British Lose Two Ships...

War Casualties Mount

By The Associated Press

Argentine warplanes knocked out two more British ships near the Falkland Islands in a devastating attack that left 24 dead and at least 20 wounded, British Defense Secretary John Nott told Parliament today.

He said 20 men were killed and about 20 wounded when the destroyer Coventry was bombed Tuesday and sunk, and that four men were killed and a small number wounded when the freighter-supply ship Atlantic Conveyor was hit and abandoned. The destroyer Broadsword was damaged in the Argentine attack.

A high-ranking British official said the freighter was hit with radar-deceiving Exocet missiles probably intended for the carrier Hermes, flagship of the British fleet.

Nott said 10 more warships have joined the Falklands armada in the last two days, and that British forces who landed at San Carlos "are now poised to begin their thrust on Port Stanley," capital of the Falklands.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told a Conservative Party meeting that "despite these grievous losses, neither our resolve nor our confidence is weakened."

The high-ranking British official, who declined to be identified, said the Atlantic Conveyor was hit from 28 miles away by two Exocet missiles fired by Argentine warplanes — the same kind of French-built missile that sank the British destroyer Sheffield on May 4.

He said the carrier Hermes was close enough to see the Atlantic Conveyor hit, and that the Exocets -- which fly about 6 feet above the surface of the water at about the speed of sound to avoid radar detection — probably were intended for the Hermes, one of two carriers in the armada and a base for Britain's vertical takeoff Harrier jets.

The source said the Coventry was hit by two 1,000-pound bombs from one of four Argentine aircraft that attacked both the Coventry and destroyer Broadsword, accompanying it on radar picket duty. He said the Broadsword suffered minor damage with no casualties reported.

Mrs. Thatcher's "War Cabinet" met earlier in the day, and a government source described the meeting as a "grim affair. We all recognize it was a bad day. But we hold fast to our objective," meaning the retaking of the Falkland Islands by British forces who landed near San Carlos Bay on Friday.

Rescue operations to recover crewmen from the icy South Atlantic continued throughout the night, British officials announced. But they did not say whether the vessels sank or how many men perished. British Defense Minister John Nott was to make a statement to the House of Commons.

Britain has said it lost 74 men and Argentina 394 since the Argentines seized the Falklands from Britain April 2. Most of the Argentine losses — 321 — were from the cruiser General Belgrano, torpedoed and sunk by a British submarine May 2.

The Atlantic Conveyor's most important taks had been to transport more Harrier fighter-bombers to the British armada fighting to regain the Falklands, but British officials said the jets had already been "disembarked."

The destroyer carried a crew of 270 men. It was not known how many men were aboard the freighter, which was requisitioned from the Cunard Steam Ship Co.

Destroy Planes...

British Damage Argentine AF

LONDON (AP) — British forces fighting to recapture the Falkland Islands have destroyed or damaged about one quarter of the effective combat strength of Argentina's air force, British defense and intelligence sources believe.

They believe the total "kills" could be even higher because some of the warplanes damaged in dogfights with British fighters or hit by missiles and gunfire probably ditched as they limped back to their mainland bases 450 miles west of the Falklands.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said the British have destroyed 45 air force combat planes in the South Atlantic conflict. Altogether the British claim they have knocked 67 planes and helicopters.

"Our claims have been on the low side," said an intelligence official who asked not to be identified. "We believe other planes were hit in attacks on our ships and may not have made it back to their bases."

"Around 10 percent of damaged planes are probably going to go down before they reach their bases. That's the accepted ratio," said Maj. Bob Elliott of the International Institute for Strategic Studies.

"If the Argentines go on losing planes at this rate, they'll be a spent force in a number of days," said Air Vice-Marshal Norman Hoad, former commander of Britain's Joint Airborne Task Force and a World War II bomber pilot.

If the British claims are accurate, then the Argentines have lost about one-third of their Mirage and Dagger interceptors and an eighth of their Skyhawk fighter-bombers.

"The Argentines are suffering colossal attrition rates — 25 to 30 percent. In World War II, 10 percent was considered heavy," said Capt. George Baldwin, former director of the Royal Navy's air wing.

The Argentine air force's current effective strength may be even less than it is on paper. Elliott commented: "Most air forces have a serviceability rate of around 75 percent at any one time. In combat situations, that gets worse and they must also be losing a few in accidents.

Weather's Spring Fling Continues

The weather continued its spring fling in the Snyder area early today as thunderstorms roamed West Texas again. As a result, Snyder had rainfall for the 14th day this month, the sixth day in a row.

Thunderstorms early this morning produced .24 inch in the official gauge at the city water plant. This ran the total for the year to 12.63 inches, with 10.13 of it credited to May.

The overnight rains were heavier south of Snyder. The measurement at the Lake J. B. Thomas dam was 1.10, and up to 1.50 was reported across South Scurry County. Only .31 fell at Fluvanna.

Local Civil Defense authorities were alerted before midnight when a vicious storm was reported near Lubbock and moving to the southeast. However, this storm passed north of Scurry County. Later, another thunderstorm moved in from the west, and most of its rain fell south of Snyder.

Lake J. B. Thomas had caught a net of 6,000 acre feet of water for the month, Colorado River Municipal Water District officials reported this morning. This represented a vertical increase in elevation of two feet. Both the river and Bull Creek were still flowing this morning, but the flow had decreased considerably.

Lake E. V. Spence has caught 20,000 acre feet of water this month on a vertical rise of two feet.

Elsewhere, tennis ball-sized hail pelted Monahans late Tuesday, injuring 14 people and inflicting heavy damage on businesses, homes, utility poles and trees.

"There's damage all over the place, windows, roofs, cars," said Monahans police Lt. Mike Strickland.

Breaking glass was responsible for the minor injuries suffered by 14 people, according to Police Chief David Mills. None of the injured were admitted to the hospital, he said.

"There's probably not a business or house that doesn't have some damage," Mills said.

Extra police were called out to provide security for businesses with broken windows, Strickland said.

"Most of them got their places boarded up and everything is quiet now," Strickland said early today.

"I've heard about hail that big, but I had never seen it before. The wind was pretty high and that made it worse," Strickland said.

Six mobile homes were also damaged by high winds and the heavy rain accompanying the storm caused some minor street flooding.

Trees were stripped of their leaves in some areas and some utility poles were snapped by the high winds accompanying the storm.

"You'd think it was a glacier," Mills said of the coating of hail on the ground. "It was curb-to-curb ice. I've never seen anything like it."

A tornado watch covered 47 counties in West Texas and North Central Texas early today. The tornado watch was along and 70 miles and on either side of a line from 60 miles southwest of Midland to 60 miles north of Abilene.

Golf ball size hail and street flooding was reported at Lubbock as the storm system passed through that West Texas city. A tornado warning was issued for Lubbock and Crosby counties as the heavier storms passed through the area.

Motorists in the Abilene area were warned that heavy rains would likely produce flooding of low water crossings and low areas of highways and roads throughout the night.

Heavy thunderstorms moved across North Central Texas early today, causing some minor street flooding in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Some scattered thunderstorms were also reported at dawn in the Chamber Still Hunts Manager

A search committee for a new manager still has some work to do but is making progress, Snyder Chamber of Commerce directors were told at their regular meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Brenda Hedges, chamber president who heads the search committee, said some applicants have been interviewed, and the committee hopes to to be ready to negotiate with a prospective manager soon. In this connection, the committee has sought guidelines from the board concerning salary, etc.

The manager's position has been vacant since April 9, effective date of Bill Warner's resignation. Warner left to join the staff of an Odessa bank.

In his monthly financial report, Brian Boswell, treasurer, said that all of the chamber's revolving fund accounts are "in the black" now. These accounts include the Goldcoats, playoff games, the annual banquet, etc.

The board decided to confer with officials of the Texas Employment Commission on the possibility of adding a telephone in the chamber building. The chamber has been furnishing office space for a TEC representative two days a week, and the two existing telephone lines are frequently inadequate on those two days, the staff reported.

Board members reviewed a list of delinquent members, and each agreed to make contacts in efforts to bring them up to date.

Mrs. Hedges presided over the meeting. Other board members attending were Boswell, Elizabeth Potts, Truett Bryan, Troy Williamson, Wedge Turner, David Thompson, and Ernie Armstrong.

The SDN Column

Several Scurry County residents northwest and north of Snyder report rainfall measurements which are used in forecasting flooding conditions on Deep Creek. One of them is Bill Jones of Fluvanna, and he disclosed this week that the erratic showers recently have made it difficult to decide exactly how much rainfall to report.

Jones has two gauges at his home. One is in front of his house (on the west side) and the other is on the opposite side. They are some 50 yards apart. These are rain gauges furnished by the weather service, and they are known to be reliable.

However, early this week, Jones says they varied by .35 inch in their measurements for one of the rain showers. But this really should not surprise those who have observed this month's rains. They have been spotty for the most part, but fortunately they have kept going long enough to cover all of the county.

★ ★ ★

Bob Clifton says this month's rains have turned one monotonous question around.

"For weeks, everywhere you went, people would ask when it was going to rain. Now they ask when is it going to quit raining."

★ ★ ★

A sure sign that "vacation season" is here:

Carlsbad Caverns National Park will begin its summer schedule Saturday with an expanded schedule.

Also, Six Flags Over Texas has unveiled its new ride for 1982. It's called the "Cliffhanger," and it features a free fall that suddenly flattens out just before it reaches ground level. From what we have heard about it and seen on television, it must be something like riding an out-of-control elevator.

It's definitely for the younger generation and those who refuse to respect their years.

★ ★ ★

Some of the people at city hall were discussing "closed caption" programming on television, which reminded us of a comment we heard. Closed caption programming, incidentally, is a device that translates the audio portion of TV programs into phrases that appear as subtitles on sets equipped with a special decoding device for the hard of hearing.

It was reported that the president of the National Captioning Institute made this statement concerning the service:

"We're extremely proud that so many people can now understand, for the first time, what is being said on TV."

This probably would be welcome news, also, to those who hear well.

Falklands Document

BOSTON (AP) — President Andrew Jackson had trouble with Argentina 151 years ago over the Falkland Islands, according to an old document that disputed Argentine claims to the islands.

Jackson ordered a diplomat in Buenos Aires to protest Argentine warnings to American sea captains against fishing near the South Atlantic islands, according to the diplomatic note signed by Martin Van Buren, Jackson's secretary of state.

The document was purchased over the weekend by a Boston manuscript collector.

"The government of Buenos Ayres can certainly deduce no good title to these islands ... from any fact connected with their history in reference to the first discovery, occupancy or exclusive possession of them by the subjects of Spain," wrote Van Buren. The five-page letter, dated Feb. 10, l831, was addressed to John M. Forbes, U.S. charge d'affaires in Buenos Aires.

The letter was connected with a dispute over the rights of U.S. fishermen, whalers and seal fishermen in the South Atlantic.

Biggest Arms Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has secretly notified Congress it plans to sell Israel an additional 75 F-16 advanced jet fighters for more than $2.5 billion, the biggest arms sale to Israel in more than four years.

