They'll be calling 'em all to Miami next week

By TOM ALLSTON
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Dancing, entertainment, barbecue and a unique and often funny competition will highlight Miami's third annual National Cow Calling Contest, scheduled the weekend of June 4-5.

The two-day festival last year drew an estimated 2,500-3,000 people, according to Miami Chamber of Commerce secretary Vernon Cook.

Activities will get under way Friday evening, June 4, with the "Frontier Follies" — a variety show and style show at 8 p.m. at the Miami High School auditorium.

Saturday's schedule begins with a Pioneer Roundup at the Miami Community Center. A barbecue with beef, beans and the trimmings is set for noon.

The cow-calling competition itself is to start at 1 p.m., when the leather-lunged competitors will vie for plaques and gift certificates. Also at 1 p.m., team roping will be held at the Miami Roping Arena.

At 9 p.m., a western dance will feature Frankie McWhorter and the Over the Hill Gang at Roberts County Barn.

"It's kind of an open house weekend," Cook pointed out, "when a lot of bull gets shot and a lot of visiting goes on. It's a lot of fun."

For those planning to attend the National Cow Calling Contest, further information is available from the Miami Chamber of Commerce, (806) 868-3191.

'83 budget collapses when House falls on it

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to write a budget for the 1983 fiscal year collapsed in chaos Thursday and early Friday when a rebellious House rejected all three plans — and one last minute fallback — presented to it.

The final blow came as the House rejected the pleas of its leaders and the original, unamended budget resolution that was drafted by the House Budget Committee. Rejection came on a 265-159 vote with Republicans almost solidly opposed to the plan and Democrats badly divided.

Earlier in the lengthy late-night session, the House had rejected a proposal endorsed by President Reagan, a budget submitted by moderates of both parties, and a Democratic-sponsored initiative.

Rejection of all possible plans sent the whole process back to the Budget Committee.

Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., chairman of that committee, suggested that the panel meet in an "informal, off-the-record" session Friday in hopes of working out some compromise.

Both House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., and Republican Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., made unavailing personal appeals to the House to put aside differences and accept the fallback plan. Acceptance would at least have put the House into a conference committee with the Senate, which has passed its own version of the budget.

Is anyone missing an Ah - oo - gah horn?

Bargain hunters might take note of an upcoming Pampa Police Department auction of abandoned or unclaimed property scheduled for Tuesday, June 1, at 2 p.m. outside the city hall. Among the many items to be sold are several which suggest untold drama.

"1 Ladies Bowling Ball, Shoes and Bag," suggests that someone may have bowled an all-time bad line and given up on the spot.

One hopes no crisis followed the loss of "1 Diaper Bag Rust in color."

While no parent is surprised at "1 Pair black shoes children's size" or

"1 Child's white windbreaker" turning up unclaimed, the loss of "1 Ah - OOO - Gah Horn" is rather mystifying.

And you could almost open a casino with "1 Card Case with 2 decks of cards," "1 Poker Chip rack with chips," "1 Plastic Box with deck of cards" and "1 Radio Shack Black Jack 21 Game."

Bicycles, watches, radios, tools and auto parts predictably abound on the list, along with more exotic items. It's impossible to know whether items were stolen and recovered, or simply lost — not even in the case of:

Arrests made in 'Ball Peen Hammer' holdups

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

Arlen Scott Thompson, 19, of 411 Texas, and Debra Sue Hasty, 23, of 901 E. Albert, were arrested in Pampa Thursday and charged with aggravated robbery in connection with three "ball peen hammer bandit" robberies of Allsup's Convenience Stores in the area March 28.

Bond for was set for Thompson at $30,000 and for Hasty at $25,000. Wesley Keith Crow of Canyon and Laura Youngquist, 18, of Abilene are also in custody in their home cities in connection with the robberies, according to Canyon police.

The four are accused of holding up stores in Pampa, White Deer and Canyon, using a ball peen hammer and argon as weapons.

Arrests of the group came after Crow and three others were arrested by Canyon police at about 11 p.m. Monday in connection with a separate incident, the Monday morning burglary of a karate school in Canyon.

Crow named Thompson, Hasty and Youngquist as suspects in the Allsup's robberies upon questioning, according to Canyon police.

Thompson was arrested about 3:30 p.m. Thursday by Pampa Police Detectives Ken Neal and Ron Howell, and Neal arrested Hasty at about 11 a.m. Thursday.

Youngquist is being held in Abilene pending extradition to Pampa.

The series of robberies began in Pampa at about 2:30 a.m. March 28, when Allsup's No. 77 employee Margaret L. Knight reported a man entered the store and ordered her to the back room.

When she questioned him, he turned his back and said "See that hammer in my hip pocket? I'm going to rob you, go to the back room."

The man reportedly took about $85 from the cash register of the store and left. Three others were apparently waiting for him in a vehicle outside, and the group drove to White Deer and then to Canyon and performed similar robberies, police said.

According to Canyon police, two men entered the Canyon store, one carrying a handgun. The man carrying the hammer knocked the telephone off the wall with it, and the two took from $5 to $60 dollars from one of the cash registers, it was reported.

Dollars down the drain?

Why can't we stay on well water?

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

Pampa voters decided about 20 years ago to look to Lake Meredith for city water supplies; and if today's Pampans wanted to change to well water only, citizens still would pay for the lake water obligation until the year 2011, according to City Manager Mack Wofford.

In 1961, Pampa voters approved joining the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority by a five-to-one margin, Wofford said. That approval obligated the city to a 50-year contract for the authority's water supply.

"We must make our contractual payment, even if we don't take any water," Wofford said. He said Pampa's payment for being a water authority member city increases $5,000 per year, until it will reach a maximum of $233,000 per year in 1988.

With 8,600 customers on the city system, payment to the water authority just for membership costs about $27 per customer per year.

"I don't know if we could, or if we would want to break the contract," Wofford said.

In addition to the fee for belonging to the authority, the 13 cities on the CRMWA system must pay a percentage of O & M (operation and maintenance) and electricity charges. Wofford said that payment is based on the amount of water each city uses. Pampa pays about seven percent of CRMWA's O & M expenses.

Pampa is presently using well water only, while the reservoir for Borger and Pampa lake water is drained and cleaned. According to a water authority official, it will take at least one more week to finish the project and restore lake water to Pampa.

The reservoir is being cleaned and treated with dry chlorine to attempt to correct a bad taste and odor condition, which developed in the reservoir about two months ago.

While the Pampans drink clean — tasting well water, some have wondered why the city cannot keep the well water pumping and leave Meredith water in the lake.

"It is not an easy matter. There would be a considerable increase in the cost of water," Wofford said about the continued use of well water.

"We certainly could not meet peak demand with our current well capacity," he said. Nine city wells can produce about five or six million gallons of water per day, enough to meet present demand, according to Wofford. He said Pampa's peak demand during the summer is about 10 million gallons.

He said to meet this peak water demand with well water, the city would need to drill more wells. "An engineering study would be required — we would need to secure water rights and drill more wells," the city manager said.

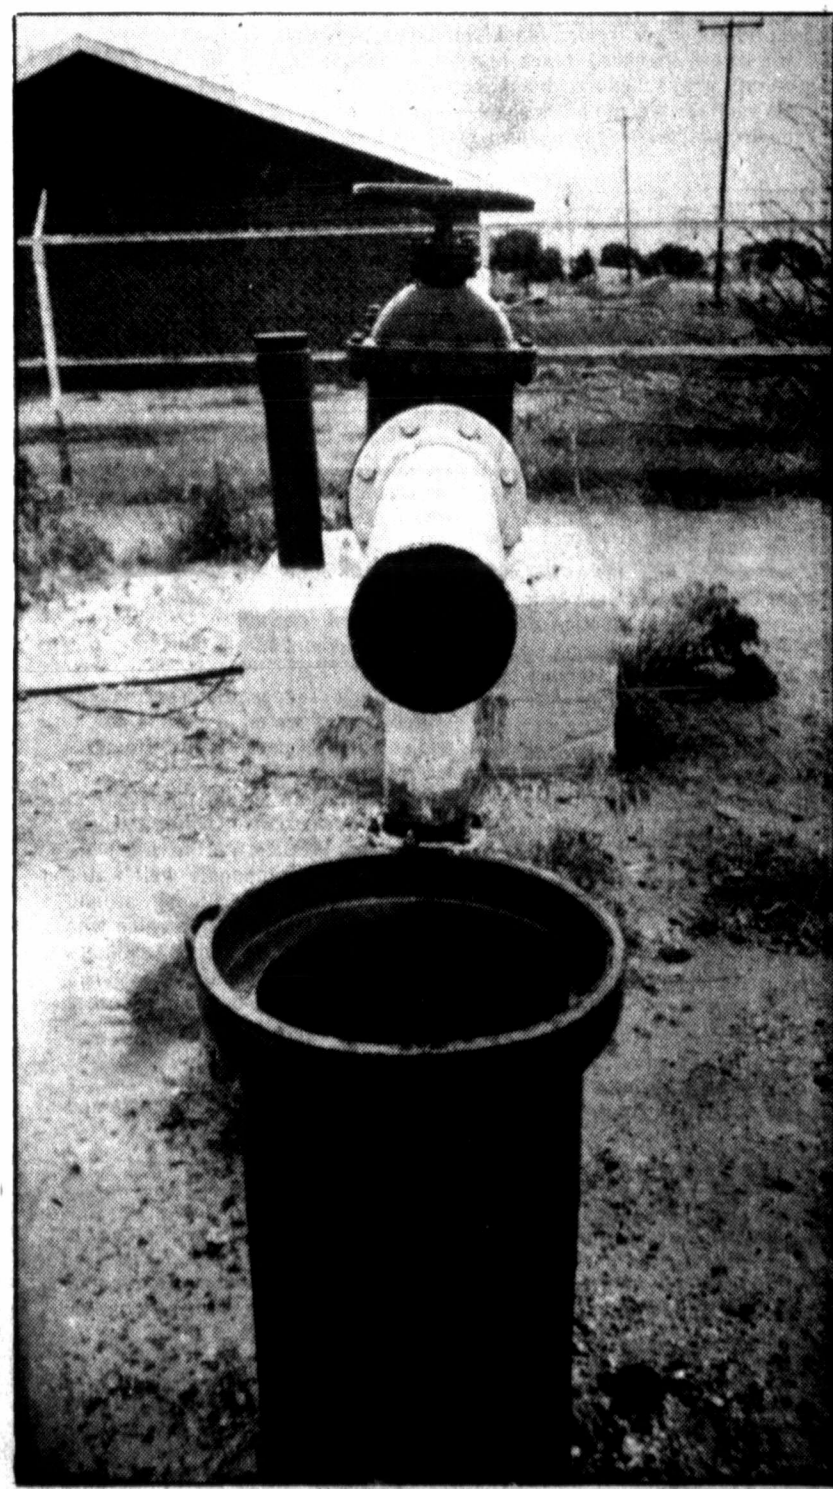

"Of course, that's assuming the Ogallala aquifer will continue to produce water for future years," he said.

The Ogallala aquifer is a giant underground lake that is tapped for irrigation and drinking. Water officials say the aquifer is being rapidly depleted, and future water supplies for areas that use the aquifer has become a hot political issue.

Pampa water official Gene Edmonson said Pampa's largest water well has "a 50-horsepower electric motor and can produce about 800 or 900 gallons of water per minute.

That translates to about 1,296,000 gallons per day at maximum capacity. Based on present well production of 5 or 6 million gallons per day, Pampa would need to drill about four or five more big wells to meet peak demand with 100 percent well water.

The number of wells needed is variable because Wofford said well production "drops off when it operates in a sustained, 365 days per year basis."

Edminson said he estimates large municipal wells now cost about $100,000 each.

Four more huge wells could produce a maximum of about 5,184,000 gallons of water per day; five more might produce 6,480,000.

Cost per Pampa water customer to buy four new wells would be about $450; five new wells figure at $58.13 per customer. Not included in the water well figures are cost to secure water rights, field study, and maintenance and operation of existing and future wells.

Continued payment to CRMWA amounts to about $27 per customer per year.

The figures suggest that a permanent switch to well water in Pampa would add at least $150 per year to customer's water bills.

Wofford points to the situation in Canyon, which uses well water and does not belong to CRMWA, to illustrate problems with Panhandle well water supplies. "They are running around trying to buy water from anyone who will sell to them," he said. He said city officials there now wish they had joined the system when the opportunity arose years ago.

Water officials began the cleanup operation at the Pampa - Borge reservoir when they decided state and odor problems were caused by substances produced by microorganisms living in the tank.

A contract expert previously said the substances, which he identified as tricyclic alcohols, do not oxidize with other chemicals; hence, except for waiting on Mother Nature, little can be done to permanently correct the problem.

The expert said taste and odor problems are common to all surface reservoirs in Texas, and the problems can be seasonal or permanent.

Edminson believes the lake water to Pampa will be good again when the cleanup job is finished. "There's not a thing in the world wrong with that lake water. When they get it cleaned, it will be just fine," he said.

Periodic bouts with taste and odor problems in Meredith water may be a price Pampans must pay for future water supplies, after the well runs dry.

Pope lands in London, pleads for peace in Falkland Island dispute

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Pope John Paul II arrived in Britain Friday on a historic first visit by a Roman Catholic pontiff and made an immediate plea for peace in the Falkland Islands.

