Bush applauds 'peaceful revolution'

Cold War's end envisioned at summit in Malta

By CHARLES CAMPBELL

They announced no breakthroughs Sunday on issues that divide their countries, such as Central America and naval disarmament, but said that was not the point of their open-agenda dockside encounters.

In their parting remarks, both chose to emphasize mutual aspirations.

"We sought the answer to the question where we stand now," Gorbachev told reporters. "Many things that were characteristic of the Cold War should be abandoned ... the arms race, mistrust, psychological and ideological struggle and all that. All that should be things of the past."

Trading relaxed banter at the first-ever joint news conference of Soviet and U.S. presidents, Bush and Gorbachev repeatedly echoed each other's words as they described their talks and their hopes for the future.

"I couldn't have asked for a better result out of this non-summit summit," Bush said. "It was a no-agenda meeting and yet it was a meeting where were discussed, as the chairman said, many, many subjects. So I think if a meeting can improve relations, I think this one has."

The next chance comes in June, when a full-scale Bush-Gorbachev summit is scheduled for Washington.

The fireworks missing in the superpower talks were supplied Sunday night in a loud and colorful display over the Grand Harbor of Valletta, the capital of this Mediterranean island nation.

But NATO told U.S. will keep troops in Europe

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

BRUSSELS, Belgium — President Bush today hailed the "peaceful revolution" sweeping Communist Eastern Europe and said the United States and its European allies would work together to see that "individual freedom everywhere replace coercion and tyranny."

Asked whether the Cold War was over, the president wouldn't go as far as Soviet Leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who said on Sunday that the world was leaving the "epoch of the Cold War."

Bush wouldn't go along. "If I say that," he said, "then they'll be asking me, 'Why do you need troops in Europe?'"

In fact, the president told a news conference after meeting with NATO leaders that the United States would keep its troops in Europe as long as leaders there desire.

Bush made his comments one day after wrapping up a two-day summit with Gorbachev that both men said heralded a new era in East-West relations.

Bush's meeting with NATO leaders were private, but Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek told reporters the president said the superpower leaders had agreed to aim for an East-West summit in Vienna next summer to sign a landmark treaty reducing conventional forces in Europe.

Bush and the allied leaders met as Gorbachev was convening a meeting of a radically reordered Warsaw Pact in Moscow.

The president was in good humor as he neared the end of his summit journey, laughing off a reporter's suggestion that he was at risk during bad weather when he boarded a launch for a brief trip through heavy seas to return to a warship anchored offshore.

Conferees tackle tough differences on comp reform

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Senators continued to feel the pressure on workers compensation reform over the weekend as Texas House and Senate conferees for the third time set out to negotiate differences between the two bodies.

The joint conference committee, in its first meeting Sunday afternoon, outlined the different approaches to reform of the system for compensating injured workers, but the panel made no progress in closing the gaps. It will meet again 2:30 p.m. today.

Democratic Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who came under fire Friday when he picked only one of the five Senate conferees from the majority that rejected the House version, said he knows of no senators who have switched their positions from that 17-14 vote.

Asked how he would like for the conference committee to proceed, Hobby, who is pushing a business-oriented version similar to the House, replied, "Quickly."

Emmett Sheppard, lobbyist for the Texas AFL-CIO, was skeptical that the conference committee was interested in negotiating. "I keep hearing that a compromise is in the works, but I haven't seen any evidence yet," he said.

Sen. Gene Green, D-Houston, the only conferee representing Friday's majority, said senators who voted not to accept the House version have been subjected to pressure from business lobbyists and district-based phone banks over the weekend, but he saw no evidence they were bowing to that pressure.

Green said he expects business lobbyists to target four or five senators in the next week. "Hopefully, we have some folks here who have some backbone and can stand up for what they believe in. So far we have," he said.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, chairman of the conference committee and the lead sponsor of Hobby's original bill, said he hoped the Legislature would give the state a Christmas present in the form of a new workers compensation bill, but senators are demanding that the House pay attention to their position on impairment schedules, dispute resolution and arbitration.

Woman receives world's first heart-liver-kidney transplant

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 26-year-old woman has a new heart, liver, and kidney after an almost daylong operation that doctors called the first of its kind.

Cindy Martin of Archbald remained in critical condition today in the intensive care unit at Presbyterian-University Hospital.

Such condition is considered normal after transplant surgery.

Other multi-organ transplants have been performed, but this was the first involving the heart, liver and a kidney, according to transplant pioneer Dr. Thomas Starzl, director of the University of Pittsburgh's transplant program.

The procedure began at 7:35 p.m. Saturday and ended 5 p.m. Sunday.

For Ms. Martin, this was her second heart transplant. She has familial cardiomyopathy, an inherited heart disease, according to the hospital.

Since her first transplant three years ago, the woman had suffered from chronic rejection of the heart and developed hepatitis and kidney dysfunction.

Her operation came five days after another milestone in transplant operations. In Chicago, 21-month-old Alyssa Smith became the nation's first person to receive part of a liver from a living donor. Alyssa was listed in serious condition Sunday, and is improving steadily, said John Easton, a spokesman for the University of Chicago's Wyler Children's Hospital.

The world's first survivor of a heart-liver transplant was Stormie Jones, now 12, of White Settlement, Texas. Starzl conducted that procedure on Feb. 14, 1984, at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

Two other heart-liver transplants were performed the next year in Pittsburgh, but both patients died with a few days of surgery.

Starzl also has headed multiple-organ transplant operations involving the intestines.

Tabatha Foster, 3, of Madisonville, Ky., survived six months before dying in May 1988 after a multiple-organ transplant. Rolandrea Dodge, 3, of Fruitland, N.M., died last January six weeks after surgery.

Starzl also has headed multiple-organ transplants on adults with malignant, inoperable tumors in the pancreas and liver areas.

In those cases, surgeons have removed the patient's liver, pancreas, most or all of the stomach, two-thirds of the colon, and duodenum, a 10-inch-long section of the small intestine.

Houston linked to Columbian cartels

HOUSTON (AP) — At least 100 "solid" members of the Medellin drug cartel and thousands of operatives from the Cali cartel make Houston a cocaine trafficking link from South America.

The Houston Post reported in a copyright story that cartel members are suspected in at least 10 local slayings, send million of dollars in cash through the city and operate a communication network that sends word of arrests back to South America.

"From day one, whenever big seizures of cocaine began happening in Houston, you can bet either the Medellin or Cali cartels were involved," said Jesse Rodriguez, an assistant U.S. attorney based in Houston and a member of the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force.

Charles Gutensohn, national head of cocaine investigations for the Drug Enforcement Administration, said the two cartels, which supply between 80 and 90 percent of the world's cocaine, were attracted to Houston because of its proximity to Mexico, its large minority population and its chemical production capabilities.

After the Medellin cocaine smugglers pioneered trafficking through Miami in the 1970s, Gutensohn said, "the cartels realized they had to vary their method of shipments and smuggling."

Gutensohn said the cartels' clout in Houston is equaled in the U.S. only in Miami, New York and Los Angeles. Evidence of the cartels' influence is noticeable throughout the city.

Banks of phone booths set up in Houston businesses allow operatives to communicate with Columbian drug chieftains without a record of calls, investigators say. Inconspicuous financial institutions launder money and wire funds back to cartel hideouts. Smugglers even use armored cars to ferry funds through the city, the Post reported.

Motorcyclists carry toys to Los Angeles mission

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 400 motorcyclists, from yuppie weekenders in exotic leather to hard-core bikers in soiled denim "colors," delivered toys to a Skid Row mission in a thundering testament to good will.

The walls of the Fred Jordan Mission echoed from the blast of arriving and departing Harley-Davidsons, Hondas, Kawasakis and other big road bikes as the members of the Harley Owners Group (HOG) and other motorcycle clubs made their second annual delivery for the mission.

Some Skid Row residents looked astounded at the polished machines, some of them festooned with Christmas garlands and mounted by riders wearing red and fur-trimmed Santa Claus hats. Others took the opportunity to collect empty aluminum soda cans left by the riders.

"I think it's the neatest thing there is," said Ferdie Chaddick of West Los Angeles.

Resplendent in black leather pants and jacket, Chaddick watched and laughed as Skid Row children and mission workers sat astride his $16,000 Harley for a snapshot.

It belied, he admitted, the old biker motto that nobody — NOBODY, touches a man's machine.

"The thing with the mission run is, we just go along with everything," said Chaddick, a Santa Monica glazier.

The delivery to the Jordan Mission on Sunday was part of a larger effort in which the Salvation Army said it expected 25,000 motorcyclists to drop off toys in the Dodger Stadium parking lot for the Army's 1989 Toy Run.

"We enjoy it, and its great for these needy kids," said South Bay Harley Owner Group member Skip Fottler, who made the run to the mission with his wife, Mary.

"A lot of people think we're hellions, but we're trying to drag down that old image," Fottler said. "We have doctors, lawyers, policemen, firemen. We're just bikers."

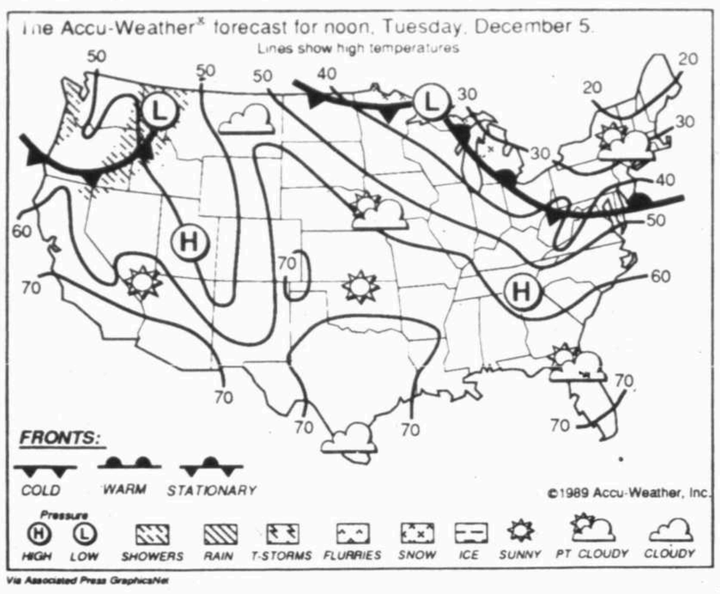

The mission hopes to collect 40,000 new toys for its huge annual Christmas party on Dec. 16. About 20,000 people are expected this year, said Willie Jordan, widow of mission founder Fred Jordan.

Light and variable winds are predicted over the east, south and southwest Tuesday. The rest of Texas will see southwest to west breezes with speed ranging from 5 to 15 mph.

Temperatures in the 30s and 40s were most common throughout the state. But, readings in the Big Bend mountains, the far west and northwest Panhandle and isolated spots in the southeast and hill country dropped into the 20s. The mercury reached the 50-degree mark in the coastal bend area.

The extreme lows this morning were 24 degrees at Dalhart and 50 at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station.

NATION

Much of the country was locked in bitter cold today with frost as far south as Florida and snow across the Northeast with the wind chill forecast as low as 50 degrees below zero.

Strong northerly winds continued to usher arctic air into the northeastern United States with gusts up to 67 mph at Johnstown, Pa. Wind chill was expected to dip as low as 50 degrees below zero in New York state and Vermont.

Snow was falling in Caribou, Maine, and in Pittsburgh, early today while gale warnings were in effect along the Maine and North Carolina coasts.

On Sunday, squalls left from 6 to 12 inches of snow in Lake and Geauga counties in northeast Ohio, up to 16 inches in Ashtabula County and up to a foot of snow over western Pennsylvania.

Snow also fell Sunday night in the central Appalachians, including western Maryland.

Temperatures dipped to 32 degrees today in Jacksonville, Fla., and freeze warnings were in effect for northern farming areas of Florida, but citrus growers said the cold wasn't expected to be serious enough to cause damage to oranges.

Woman drowns after rescuing 4-year-old girl

DALLAS (AP) — A 43-year-old woman jumped fully clothed into an apartment swimming pool and rescued a 4-year-old girl, but she then slipped back into the water herself and drowned, authorities said.

The victim was identified as Carol Yeager of Dallas, fire officials said.

Authorities said two girls had been playing beside the pool at an apartment complex Saturday afternoon when Cynthia Lewis, 4, was pushed into the pool. The other girl ran to get help and Ms. Yeager jumped in.

Authorities say Ms. Yeager apparently swam with the girl to the edge of the pool and lifted her onto the pool deck. But she must have then sank and drowned.

When Mrs. Lewis arrived at the pool, she found her daughter lying beside the water.

Dallas Fire Department paramedics arrived on the scene shortly afterward, and found Ms. Yeager on the bottom of the deep end of the pool.

Authorities said the cartels are suspected in at least 10 murders, most recently the July slaying of Jorge Anibal Condono, whose bound and gagged body was found in the trunk of a car. Informants told authorities that Condono, 23, owed the Medellin cartel $650,000, said Houston homicide investigator Jaime Escalante.

Houston police estimate that at least 35 percent of the city's homicides this year are directly linked to narcotics, with the great majority involving cocaine and crack. Last year, Houston police estimated about 23 percent of all homicides closely involved narcotics.

A February 1987 double murder, believed to have been orchestrated by Cali cartel assassins, ended in a ritual meant to ward off evil spirits, said detective Frank Pratt with the Special Investigations Unit of the sheriff's department.

The victims' bodies were drained of blood in a bathtub, Pratt said. "Then they were laid out on the bedroom floor, and they (the killers) did a voodoo dance over their bodies and bit the tongues of the victims," he said.

But federal and local authorities say ranking cartel members drive modest cars to avoid an indication of prominence and live in upper-middle-class and high-income neighborhoods, void of high crime and street-corner drug peddlers.

They mingle with their neighbors, work in their yards, go to church, enroll their children in car pools and attend school functions, the investigators said.

Arctic cold dances across nation's north

From Staff and Wire Reports

Arctic air howled across the nation's northern tier today, but winter's bite was felt as far south as Florida, where a possible frost kept citrus growers checking their trees and sun lovers all bundled up.

Heavy snow buried parts of Maine and the Great Lakes states. Some snowbelt areas received nearly 2 feet of winter's white by early today.

The frigid winds were expected to drop wind chills to 50 degrees below zero in northern New York and Vermont.

In St. Paul, Minn., the cold apparently killed two homeless men, police said Sunday. The wind chill dipped to minus 11 Saturday night.

At Miller's Bar in St. Paul, a man in his mid-60s who gave his name as "Hard Rock," said he knew the victims. He feared more homeless would meet the same fate.

"This is going to happen all winter — people dying in the cold," he said.

In Agawam, Mass., where temperatures dipped to near zero, police found the body of a 60-year-old homeless man outside a trailer Sunday morning.

"He had apparently tried to get into the trailer," Police Officer Wayne Macey said.

The wintry weather was blamed for at least four other deaths this weekend. Three people died in two separate traffic accidents on snow-covered New York highways, while one person was killed in a crash on an icy Montana road.

In Maine, Loring Air Force Base in Limestone reported 26 inches of snow on the ground late Sunday. But an additional foot of snow may fall before the storm ends, forecasters said.

The National Weather Service said some areas of New York state east of Lake Erie were expected to receive almost 2 feet of snow by the end of the storm.

West Valley, a hamlet 30 miles south of Buffalo, received 18 inches by late Sunday. The snow didn't keep everyone in.

A fund-raising event at the West Valley Volunteer Fire Department drew 60 people, and at the West Valley Market a steady stream of customers filed by cashier Marcia McCabe.

"We've had people coming in and they say it is up to their knees," she said.

Squalls produced up to a foot of snow in northeastern Ohio and in western Pennsylvania.

In the Deep South, cold winds blew across Georgia. Temperatures with the wind chill factor plummeted as low as 10 degrees in Atlanta. Winds gusted to 30 mph Sunday night in the Atlanta area.

In Florida, the season's most severe cold was expected to send temperatures to near record lows before warming later this week. Lows today should range from the mid-20s in the Panhandle to the mid- to upper 40s in the Keys, according to the weather service.

But many citrus growers said they weren't too worried about the chill.

"Actually, a cold snap like this can be quite beneficial," said Bill Becker, chairman of the Florida Citrus Commission. He said temperatures in the 30s accelerate citrus growth and put the trees into a dormant phase, which make them more resistant to future cold weather.

Heavy damage occurs when temperatures go below 28 degrees for more than four consecutive hours, he said.

NATO

"These charismatic, visionary, macho guys, they'll do anything," he said to laughter.

The 16 NATO and seven Warsaw Pact nations are negotiating in Vienna on cuts in conventional forces in Europe. Van den Broek quoted Bush as saying he hoped an accord could be reached about mid-1990.

"Let's get it done," the president said. He said he wanted the accord "in the bag" before moving on to more complicated matters.

Conventional forces aside, the superpowers are negotiating a treaty to cut long-range nuclear weapons by up to 50 percent, and a separate agreement on banning chemical weapons.

Bush said that while "all was not sweetness and light" at the Malta summit, he applauded Gorbachev's handling of the change in Eastern Europe. He said the Soviet leader's response to the upheaval there "absolutely mandates new thinking" on the part of Western leaders.

Asked what had emerged at the summit, he said "I think he took my measure and I took his and I think we both feel more comfortable about our common objectives."

He said Gorbachev was "determined and unemotional " in their private talks. The Soviet leader "seemed very much in control" and "very confident in discussing without notes a wide array of subjects with me."

The conventional arms talks are designed to reduce U.S. troops in Europe by 30,000 and Soviet troops by 325,000 to a level of about 275,000 on each side. The negotiations also are attempting to control tanks and other weapons.

"The importance of this is that it indicates both (Bush and Gorbachev) want to make an effort to reach such an agreement next year," Van den Broek said.

"In that context, the term mid-1990 was mentioned. Without a doubt, that should be regarded as positive," he said.

Bush was asked whether the improvement in East-West relations could free money for domestic programs such as education and the homeless. "I think it is premature to speak as some are at home about a peace dividend," he said.

Bush noted large federal deficits and said there isn't "excess money" available.

The president began his news conference with a statement that said a "peaceful revolution" was taking place in Eastern Europe, where five hardline communist regimes have fallen in recent weeks — and some coutries have experienced more than one change in government.

He said the task for Western nations is to consolidate the fruits of this peaceful revolution and provide the architecture for the continued peaceful changes and end the division of Europe and Germany and create a "Europe whole and free."

At the same time, he said the Western alliance "must remain strong," and said the United States "will maintain significant military forces in Europe as long as our allies desire our presence."

Even as Bush was preparing to leave for home, Secretary of State James A. Baker III was making arrangements for a trip to West Berlin next week. His trip will take him to the most notable symbol of the Cold War — the Berlin Wall — which has effectively crumbled.

A British official said Bush's summit briefing for allied leaders was "extremely well-received" and that today's session showed "very strong support for the NATO alliance."

Baker said Bush outlined his agreements and differences with Gorbachev. "Most everyone there was very pleased," Baker said on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security adviser, said the NATO allies were particularly interested in the issue of German reunification, which Gorbachev opposes.

"The president is certainly not going to stand in the way of reunification, but it needs to proceed at its own pace," Scowcroft said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

SUMMIT

Gorbachev, meanwhile, headed for Moscow to meet with his Warsaw Pact allies while Bush traveled to Brussels to brief the NATO allies.

"Tonight we stand at the crossroads of history on our way to a Europe made whole and free," Bush said when he arrived in Brussels. "Today as the sun broke through the clouds there at Malta, we could see both a new world taking shape, a new world of freedom," he said.

Gorbachev said he was "encouraged and inspired" by the reforms sweeping Stalin-style communism from Eastern Europe. He said the changes stem from "the desire of these peoples to ennoble their societies, to make them more democratic, humanitarian, to open up the rest of the world."

And in a post-summit interview broadcast on Soviet television, he had praise for Bush.

"I must say I'm glad I found a lot of realism in Bush's attitude and I felt his desire, his effort to understand the processes under way, exchange opinions, to work out approaches," Gorbachev said. "The dialogue actually surpassed my expectations."

The weather in Malta was less congenial. What was planned as an offshore summit alternating between U.S. and Soviet warships never came off.

Saturday afternoon's session was canceled when Bush could not get off the guided-missile cruiser USS Belknap because of 60 mph winds and high seas.

The two rounds of talks that did take place were both moved to the Soviet cruise liner Maxim Gorky, docked at Marsaxlokk Bay several hundred yards from the naval vessels. Neither leader ever made it to the missile cruiser Slava, intended to be the Soviet summit site.

Gorbachev suggested cutting naval forces on the two sides, but Bush, whose large-ship navy predominates, said he was "disinclined to think that this is an area where we will have immediate progress."

The leaders also restated their positions on Central America — Bush complained about Nicaraguan and Cuban supplies of Soviet-bloc weapons to rebels fighting the right-wing government in El Salvador, while Gorbachev said the Sandinista government in Nicaragua had given assurances such shipments had stopped.