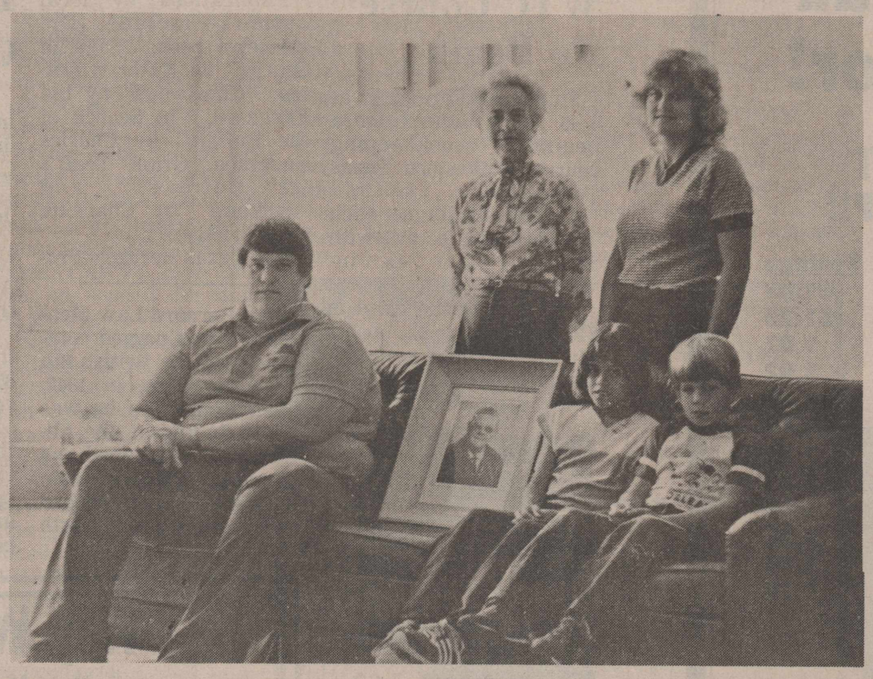

U.S. defense sources, who asked to remain anonymous, said the Pentagon sent a classified notification to Capitol Hill on Monday, a day before Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon conferred with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Congress is usually notified of all arms sales about 20 days before the public announcement.

TRIGG SCHOLARSHIP--Tommy Collum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Timora and a 1982 graduate of Snyder High School, has been awarded the Trigg Memorial Scholarship. This scholarship is given each year to a Snyder graduate who has been a part of the music program. The scholarship was established by friends of Herman Trigg upon his death and is given annually. Trigg loved music. Collum will attend McMurry College in Abilene this fall. Shown with him are from left, standing, Sallie Trigg Tate, Sara Trigg Goebel, and, seated, Lisa Goebel and Victor Goebel, Trigg's grandchildren. A portrait of the late Mr. Trigg is also shown. A.—No one person does it. However, there is an assistant superintendent, administration-personnel, who handles applications and interviews applicants. Following approval by administrators, the actual hiring is done by the board of trustees.

For Border Patrol ...

Court Ruling Causes Woes

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A federal court ruling on a lawsuit against the U.S. Border Patrol is making it tougher for officers to catch illegal aliens, Border Patrol officials say.

The ruling involves the complicated grey area of "reasonable suspicion" and is making Border Patrol agents think twice before stopping someone for questioning, says Alan Eliason, chief agent in the El Paso District.

"We're not pushing the panic button," he said. "We're not saying, 'Oh my God, the judge has put us out of business.' He didn't. We're still catching a lot of illegal aliens.

"But it seems to put more of a burden on the officer in his daily duties by narrowing the focus of who he can talk to," he said.

The ruling resulted from a lawsuit filed March 11 by four Mexican-American El Paso residents who claimed their rights were violated by Border Patrol agents in raids on area taverns Jan. 29.

The raids were part of a crackdown along the border staged by Jack Richardson, who was the acting chief agent in El Paso at the time. The same week the lawsuit was filed, Richardson returned to his regular job as chief agent in Del Rio. Eliason was appointed to the permanent post a few weeks later.

A temporary injunction requested in the lawsuit was handed down last week by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton. The government has requested a clarification of some points of the ruling and Bunton may answer that petition next week.

In the injunction, Bunton ordered the Border Patrol not to conduct "warrantless, dragnet" raids on local bars and ruled that the Jan. 29 raids were illegal because they detained bar patrons without a reasonable suspicion that each person had violated the law.

Eliason said the Border Patrol has halted raids on all but the most "notorious" bars since the lawsuit was filed, but has continued to hit some local businesses believed to employ illegal aliens.

Border Patrol officials said the bar raids were conducted because El Paso police had provided information that illegal aliens were employed at the bars.

The ruling also enjoined the Border Patrol from searching the non-public areas of businesses, such as offices or kitchens, without a warrant.

Finally, and of greatest concern to the Border Patrol, the ruling said officers must have a "reasonable suspicion" that a person is an illegal alien before they stop him for questioning.

Reasonable suspicion, in the language of the law, is a higher criteria than that provided by existing immigration law, Eliason said. The Immigration and Nationalization Act says officers can question "any alien or person believed to be an alien" about his citizenship, he said.

But under the reasonable suspicion ruling, an officer wanting to question a person would be required to have specific reasons for believing the suspect was an illegal alien.

"It's easier to come up with a set of factors to suspect this person of being an alien," Eliason said. "But to reasonably suspect him of being illegal is a lot tougher."

Under the old method, an officer could stop anyone who looked, dressed or acted like an alien. But that often led to Border Patrolmen checking the identification of Mexican-Americans — one of the factors in the lawsuit.

Eliason said government lawyers have asked the judge to clarify whether reasonable suspicion is needed to simply stop someone and ask for identification papers.

"The Supreme Court of the United States has already ruled that a brief interrogatory stop (at highway checkpoints) is not violative of the Constitution," he said. "In that case, we have a much lesser degree of suspicion required. We had presumed that same rationale would hold ... How long can you question a person before you are detaining him?"

While the agency is awaiting the clarification, Eliason said he has ordered his officers to be as certain as possible that a person is an illegal alien before stopping him.

The same order has spread throughout the western half of Texas — which is in Bunton's jurisdiction — and may be instituted throughout the 13-state southern region, Richardson said from his Del Rio office.

"The service attorneys have discussed it with all the chiefs in the southern region," said the man whose crackdown resulted in the lawsuit. "Depending on how the order reads in its final form, the whole region may have to go to this method. We'll just have to wait until we see what he'll do."

Eliason said a reasonable suspicion requirement could make it easier for Mexican-Americans to file lawsuits against the Border Patrol if they are mistakenly questioned.

"The United States is the most litigious country in the world," Eliason said. "Everybody sues everybody, it seems. As for whether there will be another lawsuit filed, who knows? They can do what they like.

Jehovah Witnesses To Gather Together

Jehovah Witnesses from Snyder will be convening with members of some 20 other congregations of the West Texas area at the Convention Center of San Angelo toward the end of this month.

Mardoqueo Maestas, spokesman for the group here said that 2,150 attended their gathering last December and about the same number are expected to attend this upcoming two-day session of Bible related instruction and fellowship.

"Our program theme is based upon the Bible book of Philippians chapter two verse 15," he said, "wherein we as Christians are encouraged to be blameless among a twisted generation and at the same time shine zealously as light bearers or illuminators in the world."

The principal address of the assembly will be delivered by Angelo C. Manera. Jr., district overseer working out of the world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses in Brooklyn, N.Y. His subject will be "Surviving a Generation of Darkness."

Hardin On Dean's List

LUBBOCK-Joe David Hardin, a graduate of Snyder High School and Western Texas College, is on the Texas Tech University College of Engineering dean's list for the spring semester.

A senior petroleum engineering student, he has maintained a grade point average of 3.71 while enrolled for 17 semester hours. Minimum requirements for the dean's list are a GPA of 3.5 and being enrolled for at least 12 hours. A resident of Fluvanna, Hardin has been employed by Watson Packers and Top Services for the past six years.

WTC Course To Begin

Students will register at 5:45 p. m. June 1 for a beginning bookkeeping course at Western Texas College.

The class will meet each Tuesday at 6 p. m., with Joann Pylant as instructor.

The fee for the class is $40, plus cost of books. Students should call 573-8511, extension 240, to reserve space in the class.

Scurry Library Named New Resource Center

Scurry County Library has been designated a Certified Texas Heritage Resource Center by the Texas Heritage Project of the Texas Historical Foundation, according to Mary Nell Bullard, librarian.

R. J. "Red" Walker and Dr. Harry Krenek accepted the plaque from the Texas Heritage Project to the library on May 24. Walker, chairman of the Scurry County Library Board and field representative for Texaco, is the cartographer of "Historic Map" of Scurry County and surrounding areas.

Dr. Krenek, member of the Scurry County Historical Commission, treasurer of Historic Scurry County, and professor of history at Western Texas College, is the author of "The Power Vested" the use of martial law and the National Guard in Texas domestic crises...1919-1932.

Scurry County Library holds approximately 1,000 Texas titles, files of the local historical commission, microfilm of the 1900 U. S. Texas census, subscribes to 10 Texas periodicals, and receives quarterlies from several Texas genealogical societies.

The basic collection has been purchased with local tax funds as budgeted by the County Commissioners Court; collection development funds through the Big Country Library System has made fine reference materials available. Many of the books have been given as memorials and others have been given by the authors.

Publications by local authors include Dr. Krenek's book, "Saga of Scurry" by Kathryn Cotton, "Ghostwood" by Ina Fargason, "In Search of the Buffalo" by Charles Anderson, Grant Teaff's "I Believe," and "Folklore" by Charlotte Cogdell Etgen.

The Texas Heritage Project has initiated the establishment of Texas Heritage Resource Centers across the state to spotlight Texas History, to emphasize the importance of Texas history courses, and to provide Texas history teachers, students and the general public with easy access to books and materials about the state.

The Texas Historical Project contacts publishers and authors of Texas books to obtain donations of these books to the centers.

As these books become available, they will be sent to the center free of charge. Scurry County Library has already received publications donated by Claude Dooley, El Paso Products Company of Odessa, and West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Gen. Bernard Law Montgomery was named commander of the British 8th Army in Egypt in 1942. Under Monty, as he was familiarly known, the Allied soldiers regrouped and started an offensive from El Alamein, which pushed the Germans out of North Africa.

'Poppy Day' To Be Observed

Poppy Day in Snyder will actually be a three day event lasting from Friday through Monday, according to a proclamation signed by Mayor Rod Waller.

Veteran of Foreign Wars (VFW) Buddy Poppies are assembled by disabled veterans and the proceeds are used exclusively for the benefit of disabled and needy veterans and the widows and orphans of deceased veterans.

According to the proclamation, the basic purpose of the annual sale of Buddy Poppies is reflected in "Honor the Dead by Helping the Living."

The VFW of the United States was the first organization to promote a nationwide sale of Poppies made by disabled and needy veterans.

To substantiate this claim, and to dispel any claims to the contrary, the following chronological and documentary information is briefly outlined.

In 1921, the Franco-American Children's League conducted a nationwide sale of poppies made in France, for the benefit of children in war-torn areas of France and Belgium.

In October, 1921, the American Legion, at its convention in Kansas City, repudiated its action of 1920 in choosing the poppy as its official flower, and substituted the daisy.

In May, 1922, the VFW of the U.S. conducted a nationwide sale of poppies made in France. This was after the dissolution of the Franco-American League and in response to an appeal by Madame Guerin, "the Poppy lady from France."

In October, 1922, following the first nationwide sale of poppies by the VFW, the American Legion repudiated the daisy as its official flower and again adopted the poppy.

In the spring of 1923, the American Legion conducted its first nationwide same of poppies made by a French manufacturer.

In 1923, the VFW evolved the idea which resulted in the VFW "Buddy" Poppy with the U. S. Patent Office, and still holds all trade-mark rights in the name "buddy" under the classification of artificial flowers.

Since May, 1924, the VFW has annually conducted a "Buddy" Poppy sale.

Beginning Classes Set

A class in beginning typing will begin at 6 p. m. June 7 at Western Texas College.

The instructor will be Joann Pylant.

The class will have 11, four-hour sessions, ending Aug. 23. Tuition is $40, plus the cost of the book.

Students interested in the course should call 573-8511, extension 240, to reserve space in the class.

Students will register in the Learning Resource Center at 5:45 p. m. on the opening day of the course and then meet one night each week.

They Will Get Islands...

Argentines Remain Confident

Argentina (AP) — The Argentines put out more flags this week, but the war news produced a cold shock of realism that dampened the patriotic fervor.

"We are very worried about 2,000 British troops on the Malvinas (Falklands)," said Rosario Torolini at ceremonies Tuesday celebrating the 1810 May revolution from Spain. "It's a big turn."

Hours earlier, military leaders told the nation 2,000 well-supplied Britons were ashore in the Falklands and controlled an area of 45 square miles. A communique said Argentine forces were trying to halt their advance.

The Argentine admission was 3,000 short of Britain's claim that it had put 5,000 men ashore. But it was a significant retreat from the earlier optimistic official accounts that spoke of only 400 to 800 British troops in a steadily shrinking circle on the beach, hounded by air attacks and "under the control" of land forces.

