Texaco calls for new cuts

Oil giant's moves put 120-160 basin jobs at risk

■ Sale would affect company's production in area by less than 10 percent, and should add to cash flow, division chief says.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Asset sales and employee cuts announced Tuesday by Texaco will put approximately 120-160 Texaco jobs in the Midland Division at risk, but the actual number of jobs lost in the Permian Basin could be less if asset sales go as planned.

Jobs affected in the Midland Division will be spread over production districts at Big Spring, Hobbs, Levelland, Odessa, and Farmington, N.M., according to Bill Johnson, Midland Division manager for Texaco. He said there are a total of 835 employees in the division, with 315 employed in the Midland office.

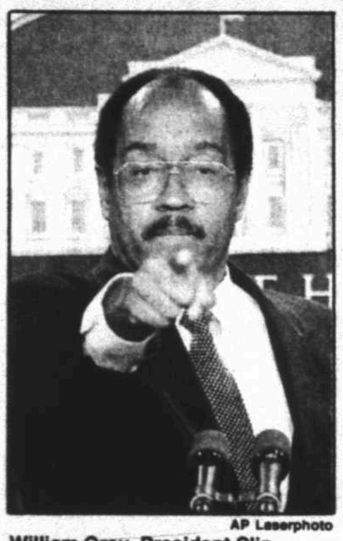

Johnson said he would not know how many would be cut from the Midland office until the end of August.

Texaco announced Tuesday that it would sell approximately half of its U.S. producing properties and reduce its employees by 2,500 nationwide. Texaco, one of the nation's largest oil companies, already has eliminated 13 percent of its worldwide workforce over the past two years. A Texaco spokesman said the company had not yet determined how many job cuts will be through layoffs, attrition or early retirements. The reductions are intended to reduce overhead.

News of the Texaco restructuring follows an announcement by Exxon last week that it would downgrade its Mid-Continent Divison to a production district and reduce the number of jobs in Midland by 140 em-

William Gray, President Clinton's special adviser on Haiti, calls on a questioner in the White House briefing room Tuesday.

Action on Haiti

WASHINGTON — Haitians who flee their country by boat will not be allowed into the United States, but will either be taken to refugee camps in Panama or returned home, the Clinton administration said Tuesday. In the latest shift in policy, the administration said it wanted to halt a surge of fleeing boat people. The announcement came a day after more than 3,000 Haitians were picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard. And in a new show of military force, the administration ordered four more warships and 2,000 Marines to sail toward Haiti and prepare for a potential evacuation of U.S. citizens./8A

Texas closes books on most deadly holiday

■ State's traffic death toll for long July Fourth weekend hits record-breaking 65.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas' traffic death toll for the long July Fourth holiday weekend reached a record-breaking 65, including 27 youngsters, state officials said Tuesday.

Many who died weren't wearing seat belts.

Kimberly Funches grieves in Los Angeles for 12 siblings killed in a Texas crash on Sunday.

"I saw several accidents where it is quite arguable that if the occupant had had a safety belt on, they probably would still be alive," said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox.

"It's incredible to me to think there are still that many people out there who for some reason think they're bullet-proof and don't have to wear safety belts," he said.

The total number of traffic deaths during the holiday period was more than double the 31 that had been predicted by DPS. The official count began at 6 p.m. Friday and continued through midnight Monday.

Sunday was the deadliest day in Texas traffic history, with 44 deaths, in-

Despite three-digit flirtation, Mother Nature offers respite

By Katherine Poteet

The temperature crept back up over the 100-degree mark Tuesday, but Mother Nature finally gave the Permian Basin a break with about two hours of steady rain.

The National Weather Service reported that .02 inches of rain fell during the storm, which brought a brief spell of hail and some lightning. The system started in the Guadalupe Mountains and reached the Midland/Odessa area about 6:45 p.m.

Winds gusted up to 43 mph ahead of the storm, causing a small dust storm to develop along FM 1788, north of Highway 191, just before the rain fell.

O.J. case: Driver, guest tell of 'thumps,' shadowy figure

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A limousine driver and a guest at O.J. Simpson's estate told a tale of thumps in the night and a shadowy figure hurrying into the mansion as prosecutors Tuesday sought to establish that Simpson had as much as 75 minutes to commit murder.

Limo driver Allan Park testified he arrived early at Simpson's mansion for a 10:45 p.m. pickup the night of the murders and no one answered the intercom until after he saw a black person slip into the house close to 11 p.m.

"He told me he overslept, that he just got out of the shower and he'd be down in a minute," Park said of the voice over the intercom that he believed to be Simpson's.

Poll: Residents strongly favor more AIDS, sex education in schools

By Jimmy Patterson
Special Projects Editor

Cityline Community Pulse

Midland residents who participated in a three-day poll came out strongly in favor of having the school district step up its teaching of sex and AIDS education in the classroom.

Of 632 callers to this week's Community Pulse Poll, 434, 68.7 percent, say they feel the Midland Independent School District should become more explicit in its handling of sex and AIDS education. The remaining 198 callers to the non-scientific poll felt the MISD should maintain its more traditional stance.

One regular caller to Community Pulse who prefers anonymity had a novel idea.

"Before entering junior high," she said, "all students should attend a medical seminar to be educated as to the dangers of sexually transmitted diseases. This seminar should be presided over by medical doctors and other medical personnel — not by teachers. A certificate could be awarded after completing the seminar which would allow the students to then enter junior high."

Theresa Hawkins was adamant in her support for stepped-up education of the controversial subjects.

"The school board's ridiculous and outdated rules of what can and can't be said are so strict that most teachers don't even bother with trying to teach sex education," Ms. Hawkins said. "Is it any wonder that Midland has one of the highest teen pregnancy rates in the state? Now, with the threat of AIDS, it has come down to this question for Midland: Would you rather spare your own embarrassment or save your children's life?"

There were those, however, who took the opposing viewpoint and remain in favor of the district's conservative approach to the topic.

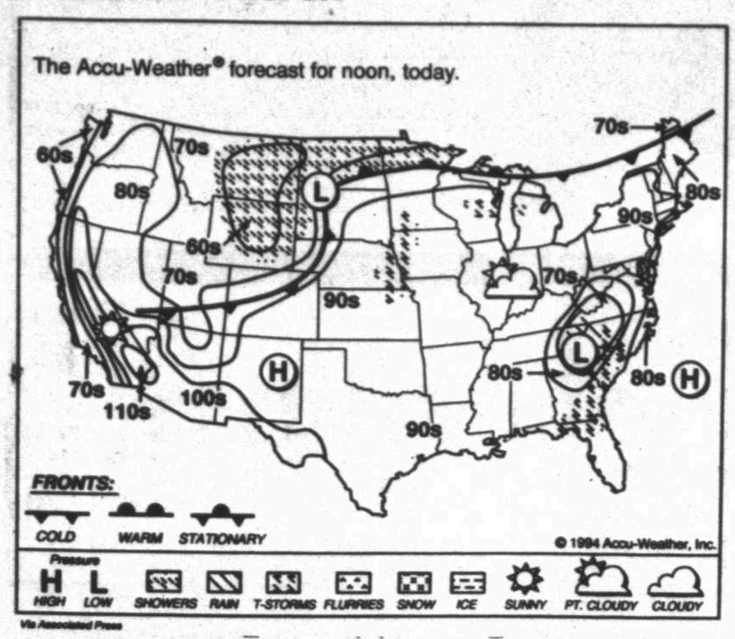

"Not just no, but h--- no," said a caller named Mrs. Allen. "Who do they think they are?"

"How explicit does it need to be?" another female caller asked. "Don't you know there's some things that if you

ceived any significant rainfall was an inch on June 11.

The rain, coupled with temperatures that are slowly moving back to below the century mark, are positive signs, according to the NWS, that Mother Nature is finally easing up on West Texas.

After temperatures that soared during one day to a record-shattering 116, dry conditions that helped touch off a range fire and no rain, the high pressure system responsible for hot, dry conditions appears to be weakening.

"The high pressure is finally loosing its strength," said a National Weather Service forecaster. "We will continue to have hot weather for a little while, but nothing near the 116 we reached last week."

The Pacific high pressure has been fixed over Arizona and New Mexico, with no major front or jet stream to break it up, the forecaster said.

The Permian Basin came within one day of breaking the record of 12 consecutive days of temperatures at 100 or above. Monday's temperature of 99 broke that string of triple-digit days that started on June 23. Tuesday's temperature crept back up to 101, but came three degrees short of breaking the record high for the date set in 1971.

Today's skies should be mostly sunny with the high reaching near 100. Winds will be south at 15-20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower 70s.

Thursday will remain mostly sunny with a high again near 100.

Tuesday's overnight low was 75, compared to the record low for that date of 57 set in 1931.

STATE

Scattered showers were reported in South and West Texas Tuesday, while skies were generally clear in North Texas.

Skies were fair to partly cloudy Tuesday in North Texas. Winds were south at 5 to 10 mph in the east and 10 to 15 mph in the west with gusts to 25 mph.

Temperatures were in the 80s and 90s.

North Texas should be partly cloudy and windy today with highs in the mid-90s.

Skies were partly cloudy across most of South Texas. Thunderstorms to the north and east of the Houston area produced rains of 1 to 2 inches.

Temperatures were in the 80s along the coast; and in the 90s to near 100 across inland areas.

Winds were southeast at 10 to 15 mph across inland areas with higher gusts to 30 mph along the mid- and lower coast.

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with widely scattered showers during the afternoon. Highs will be in the 90s inland and 80s along the coast.

Scattered storms, some with heavy rain, developed over portions of the Davis Mountains and Trans Pecos region Tuesday. The rest of West Texas was mostly sunny.

NATION

The remnants of Tropical Storm Alberto dumped heavy rain on the Southeast and Gulf Coast states on Tuesday, while thunderstorms rumbled across parts of the Midwest, spawning at least one tornado.

Just west of Maribel in eastern Wisconsin, a tornado caused some minor injuries, knocked down trees and power lines and damaged several homes in a rural subdivision, authorities said.

Moist tropical air brought the heaviest rain to Georgia, Alabama and Louisiana.

During the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT, 1.64 inches of rain fell in Lafayette, La.; 1.63 in New Orleans; 1.45 in Albany, Ga.; 1.41 in Atlanta; and 1.22 in Dothan, Ala.

Rain has fallen since Sunday across the region, sending some rivers and streams over their banks across Georgia. Several bridges were washed out and mud slides were reported in some areas of the state.

More rain is expected in the region from the slow-moving storm system, the National Weather Service said. Flash flood watches were issued for much of Georgia, northwest South Carolina and parts of North Carolina.

Elsewhere, a cold front across the northern Plains produced scattered thunderstorms. Rain showers and a few thunderstorms also hit parts of Washington, Oregon and the northern Rockies.

A severe thunderstorm watch was posted for parts of Indiana, Ohio and the West Virginia.

Thunderstorms dropped more than 3½ inches of rain Tuesday morning in Grand Rapids, Mich., causing some minor flooding. More than 1½ inches of rain fell in Minneapolis-St. Paul. In just five minutes, La Porte, Ind., was deluged with nearly a half-inch of rain.

Heat baked parts of the Midwest. The temperature soared to 98 degrees in Louisville, Ky., tying the record for the day set in 1988. Heat advisories were issued for much of Arkansas, east-central Missouri and central Illinois.

In contrast, Alamosa, Colo., dipped to 37 Tuesday morning, breaking the old record of 38 set in 1971.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

HEARING: O.J. had time, prosecutors say

the estate, said he and Simpson returned from a McDonald's dinner about 9:45 p.m. and he didn't see him again until he went out to investigate thumps he heard at 10:40 p.m. and saw Simpson a short time later getting into the limousine.

Earlier testimony at the preliminary hearing has suggested that Simpson's ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and Ronald Goldman, a friend of hers, were killed between 10 and 11 p.m. June 12.

Howard Weitzman, one of Simpson's previous attorneys, said he was told by police that the slayings happened about 11 p.m. and that Simpson was at home at that time waiting for his ride to the airport. Simpson's lawyers have not disclosed his whereabouts in the hour or two leading up to 11 p.m.

Simpson, 46, is charged with stabbing to death Ms. Simpson, 35, and Goldman, 25.

So far, testimony at the hearing, which began Thursday and will determine whether there is enough evidence to go to trial, has shown only that Simpson had the opportunity to kill. There has been no evidence presented directly linking him to the murders.

And Municipal Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell hasn't yet revealed the contents of a bulky yellow envelope that Simpson's attorneys turned over last week. The appearance of the envelope gave rise to speculation that it could contain the 15-inch stiletto that Simpson allegedly bought several weeks before the murder.

After the lunch break, attorneys argued a defense motion to throw out all evidence seized at Simpson's house. The defense contends detectives illegally scaled the wall of Simpson's estate without a warrant the morning after the slayings and that when they obtained a warrant a few hours later, they did so by misrepresenting the situation.

In court papers filed to counter that argument, prosecutors revealed for the first time that there was a path of bloody shoe prints from the dead bodies to an alley behind Ms. Simpson's condo.

Detective Mark Fuhrman, who scaled the wall, testified that police, who had just come from the bloody crime scene, spotted blood on a Bronco outside the estate and feared there might be trouble.

"I said, 'We've got an emergency. We've got a problem. We don't know if we have people inside that are in danger, dying, bleeding to death. We have to do something. I don't care whose house it is, we have to do something,'" Fuhrman said.

Once inside, Fuhrman testified, he found a glove on a walkway next to a guest house that matched one found at the crime scene, and Kaelin told him he had heard a loud thump the night before coming from the area where the glove was found.

The hearing adjourned until today with Fuhrman still on the stand.

In morning testimony, Park told of arriving early at Simpson's mansion on June 12 for a previously arranged 10:45 p.m. pickup, set to take Simpson to the airport.

Park said he repeatedly buzzed Simpson's intercom by the front gate from around 10:40 to 10:50 p.m. but didn't get an answer until around 11 p.m. Moments before, he said he saw a tall, black person slip into the front door of the estate.

Park said the mystery figure was black, about 6 feet and 200 pounds, dressed in dark clothes and "was walking pretty fast." He couldn't tell if it was a man or woman, but acknowledged the build was probably that of a man.

