Diamonds: Designs 'suspend' the imagination

NEW YORK (AP) — Why would anyone wear a pair of $3,400, diamond-studded suspenders? To hold his pants up, of course — but with style.

"It's a special item. It's an item for a woman to give a man who has rings and cuff links, and could use something different," said Patricia Gordon of New York City, who came up with the sparkling idea of combining 20 diamonds, 18-karat white gold and a pair of black suspenders.

For that inspiration, Ms. Gordon won Wednesday one of 24 prizes for diamond jewelry design from DeBeers Consolidated Mines Ltd., the diamond cartel. Each winning designer received a plaque, the promise of publicity and a place among more than $240,000 in jewelry exhibited at a champagne reception.

"It's fun, it's creative, it's exciting," said Suzanne Steinberg, a spokeswoman for DeBeers' Diamond Information Center.

There were plenty of bracelets, rings and cuff links among the winners. But there also was a $1,600 cigarette case, made of sterling silver and featuring two .75 carat diamonds. And then there was a $2,200 gold tie bar with a hidden toothpick, incorporating two .25 carat diamonds.

"The idea that the toothpick is hidden is nice. Everybody's been to dinner parties where they needed a toothpick, and there was none to be found," said Susanna Stachura De Gelabert, inventor of the tie bar-toothpick.

Mrs. De Gelabert said she has applied for a patent for her innovation, and expects to sell a lot of them.

Asked if the bauble with its $2,200 price tag might be considered a bit decadent by some potential buyers, she replied: "I live in Miami, where nothing is decadent."

At least the tie bar-toothpick has a practical use, she noted, more than can be said for much of the jewelry on display Wednesday.

The most expensive piece, for example, was a $29,000 bracelet, consisting of several gold bands on which 87 diamonds were artfully distributed.

Janice Savitt of New York City, designer of the bracelet, said she already had a buyer for her work.

Why would anybody spend a year's pay on a single piece of jewelry? "Diamonds are a girl's best friend. Diamonds are forever," answered Miss Savitt, falling back on the industry's slogans.

"There's a certain romantic 'je ne sais quoi' about diamonds," said her partner and sister, Michelle.

Even the French might have difficulty explaining the award-winning design of Robert Campbell of Portland, Ore. Trying to put diamonds "in a place where you would normally not find diamonds," Campbell put them on gold zipper pulls.

"It's sensational. People love it," Campbell said of his $7,000 design. He added he hopes to put one of the zipper pulls on a pair of denim jeans. "What could be more natural?"

"A diamond zipper pull is a way of reassuring the wealthy that they still have money," he said.

Mundy died of head injuries after his motorcycle and this 1976 Cadillac collided in the 700 block of Andrews Highway shortly after 1 p.m. Wednesday. In critical condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital was a passenger on the motorcycle, Frank Hernandez Perkins, 16, of 608 Waverly. Driver of the car, Douglas R. McLoed of 1905 Ward, 38, and his 6-year-old passenger were released following emergency treatment. Another passenger in the car, 35-year-old Pearl Barnhart, also of 1905 Ward, was not injured.

Midland slipping into school funding gap

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Midland school district officials expected one cut in funding from the state. However, they thought other state funds would compensate for the $300,000 loss.

Now they are looking at a loss of about $1.5 million.

Equalization funding, established to maintain an equal education for all students regardless of the wealth of their school districts, typically provided more funds for poorer districts.

Recent preliminary figures on equalization funding indicated wealthy districts, such as Midland Independent School District, will be cut.

The state's usual alternatives also may be.

The minimum foundation program, based on the wealth of the district and average daily attendance (ADA), specifies a district must pay a minimum amount of the educational costs locally. Districts like MISD that want to provide more local funds than those matched by the state minimum foundation may do so.

While MISD officials were expecting some relief from the equalization loss through the state minimum aid, they found instead they will be assuming some $500,000 more each year for the next two years.

The formula used to determine the amount of minimum aid is updated every two years to take in revised tax valuations. During the last days of the Legislative session, however, legislators did not update the formula — a move that could cost almost half of the school districts in the state about $111 million in state funds.

It, along with the equalization loss, could cost MISD $1.5 million, based on preliminary computer analysis by the Texas Education Agency.

MISD Business Manager Don Furgeson explained the local share of supporting the minimum foundation for MISD during the 1982-83 year was $2.9 million. That figure may raise the 20 percent maximum allowed by the foundation to $3.5 million.

"State minimum aid was to help all districts losing equalization and having to assume more of the share locally," Don Furgeson said. "There was about $309,000 in equalization we were expecting to receive and it looks like we're not going to get any of that."

Lenders voice only bids in foreclosure auction

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Only a few people attended Tuesday morning's foreclosure auction on the steps of the Midland County Courthouse. Homes and lots in Green Tree, Westgate Acres, Kimber Lea, Fannin Terrace, Saddle Club and other Midland subdivisions were up for sale.

The auction represented the last sad step for several homeowners or builders caught between the recession and their lenders.

Such auctions are held on the Midland County Courthouse steps the first Tuesday of every month.

About $5 million in various property was scheduled to be auctioned Tuesday, but most of it was pulled from the sale a few days before when the debtors made 11th-hour financial arrangements.

"I had six properties posted at the beginning of the month and sold only two today," said attorney Brian Martin. "What usually happens is that at the last minute the person who owns the home settles the debt in some way."

In one case, a local builder filed for bankruptcy less than a week before the auction. By doing so, he automatically stopped foreclosure proceedings on more than $2 million worth of homes in northwest Midland.

LOCAL ATTORNEYS and lenders say foreclosure activity has increased here in the last six months as Midlanders cope with economic conditions.

"The downturn affects house payments, but on the other hand, it is a buyers' market," said one, reminded of similar conditions in Midland in the late 1960s and early '70s.

At Tuesday's auction, the original lenders were the only bidders for the properties.

A few interested real estate people watched silently as trustees or attorneys for the lenders auctioned their wares — ranging from a $26,000 house on College Street to a $175,000 lot in Saddle Club South.

Banking sources say lenders who hold mortgages, or who financed interim construction loans for home builders, can no longer hold out.

Budget battle again focused on defense spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators trying to piece together a compromise budget are grappling over a plan to limit the increase in military spending to 5 percent, half of what President Reagan has requested.

Conferees from the House and Senate began their bargaining Wednesday on separate budget blueprints passed by each chamber, and were continuing today with the focus on defense.

The $863.6 billion 1984 budget plan adopted by the Democrat-controlled House in March called for defense spending authority of $263.8 billion. House Democrats say this would be a 4 percent increase after inflation, but the Congressional Budget Office estimates it would be a 2.3 percent increase.

Reagan had asked in February for a 10 percent increase.

The $849.7 billion budget adopted by the Senate last month calls for $270.6 billion for defense, or about a 6 percent increase.

Congressional sources who insisted that they not be quoted by name said it appeared likely that the negotiators would split the difference between the House and Senate figures and settle on a 5 percent increase, or between $267 billion and $268 billion.

However, it was expected there would be heated discussions over the volatile defense issue before the agreement is reached.

"We've got to argue (the) 4 percent (limitation) very strongly," Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said of the House position.

As the talks began Wednesday, it was clear that the negotiations would be difficult and warnings that a failure to reach agreement on an overall spending plan could imperil the nation's economic recovery.

"I think we'll have chaos if we don't have a budget resolution," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. He added that "chaos will lead to abortion of the recovery."

"We'll need all the political skills and all the ability we can muster at statesmanship" to draft a plan that can pass both houses of Congress, said Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee.

Meanwhile, the political bickering that accompanied the congressional budget process all year flared among the conferees Wednesday.

Rep. Ed Bethune, R-Ark., reflected the view of conservative Republicans in the House who say both the House and Senate budget plans are unacceptable and that they will have enough votes to sustain Reagan's vetoes of spending and tax bills he deems excessive.

"You might get a document out of here that would pass both houses," Bethune told the other conferees, but it will be rejected "at the White House."

Panetta replied, "Anybody who thinks that the game of veto and counterveto and override is a way to replace the budget process is asking for a scenario of chaos. And chaos is not going to be able to be a foundation for economic recovery."

How far will revised arms plan reach?

An Analysis

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's revised arms control proposal could improve prospects for congressional approval of his MX missile program, but it will break the deadlock in Geneva only if the Soviet Union decides the United States is not aiming for a one-sided agreement.

The treaty Reagan outlined last year at Eureka College, his alma mater, and then had Edward Rowny, his negotiator, put on the table in the arms control talks was swept away by the Soviets as unfair. They interpreted it as a crude attempt to weaken their long-range nuclear force by striking at its core: the heavy land-based missiles that account for about two-thirds of the Soviet strategic punch.

The president is trying to improve chances for an agreement this time in at least three ways: He is raising the ceiling on ground-based missiles from 850, he is offering the Soviets a variety of ways the two sides could reduce to equal strategic weapons levels and he is not disclosing all the details of the revised proposal in an effort to avert a public debate.

The thinking within the Reagan administration was that the Soviets would have been compelled to respond in public to a detailed American proposal, and for propaganda reasons would probably strike a tougher stance than they might take in the confidential Geneva setting.

So far, the Kremlin has not reacted to Reagan's statement Wednesday in the White House Rose Garden and the elaboration on the U.S. position provided by senior administration officials at a briefing for reporters.

Reagan said he was giving Rowny "flexibility to explore all appropriate avenues for meeting our goals" and that he hoped the Soviets "will respond with corresponding flexibility."

In Geneva, where the talks resumed after a 10-week recess, Rowny said he was a "little more hopeful" of progress.

While Reagan and Rowny kept the new ceiling secret, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., who has played a key role in Reagan's negotiations with Congress over the MX missiles, said Tuesday his guess was in the range of 1,100 to 1,200 missiles. That is about midway between the 850 initially sought by the United States and the 1,450 urged by the Soviet Union.

There was no change from Reagan's orginal proposal to limit each side to no more than 5,000 missile warheads, requiring a cut of about one-third in the current U.S. and Soviet arsenals.

The overriding goal remains equality, but Reagan has now opened the door to achieving it by counting missiles, warheads and throw-weight, which is the total destructive force of the strategic weapons, or a combination of these elements.

The revised plan does not contain the "build-down" advocated by some members of Congress that would require the destruction of two warheads for each new one that was deployed.

Reagan approved the changes after a National Security Council meeting on Tuesday and after weighing for weeks the recommendations of his Commission on Strategic Forces, headed by Brent Scowcroft, who was former President Gerald R. Ford's security adviser.

The process was interlocked with Reagan's effort to win congressional approval of the MX missile, which opponents insist is too expensive, of questionable security value and a spur to the U.S.-Soviet arms race.

Canal funds should be OK'ed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas, is confident the Senate will go along with the House and approve spending $450,000 to begin work on the American Canal Extension of the Rio Grande Project, a spokesman says.

The canal extension was authorized by the Congress in 1976, but the money to begin the project was never appropriated until it was included in the energy and water planning bill approved by the House Tuesday, John Jackley said.

The project will involve building a canal from the international dam west of El Paso, along the river, to the Riverside Canal east of the city. It would aid in flood control and help prevent seepage from the river and the existing canal system.

Donor system to be announced

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The plight of a tiny Abilene baby, Ashley Bailey, who needs a donor for a liver transplant, is the key to launching a new network in the U.S. to put those who need organs in touch with donors.

Project Hope, which was originally founded by Dr. William Walsh in Washington, to bring medical help to many in poor nations overseas, and later to impoverished border cities in Texas, is going to sponsor the new system.

The system will be announced at a news conference today along with an appeal for a liver for Ashley.

Wastewater pumped into pond

THOMPSONS (AP) — Wind apparently blew coal dust from a power plant's coal piles into a creek, contaminating the stream and forcing the company to pump all wastewater into a holding pond, officials said.

Jennifer Sidnell, a field representative of the Texas Water Department, said the dust was apparently blown from the coal powdering operation at Houston Lighting & Power Co.'s W.A. Parrish Power Plant.

Although officials discovered six inches to a foot of coal dust in Dry Creek, in Fort Bend County, Ms. Sidnell said the dust levels were too low to pose a danger to health or to the environment.

General announces new method of training pilots

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A new method of training U.S. Air Force pilots to meet the demands of the highly sophisticated aircraft will be installed, says Lt. Gen. Andrew P. Iosue, who assumes command of the Air Traning Command at Randolph Air Force base in San Antonio on June 23. He will then become a four-star general.

Iouse, who will be promoted to four-star-general, has one of the broadest records of experience in training and personnel of any one in the military service. Much of that experience he acquired in previous duty at Randolph and once as a commander at Lackland AFB between 1976 and 1979.

Oddly enough, he joined the service in the Navy. Later with a degree in science he was on duty as a medical bateriologist. He was at one time in charge of the Air Force recruiting program.

The general, who will overhaul training for the entire Air Force, no longer flies himself, although he has an enviable recored as a pilot. "They keep us tied to that pilot seat over there," he said indicating a large office desk, "and that thing won't get off the ground."

Iosue (pronounced Osway) believes that today's Air Force recruits "are smarter." "They look at options more carefully now than in the past. We are doing very well with numbers entering the service and I have no fears but that we will keep this up. Of course I realize the economy has something to do with it. You can expect that when there is 10 percent unemployment. But many are coming in because they want to be serving their country. And the President has helped bring about this feeling with his strong plea for higher defense."

One of the new concepts Iosue plans to inculcate in the Air Force is that the individual airman is not an employee on a job, a line of thinking that has been pervading the service for some time. He said "we must get away from looking at our assignment as just a job and teach our personnel in uniform to realize that they are all part of a big military organizaton serving our country.

"Directing the training for the entire Air Force is going to be very exciting, he said.

New Orleans police officers to be sentenced

DALLAS (AP) — Three New Orleans police officers prepared to return to federal court today to hear their sentences for violating the rights of blacks interrogated following the slaying of a white patrolman.

John E. McKenzie, 40; Dale Bonura, 34; and Stephen Farrar, 31, were convicted by a federal jury in March. Four other New Orleans officers were acquitted by the jury.

Each of the three faces a possible prison term of up to 10 years and a $10,000 fine on felony conspiracy charges. They also face misdemeanor fines of $1,000 each.

The officers were accused of beating black residents of New Orleans' Algiers section during an investigation into the 1980 killing of officer Gregory Neupert.

Four people were killed in Algiers during a police crackdown after Neupert's shooting. No charges were filed in connection with the deaths, but New Orleans Police Superintendent James Parsons and his top lieutenant resigned amid the controversy.

A federal judge in New Orleans moved the case to Dallas.

Alleged victims of the beatings also have filed an $8 million civil rights suit.

During the three-week trial, a detective granted immunity in the case testified he participated in the beating of two people being questioned in the officer's death.

Defense attorneys tried to portray Oris Buckner as an incompetent detective whose motives were suspect because of his immunity and because his father died in the custody of New Orleans police in the 1950s.

Prosecutors told the jurors that Buckner was still a defendant in the civil suit, even though he was granted immunity in the criminal case.

The jury returned the verdicts after telling U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer they were hopelessly deadlocked. Buchmeyer sent the panel a note urging them to keep deliberating. The verdicts were returned on March 28.

Judge tired of Braniff's creditors' bickering

FORT WORTH (AP) — Braniff International creditors were ordered to the office today of a federal bankruptcy judge who says he is tired of their "bickering."

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers told the creditors Wednesday to get a final offer from the Hyatt Corp. by the end of the day and return to his office today.

"There will not be this endless bickering for months," lowers said at a hearing. "There will either be an agreement or not be an agreement. Essentially, there's going to be a pie and you're going to negotiate on how to divide it."

Hyatt Has been negotiating with Braniff's creditors to put the airline back in the air by investing $70 million in the company in return for 80 percent of the stock in a new carrier.

A rift over the Hyatt deal developed between the banks and insurance companies and the public bmndholders who among them carry $467 million in Braniff notes.

The bondholders and soma other Braniff noteholders filed a $100 million lawsuit against the banks and insurance companies, charging them with manipulating Braniff's finances.

A reorganization plan can be filed in court without the bondholders' agreement, but they can ask the court to block it.

The suit asks the federal court to put the bondholders ahead of the banks and insurance companies in priority for repayment and seeks $100 million in loan payments dating back to Braniff's bankruptcy filing in May 1982.

A committee negotiating with Hyatt was headed by the vice president of Prudential Insurance Co., which is Braniff's major creditor.

A spokesman for the creditors, Jim Toren, said Tuesday that new proposals by Hyatt had brotght the group closer to agreement.

Dale States

But under the bankruptcy laws, a takeover deal would have to be approved by the secured creditors in two ways, by numerical majority and by financial majority. The bondholders have greater numbers than the banks and insurance companies, but the banks and insurance companies hold a monetary majority.

There are 2,000 bondholders, but only 37 banks and insurance companies. The banks and insuranCe companies hold more than $300 million of the secured notes.

Also Wednesday, the Braniff board of directors named Dale States to replace Howard Putnam has president of the company. Putnam and chief financial officer Philip Guthrie announced Monday that they are resigning their positions.

Guthrie will be replaced by Braniff controller Steven Turoff, 37. States, 55, has been vice president of flight operations for Braniff.

Putnam, board chairman, and Guthrie will remain Braniff directors.

Bank climber found found not guilty

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors had no case against a man who climbed the tallest building west of the Mississippi River, said a judge, who held that Hollywood stuntman Ron Broyles was not given proper warning to leave.

Broyles, found innocent Wednesday of criminal trespass when Harris County Court-at-Law Al Leal granted a defense motion for a directed verdit, said he does not plan further climbs in Texas but said "we've got some projects in the offing. But we will have to be more careful."

The 29-year-old Broyles, clad in a white tuxedo and carrying a portable telephone, was arrested March 14 after an 18-hour climb of the 75-story Texas Commerce Tower. Thousands of people watched his final assault on the roof and cheered when he crested the building.

Leal agreed with defense attorney Jim Moriarty's contention that Broyles violated no law. Moriarty argued that the building bears no "no trespassing" signs.

Property manager Ferrell Hayes testified he held up a sign at the 23rd floor telling Broyles to leave.

"What do you want me to do, commit suicide?" Hayes said Broyles answered.

Hayes said, "It was his option to go up or down."

Broyles could have been jailed for six months and fined $1,000.

"Justice was served," he said. "I'm not in jail, and I love it."

Spellers competing in the National Spelling Bee early Wednesday morning, in the opening round seem to have a hard time getting started in the competition here in Washington.

Students 'spell-bound' in national competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Kathy Griffith, 13, of Woodsfield, Ohio, the "odyssey" toward the National Spelling Bee championship almost ended when the judges misheard the first letter she uttered as "a" rather than "o."

Only a loud protest from the nearly 1,000 onlookers crowded into a hotel ballroom as Kathy was slowly walking off the stage in defeat Wednesday prompted the judges to reconsider. After listening to the tape of her "o-d-y-s-s-e-y," they kept her among the 52 youngsters in today's final rounds for the national title.

The winner will get $1,000, a trophy and several other prizes from the National Bee's sponsor, Scripps-Howard Newspapers. The 137 contestants, all fourth through eighth graders, got to the 56th annual bee by winning similar contests sponsored by their local newspapers.

When told it meant hit-or-miss, 12-year-old Amy Sandusky of Johnstown, Pa., made a "heuristic" stab at the adjective. She missed, spelling it "hurristic."

Amy was one of 85 spellers, including eight National Bee veterans, eliminated in the first four rounds Wednesday. Among them were Lucy O'Malley of Moscow, Pa., and Thomas C. Finnerty Jr. of Sayre, Pa.

But it was Andrew Flosdorf, 13, of Fonda, N.Y., who captured the emotions of the crowd. Andy, with his parents at his side, went to the judges between the third and fourth rounds with an admission that he had misspelled "echolalia" and the mistake had not been caught.

Customer says burger full of mouse innards

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — "Some like pickles, some like relish, some say, 'Hold them, please.'

"But plaintiff never, ever, said, 'I'd like some mousie, and some cheese.'"

That's how lawyer Joseph Peter Myers presented his case to Riverside Superior Court on behalf of a client who says he got a hamburger tainted with mouse meat.

The defendants maintain the hamburger was stuffed with the contamination after it left the restaurant.

The suit says Douglas Gilbert of Sunnymead ordered a hamburger at a Wendy's restaurant in Riverside on March 28.

Gilbert took the uneaten portions of the hamburger to the Riverside County Health Department, where officials found mouse hair, liver and brain in the hamburger meat, according to the suit.

The legal action, filed against Wendy's International, Inc.; Butterfield Hospitality Corp., owner of the Riverside franchise; and Valley Beef Processors of Northridge, which supplied the meat, claims the hamburger made Gilbert sick with a fever and the chills.

Reagan goes on road for education

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is taking his campaign for tougher U.S. school standards on the road, with public educators who often have opposed his ideas now hoping his personal interest will lead to increased federal aid.

The president was journeying today to Hopkins, Minn., a suburb of Minneapolis, to join in a panel discussion with educators and politicians on how the government should respond to the National Commission on Excellence in Education's call for sweeping reforms in public education.

He also will attend a $500-a-ticket fund-raising dinner for Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.

On Wednesday, Reagan discussed the school problems over lunch at the White House with leaders of four major education groups, the AFL-CIO's American Federation of Teachers, the National School Boards Association, the American Association of School Administrators and the Council of Chief State School Officers.

AFT President Albert Shanker, a frequent critic of Reagan's efforts to give tax breaks to parents of private school children as well as his past attempts to sharply cut back on federal aid to public schools, said afterwards, "There were assumptions in today's discussions that the federal government might do a few other things, not huge."

Earlier this year, Reagan asked Congress for $50 million to help states meet a shortage of math and science teachers. The House already has passed a $425 million version of that bill.

"The president sort of indicated that they will be doing some more, but I'm sure not as much as we would want," said Shanker.

Shanker said that "98 percent of the discussion was around points of agreement," such as the need to raise standards, maintain discipline and attract better teachers to the profession. He said they agreed to explore the concept of higher salaries for "master" teachers. They did not dwell on such disputed issues as tuition tax credits and restoring prayer to public schools, he said.

"The president asked for our support and we gave it and we asked that the president remain very visible and vocal on the issues," Shanker said.

