Hereford finally joins PRPC, after heated discussion by commissioners

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

The Hereford City Commission, after a heated discussion between commissioners, elected to become a dues paying member of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission by a four to one vote.

Commissioner Emory Brownlow asked the commission exactly what benefits would be gained by entering the PRPC, and if it would be wise to spend taxpayers money on services that the government already funds. PRPC board of directors chairman Austin Rose stated, "I don't know what you would receive, that you are not already getting, but if it were not for the PRPC, you would not be getting any benefits."

The PRPC is an organization of Panhandle government officials, working together on problems concerning the region. The PRPC uses funds that the cities and counties of the panhandle provide to operate the facilities, and fund projects in law enforcement, drug abuse, senior citizen's activities, and government grant application fees. Currently the city of Hereford uses the benefits provided by the PRPC, but does not pay any dues.

Commissioner Bud Eades said that the city is not paying their share to keep the operation working.

Brownlow responded by saying, "The government is paying for the whole thing and I don't see any reason why we should have to pay for something that the government already funds, I don't think that it should even exist."

Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher told Brownlow that, "It does exist, and we are simply not paying our share."

After the vote was taken to join the PRPC, Fisher asked Rose to send the city a bill for dues. Brownlow then stated, "That's exactly the way I feel - we'll just get a bill."

In other business the commission decided to table the issue of the annexation of 22.614 acres on Fifteenth Street approximately 100 feet west of Centre Street.

The commission also elected to adopt an ordinance to annex a 10.328

Barrett wins puzzle game

The Hereford Brand's Photo Puzzle game drew 93 correct entries last week, but the lone winner of the $50 in Hereford Bucks was Betty Barrett, 112 N. Texas.

Mrs. Barrett's name was picked in a random drawing by a Brand customer, Mary Spinhirne. The photo puzzle was that of Rex Easterwood, local attorney and president of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

The first clue, or clues, to this week's Photo Puzzle appeared in Sunday's Brand. Pieces will be printed each day through Friday, and entrants must put the pieces together and identify the mystery guest. Submit the 4 by 5 completed puzzle, along with the entry form from Friday's paper.

Join the fun and enter the game each week! You could be the lucky winner of $50 in Hereford Bucks.

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox has filed suit against the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, alleging that EPA standards for storing high-level nuclear wastes would not protect groundwater in Deaf Smith County.

The suit was filed Monday in the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, the same day the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear Texas' previous legal challenge of the selection of a Deaf Smith County site.

The justices, without comment, left standing a 5th Circuit Court ruling that the earlier challenge was premature.

A spokeswoman for Gov. Mark White's office said Monday that White, who was out of town, was extremely disappointed in the high court's refusal to hear the case but hoped there would be a different decision in other appeals. There also is pending in the 9th Circuit Court of California a case in which Texas and other states have challenged EPA standards for high-level disposal sites.

Mattox's lawsuit Monday alleges that EPA's standards for long-term storage and management of the radioactive waste will not protect the groundwater in the Panhandle, one of the nation's most important agricultural areas.

"According to EPA's definitions, Deaf Smith County doesn't have enough population to come under the groundwater protection standards.

Local students stage walkout

By JERI CURTIS
Managing Editor

Unexcused absences will be issued to Stanton Junior High students involved in a walkout of classes which began Monday afternoon as an organized protest against several school rules, according to Bobby Decker, Stanton principal.

The students marched around the junior high school carrying red and black flags, the banner of a farm worker union, after flyers circulated by the Students Rights Committee urged the group to "fight for your rights" by skipping sixth and seventh period classes.

A group of 15 to 20 students — joined by Jesus Moya, of a farm worker union — continued the demonstration today across Park Street from the school.

Dr. Harrell Holder said Moya had denied having organized the walkout. Decker said he did not know if Moya was an instigator. Texas Rural Legal Aid attorney Randall Marshall said that it was his understanding that it was done by students.

Monday afternoon, school board members Marilyn Culpepper, Jo Garcia and John Fuston met with the students, Decker, and Holder for a meeting to discuss the list of demands made by the students. Moya and Marshall were at the meeting also.

Verbatim from the flyer, the students demands were:

- No more punishment by Isolating students.
- No more swating by principal and coaches without parents permission.
- No restrictions on dressing.