As British troops fought to expand their Falklands beachhead, the pontiff said, "This tragic situation has been one of most serious concern to me... It has claimed numerous lives and has even threatened to expand to still more dreadful proportions."

The pontiff recalled his repeated pleas for a cease-fire and said: "As I stand here today, I renew my heartfelt appeal, and I pray that such a settlement of the dispute will soon be reached."

After his Alitalia Boeing 727 touched down at Gatwick Airport, the pontiff appeared at the plane's door, made the sign of the cross, then strode down the arrival ramp and kissed the ground, as he has done on each of his trips abroad.

Cardinal Basil Hume, primate of England and Wales, led a select welcoming party of 2,500 Britons invited to the airport to greet the pope under bright, sunny skies.

The public was barred from the arrival area, an example of the stringent security precautions being taken by Scotland Yard to safeguard the pope, who has twice been the target of assassins. No open motorcade from the airport was planned. The pope was to take British Rail's special royal train into London's Victoria Station.

None of the pope's 11 previous trips abroad were so fraught with potential political and religious conflict as this one.

The six-day visit, planned for two years, was almost cancelled because of the outbreak of war between Britain and mostly Catholic Argentina over the Falklands. To appease the Argentines, the pope hurriedly scheduled a visit to them on June 10 and canceled all meetings with British political leaders including Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

The visit will be "strictly pastoral, in no way political — an incessant prayer for peace," the pope said earlier this week in a letter to Argentina's President Leopoldo Galtieri.

Leaders of the Church of England hailed the papal visit as a giant step of encouragement to all non-Catholic Christians toward eventual reunion with Rome.

Some militant Protestant groups, adhering to the centuries-old tradition of hostility to "popery," planned hostile demonstrations at each of the nine cities to be visited by the pontiff: London, Canterbury, Coventry, Manchester, Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Cardiff, and York.

On his first day in Britain, John Paul was to pay a courtesy call on Queen Elizabeth II, the temporal head of the Church of England, at Buckingham Palace; hold services at two Roman Catholic cathedrals and address his British bishops at a private dinner.

The pope will underscore the importance he attaches to improving relations with the Church of England by going to Canterbury Cathedral, the Anglican mother church, Saturday to join Runcie in a "Celebration of Faith" service to be attended by Prince Charles, the heir to the throne.

Gas for summer driving should not be problem

By MATT VANCEY

Associated Press Writer

With the peak driving season beginning this Memorial Day weekend, the oil industry says there's no cause for concern about gasoline shortages this summer. But prices are rising again.

The industry's upbeat outlook for summer gasoline supplies comes despite declines in refiners' stockpiles, reimposition of allocations by several oil companies and speculation that motorists may travel more between now and Labor Day than they did last summer.

Meanwhile, analysts say retail prices for gasoline at the pump have been increasing but they still are not as high as last year.

The American Petroleum Institute, the industry's chief lobbyist here, said there will be no shortages because there are still surpluses of unrefined crude oil and plenty of refinery capacity to convert it into gasoline if needed.

"We know of no motorist in any part of the country who will have trouble buying gasoline during normal business hours this summer," Charles J. DiBona, the institute's president, said Thursday.

DiBona said U.S. oil companies now have a 50 million barrel excess of crude oil that could be processed into an additional 40 million to 80 million gallons of gasoline a day by refineries now running at only 65 percent capacity. Those refineries are now producing about 250 million gallons of gasoline a day.

He also cited the 255 million barrels of crude that the government has in its Strategic Petroleum Reserve — something that didn't even exist in the last summer shortages of 1979.

Only a major political disruption such as the 1973 Arab oil boycott or massive breakdowns at the nation's refineries could cause serious problems, he said. But he also noted that the nation is now importing only half the oil it was in 1978.

The institute reported earlier this month that refineries in April increased their shipments of gasoline to wholesalers by 1 percent, the first time in three years that demand has been greater than year-before levels.

But DiBona said that doesn't mean that consumer demand is up. Because of price increases the past month, the nation's 10,000 wholesalers and 190,000 gasoline stations may be stockpiling gasoline in anticipation of further price increases, he said.

"There's a lot of speculation that people are going to go out and do a lot more driving this summer, but we don't know that," DiBona said. "It's very competitive out there and that suggests there's plenty of gasoline available."

The nation's primary stocks of refined gasoline have dropped from a 41-day supply in May 1981 to a 31-day supply as of last week.

British troops advance under a heavy barrage

By The Associated Press

Argentine warplanes attacked British troops pushing out from their Falkland Islands beachhead, the Defense Ministry reported Friday, and the British Broadcasting Corp. said British forces ran into fierce Argentine resistance on the ground.

The ministry also said British Harrier jets stepped up attacks today on the airfield at Stanley, the Falklands capital.

The brief communique gave no details of the Argentine or British raids. It was the first official British confirmation of Argentine air raids aimed at blocking the British drive off the beach at San Carlos.

Earlier, the BBC, citing unofficial reports, said British troops ran into stiff Argentine resistance Thursday as they pushed toward Darwin in a bid to secure one leg of their two-pronged assault on Stanley.

The BBC said paratroopers opened fire from high ground on the estimated 600 Argentine troops at Darwin, about 20 miles south of Britain's San Carlos beachhead, and at nearby Goose Green, site of a key island airstrip.

The Argentine defenders put up fierce resistance, the BBC said. It gave no details.

The Times of London said helicopters were ferrying troops under cover of darkness for a "big push" to Darwin and Goose Green. Another British press report said the attackers might try to bottle up the Argentine defenders and push on to the capital, 50 miles to the northeast.

Pampa get three inches from storm

An intense rainstorm dumped up to three inches of water on parts of the Pampa vicinity Thursday, accompanied by damaging high winds and several accidents.

Heaviest rain reported came in Shamrock, where the storm "ran the gauges over," according to reports, with 3 inches measured in one location. Two minor traffic accidents in Shamrock were blamed on weather conditions.

The Wheeler - Mobeetie - Briscoe area experienced violent winds along with their precipitation. Three sheds were destroyed near Briscoe, according to reports, and the winds at Mobeetie uprooted several big trees. Mobeetie's winds were described as "pretty scary," according to one witness. "They came at us from all directions for about 10 minutes."

At White Deer, a possible funnel cloud passed over the town, amid high directional winds.

Special session due to end today

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A spurt of Senate action, including completion of its main business, put legislators in position today to finish a special session in five days.

"Most of the work shifted to the House, which scheduled a 10 a.m. opening, an hour earlier than the Senate.

The goal was to adjourn by Friday night and get home for the Memorial Day weekend.

Senators approved four proposed constitutional amendments Thursday, including one to repeal the state property tax, and voted to spend $50 million to speed up construction of state prison cells.

It was estimated that 4,600 additional prison beds would be ready by the end of 1982.

Money for college construction and settling differences in what senators and House members want to spend at once to ease prison overcrowding appeared to be the major items of unfinished business.

The House, however, still had to approve three of the constitutional proposals that cleared the Senate to put them on the Nov. 2 general election ballot.

Clements called the special session to repeal the 10-cent per $100 valuation property tax, but he also said he wanted legislators to find construction money for 17 colleges that had relied on the tax.

On Monday, he authorized lawmakers to see what they could do about overcrowded prisons and a few other issues.

The Senate defeated an attempt by Sen. Carl Parker on Thursday to substitute a 3-cent property tax, which would be phased out in building a $2 billion college construction fund for colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M University systems.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said senators had told him privately that his proposal was the "easiest" and "best" way to finance college construction, but they feared political opponents might use a tax vote against them in November.

"I want to serve notice to the people of Texas that what you're about to witness is a case of politicians rising above principle for the sake of politics," Parker said, then watched as his measure failed 23-8.

The Senate approved the proposal to repeal the tax, 30-1, with Peyton McKnight, a lameduck Tyler Democrat, casting the lone "no" vote.

House members had adopted the measure, 132-14, on Tuesday, and it now goes on the November ballot.

The state property tax has not been collected since 1979 when the Legislature tried to eliminate it by lowering the assessment ratio to such a negligible figure.

A pending lawsuit contends that the tax could only be repealed by a constitutional amendment, which requires a statewide vote.

Senators also voted Thursday to raise the legal limit on interest rates for certain government bonds, to allow the state to take over sole funding of some welfare programs if federal funds are withdrawn and to exempt farm tools from property taxes.

The bond proposal would raise the maximum interest rate from 6 percent to 12 percent, or even higher by a vote of the Legislature. A Senate committee heard testimony Wednesday that nearly $219 million in water improvement bonds are going to waste because 6 percent is too low to attract buyers.

Also authorized but unissued because of the 6 percent limitation are $57.3 million in park development bonds and $36.2 million in college student loan bonds.

Lawsuit objects to roadblocks

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Saturation roadblocks used by police agencies violate the constitutional protection against unreasonable search and seizure, the American Civil Liberties Union says in a lawsuit.

The ACLU filed the lawsuit Thursday in U.S. District Court on behalf of 10 people who were among those stopped at a roadblock on Interstate 40 near Forrest City on May 3 and 4. Police stopped about 7,500 vehicles during the 24-hour roadblock.

During the traffic check, police arrested nine people for drunken driving, 33 for speeding, 33 for other traffic infractions, 62 for vehicle equipment problems, 49 for drug infractions, 29 for other criminal activities. Officers also arrested eight aliens for being in the state illegally.

The lawsuit filed for four Arkansans, two Texans and two Tennesseans asks the court to declare that saturation enforcement roadblocks are illegal. It asks that they be outlawed.

Defendants are the state police, the state crime laboratory, Highway Police Division of the state Highway and Transportation Department, National Auto Theft Bureau, Blytheville police and the St. Francis County Sheriff's Department.

The lawsuit says the Fourth and 14th Amendment rights of drivers and passengers were violated because cars were stopped and searched without probable cause.

It says the commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution was violated because the roadblock unreasonably restrained the free mobility of motorists in interstate commerce. Other arguments presented in the lawsuit were that the right to travel was violated and the right of equal protection was violated because out-of-state residents were treated differently than Arkansans.

The lawsuit says officers indicated to out-of-state residents that it would be better for them to forfeit bonds and not appear in court to contest the charges against them.

Four of the plaintiffs were cited for driver's license or vehicle registration offenses and two others were issued tickets for misdemeanor possession of controlled substances.

The lawsuit says two plaintiffs were delayed because they were passengers in cars stopped at the roadblock and the drivers were detained for minor violations. Donna Dowland of Crittenden County, who was nine months and three weeks pregnant, was forced by sheriff's office personnel to walk to a pay telephone when she wanted to make a telephone call to try to arrange bond for her husband, the lawsuit said. The lawsuit seeks $2,000 damages because the walk induced labor.

Senate cuts state prison spending

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Senators have approved a prison appropriation of about $28 million less than recommended by a House committee.

But that difference could be resolved today as the special session winds down.

The Senate voted 28-1 Thursday in favor of Sen. Bill Meier's $50 million appropriation for the overcrowded Texas Department of Corrections. On Wednesday, the House Appropriation Committee, coming much closer to the amount sought by the TDC, approved a $78.6 million package.

That committee was to look at the Senate bill today and decide which version the full House should debate.

TDC Director Jim Estelle told the Senate Finance Committee on Thursday that prison system has been gaining 500 new inmates a month and must embark on a $630 million construction program over the next four years.

With utilities and extra staff added, the program would add up to about $1 billion, he said.

Estelle said the $85 million sought by prison officials would be used to start up construction of 13 1,000-bed units, speed up current construction and adapt existing building for inmate housing. The House package includes those items.

Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Bill Clayton all favor an appropriation close to the $50 million approved by the Senate.

The $50 million Senate package includes $34 million for new construction, speed-up of current construction projects, and adaptation of existing buildings for inmate housing. The remainder would go for additional staff, staff housing and increases in parole and probation services.

Estelle said the limited funding probably would be used to build two 1,000-bed dormitories, rather than more expensive and time-consuming cellblocks.

After the meeting, Estelle said it would be risky to house inmates in dormitories rather than cells, because accelerated release programs designed to ease overcrowding "further distill the prison population down to the type of inmate that requires that kind of housing."

The bill gives TDC discretion in what type of facility is built with the money.

TDC board Chairman T.L. Austin said the system needs more cellblocks and insisted legislators eventually will have to face spending more for prisons.

"I think this state is going to have to spend a billion dollars on prisons," Austin said.

Administration figure calls food stamps 'subsidy for Puerto Ricans'

DALLAS (AP) — J. Peter Grace triggered demands for his resignation as head of President Reagan's spending watchdog committee when he said here that the food stamp program is basically a "subsidy for Puerto Ricans."

Grace, head of Reagan's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control in the Federal Government, made the comment Thursday to a meeting of the American Feed and Grain Manufacturers Association.

Puerto Ricans are getting more than their share of food stamps, said Grace, the chief executive officer of W.R. Grace & Co. of New York.

Puerto Rico not only gets a share of the money allocated for food stamps, but a greater number of Puerto Ricans living in the United States are on food stamps as well, he told the businessmen.

Resident Commissioner Baltasar

Corrada, who represents Puerto Rico in Congress, urged the administration to publicly reject the comments and to demand the immediate resignation of Grace.