Asked by Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark about Simpson's behavior when he came down, Park said, "I never met him before, and everything seemed OK to me." He said he saw no sign of injury to Simpson.

During the ride to the airport, Simpson complained two or three times of being hot and put his window down and turned the air conditioning on, Park testified.

Park also testified he didn't remember seeing Simpson's white Ford Bronco outside the house when he came by one of the compound's two gates. He spent most of his time waiting at the other gate.

Under cross-examination, defense attorney Robert Shapiro pointed out that Park had described the black person as a black male at the grand jury. He also quizzed him on apparent discrepancies in his testimony on the time that events happened.

Kaelin testified he chatted with Simpson at least four times the day of the murders.

After returning from a golf game midafternoon, Simpson spoke of his failed marriage, and after returning from his daughter's dance recital, he mentioned the tight dresses that his ex-wife and her friends were wearing, Kaelin said.

Later in the evening, Kaelin testifie, Simpson came to his room and asked to borrow some small bills because he had only $100 bills and he wanted to tip a skycap.

When Simpson said he was going to McDonald's for a hamburger, Kaelin said he asked to go along. Simpson drove his Rolls-Royce through the drive-through and ate his hamburger behind the wheel.

Kaelin said they returned home about 9:45 p.m.

At 10:40 p.m., Kaelin said, he heard two or three loud thumps against the guesthouse wall and thought there might have been an earthquake. Then he became suspicious a prowler might be on the grounds and went out to investigate. He said that sometime after that he saw the limousine driver and Simpson leaving for the airport for his 11:45 p.m. flight.

"(He seemed) rushed for his flight," he said.

RECORDS: State releases its final figures

cluding 31 people killed in just three accidents in Runnels, Scurry and Parker counties. The previous record had been 42 on Dec. 24, 1975.

The total toll topped the previous record in Texas of 64 deaths for a 78-hour July 4th holiday period, reached in 1971, 1982 and 1983, Cox said. When DPS officials counted traffic deaths during a 102-hour July 4th period in 1972, they tallied 80.

Of this long weekend's 65 deaths, 51 were vehicle occupants, nine were in the rear of a pickup and five were pedestrians, DPS said.

Of the vehicle occupants who died, only 18 percent were confirmed as being restrained by seat belts.

Forty-three percent were not restrained. DPS was unsure about the remaining 39 percent, including 14 people who died when a van apparently pulled into the path of a tractor-trailer near Weatherford.

Of the 27 people under age 18 who died, 12 were in that van. Of the remaining 15, none were restrained, according to DPS reports.

State law requires front-seat passengers to wear their seat belts.

The law also requires children under age 4 to be restrained, whether in the front or back seat. And it is illegal for children under 12 to ride in the open bed of a pickup truck traveling over 35 mph. In one accident Sunday, 12 children were in a truck bed.

Two state lawmakers from Austin, citing the death of a 7-year-old boy from nearby Georgetown, said they will work to strengthen the seat belt law to help protect youngsters. The regular legislative session begins in January.

The boy, who wasn't wearing a seat belt, was thrown from a car in an accident Sunday and suffered head injuries. Reps. Sherri Greenberg and Elliott Naishtat, both Democrats, want to require seat belts for all youngsters between ages 4 and 15, not just those in the front seat.

"The risk of not buckling up is simply too high," Ms. Greenberg said. She said similar legislation failed to pass in 1993.

This year's Fourth of July holiday death count will rise if more people die as a result of injuries sustained during the reporting period, the DPS' Cox said.

The 65th death occurred Tuesday, when 21-year-old John Mark Davidson of San Angelo died of injuries suffered in a wreck Saturday in Terrell County, according to DPS.

Data was too preliminary to determine how many of the accidents were alcohol-related, but the DPS said about 40 percent of all fatal accidents in Texas are related to alcohol.

Cox said despite the deaths of people not wearing seat belts, figures indicate more Texans are complying with the law.

He said that in 1992, the DPS issued citations for 91,898 seat belt violations. That dropped to 77,028 in 1993. Through May of this year, the total was 27,309.

A total of 8,694 citations were issued by the DPS for child safety seat violations in 1992, compared with 7,940 tickets in 1993 and 3,087 through May of this year, Cox said.

In 1992, the DPS also issued 402 citations statewide for carrying children in the bed of an open pickup. The total was 324 in 1993, and 103 through May of this year.

don't tell them (children), then they won't think of?"

"I have four teen-age boys," Ellen Rankin said, "three of whom are in MISD schools this fall. I commend the district's stance on sex and AIDS education. Keep up the good work."

A pair of Midland educators also responded to the poll. Both preferred to remain anonymous.

"I am an employee of the Midland ISD so I don't feel like I can leave my name, but I find it rather amusing that the district would say no to sex education and yet provide a building, a school, for teens before and after their babies are born."

"As an educator in the Midland Independent School District," the other caller said, "I feel very, very uncomfortable with trying to match my own personal values with the values of all the parents who I am going to be representing and serving as a surrogate for if I'm going to be teaching sex education in school. That's the job of the ministers and the families."

A caller by the name of Rita Geismer said, "I am absolutely and totally against sex education in the school system. It's just another way for the state to take control of our lives. If we allow them into our schools, it becomes another door open to humanism and state control."

One caller said she felt there was enough explicit sex in "the news media, books and magazines" and that it needs to be out of schools; another caller said "if we taught sex education in schools, maybe we'd have less of those stupid pink (It's a Baby, Ya'll) signs in people's front yards."

"The schools should definitely become more explicit," Wanda Scott said. "What we have been doing has not been working. On the job training does not work, and a little knowledge never hurt anyone."

But Carol Morgan disagreed, saying, "I do not want my children taught sex education in school. That is my job as a parent."

ployees. It also follows an announcement by Mobil last week that it would cut 2,300 workers from its chemical operations.

"For the past several years we have been evaluating and rationalizing all our upstream and downstream assets in the U.S. so that we can shed or non-core assets and focus on core assets," Johnson said.

He said the Permian Basin is and will remain a core asset area for Texaco, and that the company would be selling about 200 of its non-core properties in order to concentrate on core assets in the basin. He said the sale would affect Texaco production in the basin by less than 10 percent, and should add to cash flow.

"These are properties that we have determined to have little upside potential to us, and we will sell them and redeploy the proceeds for upstream projects. I would not be surprised if we had an increase in spending and activity next year," Johnson added.

While 120-160 jobs are at risk because of the asset rationalization, Johnson said Texaco hoped to reduce the number of unemployed by selling to a buyer who would take all or most of the employees.

"We plan to lump all the Texaco properties nationwide into a single package, in the hopes that someone who needs the employees will buy it. We will certainly encourage this, but we cannot require it of a buyer."

Johnson said that the Mabee and Slaughter properties were core properties and would not be sold, but that Texaco would not use any of the sale proceeds to launch other enhanced oil recovery (EOR) projects. "The price of oil makes EOR uneconomical at this point," he said.

In making the announcement Tuesday, Texaco said it was shifting its focus from aging domestic production sites toward more promising oil and gas ventures here and abroad, including the North Sea, the Tarim Basin in China and Timan Pechora in Russia.

The White Plains, N.Y.-based company is also selling less profitable overseas operations, such as its heavy-oil production site in Colombia.

Texaco said it will report a $165 million charge in the second quarter for layoffs, property write-downs and other expenses, including $49.5 million set aside for the sale of its chemical unit to Huntsman Corp., completed in April.

Texaco stock was up $1.50 at $61.62½ in Tuesday morning trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

peared he needed counseling. He went home and told his wife about the "odd" remark; she replied that counseling wouldn't hurt.

Around the same time, Steve Baker, a working investor in the gold mining company, and his brother, David, came to town. The last time Manning saw Steve Baker was at the time of the kidnapping.

Manning, his brother Bob, and the two Bakers went out for breakfast. The guys kidded pretty hard, as always.

During the visit, Steve Baker mentioned some events that occurred in Colombia while Manning was being held. It was news to Manning.

The guerrilla group that kidnapped Manning had killed some of his acquaintances among others. The rebels went to villages and killed people; the rebels stopped buses, made some people get out and killed them.

These were not the rebels Manning knew. The rebels — although armed — were not confrontational, Manning thought. The rebels — although they held Manning against his will for ransom — had treated him relatively well.

"I lost it emotionally after I came to the realization that they were cold-blooded murderers," Manning said. "It kind of shocked me back into the real world."

After breakfast, Manning fell physically ill. His family took him to a doctor, who gave Manning a shot to calm him down and prescribed tranquilizers.

Manning — whose family had always worked problems out without outside help — sought counseling reluctantly at first. Manning told the counselor: "I don't like you. I treat you like tranquilizers but I want you close by."

The counselor cautioned Manning that his experience was traumatic and there would be aftereffects. There were.

There are times when Manning loses control of his emotions. "My tears run uncontrollable," he said.

EFFECTS: Manning notes lingering symptoms

(From 2A)

sive and withdraws. Before the kidnapping, Manning was assertive in such situations.

Sometimes when he talks with his family, he avoids eye contact.

When faced with confrontation, Manning just gets up and walks out in frustration.

Manning recognizes the lingering symptoms of the passive defense he used with the rebels and the feelings he suppressed while in captivity.

Manning said he is learning to overcome the trauma, and has become better at expressing his emotions.

The meetings with the counselor — fairly regular at first — have dropped to an as-needed basis.

That doesn't mean the experience is behind him.

"I get emotional every time I talk about it," he said.

Aside from the emotional strain, Manning's bill of health looked good after a year and eight days in the jungle.

After arriving in Midland, Manning — who suffered symptoms of malaria while in captivity — visited a doctor immediately.

Various tests were conducted; all came back negative. Manning's doctor recommended a more extensive examination.

Manning traveled to the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston to a tropical disease expert.

"We did not turn up any evidence for significant tropical infection," said Dr. James Runnels, general internist and director of Baylor travel medicine service.

"Overall, I was surprised. He seemed by and large to be well taken care of as far as being taken care of as a hostage," Runnels said.

Although Manning felt bad physically, nothing could be found wrong. He was treated for some abdominal discomfort.

In addition, Runnels said Manning suffered some emotional and stress-related problems.

When Manning was released from captivity, no one offered counseling or medical attention. Not until he returned to Midland did he seek help.

Manning's separation from his family for more than a year has brought the family closer together.

"We're better people for it," Manning said.

When the family's on a special outing, the time doesn't pass without someone saying he or she is glad it's not last year.

Manning's promise not to take things for granted when he was released included a desire for greater peace and tranquility in his family.

Manning has worked to keep that promise.

"He has a different perspective on life," said Manning's son, Alan.

And the family has learned not to take Manning — and life — for granted.

"There's elation that we're back together and the time Lewis spends with family is precious. I think we're more at peace for what the future should hold for us," said Manning's wife, Donna Kay Manning.

Manning and his family attribute their fortitude to their faith in God.

"I got to see God's work in action," Manning said.

The Manning family said they appreciate the prayers of the community and help from the church, including the ransom money raised.

"I'm eternally indebted to people . . . and I'm living proof that prayers are answered," Manning said.

After returning to the United States, Manning was shocked to learn that the leftist rebels had aggressively killed people. And while in captivity and after his release, Manning pieced together the conclusion that one of the company's employees had a hand in the abduction.

Ruben, a Colombian geologist who worked for the company, had acted suspicious before the kidnapping.

Toward the end of 1992, Ruben became counterproductive, and poked around in the production aspects of the business outside his employed area of exploration, Manning said.

"I started finding things that didn't add up" with the general operations and bookkeeping, said Manning, who acted as comptroller.

Manning recalled a time when the company fired some of Ruben's friends that angered Ruben.

In mid-1992, the curly haired clean-cut 30-something Ruben had mentioned that he knew some of the rebels, had spent the night with them and had a guerrilla girlfriend.

When the rebels first invaded the camp, Manning watched as a guerrilla commandant acted friendly to Ruben, "more so than a prospective kidnapper," Manning said.

Within the first few days of his captivity, Manning noticed radios the rebels set out to dry from the rain. He thought the radios were from the gold-mining camp. He discovered that the guerrillas' radios were identical. Ruben has recommended the type to the company.

Manning later discovered that the order from the guerrillas was to kidnap the president of the company — Manning's brother Bob — and kill one of the company partners, Chuck Majors.

As fate happened, Bob Manning was in Midland. He and his younger brother alternated their stays at the gold-mining camp. And Majors had left the day before the abduction to look for Manning's lost luggage in Bogota.

The Colombian authorities told Manning they believed Ruben helped set up the abduction.

"(A police officer) said 'Your man Ruben is a very bad guy,'" Manning said.

Despite his experience and his eagerness to leave Colombia following his release, Manning has not abandoned the possibility of returning to the South American country.

Although his brother's gold-mining business is defunct — since July, because of the kidnapping — Manning said he may return on business, but not in the front lines in a gold-mining camp.

When Mrs. Manning was asked about such plans she read from a handwritten note: "We have an understanding realizing my husband is not the type to keep in a cage. Should he decide to do so — go back to Colombia or elsewhere — all legal and business matters would be in order. This encounter has made us much more sensitive to our own mortality and we would be at peace should tragedy strike either of us."

When asked whether that meant she was OK with him going back to Colombia she said — her eyes moistened with tears — she wasn't ready for her husband to leave home anytime soon.

"Right now it's real hard for us to be away from one another," she said.

Hutus flee from Tutsis in Rwanda

GIKONGORO, Rwanda (AP) — Panicked Hutus fled south before advancing rebels Tuesday, fearing the Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front was bent on avenging ethnic massacres by supporters of the Hutu-dominated government.

Hutus streamed into a security zone established in southwestern Rwanda by French troops who intervened in the civil war two weeks ago. As 500 French marines and Foreign Legionnaires dug in howitzers and mortars, their leaders said the troops would fight if the rebels tried to enter the zone.

Rebel leaders accused France of trying to prop up Rwanda's Hutu-dominated government just as Paris did in 1990, the first year of the war in the Central African country, and said a confrontation was possible.

A column of about 2,000 rebel fighters was reported about 12½ miles from the security zone, but French officials said there had not been any fighting.