-No more locker searching without parents permission.

-No more strip searching.

-No shouting at students.

-We want quality education.

-No more unjustified suspensions.

-No more unequal treatment.

-No more S.A.C.

-Permission to all students to go to the bathroom.

During the meeting Marshall asked the school officials to leave the room so he could give the children their legal rights.

Marshall told The Brand today, "We were asked yesterday to go down and render any advice necessary. We cannot comment upon the representation of any client at this point without their prior permission."

Marshall said by whom and when the TRLA was contacted about the walkout was "confidential information" but did admit that he attended the meeting Monday "in my capacity as an attorney."

He did not know if the student grievances had been presented to the school administration but indicated that the walkout probably goes back to the time of the TRLA lawsuit with the Hereford school district concerning trustee elections when a parent

Demos plan to dump donkey

DALLAS (AP) — It's dump-the-donkey time at the Democratic National Committee.

The committee has hired a corporate image-maker to come up with something more contemporary than the old floppy-eared party symbol.

Committee spokesman, John Florescu, said the idea is to counteract the party's image of "division and fractiousness."

"We want to put a new face on the party," he said.

Terry Michaels, another committee spokesman, said the new logo is being developed by Saul Bass of Hollywood, who has cooked up symbols for AT&T and United Airlines.

"We simply want to modernize," Michaels said.

While the new logo will adorn party stationery and publications, Michaels suspects the donkey will stubbornly refuse to stay out to pasture.

"The donkey as a symbol will be used at some point in the future in some way," he predicted.

Although the donkey has long played feisty counterpart to the Republican Party's elephant, Michaels said it was never adopted as an official Democratic symbol.

Local officials from both parties said they don't believe a new logo will change the Democratic Party.

"Personally, I don't think it makes one iota of a difference," said Mike McKool, Dallas County Democratic Chairman.

McKool's counterpart, Republican Fred Meyer, said a new symbol won't help the Democrats "change their public perception as being tired and out-of-date."

"Getting rid of the donkey is not going to help," he said.

Astronauts coming home today

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis' astronauts headed back to Earth today with proof that humans can build a space station and with a drug purified in zero gravity that could treat millions with red-blood cell deficiencies.

The crew of five men and one woman packed up their experiments and prepared to end their week-long journey with a landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., at 4:33 p.m. EST.

Normally, shuttles land on a dry lakebed at Edwards, but rain has soaked the area, so commander Brewster Shaw and pilot Bryan O'Connor were to guide their ship onto a concrete strip.

The astronauts were returning somewhat reluctantly from what has been a flawless mission since a spectacular night liftoff last Tuesday.

"I'm looking forward to getting home, but I will miss the view of the Earth from up here," Sherwood Spring told a news conference from space on Monday.

Spring and Jerry Ross spent much of the news conference discussing their two lengthy space walks in which they demonstrated space station construction techniques by building a 45-foot tower and a 12-foot pyramid structure and moving them around easily.

Ross said he and Spring will spend time with space station designers "to assist them in understanding what it means to build a space station and what is the best and most efficient way of doing it."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to build a large permanent manned space station in orbit in the early 1990s.

During the flight, the astronauts launched three commercial communications satellites, grew crystals in weightlessness, operated a small drug factory and aimed a special camera at drought-stricken Ethiopia and Somalia in search of underground water.

Price tag rising for nuke plant

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Texas Utilities Electric Co. officials say a higher price tag for the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant will not lead to an automatic increase in electric rates but the future remains uncertain because of start-up delays.

The latest delay in the plant's opening will add $900 million to its cost, bringing the projected price tag to $5.46 billion, utility officials said.

The utility announced the delay two weeks ago. The nuclear plant has been under construction near Glen Rose for more than 10 years. TUEC owns 87 percent of the plant.

TUEC spokesman Dick Ramsey said a rate increase request has not been ruled out for 1986, but no request has been filed with the Texas Public Utilities Commission.

Comanche Peak's original cost was estimated at $779 million in 1974. The cost and completion date of the plant have been changed eight times since then as doubt has been cast on equipment safety and inspection procedures.

Officials said a complete federal reinspection, which will cost $130 million in the next 18 months, is underway.

But TUEC officials say, despite the growing price tag, utility customers — including those in Eastland, Sweetwater, Breckenridge and other cities — pay slightly lower electric rates on average than three years ago.

