Congress pushing ahead with new pay hike plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Armed with an endorsement from President Bush and a fast-track schedule, Democratic and Republican leaders smell victory for their plan to raise House salaries above $120,000 in just over a year and to tighten ethics rules.

"I believe that ... it will receive a strong majority in the Congress from both parties," said House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash. He set a vote for today with no amendments allowed.

"This is truly an ethics package," said House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., citing a series of reforms that would accompany the salary increases spread over the next 14 months.

The plan does not include a raise for the Senate, where Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said lawmakers might go for a more gradual pay plan and elimination of honoraria.

Under the plan, House members, federal judges and top executive branch officials would receive 7.9 percent in cost of living raises by January, making up for inflation since the last congressional pay raise in early 1987.

On Jan. 1, 1990, those officials would receive another as-yet-undetermined cost of living increase - whatever rank and file civil servants are given then - plus a 25 percent pay boost. At that time, new rules would require House members to stop pocketing money from speeches and limit other outside earned income to 15 percent of their congressional salaries.

The total pay increase would be about 35 percent if there was no 1991 cost of living raise. If it followed the pattern of the previous two years - 4.1 percent and 3.6 percent - the pay raise would be closer to 40 percent with salaries reaching about $125,000.

The long-awaited package was unveiled Wednesday by the joint House leadership just as Bush was sending a letter to Capitol Hill giving it his blessing.

"In my view, the bill would effect a tremendous change in the landscape of government ethics standards," the president said.

Leaders will approve the raises for the House and other officials, although that scenario would repeat a situation that existed seven years ago when, for about six months, the House was paid more than the Senate.

That prospect is less than attractive to many senators, and there appeared this week to be growing support for the House plan. However, Senate rules make it possible for even a single senator to block the majority will, especially with Congress trying to end its session before Thanksgiving.

The House plan was worked out in close consultation with the White House, which has been desperately seeking to raise salaries for federal judges and top agency officials.

President Reagan, as he left office in January, proposed a 51 percent pay raise for Congress and the other officials but Congress was forced to kill it after a storm of public protest.

Wednesday's letter of support from the president was crucial not only for GOP support but for Democrats, who will use it to inoculate themselves from Republican attacks in next year's elections.

Adopted for Smokeout

Gayla Kimball (second from left), a Hereford High School teacher, has been adopted by Priscilla Villarreal, Cynamin Brown and here Hema Gajiwala of the Hereford Keywanettes for the Great American Smokeout on Thursday. The Keywanettes have also adopted had football coach Don Cumpton and County Judge Tom Simons, and have promised to adopt others. The Smokeout is designed to encourage tobacco users to give up the habit for a day in hopes of giving up smoking for good.

Hobby, Parker joust on worker's comp bill

AUSTIN (AP) - Sen. Carl Parker continued to verbally jab Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, saying Hobby has done a complete reversal on the issue of reforming the workers' compensation insurance system.

"I don't know why our leader has had such a change of heart, other than he got more heat at the country club than he could stand," Parker, D-Port Arthur, said Wednesday.

But Hobby defended his measure, saying it had tougher job-safety provisions and would cost less to the system than a bill by Parker and Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

The Parker-Caperton proposal is preferred by labor and trial lawyers, who represent injured workers in disputed compensation cases.

Hobby's proposal to overhaul the system of compensating workers who are injured on the job was to be considered today by the Senate Economic Development Committee.

Major differences between the Hobby plan and the Caperton-Parker proposal center on how benefits are calculated and how disputed claims are resolved.

Hobby's proposal establishes a schedule of awards for certain injuries, regardless of how that injury affects different workers. It also places strict limits on jury trials in such cases.

The Caperton-Parker measure ties benefits to lost wage-earning capacity and does not restrict jury trials to the extent that Hobby's bill does.

Lawmakers are meeting in special legislative session to overhaul the comp system, which is designed to compensate workers injured on the job, but has been criticized for high employer costs and meager benefits to employees.

In another development, state Sen. Ted Lyon filed a bill that he said would reduce insurance rates for employers by as much as 45 percent.

"My bill lowers costs by eliminating self-insurance, something none of the other bills do," Lyon, D-Rockwall, said.

In a letter to Hobby, the State Board of Insurance said if large employers are allowed to self-insure, a significant number will pull out of the insurance system, which could result in increased rates for other businesses.

4-H to hold clinic Saturday

Deaf Smith County 4-H clubs will hold a livestock clinic at 9 a.m. Saturday at the Hereford High School Agricultural Science Project Center located east of the Bull Barn.

At the clinic, hoes will be weighed and measured, and adjustments in the feeding program will be made.

All lambs and hogs will be weighed and evaluated and recommendations for changes in feeding programs will be made.

Information will be given for completion of project record forms. Project record forms will be required for all 4-H'ers entering the Hereford Livestock Show.

Smokeout's founder pleased with efforts

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - A campaign celebrated today that has helped millions of Americans quit smoking had its origins 15 years ago when a small-town newspaper publisher printed the names of his neighbors who went cold turkey for a day.

Today's Great American Smokeout stems from an idea by Lynn Smith, former publisher of the weekly Monticello Times.

"People said you couldn't get people to stop," said Smith, founder of "Don't Smoke Day," which was held Jan. 7, 1974, in this Mississippi River town 40 miles northwest of Minneapolis. "I was ridiculed."

Smith persuaded 291 of the town's 2,300 residents to quit smoking for one day. He said he put their names in print "so they were on the record."

Three years later, the American Cancer Society began the Great American Smokeout. Held the third Thursday of November, the society hopes this year that 10 million smokers will give up their cigarettes for at least 24 hours.

Nearly three of every 10 Americans smoke, according to Adele Parone, a spokeswoman for the cancer society. That's down from the 37 percent who smoked in 1974, the year of Smith's first "D-Day."

Smith, 69, continues to write a column in the Times. And he's still active in the campaign to end smoking.

He himself quit in 1954 after 19 years of smoking.

"I had no idea it would reach such proportions," Smith said of the Great American Smokeout. "I was surprised and gratified that an idea could grow to such extent."

Cancer society spokesman Curtis Allen, who quit smoking 10 years ago after a Smokeout, said the society's goal is to get 20 percent of the estimated 50 million smokers to kick the habit today.

Of those who tried quitting last year, more than 5.4 million abstained for the entire 24 hours, and 3.4 million stopped for at least one to three days, Allen said, citing numbers from a Gallup Poll commissioned by the society.

Smoking causes lung cancer, heart disease and respiratory disease. The surgeon general has warned of the potentially fatal risks of smoking and the addictive nature of nicotine, the active drug in cigarettes.

The Tobacco Institute, a Washington, D.C.-based lobbying group for the tobacco industry, said it will release a poll that it says shows smokers and non-smokers are more tolerant of each other than most people believe.

Tom Lauria, a spokesman for the institute, said the poll found that 73 percent of adults polled believe that smoking by adults is a personal matter and "nobody's business but their own."

Lauria said that 76 percent of those polled think there ought to be a place for people to smoke in every public place.

"We like the fact that (the poll) shows a fairness to both smokers and non-smokers," Lauria said.

The survey of 1,500 adults, conducted by the Washington, D.C., polling firm of Frederick-Schneiders, has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent, Lauria said.

Trio believed kidnapped okay

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - An American woman and two West Germans turned up in good health in Lebanon today, and family sources and West German authorities said the three claimed they had not been kidnapped.

A previously unknown group said Wednesday it had kidnapped the three.

One family source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the woman, Deborah Fahrend, 54, and the naturalized Germans - Mounir Shamseddin Sami, 39, who is born in Lebanon, and his son, Daniel, 7, born in Berlin - were planning to leave for Cyprus later in the day by ferry.