Reagan in recent weeks has spoken repeatedly on education, which is emerging as a major issue for the 1984 campaign. Democratic presidential hopeful Walter F. Mondale has accused Reagan of being "an enemy of excellence" and proposed boosting federal school aid by $11 billion a year.

Asked if he thought Reagan was genuinely concerned or merely using the issue for political purposes, Shanker said, "I think he does care about education....It's a good thing for education that it is a major issue and that all of the candidates will be competing to come up with good programs."

Asked why the National Education Association, the larger teachers' union, was not invited to the luncheon, Education Secretary T.H. Bell replied, "The table was full." But he added that the NEA and other groups would be invited to a later session with the president.

Reagan has charged that the NEA is impeding efforts to improve U.S. schools with its staunch opposition to a "master" teacher plan in Tennessee and other proposals to pay teachers by merit instead of seniority.

Bell said Reagan has shelved, but not abandoned, his plan to abolish the Education Department.

"I shouldn't say that that endeavor has been abandoned forever," Bell said. "I think it's been temporarily put aside."

Reagan vowed during the 1980 election campaign that as president he would abolish the department established in October 1979 under his predecessor, Jimmy Carter. Reagan never submitted a formal proposal to Congress, which would have to approve such a move.

Police officer acquitted

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — A jury has acquitted a rookie police officer charged with voluntary manslaughter in the New Year's Day shooting death of a drunken driving suspect.

The Lukin officer, Rodney Neil Vorndam, 27, cried when the verdict was read Wednesday. He had been suspended without pay since his indictment Jan. 5 in the death of Clennis Ray Page, 25, of Nacogdoches.

Prosecutors claimed Vorndam shot Page once in the back with his 357-magnum service revolver, even though the officer's partner, Mike Darby, was shouting, "Don't shoot him!"

Vorndam testified that he thought Darby had yelled, "Shoot him!" Vorndam said he had lost his glasses in a struggle with Page and was unable to tell whether the suspect was running away or charging him.

Thunderstorms sweep Plains

By The Associated Press

A line of heavy thunderstorms rumbled across the South Plains into Northwest Texas early today, triggering high winds.

Heavy rain and large hail was noted over a wide area and there were several reports of tornadoes, according to the National Weather Service. No injuries were reported.

Wind damage to trees was noted at Muleshoe. In Lubbock, golf-ball size hail pelted the city and some street flooding was reported.

The storm line streched from Wichita Falls to Abilene before dawn today, but showers had weakened. The rest of the state was under mostly fair skies.

Few attend foreclosure auction

"IT'S BEEN MY experience that lenders will go as far as they can to do a loan workout agreement — let you skip a payment or make a partial one," said attorney Martin, partner with Freeman, Hyde and Martin.

"But it doesn't do the lender any good to end up with the property. It puts them right back where they started. It's still a debt and, often, there are a lot of expenses to maintain the property or take care of vandalism."

Foreclosure is the last thing a bank or debtor wants. To get a loan back on solid ground, many banks have what they call loan workout divisions or teams, which specialize in helping individuals and businesses make good on loans.

A lender can restructure the payment terms, reduce the principal, help the customer with budgeting or, if it's a business account, give him business management and accounting advice.

Or, the business customer can try to sell off some assets to come up with cash.

"WHEN WE'VE GOT a customer who's willing to work with us and can present a sound business plan, we'll do all we can," said a Midland banker who asked not to be named.

"If there's a way to keep a company in business, we'll do it."

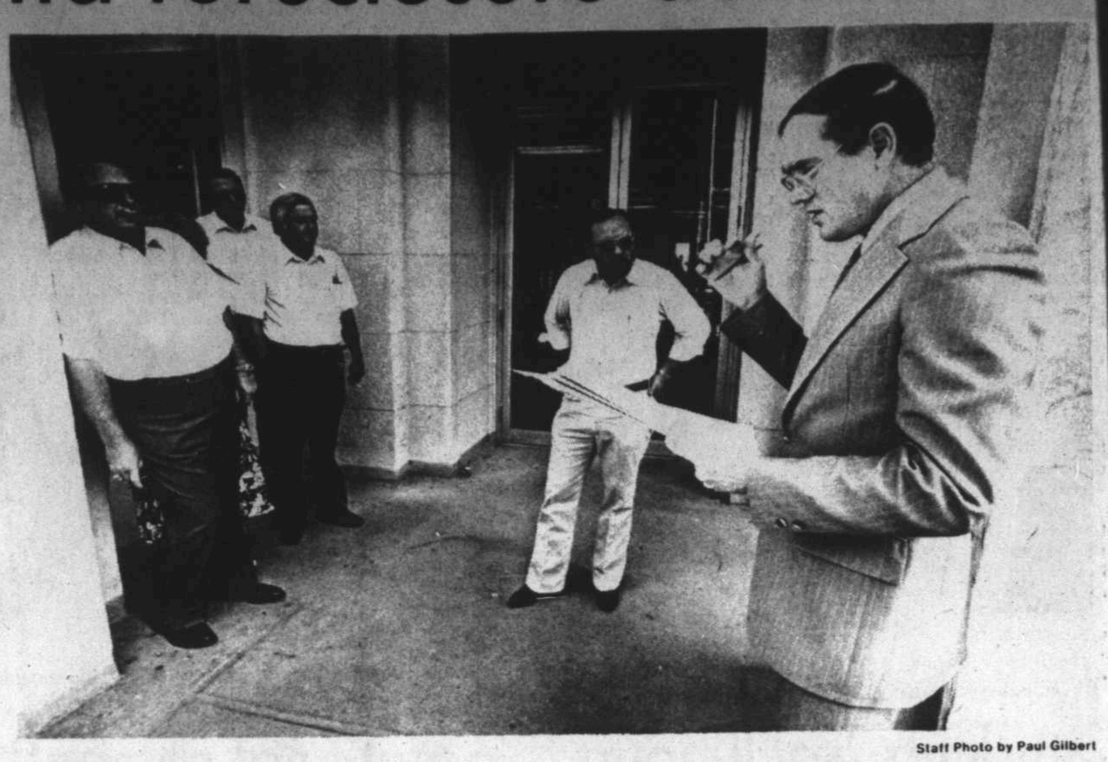

A spokesman at First National Bank acknowledged recently that particular bank feels it has bent over backwards for some customers in trouble, but it can no longer afford to do so. "It's pointless for us to take over a man's business if he's got a plan. But if he's not making payments and has no plan," then the bank is forced to take action, he said.

Foreclosure is distasteful to both debtor and creditor, but by the time a problem loan reaches that extreme step, both parties know there is no other alternative — except to file for personal or corporate bankruptcy.

Still, bad feelings are likely to exist.

"If the person is not paying on either the principal or the interest, the bank has no choice," one Realtor said. "If I owed the bank money, I wouldn't blame them, but I would be mad at myself for over-extending.

"You certainly can't blame the banks for doing what they are supposed to be doing."

Attorney Brian Martin reads the legal description of a house for sale while potential bidders listen. Lenders may offer for sale properties on which the loan is in default. Auctions of such foreclosures are held each month on the steps of the Midland County Courthouse.

If a debtor defaults on a loan, the lender can foreclose and invoke the power of a sale. The borrower must be given written notice in enough time to try to work out some kind of payment agreement.

Under Texas law, after proper notification to give the debtor a last chance to pay, the lender can auction the property for the highest cash bid on the courthouse steps.

If loan workout agreements satisfactory to both lender and debtor cannot be made, banks have no choice but to foreclose, according to terms of most mortgage documents. Federal regulators do not allow a lender to recognize interest income on a loan which is more than 90 days past due.

PROPERTIES WORTH more than $2 million held by Midland builder Tim Tabor, his Tabor Construction Inc., and T&G Construction, a joint venture, were scheduled to be auctioned Tuesday. First National Bank of Midland called in the loans on these lots and homes after Tabor defaulted on them in May. The properties involved are in Skyline Terrace, Westgate Acres, Green Tree Country Club Estates and Saddle Club North and South.

On June 2, Tabor and the two construction firms filed for bankruptcy under Chapter 11 rules in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in San Antonio, however, stopping all foreclosure proceedings. The properties were then removed from the auction.

Tabor could not be reached for comment.

Tabor's firm is not the only one to be caught in an economic squeeze. Most of his building activity in the last two years was in north Midland where many other builders or Realtors have been holding onto unsold property for several months. Interest payments on construction loans have gradually eaten away the profit builders hoped to make on the sale of these properties.

FORECLOSURE NOTICES also had been posted for properties held by Bufler Construction, Rite-Way Contractors, Cavalier Homes, Canatex, and Meadows Ltd. and its partner, Consolidated Structures of Texas Inc. The latter defaulted in May on a $3.5 million loan with First National for a 14-acre tract in Midland County.

A private auction Sunday afternoon at Green Tree Country Club Estates failed to produce any sales, according to a spokeswoman for Independent Realtors. About 35 people attended the auction, where four homes on Green Tree Boulevard were for sale. A minimum price was set on each property.

Although none of the homes was purchased Sunday, several interested buyers appeared this week and possible sales contracts have resulted on two of the homes, the spokeswoman said.

In May, local realtors sold 24 new homes and 60 existing ones, for a total dollar volume of $7.8 million, according to the Midland Board of Realtors. Since the first of the year, an average of 95 homes per month have been sold here. Total dollar volume per month has averaged $8.42 million for the five-month period.

Tax outlays prohibited production

By BETH A. SEXER
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — Sixteen of the largest U.S. oil companies could have increased their reserves by 190 million barrels in the last two years but didn't because of the Windfall Profits Tax, according to Dillard P. Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a research firm here.

If not for the tax, the companies "would have taken that money and used it to increase production," he said.

The Windfall Profits Tax outlays for the companies, which pump more than 50 percent of the oil in the U.S., came to $14.3 billion in 1981 and $11.1 billion last year. A survey conducted by Petroleum Analysis on the 16 companies indicated that they reinvested 64.5 percent of their 1982 oil-producing revenue into exploration and development.

Based on that percentage, without the windfall tax, the companies could have channeled an extra $9 billion in 1981 and another $7 billion in 1982 into domestic oil production, Spriggs said.

The Carter administration instituted the Windfall Profits Tax on domestic oil in April 1980 in conjunction with the decontrol of oil prices. The tax is calculated as the difference between the sales price over the base price adjusted for inflation after 1979. The 1980 tax rate ranged from approximately 30 percent to 70 percent depending on the classification of oil produced.

Newly-discovered, heavy and tertiary oil was taxed at a rate of 30 percent; stripper well and national preserves oil at 60 percent; all other types of oil were taxed at 70 percent.

The windfall tax was slightly revised in the 1981 Economic Recovery Tax Act, exempting independent oil producers using stripper wells. The tax rate for newly-discovered oil was reduced to 27.5 percent in 1982, and to 25 percent in 1983, and will decrease by 2.5 percent each year through 1986.

However, Spriggs said that new oil should not be subject to the windfall tax at all. "If you're trying to encourage (domestic exploration), you don't discourage drilling for new oil."

Texas congressmen push repeal

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. John G. Tower, R-Texas, and three Texans in the House of Representatives introduced bills in Congress Wednesday to repeal the Windfall Profits Tax.

In the House, it was a bi-partisan effort joined in by Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt; Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock; and Rep. Jake Pickle, D-Austin.

Hance and Pickle are on the House Ways and Means committee and Loeffler is on the Appropriations committee.

In joining with Hance and Pickle, Loeffler said he was doing it "to repeal what I consider a most heinous irresponsible tax ever inflicted on an American industry. To maintain energy self-sufficiency and lower prices for consumers we must get the government's hands out of the oil and gas industry pockets."

Tower was joined by both Oklahoma Senators Don Nickles, R., and David Boren, D.

Number of the Tower bill is S.1422. Tower discussed it over national broadcast stations, citing the fact that America's energy independence suffers from this legislation.

"The oil industry is hampered by a variety of punitive taxes which tend to discourage rather than encourage domestic production of oil and gas," said Tower, adding that the most serious of these "is the ill-conceived Windfall Profits Tax.

"It does not promote our energy independence. The supporters of this tax claim the purpose is to insure that the producers did not reap a windfall on their investment due to the rising oil prices. This reasoning was faulty on two counts. First, a return investment in the energy business is not usually high when compared to that in other industries. Those producers depend on reserve from existing wells to finance future exploration.

"Puting money from the Windfall Profits Tax into the Treasury does nothing to reduce the cost of today's oil to consumers but it effectively decreases the level of exploration for tomorrow's supplies," said Tower.

Midland schools slip into school funding gap

State Commissioner of Education Raymon Bynum said the minimum aid was designed to keep local districts from dipping further into their own tax bases when property values increased.

"Our only hope would be to have a special session that could change the (tax appraisal) base from 1980-81 (valuations) to 82-83," MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi said.

School districts which have experienced an increase in taxable property, such as MISD, will be hurt more than others because of the failure to update the formula to current tax valuations.

During the 1982-83 school year, tax valuations for MISD were set at $3.3 billion, Baressi said.

"But that will probably increase, we hope, with some of the new property," Furgeson said, explaining new tax valuations are expected to be released from the tax appraisal district July 20.

Baressi, who recently talked with Bynum in Austin, said, "Bynum had been under the impression they'd be changing the (tax) base period from 80-81 to 82-83. Apparently, that didn't happen."

According to a representative of the Texas Association of School Administrators, districts losing state aid will have to have cut programs or turn to the local property tax base to offset losses.

While some mention has been made of a special session, House Speaker Gib Lewis was reported to have said the $111 million in state funds earmarked to maintain funding levels would pad the state budget in case of economic problems.

There are three steps MISD could take to ease the double loss of equalization and minimum state aid, according to Baressi.

"First, there is raising taxes — which I would hope we would have to do little of. Second, we could cut programs — which I hope we would not have to do at all. And the third thing is an increase in the tax base, which is what I'm hoping for."

MISD is expected to receive $16,294,500 in state aid for fiscal year 1984, under a proposed salary schedule in the appropriations bill recently approved by the Legislature. However, the school district's total proposed cost of operation during the first year of the 1984-85 biennium is $19,666,300, which does not include the costs of equalization and minimum aid, according to figures released Wednesday by Bynum.

The amount of state aid proposed for the school district for fiscal year 1984 is $619,200 less than state aid funded under the current fiscal year, according to the Texas Education Agency.

"We were hoping, because of the drastic increase in ADA we'll get, that figure also will increase," Baressi said.

Average daily attendance has increased over 1,200 students, according to director of pupil and community services Payton Cook, who added enrollment increased from 14,716 students in 1981-82 to 15,988 student in 82-83.

Cook said the increase in the percentage of attendance, from 92.10 to 93.63 percent, is a result of an increase in enrollment and the implementation of a new attendance policy.

"But when you're near 100 percent attendance, a 1.5 percent increase is really significant," he pointed out.

Nicaraguan envoys make quick work of move

By RUBEN CASTANEDA
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — As a supervisor gave instructions in Spanish, several workers on the eighth floor of the downtown building feverishly loaded boxes and took them outside an office.

Just a few hours earlier, the inhabitants of that Spring Street office, the Los Angeles Consulate for Nicaragua, had been informed by the State Department that they and employees of five other consulates in the United States would have to be out of the country by noon today, in retaliation for their government's expulsion of three American diplomats.

By late yesterday afternoon, the three people who used that office had cleared out. And by late last night the consul general, Alejandro Palacios, had boarded an Eastern Airlines flight for Miami, from which he'll catch a plane to Nicaragua.

The expulsion is unjustified and is going to cause hardships for the approximately 75,000 members of the Nicaraguan community in Los Angeles, Palacios said just a couple of hours kefore he boarded the plane for Miami.

"No, (the expulsion) is not justified. We're not spies, we're here to help the Nicaraguan community, we don't get involved in politics," Palacios said. Although the State Department said the Nicaraguan consulates were engaged in intelligence gathering, Palacios asked, "What do we have to spy on over here? There's nothing to spy on."

Palacios, who said he was appointed to his post as consul general last June, said Nicaraguans in Los Angeles seeking passports, visas and other documents will face long delays without the Los Angeles consulate.

"They'll have no place to go for their passports and documentation. They'll be in limbo. They'll have to call the (Nicaraguan) embassy in Washington (which remained open yesterday), which will be very busy. It'll take a long time (for Nicaraguans to be helped)," he said.

In addition to helping Nicaraguans with legal documents, Palacios said he and his co-workers certified invoices of products — bananas, cereals, liquor — shipped into Los Angeles, and added that he's not sure who's going to take over that task.

Dangerous pesticide found in river

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pesticide levels considered dangerous to humans have been found in a river that flows from Mexico into a major Southern California vegetable growing area, officials say.

The New River, which flows from Mexicali on the Mexican border through the tomato and avocado farming region of the Imperial Valley, contains pollution from many pesticides banned in the United States, said Stuart Gummer, chairman of the Colorado River Basin region of the state Water Quality Control Board.

"The immensity of the pollution and contamination problem presented by the hazardous substances in the New River demands that every possible remedy be pursued," Gummer said in a recent letter to the state Department of Health Services.

'Confused' students being watched

CROTON FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Teachers, parents and psychologists are maintaining a close watch over several youths said to be confused and depressed by the suicide deaths of two classmates during the past three weeks.

Classmates and teachers from North Salem High School were asked by the Rev. Brian Brennan to "pull together" as services were held Wednesday for William Shott, 17, who hanged himself Sunday in the bathroom of his home. His girlfriend, Cathy Ann Petruso, 17, hanged herself May 14 at a drive-in theater after they reportedly argued.

About five students, friends of Miss Petruso, were judged to be "at high or moderate risk" of suicide, Superintendent William Toll said.

Troops bring lawmakers for vote

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Orders from the governor and Senate president for troopers to bring in four absent Alaska lawmakers achieved a quorum of 21 House members needed to confirm 13 cabinet members.

The Alaska House of Representatives adjourned last week after refusing to attend a joint session scheduled by the Senate to take up the confirmations. The House and Senate had been battling for a month about when to perform the normally routine chore.

"They took me by the arm," Rep. Jack Fuller, of Nome, said Wednesday as he was escorted by troopers into the session. Another absent lawmaker, Rep. Mike Miller of North Pole, said he was told, "If I didn't come, they would arrest me."

Two-site fair closer to reality

CHICAGO (AP) — A decision to celebrate the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' discovery of the new world with a two-site world's fair in Chicago and Seville, Spain, is a step closer to reality, officials say.

The executive committee of the Bureau for International Expositions recommended Wednesday in Paris that its general assembly give shared status the go-ahead when it meets next week. That would all but guarantee participation in the 1992 fair by most of the 46 member nations.

"We got what we came for, and then some," said Thomas Ayers, chairman of the 1992 Chicago World's Fair Corp.

Soldiers killed, hurt in explosion

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — One soldier was killed and three others wounded in an explosion on an anti-tank firing range while they were setting up a target, a Fort Bragg spokesman says.

The apparent dud, left over from an earlier practice, exploded Wednesday, said spokesman Capt. Bill O'Connell. Two soldiers were hospitalized and a third was treated and released from Womack Army Community Hospital, he said.

On Monday, at Fort Bliss near El Paso, Texas, 24 recruits and an instructor were injured by shrapnel when an anti-tank rocket exploded on a firing range during training.

Judge asked to review evidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has asked a retired federal judge to review evidence against five Salvadoran national guardsman accused of killing four Catholic churchwomen in 1980.

Judge Harold R. Tyler Jr. of New York will review the the evidence under contract and report how it can best be used in the Salvadoran courts, State Department spokesman Rush Taylor said Wednesday.

Given the complexity of the Salvadoran legal system, it is uncertain when the case may be brought to trial. The guardsman are accused of killing three nuns and a lay mission worker whose bodies were found in a shallow grave 30 miles from San Salvador.

Four scientists to train for shuttle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four scientists have been named to train for two positions aboard the small laboratory that will be carried into orbit next year by the space shuttle Columbia.

Two members of the group, composed of three men and a woman, will be chosen as payload specialists for the flight, scheduled for September 1984. The other two scientists will be assigned to the ground management team for the shuttle launch.

Selected Wednesday for training were Eugene H. Trinh and Taylor G. Wang, both of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif.; Mary Helen Johnston of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., and Lodewijk van der Berg of EG&G Inc., Goleta, Calif.

Unemployed hard-hit from lack of health insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government study says about 25 percent of American families whose breadwinners were out of work or not regularly employed lacked health insurance in 1980.

The National Center for Health Statistics study released Wednesday said 6.3 percent of the families without any working member had no known health insurance coverage. And 19 percent of the families in which someone worked but did not have a steady job were without health insurance.

Overall, 13.4 percent of all individuals and 12.8 percent of all families lacked health insurance coverage.

The study, "Health Care Coverage and Insurance Premiums for Families: United States 1980," focused on families rather than on individuals because the family is the basic unit for buying and consuming health care services.

The survey was based on data collected during the first six months of 1980, before the most recent recession.

Both the administration and Congress are considering whether to set up a health insurance program to cover the unemployed and are searching for ways of holding down health care costs.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that between 10 million and 11 million Americans are without health insurance coverage because of unemployment.

The proportion of families without insurance increased when those headed by someone over 65, who would be eligible for Medicare, were eliminated from the calculations.

Plane makes 'pretty good landing' after losing two engines

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A crippled airliner with 15 people aboard limped to a "pretty good" landing on two of four engines after an engine exploded, blowing loose a propeller that gashed the fuselage, authorities said.

Reeve Aleutian Airways Flight 8, a Lockheed Electra turboprop on a run from the Alaska Peninsula to Seattle, landed Wednesday night on its second approach to Anchorage International Airport after circling for about two hours to burn fuel, officials said. Dozens of spectators cheered as the plane touched down.

No injuries were reported among the five crew members or 10 passengers, who slid down emergency chutes after the plane rolled to a stop a few feet off the runway.

The pilot, Capt. Jim Gibson, "made a pretty good landing," said Andrew Laux, control tower supervisor. "There's a little fire around one of the wheels, but it's just a tire," he said after the plane landed. Firefighters quickly hosed down the smoking rubber.

The pilot had "very little control" over the plane and had to stand on the brakes to get the craft to stop, officials said.

During the tense period as the plane circled west of Anchorage before making its final approach, scores of observers gathered, including airport personnel, emergency crews and townspeople who had heard of the trouble.

As the plane touched down, they burst into cheers.

Most passengers stayed calm during the incident, said Richard Krueger, 37, of Seattle, one of those on board. "I always think positive," he said.