Corazon Aquino seeks presidency

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Corazon Aquino announced today she will run for president against 20-year incumbent Ferdinand E. Marcos, who she accuses of responsibility for the assassination of her husband, opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Her announcement came only hours after Marcos signed a law calling a special presidential election for Feb. 7.

"I hereby affirm my candidacy and confirm my willingness to serve our people as president of the Republic of the Philippines," Mrs. Aquino told a packed auditorium. She was flanked by leaders of an eight-party coalition that had earlier drafted her as its candidate. Eighteen members of Parliament sat in the audience.

"For 20 years we have had one of the most brilliant Filipinos" as president, she said, "and yet look what has happened to our country. It has been devastated."

Mrs. Aquino said she had offered former Sen. Salvador H. Laurel the opportunity to run with her as a candidate for vice president. Laurel, who is considering his own campaign for president, has not said whether he would accept.

Succeeds Hereford's Bob Josserand

One Hereford man handed over the gavel as president of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association at the recent state convention in Fort Worth, but another Hereford man was installed as the new president.

Bob Josserand, president of AZTX Cattle Co., completed his year as head of the world's largest cattle feeding organization, and Mike Bowles, manager of Pre-Feeders at Summerfield, has taken over as chief of the huge association.

In spite of the heavy toll taken by sustained losses during 1985, "Cattle feeding remains an exciting and high-risk business," Josserand said when he kicked off the convention.

During his address to the membership, Josserand pointed to a number of innovations and services that have helped TCFA earn a reputation as a powerful force in the livestock industry. TCFA has retained a tax lobbyist and agricultural lobbyist, maintains a market department aimed at keeping sellers as well informed as buyers, has a task force on alternative methods of marketing cattle, developed a total insurance plan for feedyards, has a safety specialist as well as a Ph.D. specialist to deal with regulatory agencies, has a cattlemen's emergency fund, volume grain shipments, and many seminars during the year.

Jo Ann Smith, president of the National Cattlemen's Association, was a featured speaker at the convention. She said the cattle industry should see improved profit opportunities during the next few years. She added that profitability can be sustained more readily if the industry takes steps to strengthen demand.

Smith cited prospects for significantly smaller beef supplies and higher average cattle prices. At the same time, she emphasized the need for expanded beef promotion and research programs. She praised the members of TCFA for their part in seeking passage of the beef promotion enabling legislation.

"For the past several years, we have been out-processed, out-packaged and out-merchandised by our friends in the integrated poultry companies," said Smith. "Now, we must not only play catch-up; we must advance our efforts to recapture our dominant share of available meat dollars."

As the prospects for cattle prices strengthen, "we should act to improve demand by developing and promoting products that will satisfy the wants and needs of a changing society," she said.

committee presented complaints. Marshall said he did not recall any of the problems having been taken care of.

Asked if he could legally justify the children being out of class for the protest, Marshall said, "I guess I really couldn't answer that at this time."

Holder said he believed there were "some kids caught up in it through peer pressure."

Fuston said that during the meeting most of the talking was done by Moya, parents and the children and noted that it was in a way "which was very disrespectful."

Holder said the students and parents need to realize there are three risks involved in the protest participation. First, students who have more than five unexcused absences cannot receive credit for that semester's course; second, compulsory attendance laws subject parents to fines if students are absent more than 10 times without cause; and third, it is a misdemeanor under state law for a person within 500 feet of a school to disrupt classes. That conduct includes enticement of students away from classes and prevention or attempted prevention of students from attending class.

Holder said he was aware of the group's grievances, but added "some I don't think there's any basis for."

Decker said several of the parents he talked to Monday were "pretty concerned about their students being in the walkout."

He said that of the students in the group "some have been to the office quite a bit."

"I just hope we can get it cleared up and get the kids back in school where they need to be," Decker said. "We've got a lot of students that are coming to school and are not complaining."

Fuston told The Brand, "It's sad that Jesus Moya and Randall Marshall would be a part to disrupting our school and community. Those students in four or five years should be suing Moya and Marshall because they (the students) didn't get an education."

SUIT

That is patently absurd," Mattox said.

Under the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982, the U.S. Department of Energy is to select a site which, in 1996, will house the nation's first repository for highly radioactive wastes.