"I don't believe that the Sandinistas have told the truth to our Soviet friends," Bush said.

U.S. officials said Moscow could benefit from cuts in tariffs on Soviet exports to the United States and American support for its participation in the 97-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in exchange for relaxing emigration restrictions on Soviet Jews.

The leaders also ordered their officials to speed up negotiations on treaties to cut conventional arms in Europe and long-range nuclear weapons in hopes of signing both next year.

COMP

"I think we're all mindful of what the Senate passed and we're going to consider that in our deliberations," he said.

Sen. Bill Haley, D-Center, one of the conferees, said he does not plan to rubber stamp anything. He voted to concur with the House bill Friday, but he supports the Senate's more subjective impairment schedule. "Most everybody on the Senate side, I think, will think for themselves," he said.

The business-oriented House bill would provide a more objective system for figuring benefits for injured workers and restrict appeals of administrative decisions in compensation cases in an attempt to control insurance costs for businesses, which have risen 148 percent in the past five years. House supporters say it also would increase benefits for the most severely injured workers.

The Senate bill is more labor-oriented, offering a more subjective system for figuring benefits, providing for binding arbitration in disputes and making it easier to appeal administrative decisions to district court juries. Senate supporters say it would reduce costs for businesses.

Neither Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, nor Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, who led the Senate overhaul of the Hobby plan, were included on the conference committee, and neither attended Sunday's meeting, but Montford said he was staying in contact with them.

He added that the pressure from other senators may be more intense than the pressure coming from lobbyists. "I guarantee you, every time I visit one, Parker and Caperton are either running ahead of me or right behind me," Montford said.

But putting up with pressure goes with the job, he said. "If you can't handle the pressure, you're in the wrong line of avocation. They ought to go manage a K mart store ... This is the big time oven, so let's get it on."

Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, said it was at least possible to get a compromise bill Monday, although he has resisted any movement on the major issues of benefits and dispute resolution. Montford said he hoped to have a compromise report in the coming week.

At least three members from each house must agree to send the compromise report back to the House and Senate. Both houses may either accept or reject the conference report, but they cannot amend it.

Deaf woman wins rights to class notes

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Karen Prince always planned to use her legal training to help the disabled. But the deaf Rutgers University law student found she also needed her skills to help herself.

Ms. Prince, a 39-year-old third-year law student who represented herself in a court hearing, won a court order forcing the university to supply her with class notes.

Her victory was one of two last week that upheld rights of the disabled. A federal judge ruled that a school district in White Plains, N.Y., must supply a sign-language interpreter for deaf parents at school-sponsored parents conferences.

Both lawsuits were filed under the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973, which says any organization receiving federal aid cannot discriminate against the handicapped.

"We have two examples of recipients of federal financial assistance ... which refused to provide services of meaningful access to the programs," said Marc Charmatz, attorney for the National Association for the Deaf Legal Defense Fund, which brought the New York case. "In both cases, the court recognized that the deaf parents or the deaf student were denied meaningful access."

The New York case is the first of its kind in the country, according to Charmatz. Coupled with the New Jersey case, it provides leverage to force school districts to comply with the federal guidelines, he said.

"This is an illustration of what school districts must do," Charmatz said.

Ms. Prince said her case marks the first time federal civil rights provisions have been used to force a university to supply assistance for a deaf student.

When she began taking classes at the Camden campus in 1986, she said the university agreed to provide note-takers and interpreters for every course.

Since then, Ms. Prince has filed two civil rights claims contending the university failed to live up to its promise. In one instance, she rejected notes she said were illegible.

In the latest battle, a judge ordered the school provide note-takers and issued a temporary restraining order barring Rutgers from holding two classes unless Ms. Prince received transcribed notes within 24 hours of each class.

Audrey Blackburn, associate dean of student affairs, said the university late last week hired a court stenographer to take notes for four one-hour lecture sessions. The service costs about $1,400, she said.

The university has spent about $10,000 a year to provide sign-language translators and note-takers for Ms. Prince, school officials said. School spokesmen have said they have had trouble finding qualified candidates.

The law requires "that one exert reasonable efforts and I believe I did above and beyond that," Blackburn said.

Man's tacky lawn sculpture collection 'so bad it's good'

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — It isn't any noisy, late-night parties at bachelor John Shumate's home that have his neighbors whispering. It's what he keeps in his front yard.

Like the life-size Elvis Presley bust with purple pompadour, bolted atop a tall pedestal guarded by a grinning, red-bearded gnome holding a sign reading "Long Live the King."

Or that plastic palm tree festooned with blinking blue lights that decorated Shumate's front porch last Christmas, opposite a plastic Santa Claus whose fat belly was illuminated with a flashing light bulb.

Passersby also are transfixed by the concrete Venus de Milo and pink flamingo, the plastic madonna blessing the concrete rabbit, squirrel and penguin.

And the little concrete toddler, shyly clutching a teddy bear and sucking on its fingers while its diapers fall down. It's one of Shumate's favorites.

Shumate, a 42-year-old architect and avid collector of lawn ornaments, delights in adorning the yard of his modest bungalow in this Washington suburb with the sort of truly tasteless schlock that makes urban sophisticates wince.

"I saw this stuff when I was a kid growing up in the Philadelphia suburbs," he said. "It was humorous to me even then. What's interesting about the 50s was the junky stuff — the cars, the lawn sculptures, the furniture. It's so bad it's good."

Shumate had only a few pink flamingos when he bought his Arlington house three years ago. Perhaps it was the house, with its original pink aluminum siding from the 1950s, that inspired Shumate to begin collecting in earnest.

His favorite haunt is Harper's Lawn Ornaments, a two-acre mecca for kitsch hunters in rural Harrisonburg, Va. It was there that he found his $32 Elvis bust among the tons of concrete birdbaths, Jesus figures, antlered stags and naked ladies.

"Things were relatively quiet around here until I put up Elvis," Shumate said. "It became a landmark overnight. At first my neighbors didn't know what to think, but they finally figured out my sense of humor and now they enjoy it."

Shumate is a Cadillac freak, too. He's owned six of them. The latest, parked in his driveway, is a monstrous 1975 model Fleetwood. Original avocado green paint, wide white sidewalls, license plates that read "Gross XS" (for Gross Excess) and a "Caution: I Brake For Elvis" bumper sticker.

"I consider that to be one of my lawn sculptures," he says.

Congress fights over defense cuts

By ALAN FRAM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Battle lines in Congress are already being drawn over whether and how to spend the money the Bush administration plans to slice off next year's Pentagon budget.

On one side are lawmakers who say liberalization in Eastern Europe means the defense cuts should be large, and who want to use the money to beef up education, child care and other domestic programs that have been pinched in recent years.

"If the tearing down of the Berlin Wall means nothing more than we put the USS Missouri in mothballs, we will not have accomplished much," says liberal Rep. George Miller, D-Calif.

Arrayed against them are others who want to use the savings to reduce the 1991 deficit to $64 billion, a goal universally seen as difficult yet one that is required by the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law.

"There seems hardly any room for discussion that the ... defense savings go to anything but deficit reduction," says Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee.

Dangling somewhere in between are senators and representatives who will be wary of defense cuts that affect military bases or contractors in their home districts.

"The light bulb in their heads says jobs," says Ellen Nissenbaum, a lobbyist for programs for low-income people.

While Congress just finished its 1990 budget work on Nov. 22, the administration is already sketching out its spending blueprint for fiscal 1991, which begins next Oct. 1. That document will be presented to Congress on Jan. 22.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney is reportedly preparing budget plans that will pare up to $180 billion from planned Pentagon spending through 1994.

Even if carried to the maximum, such cuts would reap little savings next year because of the nature of defense spending.

In any given year, much of it is carried over from previous commitments — such as an aircraft carrier on which construction began two years ago — or is contained in difficult-to-break, long-term contracts stretching into the future. Even laying off troops brings with it offsetting expenses such as retirement payments, unemployment benefits and other costs.

Because of that, the consensus among lawmakers and lobbyists is the reductions are likely to rein military spending by no more than $3 billion to $8 billion next year out of a nearly $300 billion Pentagon budget. The entire federal budget will be about $1.2 trillion.

Such savings are but a tiny fraction of the $40 billion that many on Capitol Hill expect will be needed to shave the 1991 deficit to the Gramm-Rudman target of $64 billion.

"The peace dividend isn't large, and there are a lot of claimants," says Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee.

Although the defense buildup of the early Reagan administration years left a lasting public impression of an ever-growing Pentagon, the military budget has shrunk over the last five years when the effects of inflation are considered.

The trend was considered likely to continue in 1991 even before Cheney began considering reductions and Eastern European countries began asserting more political independence from the Soviet bloc.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., predicted "a feeding frenzy" last week by lawmakers eager to cut defense spending if the administration asks for a budget reduction.

But there's little question that the nation's defense system — its bases and the companies that supply the weapons, food and other goods for them — has a large base of support in Congress.

Even so, the need for deficit-reduction is likely to lead lawmakers to take a bite out of the military budget. The fight over reaching the Gramm-Rudman deficit target is likely to also focus on elements that have been contested in recent budget years: higher taxes, which Bush opposes, and domestic cuts, which Democrats reject.

Security at weapons lab questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Serious security lapses involving large amounts of plutonium were noted in an inspection earlier this year of a federal nuclear weapons laboratory in California, a congressional report says.

The report released Sunday also said the Energy Department from 1982 through 1988 misled the president, in its annual reports to the White House, about the adequacy of measures to protect weapons-grade nuclear materials from potential theft or sabotage.

The report included a declassified transcript of a closed hearing last July in which several senior Energy Department officials testified on security and safeguards weaknesses in the nuclear weapons production and design complex. The hearing was held by the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations.

The panel is investigating the department's nuclear weapons facilities, which have been wracked by allegations of health, safety and environmental violations. Some key plants have been closed temporarily.

According to the hearing transcript, Edward J. McCallum, director of the Energy Department's weapons security evaluations office, was highly critical of nuclear materials protection at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, near Livermore, Calif.

The Livermore lab has come under fire in recent years for illegal drug use by some employees, alleged ethics and conflict-of-interest violations by senior lab officials and charges of theft of government property from the facility.

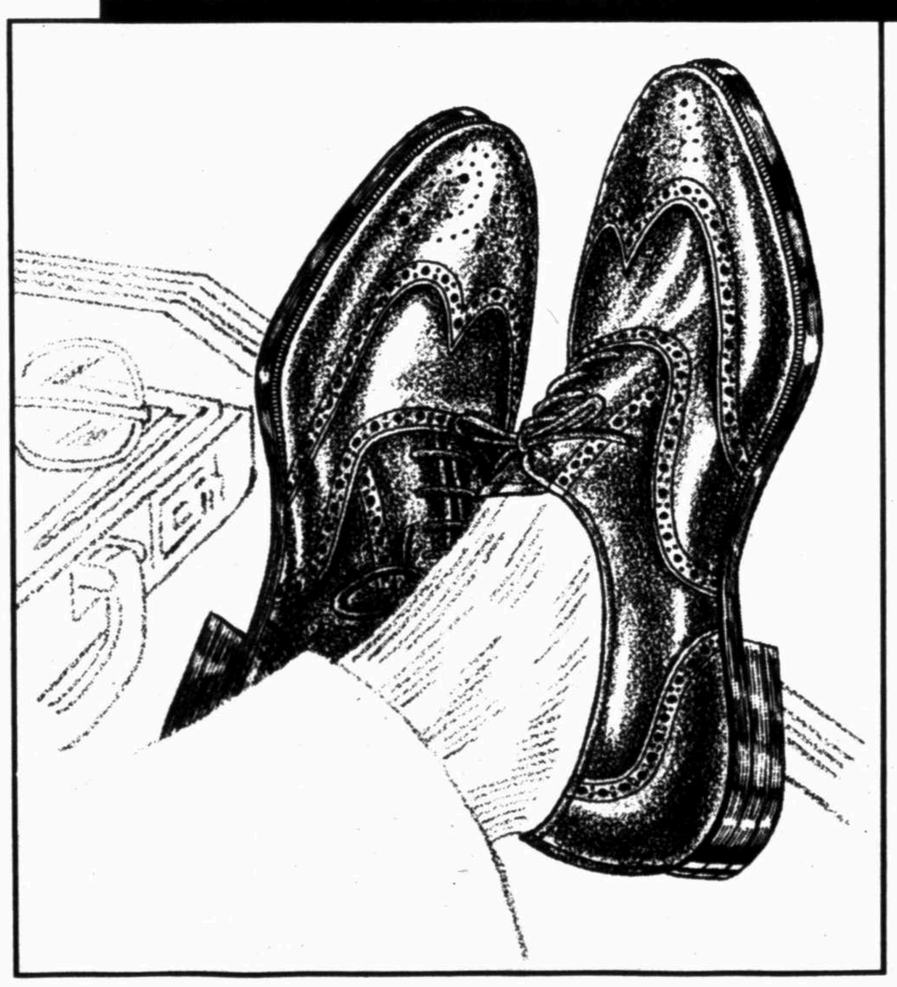

The lab is run for the government by the University of California.

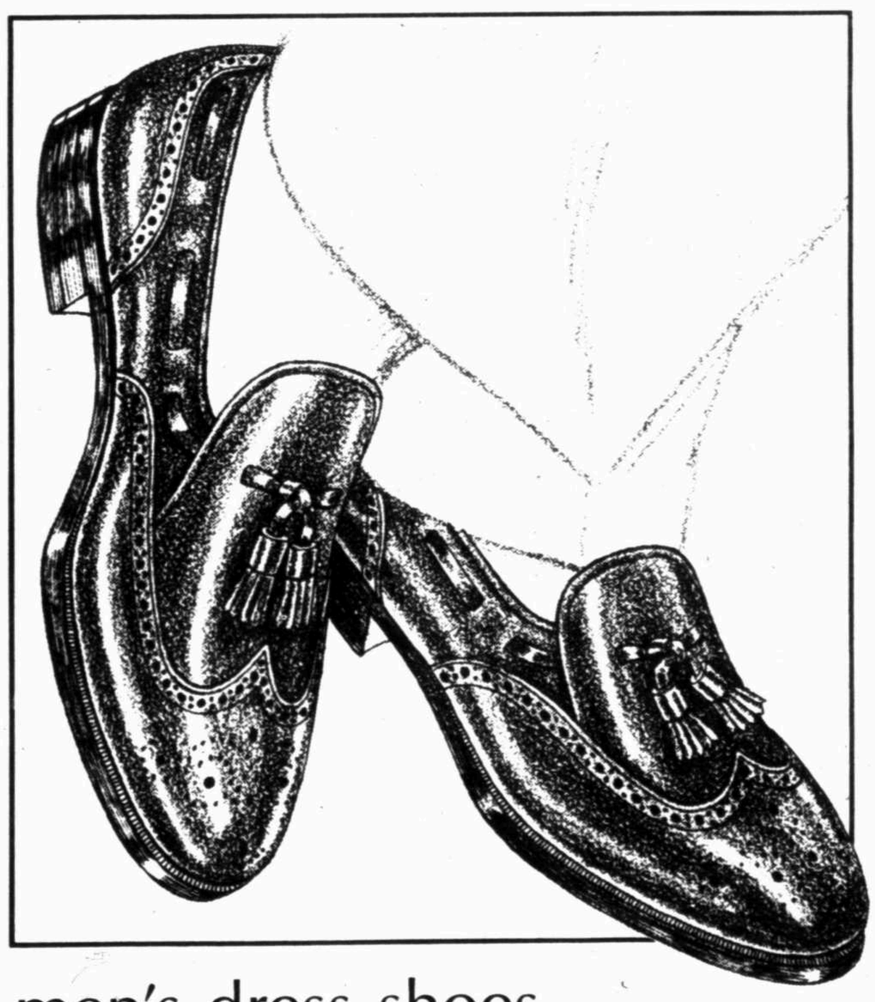

Under questioning from Rep. Gerry Sikorski, D-Minn., McCallum said these security lapses involved quantities of plutonium greater than 4.5 pounds, which is enough to build a nuclear bomb.

Comaneci hiked across border

NEW YORK (AP) — Romanian gymnast Nadia Comaneci says she fled for the West without saying goodbye to her parents, and began her journey with a cold, six-hour hike to Hungary during which she risked arrest or worse.

The Olympic champion has kept out of public sight since arriving Friday in New York City and holding a brief news conference.

An account of her escape to Hungary was published in London's Sunday Mail, which said it paid Comaneci for the story.

Comaneci endured a muddy, nighttime trek through country terrain before reaching the Romanian border with Hungary, she said.

"I could not bring anything else with me, not even my precious gold medals or a photograph of my family," she was quoted as saying.

She said she left without saying farewell to her parents.

"I could tell no one I was escaping," she said. "I even had to lie to my brother. I was frightened, of course I was. I was scared of being picked up by the Romanian authorities."

The Mail said it interviewed Comaneci, 28, in New York on Saturday night. Patti Auer, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Gymnastics Federation, said officials of the organization had flown to New York to speak with Comaneci but could not contact her.

Auer said the federation wanted to set up a meeting between Comaneci and her former coach, Bela Karolyi, who lives in Houston and was scheduled to arrive in Chicago today from Europe.

Discovery shuttled home

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle Discovery, which landed in California last week after a classified flight, was flown back to Florida on Sunday atop a modified Boeing 747, NASA said.

The aircraft took off from Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., at 6:36 a.m. PST, according to a release from National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokeswoman Nancy Lovato.

The 747 stopped at Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio for refueling, then continued to this base on the Florida Panhandle, landing at 4:15 p.m. CST, said Kennedy Space Center spokeswoman Lisa Malone.

The 747 and the shuttle were to stay overnight at Eglin before flying the final leg to the space center. Depending on the weather, the spacecraft could be back at its home base as early as today, Ms. Malone said.

Abortion stand changed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State Attorney General Anthony Celebrezze Jr., a leading contender for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, announced a shift in his position on abortion, angering anti-abortion activists.

Celebrezze, who had voiced a strong anti-abortion position since entering the state Senate in 1975, told reporters Saturday he supports public funding of abortions for low-income women and would veto legislation to ban abortion.

Celebrezze said he now believes women should have the right to choose abortion until the fetus is determined to be viable, at which point the rights of the fetus become paramount.

Celebrezze was expected to announce his candidacy later this month for the Democratic primary to be held in May.

U.S. prisons crowded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal prison system is 56 percent over capacity, with more than twice as many inmates as in 1980 when the system was less than 1 percent above capacity, a congressional report says.

Federal prisons contained 24,162 inmates in 1980, but the number mushroomed to 48,017 by 1989, said the report Sunday by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm.

The 70 institutions operated by the federal system were designed to hold a maximum of 30,860 prisoners.

The report was requested by Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Wind erosion increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soil erosion from water runoff declined between 1982 and 1987, but wind damage to the nation's cropland increased slightly, an Agriculture Department report said today.

The latest National Resources Inventory released by the department's Soil Conservation Service said "sheet and rill" erosion by water dropped to an average of 3.8 tons per acre annually from 4.3 tons during the five-year period.

Wind erosion, however, increased 0.1 ton per acre to 3.3 tons per acre annually. Most wind erosion of cropland is concentrated in the Great Plains states.

Total sheet-and-rill erosion of cropland was reported at 1.6 billion tons per year and wind erosion at nearly 1.4 billion tons annually.

Filipino rebels agree to free foreigners

WORLD

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Rebel soldiers positioned in hotels and high-rises fired on government troops in the Makati financial district today, refusing to end a 4-day-old mutiny and trapping hundreds of people in homes and hotel rooms.

A rebel spokesman said the trapped foreigners would be freed Tuesday but he said this did not mean the mutineers were giving up their fight to oust President Corazon Aquino.

"We pledged our lives to this cause. We will hold the line to the last drop of our blood," said the spokesman, Capt. Alfred Yen.

Two bombs exploded in the city, injuring two people. It was unclear if they were related to the coup attempt, which began Friday and has killed at least 70 people.

Hundreds of Americans and other foreigners were pinned down in homes and hotels in the post Makati district, where forces loyal to Mrs. Aquino contained the mutineers to 22 buildings.

Rebels shot at anyone venturing outside.

"Literally, we're in the middle," said Barbara Julich, a New York businesswoman trapped in the Intercontinental Hotel. "(We're) now low on food. There are babies in the building, and there is no baby food, and the mothers are hysterical.

"We saw were a group of nuns trying to walk where the tanks are. They were eventually shot at and took cover."

At least three people were reported slain in Makati today and 15 wounded, including one American, by rebel snipers and in fighting between rebel and loyalist forces.

Earlier, spokesmen for the Makati Medical Center said 10 people were killed. They said the discrepancy was due to an error in records.

Government troops forced the surrender of more than 600 rebels Sunday, and Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos said the coup attempt had been crushed but that it would take several days to complete "mopping up operations."

