Many airlines cancel flights to Iran, Iraq

Associated Press

Many airlines cancelled flights to the capitals of Iran and Iraq today and others are considering doing so following Iraq's threat to shoot down any aircraft it finds in Iranian airspace starting Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a powerful explosion rocked Baghdad today after Iran claimed it fired a missile into the Iraqi capital in retaliation for Iraqi missile attacks on Iranian cities.

Residents in Baghdad heard the blast at 11:55 a.m., but were unable to determine its source. One foreign resident, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said: "The explosion was heard by people at the airport some nine miles away from the city center."

There was no official comment from Iraq, which announced new air raids on Iranian cities today in the 4½-year-old war.

However, a caller to the AP bureau in London also claimed responsibility for the explosion on behalf of an organization calling itself the Arab Socialist Baath Party.

"We are not Iranian but we would like to make a good friendship and good neighborhood agreement with the Iranian government when we destroy the Saddam criminal regime," said the anonymous caller, who spoke with an accent, and apparently referred to the government of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Hundreds of civilians have been reported killed in the past two weeks of attacks on civilian targets, and each side has claimed to have killed or wounded more than 12,000 in ground fighting in southeastern Iraq.

Iraq's air blockade would match an "exclusion zone" it imposed around Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal last January. Iraq says it imposed the sea blockade to cut Iran's oil export income.

An Iraqi military spokesman warned in a statement distributed by the Iraqi News Agency on Sunday that after 8 p.m. Tuesday (noon EST) any plane "that passes through Iranian air space will become a possible target in view of the difficulty of distinguishing targets."

In London, spokesman Norman Lornie said British Airways canceled flights to Tehran and Baghdad on Sunday, and had not decided whether flights to Iran would continue.

Swissair canceled a Zurich-to-Tehran flight Sunday night, said a spokesman. The status of the next flight, scheduled to leave Thursday, "depends on the situation," he said.

Two or three flights daily to the Far East would have to be rerouted to avoid Iranian airspace, said the spokesman, who commented on condition he not be identified.

The Italian airline Alitalia said last week it was suspending flights to both Baghdad and Tehran. Egypt's national airline, Egyptair, canceled three flights to Baghdad on Sunday and today and is considering suspending other flights, said a spokesman. Turkish Airlines has suspended indefinitely flights to Tehran and Baghdad, a spokesman said.

Air India canceled today's flight to Baghdad. Austrian Airlines announced an indefinite suspension, starting Tuesday, of flights to Iran. The West German airline Lufthansa called off this week's four flights to Tehran.

Reagan, Mulroney plan to discuss East-West issues

QUEBEC (AP) — President Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney opened the second day of their "Shamrock Summit" today with smiles and handshakes, then delved into disucssions of East-West relations and nurturing their good neighbor policies.

The two men appeared for photographers at the start of the session, chatting briefly with each other and exhanging a hearty handshake across the conference table in the elaborate, wood-paneled Hotel Chateau Frontenac.

Reagan was queried about whether U.S. missiles might be based in Canada. The president replied such reports were "not true." The question referred to an interview given earlier in the day by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who was asked about the basing of missile launchers in Canada. Weinberger said such launchers "might be" placed in Canada.

Later, White House spokesman Larry Speakes stressed that any such action would be a "Canadian decision."

Reagan was scheduled to return to Washington after a final luncheon with the prime minister and a visit to one of the city's historic fortresses.

U.S.-Soviet arms control talks, defense issues and Mulroney's meeting last week in Moscow with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev topped the agenda today in the second day of Reagan's visit here.

Later, principal advisers were to join the two leaders for a discussion on trade, the upcoming Bonn economic summit and other bilateral issues.

The two leaders share "solid agreement" on nearly all those subjects, and Reagan was keen on hearing Mulroney's assessment of the new Soviet leader, according to White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

Mulroney had met with Gorbachev following the funeral of Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko, while Reagan instead sent Vice President George Bush to represent the United States.

Despite the stubbornly lingering Canadian snows that have piled up against the massive stone walls of this 300-year-old city, a well-rehearsed atmosphere of warmth pervades the summit.

The president, after boasting of their shared Irish roots and his bright green St. Patrick's Day tie, told the premier upon arriving, "We are kin who together have built the most productive relationship between any two countries in the world today."

As further evidence of their harmonious relations, Reagan and Mulroney scheduled a ceremony in the fortified Citadel castle to sign a range of agreements on salmon fishing, law enforcement cooperation and modernizing the aging Distant Early Warning line along Canada's northern frontier.

The DEW line will be replaced with a sophisticated chain of radar stations designed to detect Soviet airborne intruders. The United States will bear more than half the $1.2 billion cost.

Tornado strikes Florida city

VENICE, Fla. (AP) — A tornado that snatched the roof off a shopping center and turned 55 houses into kindling, killing two people and injuring at least 40 others, left 25 blocks in a quiet neighborhood looking "like a bomb hit," officials said.

Gov. Bob Graham declared a state of emergency Sunday, and 45 people fled to nursing homes for shelter after the twister cut a mile-long swath of destruction through this southwestern coastal city.

"I heard an explosion, a boom," said Curt Stivers, 17, who was in bed when the twister hit about 4:30 a.m. "Everything just started flying through the air."

Early this morning, utility crews, contractors, insurance assessors and cleanup crews would continue "trying to restore some normalcy" to the affected area, about 25 streets in all, said Sarasota County sheriff's Capt. Earl Jacobson.

Some houses had no walls left standing. Debris floated in swimming pools and a nearby canal. Behind one home, the force of the wind had driven a 2-by-4-inch roofing beam into a palm tree, leaving it like an arrow sticking out of a dart board.

"It actually looks like a war zone, like a bomb had hit," said county Commissioner Jim Greenwald. "It is terrible. It just hurts you to look and see the damage."

At least 45 people were driven from their homes by the devastation, and were spending the night in nursing homes, said Red Cross spokesman Al Green. Many others were staying with friends and neighbors.

Ohio governor orders financial institutions to remain closed

CINCINNATI (AP) — None of the 70 state-chartered savings and loans closed by Gov. Richard Celeste will be allowed to reopen until at least Wednesday while the Legislature devises a plan to strengthen the institutions and avoid runs by depositors.

After conferring with lawmakers and other officials, Celeste said Sunday night the Legislature will meet today in emergency session to consider a measure that would allow the thrifts to reopen "in a matter of days, rather than weeks."

Celeste was to sign an executive order today to keep the institutions closed for another 48 hours, said the governor's chief of staff, Raymond Sawyer.

Meanwhile, thousands of people and businesses were separated from their savings and cash by the three-day bank holiday Celeste declared Friday. Federal officials and bank executives said they could not recall a similar action since President Franklin Delano Roosevelt shut all the nation's banks in 1933 to stem a panic during the Great Depression.

The plan to be presented to the Legislature called for all the closed institutions, now insured privately, to apply for Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation coverage before being allowed to reopen.

In addition, the legislation will require the thrifts to demonstrate to the state Commerce Department's Divison of Savings and Loan Associations that they meet the basic criteria and regulations of the FSLIC, proving their deposits and secure and protected.

The governor said that, under the proposed legislation, once any of the institutions receive FSLIC approval or demonstrate to state officials that they have sufficient outside financial backing, they will be allowed to reopen.

"The orderly reopening of many of our institutions should be a matter of days, rather than weeks," he said.

When the Home State Savings Association of Cincinnatti said it had lost up to $150 million stemming from the collapse of a Florida government securities company, droves of depositors withdrew their money. Home State, one of Ohio's largest savings and loans, closed its doors March 8.

Depositors then camped outside two other S&Ls waiting to make withdrawals, prompting Celeste on Friday to order 70 institutions, including Home State, to remain closed for three days.

But many depositors were caught short by the forced closings.

In Columbus, Tom and Crystal Pipic were still recovering from the closing of Home State, where they

MIDLAND CENTENNIAL 1885·1985

Absentee balloting begins for April 6 election

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Absentee balloting for the April 6 city election began on schedule this morning even though the Justice Department has yet to rule on a proposed change in the ballot language.

"We were told we would receive a determination last Friday," said City Attorney David Reagan today. "We did not receive one. The Justice Department knew we were going to proceed with the ballots saying 'vote for two' if we hadn't heard from them."

A Justice Department lawyer is flying to Midland today to confer with representatives of the two minority groups who seek a change in the ballot wording. Justice Department spokeswoman Amy Brown said Friday the city's submission on the ballot-language issue had arrived that morning by Express Mail, that Justice was aware of the timing of the election, and that a decision would be made "as soon as possible."

At issue is the wording of the ballot regarding the two at-large city council seats. The League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council want the ballot to say, "Vote for one or two," or "Vote for up to two;" the city wants to use the standard "Vote for two," which Reagan said is the language "used all over the state in situations like this."

But the minority groups claim the city reneged on a verbal agreement to consult with them about the ballot language. This verbal agreement, which city officials disavow, was supposedly made in December when the two groups' suit to force the city council to switch to single-member districts was settled out of court, with the city agreeing to replace its five at-large council seats with four single-member district seats and two at-large seats. The mayor would continue to be elected at-large under the new system, which was approved by the Justice Department last month.

"They just haven't operated in good faith," Joanne DeWitt, a member of the LULAC-BAC negotiating team, said today. Ms. DeWitt noted the city's submission to the Justice Department arrived on the last working day before absentee balloting was to begin, when it was unlikely that a decision would be forthcoming in time to settle the issue before the election process began.

"We were dumb, but we won't be next time," said Ms. DeWitt, who last week said she favored the language change to increase the

Caller claims Jihad Islami kidnapped U.S. reporter

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An anonymous telephone caller says the shadowy Islamic Holy War group kidnapped Associated Press correspondent Terry Anderson, as well as two Britons who were abducted in Beirut last week.

The caller said he represented the group, known in Arabic as Jihad Islami, and read a statement Sunday which said the "the detention" of Anderson and the two British men "comes within the framework of our continuing operations against America and its agents."

AP photographer Donald Mell witnessed the abduction of Anderson Saturday morning. The 37-year-old Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for the AP, was shoved into a green Mercedes by three men, two of them armed with pistols.

The caller's statement, phoned to a Western news agency, said: "We are definite that Islamic Beirut is full of agents from all sides, and accordingly we are working day and night to purge our region of any subversive element."

The statement also said that "assuming the profession of a journalist, merchant, industrialist, scientist and religious man will, from now on, be of no avail to spies staying among us. They have been exposed, and their punishment is well known."

After reading the statement, the caller added: "We have delayed releasing this statement until the three were taken outside Beirut."

In New York, AP Foreign Editor Nate Polowetzky said, "Terry Anderson is a longtime newsman for The Associated Press whose job in Beirut and wherever else he has been assigned is to report events objectively and fairly. This he has done wherever he has been stationed. He stands for the principles of free access to news and free dissemination of that news."

There was no way to authenticate the validity of the anonymous call, similar to those which have followed past kidnappings of other Americans in Beirut as well as anti-American bombings and other violent activities.

The statement attributed to Jihad Islami also threatened Swiss citizens and interests, claiming Switzerland, a neutral country, was planning to buy weapons from Israel.

The missing Britons are Brian Levick, 59, managing director of the Coral Oil Co. in Lebanon for the past 18 months, kidnapped on Friday; and Geoffrey Nash, 60, a metallurgist who works for the Lebanese government, abducted Thursday.

All were seized in west Beirut the Moslem sector of the capital which, for the past 13 months, has been under control of Shiite Moslem and Druse militias.

Threats were made against Americans in Lebanon over the U.S. States veto in the U.N. Security Council last Tuesday of a Lebanese-sponsored resolution condemning Israeli practices in occupied south Lebanon.

Spokesmen at the British Embassy and the Lebanese Foreign Ministry said they believed the two Britons may have been abducted because they were mistaken for Americans.

On Sunday, Western reporters traveling in a private car and a taxi reported they "came under fire" after approaching the Syrian army's southernmost position on the coastal highway north of Beirut.

One reporter, who asked not to be identified, said they had driven near the Syrians' earthen roadblock, then turned around when the shooting started. The reporter said the taxi was hit "several times" but no one was injured.

Police sources in Beirut, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed Sunday that a Libyan diplomat had been abducted from his car on west Beirut's Corniche Mazraa Boulevard the day before. They identified him as Abdel-Basset Trabulsi, a member of the Libyan People's Bureau, the equivalent of an embassy.

The Islamic Holy War organization claimed responsibility in anonymous telephone calls for the four earlier abductions, for the 1983 and 1984 car bomb attacks on U.S. Embassy buildings in Beirut and the 1983 suicide truck bombings of the U.S. Marine headquarters and French military headquarters in which nearly 300 servicemen were killed.

Four other Americans also remain missing after disappearing or being kidnapped in west Beirut in the past 13 months, since the militia takeover of the Moslem neighborhoods.

They are William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer; the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister; Peter Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut, and the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest.

As a result of threats against Americans before and after the U.S. veto of the Lebanese resolution, 36 Americans working with various U.N. agencies in south Lebanon were ordered out of the country within the past two weeks.

At least 29 Americans, including diplomats, have been evacuated in recent days from Beirut to the island of Cyprus.

Lebanon prime minister says rebellion undermines country

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Moslem, warned today that a week-old Christian militia rebellion within President Amin Gemayel's Phalange Party threatens to "undermine Lebanon and terminate its existence."

He said in a statement broadcast on Lebanon's state radio that the mutiny was aimed at partitioning Lebanon into mini-states, which might force the 42-year-old Gemayel to step down.

"If they (mutineers') consolidate their control on the ground, then they will grip the reigns of power. The president then will have to bow to their will or resign," Karami said.

The mutiny, he warned, "will lead to the elimination of Lebanon." It was his first public denunciation of the movement.

Karami said the rebels' call for the election of a Christian parliament to legislate in their areas "returns us to the hard years" of the nearly decade-old civil war.

The rebels seized control of most of the Christian heartland north of Beirut last Tuesday and declared the Lebanese Forces militia, the nation's largest Christian paramilitary organization, independent from the Phalange Party.

Fuad Abu Nadher, Gemayel's nephew and commander of the Lebanese Forces militia, sided with the rebels. He said Sunday that elections will be called to establish a Christian parliament which would also serve as a "Christian cabinet within (a) decentralized government system."

A day earlier, Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt, a member of the Lebanese Cabinet, vowed to "wring the necks" of the mutineers and urged his followers to rearm for a new civil war round.

In other Lebanon-related developments Sunday:

—Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres said in an interview with CBS News that the Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon was being accelerated and should be completed "in a matter of weeks." The previous timetable called for a withdrawal by mid-September.

—The Israeli military command said in Tel Aviv that two of its soldiers were killed and five wounded when their jeep was ambushed by guerrillas firing small arms near the southern Shiite village of Jibchit. Israeli troops raided two more Shiite villages in the occupied zone as part of a four-week crackdown.

The Christian rebels have complained that Gemayel, also a Christian, was giving too many concessions to the Moslems in Syrian-mediated negotiations on political reforms aimed at ending Lebanon's civil war. They demanded representation in future talks.

Jumblatt has accused Gemayal of reneging on pledges to introduce reforms that would give Moslems an equal share of power with the Christians.

Leading the mutiny in Gemayel's party was a pro-Israeli Christian militia commander, Samir Geagea.

State-run Beirut Radio said Israeli warplanes flew reconnaissance runs over the northern fringes of Lebanon's Christian heartland, where Syria moved troops and armor to support Gemayel against the rebels.

U.S. owes more than it is owed, economists say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The broadest measure of U.S. foreign trade plunged to a record deficit of $101.6 billion last year, more than double the deficit suffered in 1983, the government reported today.

The trade hemorrhage has been so severe it is almost certain that sometime early this year the United States became a net debtor country for the first time in 71 years, government analysts said.

The last time the United States was a net debtor was in 1914, when Americans owed $3.7 billion more to foreigners than was owed to them.

The figures released by the Commerce Department today revealed that Americans' net investments overseas had dwindled to $32 billion by the end of the year, down from $104 billion when 1984 started. Analysts said this cushion has almost certainly been wiped out by now, although confirmation will not come for three months.

The information on net debt is contained in the current account balance — the broadest measure of U.S. foreign trade. The current account measures not only trade in merchandise but trade in services, primarily investment flows between the United States and other countries.

While the country has run a trade deficit every year since 1975, income from Americans' foreign investment flowing back into the country has in most years been enough to offset the merchandise deficit.

As recently as 1981, the United States had a surplus of $6.3 billion in its current account. However, a deteriorating trade picture has seen the supluses turn into massive deficits. The previous record deficit was $41.6 billion in 1983.

The $101.6 billion record set in 1984 came despite the fact that the trade picture brightened somewhat in the final three months of the year.

The current account deficit for the fourth quarter last year was $23.7 billion, down 30 percent from the $33.6 billion deficit run up during the July-September period.

Analysts said the economic slowdown in this country had temporarily dampened Americans' appetite for imports. However, they pointed to the 28 percent jump in the trade deficit in January as a sign that imports are surging once again.

The country's poor trading performance has been blamed on the high value of the dollar against foreign currencies. A strong dollar makes U.S. exports more expensive and thus harder to sell overseas while attracting a flood fo cheaper imports to this country.

The current account report said that imports rose $66.5 billion in 1984 to a new total of $327.8 billion while exports rose by only $20.1 billion to $220.3 billion.

There is disagreement over just how much adverse impact there will be from the United States becoming a net debtor country. Those who argue that the impact is minimal point out America was a net debtor from the founding of the country through the 19th century.

But now that America's overseas earnings no longer cover what it purchases from abroad, the country is in the position of relying on the willingness of foreigners to hold dollars to finance the trade deficits.

This has not been a problem so far. In fact, the dollar has soared in value by 40 percent to 70 percent since 1980, depending on what currencies it is measured against.

But many economists are concerned about what will happen when the dollar starts losing strength.

C. Fred Bergsten, director of the Institute for International Economics, a private research group, said the huge foreign debt subjects the United States to global uncertainties.