Under the law, "potentially acceptable sites" were to be determined in early 1983.

When two tracts of farmland in the Texas Panhandle's Palo Duro Basin were among nine listed as possible sites, state officials sued to challenge the way in which the DOE reached its designations.

The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed the lawsuit last June 19, ruling that the preliminary site decisions "are not final actions which are ripe for our review."

Lawyers from the Texas attorney general's office sought Supreme Court review to revive the lawsuit.

Since then, the government has narrowed the list of suitable sites to three — Deaf Smith County near Amarillo, Texas; Yucca Mountain on the edge of Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada; and the government's Hanford nuclear reservation near Richland, Wash.

The DOE announced in October that it had asked the National Academy of Sciences to review how the sites were selected. Department officials said they hoped that review would defuse criticism that the selection process is seriously flawed.

tract at the northwest corner of Fifteenth and Highway 385 where the new Smith's Food and Drug is being constructed.

The commission then voted to use the county clerk's office as the only location for absentee voting.

Steve Coneway, a member of the Hereford School Board, then addressed the commission concerning the maintenance of school-city-neighborhood parks on school property. The parks would consist of playground equipment constructed at three different elementary schools. The school board member asked the commission if the city would be willing to help with the maintenance of the grounds and equipment. The city stated that due to reasons concerning liability against injury to children while they are playing, the city cannot be responsible for the up-keep of the equipment, but would be willing to assist in the up-keep of the grounds.

The commissioners felt that the idea of constructing public playgrounds in Hereford was great, but the risks were too big for the city. The commission told Coneway that the city would be willing to help in some way, but they were not sure what they could do other than mowing the grass around the equipment.

The commission then appointed Fisher to serve another two-year term on the Deaf Smith County juvenile board.

Nation's libel laws face new tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future course of American libel law could be determined in a pair of Supreme Court cases involving The Philadelphia Inquirer and a magazine published by columnist Jack Anderson.

The court was hearing arguments in both cases today and plans to announce its decisions sometime before July.

Its ruling in the Anderson case is expected to help the nation's trial judges decide when to dismiss a public figure's libel lawsuit before trial and when to let it proceed to trial.

A decision in the Inquirer case should resolve another important libel law issue: Do those who sue or those sued have to prove the truth or falsity of an allegedly libelous statement?

Both cases have captured the attention of numerous news organizations, all with potentially significant stakes in the outcomes. They have offered the justices volumes of unsolicited advice.

Anderson is seeking to have the court dismiss a libel suit against his magazine, The Investigator, filed by a group called the Liberty Lobby. Anderson's syndicated newspaper column was not involved in the suit.

The Liberty Lobby and its founder, Willis Carto, sued over two articles printed in the October 1981 issues of Anderson's magazine that described the group as pro-Nazi. The articles also said Carto tried to model himself after Adolf Hitler.

A federal trial judge here threw out the suit, but the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated it and ordered a trial.

At issue is what standard of proof state and federal trial judges should use in deciding whether a public figure's lawsuit should be dismissed before trial.

Past court decisions require public figures to prove libel by "clear and convincing evidence" — a tougher burden than plaintiffs in most other non-criminal cases face.

But the court has never said whether public figures who sue for libel must also present "clear and convincing" evidence to defeat a defendant's pre-trial move to dismiss the case.

In the Inquirer case, the newspaper is challenging a Pennsylvania law placing the burden of proof on defendants.

Maurice S. Hepps, principal stockholder of General Programming Inc., sued The Philadelphia Inquirer over a series of articles published in 1975 and 1976.

The articles said there was link between businesses that operated beer and beverage distributorships as franchises of General Programming and certain "underworld" figures and organized crime generally.

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court ordered a new trial as it upheld the state law placing the burden of proof in such cases on the libel defendant.

Making Donations

The Christmas holidays are just a few weeks away and residents are encouraged to donate to Project Christmas Card, an annual community-wide project to assist Deaf Smith General Hospital and students pursuing careers in health professions. Donation canisters are located around town. Making their contributions at Hereford State Bank are (from left) Holly and Jessica Weishaar, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Weishaar. Looking on are (at left) Terry Bromlow, executive vice-president of the bank, and Craig Smith, president.