This is the sixth and most serious coup attempt against Mrs. Aquino.

Insurgents seized Makati Saturday, trading fire with government troops and sending bystanders racing for cover. Government forces appeared reluctant to attack for fear of killing foreigners.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jerry Huchel said about 215 Americans were believed trapped in three hotels in the wealthy district. An undetermined number of others were believed trapped in luxury apartments.

Hospital sources identified the American wounded as Jerome Weissburg, who they said was hit in the arm by glass when a bullet shattered the window of his room at the Peninsula Hotel. They did not know his hometown.

Yen telephoned news organizations in Manila and said foreigners would be free to leave hotels at 10 a.m. Tuesday (9 p.m. EST Monday), to dispel any ideas they were held hostage.

The foreigners will be taken to Manila's airport aboard shuttle buses, Yen said.

At least 70 people have been killed and more than 500 wounded since mutineers seized several military installations and bombed the presidential palace Friday, according to the Red Cross.

U.S. F-4 Phantom jets flew air cover for counterattacking loyalist forces later that day.

Sunday, loyalist troops fought off a furious attack by the rebels on the military headquarters at Camp Aguinaldo, and about 600 mutineers surrendered.

About 400 rebels were still occupying Mactan Air Base in Cebu, 350 miles south of Manila. Their leader refused to give up and threatened to blow up the base's planes.

Officials arrested one coup participant who approached the defense chief with a grenade during a news conference.

Also today, an explosion occurred in the compound of the Central Bank, the equivalent of the Federal Reserve. There were no injuries.

A second bomb went off in the Ermita entertainment district, damaging an unoccupied minibus and shattering windows. Two women were injured by flying glass.

In the morning, the estimated 390 rebel holdouts in Makati — members of the army's First Scout Ranger Regiment — refused appeals to surrender and fired at soldiers and civilians who approached their strongholds.

The mutinous soldiers claim Mrs. Aquino, swept to power in a 1986 military-civilian uprising that ousted President Ferdinand Marcos, has failed to deal effectively with the country's Communist insurgency and economic problems.

One of the coup leaders was Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, a cashiered lieutenant colonel who once supported Mrs. Aquino but later led an August 1987 attempt to overthrow her. He remained at large.

The city's international airport reopened today but domestic air service was indefinitely postponed. Schools were closed but government employees were ordered to return to work except in the Makati area.

Officials reported shortages of food and fuel from interruptions caused by the fighting.

More than 10,000 people fled their homes to escape the fighting and were housed in schools, churches and other refugee centers.

Army copter crashes; Passengers safe

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A U.S. Army helicopter carrying 16 soldiers and a crew of three crashed into a remote mountainside south of Seoul today, but only minor injuries were reported, officials said.

The CH-47D Chinook transport helicopter was on a training mission when it crashed near Osan City, 40 miles south of Seoul, at about 10:30 a.m., said Air Force Sgt. Wilt Baker of the 8th U.S. Army public affairs office.

The injured were treated at nearby hospitals, he said. Their names were withheld.

The helicopter was assigned to B Company, 2nd Battalion, 501st Aviation Regiment stationed at Camp Humphreys south of Seoul. American military officials said they were investigating the cause of the crash.

The Army grounded most of its CH-47D Chinook helicopters in October because of a problem with transmission oil cooling fans.

Grinch of season lives in Austin

For Grinch of this Christmas season we disgustedly nominate the unnamed man in Austin who recently turned away a pregnant woman who came to his door asking to use the telephone to call for help after being attacked by dogs.

The man, obviously fearful of what the situation might entail, didn't want to get involved. Fortunately for Kathleen MacKenzie another nearby resident let her call for help.

Ms. MacKenzie was attempting to save her cat, which was being attacked by two large dogs that, then, turned on her. The attack resulted in injuries to the woman that necessitated her hospitalization, but even more serious the large dogs knocked her down, causing her to go into labor. Doctors at an Austin hospital delivered her baby, a healthy son, by Caesarean section about four hours later, which was six days before his due date.

While one can argue convincingly that the owner of the dogs, Joseph Chernoff, should have kept the dogs penned or on a leash, particularly since he noted that the dogs had bitten other people before, at least there are other remedies available to address that failure. Ms. MacKenzie is pursuing one of them, since she has filed a lawsuit against Chernoff accusing him of being negligent in allowing the dogs to run loose, keeping then in a populated area, and failing to notify proper authorities when he found the dogs had escaped from his home.

But there is no excuse for the refusal of the other apartment dweller to permit Ms. MacKenzie to use his telephone. While it's true that today's frequency of violence has made most people cautious in how they respond to the requests of strangers, the man surely could have seen that Ms. MacKenzie was pregnant, injured, and in desperate need of assistance.

To turn her away at a time when Christian charity calls for us all to be more cognizant of the needs of others around us is in direct violation of everything the Christmas season teaches.

Another View:

Helping democracy

Chinese leaders, quick to complain when foreigners question their conduct of internal affairs, have now presumptuously interfered in the American legislative process. They demand that the Bush administration veto a bill allowing Chinese students to remain in the U.S. after their visas expire. Even more offensive are signs that the White House might capitulate.

Normally, foreign students with expiring visas must return home for two years before seeking new ones. After the Tiananmen massacre, the administration offered a modest clemency program for Chinese students. Under certain conditions it would defer pending deportations until June 1990. Not many of the 40,000 Chinese now studying in the U.S. have applied. Most fear that doing so would invite retaliation from a regime that's likely to be as repressive next June as it is now.

Congress has produced a humane response. Rep. Nancy Pelosi, a California Democrat, introduced a bill that would give Chinese students four more years to apply for new visas, or permanent residency. And it waives the requirement that they first return to China. With strong conservative and liberal support, the bill passed the House by a 403-0 vote and the Senate by voice vote.

Beijing sharply protested and threatened to suspend student exchanges if the bill becomes law. Never mind that America's legislators properly sought to defend the human rights of people now lawfully in the U.S. The same China that would deny Americans any right to second-guess its political decisions now claims a veto over America's own.

So far, administration spokesmen parrot Beijing. They fret that the climate of relations could be damaged. But the principle of human rights is worth that risk. Bush's aides say his own clemency program adequately protects students from intimidation. But Beijing obviously doesn't think so. Why else does it complain so loudly about the Pelosi bill? The administration also argues that future exchange programs could be hurt, damaging the flow of democratic ideas. But surely Bush knows that China has already gone far to limit that flow by carefully screening new candidates.

These arguments serve the present needs of Chinese hardliners. But they insult America's commitment to human rights. Bush can best serve democracy, Chinese and American, by signing the Pelosi bill.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, December 4, the 338th day of 1989. There are 27 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On December 4, 1783, General George Washington bade farewell to his officers at Frauces Tavern in New York. In a choked voice, the departing chief commander of the Continental Army said, "With a heart full of love and gratitude, I now take leave of you."

On this date:

In 1816, James Monroe of Virginia was elected the fifth president of the United States, defeating Federalist Rufus King.

In 1839, the Whig Party opened a national convention in Harrisburg, Pa., during which they nominated William Henry Harrison for president.

In 1875, William Marcy Tweed, the "Boss" of New York City's Tammany Hall political organization, escaped from jail and fled the country.

In 1918, President Wilson set sail for France to attend the Versailles Peace Conference, becoming the first chief executive to travel outside the United States while in office.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered the dismantling of the Works Progress Administration, which had been created in 1935 to provide work during the Depression.

In 1942, U.S. bombers struck the Italian mainland for the first time in World War II.

In 1945, the Senate approved U.S. participation in the United Nations.

In 1965, the United States launched Gemini 7 with Air Force Lt. Col. Frank Borman and Navy Commander James A. Lovell aboard.

In 1977, Jean-Bedel Bokassa, ruler of the Central African Empire, crowned himself emperor in a ceremony believed to have cost more than $100 million. (Bokassa was deposed in 1979.)

In 1978, San Francisco got its first female mayor as City Supervisor Dianne Feinstein was named to replace the assassinated George Moscone.

In 1980, the bodies of four American churchwomen slain in El Salvador were unearthed. (Five national guardsmen were convicted in 1984 of murdering Maryknoll nuns Ita Ford and Maura Clarke, Ursuline nun Dorothy Kazel, and lay worker Jean Donovan.)

Ten years ago: The UN Security Council unanimously approved a resolution demanding that Iran free its American hostages. President Jimmy Carter announced his candidacy for re-election.

Five years ago: A hijack drama began as four armed men seized a Kuwaiti airliner en route to Pakistan and forced it to land in Tehran, where the hijackers killed American passenger Charles Hegna.

Americans come to aid of ill veteran

WASHINGTON — When U.S. Navy veteran Frank Weldon came down with leukemia, he got little from the Department of Veterans Affairs except red tape and excuses. But from generous Americans who read Weldon's story in this column last month, he got what he needed — the drug to treat his leukemia.

Jack Anderson

Weldon now has $11,000 worth of Alpha Interferon from two readers who, in their own grief, found room to help someone else. Steve DeAngelo of Titusville, Fla., and Juanita Anderson of Clarkesdale, Mo., each lost a spouse to cancer recently and each had a leftover supply of Alpha Interferon.

DeAngelo, a stockbroker and city councilman in Titusville, read our column about Weldon and was moved to tears. His wife, Angela, 43, a high-school teacher, died of the same leukemia that is threatening Weldon's life. He arranged to give Weldon the $10,000 supply of Alpha Interferon he had when his wife died.

"I've vowed to keep Angela's memory alive and this is just one way I've done that," DeAngelo told our associate Tim Warner. "My mother read the column and called me while I still had tears in my eyes. We both had the same thing in mind — send Angela's extra Alpha Interferon to Frank. Angela would have wanted Frank to have it."

Anderson lost her husband of 45 years, Clint, to bone marrow cancer. She too read about Weldon, consulted with a few doctors and then arranged to send him $1,000 worth of Alpha Interferon and other medical supplies. "I saw this and just couldn't let it pass by," she told us. "The Lord laid it upon my heart to do what I did."

Weldon was overwhelmed. "I sure didn't expect this to happen," he said. "Both Steve and Juanita's generosity has helped a great deal. It's nice to know there are some people out there who care, even though the VA doesn't seem to want to help much."

The VA negotiated itself out of helping Weldon and others in his circumstance. When Congress debated the Atomic Veterans Act of 1987 to compensate veterans who have been exposed to radiation, the VA bargained down the cost. One compromise struck in the bill is a 30-year statute of limitations on leukemia. If a veteran is not diagnosed with leukemia within 30 years of the exposure to radiation on the job, then the VA is not obliged to treat it.

Weldon's leukemia did not show up until 34 years after he participated in Operation Wigwam — a series of underwater nuclear tests.

In May 1955, Weldon and his shipmates on the USS O'Brien were observers of the tests in the Pacific Ocean about 500 miles southwest of San Diego. Weldon retrieved a buoy after one underwater atomic blast and the buoy was later found to be radioactive.

Over the years, Weldon thought about that buoy each time he read of others whose cancer was blamed on exposure to radiation. He always thought the VA would treat him, but he thought wrong.

When Weldon, a 56-year-old engineer from Long Beach, Calif., was diagnosed with leukemia last February, six VA doctors told him it was probably related to Operation Wigwam. But the VA found the loophole in the Atomic Veterans Compensation Act and informed Weldon he was not eligible for treatment.

He has been getting Alpha Interferon — an experimental drug found effective in the treatment of leukemia — from a civilian doctor at a cost of more than $3,000 a month, and his insurance runs out in April.

Now Weldon is back at work with an extension on that deadline, thanks to two caring people. He has yet to hear anything more from the VA.

PEACETIME PROFITS — Will peace between the superpowers be profitable? Government economists are beginning to speculate on the impact of deep cuts in the defense budget as the Soviet military threat wanes. Many communities that are dependent on defense contractors could be in for tough times if those employers go under for lack of work. But the prospect of reduced arms could also stimulate a boomlet for the economy at large. As the federal deficit shrinks, so will interest rates. Under the Reagan administration, the combination of high defense spending and tax cuts resulted in more public debt than was amassed by all the previous presidents combined.

• • •

MINI-EDITORIAL — George Bush is a wee bit too proud of the Green Berets "liberating" that hotel in San Salvador. The taking of the Sheraton is the most overrated military action since Grenada where Ronald Reagan "liberated" a handful of medical students who didn't even know they needed to be liberated. That's one of the downsides of peace. The president and the troops have too much time to watch television.

Members of Congress don't deserve pay raise

Congress should get no pay raise. It doesn't deserve one. It doesn't deserve one because it already makes more than 98 percent of all Americans and because it is, taken as a whole, sleazy and incompetent.

Charley Reese

No business whose managers ran it in the red for 17 consecutive years would give them a raise. It would instead fire them, and that's what the American people ought to do in the 1990 elections.

You often hear people say that we should limit the number of terms people serve. Well, the Constitution does limit them. Two years in the House and six years in the Senate. Voters, not the Constitution, extend their tenure.

Let's examine the two reasons Congress doesn't deserve any raise at all. First, as to its present perks. The job pays $89,000 a year and that's more than 98 percent of Americans earn. But pay is just the beginning. Congress has not been stingy in voting itself perks and privileges. It is the most pampered legislative body on earth.

Congressmen are alloted generous expenses for their offices and staffs, both in Washington and in their districts. They allow us taxpayers to subsidize their haircuts, gymnasium, parking spaces, travel expenses, meals, insurance, retirement, even their savings plan. Under their 401K plan, they can contribute up to 10 percent of their salaries and the taxpayers will contribute 5 percent. That's in addition to a pension that creates pension millionaires.

In fact, of course, Congress already makes about $120,000 each because it allows itself around $30,000 in honoraria. These are, technically, speaking fees. In fact, they are legalized bribes paid by special interest groups. But that's not the end of their perks. Those elected before 1980 are allowed to convert campaign contributions to their personal use and many have accumulated hundreds of thousands of dollars. They have very loose rules, if you can call them rules at all, on outside investments.

In short, it is a peach of job. They cling tenaciously to it.

Now to the sleaze part. I will not dwell on those investigated and indicted and convicted, which is not an inconsiderable number. Just look at the present pay raise. Give us an additional $31,000 (and a generous boost in our pension benefits) and we will give up the unethical practice of taking honoraria from special interest groups, they are saying. That's a sleazy proposition. It is an insult to our intelligence to call such a sleazy proposition ethics reform.

While this year's method of voting for their pay raise is better than the scheme engineered last year by ousted Speaker Jim Wright, it is not much better. The bill was introduced and voted on within 24 hours. No formal hearings. Quitely, clearly they intended to do the deed before the public could become aroused. They are hoping by the time 1990 elections come around, people will have forgotten.

They have also demonstrated, if anyone still harbored any illusions, that there is little practical difference between Democrats and Republicans. On questions of their own self-interest, Republicans and Democrats are as close as two sides of a clam.

Now for their incompetence. Congress never meets its own budget deadlines. It is mired in inefficiency. The cost of running Congress and its agencies has risen 400 percent since 1970 and averages $4.5 million a day. There are 39,167 people on the legislative payrolls. Congress cost us $1.67 billion. Consider what poor performance we get for that. Over 96 committees and subcommittees have their hands in the defense budget, requiring nearly a 1,000 reports and several thousand hours of testimony annually by Defense Department people. That's just to get one year's budget passed — which is always late.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Coca Cola fan wages war against Pepsi

You simply must take a side sometimes, and I have taken one in the current Cola War that is raging between Coke and Pepsi. I'm for Coke.

Everybody should know by now how the war got started, but I'll go back over it briefly:

Lewis Grizzard

Some overzealous Pepsi employee came up with a little piece of would-be humor to hand out to college students Pepsi was recruiting as future employees.

There was this little sheet that compared New York, Pepsi headquarters, to Atlanta, where Coke lives.

There was the usual stereotyping of the South as a cultural wasteland where people eat strange foods, hang out at Confederate museums, and engage in something termed, "cow tipping."

New York, on the other hand, was portrayed as a much better place in which to live and work, despite the fact we all know there are man-eating alligators in the New York sewer system.

This cow tipping thing confused Southerners, including myself, who had never heard of it. One school of thought said it was a deal where you go out and find a cow asleep on its feet and tip it over. What fun.

Further investigation, however, indicated cows don't sleep standing up. What I eventually learned was that the term "cow tipping" comes from the dairy farms of Wisconsin.

A friend of mine, George, grew up on a Wisconsin dairy farm and he explained:

"You go out in the morning to milk the cows. A cow will say, 'I'm Bossy, and I'll be your cow.'

"So, after you finish milking the cow, you give her a little tip. Like 'Never go out in the rain without your galoshes,' or 'Rosebud in the third race at Arlington Park.' The cows really appreciated such advice."

I took Coke in the Cola War for a couple of reasons. One, I live in Atlanta and resent the way it was portrayed, and, two, I have always strongly preferred Coke over Pepsi as my soft drink.

Very few things irritate me more than going into a restaurant and the waitress saying, "Hi, I'm Beatrice, and I'll be your waitress."

I order and then say, "I'll have a Coke to drink."

And the waitress says, "We don't have Coke. Would Pepsi be OK?"

And I say, "No. A thousand times no. If I had wanted Pepsi I would have ordered one."

I suppose this is better than the other similar situation I often run into. It's where I order a Coke and the waitress doesn't mention anything about not having any and brings me a Pepsi, figuring I won't really know the difference.

But I do know the difference. It's like ordering Dom Perignon and getting Wild Russian Vanya instead. The only tip a waiter or waitress like that will get from me is, "Take the Falcons and the points against the Bears," a sure loser.

When I take a side, I take a side. I've decided never to drink Pepsi again, never to allow it in my house, and when it is forced upon me in a restaurant, to get up and leave and go find a civilized place that does serve Coke.

I've also made a sign to put in the window of my car that says, "Coke Fan on Board," and I have vowed occasionally to scream out, "How 'bout them Cokes," in public places and to throw rocks at Pepsi delivery trucks.

So, here's a little tip for Pepsi: Never incur the wrath of a Coke fan. We bad.

150,000 Czechs rally for government to resign

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of people chanting "Resign! Resign!" rallied in the nation's two biggest cities today to protest the new Communist-dominated government and demand a new one be named by the weekend.

Waving red, white and blue national flags, a crowd in Prague's Wenceslas Square cheered opposition calls for a general strike Dec. 11 if there is no new government by Sunday.

Boos and derisive whistles greeted the mention of old Communist Party leaders responsible for 21 years of hard-line policy.

In the nation's second-largest city, Bratislava, tens of thousands gathered in central Namestie Square despite the numbing cold to vent their anger. They chanted "Resign!" and "Shame! Shame!" as speaker after speaker accused Premier Ladislav Adamec of ignoring the will of the people.

Civic Forum, the largest opposition movement, demanded elections by July. A group spokesman, Vaclav Maly, said the opposition hoped to field its own candidates.

"Thanks for your help and support," Maly shouted to the crowd in Prague. "We need it now more than ever."

It was the first protest in Prague since Civic Forum staged a general strike a week ago. That strike, observed by millions, led Adamec to agree to relinquish the Communists' 41-year monopoly on power.

But the new 21-member Cabinet named Sunday contained only five non-Communists, and Communists retained all the key ministries.

"We Want a Happy Christmas, Christmas with a new government," read a poster near Civic Forum's Prague headquarters today. "An old play with a new cast," warned another poster on the same window.

The turnouts at the rallies were clear signals to the government that the opposition can still draw popular support to back its demands for democracy.

"L ng live Havel!" protesters shouted to welcome playwright Vaclav Havel, the country's most prominent dissident, to Wenceslas Square. The rally was reported live on state radio and television.

State radio estimated the crowd at 200,000, but Western reporters put it at about 150,000.

"We feel disappointed and cheated," said Michal Sedlacek, a representative of striking students who decided to prolong their two-week sit-in at campuses across the country in protest of the new government.

"The government doesn't understand the situation fully," Sedlacek told the cheering crowd. "We want other changes."

"With this government, the leading role of the Communist party was assured," said another speaker, director Miroslav Machocek.

"In fact, the leading role has been abolished in the constitution but with this government it exists again," he added. Machocek said artists, theaters and galleries will go on strike until Dec. 11.

Actor Milan Knazko, a key Slovak republic figure in the popular uprising, said no rally had been planned in Bratislava, "but the government had sent us this invitation" to demonstrate by ignoring the people.

The new government appeared an attempt by the ruling Communists to buy time and get reform going at a pace they dictate, rather than the hectic tempo forced by the mass demonstrations last month.

WORLD IN BRIEF

German agents guard former leaders' offices

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Security agents stood guard today outside the offices of former disgraced Communist leaders to safeguard documents and other evidence that could be used in investigations of high-level corruption.

Members of the largest opposition group demanded a referendum on German reunification and urged the go ernment to allow quick free elections. One spokesman said Communist leaders had "lost all legitimacy."