"There is a real question in my mind whether you can be the world's greatest power if you are a massive debtor country with the rest of the world holding you in hock," he said.

Other economists said the danger lies not so much in the fact that the United States has become a net debtor, but in the underlying trade problem caused by an inability of U.S. industries to compete internationally.

"The issue isn't whether we owe the money to foreigners or to ourselves. The problem is we are destroying the industrial fabric of our society," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm.

Evans blamed the strength of the dollar for putting U.S. firms at such a disadvantage that they are being forced to relocate manufacturing plants overseas. A strong dollar makes U.S. exports more expensive and thus harder to sell overseas.

Robert Ortner, chief economist at the Commerce Department, said the key issue is how the countr goes about trying to extricate itself from the current trading dilemma. He noted a growing sentiment for protectionist measures in Congress.

"Tariffs and quotas and trade restriction are not much better than shooting yourself in the foot," he said. "They would raise our inflation rate and subject us to substantial retaliation."

Ortner said the key way to solve the trade problem is to reduce federal budget deficits.

had personal and business accounts, when they learned that First State Savings and Loan Association was covered by Celeste's order.

"We can't touch any of that money," Mrs. Pipic told The New York Times. "I just hope the federal government is going to understand when tax time comes."

A telephone hotline explaining the closings fielded 10,000 calls over the weekend.

Celeste said he will ask officials of the closed institutions to work with legislators to develop plans whereby depositors can make partial withdrawals of their funds.

The governor said the institutions would also have the option for mergers with commercial banks so that they could get Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation coverage.

What prompted the run on Home State was the March 4 collapse of E.S.M. Government Securities Corp. of Florida, which owed more than $300 million to at least 68 investors, including 16 cities and some mid-size banks.

Celeste acted out of fear the Home State closing and possible runs on other S&Ls would wipe out the private Ohio Deposit Guarantee Fund, which protects deposits at the 70 institutions. About 200 federally insured S&Ls were not affected by Celeste's order and remained open.

In a gesture designed to help defuse the most irritating problem hovering over the meeting, Reagan and Mulroney announced after their first half-hour face-to face session Sunday that they had agreed to appoint two special envoys to study acid rain. Reagan tapped his tough former transportation secretary, Drew Lewis, while Mulroney opted for the popular William Davis, the former prime minister of Ontario.

Reagan said he "couldn't be happier about getting this under way and off dead center."

Mulroney, who had wanted an end to U.S. research and pressed for more action on the pollution problem, admitted, "We did not work a miracle." But Canadian officials denied that the action was just a sop, saying the high-level team amounted to a stronger commitment so far from the Reagan administration for a joint solution to the acid rain problem.

Acid rain is the name given to the sulphuric and nitric acids washed out of the atmosphere by rain, snow and smog and deposited as particles some environmentalists blame for threatening fauna and fish. Canadians contend nearly half the pollutant comes from the United States.

Irish high spirits and Gaelic-inspired good will were evident throughout the St. Patrick's Day opening of what is being called the "Shamrock Summit," and were carefully woven into the activities of the two men of Irish heritage.

At an evening gala, the president and his wife, Nancy, joined Mulroney and his wife, Mila, on stage for a choir-backed rendition of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling."

Air France in Paris said executives had not yet decided whether to suspend flights to Tehran.

Iran Air said flights from London and Athens to Tehran would take off as scheduled.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency quoted a senior Iranian military official as warning Baghdad citizens to evacuate "as soon as possible so that the Iranian missiles will only hit the Iraqi criminals in their palaces."

The official said Iran would attack Iraqi cities because Iraq failed to heed Iran's warning against attacks on Iranian cities.

Baghdad Radio said Iraqi warplanes today raided the cities of Tabriz, Hamadan, Isfahan, Kermanshah and Arak. The Iranian news agency confirmed the attacks on Tabriz and Arak, but said its planes drove off attackers at Hamadan and Isfahan. It gave no casualty figures.

The two nations also made conflicting claims of victory today in a week-long battle for a key highway leading to Iraq's second-largest city.

Iran said its soldiers had killed or wounded 12,000 Iraqis and captured 3,000 more in an invasion across miles of southern Iraqi swamp aimed at cutting off Basra, an Iraqi city at the head of the Persian Gulf.

But Iraq's information minister, Latif Nsayef Jassem, said Sunday on Baghdad Radio that 15,000 Iranians had been killed and thousands more captured in the fighting. The contradictory claims cannot be verified independently because Western reporters are not allowed near the battlefront.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said in a report monitored in Cyprus that Iranian soldiers fighting for control of the Howeizah marshes and the Baghdad-to-Basra highway, had captured the Hur Al Azim marsh south of the Iraqi city of Amarah.

The news agency later said Iranian forces shot down an Iraqi war plane in the southern front.

Manson follower wants to stay in prison

ALDERSON, W.Va. (AP) — A member of the notorious Charles Manson "family" says she has strong personal and political reasons for wanting to stay in prison when her mandatory "good time" release date comes up later this month.

"It's not that I'm institutionalized," said Sandra Good, one of Manson's early followers. "Anybody who has ever been in prison would rather be free to do things such as go to the beach, walk in the woods and see their children.

"It's just that I want to be where my family is, and my family is in prison."

Ms. Good said she preferred her cloistered existence at the federal women's prison here to a life in what she calls "the bigger institution" outside.

The 40-year-old former Southern California surfer girl has served nearly 10 years of the 15-year sentence she received in Sacramento, Calif., for conspiring to mail death threats to corporate officials she accused of polluting the planet.

She was arrested when FBI agents searched the apartment she shared with another family member, Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, who had been taken into custody for pointing a pistol at President Ford.

Ms. Good and Ms. Fromme, who was sentenced to life in prison, have been serving their time at Alderson, a medium security prison that resembles a college campus. They see it somewhat differently.

"In a way, this place can be viewed as our convent," Ms. Good said in an interview at the prison. "We're like nuns, working toward Earth balance."

The two women keep their heads covered in nun fashion; they wore bandannas during the interview.

Ms. Good was dressed in blue, symbolizing "clean air and water." Ms. Fromme was clad in red, "for the animals and earth colors."

"Blue," as Ms. Good called herself, elaborated on her reason for not wanting to be released.

"Thought can be as important as deeds," said Ms. Good, her blue eyes matching her outfit. "By staying inside where my family is, I keep myself outside of thoughts that are dedicated to money, power and approval. I keep myself in the thought of ATWA (Air, Trees, Water, Animals), the thought of life."

Sandra Good

Ms. Good and Ms. Fromme work as groundskeepers at Alderson. They live in separate dormitories but see each other daily.

Neither woman was connected with the Manson family murders of actress Sharon Tate and eight other people in 1969. Manson and four members of his counterculture clan, who lived on an abandoned movie set near Los Angeles, are serving life sentences for the wanton killings at two houses in a luxurious Hollywood Hills neighborhood.

Ms. Fromme and Ms. Good maintained they were in telepathic communication with Manson. They also said the actions for which they were imprisoned, and the killings themselves, were designed to protect ATWA.

"We all need ATWA to survive," said Ms. Good. "So, you can see that the killings were done in self-defense. Also, they were done to prevent the world from being blown up, but that's all I can say about that."

Ms. Good said she would like nothing better than to be with Manson again. She hasn't seen him since his 1971 trial, although she has had permission to write to him.

"Manson is ATWA," she said. "He is the balance, I know this in the depths of my soul; also, I have a child by Charley."

chances of electing a minority candidate to one of the two at-large seats. By only voting for one at-large candidate, a voter can increase his or her chances of being elected, since the top two vote-getters take the seats, she explained. But the only minority candidate for an at-large seat is Manuel Carrasco, who Saturday announced his opposition to any attempt to change the ballot language to favor minority candidates.

"If he says he doesn't want it, fine," Ms. DeWitt said today. She's willing to concede the issue for this election, but wants the Justice Department "to establish a precedent" on changing the language for future elections, both for city council and for the Midland Independent School District, which is negotiating a change from at-large to single-member district seats for its board of trustees.

But LULAC President Edia Hernandez and BAC President Charlie Jackson said today they wanted the Justice Department to issue its ruling, even though absentee balloting has begun.

"I've spoken to Edia and we are both in agreement," Jackson said. "We want the Justice Department to make its decision."

Yvette Rivera, an attorney for the Justice Department's civil-rights division, is "supposed to be flying in today," he said, and a decision "will definitely be made tonight."

In the wake of Carrasco's disavowal of the attempts to change the ballot wording, both Jackson and Ms. Hernandez stressed their intention was not to favor one particular candidate.

"We are doing it so that citizens understand that if they vote for one candidate, that's their prerogative," Ms. Hernandez said.

"The language is important because of the lack of political knowledge in the minority community," said Jackson, who added he agrees with Carrasco that an at-large councilman "must represent the entire city, not just one group."

Even if Justice rules for the language change, it's too late to change the ballots, Reagan said: "I don't see how at this point we could make the change without starting all over."

If the federal agency decides the issue is important enough, "It has injunctive powers to both call off the election or to invalidate the results," he said. "I don't know what would happen."

But Jackson said if the two minority groups backed away from the issue now before the Justice Department made its ruling, "Our work would be in vain."

TORNADO

The tornado first hit at the Jacaranda Shopping Plaza, snatching the roof off much of the building and leaving a 36,000-square-foot supermarket open to the skies and a jumble of air conditioning ducts, vegetables, and checkout counters.

"It's a complete loss," said Orvil Ray, area manager for Publix supermarkets. Half a dozen other stores were damaged.

An Ohio couple's camper parked in front of the building was blown over and shattered by the wind, killing Dorothy Taravella, 65, and injuring her husband, authorities said.

The twister roared into nearby homes along a mile-long path, leaving them looking like splintered matchwood and leveling trees and utility poles. Forty-one injured people were taken to Venice Hospital for treatment of cuts, contusions and fractures. All but eight were released after treatment and those admitted were listed in fair condition, said nursing supervisor Ann Quoos.

Jaqub Sieniawski, 66, who suffered from a heart condition, died standing on his front porch, where he had apparently been drawn by the noise from fierce winds, police said.

Jacobson said 55 homes were destroyed and another 120 were at least 50 percent damaged. Another 100 or so homes suffered less severe damage, said Marie Sammarco, a county property appraiser.

A "very preliminary" estimate put the loss at more than $2 million but that figure was bound to increase, Jacobson said.

Kerrie Angeley, 13, was sleeping in a top bunk bed when the tornado blew the roof off her home.

"There was a big noise. I thought I was going to die," she said. "Luckily the ceiling didn't collapse. It just blew off. I looked up and the ceiling wasn't there. I went into the closet, shut the door and I started screaming."

Six officers arraigned in death of drug agent

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Six police officers and a former police agent have been arraigned on charges of kidnapping and killing a U.S. drug agent. Some of the unshaven and haggard defendants claimed they had been tortured and forced to sign confessions.

The men, six of them Jalisco state Judicial Police officers, stood behind bars Sunday while officials read more than 380 pages of evidence against them. The accused said they had been beaten and given electric shocks, and had not been fed for a week. One other suspect died in police custody last week.

Judge Gonzalo Ballesteros Tena said "all seven are charged to a greater or lesser degree" with the three most serious crimes — homicide, kidnapping and drug-related offenses. He said the degree of each person's charges would be determined later.

He said he did not expect any of the defendants to be released on bail.

Kidnapping carries a sentence ranging from six to 40 years in prison, murder from eight to 20 years, and narcotics violations seven to 15 years.

Ballesteros Tena must decide by late Tuesday whether the evidence is sufficient to consider the men "presumed responsible" for the crimes. If so, he has a year to hear more evidence and reach a verdict. If not, the case is thrown out of court.

The defendants are among 13 people arrested last week in an investigation of the killing of Enrique Camarena Salazar, a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, and Alfredo Zavala Avelar, a pilot who worked with him. Camarena and Zavala were kidnapped Feb. 7 in Guadalajara and their severely beaten bodies were found March 5 on a ranch 60 miles east of the city.

Felipe Flores, a spokesman for the Attorney General's office, said Saturday that authorities are still looking for six or seven other people in the case, including a reputed drug trafficker, Rafael Caro Quintero. Authorities say they have issued several more arrest warrants.

Of the 13 people arrested so far, four were released after questioning, one was turned over to state authorities in Guadalajara on other charges and the other, Commander Gabriel Gonzalez Gonzalez of the Jalisco homicide division, died in custody.

Jose Guadalupe Munoz Villareal, the former police agent, told the court Sunday that he had heard sounds of Gonzalez Gonzalez being tortured to death.

"We could hear his screams and we knew his voice," he said. "And at a certain time his screams stopped and we heard someone say, 'This ox is gone.' The Attorney General's office said last week an autopsy showed the cause of death was "acute bleeding of the pancreas" and indicated no signs of beating.

Munoz Villareal showed the court a bruise on his shoulder and burns on his right ankle. He said that in addition to being beaten, his head had been forced into a toilet bowl, carbonated water was forced up his nose, and he was given electric shocks.

Munoz Villareal said he had been forced to sign a confession, "a sheet of paper already written out."

Two other defendants, Gerardo Torres Lepe and Benjamin Locheo Salazar, also said they were tortured.

Forty-thousand Belgians protest missiles' deployment

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — More than 40,000 people marched through Brussels to protest the government's deployment of U.S.-made cruise nuclear missiles in Belgium.

Police said there were no violent incidents in the Sunday protest. Organizers claimed some 150,000-200,000 demonstrators took part, but police put the figure at about 43,000.

The march was held within a few miles of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's headquarters. Some roads that pass by the sprawling NATO complex were closed, armored police cars were parked inside the main entrance and mounted police patroled areas around the headquarters on the outskirts of the city.

The march had been scheduled before Friday's announcement that the government had agreed to deploy 16 cruise missiles on Belgian soil, and was to have protested nuclear missiles in both East and West Europe.

But Friday's announcement and the arrival hours later of the 16 missiles at Florennes air base in southern Belgium turned the protest into a march against Prime Minister Wilfried Martens' center-right coalition.

Pierre Galand, one of the demonstration organizers, called the deployment of the medium-range missiles "a direct provocation" and urged the government to reverse its decision.

Could Philippines' next president be a woman?

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Will Imelda Marcos or Corazon Aquino be the next president of the Philippines?

Both Mrs. Marcos, the country's first lady, and Mrs. Aquino, the widow of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino, say they will not run.

However, there is increasing talk in the capital of a battle between the country's two best-known women for the presidency of the Philippine islands.

The election is scheduled for 1987, but critics of President Ferdinand E. Marcos, 67, say that, despite his denials, it may be earlier, possibly this year.

Although the Philippines has never had a woman president, women have held most other government posts, including positions as Supreme Court justices. Men are the traditional leaders in Philippine society, but women, who have entered nearly all professions, wield considerable power.

Mrs. Marcos, 55, says she only wants to support her husband for re-election. Mrs. Aquino, 52, says she, as leader of an opposition coalition, only wants to gain justice for her husband and "restore democracy to the Philippines."

But Marcos' early announcement that he will run for re-election in 1987 and his increased activity following several months of medical seclusion have not stopped rumors he may soon yield to his younger and more active wife.

Labor Minister Blas Ople said Mrs. Marcos is the most likely contender after Marcos because she is "pre-eminent in organization resources and personal networks."

Mrs. Marcos, a cabinet minister and governor of Metropolitan Manila, has long been the second most powerful figure in her husband's government, overshadowing Prime Minister Cesar Virata.

In recent weeks, she has dedicated public markets, met with farmers in their fields, handed out relief goods and announced several new projects. She headed a delegation last week to the funeral of Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko.

Mrs. Aquino's insistence that she will not run for any office has also failed to stop speculation she may be drafted by a badly splintered opposition looking for a candidate acceptable to all factions.

Her husband, assassinated Aug. 21, 1983, in what government prosecutors are trying to prove was a military conspiracy involving Armed Forces chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver, is considered a martyr by a wide variety of opposition groups.

"If you are looking for one who could really unify the opposition right now, it would be Mrs. Cory Aquino. That is the feeling of all of us," said former Supreme Court Justice Cecilia Munoz Palma, the first woman to hold that position, who chaired a recent opposition political convention.

Mrs. Aquino, a quiet but compelling woman whose public speeches rarely last for more than a few minutes, has never run for political office. She openly accuses Marcos of masterminding her husband's death and has been working for unity among several groups opposing Marcos.