Project Christmas Card underway

Instead of sending holiday greeting cards to Hereford residents why not donate to the annual Christmas Card Project?

Those who participate in the project, which is under the sponsorship of the L'Allegre Study Club, will have their names printed in a full page greeting in The Hereford Brand.

The project officially began Monday and will conclude Dec. 18. As in the past, the money will be used to purchase medical equipment for Deaf Smith Hospital.

Donation canisters have been placed throughout town for the convenience of donors. Businesses who are assisting with the project include both Hereford State and First National Banks, TG&Y, Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union, The Vogue, Bag 'n' Save, Jack 'n' Jill, JJ's Beauty Shop, Touch of Class, K-Bob's Steak House, Grandma's Korner Too and Louise's. Canisters have also been placed at Hereford Senior Citizens Center and the hospital.

Until this year, the annual project has been managed by the Hereford Medical Auxiliary. A total of just under $100,000 has been raised in the past 29 years for various medical equipment.

Ann Landers

Rules basically the same

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letters you have run lately on the "new" rules for women who date has prompted me to write.

I am in my 40s, was married for several years, am totally confused and more than a little nervous.

What am I supposed to do when a man invites me to join him for dinner and a movie? Should I ask him then and there, "Who is paying?" How might one do that gracefully? I cannot imagine.

I am struggling hard to make ends meet. I simply cannot afford to go out with someone and suddenly be told, "I paid for the dinner, it's up to you to buy the movie tickets."

Now I am wondering if that nice man who took me out last week and seemed to enjoy my company so much hasn't called me back because I didn't offer to pay for my half. Or is he waiting for ME to call and invite HIM out for a meal?

Please, Ann, how about some help for us females who were busy doing something else while the rules were changing?—CONFUSED IN WASHINGTON

DEAR CONFUSED: Relax. The rules haven't changed all that much for females in their 40s. Most men in the same age bracket who invite women to dinner and the movies still expect to pick up the tab.

If the relationship becomes more than casual, the woman should offer to cook occasionally at her place or take him out on his birthday or on Valentine's Day or just for a Sunday treat. She should also buy him a gift once in a while.

The rules are different for teenagers on an allowance, college kids who are barely getting by, or senior citizens on a pension. They go Dutch.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read with interest the letter describing the widespread practice of stealing merchandise from one's employer. While I do not condone such behavior it is not difficult to understand why some people do it. Let me illustrate my point.

Many years ago I worked in the office of a small company in Chicago. The woman in charge of the mailing room handled several hundred dollars worth of postage stamps. When employees wanted to buy a few stamps for personal letters they would go to "Betty" and she would accommodate them. It was discovered that Betty did not always put that small change in the cash drawer. Eventually she was caught and discharged for stealing.

Several weeks later something inadvertently activated the sprinkler system. The superintendent ordered three truckloads of merchandise up from the basement and placed it where it would get wet. The company then called the insurance people and collected a nice sum of money for the ruined merchandise.

The news circulated around the plant in a hurry and many of us were disgusted. They fired Betty for stealing a few measly dollars while the company ripped off the insurance company for a hefty sum. Do you understand why some employees think it's OK to steal?—SUN-TIMES READER

DEAR READER: Stealing is stealing, whether it's a few dollars for stamps or collecting unjustly from the insurance company. Neither is acceptable and no excuse is good enough.

PUPPY WORMS
NEW YORK A(AP)—"There's nothing cute about a puppy with worms," says Homer Connell, "and even less appealing is the possibility of contracting worms from your pet."

Connell, a veterinarian with Pfizer Inc., says, "Most people don't know that worms from a dog can infect humans. Young children are especially vulnerable to parasitic infection because they are more likely to come in contact with dirt" that has been contaminated by a dog.

"Most puppies are born with worms or get them shortly thereafter," says Connell, who suggests deworming puppies at 2, 3, 4, 6, 8, and 10 weeks after birth.

Texas Tech selects new grid coach

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — David McWilliams has a five-year contract as Texas Tech's 11th head football coach, but he knows he'll have to produce fast at a Southwest Conference school that hasn't had a winning record since 1978.

"I hope it doesn't take five years to get to the Cotton Bowl," said McWilliams, 43, who was hired Monday as Jerry Moore's replacement. "We're going to talk bowls and championships every year around here. You have to be positive."