The source, insisting on anonymity, said the three "called from the West German Embassy in east Beirut to report that they were O.K." He would not give other details.

The family source quoted Sami as saying the three were "robbed by gunmen."

"He didn't say where they were robbed," the source added. He quoted Sami as saying the three were never kidnapped.

"It seems those who robbed them also took their passports, photocopied them and issued the claim hoping to make some money," the source said.

A Beirut police spokesman, who cannot be named in line with standing regulations, said: "It's a strange story. I don't believe that they were held against their will."

In Bonn, a West German government spokesman said the three insisted they were not abducted. "They showed up at the (West German Embassy in Beirut) saying they could not explain why it was reported they were kidnapped," said Foreign Ministry spokesman Rainer Mueller. He said the three went to the embassy this morning and were all in good health.

"They told the embassy they went there because they were upset about news reports of their kidnapping," said Mueller.

The kidnapping claim was made in a typewritten statement, in Arabic, by a group calling itself The Organization of Just Revenge. The statement was delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut with photocopies of the passports and visas of the three people.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater announced to reporters flying with President Bush to Houston today that the three had turned up.

"The West German government has informed us that the three people kidnapped in Beirut yesterday - two Germans and one U.S. citizen - are in the West German Embassy in Beirut.

All three are reported in good health. That's all we have. The cable just came to the president," Fitzwater said.

Ms. Fahrend, 54, is a nurse and sometime poet who had described herself as a "publisher-journalist." She reportedly had gone to war-torn Lebanon in hopes of writing a book.

It could not be immediately determined whether the three knew each other.

Eighteen foreigners are held in Lebanon, including eight Americans. Held longest is Terry A. Anderson, 42, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Most of the hostages are believed held by pro-Iranian factions.

ATLANTA (AP) - Hurry! Hurry! Hurry! Get your weight guessed, your fortune told, your arteries clogged, test your strength, win a stuffed animal, win two, one for the little lady, scare yourself witless on a G-force ride.

Welcome to the 71st trade show of the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions.

Despite all the glitz, bells and whistles at show one fact shines like a carnival spotlight: Most of what's new on the Midway has been there in various forms for a long, long time.

At this year's show, the industry's biggest with more than 600 exhibitors, nostalgia runs neck-and-neck with computerized fantasy for the carnival dollar.

Tom Collins of Niagara Falls, Ont., is selling a weight-guessing scale for $24,500. It's a reproduction of one at the Chicago's Century of Progress exposition, held 1933-34 along the downtown lakefront.

Weight-guessing has been a carnival staple since the 1890s, he said, and is one of the only carnival games the customer doesn't play.

"The guesser does the work," he said. "We think it's a good idea to dig out an old idea and redo it."

Carousels, too, agree that old is in. Tony Rae of the American Carousel Works of Diamond Bar, Calif., said the company's craftsmen still carve wooden horses. They don't come cheap: $4,400 for the standard carousel horse.

Intamin Service Corp.'s carousels, the brochure correctly notes, look 100 years old. They are replicas of the old steam carousels, and the horses are made from molds of the wooden originals.

Barbara Zaichick and her husband, Gerald of Miami, have automated the Gypsy fortune teller, but they said their artists were careful to keep the old theme.

She said the newer video attractions and other modernizations of the carnival trade "are getting tired."

Her coin-operated fortune machines are good at telling you what you want to hear.

"There is enough negative in the world," Mrs. Zaichick said.

One taker was pronounced to be cultured, reserved, realistic, ambitious, friendly, aesthetic, energetic, perceptive, individualistic, enterprising, affectionate, sophisticated, courageous, considerate, responsive, conventional, discriminating, self-composed, disciplined and tender-hearted with a keen foresight, quick mind and good memory.

All true, and all for 50 cents. Another machine offers a sex analysis.

Never mind.

An Italian firm is marketing "The Mouth of Truth," a replica of a Roman stone museum piece. Put your hand in the mouth, and it reads your hand and tells your future.

The Barker, the old-time pitchman and the sleazy looking ride operator didn't make this year's show.

But their horses did, and they have their checkbooks. About 10,000 people in the industry are registered. More than 150 million Americans will visit IAAPA member parks this year.

Trumpet theft among reports

The theft of a trumpet, valued at $480, is currently under investigation by the Hereford Police Department. A woman reported to police that the instrument was taken from Hereford Junior High School last week after her son took the trumpet to school.

Other incidents investigated by city police were:

Burglary of a business reported in the 200 block of North 25 Mile Ave. with a .22 caliber rifle stolen and damages to the building estimated at $250; a theft reported in the 200 block of West Park Ave.; a man filed charges against a juvenile male for making an obscene gesture; a report of someone shooting a cat with a BB gun in the 200 block of Elm; a juvenile truant with the case referred to juvenile authorities;

Charges of carrying a prohibited weapon were filed against a juvenile male for wearing a spiked glove; criminal mischief to a vehicle (damages valued at $175) reported near the Santa Fe depot; a disturbance at Hereford High School; burglary of a residence in the 200 block of Ave. H with a pellet gun valued at $50 taken in that theft; and a juvenile female filed charges against a man, 19, for threatening her in an incident at the high school.

City police issued five citations.

The Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office received one report from northwest of town in connection with an apparent case of child abuse.

Arrests made by city officers since Wednesday morning included a man, 43, for driving while intoxicated; a man, 19, for violation of probation, resisting arrest and assault on a police officer; and a woman, 23, arrested for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Warmer weather Friday

Tonight will be fair with a low of 25. East winds will be 5-15 mph. Friday will be sunny and warmer with a high of 62. Southeast winds will be 5-15 mph.

This morning's low at KPAN was 22 after a high Wednesday of 50.

City manager tells of regulation woes

State, federal regulations plague local landfill

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

Hereford City Manager Darwin McGill took aim at the slow strangulation inflicted by state and federal mandates on local governments while pinch-hitting as the guest speaker for the Hereford Rotary Club on Monday.

McGill was not asked to speak to the group until the morning of the meeting.

"The advantage at being called at 9:30 in the morning is that you don't have to prepare. You can shoot from the hip," McGill said.

"Regulations are killing us in municipal government," McGill said.

McGill dealt at length with new Environmental Protection Agency rules which are to go into effect next February. Hereford has already begun to feel the strain of increased environmental regulations.

Last September, the Texas Department of Health banned the city's use of an incinerator which had been used effectively in refuse treatment for nearly two decades. McGill estimated that the incinerator had decreased the bulk of garbage buried in the city landfill by 85 to 90 percent.

"They shut that down and that was a very frustrating situation for us," McGill said.

The city manager and Mayor Wes Fisher are both currently serving on an area task force which is attempting to deal with the forthcoming EPA regulations.

McGill quoted a state health official as saying that no city with a population under 50,000 will be able to afford to continue to have a landfill following the implementation of the new regulations. If that stands, about two-thirds of all Texas cities will be unable to maintain their own landfills.

"What's happening is that the only landfills you're going to have are large city and area landfills," McGill said.

The added expense will eventually mean an increase in fees charged by the city for handling refuse. McGill stated that within two or three years, rates will probably increase to three or four times their current level.

"It's going to be burdensome and extremely expensive," McGill said.

During the Rotary presentation, McGill mentioned the positive contributions by the D.A.R.E. program incorporated in the police department and by the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department.

"Have you all even thought about how much money our volunteer fire department saves the city of Hereford?" McGill asked.

The estimated cost of maintaining a very basic professional fire department would be better than a half million dollars per year. McGill reported that the city fire department made 55 runs during the month of October.

"Believe me, if it doesn't rain, we're going to run a lot more," McGill said.

Lighter moment

Strict low-salt diet may be harmful

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Salt, long believed a cause of high blood pressure, may have the opposite effect on some people on strict low-salt diets, a study says. But other doctors insist it's still better to keep your hands off the shaker.