The airline kept the crew from talking to reporters.

The pilot initially reported problems at about 2 p.m. Alaska Standard Time (7 p.m. EDT), shortly after taking off for Seattle from Cold Bay, about 600 miles southwest of Anchorage, said Dave Jenson, airline vice president.

The plane's right, outboard engine "exploded" and its propeller blew loose, ripping a vertical gash in the fuselage about 8 feet high and 4 feet deep, said Jim Michelangelo, chief of the National Transportation Safety Board in Alaska.

In Washington, NTSB spokesman Ira Furman said investigators were being sent to the airport today to look at the aircraft's engines, cabin damage and controls.

An airline spokeswoman who asked that her name not be used said the aircraft was capable of carrying 87 passengers and crew.

Fourteen indicted

SEATTLE (AP) — Federal bid-rigging charges against six of the nation's biggest electrical contractors for $360 million in work on nuclear power plants in Washington and Indiana came "out of the blue," a utility spokesman says.

Gene Anderson, U.S. attorney for western Washington, said Wednesday that the six contractors and eight company officers were indicted by a federal grand jury allegedly for conspiring to fix bids.

The defendants were charged with establishing artificial and noncompetitive bids on electrical work for four of five Washington Public Power Supply System plants and the Marble Hill plant in Indiana. That plant is being built by Public Service Indiana about 40 miles northeast of Louisville, Ky.

SPOKESMEN for WPPSS and the Indiana plant said they didn't know the indictments were being prepared.

John Britton, a WPPSS spokesman, said the indictment came "out of the blue." Two WPPSS power plants were terminated last year, construction on a third recently stopped, and one WPPSS plant has been mothballed five years because of financing problems faced by the consortium of Northwest utilities.

Julie Van Utt, a spokeswoman for Public Service Indiana, said the company was aware of the Justice Department investigation for several months and had cooperated voluntarily with authorities.

The indictment, charging the defendants with violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, was filed in U.S. District Court in Seattle. Arraignment was set for June 23.

CONTRACTS for WPPSS plants were valued at more than $250 million. The Indiana plant contract was valued at $116 million.

The indictment charged from April 1978 to December 1979, the defendants and unidentified co-conspirators conspired to eliminate competition in the bidding of three primary electrical contracts.

The named defendants were Fischbach and Moore Inc. of Dallas; Francis S. Kellstrom, former chairman of the firm and now chairman of its parent company, Fischbach Corp.; Lawrence E. Grundy, president of the firm's Western Division; Howard P. Foley Co. Inc. of Washington, D.C., and Bancroft T. Foley Jr., its president and chief executive officer;

L.K. Comstock and Co. Inc. of Danbury, Conn., and Charles L. Scharfe Jr., chairman and president of Comstock and its parent company, L.K.C. Inc.; Commonwealth Electric Co. Inc. of Lincoln, Neb., and Paul C. Schorr III, its former president and now chairman and president of its parent company, Commonwealth Companies Inc.;

Lord Electric Co. Inc. of New York City, Peter F. Matthews, Lord's president and chief executive officer, Harry A. Kammenzind, formerly vice president in charge of the Chicago branch and now regional vice president, and Paul E. Arbogast, vice president and chief of the Pittsburgh office; and Wismer and Becker Contracting Engineers Inc. of Sacramento, Calif.

CBS soap wins top Emmy award; ABC dominated awards

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC grabbed seven of eight daytime Emmys in the drama category, but CBS spoiled a clean sweep when "The Young and the Restless" was named the season's outstanding soap opera.

ABC dominated the star-packed awards ceremony Wednesday night, walking away with 11 of the 25 coveted statuettes presented in a half-dozen categories.

CBS and NBC each won three Emmys, the Public Broadcasting Service, two, and syndicated shows, five. A special Trustees Award went to Robert Short of the Procter & Gamble Co., a major creative force in daytime TV over the last quarter-century.

CBS' "The Young and the Restless," also had been named the best soap opera in the 1974-75 season.

ROBERT WOODS, who plays Bo Buchanan in "One Life to Live" on ABC, was cited as the outstanding actor in daytime drama, and Dorothy Lyman, Opal Gardner in ABC's "All My Children," was honored as the season's outstanding female lead.

The 10th annual Daytime Emmy Award ceremonies was the first in recent years not broadcast live on television. NBC, which would have carried this year's program, declined, and the sponsoring National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences was unable to line up live coverage.

"Captain Kangaroo" on CBS and "Smurfs" on NBC shared an Emmy as the best children's entertainment series.

An ABC "Afterschool Special" called "The Woman Who Willed a Miracle," and the star of the show, Cloris Leachman, each won an Emmy in the children's entertainment category.

ENTERING the competition, ABC had 61 nominees, CBS 25, NBC 22 and PBS 19. Syndicated shows were nominated 26 times.

Here are the winners:

Drama — Program, "The Young and the Restless," CBS; Actor, Robert Woods, Bo Buchanan in "One Life to Live," ABC; Actress, Dorothy Lyman, Opal Gardner in "All My Children," ABC; Supporting Actor, Darnell Williams, Jess Hubbard in "All My Children," ABC; Supporting Actress, Louise Shaffer, Rae Woodard in "Ryan's Hope," ABC; Direction, "One Life to Live," ABC; Writing, "Ryan's Hope," ABC; Technical Excellence, "All My Children," ABC; Design Excellence, "All My Children," ABC.

Changes advocated for hi-tech

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advances in scientific technology have made federal food safety laws outmoded, say two former commissioners of the Food and Drug Administration.

By prohibiting any amount of a substance shown to cause cancer in animals, the Delaney Clause is "undesirably inflexible", said Dr. Donald Kennedy, president of Stanford University and FDA commissioner during the Carter administration.

KENNEDY and Dr. Jere Goyan, dean of the school of pharmacy at the University of California and also a former FDA commissioner, testified Wednesday before the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

The committee was to continue today its three-day examination of the nation's food safety laws to determine if they should be changed in light of recent technological advances in analyzing food content.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the committee, posed these questions for the public:

"Are we willing to take mustard off the market because of trace elements of carcinogens? What do we do in the case of saccharin when we have no other suitable alternative available today? If we really permitted no substance with any amount of carcinogens, would we be willing to do without products containing corn and peanuts, because they may contain a carcinogenic substance called aflatoxin?"

Kennedy said that by requiring agency action in cases where risks to human health appear to be trivial, the Delaney Clause "invites public ridicule and disregard for the food safety laws more generally."

GOYAN SAID "there is no question that the Delaney Amendment was appropriate when it was enacted in 1958, a time when it was generally believed that there were only a few carcinogenic food substances, and when analytical techniques were relatively limited and when all cancer-causing substances were assumed to act by an identical mechanism."

But he said today it is known that many chemicals can increase the rate of cancer in animals — though not necessarily in humans. And, he said, analytic technology has advanced so that it is capable of measuring such substances in parts per trillion.

"Let us assume that we determine an important food additive at its present level of use is capable of increasing the rate of cancer by one in one thousand million over a lifetime," Goyan suggested.

"Strict interpretation of the Delaney Clause would dictate that the substance be banned from the food supply," he said. "Now I, for one would not agree with such an action, and it is because of this — the fact that Delaney is not sensitive to advances in technology — that I believe it has lost much of its initial utility."

However, consumer groups scheduled to testify Friday distributed statements opposing changes in the Delaney Clause.

They noted suggestions that it be replaced with a safety standard based on the concept of "negligible risk" — such as one cancer in a million persons.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, June 10, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of Judy Garland, Virginia politician Harry F. Byrd, Sr., Japanese screen star Sessue Hayakawa, the circus' Clyde Beatty and "Gone With the Wind's" Hattie McDaniel. Also sharing your birthday: Prince Philip, playwright Terrence Rattigan, actor Andrew Stevens, writer Saul Bellow, attorney F. Lee Bailey and Baltimore Orioles slugger Ken Singleton. The months ahead give you a golden opportunity to attain a lifelong goal. Greater self-discipline is the key to success. Be assertive at place of employment, but avoid displaying anger. A quick temper will harm you with higher-ups. New social contacts help you solve a financial problem.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Teamwork is essential to success. There is no reason you cannot obtain your objectives. Learn to put your personal feelings aside and work with difficult associates.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Work to get your ideas accepted by those in charge. Contact old friends who are in a position to help you. Check your mail carefully. It could contain a golden opportunity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Family issues continue to cause trouble between you and mate. Do not despair. Things will eventually work out. A blind date provides a welcome change of pace.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for asking for a loan or seeking financial advice. Take only calculated risks. A competitor could have a trick up his or her sleeve. Proceed with caution.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This can be an emotional day for you. Keep your temper in check. Romance has you on the run. Better slow down and tend to business. A sense of humor works wonders.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not pay attention to what your co-workers are saying if the facts are on your side. Make special allowances for a troubled teen-ager. He/she is trying to weather a storm.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel proves enlightening. Share your findings with loved ones. Some of you are inspired to greatness. Be careful when dealing with people you do not know well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Come to grips with an important money matter. Progress at place of employment may be painfully slow today. A change in routine will make things more lively. Be imaginative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not be too proud to ask for favors that will help a loved one. You have no trouble getting the appointment you want. Deal with an undercurrent that is affecting romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Now is the time to discuss mutually-held funds with mate or partner. Be sure there are not too many strings attached to a favor. Act swiftly on original ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get an opportunity to make some extra money. Friends ask your help with a community project. Pitch in! Someone has owed you money for far too long. Insist on payment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A phone call or letter sends your spirits soaring. You will be able to make a short trip if you begin planning for it right now. Keep expenses down.

TV ad to open market

NEW YORK (AP) — These may not sound like fighting words, but they are. "The next best thing to taking it there yourself," says Ted Turner, well-known corporate pitchmen for DHL, the newest entry in the overnight delivery market.

DHL's commercials, and ads for seven other major overnight couriers, have become TV staples — an air war over the airwaves, so to speak.

"They're fighting it out on TV," says Roger Rice, president of the Television Bureau of Advertising, who notes that spending on television by the overnight services was up nearly 300 percent in 1982 over the previous year.

Projections for 1983 are for increased spending, and that's by an industry that didn't spend a nickel on televison advertising seven years ago. Of course, that was before Federal Express decided that TV was the best way to say, "If it absolutely, positively has to get there overnight."

Now, prime time's car chases and squealing tires are commercially interrupted by even more moving machinery — either soaring planes or speeding vans carrying small packages anywhere and everywhere overnight. Or else.

"It's on time, or it's on us," says Flying Tiger.

"We're shooting for 100 percent on-time delivery," says Airborne.

The post office's Express Mail Service doesn't boast speed, but promises you will "look good for less."

And let's not forget Emery, which calls itself "The Air Force In Air Freight," or the talking packages of United Air Express, or the restless vans and planes from Purolator Courier.

But, in both volume of business and TV visibility, the leader still is Federal Express, with its humorous plugs, including ones featuring the guy with the fastest gums in the west.

Federal is the yardstick for DHL, a courier service that claims more international shipments than any other company but is just now breaking into the U.S. market with a reported $10 million advertising campaign.

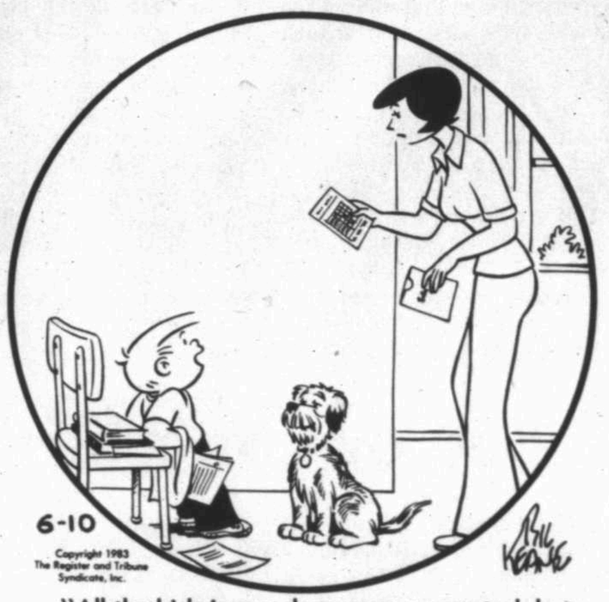

"As far as we're concerned there's Federal, and then all the others," says Malcolm McConnell, a senior vice president for the Ted Bates advertising agency, which is handling DHL's consumer bombardment. "We want to become the logical alternative to Federal."

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	2 ◇	Dble
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

Here's an opportunity to test your technique. Would you rather play or defend four spades?

We do not approve of the bidding. East should show his four-card heart suit rather than raise diamonds. However, that would not have changed the final contract.

It seems that declarer can get to dummy only once because of the poor trump break. He ruffs the second diamond and can enter dummy with the trump ten sooner or later. Best is to lead the ten of clubs, but East doesn't cover and declarer will end up losing a trick in each suit.

But look what happens if, at trick three, declarer leads the club queen from hand. If West takes the king, his safest exit is a trump. Dummy wins and declarer leads the ten of clubs. If East covers, declarer wins and gets back to the table with the nine of clubs to take the heart finesse. So East must duck, but declarer is in dummy to take the heart finesse — making four-odd.

Let's back up a bit. Suppose West allows declarer to win the queen of clubs. What then?

Now declarer needs only one finesse for his contract. He can enter dummy with the ten of trumps to take the heart finesse, and he will lose a trick in each suit except hearts, no more.

So congratulations if you elected to declare. We'd like to have you on our side in our next team match.

Planning for water

As legislators ended their work in Austin recently, they put off until another year consideration of a state water plan. The debate is sure to resume in the next regular session and legislators know it.

The urgency of the water issue is expressed in a publication issued by the Texas Department of Water Resources in Austin. In a chapter relating to water problems, that publication notes "rapid population growth and economic development, coupled with climate in which resources are scarce, have resulted in water supply problems in many areas within the state."

The section goes on to note that "in much of the state today, available storage capacity in existing surface-water reservoirs will barely be able to meet water demand during a critical period of drought; water supplies will have to be developed to meet growing needs."

Debate in the Legislature over streamflow for bays and estuaries stalled this session's progression toward a water plan but the need for a water plan didn't vanish when the plan's hopes for passage did. If anything, the need for a state water plan will be even greater when the Legislature next meets.

Water is critical to all of Texas — to agriculture concerns, industry, Gulf Coast shrimpers and fishermen. The list has no end. As the state continues to grow, the demands placed on water resources will become overwhelming. At that point, the state's growth will end.

That must not be allowed to happen. Water truly is critical to Texas — all of Texas. A state water plan should be the number one priority of the next session.

A bee or not a bee?

Our government has accused the Soviet Union of furnishing a kind of exotic poison for use in Southeast Asia. It has been identified as a mycotoxin, derived from the kind of fungi that grow on grain, and has been called "yellow rain."

The Soviet Union has denied the charges. The United Nations has been less than aggressive, to put it kindly, in investigating the matter. And our State Department has continued to denounce the Soviets for violating international agreements against the use of chemical or biological weapons.

Now come two American scientists, who appeared at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Detroit this week and declared that the toxic rain appears to be nothing more than bee excrement, to which natural fungi can be attracted, producing mycotoxins of natural origin.

We do not wish to see our State Department embarrassed in the unceasing propaganda war with the Soviet Union. The Soviets will undoubtedly make much of this in every available forum.

But the fact that the scientists came forward and went public with their finding testifies to the freedom of inquiry and expression that exists in our country. Soviet scientists similarly engaged would soon find themselves in Siberia or in straitjackets.

The State Department should quickly come to grips with the new yellow rain hypothesis. Our national credibility is at stake. An independent panel of scientists should be commissioned to make a report without delay. And if yellow rain appears to be of natural origin, we should be the first to say so and retract our accusation.

Another View:

Tiding them over

National Public Radio is many things: classical music, opera and jazz, drama, reruns of old comedy and first-runs of new comedy. But for about 8 million listeners it is first of all an evening news program called "All Things Considered" and a morning program appropriately known as "Morning Edition."

Recently the public network, whose reporters and analysts do such a splendid job of squeezing some sense out of the human condition, has had trouble making ends meet. There is a lot of second-guessing about what, or who, went wrong. But with valued old friends like these, what you really want to know is how much they need to tide them over.

"All Things Considered" was the first of the network's news programs, and it promptly set such lofty new standards for radio journalism that to this day only public radio comes close to meeting them.

Public radio's news operations have grown since "All Things Considered" went on the air in 1971. The show no longer offers just a sanctuary on a shoestring from the bell-ringing, pan-banging school of radio journalism but comprehensive accounts of the whole world's day as well. The show's curiosity has no limits. It can go from a superbly rich examination of American politics to advice on what to do if a Gila monster bites you.

A loss of some federal grants, the recession that made it difficult to replace those grants with private funds, and new ventures that did not pan out have left public radio $6 million in the red. To cover the loss, new management is looking first at spending cuts. That approach is defended, in part, on the ground that trimming both staff and budget would force producers and reporters to be as innovative and refreshingly different as they were in the old days when creativity was all that they could afford.

Another view, understandably held by many of the staff at public radio, is that the larger staff and budget have not stifled innovation but have made it possible to be innovative about many more things.

The staff wants to make an open appeal for contributions to support news operations at present levels. Many local stations resist the idea, arguing that such an appeal would skim off money that they would otherwise get during their own fund-raisers. That argument overlooks the fact that most contributors mail checks to local stations precisely because of the high quality of public radio news.

We think that the new management should try a fund-raiser. Our guess is that there are several million listeners who care less about what went wrong at National Public Radio than about how much the valued old friends need to tide them over.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Budget busters breaking hearts

WASHINGTON — In their zeal to save a few nickels, the White House budget busters have managed to break the heart of a 74-year-old blind woman, damage one of the most successful social programs in the country and leave the president's wife with egg on her face. Here's what happened:

Jack Anderson

In her book, "To Love a Child," Nancy Reagan told the poignant story of Mary Lee Wright, who volunteered her time as a foster grandparent to two blind and mentally impaired children. For almost two years, Mrs. Wright had poured out her love to her two foster grandchildren. They depended on her gift of love, and in time she grew to depend on theirs.

But the First Lady's touching story was published before her husband's budget cutters went to work on the program. Last February, ACTION, the federal agency which administers the Foster Grandparent and other volunteer programs, decided the New York state agency which sponsored Mrs. Wright's foster grandparent activity was spending too much money on administrative expenses.

So the bureaucrats in Washington, without so much as a formal hearing, canceled the state agency's Foster Grandparent sponsorship — shrugging off the fact that ACTION had incorporated several of New York's innovations into its handbook of model programs.

Rather than deal with the state, ACTION "decentralized" the program by handing out sponsorships to local community agencies. The federal agency's deputy director, Betty Brake, promised that foster grandparents, placed under new sponsorships, would continue to be with the children they had grown to love.

That promise was broken. When new sponsors couldn't pick up the transportation costs and the state wouldn't, Mrs. Wright and others were assigned to children closer to home.

For more than two months, Mrs. Wright sat home alone, cut off from her foster grandchildren. Finally, in desperation, she wrote to Mrs. Reagan, whom she had met a few months before in Washington. My associate Corky Johnson obtained a copy of Mrs. Wright's handwritten letter. Here is part of what she wrote:

"My meeting you in Washington was an experience I will always treasure, but the turn of events here in New York State since then makes it a bittersweet memory. It really breaks my heart to sit at home with nothing to do... and to know that Jason and Marion must be lonely and wondering why I have deserted them. They can't understand why this had to happen and, frankly, neither can I...

"Without sight, I need special help to get to my children every day, so this wonderful program can no longer make my life worth living.

"Many of the other 'Grandparents' who aren't handicapped might be able to work with children in public schools, but Mrs. Reagan, these youngsters don't have the 'special' need that our disabled children have...

"We found that our loving them is all that this world can give them. Because they are 'special' children with 'special' needs, they are the children we want to be with. They are the children ACTION said we would remain with. However, now our love has been cut off by ACTION and our new sponsor."

Mrs. Wright got no response from Mrs. Reagan. An aide said the First Lady does not interfere in administrative matters.

Footnote: Mrs. Wright was recently assigned to work with a mentally impaired 19-year-old girl. But she still worries about Jason and Marion. "They probably feel they are being punished," she said, with concern.

DISASTER PLANS: The administration's $184 million Integrated Emergency Management System seems to be panning out. State and local governments, no doubt encouraged by the prospect of matching federal funds, are backing the idea of a system set up to handle any major disaster: nuclear attack, flood, tornado, toxic spill, radiation leak, earthquake or air crash. The initial purpose of the program — planning for nuclear attack — has been played down because of the nuclear freeze movement.

Federal and state planners met last month in Emmitsburg, Md., for preliminary talks. The system should be in place by October 1984.

One major hitch: Each region will have an "incident commander" for each emergency, and there is considerable competition among police and fire chiefs, mayors and city managers for the potentially high-profile assignment.

* * *

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Though better known for its forced labor camps, the Soviet Union has branched out into the summer camp field. State Department sources report that the Russians send about 1,200 Afghan youngsters to summer camps in the Soviet Union. Parents have complained that the kids get political indoctrination from their Soviet camp counselors, as well as hikes and swimming lessons.

— Incredible as it seems, the State Department has apparently decided that Africa — with its millions of refugees, racial apartheid, tinhorn dictators and civil wars — doesn't have enough human rights problems to merit its own "desk" in the Human Rights Bureau. The department is considering merging the Africa human rights desk with another regional bureau.

Station wagons need dictionaries

WASHINGTON — This broadening incident from an all-too-broadening life occurred, as most of life seems to, in a station wagon. On a typical Saturday in autumn or spring, the highways in suburban Maryland are congested with station wagons — Democrats in Volvos, Republicans in Pontiacs — carting young players, male and female, to and from soccer games.

A parent tough enough to keep his or her ears open gets a shattering sense of the mind and vocabulary of the nation's nine-year-olds. It confirms the proposition that Mowgli, the boy raised by wolves in Kipling's "Jungle Book," is not really unlike children raised by normal parents, who are members of a different species.

Recently, the Will wagon, brimful of the anarchy that nine-year-olds secrete, was inching through coagulated traffic opposite a shopping center where a movie marquee announced: "The Last Virgin in America (R)." Now, it is a well-documented fact that the average child who is blind as a brussels sprout when looking for the sneaker he left in the middle of the living room can read a movie marquee that is still over the horizon, especially if the movie being advertised has received the tantalizing accolade of an "R" rating.