Moore was fired Nov. 19 with two years remaining on his contract.

Tech quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver said that would be fine with him.

"I'm sick and tired of losing," said Tolliver. "Something has to be done around here. We need some discipline out on the field. We've just been beating ourselves."

McWilliams was defensive coordinator at the University of Texas for 16 years.

Athletic Director T. Jones, who was an associate athletic director at Texas, has known McWilliams since 1960 and called him "a dear friend."

However, Jones wanted to dispell any notions he hired McWilliams for that reason.

"I'm not in the friendship business," said Jones. "I hired David because he was the best coach available. I want that known clearly."

Jones admitted his decision had caused a rift among some Texas Tech supporters.

"My decision wasn't popular with some people in Lubbock but all I ask is that they give the man a fair shake," said Jones.

Then he quipped, "There are some unhappy people in Austin, too."

With his wife, Cindy, at his side, McWilliams said that although his work at Texas was with the defense, he planned a wide open offense.

"I believe you have to throw the football nowadays," he said. "You can't just lineup and run the football

Violetta Valdez is season football contest champion

The season winner of the Brand football contest is Violetta Valdez, and the winner of last week's football contest is Mike Wartes.

In the season winners' competition, Valdez missed five games. There was a second place tie among three people who missed six games each, with R.L. Blakely winning the second place prize.

The third place winner was Karen Marsh, who edged out her father, Cuby Kitchens, in the tie-breaker for third place.

The prizes in the season winners' contest were $100 Hereford Bucks for first place, $35 Hereford Bucks for second place, and $15 Hereford Bucks for third place.

The weekly contest ended last week, in which 125 people submitted entries. Mike Wartes of Fort Worth came in first place with four games missed.

Bobbie Kitchens placed second with five misses, and Teresa Baker came in third place with six missed games. Ten other people missed seven games each.

Defeated Wichita Falls Rider 63-56

Herd wins one of three tourney games

Although they had a 1-2 record in the Borger Holiday Tournament, the Hereford High School varsity boys' basketball team played close games in the two defeats.

The Herd defeated Wichita Falls Rider 63-56 in its opening game of the tournament on Friday. In a semifinal contest Saturday morning, Hereford fell to Borger 62-52.

In the tournament's third place game, the Whitefaces were edged by Mineral Wells 56-54.

Bobby Baker of Hereford, who averaged 19.7 points, 8.0 rebounds and 3.0 steals per game, was named to the all-tournament team.

"We played probably two of our best games of the season, against Wichita Falls Rider and then Borger," said HHS Coach Mike Fields.

"We were tied with Borger with six minutes left. Borger is picked to go regionals in 4A. We had our chance to be beat them. We had a chance or two to go ahead of Borger, but we just didn't do it," Fields continued.

Hereford led Mineral Wells by three points with 40 seconds left in the game. Hereford failed in an attempt to tie the game and send it into overtime when a shot was missed at the final buzzer.

"Our inexperience to protect a lead cost us the third place trophy," Fields said.

In the 63-56 victory over Wichita Falls Rider, Bobby Baker hit 10 of 12 field goal attempts and scored 23 points to help lead Hereford to its win.

Baker scored 10 points in the second quarter when the Whitefaces built up a 29-22 halftime lead.

Rodney Torres, who had 12 points, scored 10 of them in the second half as Hereford maintained its lead over Wichita Falls Rider.

Other scorers for the Herd included Rodney McCracken and Jerry Brown each with seven points, Stefan Hacker with six points, and Doug Watts with five points.

Torres led the team in assists with nine, McCracken and Brown each grabbed seven rebounds, and Baker had four steals.

Hereford made 22 of 42 field goal attempts, 52 percent, in the victory over Wichita Falls Rider.

The Whitefaces trailed Borger 28-24 at halftime, and were still behind by four points at the end of the third quarter, 40-36, in the 62-52 loss to Borger.

Baker again led Hereford in scoring with 18 points. McCracken was also in double figures with 10 points.

Other scorers were Torres and Watts with nine points each, and Brown with six points.

Hereford's field goal shooting was just 43 percent, 21 of 49.

Other statistical leaders for Hereford included Brown with nine rebounds, Torres with seven assists, and Baker and McCracken each with five steals.