Premier Hans Modrow, a Communist reformer, emerged as the country's No. 1 political leader after the entire party leadership resigned in disgrace Sunday and left a 25-member committee in control of the government.

"We don't need any Politburo and Central Committee that is made up of criminals!" one woman screamed at a rally of about 10,000 people Sunday night in East Berlin "This should have happened long ago!" a man shouted.

The official ADN news agency said security agents were stationed outside party offices in East Berlin

Salvadoran lawyer sought

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark says it will be difficult to find a competent lawyer to defend an American woman accused of hiding weapons for leftist guerrillas.

Clark said Sunday that the woman, Jennifer Jean Casolo, had decided to stand trial in the case rather than be deported.

He said that even with a good lawyer, "it would be extremely difficult if not impossible" for Ms. Casolo to get a fair trial amid the pressure of war and the near paranoia about foreigners in El Salvador.

Ms. Casolo was due to be arraigned today, he said, most likely before a military tribunal. He was not sure precisely what charges would be filed.

Scanner detects cancer

TEL AVIV (AP) — A team of Israeli doctors Sunday unveiled a laser scanner that they said can detect certain types of cancer by examining a blood sample, eliminating the need for surgical tests.

Doctors at Tel Aviv's Ichilov Hospital, who began testing the device about two weeks ago, said the Cytoscan machine is still in an experimental stage and has an error rate of almost 5 percent.

But they said the device, which needs only a syringe of blood for analysis, could become part of routine testing for the detection of early signs of cancer.

"It's a great breakthrough that shows promise," Dr. Dan Michaeli, director of the Tel Aviv Medical Center that includes Ichilov, told reporters.

Two of Mankind's Greatest Inventions.

Benjamin Franklin made the first bifocals two hundred years ago. And to this day no one has envisioned a better way to keep us in sight. (Even some contact lenses are bifocal!)

Old Ben invented the Franklin stove, too. But today he would have a natural gas furnace to keep his home and family warm all winter.

Like all the great inventions, a gas furnace is simple, reliable, and has stood the test of time. It quietly and efficiently does the job it was designed to do ... year after comfortable year.

It's easy to see that for comfort and efficient home heating, the most effective invention ever made is a natural gas furnace. Period.

Robert Gieitman, 5, tries his hardest to remember everything that he would like for Christmas. Vincent Hancock, who plays Santa Claus, claims children have incredible memories when it comes to Christmas wish lists.

A JOLLY Fellow

Midland firefighter spends spare time playing Santa

Hancock said that one of the benefits of being Santa is that you get lots of hugs.

Vincent Hancock, who is a Midland firefighter in real life, said he enjoys playing the role of Santa Claus.

At 6 feet 4 inches and 210 pounds, he looks more like a starting forward than a "right jolly old elf," but a few minutes in the dressing room at Midland Park Mall and he undergoes a remarkable change.

A few carefully placed pillows and a false beard go a long way toward transforming Vince Hancock, 28, from mild-mannered Midland firefighter to Santa Claus, bearer of gifts and confidant to the children of the world.

That's a big job for $5 an hour.

"You earn every bit of it," Hancock said, relishing his release from a hot Santa suit and beard after an eight-hour shift. The bench is hard and the flashbulbs are bright, but it's worth the sacrifice for Hancock.

"The kids are what keep you going," he said. "I love to watch their eyes light up when I tell them they're on my 'good' list."

Hancock is one of six Santas working at the mall, dispensing hugs and candy canes and posing for countless photographs with children whose responses to the man in red range from exuberance to abject horror.

"First-timers have to kind of warm up to you," Hancock said. "Some of them have to be coerced by their moms to get on my lap, and they're screaming bloody murder.

"For the most part, they take a liking to Santa."

Most children, of course, love Santa Claus. And if the kids love him, he's got to be good for business, reasoned mall marketing director Susan Perkins.

"It's public relations," she said. "Everyone expects a Santa to be at the mall. People who wouldn't ordinarily shop here might say, 'let's go visit Santa.' And if they come out here for that reason, they may go ahead and shop."

She said the mall Santas, contrary to popular belief, do not come from the North Pole. Rather, they are dispatched by an organization in St. Louis called "Santa Plus," which employs local managers nationwide to recruit people to assume the role of St. Nick.

Nor Sewell, Santa Plus administrator, said from St. Louis that Santas are getting bigger.

"We've found this year that Santas are using less and less padding," she said.

Santa Plus especially likes to hire authentic Santa types.

"A Santa Claus who has his own beard and his own white hair can demand a little bit more money because they already look the part," she said.

Journalist missing in El Salvador found

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas Spanish-language radio network reporter missing and feared dead in El Salvador appears to be all right, network officials said today.

Sal Valdez, 44, a manager and reporter for Cadena Radio Centro, a Spanish-language radio network based in Dallas, had been missing from San Salvador since Nov. 28. But network controller Bill Cherry said Valdez called someone this morning.

"Someone received a call this morning from him. I don't have any further information on who received the call," Bill Cherry, network controller, said today.

"I'm sorry it's so sketchy but that's all we have to work with right now."

A statement from network president Barrett Alley said "We are extremely grateful to receive word that Sal Valdez appears to be all right and will be returning to Dallas this evening."

"Due to security reasons, we have no more information at this time. As soon as Sal is debriefed, we will have a full release and statement as to his disappearance."

Hispanic groups in Dallas had planned a vigil Monday evening in City Hall Plaza for Valdez.

Valdez arrived in El Salvador Nov. 25 to report on the latest outbreak in that country's civil war.

Javier Rubio, a CRC reporter, said Valdez had filed seven to 10 stories per day during his stay. Nearly all dealt with current or former members of the Salvadoran government, including President Alfredo Cristiani, and the country's minister of defense.

Alley said he did not know of Valdez having any contact with guerillas. He said, however, that Valdez had not followed some of the standard procedures of reporting from a war zone.

"Usually those guys travel in pairs," Alley said. "He was working as a loner."

Valdez also failed to check in with the U.S. Embassy, Alley said.

Rubio, the last person known to have talked to Valdez, said he thought Valdez had contacted rebels based in Mexico.

A prominent member of the Dallas Hispanic community, Valdez has worked in journalism for nearly 20 years, Alley said.

Treaty Oak's fate may be read in spring leaves

AUSTIN (AP) — People no longer leave chicken soup beneath the branches of the historic Treaty Oak, but well-wishers still send support from as far as West Germany for its struggle to survive a poisoning attack.

Since the May 31 discovery that it was poisoned with a powerful herbicide, the centuries-old live oak has shed five sets of leaves. The sixth is sparse.

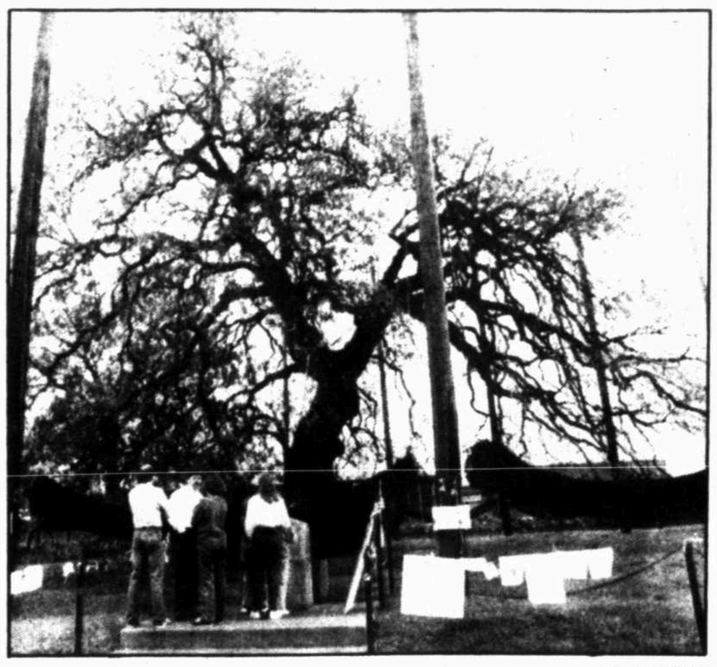

It will be spring, though, before experts know the fate of the tree where legend has it that Stephen F. Austin, the father of Texas, signed a treaty with the Indians. The Handbook of Texas says there is little foundation for that tale, but that hasn't diminished the popularity of the landmark.

The oak is 50 feet tall and has a limb spread of about 120 feet.

Throughout the summer, well-wishers brought cans of chicken soup, flowers and cards, and rock crystals that some believed would transmit healing powers. Visitors still pin get-well messages, woven friendship bracelets, ribbons and beads on a line strung around a barrier surrounding the tree.

A West German company recently shipped organic fertilizer for the tree, which has undergone myriad treatments. Contaminated soil was replaced, and some roots were severed in a move to keep the tree from absorbing more poison. Shade screens were mounted on telephone poles to protect it from the summer sun, and it was misted with water to ease heat stress. A saltwater solution was pumped in to try to counteract the poison, followed by energy-giving sugar water.

Recent tests show the level of the herbicide, Velpar, has been significantly reduced, said city forester John Giedraitis. If leaves that bud next spring stay on the tree, "We're in luck, and the tree will survive."

AP Laserphoto

Visitors look at the historic Treaty Oak in Austin recently. Well-wishers continue to root for the poisoned tree, while experts wait for spring to see if the tree will win its fight against a powerful herbicide that was poured around its base early this year.

Treatment has cost about $80,000, plus $40,000 worth of services. Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot has pledged to cover the cash outlay.

The man charged with felony criminal mischief in the poisoning has been waging a battle of his own.

Paul Stedman Cullen, 45, of Elroy, has been in jail since his June 29 arrest, unable to make $20,000 bail or get it reduced. Because of a prior felony conviction, he could face life in prison if convicted in the poisoning, which authorities say may have been done in some sort of ritual.

If an effort to quash Cullen's indictment fails, defense attorney Terrence Kirk said he will try to get the case moved out of Travis County. Some people have suggested that the tree's poisoner should be hung from its branches.

"This city basically has been transformed into a city of druids, tree-worshipers. People that never heard of the Treaty Oak before — wouldn't know the Treaty Oak from a cactus — are now clamoring for blood," Kirk said.

Vengeance isn't the only emotion evident, however.

Gordon Israel, who lives across the street from the oak and picnicked under its branches as a child, is growing seedlings from its acorns. Israel said he hopes some seedlings could be planted in the Treaty Oak's place if it dies.

An enterprising entrepreneur sold T-shirts bearing a drawing of the oak superimposed on a red heart. The sales raised more than $15,000 for a special Treaty Oak fund to finance tree plantings citywide.

Well-wishers sent a post card addressed to "Treaty Oak, Austin, Texas" — and a postal worker delivered it to the tree.

An Austin foundry worker suggested bronzing the tree if it dies, at a cost of more than $1 million, and replanting the metal replica.

While the spring growth will be a milestone, Giedraitis said, it could be two years before the tree is "out of the woods." Even if it lives, it always will bear the effects, he said, like a tree that has been struck by lightning.

But no matter what it finally looks like, the Treaty Oak is special to visitors like Margaret Lounsbury of San Jose, Calif.

"I'm a tree person. ... To me, this is how a tree is supposed to look," said Ms. Lounsbury. "Well, not with the dead leaves, but the shape."

"We come here to see this thing, how it's doing, every time we come to Austin," said Elmer Immell of Amarillo.

"We came to wish the tree well," added his wife, Margot.

Dallas owes money to dead workers' families

DALLAS (AP) — The city's failure to pay more than $133,000 owed at least 36 families of deceased city employees is a formality that slipped through the cracks, a city official said.

Records show the city even owes money to relatives of workers who died more than three years ago, a Dallas newspaper reported Sunday.

A closer review of city records showed poor record-keeping, bureaucratic red tape and the failure by some city officials to follow proper procedures have kept final paychecks from getting to families for several years.

"Apparently, this is one of the things that's gotten through the cracks," said Everad Davenport, an assistant city attorney. Davenport is one of two lawyers who review the disbursements of checks to relatives.

"I'd like to say the system is working perfectly, but I'd be a fool to say that," Davenport said.

The lump-sum payments range from $12.50 to more than $16,000.

Included among the survivors still awaiting final payments is Walter Sandel, whose police officer daughter, Lisa, was killed in January while pursuing a stolen car.

Records show the city owes the Sandel family $3,400.

"It's not like I'm in dire need of the money," Sandel said, "but I could understand how this runaround could be frustrating to someone who does need it. I just don't understand it. Here's someone who gave her life for the city, and we feel this is a debt owed to us."

Although the city has a set of seven-year-old guidelines for making final payments to families of deceased workers, Davenport said some city administrators haven't followed those rules.

When an employee dies, city departments are supposed to appoint someone to contact relatives to help them get the final paychecks.

"Stuff would come into our office and we'd look at it and see that we needed to wait for someone else to do something, and it would get filed away. ... And if nobody checked on it, and the department didn't get back to us, then it would just sit."

— Everad Davenport
an assistant Dallas city attorney

Once the family supplies the information needed to complete the paper work, the city's legal staff reviews the files before the checks are issued.

But Davenport said there is little supervision to make sure the forms are completed by the family. He said without the completed forms, his hands are tied.

"Stuff would come into our office and we'd look at it and see that we needed to wait for someone else to do something, and it would get filed away," he told the Dallas Times Herald.

"And if nobody checked on it, and the department didn't get back to us, then it would just sit."

Staffing changes within the city attorney's office also may contribute to the problem, said Monica Smith, president of the Dallas Police Association.

"They've had different people handling this," Ms. Smith said. "And I really think that the bureaucracy at City Hall is part of the problem. It's so overwhelming."

12-year-old charged with killing of teen cheerleader

ROUND ROCK (AP) — A 12-year-old boy was charged with fatally stabbing a 13-year-old cheerleader whose body was discovered stashed under wood in the boy's backyard, police said.

Kelly Brumbelow, a straight-A student at C.D. Fulkes Middle School where the boy also attended classes, had been stabbed several times Saturday night, said Sgt. Dan LeMay of the Round Rock Police Department.

The boy was arrested after his father called police about 9 a.m. Sunday and said he had found the girl's body hidden in the backyard, Cpl. David Pierce said.

The boy was ordered held in the William S. Lott Detention Center in Georgetown, and would appear before a juvenile court judge today, Pierce said. His name was withheld because he is a minor.

Friends of the students said Miss Brumbelow and the boy were neighborhood friends. Police said she visited the boy Saturday night.

Evidence at the crime scene indicates "as soon as she arrived at his residence, he attacked her and stabbed her several times in the hall of his home and then carried her outside," LeMay said.

Pierce said the father of the boy "has informed the Round Rock Police Department that the boy did admit to him that he killed Kelly."

"... He was really in a rage when he killed her," LeMay said. "You can tell by the nature of the wounds."

The girl was stabbed at least 15 times, LeMay said. The jogging suit she was wearing was rumpled when she was found, but there was no evidence that she had been sexually assaulted, LeMay said. The girl was not wearing shoes.

Neighbors questioned by police said they heard nothing. Police have not determined a motive, Pierce said.

A 10-inch-long, serrated bread knife used to kill Brumbelow was found inside the boy's house along with other evidence, LeMay said. He said the boy showed little emotion during his statement to police.

LeMay said he knew of no other slaying in Round Rock with a younger suspect. Austin police said they, too, could not think of a younger murder suspect.

"I worked a lot of homicides, but I've never seen one like this in Round Rock before," LeMay said. "You hear about this in other places, but not in Round Rock."

Evidence at the crime scene indicates "as soon as she arrived at his residence, he attacked her and stabbed her several times in the hall of his home and then carried her outside," said Sgt. Dan LeMay of the Round Rock Police Department.

Two brothers charged in aggravated robbery

From Staff Reports

Two brothers were still in the Midland County jail this morning on aggravated robbery charges, Midland County Sheriff's Office officials reported.

Tommy Wayne Aycock, 19, and Christopher Lynn Aycock, 17, both of 1716B Navajo Road, were each charged with the first-degree felony in connection with the armed robbery of a 7-Eleven Food Store, 5408 Thomason Drive, officials said.

A sheriff's officer was driving by the store about 12:30 a.m. this morning when she spotted two men hurrying out of the store and carrying a case of beer, authorities said.

The store clerk told the officer that the men had pulled a knife, officials said. Four men were arrested, but only two were charged, authorities said.

Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe set bond on the two brothers at $40,000 each.

Tommy Wayne Aycock recently was released from prison after serving time on an aggravated robbery conviction, officials said. Christopher Lynn Aycock is on probation for a burglary conviction, officials said.

Thornton originally designed capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Capitol was originally designed by Dr. William Thornton in 1793 and the south wing was completed in 1807.

Thomas U. Walter, who was the Capitol's architect from 1851 to 1865, was responsible for adding the Senate and House wings and the iron dome, which measures 135-feet-5-inches across.

Walter, well-known for his Greek Revival style, was a co-founder of the American Institute of Architects.

Post office opens holiday mall store

From Staff Reports

Need a little something for that philatelist on your holiday shopping list? Look no further than the Postal Christmas Store opening today at Midland Park Mall.

Midland Postmaster Kathie Hawley said the store is the first of its kind in Midland and a new marketing concept for the U.S. Postal Service in Midland.

In addition to performing the normal duties of a post office, the Christmas store will sell clothing, stamp collecting kits, a stamp game and stamp jewelry.

The store will be open Monday through Saturday, noon to 8 p.m., until Dec. 21.

SANTA

Santa Plus Midland manager Judi Harrison said her Santas come in all shapes and sizes.

"We've got some really tall Santas and some really short Santas and some really heavy Santas and some really skinny Santas," she said. "But you can't tell when they're all padded out."

She said her cohort of Santas will be on the job until Dec. 24th, until it's time to "take off" on their worldwide gift distribution tour.

Meanwhile, Hancock and his red-suited colleagues will continue to bounce toddlers on their respective knees and take requests for stocking stuffers.

"I had one kid ask me for $1,000," Hancock said.

And he sees quite a few. On a "slow" Thursday afternoon, he said he was averaging 30 visits an hour.

"I wouldn't be doing this if I didn't like kids," he said.

And kids like him. Amber Browning, 4, emerged happy from her Santa experience Thursday.

"I liked him because he gave me a candy cane," she said. "He rides in a sleigh."

Three-year-old Luke Chambers gave Santa a thumbs-up.

"I told him I wanted a choo-choo train and a truck," he said.

Despite some good-natured ribbing by his buddies at the firehouse, Hancock has been bitten by the Santa bug. He said he is looking forward to playing the part again next year.

Meanwhile, he has an image to uphold.

"If Santa says it, it's got to be gospel," he said with a Kris Kringle twinkle in his eye.

Experts disagree on dangers of sugar consumption

By DONNA KATO
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The season for glucose gluttony has begun.

For most of us, it started Thanksgiving with cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie. It probably continued during the following days with coffeecakes, cookies, ice cream, homemade breads and muffins.

And, if you are like most Americans, the nibbling of sugary goodies will go on throughout December.

More than at any other time of the year, the period between Thanksgiving and New Year's seems to signal a free-for-all when it comes to the consumption of refined sugar.

Even those who are normally diet-conscious cannot resist indulging when there is an abundant spread of sweet treats at nearly every gathering.

But, with each bite of a chocolate chip cookie, most cannot help wondering, how bad can this be? Is eating a banana really that much better? How much sugar is too much sugar? Will I go into some sort of sugar shock if I gratify my sweet tooth with more than a few confections between now and 1990?

Sugar does have a strong, insistent lure for many, but the extent of the harm it may or may not cause is widely debated among physicians, researchers and nutritionists.

SOME EXPERTS say research has proven a number of medical problems arise from overconsumption of refined sugar — especially for those whose body chemistry is sensitive to or unable to metabolize large quantities of glucose.

Others say that for the average, healthy individual, eating too much sugar is not all that damaging as long as obesity, diabetes and cavities are not pre-existing or imminent problems.

"There have been a lot of allegations that sugar is a cause in many diseases," said Dr. Hiltje Irausquin, group leader in the division of toxicology review and evaluation for the federal Food and Drug Administration.

"Basically, our conclusion is that like most everything else in our diet, sugar is acceptable in moderation."

Irausquin was a member of the Sugars Task Force, an investigative team for the FDA that reviewed all relevant scientific and medical research on sugar. The task force published a report of its findings in 1986 after more than a year of evaluation.

But even with such evidence, many medical experts argue that sugar is not just an innocent ingredient in favorite foods.

In addition to promoting cavities, obesity and heart disease, sugar is also a suspect in problems of the endocrine system, they say.

The yo-yoing of blood sugar from constantly eating too many treats overworks the pancreas, which, in some instances, weakens the gland to the point where it cannot efficiently produce insulin, the regulator of the body's glucose.

"Americans definitely eat too much refined sugar," said Dr. Aliza Lifschitz, a Beverly Hills endocrinologist who works extensively with diabetics. "The human body does not need any refined sugar at all, but our tastebuds like it.