For many, the sharp shift put in question the optimism reflected in the scarce, vaguely worded communiques that have described the fighting since the landing on Friday.

Such successes as the damaging of another British warship on the May 25 holiday buoy up the public's spirits. But most realize the main question is who holds the islands.

Naval losses weaken the British fleet. But they could impel the Britain's air forces to escalate its attacks, perhaps including a raid on mainland bases.

Most Argentines clearly believe they will gain title to the islands when the crisis eventually ends, and many still expect a military rout to display Argentina's force of arms.

But hard realism is seeping into popular mythology. The Argentines so firmly believed that the British carrier Hermes had limped away from battle that one magazine sent photographers to Curacao where it was supposed to be seeking repairs. Street rumor had Adm. Sandy Woodward, the commander of the British task force, shooting himself in despair.

Now the Argentines are more skeptical of the war news their government is giving them. And in increasing numbers they seem to be altering their definition of victory.

"We have already won," said Jose Torolini, Rosario's husband. "Either way we get the islands. The British will have to bear the responsibility for all this blood ... it will be on their hands."

National newspapers, all of which adhere closely to government guidelines, have begun to stress that Argentina is fighting not only Britain but also its superpower ally, the United States.

A government economist observed: "Even if we lose, our boys will come home in triumph because they stood up to Britain — and the United States."

Burglaries Cleared

Snyder police reported clearing some 16 school and business burglaries dating from November 1980 to April 1982 with the arrest of three men early this morning.

The trio is accused of being involved in burglaries at Stanfield, East, North and Northeast elementary schools over the past two years. Business burglaries linked to the suspects include incidents at Patterson's Used Cars, Pioneer Furniture, the Health Food Center and the R. E. Smith offices.

All 16 of the burglaries are reported to have involved the theft of currency.

Ages of the trio are listed as 16, 17 and 19.

In other action, local police took one theft report and investigated two minor traffic mishaps Tuesday evening.

An employee of the Dairy Queen on the East Highway called police around 9:45 p.m. and reported the theft of about $50 from the business. Police are looking for a black male subject in connection with this incident.

The first traffic accident of the day occurred in the 2200 block of 25th St. and involved a 1981 Ford driven by Oziel Gonzales of 1700 26th St. and a 1977 Chevrolet driven by Dovie Callula Potts of Rt. 3, Snyder. Only minor damages were reported in this mishap.

The 3500 block of College Ave, was the scene of another minor collision around 5:12 p.m. Tuesday. Involved in this accident were a 1970 Oldsmobile driven by Joyce David Vaughn of 3100 Avenue T. and a 1977 Pontiac driven by Andrea Dawn Heard of 4101 Jacksboro. Again, only minor damages and no injuries were reported in the mishap.

Small Blaze Extinguished

Snyder firemen extinguished a small blaze in a shop building at Arrow Construction Company, 2770 21st St. around 1:55 p.m. Tuesday.

According to reports, the fire involved some power shop equipment in the building and damages were listed as minor. No injuries were reported to anyone at the fire scene.

Sundeck Falls, 34 Are Injured

ROGERS, Ark. (AP) — A second-story wooden sundeck collapsed "in a twinkle of an eye" at a birthday party on a children's ranch, injuring 34 of 70 people who fell to the ground, authorities said.

Ten victims of the Tuesday evening accident remained hospitalized today.

After the piers and planks of the balcony at the Real Life Ranch gave way at about 8:45 p.m., children and adults were sent sprawling on a concrete sidewalk. Some of the falls may have been softened by honeysuckle bushes, one official said.

Nelda Long, co-owner of the interdenominational foster home that opened nine years ago, said the collapse happened "in a twinkle of an eye. There was not one single warning."

Mrs. Long, reached at St. Mary's Hospital in Rogers, said children, staff members and guests had gathered on the balcony for a birthday party for four children.

"The serious injuries are among the staff," she said. "The children fell on top of the staff."

Weather

Panhandle. Skies were partly cloudy elsewhere.

Early morning temperatures were in the 50s in the Panhandle and far West Texas and in the 60s and 70s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 55 at Amarillo to 77 at Brownsville, McAllen and Galveston.

Forecasts called for thunderstorms, some possibly heavy with flash flooding in North Central Texas and for scattered showers and thunderstorms in West Texas and along the coastal plains. Elsewhere it was to be partly cloudy and continued warm.

Highs were to be mostly in the 80s and 90s, ranging from the 70s in the Panhandle to near 102 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s. Highs Thursday will again be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

Obituaries

Mrs. Rogers

Elry (Nan) Rogers, 84, who lived at 3112 Ave. I, died at 8:20 p. m. Tuesday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Funeral service has been set for 2 p. m. Thursday at Green Hill Baptist Church. The Rev. Larry McAden, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in the Snyder Cemetery, under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

A native of Caldwell, Mrs. Rogers was a longtime resident of Snyder.

Surviving are her husband, Wade B. Rogers; a son, Raymond Kirkland of Austin; two sisters, Mrs. Gib Tatom and Vivian Fikes, both of Snyder; a brother, Earl Sutton of Henderson; four grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Benefit Show Slated June 5

Local citizens have planned a benefit show for 8 p.m. Saturday, June 5 for Delwin Bane and Tommy Pherigo.

Bane is listed in critical condition in Lubbock's St. Mary's Hospital following a traffic accident some two weeks ago. Pherigo's wife recently passed away following a lenghtly illness.

According to benefit organizers, proceeds from the June 5 show will be divided equally between two causes.

Snyder High School Drama teacher Jerry Worsham is slated to emcee show which will feature a variety of talent in the Jerry P. Worsham Auditorium.

Several local and formally local singers are set to appear in the show. Among those listed as contributing to the effort will be, Darrell Collins, La Donna Benson, Todd Stevens and Lloyd Benson.

Tickets for the show are priced at $3.

Funds for the beneficaries have been set up at First Federal Savings and Loan and the West Texas State Bank.

Those wishing to contribute to these relief efforts should go to the West Texas State Bank to add to the Pherigo fund. Contributitions to the Bane fund are being taken at the Snyder offices of First Federal Savings.

Tigers Tumble 7-3 In Game One Of Series

By BILL McCLELLAN

LUBBOCK -- Lubbock Estacado broke a 3-3 tie in the third inning here yesterday and went on to win controversy-marred Game One of a bi-district baseball playoff series over the Snyder Tigers, 7-3.

The best-of-three series moves to Snyder's Moffett Field for Game Two and a Game Three, if necessary, on Friday. Game Two is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m.

Estacado, a 1981 state finalist team, took advantage of a shakey start by the Tigers to fashion a 3-0 lead over the first two innings.

Snyder pitcher John Wilson got first-up Dwayne Slaughter to ground out, but walked Rodney Wheeler and Hector Limon to put two on the bags. Danny Griffin loaded the bases when Snyder third baseman Charles Bollinger fielded his bunt but could find no place to make a throw. Joe Benavidez then cracked a shot to Tiger first-baseman Barry Davis and the first baseman elected to go home with the ball, narrowly missing the put-out of Wheeler, 1-0.

A sacrifice bunt then scored Limon before Wilson could get out of the inning.

In the second, Mike Garaby doubled and later scored on a two-bagger by Wheeler, making the game 3-0 in favor of the Matadors.

Snyder tied the contest in the fourth. Estacado pitcher Wayne Dotson struckout Casey Peterson, but Curtis Gafford reached on a bunt and Brent Roemisch hit into a single. A wild pitch pushed the runners to third and second base before Dotson put Wilson down on strikes. The Mats then walked Hernandez intentionally to bring the force-out into focus.

Perry Echols answered the challenge however, rapping a two-out, three-two pitch into centerfield for a single. Outfielder Griffin let the ball slip past him, and Gafford, Roemisch and Hernandez all scored, 3-3.

The winning run came in the third inning as Limon doubled, stole third and scored on a low inside pitch by Wilson that bit the dirt and got past catcher Hernandez, 4-3.

But it was the fourth inning which caused controversy in the game.

Wilson started the inning by fanning Garaby. Dotson then singled but Slaughter was thrown out at first base for the second out. B.T. Ross, running for Dotson, eventually stole second base, setting up Estacado's fifth run. Meanwhile, Wheeler was at the plate working toward a two-two count.

Wilson took his time over the next pitch and delivered the ball right along Wheeler's midsection. Umpire Robert Cameron called the pitch a ball and Tiger coaches Albert Lewis and Roland Herrera stormed out to the plate. Cameron immediately ejected Herrera from the game and waved off Lewis' frantic pleas to reconsider the call.

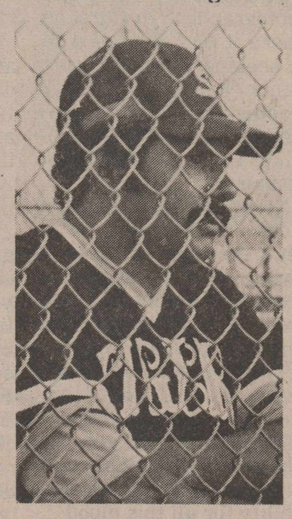

The call - which the umpire stood by as being just outside - seemed to sap the Tigers' energy. When play started up again Ross took off for third base. Hernandez tried to pick him off but threw wild into the outfield, and Ross scored. Estacado then got runs six and seven as Wheeler walked and Limon cracked a two-nothing pitch over the right-centerfield fence - a power punch of around 400 feet.

"The guy (Cameron) didn't have the guts to make the call," said an disappointed Coach Lewis after the game. "That's (should have been) the third strike and we're out of the inning. It's still 4 to 3. He blew it, that's all there is to it."

Neither team scored again in the game. Wilson gave way to junior Gerald Don Hicks for the final two innings, and the left-hander gave up only one hit. Dotson, who had noticably begun to get rattled in the third and fourth innings, seemed to regain strength and struck out four batters over the final three innings, allowing no more hits.

Wilson, 10-2, took the loss, giving up six hits and four walks over four innings. Dotson, 12-1, allowed five hits in seven. He walked one batter and struck out 12.

Both Lewis and Herrera felt the momentum might have swung Snyder's direction had it not been for the controversial call in the fourth inning - but both also agreed that the Tigers hurt themselves on too many occassions.

ROLAND HERRERA
...ejected from game

"We made some mistakes that cost us," said Lewis. "We gave them a lot. If we can keep from doing that Friday, we'll have a decent chance. We're not out of it yet by any means."

"It's looking better than it could," agreed Herrera. "Now we know we can play with these guys (Estacado). I think our players will be more relaxed Friday. You're always going to have some butterflies the first game - especially your younger kids. This game was more of a learning experience for us."

LEWIS PLEADS CASE -- Snyder Coach Albert Lewis and umpire Robert Cameron, of Lubbock, squared off several times during yesterday's bi-district playoff game. Though not the last time, the climax came in the fourth inning when Lewis and assistant Roland Herrera differed with Cameron on a call that would have put Snyder out of the inning. Herrera's protest was met with an ejection. See related article above. (SDN Staff Photo)

FARM LEAGUE
Yankees 9, Indians 5

Hits weren't listed, but the Yankees came up with nine walks to help aid them in a 9-5 victory over the Indians last evening. Ronnie Fisk was the winning pitcher.

Braves 14, Athletics 10

The Braves got five runs in the fourth inning in a come-from-behind effort to defeat the A's Tuesday night. Steve Ybarra picked up the win.

LITTLE LEAGUE
Braves 17, Athletics 4

The Braves came up with 13 runs in the second inning to give the Athletics their first loss of the season Friday night. Kevin Dollins led a nine-hit attack with a triple and a single, while winning pitcher Roy Gutierrez rapped a double and a single. Randy Morris and Justin Derryberry hit two singles each and Bobby Rico added one as the Braves raised their record to 2-2.

Danny Gambol knocked a double and a single for the A's while Jeff Farmer had two singles and pitcher Skip Jones, Wade Spencer and Trey Wilson added one apiece.

Yankees 25, Indians 15

The Yankees walked 10 and the Indians walked 21 in this scoring spree, which took place Tuesday night. The Yanks were led offensively by Scott Lanier, who had two home runs and a two singles. Joe Velasquez popped a double and a single; Johnny Escobedo rapped two singles; Jimmy Taylor hit a double; and Richard Garcia added a single.