While saying French soldiers would fight if necessary, French President Francois Mitterrand insisted the rebel front "is not our adversary" and said his troops would not prevent a rebel victory.

"We say simply that there must be somewhere a place for people in danger to take cover. We extend a helpful hand. Our action stops there," he said.

Hundreds of refugees trudged along the road leading to the French base at Gikongoro. They carried mattresses, baskets of food and suitcases stuffed with clothes balanced on their heads.

Thousands of Hutus already had come to the Gikongoro area over the past few months as the rebels captured town after town to the north. Kigali, the capital 85 miles to the northeast, fell to the rebels Monday, as did Butare, the country's second largest city.

Innocent Busisi and about 100 of his Hutu relatives and neighbors followed their priest from a village near Butare to Gikongoro on Tuesday. Busisi said they were fleeing the rebels and seeking safety with French troops.

"The rebels, they're bad people, they've killed a lot of people," he said.

However, the United Nations and human rights groups blame the government for most of the bloodshed, accusing it of trying to exterminate the Tutsi minority. An estimated 200,000 to 500,000 people, most of them Tutsi civilians, have been slain since the latest round of civil war began in April.

There has been little confirmation of reports of atrocities by Tutsis, but government propoganda portrays the rebels as blood-thirsty.

N. Yemen claims control of southern city

SAN'A, Yemen (AP) — Northern Yemeni leaders claimed their troops won control of most of the southern stronghold of Aden on Tuesday, an advance that would point to imminent victory against the secessionist south.

The south's prime minister, Haidar Abu Bakr Al-Attas, conceded his forces lost ground in Aden but said the attackers were being driven back.

Neither side's statements could be independently verified; both sides have made exaggerated claims in the past.

But it was clear Aden continued to suffer. Kuwait News Agency, which has a correspondent in Aden, said shelling killed at least 30 people Tuesday.

The 400,000 people in Aden are increasingly short of water, food and medical supplies. Relief officials fear the city is on the verge of catastrophic health problems. The port has become increasingly crowded as people flee advancing northern troops.

Aden has been the focus of most of the fighting in the civil war that broke out May 4. Issues left unresolved in the 1990 unification of North and South Yemen had festered into an irreconcilable feud between leaders.

Artillery shells crashed into Hotel Aden, where foreign journalists and relief officials were staying, injuring two French physicians with the international aid group Doctors Without Borders on Tuesday, the Kuwaiti agency said.

The north claimed its troops and tanks battled their way into Aden's outlying neighborhoods and controlled most of the city by midday. A battle front in the heart of the crowded city could mean street battles and major civilian casualties.

Hundreds have been reported killed the past few weeks as northern forces drove toward the former South Yemen capital.

A Defense Ministry official in San'a, the federal capital, said northern troops and armor broke into Aden's northern suburbs of Al-Mansoura, Dar Saad and Sheik Othman on Tuesday morning.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said northern troops also engaged southern forces at Khormaksar airport, capturing the military and commercial airstrip and pushing secessionist forces back to Crater, the city center.

"Large numbers" of southern troops had surrendered while others fled to Crater, he claimed, while declining to give casualty estimates.

FBI chief signs anti-crime agreement with Russians

MOSCOW (NYT) — The director of the FBI, Louis J. Freeh, signed an agreement Tuesday to cooperate with Russian authorities in the fight against Russian-based organized crime.

Freeh and the Russian interior minister, Viktor Yerin, said that both countries were at risk from well-funded criminal gangs, parts of which have increasingly broad international connections. The prevalence of organized crime in Russia and the evident corruption of many underpaid officials and policemen are widely considered to be undermining the faith of ordinary Russians in market-oriented economic changes.

Opinion polls suggest that Russians regard criminals as the major beneficiaries of these changes, including the privatization of state property.

"Much remains to be done," Yerin said, "so that the professionalism, honesty, orderliness of every worker of the Interior Ministry organs will meet the standards of the society we are building together."

Freeh, who was quick to admit that the United States has a severe organized-crime problem of its own, praised draft anti-corruption legislation now before the Russian Parliament.

The protocol signed Tuesday calls for the exchange of information among police forces, cooperation in investigations, the detention of alleged criminals in each other's countries and the training of Russian officers in the FBI's more modern techniques.

Both sides also welcomed the establishment of a legal attache office of the FBI in the American Embassy here, which will house two FBI agents. Although office space has not yet been set aside and the first agent to be assigned here will first undergo six months of language training, liaison with Russian authorities will continue, as in the past, through regular visits by European-based agents.

The Germans and Finns already have similar offices here, and the Italians are about to open one.

Freeh said he would welcome a similar Interior Ministry office in Washington at the Russian Embassy, though he said there had been no formal request for one so far.

Freeh left Moscow Tuesday after a two days of meetings with the chiefs of the Russian domestic security apparatus, including Yerin; the director of the Federal Counterintelligence Service (the domestic branch of the old KGB); the national security adviser; the deputy justice minister and the first deputy prime minister, Oleg Soskovets.

He did not get to see President Boris N. Yeltsin, however, despite a request from the American Embassy.

American officials said that among the issues that brought Freeh here were concerns over narcotics trafficking from Colombia to Europe through Russia, the illegal transfer of money and the impact of Russian gangs among Russian emigres in the United States, especially in the Brighton Beach section of Brooklyn.

Chinese Prime Minister Li Peng, right, and the new German President Roman Herzog, left, share a smile after Li Peng's arrival for talks in Bonn Tuesday. Li Peng said he didn't want to order the bloody crackdown on pro-democracy activists at Tiananman Square in 1989 but felt there was no other option.

Chinese leader: Massacre was unavoidable

BONN, Germany (AP) — China's Li Peng said Tuesday he did not want to order the bloody 1989 crackdown on pro-democracy activists at Tiananmen Square but that the only other option was national chaos.

Premier Li sarcastically offered the Chinese leadership to any Western politician who thinks he can do a better job.

"If some Western politician claims he is in a position to use the normal Western methods to feed and clothe 1.2 billion Chinese, we would be happily prepared to elect him president of China," Li said in a German TV interview.

He spoke in Chinese and his comments were translated into German by ZDF television network.

Since Li's delegation arrived in Germany Sunday for a weeklong stay. It has signed more than 20 business deals with Germans.

But Li has been dogged by critics of China's civil rights record and by protesters who remind German leaders that Li ordered tanks and troops to quell the uprising centered at Beijing's Tiananmen Square.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, are believed to have been killed and thousands jailed in the June 1989 crackdown.

World powers issue Bosnian ultimatum

GENEVA (AP) — The United States, Russia and three European powers issued an ultimatum Tuesday to the warring factions in Bosnia: Agree to a new peace package or face international reprisals.

Their foreign ministers approved a plan to give the new Bosnian-Croat federation roughly 51 percent of Bosnia's territory and the Serbs 49 percent. The Serbs now hold about 70 percent and are seen as the most likely to reject the demand.

"It would be a mistake of truly historic proportions for either party to feel they can serve their people well if they reject the proposal," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said after the three-hour meeting.

Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev described the plan as "the only possible alternative" to war.

"We have mapped out a peaceful ultimatum. This is the first such effort to force a compromise and peace," he said.

Kozyrev, who was host for the meeting for the envoys from the United States, Russia, Germany, France and Britain, said the Croat-Muslim federation and the Bosnian Serbs had two weeks to respond. Leaders of the Bosnian factions will be given a copy of the new map Wednesday.

The ministers aimed their ultimatum primarily at the Serbs, who would have to give up land they consider strategically important.

Christopher said U.N. sanctions against the Serbs would be gradually lifted if they withdrew to the areas designated under the proposal. He said that if they did not agree, enforcement of the sanctions would be tightened.

British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd and his French counterpart, Alain Juppe, both warned their countries might be forced to pull their troops out of the U.N. peacekeeping mission in Bosnia if that happened. The two provide the biggest peacekeeper contingents.

Christopher also held out the possibility of more air strikes on Serb targets.

He said that as an incentive for the Muslim-Croat federation to accept the plan, the international community would give aid to rebuild the shattered land. And he indicated the United States would be willing to send military support to enforce the peace settlement.

Colombian police arrest 3 in soccer player murder case

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Three more suspects have been arrested in the murder of soccer star Andres Escobar, who was shot to death because he scored an own-goal in Colombia's World Cup loss to the United States.

Authorities also said Tuesday that they seized 55 pounds of cocaine, two revolvers and a submachine gun in two homes where they arrested two men and a woman on Monday.

Escobar was shot early Saturday in the parking lot of a bar in Medellin, Colombia's third-largest city. Police arrested two suspects over the weekend, one of whom confessed to shooting Escobar, said Gen. Octavio Vargas Silva, director of the national police.

At an emotional funeral Sunday, thousands of mourners chanted "justice! justice!" and listened to eulogies from President Cesar Gaviria, among others. Despite Colombia's history of violence, Escobar's death shocked a nation that reveres its sports stars.

The three suspects arrested in Medellin on Monday were at the scene of Escobar's death with Humberto Munoz, who confessed to shooting the soccer star, police said. They were identified as brothers Humberto and Hernan Dario Velez Correa and their cousin, Luz Mila Correa.

Munoz worked as a driver for another suspect, rancher Santiago Gallon Henao, who allegedly bet heavily on the Colombian team and was upset at having lost.

War memorial is important to basin

On March 29, 1973, the last U.S. ground troops were pulled out of Vietnam and if everything proceeds on schedule, early in November a memorial will be completed to the 200-plus Permian Basin residents who were either killed in action or listed as missing in that bloody war.

This week construction is starting on the memorial which will be located at a site off Wright Drive at Midland International Airport.

The memorial has been a long time in coming in more ways than one, but veterans of the Vietnam War living in the Permian Basin have every right to be proud that construction is beginning and the memorial will soon become a long-awaited reality.

In one regard, construction of the memorial is one more way in which the Permian Basin can tell its Vietnam veterans that the divisive Vietnam War is really over and that their service in that war truly was appreciated. In another, it will be a way for the veterans to have a monument to the men and women who took up arms when their country called and waded into the unpopular war regardless whether they believed it was right or just. They answered the call — and many needlessly laid down their lives for their country and their countrymen.

Building the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial is an important step in the history of this region and the life of its people. It will signify the bond that holds us together and assures all those who come behind us that we are all true Americans who understand how precious is the liberty we hold in our hands.

JACK ANDERSON

Wanted: Trash collectors with spacesuits

WASHINGTON — Government scientists have confirmed that at any given moment billions of Unidentified Flying Objects are circling the earth. But they've got nothing to do with E.T.

Anderson

Thanks to three decades of exploration, espionage and cable TV, the heavens are littered with debris from space gloves to paint chips.

"Left unchecked," one report to the National Security Council of the Bush administration warned, "the growth of debris could substantially threaten the safe and reliable operation of manned and unmanned spacecraft in the next century. . . . International cooperation is essential to a satisfactory solution."

NASA has taken the lead in addressing the problem in talks with the European Space Agency and the Russians.

The primary hazards of space pollution are posed to astronauts who will work and live in the environment, and to expensive satellites put up by various nations and commercial ventures. The space station designers are trying to minimize the likelihood of damage with heavy, expensive shielding.

The U.S. North American Aerospace Defense Command (NORAD) has cataloged more than 20,000 major pieces of debris in orbit since the Soviets first sent up the Sputnik in 1957. More than 7,000 are still up there. NORAD has to track all these pieces because it must differentiate between the junk that loses orbit and plunges to earth and hostile missiles on their way to U.S. targets.

Beyond the more than 7,000 larger, trackable pieces, there are literally billions of other pieces of debris that cause hazards in the space lanes. Those in low earth orbit travel at the incredible speed of 17,500 miles an hour, or seven times faster than the fastest rifle bullet.

Even a paint chip can be quite damaging to a satellite — and one can be lethal to an astronaut out on a spacewalk who might be struck by one. A piece of paint about the size of a grain of salt struck the three-layer windshield of the U.S. space shuttle at high velocity in 1983 gouging a crater in the outermost layer. The window cost $50,000 to replace. At least three such collisions have occurred in recent space history which destroyed U.S. and Soviet satellites.

In the late 1960s and 1970s, the Soviets tested an anti-satellite weapon in space which destroyed satellites by striking them with fragments, like a grenade. The repeated experiments produced hundreds of large pieces of metal shrapnel.

Additionally, the Soviet Union, deliberately destroyed 11 electronic surveillance satellites between 1975 and 1983, producing almost 600 relatively large fragments. The United States is also responsible for many large pieces from at least nine accidental explosions of rockets.

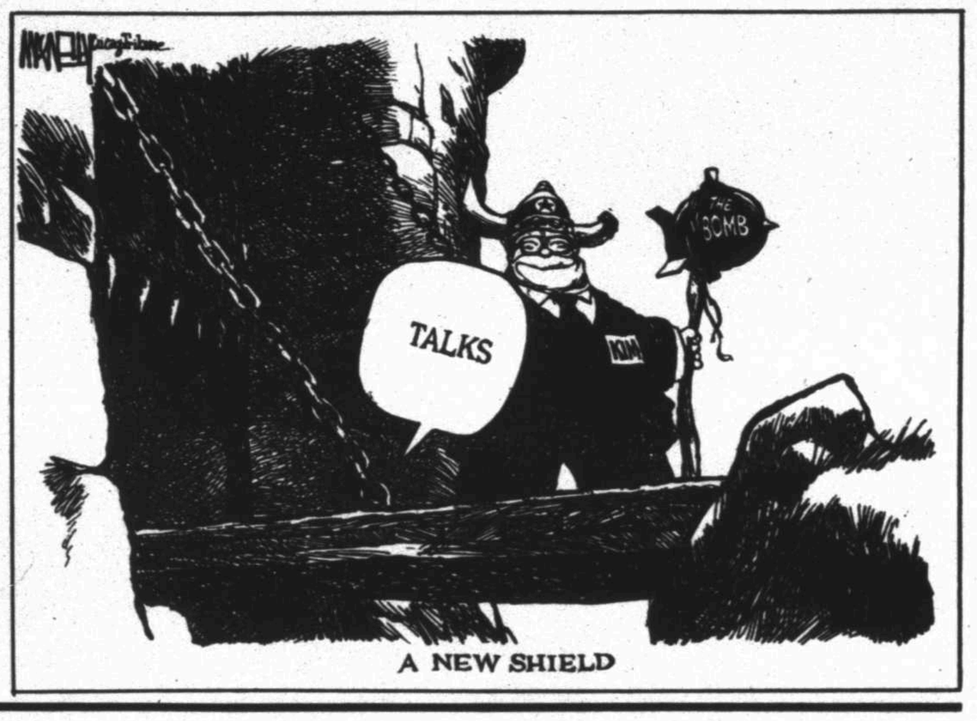

Some experts have suggested, it may be necessary to send up a space trash collector with mechanical arms to pick up some of the larger debris and return it to earth.