All that glitters and glows is gold.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, March 19, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: An outsider will play a key role in your good fortune this year. Take a positive attitude towards changes at work and home. Assuming new responsibilities will bring new rewards. Financial growth depends on your dedication and hard work. Give a special project your best shot. Romance moves you in an exciting direction. Marital bonds grow stronger. A challenge draws family members closer together. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actress Ursula Andress, novelist Philip Roth, actor Patrick McGoohan, Virginia First Lady Lynda Bird Johnson Robb, Judge John Sirica, Oakland A's pitcher Mike Norris, actress-singer Phyllis Newman, the Seattle Mariners' Ivan Calderone, William Jennings Bryan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A delay is only temporary. Catch up on paper work related to your finances or budget. Timely reports and well-written memos help you reach your career goals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Double-check any travel arrangements before starting out. Your relationship with a former flame could interfere with a current romance. Watch your step!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A delay or postponement could be a blessing in disguise. You gain more time to prepare an important presentation! Spend the afternoon working on projects you can handle alone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A strong-minded individual makes unreasonable demands. Keep your cool and you can handle the situation beautifully. A Gemini offers some excellent business advice; follow it and you make new financial gains.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A work project could have difficulty getting off the ground today. A little imagination relieves the tedium of performing routine tasks. Body language can be very revealing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A well-connected individual offers valuable advice or assistance. Go slow; there could be strings attached. Avoid giving the impression that you would make a jealous romantic partner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A brother or sister plays a key role in the business or financial gains you make now. New partnerships enjoy favorable influences. A bargain may not be as wonderful as it appears.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Joint endeavors will greatly increase profits. Renew your efforts to get on better terms with an older person. Romance takes off in an exciting new direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your quick reactions impress someone you help in an emergency situation. A friendship offers less than you expected. Steer clear of negative people. Solo projects and hobbies prove very fulfilling.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be more conservative in business; a capricious attitude could be your undoing. Complete paper work on time. Meeting deadlines proves you are reliable. Evening is the best time for mediating a family dispute.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Influential person requires accurate, up-to-date information. Do your own research; others could make small but costly mistakes. Although romance has its ups and downs, a platonic relationship flourishes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You win big in business or romance when you adopt a direct approach. Loved one forgives past mistakes. Tension evaporates! Look to the future with confidence. New opportunities beckon.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q109752 ♡A98 ◇J102 ♣3
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—In the direct seat, this hand would not qualify for a vulnerable overcall of one spade. In the passout position, however, you must protect against the possibility that partner has been forced into making a trap pass on a good hand with clubs. You are not strong enough for a balancing double, so bid one spade.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♡KQJ762 ◇KJ9 ♣AJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—You are much too strong for a balancing bid of one heart. However, you can't afford a double because of your spade shortness—partner might insist on a spade contract. The solution is to jump to two hearts. In the balancing seat, that shows a one-suited hand of at least opening bid strength.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ954 ♡A93 ◇QJ102 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—In the balancing seat, a one spade overcall could be made on a hand considerably weaker than this. In addition, you can't even be sure that spades is your best spot. Double. In the balancing seat, you can make a takeout double with a weaker hand than in the direct position.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ93 ♡A9 ◇QJ105 ♣K102
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—You have a balanced-hand with a stopper in the enemy suit. Bid one no trump. In the passout seat, that action shows about 12-15 points—with 16-18, you would first double and then bid no trump at the cheapest level.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ9 ♡93 ◇J1052 ♣AK72
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Because of your length and strength in clubs, it is obvious that partner did not make a trap pass. Therefore, he rates to have a fairly weak hand. Since the opponents are in your best suit, pass. It seems that West has a strong hand, so if you reopen the bidding you could easily drive the opponents into a superior contract—hearts, for example. You might not even be able to defeat a game.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ982 ◇5 ♣KJ10653
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What do you bid now?

A.—It looks as if there is going to be some heavy bidding on this hand. If you overcall one spade, the bidding could easily be at four hearts when next it is your turn, and you won't know what to do. If, however, you choose to overcall two clubs, no development of the auction can embarrass you. You will simply show your spades at the appropriate level to complete the description of your two-suited hand.

Bach preludes played at premier at Yale concerts

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Old, familiar melodies surprised audiences in the first modern performance of 33 previously unknown chorale preludes by Johann Sebastian Bach.

On Sunday, more than 1,000 people, some from as far away as California, crowded into Yale University's Battell Chapell for both performances of the music discovered last fall in an 18th century music manuscript in the university's library.

Despite their "modern premiere," some of the preludes were for chorales that have become part of the common Protestant hymnal and were instantly recognized.

Preludes were part of the early 18th century German Protestant church service in which the organist played an embellished version of the melody as a means of introducing the chorale to be sung.

Although they were not signed, the preludes were clearly identifiable as by Bach by their style and notation, said Wolff.

The program featured two organists, a choir and a trombone quartet.

Attending the concert was Christoph Wolff, one of the world's leading authorities on Bach, who discovered the manuscripts and helped Yale organist Charles Krigbaum prepare for the program.

Krigbaum said there were numerous errors in the manuscript, which was compiled by a copyist — a practice that was common in the 18th century.

Both Krigbaum and Harvard organist John Ferris were deliberate in their presentation of the works since they both had to learn the music quickly.

Plans for the concert were announced shortly after the first of the year and both performances were sold out in February. The Battell Chapel and its organ have just completed renovations.

The manuscript containing the Bach preludes had escaped the attention of scholars because it was catalogued as "chorales without text," Yale officials said.

Of the 38 compositions in the manuscript identifie as Johann Sebastian Bach's, five were known to exis previously. All are believed to be early works, likel written before 1710, and show the range of style h was developing at that time. Bach died in 1750.

Although they were not signed, the preludes were clearly identifiable as by Bach by their style and notation, said Wolff. In addition, the paper on which they are written is clearly from the 18th century, he said, and Yale is now having X-ray studies done o water marks to provide a more exact date.

Yale University Press is planning to publish facsimile editions of both the complete manuscript in which the preludes were found and the first performance edition edited and transcribed by Wolff.

Prince Andrew will perform Falklands' airport opening

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew, a Royal Navy helicopter pilot who flew decoy missions during the 1982 Falklands War, will open the islands' new airport near Port Stanley in May, the Defense Ministry said.

Prince Andrew

The 25-year-old prince is currently in the South Atlantic on the frigate HMS Brazen, which patrols the 200-mile protection zone Britain has maintained around the Falklands since the end of the war with Argentina.

The Brazen will remain in the Falklands until June.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said Andrew decided to perform the opening ceremony for the new airport despite concern over security.

Britain recaptured the Falklands following an Argentine invasion in 1982 but hostilities between the two countries have not officially ceased.

During the conflict, Andrew was part of the crew of the aircraft carrier Invincible and at one point his Sea King helicopter was used as a decoy for Exocet missiles.

LA MIRADA, Calif. (AP) — Whether the topic was his daughter, drugs or happiness, actor Cary Grant's humor and philosophy delighted an appreciative audience during an appearance at a shopping-mall theater.

Cary Grant

With 72 movies to his credit during his 81 years, Grant told an enthralled throng Friday his secret to longevity has been to "do everything in moderation. Except making love."

He said he gets "a kick" out of his occasional appearances like Friday night's "one-man show" at the 1,264-seat La Mirada Civic Theater. He called them "ego fodder."

Sitting on a high wooden bar stool, Grant said he has a terrific relationship with his daughter, Jennifer, by his fourth wife, Dyan Cannon.

"We level with each other," he said. "I know when she's looking at me she's not thinking, 'I wonder if I can get this old goat for a BMW.'"

With a thatch of white hair framing his familiar square face, the actor discussed his medically supervised experience two decades ago with LSD.

"I know that I became happier because of it," he said. "Also I lost a lot of the fears that I had...the hypocrisy." But he said he doesn't recommend its use because "it is illegal."

"Like anything else that's good for you," he said, "they take it away..."

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Tom Selleck is television's highest paid actor at $220,000 per episode of the hit series Magnum, P.I., but his estimated $4.8 million annual salary falls short of comedian Johnny Carson's $5 million, according to People magazine.

Tom Selleck

Also closing in on the $5 million figure is Alan Alda, who reportedly will receive $4.4 million next year under a contract for a new situation comedy on CBS, People said in its March 25 issue, which listed the paychecks of 57 top celebrities.

The king of show biz earnings for 1984 appears to have been rock star Michael Jackson, who reportedly took in $70 million for his album "Thriller." Jackson donated an estimated $5 million from his Victory tour to the United Negro College Fund and other charities.

Jackson still lags behind the lifetime earnings of former Beatle Paul McCartney, who "has made more money than any musician who ever lived," a total of $500 million, the magazine said.

Runner-up on the pop charts last year was Prince, who earned $17.8 million for his "Purple Rain" album.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William J. Schroeder spent a quiet 113th day of life on his artificial heart, the longest anyone has ever lived with the plastic and metal device.

Dr. Barney Clark, a 62-year-old Seattle-area dentist, made medical history Dec. 2, 1982, as the first man to have a permanent artificial heart implanted into his chest. He died March 23, 1983 after 112 days on the fist-sized device.

Both men received the implant from Dr. William C. DeVries.

Schroeder, 53, was in satisfactory condition Sunday, and spent the day visiting with his family and watching basketball on television, spokeswoman Linda Broadus said.

Balancing act

Now that the scales of justice have been — appropriately — tilting back toward society, it's refreshing to see the U.S. Supreme Court has taken yet another important step toward achieving that balance.

The court ruled 6-3 that an unsolicited confession made before a suspect is informed of his right to remain silent does not make a later confession inadmissible as evidence so long as the suspect was properly warned before making the second statement.

This was the second time in less than a year that the court has made a common-sense modification of the 19-year-old Miranda rule, which requires police to inform suspects of their right against self-incrimination. Under Miranda, police are required to tell suspects they have a right to remain silent, a right to have an attorney present during questioning, and that what they tell police can be used against them in court. Unfortunately, Miranda has been abused at times by defendants and society has suffered the consequences.

In this case, an Oregon appeals court had overturned the conviction of an 18-year-old burglar who had confessed to his crime. When police served an arrest warrant and told the suspect they thought he was involved in a burglary, the youth replied, "Yes, I was there."

An hour later, after being properly informed of his rights, the youth gave a full confession. He was convicted by a trial court, but a state appellate court ruled that his initial statement had a "coercive impact" on him and led to the later confession.

But Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and five of her colleagues rejected that absurd contention. The court majority said the initial statement could not be used in court, but that suppressing the subsequent confession would be "an unwarranted extension of Miranda." We agree.

This Supreme Court ruling does not absolve police of the responsibility to warn suspects of their right against self-incrimination. It does prevent suspects from being held accountable to confessions blurted out before the Miranda warning and then asserting that their rights were violated. In that manner, suspects could — legally — make society their victim.

The ruling is sensible.

Another View:

Population control

The Reagan administration has struck another senseless blow against international population-control efforts. The latest maneuver is an extension of a policy unveiled at a world population-control conference last year. By law, no U.S. funds may be used for abortions overseas. But the administration announced it was denying U.S. support to private organizations involved in any way with abortion in other countries, even if no U.S. money is involved in those activities.

The administration has used that policy to deny $17 million to the International Planned Parenthood Federation, the largest private family planning organization in the world, and to hold up $46 million for the United Nations fund for Population Activities, the largest supporter of government population control programs.

Having hamstrung the international organizations, the administration now has turned to other kinds — from nationally chartered groups to local hospitals, clinics and family-planning centers. A proposed clause in U.S. contracts with foreign family planning groups would require them to keep "books and records" to prove that they have no involvement with abortion — even if those activities are legal and paid for with private or another government's funds. The forbidden activity would include performing any abortion other than to save the life of the mother, providing information about abortion or making referrals.

In effect, the administration is attempting to impose on private organizations in other countries restrictions greater than are imposed in the United States; to censor the speech of private family planning organizations; and to use private organizations to manipulate the population policies of their nations.

If foreign organizations cannot or will not meet the new requirements, the cost could be U.S family-planning assistance to 1.5 billion people in 35 countries where abortion is allowed for reasons other than to save the life of the mother. The human cost will be paid by couples denied information and materials to prevent pregnancies or space births, by women driven to abortion, by babies born into hunger and sickness.

Unfortunately, the Reagan administration has confused abortion with family planning; tragically, it has used its antipathy to one to undermine the good work of the other. The result will be the opposite intended. Congress should intervene to restore U.S. support to International Planned Parenthood, to the U.N. fund and to the thousands of groups in other countries whose work makes a better world possible.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, March 18, the 77th day of 1985. There are 288 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 18, 1965, the first spacewalk took place as Soviet cosmonaut Aleksei Leonov left his Voskhod Two capsule and remained outside the spacecraft for 20 minutes, secured by a tether.

On this date:

In 1766, England repealed the Stamp Act.

In 1837, the 22nd and 24th President of the United States, Grover Cleveland, was born in Caldwell, N.J.

In 1909, Einar Dessau of Denmark used a shortwave transmitter to converse with a government radio post about six miles away. It's believed to have been the first broadcast by a "ham" operator.

In 1922, Mohandas K. Gandhi was sentenced in India to six years imprisonment for civil disobedience. He would be released after serving two years.

In 1931, Schick Incorporated marketed the first electric razor.

In 1937, more than 400 people — mostly children — were killed in a gas explosion at a school in New London, Texas.

In 1938, Mexico took control of foreign-owned oil properties on Mexican soil.

In 1959, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the Hawaii statehood bill.

In 1962, France and Algerian rebels agreed to a truce.

In 1974, most of the Arab oil-producing nations ended their embargo against the United States.

Ten years ago: It was revealed that the Central Intelligence Agency had, in the summer of 1974, salvaged part of a sunken Soviet submarine from the floor of the Pacific Ocean, using the Hughes-built Glomar Explorer deep-sea vessel.

JACK ANDERSON

GAO generally supports Grace

WASHINGTON — There should be bad news today for the spendthrifts who are squandering the taxpayers' money. The General Accounting Office is expected to release its nine-month, 1,312-page critique of the Grace Commission's work.

Jack Anderson

The report generally supports the commission's assault on federal mismanagement. Most of the exceptions can be attributed to differences on recommended changes in major policies and in accounting methods.

My associate Tony Capaccio pored over the GAO review; here's a summary of the most important savings the Grace Commission recommended — along with the GAO's evaluation of the commission's findings:

— The Grace Commission offered five specific recommendations that would provide a central focus for the Budget and Personnel offices. The purpose is to encourage increased productivity among federal workers, which would save an estimated $10.5 billion in personnel expenses over three years.

Comments the GAO review: "The savings estimates provided by Grace appear to be reasonable, although they cannot be fully supported" — meaning that the exact amount of savings can't be predicted until the recommendations are tried.

"What is important," the review explains, "is that the Grace Commission and the GAO show significant opportunities for reducing federal costs through productivity gains."

— The commission wants to get Uncle Sam out of the hydroelectric power business by selling off five of the country's major dams and their generating plants. The sale of the power complexes would bring in $19.8 billion over a three-year period, the commission estimates. The GAO isn't so sure.

While the recommendation "may have some merit ... GAO sees a number of obstacles to implementing this recommendation," the review states. The GAO auditors had "no basis to assess ... whether the commission's estimated sales price is reasonable," they point out.

The five power plants are Bonneville Power Administration, Portland, Ore.; Alaska Power Administration, Juneau; Southwestern Power Administration, Tulsa, Okla.; Southeastern Power Administration, Elberton, Ga., and Western Area Power Administration, Golden, Colo.

— GAO's hard-eyed cost cutters give unqualified approval to the Grace Commission's recommendation that user fees for government-operated hydroelectric plants be increased. And they agree with the commission's estimate that $4.5 billion could be realized over three years by bringing the user fees more in line with what most utility customers pay.

— The Grace Commission urged that federal agency procurement chiefs — the people who are responsible for what the government buys — abide by the provisions of a 2-year-old directive called Circular A-76. This directs agencies to rely on the private sector for commercial products and services whenever they are cheaper.

The commission estimated a three-year savings of $7.3 billion from turning over procurement to the private sector. The GAO review neither approves nor questions this estimate, but it notes that while the Reagan administration had made some moves in the spirit of A-76, "in spite of these actions, GAO agrees with the Grace Commission's position that legislation could be beneficial in encouraging more consistent and widespread compliance with A-76."

— The GAO finds "merit" in the commission's recommendation that three federal wage-protection laws, including the controversial Davis-Bacon Act, be either repealed or modified. The Grace Commission estimated that the three-year savings would be $11.6 billion; the GAO said this estimate appears "reasonable."

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Michael J. Glennon, former Senate Foreign Relations Committee counsel, has charged that U.S. intelligence agencies wink at the illegal harassment and surveillance of U.S. residents by foreign intelligence services.

Glennon first detailed the activities of foreign intelligence agents in the United States in a secret 1979 report. He recently testified that the United States has training and information-sharing relationships with the foreign services, which "have used their newly acquired skills to violate United States law." Rarely, he said, do the U.S. agencies make protests, and "these appear to have been pro forma."

Glennon aired his charges at a hearing into the murder of Taiwanese dissident author Henry Liu in San Francisco last October. Taiwanese intelligence personnel have been implicated.

— Saddam Hussein, the dictator of Iraq, is a blood-drenched tyrant even by the standards of the region. But like earlier despots, Hussein tries to present the image of a benevolent Big Brother.

Posters of Hussein are everywhere in Baghdad, showing him in a variety of poses and costumes: looking stern and determined in military uniform, gazing fondly at a baby he holds in his arms — even romantically caparisoned like Rudolph Valentino in sheikly robes.

— A new phenomenon has appeared in Saudi Arabia: the American-style workaholic. It's a radical departure from the old lazy days when, as a State Department report observes, hard work was left to foreigners and a Saudi could make money just by getting up in the morning.

The new Saudi strivers appear to be suffering from all the symptoms of their American role models. The report notes "higher incidence of heart attacks, hypertension and ... the other side effects of Western progress ... (and) Western-style press of business."

EVANS & NOVAK

Shultz rebuffed by Reagan

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's quick refusal to attend Konstantin Chernenko's funeral was a highly-unusual setback for Secretary of State George Shultz, chief advocate in the Reagan inner circle pushing the president to attend.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Contrary to published reports, national security adviser Robert McFarlane was not enthusiastic about a Moscow trip for Reagan. In McFarlane's view, the president would be only one among scores of heads of state paying court to new Communist Party boss Mikhail Gorbachev. Even Michael Deaver, normally the administration's most enthusiastic detentist, worried about loss of prestige for Reagan.

The president's rejection of Shultz's advice, however, does not extend to other matters. Reagan's chief diplomat continues to ride high in prestige and power inside the Oval Office.

FARMER TED

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who as a liberal northeasterner never has shown much interest in agriculture, is about to join farm-belt Democrats in pushing for federal help to ease farmers through the current crisis — thereby increasing speculation about a try for the 1988 presidential nomination.

Rep. Dan Glickman, a moderate from Kansas, has been delegated by other farm-belt Democrats trying to enlist Kennedy's prominence to press for federal help to the farmers. The senator's aides fret that his sudden interest in an area that has never before concerned him, coming on top of his anti-South African efforts, may look like political opportunism. Nevertheless, Kennedy is likely to join the farm bloc.

An ironic note: Sen. John F. Kennedy attracted national attention in the 1950s by breaking from Democratic policy and supporting the Republican administration's low price-support policy.