For the Indians, Mark Garcia cracked a home run and a single; Tony Ferrard hit two singles; Randy Mallory powered a double and a single; and Van Echols, Darren McCowen, Lee Hamilton, Chad Welch, David Tate and Shawn Mallory contributed a single apiece.

Jenkins Gets 3,000th Career KO But Loses

Use Snyder Daily News Classified Ads 573-5484

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Ferguson Jenkins of the Cubs Tuesday night became the seventh pitcher in major league history to record 3,000 career strikeouts, but was the loser as the San Diego Padres edged Chicago 2-1.

Jenkins, who was relieved after seven innings, reached the 3,000-strikeout plateau when he fanned Garry Templeton in the third inning. He added three other strikeouts in the game.

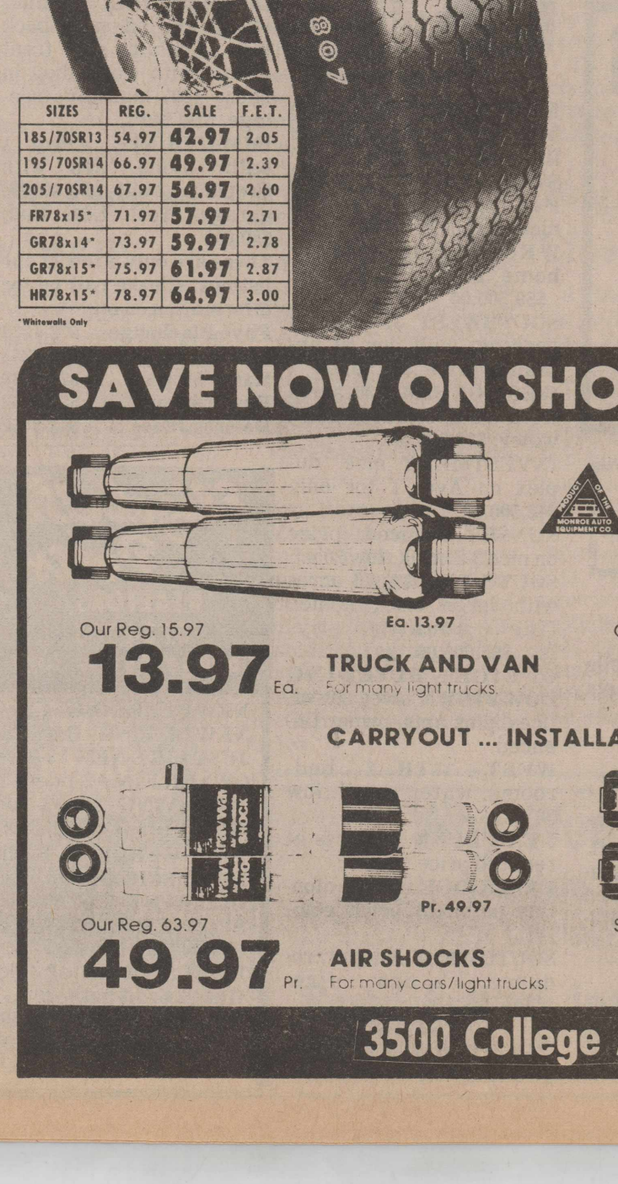

"I was very happy," said the soft-spoken Jenkins. "If you're consistent enough, you make goals happen."

All-Woman College Is Thriving In Missouri

NEVADA, Mo. (AP) — On a Sunday in 1884, 12 young ladies marched along a dirt road to the Centenary Methodist Church in Nevada, Mo.

During the walk, Virginia Alice Cottey instructed her charges: "Hold your heads high, you're Cottey girls."

That year, Miss Cottey had chosen a cornfield on the edge of the farming town in westcentral Missouri to found Vernon Seminary, a Home and Day School for Young Ladies. It was renamed Cottey College two years later.

Today, Cottey — a nonsectarian, two-year, liberal arts institution — is the only college in the nation owned and operated by women for women.

In 1927, the aging Miss Cottey gave the school to the Philanthropic Educational Organization Sisterhood, with the understanding that the organization would build an endowment fund of at least $200,000.

The P.E.O. Sisterhood, which has at least one chapter in every state, was founded in 1869 to provide financial and moral support to women pursuing a higher education. It is not affiliated with any church group.

In addition to the Cottey project, the P.E.O. has a revolving fund that provides loans to college women; a continuing-education grant program for women who want to return to college after an interruption, and scholarships for foreign women doing graduate work in the United States.

The 220,000 international members of the Des Moines based P.E.O. later boosted the original Cottey endowment to $3 million and Dr. Evelyn Milan, college president, hopes to raise it to $10 million by the school's 100th anniversary in 1984.

Officials say the college is now entirely self-supporting, although some students receive loans or grants. It operates on an assessment of P.E.O. members and on student tuition. Enrollment is limited to 350 women.

The 56-acre campus, flat and largely treeless, is dotted by a dozen or so austere red brick buildings of Georgian architecture — testimony to Miss Cottey's no-nonsense attitude toward education.

"Right living should be the fourth 'R' in education," read the Home Science Creed in 1909, reprinted in a Cottey catalog. Miss Cottey followed it to the letter, especially on Sundays.

Her protective arm reached into the 1920s, when students were still shadowed by chaperones, even to doctors' appointments.

Before founding the college, Miss Cottey, who married Samuel Stockard in 1879, attended a convent school and a school for girls in Missouri, where she felt women were receiving inadequate academic training. She believed they should have access to quality education equal to that offered men.

Cottey today, with 314 students, is a far cry from the early days.

Although church attendance is no longer required, students still trek into the quiet city of 10,000 to go to movies, do church volunteer work or, if 21 or older, stop by the local tavern.

Groups of students often drive north 93 miles to Kansas City, Mo., where they shop or see shows. Or they stay at Cottey's lodge on 33 wooded acres at the edge of Nevada for a weekend of socializing.

Wise Buying Of Clothing Is Important

NEW YORK (AP) — Inflationary trends have caused many consumers to look upon their wardrobes as a major investment, so buying carefully and wisely is more important than ever, warns Bill Seitz, an expert in the clothing field.

Style continues to be important to most consumers, but more and more are paying attention to the serviceability and wearability of the garments they purchase, reports Seitz, executive director of the Neighborhood Cleaners Association (NCA), a group representing more than 3,000 drycleaners in nine eastern states.

"If you're looking for quality, don't judge a garment on face value," says Seitz, cautioning that the cost of a garment or the designer name is not always a guarantee the consumer is getting quality merchandise.

"And the care labels don't always tell the whole story," he adds. "Read the labels carefully and closely examine garments for workmanship. Be aware: the more you understand about fabrics and their limitations and qualities, the less likely you are to be disappointed in a purchase."

Seitz regularly examines garments being sold in major department stores as part of the NCA's consumer-education program. Some potential problem areas he and the NCA are advising consumers to look out for when they shop are:

—Silk: Good European and Japanese silks should provide reasonable wearability, but avoid the cheaper types produced in some other parts of the Orient. Take care when selecting brightly colored silks. Many of them will fade from sunlight and sometimes even from fluorescent lighting. Many silk prints bleed due to perspiration or liquid staining substances.

—Linen and linen-look fashions: These garments will be seen in whites and pastel shades. Both the linen and linen-look are likely to be sized. Dye crocking or color loss may occur in areas of wear. Loss of sizing may result in substantial shrinkage.

—Imitation suede or leather: Imitation leather made of vinyl can never be drycleaned. It will become stiff and unwearable. Imitation suede made of polyurethane may be drycleanable, if the manufacturer uses careful quality control in the necessary pressure and proper temperature to ensure that the fabric is serviceable. If not, peeling and puckering will occur.

Children Learn To Cope With Alcoholic Mothers

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The child's crayon drawings of her mother are acutely perceptive.

In one picture, the woman's hair is unkempt, she wears no makeup, the expression on her face is blank. In a second picture, drawn on the same page, the woman's clothes are stylish, the hair is neatly arranged, the legs taper into high-heeled shoes, the face smiles.

With a few careful strokes of a crayon, the 9-year-old artist has sketched the difference between her mother's drunkenness and sobriety.

Another youngster, a 13-year-old seventh grader, recalls his mother's alcoholism in words, not colors. He remembers the guilt he felt, remembers wishing school wouldn't end because "I'd realize that mom was probably home drunk again." He remembers being afraid.

"Alcoholism is like this terrible family secret that children have to carry around," says Steve Gilbert, community educator for the non-profit Lane County Council on Alcoholism. "They don't bring friends home; they're not too open about talking about it."

Helping the children of alcoholics to understand their parents' affliction is the goal of a new educational program being offered by the council. The program offers one group meeting a week for youngsters 5 through 11 and 12 through 18.

Working with Gilbert and student-aide Charlotte Jenkins of the University of Oregon, the participants will learn more about alcoholism, will engage in art projects and play activities, and will have a chance to mingle socially with other children from similar, pressurized family settings.

Gilbert says the free program has two main goals: to help the children understand that a parent's alcoholism is a "family illness" that has affected all other members of the family. In doing so, Gilbert hopes to help break what becomes a generational cycle.

"Fifty percent of all those kids become alcoholics themselves," in part because of genetic factors, he says. Perhaps more startlingly, of the other 50 percent, many will marry alcoholics," he says.

"They don't do that intentionally," he says. "They may not drink themselves." Simply, however, the patterns of behavior that center around an alcoholic can become ties that bind family members for their lifetimes.

"The immediate need we're trying to fill is to relieve the emotional stress the child is going through," Gilbert says. "A child 3 to 5 years old will begin to take on guilt, to feel responsible for the parent's drinking."

In addition to guilt, there is also anger, resentment and fear. "Sixty percent of all incidents of child abuse occur when the parent is intoxicated," Gilbert says. "Those kids have something to be afraid of."

Because a young child's perception of the world centers on his parents, he may become aware of a drinking problem before other, older family members, Gilbert says.

But being aware of a problem isn't the same as admitting or understanding it, Gilbert says.

Among the goals of the program are to educate the child about such concepts as "denial" and "blackouts" and to enable a child to express the situation through art or play.

As the alcoholic's child grows, he or she is often forced into an early adulthood, taking care of household chores, babysitting and other parental responsibilities.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The famous playwright and wit, George S. Kaufman, once described the bridge habits of a moving picture tycoon by saying: "There are three ways to tell when Mr. X has a good hand. First his face lights up like a Christmas tree. Then he chortles a few times and finally misplays it."

Mr. X might well be South in today's hand. His face didn't light up right away. Fifteen high-card points aren't really too much even when your partner opens the bidding. However, when North's second bid was a jump, South's face lit up and he jumped right back in his own spade suit.

North Blackwooded to the slam and when the dummy hit the table South guffawed and said, "Looks like game, slam and rubber."

Then he took his ace of hearts and led a trump to dummy's king and East's ace. Back came a second heart and the laughter died suddenly. It didn't matter what South played, West was going to score the setting trick with his 10 of trumps.

If South had bothered to think at trick two, he would have led a diamond to dummy's ace and then played a low trump from dummy. East would get his ace, but West would never get the setting trick.

Vote 132-14...

Texas House Approves Property Tax Repeal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The House has driven in the first of three nails required to shut the coffin and bury the state property tax.

House members voted 132-14 on Tuesday in favor of a proposed constitutional amendment that would abolish the tax that has not been collected since 1979.

The tax would die if the amendment is approved by senators meeting in special session here and by voters on Nov. 2. The proposed amendment also would forgive the payment of uncollected taxes, which add up to about $850 million.

House approval of the repeal measure came despite pleas from representatives concerned about the future of the 17 state universities that had depended on the tax for construction money. The 17 schools do not get a piece of the Permanent University Fund (PUF), which has built University of Texas and Texas A&M system schools.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, said repealing the tax before appropriating replacement money was like selling a car — albeit it an "old beat-up '65 model that perhaps doesn't run too well" — without getting a new one."