"Although I'm not aware of any scientific studies that label it an addiction, getting off sugar is like getting off caffeine in terms of withdrawal."

THOSE WHO eat too much refined sugar also are likely to be eating too much fat, said Jayne Hurley, associate nutritionist at the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer advocacy agency in Washington, D.C.

"It (refined sugar) definitely dilutes the nutritional quality of your diet," said Hurley, who notes that sugar-laden foods such as cakes, cookies and pies almost always contain large amounts of butter or shortening as well.

"People who eat lots of sugar in their diets must get their nutrients and vitamins in a smaller amount of calories or face possible weight gain. Honestly, how many of us can say we get all our daily requirements every day and can afford to eat all the sugar we want?"

The most commonly used sugar in foods today come from sugar cane or sugar beets. The refining process removes vitamins and other nutrients. Refined sugar is metabolized differently in the body than the natural sugar found in fresh fruits and vegetables.

At 70 or 80 calories, an apple is a better choice than a cookie of equal calories for several reasons: The natural sugar that occurs in the fruit has not been refined or stripped of important vitamins, it is rich in fiber and contains no fat, nutritionists say.

What constitutes too much sugar depends on a person's total caloric needs, explained Dr. James D. Boyle, a specialist in gastroenterology and nutrition and a clinical professor of medicine at UCLA Medical School.

"Since most of us are on limited calories, I'd say the biggest problem with sugar is that eating it makes us exceed our caloric allowance," he said. "Eaten in moderation during our cultural feast days, sugar is not going to cause a great deal of harm. But, if you eat it in quantity all year long, it can lead to increased tooth decay and elevated blood fats."

CNS Graphic

ONE OF the myths of eating too much sugar is that it leads to adult-onset diabetes, physicians say. Indirectly, it can contribute to obesity, which, in turn, can cause this type of diabetes, explained Lifschitz, who also mentions recent studies that indicate excessive amounts of sugar also contribute to elevated triglyceride (blood fat) levels, a factor in heart disease.

Another myth is that sugar causes hyperactivity in children, said Dr. Eli Ipp, director of a diabetes blood regulation study at the Research and Education Institute at Harbor-UCLA Medical Center.

"There is no really good evidence that diabetes and hyperactivity are related to eating too much sugar," he said. "However, it is proven that it's not good for the teeth, and eating a lot of sugar is probably an efficient way to get fat."

Although most endocrinologists and nutrition experts subscribe to the school of thought that sugar in moderation is all right for the healthy individual, there are others who say sugar is at the root of many ills, including problems with the digestive and immune systems.

Dr. Luc DeSchepper, an L.A. physician and an assistant clinical professor of medicine at UCLA Medical School, says his research has shown sugar interferes with the absorption of nutrients in food, aggravates and causes constipation and hinders the body's mechanisms for fighting infections.

He has published his findings in a book, "Peak Immunity" (DeSchepper Publishing; $15).

FOR THOSE concerned about eating too much sugar this holiday season, nutritionists also warn there is much hidden sugar in foods that may not even taste sweet.

"A lot of people assume cutting back on sugar means only cutting out candy; the same sugar becomes invisible when it's in bread or cereal or canned and packaged foods," said Mei Ling Schwartz, health educator at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in the Los Angeles area. "Everyone needs to be more aware of where sugar is found, and parents need to be especially aware of what their children are eating."

In addition, the specialists also recommend cutting back on the sugar called for in recipes and limiting consumption of sugared soda pop.

Overdosing on sweets is not uncommon this time of year, and signs that you may be eating too much sugar include feeling light-headed or giddy — possible symptoms of unstable blood sugar. Other possible indications of sugar overindulgence could include a headache or an urge to take a nap.

One effort to take control when the sugar urge hits is to reach for a complex carbohydrate, such as a fruit or slice of whole wheat bread, doctors and nutritionists say.

Another is to anticipate when you'll be eating the sugary snacks and cut down on your normal consumption that day. Or, take a serving of the three-layer-chocolate-and-whipped-cream-dessert — but use willpower and eat just half of it.

Are you a sugarholic? This quiz, developed by nutritional consultant and author Nancy Appleton, may help you determine how pervasive refined sugar is in your lifestyle and what effect it could be having on your body.

Answer true or false:

1. I don't eat refined sugar every day.
2. I can go for more than a day without eating some type of sugar-containing food.
3. I never have cravings for sugar, coffee, chocolate, peanut butter or alcohol.
4. I have never hidden candy or other sweets around my home in order to find and eat them later.
5. I can stop after one piece of candy or one bite of pastry.
6. There are times when I have no sugar of any kind in my home.
7. I can go for three or more hours without eating and not experience the shakes, fatigue, perspiration, irritability, depressions or anxiety.
8. I can have candy and other sweets in my home and not eat them.
9. I don't eat something sweet after every meal.
10. I rarely drink coffee and eat doughnuts or sweet rolls for breakfast.
11. I can go for more than an hour after waking up in the morning without eating.
12. I can go from one day to the next without drinking a soft drink.

If you answered false to more than four of these statements, chances are that you are sugar sensitive.

REAPING THE REWARDS

There are at least two ways jewelery is a wonderful reward. The first is the internal pleasure it brings the wearer. The second is the external recognition it brings you.

When you put on your watch, your rings, and other jewelery in the morning, you take pleasure in what you've given yourself. Beauty at a good value, the feel of quality against your skin, the knowledge that you consider yourself worth the valuable, special gift.

The kind of jewelry you choose for yourself also brings external recognition. In fact, jewelry designers are sometimes grouped by the label given their wearer: avant garde, sophisticated, perhaps classic. Others make assumptions about how well you do what you do, how effective you are in your life, according to what your jewelry says about you. In fact, the opportunities you create for yourself are created in part, by the jewelry you give yourself.

If you consider it time to take a fresh look at the rewards you give yourself, drop by. We'd be glad to discuss the image you have of yourself and whether your jewelry communicates that image. You do deserve the very best.

Santa makes pre-Christmas housecall

By GAYLE McCRACKEN TUTTLE
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

Ann Marie Dalis came up with the idea when she tired of standing in endless shopping mall lines so her five daughters could be photographed sitting on Santa's lap. The Georgia artist decided seven years ago to recruit her own Santa, supply him with a basket of candy canes and invite her friends' children to tell him their wishes in her Augusta home.

"What we really stress is for parents to bring their cameras and enjoy it," says Dalis. "It's such a good chance to watch the kids."

So for two hours on the Sunday afternoon before Christmas, the Dalis home becomes a Santa's workshop, complete with gingerbread cottages, punch and decorated cookies for a few hundred guests. Family friend Horace Usry, in the familiar white beard and red suit, settles into the big easy chair by the fireplace to welcome the young guests.

The children recognize Usry as their own Santa and are much more comfortable with him than with a new face in a department store or shopping mall setting.

"He remembers their names, and their eyes light up when Santa knows who they are," says Dalis. In case someone forgets a wish or two, there's plenty of time for a return trip to Santa's knee.

Refreshments are kept simple: cookies and punch for the kids, beer and wine for the grown-ups. Dalis, a watercolor painter, is especially busy in her studio just before Christmas, so her daughters — Marie, 11; Patti, 9; Helen, 7; Katherine, 5; and Zoe, 4 — handle many of the preparations.

With a sitter supervising, the girls use box cookie mix as a base to bake 10 dozen peanut butter cookies, 20 dozen chocolate-chip cookies and countless dozens of decorated sugar cookies. Dalis supplements these with petit fours and gingerbread men from the bakery. She also keeps a list of ideas handy for guests who want to contribute something.

The party provides the opportunity for special family activities. About two weeks ahead, Dalis and her daughters build 20 gingerbread houses, using graham cracker sections. The gumdrop-decorated cottages serve as centerpieces.

With her home already decorated for the holidays, the open house provides an inexpensive way to entertain. Minus the beer and wine, Dalis spends about $150 for the party.

If the idea of bringing Santa home sounds appealing, here are some ways to make your party a success.

■ Be sure your invitations remind parents to bring cameras and video recorders.

■ Eliminate chocolates from the menu. Even Dalis' chocolate-chip cookies are bite-size to prevent dropped chips from being ground into the carpet or smeared on good clothes.

■ Serve a light-colored punch, apple or lemonade based, to avoid stains from the inevitable spills.

■ No planned activities are needed for the children. At the Dalis party, the older boys bring along a soccer ball for outdoor play, but the younger children tend to huddle near Santa.

■ If the first year is a success, consider investing in a Santa suit for repeat performances. But be sure to keep it hidden from suspecting kids.

'Hot' gifts for Christmas giving are listed

By SHANN NIX
N.Y. Times News Service

The feeding frenzy has begun, as experts forecast a buyer's market this Christmas.

Electronic hand-held gadgets are in. Anything by Nintendo is a winner this season, and cashmere is the happening fabric in clothing.

Tiny racing cars that rip along as fast as real cars are getting warmer and warmer. Video, video and more video. Go with glamour in black and gold — none of this subtle stuff.

Everything sparkles this season, even the dolls.

To make eyes gleam and pocketbooks empty, keep a look out for these hot items:

TOYS

■ Rockin' Flowers, slowly bobbing blossoms powered by a microchip that nod and smile, are this year's supersellers. They don't have any perceivable purpose, but they're said to be the Pet Rock of the '90s. Good for zany adults as well as tykes.

■ Game Boy from Nintendo is hottest of the hot this season. Before Game Boys hit the shelves, rumor said, "If you find one, buy one." But it looks as if there'll be enough to go around, so don't panic.

Anything from Nintendo is hip. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and Super Mario Bros. II are especially popular.

■ Super Hyper Racer from Ban Dai made a big splash in Japan and just came to this country. They're small race cars that go as fast as 30 miles per hour — the equivalent of 325 miles per hour for a real car. The trick is to pick the right accessories for the right track.

■ In dolls, Barbie is as hot as ever. F.A.O. Schwarz has a limited-edition Barbie in a gold lame dress. P.J. Sparkles from Mattel, a blond dolly whose jewelry lights up when you squeeze her, is making big waves.

Also popular are Oopsie Daisy from Tyco, an animated doll that crawls, falls down, cries and gets up by herself; Pretty Penny Chatterbox, who says "ouch" when you brush her hair; and Cherry Merry Muffin and friends, who smell like their names.

■ Micro Machines from Galoob aren't new this season, but they're still hot. They're smaller than Matchbox cars, good to collect and relatively inexpensive.

■ Koosh Ball from OddzOn is selling in droves — a ball of rubbery tendrils that's inexpensive and easy to catch, designed for kids and indoor play, great for stuffing stockings.

FOR MEN

■ Cashmere slippers and crewneck sweaters, as well as camel's hair robes with satin collars.

■ For golfers, try a golf attache putter kit or sporty head covers.

■ Boxer shorts are in, especially made of silk. They even sell them printed with multicolored Christmas ornaments.

■ One fad this season is fly-fishing — even Jane Fonda is into it. Paperweights with fishing flies in them are all the rage.

FOR WOMEN

■ The new exotic earrings hang to the shoulder — faux crystal, impressive but pricey.

■ Paloma Picasso has come out with posh handbags shaped like books, expected to sweep the accessories scene. For that upper-crust type, she also has a folding lorgnette (opera glasses with handle and tassel).

■ Donna Karan is the hot women's wear designer from New York. Her line features stretch pants, rib knits, slightly oversize cotton sweaters and body suits.

■ You can't have too much black and gold, in anything. Anne Klein offers boxed hair goods that match the new looks.

■ Fancy patent leather belts are in, beaded with chains for evening. Metallic ponytail holders, satin "crinkle" hair bands and hats are all in step.

ELECTRONICS

■ Seiko offers a popular Home Contractor that sets up home improvers to calculate anything to do with building.

■ Superhot this season are databanks from Casio and Sharp. They store calendars, addresses, phone numbers, schedules and memos. Upper-range items have hand-held links with PCs — links are sold separately.

■ Cordless phones with answering machines from Panasonic are big, as are Seiko and Casio phone cards, which store 429 names and numbers. Microchip no-tape answering machines are the new high-tech favorites.

GADGETS

■ Pollenex makes a long, tubular massager called the Twist Massager, very popular with health-conscious types.

■ Anolon is out with the newest professional nonstick cookware, expensive but tres chic.

■ Krups has a new Cafe Press, a cappuccino and espresso maker that works with prepackaged espresso pods.

■ For impossible teenagers, try Geometrics by Conair. It irons impressions of hearts, stars and other shapes right into their hair — and it's not permanent.

Children's gift suggestions unusual

Associated Press

Make Santa's life a little less hectic this season. Call on Better Homes and Gardens magazine's potpourri of festive touches and gift ideas to help the jolly old elf choose presents for little ones.

Besides all the bubble gum, toys and colorful trinkets, have Santa tuck a lasting memento way down in the toe of children's stockings.

■ Sneak in a U.S. savings bond to create a healthy nest egg or a welcome addition come college time.

■ Pack a piece of sterling into the stocking. By the time your little ones are grown, they'll have a starter set.

■ Stick in a piece of heirloom jewelry — grandmother's pearls or great-aunt Minnie's classic old brooch — for a cherished family keepsake.

■ Set in a dated Christmas ornament to start a collection for their own grown-up trees.

DEAR ABBY

Celibate, happy, woman regains peace of mind

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This morning I read the letters from your readers concerning the adolescent girl who was being pressured for sex by her boyfriend. "Sorry I Didn't" regretted that she didn't resist when she found herself in a similar situation. She said it was easy to continue having sex, "and not always with the same partner."

While there is something to be said for being a virgin bride, those who give in for whatever reasons need not feel that all is lost. I "gave in" when I was 17, more out of curiosity than anything else. I went through a period of guilt and soul-searching, and finally concluded that I wasn't ready for the physical and emotional responsibilities. I needed time to gain some distance on the tangle of issues I was grappling with, so I took a six-month vow of abstinence.

This month I begin my 10th year of celibacy. I've worked through my ambivalence and have no regrets. If someday I meet a man with whom I want to spend the rest of my life, I can hold my head high and wear white to the altar. And if I never marry, so be it! In my heart, I have regained that intangible quality we happen to call "virginity." And I can appreciate it all the more because I earned it this time.

I support any woman who has decided to be responsibly sexually active, and I wish her every happiness. But for those women who bear the burden of guilt or regret, I say, learn to forgive yourself for being human, and start again! It is never too late to change. Never! — BETTER FOR IT ALL IN BOSTON

DEAR BETTER: Bravo for a mature and admirable attitude. Should you meet a man one day with whom you want to spend the rest of your life, he will be getting a prize.

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to your response to the inquiry as to how to address a widow. Abby, what gives you the right to dictate what a person should be called? This should be a matter of personal preference.

I am a widow, and I strongly object to being called "Mrs. John Doe." I am no longer married to John Doe, as he is dead. So how can I be married to a dead man?

I have told all my friends to simply address me as "Mary Doe" — no title necessary.

Please be fair, Abby, and leave it to each individual as to what she prefers to be called. — MARY DOE

DEAR MARY DOE: I agree with you — a woman should be addressed according to her own personal preference. But a reader asked, "What is the 'correct' way?" So I deferred to the etiquette authorities: Letitia Baldrige, the late Amy Vanderbilt, the late Emily Post, and the very-much alive Miss Manners. All four agree that a widow is "Mrs. John Doe" (socially — but not on legal documents) as long as she lives, unless she remarries.

DEAR ABBY: Far worse than the pain of being hugged too tightly is the pain of having no one to hug you.

No wonder Americans have so many pets. I have a cat I love dearly, but she's just a substitute for my need to touch and be touched by a warm human.

I've seen bumper stickers that read: HUGS ARE BETTER THAN DRUGS. They certainly are — but drugs are a lot easier to find. — HUNGRY FOR A HUG

DEAR HUNGRY: The surest way I know of to get "positive strokes" (hugs) is to give them. Volunteer some time to the Big Brothers or Big Sisters of America, a food program for the poor and homeless, an AIDS hospice, a senior citizens' assistance program or a local hospital.

If you've been looking for hugs in the places where drugs are being traded, perhaps you're lucky to have come up empty.

Houston police seek clues in triple slaying

HOUSTON (AP) — Police today planned to visit Kashmere High School with hopes of learning more about twin teen-age students who were brutally stabbed to death along with their mother.

The bodies of Bonita Edwards, 38, and her 16-year-old daughter, Annette, were found near the door of their northeast Houston apartment after a maintenance man opened the locked door Saturday.

The body of Bernette Edwards, also 16, was found in a back bedroom. She had been gagged and sexually assaulted, authorities said.

Both girls had their throats slashed in addition to several stab wounds. Ms. Edwards had been stabbed repeatedly in the chest near her heart, officers said.

"The two in the front were killed very rapidly," said homicide Lt. Greg Neely. "It was the poor girl in the back that suffered the most."

Neely said authorities believe all three were slain late Wednesday night — a day after the twins celebrated their 16th birthday.

Neighbors told police they heard nothing unusual on the evening of the attack.

"That's what's so strange," said an upstairs neighbor who asked not to be identified. "We didn't hear nothing."

Autopsies are scheduled today by the Harris County Medical Examiner's Office, Neely said.

Police said the apartment showed no signs of forced entry and all of the windows were protected by burglar bars, leading authorities to believe the women knew their assailant. Fingerprints taken from the blood-spattered apartment were being analyzed.

Ms. Edwards remained unmarried after her husband's murder in 1973, the year the girls were born, Neely said. She was unemployed and supported the family with Social Security checks.

The bodies were found after Ms. Edwards' boyfriend grew concerned about not being able to reach the family. When no one answered his knock at the door, he summoned the maintenance man, police said.

"Whoever it was took them completely by surprise," Neely said. All three were dressed in pajamas and apparently had gone to bed just before the attack, investigators said.

"It is not inconceivable that this was done by one person," Neely said. "At this point, we just don't know."

Buddhists puzzled by recent harassment from vandals

IRVING (AP) — Two monks and a nun living in a Buddhist monastery say they are puzzled by repeated harassment from vandals.

The young vandals often come two or three times a week to shine their headlights, honk their car horns and shout at the Lien Hoa Buddhist monastery's inhabitants.

"I don't feel many people understand that we are here to make people happy and peaceful," said Abbott Thich Phap Nhan, who founded the monastery nine years ago.

The day after Thanksgiving, Thich said he found the sidewalk splattered with broken eggs when he woke up before 5 a.m.

On Nov. 26, several carloads of youths came at 10:30 p.m., 11 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. to shine headlights, honk horns and holler, Thich said.

Slogans and obscenities were recently spray-painted on the parking lot and sidewalks of the monastery.

One of the spray-painted messages included the word "skinheads," raising concern that neo-Nazi hatemongers are responsible for incidents, Irving police said.

Six skinheads recently pleaded guilty to vandalism that occurred against north Dallas synagogues last year.

But Lt. John Nelley said he isn't sure who is terrorizing the Buddhists.

"Anybody can do some damage and blame it on another group, but it doesn't matter who they were," Nelley told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "If they're damaging property we need to be actively looking for them."

FBI director's wife resigns from anti-drug project

AUSTIN (AP) — The wife of FBI Director William Sessions says a dispute over fund-raising and spending practices caused her to resign as head of a Texas anti-drug program, a newspaper reported.

Alice Sessions says her sudden departure from the "Join the Move" project last month was prompted by complaints that telephone solicitors had used her husband's name to attract donations.

The fund-raisers once even called one of her sons who lives in Texas, she said.

"I just couldn't be associated with that," Mrs. Sessions said in an interview with an Austin newspaper. "I didn't get real accountability from them. So I got out."

Mrs. Sessions said some of her Texas friends had complained several times that they had been asked for donations for the anti-drug project "by callers who were saying 'Alice Sessions, wife of the FBI director.'

"From the very beginning ... I asked that they not do anything like that — my husband's position was not to be exploited," she said.

News of the resignation surfaced last week, four months after police groups targeted the program's sponsors, the Austin-based Texas Department of Public Safety Officers' Association, in a dispute over phone fund raising.

Program officials deny any wrongdoing and contend that the disagreement is a misunderstanding.

"She may have some particular disagreements with some of the things that the association is doing, but I think overall our goals are positive," said DPSOA Executive Director Lane Denton. "We're willing to commit money to a program that hopefully can be helpful."

But Mrs. Sessions said she started to suspect the program was poorly coordinated last spring.

She had been serving as an unpaid honorary chairwoman at the request of Denton, whom she had known in the late 1960s while living in Waco. Denton was then a state representative.

The program began in January, amid fanfare that included endorsements from House Speaker Gib Lewis and other state officials. School rallies and video and poster contests followed, all stressing the anti-drug theme with fifth-, sixth- and seventh-graders.

So far, about 80 schools have participated.

But as the campaign grew, Mrs. Sessions said, educational materials were being sent out late and planning seemed disorganized.