"J. Peter Grace's comment to the effect that the federal food stamp program is basically a subsidy for Puerto Ricans is an affront and insult to Puerto Ricans both on the island as well as on the U.S. Mainland," Corrada said in a telephone interview from Washington.

Corrada said the food stamp program currently serves 23,036,722 Americans. He said if participants from Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands and Guam were excluded, the program would still serve 21,169,130 people on the U.S. mainland.

"It is unfortunate that Grace was speaking in his official capacity," said Corrada. "His remarks are totally out of touch with reality and reflect a complete lack of sensitivity towards the needs of poor Americans as well as Puerto Ricans who are U.S. Citizens whether they reside on the mainland or in Puerto Rico."

U.S. Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., the head of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, said he sent a telegram to the president asking for Grace's "immediate resignation for making statements that are absolutely false and detrimental to the Puerto Rican community and Hispanics throughout America."

"There is no question that the statement is racist in nature and that is the reason why America is being divided, because of insensitive people who have no feelings or sensitivity about a hard-working group of Americans who only want what every other group has had before us," Garcia said in a telephone interview from Washington.

Fetal brain damage laid to alcohol use

A new study shows how alcohol use by pregnant or nursing mothers can harm fetuses and newborn infants. Women have been advised for years to reduce alcohol intake during pregnancy, but a study conducted by Dr. Arun Rawat, a University of Toledo biochemist, indicates any alcohol ingested is cycled through the developing fetus and impairs vital brain development.

Dr. Rawat conducted his research on laboratory rats over a period of 15 months. He said results can be projected to indicate 20 per cent of the children in America's mental retardation centers are victims of the fetal alcohol syndrome.

In his report to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, Rawat said drinking alcohol, particularly in the first three months of pregnancy, hinders brain development.

The study also showed that nursing mothers who drink may be endangering their babies' mental health, because alcohol greatly reduces the rate of protein formation in the infant's brain.

The study by the biochemist should be investigated by federal and other health authorities, and if it is confirmed efforts to warn pregnant women against drinking should be intensified.

People of Poland do not walk alone

The riots in Poland are carrying out the slogan that was scrawled in Warsaw in December: "The winter belongs to you. The spring belongs to us."

That message to the Communist Party's military government from supporters of the suppressed labor movement called Solidarity was in the historic spirit of Polish independence.

Now, in May, the people of Poland, especially the young people, are demonstrating that the spirit of freedom lives, and they will live, with ever - returning spring.

A great deal of television coverage of the riots was permitted by the government. Why was it shown at length on Warsaw television? Why were foreigners permitted to see the water cannon pummeling women caught in a cul de sac while trying to get away? And the militia man's arm rising and falling, rising and falling above the body of a fallen demonstrator — why did the Polish government want to show that? We assume we see almost nothing that the government censorship in Warsaw doesn't want us to see.

The fear is that the coverage was part of the propaganda buildup to justify a new crackdown, even more severe repression and censorship, whatever the Kremlin requires to rebuild its confidence in its puppet regime in Poland.

Our sympathies with Solidarity and our support for the protestors must be affirmed and reaffirmed. Those people must know they do not walk alone.

Fixed tax would eliminate shelters

The time is long overdue for replacing the federal income tax law's 6,000 pages of loopholes with a simple, fixed - rate tax on rich and poor alike — no deductions, no shelters.

Evidence has accumulated that the present graduated tax, which was designed to take progressively larger bites of higher incomes, is self - defeating. Thanks to all of the loopholes, the very rich manage to join the very poor in escaping the income tax burden. It is the middle - income earners who pay most of the taxes.

The Internal Revenue Service says that those in the 50 percent tax bracket rarely pay half their income in taxes. Of nearly 94 million tax returns filed last year, only 550,000 reported adjusted gross income of more than $100,000, and less than 15 percent of total taxes came from citizens making more than $100,000.

Not only do the rich escape from the higher tax brackets by using special - interest loopholes, they shelter their income in ways that contribute little to the economy. Thus the government is deprived of tax revenue and the economy loses the stimulus it should receive from earnings reinvested in wealth - producing enterprises. The direct costs to the economy of tax shelters and exemptions has been estimated at anywhere from $60 billion to $500 billion a year.

An increasingly favored alternative, the flat - rate tax levied on 12 to 14 percent of gross income, would bring in the same revenue as the present graduated tax. It would cost the average middle - income taxpayer no more than he already pays. The poor would be cushioned by a uniformly applied personal exemption, while the rich would be shorn of the shelters they now enjoy.

So flagrant are inequities in the tax system that such philosophically diverse observers as conservative economist Arthur Laffer and consumer advocate Ralph Nader agree the single - rate tax is the solution. This view is shared by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D - Aiz., who has introduced a tax - reform bill in the Senate. He describes the present taxing system as "a labyrinth for the unwary" and a bonanza for tax lawyers. Another flat - rate tax proposal has been introduced in the House by a bipartisan group of seven congressmen led by Rep. Kent Hance, D - Texas.

Not everyone would like a flat - rate tax, and some who have successfully sheltered their fortunes from the tax collector would oppose it strongly. The middle - income taxpayer, for example, would have to be persuaded to give up his property tax and mortgage interest deductions in return for a lower, non - graduated tax rate and — best of all — an income tax return form that would fit on the back of a postcard.

By DON GRAFF

From day two of the Falklands crisis, the problem has really been how to give the Argentines what they want without appearing to do so.

What they want, as all the world knows by now, is the Falkland Islands.

The charge that British resistance to Argentina's forcible seizure of the islands represents resurgent colonialism is ludicrous. Once Britain got the hang of the procedure in the early post - war years, it has demonstrated exceptional proficiency in investing itself of empire.

One of the last remaining sizable pieces of real estate, Belize on the Caribbean coast of Central America, was turned out on its own last year to the distress of much of a native population apprehensive that the follow - up to independence might be absorption by neighboring Guatemala.

The major difference between Belize and the Falklands is that the population of the latter is of British stock. London has paid more heed to — and up to April 2 been guided by — the Falklanders' desire to remain subjects of the crown.

Deference to the Falklanders' desire has not, however, altered the basic British desire to be rid of the islands. And despite the bellicosity of the response to the Argentine initiative, that desire must now be stronger than ever.

The present crisis vividly demonstrates what a liability the islands are. They may be retaken — as a matter of principle. But they can't be held indefinitely. Even if the principle were worth it, the British cannot afford the cost.

So that brings the British and everyone else interested in the impasse — with the possible exception of the Argentines, although even the generals in Buenos Aires are showing some signs of at last seeing the light — back to the basic problem: How to arrange the divestiture of a British liability without appearing to reward Argentine aggression?

Given governments in firm control of their home fronts and fully cognizant of the realities of a confrontation, a little fast diplomatic footwork might produce an acceptable arrangement.

But that in no sense describes the Argentine government. By seizing the islands in disregard of the political realities involved, the Argentines created for themselves a Falklands monster. They are in line as the first victims of a rampant Argentine nationalism seeking revenge for any perceived yielding to the British.

Under the circumstances, they are showing courage as well as delayed recognition of reality in qualifying their original insistence on acknowledgement of Argentine sovereignty as a pre - condition of a Falklands settlement.

What is particularly interesting is the forum in which this is occurring — the United Nations.

This is the second time around in this crisis for the U.N. The Security Council was seized with the question immediately following the seizure of the islands, held the usual emergency session and passed the usual resolution calling upon all parties to cool it, which met with the usual noncompliance.

The U.N. hasn't had much to show for its peace - keeping efforts for a long time now. It has been totally ineffectual in the Persian Gulf war and the destruction of Lebanon. It has been a non - factor in the larger Arab - Israeli conflict in the Mideast and in the uttering little wars across Africa and in Southeast Asia.

It has been ineffectual in part because of the power alignments in those conflicts, but also in very large part because it has ceased to deal in realities. For most of its members, the United Nations has become a giant board upon which to play elaborate diplomatic games in which the question of who wins or loses is less important than the playing of the game.

It is just possible that the United Nations is the perfect forum for resolving an unreal problem such as the Falklands.

NEWS ITEM: UNEMPLOYMENT LINES ARE THE LONGEST IN FORTY YEARS.

More help needed

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

News that half the graduating class at a Southeastern law school has not found employment for the year ahead is a harsh reminder of how deep the recession is gripping the country.

These young men and women have demonstrated superior skills as students. They have worked long hours, mastering the intricacies of the law. It is a terrible shock for them to discover that they can't get jobs in their chosen field.

What's happening is the law firms, like other types of business, aren't hiring on the scale that they did a few years ago. Many firms are adversely affected by the deteriorating business climate. In time, they may resume hiring on a larger scale. In the meantime, however, the situation means hardship for numerous law school graduates.

Many people, not only young lawyers, are paying for the deterioration of the U.S. economy. The distress is widespread in our society, and it has deep roots. Americans are paying, not for mistakes in President Reagan's economic program but for wild extravagance by the federal government over a period of decades. Back in the New Deal days of the 1930s, wise observers of government economic policy warned that the grandchildren of people then adults would pay for governmental excess. We are learning that these observers were correct in their predictions.

It is to be hoped that business, wherever possible, will make an investment in young talent. The ideas and energies of bright young people will pay off in the long run. Intelligent people can do more for a business than intelligent machines. Everyone needs to keep that in mind.

Colleges and universities, for their part, need to do much more to help graduates. Many institutions are indifferent to the job search conducted by their seniors. They act as though the college or university had no significant responsibility in that area. At best, they may offer some general orientation on the subject of looking for a job.

Today, colleges and universities owe it to their seniors to prepare them as carefully as possible for the job search. The students need access to computer printouts of alumni who may be in a position to offer jobs. They need detailed, current information on employment prospects in specific fields. Many graduates are real achievers but lack personal contacts. The educational institutions should help arrange interviews and advise seniors as to how to prepare effective resumes. It is unconscionable for educational institutions to simply dump graduates into a job market that has contracted to an alarming degree.

In any society, there are little things and big things that need to be done. Everyone knows that the Congress has a lot of big things to do in the way of adjusting economic policy in finding ways to get the interest rate down, for example, so that consumer sales may be stimulated. On the other hand, there are jobs available even in a depressed economy, and maximum help must be given by educational institutions to help match the jobs and the available candidates for them. Private initiatives of this sort can go a long way towards alleviating the problems young people face today.

The carrot mightier than the stick

By PAUL HARVEY

The one energy indispensable to life on this planet — the one energy of which we have more than anybody — is food. Why don't we use it?

By withholding food from belligerent nations we could get them to back off.

And we could motivate backward nations to move forward in the development of their own agriculture.

Ours is the carrot mightier than the stick.

Lowell Ponte, for Reader's Digest, traveled 14 nations re - evaluating our nation's food policy. He concludes that we should be using this mightiest weapon for power, for profit — and for peace.

More than 170 nations sit in the United Nations' only eight of them grow more food than they eat.

The United States and Canada, Australia and Argentina, France and New Zealand, South Africa and Thailand — all "Western - aligned nations," please note — produce food for export.

But the United States, all by itself, controls the biggest share (57 percent) of exportable grain. With Canada, we produce and control 85 percent.

We have a greater potential stranglehold on the world's food supply than the OPEC nations have on the world's oil supply.

It is not inexhaustible. Our soil is being depleted as surely as world oil is being depleted.

Before our fertile topsoil is spent, we had better learn to husband what remains of this irreplaceable energy resource. President Carter tried to use food as a weapon in 1980, failed.

When the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, President Carter cut off further grain sales.

There were several reasons the embargo hurt us worse than it did them.

For one thing, there was enough grain "in the pipelines" to keep the Soviets supplied for many months. Also, the embargo "leaked": Eastern Europe bought our grain and re - sold it to the Soviets. And our allies among food producing nations doubled their own exports.

So the Carter embargo fizzled. The glut of unsold grain in the United States depressed prices so that our own farmers were punished mercilessly.

Lowell Ponte concludes that our nation's global humanitarian food policy has done more harm than good. It discouraged under - developed nations from developing their own agriculture and encouraged them to breed more babies.

Even now we sell our grain much too cheaply.

While oil has gone from one dollar a barrel to 30 dollars and more, a bushel of wheat or corn sells now for less than then!

If we would join with the other seven world grain producers to form an OPEC - like cartel, we could get top dollar for our grain, conserve topsoil, and prompt other nations to produce more food on their own.

We tired using food as "a stick" and failed.

As a "carrot" it might benefit everyone on Earth.

Senate ditches own tax break

WASHINGTON (AP) — Without a voice raised in objection, the Senate is ditching the politically unpopular tax break that gives members of Congress an audit-proof $75-a-day deduction.

But the fate of the special deduction will rest with a House-Senate conference committee that could overturn the Senate's 70-23 action late Thursday.

By that vote, senators adopted an amendment by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., to repeal the tax break of nearly $20,000 a year, a deduction that generated a public outcry. Congress voted to give itself the break last year.

Proxmire's tax-break repeal was attached to an unrelated funding bill which was then passed and sent to the conference committee. Since the House-passed version of the bill does not deal with the congressional tax break, conferees could vote to cancel the Senate's action.

Proxmire told reporters "it will be tough" to get the conference committee to go along with his plan. But he noted House members must stand for re-election every two years, and might come under considerable voter pressure to go along with repealing the tax break.

At issue is the amount of money members of Congress can deduct for expenses associated with living in Washington.