Dr. Brent Egan, director of the hypertension unit at the Medical College of Wisconsin, said his study suggests that strictly limiting salt intake could be bad for people with normal blood pressure.

He said he believes that the American Heart Association's suggestion of limiting daily salt consumption to 7 grams, or about 1 1/2 teaspoons, is safe. But he said further study is necessary before more stringent rules are adopted for the general population.

"I think there are some people who are harmed by severe to moderate salt restriction, at least in the short term," said Egan, who based his findings on a diet experiment.

But, he cautioned, "I am not suggesting that the population should run out and shake salt on their food."

Egan presented his findings Wednesday at the heart association's annual meeting, where his conclusions were immediately questioned by other high blood pressure experts.

"I would challenge the notion that blood pressures went up because they went on low-salt diets," said Dr. Richard Grimm of the University of Minnesota. "It may just be the normal variation in blood pressure. We haven't seen anything like that in our studies."

An estimated 60 million Americans have high blood pressure. It is a major underlying cause of heart attacks and strokes.

Large population studies have clearly linked salt with blood pressure. They show that, in general, people's blood pressures rise as their salt intake increases.

Other factors associated with high blood pressure are obesity, low potassium consumption and heavy use of alcohol.

Public health experts have recommended that all Americans watch their salt intake, even though many people are not sensitive to the bad effects of salt. Some said they feared Egan's findings might make people think widely accepted dietary rules are potentially harmful.

"It would be a big mistake for us to say that the modest reduction of salt that the American Heart Association recommends would be detrimental to anyone's health," said Dr. Theodore Kotchen of West Virginia University.

In Egan's study, 27 men in their 30s went on alternating high-and-low-salt diets. During the low-salt phase, half of the men's blood pressures went down, and half rose.

Among those whose pressures went up, the researchers noticed that their levels of low-density lipoprotein, the so-called bad cholesterol, also increased, as did their levels of insulin and uric acid.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Nov. 16, the 320th day of 1989. There are 45 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 16, 1933, the United States and the Soviet Union established diplomatic relations. President Roosevelt sent a telegram to Soviet leader Maxim Litvinov in which he expressed hope that U.S.-Soviet relations would "forever remain normal and friendly."

On this date:

In 1776, British troops captured Fort Washington during the American Revolution.

In 1864, Union Gen. William T. Sherman and his troops began their "March to the Sea" during the Civil War.

In 1885, Canadian rebel Louis Riel was executed for high treason.

In 1889, playwright and director George S. Kaufman, who co-wrote plays such as "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "You Can't Take It with You," and "Stage Door," was born in Pittsburgh.

In 1907, Oklahoma became the 46th state in the union.

In 1959, the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "The Sound of Music" opened on Broadway, starring Mary Martin as Maria von Trapp.

In 1961, House Speaker Samuel T. Rayburn died in Bonham, Texas, having served as speaker since 1940 except for two terms.

In 1966, Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard was acquitted in his second trial of charges he'd murdered his pregnant wife, Marilyn, in 1954.

In 1973, Skylab III, carrying a crew of three American astronauts, was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on an 84-day mission.

In 1973, President Nixon signed the Alaska Pipeline measure into law. In 1981, actor William Holden, age 63, was found dead in his apartment in Santa Monica, Calif.

In 1982, an agreement was announced in the 57th day of a strike by National Football League players.

In 1982, the space shuttle "Columbia" glided to a smooth landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California, ending a five-day mission.

In 1983, a jury in Gretna, La., acquitted California feminist leader Ginny Foat of the murder of an Argentine businessman during a robbery outside New Orleans in 1965.

Ten years ago: Militant Iranians holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran threatened harsh action against the hostages if the United States sent the deposed shah to any country except Iran.

Five years ago: The space shuttle Discovery landed at Cape Canaveral, Fla., carrying the first two satellites ever salvaged from space.

One year ago: Voters in Pakistan cast ballots in their first open election in more than a decade, resulting in victory for populist candidate Benazir Bhutto.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Burgess Meredith is 81. Journalist Elizabeth Drew is 54. Actress Joanna Pettet is 45. Baseball player Dwight Gooden is 25. Actress Lisa Bonet is 22.

Thought for Today: "Satire is what closes Saturday night." -George S. Kaufman (1889-1961).

Neeper feted with shower

Jaime Leigh Neeper, Dec. 29 bride-elect of Lawrence Conrad Brorman, was honored with a bridal shower Saturday, Nov. 11, at the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum.

Guests were welcomed by the honoree; her mother, Grace Neeper of Parker, Ariz.; and the prospective bridegroom's mother, Margaret Brorman of Hereford.

Gail Thompson and Carol Moody served refreshments of assorted breads, tea rings and finger foods from a table centered with an arrangement of red roses and white carnations. Silver appointments further enhanced the table setting.

A set of stainless steel cookware was presented to Miss Neeper by hostesses: Denise Marnell, Joyce Schlabs, Joan Strafuss, JoAnn Jesko, Mary Zinser, Cheryl Betzen, Carmen Flood, Wilhelmine Fetsch, Toddy Flippo, Mary Schlabs, Donna Weaver, Leona Schilling, Barbara Franks, Wanda Huseman, Theresa Artho, Marian Yosten, Pattie Urbanczyk and Judy Detten.

New arrivals

Donald and Carla Vasek of Hereford are the parents of a daughter, Selena Jill, born Nov. 9, 1989, at High Plains Hospital. She weighed 9 lbs. and 2 ounces.

Her two sisters are Amber and Lindy and her brother is Byran.

Grandparents are Arnold and Doris Kuchler of Groom.

Herd set for finale with Demons

By SAM W. WALLER
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces may have wrapped up their fifth playoff spot in the 1980s, but they still have one more piece of business to take care of this week when they visit the Dumas Demons at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the regular season finale for both teams.

Herd coach Don Cumpton, whose team is 7-2 overall and 6-1 in District 1-4A, said the playoffs have not even been mentioned during this week's practice sessions.

"We haven't even talked about (the playoffs)," Cumpton said. "We're trying to get ready for Dumas."

"Dumas is a pretty good little ol' ball club. They beat Borger and they should have beat Frenship - they outplayed Frenship - and they beat Levelland. They've won some games. They've done a heckuva turnaround over last year."

Cumpton added that there did not seem to be any cases of the team overlooking the Demons, who sport a 3-5-1 season record and a 3-4 mark in district.

"I hope not," he said of the possibility of players looking ahead to the playoffs. "I can't say that for sure, but I certainly hope not."

"We've tried to explain to them that this game is important due to momentum and just the fact that we need to keep improving. You're going to either improve or go down, and we don't want to go down, we want to get a little better."

Dumas has been dependent on the pass-catch combo of quarterback Samuel Strayhorn and wide receiver Sammy Escarciga for their offensive production while the Demon defense had allowed as many as three touchdowns in only four games before being blown out, 42-0 last week by Estacado.

Hereford will counter with a pair of offensive threats that are beginning to gain state-wide notice. Tailback Matt Bromlow is 11th in Class 4A with 1196 yards rushing in only seven games and is averaging 6.43 yards per carry. Wide receiver Russell Backus is 12th in the state this week with 33 receptions for 619 yards and nine touchdowns. Most of Backus' catches have been on passes by Jason Walterscheid, who has completed 53 of 89 attempts for 847 yards and eight scores. Walterscheid has amassed most of his numbers since earning the starting job three weeks into the season.

The Herd defense has been anchored by linebacker Oscar Garcia, who has a team-high 85 tackles along with three fumble recoveries and three interceptions, both tops on the team. Defensive tackle Brian Wagner has 74 tackles, including 14 behind the line of scrimmage, while fellow DT Aaron Savage has 64 stops and 16 hurried passes and defensive end Mike Daniel has 58 tackles. Defensive end Burt Noland leads the Herd with six quarterback sacks.