The 1979 Legislature gutted the property tax by reducing the assessment ratio to .0001 percent. The tax has not been collected since then.

Midwestern State University sued, contending lawmakers could not do away with the tax established in the Texas Constitution. Gov. Bill Clements, confident the state would lose the case when it goes to trial, called the special session.

Clements' goal was to have the tax abolished and come up with a "catch-up" fund for the 17 colleges that have had to postpone construction plans because of a lack of money.

The governor's idea was carried on the House floor by Speaker Bill Clayton, Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, and others. Schlueter defended it against several challenges Tuesday.

The challengers said they did not want to kill the tax until an interim fund is approved, and a permanent fund is established.

The House Appropriation Committee is working on the interim appropriation, but has been bogged down in parliamentary questions since the session opened Monday.

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, failed to win support for her plan to revive the tax at a 3-cent rate until a $2 billion fund had accrued for the 17 colleges that don't get PUF money.

She said the 3-cent tax would mean a $15 annual assessment on a $50,000 home.

"I am not politically naive. I understand clearly that it would be very easy for every member to vote to repeal, go back home and tell the citizens of your community, 'I voted to repeal a tax. Good for me.' But you are going to have to ... go back to those same people and say, 'Look, our institutions are in trouble and we need money,' " said Mrs. Delco.

Her plan was killed, 108-37.

Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, tried to delay consideration until next week.

"We just really don't know what we're doing," said Green.

During Undercover Assignment...

Reporter Gets Arrested

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Reporter Danny Garcia got a story by posing as an undocumented worker and sneaking into the country from Mexico, but the Border Patrol got Garcia and charged him with smuggling five real illegal aliens.

The San Antonio Light reporter is charged with five counts of transporting illegal aliens, federal felonies that carry maximum combined penalties of 25 years in prison.

Garcia, 27, wrote two stories for Sunday and Monday's editions about paying two Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, men $80 to float him across the Rio Grande on an inner tube at night, then giving a "coyote (alien smuggler)" more than $100 to transport him on to San Antonio.

The "coyote" insisted that Garcia drive the five illegal aliens because he did not have the full $250 fee for the trip, the reporter wrote. Two Border Patrol officers stopped the dilapidated car and arrested the six Thursday 12 miles outside of Laredo. The "coyote" was arrested later.

The Light's attorney, John Pinckney, said Tuesday he would move for dismissal of the charge because Garcia discussed it with San Antonio Immigration and Naturalization Service officials before going undercover.

"Clearly there was no criminal intent on the part of Garcia, and in fact the INS was aware of his going down in the capacity of an illegal alien," said Pinckney, a former assistant U.S. attorney who prosecuted alien cases.

INS District Director Richard Casillas in San Antonio confirmed Tuesday that Garcia discussed the idea with him and that he introduced Garcia to an undercover agent to get some tips. Garcia said he rode to the border on an INS bus and was deported along with several illegal aliens.

But Border Patrol chief Bill Selser of Laredo said he neither knew about nor gave his permission for the operation. He said what Garcia did was extremely dangerous and he would never condone such undercover reporting excursions.

Selser said Casillas never contacted him prior to Garcia's trip.

"I assume Danny Garcia is an intelligent fellow and I can't imagine why he thought he could commit a crime and be excused," Selser said. "It's like going in an holding up a bank and saying, 'I just wanted to see what it was like and I wasn't really going to keep the money.' I'm really at a loss at why he would do such a thing."

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Almaraz of Laredo said Tuesday he had asked for reports from the Border Patrol, from the INS and from Garcia's attorney before deciding whether to drop the charges against the reporter.

"This jurisdiction has enough problems with real smugglers without having undercover reporters smuggling aliens to add to the problem," Almaraz said. "I will take a long look at it and talk to his lawyer and I'm sure we'll be able to work something out."

Almaraz said he wants to talk to Pinckney, and possibly Garcia himself, to learn whether the reporter gathered any valuable information on alien smuggling during his investigation.

"I'm just afraid I'll wind up testifying against this coyote and I fear retaliation," Garcia said.

Both Almaraz and Selser warned that crossing the border as an illegal alien is dangerous, because armed bandits on both sides of the river prey on illegal entrants.

"It's a dangerous damn thing," Selser said, "and I guess maybe he (Garcia) realizes that today. Those people will kill you over there for $200, pitch the body back in the river and that's the end of it."

More Bodies Discovered

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Five more bodies were recovered from the rubble of an eight-story, bombed-out building in Beirut's Moslem western sector Sunday, bringing the casualty toll from the explosion to 15 killed and 25 wounded, police reported.

A police spokesman, who declined to be identified, said at least two more victims were feared to be still buried in the wreckage.

The apartment building, blown up Friday afternoon, housed the offices of the Murabet magazine, organ of the dominant Nasserite Moslem militia known as al-Mourabetoun, or "ambushers," which is allied with Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

A rightist underground terrorist group calling itself the Front for the Liberation of Lebanon from Foreigners claimed responsibility for the bombing a few hours after the blast.

Driver's Ed Class Slated

A driver's education class will begin at Western Texas College Tuesday, June 1. The class will be for those wishing to learn to drive, and upon successful completion, they will be ready to take the driver license test.

Students must be 16 or older, and the fee is $135 per student, which is payable on the first day of the class. Students will be in class from 8:30 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. for two weeks, after which they will begin a series of driving lessons.

Albert Lewis, Snyder High School baseball coach who has taught driver's education for many years, will be the intructor.

Students will register at 8:15 a. m. June 1 in the Learning Resource Center on the WTC campus. To reserve space in the class, they should call 573-8511, extension 240.

Stenholm Rep. Here Thursday

A member of Congressman Charles W. Stenholm's staff is scheduled to be in the council room of the Snyder City Hall Thursday afternoon. The hours will be from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

"I would encourage anyone with a problem with any federal agency or program, or anyone desiring to have direct communication with me to stop by and meet with my staff," Stenholm said.

In announcing the schedule, Stenholm said the response to regular visits by congressional staff members has been very good. These meetings are another means to increase communication with constituents in the sprawling 17th District, the second largest congressional district in Texas.

Copenhagen Changing Image As Porno Center

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Copenhagen is slowly shedding its image as the porno capital of Europe. Sex and pornography have been done in by the Tivoli Gardens and the statue of Hans Christian Andersen's "Little Mermaid," a new survey of prominent foreigners says.

"Just a few years ago porno loomed near the top in a similar poll," said Professor Ejler Alkjaer of the Copenhagen School of Economics. "But now it seems that the risk that our city's reputation might be permanently spoiled by the 1969 liberation of pornography has receded."

Alkjaer, who conducted the study over several years, said that on a list of attractions that prominent foreigners spontaneously associate with the city, pornography and sex now rank 15th. Tivoli Gardens, the venerable amusement park, and the mermaid statue took the top two spots.

Alkjaer gathered his data for "The Global Image of Copenhagen" from a poll of more than 2,000 "key personalities" around the world.

He mailed questionnaires to people in more than 100 countries. They were selected from the International Who's Who and similar handbooks covering such specific categories as business executives and university professors.

The analysis presents a VIP's image of Copenhagen, but, according to Alkjaer, this concentration of upper income and higher education visitors adds more credibility to the survey.

"These are much-traveled and observant people capable of relaying their impressions. As opinion leaders they are crucial in creating the very image of a city," said Alkjaer, who promised his respondents anonymity.

The study was published at a time when many residents criticized the city's glass-and-concrete urban renewal, the dwindling of the population of the city proper (down by 100,000 over 10 years to 500,000) and increasing noise and air pollution.

No one, he said, is less suited to evaluate the image of a city than those who live in it.

Copenhagen's international reputation is far better than its own citizens tend to believe — and those citizens remain one of the capital's chief assets, the professor said.

"From across the world there are kudos for the people of Copenhagen, not least the girls, for being easy to communicate with, humorous, helpful, good at foreign languages and not given to cold-shouldering any particular race or nationality," Alkjaer said.

The survey said that what first comes to mind among foreigners when they think of Copenhagen are the Tivoli amusement gardens, the Little Mermaid statue and the population — in that order.

"If Copenhagen lost any of its friendliness, things appear to be even worse in the other cities of the world," Alkjaer said.

He also noted that once a city gets a bad name, as Copenhagen did after the 1969 lifting of pornography restrictions, it takes a long time to erase the image.

"The image of a city does change, but most frequently not in step with actual developments," he added.

The change can be seen today on the mile-long walking street, "Stroeget," which 10 years ago boasted a dozen sex shops. Now it is down to one. The remaining sex shops in the city are now off the main streets and concentrated in the seedy Vesterbro district.

The study said that while university professors had porno and sex parlors far down their list, business executives placed them third after Tivoli and the Mermaid statue.

The complaints appearing most frequently in the study have to do with high prices, declining service at hotels and restaurants, too little night life and early closing hours for stores.

Copenhagen scores high marks for achieving an increasingly international atmosphere without losing too much of its own personality and without ruining its old-town center.

For Copenhagen Tourist Association manager Jens Ehlers the study's reference to dirty streets came just in time to add momentum to an extensive "Keep the City Clean" campaign to be launched later this month.

The study confirmed the thinking of Skjalm Petersen, a champion of old-city preservation and former chairman of the Copenhagen City Center Association, that a city must, first of all, be a place where the citizens thrive.

"Then the tourists may like it, too," he said, noting that the Tivoli Gardens were never fashioned after the tastes of tourists, but were shaped "to fit us and our little city."

Groups Band Together To Oppose Effect

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Several religious groups have banded together to oppose a recruiting effort on the campus of San Antonio College by a new group affiliated with the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church.

Directors of Methodist, Catholic, Baptist and Episcopal student organizations say they view the Collegiate Association for Research of Principles, a sister organization of Moon's church, as an anti-Christian cult that must be opposed.

"Never before has there been such an organized recruiting effort conducted here by the Unification Church," said Chris Wiliamson, director of the Episcopal Student Center.

"The Ten Commandments are the basis for Christian religions. They (Moonies) break with the Commandments. God's supposed to be first in our lives, but with them, Moon is. We're supposed to honor or fathers and mothers, but they try and break the line of communication among families," added Sister Maria Theresa Flores, director of the Catholic students program.

But Mark Lincoln, a CARP member, said, "We really haven't recruited anyone. We've talked to several people, but no one's been recruited." Lincoln described the group as an anti-communist movement whose focus is political, rather than religious.

Napoleon Bonaparte escaped from the island of Elba Feb. 26, 1815, but the news of his flight from exile did not reach the Congress of Vienna until early March. Within three weeks the people of France had rallied to their former emperor. However, defeat at the Battle of Waterloo June 18 ended Napoleon's last hopes, and the British banished him to the remote island of St. Helena's, where he died at the age of 52.

If Played Backwards, Some Say...

Satan Lurks In Records

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Is the Led Zeppelin classic "Stairway to Heaven" really a coded invitation to hell? Did the rock band Styx secretly pay homage to the devil in a song which criticizes drug use?

Are a group of rock musicians in league with Satan trying to corrupt the minds of youth through messages that can only be deciphered when their records are played backward?

California Assemblyman Phil Wyman isn't sure, but he is convinced "backward masking" — the recording of messages backward onto records and tapes — does exist.

And Wyman, a Republican, has proposed a state law that would require any records containing messages discernable when played backward to be labeled accordingly.

"I don't care, as a legislator, what the message is," Wyman said. "What the bill would require is a warning, and this is what (it) would say: 'Warning: This record contains backward masking which may be perceptible at a subliminal level when the record is played forward.'"

Wyman's bill is dead for the current assembly session, but he expects backward masking to be explored more thoroughly at hearings next fall which will focus on the issue of subliminal advertising.

Meanwhile, hundreds of people have been fiddling with their stereo equipment to try to duplicate Wyman's much-publicized presentation at an Assembly Consumer Protection and Toxic Materials Committee hearing in Sacramento last month.

When Styx's "Snowblind" — a cut from the group's best-selling "Paradise Theater" album — was played backward, Wyman said he heard the words "O Satan move in our voices." On ELO's "El Dorado," the alleged backward message is "Christ, you're the nasty one, you're inferno."