In voting to repeal the new tax break, the Senate agreed to restore a $3,000 annual deduction that was enacted in 1954.

"The public well understands and disapproves of the action last year," Proxmire told the Senate. "There was almost universal condemnation."

Congressional offices have been flooded with mail denouncing the tax break. The Internal Revenue Service reported receiving more than 34,000 letters of protest.

Although 23 senators voted against

Proxmire's amendment, none rose to urge retention of the tax break, although some argued for a more-moderate change than returning to the $3,000 deduction.

And Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., complained that Congress is giving itself a bad reputation by regular efforts to raise its pay or tax deductions.

Under the provision enacted last year, members of Congress may deduct a flat $75 for each day Congress is in session.

Or, they can deduct $50 for each such day plus interest and taxes on their Washington home.

Members could take the deductions even for days when they are not in Washington.

The IRS may not challenge either of those deductions.

For 1981 expenses, the $75-per-day option was worth about $19,600.

Prosecution poised to open case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecutors, poised to begin trying to prove that John W. Hinckley Jr. was sane when he shot President Reagan, have won their effort to bar the jury from seeing X-rays of the defendant's brain.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, siding with the government, told the defense team Thursday it could not introduce results of a CAT scan. Hinckley's lawyers hoped the brain scan would support the conclusion that the defendant was suffering from schizophrenia at the time of the March 30, 1981 shooting.

Jurors spent the day outside the courtroom, but Parker summoned them in the late afternoon to tell them the defense has called their last witness.

"Defense counsel have completed their testimony," Parker said. "Then you will hear testimony from the government on the issue of insanity."

But the prosecution cannot begin its case until Parker issues his ruling on whether the jury can view the movie "Taxi Driver." Parker, who said he would reveal his decision today, first planned to view the film.

Defense psychiatrists have testified that Hinckley assumed the role of the main character, a taxi driver who stalks a presidential candidate and kills to impress a young prostitute.

The prosecution has argued jurors do not need to see the film because they have heard enough about it from witnesses.

While the defense has attempted over the last two weeks to show that Hinckley was insane, and thus innocent, the prosecution will argue that the defendant knew what he was doing when he wounded Reagan and three other men outside the Washington Hilton Hotel.

Prosecutors have said they will call several witnesses, including law enforcement officers who were at the Hilton when Hinckley fired six shots from his .22-caliber revolver.

Before hearing testimony on the CAT scan, Parker called Hinckley to the bench to discuss his absences from the courtroom.

Head down and hands clasped in front of him, Hinckley told the judge: "I just had a problem listening to testimony yesterday. I feel today I can sit through the remainder of testimony."

Rev. Moon says he met Jesus

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, leader of the Unification Church, testified in federal court that he had met Moses and Buddha and that Jesus Christ had asked him to help save the universe.

Testifying under oath about his religious beliefs for the first time, the Korean evangelist said Thursday that although he doesn't call himself the Messiah, his followers "believe" in him.

"I have the possibility of becoming the real Messiah," he said.

He was compelled to testify in a case involving a $9 million lawsuit filed by Anthony Colombrito, a Moon follower. He claims he was abducted in 1979 by Galen Kelly, a "deprogrammer" from Kingston, N.Y., in an effort to wrest him from the church. Colombrito claims his civil rights were violated.

The 62-year-old church leader and businessman had fought a subpoena to testify, but U.S. District Judge Richard Owen ordered him to.

Moon's testimony was halted midstream Thursday when the 2nd U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals intervened and scheduled a hearing for today to decide if the trial should continue. Moon contends he is being subjected to a "Federal judicial inquisition."

Moon appeared Thursday, his second day on the stand, as a reluctant witness for the defense, which is trying to show that Moon's church is a "sham" operated to enrich him and his top aides.

OAS expected to hand Argentina victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite U.S. objections, the Organization of American States appeared ready today to approve a resolution that would hand Argentina a diplomatic victory in its war with Great Britain over the Falkland Islands.

Argentina apparently had the two-thirds majority required for approval of a strongly-worded pro-Argentine resolution, although some diplomats cautioned that the final version might be somewhat watered down.

A drafting committee was resuming work on the resolution today after a debate Thursday which featured some of the strongest anti-American rhetoric heard at the OAS in recent years.

At Thursday's opening session of the special OAS foreign ministers meeting, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. suggested the OAS could aggravate the crisis by going beyond a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire and Argentina's withdrawal from the islands.

But the pro-Argentine, Spanish-speaking majority appeared inclined to ignore Haig's advice and to go along with an Argentine-sponsored resolution condemning Britain's "armed aggression" against Argentina and demanding that Britain cease hostilities immediately.

The draft also called on the United States to lift the economic and military sanctions which it imposed against Argentina a month ago. In addition, all member states were invited to take "measures they deem appropriate" to assist Argentina — which Argentina hopes will encourage other hemispheric nations to provide military assistance.

The resolution, if approved, would do much to neutralize European Common Market action last Monday extending indefinitely the economic sanctions it applied against Argentina a month ago.

Charges against reporter may be dropped

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Felony charges filed against an investigative reporter who pretended to be an illegal alien could be dismissed as early as next Tuesday, a federal prosecutor says.

"There is no question that I can dismiss this case at any time," Assistant U.S. Attorney David Almaraz said. "I just want to have all the facts before me before I make that decision. I would say probably Tuesday at the latest next week."

Almaraz said earlier this week that he might want to question San Antonio Light reporter Danny Garcia about his investigation into alien smuggling before deciding whether to pursue the charge.

But Almaraz said Thursday that discovery of a federal rule protecting investigative reporters may preclude such questioning.

"There's been a new quirk," Almaraz said. "Yesterday, I was informed by various officers that apparently there was a section in the Code of Federal Regulations that states that we, the Department of Justice, cannot talk to, subpoena, indict, summons a reporter who is charged ostensibly with something that arises out of an investigative type story without prior approval of the attorney general."

"So, rather than going through that process, which I think would be very time-consuming, I am probably going to try to settle the matter by discussing it fully with INS (Immigration and Naturalization Service) officials in San Antonio," he said.

The 27-year-old Garcia said he arranged with San Antonio INS officials to have himself deported to Mexico for a story on illegal aliens.

But, Garcia said, he got separated from the aliens he was trailing.

Instead of following the aliens in Mexico, he said he paid $80 to have two Mexicans float him across the Rio Grande on an inner tube, and then paid a "coyote" — or alien smuggler — more than $100 to transport him to San Antonio.

But the coyote insisted that Garcia drive five real illegal aliens to San Antonio in a rundown car because Garcia did not have the full $250 fee, the reporter said.

Twelve miles outside of Laredo, the Border Patrol stopped the car and charged Garcia with five counts of transporting illegal aliens, punishable by up to five years in prison on each count.

The alien smuggler was arrested later and Garcia said he was concerned that he would have to testify against the man, fearing "retaliation."

ONE REASON WE are starting to bridge the gap between science and the general public is that science is receiving increasing attention from the media," says Stephanie Ann Telesetsky, a 16-year-old national winner in the Science Talent Search. The Maryland student is shown with her project on antibiotics.

An advance look at tomorrow's scientists

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The daily newspaper, not television, is the preferred news source for 97 percent of our nation's most promising future scientists.

Slightly more than half perceive that the gap is widening between the scientific community and the general public; 10 percent believe that science is progressing too slowly.

Nearly half believe that scientists should become more active politically. More than three-quarters do not have a role model.

These are highlights from an informal sampling among the 40 national winners in the 41st Annual Westinghouse Science Talent Search, a program open to high school seniors who undertake original scientific research projects.

The goal of the Science Talent Search — sponsored since its onset in 1942 by the Westinghouse Electric Corp. and administered by the non-profit Science Service organization — is to encourage young people in their pursuit of scientific careers. Five winners have gone on to become Nobel laureates.

This year's national winners, ranging in age from 15 to 18 and representing 16 states, were judged the best from among nearly 1,000 competitors in 49 states.

Why the preference for newspapers? The students cited their keen interest in current events, diversified opinions and a framework in planning for the future by understanding the present.

For example, 16-year-old Regina Beth Gordon of Brooklyn, N.Y., the winner of the top $12,000 scholarship, said, "It's natural for me to rely upon newspapers for in-depth news because my dad is a history writer, but I'm interested in getting a lot of different opinions as well as facts."

For her project, Ms. Gordon, also an accomplished classical pianist and cellist, constructed a mathematical model that attempts to replicate the process by which people correctly and subconsciously interpret certain ambiguities in the English language.

"I'm very interested in current events and read newspapers avidly because what happens worldwide my involve me. What happens economically also affects my future," said Gary Merle Griner Jr., 17, of Huntsville, Ala.

Griner — his state's 1981 pole vault champion — received a $500 award for designing, building and using a seismograph to determine the speed of earthquake waves through the earth's interior. From the basement of his home, he recorded the tremors of 53 earthquakes from as far away as Japan.

In addition to newspaper reading, 60 percent of the winners found it important to read weekly news magazines, most often Time and Newsweek. All said they read scientific and technical publications regularly.

Fifteen percent listen to the radio, often while doing homework. But 60 percent said they didn't watch television or watched it rarely.

Among the remainder, 18 percent said they watched it primarily for news, 10 percent for sports events, and the balance for sit-coms ("M*A*S*H" was a favorite) or PBS specials.

There were sharp differences even among regular TV watchers.

Said 15-year-old Mitchell Tsai of Kent, Ohio, the winner of the sixth place $7,500 scholarship for a physics project: "I'm pretty well informed about current events. I read newspapers, magazines and spend about two hours a day watching television." Tsai, an violinist, has already completed a number of math and science courses at Kent State University.

David Erich Nahias of Decatur, Ga., reported reading one or two newspapers daily. "As schoolwork increases, TV decreases," he added.

The 17-year-old Nahias, who received a $500 cash award for a project in virology, is a member of the varsity soccer team, the staff of the literary magazine, and the science, math and drama clubs.

Making it clear that their views were based on perception, not documentation, 55 percent of the winners said that the gap was widening between scientists and the general public because of increasing specialization and the inability among most scientists to keep up with everything.

Twenty-seven percent said they believed that the gap was about the same as it had always been, and 18 percent felt it was narrowing.

Here, a typical comment came from 16-year-old

Stephanie Ann Telesetsky of Bethesda, Md.: "One reason we are starting to bridge the gap is that science is receiving increasing attention from the media, especially in newspapers and through magazines such as Discover."

Ms. Telesetsky, the recipient of a $500 award for a project relating to antibiotics, holds 11 swimming records and is a drama enthusiast.

Is the scientific pace too rapid? Certainly not, according to most of the winners; 10 percent of them felt that science was proceeding too slowly.

Among them was Ronald Marc Kantor, 17, of the Bronx, N.Y., who said: "While the pace of technology is adequate, the pace of science could be faster. We are in a dry period because of a lack of basic discoveries."

Kantor, awarded a second place $10,000 scholarship for a project in plasma physics, enjoys drafting and architecture.

What role should scientists play politically? Forty-five percent said that scientists should be more active in world and national affairs. Meanwhile, 12.5 percent disagreed, and 42.5 percent were unsure.

Among those who favored political activity was Jared Adam Silverman, 17, of West Long Branch, N.J. "It's necessary for scientists to have a voice in the political process," he said. "It's far better to have a scientist in power who's turned politician than vice versa."

Silverman, the recipient of a $500 award for a microbiology experiment, is active in dramatics, varsity cross-country and the school band, in which he plays the saxophone.

The demands of a scientific career were cited most frequently by students who were opposed to political involvement.

Tiny airline takes jackpot in Braniff lottery

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tiny Miami-based cargo carrier collected the biggest bonanza in a lottery conducted by the Federal Aviation Administration for allocating the rights to 276 daily landings held by Braniff International Airways.

Of the series of 37 random drawings Thursday for slots at airports in 19 states and the District of Columbia, Fleming International Airways won first place seven times and a total of 12 in the top four.

"Fleming is a cargo carrier. But there isn't any restriction. They can fly cargo if they wish," said Dick Stafford, an FAA public affairs spokesman.

Continental Airlines, Delta Airlines, New York Air, Northwest Orient Airlines and Frontier Airlines fared best among carriers who plan to offer passenger service in time slots formerly held by Braniff.

In 37 separate drawings that lasted 2½ hours, Continental was the first selected in the draw at three airports, second at one, third at four and fourth at six airports. That gave the line a total of 14 finishes in the top four.

Delta, New York Air and Northwest Orient won top-four selection rights at nine airports each, while Frontier was in the top four at eight airports.

Pan American World Airways and U.S. Air were top-four picks in the lotteries of seven airports apiece, while United Airlines finished in the top four at six airports.

The number of landing "slots" up for grabs varied from one at some airports to as many as 57 at Dallas-Fort Worth, where Braniff has its headquarters.

Braniff had an allocation of more than 400 arrival slots when it suspended its operations May 12 and filed for court protection from creditors under the bankruptcy laws.

Many at the FAA auditorium for the lottery had never heard of Fleming and had not expected a cargo carrier to compete for the landing rights.

Whispers of "Who's Fleming?" spread across the room after the carrier was picked first twice in a row early in the lottery.