On this occasion, the nine-year-old culture critics said: "'The Last Virgin in America' — Ohooooooooo." And the driver thought: Arrrrggghhhhh — what is the decorous thing to say when one of the creatures asks what a virgin is and why America is down to its last one?

The Shorter Oxford English Dictionary (no station wagon should be without one) offers a useful salad of definitions that could have been given to the soccer players. One definition is: "A female insect producing fertile eggs by parthenogenesis." The soccer players would not have been satisfied with that.

Another definition is "Of a fortress city, etc., that has never been taken or subdued." The OED gives this example: "In Africa, the highest mountain is still a virgin." That is, surely, a retrograde use of the word, because it suggests that sex is a conquest, a form of aggression. Nine-year-olds of my acquaintance, of both genders, should not be told that there are unexplored fields for their overflowing aggressions.

The first OED definition is charged with theology: "An unmarried or chaste maiden or woman, distinguished for piety or steadfastness in religion." The second definition is similar, but the third is: "A young woman or maiden of an age and character affording presumption of chastity." That raises more problems than it solves, because the average driver of a station wagon boiling with nine-year-olds does not want to conduct a conversation on the admittedly fascinating question of at what age, in 1983, the presumption referred to evaporates.

I have asked other parents what they would have said about what a virgin is. One father suggests: "Tell them a virgin is a girl without a boyfriend." But that definition postulates a correlation that is dubious — and defeatist. Anyway, the OED is not so sexist as to say a virgin must be female. Its fifth definition is: "A youth or a man who has remained in a state of chastity."

Perhaps as the traffic crept along I should have fallen back on the last resort, the truth. Perhaps I should have said the idea of virginity has to do with sexual intercourse. But a station wagon is no place for a sex-education seminar.

Some occasions call for all that the brain can manage in the way of circumlocutions. I have always admired the character who mastered the use of the triple negative, as in the phrase "not unmeaningless." Slip that labyrinth of a phrase into a conversation and it will swallow up the conversation, setting you free from tiresome talk. But circumlocutions and ruses were not so necessary back when movie marquees caught children's attention with titles like "Commanche Comeuppance."

Nothing is more striking to this parent than how early and strongly children feel the pull of popular culture. Today the social atmosphere is heavily dosed with invitations to think about what are loosely called adult topics. But, fortunately, the average nine-year-old cannot think about anything for very long.

So when one of them said, "What's a virgin?" I answered by shouting, "Chuck E. Cheese's (a pizza emporium and games arcade) coming up on the right!" The answer was, I know, a bit oblique, and perhaps a dereliction of duty. But some of life's duties should be left for those occasional intervals when one is not in a station wagon.

Whales have rights, too

BOSTON (AP) — As intelligent and emotional creatures, whales have a moral right to be left alone by scientists who want to study their habits, two philosophers say.

"To persist in viewing and treating whales, creatures who have a mental life of greater sophistication than many humans, as if they exist as a resource here for us ... is neither rationally nor morally defensible," the two professors said in a paper delivered Tuesday at an international conference on whales and dolphins.

Dale Jamieson, assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Colorado, and Tom Regan, a philosophy professor at the University of North Carolina, presented their thesis at a WhalesAlive, a global meeting attended by 200 marine biologists, researchers and activists.

Jamieson and Regan said whales have language, feelings and brains larger than humans' and should not be exploited for food, amusement or knowledge.

Denying whales basic considerations "is a tragic moral failing ... such as racism and sexism," the philosophers said.

They did not comment on the hunting and killing of whales, focusing instead on more "benign" uses, including organized whale-watching and scientific field work.

"Whales do not exist as visual commodities in an aquatic free market, and the business of taking eager sightseers into their waters ... is exploitative," they said.

Regan and Jamieson said that scientific study of whales might provide some benefits to understanding the huge, air-breathing mammals, but said, "No benefits are morally to be allowed if they are obtained at the price of violating individual rights ... The moral task before us is to let whales alone."

In a question-and-answer session afterward, most delegates agreed that whales and dolphins have rights but rejected the conclusion that field work and whale-watching should stop. Many of the scientists said the ocean-going mammals, known as cetaceans, give signs that they enjoy human contact and could easily swim away if they did not.

The week-long conference at the New England Aquarium attracted representatives of the International Whaling Commission, the world body that has overseen commercial use of whales since 1946.

Also attending were members from several scientific and conservation groups that have criticized the commission, including Greenpeace, the World Wildlife Fund, the Animal Welfare Institute and the International League for the Protection of Cetaceans.

Eduardo Iglesias of Argentina, the current commission chairman, said the commission provided the conference administrative and financial aid, but does not necessarily endorse the opinions expressed.

Spelling champ studies by lamp

WOODLAND, Wash. (AP) — Gina Teters lives in a two-room log cabin without power, running water or a telephone. She studies by kerosene lantern, but her pioneer-style life didn't stop her from becoming a finalist in the National Spelling Bee.

"I'm going to do my very best to win, although I do not pray for victory but only to do what I am capable of doing," said Gina, 13.

For the national competition against 137 other finalists, which starts today in Washington, D.C., the western Washington champion will wear a long white dress with a purple sash. It was made by the women of Amboy Nazarene Church, which she attends.

Gina lives in a backwoods 12-by-20-foot, two-story cabin in Green Mountain, east of Woodland, with her parents, Clint and Dusty Teters, and her 10-year-old brother, Clinton. Her father works at Pacific Wood Treating in Ridgefield.

The family used to live in a modern home in nearby Ridgefield, but moved a little more than a year ago to the isolated cabin at the end of a winding dirt road.

The move was dictated by a desire to return to the soil "and by our own economic situation," Mrs. Teters said.

The family has no regrets, does not miss modern technology and in fact enjoys the adventure of taking a lantern up a ladder to a large sleeping loft the entire family shares, Mrs. Teters said.

"Telephones are a curse anyway," Mrs. Teters said in a recent interview. "We had a television set once and we never looked at it. When it broke, we just left it that way.

"We're readers. We also have a lot of fun playing family card games."

For capturing the western Washington spelling title, Gina won two plane tickets to the nation's capital and an encyclopedia.

It was the first time aboard a plane for Mrs. Teters. The more worldly Gina, a straight-A student, once won a flight in a small plane out of little Woodland Airport for memorizing the most Bible verses in her Sunday school class.

On Monday, Gina and the other finalists were the guests of President Reagan at the White House.

Gina said she took a dictionary with her on the flight to Washington "skimming it for words I might not know, paying careful attention to the origin of each word. If I know that, I can generally sound it out without any problem."

Thatcher hopes for landslide in effort to 'banish' socialism

LONDON (AP) — Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, strongly favored to win a second term, asked for a landslide victory in British national elections today to "banish forever" extreme left-wing socialism.

Mrs. Thatcher ran on right-wing policies of strong defense and tight fiscal control, while the main opposition Labor Party fumbled attempts to forge a unified policy on nuclear disarmament. For the first time in 60 years, there was a strong challenge from a third political force — the alliance of the Social Democratic Party and the Liberal Party.

A final flurry of opinion polls gave Mrs. Thatcher's Conservatives a commanding lead of 16 to 21 points over the opposition, with Labor and the alliance jostling for second place.

Some forecasts said this could give her more than 400 seats in the 650-seat House of Commons, the biggest landslide in 50 years.

"I want as big a vote as possible," said the prime minister, who urged voters "to banish forever the dark, divisive clouds of extreme left-wing socialism."

A turnout of 75 to 80 percent of the 42.7 million electorate was expected with first results likely by 11:30 p.m. (6:30 p.m. EDT) with computer forecasts of the final outcome by 1 a.m. Friday (8 p.m. EDT Thursday).

A total of 2,579 candidates were contesting 650 seats, expanded from 635 in the last Parliament due to boundary changes.

Labor, disturbed by left-right feuding since it lost power to the Tories in 1979, needed to convince 5.4 percent of the electorate to change their votes to Labor. There hasn't been a swing that large since 1945 when Laborite Clement Attlee defeated Winston Churchill.

The centrist alliance, with only a handful of strongholds, faced the prospect of winning a quarter of the popular vote but ending up with only about 20 seats.

The acrimonious four-week campaign focused on the personality of 57-year-old Mrs. Thatcher, who didn't mind being called bossy. "So what?" she commented.

She got rapturous receptions at presidential-style rallies and won support from Tories not counted among her fans.

"I'm pro-Tory and anti-Thatcher," said Ron Fisher, a jeweler in Banbury, Oxfordshire. "I just don't like her, but what she's doing is necessary."

Labor scored several "own goals," the soccer term for scoring at the wrong end of the field. The party's beleaguered leader, Michael Foot, 69, disagreed with his deputy over whether Labor would scrap Britain's Polaris nuclear missiles on its own or wait for the Soviets to make concessions.

Deputy leader Denis Healey also lost points by accusing Mrs. Thatcher of "glorying in slaughter" during last year's Falklands War, later softening the charge to "glorying in conflict."

Labor's strongest issue was the post-1930s unemployment peak of 3.2 million or 13.8 percent reached this year — nearly treble the 1.2 million or 5.2 percent when Mrs. Thatcher took office.

But polls showed voters were skeptical about Labor's plans to borrow heavily for a $17 billion reflation program to create 2 million jobs in five years.

When Labor pledged to pull Britain out of the European Common Market, Mrs. Thatcher claimed that would wipe out 2.5 million jobs.

One headline summed it up: "Unemployment Isn't Working for Foot." By election eve, bookmakers were taking bets on who would replace Foot once Labor lost the election.

The alliance had hoped its moderate policies would appeal to Britain's growing middle class and transcend Tory-Labor class voting. But Liberal leader David Steel, 45, conceded to Mrs. Thatcher a day early.

Mrs. Thatcher defended her record of cutting inflation to a 15-year low of 4 percent and tackling Britain's outmoded, overmanned and union-dominated industry.

Nearly 60 opinion surveys agreed the Tories would take about half the popular vote, while Labor and the alliance would get from 20 to 30 percent of the remainder.

The party winning a majority of seats in the Commons forms the government, and its leader becomes prime minister.

When the last Parliament was dissolved, the Conservatives had 334 seats and a 35-seat majority. Labor had 239 seats, the alliance 42 and the rest were held by small or regional parties.

The 17 seats in Northern Ireland were contested by rival Protestant and Roman Catholic-supported parties, including 14 candidates for Sinn Fein, the political arm of the Irish Republican Army.

South African nationalists hanged

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Three black nationalist guerrillas were hanged Thursday morning for taking part in attacks to overthrow the white-minority South African government, authorities said.

Prime Minister P.W. Botha's government ignored worldwide appeals to reprieve the three men, who were convicted of killings that occurred during the attacks.

Coenie de Swardt, spokesman for the Department of Prisons, said the men were hanged at Pretoria Central Prison, the first insurgents to be executed in four years.

De Swardt said he was not certain what time the executions were carried out. Normally hangings take place at dawn in South Africa. and at 5 a.m., church bells rang across Soweto, the black township near Johannesburg.

Reporters were barred from the prison, guarded by a heavy police contingent in camouflage dress carrying automatic weapons.

The three men, Simon Mogerane, 23, Jerry Mosololi, 25, and Marcus Motaung, 27, were convicted of murder and high treason after a series of attacks on police stations between 1979 and 1981 in which four black policemen were killed.

All three were members of the banned African National Congress, known as the ANC.

On Wednesday, the government's Executive Council met to consider an appeal for clemency. The Council, which consists of Cabinet ministers and the president, said only that a final decision had been reached, but a well-placed Council source said it meant the hangings would take place.

State television also said the Council had rejected appeals to block the hangings, just a week ahead of the anniversary of the 1976 Soweto race riots and despite appeals from groups around the world.

OAU finds unity

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — African leaders savored newly found harmony today after finally convening a twice-aborted continental summit and averting the collapse of the Organization of African Unity.

"We have silenced our detractors who were gloating over the disintegration of the symbol of our unity — the OAU," declared Ethiopia's military leader, Mengistu Haile Mariam.

Mengistu was acclaimed new chairman of the pan-African body Wednesday night shortly after the opening of the 19th OAU summit, which had been delayed since Monday because of a longstanding dispute over whether to seat the Libyan-backed Polisario Front guerrilla organization.

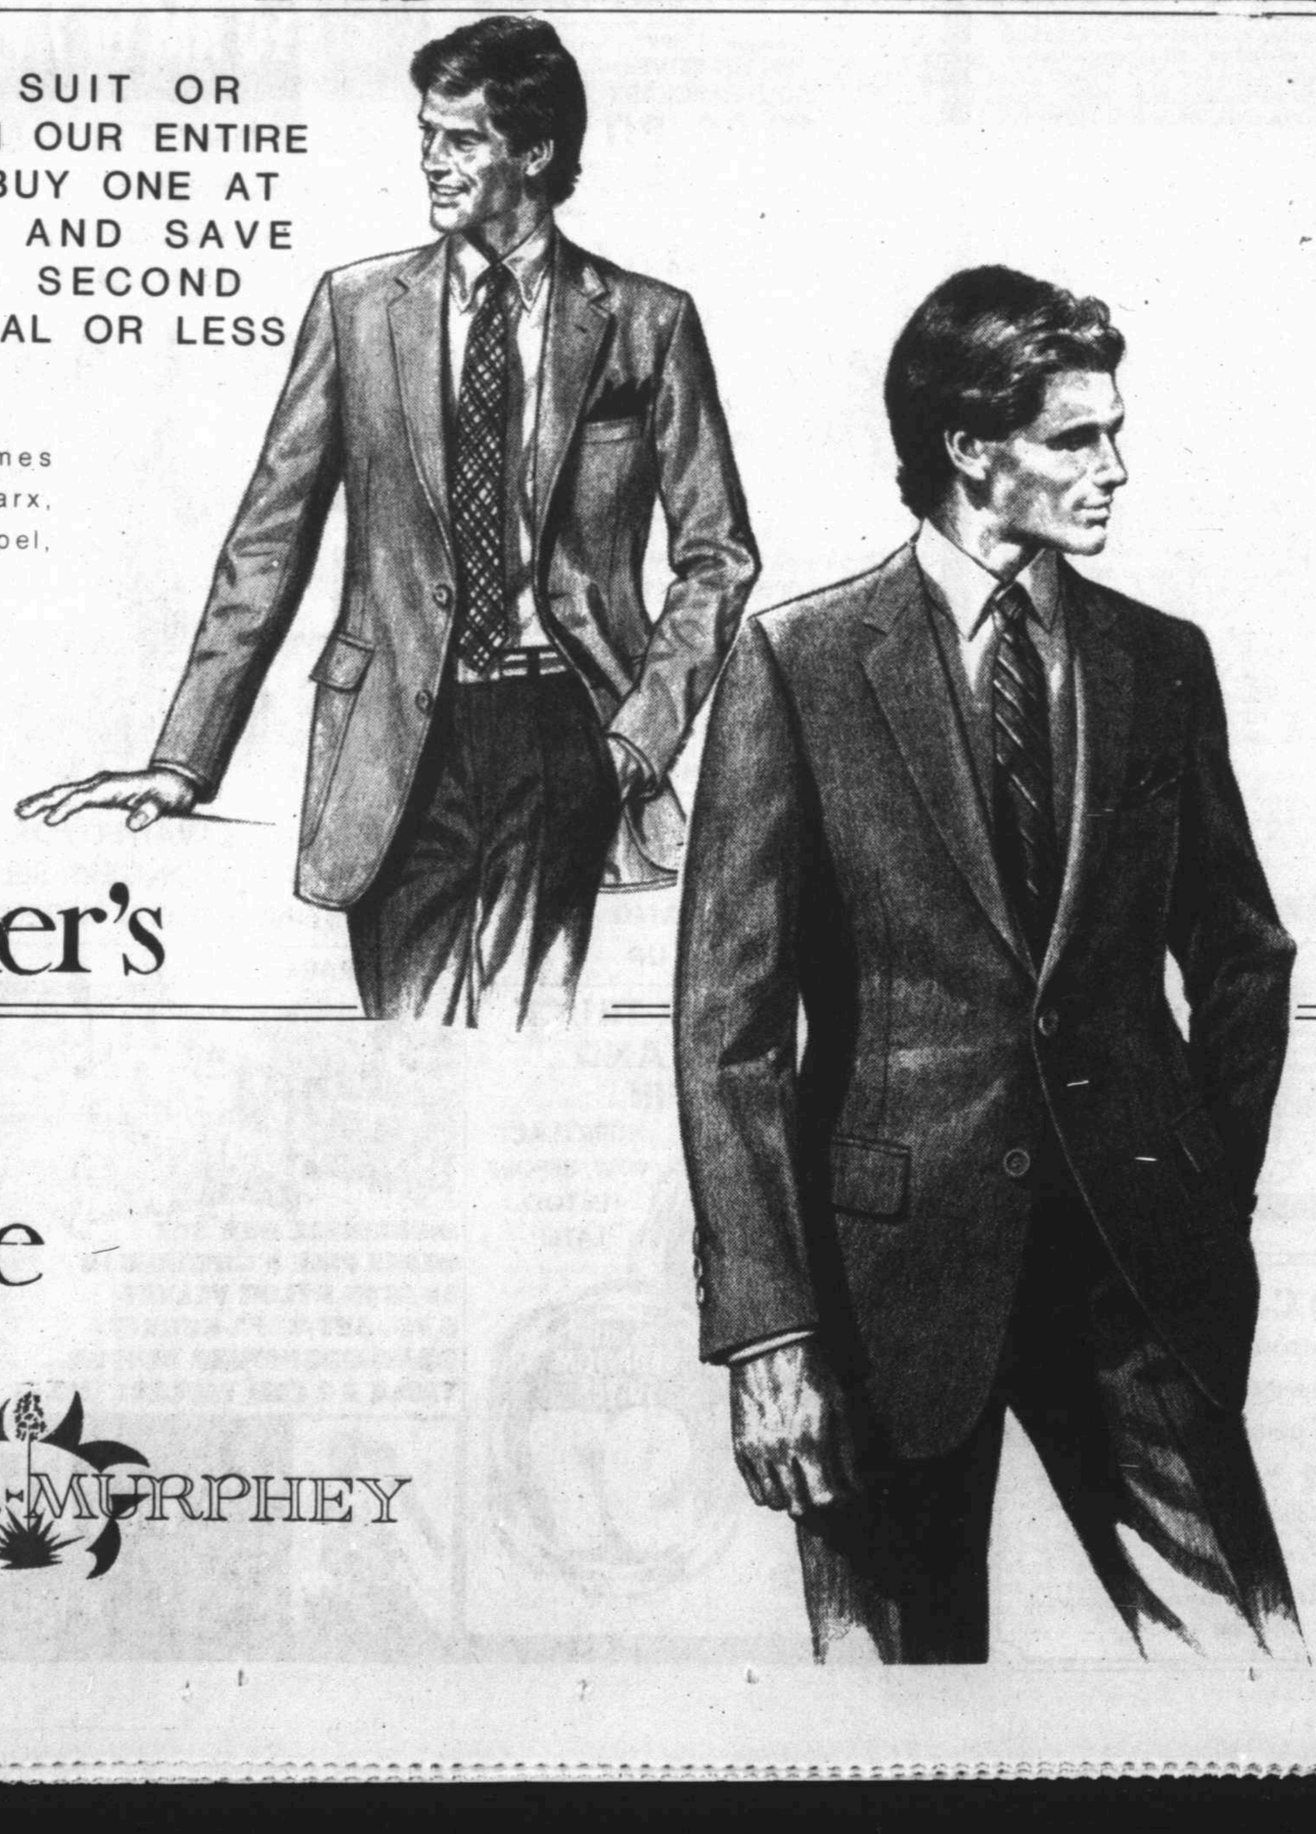

In a surprise, last-minute development, Polisario announced it would "voluntarily and temporarily not participate." That cleared the way for the opening of the 19th summit, which was scheduled to be held in Tripoli, Libya, last year but twice was canceled.

The Polisario has been fighting for eight years to wrest control of the Western Sahara from Morocco. It became the 51st OAU member in February 1982 upon an administrative decision of Secretary-General Edem Kodjo of Togo.

Since then the OAU had been paralyzed because of Moroccan-led boycotts which prevented meetings from getting a two-thirds quorum to conduct business.

Vilas draws suspension

PARIS (AP) — For the second time in 24 hours, a renowned tennis player has been suspended by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council.

On the heels of Yannick Noah's 42-day suspension Tuesday, Guillermo Vilas was hit with a harder slap Wednesday when the IPTC knocked the Argentine star out of competition for a year, along with fining him $20,000.

Vilas, the world's fifth-ranked player, was suspended and fined for accepting guaranteed appearance money to play in a tournament in Rotterdam. The action against Vilas was announced by Philippe Chatrier, president of the International Tennis Federation, who said the Argentine would have 30 days to appeal the decision.

THE ORGANIZERS of the Rotterdam tournament last March also were fined $10,000.The ban will keep Vilas out of all Grand Prix and Davis Cup events, although the tennis organization said that the Argentine player would be allowed to participate in "special events" such as exhibition matches and certain WCT events.

Vilas, who has denied the charges, became the first player ever suspended for allegedly accepting guarantee money, a practice reported to be common among the pros. Such guarantees, paid regardless of how a player performs, assures smaller tournaments of top-name participants who can generate big gate receipts.

"After an investigation of several months, we have formal proof (against Vilas) provided by the organizers themselves," Chatrier told a news conference.

No date was set for Vilas' suspension to start, pending his decision to appeal.

Noah, winner of the French Open last weekend, was suspended 42 days and fined $20,000 by the council for refusing to participate in last May's Nation's Cup tournament.

Noah said he would not appeal his fine and suspension and would sit out competition and exhibition matches, from June 13-July 25, including France's Davis Cup quarterfinals against Paraguay July 8-10.

NOAH WAS given a choice between an 84-day suspension, during which he could continue to play exhibitions, or a 42-day ban on all events. He took the latter.

It is not known what impact this decision will have on the world of pro tennis, but many of the pros fear this$will be taking money out of their pockets in the long run.

How the MIPTC will collect the $10,000 fine from the officials of Rotterdam tournament is not clear either. Rotterdam officials claim that they did nothing than many other tournaments have done in the past.