Cumpton said the strengths of the Demons have been concentrated both on offense and defense.

"Offensively, obviously, is the throwing game," he said, "and defensively is the middle. The two defensive tackles (Scott Diercks and Tony Brandon) and the linebackers (Gary Platt and Billy Parker) have been excellent. They're big kids, the tackles are about 235 or 240. And they play good. The two linebackers run to the ball well."

The foursome, all seniors, represent most of the experience in the starting lineup for Dumas as nine juniors start on offense and five more on defense.

"They're playing a lot of juniors," Cumpton said. "That's their best class. Those kids, as they've come up through that program, have been a good ball club every year. It's probably the best class they have."

While the Demons may lack some experience, Cumpton said their size will pose a problem for the Herd.

"They're probably bigger than us overall," he said. "They've got good size. They've got several kids in the 220-225 range on the offensive line (all juniors except for tight end Larry Pirkle)."

The size range of the offensive line goes up dramatically, though, when 355-pound junior Santo Greenwood comes in.

Cumpton said the key to stopping the Demons will be to control their passing attack.

"They like to throw the ball," he said. That will definitely be the first thing we look for.

"Strayhorn is an excellent quarterback. He does a good job of moving in the pocket and is hard to sack."

"And, of course, his favorite receiver is Sammy Escarciga, who is excellent. He's right up at the top of the district in receptions. He's a big, tall kid, about 6-3, and he can catch the ball."

Cumpton added that the success of the Dumas throwing game is based on precision rather than out-running the defense.

"They don't have a lot of what I call blazing speed," he said, "but they have a very sophisticated passing game. They run a whole lot of crossing routes and your secondary people have to really be alert to pick up their man or zone, whatever they're playing."

Cumpton said the Herd will probably employ the nickel defense used to shut down Randall's passing threat three weeks ago.

"We'll be able to use it," he said. "In this kind of a deal, you can approach it one of two ways. You can say 'We're going to pressure the quarterback,' or 'We're going to try and cover the receivers.' Basically, what we're going to try and do is to mix it up and do a little bit of both."

One aspect of the Demons has been their ability to pull wins out at the end. Kicker Juan Lagos kicked a field goal with no time left in a 6-3 win over Levelland and Escarciga caught a touchdown pass with 40 seconds remaining to beat Borger, 20-17.

"They came from behind to win a couple," Cumpton said. "It seems like they play better when they're behind. They seem to be pretty resilient and can come back. They've been impressive."

Cumpton added, though, that the Demons offense is not geared to a hurry-up game should they be trailing by more than a touchdown late.

"They're pretty standard as far as the way they do it," he said. "But they run a lot of different routes and show you a lot of different formations with a lot of motion. You just have to be alert and pick all that stuff up."

The defense that has made the two comebacks possible will be something the Herd has seen before, Cumpton said.

"They run what we call a 4-2 look," he said. "It's very similar to our nickel defense, very similar. They do some of the same things we do, and they play an eight-man front out of it or a six-man front and they mix it up some."

Cumpton added that a lack of consistency has been the downfall of the Demons.

"They've kind of been sporadic. They gave up a lot to Estacado, obviously. They didn't have a good game against Estacado. They've played much, much better than that up to that point."

With all that in mind, Cumpton said the Herd attack will not vary much from what it has been this season.

"We are going to do, basically, just what we did last week," he said. "We'll do pretty much the same thing on offense. We've added a few things, like we do every week, to try to exploit some things where we feel they might be a little weaker. We just game-plan that week by week."

One thing Cumpton will do differently is hold starting guard Benny Gonzales, who has been plagued by a shoulder problem, out of the contest. Cumpton said the move will necessitate the shuffling of some players.

"We'll move (tackle) Richard Perez down to guard and start Charles Romero at that tackle position," he said.

Another injury problem for the Herd will be linebacker Mark Daniel's bruised thigh.

"As of right now," Cumpton said, "I don't know about Mark. We'll just have to wait and see with him. We'll probably make a decision on him (today)."

Cumpton said middle linebacker Cody Page will take Daniel's spot on the weak side when the Herd is in a nickel set while Jason Lueb would be the replacement when Hereford is in its regular defense.

Frosh spikers

Baseball remembers Giamatti

NEW YORK (AP) - Eyes became misty and voices cracked as baseball said goodbye to A. Bartlett Giamatti, 2 1/2 months after his shocking death.

Owners, general managers, scouts, agents, lawyers, union officials, arbitrators, writers and television executives filled Carnegie Hall on Wednesday for "A Celebration of Bart Giamatti and Baseball." Hardened baseball men who trade bodies and joss around millions of dollars with little apparent emotion struggled to avoid breaking down as they extolled the late commissioner's association with the game he loved.

"There is so much I want to say and so little time to say it," said Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, the head of the search committee that brought Giamatti into baseball. Selig said Giamatti left a "legacy so powerful that it will pass into posterity."

Giamatti died of a heart attack Sept. 1 at his summer home in Edgartown, Mass., just five months after becoming commissioner and eight days after banning Pete Rose from baseball.

"To me, he was the noblest of them all," Commissioner Fay Vincent said, using words from Shakespeare as his voice choked with emotion. "Bravo, noble Bart, and goodbye."

Frosh spikers named district champions

The Hereford High School freshman volleyball team was officially declared district champions Wednesday at the District 1-4A meeting in Borger, according to HHS Girls Athletic Coordinator Dickie Faught.

The freshman spikers finished the season with a 6-2 record and a 5-0 mark in district play. The junior high district which Hereford teams compete in includes Pampa, Borger, Dumas and two Canyon junior high schools.

Other district winners in fall sports included Dumas seventh grade and Pampa eighth grade in volleyball and Dumas seventh, Borger eighth and Pampa freshman in football. The Hereford Maroon freshman finished with the same district record as Pampa, but the Harvesters were awarded the title because of their win in head-to-head play.

"We're not allowed to award trophies for the junior highs," said Hereford Junior High coach James Salinas, who also attended the meeting, "but this (declaring champions) gives the kids a little recognition."

Harris picks Herd by 20 over Dumas

The Hereford Whitefaces will be a 20-point favorite in their season finale Friday against the Dumas Demons, according to the Harris Rating System.

The Herd, 7-2 on the year and 6-1 in district competition, comes into the contest riding a six-game winning streak that includes a 42-21 decision over Borger last week to clinch the second playoff seed for District.

Dumas, 3-5-1 and 3-4, suffered its worst beating of the season Saturday, 42-0, at the hands of district champion Estacado.

The Harris System did not rate teams this week as schools in 5A, 3A, 2A along with 12-4A and 1A districts enter the playoffs. Hereford's ranking entering last week was No. 29 with a power rating of 1.79 while the Demons were ranked No. 113 with a 1.57 rating.

In other District 1-4A games, all being played Friday, Borger hosts Pampa, Levelland is at Frenship and Dunbar visits Randall.

Pampa (5-4, 4-3) at Borger (4-5, 3-4) -- A win by the Bulldogs leaves both teams at .500 for the season and in district play. Both teams will be fighting to salvage somewhat disappointing campaigns in one of the district's biggest rivalries.

Pampa rates a five-point favorite, according to Harris.

Levelland (4-5, 2-5) at Frenship (3-6, 2-5) -- Another case of two teams trying to end the season on a positive note. The Lobos suffered through a four-game losing streak after opening with three wins while the Tigers had been up and down before losing their last three.

Harris gives the nod to Frenship by two points.