"I realized they did not have the capability of developing and activating a program," Mrs. Sessions told the Austin American-Statesman.

Randall Dale Adams makes first return visit to Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Randall Dale Adams made his first trip to Dallas since his release from prison to support an organization that will investigate the cases of people who may have been wrongly convicted.

Adams, freed after 13 years of jail when a state appeals court last spring overturned his conviction in the 1976 slaying of a Dallas police officer, said it was a "little strange" to be in the city again.

"You can understand that the last time I was here I was pretty anxious to leave," Adams said at the benefit dinner for Dallas-based Justice Denied Research Inc. Saturday night.

Adams' case was documented in the 1988 film "The Thin Blue Line," which questioned the testimony of prosecution witnesses. In March, a state appeals court overturned the conviction and Texas authorities dropped the murder charge instead of retrying Adams, who moved to Columbus, Ohio.

Adams will begin a 12-day tour of Italy this week to correspond with the European premiere of "The Thin Blue Line" and will speak at an annual meeting of Amnesty International.

Adams, accompanied by his mother, Mildred Adams, said he stopped in Dallas to encourage the efforts of Justice Denied Research Inc., which is led by Jim Humphreys.

Humphreys was the investigator instrumental in gathering information that led to the release of Lenell Geter. Geter, an E-Systems engineer, spent two years in prison for a Balch Springs robbery before his release when another suspect in the crime was identified.

Brewers want Yount, sign Parker

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers have made an attempt to keep Robin Yount by signing free agent Dave Parker.

Yount, the American League's MVP, is also a free agent and is being pursued by several teams. After the season, Yount said the Brewers would have to improve to get him back.

To that end, Milwaukee signed Parker to a two-year deal for $3 million on Sunday as the annual winter meetings started in Opryland.

Parker, 38, helped the Oakland Athletics win the World Series this season by hitting .264 with 22 homers and 97 RBIs as the designated hitter.

The Brewers, who tried several players at the position this season, got a combined 10 homers, 67 RBIs and .238 average from their DHs. Milwaukee left-handed batters hit only 20 home runs in 1989.

MILWAUKEE finished fourth in the AL East at 81-81, eight games behind the first-place Toronto Blue Jays.

The Brewers had not signed a free agent since getting Roy Howell, who had been with Toronto, on Dec. 23, 1980. Parker is only the sixth free agent Milwaukee has acquired.

"I'm looking for Dave Parker to be Dave Parker, on and off the field," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "He can bring us several qualities we can use."

But to make Parker's acquisition worthwhile, the Brewers must sign Yount.

The Brewers will also try to improve their pitching and will trade Rob Deer or Greg Vaughn to do it.

The Chicago Cubs have talked to Yount about a three-year deal for $9 million and San Diego and California are in the running, too.

Yount hit .318 with 21 homers and 103 RBIs.

Parker helped keep the A's in the AL West race while Jose Canseco spent the first half of the season on the disabled list. On Sunday, Parker was selected the AL's outstanding designated hitter.

But A's general manager Sandy Alderson spent $12 million to keep Rickey Henderson happy for four years and still must sign pitcher Storm Davis (19-7) and infielder Tony Phillips.

Canseco, Dave Stewart and Mark McGwire will also have to be satisfied in the future.

"The Brewers showed genuine interest from the start," Parker said. "Plus, they're bonafide contenders."

Parker said the New York Yankees, Boston and California also expressed more interest than Oakland.

"I think the Athletics made their decision at the end of the season," Parker said. "They had a game plan. I don't think they had a serious negotiating session with us. But this is a business, and we all understand that."

"We would like to bring back everybody from our championship team, but the economics haven't made it possible," Alderson said. "We also didn't feel we could give him the multi-year contract he was seeking."

Parker has 307 home runs, 1,342 RBIs and a .289 average for 17 seasons. He was the NL's MVP with Pittsburgh in 1978 and spent the past two seasons with Oakland.

The major-league portion of the meetings started today with several big-ticket free agents still available.

The biggest prize, however, left-hander Mark Langston, decided on California. The Angels signed Langston on Friday to a five-year deal for a record $16 million.

The attention now centers on NL Cy Young winner Mark Davis, who had 44 saves in 48 opportunities for the San Diego Padres.

With reliever Dave Righetti going into New York's starting rotation, the Yankees will make every attempt to get Davis into their bullpen for 1990.

Pete O'Brien, who had 12 homers and 55 RBIs for Cleveland, also has attracted a lot of attention.

The clubs interested in O'Brien include Oakland, which would use him as a DH to replace Parker.

Not all the action during the winter meetings is expected to be about free agents and money, though. There will be some deals.

The Indians are expected to trade outfielder Joe Carter (35 homers, 105 RBIs) and San Diego has to make a decision on catchers Benito Santiago and Sandy Alomar Jr.

KANSAS CITY is said to be offering outfielder Danny Tartabull and catcher Mike Macfarlane in a package for Carter. Boston and San Diego also are showing interest.

The New York Mets and Chicago Cubs talked Sunday and the topic was Cubs reliever Les Lancaster.

Mets center fielder Juan Samuel is unhappy in New York and vice president Joe McIlvaine said the club would try to accommodate him.

The Mets have an excess of pitching and Ron Darling has been mentioned in several trade possibilities.

Rafael Palmeiro, who was acquired by Texas from the Cubs during last year's meetings, is on the block again and the Mets are interested in listening to what the Rangers want.

The St. Louis Cardinals, who signed free agent pitcher Bryn Smith last week, are shopping outfielders Willie McGee and Vince Coleman.

One deal had Coleman going to Cincinnati for pitchers Scott Scudder and Norm Charlton. But The Reds said Sunday they would not trade Scudder.

Business on today's schedule included an address by Commissioner Fay Vincent and a draft of players not protected on the 40-man roster.

Houston Oiler running back Lorenzo White ...on the way to 115 yards against Pittsburgh

Oilers romp in snow

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The weather outside was frightful, but the Houston Oilers — who usually play in the climate-controlled comfort of the Astrodome — found it downright delightful.

Lorenzo White ran for 115 yards and a game-winning 1-yard scoring run with 21 seconds left after Warren Moon threw two touchdown passes in the final 1:54 of the first half during a driving snowstorm, giving the Oilers a 23-16 victory Sunday over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The cold weather-tested Steelers were supposed to have a decided advantage in the numbing wind and blowing snow, but it was the Oilers (8-5) who overcame a 10-0 deficit, three fumbles, and a minus 25-degree wind-chill factor to take over first place in the AFC Central Division. Cincinnati's 21-0 victory in Cleveland knocked the Browns (7-6-1) out of the lead.

"Pittsburgh was saying we couldn't play in the cold — well, we did," said Moon, who played numerous bad-weather games in the Canadian Football League. "I knew we could. We played well in Cleveland last year in bad weather in the playoffs, and we knew we had everything going for us."

White, who didn't start, said the only time he played in worse weather, "was my sophomore year at Michigan State, when it rained and hailed and snowed at Iowa. I always seem to have big games in the bad weather. I had my two best games in college in bad weather."

The Steelers (6-7), who twice settled for field goals after driving to first downs at the Houston 2-yard line, lost for the first time in three games to all but end their chances of making the playoffs for the first time since 1984.

"The Steelers have a young team and this was their first big pressure game, and they played it like a playoff game," Oilers coach Jerry Glanville said. "It wasn't real pleasant out there, but you couldn't tell it by the way they played. But our goal-line defense was great ... it changed the game."

"For some reason we just couldn't get it in when we got it close," said the Steelers' Tim Worley, who had 103 yards for his first NFL 100-yard game. "We just couldn't get it in."

After Gary Anderson's third field goal made it 16-16 with 5:43 to play, Moon hit Haywood Jeffires for 37 yards to the Steelers' 27 and White, who didn't start, ran 26 yards on two carries ahead of his own go-ahead touchdown on a second-and-goal play.

Everett rallies Rams

IRVING (AP) — Jim Everett, saving his best for the last, avoided the embarrassment of losing to the NFL's worst team on Sunday and kept the Los Angeles Rams' slim NFC West championship hopes alive.

Everett threw four touchdown passes, including two in the last four minutes of the game as Los Angeles beat the luckless Dallas Cowboys 35-31 in a classic case of living dangerously.

"We're lucky to get out of here with our fannies," Los Angeles coach John Robinson said not so delicately.

"I'll give Dallas some credit," said Everett. "We got two easy touchdowns, but they wouldn't die. It surprised us, but we did what we had to do when we had to do it."

Everett, who hit 27 of 37 passes for 341 yards, rallied the Rams to a 20-17 overtime victory last Sunday night in New Orleans.

"We can't continue to screw up for 57 minutes then start playing great football," Robinson said. "We can't expect to win against San Francisco next week doing that."

Troy Aikman threw four touchdown passes and had Dallas beating on the victory door when the Cowboys ran out of time. He hit 19 of 34 passes for 179 yards.

"Troy played a great game," Johnson said. "We should have had a time-out left late in the game but the referee thought Troy called one when all he was doing was giving hand signals to our receivers. We argued but it was too late."

Aikman said he thought Dallas finally was going to win a home game.

"We got down there at the end but the ref hurt us when I was trying to signal my receivers," Aikman said. "We came close again. This one hurts."

Los Angeles advanced its record to 9-4 while Dallas dropped to 1-12 in its second-worst season. The Rams are two games behind the 49ers in the NFC West.

Everett overcame a 31-21 deficit with scoring passes of 39 yards to Ron Brown with 3:58 to go and 23 yards to Aaron Cox with 1:50 left to play.

"Jim told me in the huddle just what to do if Dallas blitzed and they did blitz so I took advantage of it," Cox said.

NFL races taking shape

Associated Press

The Philadelphia Eagles, buoyed by quarterback Randall Cunningham's 91-yard punt and five New York turnovers, took control of the NFC East with a 24-17 victory over the Giants on Sunday. Each is 9-4 but the Eagles won both head-to-head meetings, the first playoff tie-breaker should New York and Philadelphia end the season with identical records.

In the Central Division, Green Bay and Minnesota remained tied with 8-5 records but the Vikings hold a tie-breaker edge based on a better division record.

Chris Jacke's 47-yard field goal with no time remaining gave the Packers a 17-16 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, and Wade Wilson threw two scoring passes as Minnesota beat Chicago 27-16, severely damaging the Bears' hopes for a sixth straight division crown.

And the San Francisco 49ers moved to the brink of their seventh NFC West title in nine years with a 23-10 victory over the Atlanta Falcons. Steve Young took over for injured Joe Montana and threw for one second-half touchdown and ran for another. The 49ers can clinch the title with a victory over the Los Angeles Rams next week.

All of Philadelphia's points came as the result of New York turnovers. The last one was Phil Simms' fumble at his 6-yard line after Cunningham's punt, aided by 40 mph wind gusts, became the longest in Eagles history. It got Philadelphia out a hole at its own 1. Cunningham had punted only twice this season.

"I wanted a long kick, and that's what we got," Eagles coach Buddy Ryan said. "The other guy (Max Runager) can't kick it more than 40 yards. The wind was the most important factor in the game."

Two plays later, Simms was sacked by Bob Golic and Mike Pitts recovered the fumble, setting up a 2-yard touchdown run by Keith Byars with 10:50 left in the game.

The Eagles took a 7-0 lead on a touchdown by Andre Waters after Reggie White sacked Simms and forced a fumble on the third play of the game. Clyde Simmons' 60-yard interception return eight minutes later made it 14-0.

The Giants' touchdowns came on Simms' 41-yard pass to Mark Ingram and Ottis Anderson's 1-yard run. But Simms completed only 11 of 37 passes, albeit for 265 yards.

Vikings 27, Bears 16

Minnesota had its first long touchdown drives in three weeks while Chicago (6-7) fell below .500 for the first time since 1983, the last season it missed the playoffs. The Bears, who have lost three straight and are 2-7 after a 4-0 start, last had a losing season in 1982, Coach Mike Ditka's first year.

On their second possession, the Vikings went 66 yards in seven plays, including passes of 13 and 33 yards from Wilson to Hassan Jones, setting up Herschel Walker's 1-yard run for a 7-3 lead.

In the second quarter, Wilson's scrambles of 17 and 13 yards preceded his 46-yard touchdown pass to Jones for a 14-3 lead. After Mike

STREAKS

Dallas' 35-31 loss to the Los Angeles Rams was the Cowboys' 13th straight at Texas Stadium. The Cowboys' last home win was in September 1988 when they beat Atlanta 26-20.

SET AND STOPPED

Chicago's Kevin Bulter broke Mark Moseley's NFL record for consecutive field goals when he kicked a 33-yarder, his 24th in a row, in the first period. The streak ended there, however. Butler's 44-yard attempt in the second quarter was blocked by the Minnesota Vikings.

Ware plans to return to Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Heisman winner Andre Ware says he can't wait for next season and not because he'll be making millions in the NFL.

"I sit back and look at what we have coming back, and it's hard not to get excited already. I just wish we had a game to get ready for on Saturday," Ware wrote in a first-person account in a Houston newspaper.

"I know people are going to start asking me right away about next year, how I can possibly improve on the season, the numbers we put up this season."

The Cougars accepted Ware as a quarterback when others recruited him as a defensive back.

Now the 1989 Heisman Trophy winner plans to ignore the riches of the NFL and repay the favor by returning for his senior year.

"People are going to wonder how I feel about the chance of getting hurt next year, maybe losing my chance to play in the NFL. I could get hurt driving down the freeway to Dickinson," Ware wrote in a column for the Houston Chronicle.

"There are things you can do to take out an insurance policy against injury and we'll be looking into that a little later. Getting injured is no issue at this point; it's one of my least concerns."

Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders, the 1988 winner, skipped his senior year and became a 1,000-yard rusher for the Detroit Lions this season.

Ware has other plans.

"I was here when this program was about to hit rock bottom and now it's special for me to see it turn around," Ware said during an emotional news conference after winning the coveted trophy on Saturday. "I'm so proud of this school."

The 13th-ranked Cougars closed out a 9-2 season with a 64-0 victory over Rice Saturday.

Ware completed 36 of 51 passes for 400 yards, finishing the season with 14 NCAA records, 13 of them achieved within this year. He tied two other NCAA marks.

Ware's 365 completions for 4,699 yards are both NCAA records. He also set records Saturday with 4,661 total yards.

Ware threw 46 touchdown passes, missing Jim McMahon's record of 47 in 1980.

Coach Jack Pardee, a blocking back for Texas A&M's John David Crow in 1956, a year before Crow won the Heisman Trophy, said Ware's selection was his proudest moment.

The pursuit of the Heisman for Ware replaced battling for a major bowl for the Cougars, who are on NCAA probation and unable to appear on television or play in bowl games through next season.

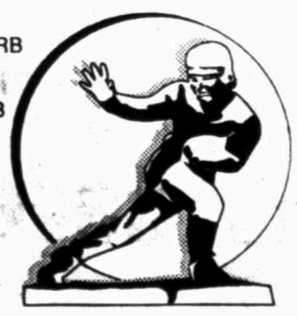

"This was our bowl game, Andre winning this for himself and for the team," Pardee said.

Crow, now Texas A&M's athletic director, and Earl Campbell, the 1977 Heisman winner from the University of Texas, advised Ware to skip his senior year and take the riches of professional football.

"We don't need anyone from our sister institutions telling us how to run our program," Davalos said. "And he doesn't have to depend on football for his future."

Tomczak's 3-yard scoring pass to Cap Boso made it 17-10 early in the third quarter, the Vikings went 73 yards in three plays, including Wilson's 24-yard scoring pass to Anthony Carter.

"It's nice to dethrone them — as long as we're the ones who replace them on the throne," Wilson said. "It wouldn't do us any good to beat the Bears and then watch the Packers win the division."

Chicago's Kevin Butler broke an NFL record when he kicked his 24th consecutive field goal, a 33-yarder in the first period. His next attempt was blocked.

Packers 17, Buccaneers 16

Jacke's game-winning kick came on the 12th play of a 52-yard drive that was kept alive at the Packers' 40 by a Tampa Bay penalty, a hands-to-the-face call against Shawn Lee that nullified a fourth-down incompletion. Don Majkowski, who threw touchdown passes of 21 and 55 yards to Sterling Sharpe, set up the score with a 17-yard completion to Carl Bland at the Bucs' 30.

The triumph was the fifth in the last six games for Green Bay, which intercepted Vinny Testaverde five times. Tampa Bay had taken a 16-14 lead with 1:35 left on Donald Igwebuike's 36-yard field goal. But Majkowski, who was 25-of-53 for 331 yards, stopped the clock with one second remaining by throwing the ball into the ground, setting up Jacke's kick. It was Green Bay's fourth one-point victory.

49ers 23, Falcons 10

Young came on after Montana aggravated a rib injury in the final two minutes of the first half and sat out the rest of the game. Young completed his first 10 passes for 168 yards in the third quarter, connecting with John Taylor on a 38-yard scoring pass over rookie Deion Sanders to erase a 10-6 halftime deficit midway through the period.

Young stretched the lead to 20-10 on a 1-yard sneak 12 seconds into the final quarter. He finished 11-of-12 for 175 yards.

Bengals 21, Browns 0

Boomer Esiason threw two touchdown passes, including a 38-yarder to Tim McGee on a trick play, as Cincinnati revived its playoff hopes with its first shutout since 1980. The Bengals (7-6) are in third place but only one game behind first-place Houston.

The Bengals led 7-0 after James Brooks ran a yard for a second-quarter touchdown. They made it 14-0 on McGee's diving catch in the third quarter on a fleaflicker, with Brooks taking a pitchout and tossing it back to Esiason for the pass. Esiason threw a 9-yard touchdown to Rodney Holman in the third quarter.

Raiders 16, Broncos 13

Jeff Jaeger kicked a 26-yard field goal at 7:02 of overtime as the Raiders kept their wild-card playoff hopes alive. The Raiders moved from their 29 to the Denver 9 and Jaeger kicked his third field goal of the game after a 16-yard run by Steve Smith.

The Raiders tied the score 13-13 on a 67-yard touchdown pass from Steve Beuerlein to Mike Dyal with 7:05 left in regulation. The touchdown capped a 92-yard, four-play drive after Los Angeles had been held to one first down and minus-1 yard in total offense in the second half.

Chiefs 26, Dolphins 21

Christian Okoye rushed for 148 yards on 32 carries, breaking Kansas City's season rushing record with 1,191 yards. Stephone Paige caught seven of Steve Deberg's passes for 133 yards, including a 38-yard touchdown that gave the Chiefs a 13-0 lead in the first period.

After the Chiefs went up 16-0 after three periods, Miami's Dan Marino threw three touchdown passes. The rally was negated by Nick Lowery's second field goal and DeBerg's 9-yard pass to Herman Heard.

Patriots 22, Colts 16

John Stephens scored on a 10-yard run with 25 seconds left after a penalty kept the drive alive and Jason Staurovsky kicked five field goals. Stephens, who rushed for 124 yards on 27 carries, scored after Jack Trudeau and Eric Dickerson combined on an 8-yard pass that gave the Colts a 16-15 lead with 1:59 remaining.

New England had a third-and-26 and Marc Wilson's pass was incomplete but the Colts were offside. On third-and-21, Wilson threw a 30-yard pass to Eric Sievers at the Indianapolis 44.

Redskins 29, Cardinals 10

Gerald Riggs and Earnest Byner had 1-yard scoring runs and rookie A.J. Johnson returned a third-quarter interception 59 yards for his first NFL touchdown. Washington took the second-half kickoff and drove 61 yards in 11 plays with Riggs' touchdown putting the Redskins ahead to stay 17-10.

Johnson, who entered the game with only one career interception, also picked off a first-quarter pass. Phoenix's Gary Hogeboom was 8-of-11 for 131 yards before fracturing the index finger on his throwing hand in the second period.

Lions 21, Saints 14

Richard Johnson caught eight passes for 248 yards, including a 75-yard touchdown from Bob Gagliano, as Detroit all but crushed New Orleans' slim hopes for a wild card playoff berth. Johnson's yardage was second in Lions' history to Cloyce Box, who had 302 yards against the Baltimore Colts in 1950.

Rodney Peete scored on a 6-yard run and Barry Sanders, who ran for 72 yards on 20 carries, had a 3-yard TD run for Detroit. Dalton Hilliard, who was held to 67 yards on 18 carries, had a 1-yard TD run and Bobby Morse returned a kickoff 99 yards for New Orleans.

Jets 20, Chargers 17

Roger Vick scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns, the first on a 1-yard run with 9:19 left that put the Jets ahead 14-10 and the second on a 14-yard run two plays after Erik McMillan intercepted a Billy Joe Tolliver pass and returned it 40 yards to the Chargers' 16.

Tolliver threw an 8-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Miller with 3:25 remaining but the Chargers missed a chance to force overtime when Chris Bahr missed a 37-yard field goal try with 10 seconds remaining.