The situation could remain in limbo for the next 30 days as Vilas prepares for an appeal to the decision.

According to federation sources, this year's Milan tournament is under investigation for similiar violations and may be dropped from the 1984 Grand Prix schedule.

Cubs drop a wild one

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Beaumont rallied for five runs in the ninth and then hung on, as Midland retaliated with three, to beat the Cubs 10-9 in a wild Texas League game at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night.

Almost lost in the eight-run ninth inning carnage was a 14-strikeout performance by Beaumont pitcher Walt Vanderbush. Vanderbush trailed 6-5 going into the ninth, but when Mark Gillaspie and Pat Casey delivered two run singles during the five-run rally, he became the winner.

But not before a few uneasy moments. Bob Patterson, sent in to mop up in the ninth, almost let it get away when Bill Hatcher singled, Tom Lombarski beat out a bunt single and rampaging Mike Anicich belted a three-run homer to left. That trimmed it to 10-9 with no one out, but relief ace Marty Kain came in to record his sixth save by retiring the final three batters on two grounders and a fly out.

VANDERBUSH, now 3-0 against the Cubs, had 12 of his 14 strikeouts against the final five batters and was tagged by the first four batters in the Cubs lineup for all the runs and hits he surrendered.

"Anytime you have 14 strikeouts, you have good stuff," he explained, "I also walked seven. And my mistakes were against Baker, Hatcher, Brooks and Lombarski. I had good stuff, but I wasn't locating the ball where I wanted it against them."

Vanderbush fanned Randy LaVigne four times, Carlos Lezcano three, Mike Anicich twice and A.J. Hill twice in what was an overpowering performance at times.

Lombarski doubled home one run in the first, doubled home two more in the Cubs three-run fifth that gave Midland a short-lived 5-4 lead. Two out singles by Jeff Ronk, Mark Gillaspie and James Steels accounted for one run and drove starter Carlos Gil to cover in the fifth as the Golden Gators tied the score.

Jim Gerlach came on and looked like he had a win with 3⅓ innings of one hit relief before being relieved in the ninth.

Trey Brooks' solo homer in the sixth had given Midland a 6-5 lead.

"That ball Brooks hit was the longest home run off me this year," said Vanderbush, who last year pitched for the Kansas City organization in the Southern League. "Yes, these ball parks in this league are quite interesting compared to the Southern League."

Mark Parent's single to open the ninth, brought Bill Johnson, the 90-mph fastballer, out of the bullpen. Since a shaky debut after being obtained from the Phils, Johnson hadn't yielded a run in six relief appearances, but he was no mystery to the Gators.

Casey's two-run single proved to be the decider, but it was three-run homer off Gil in the first that gave the Gators a 4-0 lead. After 3½ innings, Gil found himself in the unusual situation of trailing 4-2, although working on a one hitter.

Anicich had quite a night in the field with 8 unassisted putouts, six of them on grounders. Mike holds the Texas League record for putouts in an extra inning game, 30, at Jackson last year...Beaumont now leads the season's series 7-5...Vanderbush came to the San Diego Padres as the "player-to-be-named later" in the trade that sent relief pitcher Mike Armstrong to the Royals. Vanderbush signed his first pro contract in 1979 out of Wooster, Ohio, College... Beaumont's first run of the game came when Steve Garcia and Gillaspie executed a double steal....

College World Series features Alabama, Texas

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Alabama and college baseball's leading hitter will square off against Texas for the first time in 61 years for a finals bid tonight in the 37th annual College World Series.

Top-ranked Texas, 63-14, will be eyeing the Tide's David Magadan in tonight's game. The junior from Tampa, Fla., entered the series at .523 and is now batting .535 after going five-for-five and setting a single game consecutive hits record against Arizona State.

In Alabama's 6-5 victory over Michigan Tuesday night, Magadan, a second round choice of the New York Mets in the major league free agent draft, went three-for-four and had his CWS record hitting streak stopped at eight with a seventh-inning fly out.

Texas has beaten James Madison, 12-0, and Oklahoma State in 11 innings, 6-5, to remain unbeaten in this double-elimination event. No. 6 -ranked Alabama beat Arizona State in 11 innings, 6-5, and Michigan, 6-5, to go 2-0 in tournament play.

Alabama, 45-9, entered the series with a .340 batting average, the highest of any team here, with seven hitters above .300. But Tide batters will face a Longhorn bullpen that is filled with winners.

Roger Clemens, who boosted his record to 13-5 with a victory over Oklahoma State, was a first-round draft choice by the Boston Red Sox. Junior righthander Calvin Schiraldi also went in the first round to the New York Mets. Shortstop Mike Brumley was taken in the second round by the Red Sox.

Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson hasn't decided on a starter for the contest, but he has an arsenal of pitchers to use. Besides Clemens and Schiraldi, Kirk Killingsworth, 11-3, earned his team-leading eighth save over Oklahoma State. Mike Capel, who has a 3.07 ERA, is 12-1 and has a save. Steve Labay, who was drafted in the eighth round, is 7-2 with a 2.42 ERA.

The Longhorns are expected to start either Schiraldi or Labay. Dean Hayes, 11-2, will pitch for the Crimson Tide.

Alabama and Texas met for a total of seven times in 1899 and 1922. The Longhorns have won six of those baseball games.

In games Wednesday night, Arizona State eliminated Oklahoma State with a 6-5 victory while Michigan punched out Stanford by an 11-4 count, eliminating Stanford.

The winner of the 7:10 p.m. (CDT) Alabama-Texas game advances to a Friday night game and draws a bye in the finals, win or lose. The loser faces either Arizona State or Michigan.

Friday night's matchups will be determined by the outcome of the Texas against Michigan and Arizona State against Alabama at times still to be decided. Michigan and Arizona State have both lost once in the double elimination tournament and either Texas or Alabama will own a loss following tonight's game.

Steve Carlton, Nolan Ryan play KO leapfrog

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Steve Carlton is in front now, but it is odd, this game of strikeout leapfrog with Nolan Ryan. Who knows how many times the career record could change hands this season after belonging to one man, Walter Johnson, for 55 years?

Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies passed Ryan of the Houston Astros Tuesday night as baseball's most prolific artisan of the strikeout, fanning six in a 2-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals.

That boosted Carlton's career total to 3,526.

Ryan, who broke Johnson's record of 3,508 on April 27 in Montreal, has 3,524, including three in a five-inning stint against San Francisco Tuesday night, one day after returning from the disabled list for the second time this season.

Most people give Carlton the best chance to hold onto the record, although at 38 he is 2 years older than Ryan and although Ryan averages almost two strikeouts per nine innings more than Carlton. Ryan himself points out that Carlton pitches on four days' rest, while Ryan needs five.

Ryan also has said he doesn't expect to last until he's 40. His contract expires at the end of the 1985 season. Carlton's contracts last until 1987, and his teammates have said he plans to pitch another 10 years, although that may be slightly unrealistic.

"I'll take Carlton," said Lonnie Smith, strikeout victim No. 3,522, the one that put the Philly lefty ahead of Ryan. "I think the way he does it, he can pitch 10 more years. He's very difficult to beat."

Smith wasn't alone in his opinion.

"He's a great pitcher, a great competitor," said St. Louis pitcher Bob Forsch, whose two-hitter was upstaged by Carlton's acceptable seven-hitter. "You'd never know how old he is the way he throws."

Paid attendance at Veterans Stadium for Carlton's record-breaking performance was 34,274, the largest this season. They cheered and stood for Carlton as he fanned Mike Ramsey in the second inning to tie Ryan with 3,521. The feat was flashed on the scoreboard.

In the third inning, when he struck out Smith, Carlton again received a standing ovation, and he waved to the crowd, cap in hand. It is a familiar gesture to these fans, who must settle for this acknowledgement, since Carlton will not talk to them through the media.

"This has got to be a great moment for him, reaching that plateau," Phillies Manager Pat Corrales said. "But as he said, 'To heck with the strikeouts; let's win it,' and that's the kind of guy he is.

"It's a great thing for him — another star in his cap."

It is a cap already covered with stars. Last season, Carlton won an unprecedented fourth Cy Young award. With a 6-6 record this year, he is only nine victories away from becoming the 16th pitcher in baseball to win 300 games.

Texas Tech coaches give supporters good news

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Texas Tech supporters were the welcome receivers of good news Wednesday night during the banquet that highlighted Tech Day activities at Green Tree Country Club.

All coaches see the upcoming sports year as better than the one recently concluded and see Southwest Conference success a step away.

Young talent on both the football and basketball teams is seen as the foundation for that success; the experienced athletes all teams need to carry onward and upward.

Two of the players seen in Tech's future are recent graduates of the Tall City: Jerry Zachery and Calvin Riggs.

"Both have a chance to be good players for us," said Tech head football coach Jerry Moore. "We recruited Zachery as an I-Back but he's been getting larger so we've moved him to fullback. He gives us the threat at fullback to go all the way for us. We didn't know when we recruited him that he'd get that large (about 210 pounds) and remain that effective.

"Calvin Riggs is the kind of player that can play a lot of positions for us," continued Moore. "He could be a fullback or defensive end or linebacker. Jerry can start at fullback for three years and Calvin has a chance to play four. We red-shirted both of them last year."

With the extra two years of eligibility gained by red-shirting the two Midlanders, combined with youth and experience at several other positions will make the Red Raiders a "relatively young football team," said Moore. "We've had a good winter. We'll be a bigger and stronger football team than we have been."

Tech came within seconds of beating Southern Methodist in Jones Stadium last year and lost a three-pointer to then No. 1 ranked Washington on the Huskies' turf. The Red Raiders went on to post a 4-7 record, well up from Moore's initial year of 1-9-1.

Depth is the key word in Moore's assessment of the '83 Red Raiders. In his first year two seasons ago, Moore had only 87 players out for the football team and this year he counted 150.

"A lot of kids are walkons but we have numbers," said Moore. "Our strong point is depth. I don't know if we'll be better on offense or defense but we'll have depth. We'll have more speed than in the past too. I thought we were much improved during spring. We're still a young team."

GERALD MYERS' basketball squad is, if anything, younger than the football team. Returning to Tech this fall will be only one junior, three sophomores and four freshmen that saw varsity playing time in '82-83.

"All our guys will be back that finished the year and they'll have that year's experience," said Myers. "Four of them are freshman and there is a great difference a year can make. I think they're going to be a lot better and in two years be in contention."

Myers sees Houston and Arkansas as the teams to beat next season — not only in the SWC but also in the nation — and places his Red Raiders as high as third with SMU also in contention.

What gave a lot of those players time on the court was the loss of several starters through disciplinary action last year, one of which was Midland's Charles Johnson.

"Charles got caught up with some problems," said Myers. "He broke some training rules and we had to suspend him. He was playing well when it happened, too. If he hadn't gotten caught up with the wrong people it might never have happened."

A Midland criticism that has fallen on Myers and other SWC coaches from the recently concluded recruiting year has been the loss of Junior College All-American Anthony "Spud" Webb. The 5-foot-6 point guard who helped guide Midland College to the National JUCO title two years ago is off to defending NCAA champion North Carolina State.

"I think most Southwest Conference schools felt they were filled up at point guard and some schools don't play the right kind of game," explained Myers. "For a guy like Spud, you have to play a zone press."

With 5-foot-10 Bubba Jennings to run the point guard duties, Myers didn't think it was fair to Spud to ask him to come to Tech and share duties or even sit on the bench.

"We have Bubba Jennings and he's a fine point guard," said Myers. "He's a two-year starter and made the All-SWC tournament team and was second team All-SWC. You just can't have two small players of the same class and have one sit and one play.

"Spud's a fine little player, no question about it."

MIDLANDERS ALSO got an opportunity to meet the new baseball coach for Texas Tech, former Lubbock Monterey and Red Raider player Gary Ashby.

After spending five years as a professional in the San Diego organization; Ashby returned to Lubbock as an assistant baseball coach, replacing retired Cal Segrist.

"I knew that a lot of good people were interested in the job but they decided to keep within the system which I think is good," said Ashby about his appointment. "I'm a Red Raider all the way and as long as Tech strives toward putting out a good product, I'll be here."

Ashby's goal is to bring in some good players, especially pitchers which Tech has been lacking, to make the Red Raiders a SWC baseball contender.

"I don't think we'll compete with Texas or Arkansas next year but if we get a sprinkle of athletes from West Texas, we'll build our program. Lubbock has a good high school (Monterey for one) and good NAIA (Lubbock Christian College) program and now we'd like to build one too."

Felton wants change

MAUMEE, Ohio (AP) — Pitcher Terry Felton can joke with his Toledo Mud Hen teammates and talk candidly about being a record-setting loser in professional baseball.

But for Felton, it's a distinction he wants to put behind him — and soon.

"It's starting to get to get to me," said Felton, who has a personal losing streak of 17 games dating back to 1981. "I know that when I've got my stuff, I can pitch with anyone anywhere."

No player trying to break into the major leagues has lost more games to start a career than Felton. His major league record is 0-16, including 13 straight losses in a full season with the Minnesota Twins last year.

Felton's fastball and sharp curve got him to the major leagues and they will get him back there, Mud Hen Manager Cal Ermer said.

"This is more of a psychological thing with him right now," Ermer said. "It's just like a hitter who goes into a slump."

Felton is 0-3 this year for the Hens. It's been 22 months — Aug. 24, 1981 — since his last victory anywhere.

"After last year with the Twins, I decided to go to winter ball and get my head straight. I got down there and I went 0-2 in my first two starts. So I said, 'The hell with it. Let's go home.'"

In spring training, Felton was as sharp as Ermer said he's ever seen Felton.

"I put him in a four-inning exhibition against Albuquerque and he struck out nine guys and walked one. I thought, 'Oh boy, he's gonna be hot.'" Ermer said.

Felton instead developed arm trouble that has been diagnosed as tendinitis. With a major league contract, some players might ease onto the disabled list and collect their pay checks.

"My arm's driving me crazy right now, but I'll stick with it until they kick me out of this game," Felton said. "I just need some breaks.

"When you don't have the good stuff, you've got to try to baffle the hitters. But I'm not a pitcher like Tommy John and I can't keep trying to throw like him. I can't throw a sinker and slider."

Steve Crawford, the Pawtucket Red Sox pitcher who has been on the other end of two of Felton's losses this year, has sympathy.

"Put yourself in his position," Crawford said. "How hard would you be trying if you had something like that (losing streak) hanging all over you? When you try too hard, you end up going out and doing everything wrong.

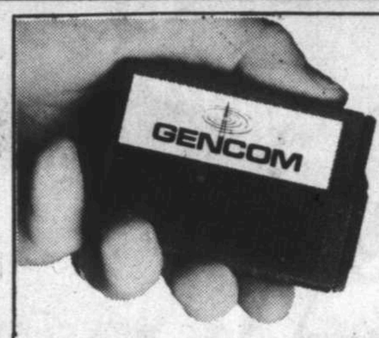

"Terry was laughing about it, but I know he's not laughing inside," Crawford said.

Rams' Reilly gets jail term

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A second-year backup linebacker for the Los Angeles Rams has pleaded no contest to charges he killed a teen-ager while driving while intoxicated.

Superior Court Judge Luis Cardenas suspended Michael Reilly's prison sentence Wednesday and placed him on three years probation and a year in county jail. The 24-year-old defendant was ordered to report to jail June 17.

According to the prosecution, Reilly's blood-alcohol level soon after the accident was .23, or .13 units above the minimum required for conviction of driving under the influence of alcohol.

Perez' homer beats Sutter

Fernando Valenzuela survives Braves, 11-5

By The Associated Press

Tony Perez blasted a three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning off St. Louis reliever Bruce Sutter to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 7-4 victory over the Cardinals Wednesday night.

Pete Rose began the winning rally against Sutter, 4-3, with a pinch-single, his first hit in 21 at-bats. Pinch-runner Bob Dernier stole second and Joe Morgan walked. Two outs later, Perez hit his fourth homer of the year.

In other National League games, Fernando Valenzuela, Dusty Baker, Rick Monday and Pedro Guerrero drilled home runs to carry the Los Angeles Dodgers to an 11-5 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Valenzuela ran his record to 7-2, giving up 11 hits, and helped his own cause with a solo homer, a run-scoring single and a sacrifice fly.

Dave Dravecky allowed five hits in 7⅔ innings to become the NL's first nine-game winner and rookie Kevin McReynolds smacked a two-run homer to lead the San Diego Padres past the Cincinnati Reds 5-3.

Baseball Roundup

Ryne Sandberg's ninth-inning home run tied the score and then Keith Moreland singled home Leon Durham with the winning run as the Chicago Cubs rallied past the New York Mets 2-1 for their seventh straight victory. The win streak is the longest for the Cubs in more than five years.

Bill Gullickson pitched 8⅓ innings before needing relief help from Jeff Reardon, and Al Oliver drove in two runs with a pair of singles as the Montreal Expos beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4.

Phil Garner's two-out single in the bottom of the 11th inning drove in the game's only run as the Houston Astros nipped the San Francisco Giants. Joe Niekro pitched 10 scoreless innings for Houston while San Francisco's Andy McGaffigan allowed four hits in nine innings.

In the American League, Cal Ripken and John Lowenstein each drilled two-run, two-out homers during Baltimore's five-run eighth inning to rally the Orioles past the Milwaukee Brewers 7-3.

Dave Stieb became the AL's first nine-game winner and Cliff Johnson had a pair of run-scoring doubles to lead the Toronto Blue Jays past the Oakland A's 5-2.

Pinch hitter Lou Piniella's one-out single in the bottom of the ninth drove in Dave Winfield as the New York Yankees nipped the Cleveland Indians 6-5.

Lou Whitaker homered, tripled and doubled twice, scored four runs and drove in two as the Detroit Tigers topped the Boston Red Sox 6-3.

Willie Aikens had three hits and drove in two runs to pace the Kansas City Royals to a 9-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

In late games, Rick Adams drove in three runs and Ron Jackson added a pair of RBI to boost California over the Chicago White Sox 7-4, and Mike Smithson worked 8⅔ innings, scattering nine hits, to outduel Matt Young as Texas blanked Seattle 1-0.

Judge halts Leroux takeover bid

BOSTON (AP) — Hayward Sullivan was back today as general manager of the Boston Red Sox after a Massachusetts judge decided his fellow partner, former team trainer Buddy Leroux, had little likelihood of winning his bid to take over the American League club.

After hearing arguments in Suffolk Superior Court for a second day on Wednesday, Judge Andrew Linscott issued a 1½-page order blocking LeRoux and his supporters from taking over the American League club.

Linscott set trial for July 11 and told the feuding parties to have all documents and motions filed by July 6.

LeRoux, one of three general partners in the club, claims he is the boss as a result of amending the partnership agreement with the support of a majority of limited partners. The other general partners, Sullivan and Jean Yawkey, claim the amending was improper. They went to court seeking an injunction.

"The court is of the opinion that the plaintiffs are entitled to a preliminary injunction pending adjudication on the merits," Linscott ruled.

"This injunction is to issue since there is a strong likelihood of success on the merits and also a strong likelihood of irreparable injury without such relief."

The judge said the ruling "leaves the partnership agreement as it was before June 6," when LeRoux attempted his coup, firing Sullivan as general manager and appointing his own candidate, Dick O'Connell. O'Connell was fired as executive vice president and general manager to make way for Sullivan.

Three Midlanders chosen for soccer trip

Midlanders Jeff Smith, Shane Steward and Shawn Williams have been selected as team members of a U.S. soccer team that will be traveling to England and Scotland in July and August.

Lubbock's Rolf Gordhamer, director of the counseling center at Texas Tech University, will serve as the team coach and made the team selections.

"I had an exceptional under-16 soccer team here in Lubbock this year and I thought it would be nice to get a team together for the Aberdeen Cup in Scotland. I'm taking six of my team members and several others from other Lubbock teams. We also picked three from Midland and one from Hobbs," Gordhamer said.

The team will leave for Portsmouth, England, July 24, for some scrimmage games and professional coaching. Then the team moves to Scotland for the Aberdeen Cup, a tournament that features teams from across the world, before returning home Aug. 7.

"We formed this trip through Bobby Moffat Tours in Dallas. Moffat is a former player for the Dallas Tornado and he hes had a big impact on youth soccer across the country," Gordhamer said.

"We're taking who we consider to be the best soccer players in the West Texas area. We are in what we call a Select Team League, one that travels to play games.

"We play against teams in Midland in the High Plains Classic League and we got the three Midland boys through what we had seen. Also coaches like to talk and you usually know where the talent is," Gordhamer said.

Smith, Steward and Williams are all excellent soccer players according to Gordhamer. "We hope to show them some high class soccer competition on this trip. I think it will be a great experience for all the kids chosen to make this trip."

The three Midlanders all played in the Midland Soccer Association's under 16 league and were coached by Chris Williams.

ARCO Games Saturday

The Midland Parks and Recreation Department has received over 125 entries for the first annual ARCO-Jesse Owens Games which will be held Saturday at 9 a.m. at the Lee High track.

Entry forms are still being accepted at the MPRD at 300 Baldwin and can also be brought to the Lee High track prior to the 9 a.m. start. There is no entry fee.

Competition is for boys and girls ages 10 through 15. Age group events will be held in the high jump, long jump and four running events — 50, 100, 200 and 400 meters.

All entrants will receive a Jesse Owens T-shirt, buttons and free sodas. The 28 first place finishers will earn an expense paid trip to Dallas for the region meet in July. The top three finishers in each event will receive ribbons.

Over 50 youngsters attended a special clinic held Tuesday by the MPRD at Dennis the Menace Park. The clinic was designed to help the youngsters to prepare for the Saturday meet.

Zachry honored

Former Midland High All-State shortstop Jimmy Zachry added to his honors this week when the American Association of College Baseball Coaches selected him for second team All-American.

As a senior at Texas Tech, Zachry came within one home run of tying the Southwest Conference league record of 10 home runs and throughout the season hit a school record 13. In four years at Tech, the Red Raider third baseman hit 24 round trippers.

Zachry also led the SWC in runs batted in with 47 and had a season batting average of .368.

Other awards Zachry received for his play at Tech this year include: Consensus All-Southwest Conference and All-District Six (SWC, Southland and six independents).