Dunbar (0-9, 0-7) at Randall (6-3, 4-3) -- This game features the district's biggest disappointment and its biggest surprise. The Panthers, who have been hit with no-pass, no-play and had to forfeit their only win for using an ineligible player, are just looking to get back to Lubbock in one piece. The Raiders, who have made their opponents take notice in only their second season, will be looking for a very respectable 7-3 mark to build on for next year.

Harris says it's the Raiders by 21. Estacado (9-1, 8-0) open date -- The only thing the Matadors have lost since the Dunbar game (and they wound up winning it eventually) was the coin flip with area playoff opponent Monahans. The Mats get the week off to make their travel plans.

UIL opens grid playoffs in court with lawsuits

DALLAS (AP) - Preliminary score in the state high school courtroom playoffs: UIL 2, School Districts, 0.

Two judges ruled Wednesday that the courts have no business deciding who's eligible to play in the state football championships this weekend. Their decisions uphold the University Interscholastic League's rulings that bumped Eastland High School and South Garland High School from championship play.

But a third legal challenge to the UIL was looming. Dallas Independent School District Board Member Thomas G. Jones said attorneys for interested Carter High School fans were to ask for a court order today to reinstate Carter into the playoffs.

And if that happens, Duncanville Independent School District officials plan to ask for a court order that could halt the championships altogether. The legal scrimmage breaks down this way:

- Attorneys for the Carter fans were to ask State District Court Judge Paul Davis today to grant a temporary restraining order allowing Carter to defend its Class 5A state football championship, Dallas school board member Thomas G. Jones said Wednesday night. Carter was banned from the playoffs for playing an ineligible player Oct. 13.

- While the law firm of Brown, Robinson & West prepared the Carter case late Wednesday night, an attorney for the Duncanville ISD prepared to take legal steps to postpone the state playoffs if a final decision is still pending in the case Friday.

Duncanville ISD attorney Earl Luna told the Dallas Times Herald that if Carter receives a temporary restraining order, Duncanville will request an expedited final ruling. Should the request be denied, Luna said, Duncanville is prepared to take legal measures to postpone the playoffs until a final ruling is issued.

Under state law a temporary restraining order is effective for 14 days, beginning the day after it is granted. A final ruling, however, could take months.

In a similar case involving Carter during last year's playoffs, a judge granted a temporary restraining order in November but didn't make a final ruling until July and didn't issue a ruling in writing, upholding Carter's title, until last week.

West and his firm were retained late Wednesday night after a fund-raising meeting of 500 Carter supporters. The basic expense for the legal maneuver, excluding legal fees which West will waive, will approach $5,000. An Arlington couple donated $1,000 at meeting, Jones said.

- On Wednesday, U.S. District Court Judge Jerry Buchmeyer turned back a claim from Garland Independent School District officials that the UIL's decision weakened the district's desegregation plan.

The case involved quarterback Tony Perry, who attended Garland High School last spring, then transferred to South Garland to take an electronics course not offered at the other school. UIL rules require a transfer student to sit out a year before being eligible to participate in UIL-governed activities.

"Nothing presented to me today showed that it (the desegregation plan) would be adversely affected by any decision by the UIL," Buchmeyer said.

"I might not agree with some of the decisions of the UIL," Buchmeyer said. "But I don't think the courthouse is a good place to determine these kinds of matters."

- In Austin, State District Judge Pete Lowry in Austin followed Buchmeyer's lead Wednesday night by denying Eastland High School's appeal from a UIL decision that said the school played an ineligible player.

In the Eastland case, the UIL's District 8-2A executive committee forced Eastland, ranked as high as fourth in The Associated Press Class 2A state poll, to forfeit four games in which reserve lineman Tracy Alford played.

Alford tried to join the Army last spring, but was told he needed a diploma to enlist. Alford took a GED test and passed it, but changed his mind about joining the Army and returned to school in the fall for a diploma.

Under UIL rules, any student who obtains a GED is considered to have finished school and therefore is ineligible for extracurricular activities. Lowry said the issue was not one for the courts.

"Courts aren't in the business of writing rules governing participation in high school athletics," Lowry said. He held the rule was constitutional and he would "leave the matter to the educators."

"It tells him even you pass, son, you ain't going to play," said Eastland Independent School District attorney Tommy Warford, who said he was not sure what the district's next move would be.

Rangers make offer to free agent Gary Pettis

ARLINGTON (AP) - In an effort to shore up their defense and improve the top of their lineup, the Texas Rangers have offered a free-agent contract to Detroit Tigers center fielder Gary Pettis.

The Rangers want Pettis because he produced a .375 on-base average last season in addition to winning his fourth Gold Glove as the best defensive player at his position, Rangers general manager Tom Grieve said Wednesday.

Last season's starting center fielder, Cecil Espy, hit .257 with a .313 on-base average. But Espy's mental lapses in the outfield frustrated manager Bobby Valentine, who called Espy's defense inadequate.

Ray Anderson, Pettis' agent, said although six teams have expressed serious interest in his client, Texas is one of the most appealing.

"More so than money, the primary concern is the team and the environment," Anderson said. "The prospects of the team challenging in their division is important because Gary has said he would like to play on another playoff-bound team."

"Texas has some horses. If they can put it together, it certainly is Gary's feeling that Texas has as good of a shot as anyone to knock off Oakland."

The multiyear offers to Pettis have reportedly ranged from $500,000 to incentive-tied offers that could boost the total to $900,000. Pettis earned $440,000 last season.

Anderson said he and Pettis hope to sign a contract within seven to 10 days.

"We're going to get our offers and then make our counteroffers," Anderson told the Dallas Times-Herald. "Gary does not want to drag this out. We are not going to be stretching for more dollars past anything that isn't justified."

"The Rangers have made an offer that will keep our dialogue going. It's not an offer that's offensive by any means, but none of the offers have been what we think Gary is worth." The Rangers made the first offer to show that they are serious about signing Pettis, Grieve said.

The switch-hitting Pettis had one of his best offensive seasons in 1989. He .257 in 119 games but he walked enough to boost his on-base average to .375. He scored 77 runs with 18 runs batted in and 43 stolen bases.

Pistons too hot for Miami Heat

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Detroit Pistons wouldn't call it revenge, but they admitted to having a certain motivation against the Miami Heat.

"We were out for blood," said John Salley, who blocked three shots as the Pistons routed the Heat 130-94 Wednesday night. "Those guys beat us and it hurt us."

Detroit snapped a two-game winning streak for Miami, which has only 18 wins in franchise history. One of the victories was 88-84 over the defending champion Pistons on Saturday in Miami.

Detroit coach Chuck Daly said he didn't think revenge was a big factor, but his former assistant, Miami coach Ron Rothstein, disagreed.

"These guys have won about 200 games the past couple of years and they know what they have to do," Daly said. "We just shot the ball better."

"They were very motivated," Rothstein said. "I'm sure revenge was a factor. They were at the top of their game."

Detroit shot 53.2 percent from the field, compared with Miami's 39.3 percent. At one stretch of the fourth quarter, the Heat missed 15 of 17 shots.

"I told the guys, 'Hey, the world champs just pounded us. What are we going to do? Slit our wrists?'" Rothstein said. "No, we just come out pounding hard the next night."

In other NBA games, it was Boston 126, New Jersey 92; Philadelphia 109, Charlotte 96; Cleveland 129, Golden State 104; San Antonio 86, Minnesota 76; Denver 109, Washington 98; Utah 108, Chicago 107; Phoenix 109, Portland 107 and the Los Angeles Lakers 117, Indiana 94.

Isiah Thomas and Joe Dumars scored six points apiece during Detroit's decisive 15-5 second-quarter run against Miami.

Dumars led Detroit with 24 points, Mark Aguirre had 23 and Thomas 22. Tellis Frank scored 16 to lead Miami.

Spurs 86, Timberwolves 76

San Antonio snapped a 22-game road losing streak dating back to last Feb. 3 and held Minnesota to 32.5 percent shooting.

