into a political marriage.

Morse said, again, that he has not decided whether to run as a Democrat in 1956. He held out only the "strong probability."

Exchange of Messages

But political leaders were interested in a little-noticed exchange of telegrams last week between Morse and Howard Morgan, who heads the Democratic party in Oregon.

The exchange followed Morse's statement that he would not hesitate to run for re-election as a Democrat if the Democrats wanted him, and if it seemed to be the best way to advance a sound liberal program for the nation.

Morgan, speaking "on behalf of the entire Democratic party" in his state, quickly renewed a "long standing and most cordial" invitation from the Democrats to Morse. Morgan said "every member" of the state Democratic committee is looking foward to Morse running as a Democrat.

Praises Liberal Program

Morse wired his appreciation. He praised the "liberal" program of the Democrats of his state and said there is a strong probability that he will enter the Democratic primary as a candidate to succeed himself.

Elected as a Republican in 1950, Morse bolted the GOP during the presidential campaign in 1952 and supported Adlai E. Stevenson. In last fall's congressional campaign he made 111 speeches for Democratic candidates.

Despite that campaign help, Morse had said that he asked nothing of the Democratic leaders in the Senate. He had said, however, that he did not believe the Democrats would repeat the "mistake" made by the Republicans when they bumped him from two major committees after his resignation from the GOP in 1953.

Hen House

AVON, Conn. — UP — While Scoutmaster Henry C. Lee was off with his troop on a camping exercise, the fathers of his Scouts decided to build him a much needed hen house. When Lee returned from the trip he was greeted by a sign on top of the new building which read: "A Hennery for our Henry."

McCarthy To Stay On Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 —UP— Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-N. J.) tried and failed Tuesday to persuade fellow Republicans to bump Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy off the Senate Government Operations committee.

Case made his move during the preliminary stage of preparing Republican assignments to legislative committees. He then abandoned the effort.

Case had announced during his campaign last fall that, if elected, he would oppose keeping the Wisconsin Republican on the Government Operations committee, parent group of the Senate Permanent Investigation subcommittee.

As chairman of both that committee and the subcommittee, McCarthy kicked up storms which led him into major conflicts with the Eisenhower administration.

Case, as a member of the Senate GOP Committee on Committees, moved Tuesday morning to remove McCarthy's name from the list of assignments to the Government Operations committee. In a public statement later, he said he voted against approval of the committee slate after his motion was ruled out of order.

"It seems quite clear that the action of the committee in retaining Senator McCarthy in his committee assignment reflects the fact, held not only by them but also by the overwhelming majority of the members of the Senate, that this matter already has been dealt with," Case said. "In the circumstances, for me to pursue the matter further at this time would not be fruitful."

The committee on committees completed the Republican legislative assignments at a brief session in order to submit them to a Senate Republican conference for approval.

TU Prof Gets U.S. Post In Spain

AUSTIN, Jan. 12—UP—Appointment of a University of Texas professor as a consultant to the American embassy's public affairs office in Madrid, Spain, under a new U.S. information agency program was announced Tuesday.

Dr. Lewis U. Hanke, director of the Institute of Latin American Studies at the university, is the first appointee under the program designed to strengthen cultural ties between the United States and other countries. He will sail late this month with his wife and a daughter for Spain.

During his leave of absence in Spain, Hanke will conduct research on the history of Potosi, famous 16th Century silver mine in Bolivia. The Spanish archives are a rich source of Potosi material.

He will return to the university in September after visiting 15 universities in Spain and Portugal.

Ex-Russ Prisoner Says Soviet Revolt Needs 'Only The Spark'

BERLIN, Jan. 12 —UP—An American released from nearly 10 years in Russian captivity said Monday "only a spark" is needed to touch off a revolt in the Soviet slave labor empire.

John H. Noble, 31, who spent years in the notorious Vorkuta slave labor camps near the Arctic circle in Siberia, said "there is great dissatisfaction in Vorkuta among both the prisoners and the guards."

Noble said other prisoners sent to the slave labor camps told him Lt. Gen. Vassily Stalin, son of the late Soviet premier, is being held in Lubianka prison in Moscow.

The newspaper Kleine Zeitung of Graz, Austria, reported last week Vassily had died in a slave labor camp in central Asia and his sister Svetlana had disappeared from Moscow. The newspaper quoted a "western diplomat who recently returned from Moscow."

Noble, whose home is in Detroit, Mich., said chances of a revolt in the Arctic slave labor camps "are very great."

"Only a spark is needed to set a revolt off," he said.

Noble said at a press conference that in July 1953, about 100,000 of the 500,000 prisoners held in the Vorkuta slave labor area revolted and 710 were shot by guards.

He expressed the belief that the revolt was organized by guards of the MVD (Soviet secret police) loyal to Lavrenti Beria, who was executed by the regime of Premier Georgi M. Malenkov.

The American, who was seized with his father in Dresden in the last days of World War II, said life in Russia is so grim that all prisoners hope for war. "Half" the people outside the prison also hope for a war to liberate them, Noble added.

The 33-year-old son of Stalin rose rapidly in the air force while his father was alive and became commander of the air force for the Moscow district.

But since his father's death, young Stalin has disappeared.

There have been a number of reports that he has been imprisoned by the Malenkov regime.