The variety of objects that have been launched into orbit range from dozens of ancient, now inoperable satellites, to a glove American astronaut Ed White lost in 1965 during the 20-minute first U.S. space walk. Astronaut Mike Collins lost a camera during a space walk the following year. In 1984, an American astronaut lost a power screwdriver from the space shuttle while repairing the Solar Max satellite.

Many of these kinds of items, particularly in the lower earth orbit of 250 miles, where human-piloted missions generally fly, lose their orbit and burn up as they re-enter the atmosphere.

The single largest piece of junk to fall from orbit was the 82-ton U.S. Skylab in 1979.

A NEW SHIELD

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Don't be suckered by White House shuffle

WASHINGTON — For those who base their opinions on principled disagreement with everything that appears in this space, here is a set of kneejerks for July to cope with events to come while I am on vacation.

Safire

1. Leon Panacea Presents the New, Organized, Pragmatic, Nonfrenetic, Clinton White House. Do not be suckered: Although this annual summer shuffle will be heralded as the most fundamental shift in governance since the importation of Superpragmatist David Gergen last summer, the sense of shake-up will last only until Leon attempts to wrest power from the real chief of staff.

Mack McLarty, who went to kindergarten with Clinton, is taking their old sandbox into the Oval Office's bunker of broken dreams. Meanwhile, over at State:

2. Vorpal Blade Goes Snickersnack: The new Foggy Bottom triumvirate of Talbott, Holbrooke and Gergen will praise Warren Christopher and Tony Lake with such vehemence that the cynical media will assume a coup is in the making. Ignore such hall-of-mirror analysis; Chris and Tony are as solidly ensconced as Mack was.

3. Whitewater Hearings Begin in the House Banking Committee on July 26. If Chairman Henry Gonzalez, protective Democrat, bangs his gavel on Republican prober Jim Leach's head, denounce the congressional cover-up. If a judicial panel rubber-stamps the appointment of anti-oversight Robert Fiske as independent counsel, castigate the pusillanimous Court of Appeals.

4. Clinton Lays Down Freedom's Marker in the Baltics. The president will speak at Riga, Latvia's Freedom Monument, next week, at the spot where the Soviet Union began to come apart. His lofty theme will be the new nature of post-Cold War courage. If he makes clear that Eastern European nations are on their way to full NATO membership, hail a historic address; if he fudges to avoid offending Yeltsin, deride his straddle and decry his missed opportunity.

5. Democrats Try to Portray Republicans as Captive of Christian Right's Lunatic Fringe. The Democratic campaign chairman, Vic Fazio, will step up the effort to scare Jews out of the Republican Party by bashing the evangelical right. The GOP should point to Fazio's refusal, for fear of offending the Demo black caucus, to join the House vote condemning Khalid Abdul Muhammad's bigoted "bloodsucker" speech. Beware of hardball-playing pols masquerading as libertarians while pumping up a "radical" villain.

6. Wars Ain't Over Till They're Over. The West will lean on Muslims and Croats to legitimize Serbian conquest of half of Bosnia, and will denounce aggression's victims when they don't. The fairest deal will be struck when forces are equal and tired; get U.N. out, arms to Muslims in.

7. Double Helix Solves Double Murder. If DNA's "superfingerprints" put O.J. Simpson at the scene of the crime, defense counsel's strategy could shift to attack on ex-wife as maddening slut. Stop treating this merely as a true-life whodunit, but focus on the need not only to find the perpetrator but to avenge the victims. Exhort vast audience to root for justice, not for the dramatic protagonist or to marvel at competing counsel.

8. Yen for a Penny. If the dollar drifts down another 5 percent or so, yawn; but if, after the G-7 meeting in Naples, the dollar keeps slipping without a bottom in sight, inflation and higher interest rates are a-comin' and it would be prudent to indulge in a bit of panic.

9. Apostles of Haiti. July is a customary month for hitting the beach. If Clinton wants to look strong to his liberal constituency, he will send the Marines into Haiti; if he wants to look smart as well as tough to conservatives, he will send in a force led by secretly-trained Haitians. Cautiously salute the former; throw hats in the air at the latter; hoot at continued water-treading.

10. Beltway Wisdom Confounded on Health Insurance. On the Senate floor, Dole's "four no's" will prevail: no price controls, no mandates, no triggers, no taxes. Instead, we'll see more coverage despite pre-existing conditions, which "cannot be taken away," with insurance subsidies for the poor. Credit Clinton for starting it, Dole for stopping it at the right point, and — on July 4 — the glorious American system for lurching forward sensibly.

Turkish action against Kurds needs reprimand

The earth is scorched and the jails are full following Turkey's massive spring offensive against Kurdish guerrillas in southeastern Turkey and northern Iraq.

The offensive involved 300,000 troops and militiamen. According to Amnesty International U.S.A., 600 Kurdish villages have now been evacuated, with four settlements bombed on a single March day.

Other human rights groups detail unpunished killings of journalists, the criminalizing of parliamentary speech and the jailing of Turkish Kurds for espousing "separatist propaganda."

To all protests, Turkey offers a reflexive reply. The Kurdish rebels are "terrorists." True, leftist guerrillas known as PKK are responsible for hundreds of killings, including (in the words of Amnesty International) "children, teachers, local politicians and other civilians."

But whatever its offenses, the PKK, or Kurdish Workers' Party, is not armed by the United States. Turkey is. Economic assistance for the current fiscal year is $100 million, military loans total $453 million and direct training is $1 million. Add to that direct arms sales of $1.3 billion for 40 single-engine F-16's.

Turkey is a NATO ally and seeks entry into the European Union. So it is a matter of valid Western concern when Turkey's war against Kurds escalates, when free speech is throttled and the political track forgotten as soldiers focus relentlessly on a military "solution" to a nine-year rebellion.

Before his death early last year, President Turgut Ozal was seeking a political opening to Kurds; and the insurgents, for their part, instituted a unilateral cease-fire. Now the soldiers appear to dominate President Suleyman Demirel and Prime Minister Tansu Ciller, the first woman to lead a Turkish government.

Ankara makes much of the fact that the Turkish Parliament every six months renews its agreement — as it did this June, for the sixth time — to let U.S. warplanes use Turkish bases to protect Kurds in northern Iraq.

Americans are reminded that Ozal gave full support to Operation Desert Storm. It also needs to be said that Iraqi Kurds themselves are engaging in a violent vendetta between rival factions.

Still, none of this fairly immunizes Turkey from criticism and scrutiny, especially since Turkish warplanes and troops routinely cross the Iraqi frontier in hot pursuit of Kurdish rebels.

Bridling at criticism, Ciller threatens to end U.S. arms purchases if Congress persists in demanding a 25 percent cut on human rights grounds.

But concern over an escalating conflict fought with U.S. weapons is scarcely a hostile act. Americans have learned at tragic cost that scorching villages spreads the very nationalism governments wish to contain. And jailing Kurdish members of Parliament for speaking their minds seems a peculiar way of promoting a political settlement for a bad war.

ART BUCHWALD

Summer court changes from tennis to O.J. jury

The reason you haven't seen me on the tennis court lately is that I've been busy with jury duty. I have been called to judge the O.J. Simpson case in the court of public opinion — the most powerful judicial body in the land. The role of a public opinion juror is to sit in front of the TV set surrounded by newspapers and listen to all the evidence as presented by TV commentators, paid eyewitnesses and legal experts on talk shows.

Buchwald

I have been very conscientious about my duties as a jury member. I have viewed O.J. in handcuffs 3,457 times, O.J. being chased by police down the freeway 4,344 times, O.J. in his Bronco in front of his house 2,340 times, O.J. pleading not guilty in court hundreds of times.

Thanks to all the shows I have also had an opportunity to hear the 911 tapes of Nicole Simpson and read about O.J.'s fits of rage over and over again.

This is all convincing, but we the jury need new evidence every day if we are to arrive at a fair judgment. That's why I was pleased as punch when F. Lee Bailey and Alan Dershowitz joined the defense. Both respected lawyers have never refused to be on television.

I knew that once they joined the team they would put their own spin on that night's events, without hurting their client.

As a dutiful juror I have given tremendous time to the radio talk shows. The people calling in know it all and my job has been to listen attentively to what a person in Austin, Texas, or Nome, Alaska, says about what really happened in Brentwood, Calif.

As a viewer I have been very much involved in sifting through the TV evidence. What annoys me is when a TV station claims that the prosecution has evidence that later turns out to be untrue. As members of the court of public opinion we cannot do our jobs if we are given false information by incompetent reporters.

One thing I have enjoyed is how the lawyers for both sides have used the media. Every time they read something they don't like they call a press conference complaining that the media is interfering with their case. The joke is if the media didn't turn out in such large numbers the lawyers would have no one to complain to.

The fact that the networks canceled all their regular shows to cover the preliminary hearings convinces me that there is more to this case than anyone is prepared to admit. Since I don't understand any of their legal arguments I make my decisions according to which lawyer is better dressed.

I admire Bob Shapiro, although I don't think that he's in the same class as F. Lee Bailey when it comes to clothes. I don't like Alan Dershowitz's haircut, but he would probably have my vote if he shaved off his mustache.

District Attorney Gil Garcetti has a likable homespun face and, besides, anyone who attempts to convict a person on television is my kind of guy.

Some people may argue that even a former sports hero such as O.J. should have his day in court. With the evidence that's been presented, how could a jury sworn in by the state come to a different verdict from the one already arrived at by all of us who watch the evening news?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 6, the 187th day of 1994. There are 178 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on July 6, 1944, 168 people died when fire broke out in the main tent of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus in Hartford, Conn.

On this date:

In 1483, England's King Richard III was crowned.

In 1535, Sir Thomas More was executed in England for treason.

In 1777, during the American Revolution, British forces captured Fort Ticonderoga.

In 1854, the Republican Party came into being at a convention in Jackson, Mich.

In 1885, French scientist Louis Pasteur successfully tested an anti-rabies vaccine on a boy who had been bitten by an infected dog.

In 1917, during World War I, Arab forces led by T.E. Lawrence captured the port of Aqaba from the Turks.

Palestinians rush a fence to get closer to PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat during his speech in the West Bank city of Jericho Tuesday. It was Arafat's first trip to the West Bank in 27 years.

Arafat returns to West Bank

JERICHO, West Bank (NYT) — Yasser Arafat returned to the West Bank for the first time in 27 years Tuesday and vowed with a freshly installed self-rule government to extend Palestinian autonomy beyond Jericho and the Gaza Strip.

Arafat, blaming Israel and right-wing demonstrators for preventing West Bank Palestinians from attending his Jericho stopover, questioned the Jewish state's commitment to the peace process.

But while the crowds in Jericho were smaller than expected, the spirit was passionate as the PLO leader repeated his vow to create a Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital.

"Together we will pray in Jerusalem," he told his audience, a pledge he has repeated in appearances since he arrived in the Gaza Strip on Friday.

Israel captured Arab east Jerusalem in the Six Day War in 1967 and regards the city as its unified and "eternal" capital, making the status of Jerusalem the most divisive issue of the Arab-Israeli peace process.

The small crowds and Arafat's hoarse voice, the result of almost non-stop speechmaking, made a lackluster finale of his Jericho trip, which was held under a wilting desert sun and temperatures that rose above 100 degrees.

After arriving in Jericho, Arafat was sworn in as head of the autonomy government and he gave the oath of office to 12 members of the new Palestinian National Authority. Only half the ministers of the governing 24-member organization attended the ceremony.

Six of the seats remain unfilled. Arafat has reserved them for Palestinian factions who so far have refused to take part in the autonomy government because oppose peace with Israel. The authority will govern the Gaza Strip, home to nearly 900,000 Palestinians, and Jericho until elections are held, possibly as early as October.

Today, Arafat will meet with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres in Paris before the three collect a peace prize from UNESCO, the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization. Arafat will attempt to accelerate negotiations to extend autonomy to the rest of the West Bank, home to 1 million Palestinians and more than 115,000 Jewish settlers.

In May, limited self-rule was granted to the Gaza Strip and Jericho as the first step in the Israel-PLO accord.

Fewer than 10,000 Palestinians attended Arafat's visit to Jericho, minuscule compared to Palestinian police estimates that up to 250,000 people would flock to the ancient oasis town.

Right-wing Israeli demonstrators and settlers caused delays at key roads leading to the Jordan River valley market town of 15,000 Palestinians.

Arafat suggested that Israel complied with the protesters to turn away Palestinians trying to reach his appearance.

"They must understand that this land is a Palestinian land and they cannot stop any Palestinian movement here," Arafat said. "The commitment for peace must be from both sides, not only one side."

Israeli officials quickly denied Arafat's claim.

"In more than one instance, Israeli soldiers and policemen physically intervened to enable Palestinians to complete their journey in safety," government spokesman Uri Dromi said.

Foreign business people deal with Russian mobster threats, payoffs

■ Price of not playing can include car bombing, kidnapping unless you can hire your own security force.

By Dan Freedman
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — For one American businessman here, trouble came in the form of three men in loose-fitting Armani suits, tattoos on their fingers and lots of gold jewelry.

The three, members of a Russian organized crime gang based in the Caucasus Mountains, began a meeting with the businessman eight months ago by telling his interpreter: "Translate exactly what we say or we'll kill you." The translator hastily left and a replacement was found. Then the mobsters got down to business.