The Spurs trailed 60-59 with 11:29 to play before Frank Brickowski sparked a 14-3 run with 15-footer and a rebound dunk to put San Antonio ahead for good, 63-60.

Lakers 117, Pacers 94

Los Angeles handed Indiana its first defeat of the season as A.C. Green had 24 points and 16 rebounds and James Worthy added 20 points, including the 10,000th of his NBA career.

Green led the Lakers' dominance of the offensive boards with eight rebounds at that end. Overall, Los Angeles had 19 offensive rebounds to three for the Pacers.

Nuggets 109, Bullets 98

Michael Adams scored 14 of his 30 points in the third quarter, enabling Denver to build a big enough lead over Washington to survive the Bullets' 14-0 spurt in the final period.

Adams had nine points in the first three minutes of the second half as Denver extended a 58-43 halftime lead.

Jazz 108, Bulls 107

Utah scored the last eight points of the game in 38 seconds, capped by John Stockton's layup at the buzzer. Stockton's performance, which also included a 3-pointer with 38 seconds left, nullified Michael Jordan's 40-point effort.

Suns 109, Trail Blazers 107

Phoenix survived a 12-0 spurt by Portland in the final period and beat the Trail Blazers on Eddie Johnson's jump shot with seven seconds remaining.

The lead exchanged hands 10 times before two free throws by Phoenix's Tom Chambers with 43 seconds left tied the score 107-107. The Suns' Kevin Johnson drove the lane, then fed back to Eddie Johnson at the top of the key for his game-winning basket and the last of his 24 points.

Cavaliers 129, Warriors 104

Cleveland set a team record with eight 3-point goals in the Cavaliers' rout of Golden State.

Mark Price made four, Steve Kerr three and Craig Ehlo one.

John Williams finished with 25 points and Price had 22 for Cleveland.

Celtics 126, Nets 92

Boston breezed over New Jersey as Robert Parish scored 26 points and Larry Bird contributed 12 points, 15 rebounds and 10 assists. Both went to the bench for good with 2:37 left in the third period. Reggie Lewis scored 24 points and Kevin McHale 18 for the Celtics.

76ers 109, Hornets 96

Charles Barkley had 29 points and 17 rebounds and Philadelphia outscored Charlotte 27-14 in the final 10 minutes.

Charlotte tied the score at 82-82 on a jumper by Rex Chapman with 10:29 left. Chapman and Kelly Tripucka scored 22 points each for the Hornets.

UNLV, LSU open seasons right

By The Associated Press

Larry Johnson and Chris Jackson were successful in their season debuts with the nation's top two teams.

Johnson, the junior college player of the year last season, took the court as a member of the UNLV Runnin' Rebels for the first time Wednesday and he left it a winner in a 102-91 victory over Loyola Marymount in the opening round of the preseason NIT.

The top-ranked Runnin' Rebels appeared to be in trouble but the tenacious pressure defense UNLV is famous for finally wore down the Lions, the highest scoring team in the nation last season.

Jackson, only the second freshman to be selected an All-America and the second-leading scorer in the nation last year at 30.2, led No. 2 Louisiana State to a 91-80 victory over Southern Mississippi.

This was to be the year the scoring pressure was taken off the smooth guard. But both of LSU's big men were in foul trouble and Jackson was called on again to lead the Tigers, this time with 37 points.

In other first-round games Wednesday night, No. 19 North Carolina State beat Richmond 57-48, Kansas clobbered Alabama-Birmingham 109-83, DePaul downed Ohio State 71-53 and California grounded Air Force 70-49.

The first round will be completed tonight with North Carolina A&T at No. 25 St. John's and Houston at Wichita State.

Tonight's winners will meet Saturday to complete the second round. The rest of the second round will be played Friday night with North Carolina State at DePaul, Kansas at LSU and California at UNLV.

No. 1 UNLV 102, Loyola Marymount 92

Johnson, with his strong inside game, and Anderson Hunt, with his 3-point shooting, led UNLV, which broke open a close game midway through the second half.

Hunt finished with 26 points, 17 in the second half, and scored three straight baskets to turn a three-point deficit into a lead the Runnin' Rebels would hold thereafter.

"I didn't like it at halftime and I don't like it now," UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "I'm still worried they're going to catch us."

Jeff Fryer led Loyola Marymount, which averaged 112 points per game last season, with 23 points.

"We almost pulled it off," Loyola coach Paul Westhead said. "We just had trouble sustaining what we set out to do."

No. 2 LSU 91, S. Mississippi 80

Jackson didn't realize much help from 7-foot-2 freshman forward Shaquille O'Neal and 7-0 sophomore center Stanley Roberts. O'Neal picked up his third foul with 13:32 left in the first half and Roberts drew his fourth with 14:55 left in the game.

Both returned for the final five minutes and Roberts finished with 16 points and O'Neal 10.

Jackson made 18 of 29 from the field, but made just one of seven from 3-point range.

Southern Mississippi was led by Daron Jenkins' 25 points.

No. 19 North Carolina State 57, Richmond 48

Rodney Monroe scored 17 of his 20 points in the second half.

Chris Corchiani, who finished with 10 points, and Monroe then made six straight free throws in the final two minutes to seal the victory.

Ken Atkinson led Richmond with 17 points.

Kansas 109, Ala.-Birmingham 83

The Jayhawks broke the game open early, taking an 18-2 lead six minutes in. They also added a 12-3 run for a 41-11 lead with 6:57 left in the first half.

Kevin Pritchard scored 22 points and Mike Maddox 21 for Kansas. Larry Rembert led the Blazers with 23 points and nine rebounds.

DePaul 71, Ohio State 53

The Blue Demons also took off to an early lead and coasted. Late in the first half, DePaul went on an 11-2 spree to open a 41-16 lead just before halftime.

Stephen Howard led DePaul with 15, while freshman Jimmy Jackson topped the Buckeyes with 14 in the head coaching debut of Randy Ayers. California 70, Air Force 49

Keith Smith scored 18 points and Ryan Drew added 11 for California, which held Raymond Dudley to 11 points, seven below his low game of last season.

Dudley, who averaged 26.6 points per game last season, was stopped by a cramp in his right thigh midway through the second half.

Reserve Chris Lowry led Air Force with 17 points.

Mavs' Tarpley arrested

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas Mavericks' forward Roy Tarpley faces a possible lifetime suspension from the National Basketball Association after being arrested for driving while intoxicated and resisting arrest.

Tarpley, who has twice been treated for drug and alcohol abuse, was arrested just before 11 p.m. Wednesday on a north Dallas freeway after officers spotted him driving his car too close to another, Police Sgt. Frank Ruspoli said.

Dallas Police Sgt. J.N. Grissom said patrol officers Laura Campbell and Paul Keough clocked Tarpley driving 70-80 mph on the LBJ Freeway.

Tarpley was held in the Lew Sterrett Justice Center for several hours until he posted his own bond at 3:27 a.m. and was released about 4:20 a.m., according to Sgt. Ed Crosby.

Jailers allowed Tarpley to leave through an entrance normally used for admitting prisoners to the facility that serves as jail for Dallas and Dallas County.

Reporters and photographers who gathered in the lobby were assured earlier that Tarpley would be released in a normal manner and would have to leave through the lobby just like other released prisoners.

Reporters were not notified that Tarpley had left until about 10 minutes after he had departed.

"Certain high profile people might have the need to be released through an alternate means," Crosby said. "It's not preferential treatment."

When pressed, he refused to answer any more questions about the manner in which Tarpley was released.

Asked if Tarpley was the only one to leave in such a manner, Crosby said tersely, "I bid you all good night."

Crosby said Tarpley posted more than $200 in bond and was released through a pre-trial release program.