DON'S IN CHARGE

Donald T. Regan showed he intends to run things with a firm hand as White House chief of staff when he turned down a deal worked up by Communications Director Pat Buchanan and political director Ed Rollins to split between them supervision over the politically-sensitive public liaison office.

No soap, said Regan. He wants an organizationally clean operation with either Buchanan or Rollins in charge. The betting is that he will pick Buchanan. That's good news for the New Right, which distrusts Rollins but counts on Buchanan to keep close contact with pro-life activists and evangelicals through the public liaison office.

A footnote: Rollins soon will begin beefing up his political office by naming Haley Barbour, one of the South's most respected Republican political operatives, as an aide. In 1982, Barbour was Republican nominee running against Democratic Sen. John Stennis in Mississippi.

MUBARAK STRIKES OUT

Not only was President Hosni Mubarak's Middle East peace plan publicly rebuffed by President Reagan, but the Egyptian leader struck out when he pleaded for U.S. help in delaying a U.N. Security Council vote on Israel's "iron fist" policy in southern Lebanon while he was visiting Washington.

Mubarak was alarmed by the certainty of a U.S. veto of the Security Council resolution condemning Israel at the moment he was conferring with Reagan on a state visit. The veto, he feared, would damage him throughout the Arab world at a time when he is trying to mend fences with fellow Moslems.

But the U.S. delegation at the U.N. informed the Egyptians they could not delay the veto by departing Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick. That mirrored the president's rejection of Mubarak's request for him to get personally involved in mediation between Israel and the Arabs.

CHARLEY REESE

Roosevelt right about intelligentsia

The presidents I most admire are George Washington, Tom Jefferson, and Andy Jackson, but the one I admire and love is Theodore Roosevelt.

Charley Reese

I can hear the intelligentsia gasp. In our decadent and effeminate age, Teddy Roosevelt is as out of place as Wilt Chamberlain at a national convention of Southern white midgets.

Furthermore, in this age of mirrors, the first thing to be said of Teddy Roosevelt is that he was real. There was not a crack between what he said and wrote and what he believed and did and was. He was as genuine as solid gold, a living rebuttal to the cynics' claim that no such creature as a real American hero actually existed.

Roosevelt wrote an essay entitled, "The American Boy," which spells out the ideals he lived by and urged others to follow. It opens this way:

"Of course, what we have a right to expect of the American boy is that he shall turn out to be a good American man. Now, the chances are strong that he won't be much of a man unless he is a good deal of a boy. He must not be a coward or a weakling, a bully, a shirk, or a prig. He must work hard and play hard. He must be clean-minded and clean-lived, and able to hold his own under all circumstances and against all comers. It is only on these conditions that he will grow into the kind of American man of whom America can be really proud."

Roosevelt then wrote of how sports can be useful, though he warned that sports must not be allowed to become an end in themselves but used only as a means of preparing yourself to face life's real challenges.

He urged study. "I am no advocate of senseless and excessive cramming in studies," he wrote, "but a boy should work, and should work hard, at his lessons — in the first place, for the sake of what he will learn, and in the next place, for the sake of the effect upon his own character of resolutely settling down to learn it. Shiftlessness, slackness, indifference in studying, are almost certain to mean inability to get on in other walks of life."

Next he said a boy needs both moral and physical courage. He cited examples of men who had one but not the other and condemned them as having only half a virtue.

"A coward who will take a blow without returning it is a contemptible creature; but, after all, he is hardly as contemptible as the boy who dares not stand up for what he deems right against the sneers of his companions who are themselves wrong."

He warned against being a prig, but added, "But there is urgent need that he should be clean and straight, honest and truthful, gentle and tender, as well as brave." A boy should abhor any form of bullying, cruelty or brutality.

"The best boys I know — the best men I know — are good at their studies or their businesses, fearless and stalwart, hated and feared by all that is wicked or depraved, incapable of submitting to wrong-doing, and equally incapable of being aught but tender to the weak and helpless. A healthy-minded boy should feel hearty contempt for the coward, and even more hearty indignation for the boy who bullies girls or small boys, or tortures animals. One prime reason for abhorring cowards is because every good boy should have it in him to thrash the objectionable boy as the need arises."

Today's intelligentsia have tried to reverse Roosevelt's ideals. Boys are told they must be more like girls. Fighting, even in self-defense, is frowned upon. Good or successful people are expected to apologize for their virtues. Sports have become ends in themselves and the aspect of sports most encouraged is the passive viewing of paid performers.

Most of all Roosevelt's rational nationalism is despised by the intelligentsia as stupid and dangerous. Americans are urged to be more concerned about the welfare of foreigners than about the welfare of their own country. The United States, they claim, must accept insult and injury without retaliation.

The truth is Teddy Roosevelt was right. It is today's intelligentsia which is stupid and dangerous.

Victim's brother: Sentence isn't punishment enough

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — The 75-year prison term David Port drew for killing a Houston letter carrier was not enough to suit Woody Schatz, the victim's brother.

"It's still not enough. We'll never have our sister back again," he said Saturday after a jury recommended the prison term and a $10,000 fine for Port, 18.

The same jury Friday convicted Port of murder in the June 7, 1984, shooting death of Debora Sue Schatz.

The 23-year-old woman was gunned down as she was delivering mail in the upper class Houston neighborhood where Port lived with his parents.

The conclusion of the three-week trial left Ms. Schatz's sister Darlene Sanderson "relieved. I've been waiting a long time."

Two other brothers and another sister were on hand for the trial. Ms. Schatz had eight brothers and sisters.

Doug Newell, a New Braunfels postman who had heard some of the trial testimony, said he was happy with the jury's decision if the Schatz family was pleased.

"We're hoping it'll have a positive effect on keeping anyone from doing it again," he said.

The case has drawn nationwide attention because Port's parents refused to testify against him. Bernard and Odette Port claimed the same protections that bar spouses from testifying against one another applied in their case.

But a judge rejected their argument and ordered them jailed on contempt of court charges. Both were behind bars while their son remained free on $20,000 bond, but both have since been released.

Neither was asked to testify in their son's trial and neither appeared in the New Braunfels courtroom until Saturday when the jury was deliberating sentencing.

Both refused comment after their son was handcuffed and taken to the Comal County Jail following formal sentencing.

Defense attorney Jack Zimmermann said Port likely would remain jailed in Comal County until the case is transferred back to district court in Harris County. He then likely will be transferred to the Harris County Jail until he is sent to the Texas Department of Corrections, Zimmermann said.

Zimmermann said he would ask for a new trial and failing that, he would appeal the case. He called the 75-year sentence "predictable. It's like an aging adult you know is going to die. You're just waiting for it to happen."

Zimmermann said Port's fate was sealed when State District Judge I.D. McMaster ruled a confession the defendant gave police was admissible in court.

Man who saved girls' lives honored

HOUSTON (AP) — A 29-year-old Montgomery County man who gave his life rescuing two youngsters from a falling tree has been posthumously honored for his bravery by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Martin Hoffman's parents say the pain of losing their son lingers, but a medal will help remind them that his death was not in vain.

"When you look at those two little girls you know why they're there," said Hoffman's mother, Martina Hoffman of Pittsburgh.

Hoffman is one of 110 people from the United States and Canada, including 35 who lost their lives because of their bravery, who are on the 1984 roster of heroes recognized by the commission, officials said.

The commission was established in 1904 by industrialist-philanthropist Andrew Carnegie.

Stamford legislator says farmers need profits, not more loans

ABILENE (AP) — A legislator says a federal subcommittee's survey of farmers and their monetary problems shows they are anxious to make money — not more loan commitments.

The "thin thread" of consensus is that "farmers don't need more credit," said U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford. "They need to make money so they can pay off the loans they have now."

Stenholm said the consensus is forming among members of the subcommittee as they traveled around the country listening to farmers.

He said he will help write proposed legislation designed to make farming in the United States more profitable.

He said components of such a bill would include maintaining "some semblance of the current loan and target price structure." Government support of agriculture can't be eliminated nearly as fast as the Reagan administration has proposed, he said.

Stenholm advocated a conservation plan where the government would pay farmers to take "highly erodible" land out of production.

Get more than a tax break.

In two respects, all IRAs are created equal—they allow you to build a nest egg for the future, while giving you valuable tax breaks today. After that, there are some important differences. And that's why we think you should know more about InterFirst IRAs.

The bonus rates.

You'll earn a bonus rate of 13% for the first 30 days with our special 2-Year Variable-Rate IRA CD. Thereafter, you'll earn a full 1% bonus over the 3-month U.S. T-Bill discount rate, adjusted every 90 days. What's more, you can earn bonus rates by investing in a fixed-rate IRA CD for one year or longer. Talk to an InterFirst banker for details.

The options.

You can also invest in a Money Market Savings IRA Account. Or, through InterFirst Brokerage Services, you can manage your own Self-Directed IRA. It allows you to trade stocks, bonds, government securities and options, while saving up to 70% on brokerage commissions. Plus, if you invest in a variable-rate CD, you can make periodic deposits up to your maximum contribution.

The bank.

You can open your InterFirst IRA at 68 InterFirst banks across Texas. (Those nearest you are listed below.)

Here you'll find experienced IRA counselors ready to help you choose the plan that's right for you. Naturally, as a depositor, you will be insured up to $100,000 by the FDIC.

The calculator.

Contribute $2,000 to any IRA, or invest an equal amount in your existing IRA, and we'll give you a desk-top solar-powered Texas Instruments calculator. County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Glasscock, Andrews, Gaines, Howard, Martin, Borden and Dawson: Tonight...partly cloudy and not so cool with lows in mid 40s. Wind southeast 5 to 15 mph.

Tuesday...mostly cloudy and warm with high in lower 70s. Southeast wind 10 to 20 mph.

Sterling, Tom Green, Irion and Coke: Tonight...partly cloudy and not so cool with low in upper 40s. Wind southeast 10 to 15 mph.

Tuesday...mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers. Warm with high in mid 70s. Wind south to southeast 10 to 20 mph.

Warmer weather expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Slightly warmer temperatures are in store for Midlanders tonight and Tuesday, but cloudy skies will reduce their impact, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-40s and winds from the southeast at 5-15 mph, while Tuesday will be mostly cloudy with a high in the mid-70s and southeasterly winds of 10-20 mph.

Sunday's high of 55 was 36 degrees below the record high for the date of 91, set in 1977, while the overnight low of 38 was 15 degrees above the 1934 record of 23.

STATE

A high-pressure ridge extending into Texas from the Great Lakes and Mississippi Valley kept skies fair over the Lone Star State today, and forecasters expectded the clearing trend to continue.

Only scattered high cloudiness persisted in South Texas. Winds were light and variable across the state.

Low temperatures were generally in the 40s and 50s, but a few 30 degree readings cooled the Panhandle. Extremes ranged from a chilly 35 degrees at Amarillo to a mild 54 degrees at Corpus Christi.

The National Weather Service said it should generally be fair to partly cloudy through tonight. Highs were expected in the 60s and 70s, with lows tonight in the 40s and 50s and 60s confined to southern sections.

Sunny skies were predicted in North Texas, with fair skies tonight and Tuesday.

Some scattered showers may develop by Tuesday in South Texas, with cloudy to partly cloudy skies expected and highs mainly in the 70s.

It should be fair in the Panhandle and partly cloudy elsewhere in West Texas tonight, becoming partly cloudy most sections Tuesday with widely scattered showers and a few thunderstorms.

NATION

Snowshowers dotted the Appalachians and upper Ohio Valley and were scattered along the Atlantic Coast today while temperatures dipped into the single digits in Michigan.

Cloudy skies prevailed over the northern and central Pacific Coast with scattered light rain from northern California across northwest Nevada.

Ballesteros birdies way to victory

Golf

NEW ORLEANS — Severiano Ballesteros fired three birdies on the back nine and survived a bogey on his final hole to come from two strokes off the pace to win the $400,000 USF&G Classic Sunday when John Mahaffey double-bogeyed 18.

The bogey on the 18 Ballesteros left tied with Mahaffey at 11-under-par, with Mahaffey still having two holes to play. But Mahaffey returned the favor on the 18th, carding his double bogey. He knocked his first shot into tree roots on the right side of the fairway, his second into the trees on the left, chipped back onto the fairway, then two-putted from about eight feet after a second chip shot to the green. Mahaffey took a 6 on the hole for a 207 total, two behind Ballesteros...

KAANAPALI, Hawaii — Jane Blalock rolled in a 15-foot putt on the final hole to win the Kemper Open by one stroke over Pat Bradley with a 75-287. Pat Bradley finished second after a double bogey on the final hole. Blalock's second shot on the 18th, landed in the tall grass next a water hazard, costing her a penalty stroke. She then sank her 15-footer to save par on the hole and win $45,000.

INDIAN WELLS—Peter Thomson of Australia birdied the last two holes en route to a 3-under-par 69—280 and a one-stroke victory in the $300,000 Vintage Invitational for players 50 and older. Arnold Palmer, who eagled the par 5 18th, tied Billy Casper for second...

DALLAS — Martina Navratilova put pressure on Chris Evert Lloyd's serve to win the Dallas Virginia Slims 6-3, 6-4. Navratilova broke Lloyd's serve four times, twice in each set, to take the $28,000 first prize.

Lloyd ended Navratilova's 13-match winning streak against her in January in Key Biscayne, Fla., 6-4, 6-2, before a capacity crowd of 8,700 in Moody Coliseum which seemed to be pulling for the No. 2 seed...

HAMPTON, Ga. — Bill Elliott, hampered by a recently broken leg, won the 328-lpa Coca-Cola 500 Grand National stock car race in a Ford Thunderbird at Atlanta International Raceway Sunday. "The leg bothered me there from 150 laps on," Elliott said. "I couldn't hardly keep it up and it was real hard to mash the brake and the clutch. But I just hung on."

Cale Yarborough, who took control of the race from Elliott as the latter's injury became more painful, said, "We had them covered when the engine went away. I was counting laps down, but I felt something in the motor, I thought, so I let off a little bit and then stood on it again — just in case it was my imagination when I was so far ahead. Well, it wasn't my imagination."...

Hoosiers' hopes improve

Steve Alford regains shooting eye

Associated Press

NIT

The regular season was nothing to write home about for Indiana University, but the Hoosiers are hoping to tack on a big P.S. now that Steve Alford has rediscovered his shooting touch.

Alford shot 59 percent as an Indiana freshman last year and upped that to 64.4 percent as a member of the Gold Medal U.S. Olympic team. But the 6-foot-2 sophomore connected on just 17 of 63 shots during a late-season slump that saw the Hoosiers slip to a 15-13 record — the worst since Coach Bob Knight arrived in 1971 — and miss out on an NCAA bid for the first time since 1979.

But Alford has shot 11-of-16 in his last two outings, including Friday's 79-57 victory over Butler when he scored 26 points and had eight steals to pace the Hoosiers into the second round of the National Invitation Tournament on Tuesday night against Richmond in Bloomington, Ind.

"I'm much more confident, though I don't really think my confidence left me that much," Alford said. "I've always been a confident shooter. I think I started thinking about being tired instead of thinking about putting the ball in the bucket."

THE REST of the Tuesday night schedule finds St. Joseph's, Pa., at Virginia, Marquette at Cincinnati, New Mexico at Fresno State and Nebraska at UCLA.

On Wednesday night, South Florida visits Louisville, Southwestern Louisiana is at Tennessee and Tennessee-Chattanooga at Lamar.

"This is a new season for us," Alford said. "I think the coaches are frustrated about the season, but I think the players are really frustrated about it.

"We had high hopes. We're not playing in the No. 1 tournament, but the NIT is prestige and it's tradition. We want to get to New York (for the semifinals), and that's a goal for us. We feel like we've got an excellent chance at winning the NIT."

Like Indiana, Virginia had a disappointing regular season (15-15). But the Cavaliers' opening-round 56-55 victory over West Virginia fired them up for a possible trip to New York.

Virginia's Jim Miller, West Virginia High School Player of the Year four years ago, played his first collegiate game in his home state. He had his best rebounding game of the season with nine and finished with a game-high 16 points.

"WE GOT there (Morgantown) and saw how arrogant the crowd was," said Virginia's Mel Kennedy. "That was what really got us pumped up. They were all over Jimmy from the early warmups on. We came back in the locker room, and we were really pumped up. We said, 'All right, now let's play some ball.'

"If we get to New York, I know I'm gonna be about three stories high," added the Bronx native. "Maybe there we'll win for the New York gang."

Besides Kennedy, that group includes sophomore center Olden Polynice from New York City and senior guard Tim Mullen from nearby Ridgewood, N.J.

Webb paces Wolfpack with 29

Michigan upset

From Wire Reports

NCAA Basketball

Former Midland College star Spud Webb, the 5-7 ball magicians scored a career high 29 points to lead North Carolina State to an 86-73 win over the University of Texas at El Paso Sunday in the second round of the Far West at Albuquerque, N.M.

Webb was an uncanny eight-of-nine from the field and 13 of 17 from the line while feeding off for seven assists in what would have been a one-man show. However, the Dallas Wilmer-Hutchins product was only the second high Wolfpack scorer as Lorenzo Charles scored 30.

North Carolina State, 22-9, advanced to meet Alabama, 23-9, in this week's Far West Regional finals at Denver. Alabama advanced with a 63-59 win over No. 11 Virginia Commonwealth.

North Carolina State used its inside-outside tandem of the 255-pound Charles and the 5-foot-7, 138-pound Webb to wear down the Miners in the second half.

UTEP, which ended the season at 22-10, scored the last nine points of the first half to get within 31-28.

The Miners were led by point guard Luster Goodwin with 22 points. Center Dave Feitl scored 12.

A pair of 20-foot jumpers by senior forward Kent Lockhart got the Miners within one point twice in the opening two minutes of the second half.

But then Charles, who scored 20 second-half points, went to work on dismantling the Miners. He scored nine points in a five-minute stretch, including two dunks over Texas-El Paso's Smith.