Fleming's success began on the fourth lottery of the day, for available slots at Corpus Christi, Texas, when Gwyneth Jones, an attorney for the Civil Aeronautics Board, reached into a hopper, drew one red capsule from among nine and announced, "The first in priority is No. 31," the number assigned Fleming for the drawings.

About five minutes later, she again picked a capsule bearing Fleming's number first, this time from a field of 30 airlines seeking choice landing slots at Washington's National Airport.

Minutes later, Fleming's capsule was plucked first from 24, giving it first choice of slots at Newark Airport.

After being picked eighth out of 11 at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the cargo carrier was selected first from eight capsules in the drawing for landing slots at Harlingen, Texas, then from 10 carriers seeking choice slots at Washington Dulles.

At that point, she traded jobs with Paul Smith, also a CAB lawyer, who had been calling out the selections on a public address system after each capsule she pulled from the hopper.

The audience, mostly comprised of airline representatives and newsmen, gave an audible sigh of relief when Smith's first selection for 25 available slots at Houston was not Fleming, but Emerald Airlines.

But then Smith drew the capsule for the airline with second priority, opened the capsule and read the number inside. It was — of course — No. 31, Fleming International Airways.

"I've never heard of them," Ms. Jones said of Fleming during an intermission.

"That's the first I've heard of them," Smith said.

Later in the day, during lotteries for landing slots at New Orleans and Seattle, Fleming again was selected first.

An executive of Fleming said the company planned to fly cargo flights. But the success in the lottery appeared to give company officials cause for reflection.

"We would expand to passengers if we were awarded slots that matched up and made sense — if we determined that we could make a profit. The idea wouldn't be to start flying passengers unless it's lucrative," Larry Rudolph, Fleming's vice president and treasurer, said in Miami.

assure that the airline would get a slot at the airport concerned. It has to meet various FAA regulations — such as one requiring that planes serving Washington National Airport have at least 56 seats.

"The actual allocation of the arrival slots will not, repeat, will not be made today," an agency spokesman said before the drawings began. "The FAA Slot Allocation Committee is scheduled to accomplish that task during the week of June 1."

Airlines were told that any arrival slots given them would be taken away if they did not begin operation within 10 days of receiving notice of the allocation from the FAA.

Each carrier submitted requests for Braniff arrival times at an airport. If the carrier placed high enough in the lottery to get one or more slots, it would be given the arrival times it specified first, if no other airline had chosen them.

If one or more choice had already been plucked by airlines choosing ahead of it, the carrier could get its second or third choice, if they were still available and provided the carrier specified those choices before the drawing.

Convicted of manslaughter hours before graduation

HOUSTON (AP) — An 18-year-old whose high school graduation fell on the same day as her conviction for involuntary manslaughter has been sentenced to seven years probation.

Hours before she received her diploma Thursday, Stephanie Obenhaus was convicted and sentenced for her part in an accident that killed three people.

Ms. Obenhaus was also fined $5,000. The Dec. 18 accident killed two Lebanese men who were junior college students and a 16-year-old girl.

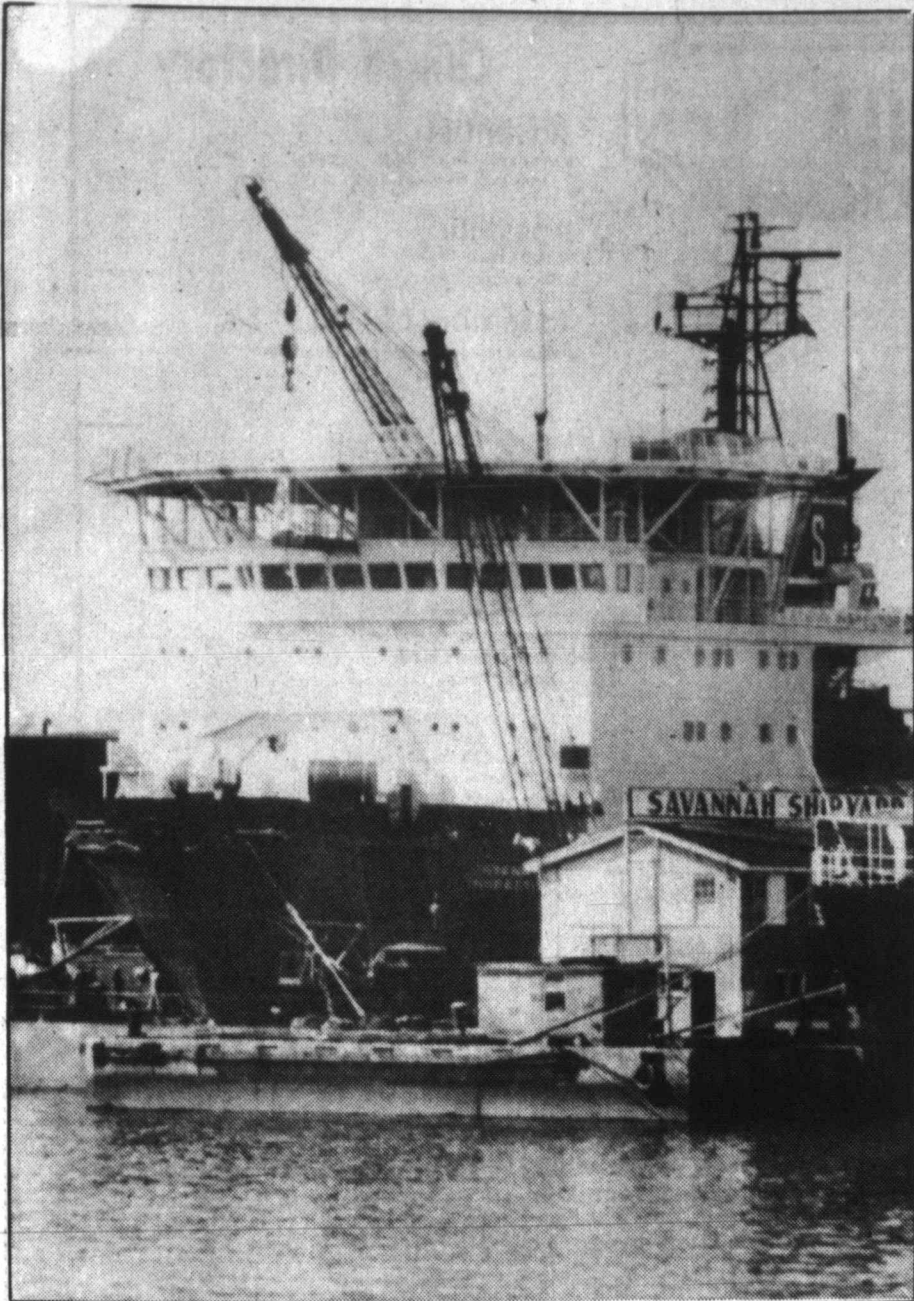

Police said Ms. Obenhaus ran a red light and broadsided the victims' car in the early morning accident.

"I saw the light turn yellow," she testified. "I should have stopped, but I sped up through the light. The next thing I knew, I was in the back of a police car."

Ms. Obenhaus said she had two free beers at the restaurant where she worked as a waitress, but denied she was drunk. Prosecutor John Petrucci said a breathalyzer test showed she was intoxicated.

Ms. Obenhaus said she was 17 when she worked as a waitress, but told the restaurant she was 19 so she could serve alcoholic drinks.

The parents of the two male victims have sued the restaurant in federal court, claiming their sons died because the establishment served alcohol to a minor.

HE KNOWS WHOM TO TRUST!

EVERY BOY knows that his grandfather is a trustworthy guide whether it is advice about boats or about life. Many adults have lost the child's ability to trust, and in fact do not know whom to trust about life. There is one guide who never fails — He is our Father in Heaven.

Are you wise enough to trust Him? Then seek

His guidance today and go Sunday to worship

Him in His Church. He alone can make sense out of life and give the victory over death.

Is something wrong with your life — an inner restless dissatisfaction? The answer to every human problem comes only from God our Maker. He alone can forgive and reassure. Through the church God has committed the provision and proclamation of His forgiveness and redeeming love. Without a church relation no one is securely related to God. Everyone should be in the Church and the Church in everyone!

Regulations tightened on Texas cattle

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Oklahoma, Missouri and Iowa are three of several states that are tightening brucellosis regulations on Texas cattle, says executive director John Holcombe of the Texas Animal Health Commission.

Holcombe said Missouri already has imposed stiffer entry requirements on Texas livestock, and Oklahoma's tougher regulations go into effect July 1.

Iowa also has begun more testing of Texas livestock for the disease.

"It appears that Texas livestock producers can expect more states to increase their requirements for Texas cattle relating to brucellosis," Holcombe said in a statement.

44 seconds to meltdown at Vermont Yankee

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The first alarm sounded at 12:56 a.m. In the next four minutes the reactor core of the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant came within 44 seconds — and three safety systems — of starting a meltdown.

Any one of the automatic safety systems was sufficient to end the danger, and they all worked. The plant shut down safely.

Still, the April 24 incident provided a stark reminder, in the words of Public Service Department Commissioner Richard Saudek, that "ultimately it is humans who control this plant."

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said operators in the control room were off the mark in guessing what was wrong and also failed to realize how the plant had saved itself.

Probably the most serious operational problem at the Vernon plant in its decade of producing power, the incident also was one of the most closely documented at the plant due to investigations by the NRC and the state of Vermont.

The following reconstruction is based on NRC documents.

At 12:50 a.m., two reactor operators and the nuclear safety engineer were in the control room of the 540-megawatt reactor. The shifts had just changed and the plant operators were preparing to lower reactor power from 100 percent to perform routine checks.

Sometime before 12:56, with the power in the process of being reduced to 75 percent of capacity, a valve stuck open on one of the pumps that feed water to the vessel containing the reactor's fuel.

The pumps are turned on manually, but turn off automatically when the water level reaches 170 inches above the top of the fuel, 14 inches above normal.

At 12:56 the rising water level led to a shutdown of the pumps. The first alarm went off. Within six seconds, a control room operator had turned the pumps back on.

But 2½ minutes later when the pumps automatically turned off again — the water level had reached 171 inches — no one in the control room noticed the shutdown. By now their eyes were on the main reactor control panel.

Without any water feeding into the vessel, the water inside the container began boiling off at a rate of about two inches a second.

A loss of water, if unchecked, would lead to a meltdown of the reactor core, releasing radiation into the environment.

Twenty-two seconds after the second pump shut down, the water level was down to 136 inches, and the reactor itself turned off automatically.

Fourteen seconds later, the water level hit 87 inches. The emergency core cooling system switched on, pouring water into the vessel at 4,250 gallons a minute. It was the first time the plant's emergency cooling system was used.

It took slightly more than a minute for the emergency cooling system to do its work, bringing the water level up to 173 inches. The plant was safe.

When the pumps first turned off, the two operators quickly went to the main reactor control panel, located at the center of a V-shaped wall of lights, alarms and dials.

The shift supervisor heard the pumps slow down and entered the control room, joining the two others at the main panel.

The nuclear safety engineer took a position at the computer console, a few feet behind the others. His post was created after the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident in March 1979 at Three Mile Island.

The safety engineer is supposed to keep an overall eye on events and provide advice to the operators.

Investigation shows that the operators thought they had saved the plant by using the feedwater pumps, unaware that they had turned off again.

The three men in direct control of the plant also were unaware that the emergency core cooling system had switched on — and had provided the critical water.

The nuclear safety engineer, meanwhile, had noticed the emergency system's activation, and assumed the others had too. The NRC has criticized the engineer's lack of communication.

The main question raised was: How close did the Vernon reactor come to a meltdown?

Draft Beer - how to pour, serve and enjoy

Your first summer party is planned. The outdoor grill is cleaned and ready to be fired up. The guest list is set. And, of course, you'll want to serve draught beer.

How much should you buy? How do you keep it cool on those hot days ahead? And how do you make sure your guests won't get a cup of foam instead of that cool, refreshing brew they've been waiting for?

It's never been easier to enjoy draught beer right in your own back yard," says Dan Sickbert, who directs sales efforts for Schlitz beer in 20 states in the eastern part of the country. He should know — he's tapped a few kegs during his 15 years with the company whose beer "made Milwaukee famous."

"Draught beer not only tastes terrific, but it can be economical, too," he explains. "A quarter barrel of beer will yield about a hundred 12-ounce cups — and that's the equivalent of about 3½ cases. You can plan that each guest will consume about one 12-ounce cup every half hour."

Once you've decided how much beer you'll need, Sickbert advises that you place your order in advance with your local retail beverage store. And after you've taken the quarter or half barrel home or to your picnic location, he suggests you let it settle for at least an hour before you tap it.

"Draught beer tastes best at the right temperature, and Schlitz recommends serving its beers at about 40 degrees F.," the Kansas native explains. "This is cool enough to be refreshing, but not so cold that your taste buds are numbed and unable to detect all of the good beer taste."

Sickbert says the best way to keep a beer keg at the right temperature is to fill a large container — like a washtub or bucket — with plenty of ice and place the keg inside.

"Remember, draught beer is like fresh food — it's perishable, so plan to use it all at one time. It won't keep unless it's cold," the beer sales manager notes.

The keg you pick up at the beverage store will come with tapping unit that "taps" into the keg. It also comes with a pump that provides the pressure required to draw the beer out of the keg and into the cups of your guests.