The arrest came less than 48 hours after his best performance of the year in a game against Seattle.

Ruspoli said Tarpley also was arrested on four traffic charges, including tailgating, and an improper lane change, and failure to have his driver's license and proof of insurance with him.

Driving while intoxicated and resisting arrest are Class B misdemeanor charges, punishable by up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The resisting arrest charge was filed after Tarpley tried to pull away from the officers' grasp during his arrest, Ruspoli said.

"When they arrested him he basically just pulled away from their grasp, that was enough for them to charge him with resisting arrest," Ruspoli said. "He didn't resist in a manner that he struck the officers at all."

Ruspoli said a breathalyzer was taken, but he was not authorized to release the results in the early stages of an arrest.

A positive test for alcohol would be a violation of Tarpley's after-care program but not necessarily the "third strike" that would result in a lifetime suspension from the National Basketball Association, with an opportunity to return after two years.

In October 1987, Tarpley admitted seeking counseling for alcohol and cocaine problems, constituting his first strike under the NBA's anti-drug policy.

The second strike came earlier this year, when he told drug counselors at the ASAP Family Treatment Center that administers the NBA's treatment programs that he needed help to control his drug problem. He was suspended without pay and went to an ASAP center in Van Nuys, Calif.

He returned to Dallas March 16 and began practicing with the team April 6. His first game back was April 12. Last season, in the 49 games Tarpley missed, the Mavs went 17-32. With Tarpley last season, the Mavs were 21-12.

On Oct. 27, Tarpley disappeared for 24 hours, missing a Mavericks practice. Under the NBA's anti-drug policy, Tarpley could have been fined or suspended.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently you printed several letters from nurses who complained about the terrible hours, low pay, high stress and lack of appreciation. And then there were letters from critical patients. Can you stand one more?

I am a nurse from the old school who has heard those complaints before, but what really made me furious was the crack about nurses going into the profession "to snag a doctor husband."

I have been a hospital nurse since 1970. I've encountered a few terrific doctors along the way, but most were married. The single ones were obnoxious and treated the nurses like dirt even though we often covered up for them.

Work with them, OK. We have to. But marry one? Never! Obviously those ditsy soap operas have turned America's brains to mush. -Windsor, Ontario

DEAR WIN: Thanks for one women's opinion. Read on. There's more.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am burning over the letter from the patient who called nurses "goof-offs" and "overrated." She also said, "The aides do all the work and get very little money and no glory."

You patients are no bargain. Almost one-third of you are drunks who refuse to admit that you have a booze problem and will die 15 years earlier than you ought to. Those of you who are on oxygen probably smoked on the way to the hospital. I have no sympathy for people who are dangerously overweight. For years they ate too much and were too lazy to exercise. Most people who are in lousy shape have themselves to blame. -Battle Creek

FROM TUCSON: I'm a R.N. who did not get "kicked around." I am not "trained like a monkey," nor do I sit around at the nurse's station gossiping and drinking coffee. As a professional, I enjoy the responsibility, accountability and challenge that goes with caring for the sick. We are striving to promote the positive aspects of our profession. Instead we get press coverage that is negative and slanderous. I'm sick of it.

FROM LANSING: It's easy to see why the public gets the notion that nurses are a bunch of empty-headed, man-chasing, miniskirted females who spend every waking hour trying to seduce doctors. That ill-conceived TV show called "Nightingales" was really an insult to our profession. We used our combined muscle and got it off the air. I am a first-rate nurse. I did not go to school five years to be called "Babe" or "Honey." I do not appreciate being treated like a maid or a waitress. I invite all your critics out there to walk for one day in our shoes and decide whether or not we deserve more respect and more money.

DEAR LANSING: You have my vote. Thanks to all who wrote. There are days when this work is a headache, but it's never a bore.

Accent on Health

According to officials at the Texas Department of Health (TDH), more than 700 job-related deaths occur yearly in Texas, more employee deaths than are reported in any other state.

These fatalities and the thousands of injuries suffered by Texas' workforce have created a crisis, affecting the state's health care, insurance, and regulatory systems. In response, the state's lawmakers are proposing reforms throughout the Texas workers' compensation system.

However, Dr. Robert Bernstein, Commissioner of Health, has said, "In search for a better workers' compensation system, thus far the greatest emphasis has been placed on containing costs. There needs to be more attention given to increasing worker safety and on preventing injuries."

A recently completed TDH study is perhaps the most accurate measure to date of the number of the state's occupational deaths. The federally funded study compared fatality information from four government sources to reach its conclusions.

In addition to its own collected data, the department's Occupational Safety and Health Division used records from the Texas Industrial Accident Board, the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), and the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics to create a single list for the 1986 calendar year.

After eliminating duplicated cases, victims of heart attacks, and other illnesses not directly related to workplace incidents, the study confirmed that 715 people died in 1986 because of traumatic events traced to their work.

The study's results were consistent with the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health's finding that Texas sustained more job-related deaths than any other state, with an average of 725 such fatalities each year between 1980 and 1985.

Jerry Lauderdale, Occupational Safety and Health Division director, said, "These numbers are alarming. But the most disturbing fact is that many of these deaths and countless other occupational injuries and illnesses could be prevented by relatively inexpensive safety measures."

He added, "We think our study will be invaluable to lawmakers, as they meet again to try to solve the state's crisis over workers' compensation. One of the greatest stumbling blocks they have is a lack of reliable numbers. We think we have supplied some solid data, not only to underscore the urgency for greater safety for workers in Texas, but to show where the safeguards are needed."

The TDH study categorizes fatalities by type of accident or illness, county, industry, occupation, age group, gender, race, and either public or private sector.

Lauderdale said the TDH has been unable to conduct a similar study of on-the-job injuries since 1976, when the department's state funds for tracking occupational injuries were deleted.

"The only other state authority directly concerned with on-the-job injuries is the Industrial Accident Board, which oversees workers' compensation claims. Only about two-thirds of Texas' 300,000-plus employers participate in the workers' compensation program, and no one really knows how many injuries go unreported."

According to Lauderdale, TDH has authority, when invited by the employer, to inspect worksites for hazards, and help employers eliminate those hazards. "We have no direct enforcement authority against violators of federal regulations. Even if we did, we have only 17 safety and health consultants on staff for the whole state. The U.S. Department of Labor has said that staff should number at least 100, just to make routine inspections."

Lauderdale said that the state allocates only about $200,000 yearly for his program. That funding is supplemented by a 90 percent federal match.

"Clearly more funding, people and authority are necessary if we are going to reduce the number of fatalities and injuries in this state's workplaces," Lauderdale said. He added that, "Not only are people being killed and injured at an alarming rate each year in Texas, but also the costs for their care have skyrocketed beyond amounts their employers and insurance companies are able to pay."

The State Board of Insurance confirms that although employers paid premiums in excess of $2.96 billion last year, the insurance companies paid out some $3.16 billion in workers' compensation claims. Some insurance companies now have ceased to offer workers' compensation plans, while others have asked for a dramatic increase in their rates.

The results is that an increasing number of injured employees and the survivors of those who are killed on the job are not being compensated. "Many of them have no recourse but to rely on public assistance to meet their expenses," Lauderdale said.

"One solution to the problem of rising insurance rates is injury prevention. Where effective prevention programs are in place, deaths, injuries, and premium rates go down.

Sew your personal style

Have you ever looked in the mirror and realized your clothes lacked a personal style, a style that was really you? There simply was no pizzazz, no individuality. Have you seen yourself coming and going as you walked down the street and vowed never to shop at that store again?

Here's an easy prescription. Create your own wardrobe through sewing.

Before you say, "who me, sew?", think about it for a moment. The art of sewing has changed dramatically over the past few years. To begin with, home sewing is so much simpler today, even a novice can create a chic, smart look.