Michigan (3-1) moved from 10th to eighth with 1,080, 29 more than LSU (2-1), which stayed ninth. Arkansas (3-0), which had two first-place votes, moved from 11th to No. 10 with 1,031 points.

Arizona was the only team to drop from the Top Ten. The Wildcats fell to a 1-2 record after a disastrous three days in the state of Oregon. They dropped from No. 2 to No. 20 after losing at Oregon 68-63 and Oregon State 84-61.

SWC hauls in three bowl teams, Heisman

Associated Press

The Arkansas Razorbacks successfully defended their championship, three teams are in bowl games and Andre Ware won the Heisman Trophy.

While the Southwest Conference won't produce a national football champion this year, it had one of the most exciting races in recent times.

Arkansas claimed the title outright on Saturday with a hard-earned 38-24 victory over lowly Southern Methodist. The Hogs had one loss on their record.

TEXAS, THE team that beat Arkansas early in the season, fell 21-10 to Texas A&M and, in the process, suffered their second consecutive losing season. It was the first time the Longhorns had back-to-back losing since 1937-38.

The Aggies claimed second place and a berth in the John Hancock (Sun Bowl) in El Paso on Dec. 30 against the Pittsburgh Panthers.

Arkansas, of course, will meet Tennessee on New Year's Day in the Cotton Bowl. The Hogs lost 17-3 to UCLA in the Cotton Bowl last year.

Texas Tech is the other SWC bowl representative. The Red Raiders play the Duke Blue Devils in the All-American Bowl in Birmingham, Ala., on Dec. 28.

Although Houston couldn't go to a bowl because of probation, Ware collected the ultimate prize, the Heisman Trophy. He won it by only 70 points in close balloting over Indiana running back Anthony Thompson.

The junior said he will return for his final year at Houston in 1990 instead of opting for the big bucks in professional football.

Houston ripped Rice 64-0 to finish its season with only two losses, to Arkansas and Texas A&M.

The Aggies beat Texas for the sixth consecutive time as they finished the season 8-3. Coach R.C. Slocum gave them time off until Dec. 16 when they will begin work for the Panthers.

SMU LED Arkansas 24-23 with 10:21 left before the Hogs finally subdued coach Forrest Gregg's 40-point underdogs.

"When they scored that touchdown, I was thinking the same thing everyone else was thinking, what's going on?" said Arkansas quarterback Quinn Grovey. "We were just shocked we were in that position."

Grovey came right back to score the game-winning touchdown for the Hogs, who go to the Cotton Bowl with a 10-1 record.

SMU, playing its first season since it returned from the NCAA's "death penalty," had two victories and led, Texas, Arkansas, and A&M before losing.

Bradley, Glasson won with eagle

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — The results don't count in the statistics for the PGA and LPGA tours, but the J.C. Penney Golf Classic was hardly a carefree weekend of golf.

"The competition down the last nine holes and the four playoff holes was incredible," said Pat Bradley, the LPGA's career money leader with nearly $3 million in 16 years. A 12-foot eagle putt on the fourth playoff hole gave Bradley and her teammate, Bill Glasson, the victory over the team of Patty Sheehan and Duffy Waldorf.

The teams halved the first three extra holes with birdies before Glasson put his second shot on the par-5 16th 12 feet from the cup. Waldorf's approach caught the edge of the green and Sheehan's putt went past.

"When Patty missed her long putt, I felt pretty good standing over my putt," Bradley said. "I felt the pressure was off. I hit it firm. I felt the grain might make it swerve."

The winners shared a $200,000 payoff and the second-place team split $120,000.

"It was not a routine day," said Waldorf, whose $60,000 check is the largest he received in three years on the PGA circuit. "The wind made you struggle all day."

Glasson and Bradley overcame wind and chill to shoot a 6-under-par 66 during Sunday's final round over the 6,892-yard Bardmoor Country Club course. The best round of the day started with five birdies on the first seven holes and allowed Glasson and Bradley to complete four rounds at 21-under 267.

Waldorf and Sheehan, who shot 67 on Sunday, got a share of the 72-hole lead with a birdie on the 72nd hole. Sheehan hit an approach to two feet and Glasson dropped the putt to force a playoff.

The teams each had birdies on the 16th, 17th and 18th holes, and had to go back to the 16th again to settle it.

Jay Don Blake and rookie Tracy Kerdyke, who were tied for the lead with Gene Sauers and Beth Daniel at 17 under after three rounds, could only manage an even-par 72 on Sunday to finish at 271, four shots back. A bogey on 13 and a double bogey on 15 doomed Blake and Kerdyke, who were joined at 271 by Kenny Perry and Sherri Turner, who shot 68 on Sunday.

Sauers and Daniel had bogeys on three of the first seven holes and never recovered, shooting 73 for 272.

Greg Twiggs and Jan Stephenson, tied for eighth place going into the final round, were disqualified after Twiggs missed his 8:48 a.m. starting time. He was in the Pinellas County Jail after being charged early Sunday for driving while intoxicated. The sheriff's department said he was held until Sunday afternoon.

Edberg stuns net leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — The top of the mountain is getting crowded.

Ivan Lendl and Boris Becker went into Masters tennis tournament with strong claims on this year's No. 1 ranking.

On Sunday, Stefan Edberg put in his bid.

The Swede defeated Becker 4-6, 7-6 (8-6), 6-3, 6-1 to capture the eight-player, season-ending tournament. That victory came one day after he shocked Lendl in the semifinals.

"Beating Lendl and Becker will help me because I'm going to start to believe in myself, and that's what I need to do," Edberg said. "I've got the physical abilities to be at the No. 1 spot."

Despite the semifinal loss, Lendl retains the No. 1 spot on the computer. Becker is considered No. 1 by many, including Lendl.

"The Grand Slam is the most important thing," Becker said before the week-long Masters tournament began at Madison Square Garden. "And I've won two of them and was in the semifinals at one. I beat Ivan in two of them.

"To me, it's clear" who's No. 1.

Becker won Wimbledon for the third time and his first U.S. Open in 1989.

"If Boris won this tournament, very clearly he would be No. 1 in my mind and he would be No. 1 in your mind," Lendl said earlier in the week. "The question is, if he doesn't win and I win, what is going to happen then?"

Neither Lendl nor Becker won, however, setting the stage for Edberg to put in his bid.

"If we stay healthy and play long enough, one of us is going to be the next No. 1," Becker said of himself and Edberg.

For Edberg, the Masters victory was a tonic after a year of seemingly falling just one victory short.

"There's been a lot of frustrations for me," he said. "I've lost a lot of finals."

Sunday wasn't one of them.

Edberg defused Becker's power, fought off a set point against him in the second set, then began dominating the West German.

"One ball was the difference," Becker said. "I had that set point and the match would have been over.

"That's tennis, though. It depends on what side of the net you're on."

Edberg said he changed strategy in the second-set tiebreaker.

"I hit a lot of serves to his forehand in the tiebreak, and I really changed my game there," Edberg said.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You can look forward to plenty of action in romance and finance. Make a fresh start. Your economic picture will brighten in January. Relatives and old friends introduce you to important business contacts in the spring. Although a new alliance could land you in a risky situation next June, you will come through with flying colors. Late summer is the best time for a wedding. Be sure you know what makes you happy. The birth of a child should bring deep joy.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President Martin Van Buren, author Joan Didion, singer Little Richard, Walt Disney, Gen. George Custer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Enrolling in seminars or weekend courses will boost your earning power. Self-improvement projects are worthwhile. New social contacts lead to a happier private life. Romance beckons.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make plans for the rest of the week and set priorities. Tackle paperwork that has been mounting. Do not let other people's personal problems bog you down. Spend more time with your children.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Explore a project more thoroughly before committing time and money to it. Keep close tabs on spending if you want to stay within your budget. An old friend offers sound advice; follow it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Modernize your day-to-day work procedures. Regular exercise will help you keep in top shape. Avoid seeking special favors. A newcomer lets you say "goodbye" to loneliness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put yourself in a better position to promote your financial interests. Do more listening than talking if trying to solve a family problem. Spend the evening writing holiday cards.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concentrate on your work, even if you feel discouraged. Higher-ups are open to suggestions. A home decoration project increases the value of your property. A phone call brings a laugh.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stop being so available and those in authority will realize how valuable your talents are. You get paid for answering a businessman's questions. Prepare the documents you need.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can make an excellent first impression today. Reconcile with a business associate before your disagreement affects profits. Family activities are encouraged this evening. A young person needs reassurance.

Be wary of telling anyone how to play a suit combination. What is the percentage play in one suit alone could be completely wrong when taken in the context of the hand as a whole.

As an example, consider the trump suit on this hand in isolation. The best chance to avoid a spade loser, by a small margin, is to cash the high trumps ("Eight ever, nine never"). Now let's look at the combined North-South assets.

North-South have arrived at four spades after a normal auction and West has led the queen of hearts. Declarer has six sure tricks in the side suits, so he needs only four trump tricks to make his game. Is there any threat to the contract?

Yes. If East gains the lead to push a diamond through the king, declarer is in danger of losing three tricks in that suit.

Forewarned that the normal approach could lead to defeat should steer you to the right line of play. The only suit where East can gain the lead is trumps, so declarer must plan the campaign to keep East off lead. There is a simple way to accomplish that.

Win the king of hearts, cross to the king of spades and lead another spade. When East produces a low trump, finesse the jack! That's an anti-percentage play, but it guarantees the contract. If West produces the lady, you have lost a trick unnecessarily, but you are in complete control. You win any return and take your 10 tricks.

Should the cards lie as in the diagram, the safety play in trumps is necessary to deliver the contract. Had you cashed the king-ace of trumps, East would be able to ruff the third club and shoot the jack of diamonds through, resulting in a one-trick set.

In Marlon Brando's case, clothes don't make the man, fashion connoisseurs say

NEW YORK (AP) — If you cast a jealous eye at the fashionably fit, take heart.

A hefty Marlon Brando was praised in the week's People magazine, but not exactly for his jogging suit, and John Candy got mixed reviews for knitwear.

A panel of five fashion connoisseurs gave their opinions in the magazine's annual review of celebrity attire.

Candy's outfit was compared to "a dad's sweater," by one reviewer. But another said, "One more chin-up and he'd look a lot better." The word on Brando: "It doesn't matter what he wears, even if it is a parachute."

First lady Barbara Bush won praise for her faux pearls, and one panelist gushed over Jackie Onassis as "the hippest woman ever."

Praises also went to Princess Diane — "She's got the legs for it" — and Angela Lansbury — "10 out of 10."

The review of style-makers and breakers dubbed actress Sean Young "the scariest woman in fashion," and panned Roseanne Barr's "Mr. T look."

Actress Kim Basinger's penchant for see-through evening wear is blasted: "Is that a tattoo or is it her lingerie?"

DALLAS (AP) — John W. Dixon, the man who helped E-Systems become a powerful player in the U.S. electronics industry, died Saturday at a Dallas hospital following a two-year battle with cancer. He was 69.

Dixon resigned as chairman and chief executive of the Dallas-based firm in April 1987. After retiring, he served as a consultant and chairman emeritus for the Fortune 500 company that produces high-technology electronics for military intelligence and reconnaissance, electronic warfare, aircraft guidance, navigation communications and data systems.

Dixon became president of E-Systems in 1969, when the company was a small, unprofitable subsidiary of Ling Teamco Vought, now LTV.

By 1971, E-Systems' revenues soared to $168 million and in 1972 it separated from its parent firm.

"He was a man of uncanny perception," said Dr. Le Van Griffis, a longtime associate of Dixon's. "He was gifted at using trends as guidelines for his strategies. He had a sixth sense with which he guided the company."

In 1985, Dixon's salary of $1.7 million made him the highest-paid executive among publicly held U.S. electronics companies.

Dixon was a former economist for the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics and also had taught economics at Mississippi Southern University. He also had served as a manager in the Corvair division of General Dynamics and had worked as deputy controller for the Defense Department before joining Ling Temco Vought in 1962.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Willem Dafoe, who has portrayed a series of tortured souls in movies during the last six years, says he doesn't look for those parts.

"I simply look for characters rich with possibility," he said in an interview published Sunday in The New York Times. When considering a role, though, he said he always asks, "Is this character involved in a struggle?"

The struggles attract the 34-year-old actor, who stars in the new film "Triumph of the Spirit," which took him to a Nazi concentration camp. He plays the role of a Greek Jew and champion boxer who survived incarceration by winning 200 bouts. The film opens Friday in New York and Los Angeles.

The $14 million movie was filmed on location at Auschwitz and neighboring Birkenau in Poland.

"How did it feel to be there? I expected to identify with the horror, but that would have been obscene," Dafoe said. "I'd have been weeping for myself. There was only one response — numbness, a terrific numbness."

Dafoe also has starred in "Platoon," "Mississippi Burning," and "The Last Temptation of Christ."

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Buddy Hackett watched seagulls so much that he learned to look like one.

Hackett

"I was a method seagull," Hackett said. "I climbed up on the window and jumped."

The character of Scuttle the seagull in Disney's new film "The Little Mermaid" was modeled after the comedian.

Hackett studied the birds at Malibu beach near Los Angeles after he signed to provide the voice of the character. He told People magazine in this week's issue that he learned seagulls are "terrorists."

The friendly seagull in the movie was changed after animator David Stephan saw a series of photographs of Hackett making faces like a seagull's.

Scrapping the skinny gull he originally drew, Stephan added a few pounds, endowed the bird with crossed, close-set eyes, and gave it Hackett's tendency of talking out of the side of his mouth.

• • •

FORT LEE, N.J. (AP) — Morton Downey Jr. begins a new talk show tonight, but don't expect the Downey of old.

Downey Jr.

Downey, the 55-year-old former loud-mouthed host of "The Morton Downey Jr. Show," is the conservative voice in "Showdown,' a half-hour program that makes its debut on cable's Consumer News & Business Channel.

CNBC President Michael L. Eskridge said the new show will allow for a lively discussion of issues between the hosts and the guests, with questions from the audience.

But "the histrionics level will be a lot lower" than Downey's old show, he said.

WILMETTE, Ill. (AP) — Who's a Who?

That's the question the editors of "Who's Who in America" must decide as they prepare listings for the 1990-91 edition of the reference book.

Roberts

Mr. T

Actor Eric Roberts will be listed in the new Who's Who. But Mr. T, star of the canceled "A-Team" TV series, will not be. Baseball slugger Jose Canseco of the Oakland A's is a Who, but National League rookie of the year, Jerome Walton, the Chicago Cubs centerfielder, is not.

"Walton was rookie of the year, true," explained John L. Daniels, product manager for Who's Who In America. "But you don't know. What about his sophomore year? What if he fizzles?"

S&L probe reaches Bush family

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, having aired the collapse of Lincoln Savings and Loan Association, is considering probing an even more politically touchy case linked to President Bush's family.

Among the institutions that could be spotlighted next by the committee are Silverado Savings and Loan Association of Denver, declared insolvent by regulators in December 1988.

Neil Bush, the president's son, served on Silverado's board of directors, resigning just after his father won the Republican nomination in 1988 and only four months before the S&L's seizure.

In a drive to oust top thrift regulator M. Danny Wall, Gonzalez conducted six public hearings this fall focusing on regulators' delay in acting against the Irvine, Calif.,-based Lincoln, which is expected to become the nation's largest S&L failure at a cost to taxpayers of $2 billion.

At the last hearing just before Congress recessed for Thanksgiving, Gonzalez, D-Texas, vowed to continue the probe when legislators return in January, expanding it to include other notorious examples of abuse.

"We had scores ... of Lincolns and we're going to look into them. Lincoln is just the first because it was the biggest," he said.

In response to a question from a reporter, Gonzalez said Silverado could be among the failures highlighted at a future hearing. Committee aides have been gathering material on the case.

Silverado was declared insolvent by thrift regulators on Dec. 9, 1988, and taxpayer costs could run as high as $500 million.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., now part of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., attributed the failure to "substantial dissipation of assets due to alleged violations of laws, rules and regulations."

According to government sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, regulators are investigating to determine whether to file a civil suit against Silverado's former officers and directors, which would include Neil Bush.

A new investigative book on the S&L crisis, "Inside Job" by Stephen Pizzo, Mary Fricker and Paul Muolo, cites links between Neil Bush, a director from 1985 until August 1988, and a major customer of Silverado.

Bush's oil and gas company, JNB Exploration, had a $1 million line of credit at Cherry Creek National Bank, which was owned by Bill Walters, who received more than $40 million in loans from Silverado, according to the book.

Silverado also had business ties to Larry Mizel, a prominent Republican who raised $1 million for Ronald Reagan's 1984 campaign.

James Moroney, a former analyst for the Federal Home Loan Bank of Topeka, alleges that regulators held off action against Silverado because of its political connections, the book says.

Aides to Gonzalez said no decision has been made about whether to air the Silverado case in public hearings. The Lincoln sessions — even though they targeted Wall, a Republican — proved more embarrassing for Democrats because they highlighted the efforts of five senators, four of them senior Democrats, to intervene with regulators on Lincoln's behalf.

The president thus far has praised Gonzalez for his bipartisan conduct of the hearings and said he has "not closed the door" on ousting Wall. Aides to Wall speculate that Gonzalez may be holding out the possibility of Silverado hearings as part of his bid to get rid of the regulator.

OPEC fights may end with decade

By BARBARA SHOOK
Hearst News Service

VIENNA — OPEC's last meeting of the decade marked a turning point because a member country acknowledged for the first time since the cartel's founding in 1960 that it cannot produce an unlimited volume of oil and that increasing its capacity is not a national priority.

In the just-concluded OPEC meeting in Vienna, Indonesia declined a production quota increase of 100,000 barrels of oil a day. Oil minister Ginanjar Kartasismita explained that the country's oil fields simply cannot deliver more than about 1.37 million barrels daily.

During the next decade, only about half the members of OPEC will have the surplus oil production capacity to justify pushing for increased sales quotas. This should make for smoother meetings, analysts say, than in the days when all 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were demanding higher quotas.

OPEC officials such as Rilwanu Lukman, oil minister of Nigeria and president of the cartel, previously said some members were nearing output limits. But the Indonesian announcement was surprising because of its timing, Lukman said. It was not expected this year.

Ginanjar said the financial investment required to raise Indonesia's production capacity is not available. Indonesia, he said, has decided to put its limited capital resources into other sectors of the economy where the return on investment will be greater.

Indonesia's decision helped considerably to resolve the ongoing battle among OPEC's other 12 members.

The 100,000 barrels that Indonesia gave up was added to Kuwait's authorized production rate to help satisfy its demand for a quota of 1.5 million barrels per day.

In exchange for the higher ceiling, Kuwait has promised to stop ignoring its OPEC quotas. Since Kuwait has been producing far beyond its authorized rate, the agreement will result in a production cutback of about 700,000 barrels a day.

Lukman said total OPEC output could be closer to 23 million barrels daily than the combined ceiling of 22.09 million barrels because the United Arab Emirates has rejected its allocated volume.

The Emirates are expected to continue producing 1.9 million to 2 million barrels of oil a day. Nevertheless, Lukman said, the accord will

New UAL bid expected this week

CHICAGO (AP) — Three major United Airlines unions have met with officials of parent UAL Corp. to draft a revised buyout proposal, a company spokesman said Sunday. United's flight attendants union said a new offer will come this week.

UAL officials have been negotiating an employee-led buyout with pilots, flight attendants and machinists since last month, when the Coniston Partners investment group began proceedings to oust 13 of UAL's 15 directors, United spokesman Russell Mack said in a telephone interview.

Mack did not say when the last meeting was held or how many meetings there had been.

Rumors about a possible new buyout plan sent UAL stock up $12½ to close at $174 Friday on the New York Stock Exchange, sparking a rally in blue-chip stocks.

A previous buyout attempt led by pilots, senior management and British Airway PLC failed in October when financing for the $6.75 billion offer fell through.

Coniston owns 9.7 percent of UAL stock. The New York-based group is seeking permission from the federal Securities and Exchange Commission to oust the board members and put its own people in control.

The president and vice president of the 14,000-member United Association of Flight Attendants indicated in a telephone message to members Friday that a revised buyout bid would be presented to the flight attendants union Wednesday.

Mack declined to comment on whether an offer would be presented to the flight attendants or other United employees this week.

Association President Patricia Friend and Vice President Carol Holmes also announced their resignation in the message, saying they were stepping aside because two years of negotiations with United had failed to produce a contract.

Telephone calls to representatives of the pilots and machinists unions seeking comment about a buyout proposal were not answered Sunday evening.