But No. 1 in the top 10 of backward masking is the 1971 Led Zeppelin tune "Stairway to Heaven," a lengthy and melodic heavy metal opus that has long been a staple of FM rock radio stations. Wyman said it contains nine examples of backward masking, including: "Here's to my sweet Satan," which is repeated twice, and "I sing because I live with Satan."

Modern multitrack recording equipment allows an artist to record a sound in one direction and then splice it in backward. The Beatles pioneered that kind of sound montage experimentation on records like the White Album. Music buffs have long traded tales about backward messages of a non-controversial nature on records by groups such as Pink Floyd and ELO.

The music industry's response to suggestions about Satanic messages has ranged from laughter and incredulity to outrage.

"Our turntables only play in one direction," Led Zeppelin's record company, Swangsong, said in a statement read to callers with questions about backward masking.

Howard Mylett, author of two books on the group, said in a telephone interview from Sussex, England, that Led Zeppelin guitarist Jimmy Page, who has a great interest in the occult, did have a saying by the late occultist Aleister Crowley etched on the vinyl of one of the band's albums.

But when asked about "Stairway to Heaven," Mylett said, "I've never heard a thing about it. I've honestly tried to hear it (the backward masks) and I've not yet been able to hear a thing."

At Jet Records, ELO's label, Larry Ross dismissed the allegations as unfounded, and James Young of Styx said: "The idea is rubbish."

Wyman's star witness at the hearing, self-described "neuroscientific researcher" William Yarroll of Aurora, Colo., says he believes the backward messages are deciphered by the brain's right or "creative" hemisphere. He said this same thought process makes it easier to make a good handwritten copy of a mirror image of a drawing or signature, as opposed to the original.

"Professional forgers have known this since 1950," Yarroll says.

But Dr. Donald Lewis, chairman of the University of Southern California's psychology department, says there is no research to support Yarroll's claim.

"I think it's sheer balderdash," Lewis said. He said that since the 1950s, when subliminal advertising was popularized in books like Vance Packard's "The Hidden Persuaders," there have been several studies showing "if there's any effect at all, it's minimal."

Wyman said the idea for his bill came from a constituent who saw a UHF television show on the subject by the Orange County-based Trinity Broadcasting Network.

However, Paul Crouch Jr., who made the televised presentation, says he now has some doubts.

"I've learned since then that Led Zeppelin wrote the words to 'Stairway to Heaven' in half an hour, and if that's true I don't see how they could have put those messages in to make sense forward and backward," he said. "I think there needs to be more research done on it."

A number of Christian media figures who have criticized rock music's values find concern over backward masking misplaced.

"It may be a Satanic plot, but it's a plot to divert peoples' minds from the real danger, which is obvious if you play the records forward," said John Styll, publisher of Contemporary Christian Music Magazine.

Kansas City Kids Play At Business

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A unique program cofunded by Kansas City's business community and school districts is teaching basic economics to 13,000 school children a year.

Fifth-graders from 22 Kansas City area school districts complete a month of classroom study before becoming capitalists for a day at Exchange City, a simulated town where the children act out adult roles ranging from disc jockey to bank president.

Widely praised by educators, the Kansas City program is viewed by its corporate founders as an investment in America's future.

"The state of our national economy points up the need for consumers, producers and policy-makers who are economically literate," said Bill Hall, president of the Hallmark Educational Foundation, which launched the program with a $100,000 grant.

Scientists See New Sound Waves

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Scientists may one day be using sound waves to aid in drug manufacture, make new plastics, and detoxify poisonous pesticides, according to North Dakota State University researchers.

They are using high-frequency sound waves — or ultrasonic waves — to greatly accelerate some important chemical reactions that have applications in these areas.

How ultrasound works is not completely understood, the researchers told a recent American Chemical Society meeting here, but they believe that when a solution is irradiated with ultrasonic waves, bubbles form and then collapse, creating extremely powerful shock waves that literally vibrate a surface clean.

When impurities are removed from the surfaces of solid chemical reagents, they can react more quickly and result in products that are more pure than would otherwise be expected, the researchers explained.

A fascinating report in a recent U.S. News on the subject of "anger."

What was a technical psychological study like that doing in a hard-nosed, business-and-political-oriented publication?

You had to read the concluding paragraphs to understand why.

The Latin American nations which are overthrown with the least frequency are those where the populace ventilates its emotions at the bullfight or the soccer game.

Granted, Latins can get pretty violent at a soccer game, but if their violence can be exhausted in that arena it is less likely to ferment and eventuate in revolution.

As ancient Romans furnished "bread and circuses" to distract the discontented, modern rulers, consciously or otherwise, divert public attention from frustrations toward violent sports.

Dr. Leo Madow, who used to chair psychiatry at the Medical College of Pennsylvania, is accepted as an authority on "anger and other emotions."

Dr. Madow says anger is "an acquired emotion" developed over a period of time.

From infancy on we are forced to adapt — from eating with a spoon to enduring a traffic jam — and each compromise with "what we want to do" contributes to frustration.

Anger against others motivates murder; against one's self it motivates suicide; against a government it detonates bombs.

Dr. Madow says United States of Americans, with higher expectations, would have a higher degree of frustration were it not for football, boxing, hockey, wrestling.

He says they are "a tremendous outlet for hostility."

He says the kind of "Three Stooges" humor where somebody is always getting bopped on the head or hit in the face with a pie is similarly "a wonderful outlet."

He thinks Don Rickles has done more than any physician to relieve blood pressure.

But back to Latin American nations where political instability is chronic.

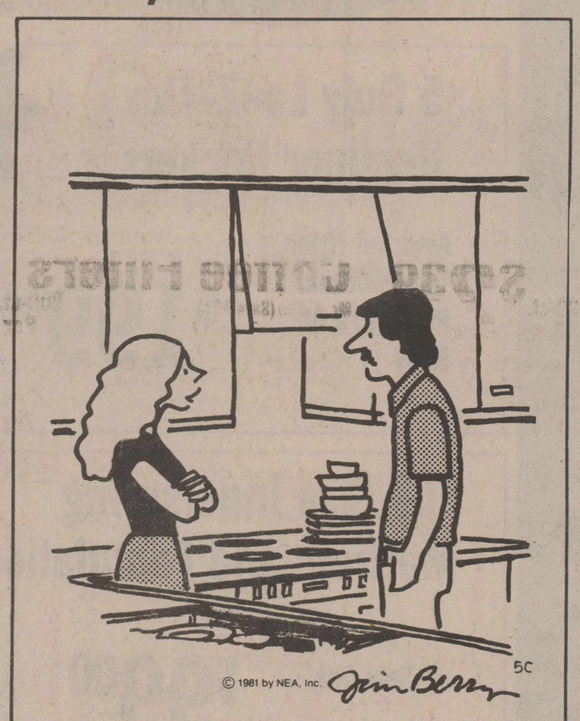

With the church no longer the influence for discipline it once was, repressed and released tension often eventuates in "revolution."

For well-intentioned Americans to imagine a clear cut cleavage between "Americanism" and "communism" in the perennial Latin ferment is too simplistic.

While "outside influences" are an acknowledged factor, with or without those there are areas of the earth where volitile people will fight "just for the hell of it."

Suspect Held In Shooting

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A teen-age robbery suspect who allegedly tried to shoot down a police helicopter as it pursued him across a field remained in jail Monday in lieu of $75,000 bond.

Dennis Hunt, 19, was accused of robbing a neighborhood convenience store Sunday, then firing a pistol at the helicopter as it chased him.

Patrolman L.H. Ramirez captured the suspect after the officer fired one shot and Hunt fell down, police reported.

Helicopter pilot Greg Koch said he was unaware the shots were fired at his craft.

After 40 Years...

Denmark's Scrappy Political Magazine Dies

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Kate Fleron has resigned herself to the death of the feisty little political journal that took her through 40 years of fighting Nazis, Americans, Common Marketeers, NATO and bureaucrats she felt were chipping away at Danish freedom.

Nevertheless, says the whitehaired Danish grandmother, the world is in such a mess that her work is far from over.

"In the 1950s it would have been terrible if we had had to stop, because there was a desert around us," she said. "Now we are scared to death about the dangers around us, but we're not sleeping as we were then."

Miss Fleron, a sprightly 72, took a break from editing the 56-page final issue of Frit Danmark to discuss her ideas in her cubbyhole downtown office. The magazine, whose name means "Free Denmark," came out for the last time on May 4. That was the 37th anniversary of Denmark's liberation from the Nazis, the first adversary the magazine took on.

On her office's yellow wall is a dark, morbid line drawing depicting a queue of prisoners beneath a spotlighted guard tower. It was drawn, she said, by a fellow inmate of the Nazi prison camp where she spent eight months, the only period since December 1942 that she was not editing Frit Danmark.

With a staff consisting of Miss Fleron and a secretary, the magazine occupies two rooms in a walk-up downtown building, overlooking a plaza favored by local leftists for demonstrations, in which she often participates.

"I want to be active as long as I can," she told an interviewer. "I will not give up. It is not so terrible for me if I am going to die in an atomic war, but it will be terrible for the world."

As dangerous as she considers the modern world, Miss Fleron is not without hope, recalling the bleak early days of the five-year Nazi occupation as proof that no situation is hopeless.

"We know, and we are trying to resist, what is threatening us," she said. "I mean first of all war, but also atomic power, pollution. We know what we are afraid of and why, but we don't know if we can change it."

Miss Fleron was a staunchly conservative nationalist when she began editing Frit Danmark nine months after it was born and 2½ years after Germany invaded and occupied its tiny northern neighbor. Most other conservatives who helped publish it in the World War II underground quit because the magazine, reflecting her bythen leftist views, refused to condemn in 1948 the takeover of Czechoslovakia's government by pro-Moscow communists.

The split turned the magazine from a right-to-left political forum into a left-wing, non-party, strongly nationalistic organ.

The magazine had become the largest publication of Denmark's anti-Nazi underground, and its first postwar edition had a press run of 140,000 copies. For the last few years, however, its circulation has been stable at about 2,000, and as the circulation dropped financial problems grew until rising costs forced the closure.

Miss Fleron's room is lined with books — authors include Nikolai Lenin, Kim Il-Sung and Hans Christian Andersen — and on its walls are memorabilia of postwar travels to North Korea, North Vietnam and elsewhere.

Her wartime underground work with Danish communists, her postwar travels and the opinions expressed in Frit Danmark led many of her fellow Danes to vilify her as a communist.

Not true, she insists. "I worked with them when I thought they were right, and I worked against them when I thought they were wrong," she said.

Nevertheless, she does not try to hide her journal's antipathy to the United States, or to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, or to the European Economic Community.

What she wants, she said, is "human socialism. I want real democracy."

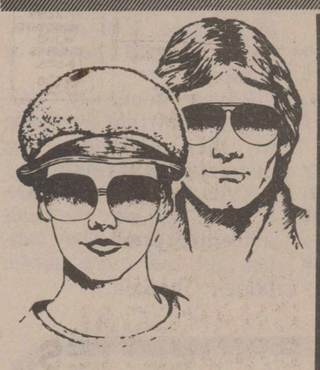

She contends that such a system does not exist now, and occasionally she lets slip evidence she's tired of her four decades of battles.

"I have a daughter and two grandchildren, and I spend a lot of time with them," she said. "I want to warn them, but I can't do it all the time."

Dear Abby

Man Is a Beast in His Treatment of Animals

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: For "Save the Fish," who cannot bear to see fish suffer:

May I point out that fish are far more fortunate than the billions of animals destined for our dinner tables each year that are confined in intensive "factory farms." Veal calves, for example, are kept anemic and even deprived of straw (to guarantee white flesh) while they are penned in wooden crates. Chained at the neck, they are hardly able to move until they are led to slaughter. Pigs, which are as sociable as dogs and more intelligent, can be kept for as long as 10 years in cages so small that they cannot turn around. It is estimated that over 90 percent of this country's egg-producing hens spend their lives in "battery" cages so small that their feet can grow around the wire floors due to their inability to move. These hens are "de-beaked" to keep them from pecking at the cage-mates with which they are virtually entombed. No matter how much agony these animals endure at the time they are slaughtered, death must come as a blessing to them.