Hostetter to fight

Texas heavyweight champion Charles "Tuffy" Hostetter and the world's No. 3 ranked lightweight karate fighter Tony Lopez — both from Odessa — will share top billing on a fight card at Ector County Coliseum on June 24.

Hostetter, who was originally scheduled to fight Nick Wells, will battle Mississippi champion Donnie Franklin of Lafayette, La., in the main boxing event. On the undercard, Midland's Richard Abila will end an eight-month layoff when he fights Mexico's Octavio Quinones in an eight-round bout.

Also on the karate card will be super welterweight Fabian Nunez and lightweight Ray Wright, both of Odessa.

Tickets for the June 24 card go on sale Friday at Endless Horizons in Odessa and Midland. Ticket prices are: $25, $15, $10 and $5.

Lipton tourney set

The Midland Tennis Association and the Parks and Recreation Department are sponsoring the Lipton Tea Mixed Doubles Tournament Saturday and Sunday at the Midland High tennis courts.

The sign up sheet is posted at 906 West Tennessee. Participants must sign up by 6 p.m. today and must be a member of the MTA. Participants may join the association at sign up time.

Winners can advance to divisional playoff and all expense paid trip to nationals.

USFL may vote for union

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Owners of teams in the United States Football League have hired a consulting firm to "educate" players before they vote on unionizing.

USFL Assistant Counsel Gary Kaplan said in a telephone interview from New York Wednesday that club owners have hired the Michigan firm of Craft-Baressi Consultants Ltd. "to educate the players as to the processes of a union and about management's view."

Kaplan said he disputed a characterization by Ed Garvey, the executive director of the National Football League Players Association who said the company was hired to "union-bust."

Garvey made the remark in Philadelphia during an interview after a brief address Wednesday to the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO.

Players in the USFL, which is in its first season, will vote on unionization June 15-16.

The USFL has said a union would be "counterproductive" to all involved and could hurt the league's chances for survival.

Garvey, who led players on a 57-day NFL strike last fall, said USFL players needed the clout a union can provide.

40 aliens become naturalized U.S. citizens

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

"From the noise emanating from the hallway," the judge told the litigants, "I think it's going to be interesting."

So, Judge Lucius D. Bunton, the fellow in the black robe, invited the lawyers, their clients, the jurors and the witnesses to sit in on the naturalization of 40 aliens from 10 countries Wednesday afternoon in the federal courtroom here.

Most attended to other business, including eating lunch.

An hour later, upon the return to his elevated bench in the spacious and stately courtroom, Bunton greeted the 40 petitioners for U.S. citizenship, their friends, relatives and other spectators in the gallery, and introduced the ceremony's speaker, Judge Ken Spencer of Crane.

Among the spectators were mothers and their babes — the earlier noise-makers in the hallway of the George Mahon Federal Building.

"HE'S KNOWN and renowned throughout West Texas for his ability, not only in the field of law but in telling stories," Bunton said of his friend Spencer, a retired state district court judge. "By that, I don't mean lies," quipped Bunton. "Judge Spencer is an excellent story-teller."

Responded Spencer: "I'm not sure why I'm here."

Sure or not, the judge from Crane said he was privileged to help out the aliens in their "desire to become one of us."

A babe screamed over and over.

An older child talked in a rambling manner.

Spencer noted America had become what "our forefathers dreamed it should be...: The whole story of America is the blend (of nationalities)."

He strengthened his case by this analogy: Pure iron is not as strong as steel, which is made by the blending of iron with other elements from the earth.

"We will be stronger by blending your abilities and your talents into our society," he said.

SPENCER NOTED the progress among elements of that blend: Election of a black mayor in the mostly-white Chicago and election of a strong, progressive Mexican-American mayor in San Antonio.

He began to recount some of the blessings of living in America.

The babe still cheered and cried, and the older child talked loudly.

"At my age, it would be old hat and might be stale," Spencer said of his re-telling those blessings.

Instead, he cited the U.S. citizens' rights of responsibities and duties, such as knowing the substance of the U.S. Constitution, protecting the country, using honestly and wise the voting rights, exercising the freedoms of thought, speech and the press, and protecting the unwritten liberties.

Spencer exhorted the new citizens from Mexico, Vietnam, Korea, Colombia, Great Britain, India, West Indies, Iran, France and Jamaica to seek the "highest education" and to instill in their children the principles of freedom. He also encouraged them to be self-reliant, to preserve the rights to buy and sell in a free market and to work toward financial independence and "thrift and economy in our own affairs."

He wished them "Godspeed as new Americans."

THE BABE was still crying off and on, and the other child was rambling.

Bunton addressed the noise-makers. He speculated the children really were crying and shouting out of happiness for the new citizens, "though you (the new citizens) may not understand every word" the noise-makers imparted.

Then, the judge turned to the panel of new citizens.

"We're happy to have all of you," Bunton said. He acknowledged that some of the citizens, who were administered the oath of citizenship by Court Clerk Bobbye Pieper, had earned degrees, including those in medicine.

"You bring expertise....Some of you are bringing your minds and bodies to help us out in the United States." U.S. home towns of the new citizens include Midland, Odessa, Stanton, Andrews, Pecos and Fort Stockton.

STANDING BY were members of chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who handed the citizens miniature U.S. flags. Other DARs were waiting to serve refreshments to the new citizens while Pat Stovall and Maxine Morris from the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office were ready to register 39 of the 40 new citizens to vote. One was too young, age 15, to vote. The oldest was 64.

The judge cautioned the new citizens not to take the elevator to the second floor, for it wouldn't stop there. The second floor "stop" is broken. The judge suggested that once on the second floor, the citizens would do well to walk on down and not wait for the elevator. "You'll be there for a week."

A young child in her mother's arms starting crying or cheering again.

"She's really happy that you are here," Bunton told the courtroom crowd just in case the spectators and new citizens might have thought otherwise. "She's not crying; she's happy there are 40 additional citizens."

Moments after the spectators and the 40 ex-aliens had exited the courtroom, the lawyers and their clients, the clerks and the U.S. deputy marshal returned to the courtroom for the on-going civil suit.

"Welcome, citizens by birth," said the judge.

Counselor helps people live for today

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Bob Savage

Bob Savage won't make decisions for anybody.

But he will give the people he counsels a road map to better living.

"I'm going to get you to live today and handle what's going on now," the Palmer Drug Abuse Program counselor said.

"If a person lives in the past, there's going to be guilt, shame and anger. If that person lives for the future, there's fear and anxiety.

"I'd drink and use drugs to get rid of those feelings, anybody would. I've got to get people to live for today."

Since 1977, Savage has been living from day-to-day. He stopped using drugs and alcohol and found a better way to live — sober as a drug and alcohol counselor.

This week, Savage along with other Texas counselors, are being recognized for their professions during Texas Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Counselor Week.

Savage, who began Midland's PDAP — an alcohol and drug rehabilitation program — in 1979, said he's seen many changes in counseling over the years.

"Today counselors learn techniques through workshops, continuing education classes and a lot of classroom training. It has its merit, but you don't get to see what's actually happening," Savage said, adding it was different in 1977 when he worked at Houston's PDAP.

"I had more practical experience, working in three different hospitals, counseling centers, out-reach programs and probation departments.

"Today, counselors are teaching you how to identify other problems (other than alcohol and drug abuse) and making the appropriate referrals. Alcohol and drugs are symptoms of deeper problems. Counselors are more knowledgeable. They don't try to treat the problems."

Following a period of family problems and abuse of prescription drugs and alcohol, Savage moved his wife and daughter in 1971 from Chicago to Houston, where he thought a fresh start would help him.

"I was blaming everything on the place, people and things so I came down here and within two years things were better. My wife thought moving would fix Bob — straighten me up. And I was pretty successful. I had two insurance offices.

"Then I spent five years getting myself back into trouble, working myself in the pits again. My wife ended up leaving me, I got into financial binds, sold one office and closed the other.

"I was abusing prescription drugs, drinking a case of beer a day and the usual street drugs, marijuana and cocaine. I was inebriated from the time I got up in the morning until I went to sleep at night."

Then Savage saw a talk show about PDAP. He said he disagreed with a lot of the organization's ideas and beliefs, but thought "what the heck."

"I knew these people had something different," he remembered. "Sobriety. Living chemically free and they were happy. I couldn't imagine a world without drinking. Everybody does; don't they?"

Savage went to a PDAP meeting in 1977 and during the year he quit drinking and using drugs.

"Then, I stopped and relearned how to live," he said, adding that he and his wife got back together.

"When I stopped drinking I thought I'd have to give up something, but I didn't. I got something in return — happiness and fellowship.

"A lot of people have stopped drinking; eliminating chemicals from their body. They're dry, but they're miserable — lonely, angry — gritting their teeth and white-knuckling it."

From this experience, Savage said he has learned how to help others who want to rid themselves of alcohol and drugs.

"With young people, if they take that step to talk with me, there's an 80 percent chance I'm going to get them to a meeting," he said.

"If I can get them to one meeting, there's a 60 percent chance they'll have 30 days of sobriety — beginning a new life."

Using his salesmanship abilities to "sell sobriety," Savage is counseling Midland alcohol and drug abusers and their families toward a better life.

"Even though I resisted this type of work (counseling), I was drawn to it. I felt like this was a calling, a vocation. Today I think it's one of the best professions around."

Scouts to bike to Davis Mountains

Preparing to ride

Eagle Scouts Robin Hood, left, and Mike Dunn, from Midland Scout Troop 232 make a final equipment check in preparation for a three day, 170 mile bike-hike beginning Friday.

By FRANK CLARK
R-T Intern

Standing restlessly beside their leanly packed 10-speed bicycles, Eagle Scouts Robin Hood and Mike Dunn look ready to ride.

Leaving Midland at 5:30 a.m. Friday with fellow scout Dan Cantrell, they will pedal cross-country on a 170 mile bike-hike to Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch, 20 miles north of Fort Davis in the Davis Mountains, to attend a week-long scout training session/camp-out.

Dunn and Hood, seniors at Lee High School, and Cantrell, a 1983 graduate from Lee, are members of Midland Scout Troop 232. Each has five or more years of scouting experience.

The idea for the trip came up in a conversation with Scoutmaster Steve Blaylock and has taken shape only within the last month. In preparation for the trip, new equipment had to be purchased and a route with evenly spaced water stops had to be plotted.

The number one requirement for the scouts' traveling equipment was lightness. Extra weight forces the biker to work harder, which increases fatigue and slows him down. Equipment must also be compact enough to fit in the light saddlebags slung across the rear wheel or in the small pouch between each 10-speed's handlebars.

Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield displays the proper way stickers should be affixed to vehicles' license tags. More than a few Midland motorists are mixing up their stickers. Others are marring their tags with decals, which is a $200 no-no.

Shuffield outlines license plate no-nos

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Driving on the highways, streets and back roads is a game of tag.

It's a serious sort of game which, noted Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield, can cost the motorist a $200 fine or jail time if he can't come up with the cash.

"You'll be surprised how many people don't have them on right," said Ms. Shuffield of vehicle license tags. She has been on a public-service crusade to straighten out people on where to put the annual stickers on their license plates and not to marr their tags with decal. That's just as illegal — a misdemeanor offense — as driving with mud- or oil-splattered tags or no tags at all.

Expired license tags can cost the "caught" motorist a maximum fine of $200.

"We had one man who got out of town, and he got fined $200 for having an expired sticker on his tags," the tax collector noted. The Midland traveling motorist was held up by the law near Burnet. She noted that some cities and counties keep their tills filled by collecting fines on minor infractions which often go unnoticed elsewhere.

The habit of Ms. Shuffield and her clerks and family has been to jot down license plate numbers of Midland motorists whose tags are illegal. Then, the tax office workers will look the name and address of the tags' owners, dispatch form letters and advise them to correct the infractions before they get caught by lawful ticket-writers.

Particularly illegal are expired stickers; tags without stickers noting the month of registration; tags marred by decals or dirt, mud, oil or other foreign matter; no stickers on the rear plates, and no front license plates.

To be forgiven are switched decals. By regulation, the decal denoting month of registration appears on the upper left side of the rear plate; the decal denoted the year is stuck on the upper right side of the plate.

"It's not proper, but it's legal (to switch the order)," Ms. Shuffield said.

As a courtesy to drivers of 105,492 motor vehicles registered in Midland County, Ms. Shuffield outlined license-plate infractions.

—Expired Plates: "I see numerous plates on vehicles being driven on the streets that are expired," Ms. Shuffield said, "and I do try to catch the license plate number and send a letter to these people that their plates are expired...If they are stopped, they are subject to fine in addition to paying a (20 percent) penalty upon their registration fees for driving the vehicle after plates have expired."

Tag fees range from $15.80 to $25.80 to $33.80 for automobiles up to $800.30 for tractor trailers. It's the driver's responsibility to ensure that his or her plates are current whether or not the motorist gets a three-part registration card which the state sends out as a courtesy.

—Stacking Stickers: "Many people will affix a year sticker over the month sticker," she said, "and I have seen quite a few driving around displaying a 1982 and a 1983 sticker or '83-'-84 — no month — on their vehicles. Texas law requires that both the month and year of expiration be displayed on the rear license plate."

—Two-plate Law: "Texas law requires that both plates be on a vehicle that has two plates. All cars and trucks in the state of Texas are issued two plates."

Drought-relief meeting announced

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Two funding applications for crime prevention programs received favorable comment and an upcoming drought relief meeting was announced during the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission board of directors monthly meeting Wednesday.

In other action, the board appointed two committees and approved an environmental review application.

The city of Big Spring and Ector County Sheriff's Department both received favorable comment on applications for funding through the Governor's Criminal Justice Division for crime prevention units to promote public education about crime and involvement in anti-crime programs.

From 1981 to 1982, Big Spring's narcotics case rate has jumped by 39 percent. Thefts for the same period are up 20 percent and burglaries are up 38 percent.

Big Spring is seeking $27,401 from the state, to be matched by a local grant of $2,880. The money will be used to pay an officer's salary, purchase audio visual equipment and begin drug abuse, rape prevention, security inspection and other crime prevention programs.

Ector County is applying for $35,599, to be supplemented with $13,144 of local money. The money will also be used for salaries, equipment and anti-crime efforts.

Also during the meeting, Upton County Judge Peggy Garner announced that a meeting to discuss possible drought relief plans for more than 40 West Texas counties is scheduled for 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Executel at Midland Regional Airport.

Mrs. Garner said research has shown that 42 counties are suffering from drought conditions. "We're in terrible shape," she said, noting that Upton County has received only 0.70 of an inch of rain this year.

She said officials from all 42 counties have been invited to attend the meeting to discuss possible means of obtaining financial relief for drought-stricken areas. Jim Hightower, state agriculture secretary, is expected to attend.

In other action, the board gave favorable comment to an application by Dovecote, Inc. of Odessa to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Dovecote is seeking an environmental review of its proposed Longview Estates subdivision in northwest Midland County.

The developer is seeking HUD approval to provide alternative financing for prospective buyers. The subdivision, primarily designed for mobile homes, will offer 18,800-square-foot lots for $6,000.

The board appointed Jack Smith, a Big Spring city councilman, Gordon Marcum II, a Midland city councilman, and Mrs. Garner to sit with PBRPC board chairman W.O. "Bill" Pigman on a committee for selecting nominees to the Private Industry Council. The council will direct the Permian Basin's participation in the Job Training Partnership Act, a job training program established to replace Comprehensive Employment and Training Act programs.

Charles Warnock, Pecos County judge; Les Brown, Andrews County judge; and Dick Sivalls, an Odessa city councilman, were appointed to a committee for reviewing bids from auditing firms for PBRCP fiscal year audits for 1983-1985.

The PBRPC's next meeting, a semi-annual membership meeting, is scheduled for July 29 in Pecos.

Midland Eagle Scouts plan to bike to Davis Mountains

With these requirements in mind, only the bare minimum was packed. Each scout will carry a change of clothes, a combination rain poncho/sleeping bag/tent, a sleeping mat and quick energy food such as candy bars and dried fruit. They will share a tire pump and extra tubes in case of flats, and will cover themselves at night with a single sheet over all three to retain body heat. Food will be provided by quick-stop restaurants along the way.

Though all three scouts have had 25-plus merit badges awarded to them over the past few years, none has received a cycling badge or has biked more than 30 miles in one day.

"The wind, the heat and our inexperience will give us the most problems," Dunn said "and between Penwell and Pecos there aren't many places to fill our canteens."

To beat the heat and wind, they plan on breaking camp at 5:30 each morning when it is the most calm and cool.

"We figure on doing 70 miles the first day while we're still fresh," said Hood, "and then 50 miles on Saturday and Sunday. We should roll into the scout ranch sometime Sunday evening."

In addition to the cycling merit badges they will earn for the trip, Hood, Dunn and Cantrell hope to receive camping and hiking badges for their week of camping out in the Davis Mountain.

Returning to Midland June 19, the scouts have elected to ride back in a friend's car, pulling the tired bicycles behind on a trailer.

"This is a one way trip," Dunn said with a smile.

Tax official outlines policy

—Rainbows & Longhorns: "I have seen several vehicles that display decals of rainbows, longhorns and other data. This is illegal. Again, Texas law requires that no decals be affixed to the plate except those that are issued....When these (illegal) decals are displayed, they make an 'unclean' plate, and this is expessly prohibited by the motor vehicle laws." If the decals cannot be removed, Ms. Shuffield will issue replacement plates at $5.30 per set.

—Infrations: "Many parts of the state strenuously enforce infractions of the registration act, especially if you get into some small county that needs the fees and fines to support their budgets. I have many people who contact this office after they had been stopped and fined in some other county."

—Courtesy: "(For) every vehicle that I can spot that has one of the...infractions, I have form letters that I send to these people as a courtesy to advise them that they are driving with plates that are in violation of the law." She only "catches" a few — six to 10 — on most days. "I have no authority for a fine on these units, but I simply advise them, hoping that they can avoid a fine because of this problem...."

—Proper Display: "The decals are always displayed on the rear plate, with the month on the left and the year on the right of the plate," Ms. Shuffield said. "However, if the decals are reversed, this still is legal, although not proper."

Dead body has been identified

The body of a man found shot to death Wednesday has been identified as that of 65-year-old Charles Kirby, whom neighbors discovered lying on the bed of his mobile home at 503 Longview about 8 a.m.

He had been shot at least once in the head with a small caliber weapon, according to sheriff's department investigators, and was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

No definite time of death has been established, but investigators said Kirby was last seen alive about 9:45 p.m. Tuesday. His body was taken to Thomas Funeral Home and an autopsy has been ordered. No arrests have been made.

Hearing scheduled on use of funds

Defendant says he was drunk when he confessed

ODESSA (AP) — A New Mexico man claims he was in a drunken and drugged stupor when Albuquerque police say he called them to confess to the 1981 murder of a West Texas priest.

James Harry Reyos, 27, of Chama, N.M., took the stand Wednesday in his trial for the killing of the Rev. Patrick Ryan of Denver City.

Reyos claimed that Ryan forced him into a homosexual act the day before the Catholic priest was murdered Dec. 21 in Odessa. But Reyos produced cash receipts to prove he uas in Roswell, N.M., the night Ryan was killed.

The priest's body was found nude, bound and beaten Dec. 22.

Reyos, 27, of Chama, N.M., took the stand for three hours Wednesday and described the priest, who he said had picked him up hitchhiking about two weeks before the murder and loaned him some money, as "kind and considerate."

But Reyos said he met Ryan in the church rectory Dec. 20 and was forced into the homsexual act.

"He came up to me, grabbed me by the shirt collar, pulled me toward him and had me perform oral sex on him," Reyos said.

Reyos said he escaped the house, and was "disgusted by the incident," but returned the next day and asked for a ride to Hobbs, N.M., to get his impounded pickup truck.

Reyos said that while he was inquiring about the truck in Hobbs, Ryan disappeared. Reyos said he then drove alone to Roswell, N.M.

A pathologist has testified that Ryan was "mildly intoxicated" before he was killed and that he "probably was a frequent user of alcohol."

Reyos was arrested last November in Albuquerque after police said he telephoned them and admitted to the murder. A tape recording of the alleged confession was played for the jury, but Reyos said he was so disoriented by drugs and alcohol he was using that he did not remember talking to authorities before his arrest.

"I knew he had been murdered, but I didn't know any of the facts leading up to the murder," Reyos testified.

Police use 15-year-olds in 'sting' operation

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Huntsville police used two 15-year-old members of a Boy Scouts organization to "sting" clerks at eight liquor stores.

Two members of a Law Enforcement Explorers post bought beer at eight stores with the blessings of police last week. Josh Silcox, a tight end for Huntsville High School's junior varsity football team, said the purchases were "just like going in and buying candy. It was that easy."

Roger Ohmstede, a Scout executive for the 14-county Sam Houston Area Council, said Wednesday he will seek disciplinary action against the post for allowing the scouts to participate.

"We will not condone a sponsoring organization that uses teen-age kids to accomplish its own ends by going outside the law," Ohmstede said. "Even though they were under police supervision, our principle is to teach kids to stay within the law."

He said he may seek to revoke the group's charter. At the very least, he said, the scout leaders will be instructed not to repeat the project using teen-agers.

Huntsville police chief David Farrar said Silcox and Ron Jewell, also a football player, went to 10 liquor stores.

One clerk lectured an undercover teen-ager.

"He said he had a wife and kid to support and couldn't afford to lose his job over something like this," Farrar said.

Both boys are stockily built. Jewell is 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighs about 220 pounds. Silcox is 5 feet 8 and weighs about 215.

But Farrar said "neither of those two looked anywhere near 19."

Veterinarians will offer vaccinations

Midland veterinarians have banded together to offer rabies vaccination clinics at five locations between 1 and 3 p.m. Saturday.

Announcement of the special rabies clinics came Wednesday, the same day tests on a skunk found inside Midland city limits Saturday proved to be rabid, pushing to 30 the number of rabid skunks discovered in Midland County this year.

According to a Midland Animal Control spokeswoman, the skunk was found dead Saturday at a residence near the intersection of Polo Club Road and Bluebird Lane in north Midland. The skunk was reportedly killed in a fight with a dog.

The dog's owner discovered the dead skunk Saturday morning and turned the body over to Animal Control. Tests on the skunk came back positive Wednesday.

The dog was vaccinated but may face a 90 day quarantine because of its contact with the skunk.

Another rabid skunk — the 29th discovered in the county this year — was found June 1 in southwest Midland County.