Indeed, sewing instructions are user friendly-simple to understand, easy to follow and exciting to complete.

Home sewing today also fits well with current busy lifestyles. Easy-to-sew patterns can cut in half the time needed to create a wardrobe. Computerized machines have revolutionized the industry. The extraordinary serger machines now seam and finish simultaneously, giving garments a professional edge in a fraction of the time.

Equally exciting for the "designer" generation, too, sew-it-yourself is now contemporary with the latest fashion trends. When the newest styles, trends, fabrics or colors reach your favorite fashion store, you'll already have found them in your local fabric store.

So, the next time you're in a fabric or notions shop, browse through a pattern book. You'll be pleasantly surprised to find that the same up-to-date fabrics and fashion trends that are now being shown in ready-to-wear clothes are readily available over-the-counter in an even wider and richer array of choice.

And what an array of choice it is. With such a treasure trove of styles, fabrics and colors at your fingertips, you are now in command, truly controlling the fashion portrait you project, whether for that big evening on the town, or a more intimate occasion.

Perhaps you need a little number for the office party, but the dress you like in the store comes only in red and beige wool-not your best colors. If teal blue makes you "glow" and you're dying for a silk dress-then sew-it-yourself is the answer.

The woman who sews today has a sense of personal style, refuses to follow the dictates of the fashion industry and sews more for satisfaction than to save money, though saving is a plus. Sewing, she finds, provides a very special opportunity to be creative.

Perhaps that is why sew-it-yourself is bigger than ever, with more women discovering that home sewing is not only easier than they had dreamed, but an exciting and rewarding adventure.

So what are you waiting for? Isn't it time you, too, opened the door to a new look, developing a style and flair that you can truly call your own? Isn't it time you found out why so many other women have turned to sew-it-yourself?

Dr. Ron Cook re-elected to BGCT executive board

A Hereford resident was elected to major positions on Texas Baptist Boards during the annual meeting of the 2.4-million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas (BGCT) in Lubbock, Nov. 7-8.

Re-elected to the 193-member BGCT Executive Board and to the board of trustees of High Plains Baptist Health Systems, Amarillo, was Ronald L. Cook, pastor of First Baptist Church.

The Executive Board, composed of pastors, church staff members and laypersons, conducts the business of the BGCT between annual sessions.

Institutions of the BGCT include eight universities, two academies, seven hospitals, four children's homes, four homes for the aging and Hispanic Baptist Theological Seminary, San Antonio.

The work is supported by the more than 5,100 Texas Baptist churches and missions which will give about $58 million this year through the Cooperative Program for mission work at home and abroad.

Besides the institutions, the convention helps support worldwide missions causes including 7,500 missionaries in the United States and more than 110 foreign nations.

Ernie Lombardi, a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame, hit the ball so hard and ran so slowly the infielders on the left side used to play him on the outfield grass.

Candidate wants state drug czar to head fight

AUSTIN (AP) - If Texas and the United States do not come to grips with illicit drugs, "we could end up like Colombia in 10 years," says Republican gubernatorial candidate Tom Luce.

Luce, a founding member of Texans War on Drugs, which was created in 1979, called Wednesday for a drug czar in Texas, who would report directly to the governor.

Luce also urged new college graduates to volunteer for a state war on drugs instead of agencies like the Peace Corps.

"I would tell them that nothing they will ever do will be more important. They could help us save a generation," Luce told a news conference in announcing his plan to halt the use of illicit drugs.

He proposed that the Texas War on Drugs Commission be established as an independent state agency, rather than being "isolated" within the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, an agency "with a philosophy of moderation."

"You can't fight the drug war in moderation," Luce said.

He also suggested pre-employment drug testing for state employees and new public school employees; denying bail to certain drug offenders; rewards for turning in drug dealers; mandatory drug education for kindergarten through 12th grade; increased use of the National Guard for intercepting drug traffickers entering Texas from Mexico and Central America, and the death penalty for drug dealers causing the death of children.

Luce said his anti-drug plan could be financed by using available revenue and possibly reducing certain state expenditures.

In another political development, East Texas lawyer Clifton "Scrappy" Holmes announced as a Democratic candidate for the Texas Supreme Court seat being vacated by Justice C.L. Ray, formerly of Marshall.

"It's in the interest of Texas, and East Texas, to maintain for East Texas a seat on our Supreme Court," Holmes, 50, said.

He said he would eschew any television blitz, which should allow him to run a primary campaign for $150,000 to $200,000, and would put a cap on campaign contributions from people he doesn't know.

"A thousand dollars ought to be more than what those kind of contributions ought to amount to," Holmes said.

"If you let million dollar TV campaigns make up your mind about who should sit on our Supreme Court, then the obvious is going to occur - those who give the big bucks get what they paid for and the public simply gets had," he told a news conference.

Holmes, past president of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers' Association, said his practice has probably included more civil than criminal law. He has practiced in Gilmer, Austin and, for the past 15 years, Kilgore and Longview.

Walesa 'optimist' on Poland

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lech Walesa, hailed by President Bush as "America's special guest" and applauded by a joint meeting of Congress, told The Associated Press that U.S. promises to help Poland make him an "optimist" that the Solidarity government will survive.

Walesa addressed a joint meeting of Congress on Wednesday and was welcomed with cheers, whistles and standing ovations as he told lawmakers, "this aid will not be wasted and will never be forgotten."

Later that night, Walesa abruptly left a dinner in his honor at the Capitol, saying the whirl of activities left him too exhausted to continue.

Bush, who has been criticized by Democrats for not promising enough aid to Poland, appeared with Walesa at an AFL-CIO convention and called for a national effort for the survival of the first non-communist government in the Soviet Bloc.

"Clearly there are times when the need for progress demands that we put differences aside, and where Poland is concerned, now is such a time," Bush said.

"Today, I appeal to the unions and on the American labor movement, the business community, and government to look for ways to support a partnership for progress in Poland for the sake of a nation and a people that need and deserve our help," Bush said.

Walesa, who began his triumphant first visit to the United States on Monday, was leaving the nation's capital today for New York.

Interviewed after he spoke to Congress and appeared with Bush, Walesa told the AP that "after my visit to Canada and the (United) States ... I am an optimist."

"I think we will have enough time," he said. "But we have to work a lot. We have to show a very tired society that there is hope, that the solutions ... though they are expensive, will lead the country out of trouble."

The United States was taking steps to help finance the Polish reforms, as the Senate voted Tuesday to authorize $657 million in economic aid to Poland over three years and $81 million for nearby Hungary, which also is dismantling its centrally controlled economy.

The House went further, approving an initial one-year installment of $533 million for the two Soviet bloc nations.

Walesa told the AP he was "uncomfortable" commenting on Democratic criticism that Bush has been slow in responding to change in Eastern Europe.

He said Bush "sees to other interests, but first of all his responsibility is to this country and nobody can have anything against that. And that is why he is very careful. He is checking what he can do."

"And I must say, that I, Lech Walesa, chairman of Solidarity, I am happy, glad with what President Bush is doing now ... I can say in unequivocal terms, he is a friend of Solidarity."

Addressing a joint meeting of Congress earlier in the day, Walesa drew resounding applause by saying that "assistance extended to democracy and freedom in Poland and all of Eastern Europe is the best investment in the future of peace, better than tanks, warships and warplanes, an investment leading to greater security."

The House chamber was packed with lawmakers, cabinet members, congressional aides and journalists eager to hear the 46-year-old union chief, whose walrus mustache has gone gray and who acknowledged putting on weight since he led the August 1980 strike that forged the first independent trade union in the communist world.

Walesa received a five-minute standing ovation punctuated by a few whoops and whistles as he flashed a "V" for victory sign. His speech was interrupted by applause 25 times.