With Charles hitting 12 of 15 field goals on the same court where he hit the winning dunk that gave North Carolina State the national title two years ago, the Wolfpack steadily pulled away.

Webb, the Wolfpack's PT-boat point guard, got 22 of his points in the second half, including four straight late in the game when the Miners got within 72-65.

North Carolina's victory gives three conferences, the Atlantic Coast, Southeastern and Big East, 11 of the 16 spots in the remaining NCAA field.

VILLANOVA, behind a solid performance from Dwayne McClain, made second-ranked Michigan the first major upset victim, 59-55.

The Wildcats, the eighth seed in the region, held a 30-26 halftime lead over Michigan, which finished the season at 26-4, but Michigan scored the first nine points of the second half.

McClain, a senior forward, hit three straight jumpers and Villanova, 21-10, had the lead for good as the Wildcats coverted 25 of 31 free-throw attempts in the game. McClain made all four of his free throws and he converted eight of 12 shots from the floor and wound up with 20 points.

"When he's shooting well and has the rhythm going, he can shoot with anybody," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino, who has led his team to six straight NCAA tournament berths, said.

Villanova, which finished tied for third in the Big East Conference, will face Maryland, which beat Navy 64-59 Sunday, in the Southeast Regional semifinal Friday at Birmingham, Ala.

In other games Sunday, Illinois beat Georgia 74-58 and Georgia Tech blasted Syracuse 70-53 in East Regional games, Memphis State defeated Alabama-Birmingham 67-66 in overtime and Boston College edged Duke 74-73 in the Midwest Regional.

Eleven of the 16 teams to reach the regional semifinals come from three conferences: the Big East (Villanova, St. John's, Georgetown and Boston College), the Atlantic Coast (North Carolina, Maryland, Georgia Tech and North Carolina State), and the Southeastern (Kentucky, Auburn and Alabama).

Jeff Adkins and Keith Gatlin each made two free throws in the final minute to lead Maryland, 25-11, over Navy.

MARYLAND trailed 45-34 with 16:18 to play and used a press to force a 14-2 run that gave them a 48-47 lead on three straight baskets by reserve Tom Jones. The Terrapins took the lead for good at 58-57 on a basket by Len Bias, who led the way with 20 points.

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell then ordered the Terrapins into a four-corner offense with 4:33 to play. They ran the clock down until Adkins was fouled with 40 seconds remaining and he made both free throws for a 60-57 lead. Gatlin added two more free throws eight seconds later.

Six-foot-11 center David Robinson led Navy, 26-6, with 22 points despite being triple-teamed throughout most of the game.

No. 12 Illinois used a 16-0 spurt in the first half to take control early in beating Georgia. Doug Altenberger scored the first and last baskets of the rally as the Fighting Illini, 26-8, took a 32-15 lead and led 34-19 at halftime.

Efrem Winters led Illinois, which will face the Georgia Tech in the regional semifinals, with 19 points, while Altenberger finished with 16. Joe Ward led Georgia, 22-9, with 17 points.

"We have been working on the fast break the last couple of months and Coach (Lou) Henson has really been stressing it," Altenberger said. "I don't think Georgia thought we could get up and down the court like we did."

SIXTH-ranked Georgia Tech, 26-7, used its inside strength to beat No. 15 Syracuse as the Yellow Jackets raced from a 28-27 halftime lead with the first six points of the second half and Syracuse never got closer than three the rest of the way.

Georgia Tech's big men, Yvon Joseph and John Salley, combined for 30 points and 14 rebounds, while guard Mark Price led the way with 18 points. Rafael Addison led Syracuse, 22-9, with 17 points.

"I'm proud of our big people," Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said.

"I thought Yvon Joseph won this tournament for us," Price said. "He shot the ball well both games."

Andre Turner's 17-foot jumper with six seconds remaining in overtime lifted Memphis State into a Midwest Regional semifinal showdown with Boston College.

Turner, who finished with 23 points for the fifth-ranked Tigers, had a chance to win the game in regulation, but his 30-foot jumper bounced off the back rim as the buzzer sounded. All-American Keith Lee sent the game into overtime when he made one of two free throws with 20 seconds remaining to bring Memphis State into a 60-60 tie. Lee fouled out 50 seconds into the overtime.

"I was just trying to get best shot I could," Turner said. "As a matter of fact, I told mey teammates I wanted the ball when Keith fouled out. I wanted that last shot, too. I had confidence it would go in."

Alabama-Birmingham, 25-9, was led by Anthony Gordon, who had given the Blazers a 66-65 lead with 39 seconds remaining, with 14 points and 15 rebounds.

Roger McCready scored 20 points and Michael Adams added 19 as Boston College downed 10th-ranked Duke. The Eagles, 20-10, trailed 31-21 with 4:41 left in the first 1.

Chap hopes not much better than 1981-82 Hutchinson entry

Midland College's chances of winning the National Junior College Athletic Association championship in Hutchinson, Kan., this week aren't any better than they were the last time the Chaps went to the tournament. And they weren't very good then.

Sure, they won the thing, but perhaps you've forgotten the anguish and torment to which they subjected their loyal following. All of the tournament games were harrowing experiences. If the Chaps were lovers, they'd have flirted with disaster. MC was a wreck looking for a stop sign to run.

IN THE nationals, close calls that left viewers washrag limp were to be expected. They could be forgiven. The problem was the 1981-82 Chaps played that way all season.

The trouble began at mid-season. The Christmas break took its toll. Some of the players who started the season didn't return. As a result, MC played shorthanded the rest of the year.

Coach Jerry Stone's big worry was that he'd have enough players to finish a game. Two foul outs and he was practically on the bench by himself.

Things were so desperate that he once asked for volunteers from the student body.

SPUD WEBB, Chester Smith, Puntus Wilson and company were a bunch that could reel off points in a hurry. It was beautiful to watch. In a matter of moments, this was a team that could blow a foe out of sight. Twenty, twenty-five point leads were common place.

Only trouble was, this was a team that could blow 20 to 25 points just as quickly. You never felt safe until they were in the shower. MC always waited until the final 10 minutes to begin squandering their easily gotten gains. They blew leads quicker than heavy-rollers blow bankrolls in Las Vegas.

Consequently, the finishes were studies in How to Survive Up the Colorado Without a Paddle.

MC that year was a team that could beat anybody. Unhappily, they were also a team that could lose to anybody and I mean anybody. Or at least, you always had that feeling.

"Four" as in "corner" wasn't in their dictionary. They played helter-skelter basketball regardless of the lead. It was the only way they knew how.

I had to have heart surgery after the season...all right, so it was after the next season, but I'm convinced it was from the stress and strain from the previous season. Stone could have saved me and other fans a lot of grief if he'd just gone to the Four Corners once in a while.

WHEN THE Chaps went to Hutchinson, it looked like a nice reward for a conference and regional championship. Realistically, you couldn't expect too much. After all, MC's first opponent was defending national champion, Westark, returning almost intact.

The Chaps not only won that one, but beat Miami-Dade North, led by Yvan Joseph, the current Georgia Tech star, in overtime in the finals.

I had higher hopes for this year's team. I thought this bunch had more consideration for their fans. They genuinely seem like a nice, thoughtful, sincere bunch of young men, but after McLennan, Laredo and a few of those late season experiences, I'm beginning to lose faith.

They seem to have slipped into the same bad habits as that 1981-82 bunch and while they left for Hutchinson Sunday with inflated hopes, in all honesty, I can't see this team's chances being any better than those of their predecessors. And we all know how bad they were.

Gooden, Seaver line up goose-egg string

Associated Press

Dwight Gooden and Tom Seaver added zeroes to their scoreless streaks Sunday while the Toronto Blue Jays kept a zero in the loss column.

Gooden, who says he expects to add a few miles an hour to his fastball by Opening Day, tacked on four goose-eggs to the three he pitched last Wednesday, helping the New York Mets beat St. Louis 5-2.

"I expect to start the season throwing about 90 miles an hour. Right now I'm throwing about 86 or 87. It's going good for me," the 1984 National League Rookie of the Year said after striking out three Cardinals in his second start this spring.

The Mets got all the offense they needed against Kurt Kepshire in the first inning when George Foster followed Daryl Strawberry's run-scoring single with a three-run homer.

TOM SEAVER pitched five scoreless innings while Joel Skinner hit a two-run homer and Darryl Boston a three-run shot to power the Chicago White Sox to a 7-2 victory over Kansas City. Seaver had pitched five shutout innings against Gooden and the Mets last Wednesday. The Royals' runs came on Dane Iorg's homer in the ninth.

The Blue Jays, the only team still unbeaten this spring, ran their record to 9-0 by erupting for six runs in the 10th inning and defeating Philadelphia 8-2.

Shortstop Juan Samuel's two errors opened the door for the Blue Jays. He misplayed Ron Sharperson's one-out grounder and, after Fred Henrique singled, Rance Mulliniks grounded to Samuel, who threw wildly home, allowing the tie-breaking run to score. Rick Leach and Ernie Whitt homered later in the inning.

RICK SUTCLIFFE, the NL's 1984 Cy Young Award winner, pitched five scoreless innings and Leon Durham hit his first homer of the spring to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 3-2 victory over Milwaukee. Doug Loman hit a two-run homer for the Brewers off Chicago reliever Ray Fontenot.

Nelson Simmons had three hits, including a three-run homer, and Dan Petry pitched five innings of three-hit ball as Detroit defeated Minnesota 7-1. Chris Pittaro had a two-run single for the Tigers, who outhit the Twins 13-6.

Eric Davis singled with two out in the bottom of the 10th inning, continued to second on left fielder Sixto Lezcano's error and scored on Dave Parker's single to right as the Cincinnati Reds edged Pittsburgh 3-2.

Fred Lynn drove in three runs with a single and double, former Midland Cub Fritz Connally hit a two-run homer, and Dennis Martinez allowed only one hit in five innings as Baltimore buried the Atlanta Braves 11-2.

RON HASSEY drove in three runs, two with a bases-loaded double in a six-run second inning against Bruce Kison, as the New York Yankees outlasted Boston 9-6. New York's Rickey Henderson had a double and two singles before suffering a slightly sprained left ankle while sliding into third in the fourth inning.

Bill Russell's two-run single highlighted a five-run second inning that triggered Los Angeles to a 6-5 victory over Houston, while Brook Jacoby's two-run single and sacrifice led the Cleveland Indians past San Francisco 6-3.

Celtics one,two Rockets

Associated Press

Houston's Twin Towers found out that the Boston Celtics have a pretty good 1-2 punch of their own.

Houston's Ralph Sampson scored 32 points Sunday and Akeem Olajuwon added 12. But Boston's Larry Bird bettered that by himself with 48 points and the Celtics got a season-high 38 from Robert Parish in rolling to a 134-120 victory over the Rockets.

"I had more fun watching them when I was coaching them (the Celtics)," said Houston's Bill Fitch. "There are days no matter who we seem to play that you realize that we have no way to get it done."

"If the ball comes to me and I have a shot, I'll take it. I'm not looking to score a lot," said Bird, who has averaged 41.2 points over his last five games. "I just look to win."

Bird, who set a club scoring record last Tuesday with 60 points, has reached 30 points 32 times this season and 40 points eight times.

"I had things going for me early and the team kept calling plays for me," said Parish, who made 15 of 20 shots. "Akeem and Ralph present a lot of problems and the motivation factor was there for me."

NBA

Spurs 124, Nuggets 119

Denver center Dan Issel became pro basketball's fourth highest all-time scorer but San Antonio's Johnny Moore scored 12 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter and led the Spurs to victory.George Gervin also had 23 for the Spurs. Issel scored 27 points and moved past Elvin Hayes into the No. 4 spot.

Bulls 119, Bucks 117

Michael Jordan scored 32 points and Chicago rallied from a 22-point deficit in the second half.

Nets 129, Pacers 105

Buck Williams had 29 points and 12 rebounds and Darryl Dawkins and Micheal Ray Richardson each added 18 points to power New Jersey.

Kings 107, Jazz 101

Rookie Otis Thorpe scored 25 points and grabbed a career-high 15 rebounds to lead Kansas City.

SuperSonics 106, Pistons 98

Tom Chambers scored 10 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter to pace a Seattle rally.

Trail Blazers 114, Hawks 101

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 14 of his 35 points in the first quarter to lead Portland.

Warriors 109, Clippers 100

Purvis Short and Eric "Sleepy" Floyd scored 20 points aech and Jerome Whitehead added 19 to lead Golden State to its fifth triumph in 33 road games.The Clippers have lost 13 of their last 14 games.

Invaders break loose

Associated Press

The Oakland Invaders, who had totaled just 55 points in their first three games this season, finally got their offense in high gear. When they did, it was off to the races against the Jacksonville Bulls.

"Getting the offense going for all four quarters was one of the main things today," said Invader quarterback Bobby Hebert, who threw for four touchdowns Sunday in a 42-36 victory. "We started well and it was almost like a track meet out there."

Hebert riddled the Bulls for 328 yards passing and fullback Albert Bentley rushed for 97 yards. On eight kickoff returns, the Invaders racked up 216 yards.

Oakland kicker Novo Bojovic kicked a 37-yard field goal to break a 29-29 tie early in the fourth quarter. Then Hebert guided the Invaders 98 yards to a 1-yard TD plunge by Tom Newton.

USFL

Stars 29, Generals 9

Kelvin Bryant, whose injured ankle had limited him to 168 yards in Baltimore's first three games, ran for 136 and scored on runs of 3 and 21 yards as the USFL's defending champions won their debut at the University of Maryland. Last year, they played in Philadelphia.

Generals quarterback Doug Flutie was sacked three times and intercepted twice. New Jersey's only touchdown came on Herschel Walker 80-yard run on the Generals' first play of the third period.

Stallions 34, Showboats 19

Cliff Stoudt passed for 247 yards and two touchdowns for Birmingham while the Stallions sacked quarterback Walter Lewis 10 times for 68 yards. Linebacker Bill Roe had three of the sacks as Birmingham tied with Memphis and Tampa Bay with 3-1 records.

Arkansas splits pair with Rice

HOUSTON (AP) — Sophomore Eric Graff hit the first two home runs of his college career to pace the Rice Owls to a 13-2 win over Arkansas and a split of their Southwest Conference baseball doubleheader Sunday.

Norm Roberts hit a pair of home runs to pace the Razorbacks to an 8-4 win in the opener.

Rice's victory broke a 16-game Arkansas winning streak. The Owls are now 16-6 on the season and 1-1 in SWC play. Arkansas is 16-4 and 1-1.

Both of Graff's home runs were two-run shots, and he had a fifth run batted in with an infield out. Freshman designated hitter Mike Patrick was also a hitting star for Rice in the second game with four RBIs on three hits.

Freshman right hander Todd Ogden of Rice picked up his first college win, going five innings in the second game after relieving Ed Holub in the opener. Derek Hoelscher's two innings of hitless relief nailed down the win.

In the first game, home runs by Roberts, Mark Jackson and Derrick Richardson staked Arkansas starter Fred Farwell to an 8-0 lead after 6⅓ innings, but Farwell lost his shutout on a two-run double by Ben Mathews and a two-run homer by Curtis Fox. Farwell needed relief from Tim Dietz, but still picked up his fifth win of the season against no losses.

The loss was Holub's first in five decisions.

Oilers fuel Jets' take-off

Associated Press

The specter of an opening-round playoff series with the Edmonton Oilers has turned the Winnipeg Jets into one of the hottest teams in the NHL.

The Jets have been swept out of the Stanley Cup playoffs by the Oilers the last two springs. Not wanting to face even the possibility of the same fate this year, the Jets have caught fire and surged into second place in the Smythe Division.

They strengthened their hold on that spot Sunday with a 5-3 decision over the Buffalo Sabres, scoring four times in the third period against All-Star goalie Tom Barrasso. Winnipeg has won six straight games and nine of its last 10 to take a five-point lead over Calgary. Los Angeles, which edged the Oilers 5-4 Sunday, is eight points back.

Trailing 3-1 entering the final period, host Winnipeg got goals from Dale Hawerchuk, Paul MacLean, Thomas Steen and Jim Nill to prevent the Sabres from jumping into first place in the Adams Division. Buffalo is one point behind Montreal and one point ahead of Quebec.

"Everybody is playing one game at a time," said Winnipeg's Doug Smail. "We can't look ahead to the playoffs. We have to deal wth the task at hand right now."

Kings 5, Oilers 4

Unless the Kings catch Calgary or Winnipeg, they will be saddled with meeting Edmonton to open the playoffs. But LA, which got nine points from its No. 1 line of Marcel Dionne (two goals and an assist), Brian MacLellan (one goal, three assists) and Dave Taylor (two assists), finished 3-3-1 with the Oilers this season. The Kings held Wayne Gretzky to one assist Sunday.

Flyers 5, Islanders 3

Philadelphia stretched its Patrick Division lead over second-place Washington to six points with its seventh consecutive win. A three-goal first period — Brad McCrimmon, Murray Craven and Dave Poulin did the damage — got the host Flyers started quickly.

McLain held without bail until sentencing

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge ordered former star baseball pitcher Denny McLain held without bond Sunday, one day after he was convicted by a jury of racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and cocaine possession.

U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich denied a request by defense attorneys to have the former Detroit Tiger right-hander free on bond until sentencing April 19, saying McLain represented a potential threat to the community and could flee.

McLain, 41, has been free on $200,000 bond since his indictment in March 1984.

A nine-woman, three-man panel, who listened to 350 hours of testimony, found baseball's last 30-game winner guilty Saturday of racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and cocaine possession charges.

McLain, however, was found innocent on one count of conspiracy to smuggle cocaine.

He faces a maximum penalty of 75 years in prison and fines totaling $75,000. Codefendants Seymour Sher and Frank Cocchiaro each face a maximum 60 years in prison and fines of $60,000, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Ernst Mueller, the prosecutor in the case.

Sher and Cocchiaro were convicted of racketeering, conspiracy and extortion, while a third codefendant, Joe Rodriguez, was found innocent on a charge of conspiracy to smuggle cocaine.