"They told me, 'You don't want to be kidnapped or killed. You work with us, then if any gangs approach you, it's our problem,'" recalled the businessman, who didn't want to be identified because "I don't want to end up dead next week."

The cost of paying off the mob was less than $5,000 a month. The businessman said he got a discount because "I cried that business has been bad." He insisted the pricetag was a relative bargain, saying he knows of one company that pays as much as $100,000 a month.

He also said he referred subsequent Russian-Mafia callers trying to extort money from him to his new-found "friends." The rival mobsters never called again, he said.

Welcome to Business Russian-style 1994, a world where for foreign investors, such mob visits often are the price of admission.

More than 600 foreign-owned businesses have opened here since 1991, according to a western diplomat. Many have been subjected to similar extortion threats, he said, though no figures exist on how many executives are paying off.

Organized crime existed in the Soviet era but was kept under control by a harsh policy of summary arrests and banishment from Moscow and other big cities, the diplomat said. The ending of travel restrictions and the influx of foreign capital fueled a spontaneous combustion of sophisticated criminal enterprises.

Today, Russian mobs, modeling themselves on their American counterparts, spend cash in places like the Cherry Casino, a swank Moscow nightclub where patrons are required to check their handguns in a locker room at the door.

Inside they flash rolls of rubles and dollars at roulette, blackjack and craps tables. Prostitutes, many of them teen-agers, roam the gambling room and the upstairs disco in search of customers.

"Of course there is (Russian) Mafia money invested here," said one gambling table supervisor, who asked that his name not be used. "There's Mafia money in every profitable business in Russia. You couldn't operate otherwise."

For legitimate businesses, the price of not doing business with the mob can be high. Executives are increasingly targets of car bombings, and an American businessman was killed in St. Petersburg last February.

On Monday, the news agency Tass reported that an executive and his wife paid a $270,000 ransom to a gang that had kidnapped their eight-month-old daughter and threatened to send her head to them in the mail. Gang members were subsequently arrested after delivering the baby girl back to her parents unharmed.

Some Americans here say that crime or fear of crime should not deter potential investors. "I think it probably was dangerous during the Gold Rush in California or the Yukon, but those are the things that come with huge opportunity," said Bruce McDonald, an advertising executive with the New York-based BBDO Marketing Inc., who has been a target of attempted shakedowns by mobsters.

Administration orders naval force to Haiti

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a new show of military force, the administration ordered four more warships and 2,000 Marines to sail toward Haiti and prepare for a potential evacuation of U.S. citizens.

Also, Haitians who flee their country by boat will not be allowed into the United States, but will either be taken to refugee camps in Panama or returned home, the Clinton administration said Tuesday.

In the latest shift in policy, the administration said it wanted to halt a surge of fleeing boat people. The announcement came a day after more than 3,000 Haitians were picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard.

"Those who are not political refugees will be returned," said William Gray, President Clinton's special adviser on Haiti. "Those who are refugees will be given safe haven — those that are picked up on the sea — in Panama."

Gray said Haitians who apply at U.S. offices inside Haiti will be allowed to come to the United States if they are granted refugee status based on a well-founded fear of persecution.

'There is no military invasion imminent (as in next several days). . ., but military option 'is on the table.'

William Gray, U.S. adviser

■ Related story/7B

In an earlier change of a policy that he had adopted from the previous administration, Clinton announced on May 8 that Haitians with a well-founded fear of persecution would be allowed to come to the United States to pursue their asylum claims or go to a third country.

But a surge in refugees turned into a tidal wave Monday, with the U.S. Coast Guard intercepting 3,247 Haitians in 70 boats, doubling the previous single-day high set in May 1992. More than 100 Haitians died when a boat capsized. Nearly 700 had been picked up by midday Tuesday and hundreds more were expected, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The flow has swelled as the Clinton administration has tightened economic sanctions against Haiti in an effort to force out the military leaders who ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September 1991.

Michael Barnes, a former congressman and close adviser to exiled Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, said he was confident Aristide would oppose the new U.S. policy.

"For the people of Haiti who are trying to escape from the reign of terror, this is a step backwards," Barnes said.

Amnesty International USA called the new policy a double standard contrary to the intent of the 1980 Refugee Act to treat all refugees equally.

The latest shift, coupled with flip-flops on U.S. policy toward Bosnia, China and Somalia, raised again questions about Clinton's consistency on foreign policy as he headed for Europe to meet with leaders there and attend an economic summit.

Asked about the possibility of an invasion of Haiti, Gray said, "There is no military invasion imminent." He defined imminent as the next several days.

Nevertheless, he said that a military option "is on the table," and that the administration is "looking at that situation as it deteriorates." He said the sudden deployment of the warships was necessary because the deteriorating situation "poses a threat to the safety of Americans."

Panamanian responds to U.S. call for help

By George Gedda
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — In seeking a helping hand on Haiti, the Clinton administration turned to the Latin American leader who owes more to the United States than any other: President Guillermo Endara of Panama.

Even before the latest upsurge in boat people, U.S. officials were working on contingency planning with Panamanian authorities in case the refugee problem reached crisis proportions.

And crisis is the best word to describe what happened starting last Friday. U.S. Coast Guard cutters picked up 5,884 Haitians during the four-day period ending on Monday — roughly one a minute.

The high administration hopes that the exodus of Haitians would be manageable failed to take into account just how many desperate Haitians there are these days. The Haitians simply were overwhelming the facilities set up by U.S. officials just three weeks ago to process them.

The administration had hoped that Haitians seeking political asylum would apply at U.S. offices set up for that purpose inside Haiti, instead of heading out to sea. It was a bad miscalculation; on Monday alone, 3,247 were picked up by the Coast Guard.

So the administration had to find a way to induce Haitians to stop seeking salvation by taking off in rickety boats — and praying that the United States might somehow be their destination.

For an administration in need of help, Endara was a logical choice. He might have been one of history's footnotes were it not for what happened in a few December days of 1989 when President Bush ordered the invasion that deposed Manuel Antonio Noriega.

A year and a half earlier, Endara had won Panama's presidential election but Noriega prevented him from taking power. Bush rescued Endara from almost certain oblivion and, in effect, enforced the outcome of the May 1988 elections. Thanks to Bush, Endara wound up with the presidential sash. Noriega wound up in a Florida prison on drug charges.

Now Endara is responding to an SOS from Uncle Sam. As a lame duck with just a few months left in office, Endara had little to lose by going along with administration requests for help on Haiti.

Endara has agreed to grant a safe haven to Haitian boat people deemed by U.S. officials to have a well-founded fear of persecution. The administration hopes that Haitians will think twice about heading out to sea if they realize there is no chance of ending up in the United States.

■ More national news/7B

Will Haitians continue to take to the sea if the best case scenario is a refugee camp in Panama or some other Caribbean nation? The administration hopes not.

Political IOUs are not the only reason Panama seemed a good choice to help out a beleaguered U.S. administration. There are military facilities there which can be used to house Haitians temporarily while other facilities are constructed.

There are some advantages for Panama as well. Panamanian enterprises are certain to fill at least some of Haitians' material needs, giving a boost to the local economy. Also, the camps for the Haitians will be built with U.S. — not Panamanian — money. In addition, Panama has received assurances that the Haitians sent to Panama will be sent back home once constitutional rule is re-established in Haiti.

When that will occur is anybody's guess. It was just a year ago this week that a "definitive" solution to the Haitian crisis was signed at Governor's Island in New York.

But the Haitian military is still in charge, having shredded that agreement just three months after signing it.

Cotton crops crave rainfall

■ Dryness, heat, wind combine to lift moisture from topsoil.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Cotton likes the sunshine. It's a hot-weather desert plant.

But it craves rainfall as well. And, despite Tuesday night's sporatic rainfall throughout a portion of West Texas, including in the Midland area, cotton is not getting much moisture, except what's already deep into the topsoil from previous rains many hot days ago.

"It's just too hot and dry; there's not enough water," St. Lawrence cotton farmer Jerome F. Hoelscher said moaning. "There's no way you can keep up with it. We need a rain."

While much of the St. Lawrence cotton country is under irrigation, it still needs natural rainfall. Elsewhere, most West Texas cotton, including that around Midland, is dryland produced and is undergoing the stress of heat and dryness.

The heat — despite Tuesday's rainfall — has been desert-like in intensity.

In June, there were 14 days in which the temperature pegged 100 degrees or more. And the peak, a record-breaking 116 degrees, came on the afternoon on June 27.

The dryness, the heat and the wind combined to lift moisture from the topsoil and the plants whether they were the farmers' primary cash crop, cotton or the ranchers' primary "wealth" — their livestock-feeding grassland.

Midland rancher Button Estes said his cattle have "got feed" — dried-out grass with rare patches of

Fatal accident

CROCKETT COUNTY — An Odessa man and a McCamey teenager were both killed during a two-vehicle accident south of McCamey Tuesday. According to a Department of Public Safety report, a Ford pickup, driven by 26-year-old Dean Rayford Sueltenfuss, assistant city editor for the Odessa American, was traveling north on Texas Highway 305 at about 1:40 a.m. Tuesday. A Chevrolet pickup, driven by 19-year-old Justin Ryan Lester of McCamey, was southbound on Texas 305 when it veered into the northbound lane and struck the other pickup head on, officers said. Lester was ejected from his vehicle and both men were both pronounced dead at the scene, the report stated.

Name released

Midland police officials Tuesday released the name of a Midland teenager who was found dead on the railroad tracks in the 3000 block of W. Front Street on Friday. Officials identified the body at Stephen Eric Farrington, 17, of Midland. Farrington was found on the tracks at about 1:20 a.m. after he had been run over by a westbound freight train. Officials have not determined if Farrington was dead before the train hit him. An investigation continues-

Fireworks banned

The Midland County Commissioners' Court, in recognizing fire hazards associated with dry grassland and rangeland, on Tuesday reaffirmed its June 30th orders banning outdoor burning, outlawing the igniting of fireworks on county roads and rights of way, and forbiding the firing of skyrockets with sticks and missiles. The court's orders, which cite fast-moving wildfires, were ratified after lightning ignited widespread grass fires before Independence Day Fourth-of-July celebrations, which customarily are marked by setting off fireworks.

July 4th mishaps

A mother and daughter remained hospitalized Tuesday and firefighters still were battling wildfires in West Texas related to July 4th fireworks mishaps. Leslie Garcia, 26, and her daughter, Ashley, 4, were burned when a fireworks projectile exploded near a crowd of people at an outdoor display in the Houston suburb of Deer Park./3B

Study on school zones suggests 4:30 p.m. cut off

■ Study finds Henderson Elementary School needs additional controls, all reduced-speed zone times can be shortened.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Flashing lights will be added near one school as a result of a recently released school zone study by the city's traffic department. In addition, reduced-speed zones at all public elementary schools will end at 4:30 p.m. instead of 5 p.m. beginning this fall.

"We looked at 50 locations and 49 warranted the existing controls and one warranted additional controls," said Gary Saunders, traffic engineering coordinator.

The change was to add flashing lights at Henderson Elementary School, located at Bentwood Drive and Graceland Drive. That recommendation was made based on a comparison of the number of children who use the crosswalk and the traffic volume.

The school studies are conducted each fall and spring at the schools that have flashing lights or crossing guards, and where special requests are made to examine the conditions. In addition, the city looks at existing zones with new streets and the creation of new zones for new schools.

Traffic engineers study crosswalks, speed reductions, crossing guards, flashing lights, road buttons and whether children have adequate time to cross roadways.

In addition, the city looks at other concerns such as one prompted by citizen calls about the times reduced speed zones end.

The city conferred with Midland Independent School District officials, who agreed the time could be shortened in the afternoon.

"The bus scheduling in this last year was the big factor in changing this," said Wilson Heidelberg, executive director for auxiliary services with MISD. The bus scheduling changed due to changes in the stopping and starting times of the elementary and secondary schools, he said.

New board member recognizes regional expansion as pressing need of hospital

By Ed Todd

David Darmstetter has adopted a plan, a goal, in character development: "Begin with the end in mind."

And the question from the outset is, "How do you get from 'now' to 'there'?"

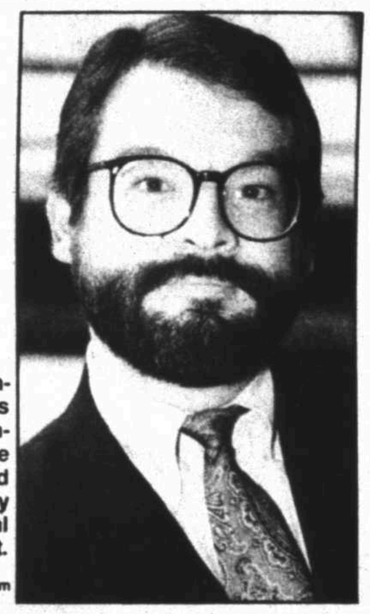

His ultimate goal, for his "entire life," is to be known "as a man of principles and integrity."

"All along, all of my life, I've wanted to be known as 'a man whose word was his bond," said Darmstetter, the newest member of the Midland County Hospital District and a 40-year-old financial consultant for the Western Region of OXY USA Inc., in Midland. "That's important to me. If I say I will do something, I will come through. If I get involved in something, I do it 100 percent."

Last week, Darmstetter got involved in the hospital district, which oversees the operation of Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. He participated in his first hospital-district board meeting after assuming the term formerly held by a Midland physician, Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, who resigned from the seven-member board.

"I'm not duplicitous," Darmstet-

Director hopes to recruit student, community support for MHS choir

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Barry Dowell has already hit the stage humming with Midland High School choir students.

Arriving from Piano on Friday, the new choir teacher/director wasn't in Midland two days before he started auditioning choir students. Choir boosters have spent weeks preparing for his arrival, and with a little more than six weeks until school starts, Dowell has choir preparations in full swing.

His first impression of Midland?

"It's hot. I'm getting used to the heat. I may have to rethink this," Dowell said, laughing.

The choir teacher said he has visited the Tall City twice before, once when his choir from Hardin-Simmons University performed in Midland.

Dowell majored in music education with an emphasis in voice and a minor in piano at HSU in Abilene. He later earned his master's degree in church music at Southwestern Baptist Seminary in 1979.