"Be sure to follow the instructions provided with this equipment, since taps and pumps differ from one area to another," Sickbert explains. "Then draw off about a pitcher of beer before you use the pump."

"Too much pumping causes the beer to foam," he explains, "so don't pump until the flow of beer begins to slow down. Then pump only until the beer runs again in a steady stream."

When draught beer is poured properly, the flavor is enhanced. "Drawing that perfect glass is simple," Sickbert says with a smile. "All you need, to do is place the cup, slightly angled, an inch or so below the faucet. Open the faucet completely and fill the cup about halfway, then gradually straighten it into an upright position."

"The rest of the beer should flow directly into the middle of the cup," he continued. "By using this technique, you will create a ¾-inch head of foam, which is just right."

And all that's left to do is sit down and enjoy a refreshing brew with your guests!

New faces to appear in the musical drama TEXAS

By PAUL GREEN

Canyon, Texas, April 30, 1982. On the evening of June 16, 1982, the lights will go up on the seventeenth season of the musical drama "Texas". Six veteran lead players will greet and support a new Elsie, Penny Pennington, who is beginning her first season with the show.

Elsie will be weighing the courtships of Calvin Armstrong (Royal Rugel Brantley) and Dave Newberry (Lee Kendle). She will be visiting with her Aunt Anna and Uncle Henry (Lois Hull and Gene Murray), and will be amused and supported by her friends Kate Lucas (Robin Goodhue) and Tucker Yeldell (Jerry Williams).

Miss Pennington is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pennington of Dumas, and while in high school, she had numerous leading roles in both singing and acting parts.

Miss Pennington is a graduate student in Music at West Texas State University where she received her Bachelor's degree. She brought great pleasure to audiences at WTSU with her interpretation of Magnolia in "Show Boat", Edith in the "Pirates of Penzance", and Ann Edgarmar in "A Little Night Music." As a member of the New Day Singers, at WTSU, Miss Pennington traveled on a USO tour of the Far East. She is a member of Mu Phi Epsilon and WTSU

Chorus.

Royal Rugel Brantley is returning to "Texas" for the tenth season. Mr. Brantley has parked cars, appeared as a Tatum child, sung in the chorus and the quartet, played the role of Flip, and finally, in 1979, played Calvin.

Since that time, he graduated from West Texas State University, and won two years scholarships at the Dallas Theatre Center to work on his Master's degree. He was also admitted to the professional company at DTC and is now playing Antonio in "Tartuff." Last summer he played the younger of the two leading roles in "Death Trap." Among his other credits were leads in many productions for Magic Turtle Children's Theatre, work on sound for "Mice and Men," and understudy for the lead in "Tin Types."

The other man courting Elsie will be Dave Newberry, played by Lee Kendle who grew up in Amarillo and returned this fall to be choir director at Tascosa High School. This will be his eighth year with the show. He has been in the chorus, in the light and sound booth, and assistant musical director. He played Dave in 1978. Until he received his Master's degree in Music, Mr. Kendle earned many awards for his work in WTSU productions, both in acting and singing. After graduation he directed the choir at Borger High School for three years, co-directing such musicals as "Hello, Dolly," "Pippin," "The King and I." He sings with the Amarillo Symphony Chorus.

Robin Goodhue is coming back as Kate. She grew up in theatre, appearing in children's theatre groups, high school workshops WTSU, and in Amarillo Theatre Center productions. She holds the BFA from Stephens College and the MA from WTSU, where she often returns to teach special classes. She has also included direction and theatre management to her list of skills.

Since playing in "Texas" in 1979, Mrs. Goodhue has directed the Children's Drama Workshop in Panhandle at the Square House Museum, played in "And Killers" at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre and written two novels.

Jerry Williams, beloved as Tucker Yeldell, will play opposite Mrs. Goodhue. He has appeared in the role more than 800 times always arousing the amusement and sympathy of the audiences as he battles the elements and Calvin's stubbornness. He is an actor, businessman, speech pathologist, potter, church layman and booster of the area. He is also a member the Appraiser's Association of America and evaluates estates in his spare time when he is not busy teaching at the Amarillo Speech and Hearing Center. He has appeared in dinner theatre productions, done local radio and TV commercials, and appeared as extra in movies filmed in this area.

Aunt Anna is played by another friend of "Texas" audiences, Lois Hull. This will be her seventh season in the role. Daughter of two San Antonio people who met while studying opera in Italy, Mrs. Hull inherited a fine voice and stage presence. She is a graduate of the University of Texas. Among her civic responsibilities have been the presidencies of the South Randall County Hospital District Board of Directors, Lone Star Ballet, Inc., University Study Club, Canyon Fine Arts Club, and the Friends of the Canyon Library. In 1974, she was chosen Citizen of the Year by the Canyon Chamber of Commerce.

Gene Murray, who will play Uncle Henry, is a veteran of early "Texas" productions, as he was in four of the first five seasons of "Texas" as a dancer and singer, and played many parts, among them, that of the Indian medicine man.

Mr. Murray is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Murray of Childress, and his mother arrived in the Panhandle in a covered wagon.

Mr. Murray received his Bachelor in Music Education and his Master of Arts at WTSU. He has taught choir and art in Canyon High School, and English in the Junior High.

WHEN YOU POUR BEER properly the flavor is enhanced, says Dan Sickbert, who directs northeast sales efforts for Schlitz beer. Just lace the cup, slightly angled, an inch or so below the faucet. Open the faucet completely and fill the cup about halfway, then gradually straighten it into an upright position.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I call this piece, "A Guide Through Toys Past" or "Seven Reasons Why We Don't Need a $140 Video Game." Indulge me, folks, while I reminisce about toys of yesteryear that my children not only lusted for, but convinced us they could not possibly live without.

Horse. Remember him? He was brown and sucked up 80 gallons of water a day through his face. He was a lot of fun and lived with us for three years. He toed in and every time the farrier came to shoe him, it cost $45. No one wanted to pick the manure out of his feet because it was "gross." He attracted flies and did not like the sensation of anything on his back. He was ridden 12 times.

Ping Pong Table. It was a big table and held books, coats, dirty laundry, lunch sacks, stuff that had to go to the cleaners and stacks of old newspapers. You couldn't see the TV over it and it eventually went to the garage where it warped.

Frankenstein Doll: When you wound it up the pants fell down and the face turned red. When the batteries were out, it just stood there.

Dolly and Bob: Two oversexed gerbils who started their own world. They enjoyed popularity for a full 15 minutes. Then their cage began to smell and got crowded.

Full Set of Leather - Bound - Gilt - Edged - 3,000 - Illustration Encyclopedias. They were supposed to bring a new cultural level to the family. Used twice. 1. To point out picture of Eve in Vol. V who was topos. 2. To hold open the door when the new sofa was delivered.

Plastic Inflatable Swimming Pool. Officially dedicated on the morning of July 5. Officially closed on the evening of July 5 when it was noted that a small boy in the neighborhood had drunk five glasses of grape drink and had not left the pool in 12 hours.

Ice Hockey Sticks. In closet awaiting arrival of Canadian Salvation Army. Fell out of favor when it was discovered they did not have training wheels on them and worked only when someone stood upright on ice skates.

I try to be a good mother, a loving mother, a considerate mother who wants to see her children happy. However, I do not see little heads eating video wafers surviving the long haul.

As for Daddy's $5,000 boat with the cute name that is parked in the side yard and has not seen water since the last 100-year flood... that's different.

Seven Signals

"If you don't know cancer's seven warning signals, how do you know you haven't got one?" asks the American Cancer Society.

Smoking and Lung Cancer
There are many unanswered questions about cancer, but scientists know that over 80 percent of lung cancer cases in the United States are caused by cigarette smoking, the American Cancer Society says. The risk increases with the amount and length of time smoked, and decreases gradually after a smoker breaks that habit.

Women and Smoking
Women's smoking patterns are becoming more like men's and more women are developing lung cancer. During the past ten years, women's death rates from lung cancer have doubled, according to the American Cancer Society.

Dear Abby

Woman's case opens a can of worms

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 22-year-old woman who has worms. How can I get rid of them without going to a doctor? My husband is in the Army, and when I go to the doctor on the base, I have to tell him what's wrong with me in front of a bunch of people. It's kind of embarrassing to say I've got worms.

How did I get worms anyway? Please write back and tell me all you know about worms. Thank you.

COVER UP MY LOCATION

DEAR COVER UP: Dr. Jaime Paris, my chief medical consultant, said it is unwise to assume that I diagnosed your case correctly without having been examined by a physician. Therefore, he hesitated to give me much information about worms. However, this is what I wormed out of him:

Pinworms, the commonest type of worms, are transmitted by personal contact. Pinworms are often epidemic in schools; children bring them home to their families.

Tapeworms can be transmitted by eating raw fish, or being in close contact with pets — particularly dogs. They can also be transmitted through water or foods — especially lettuce.

Please see a doctor. And tell his nurse you would appreciate some privacy.

DEAR ABBY: With summer here, please call your readers' attention to the danger of automobiles equipped with power windows. Who knows how many young lives you could save?

In just one day I heard of two incidents where two drivers inadvertently pushed the rear-window button while a child's head was out the window! Even the children themselves can accidentally push the button with their knees — unless the driver can lock the window at his seat. I hope you think this is important enough to print.

MILLIE H. IN HARRISBURG

DEAR MILLIE: I do. Now, meet Lloyd Kleckner, who has another life-saving suggestion for automobile drivers:

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law, Margaret, was going to ride along with two other women who came by for her. When they pulled up (both sitting in front) Margaret started to get into the back, when they said, "There's plenty of room for three in front."

As she started to get in, the woman on the right moved to make room for Margaret, and she accidentally stepped on the gas pedal. The car lurched and Margaret was thrown to the pavement and broke her leg. It was a nasty break, which will take a long time to heal.

Please warn your readers to always shift into "park" when people are getting into and out of a car.

LLOYD KLECKNER

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem a lot of kids my age have, so I hope you will come up with an answer and print it. I'm 17 and a junior in high school. I'm an average student and I guess you could call me an average guy.

People are always asking me what I am going to do with my future. And my problem is, I don't know yet.

When I tell them that, they look at me like I am weird or stupid, so please tell me how I am supposed to answer that question so I won't feel embarrassed.

FUZZY FUTURE

DEAR FUZZY: You need not feel embarrassed for admitting that at 17 you don't know how you want to spend the rest of your life.

You are very wise, not "weird or stupid," to defer such an important decision until you are reasonably certain. Hat's off to you for your honesty and good judgment.

"The Best of Dear Abby," featuring Abby's best answers and favorite responses during the past 25 years, is now available. You can obtain a copy of this new best-selling book by sending $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to "The Best of Dear Abby," in care of this newspaper, 4400 Johnson Dr., Fairway, Kan. 66205. Computer to speed-up Medicare claims

By LARRY MAYO

Pampa Social Security Branch Office

On May 4, 1982, Texas Blue Shield (TBS), the Medicare carrier for Texas, began using a new computer system to process your Medicare claims. The new system was the first in the nation to process bills from hospitals, nursing homes, doctors, suppliers, and home health agencies together to create a total medical history for each beneficiary. The system has allowed TBS to reduce its Medicare staff and, therefore, its administrative costs while improving processing time. The average length of time TBS has a claim before writing a check has been reduced from three weeks to two.

As with any major change, especially one involving computers, numerous problems were encountered during the first few months after installation of the new computer system. Not only did the computer system change, but all the clerical procedures for processing claims were also modified. In fact, most clerks had to be taught how to key or type information into a computer. Another side effect of the systems change has been an increase in processing errors. One clerk described the increase in error rates as similar to what happened when she got her first electric stove. "I learned to cook with gas and I guess I just had to burn a few things before I got used to not being able to look at the flame."

Even though the rate has declined, there are still problems with incorrect names, addresses and health insurance claim numbers. Therefore, you should be sure to file your claims with exactly the name and number shown on your Medicare card. If your doctor completes the form for you, check your records during your next visit to be sure the information he has is accurate. Using a nickname or your middle name will cause significant delays in payment.

In the past, telephone service representatives answered inquiries about claims status by looking at microfilm listings which were often not up to date. With the new system, each clerk has direct access to the computer. More current information on your claim's status will be available. Sometimes, however, the service representative will not be able to answer questions about the claim immediately because the computer system may not be working. Fortunately, this should not be much of a problem because the system is working more than 90 percent of the time.

However, one problem that still exists is a large backlog of correspondence. It is expected to take about six months to reduce the backlog to normal levels. Therefore, if you have a question, try calling the toll-free telephone service rather than writing a letter. The toll-free telephone service (1-800-442-2600) is available from 7:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. each work day. You will have better luck getting through early in the day (before 9 a.m.) or after 3 p.m. The Dallas-Fort Worth metro line (647-2282) is not as busy as the toll-free service. These numbers are shown on the statement entitled "Explanation of Medicare Benefits." Please have your health insurance claim number and claims information handy when you call.

SPEAKING OF SOAPS

by Mary Ann Cooper

The departure of Genie Frances as Tony Geary's leading lady was the start of a series of events which almost wrecked "General Hospital."

Anne Howard Bailey, recipient of the distinguished Emmy and winner of the coveted Christopher Award, has been named head writer of "General Hospital," it was announced by Jacqueline Smith, Vice President, Daytime Programs, ABC Entertainment. The appointment is effective immediately.