Ms. Kovachevich also ordered Sher held without bond Sunday.

In its case against McLain, the government claimed that between 1978 and 1983, McLain was part of a loan-sharking operation that charged interest rates of 130 percent, used threats to collect, and booked high-stakes bets on professional and college football and basketball games.

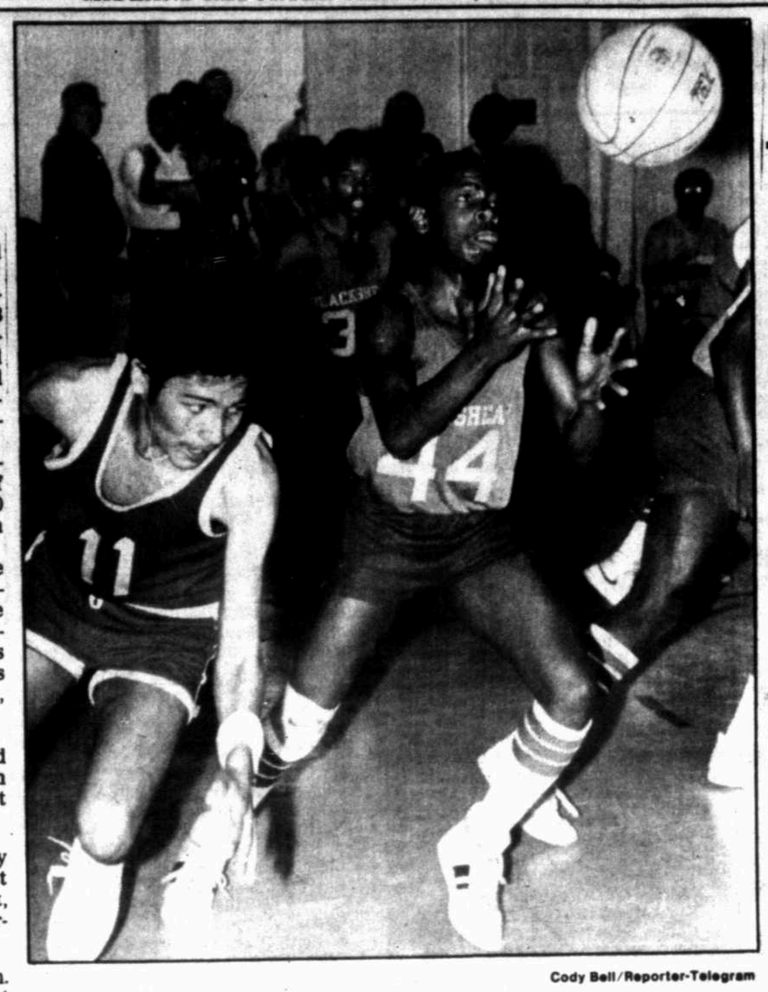

McLain also was accused of possessing 13 kilos (29 pounds) of cocaine and plotting to smuggle 400 kilos (880 pounds) of cocaine from Colombia.

During two days on the stand, the three-time American League All-Star admitted being a bookie. He denied drug dealing but acknowledged being present while deals were planned. He also said he was innocent of racketeering conspiracy, loan-sharking and extortion.

Six others, including Sher and Cocchiaro, were charged with McLain in a 22-page indictment returned a year ago.

Before trial, co-defendants Barry Nelson, Mel Kaplan and Larry Knott struck deals with the government, pleaded guilty and agreed to cooperate.

It was the second trial for McLain. The first ended in a mistrial eight days after testimony began in October. A second panel was seated Nov. 20.

Baylor takes pair from Tech 3-0, 5-4

WACO (AP) — Mike Malinak doubled in the winning run in the bottom of the 12th to give Baylor a 5-4 victory over Texas Tech and a sweep of a doubleheader Sunday in Southwest Conference baseball action.

Blaine Beatty (6-1) got the credit for both victories. After going the distance, striking out four and allowing only two hits in a 3-0 shutout in the first game, he pitched 4 2-3 innings of scoreless relief in the nightcap.

Baylor, which defeated Texas Tech Saturday in the opening conference action for both teams, improved its record to 3-0 in league play and 19-4 for the season. Tech fell to 14-14 and 0-3.

Tony Huey opened the 12th with a single off loser Clay Hollock (3-4). Two outs later, Kyle Todd was walked intentionally, and Malinak followed with his game-winning hit.

Todd's three-run homer had given Baylor a 3-0 lead in the third inning. But Tech's Red Raiders tied the game in the sixth off Baylor starter Kenneth Patterson. Tommy Dobyns' double and a single by Jimmy Darnell drove home runs for Tech.

Tech grabbed a 5-4 lead in the eighth on a squeeze bunt by Bill Lance that scored Amory Booker. Baylor sent the game into extra innings in its half of the eighth when Malinak's sacrifice fly scored Greg Dennis, who had opened the inning with a double off Tech starter Craig Chapin.

Baylor scored all the runs that Beatty needed in the opener in the fifth inning.

Exercising care

Instructor Cezanne Stokes catches Tess Owen before she falls off the balance beam as she learns how to do handstands.

The days of the PTA mom are gone.

"After working all day who wants to drive their child to dance lessons?" said Gail Harmon, associate executive director of community services for the Young Men's Christian Association.

Certainly not the parents of more than 300 children who spend part of their day in the YMCA child-care program which employees 21 staff members citywide.

"We have one of the biggest and most tested child care programs right here in Midland," said Ms. Harmon.

Although the program is large, Ms. Harmon insists that it is "not a babysitting service.

"It's not cheap," she said. "Nor is it an easy program. We wanted to get away from the idea that child care had to be a baby-sitting service."

Original plans for the project, which has pre-school, before school (grades K-6), after school (grades 1-6) and kindergarten programs, began during the boom of 1979 to 1983.

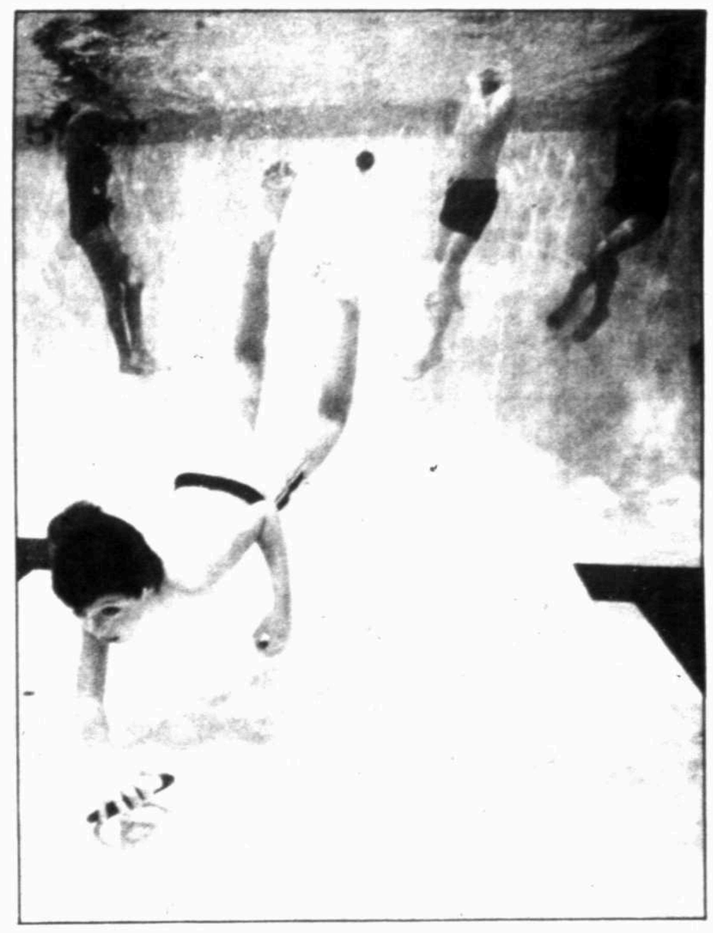

"The National YMCA did a study 10 years ago that targeted child care as a need for the '80s," said Ms. Harmon.

Ms. Harmon, who started with the YMCA just before the boom, has seen the program grow from infancy to its present-day $500,000 budget.

"We just break even," she said. "We get funds from United Way and private donations and parent's fees. Without those funds, it would be impossible."

While money may be a problem for the YMCA, Ms. Harmon assures parents that the service is available even to those who cannot afford it.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Dick Yates, Sikes Johnson, Holt Jowell, Rufus Emmons and Johnny Mills.

Clemmie W. Harris

Services for Clemmie Waldroup Harris of Midland are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Sunday evening at a Midland hospital.

Survivors include her son, Edgar Harris of Midland.

Officials: Texas banks 'laundered' drug funds

DALLAS (AP) — Federal officials say a Laredo savings and loan and an El Paso bank were used by a Mexican investment broker to pull off the largest known scheme in recent years to "launder" drug money through Texas.

Almost $16 million was shuffled through the Tesoro Savings and Loan in Laredo and the First City National Bank of El Paso, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

Federal officials are trying to seize $6.5 million on deposit at the El Paso bank and $1.4 million at the Laredo thrift

Agents also are seeking reimbursement of $8 million that was hurriedly transferred out of the institutions after the Internal Revenue Service placed a claim on the Mexican businessman's funds, the Times Herald reported.

"I feel we're just looking at the tip of the iceberg," said Phillip Jordan, special agent in charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration's regional office in Dallas. "Laundering is here in the Southwest."

Money laundering involves taking cash reaped from illicit activities and using it in a series of legal financial transactions to make it difficult to trace.

When federal drug agents raided two Anaheim, Calif., motels last June 22, they found $4.1 million in alleged illicit drug trafficking proceeds that were about to be laundered through a California bank.

According to the Times Herald, one of the two people arrested in the motel raid last summer told agents that the money came from the sale of drugs.

A few days later, an attorney representing the two suspects told prosecutors that the two were working for Mexican businessman Mardoqueo Alfaro Magarino, who had paid them to deposit the funds in the Bank of Coronado in San Ysidro, Calif., the Times Herald said.

About the same time, DEA agents received information from confidential informants that Alfaro was involved with a Guadalajara-based drug trafficking ring, the newspaper added.

The informants estimated that the operation garnered profits of between $10 million and $20 million a month.

Based upon that estimate, the IRS immediately placed levies on all U.S. assets in which Alfaro was believed to have an interest, the newspaper said. Authorities said they learned of the Texas and California bank accounts through material seized at the Anaheim motels and transaction records.

However, Alfaro and his business associates quickly managed to slip $8 million out of the two Texas institutions, officials said — $6 million from Tesoro Savings and Loan and $2 million from First City.

Several million dollars from Tesoro Savings and Loan was wired to Panama financial institutions, according to court documents.

Federal officials are trying to force the two Texas institutions to reimburse the government, since the money was released after the IRS had announced its claim on Alfaro's funds.

The institutions said they had no knowledge of Alfaro's alleged connection to the funds and should not have to give the government any money.

Alfaro's attorneys insist there was no attempt by him to evade the IRS action.

Alfaro's lawyer said although Alfaro chose how the money would be used, such as when a certificate of deposit would be purchased and for how long, his name did not appear on any of the accounts in question.

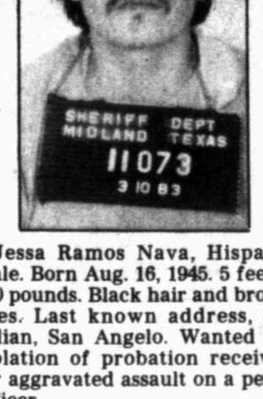

Alfaro has not been charged with criminal wrongdoing and has denied any involvement in drug activities. He has asserted that he is simply an investment adviser and broker for wealthy Mexican citizens.

"We disavow any involvement with laundering money, and any involvement with drugs. Mr. Alfaro is a respected businessman and broker...a member of the Lions Club for 20 years," said his lawyer, Merwin Grand of Phoenix, Ariz.

SILSBEE (AP) — Mirek Mandlebauer is now a proud Texan, complete with a ranch-style home, an oilfield job and a gold Lone Star State emblem that gleams from a chain around his neck.

But once, he was a hunted Czechoslovakian rebel who barely escaped into Italy amid a hail of gunfire.

A native of Prague, Mandlebauer now claims this small town north of Beaumont as his home and is the only Czech roughneck on an oilfield crew he has worked with for the past seven years.

Mirek, or "Mike" as he is now known, calmly recalls the details of a night 17 years ago when he and a friend outraced death to fulfill a dream of freedom.

"I running after shot was firing, and Peter was behind me. But then you get scared," he said in speech thick with a middle-European accent. "The danger to be killed is more powerful than everything else. You don't worry about nothing else, just try and get out."

The blue-eyed, blond-haired European proudly proclaims, "I'm an American citizen. I'm very happy."

But he is quick to recall times when harsh conditions of a Communist-ruled country made life difficult and generated thoughts of escape.

Mandlebauer says correspondence with an uncle living in Sweden, along with a desire to discover what lay beyond the barbed wire confines of his world, first sparked thoughts of freedom.

"I always have idea I go escape from the communist country because I want to find it out on my own what's going on here."

Ruling awaited on retardeds' rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for a Texas town went before the U.S. Supreme Court today to try to convince the panel that a city should be allowed to forbid the establishment of a home for the mentally retarded in a residential neighborhood.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans ruled last year that Cleburne's refusal to allow such a facility only four blocks from the city square violated the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution.

The full appeals court refused by an 8-7 vote to review the ruling, and Cleburne appealed.

In accepting the case last fall, the Supreme Court agreed for the first time to consider the rights of the mentally retarded to live in a group facility, and a city's authority to keep them out.

At stake is a modest four-bedroom home that Jan Hannah and Bobbie Northrop, longtime Johnson County residents, bought in Cleburne.

Officers looking for men in two women's abduction

From Staff Reports

Midland County Sheriff's Department is looking for two men in connection with the early morning abduction of two Midland women at County Road 1160 about a quarter mile north of Farm-To-Market Road 1213.

According to the sheriff's report, Shirley Jean McQuatters, 608 S. Fort Worth, and Patricia Simmons, 906 S. Marshall, were rescued by deputies about 1 a.m. while walking along County Road 1160.

The women told deputies that two men brought them to the location against their will, but that they had escaped while the van had been parked along the side of the roadway. The women did not appear to be injured. Descriptions of the two suspects were not available, it was reported.

Also, a bicycle valued at $400 was reported stolen from the Thomas Martin residence about noon Sunday, according to sheriff's deputies. The bicycle reportedly was stolen from the front of the residence.

Midland police are looking for someone in connection with the theft Saturday of a 1982 Ford Silverado pickup.

The pickup, belonging to Peter Fiest, 405 Carrizo, was reported stolen between 5:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. while it was parked in the eastside parking lot of Fiest's apartment complex residence. The pickup is valued at $9,000, according to police reports.

In other weekend complaints, police reported stereo equipment and jewelry were among $1,230 in property stolen either Saturday or Sunday from the Danny Lemay Sanders residence at 208 E. Pecan.

The theft is believed to have occured between 8:30 p.m. and 2:50 a.m., according to the report.

A representative of Kwik-Kopy Printing, 2203 N. Big Spring, reported a money bag containing about $452 in cash and checks was stolen from the business between 5:30 and 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Wednesday set aside to honor agriculture

By EARNEST C. KIKER

National Agriculture Day will be Wednesday, March 20, the first day of spring. It highlights National Agriculture Week which began Sunday, March 17.

Agriculture Day has been authorized as an official national observance every year since 1981 by a joint resolution of Congress and a presidential proclamation. It was first celebrated in 1972 and since has grown to include thousands of events at the local, state and national level.

Theme of this year's observance is "The Business of Food and Fiber."

State agricultural leaders and commodity groups are emphasizing agriculture as the nation's largest industry, in terms of gross national product, employment and personal spending during this 13th annual observance of Agriculture Day.

Agriculture Day is set aside as a special time to focus on the achievements of the 23 million men and women in United States agriculture. This is one-fifth of the work force, from suppliers of goods and services on through the food and fiber chain to retail food, clothing and horticultural workers. Altogether, they are responsible for more than 20 percent of the gross national product.

In Texas, one out of every 35 persons is a farmer or rancher, yet about 25 percent of the state's retail trade buisiness is directly associated with agricultural production and selling of food and fiber products.

Consumers are enjoying quality food and natural fiber apparel at a low cost. The farm value of the retail food dollar amounts to about 30 cents, with the average American spending less than 18 percent of income on food.

Because of advancements in productivity, the same number of acres required in 1910 to feed 80 million Americans produced enough to meet needs of 200 million Americans in 1970. One farmer in this country can now feed 80 people, compared to 26 people in 1960.

Texas wheat producers will vote in April to decide if they want to expand the check-off territory from the existing 34 counties under the jurisdicition of the Texas Wheat Producers Board.

To learn more about the upcoming wheat referendum, producers in Midland and surrounding counties will want to attend an information meeting sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service on March 19 in Midland. The meeting will be at the Holiday Inn Country Villa and will start at 7:30 p.m.

Producers will hear from an Extension economist regarding the current wheat situation, outlook and changing wheat production trends in the state. Also, the mechanics and timing of the referendum voting process will be discussed, including recent changes in the commodity referendum law.

Following the discussions, Texas Wheat Producers Board representatives will present information on the existing wheat check-off program and the potential outcome of a total statewide effort. There will be ample time for questions from producers regarding the program.

CARE

"We never turn down a child, regardless of the inability to pay," she said. "We feel that we should provide low-cost or no-cost child care to Midland."

Ms. Harmon recently conducted a national survey, contacting more than 90 YMCAs.

"I found out that 75 percent are involved in child care," she said.

Another local survey that she conducted revealed that "Midland's day-care services" have waiting lists.

Two area day-care centers agreed they had waiting lists.

"We've been open only 18 months, but we have been full since October," said Judy Rice of Rainbow Learning Center.

Another owner, Melinda Mantel, also had a waiting list.