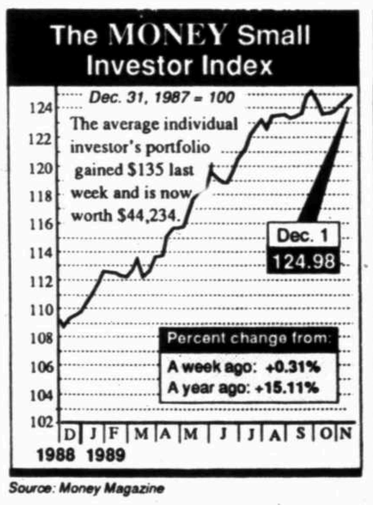

Toyota recalls Lexus models

N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — Toyota Motor Corp. has confirmed that it is recalling all 8,000 of the Lexus LS 400 cars that it has sold in the United States to correct three problems.

A Toyota spokesman said no accidents or injuries had been associated with the reported defects in the luxury sedan, which was introduced two months ago in the United States and sells for about $40,000.

The defects relate to the car's cruise-control mechanism, the brake light in the back window and an alternator cable that connects to the car's battery.

COMPUTER NOTES

Drive failure unlikely with one software

By DENNIS SEVER

Q. I use Wordstar 2000 on an IBM PC-XT with a small hard disk (10 Megabytes). Since I have such a small hard disk I keep all my Wordstar documents on floppy diskettes. The other day when I tried to save an updated document to the floppy, I got an error telling me that I was out of disk space. When I checked the diskette after losing my changes, there was over 300K of free space on the diskette. As far as I can tell, the diskette drive works fine with my other software. Do you think that my Wordstar 2000 has gone bad, or is my diskette drive going bad?

Sever

A. It is very unlikely that a diskette drive will fail with one software and not with others. There are two other situations that could exist that would cause this problem. One, it is possible that your Wordstar 2000 has become corrupted. This however is also somewhat unlikely if this diskette error is the only problem you are having.

Two, and I suspect that what has happened is that your hard disk has filled. Some software, especially word processors will use some system drive space for a swap area, that is a place to temporarily store information. If you have no space, or very little, left on your hard drive then this is what is happening to you. Your error is a result of there being no room for the swap area on the hard disk.

I recommend that you examine your hard disk using the CHKDSK command. If you have less than one Megabyte of free space you should take some files off the hard disk and keep them on floppy diskettes if they can't just be deleted.

Q. Your colleague, Paul, recommended in his column last week that he felt that the 8086/8088 computers were outdated and that everyone should buy 80286's or 80386's. I was really distressed to hear this because I just purchased one of those 8088's for my son, a freshman, to use at Texas Tech University. (This was advice from you earlier this year.) The guy at the computer store said that this was plenty of computer for my son and it was a lot less expensive than than one of those 80286 computers. Have I just wasted $2,000? What can I do?

A. I think that Paul was probably addressing a business audience, or at least those individuals that are serious about computing, and have sophisticated needs.

Rest assured that your son's need for a word processor and spreadsheet are well met and your investment was a solid one. At this time there is very little in the way of software that an undergraduate would want that would require an 80286 to execute. The 80286 would just execute it faster, and for the most part we are not talking about saving hours, just seconds. If your son were going into some business and needed marketing projections, extensive record keeping, CAD/CAM and/or other time consuming applications, then I would certainly stand on Paul's advice to buy the 80X86 computer first, but the normal college student needs only a word processor, a spreadsheet and a decent printer. I'll admit that the scenario is changing and that three years from now an 80386 may be the student sized computer, but for now I believe it is overkill.

I have recently added a 3.5 inch diskette drive to my PC compatible as drive B. It works OK if it is reading or writing to an already formatted diskette but it will not format a diskette properly. No matter what options I give the FORMAT command, if it works it formats the diskette to 360KB.

A friend told me to add "DEVICE=DRIVER.SYS" to my CONFIG.SYS file but that seems to have no effect. What can I do?

DRIVPARM *A*A*A/d:1

where the '*A' represents the CONTROL-A keystroke. Be very careful to duplicate this line exactly paying attention to the single space before the first CONTROL-A and the lack of any more spaces in the command. Note also that you will probably have to use EDLIN, ECHO or the COPY statement to insert the CONTROL-A's as most text editors and word processors don't handle control characters very well. If this doesn't work then I suggest that you contact the vendor that sold you the drive and request some technical support.

Crude futures continue to rally

From Staff Reports

Crude oil futures rose another 25 cents this morning from Friday's close to rest at $20.55 per barrel at mid-morning for West Texas Intermediate.

This continues a drive upward that began Thursday and includes a gain of $1.15 over the past two and a half days.

Posted prices began rising late Friday afternoon. Permain Corp. lifted its posted price for West Texas Intermediate Crude to $19.25, as did most other oil companies. Many of the companies increased their postings 50 cents over the past week.

On Friday, the January contract price of West Texas Intermediate Crude oil, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, added 41 cents to close at $20.30 per barrel, raising its two-day gain to 90 cents. Contracts for delivery in February through April finished with similarly sized increases.

Wholesale home heating oil lead the rally on Friday, with the contract for January delivery of No. 2 heating oil spuring $1.10 to 62.91 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange, bringing its gain over the past two sessions to 2.87 cents. Contracts for delivery during February through April also finished with strong increases.

Dollar falls in calm trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell in early European trading today. Gold prices also fell as much as $5.25 an ounce.

Foreign currency dealers said trading was calm, with most attention on the West German mark, following the weekend summit meeting in Malta between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

EXCHANGE RATES

- 1.7755 West German marks
- 1.5920 Swiss francs
- 6.0635 French francs
- 2.0038 Dutch guilders
- 1,308.50 Italian lire
- 1.1650 Canadian dollars

"The summit has given the mark another boost," said a trader at a U.S. bank in Frankfurt, citing hopes the continuing thaw between East and West will create new business opportunities for West German industry.

"As long as the focus is on the mark, the dollar remains under pressure," he said.

A trader in Milan said the market is "very lethargic with very little activity ... The absence of factors to consider is preoccupying."

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 0.40 yen to a closing 143.48 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 143.30 yen.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.5685 to buy one pound, compared with $1.5665 late Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $408.75 a troy ounce, down from $414.00 bid late Friday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $409.90.

In Zurich, the bid price was $409.75, down from $415.00 bid late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.79 to close at a bid $409.31.

Silver fell in London to a bid price of $5.66 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $5.70.

Stocks surge on summit hopes

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market surged Friday, lifted by a surprise afternoon rally that drew strength from investor hopes for lower interest rates and a promising U.S.Soviet summit this weekend.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 41.38 points to 2,747.65, the 10th highest close ever.

The intensity of the rally, which sent the Dow average up more than 50 points before it eased back, took many market observers by surprise.

"I'm as shocked as anybody," said Brad Weeks, head of equity trading for Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by nearly 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 990 issues up, 531 down and 475 unchanged.

"Usually markets do well prior to summits," said Larry Wachtel, analyst with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "I don't know what the market expects. But there's always a gamble that something good will come out of it."

A.C. Moore, director of research at Argus Research, said investors may have been encouraged by the outlook for cuts in government outlays for defense.

"These meetings could lead to an easing of the deficits that would cause interest rates to go down," Moore said.

The market also got help from economic reports that pointed to a sluggish fourthquarter economy. The news heightened expectations that the Federal Reserve will cut short-term interest rates to stimulate growth.

The government reported that its chief economic forecasting gauge, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, fell 0.4 percent in October, the sixth month of declines or no gain this year.

That report was followed by the Purchasing Management Association's November report showing a decline in the group's index to 46.6 percent from 47.6 percent in October. A reading below 50 percent indicates a contraction in the nation's manufacturing sector.

Wall Street will let bankers trade stocks

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Wall Street leaders declared an end to their lengthy battle to keep banks out of the stocks and bonds business, proposing to junk the law that has governed the nation's basic banking structure since the Depression.

Directors of the Securities Industry Association, at the trade group's annual convention, on Friday endorsed a proposal for new legislation to let subsidiaries of banks "engage in a broad range of securities and securities-related activities."

At the same time, the SIA said its plan would let brokers engage in consumer banking businesses and join banks in having access to the Federal Reserve's banking system.

Building gains boost construction spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first gain in single-family home building in nine months helped boost construction spending in October, the government said in a report suggesting lower interest rates are helping end a construction slump.

The Commerce Department said Friday that spending rose 1 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $420.1 billion.

The increase followed no change in September and a 1.5 percent gain in August. Construction spending fell in July and June.

Small businesses bail out of pension plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of small businesses across the country are ditching their employee pension plans, saying federal rules make the benefit programs too costly and complex to maintain.

Employers claim congressional tinkering with a 1974 pension law has dramatically increased the paperwork, accountants and administrative personnel needed to comply with the law.

"It's impossible," said Ronald Turner, a third generation lumber company owner in Clarksburg, W.Va. "We're going to drop the plan."

Alvin D. Lurie, a former assistant commissioner for the Internal Revenue Service, says Turner is typical of small business owners who tried but failed to keep current with the ever-changing provisions of the 1974 Employee Retirement Income Security Act.

"It has become much, much too complicated," said Lurie, now chairman of the New York Bar Association's Special Committee on Pension Simplification. "It's frightful. People can't afford it, don't understand it."

A San Antonio, Texas, attorney who handles the pension plans for several hundred small businesses said he is advising his clients to drop them. A Santa Ana, Calif., plan administrator said about 30 percent of the small businesses she works with are terminating their programs.

But some say the business owners are simply using regulations as an excuse.

"I don't think it's that clear cut that the (congressional) revisions have led small businesses to drop their plans," a Senate Labor Committee aide said, asking that she not be further identified. "I'm skeptical because they can go into simplified plans."

Many of the employers bailing out of the federally insured pension plans are setting up profit-sharing or other programs seen as less beneficial to employees because they usually require the workers to put up some of the money.

The pension law, known as ERISA, was enacted by Congress to protect the 76 million American workers with pension plans and their $2 trillion in pension assets. Always complex, the law saw a series of amendments over the years that proved, in some cases, expensive or frustrating for employers.

The Labor Department's inspector general's office, cautioning that the pension system is open to fraud and embezzlement, wants Congress to enact additional laws to prevent possible abuses.

"I think the people writing the laws are trying to be fair and equitable, but they don't understand what the costs mean," said Paula Calamafde, a tax lawyer and head of the Small Business Council of America.

Turner, who plans to give his employees the cash due to them from the pension fund, said he always tried to keep up with the laws. The required paperwork grew from 35 pages to 77 pages this year, he said.

Then the IRS came in to check out his plan and disqualified it on a technicality. His report lacked this phrase: "These are the rules we will follow if the plan becomes top heavy," a measure designed to prevent employers from favoring top management.

"We felt like the Gestapo had been turned loose on us," he said. "It's not fair. I have always told the Internal Revenue I'll do whatever I have to do to stay qualified."

The Social Security Administration says the number of full-time workers with employer-financed pension plans fell to 46 percent last year, down from 50 percent in 1979. Only 29 percent of the workers in companies employing between 25 and 49 workers have such plans, while 67 percent of those in companies of 250 workers or more are covered.

The federal insurer of private pension plans, the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation, received 10,790 notices of planned termination in fiscal 1988. But the organization, already $1.5 billion in the red, does not separate large from small businesses.

Business owners are required to notify the IRS, the PBGC and all plan participants before they end pension plans.

Chet Salkind, executive director of the New York-based American Society of Pension Actuaries, said there has been a constant decline in employer-financed plans and an increase in programs in which employees contribute, such as the 401 (k) savings plans.

"From the employee angle there's a tremendous difference," Salkind explained. "Usually it's employee money and not a guaranteed amount."

Donna Hopson, a plan administrator and president of the Santa Ana, Calif.-based National Institute of Pension Administrators, said her office used to see about four plan terminations a year but that this year there have been about 60 terminations among her 250 clients.

Employers who end the plans pay their workers the amount accrued, but Ms. Hopson said bailing out undermines the nation's retirement program.

"The feedback I get is they take the money and spend it," she said.

Ms. Hopson puts the blame on laws that add to the cost of compliance, requiring detailed reports, accountants, actuaries and plan administrators.

"We can't spend the amount of time necessary to keep the plan updated and comply with the provisions," said a Maryland employer who spoke on condition of anonymity because she is still in the process of terminating her plan. "It took two months of my time."

A Virginia restaurant owner, who asked not to be further identified because "I don't trust the IRS," said he dropped his employer-paid plan and set up a profit-sharing program.

"With a profit-sharing plan I can put into it whatever I want," he said, adding that the government required him to put $113,000 into his employer-paid pension plan last year.

Futures trader pleads guilty

N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — Melanie Kosar, a trader indicted in the federal investigation of the Chicago futures pits, pleaded guilty Friday to two counts of prearranged trading, the U.S. attorney's office in Chicago said.

Ms. Kosar faces a maximum sentence of six years in jail and a $350,000 fine. She must also make restitution to customers.

She has agreed to cooperate with the government and to testify, if necessary, at any trials. Typically, such arrangements are taken into account and result in lighter sentences.

In her plea, Ms. Kosar admitted that "she was cheating and defrauding" customers by engaging in prearranged trading at the Chicago Board of Trade's Treasury bond pit. Such trades prevent customers from getting the best possible price in their transactions.

Ms. Kosar also acknowledged her participation with many other traders in the Treasury bond pit "in an ongoing scheme in which brokers deliberately converted customer funds and market opportunities to their own use," the guilty plea said.

The scheme included changing the price of previously executed orders and disavowing trades if the market moved to make the trader's position unprofitable. Neither Ms. Kosar nor her attorney, James Fox, could be reached for comment.

In addition to Ms. Kosar, 12 traders and a clerk have pleaded guilty to charges resulting from the Chicago investigations.

OPEC

take enough excess volume off the market to support prices for OPEC oil at about $18 a barrel.

"You have to look at the real arithmetic. It is going to cut 500,000 barrels a day," he said.

Recent estimates indicate the 13 OPEC members are supplying about 23.5 million barrels a day.

Other OPEC members viewed Indonesia's action favorably but with varying degrees of enthusiasm, said Bahman Karbassioun, a Vienna-based consultant and former OPEC official.

"The gesture has been made, and that gesture is very important," Karbassioun said. "Now that the precedent has been set, it will be easier for others to acknowledge, especially if they get something on the price."

He expects Algeria and Libya to follow Indonesia's initiative soon. Domestic political reasons prevented either from doing so at this meeting, Karbassioun said, although he said Algeria cannot deliver its new quota. Algerian oil minister Sadek Boussena denied his country cannot produce the 827,000 barrels a day allowed in its new quota.

"We have more capacity," he said, but declined to say how much.

A source close to the Saudi Arabian delegation said oil minister Sheik Hisham Nazer was pleased with Indonesia's action.

"It recognizes the reality which some others have not yet acknowledged," the Saudi source said.

This meeting does not mark the end of OPEC's disputes over individual production quotas, but it is a start, Lukman said.

Another event at the meeting also seems a harbinger of changes in OPEC and the global oil market.

Representatives of the Independent Petroleum Exporting Countries, or IPEC, were given official recognition for the first time. Officials from Alaska, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma in the United States, along with those from several foreign nations, were issued special badges by the OPEC secretariat. Among those wearing the green IPEC badges were three representatives of the Soviet Union.

"This is part of our effort to become more involved in the world economy," said Andrei Y. Bugrov, division chief of the department of international economic relations in the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Irish wits abuse female dignity in naming, display of statues

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ireland puts its male statues on pedestals. The female images are displayed at street level, then the wits go to work at shredding what dignity remains.

Dublin's bronze women are familiarly known as "The Tart with the Cart," "The Hags with the Bags," and "The Floozie in the Jacuzzi."

The statues, which have appeared in the past two years, are accessible, street-level images intended to make amends for the past male bias in the capital's public sculpture.

The "Hags," resting on a bench beside their bronze shopping bags at the foot of the Ha'penny Bridge, are two anonymous shoppers.

The "Tart" is a well-built lass inspired by sweet Molly Malone, who "wheeled her wheelbarrow, through streets broad and narrow, crying "Cockles and mussels, alive, alive, o!"

The "Floozie," recumbent in flowing streams, represents the River Liffey, recalling James Joyce's "Anna Livia." But "Floozie" she is, and much more.

Ailbhe Smyth, writing in The Irish Review, catalogued other aliases: "Bidet Mulligan," "The Skivvy in the Sink," "Anorexia," "Anna Livia Plurability," and, scandalously, "The Whore (pronounced 'hoor') in the Sewer."

Ms. Smyth, a lecturer at University College and head of the Women's Studies Forum, detected "a sign of difficulty and fragmentation but also of possibility," and "the singular diversities and diverse singularities of Irish women."

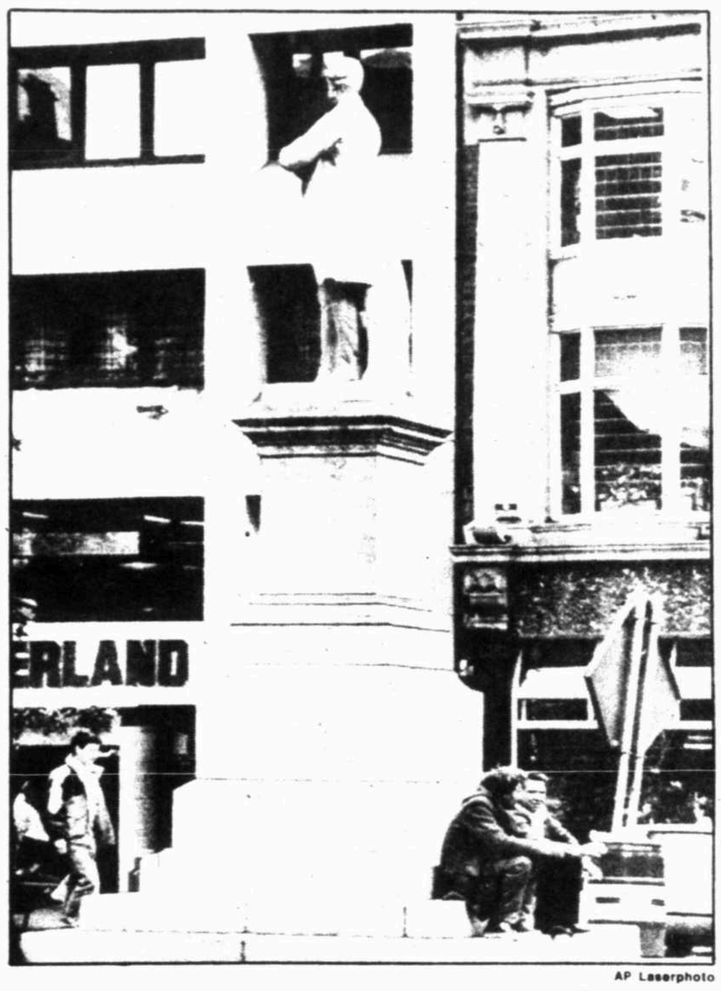

"Dubliners have appropriated the monument in their midst through a multiple re-naming game, manifestly pleasurable, which reverberates with a plurality of significations, often contradictory (but 'dreams go by contraries') infinitely translating travesty," she explained.

Anna Livia may be the most abused by the wits, but recent letters to The Irish Times indicate Molly Malone, who stands at the foot of the Grafton Street shopping strip and opposite Trinity College, is more controversial.

Letter of Sept. 22, from the Dublin City Center Business Association: "Its unwelcome imposition ..."

Letter of Oct. 2, from the sculptor Jean Rynhart: "Breasts would not have shocked 17th century Dubliners. ... Molly's healthy diet of fish, and strenuous daily exercise routine pushing approximately 3 hundredweight around, would have assisted her development into a fine strong girl. ... She is a Restoration citizen placed accurately in 17th century Dublin."

Letter of Oct. 7: "Is not the design of Molly Malone's barrow . .. completely wrong? Up to 10 years or so ago a coster's barrow was of a design specific to Dublin. It was of wicker construction with three wooden wheels with steel tires."

Letter of Oct. 9: "A masterpiece in the classical mode."

Letter of Oct. 12: "How do we know that Molly was Church of Ireland and not Roman Catholic; how do we know that she was a 'Restoration citizen' and not of the 18th or 19th centuries?"

Ms. Rynhart, the sculptor, has proposed statues of Joyce, W.B. Yeats and Oscar Wilde. You can almost hear the brainwheels turning.

Children of Auburn fans have unusual names

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Schoolteacher Kay White says strangers often mention those "horrible" parents who live in her neighborhood.

"People come up to me and say, 'Have you heard about those people here in Vestavia that named their children WarEagle and Tiger?' " she said. "When I tell them it's my children, they nearly die with embarrassment."

"My husband and I met on a blind date while we were going to school at Auburn," Mrs. White said. "Needless to say, we're big Auburn fans."

The elder daughter is known as Pepper, but she wishes people would call her WarEagle, her mother said. The youngest daughter has always gone by Tiger.

"The Auburn fans think it's pretty cool," said Pepper WarEagle, an eighth grader.

Tiger, a fourth-grader, is proud of her name. "It's unusual," she said. "No one else has that name."