And another note of interest, Dowell

Concrete gorilla adds change, fun to established neighborhood

By Rosemary Barnes
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI — Deep within the older, affluent Hyde Park neighborhood, where Jaguars and Mercedes-Benzes roam freely along the oak tree-lined streets, dwells a member of the ape family rarely found in captivity, or anywhere else for that matter.

Even Marlin Perkins, the famed naturalist who hosted television's "Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom," no doubt would have been stumped by this discovery.

Perhaps it can best be explained by a variation of the age-old riddle: Where does a 3,000 pound, black concrete gorilla sit? The answer: At 217 Wilshire Place in the front yard of Jenny and Paul Caldwell's home.

And, concrete or not, what is a lowland gorilla doing on Wilshire Place, thousands of miles from its normal habitat in central Africa?

"We got the gorilla for the kids around here and because the neighborhood needed a lot of character," said Paul Caldwell, the 33-year-old owner of an international information service company. "There are too many

NEW: Board member sees hospital's pressing needs

ter said. "When I say I will do something, I feel very good that I am going to do it."

Darmstetter accepted the appointment to the elected board to finish out Wiesenfeld's term.

He characterized the appointment as an "opportunity for growth, ... an opportunity to learn new things, a new avenue."

And following his accelerated initiation on the board, Darmstetter discerned the hospital district's pressing needs, which includes regional expansion in the hospital "growth strategy."

From his viewpoint, the option to expand the hospital's geographical service area was pitted against sacrificing the quality or quantity of health care, raising the cost of inpatient and outpatient health care and raising ad-valorem tax rates.

"The only thing that really makes sense in the best interests of the community is the growth strategy — regionalism," Darmstetter said. "As a hospital district, if we don't seek to protect the revenue stream that we get outside of this county, someone else will compete for it."

Situations in health care are no longer the way they "used to be.

"Times have changed," he said. "Really, you are looking at protecting the hospital's and taxpayers' interests to maintain growth in the face of escalating costs in the medical arena. You really do have to protect your very precious revenue sources."

Just as it is crucial for the hospital to remain financially solvent and healthy, it is critical for people to be attuned to "wellness plans" to maintain their health as best as practical just as they perform "preventive maintenance" on their automobiles by changing the oil and oil filter.

The hospital district provides wellness and preventive medicine programs in its low-cost healthcare center for pediatric and obstetrics patients and centers for health-care for adults. The objective is wellness plans for people "to prevent the catastrophic (medical) problems."

Darmstetter, who was "born into an oil family" in 1954 and "tumbled the mid-continent area," moved to Midland from Tulsa, Okla., in 1982 with Cities Service Company, which later was acquired by the worldwide Occidental Oil and Gas, a Fortune 100 company. OXY USA Inc., is the domestic arm of Occidental Oil and Gas.

In preparing himself academically for a career in the energy field, Darmstetter earned the bachelor's degree in chemistry and three master's degrees in geosciences, behavioral sciences and business administration.

"I started college (at Tulsa) with the resolute intention of going into medicine," Darmstetter said. "I was going to be a brain surgeon. Neurology was what I thought was my call."

But Darmstetter was so fascinated by the study of chemistry that he was sidetracked and entered the petroleum industry.

"The days of being a specialist, unless you are in medicine, are numbered."

Darmstetter holds optimism for the petroleum industry and his role in it particularly due to his diversified academic background.

"That (the sun) is our ultimate competition," he said. "The oil industry is something that will always be here. A lot of doomsayers are saying we'll run out time and time again. We don't want to ever take it for granted. I'd hate to see the energy industry taken for granted anymore."

And of his role as a financial consultant in the petroleum industry, Darmstetter said: "Titles come and go, but the duties usually stay and get added to."

HEAT: High temperatures steal moisture from crops

green — on the rangeland.

And as long as the livestock have "plenty of water and some good feed, they will do all right.

"We've had four or five real good years, so we've got lots of turf," Estes said. "They're eating. They have plenty to eat, and they've got plenty of water. We're doing all right."

But to compound the farmers' hot-weather problems, a strong, sand-blowing wind moved in last week and heavily damaged thousands of acres of West Texas cotton.

"It's tough," said Myrl Mitchell, who farms and gins cotton at Lenorah in central Martin County.

The driving sand "just burned that cotton," he said. "We had been having four days of about 110(-degree) heat, and then we get that high wind" at mid-week not long after lightning touched off grassland range fires in Midland County. "It (blowing sand) just burned the leaves and left nothing but a black stem sticking up there."

Some of the hardest-hit cotton that had been decimated by the blowing sand included fields that had been replanted in the spring due to hail damage and washouts.

Otherwise, the cotton not damaged by the wind is "hanging in there pretty good," Mitchell said. "We're just sitting here with our fingers crossed, hoping that wind doesn't get up until we get a rain."

Farmers, said Mitchell, are among the world's greatest gamblers whether they admit it or not: They bank on timely rains and favorable conditions, including market prices, to see them through season after season.

"A lot of farmers, if you call them a gambler, they'd say, 'Oh no, I'm not a gambler. You ain't going to catch me rolling dice or going to Las Vegas,'" Mitchell said. "I'd guess farmers are the biggest gamblers in the world."

Jearl Holland, who processes cottonseed near Big Spring, said the cotton crop is hurting particularly "with the heat we've had (even) without the wind.

"It's really getting to be where we need the moisture pretty bad."

The exceedingly high, dry temperatures of up to 116 degrees are "kind of a new ballgame for us," Holland said. "With that wind from the storm the other night, it (the cotton) was really stressed."

Much of the cotton was ankle- to knee-high tall.

And there's not enough time or moisture to re-plant, he said.

"Most (farmers) are leaving it, hoping for a rain, to see if it might try to come out of it."

Marc Traweek, who manages a cotton gin at Tokio northwest of Lamesa, said the cotton crop there is "still doing all right" even though the cotton is undergoing stress during the heat of the day.

"It pulls down pretty hard when it gets real hot. But in the morning, it's standing back up."

While there is still some underground moisture, "It's not going to last very long if it stays this hot," Traweek said.

Midland County farmer Roy Graham is hoping for "more moderate conditions," namely rainfall and lower temperatures, for the cotton crop.

"It needs the moisture," said Graham, who noted that "cotton is a tough plant.

"It will survive here for a little bit until it gets some moisture."

Rocky King, who operates a cotton gin at Midkiff southwest of Midland, said the cotton crop is "just kind of holding its own.

"We had a real good crop started" with the spring planting rains, King said. "It hasn't done much since it turned off hot. If we don't get a rain within the next 10 days or two weeks, we are going to be in trouble."

MUSIC: MHS choir director prepares for new school year sang in the HSU choir with Lee choir teacher Paula Edwards.

"Barry was a year ahead of me in school. We did our junior and senior recitals together," Ms. Edwards said, noting the former classmates kept tabs on each other over the years. "Both he and his wife were music majors and musicians, and will be great assets to the community."

Dowell's wife, Kathy, will teach music at Santa Rita Elementary School in the fall.

Dowell, a high school choir teacher for three years, taught one year at Brownsville and two years at Clark High School in Plano. He said he was unsure about moving to Midland until he received some videotapes and listened to audio cassettes of past local performances.

"I saw such an incredible amount of talent, I just couldn't pass up an opportunity to check it out," Dowell said.

He said meeting MHS Principal Jane Carrens really sold him on heading up the choir department.

The choir teacher's plans include recruiting as many students as possible.

"There are kids who ought to be in the choir who may not have been in the past," he said. "I'm hoping to build the choir numerically, make it a major chorale organization in West Texas that stands above others."

He said the MHS choir had about 65-70 students last year. "There were 59 signed up in June and there is between 70-80 signed up now. I was hoping to start the year with about 90 on the roster."

Dowell also has his sights set on taking the choir to the Olympics in Atlanta in 1996.

He said a choir festival may be held in conjunction with the Olympics. "I really want the kids to experience the Olympics. It would be very expensive and a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

The choir teacher is considering combining forces with the LHS choir to perform at events, including with band accompaniment at a football game.

But his short range goals are to recruit students and community support for the MHS choir. He said he is looking forward to a choir recruitment swim party set for 7-9 p.m. Aug. 1 at Kimber-Lea Pool. It is for students entering the ninth through 12th grades at MHS. Parents are also invited to attend.

"I'm real pleased with the choir boosters and volunteers," he said. "They are ready to go to work, and we are ready to put them to work."

Kay Brahaney, formerly the choir director at MHS, will be the new music director at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Fireworks mishaps contribute to injuries, grass fires

Associated Press

A mother and daughter remained hospitalized Tuesday and firefighters still were battling wildfires in West Texas related to July 4th fireworks mishaps.

Leslie Garcia, 26, and her daughter, Ashley, 4, were burned when a fireworks projectile exploded near a crowd of people at an outdoor display in the Houston suburb of Deer Park.

Both were in stable condition on Tuesday at Hermann Hospital in Houston. The daughter was undergoing surgery for burns on her upper thighs, said Michael Togliatti, a Hermann spokesman.

"We do not know if it was a shell from our display or from an outside source," said Ron Crabtree, Deer Park's city manager.

Two more people were taken to Southmore Medical Center Hospital in Pasadena. Cleotilde Diaz, 47, was treated for cuts and abrasions and released Monday. Her granddaughter, Marisa Escareno, 4, was treated for second-degree burns on her right arm and also released the same day.

Crabtree said eight minutes into the display at Dow Park Monday night, one of the shells exploded near a crowd of people.

In Hurst, a 9-year-old boy suffered first- and second-degree burns on his neck and shoulder when fireworks ignited his shirt.

Joseph Stephenson was treated at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas and released Monday. Henry Lopez, 24 was arrested in connection with the injury, said Hurst Cpl. Steve Safran, for illegally setting off fireworks.

In West Texas, hot weather, high winds and low humidity made Independence Day 1994 the equivalent of Christmas at the post office for firefighters in the Amarillo area.

In the Panhandle, temperatures reached only 98 degrees Monday, but the humidity dropped to 17 percent, with steady winds of 25 to 35 mph and gusts up to 40 mph, the National Weather Service said.

All three factors contributed to grass fires.

Amarillo and Potter County reported 180 wildfires caused by fireworks on Monday. Travis County reported 40 fires caused by fireworks.

Firefighters worked Tuesday to control the fires.

The Texas Forest Service's fire control department joined forces with fire crews from surrounding counties and cities to help control the blaze, summoning an Army helicopter to douse inaccessible areas of the countryside, the spokesman said.

In Amarillo itself, fireworks sparked blazes across the city and in both Potter and Randall counties, officials said.

Amarillo District Chief Buddy Wilkerson said fireworks started a fire that burned several acres of farmland southwest of the city on Monday.

On July 4 and 5 of last year, fire crews in Amarillo, Canyon, and Potter and Randall counties responded to more than 100 grass fires.

This year, with temperatures higher and conditions drier, officials feared even worse blazes and took measures against it, prohibiting fireworks in Potter County except for an area west of Amarillo.

Potter County Fire Chief Steve Brown said the actions seemed to help.

Bobby Young, head of the state forest service's fire control department, estimated more than 35,000 acres have burned in Texas over the past seven days, including three that have started in the past few days.

Plane crash kills Texas pilot

KINGFISHER, Okla. (AP) — A single-engine plane once used for NATO training crashed Tuesday during a demonstration flight, killing the Texas-based pilot and a television reporter as the tragedy was captured on videotape.

Kathy Jones, 30, of Oklahoma City television station KFOR died at a hospital in Kingfisher, about 45 miles northwest of Oklahoma City. Pilot Maurice "Skip" Stevens of McKinney, died at the scene, authorities said. His age was not available.

The propeller-driven Marchetti F-260, which had been used in a mock dogfight, was flying upside down when it dropped its left wing for a tight turn. It banked and gradually leveled as it completed the descending turn but quickly ran out of altitude.

The plane hit in a shallow angle hard on its belly — very close to a KFOR photographer on the ground — and the plane came apart. Nine seconds elapsed between the start of the turn and the crash.

The wreckage was in a dry, sandy section of the Cimarron River bed.

"I could tell the angle was pretty steep," said Steve Purvis, who saw the plane before it crashed. "I thought I heard a thump. The plane never reappeared. I knew something was wrong."

Purvis said the second plane that had been used had left the area before the crash.

Stevens was a partner in Air Strikes International, a mock-dogfighting outfit based in McKinney. Customers who pay $695 sit side-by-side with an instructor and fly mock air combat missions using dual plane controls.

The company was on a three-day promotional tour of Oklahoma, said George Schuler, president of McKinney Exec Air, the landlord for Air Strikes. Two Oklahoma newspaper publishers had planned to fly missions Wednesday.

The company also planned to appear at the Aerospace America air show July 15-17 in Oklahoma City. Aerospace America chairman Leroy Hansen said the company had paid to be on static display during the show and were not scheduled to fly at the show.

Two messages were left on an answering machine at Air Strikes offices Tuesday, seeking additional comment.

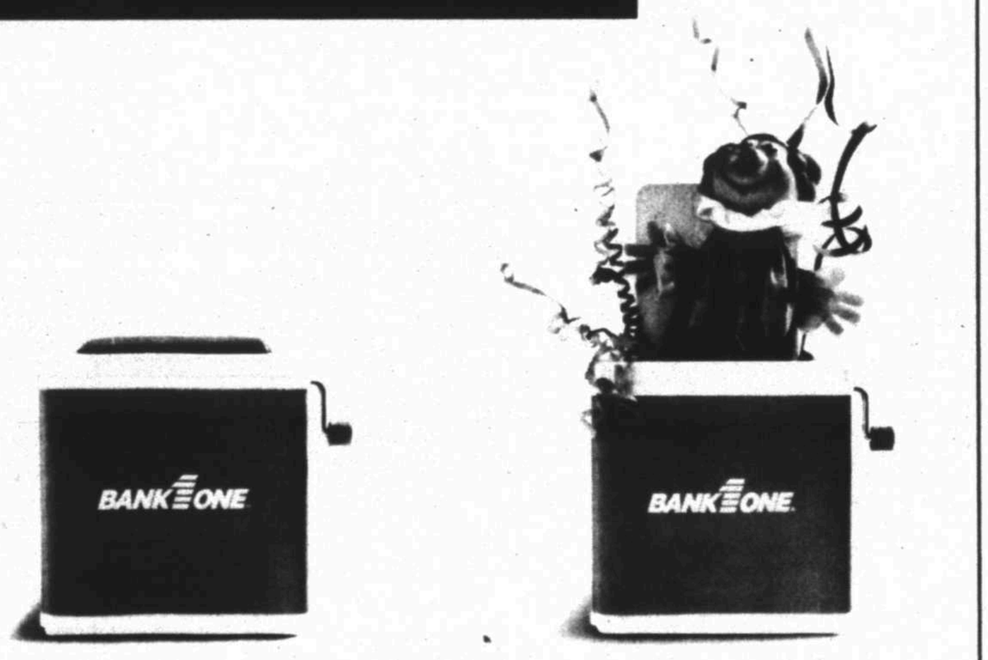

The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating the crash.