Animal Control officials urge pet owners to vaccinate their dogs and cats against rabies to limit the chance of spreading rabies from wild to domestic animals.

State law requires that all dogs and cats more than four months old be vaccinated for rabies.

Locations for Saturday's rabies clinics include: Green's Animal Clinic, 3009 N. Big Spring St.; Mesa Verde Animal Clinic, 2215 N. Midland Drive; Tall City Veterinary Hospital, 4606 W. Highway 80; Freddie's Instant Shopping, 1301 E. Front St.; and Midland Freshman School, 100 Gist Ave.

There's a feeling of Chippendale in this room — but nothing stuffy. Blue and dark cherry wood furniture. Matching glazed cotton is used in tie-back draperies and laminated window shades. Room was designed by Shirley Regendahl.

Tie-back draperies, window shades offer privacy, light

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q: I'd like to update my living room which has traditional furniture in dark wood tones of cherry and mahogany. I want to reupholster my sofa, a pair of lounge chairs and an occasional chair with wood trim.

I want to keep the pale-gold carpeting. Also, I am tired of heavy draw draperies but I do have a need for complete privacy at night in this room. Please help me create some personality in this room. — L.D.

A: The color scheme of blue, gold and rust in a room created by designer Shirley Regendahl might inspire you.

She selected ecru carpeting for cherry furnishings from the 1700s. Her fabric selection was a blue and rust glazed-cotton print which she used for a sofa and matching chairs.

The same print was used for tie-back curtains at the windows complemented by window shades with laminated fabric to match. This type of window treatment would give you privacy at night but plenty of light by day if the shades were pulled up.

Regendahl's room was large and accommodated a second sofa which she covered in a bright-blue velvet. The blue velvet or a textured wool in a solid color might be nice on your chair to pick up one of the colors in your print.

Your walls could be a soft rust, a soft blue or even covered in the print fabric if you desired.

Q: I am moving into a new condominium in a large city. Three walls of the living room look out on a gorgeous view of the city. Vertical off-white blinds are at the windows and gray carpeting is throughout.

What would be a very rich and slightly restrained color scheme for my room? I have some dark mahogany wood pieces. — P.N.

A: One very elegant color scheme starting with gray carpeting and off-white blinds might be deep forest green and a rich wine.

Accessorize with lighter shades of green and pale pinks for contrast.

Today's greetings found in more than simple cards

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

How many ways are there to say, "Happy Birthday?"

Judging from the display of new greeting cards at this year's National Stationery Show in New York recently, there seem to be as many ideas on the subject as there are greeting card customers.

Thousands of retailers attended the show as some 700 producers of cards, party supplies, gift wrap, stationery, desk accessories and related items displayed their wares.

Consumers can expect to see some of the newest ideas in stationery stores, starting this summer. Though more expensive than the traditional paper card, many of them are also more elaborate. They are designed to serve as both gift and card.

The new type of cards that are more than cards include porcelain plaques which can be signed, sent through the mail in a heavy-duty envelope, and then hung on the wall. There are also small, soft sculptures which can be personalized with a felt-tip pen and mailed; musical greeting cards which play a tune courtesy of an electronic microchip; three-dimensional cards, and cards which contain a dividend — perhaps seeds which can be planted, potpourri or dried flowers.

Many retailers and manufacturers attending the show were in a jolly mood because business has been good.

Gary K. Smith, executive vice president of the Greeting Card Association, said card unit sales should run about 7.5 billion in 1983, a 7 to 9 percent increase over 1982.

According to Smith, greeting cards have been less affected by the economy's downturn than other types of merchandise because they are less expensive. Many consumers sent cards instead of gifts this year, he said.

Although sales of Christmas cards have been fairly stable, registering 2.7 billion in 1982, sales of what the industry calls everyday cards (including birthday, engagement, sympathy and friendship cards) rose to about 2.7 billion in 1982. Valentine's Day cards, which totaled 1 billion in 1982, represent another major growth area.

Though it may seem that cards have gotten much more expensive to shoppers who may find that the 25- and 50-cent card appears to have disappeared, Smith says cards are still made in all price ranges.

However, the cost of doing business has encouraged retailers to stock more expensive greetings cards which are more profitable, particularly since few consumers seem to object.

If cards are going to cost more they ought to offer more, goes the reasoning. As a result, more elaborate cards were strongly in evidence at the show.

This is a trend which has been accelerating over the past few years, show officials said. Musical cards which play a tune can range up to $7 or $8. One producer introduced four brilliantly-colored porcelain "cards" which are meant to be hung on the wall as a permanent keepsake with a suggested retail price of $20.

How to raise enrollment

By ERMA BOMBECK

For the last decade, all parents have heard is how school enrollment is dropping off. Kids don't want to go to school anymore. It isn't "fun." It isn't stimulating. It isn't challenging.

In typical adult fashion, we've really flexed our muscles. We've shortened the school day to four hours or less. We've made electronic games out of English and math. We've added every frill from the History of Perrier to Holistic Car Repairs.

None of it has worked. We've got to start thinking like teenagers and use a little reverse psychology. You want to discourage dropouts? How about this plan of action?

Tell them their parents would die if they knew they were in school. Within weeks, teenagers would sneak out of the house by the thousands and force their way into schools if they had to.

Tell them they're not old enough to go to high school and watch them break out fake I.D.'s in droves.

Can't get your kids to go to summer school? Just tell them that out of season it costs more. The hotter it gets, the more it costs. There won't be an empty seat in the house.

Tell them they have to drive to get there. If the school is only two blocks away, tell them that anyway. They won't miss a day.

If you really want a mob scene at the front door of every school in the country, sell tickets on a first-come, first-seated basis. No reserved seats! Then stand back. Especially if the school has had a "hit" within the last six months.

If school is touted as being fattening and gives you bad skin, they'll go for it. If you forbid them to associate with anyone who even goes there, they'll sleep over and accompany their friends to school every day it is open.

It probably sounds like a lot of trouble, but young people don't want to hear how unique public education is in this country. They no longer believe in the American dream that if you learn how to diagram a sentence, you can become president. They've been raised as a society of spectators where everything is done for them, and if you don't like what you see, you just change channels.

It isn't an easy job to keep them in school as it was a few years ago when my son said, "Everyone is skipping school. It's no big deal. I don't see why I can't do it."

"Then why don't you?" I asked.

"Because you'd kill me!"

Fear. We should have hung onto it.

AT WORK

Life after high school

By DR. ADELE M. SCHEELE

A local high school girl here in Los Angeles killed herself recently. No one knows exactly why. Her friends say she was graduating in a month and couldn't go on to college. She felt her fate was sealed, her future doomed. Maybe that was the straw that broke her, they think.

Many seniors confide in me that they are terrified of life after high school. After all, even if they didn't love high school, at least they knew what to do in it. The system took care of them. Now, the unknown looms large and forbidding.

The question is: What do you do if you aren't continuing school? Is there any hope or profit if you don't go on to college?

Obviously, yes. Remember, this is truly the land of opportunity, no matter the economy. But how and where? Getting in is the critical first step.

Start anywhere you have an interest. For example, if you like sports, go for a sales job in a sporting goods or department store. If you're ambitious it could lead to either a better position as a buyer or manager for the store, or as a sales rep for the sporting goods manufacturers themselves. Or, it could lead to things you've never dreamed of before, since ideas often are stimulated only by doing something for a period of time — new products or services begin this way.

Another avenue is big business. It is, of course, helpful if you have a referral or recommendation from someone in your family, church or school. Many young people are wary of using referrals but it is a real way of doing business.

If you don't know what you want, ask for any entry level job in order to learn some aspects of the business. In this way, you can learn where you will do your best work. Plan to stick to it for at least six months, or until you have some notion of what goes on inside. Only then are you able to ask for more responsibility or a transfer.

If you don't have anyone to help you and you want to join a large company, try to find someone, anyone, who works inside at any level. Ask if you can come by for an hour, even during lunch, to see what goes on. That can work for you in two ways. First, you can see firsthand a few kinds of jobs that people hold so you can know better what to ask for.

Second, they can see you and help you get to talk to the right supervisor. Taking the initiative this way obviously takes courage and prospective employers can only be impressed by your spirit.

Another courageous act is to find out which conventions are holding their trade shows or exhibits in town in the next month. There is always so much more going on in town than you can imagine. Ask for a special student's pass and go "hang out" at some of the booths.

See which ones are crowded with people wanting information but are understaffed. With permission, pitch in and help, do anything without pay and see what happens. Of course, talk to the people staffing the booths. They know a lot about the industry as well as the people walking through collecting information. Asking questions about their companies, their jobs, their services or products, or even how they started, is a good way to have a conversation.

DEAR ABBY

Scars have yet to heal

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I can't get the letter from "Worried Father" out of my mind. His 19-year-old daughter, "Judy," stopped seeing her boyfriend because he had slapped her on a few occasions, but she went back with him. Her father then barred him from their home, and asked you if he had done the right thing. (You said he had not.)

How I wish I had read that in your column when I was 19. I was in similar circumstances at that age (I am now 25), and I can tell you that when my parents barred my boyfriend from our home, it drove us (him and me) closer together.

You were also correct when you said slapping eventually turns into beating. It happened to me. The more he abused me, the less my family thought of me, and the less I thought of myself, until I was convinced that I wasn't good enough for any man. (I felt lucky he would have me, no matter how he abused me.) Thank God I finally got the strength to break up the relationship.

I am now happily married to a wonderful, non-violent man, but it will take years to overcome the humiliation and degradation of having been battered and abused. – OVER IT IN OREGON

DEAR OVER IT: There is not sufficient space to print all the letters I received in response to the one from "Worried Father." This one says it all:

DEAR ABBY: I stupidly married not one, but TWO men who "slapped" me before we were married. Your advice was excellent, but I would like to add this:

Judy should visit the local spouse abuse center. One visit will convince her that a slap soon becomes a punch, and then outright brutal beating. Unfortunately, it rarely stops there. The abuser soon learns that he can hurt a woman even more by extending the abuse to her children. Any individual who lays a hand to another in violence has no respect for either that person or himself.

Please advise Judy to run as fast as she can from this lunatic. It will not get better – only worse. – BEEN THERE IN COCOA, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: There are three children in our family (all boys). We want to ask you if you think it is rougher being the youngest, oldest or middle child? – DOUG IN DURHAM, N.C.

DEAR DOUG: As I've said before, if you ask the eldest, he'll say, "The eldest, because you're expected to set a good example for the younger ones. And if a fight breaks out, I get blamed because I'm the oldest and should know better."

Ask the middle child, and he'll say, "Being the middle child is the hardest because you get none of the advantages of being the youngest or the oldest."

Ask the youngest child, and he'll tell you that being the youngest is hardest because "your parents try to keep you 'a baby' as long as possible, and you're the one who has to wear all the hand-me-downs."

In other words, it all depends where you're coming from.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Johnny on the Spot," whose ladyfriend is never on time for a date. I have a solution to this problem, and it's been working like a charm for years.

My husband has never been on time for anything, so when we have to be someplace at 7 p.m., I tell him we have to be there at 6 p.m.

This way we are only 15 minutes late, but it sure beats an hour! – SNEAKY IN NEW YORK

Diarrhea: A deadly disorder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once every 10 seconds, somewhere in the developing world, a child dies of dehydrating diarrhea. And this could be stopped with a simple solution of water, sugar and salt, world health authorities say.

More than 500 public health experts from 50 countries gathered Tuesday in Washington for the beginning of a four-day conference on the world's leading killer of children — dehydration from diarrhea.

"What is so sad about this is that the solution to the problem is so simple," Dr. Halfdan Mahler, director general of the World Health Organization, said in an interview. "If there was a will to do it, we could end this problem."

The conference, sponsored by the U.S. Agency for International Development, was to attempt to find better ways to teach people how to use a 20-year-old solution that experts say could reverse a condition that kills 5 million children a year.

The treatment is called oral rehydration therapy and involves giving diarrhea victims a solution of salts, sugar and water prepared at home. The solution replaces water and vital chemicals drained from the body by runny bowel movements and prevents death from dehydration, the loss of body fluids, experts say.

The simple treatment, developed in the 1960s in Bangladesh, is being used effectively in several developing countries but has not reached many who need it, experts say.

"You lose fluid in diarrhea because germs cause secretions that block the absorption of salts," Greenough told a news briefing.

Heretical economist has formula for prosperity

By ARELO SEDERBERG
Hearst Feature Service

At times it's been downright messy, the economy of this democracy called the United States — bound by big government, suffering from massive federal deficits, overtaxed and debt-burdened, coping with bouts of inflation and recession — yet there is hope for smooth prosperity if our leaders could grasp a few basic laws of economics.

That seems to sum up the views of Nobel Prize-winning economist Dr. Milton Friedman, who expressed them to me in a wide-ranging interview on the Financial News Network. He is a man of small size, but of large mind. Call him what you wish. Conservative. Doctrinaire. Opinionated. But it is difficult not to listen to him. At 70, he is as sharp as ever; there is gusto in his movements and a sparkle in his eyes.

HERE ARE SOME of the bold free market heresies he advocates:

— Eliminate the Federal Reserve Board. Replace it with a computer that could provide reliable money supply statistics.

That comment may be slightly tongue-in-cheek, but Friedman is totally serious when he proposes that the Fed become part of the Treasury. It has too much power to remain independent, he believes.

— Throw out all import tariffs, creating absolute free trade.

— Strike minimum wage laws from the books.

Friedman: "Why should it be illegal if you want to hire me at a certain wage and I agree? And why should it be illegal to hire a person who doesn't have the skill to earn the minimum wage?"

— Legalize drugs.

"Crime is a major problem, and half is attributable to drugs," he says. "Keeping drugs illegal doesn't prevent their use. People commit crimes to get money to pay for drugs, which are very expensive in an illegal market. Aside from the moral issue, strictly as an economics issue, they should be legalized."

— Vote in a flat tax on individual income and eliminate the corporate tax, which is merely passed on to customers.

FRIEDMAN fathered the "Chicago School" of economics, winning the Nobel Prize in 1975 for his work on monetarism. He's now a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution at Stanford. Pure monetarism holds that money supply — total spendable funds — and inflation go hand in hand, that if the quantity of money exceeds economic growth, inflation inevitably will result. So you control inflation by controlling money. Friedman calls that a basic law.

If it's so easy, why isn't it done? Because, Friedman answers, the cure is simple to state but difficult to implement. It's a matter of generating the political will to do it, often at great disruptive pain.

The Fed changed policy in October of 1979, braking money and letting interest rates rise. It resulted in less inflation, but severe economic distress. That wasn't too popular; hate mail flooded the Fed. Last year, under charges it was creating a depression, the Fed loosened money. Interest rates declined; the economy now is picking up.

But Friedman argues that policy really wasn't changed in 1979; it was not pure monetarism, but merely a mechanism to stop the flight of the dollar into stronger currencies.

"The objective was excellent, but it was almost entirely words," he says. "From October of 1979 to July of 1982, we saw the most volatile movements in money supply in history. Remember that a six-foot man can drown in a stream that averages five feet deep."

Friedman always is quick to note that the Fed has the power to create money, something few understand. Budget deficits can be financed by buying Treasury bonds and crediting bank accounts. Poof! New money is born. It seems like a free lunch. But it is not. Since created money is inflationary, everyone pays.

Friedman: "Why do I say I don't like the Federal Reserve System? Because here are 12 or 19 people, depending upon how you count them, who sit around a table and have the complete power to determine if there will be twice as much money or half as much."

HE IS ONLY winding up. "I don't know of an organization that has such a high reputation and such a terrible record. It doesn't matter if the chairman is Martin or Burns or Miller or Volcker. In all its 70 years, its record has remained terrible. It caused more inflation than necessary in World War I (and WW II) and was responsible for the severity of the Depression.

"Its big problem is that it has no bottom line. It doesn't have to go to Congress for its budget; it merely prints money. Congress lets it go because it has a scapegoat and a whipping boy for economic failure. I say end its independence, make it a part of the Treasury."

Now money supply again is exploding, up some 15 percent since December. Friedman is confident tha a tightening is coming. That, however, could lead to abortion of the economic recovery.

It sounds like a huge dilemma, and perhaps is; Friedman hasn't a pure answer, but a suggestion. Let free markets work. Turn back to 1776 and Adam Smith's insights. Self-interest is paramount, sure, but that is only natural.

"If you pursue your own interest, led by the 'invisible hand,' the public interest will also be looked after," Friedman says. "That's what Adams Smith preached. It produced the miracle of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, in which you had a greater improvement in the well-being of the ordinary person in one part of the world than you ever had in history before. And the failure to follow the principle accounts for the misery and degradation in countries like India, Russia, Poland — and so on."

ONE NEED ONLY stroll through the workshops of the master coach builders of London, Mulliner Park Ward, to realize that here the notion of mass production is an unwelcome one, indeed. For it is in this venerable institution that one quickly learns that the Rolls-Royce Corniche is a motor car crafted entirely by hand.

On an assembly line that barely inches along, you will find a master craftsman laboring for five days just to build the frame of the convertible top.

You will also learn that the lining of the top will be hand cut, using only pure West of England wool. And requiring a full two weeks for completion.

The walnut for the interior is specially selected by Rolls-Royce in the veneer markets of Milan. Back in London, the master woodsman begins to cut with knife and straight edge. He creates patterns which no two cars will ever share. In fact, veneer patterns are recorded in the car's history book. This total process takes four weeks.

The upholstery, even the carpet bindings, are trimmed in choice Connally hide. In a Rolls-Royce there are 260 square feet of this fine quality leather, hand-sewn and hand-tailored by over 40 skilled coach trimmers. The passenger compartment takes the better part of one month to complete.

Of course, like anything crafted by hand you will find each Corniche has its own unique personality. In fact, each Corniche has two signatures attesting to its individuality: the famous double R insignia and the engraved initials of the craftsman who made the classic Rolls-Royce grille.

Yet, while each Corniche is a tribute to the art and craft of coach building, let us hasten to add it is first and foremost a Rolls-Royce. Which means there is equal attention devoted to engineering and technological advancement. That the odometer reads to 999,999 miles gives quiet testimony to that fact. But perhaps the fact that, of the 86,000 Rolls-Royce motor cars built since 1906, over half are still on the road speaks even more eloquently.

The Corniche Convertible. It certainly isn't within the reach of most people. But with the strength of the U.S. dollar in relation to the British pound, there has never been a better time to purchase one. Or two.

ROLLS ROYCE

IT TAKES AT LEAST 5 MONTHS TO BUILD A CORNICHE CONVERTIBLE, AND NO TWO OF THEM ARE EXACTLY ALIKE.

Suspense films to be at museum

The first film in the Museum of the Southwest's four-part "Suspense and Intrigue" festival will be shown today at 7:30 p.m. at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium.

Shown tonight will be the 1952 release "Five Fingers," starring James Mason as one of the most famous spies in history who must elude the police in three countries when the Germans began to doubt the authenticity of his information.

The festival continues June 16 at 7:30 p.m. with the 1966 release "The Spy Who Came in From the Cold," written by John Le Carre, starring Richard Burton as a British intelligence agent.

The last two films are on June 23 with the 1951 release "The Big Carnival," starring Kirk Douglas as a New York reporter who deliberately delays rescue operations for a man trapped in a New Mexico cave so that his newspaper will gain national recognition; and on June 30 with the 1975 release "Picnic at Hanging Rock," directed by Australian Peter Weir.

All films will be shown at 7:30 p.m. at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. Suggested donation is $1. For more information call the museum, 683-2882.

Pickwick Players tryouts slated

Auditions for new members of Pickwick Players, Midland Community Theatre's youth performing group, will be held Monday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Theatre II at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Any student between the ages of 12 and 18 may audition by preparing a one minute monologue from a play, poem or story. In addition, a movement exercise and group sing will be included in the tryouts.

The Pickwicks will perform two summer productions — "Dirty Work at the Crossroads" and "Snoopy." "Dirty Work," a mini melodrama, will be staged at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave., two consecutive weekends, July 16-17 and 23-24. "Snoopy," which has been performed recently on Broadway, will be staged Aug. 11, 12 and 13 in Theatre I at Theatre Midland.

For more information call Theatre Midland's business office, 682-2544.

Summertime Girls tryouts slated

Tryouts for the Summer Mummers' Summertime Girls will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

Twenty-one to 28 young women will be chosen to introduce Summer Mummers, assist in seating guests at the Yucca and sell hats, flags and other novelties.

During tryouts auditioners will be expected to read the Mummers' introduction number, to show the ability to be heard in a theater production and to demonstrate a desire to work with people and convey the spirit of fun that is a part of Mummers.

Although this summer's production, "Ripsnorting on the Roaring Fork," will run every Thursday, Friday and Saturday from July 1 to Sept. 3, Summertime Girls will have an alternating schedule and work every third or fourth performance.

Burns covers lot of material in 'How to Live to be 100'

ENTERTAINMENT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — George Burns, who has an Oscar, a few millions, beautiful young dates and almost everything else an 86-year-old would want, now has a best selling book.

It's called "How to Live to Be 100 — or More: The Ultimate Diet, Sex and Exercise Book," and that covers a lot of territory. Burns has been hustling the book on talk shows all over, and the results have paid off. He came to lunch with exciting news: his book had reached No. 15 on The New York Times bestseller list.

"This is my fourth book," he said proudly. "Not bad for a guy who has read two."

"How to Live to be 100" is not likely to be among the contenders for the Pulitzer Prize. It reads like an extended Burns monologue. Even the chapter headings fit the pattern:

"Sex Can Be Fun After 80, After 90, After 100, and After Lunch"..."Relatives Can Be Nice — If They're Not Yours"..."Stay Away from Funerals, Especially Yours."

Burns had just returned from a four-night appearance in Las Vegas, and he seemed the best possible advertisement for the book. As he consumed his ritual luncheon of Bloody Mary and soup, he talked about the literary life.

"Of course I had to lie a little in the book," he confessed. "I made up the beginning and the end. Nobody believes the middle part, anyway."

About the TV appearances: "I never prepare. Because if you do prepare material, you don't listen. It's better to listen, and something good is bound to come up. Like at the Phil Donahue Show. A lady asked me if it was true that I only went out with young girls. I said, 'Not necessarily — what are you doing tonight?' Big laugh."

Burns was eating in the main dining room of the Hillcrest Country Club. Gone are the days when he used to share the comedians' round table in the men's grill.