However, one center reported only half-capacity.

"We are licensed for 157 kids, but we only have 75 registered," said Laura Atwood, of All My Children. "But we just took over and we are starting to get more kids. We'll just hire more help as we need it."

Ms. Harmon indicated that the need for "a safe, happy experience" is behind the YMCA program.

"With all the brouhaha over childcare, more and more care will be taken to ensure that it's a healthy experience for them," she said.

Nor will it be dull for the children, according to Ms. Harmon.

"There is no law that says child care has to be boring," she said.

Included in the YMCA's program are swimming, gymnastics, fitness classes, nutrition education, daily snacks and even summer camp activities.

"We do all of the things that make summer fun," said Ms. Harmon. "We take the kids bowling, overnight trips and midnight swimming."

Future expansion of activities include dance lessons, diving and piano lessons, said Ms. Harmon.

Odessa police continue burglary investigation

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police continue to investigate the burglary of the Carl Alford Tacker home, which occurred sometime between late Thursday night and Sunday evening.

Tacker told Odessa police he returned home to find the house ransacked and three television sets, a Beta video recorder, microwave oven and guitar and amplifier, with a total estimated value of nearly $2,500 missing.

Police are also seeking a missing $12,000 car and a runaway 16-year-old youth.

Louise Jernigan, 1203 Oak, reported late Sunday night a 1985 Ford Mustang, belonging to Vendora Reece was missing. She also reported her 16-year-old grandson was missing.

Gordon Brunner, 1312 Pagewood, reported that sometime between Friday night and Sunday evening someone smashed windshields and windows in six vehicles parked at his used car lot at 102 S. Dixie. Brunner estimated damage at about $1,000.

Odessa Fire Department investigators and police continue to investigate a fire that occurred in a unit of the Westage Motel, 1701 E. 2nd St. early Saturday morning.

Manager Bob Patel reported a black man about 35 to 40 years old checked into a room about 1 a.m. Saturday and apparently left several hours later.

Patel told investigators he noticed smoke coming from the room. He entered and found a mattress on fire and a smoke alarm had been disabled. He estimated damage about $900.

Odessa sexual assault trial to begin

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The trial of a 47-year-old man on one of five charges of sexual assault of a child is slated to get under way in 70th District Court Tuesday morning.

Donald LeClair was indicted by the Ector County grand jury Aug. 27 on eight counts of indecency with a child, with five of the counts involving sexual assault charges.

The eight incidents allegedly occurred between early June and September 1984 and reportedly involved eight children.

LeClair has remained in Ector County jail in lieu of $7,500 bond on each of the eight charges since his arrest.

Louisiana man in critical condition

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 42-year-old Shreveport, La., man remained in critical condition today at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa with chest injuries he sustained following a one-vehicle rollover Sunday on Interstate 20 about five miles west of Stanton.

A Department of Public Safety spokeswoman reported Harold J. Addie, 42, of Shreveport was eastbound on I-20 about 6:30 a.m. when his 1981 Kenworth tractor trailer left the roadway, struck two telephone polls, traveled down an embankment and collided head-on with two culverts.

DPS officials said Addie was hauling an estimated 40,000 pounds of produce at the time of the accident. The produce was not contaminated, according to reports.

Anti-'Lunch' trends upsets restaurants' applecart

Hearst News Service

Spelled with a small "l," lunch means coffee and a sandwich at your desk or a quick bite at a minor-league restaurant near the office. Spelled with a capital, however, Lunch indicates a leisurely Lucullan meal with ice-cold martinis and superb wines in a splendid, first-rate restaurant, followed by a stratospheric bill paid with plastic.

Now comes Sidney Wolinsky, an attorney with Public Advocates Inc., who wants to take the "L" out of Lunch by eliminating tax deductions for business booze.

"I'm not anti-booze," he says, "but should liquor be subsidized? By the taxpayers?"

The anti-Lunch trend, coupled with what the liquor lobby calls neo-Prohibition, became visible soon after Thanksgiving:

— THE BIG LUNCH: In November, at a conference sponsored by the American Medical Association, British researchers reported that a mid-day meal causes mistakes, sleepiness and loss of alertness on the job.

— THE THREE-MARTINI LUNCH: In December, the U.S. Treasury Department supplied details of a crackdown aimed at the phenomenon that got its name during the Carter administration. The government would limit the tax deduction for breakfast to $10, lunch to $15 and dinner to $25. In a high-class restaurant devoted to the expense account trade, $15 will pay for a toothpick, a glass of water and an order of radicchio con pomidori, also known as "dandelions with tomatoes," which is said to taste much like dandelions with tomatoes.

— NO LUNCH: A boom in business breakfasts has been reported throughout the country as part of what a hotel spokeswoman calls "a trend for briefer meetings over lighter meals." Worse, from the restaurant viewpoint, is the observation of John Keane, a Bank of America vice president, who says, "Most of the time I just eat at my desk."

— BANKER'S LUNCH: In January, the Wall Street Journal inspired panic with a simple headline on a story about anti-bribery legislation: "Taking a Banker Out for Lunch Could Be Illegal Under New Law."

The defenders of Lunch argue that business-related meals amount to $25 billion in volume annually throughout the country. The National Restaurant Association commissioned a study that estimated the effect of a 50 percent cut in business-related entertainment and meals. Federal tax revenues would drop by $3.7 billion, according to the study, and 910,000 jobs would disappear. But things aren't going well for the booze business in this, the 50th anniversary of Alcoholics Anonymous.

— The legal age for drinking, previously a matter for states to decide, has in essence been nationalized at 21.

Selecting quality gemstones requires caution

Copley News Service

Eye-seducing, colorful gemstones, sometimes lost in the glitter of diamonds, have grown in popularity the past few years as an alternative to the more expensive diamond.

However, cautions George Doty of Escondido, Calif., longtime gem and jewelry appraiser, ancient and new characteristics of gems can lead to disappointment ranging from discovering you were overcharged for the real thing to being ripped off with a bogus stone that only a trained gemologist would recognize as fake.

Doty said by careful selection, you may find a lower-grade gemstone that surpasses more expensive varieties of stones in both beauty and value. So, if you are considering the purchase of jewelry, don't overlook colorful gemstones.

DURING AN INTERVIEW in his Escondido office, the Michigan native, who started out as a watchmaker in Ohio, dropped two large, uncut stones into the hand of a reporter and said:

"There, you are holding two rubies."

They looked like rocks to be thrown into a pond.

"I paid $12.50 for them," Doty said, "and that's about all they will ever be worth."

His point: Sapphires and rubies — as well as other gemstones — can vary greatly in quality. Both of the gems, varieties of the mineral corundum, can be the valuable center of a ring setting — or junk.

Doty, in the business 40 years, said it takes a trained eye to judge them even after they are cut.

Today, artificial gems as alluring as fool's gold can be mistaken for the genuine stone — unless they are carefully examined by a specialist.

He recalled that about two years ago, a woman who had inherited an estate, including what appeared to be a real sapphire necklace, asked him how much it was worth. It had been fashioned by a relative and was considered a family heirloom.

She was aghast, he said, when he advised her the gem was artificial.

"My grandfather," she said, "would never use anything but a genuine sapphire."

Despite what she may have thought, Doty said, "it was obvious to me the jewelry had contained an artificial sapphire all along."

DOTY SAID THERE are several things the consumer should know about gemstones:

— Unless you are in big money, forget them as investments. Investment quality stones generally pass from one gem dealer to another, and they cater to wealthy clients.

— The most popular colored gemstones are the sapphire and ruby. The sapphire is second only to the diamond in hardness. While rubies are usually red, sapphires vary widely in color. They can be dark green, black, gray, pink, pink-orange — even yellow. And, of course, blue.

— The value of a stone varies according to its rarity and color. Doty displayed a rare 2.5-carat green garnet from Kenya that, he said, probably would be worth more than most comparable emeralds. Color is the most important characteristic of a precious gemstone, Doty said. An appraiser looks for purity. The Kenya garnet, valued at $8,000, was a rich green, and its color remained constant as you looked into the depths of the stone. It had an almost magical lure about it.

— Star sapphires vary greatly in quality — and some of them are synthesized. The star in a real stone will appear a bit fuzzy, Doty said, whereas the synthetic star "will be sharply defined."

The value of gemstones is affected by supply and demand — and politics.

ONE REASON the garnet Doty displayed was valuable was that few have been mined in Kenya in recent years as a result of political unrest in the East African country.

If you inherit estate jewelry, you may get more value from it by distributing pieces among members of the family, Doty said. He said that it is not likely that you will be able to sell the jewelry at its appraised value. He displayed an estate necklace full of garnets that he said would be difficult to sell because the style of the jewelry was dated.

Doty said he thinks that gem appraisers have an edge over jewelers in evaluating a stone simply because they see more and a greater variety.

Appraisers charge by the hour (from $75 to $125 an hour) or by the piece, he said, adding that it is unethical for an appraiser to charge a percentage of the evaluation.

Generally, members of the American Gem Society and the American Society of Appraisers are reliable, Doty said. However, he cautioned, "you can find bad apples in any group."

He recommended that buyers select unmounted stones. They are easier to evaluate and your own jewelry design will have more individuality and personal value.

IN SELECTING a gemstone, how it pleases you is the most important consideration, Doty said. There is nothing wrong with selecting a fine, expensive sapphire or ruby and surrounding it with inexpensive cut diamonds, he said. If the combination is beautiful to you, that is all that matters.

Ask questions before buying gems

Copley News Service

There are a lot of questions to consider before the wise consumer makes an investment in a gemstone, according to George Doty, a longtime gemologist and jewelry appraiser. Here are some of them:

— Is the stone durable?
— How do you care for it?
— If it is fragile, should it be worn only on special occasions?
— What is the potential of price changes?
— Where did it come from? Is there a romantic story behind the stone?
— If it has been treated, was the process permanent?
— Do you wear expensive jewelry or hide it in a bank vault?

Doty has only one answer: Show it off. Jewelry, he said, is to be worn and enjoyed.

DEAR ABBY

'Poison-proofing' home prevents tragedy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in response to the problems of the elderly and those with arthritis in opening pill containers with child-resistant caps. If it's any consolation, they really do work, and since their appearance, the incidence of child deaths from aspirin has been reduced by 88 percent!

However, pharmacists also have non-child-resistant caps available — all you need do is ask. But please warn grandparents whose grandchildren come to visit that their homes (and especially grandmother's purse) are a treasure trove for a curious child.

Keep medicine and poisons out of reach. Have a bottle of syrup of ipecac on hand in case your local poison center or your physician recommends its use to induce vomiting. Lastly, put your name, address and emergency numbers (including that of the poison center) on or next to your telephone. If you have more questions, please call your local poison center or pharmacist. — ELIZABETH BENNETT, SEATTLE POISON CENTER

DEAR MS. BENNETT: Thank you for a timely and valuable letter — especially since this is Poison Prevention Week. Some poison prevention tips:

— Never take medicine in front of children.
— Never call medicine "candy."
— Store all cleaning supplies out of sight and out of reach of children. (Never leave cleanser or detergent under the kitchen or bathroom sink.)
— Keep all products in their original containers.
— Discard old medicines by flushing them down the toilet.

Here is a checklist of potential poisons found in the home. These products should be locked up or kept out of reach of children.

KITCHEN: aspirin, drain cleaners (lye), furniture polish, powdered and liquid detergents, cleanser and scouring powders, ammonia, oven cleaner, rust remover, dishwasher detergents.

BEDROOM: all medication, jewelry cleaner, cosmetics, perfume.

LAUNDRY: bleaches, soaps, detergents, disinfectants, bluing, dyes, spot removers.

CLOSETS, ATTIC, STORAGE PLACES: rat poison, ant poison, mothballs, insect sprays.

PURSE: aspirin, all drugs, cigarettes.

BATHROOM: all drugs and pills, shampoo, wave lotion and sprays, nail polish and polish remover, suntan products, shaving lotions, toilet bowl cleaner, rubbing alcohol, room deodorizer, hair remover, boric acid, denture tablets, deodorants, pine oil and bath oil.

GARAGE, BASEMENT, WORKSHOP: lye, kerosene, bug killers, gasoline, lighter fluid, turpentine, paint remover and thinner, paint, weed killers, anti-freeze and fertilizers.

GENERAL: flaking paint, repainted toys, broken plaster. Some flowers and plants are poisonous.

FIRST AID FOR POISONINGS:

Keep syrup of ipecac on hand in your home, BUT DO NOT USE EXCEPT ON THE ADVICE OF YOUR PHYSICIAN OR THE POISON CENTER. (Call information NOW for your local poison center's 24-hour hot-line number, and keep it on or near your phone.)

Poison prevention is the best antidote for poisonings, but accidental poisoning can occur in any home. The natural impulse is to act at once, but the wrong treatment for poisoning is often more harmful than none. So call your physician or your local poison center for advice immediately.

The number of children who have died and or have been seriously injured ingesting poisonous substances found in the home would make you weep.

It is the responsibility of adults to poison-proof their homes to prevent children from becoming victims.

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar eased against all major currencies except the West German mark in early European trading today. Gold prices were mixed.

Despite the dollar's easing, some dealers predicted that last Friday's three-day closure order on Ohio savings and loan societies following a run by depositors would not have a severe impact on the dollar.

"The U.S. Federal Reserve won't let the situation become a crisis," commented one Frankfurt dealer.

Dealers attributed the dollar's early weakness to lower American interest rates — the Eurodollar rate paid to holders of dollars in Europe was off an eighth of a point — and expectations that the February U.S. industrial capacity figures, due out later today, would show a decline from January.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar closed at 260.35 yen, down from 260.80 late Friday. In later European trading, the dollar was quoted at 260.42 yen.

In London, the dollar eased against the British pound, which cost $1.0875, more expensive than late Friday's $1.0860.

Early dollar rates against other key currencies, compared with late rates Friday:

-3.3767 West German marks, up from 3.3700.

--2.8762 Swiss francs, down from 2.8865.

-10.3125 French francs, down from 10.3550.

-3.8187 Dutch guilders, down from 3.8260.

--2,126.00 Italian lire, down from 2,135.00.

-1.3860 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3875.

In London, gold opened at $293.80 bid an ounce, unchanged from Friday's late bid. London's five main bullion houses set the recommended price midmorning at $293.70.

But in Zurich gold prices rose. The metal opened at $294.30 bid, up from $291 late Friday and was quoted later at $294.10.

Gold closed in Hong Kong at $294.67 bid, up $3.41 from Saturday.

Silver was quoted in London at $5.690 bid an ounce, down from $5.715 on Friday.

Statistics show lumber prices dropping sharply

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — In the spring, rising lumber prices traditionally have been a harbinger of an awakening economy, spurred by the end of a long, inactive winter in the home-building industry. But this year lumber prices have been dropping sharply.

Statistics indicate a respectable rate of housing starts for the year — possibly around the 1.7 million level. That would be a good year for the building trades, although still short of the record 2.3 million starts in 1972.

But despite the housing industry's health, lumber prices continue to bump along slightly above their contract lows, showing little impetus to rise.

For example, on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange contracts for May, delivery of lumber have been dawdling along for weeks at less than $137 a thousand board feet. A futures contract in lumber covers 130,000 board feet of basic spruce fir — the kind that carpenters typically use in houses.

The May contract's high was $225 in March 1983 and its low was $132 made earlier this month on March 7. On Friday, the contract closed at $133.40, compared with $135.20 a week ago. Prices have shown a dramatic, almost steady, slide since the second week in January when the May contract sold for more than $176.

On Friday, Walter L. Emery, research director for the Commodity Research Bureau, stressed that this year the coming of warmer weather will not improve prices.

"There was a blip up earlier this week," but it was technical, he said. "Even the Friday closing price will be difficult to sustain unless the Canadian dollar strengthens. I must say I am surprised at how prices have been reacting, but it is basically a problem of overproduction."

Carmen Soldato, a vice president of Pershing Futures in Chicago, a unit of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Inc., said that interest-rate worries and oversupply problems will cause prices of lumber to drop even further.

"We are headed lower," Soldato said. In fact, he thinks the May contract could work down to $110. Trading in the May contract ends around the middle of that month, he pointed out, which means prices still have about eight weeks to sag.

"If we do have a temporary rally of about $8 to $12, I advise selling into it," Soldato said.

Meanwhile, many producers and users of lumber also expect lower futures prices. One lumber manufacturer reportedly said that "he was looking for the price of May to move down to $115."

Curt Cunningham, a forest products analyst for Prudential Bache Securities Inc. in Bellevue, Wash., wrote in his latest report that "the imbalance between supply and demand continues to dominate the lumber market."

"We do not believe," Cunningham wrote, "that a significant percentage of the lumber for this building season has been purchased yet. The question remains, however, more one of absorbing the volume of unsold wood in the market currently."

He guesses that dealers, knowing that lumber mills are overloaded, will continue to keep inventories low, buying on "a hand-to-mouth basis, while waiting for possible lower prices." He even considers $100 lumber "a real possibility," especially if the U.S. dollar continues strong against the Canadian dollar.

U.S. producers have become increasingly concerned about the competition from Canadian companies. Recently, members of Congress from some of the major lumber-producing states in the West introduced legislation to limit Canadian imports to about 25 percent of consumption for the next five years.

Firm opposing Gulf Broadcast's liquidation plan

DALLAS (AP) — American Continental Corp., which controls about 25 percent of Dallas-based Gulf Broadcast Co., has said it will conduct a proxy fight to oppose the Texas firm's liquidation plan.

Gulf Broadcast has asked it shareholders to approve an $885 million liquidation of its broadcast and real estate holdings.