The Herd fell behind Mineral Wells 30-22 in the first half, but rallied in the third quarter to move into a 42-40 lead. Baker, Torres and Hacker each scored six points for Hereford in the third quarter.

Turnovers then resulted in Hereford losing its three-point lead

Stanton Junior High School suffered three defeats in boys' basketball games Monday at Clovis, N.M., losing to Marshall Junior High School.

The ninth grade game went into overtime. The score was tied 55-55 at the end of regulation time, and Marshall went on to defeat Stanton 59-57.

Pat Mercer scored 10 points in the third quarter for Stanton, Richard Abalos scored eight points, and Keith Brown six points in helping their team rally.

MILLER ARRIVES
NEW YORK (AP) — Pro golfer Alice Miller came into her own this year, something that had been predicted by watchers of the feminine tour for several years.

Miller has been on the Ladies PGA Tour for eight years and didn't win a tournament until 1983 when she captured the West Virginia Classic. She won two more tournaments in 1984 and this year from January to July she took first money in four, including the prestigious Nabisco Dinah Shore event.

Wilt Chamberlain is the only player to have taken part in at least 400 National Basketball Association games and have a scoring average of at least 30 points per game.

Stanton then outscored Marshall 18-14 in the fourth quarter to tie the game 55-55, only to see Marshall win it in overtime, 59-57.

Mercer was high scorer for Stanton with 23 points. Brown scored 15 points, and Abalos had eight points.

Stanton's eighth grade team held a 24-19 halftime lead over Marshall, but a cold-shooting third quarter was the downfall of Stanton. Marshall outscored Stanton 19-2 in the third quarter, and 13-6 in the fourth quarter to win the game 51-32.

Jason Walterscheid, who scored nine points in the second quarter, led Stanton with 13 points. Robert Miriam scored six points, and Freddie Melindrez had five points.

In the seventh grade team's 28-23 loss to Marshall, Jermaine Williams led Stanton with 17 points.

Holiday blues normal says psychologist

A hint of holiday blues mixed in with seasonal joy is natural and may even be healthy, says a Texas Tech University psychologist.

Seasonal blues seem to affect most people this time of year, said Psychology Department Chairperson John H. Harvey, because holidays, especially Christmas, Thanksgiving and Easter, are important landmarks in people's lives. People remember Christmases past and compare them with the present, he said. That provides some important cues which call up the blues.

"Our memories of these events in the past are so clearly and vividly linked to people — people we have lost, those who have died and family friends, ex-lovers and ex-spouses we are away from now," Dr. Harvey said. "It's kind of a wistfulness. Holiday periods bring out the nostalgia and the good old days always seem better."

Harvey said studies indicate that most people, even those who have their lives in good order, experience some holiday depression. However, he separates that from unhealthy, chronic depression which lingers much longer and is characterized by little activity, disorganized thought and a low state of emotional arousal.

"It's important that we have memorial services in the mind for our past. That's just as important as the more formal services we have for the dead," he said. "We need to give the past its honor and move on. Avoidance of it will cause problems in the long-run."

Besides organizing and remembering the past around holidays, people may also have more free time then and can engage in active reflection.

"The holiday season is a time to reflect because there is a built-in set of cues for that," he said. "It calls our attention to how quickly life goes by and the losses and that loss is a part of life."

4 Around the County

By DAVY VESTAL

Is it stock show time already? Well, almost, but it is time for entries to the major stock shows to be turned into the office. San Antonio Stock Show entries have already been sent off and a big increase of entries has been recorded from this county.

Sixteen 4-H'ers with 7 steers, 10 lambs and 5 hogs have signed up to participate in the San Antonio Show in mid February. Houston entries have increased as well with around 30 4-H'ers with 13 steers, 15 hogs and 10 lambs. Houston Show is held the last week of February. Ft. Worth Stock Show entries will be up also this year with around 18 4-H'ers participating.

The Showmanship Club will hold a clinic on Dec. 7 at the Bull Barn. Tracy Haymes of Canyon will assist with hogs, Storm Gerhart of Grady, N.M. will help with sheep and Randy Vogel of Lubbock will assist with steers. For more information call the office.

With District 4-H Show entries good luck this Saturday, Dec. 7. Six young ladies will go to Dumas to compete. All won the right to compete in district at our Deaf Smith County 4-H Food Show in Hereford on November 16.