"They're all upstairs," he said matter-of-factly. "All of them gone — Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Jack Benny, George Jessel, Lou Holtz, Groucho Marx, Harpo Marx."

It was a legendary time, when the wisecracks at the lunch table circulated Hollywood by late afternoon. The funniest of the Hillcrest jesters?

"Jessel," Burns replied. "He had a rare and original humor. I don't know why he never made it big as a comedian. Maybe he tried to be too many things: general, producer, actor, writer, lover."

George Burns has no intention of joining the upstairs table: "I can't afford to die; I'd lose too much money."

On his future list are appearances in Washington, D.C., Indiana and Lake Tahoe, a movie and a television special celebrating his 80 years in show business.

Alexander plays Calamity Jane

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jane Alexander, who played Eleanor Roosevelt in the two "Eleanor and Franklin" programs, will star as Calamity Jane, the colorful Western heroine, in a television movie for CBS.

Calamity Jane, whose real name was Martha Jane Canary, dressed like a frontiersman, was an expert horsewoman and shot, scouted for the cavalry and became a heroine when smallpox struck Deadwood, S.D., in 1878. She supposedly got her nickname because she told men that to offend her was to court calamity.

Frederic Forrest will play Wild Bill Hickock, who had a love affair with Calamity Jane, and David Hemmings as Jim O'Neill, who adopted her daughter.

Morgan plays homicide cop again in 'Sparkling Cyanide'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Returned from the Korean War, Harry Morgan is back on the cop beat — temporarily.

The trustworthy Col. Potter of "M*A*S*H" is working the streets of Los Angeles as a homicide lieutenant in "Sparkling Cyanide," a CBS movie based on an Agatha Christie story. Also in the cast: Anthony Andrews ("Brideshead Revisited," "Danger UXB," "The Scarlet Pimpernel"), Deborah Raffin, Pamela Bellwood ("Dynasty") and Nancy Marchand ("Lou Grant").

The other day, Andrews, playing a British journalist, and Morgan were investigating a murder in a midtown apartment building. It was a cinch for Morgan. Didn't he spend four seasons as Jack Webb's sidekick on the second series of "Dragnet"?

"Sparkling Cyanide," which will appear next season, is Morgan's first role after the grand finale of "M*A*S*H." The cop part turns out to be merely an interlude, since he will resume the guise of Col. Potter in a CBS series, "After M*A*S*H," due in the fall.

During a break in filming, Morgan explained that the roots of the sequel series date more than a year ago. While Alan Alda was busy editing, the rest of the cast took a lunchtime vote on whether they wanted to quit after the 10th season. The result: Loretta Swit, Mike Farrell, David Ogden Stiers for quitting; Morgan, Jamie Farr and William Christopher for continuing.

"When Alan came in and learned what we had done, he was furious," Morgan recalled. "'I thought I have made it perfectly clear: I do not want to do another season,' he insisted. The upshot was that we did an 11th season."

Morgan, veteran of eight series including "December Bride" and "Kentucky Jones," wasn't ready to quit. As "M*A*S*H" came to a conclusion with its 2½-hour movie, he and Farr (Cpl. Klinger) discussed a series together.

"I don't care about the money," Morgan cracked, "I'm just interested in the perks. I'll do a series if I am picked up by a limo, work only until 4, and the show is shot in Hawaii."

At first they discussed playing detectives. Then came the notion: why not continue their "M*A*S*H" roles at a veterans hospital in Hawaii. They made the suggestion to "M*A*S*H" producer Burt Metcalf. He took a long shot and solicited Larry Gelbart, who helped originate the series but had gone on to feature-film writing ("Tootsie").

Gelbart agreed to join the new series, and CBS jumped at it, sans pilot. William Christopher returns as Father Mulcahy and Rosalind Chao as Klinger's new wife. The setting is a Veterans Administration hospital in the fictional town of River Bend, Mo.

"This series has endless possibilties," said Morgan. "In the 1950s, the hospital could have veterans of the Spanish-American War, as well as World War I and II. 'M*A*S*H' ran out of stories, that's why Alan quit. 'After M*A*S*H' could go on for 50 years."

Lennon, Ono film planned

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The 15-year creative and romantic relationship between former Beatle John Lennon and his wife, Yoko Ono, will be traced in a three-hour television movie produced by Johnny Carson's Carson Productions.

Carson Productions president John J. McMahon says he acquired exclusive rights to the Lennon-Ono story from Ms. Ono over the Memorial Day weekend.

Typecasting doesn't worry Fisher

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Carrie Fisher isn't worried about being typecast as a princess despite the three times she's done Princess Leia in the "Star Wars" trilogy.

"Look," she says, laughing, "if I'm perceived as a princess then I could go on playing them...Princess Anne, Princess Di..."

Miss Fisher said when she began with "Star Wars," creator George Lucas told her to speak up if she found anything uncomfortable. "But on the first movie I never said a word," she said. "I felt I had to keep quiet so he wouldn't realize he'd made a mistake in hiring me."

After that came "The Empire Strikes Back" and the latest, "Return of the Jedi."

"By the third movie I spoke up," she said. "And I can see now the progression in the films. In the first two, Leia is angry, strong.

The first two are about getting the characters' relationships down. In 'Jedi,' finally, we are in sync."

Mayor-elect wants quick buyout of town

EUREKA, Mo. (AP) — Times Beach Mayor-elect Marilyn Leistner says she hopes her landslide election will encourage federal officials to proceed quickly with the buyout of this dioxin-tainted town.

"With the victory today, we can expect the buyout without any more hangups," Mrs. Leistner said at a celebration Tuesday night. "The people can start pulling their lives together again as soon as possible."

In St. Louis on Tuesday, federal officials gave their final approval to the long-awaited buyout program.

Mrs. Leistner, who favors mandatory participation in the federal plan, received 312 votes Tuesday, or 93 percent of the ballots cast. Her opponent Willow Johnson, who maintains the buyout should be voluntary, got 25 votes.

"What I believe in hasn't changed at all," Mrs. Johnson said afterward.

Two candidates elected to the Board of Aldermen also favored the buyout. They defeated a slate of residents who are still living in the town despite federal warnings that it might be dangerous to their health.

Only about 40 people remain in the Times Beach, located about 25 miles southwest of St. Louis, which once had a population of about 2,400. The election was held in Eureka, a town nearby.

Gov. Christopher Bond and officials from the Federal Emergency Management Agency earlier Tuesday explained terms of the dioxin buyout plan.

The complex agreement — which Bond characterized as "cutting your way through a forest with a pocket knife" — covers the purchase of all homes and businesses in Times Beach.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has allocated $33 million to be distributed by FEMA for the buyout. The state has agreed to pay $3.3 million.

Terms of the agreement call for Times Beach to take temporary title to property as it is purhased by the government, and turn over titles to the state once all the parcels are bought.

The process of assessing property values could begin in two to four weeks, according to Pat Breheny, regional supervisor for FEMA.

'Controller fatigue potentially hazardous'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal aviation regulators should consider delaying plans to lift ceilings on airport traffic because fatigue among air traffic controllers is still a potential hazard, a transportation safety official says.

Nearly two years after a strike that resulted in the dismissal of many air traffic controllers, the most experienced employees of the busiest control towers routinely work six-day weeks, Jim Burnett, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board said Tuesday.

"We found for instance ... that a controller had not had two consecutive days off ... since January of this year," he said.

Briefing a House subcommittee on his agency's study of the air traffic control system, Burnett suggested working hours could be reduced if the FAA delays plans to allow more traffic at busy airports.

Traffic ceilings were imposed by the FAA after the Aug. 1981 strike that resulted in the dismissal of 11,500 controllers. Some ceilings have been lifted at a number of major airports and controls at all but four will be eliminated by November, FAA administrator J. Lynn Helms said.

Helms, disputed the safety board's report, saying the average work week is 41 hours and that any overtime is strictly voluntary.

"The controllers like it that way," Helms said, adding that if they were allowed, some would be willing to work up to 56 hours a week. He said the agency prohibits controllers from working more than 48 hours a week.

But under questioning by the Public Works and Transportation investigations subcommittee, Helms acknowledged that the average work week is about 44 hours in very busy facilities.

Aid for desegregation proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal aid for desegregation will once again be provided to school districts through a special fund if legislation passed by the House becomes law.

The measure setting up the fund was approved Tuesday in a 299-120 vote over the strong opposition of the Reagan administration. Similar legislation is pending in the Senate.

The bill "will send a signal across the land that the Congress remains committed to desegregation and will keep the promise made to many school districts who were abruptly cut off from funds during multiyear programs," said Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y.

The fund went out of existence as a separate entity in 1981 when it was blended with 28 other education programs into a block grant. At the same time, funding for the entire package was cut.

With states and local school districts given discretion over how the block grant should be spent, desegregation often took a back seat to other educational priorities, according to proponents of the bill.

Some cities lost as much as 87 percent of their previous funding for desegregation, said Rep. William F. Goodling, R-Pa.

The legislation would set up a single national competitive grant program administered by the secretary of education under the Emergency School Aid Act. School districts needing assistance for desegregation programs could apply for grants, said Rep. Dale E. Kildee, D-Mich.

The money could not go toward busing, but could be used for staff training, community relations, development of new curriculum or extracurricular activities, and operation of magnet schools. The bill authorizes $100 million in 1984 and such sums as may be necessary in 1985 and 1986.

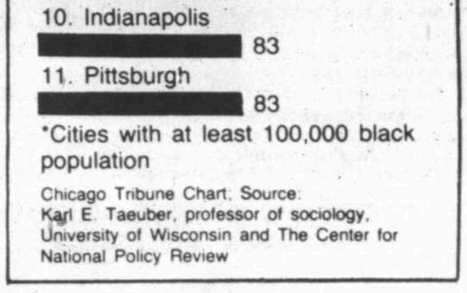

Opponents said a desegregation emergency no longer exists and Congress did not intend to provide long-term assistance to districts implementing older desegregation plans.

They also claimed that funds provided under the original emergency act were used, not for desegregation, but for such purposes as compensatory education and activities designed to reduce suspensions, absenteeism, and other discipline problems.

New tamper-resistant bottles taken off market

WASHINGTON (AP) — New tamper-resistant bottles for adult Tylenol and Sine-aid tablets have been taken off the market because it is too easy for children to open them, the Consumer Product Safety Commission says.

McNeil Consumer Products Co. of Fort Washington, Pa., voluntarily suspended production and shipment of the 24-tablet bottles after tests showed the "new packaging made it easier for some children to remove the caps," the commission said Tuesday.

Officials of the drug company, a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson Corp., told the commission the cap would be modified to improve child resistance, the commission said.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Hypertension can occur at any age

Dear Dr. Solomon: I heard a doctor say that high blood pressure is very common among older people. But can't anyone have it? — Mrs. E.L., Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Mrs. L.: Hypertension can occur in individuals of any age, but it is more common among older people. In fact, 50 percent of all Americans who are at least 65 years of age have high blood pressure.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My children used to suffer from inflammation of the ear when they were younger, but I was told that this was common in children. Now my husband has the same kind of problem. At first he thought he was losing his hearing until the doctor found out what the real trouble was. Do many adults have this problem? — Mrs. A.L., Chicago

Dear Mrs. L.: You seem to be referring to a condition known as serous otitis media, which is fairly common in children. It refers to an accumulation of fluid in the middle ear as a result of infection or enlarged adenoids, among other reasons. The condition can lead to hearing loss. Adults may also develop otitis media with hearing loss. One problem is that the hearing loss in adults may be mistakenly attributed to the aging process, and the real problem may therefore be overlooked. What these patients require, however, is medical or surgical treatment, not a hearing aid.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My teen-age son has practically no vision in one eye and the doctor has told him not to play football becuase he might injure the good eye. My son is ready to follow the doctor's advice, but he asked me to write to you. Do you have any suggestions about his athletic activities? — Mrs. J.E., Staten Island, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. E.: Most people are able to get along with only one good eye. If that eye is injured, however, the person's vision obviously will be gone. Therefore, prevention becomes particularly important.

Drs. Seymour H. Perlstein and Gary S. Chubak, attending physicians at the Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York City, suggest a common-sense approach. Eyeglasses with plastic lenses or safety glasses should be used to prevent injury from an external source. The use of contact lenses is discouraged because they offer little or nor protection against trauma.

Contact sports, such as football and boxing, should be avoided since they can result in injury to the good eye. Even noncontact sports, such as tennis, involve some risk since the ball travels at high speeds. Your son should wear safety goggles if he takes part in such sports.

For Jim, Staten Island, N.Y.: There are two types of hearing loss. conductive hearing loss involves a problem with the outer or middle ear. The condition can be corrected in most cases. Sensorineural hearing loss refers to an impairment of the inner ear. The hearing loss in patients with this condition is usually permanent.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

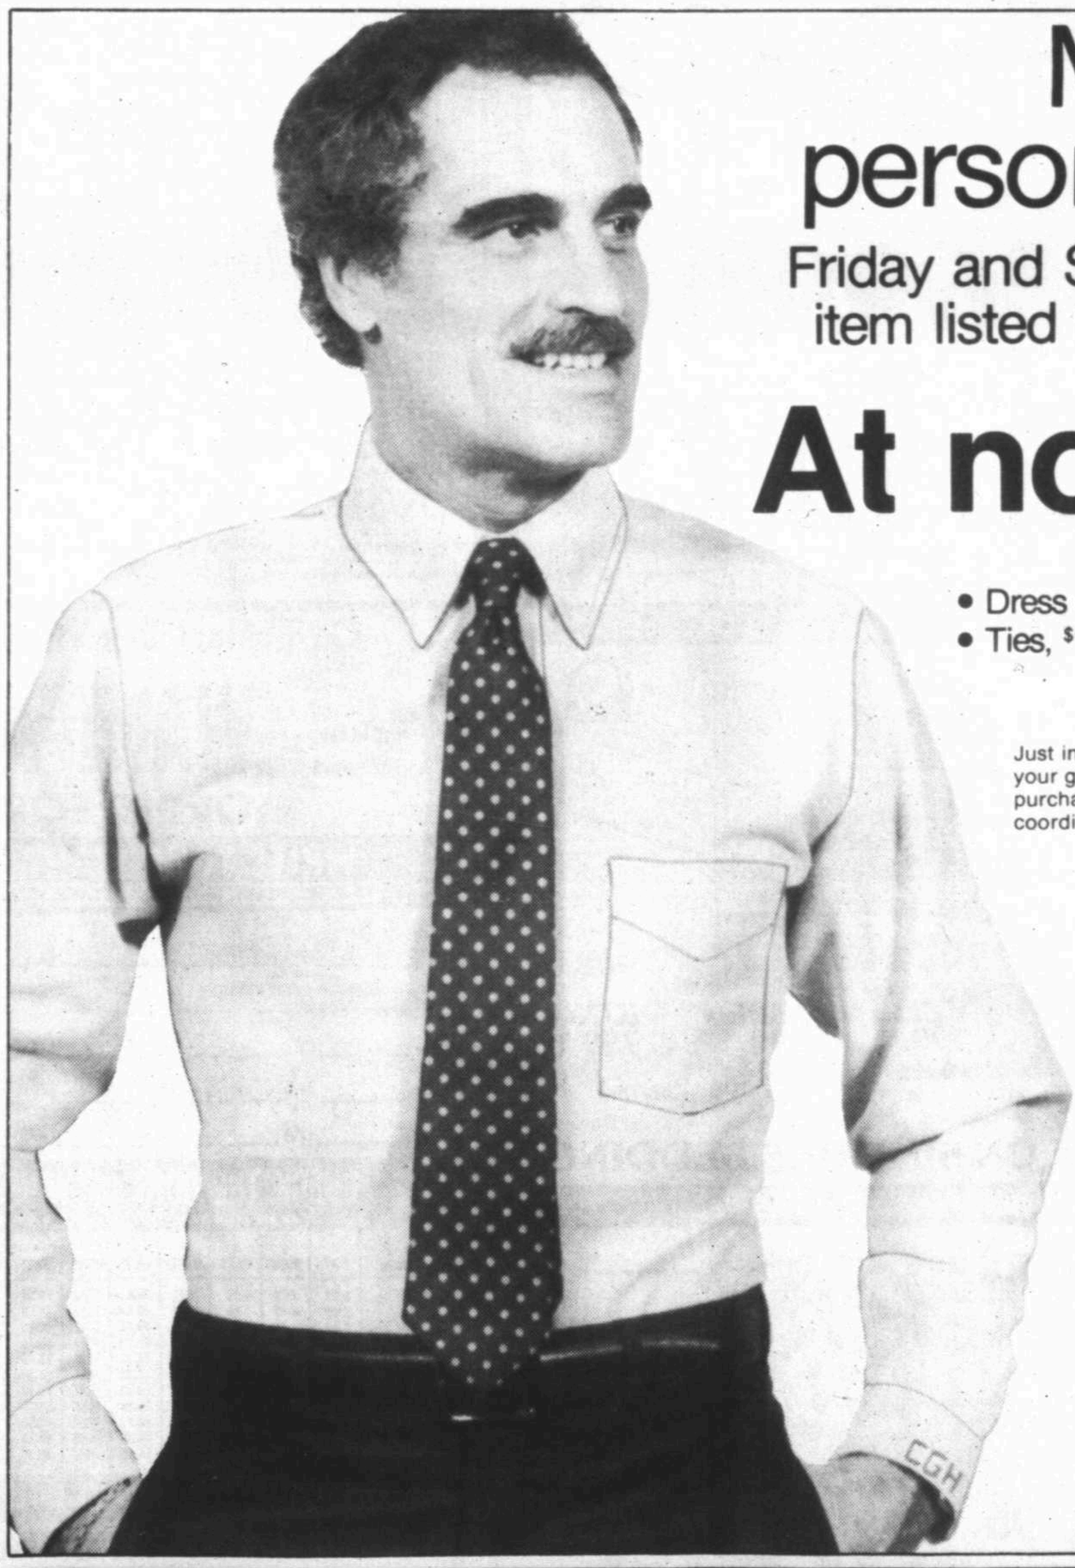

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it safe to use a diaphragm without also using the jelly? — Amy, Austin, Texas

Dear Amy: By "safe" I assume you are asking whether the use of a diaphragm without a spermicidal jelly would provide contraceptive protection. The answer is that the diaphragm would provide some protecton but not as much as if the jelly were also used.

According to Dr. Louise B. Tyrer, of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, a woman should not depend on the diaphragm alone for contraception.

The diaphragm has a fairly high failure rate, about 13 percent during the first year. However the results of a study of highly motivated and closely monitored diaphragm users showed a failure rate of only two percent. This suggests that the diaphragm can be an effective means of contraception when it is used properly.

Prisoner release sought

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Amin Gemayel is pressing for the release of thousands of Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners in an Israeli detention camp, where a rebellion is in its fourth day, state media reported today.

Prisoners in Ansar camp in southern Lebanon burned tents and shouted slogans denouncing their captors, Beirut radio stations and newspapers said. Israeli guards used loudspeakers to appeal for calm Wednesday, telling the estimated 5,000 inmates that negotiations on a prisoner exhange were nearly completed.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has been demanding the release of the Ansar prisoners — most of them Palestinian — in exchange for eight Israelis soldiers the PLO captured during last summer's war in Lebanon.

Cousteau boosts boat

PARIS (AP) — A few days shy of his 73rd birthday, Jacques Cousteau shows no signs mf running out of energy while he tries to reduce the amount the rest of us use.

The Oscar-winning filmmaker, undersea explorer and co-inventor of the aqualung flew in from the Amazon Basin for a news conference today to promote his latest innovation — a wind-powered boat with no sails. The boat uses a 12 horsepower fan to produce the same speeds generated by a 1,500 horsepower diesel engine.

He received more than $1 million from the French government for his wind ship but unhesitatingly describes the Socialists' environmental policy as "terrible."

Volcano sweep slated

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The army was assembling troops today for a sweep of guerrilla strongholds on a volcano east of the capital, military sources said.

Sources in San Vicente, 37 miles east of San Salvador, said as many as 5,000 troops were being gathered to attack rebel positions on Chichontepec volcano, just southwest of the city of San Vicente.

Numerous volcanoes are scattered through El Salvador's rugged landscape and several have become favorite guerrilla hideouts that are frequent targets of army sweeps.

Guatemala wages fight

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Fighting chronic guerrilla insurgency of its own, Guatemala's military government is trying to keep a distance from the wars and border tensions that plague other Central American nations.

However, opposition politicians and others say the country cannot escape political repercussions from the Central American strife.

The most serious impact of the regional turmoil has been to disrupt Guatemalan industry, built on exports to other Central American countries that can no longer afford to buy them.

Hunger strike ends

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Political dissident Kim Young-sam said today he ended his 23-day hunger strike because of pleas from supporters and relatives but he vowed to continue to work for democratic reforms.

Kim, 55, head of the now defunct New Democratic Party, lay motionless and feeble in his hospital bed with his eyes shut while his chief secretary read a statement to reporters.

Kim, once a leading presidential contender, charged that there had been a "conspiracy" by government authorities to bring an end to his fast.

Irish tanker bombed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Terrorists today blew up a gasoline tanker outside a police station in predominantly Catholic west Belfast, shortly after polls opened for the British general elections, police reported.

A press officer at Belfast police headquarters said no one was injured in the explosion outside the Woodburn station but the building was extensively damaged.

A bomb ignited the gasoline, sending a huge cloud of black smoke over west Belfast. The tanker had been driven close to the security fence surrounding the police station and no warning was given before the blast, the officer said.

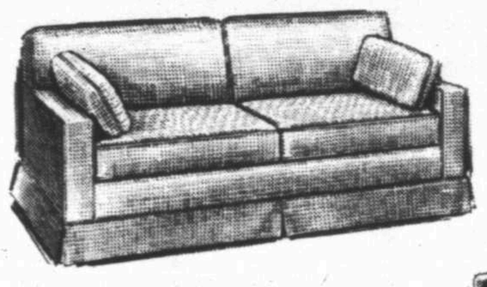

Catholic clubs reinstated

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government has reinstated 15 Roman Catholic intellectual clubs but at the same time criticized priests who use their pulpits for attacks on Poland's political system.

The government minister for religious affairs, Adam Lopatka, issued a sharp warning to priests Wednesday not to criticize Poland or Warsaw Pact countries in their sermons.