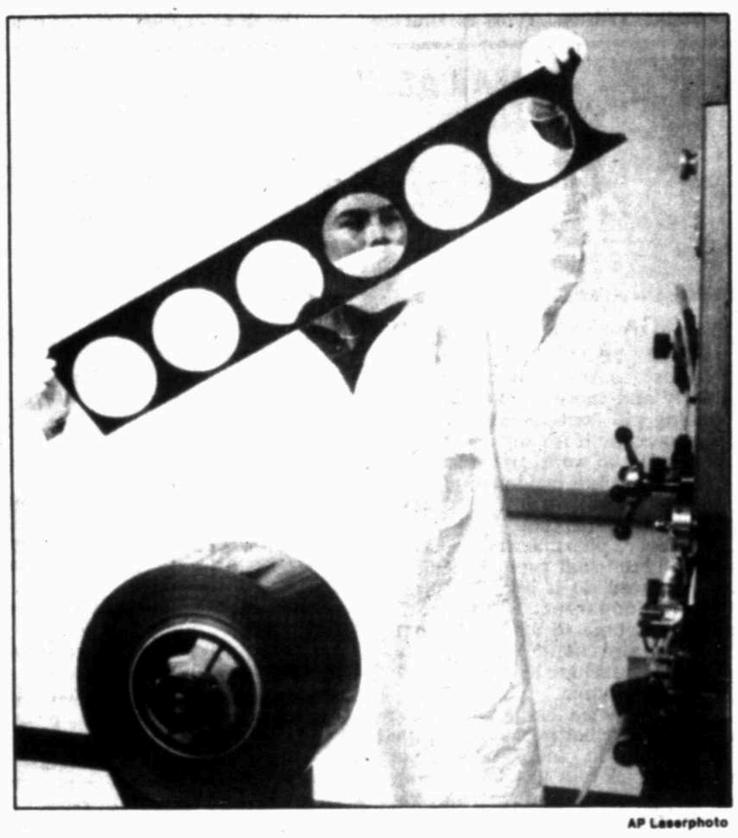

American Continental, a Phoenix company, said in a statement Friday that it believes Gulf Broadcast's proposed sale price is inadequate. The company will try to persuade shareholders to vote against the liquidation.

Gulf Broadcast has contracted to sell five television stations and seven radio stations to Taft Broadcasting Co. of Cincinnati for $755 million.

Houston-based Gibraltar Savings & Loan has agreed to pay $130 million for 6,400 acres of undeveloped real estate Gulf Broadcast owns in Collin County. The highly publicized land sale would be the largest land deal on record in the Dallas area.

When Gulf Broadcast's liquidation plan was announced in February, American Continental officials said they would study the plan and consider mounting their own bid for the broadcast properties.

A Gulf Broadcast spokesman said the company's directors are satisfied with the liquidation plan and will oppose the action by American Continental.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Savings and loan closings 'unusual thing'

NEW YORK (AP) — Analysts say last week's closing of about 70 Ohio savings and loan institutions was the result of unusual circumstances affecting only a limited number of thrifts and was no reflection on the safety of the industry.

"I think it was a fluke, a very unusual thing," William B. O'Connell, president of the United States League of Savings Institutions, said Friday. The league is a trade group.

Private analysts agreed. But they also said it raised questions about whether small depositors realize the risks of placing money in an institution that is not federally insured.

Gov. Richard Celeste ordered the 70 savings and loans to remain closed Friday morning because of runs on depoists at some of the institutions. They were insured by a privately held fund.

The governor's chief of staff said over the weekend that the three-day closing will be extended until at least Wednesday while the Legislature devises a plan to strengthen the institutions.

The runs on some of the institutions had been touched off by the failure of a state-chartered S&L late last week.

The thrift that touched off the furor, Home State Savings Association of Cincinnati, had sustained heavy losses in an unusual manner — it lost a lot in transactions with a failed securities dealer, ESM Government Securities Inc. of Florida.

Building permits' value increases 8 percent

NEW YORK (AP) — The value of building permits issued in the nation's 200 largest cities rose 8.1 percent in the third quarter of 1984 from a year earlier, Dun & Bradstreet Corp. says.

The increase in building permit activity fell short of the 20 percent increase from a year earlier in the second quarter of 1984 and the 25.1 percent increase in the first quarter of 1984, the business information company said in its latest report released for publication today.

The report said $12.9 billion worth of building permits was issued in the cities surveyed during the three months ended Sept. 30, 1984, up from $12 billion in the third quarter of 1983.

The figures indicate "that construction activity should remain relatively strong throughout 1985, since building permit levels forecast construction activity in the next six to eight quarters," Dun & Bradstreet said in a news release.

Department says exports unfairly subsidized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department has ruled that exports of carbon steel products from Austria, Sweden and Venezuela are being unfairly subsidized.

The preliminary determination on Friday, if upheld, could mean that an import tax equal to the amount of the subsidy will be imposed on steel shipments from the three countries.

The subsidies found after the initial investigation were 72.6 percent for Venezuela, 2.08 percent for Austria and 3.38 percent for Sweden.

The investigation was launched following a complaint on Jan. 8 filed by the U.S. Steel Corp.

Imports of carbon steel products in the first nine months of 1984 were $44 million from Austria, $62 million from Sweden and $38 million from Venezuela.

Meanwhile, buoyed by strengthening orders, two leading steel producers have raised prices on products used in construction, but spirited competition is holding down prices for the industry's most popular product, the flat-rolled steel used in cars and appliances.

The increases were announced recently by industry leader U.S. Steel. and No. 3 Bethlehem Steel Corp.

Stock tenders exceed Phillips buyup offer

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. says its offer to buy back nearly 72.6 million shares of its stock was oversubscribed by a wide margin.

Phillips has offered to exchange about half of its shares for securities valued at $62 a share. The offer was the company's response earlier this month to a hostile takeover attempt by New York financier Carl Icahn, who then agreed to drop his bid.

Phillips said Saturday that substantially more than the 72.58 million shares it offered to buy back were tendered in response to the offer. It said it expected to have preliminary figures later today on the percentage of stock that would be accepted.

Shareholders who agreed to the company's offer as of a deadline of midnight last Friday will be assured that a portion of their shares will be accepted.

If all the company's outstanding shares were tendered, then each stockholder would be able to exchange half of his holdings for securities.

There were 154.6 million shares of Phillips stock outstanding when the offer was made. But Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr., who led an earlier attempt to acquire Phillips, agreed to sell his group's 8.9 million shares back to the company at $53 a share in a cash.

Phillips has estimated that the blended value of its stock and the new securities will equal $56 to $57 a share, but some security industry analysts have put a lower price tag on the deal because of the impact of the heavy debt load on Phillips' operations.

The swap of stock for securities will cost Phillips $4.5 billion.

Auto industry's growth helps shape corporations' rankings

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Divestiture, acquisitions and continued growth in the automobile industry in 1984 helped shape the rankings of the nation's 25 largest nonfinancial corporations.

Petroleum companies, as in years past, continued to dominate the list of corporations, which are ranked in terms of revenue. With softer demand for petroleum products, however, some of these large oil companies have had slightly lower revenue and nearly half reported lower earnings. Still, oil companies accounted for 11 of the 25 companies listed.

Among the most notable changes was the Chrysler Corp., which was not among the companies listed last year but ranked 18th on this year's list.

The auto company's revenues climbed 47.6 percent, to $19.57 billion. Chrysler was also the biggest gainer in net income, on a percentage basis, with earnings more than tripling, to $2.38 billion.

In all, America's 25 largest nonfinancial corporations posted revenues of $820.74 billion last year, up 1.8 percent from $805.9 billion in 1983. The increase in revenue in 1983, when the country was rebounding from a recession, had been 2.5 percent. In 1984, net income for these corporations rose 5.06 percent, to $41.06 billion. Net income had increased 4.2 percent in 1983.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co., reflecting the effects of the divestiture of its local operating subsidiaries, dropped to ninth place, from third on last year's list. AT&T ranked second two years ago.

The Exxon Corp., with $97.28 billion in revenues, retained its position as the nation's largest company for the seventh consecutive year. Exxon's revenues climbed a modest 2.7 percent, while the company's net income rose 11 percent, to $5.53 billion.

The General Motors Corp., reflecting continued high demand, held the No. 2 position. But GM narrowed Exxon's lead to $13.39 billion in revenue, from $20 billion in 1983.

The Mobil Corp. ranked third, moving up one position from last year. The company's revenues rose 2.8 percent, to $60.62 billion. However, Mobil's net income declined 15.5 percent, to $1.27 billion.

The Ford Motor Co. also moved up one position, to fourth place. Ford posted revenue of $52.37 billion, an increase of 17.8 percent from the previous year.

Goodyear recalling 6,000 tires

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. is recalling 6,000 Wrangler radial truck tires because of possible cracking around the sidewall.

The tires are size 8R19.5 and have serial numbers beginning with the letters MM and ending in the numbers 492, 502, 512, 013, 023, 033, 043, 053 or 063, Goodyear announced.

They were made at the company's Fayetteville, N.C., plant in late 1982 and early 1983.

The possible defects could lead to premature failure, the company said.

Owners of the tires are being notified by mail. They will receive new tires, including mounting and balancing, free provided they bring in their old tires within 60 days after receiving the notices.

Shultz says Soviet long-range rocket system 'raises questions'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who firmly rejects any arms control deal that can't be closely verified, says he is concerned about a new, 10-warhead Soviet missile fired from easily hidden mobile launchers.

The SS-24, a long-range, heavy rocket system now being deployed in the Soviet Union, also "raises very considerable questions" about whether the Kremlin is complying with the SALT II treaty limitations on strategic nuclear weapons, Shultz says.

"What it shows is the continuing modernization of the Soviet land-based weapons," Shultz said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley." "I think the emergence of weapons of that kind only emphasize the importance of defense against them because they're not in a fixed place where you know where they are.

"The mobility of the missiles increasingly raises problems about verification — whether you can really count them and know where they are," he said.

Stanislav Menshikov, a Soviet spokesman interviewed by ABC, denied that the rail-mobile SS-24 or the new single-warhead, stationary SS-25 system violate the pact. "We are doing all we can to maintain SALT II," he said.

In the 1979 SALT II agreement, which the United States never ratified but still honors informally, both sides promised to limit the numbers of launchers and warheads on long-range nuclear weapons.

In the past, the Soviet Union has said it is retiring older weapons as new ones such as the SS-24 are deployed to stay within the treaty limits. Shultz said the United States might face a similar decision later this year when it deploys a new missile-carrying Trident submarine.

"We'll have to make that decision as we come to it," Shultz said. "In the meantime the president's policy is a 'no-undercut' policy in the interest of seeing if we can't bring forward from the present Geneva negotiations the promise of the radical reduction" in missiles on both sides.

The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, meanwhile, predicted that the negotiations would be "totally bogged down" in six to nine months.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press" on Sunday, said, "The administration's position and the Soviet position just philosophically, at the outset, are inconsistent."

At the beginning last week of the first superpower arms discussions since December 1983, the Soviets said they would not agree to President Reagan's call for major reductions in offensive weapons unless he drops his "Star Wars" missile defense research program. Reagan has said the research is not negotiable.

"Unless one of those two sides changes their philosophy, I see it getting bogged down, and it's going to be trench warfare for the administration," Aspin said.

Shultz also said the talks would be difficult.

Reagan lobbies divided Senate to continue funding for MX

WASHINGTON (AP) — A divided Senate is nearing a decision on continued spending for the MX missile, with President Reagan telling undecided senators a vote against the weapon will undercut U.S. negotiators at arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

With the first of two Senate votes on the issue set for Tuesday, a survey by The Associated Press of all 100 senators shows a 42-42 split. Resolution of the issue rests in the hands of 16 undecided senators, most of whom are moderate Republicans and Democrats.

Another toss-up is shown in the vote count of assistant Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, who said he found a 46-46 tie with just eight senators still undecided.

At issue is whether Congress will end a freeze on MX funds enacted last year and release $1.5 billion to build a second batch of 21 MX missiles.

"It's going to be extremely tight," predicted Fred Werthheimer, president of Common Cause, who has been lobbying against the MX.

Reagan is lobbying hard for the missile system and sources said he has been inviting undecided senators to the White House for chats and calling others on the telephone.

Among the key undecided votes in the Senate are Arlen Specter, R-Pa., Daniel Evans, R-Wash., Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., Russell Long, D-La., Charles McC Mathias Jr., R-Md., and Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va.

A major unknown factor in the situation is how Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, will cast his vote.

Goldwater has been on both sides of the issue, first saying he would oppose MX because it could not be made invulnerable to Soviet attack, then saying that to kill it would be a sign of weakened American resolve that would send the wrong signal to Soviet arms negotiators.

The two Senate votes, the first on Tuesday, the second on Thursday, focus on the twin issues of authorizing and appropriating MX funds.

If either vote goes against the MX, the battle is over and the 21 long-range, land-based, multiple-warhead missiles won't be deployed as planned in existing Minuteman silos in Nebraska and Montana.

If the Senate approves the funds, the issue moves to the House, where two additional votes are scheduled tentatively for next Tuesday.

The House vote also is expected to be close, but on Sunday, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said he would vote for the MX "mostly as a bargaining chip" in the U.S.-Soviet arms talks being held in Geneva, Switzerland.

On Friday, Reagan lost one important supporter when Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., who voted for the MX in the last congressional test, announced she had switched sides and will oppose it.

But Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., who has voted against MX appropriations in five successive roll calls, leaped in the other direction.

Boren announced he will vote to continue MX funds this time because "it is extremely important that we send the president's team to Geneva in the strongest possible position."

Mrs. Kassebaum said she will vote "no" on MX because she has concluded it is "a vulnerable, expensive system that provides no significant improvement in our nuclear deterrent."

Many senators contacted by the AP said they shared Boren's concern that whatever the technical faults of the MX, voting against it now could be seen as undermining the U.S. negotiating stance at Geneva and lessening the incentive for the Soviets to agree to deep cuts in their nuclear arsenal.

Some of those surveyed noted Reagan also is asking for approval of another 46 MXs in his budget for fiscal 1986.

These senators say they might vote for the weapon this week while there is intense focus on the Geneva talks, then decide to cut off additional money when the MX debate reopens during budget discussions this summer.

While the MX issue holds center stage on Capitol Hill, more U.S. help for famine victims in Africa may come up for final action this week as well.

Legislation providing $669 million in more food and other relief for famine victims in Ethopia and elsewhere in Africa is scheduled on the Senate floor sometime during the week, depending on the progress of the MX debate.

Study: Chemical plants' risk unknown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three out of every four Americans live "in proximity" to a chemical plant, but nobody knows which facilities are capable of a Bhopal-type disaster, the chairman of the Senate Environment Committee says.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., says the statistic, developed at his request by the Congressional Research Service, "gives us some idea of the potential magnitude for a chemical disaster in the United States."

The Congressional Research Service report, which was made available Sunday, said that in 1982 there were 11,368 chemical manufacturing plants in this country, most of them in the nation's 335 metropolitan areas where 75.8 percent of the U.S. population lived in 1980.

"One may conclude that about 75 percent of the U.S. population lives in proximity to a chemical plant," the report said, noting that the five largest metropolitan areas — New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia and San Francisco — had the greatest concentrations of plants.

The service, part of the Library of Congress, said it "defined 'population in proximity' as the population of a metropolitan area in which chemical plants are located. This may, in some instances, include people who live a substantial distance from a plant; but in most cases, the larger the population of a metropolitan area, the most likely it is to include numerous chemical plants."

Stafford said in a statement that "certainly not every one of these plants — for that matter, probably not even one-half of them — poses the potential for disaster like Bhopal.

"But some of them do, and the shame is we do not know which ones," Stafford said. "The Congress does not know, the press does not, the government does not and, most importantly, the public does not."

The senator said the plants pose dangers beyond the type of large release of methyl isocyanate gas that escaped from a Union Carbide-affiliated plant in Bhopal, India, last December.

"Each of these chemical plants almost certainly regularly releases toxic chemicals into the environment as a part of doing business," Stafford said. "By and large, the releases are either under-regulated or not regulated at all."

He termed these regular ventings "more insidious...more threatening" than what occurred in Bhopal.

In another study prepared at Stafford's request, Congressional Research Service reviewed state and federal records for five chemical plants in northern New Jersey, where a rash of recent ventings have forced people to seek medical treatment.

America's heartland shifts westward

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans see the Middle West, the mythical heartland of the country from which the nation draws its values, as moving farther west as the East becomes less rural, a survey indicates.

Based upon their location, Americans have different ideas about where the "Midwest" is located, says a study published Sunday. But many seem to agree that the heartland is not where it used to be, the report said.

James R. Shortridge, a professor of geography at the University of Kansas, says a survey of 1,941 college students nationwide indicates the Midwest has now moved to the Great Plains states and left behind states traditionally considered as part of the Middle West, such as Illinois and Michigan.

The term Middle West evokes images of farms, small towns and friendly people, he says, and as the reality of these images moves farther west, so do people's ideas of where this region is located.

Most Americans now think of the Midwest as the central region of the country that includes Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, South Dakota and Missouri, the report says.

"The vernacular region has shifted westward," Shortridge says. "Omaha and Lincoln, Neb., lie near the region's heart."

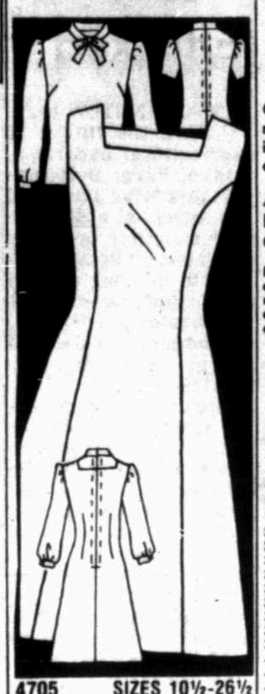

People began developing the myth of the Midwest as the true heartland of America around 1880, he said in a telephone interview.

"The East, which had been considered the core of values, was perceived as being full of foreigners who had strange religions and values," he said. "The 'true America' was then thought to be in the rural Midwest of the day, where people worked hard, practiced Jeffersonian democracy and upheld 'traditional' values."

Since the beginning of this century, the Middle West traditionally has been described by social scientists and writers as the 12 states extending from Ohio westward through Kansas and northward to the Canadian border, he reports.