In addition, Ms. Bailey was story editor/writer for PBS' "The Adams Chronicles," story supervisor/writer for the "Beacon Hill" series, and creator and head writer for "How to Survive a Marriage," for Metromedia/NBC.

In the announcement, Ms. Smith also said that Thom Racina and Leah Laiman, two current members of the "General Hospital" writing staff, have been named associate head writers. Mr. Racina, a prolific novelist, has also written for such television series as ABC's "Family," "Ms. Laiman, a documentary film writer, has written for such prime time series as "Grandpa Goes to Washington." She has also written for Cosmopolitan and other national magazines.

A.J. Russell, a triple Emmy Award-winner and a consultant to the series since 1977, continues in the capacity. Together Mr.

Russell and Producer Gloria Monty have brought innovations to daytime stories, taking romance out of the living room and putting it "on the road" with the popular Luke and Laura adventures.

Continuing as an important member of the writing staff is Bob Shaw who has had a 20-year career in TV series writing. Among his outstanding credits, Mr. Shaw was the story editor and writer (eight episodes) for "Dallas," story editor and writer (20 episodes) of "Medical Center," and story editor and writer (50 episodes) of "Peyton Place."

Other members of the writing team are: Jeanne Glynn, Susan Goldberg, and Chuck Pratt, Jr.

The husband-and-wife writing team of Bill and Joyce Corrington, who had been head writers for "General Hospital" on an interim basis, will leave Los Angeles for their home in New Orleans, their writing base for many years. "We thank Bill and Joyce Corrington for their contributions to 'General Hospital,' and we look forward to working with them again," Ms. Smith said.

Finally, the turmoil surrounding daytime's #1 soap, "General Hospital," has begun to subside. Ever since Genie Frances left the show last December ABC's most successful soap has suffered a series of body blows. First, head writer, Pat Falck-Smith abruptly left to work for "Days of Our Lives" taking her whole staff with her. Then Floria Olonty, the executive producer and mastermind of GH's dramatic rise in the ratings had to have major surgery, putting her out of action for a considerable period of time. It is a tribute to the cast and crew of "General Hospital" that it never relinquished its hold on 1st place during this critical period. Now that Ms. Monty is recuperating and carefully monitoring the action on the set, ABC has announced another important step toward bringing back business as usual on ABC's only West Coast soap.

Arthur Hancock chooses horses over music

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It was horses over music in a photo finish of sorts for Arthur Hancock, owner of Kentucky Derby winner Gato del Sol.

But Hancock is at the gate again for another fling at a country music career — a career he gave up for the horse breeding business in 1967.

The 39-year-old Hancock has an album out on Monument Records, appropriately titled "A Horse of a Different Color." His horse, Tap Shoe, which finished 14th in the Kentucky Derby a year ago, is pictured on the cover. A single has already been released from the album — "If It's All the Same to You (I'll Be Leaving in the Morning)."

He describes the music as "country-folk." "I gave it (a music career) a real good try, but not as good as I should have," Hancock said. "I loved horses and the farm, too."

He has maintained his interest in music and still writes songs. He also plays the guitar and a little harmonica and piano; and says that it's an enjoyable sideline to the horse business.

"I'd like to make a contribution (to the music business)," he said. "I'd like for some of these artists to hear my songs and maybe record them."

He wrote, arranged and sang all 10 songs on the album, which include, "Nashville on My Mind," "Divorcee After Dawn" and "There Ain't No Life Without You."

Earlier, Hancock wrote songs that were recorded by Ray Price and Grandpa Jones.

After graduating from Vanderbilt University in Nashville in 1966, Hancock recorded three singles for Monument, including a song written by Kris Kristofferson, "When I Loved Her."

The three songs were stragglers on the charts, so Hancock returned to the family farm in Kentucky to concentrate on horses instead of hits.

It was Pete Rowan, guitarist for Bill Monroe's famous Bluegrass Boys, who first got Hancock interested in bluegrass music.

"He'd take me to the Grand Ole Opry," Hancock said. "I saw what the road life was like from Pete and I didn't want that."

So the horse business prevailed. But Hancock still had fond ties to the music world, naming one of his horses after Kristofferson.

Raquel Welch plays Indian woman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Raquel Welch stars as an Indian woman in the waning days of the American Indian's prairie empire in the long-delayed NBC movie, "The Legend of Walks Far Woman."

She plays Walks Far Woman, a Pikuni Blackfoot who marries a handsome and arrogant Sioux warrior named Horses Ghost. She then sees her world crushed by the advance of the white man in the late 19th century.

"This role appealed to me as an actress because it was unexpected of me," Miss Welch said.

The 2½-hour movie, which NBC will telecast Sunday, also stars Nick Mancuso as Horses Ghost, Bradford Dillman as a mixed blood trader and George Glutsi as Old Grandfather.

The first half of the movie is disappointing. It drags along for about 30 or 40 minutes.

Then Walks Far Woman meets Horses Ghost and it takes off like an Indian pony on a buffalo hunt. During their rough-and-tumble courtship, the sparks fly between this independent Indian woman and this cocky brave.

The second half of the movie is well worth waiting for. Miss Welch completely submerges her sex symbol persona in this well-performed role.

"This woman, in a sense, is liberated before her time," Miss Welch says. "The Indian women didn't have a voice in running the tribe, but they did have a profound influence. Walks Far Woman was an independent woman."

The role was a very strenuous and physical one that required her to run a foot race and ride a bucking horse.

RETURNING PITCHER. Pampa High junior Wade Barker is expected to be one of the leaders of the mound staff next season. Barker will be one of 17 returning lettermen in 1983.

Harvester baseball team may reap rich dividends next season

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa High's baseball team suffered through the growing pains of a youth movement this season, but the Harvesters should reach the full bloom of maturity in 1983.

Consider that Pampa loses only one starter (second baseman Mark Case), returns 17 lettermen and the entire pitching staff. Those ingredients could make the Harvesters a legitimate contender for the new District 1-4A title next season.

"Experience is going to be a big plus," Pampa coach Gary Haynes said. "We'll have all our pitchers back plus a couple of sophomores who are going to be good."

"Our hitting is going to have to improve, but after a year's growth I look for these guys to come back hitting the ball better."

Pampa had only a 3-21 overall record and a 1-11 mark in District 3-5A, but closed the season with a 10-8 win over Palo Duro.

"If you take a positive look at the season, we went into the sixth or seventh inning of several games trailing by only one or two runs," Haynes added. "We'd make some mistakes and the other team would score six or seven runs on us."

Even though he won't be around next season, except maybe as a spectator, Haynes feels the Harvesters are ready to turn things around in their favor.

"Next year they can win those close ones instead of letting them slip by," Haynes said. "They competed well this year, but I think next year is going to be a very good year."

Top returnees include pitcher-outfielder Brian Bowen, outfielder Charles Wuest, pitcher Wade Barker, first baseman Rick Baird, outfielder Steve Flaherty, pitcher Devin Cross, outfielder-pitcher Coyle Winborn, shortstop Danny Guerra, outfielder Brad Knutson, catchers Dennis Dougherty and Jeff Steward, Tobi Ritthaler, pitcher-third baseman Randy Skaggs, outfielder David Owens and Lane Howard.

Haynes resigned this year to go to work for a local oil company. Bill Butler, his assistant, will be the new head coach.

Nichols to conduct camp

Garland Nichols' basketball camp will begin next month at the Pampa Youth Center with six sessions scheduled for both boys and girls who are not high school varsity players.

Nichols, who is head coach of the high school Harvesters, said two sessions (June 28-July 2 and July 19-July 23) had to be canceled.

The first session is June 14-18 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. daily. Interested youngsters are urged to register as soon as possible at the Youth Center. Youngsters can also check on the sessions schedule at the Center.

Dunlap wins, 20-6

Dunlap Industrial pounded Dixie, 20-6, Tuesday in a Pampa National Little League game at Optimist Park.

Winning pitcher was P.J. Moose, who registered four strikeouts. Sue Birch took the loss.

Chris Martinez led Dunlap's hitting attack with four singles. David Doke scored five times and had four runs batted in.

Moose added a two-run double.

Brian Noack had two singles to lead Dixie.

Dunlap is coached by Gene Rains.

Fitness First!

By Tim McLaughlin
Youth Center Director

The basic idea behind this column is to educate, and to help readers to question their basic fitness and understanding about fitness and the components that go into it. All basic body fitness can be categorized in five areas: heart and lung fitness, strength, flexibility, body size (shape, weight, and fat content), and relaxation (mental and physical). There are many other factors that enter into athletics, injuries and other related areas, but everyone should be concerned with fitness because it helps improve the quality of life. If you have any questions about fitness and its related fields, or have questions or disagreements with anything in Fitness First!, feel free to write me at P.O. Box 1164, Pampa, Tex. 79065.

Pool Opens

The pool should be open June 1 after a month of extensive repairs. With the addition of a new filter, heater, drain, pump, and motor, the pool should be in great shape for summer swimming. Our apologies go to any one who has been inconvenienced, but unfortunately the work had to be done in order for the pool to operate properly. Swimming lessons are still available for those of you who have not signed up your children. All the instructors are Red Cross approved. Take the time to be sure that your child has the opportunity to be safe in the water by enrolling them in swim lessons.

Basketball Meeting

There will be an important meeting for the summer basketball league. The meeting will be Tuesday night at 8:30 in the recreation hall of the Youth Center. Topics for discussion will include league fees, playing times, roster, rules, referees and other related questions. Team leaders, captains, or a team member should be present to register the team. If you cannot have someone present, call Tim or Bill sometime this week to get the details.

Summer Memberships

For all the college and school kids there are summer memberships available for the fitness center. Fitness Center memberships for individuals are $45, tennis memberships are $45, and an unlimited combination membership is $60 for three months. Come by the Fitness Center any day and take a look at all the facilities that are available. The Pampa Youth and Community Center is located at 1005 West Harvester.

Lakers rally to down 76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers' Coach Pat Riley proved himself a master of understatement after his team beat the Philadelphia 76ers in the first game of the National Basketball Association championship playoffs.

"We're a team of spurts," said Riley after the Lakers' 124-117 triumph over a Sixers' team that crumpled in the last 26 minutes Thursday night.

The Lakers trailed, 83-68 with 5:59 left in the third period. In the next 10½ minutes, Los Angeles outscored Philadelphia, 40-9, to turn that 15-point deficit into a 16-point lead.

That made it 108-92 with 7:35 left in the game. The 76ers never got closer than the final margin of seven points, and most of that came at the end on two three-point goals by Andrew Toney and another by Steve Mix.

The second game in the best-of-seven series is here Sunday, with the third and fourth at Los Angeles Tuesday and Thursday.

The victory was the ninth straight in the playoffs for the Lakers, breaking the NBA record of most consecutive playoff victories in one season. The 1950 Minneapolis Lakers won their first eight.

Minneapolis actually won nine straight if you count the last game of the 1949 playoffs.

The Lakers, who hadn't played in 12 days, previously eliminated the Phoenix Suns and San Antonio Spurs, each in four straight games to win the Western Conference title.

They've been waiting since for the winner of the Eastern final between Philadelphia and Boston, which went seven games.

Jamaal Wilkes and Norm Nixon led seven Lakers in double figures, each with 24 points. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar collected 23.

It was the 100th of 105 career playoff games that Abdul-Jabbar scored 20 or more points.

Nixon also had 10 assists and two steals, while Earvin "Magic" Johnson contributed 14 rebounds and nine steals. Wilkes also had 10 rebounds, seven off the offensive boards.

Philadelphia, which reached the final with victories over Atlanta, Milwaukee and Boston, was led by Julius Erving's 27. Erving had nine rebounds, three assists and three steals.

Bobby Jones had 19, Toney 20 and nine assists, and Darryl Dawkins 16 points. Maurice Cheeks scored 12, handed out nine assists and made three steals in a losing cause.

Philadelphia started fast, leading 61-50 at halftime. The Lakers appeared flat from their long layoff.

But Los Angeles adjusted, caught up at 1:27 of the third period, 87-87, and took the lead for good on a fastbreak layup by Mike Cooper. It was 91-89 after three quarters.

Wilkes scored 16 of his points in the third period, with Nixon getting 11 and Abdul-Jabbar 10.

Wilkes said the turnaround was due to the pride and character of the Western champions.

"We got our defense going and the opportunity shots and made them," said Wilkes.

"If we can keep Doc (Erving) at 25 points or less we ought to win," said Wilkes. "Another key to our second half was our defense off the offensive boards. It triggered our fastbreak and turned the game around," Wilkes said.

Coach Billy Cunningham of the 76ers said his team played well for 2½ periods, then broke down at both ends of the court.

"They used traps to limit our inside game. They kept us to one shot and were able to run and get their transition game going."

"They're a great team, but I'm confident we'll bounce back," Cunningham said.

Erving, sitting with ice packs on both knees, sat patiently and explained what happened to his team as the others dressed hurriedly and left.

"If we won it in a breeze today, we probably wouldn't know how to act. Now we have to do it the hard way. In the third period they came at us in waves."

"We were beaten tonight but now we feel we can come back and do the beating on Sunday."

Golf world pays homage to Nicklaus

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — It was 25 years ago almost to the day that the U.S. Open golf championship was played in Toledo, Ohio, and a big, friendly Columbus pharmacist named Charlie Nicklaus brought his 17-year-old son to watch the stars.