I'm sure that nine out of 10 decent, sensitive, humane people who actually see a suffering animal will do everything in their power to help, whether it's a stray dog, homeless kitten, injured bird or even a fish. But let that dog or kitten wind up comfortably out of sight in an animal shelter or research laboratory . . . let that bird turn out to be one of a million hens confined to one acre of land, then suddenly many of those humane, sensitive people don't really care.

MARY ANN VIOLIN, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR, AGENDA: NEWS MAGAZINE FOR ANIMAL RIGHTS, P.O. BOX 5234, WESTPORT, CONN. 06881.

DEAR ABBY: Vegetarians shouldn't be all that high and mighty because they don't "kill" to eat. Vegetables also are living things. In fact, it's more sporting to eat cows, pigs, deer and fish. At least they have a chance of getting away. Pity the poor vegetables who have absolutely no chance for escape.

SAVE THE VEGETABLES

DEAR SAVE: For crusaders who want to campaign to save the vegetables, I submit, as an appropriate battle cry, "Lettuce Alone"! Or is that too corny?

* * *

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a 75-year-old man who resented being called "old."

I'm only 36, and I enjoy being called "young," but I hope I live long enough to be called an "old man."

I've discussed this with my father, who is now 78, and he agrees that being called "old" isn't an insult, it's an honor!

LOOKING FORWARD TO GROWING OLD IN N.J.

DEAR LOOKING: Judging from my mail, a new view of the word "old" has emerged. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: A reader urged you to start a crusade against introducing people as old friends. He suggests instead: "Good friends whom I have known for a long time."

Attempting to replace the simple two-word phrase with 10 words is needless. "Old friends" are not necessarily friends who are old. They are exactly what the dictionary says they are: "friends of long standing."

What's next? "Senior Citizen River?"

ARNOLD FEDERBUSH, LOS ANGELES

Credibility Of Falklands Reports Questioned

MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — While British officials were telling the press that the battle for the Falklands would be a series of "hit-and-run" raids, the nation's biggest invasion force since Suez in 1956 was assembling off the Argentine-occupied islands.

"Fleet Street must have been worth at least three Type 42 destroyers," the liberal Sunday newspaper, the Observer, said afterward in a comment on the government's apparent use of the press to confuse the enemy.

One official later noted privately there are times when the element of surprise in battle is more important than the credibility of government sources, however senior.

"The process of dissimulation began not in the South Atlantic but in the halls of diplomacy where expectations of an immediate full-scale invasion were skillfully countered with rumors of raids," the independent Sunday Times of London reported.

The prelude came in London on Thursday evening when a top government official briefed senior British correspondents.

In the South Atlantic the surprise was under way with, the British now say, 5,000 troops being assembled on the Royal Navy task force with orders to get ashore and set up a bridgehead at Port San Carlos.

The government briefing that divulged the hit-and-run strategy was immediately reported by the domestic news agency, Press Association, British radio and television, and picked up by the foreign media.

By the time the majority of Britons read the most popular quote in newspapers Friday morning — "attrition is the name of the game" — the troops were ashore and a flotilla of Royal Navy warships, guns ablaze, was in the Falkland Sound between the two main islands.

Foreign Secretary Francis Pym was talking about raids as late as Friday morning.

"I would expect a series of raids rather like the one we saw on Pebble Island (a May 15 hit-and-run attack by 48 commandos)," he said in a radio interview, adding that tactics were up to military chiefs.

The stakes were high and it worked.

Any government in Britain, with a vigorous Parliamentary opposition and a lively and diverse press, must acknowledge major losses. Even the most seasoned correspondents and politicians believe the basic account of the fighting provided by the Defense Ministry.

However, war information is a mixture of straight announcements, which the ministry insists are true as far as they go while conceding they don't always go all the way, unattributable background briefings by senior officials, and skillfully used nods and winks.

This is supplemented by firsthand accounts from British correspondents with the fleet whose dispatches are subject to censorship.

A notable example of the skillful nod was widespread reports here that the nuclear-powered hunter-killer submarine HMS Superb lurked in the South Atlantic when Britain imposed a 200 nautical mile naval blockade zone around the islands on April 12.

When it turned out a week later that the Superb was back at its Scottish base on the Clyde, a ministry spokesman said simply: "We never said the Superb was in the South Atlantic."

But the story had never been denied.

"I will never tell you anything that I know to be false," says Defense Ministry chief spokesman Ian McDonald.

"However, where the lives of the men of the task force are at risk, I am prepared to possibly mislead you by committing the lesser sin of omission."

Some "omissions" apparently result from bad communication and are corrected.

McDonald's ponderous "there were no — I repeat no — casualties" after British Harriers sunk an Argentine fishing boat which the British said was spying was corrected to one dead Argentine a few hours later.

Not so easy to handle was McDonald's failure to report that two Wessex helicopters crashed in a blizzard — their crews were unhurt — on the Falklands dependency of South Georgia April 22, three days before it was recaptured from Argentine troops.

News of the lost helicopters did not get out until weeks later — in a letter home from an 18-year-old sailor, Leigh Qurrey.

McDonald's explanation was that an announcement at the time might have helped the Argentines by alerting them that commandos were going ashore ahead of the attack.

On why the lost choppers had still not been revealed when the Union Jack had been flying again on South Georgia for three weeks, McDonald said an announcement might have provided Argentina with hints about "future operations."

Auberon Waugh, son of author Evelyn Waugh and a political satirist and columnist, noted: "My own confidence that we were being given the unadorned truth while Argentines were being fed a pack of lies was somewhat shaken...One wonders what other information has been withheld."

The Falklands conflict had been what one opposition lawmaker called the "most unphotographed war since the Crimea" until Friday's counter-invasion when pictures from military and British press photographers began flooding back to London.

Official explanation for the initial dearth — while the British press and television used Argentine film — was that there was no space on overcrowded communications satellites.

"We've got transmission facilities in place now," an official commented on the speedy arrival of a picture of island children at San Carlos welcoming the Royal Marines.

Professional Storier Spellbinds Audiences

By MARIANNE McQUIDDY
Alamogordo Daily News

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — One minute, he's a little bitty ant, asking a passing traveler to "blow the dirt off my feet and then I won't track up your tortilla."

The next instant, he's a big black beetle, and then he's a mouse, or maybe a frog digging a hole with his "little frog shovel."

The change between characters is instantaneous and total, and the audience sits transfixed waiting for the next move.

It's all in a day's work for Joe Hayes.

Hayes, of Santa Fe, N.M., is one of a rare breed. He's a professional storyteller, traveling the area sharing his repertoire of tales with people, and is one of only 200 who do it full time.

He was in Alamogordo recently as part of the annual "Writers' Connection" sponsored by the International Reading Association of Otero County.

"I've been telling stories for six years," he said, "and have been making a living at it for the past two years."

Hayes said he had always been fascinated by stories, and had collected the sagas as a hobby. "I started fantasizing about doing it for a living, and, you know what, it worked!

"I tell stories to children, adults, anyone who is interested."

He says he has no favorite story because he likes every one he tells. "Any one I remember I like."

Hayes says that many people like scary stories, and always ask him for those.

He explains that he has no set program. "I vary what stories I tell with the type of group. I generally decide the second story I am going to do after I've started the first one."

What makes a good storyteller?

You must communicate well with your audience, "but it has to be real. You cannot put it on. You've got to believe and feel what you are doing."

Also, a good storyteller is one who has the guts to know himself.

"There's got to be a strong child living inside of you — someone who is not afraid to wonder and react to the tale. You need to have a good sense of humor."

Hayes generally will pick a story that everyone in the audience can understand and relate to.

"You want to make sure it doesn't go over the head of the little ones. They cannot get the more subtle humor," he said.

Correct your chemistry

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was interested in your column on bad breath. I have had bad breath all my life. My dentist claims it comes from my stomach. I have consumed antacid tablets to no avail.

You said the bad breath could come from a chemical but you didn't say how to eliminate the chemical. What do I do? I am very anxious to rid myself of this problem.

DEAR READER — First of all it is quite rare that bad breath ever comes from the stomach. Why? Because the opening to the stomach is normally closed and odors from food being digested in the stomach simply have no way of escaping. The exception is when there is an esophageal reflux or belch and the entrance to the stomach is temporarily open. The same applies to bad breath from the rest of the bowels. Constipation is not a cause of bad breath.

The three common causes of bad breath are teeth, sinuses and chemical odors that are exhaled from the lungs.

Now, the chemicals can be anything that has an odor. A good example is alcohol. When the alcohol in your blood gets to the lungs the alcohol vapor escapes with the carbon dioxide as you exhale. If you are a diabetic in coma the chemicals from acetone will be in your breath. So will these same chemicals if you are on a very strict low-carbohydrate diet. And if you have liver disease certain chemicals will accumulate in the blood and impart a characteristic fruity odor to the exhaled breath.

That is also how a number of foods cause bad breath. Garlic is a good example. The spice absorbed into the bloodstream circulates to the lungs and out. Clearly a mouthwash will not correct such a problem. Recently a lady wrote that her husband discovered that cheese had this effect for him.

So the chemical that causes an odor can be from a disease, such as liver disease, or something you have eaten or drunk or from any mechanism that upsets the body's normal chemistry. The trick is to find out what it is and correct the temporarily and do nothing for the basic problem.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 9-4, Halitosis: The Breath Problem and What to Do About It. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 26 years old. I am not overweight but I do have cellulite on my thighs. I like to be comfortable in warm weather but I refuse to wear shorts because of this unsightly condition. Is there any cure for cellulite? What causes it?

DEAR READER — Surprise. Cellulite is just fat — plain ordinary fat deposits. The lumps of fat cause the dimpling effect. And women are more prone to lumpy fat deposits over the thighs. There is no magic, no disease, just fat.

It doesn't matter that the rest of your body is thin; it is still fat and the only way to eliminate it is by further weight reduction — but some people diet to the point of it being unhealthy. Exercise does help to tone up the thigh muscles which may help. But if nothing else works you might consider cosmetic surgery. The fat tissue can be cut away but you need to trade some scars for the elimination of the fat lumps. If you are interested you can see a plastic surgeon who does cosmetic surgery. Ask your family doctor or your county medical society to recommend one.

The first World's Fair was opened at London in 1851. Since then, the fairs have served as the backdrop for the unveiling of inventions and the blossoming of new ideas. The highlight of the 1876 fair in Philadelphia was the display of the first telephone, and the 1904 fair in St. Louis gave birth to the icecream cone.

Proper Care Aids Plant Moving

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Will your palnts survive the move? That's one question to consider if you're moving soon, advises an expert in the moving industry.

"Moving plants is more of a challenge than growing them," said Elaine DeShong, manager of customer service for U-Haul International, headquartered in Phoenix.

"But with proper care and know-how, plants can be moved successfully," she added, suggesting these packing and moving tips:

—Before you move, check with the department of agriculture for border inspection stations along your route. Since harmful pests found in some household plants may spread to valuable crops, some states maintain border stations to keep plants out.

—The key to moving plants is to securely wedge them in place. This keeps them from shifting and bumping into other objects. One of the best ways to do this is to lay a metal utility shelf unit on the floor of the truck or trailer.

Records...

Famed Soprano Compiles Memoir Of Classical

NEW YORK (AP) — Elisabeth Schwarzkopf tells a story of going with her late husband, Walter Legge, to a rehearsal of the Vienna Philharmonic. "We walked in from the side of the empty hall and went to the back of a box. You could see — it took about three seconds — the musicians sat up straight and started to play for dear life.

"They knew he knew."

Miss Schwarzkopf was one of the world's foremost sopranos, in opera and lieder, of postWorld War II. She says, "If you're worth your salt as an artist, you always try to perform for those one or two people present who know."

Her husband gave her an additional reason for always performing at her best, "even in a small concert in the biggest woods of Australia." That was "for that person — and there may be just one — whose life will be changed by that concert," She says. "From the letters I have been receiving, he was right."

Legge was really the first "producer" of classical recordings. Miss Schwarzkopf says he influenced hundreds of singers. And he traveled, listening and discovering singers he wanted to record. He offered Maria Callas a recording contract backstage at the Rome Opera after the first performance he heard her sing.