Schuler said Stevens had only recently left the Air Force. Both Air Strikes pilots had military training, he said.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 6, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR: The larger the organization you work with, the greater your chances for getting nationwide publicity. Think big! Bold and innovative ideas will boost your income and prestige. Moving to another city or state is a real option early in 1995. Married couples draw closer together when they join forces to make the best of an unexpected opportunity. Do not act like an amateur in business or finance. Seek legal advice before signing contracts.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball player Willie Randolph, singer Della Reese, actress Allyce Beasley, the 14th Dalai Lama.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business affairs progress nicely if no extra demands are made on those in authority. You may not be ready to take the plunge.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some hopes you have harbored become reality now. Do not try to rush things. An imaginative, subtle approach will move you forward. A short business trip could prove surprisingly lucrative.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your enthusiasm for a certain project wanes when you see the advantages of an alternative plan. Winning the support of the public should be your top priority.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are in an excellent position to score points with those in authority. Letters sent now will bring the results you seek. Your deepest feelings about romance are beginning to emerge.

LEO (July 28-Aug. 22): A casual remark could be misunderstood. Apologize immediately. Teamwork will bring you closer to a major financial or career goal. Keep any promises you made to mate or partner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Group activities are favored. Think about your long-range objectives, then ration your time and energy. Luck will play an important role in advancing a romantic interest.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If your workload increases, your paycheck may soon get larger. Try to find a quiet place to work when dealing with financial figures. Be willing to pay top dollar for expert advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be on the lookout for interesting employment opportunities. A family friend may give you a valuable lead. If you get the job, treat this pal to lunch!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends could play a major role in your financial fortunes. Make optimal use of your time and resources. A secret agreement can be finalized very quickly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A change in a professional or personal relationship is inevitable. Act on your priorities. A relative or friend could hold the answer to a mystery.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An important alliance will be tested. Bide your time where a complicated romance is concerned. Your independent streak may put you at odds with another headstrong individual.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Recognize your limits and avoid taking on more than you can handle. Relaxing at home with a good book or video may be more fun than going out tonight.

TODAY'S CHILDREN: These youngsters' zest for life will wax and wane like the moon. They want to believe the best about people and will be cruelly disappointed if someone lets them down. These Cancerians' own sensitivity makes them keenly aware of other people's needs and vulnerabilities. Once they reach adolescence, they will become eager to get out

GOREN BRIDGE

With Omar Sharif and Tannah Hirsch

SILENCE IS GOLDEN

Both vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 7 6 4 ♡ A K ♢ A K 7 5 ♣ A J 10 9
WEST ♠ K Q 9 ♡ Q 10 ♢ Q J 10 6 ♣ 6 4 3 2		EAST ♠ Void ♡ J 9 8 6 5 4 3 2 ♢ 9 3 2 ♣ 8 7
	SOUTH ♠ A J 10 8 5 3 2 ♡ 7 ♢ 8 4 ♣ K Q 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dbl	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♢

If your opponents have never made a doubled contract against you, you are not doubling enough. However, refrain from doubling if, in so doing, you might give declarer a blueprint of the hand.

Since South's vulnerable preempt promised about seven tricks, North added in five tricks and made the value bid by jumping directly to six spades. West, confident of two trump tricks, wielded the ax.

West led the queen of diamonds and as soon as dummy appeared it was obvious to declarer that West's double had to be based on the expectancy of two trump tricks. To avoid that declarer needed to engineer an endplay. South's trump length had to be reduced to the same as West's, which could be accomplished only if West held specifically four cards in each minor suit.

After winning the first trick with the king of diamonds, declarer cashed the ace and ruffed a diamond in hand. A club to the nine furnished the entry for another diamond ruff. The king of clubs was cashed, the queen was overtaken with the ace and a club was ruffed.

Next came the ace of hearts, then the king was trumped to reduce both South and West to three cards each, all spades. Declarer exited with the jack of spades and West was helpless. Forced to win with the queen, West had to lead a trump away from K 9 into declarer's A 10 tenace.

West was greedy. The double stood to gain 100 points. Instead, it cost 1,660. Declarer would never have adopted such an unusual line had West not given away the show.

Former President Carter scales new heights, climbs Mount Fuji

Jimmy Carter climbs Japan's highest mountain.

Carter began his climb of Japan's highest mountain at about 7,600 feet. He and his 30 security escorts reached the 12,385-foot summit by early afternoon.

Roughly 200,000 people scale Mount Fuji, a relatively gentle slope, each summer.

Carter, 69, is in Japan to participate in the opening next week of American Festival Japan '94, which highlights American culture and history.

DECATUR, Ala. — As he collected an award for patriotism, helicopter pilot Michael Durant remembered two soldiers who gave their lives to save his in Somalia last year.

Michael Durant remembers two who saved his life.

Durant, an Army helicopter pilot, spent 11 days as a prisoner of Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid. When his helicopter was shot down Oct. 3 in Mogadishu, two soldiers rescued him from the wreckage, but they were overrun by Somali militia and civilians.

"It cost them their lives," Durant said. "There is no greater sacrifice a soldier can make."

After Durant's capture, his battered face appeared on television around the world.

The city of Decatur gave the 32-year-old Durant the Audie Murphy Patriotism Award on Monday at a Fourth of July festival. Previous recipients are former Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Gen. Omar Bradley.

NEW YORK — Male TV anchors are more competitive than female anchors. So say Barbara Walters and Diane Sawyer.

"If you're talking about elbows, you shouldn't be talking to the women, really," Sawyer said in the August issue of Vanity Fair.

"Peter Jennings and Ted Koppel are far more competitive in their stories, in what they do, than the women," Walters said.

"That's nonsense," Jennings said.

Then there's Jane Pauley. During the Clarence Thomas hearings, the NBC newswoman was working from home, trying to set up an interview with Anita Hill.

"Family's here in the kitchen, they're eating breakfast," Pauley recalled. "Jane's on the phone, looking for the hotel room."

Pauley thought the hotel operator was ringing a Hill assistant. As she waited, she watched NBC colleague Katie Couric interview Hill on television.

"A telephone by Anita Hill's side rings," Pauley said. "I went, 'That's ME!' And I hang up the phone!"

Pauley said she apologized to Couric.

RADNOR, Pa. — Kathy Mattea helped recruit some — but not all — of country music's biggest names for an AIDS benefit album.

Clint Black, Dolly Parton, Mary Chapin Carpenter, Brooks & Dunn and Johnny Cash are on the album, "Red, Hot and Country." But others shied away from the project, Mattea said in the July 9 issue of TV Guide.

"We got every kind of response," she said. "There were people who called us, saying, 'Please use me.' There were people who wanted to be involved, but their record companies said, 'No way.' And there were some people who just never returned a phone call. I don't know if it's homophobia or not."

Mattea traces her own awareness of AIDS to the death of a friend in California. She hadn't known he had AIDS.

"The idea that it's something you have to hide from people you work with, your family, your friends — it just broke my heart," she said.

NEW YORK — William Kunstler will turn his attention away from the courtroom, if only for an evening, when he celebrates his 75th birthday on Thursday night.

His wife, Margaret Ratner, is giving him a party at Gus's Place, a restaurant that was recently shown in the movie "The Paper" (as was Kunstler).

Tuesday, the flamboyant Kunstler said all the requisite modest things about not wanting to celebrate. But he was quick to add, "I love a party, so what can I do but go in good grace?"

The invited guests include Ruby Dee and Ossie Davis; Brice Marden, the artist, and Jamil Abdullah Al-Amin, the Muslim spiritual leader known in the 1960s as H. Rap Brown, the civil rights leader and Black Panther.

The second part of Kunstler's birthday commemoration will come on July 18 at a screening of the film "The Client."

Board: Sexual misconduct charges against doctors increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Increasing numbers of women and some men are complaining that they have been the victims of inappropriate sexual advances, suggestions, seduction or even assault by Texas doctors, according to the State Board of Medical Examiners.

The steadily increasing complaints are part of a national trend, according to the Federation of State Medical Boards. In 1992, the most recent year for which statistics are available, federation officials said 42 state boards reported 393 complaints of sexual misconduct against doctors.

In Texas, there have been 113 complaints so far in the 1990s — seven in the 1991 fiscal year, 27 in 1992 and 36 in 1993. So far this fiscal year, which ends in September, there have been 43 complaints.

Of the 113 complaints, board officials said, 48 were dismissed for lack of evidence, 13 led to some punishment, including revocation of license, and 52 are pending.

The examiners board, which licenses doctors, is concerned about the increases and has warned doctors that it will investigate them and punish offenders, said Dr. Bruce Levy, the board's executive director.

"This board will take these complaints quite seriously," Levy said. "If we can prove the allegations, we'll move ahead to discipline the physicians appropriately, including revoking their licenses."

Officials said the board's policy is to prohibit sexual relationships of any kind between doctors and their patients. They said a patient's consent to a doctor's sexual overtures is not a defense.

"The physician," says a policy statement issued by the board, "assumes the role and the power of a benevolent authority. As a result, the doctor-patient relationship is especially vulnerable to abuse."

Tim Weitz, the board's general counsel, said even anonymous complaints will be investigated. He said most so far have involved men doctors and women patients, but a few women doctors also have been accused of sexual misconduct.

"But the complaints are very, very tough to prove sometimes," Weitz said. "Often it's just one on one."

old dinosaurs in this neighborhood who aren't in touch with reality."

Actually, the concrete primate originally was destined to reside in a cove of banana trees in the Caldwells' back yard. But when it arrived on April 28 from Double D Statuary in Sinton, which specializes in concrete statues of animals, the yard was too soggy from spring rains to support the gorilla's weight.

So, for the past two months, the imposing statue has sat at the edge of the Caldwells' driveway, where it has become a tourist attraction of sorts.

"Kids are always coming by to crawl all over it and posing for pictures," Jenny Caldwell, 38, said. "Parents come up and tell us that we've ruined their children."

The suburban-dwelling, knuckle-dragging gorilla with deep-set fiery red eyes is a curious sight, Jenny Caldwell acknowledged. What makes the spectacle even weirder are the assortment of costumes and signs the ape has worn since taking up residence at the Caldwells'.

The costumes have become as talked about as the ape itself, but the Caldwells don't know who has been dressing it up.

First, someone left 20 pounds of bananas at the base of the statue. Then there was the pink bikini top and fringe skirt, Playboy bunny ears and fluffy white tail and the sign reading, "Why soar with the eagles when you can swing with the gorillas?"

A week ago, the Caldwells awoke to find their gorilla in a big red and white striped top hat and fuzzy white whiskers and toting a sign reading "Uncle Paul," apparently in observance of the Fourth of July.

"Everyone assumes that we've been doing it, but it's a big mystery to us," Jenny Caldwell said. "None of our friends will fess up. But whoever is doing it is doing a great job."

As soon as the ground in their back yard dries sufficiently and they can find a forklift large enough to carry the statue, the ape will be moved to its permanent home among the banana trees.

In the meantime, the primate's presence is driving one neighbor bananas. Real estate broker Sam Allen, who lives at 202 Wilshire Place, said the statue is inappropriate for the conservative neighborhood bounded by Doddridge Street, Ocean Drive, Santa Fe Street and Bayridge Drive.

"I don't like it there," Allen said. "It's a little far out, and I just wish they would go ahead and put it in their back yard. The gorilla doesn't characterize this neighborhood."

But most neighbors have adopted the knuckle-dragging gorilla, saying it has added a little excitement to the established neighborhood, founded in 1947.

Elizabeth Susser, of 225 Wilshire, said the ape is a natural conversation piece for visitors, who always ask in disbelief: "You have a gorilla next door?"

"Our dining room is right at the front of our house," Susser said. "We'll be eating dinner and see a car drive by. Then, sure enough, we'll see the car backing up. People just can't believe what they saw. It causes a lot of double takes."

Jan Clark, who lives at 209 Wilshire, said the concrete ape has become a symbol of fun and change in the neighborhood.

Police look for clues in double slaying of brothers

DALLAS (AP) — Fifteen years after getting into the food business with the local franchise for a sandwich shop, brothers Robert and Mark Wilkin decided it was time to try again with an Italian restaurant.

Less than 10 months into their second venture, the dream was shattered when the two were found brutally murdered in their Pasta Presto store in a case that's left Dallas police struggling for suspects.

"We don't have any description or anything to put out," Lt. Rob Waldrop said Tuesday.

"The facts of the case are unusual in that I haven't seen anything like it. Any time you see two people killed in a robbery it's unusual," said Waldrop, who declined to elaborate for fear of harming the case.

To aid the investigation, an anonymous donor offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to a indictment on top of the $1,000 already offered by Crime Stoppers.

Waldrop said it appears to have been a robbery and it likely involved more than one person. Investigators said they found no money or receipts in the cash register.

The slain bodies were discovered late Saturday when relatives and friends arrived at the store. An assistant manager of a Pizza Inn two doors away also saw the bodies lying behind the counter of the small store.

"They were lying in a big puddle of blood," Margo Benton said. "I saw them lying there tied up. They had their belts around their ankles, had their hands behind their backs with tape of something."

Friends and family remembered 44-year-old Robert — who went by the name Mike — and Mark, 42, as successful, hard-working restaurateurs.