The kid was a skinny tow-head whose voice was changing and who hadn't begun to shave. He was bug-eyed at the sight of Ben Hogan, Sam Snead, Cary Middlecoff and others.

"He'll be playing in this tournament some day," Ohioans said proudly, introducing the kid around. "He won the state tournament, you know."

"Oh, sure," said cynical members of the press, who are accustomed to hometown pride. They then walked over to watch Hogan on the practice tee.

Well, the kid made it, as his pop and friends predicted, and this is the week that golf pays homage to Jack Nicklaus, the non pareil.

This is Jack's personal week. It's his party. A former President, Gerald Ford, dropped in. So did Bob Hope and Mrs. Hope. The game's high echelon — former commissioner Joe Dey, Masters chairman Hord Hardin, faded legends such as Gene Sarazen, Byron Nelson, Glenna Collett Vare and Patty Berg — all are around.

Jack has had many glorious weeks over the past two decades while carving out a collection of 19 major championships — a record that seems beyond anyone else's reach.

But this one's special.

It's his own tournament — the annual Memorial. It's on a course he personally designed and almost fashioned with his bare hands, the Muirfield Village Golf Club. It's in his own backyard, the suburbs of Columbus where he grew up, went to college and took his first lessons.

There is a strong similarity between the Masters and the Memorial just as there is a parallel in the careers of Nicklaus and the great Bob Jones, father of the Masters, America's two greatest golfers.

The best words to describe them are "gentleman" and "class" — both from moderately well-to-do backgrounds, both with strong ties to the game's tradition, both emerging as kings of their respective eras.

Jones died without ever winning his Masters. His best was a tie for 13th the first time the tournament was played. Nicklaus won the second Memorial in 1977.

He had subdued his own brainchild, just as he finally brought the Colonial to its knees two weeks ago after 10 frustrating failures.

At 42, Nicklaus has found that expanding business enterprises have not — as some doomsayers have predicted — in any way dulled his desire or game.

He recently bought 75 per cent of the MacGregor Company, which manufactures his clubs, projecting him into every facet of the game.

AL roundup Rangers blanked by Orioles

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Baltimore's Eddie Murray missed nine games with a hand injury in his left hand — and he's making up for it in a hurry.

Rebounding from his recent hand injury with a vengeance, Murray has picked up right where he left off. In his second game back in action Thursday night, he lashed four hits, including a home run, and drove in three runs as the Orioles stopped the Texas Rangers 6-0.

"I don't feel like I can hit well with my left hand right now," said Murray, who did his damage Thursday night with virtually one hand. "It feels bad — I'm just trying to use my left hand as a guide hand. I'm not swinging with it at all.

"It's only hitting — swinging the bat — that bothers it," he added. "I can play the field fine now."

In addition to his sixth homer of the season, Murray clouted two singles and a double. His performance backed the five-hit pitching of Sammy Stewart, who got his first complete game of the year, his first career victory over the Rangers and his first career shutout in the majors.

Murray's two-run homer in the first inning produced all the runs Stewart, 5-3, actually needed. The Baltimore starter struck out two and walked one.

In the only other AL games, Milwaukee edged California 4-3 and Seattle outscored Boston 10-6. There were no National League games Thursday night. Brewers 4, Angels 3.

Paul Molitor homered on the game's third pitch to put Milwaukee ahead to stay and Cecil Cooper unloaded a two-run blast in the third inning to lead the Brewers over California.

Molitor belted his fifth homer of the season leading off against loser Ken Forsch, 4-4. Cooper's blow, his fourth, gave the Brewers a 4-0 lead and they hung on to cool off the streaking Angels, who had won nine of their last 11 games.

Drivers ready for Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — After three weeks of frenzied preparation, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's 2½-mile track is silent. The next time the 33 gleaming race cars are wheeled from their Gasoline Alley garages will be on race day.

The next time all of the powerful engines are brought to life, three abreast in 11 rows along the main straightaway, will be on Sunday at the start of the 66th running of the Indianapolis 500.

Thursday's final practice session for the world's richest automobile race again offered glimpses of the speed that produced the fastest Indy starting lineup in history. Again, from left teammates Rick Mears and Kevin Cogan were above 200 mph, and car owner Roger Penske pronounced their identical PC-10s as race-ready.

"We got both cars at 202 early in the practice. They were running great, so we took 'em back to the garage. There wasn't anything else we needed to do," said Penske.

Also leading the speed assault at more than 200 mph were teammates Mario Andretti and Gordon Johncock, both former winners who will start from the second row. Cogan, who will start between Mears and four-time winner A.J. Foyt on the front row, had a lap at 202.292.

Two of the 33 starters failed to take advantage of Thursday's practice session.

Rookie Chet Fillip, who has yet to drive his first lap in an Indy-car race, did not practice because of a clutch problem. The only other no-show Thursday was two-year Indy veteran Dennis Firestone, whose race engine was being rebuilt.

Foyt, who qualified at more than 203 mph for a record 25th Indy start, failed to get his March-Cosworth over 170 mph in a brief appearance on the track. The only four-time Indy winner gruffly said the car had "some sort of problem" and took it back to the garage for work.

A crewman for Foyt, the third man in the front row, indicated, however, that the problem was in the chassis setup and was not serious.

Michael Chandler, who put the fastest of the four stock block Chevrolet engine-powered cars in the race, came off the track spraying oil and the crew immediately took it back to the garage to begin repairs. And Gary Bettenhausen didn't even complete his first lap before blowing an engine in his Lightning-Cosworth.

Leonard to wait on recovery before deciding on future

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a time when an eye injury may have ended his boxing career, a vision of himself away from the ring is coming into view for welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard.

On Thursday, holding his first news conference since undergoing surgery to repair a detached retina in his left eye, the 26-year-old Leonard said he could walk away from boxing if necessary.

"I would miss the challenge but there's nothing left for me to prove. I have destroyed all the animals and the killers," he said.

A gold medal winner in the 1976 Olympics, Leonard later captured the World Boxing Council welterweight title when he defeated Wilfred Benitez. He won the title a second time by avenging his only loss in 34 professional fights when he stopped Roberto Duran in eight rounds.

Leonard won the World Boxing Association junior middleweight championship from Ayub Kalule, a crown he later voluntarily surrendered. He became the undisputed champion by beating World Boxing Association king Thomas Hearns.

"If I were to fight again it would be (middleweight champion Marvin) Hagler," Leonard said. "Hagler and a fourth title would look good on my resume."

Five days before his scheduled May 14 bout with Ray Stafford in Buffalo, Leonard underwent surgery to reattach his retina.

His physician at the Wilmer Eye Institute in Baltimore, Dr. Ronald Michels, described the operation as a success and said Leonard's vision, 20-15 before the injury, has improved to a nearly-normal level.

Michels added, however, that it would be months before he could advise Leonard whether it was safe to resume his boxing career.

"Time is a factor," Leonard said. "If the doctor advises me against fighting, that's it. If I get the green light I will think about it."

If he cannot continue in the ring, Leonard says he may pursue an acting career.

Texas League roundup

By The Associated Press

Mark Schuster's solo homer in the bottom of the ninth inning powered the El Paso Diablos to a 6-5 Texas League baseball victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

In other Texas League action Thursday night, Amarillo beat Jackson, 8-6, and Shreveport and San Antonio split a doubleheader. Shreveport won the first game, 9-4, and San Antonio took the nightcap, 7-4. Arkansas' scheduled game at Midland was postponed because of rain.

Schuster's homer enabled the Diablos to win their 12th straight game.

Dan Murphy had a solo homer for Tulsa.

Bob Gibson, 4-1, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Kevin Richards, 0-2.

A three-run homer by Luis Quinones gave the Amarillo Gold Sox an 8-6 come-from-behind victory over the Jackson Mets.

Jackson held a 5-0 lead until Amarillo tied the game with a five-run rally highlighted by a two-run double by George Hinshaw and a two-run single by Randy Kaczmarek.

Darryl Strawberry drove home three runs for Jackson with a sacrifice fly and a triple.

The winning pitcher was Bob Long, 3-6. Doug Sisk, 5-3, was the loser.

Catcher Bob Cummings and second baseman Doug Wabeke provided the hitting power as the Shreveport Captains beat the San Antonio Dodgers, 9-4, in the first game of their doubleheader.

Cummings had a three-run homer in the first inning and Wabeke drove in four runs with a homer, a double and a single.

Scotti Madison and Greg Smith each had two-run homers for San Antonio.

Chuck Luster, 2-2, was the winning pitcher. Tagged with the loss was Tom Klawitter, 2-3.

Tony Brewer had a three-run homer for San Antonio in the 7-4 victory in the second game of the doubleheader.

AT'S - EYE view of the IMB proton decay detector. A man is standing on a catwalk that actually surrounds top of the six - story cube. Behind him is the tunnel leading to the detector. The electronic and water filter element has been installed there. Before him, the detector is lined with black plastic and a network of phototubes which are represented by the dots.

Physicists toy with the end of it all

Tom Tiede

AIRPORT HARBOR, N.J. (NEA) - Today's class called to order 2,000 feet of a salt mine here on the frigid shore of Lake Michigan. The mine belongs to the Morton Company when it rains, it pours, that's neither here nor there. Pay attention now, cause this may get a little confusing.

The lesson concerns tons. And maybe the end of the world.

Can you hear me in the back row? The proton should need no introduction. It is the elementary particle found in the nucleus of all atoms, and it comprises the atomic nucleus of the protium isotope of hydrogen. Are you with me so far? No? All right, let's just say the proton is a fundamental element of the universe.

It's also a newly controversial element. That's because it may not be what always appeared to be. For the last 100 years scientists have believed that protons are indestructible, which is to say they can't decay. Recently, however, there's been some rethinking of the subject.

The rethinking was first done by Harvard University physicist Steven Weinberg and Sheldon Glashow. They won the 1979 Nobel Prize, in part, for theorizing that protons may bite the dust after all. The theory is that protons are linked to neutrons, and therefore they must eventually expire.

I told you it was confusing. You there, straighten up your seat.

So what does it all mean? As, perhaps nothing good. Scientists now say that if protons decay, it means that matter may also decay. In other words, if protons turn out, all matter may eventually turn into pure energy, and if that happens the result could be the destruction of the cosmos.

So that's why class is being held down in the Fairport Harbor salt mine. The U.S. government is sponsoring a highly technical experiment here that is designed to determine (1) whether or not protons do journey to the end of time, and (2) if the world is going to end.

I should point out that it is the only proton decay experiment being conducted today. In fact, they are fairly widespread. The U.S. government is sponsoring three others - in Idaho, Minnesota and in South Dakota - and scientists from several other nations are likewise engaged.

But the Fairport Harbor probe is the most ambitious of the lot. And it's the one most likely to succeed. It's being directed by a couple of eminent physicists, Frederick Reines of the University of California, and Jack Vanderdelve of Michigan, and it's costing more money than the others.

It has cost $4 million to date. And that's just to get set up. Dr. Vanderdelve says the money has been used to build an enclosed laboratory in a 350-foot shaft of salt. The laboratory has been stocked with banks of electronic detectors that will soon begin searching for proton decay.

The search will take place in a six-story tank that carries 2.5 million gallons of purified water. The water contains protons that number 10 to the 29th power per ton, or 10 followed by 28 zeros, and it is surrounded by rows of five-inch lights that are something like phototube cells.

Dr. Vanderdelve says the cells are supposed to monitor the transitory activity of the protons. Thus, if one of the protons in the water does decay, a light will flash, a computer will take note, the world of physics will be set on its ear, and everyone can begin to get ready for doomsday.

Then again, it may not happen like this at all. And here's where things get really confusing. No one has ever seen protons before, ergo no one really knows how to get a peek at their death throes. So it may well be that the $4 million Fairport Harbor experiment will not work.

Dr. Vanderdelve is quite optimistic. He says the search should record as many as 100 dying protons a year. But he can't be absolutely positive. Even if the theory is correct, and protons do meet their maker, the machinery here may not be sensitive enough to record the passings.

In any event, Vanderdelve says he should know in a year or two, or perhaps three or four. He says construction is almost complete now, the actual experiment will begin in late spring, and he and Dr. Reines are prepared to spend the entire decade waiting for something to happen.

Law permits private club to discriminate

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Rotary International does not support a "whites only" membership policy in the Birmingham chapter, but can't force a change because of a "grandfather clause" in a 1922 club constitution, officials say.

The policy was disclosed after a newspaper editor said he resigned from the 350-member chapter after battling unsuccessfully for 3 1/2 years to change the membership rule.

The Alabama attorney general's office said Wednesday there is nothing illegal in the exclusionary policy because the Rotary is a private club meeting on private property.

Federal law also has no bearing on the policy, said U.S. Attorney Frank Donaldson, since the 1944

Civil Rights Act specifically exempts private clubs.

Rotary members voted 120-90 by secret ballot on May 12 to reject a change in their constitution that would have deleted the word "white" from membership requirements.

Birmingham has about 158,000 blacks out of 284,000 residents. At Rotary International headquarters in Evanston, Ill., president Stanley E. McCaffrey said Wednesday that the Birmingham policy excluding blacks is not supported by the parent organization, but the chapter is allowed to set its own rules.

Rotary International, which claims more than 906,000 members in 157 countries, does not admit women.