Seniors Kristi Powell will enter Charles Chunki Chili in main dish. Brandy Matthews will prepare golden ham bake for the senior fruits and vegetables.

Four juniors will try to win district. Jennifer Hicks will create creole pork in the main dish division this weekend. Larissa Kleuskens will enter her dish, fresh corn saute using all home grown vegetables in the fruits and vegetables division. Strawberry nut bread will be Pam Price's entry in the bread and cereals category. Jill Dutton will make crowned carrot cake for the judges in the nutritious snacks and desserts division.

Mrs. Dean Bradly, former homemaking teacher, will be a judge at the district event. Louise Walker will also be assisting.

Good cheer is half of good courage.

Deaths from heart disease decline in Texas this year

Deaths from heart disease in 1984 accounted for 44 percent of all deaths in Texas.

During the last 30 years, the percent of all deaths attributable to heart disease slowly rose, peaked in the early sixties and then slowly fell again to its current new low. Over half of all deaths were caused by heart disease as recently as 1966.

The American Heart Association credits this dramatic turnaround to improvement in lifestyle and related cardiovascular risk factor levels, increased efforts in prevention, and innovations in diagnosis and treatment. However, it is not possible to determine whether the declines in heart reflect a reduction in the frequency of attacks, an improvement in life expectancy after an attack, or both.

American Heart Association computations using Texas Department of Health vital statistics show that 51,329 people died of heart and blood vessel diseases in 1984.

Of those deaths, diseases of the heart accounted for 39,782 deaths; hypertension caused 346 deaths; cerebrovascular disease caused 8,974 deaths; and atherosclerosis 1,164 deaths. Other diseases of the arteries, arterioles and capillaries caused 1,063 deaths.

Just over 10,919 (26.9 percent) of all deaths from cardiovascular diseases in Texas occurred in individuals under age 65. The American Heart Association defines death prior to age 65 as premature.

Despite the common misconception of heart disease striking mostly men, 25,993 victims were male and 25,336 were female.

Heart disease affected over 44 million people in the United States this past year, and is expected to cost our economy over $72 billion in 1986. Cardiovascular disease is a serious and significant health problem in need of attention and action.

The American Heart Association believes that heart disease is largely preventable, and states its mission as "the prevention of premature death and disability from cardiovascular disease and stroke."

The major underlying cause of heart disease is atherosclerosis—a build-up of fatty deposits inside the blood vessels that restricts and blocks the flow of blood. Studies have shown that high levels of cholesterol in the blood, smoking and high blood pressure all contribute greatly to the chance of developing atherosclerosis.

Teacher works with severely handicapped children at home

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — There's a new classroom and a new teacher at Marshall Manor Nursing Home.

The classroom is a converted television sitting area and the teacher is Kathy Raines from the Marshall Independent School District.

Ms. Raines began teaching severely handicapped children in the local nursing home in September.

The students, ranging from 2 to 18 years old, are residents in the home and are disabled to a degree that they need 24-hour care.

Ms. Raines works with the five children daily from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. They are also served by an occupational therapist, and a vision specialist works with one student one day each week.

"We go through each day on a schedule," Ms. Raines said. "It's just like a regular class." Ms. Raines said the schedule is often adjusted because of health problems with the children. "They have problems we have to take care of," she said.

All of the children are on the same level, despite their age differences. The classroom is set up to meet the needs of the students. Mental stimulation of the children is Ms. Raines' major intent.

"They need constant stimulation," she said. The room is painted in bright colors, and other items for visual stimulation adorn the walls.

"All that's lacking here (in the classroom) are regular desks," she said.

Ms. Raines works with her students in group therapy, as well as one-on-one. She sees the children "as real children" and often finds herself back at the nursing home on Saturdays and Sundays.

"I think a lot of people look at children like this and see only their physical disabilities," Ms. Raines said. "If you can see through those disabilities, you see real children."

Ms. Raines said the classroom idea had been in the planning stages for more than a year. "Setting up the class was a co-effort of the nursing home and school district," she said.

The nursing home provides the actual classroom space while the school district provides the teacher, materials and equipment.

Ms. Raines visited a private school that had an infant stimulation program. She set her classroom up from ideas she took from that visit.