Miss Schwarzkopf had thought about writing a book about Legge but she didn't like to write. Then she found, in the basement, some chapters he had written for an autobiography.

"Some things shed a very good light on musical life in Europe in his years, what goes into making recordings and making artists," she says. "And he was gifted with a high quality of prose.

"I think people will take a great deal of knowledge out of this book and a sense of Walter's integrity and good taste that went into music making."

So she put his chapters together with some early music criticism he had written, some of his letters and articles, and very few of her own comments, as "On and Off the Record: A Memoir of Walter Legge."

"I didn't want any sentimental elaborations," she explains. "I'm glad when the true sentiment which was between us and the love for music comes out even in my poor words. The love of music certainly comes out in Walter's words. The man was made of music. He really was."

Legge's opinions were sometimes scathing. One wonders if there will be criticism of "On and Off the Record" because of it. "There already has been," Miss Schwarzkopf says. "He was very sharp tongued."

Miss Schwartzkopf and Legge didn't often disagree about the patch her career should take, she said. But she did once, when he was out of the country, sign a contract to sing "Madame Butterfly" 25 times at Covent Garden.

"I nearly got an immediate separation," she recalls.

Ellis Rubin Describes Himself As 'Flamboyant'

MIAMI (AP) — The kidnapping suspect, arrested as he stepped off a plane from Cuba, mystified everyone by demanding: "Get me Ellis Rubin."

That was 29 years ago. Nowadays, hardly anyone has to ask "Ellis who?"

Rubin first appeared in the national limelight in 1952, when he saved that suspect, Charley W. Johnson, from a possible death sentence by proving the kidnapping of a wealthy Miami jeweler's son hadn't been a kidnapping at all.

Rubin, 56, has kept his name in the news ever since, from 1950s anti-Communist crusades, to his "TV intoxication" insanity defense of teen-age murderer Ronny Zamora, to unsuccessful forays into politics, to lawsuits against the National Football League, a local judge and even another lawyer.

Asked to describe himself, Rubin chooses a word that appears frequently before his name in news stories: "flamboyant."

"I think the press is very accurate" on that, he says. "I don't deny it. I don't think it's bad. And if I did think it's bad, what could I do about it?

"I like to participate in the living of my times. I'd like to leave this place a little better than I found it. I think I'm contributing. I would say that I'm the guy that maybe the little guy can come to and hope to buck the establishment."

He makes a six-figure income representing such people, but says he hates to charge them and wishes he didn't have to reject any case. His biggest successes, Rubin says, are four well-adjusted children.

In his work, though, Rubin is never so happy as when he's filing suits and trying cases on causes that haven't been explored before and in ways they haven't been heard before. He still celebrates a big victory with interviews and press releases.

And there seem to be ample opportunities for that. His clients include fired air-traffic controllers who want their jobs back, a Cuban stowaway who wants to stay in this country and a former Dade County fireman who's dying of an inoperable heart disease.

On March 19, Rubin threatened to park that client, Dale Lott, on the steps of the medical center at the University of Utah and watch him die if hospital officials wouldn't consider giving Lott an artificial heart. Rubin has asked the university to change its criteria for implanting the heart so that inoperable patients like Lott would be eligible to receive it.

Other clients are Watergate burglar E. Howard Hunt, Bay of Pigs veterans, a tourist-attraction operator who sells snake venom to relieve arthritis, Broward County tax protesters and Cuban and Nicaraguan exiles who conduct commando-type exercises in the Everglades.

Rubin has represented blacks in Key West who want a black on the school board and whites in Broward County who don't want their children bused to integrate the schools. He represents a Miami couple, Mark and Eileen Johns, embroiled in a complex international battle with a Mexican woman for custody of the 5-year-old girl they claim to have adopted.

Whether he's running for office — he's tried unsuccessfully nine time for posts ranging from mayor of North Miami Beach to the U.S. Senate — or preparing a new blockbuster case, Rubin counts on people remembering him.

That's why, he says, the newsmaking cases keep coming in.

"I think the kind of cases that come in here and perhaps the way we handle them does cause public interest and thus publicity," he says.

Mexico City Has Splendors, Large Population

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Sinking, swaying, choking on its own breath, this metropolitan sprawl of man and machine, monuments and mariachi bands has a motto, an openhearted one — "La ciudad es de todos," "The city is everyone's."

The trouble is, everyone seems to believe it.

Ragged peasants streaming in from the Mexican countryside, job hunters from provincial towns, babies born to a prolific populace, together they all produce this staggering fact:

Mexico City, each and every year, is adding the equivalent of one Boston to itself — 700,000 people.

It is becoming a "supercity ... beyond the scope of human experience," says the Population Crisis Committee of Washington, D.C.

Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, who lives in a wooded oasis in the midst of it all, has another word for it.

"Mexico City is the most absurd thing that ever happened," he has been quoted as saying.

It now holds 14 million people. It is growing at a rate of 5 percent a year, 2 percentage points higher than the national growth rate. By the year 2000 its population will probably surpass 30 million, the world's greatest urban concentration.

The problems of water and power supply, of sewage and air pollution, of automobile traffic, public transport, housing, schools, crime, employment — all are gigantic, like the city itself. "Solutions" are out of the question.

"It is not a matter of 'solving' it," says World Bank urban planner Giancarlo Guarda. "It is a matter of trying to manage it."

When viewed from the western hills, the Mexican capital spreads like a huge gray-white amoeba over the bumps and flats of the 7,400-foot-high Valley of Mexico. This organism of concrete, adobe and asphalt now covers 400 square miles, and some believe it will cover 1,000 square miles 20 years from now.

In, around and above it floats an ether of carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxide and other contaminants that make Mexico City one of the world's most polluted urban areas. Every day dawns a dirty yellow, every street boasts a smoke-spewing traffic jam, every night falls a smoky gray.

Urbanologists might have chosen a better setting for a great city. But it was a priestly prophecy, not science, that selected it. Legend says Aztec priests led their wandering Indian tribe to an island in the valley's Lake Texcoco where, as prophesied, they found an eagle grasping a rattlesnake on a cactus. They built their capital there in 1321.

Today's city rests mostly on the filled-in lake, and it has been sinking of its own weight — 35 feet over the past 70 years — as water is drawn from below.

At the same time, earthquakes regularly shake the capital, freakish downpours drown it, and windstorms blow in gritty dust from dried lakebeds on the outskirts.

This is not to say the "Supercity" sprawl is a dreary monotony.

The city's axis, the Paseo de la Reforma, is one of the world's grandest boulevards, a four-mile-long, 12-lane-wide swath softened by greenery and glittering with monumental statuary.

Sumptuous homes, fashionable shopping centers and elegant restaurants fill the leafy and affluent southern and western districts, or "colonias." Government technocrats and businessmen, enriched in Mexico's age of oil, crisscross the city — slowly — in air-conditioned limousines. Gleaming new office towers rise through the smog.

In the age-old heart of the city, the grandiose cathedral, National Palace, blocks of baroque buildings and the newly unearthed ruins of the Aztecs' Great Temple ring the vast central plaza, the Zocalo. In nearby Plaza Garibaldi, mariachi bands blare their brassy tunes to tourists.

The contrasts, in the space of miles, can be stunning.

In this place where man first settled during the Ice Age, impoverished families still live in caves. A few miles from the heroic bronzes that line the Paseo de la Reforma, garbage piles and pigs line the churned-up dirt "streets" of the slum Netzahualcoyotl. Across town from the wine cellars of hacienda dining rooms, jobless peasants sit in darkened hovels drinking themselves stuporous on a dangerous, but nutritious, Indian home brew called pulque.

"There are people starving to death in the streets and other people riding around in their Mercedes-Benzs and flying in on their Lear jets," says Bruce Bagley, a professor of Latin American studies from Washington, who is a frequent visitor here.

The Mexican government, through its Federal District administration, has been scrambling to "manage" the many crises, laying miles of new pipe for water and sewage, extending the subway, buying buses, building housing blocks and schools. At the same time, through tax breaks and other incentives, it is trying to encourage Mexico's expanding industries to locate elsewhere. About half of Mexican industry is here.

"This city has grown up hurriedly, and that is the problem," Manuel Gurria, deputy mayor of the Federal District, says.

It has doubled its population each decade since 1940, and by the end of the century is expected to have almost one-third of the national population. At least 500 new migrants arrive each day from the countryside, where the limited farmland cannot support the population.

"The solutions lie in decentralizing politically, economically and socially. This would mean that all kinds of tension would be reduced," Gurria says.

But much of the growth is out of the Federal District's control.

On paper, "Mexico City" does not exist. Three-quarters of the people live in the Federal District and the rest in adjacent municipalities of the surrounding State of Mexico. The "hyperurbanization" of recent years has occurred in these outlying appendages, sometimes called "ciudades perdidas," lost cities.

The biggest is Netzahualcoyotl, where the first shack was raised on landfill 18 years ago and where at least 3 million people now live in poverty, without water and sewage systems or other basic services.

Mexico City's most visible problems are in the streets and the air. But the most intractable are below ground.

"The water supply for the valley is a problem that is going to be there forever," says the World Bank's Guarda. "They have very few places from which to draw water. It comes from very far away and has to be pumped uphill."

From 1960 to 1976, water supply more than doubled, but the supply per capita of population actually declined.

Although the government has spent $600 million over four years to improve the water and sewage systems, severe deficiencies remain. The Federal District government says it will complete the water supply network for all its residents this year, but only 15 percent of the population in the outlying slums have drinking water piped in, and in parts of the Federal District the supply system works only intermittently.

To slake the city's thirst, the government must reach farther and farther afield. New costly proposals call for tapping rivers more than 100 miles away.

As for the sewers, only onequarter of the Federal District's homes are connected with the system.

The problems above ground are more palpable.

Average visibility in Mexico City dropped from nine miles to three from 1937 to 1966. In the past four years alone, air pollutants have increased by 30 percent, the government says.

Doctors report a sharp increase in respiratory and cardiovascular diseases in recent years. Joggers flock to the parks in the evenings, since some have been incapacitated by running in the daytime smog.

Gurria says the government is pressing private industry to improve pollution control. It is pursuing a more natural method as well — planting 70 million trees in the greatly deforested valley.

Sixty percent of the contaminants come from Mexico City's 2.5 million motor vehicles, which are not fitted with U.S.-style anti-pollution equipment. The government has built some automotive inspection stations, but the fine for a flagrant polluter is a mere $5.

The worst offender is undoubtedly the government itself, each of whose 5,000 city buses thunders down the streets trailing a thick black plume of exhaust.

"In many cities I know, people would not stand for these buses that go down the principal avenues of Mexico City belching smoke, destroying the trees, destroying your breathing capacity," Mexican novelist Carlos Fuentes told a reporter. "In Mexico it is tolerated."

The traffic long ago overburdened a street system first sketched out by the Aztecs. A survey in the 1970s found that Mexico City's traffic moved at an average of 7 miles an hour, while London and Paris, with three times as many vehicles, had averages of about 15 mph.

In a mile-square area around the Zocalo, on narrow streets that were once canals for Aztec canoes, the traffic often comes to a dead halt.

Over a traffic-delayed lunch, Sen. Faustino Zapata confessed to a visitor, "Nowadays it is impossible to be on time in Mexico City."

Battered old American-made "gas guzzlers" pack the streets. Triple parking clogs them. The din rising from the asphalt can be as polluting as the exhaust.

For years the rivers of traffic flowed on cheap gasoline.

PRICE POLICY—It is McCoy's policy to offer the lowest possible price on all products, not just "leader" items.
HOW DO YOU PAY?—McCoy's will accept cash, personal check and Visa and MasterCard credit cards.
DELIVERY—This service is available at a modest charge. Check your nearest McCoy's for delivery area and rates.
RETURNED MERCHANDISE—Merchandise in resaleable condition may be returned within 30 days for credit on other purchases. Receipt must accompany return. A 10% restocking charge will be subtracted from cash refunds. Lumber cannot be returned.
PLEASE NOTE—A raincheck will be issued, upon request, for out-of-stock sale merchandise. We reserve the right to correct printing errors.