"My brothers meant business," said brother Jeff Wilkin, 38, who was a former business partner. "They were serious about doing well. Mike has always been . . . the one we looked up to. He was always in charge, but it was up to us to carry our load as well."

Mike Wilkin opened the first local Schlotzsky's sandwich shop in 1976 and his two brothers later joined him.

The business took off in 1977 and eventually grew to 11 stores before the brothers sold out last year in search of new challenges.

"The challenge as much as anything was what drew them to Pasta Presto," Jeff Wilkin said. "They thought they could build it into the Schlotzsky's of the 1990s."

Two locations were opened in September, although one was recently closed so they could dedicate themselves to the North Dallas location.

Analysts: Haiti policy shift spotlights problem

By Stewart M. Powell
N.Y. Times News Service

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's shift on Haitian refugees — his fourth policy in less than two years — spotlights the administration's zig-zag efforts to resolve its most frustrating foreign policy quandary.

The president on Tuesday abruptly ordered Haitian boat people picked up by U.S. warships to be transferred to temporary "safe havens" in Panama, Dominica and Antigua to await return to their Caribbean island once democracy is restored.

The announcement came just hours before Clinton was embarking on a four-nation European trip designed in part to polish his image as a master of foreign policy.

Clinton has changed course on how to handle Haitian refugees four times in less than two years.

During his successful 1992 election campaign, Clinton promised to reverse the "cruel" policies of President George Bush that required the forcible repatriation of Haitian boat people picked up by U.S. warships.

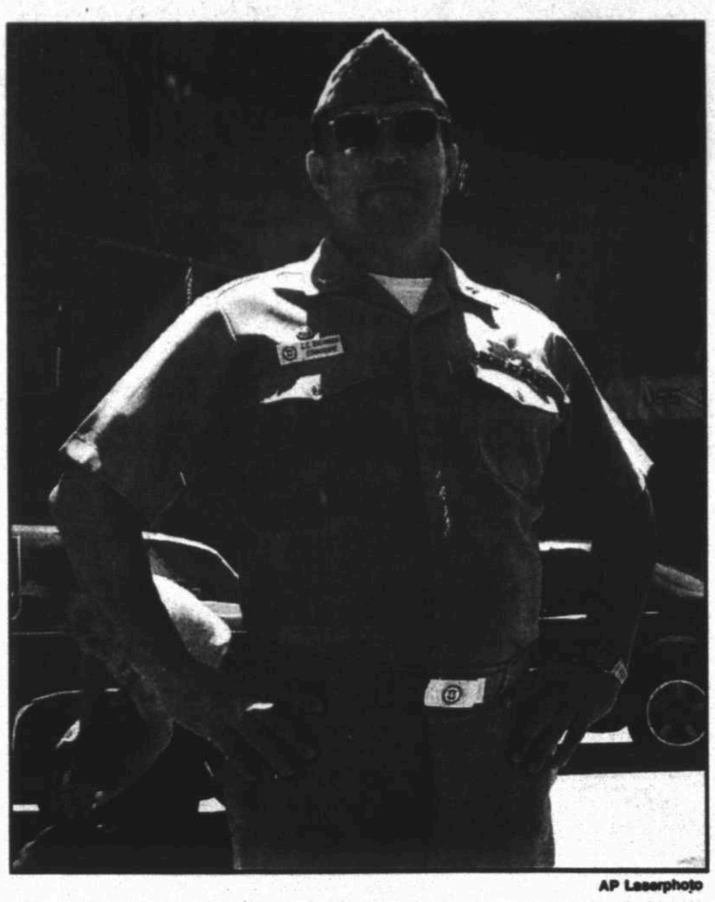

As president-elect in January 1993, the former Arkansas governor announced that he would continue the forcible repatriation without hearings on asylum requests.

The next shift came barely eight weeks ago on May 8.

In response to mounting political pressure from the 40-member Congressional Black Caucus and a hunger strike by Trans-Africa executive director Randall Robinson, Clinton announced that the administration would end forcible repatriation and grant asylum interviews to Haitian boat people. The screening took place aboard U.S. ships and at the newly reopened refugee center at the U.S. base in Guantanamo, Cuba.

On Tuesday, William Gray, the president of the United Negro College Fund who is serving as Clinton's unpaid special envoy on Haiti for 130 days, unveiled the fourth approach in response to the onslaught of Haitian refugees.

Gray said the latest "evolution" of the administration's policy stems from deepening White House concern.

Georgia floods kill one, force many from homes

Alberto remnants dump foot or more of rain on parts of state.

PALMETTO, Ga. (AP) — Remnants of Tropical Storm Alberto unloaded rain on Georgia for the second straight day Tuesday, forcing hundreds from their homes. One woman was killed when her car went out of control on a flooded road.

The storm dumped up to a foot or more of rain on the north and central parts of the state.

Just south of Atlanta, some residents had to be evacuated by boat. A man trying to walk back to his Clayton County home fell into a large water-filled hole.

"All of a sudden there was no road," Harold Bailey said after a firefighter pulled him to safety. "I was grabbing for the asphalt with one hand and grabbing my umbrella with the other."

In Crawford County, 58 Girl Scouts were evacuated from their camp to a shelter at a school.

Teresa Beyah, 31, was killed Tuesday when she lost control of her car at a flooded intersection in Spalding County. Two women were injured in Fulton County when their pickup truck skidded and was hit by a tractor-trailer.

In Coweta County, one of the worst hit areas of the state, 180 families had to evacuate a trailer park in the early morning hours. Several feet of water sloshed through the swingset and slides of the children's playground.

"I looked out my door, the water was rushing up like the Chattahoochee River," Hazel Dykes said.

As they were being evacuated at 3 a.m., Dykes watched as her porch, ripped loose by the surging water, floated away into the night.

In College Park, a suburb of Atlanta, Kenny Marmon and his family waited out the storm at a shelter at North Clayton High School with about 75 of their neighbors from a mobile home park.

"I hope I've got something to go back to," he said.

Mudslides were reported in several areas, and the dam of the Lamar County reservoir broke, forcing the evacuation of residents downstream. In Taylor Conty, a dam broke and heavy flooding washed out 10 bridges.

Tropical Storm Alberto, the first storm of the 1994 Atlantic hurricane season, formed off Cuba on Thursday and moved ashore over the Florida Panhandle early Sunday.

With winds of 60 mph, it disrupted vacationers' holiday plans but caused little significant damage.

Pro-lifers to hit Little Rock streets today for 4 days of protests

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Abortion opponents said Tuesday they will challenge new federal protections for abortion clinics, in the streets if not in the courtroom.

Operation Rescue-National and other pro-life groups plan to begin four days of protests today that will include picketing abortion clinics and the homes of doctors who perform abortions. Members say they also will provide pro-life counseling to women who try to enter the clinics.

"We're going to exercise every means possible to bring the truth about the destruction of little boys and girls waiting to be born in this city," Operation Rescue Director Flip Benham of Dallas said at a news conference on the state Capitol grounds. "We're going to physically intervene on behalf of these children."

The groups' confrontational tactics have resulted in thousands of arrests since 1987 and attempts by protesters to block entrances to abortion clinics.

Earlier this year, Congress passed the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrance Act, dubbed FACE, to impose jail time and stiff fines on protesters who physically block access to clinics, damage their property, or injure or intimidate their patients or staff.

President Clinton signed the bill into law May 26. Benham said Operation Rescue chose Little Rock for demonstrations partly because of Clinton. He accused the president from Arkansas of having "declared war on fetal children."

Benham of Dallas, pledged not to break "God's law" but made no such commitment regarding the new federal statute. He also was noncommittal about whether his group would file a federal suit challenging the new law while in Arkansas.

Arkansas Right to Life, an affiliate of the pro-life National Right to Life Committee, has distanced itself from Operation Rescue and the events planned in Little Rock. However, a little-known group helped coordinate this week's events, its director said.

Theresa Qualls, director of Friends of Life, said the group has 50 to 75 members statewide and plans to mobilize about 150 abortion opponents to take part in protests. Benham said he had no idea how many people would participate, but said he hoped state anti-abortion groups eventually would join in the effort.

Carol Nokes of the Arkansas Coalition for Choice said about 300 pro-choice advocates had been trained to form human walls and corridors to prevent protesters from blocking clinic entrances.

Neither Ms. Nokes nor Benham expected confrontations between their groups to turn violent.

"Their events at abortion clinics are media events. It certainly would not be good press for some of their people to do something violent while the cameras are rolling," Ms. Nokes said.

"We're simply going to stand up for the gospel of Jesus, lift Him up high, establish the truth and provide a defense for children," Benham said. "I would certainly hope that they wouldn't try to hurt us, but they might."

Little Rock police said they were ready to handle confrontations. Lt. Charles Holladay, the police spokesman, declined to discuss the department's crowd-control strategies but said preparations began as early as 1991

Rescue listed Little Rock as a possible site for demonstrations.

A blazing sun and temperatures in the mid-90s forced Operation Rescue's afternoon news conference off the Capitol steps to the shade of a nearby tree. Each side in the abortion issue used heated rhetoric to condemn the other.

Wendy Wright of Dallas, Operation Rescue's communications officer, accused pro-choice advocates of "protecting male abortionists who exploit women and kill children for money."

"The action that's important is not so much what's happening outside the abortion mill, as what's happening inside — the slaughter of innocent children and the exploitation of women. That's where the attention needs to be," she added.

Ms. Nokes said Benham's group is "not about abortion. They're about male, white domination."

Bombs. . .burns away

A slurry bomber drops a load of fire retardant on a blaze near Paonia, Colo. Tuesday. The fire destroyed three houses and was threatening others. After a week of searing heat in the Southwest, crews battled fires in 11 states Tuesday at the start of what officials said could be an unusually dangerous fire season. About 10,000 firefighters, mobilized like military units, moved from fire to fire throughout the West supported by scores of tanker planes and helicopters dropping water and chemicals. Arnold Hartigan, a spokesman for the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho, said the fires had burned a total of 174,000 acres so far. The states affected are Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

In-flight data reveals horror of USAir crash

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — From the cockpit voice recorder, tower communications and other in-flight data, investigators of the crash of USAir Flight 1016 have put together a chilling chronology of every traveler's worst nightmare — a sudden and vicious storm that erupts just as a plane is thundering in for a landing and brings on catastrophe.

Airport sensors indicate that the USAir DC-9 flew into torrential rains and heavy gusting headwinds that almost doubled in the last minute the plane was in the air, leading the pilot to abort the landing when the plane was 150 feet above the ground.

Investigators do not know for sure whether the flight flew into a dangerous wind shear, and if it did, whether the pilot's response or a mechanical failure contributed to the crash. But they can put together an almost second-by-second account of Flight 1016's disastrous last two minutes as it roared into a storm, tried to abort its landing and climb back into the air, and then crashed to earth, killing 37 persons and injuring 20 others.

Investigators Tuesday pulled a final body from the wreckage of the plane's tail, which struck a house near the runway. The discovery did not change the death toll. Investigators with the National Transportation Safety Board Tuesday for the first time interviewed the plane's captain, Michael Greenlee, 38, and its first officer, James Hayes, 41. Both have been released from the hospital.

The board's investigation, which will probably take from 9 to 12 months, will seek to determine the roles played by the weather, the pilots, the equipment, the air-traffic controllers and other factors. Pilots are taught to fly through wind shear, essentially by going into a takeoff attitude with the nose up and as much power as possible.

But wind shear during a landing can be disastrous, because the wheels and flaps are down, producing drag, and sometimes not even engines operating at full throttle can accelerate the plane quickly enough to keep it airborne. Also, the most dangerous form of wind shear, a microburst, can be very narrowly localized and thus extremely difficult to detect.

Even if wind shear is found in the crash of Flight 1016, investigators must determine whether the pilots reacted properly to it, whether the equipment responded and whether they were given sufficient warning. Areas of inquiry could include whether the amount of rain affected the performance of the Pratt & Whitney JT-8D engines.

Still it is almost certain that the severe weather played a role in the accident.

Just before 6:40 p.m. on Saturday, Flight 1016 radioed the tower asking for a condition report from the pilot about to land ahead of them. The plane ahead radioed that conditions were smooth.

But 15 seconds later, the control tower issued a wind shear alert.

Just before 6:42 p.m., a light rain turned to a torrential downpour with fierce wind gusts.

Clinton waxes upbeat before European trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Setting out on a four-nation trip to Europe, President Clinton said Tuesday the world has a rare opportunity to use a growing global economy to help generate more jobs and ease political insecurities.

Clinton, in a speech to U.S. business leaders a few hours before his departure, declared: "The mission to Europe on which I embark tonight is simple: to create jobs in a world of prosperity."

"We have to use this newfound strength to address how to give the citizens of our nation and all other nations the confidence they need to prosper in uncertain times," said Clinton, a sampling of flags from around the world arrayed behind him. "We have to move from coping with crises to planning for prosperity."

Clinton is traveling abroad at a time when his foreign policy faces criticism and his approval ratings have slipped. In his speech, the president sought to stress the benefits at home of economic cooperation abroad.

"Even as we sow the seeds of our own renewal, we also must recognize that what happens around the world affects us here at home," Clinton said. "We must have global economic growth because when global markets grow, our exports boom, and that means higher-paying jobs here in America."

He said the industrialized democracies' "first job is to create jobs and to develop the high-skill work force to fill them." Swift ratification of a new world trade agreement would help in that regard, he added.

Clinton departed Tuesday night for Riga, Latvia, where he will be the first U.S. president to visit a Baltic country.

Shortly before his departure, Clinton called Russian President Boris Yeltsin, who voiced concern over the rights of ethnic Russians in the three Baltic states and linked the issue to the withdrawal of Russian troops.

Douglas in hospital

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Former heavyweight champion James "Buster" Douglas was reportedly hospitalized Tuesday in a diabetic coma.

WBNS-TV, citing no sources, said Douglas, 34, was upgraded from poor to stable condition at Grant Medical Center on Tuesday afternoon.

Douglas

The hospital refused comment and hospital spokeswoman Karen Waldbillig said the family asked that no information be released.

Unidentified relatives of the former boxer had told the station Douglas was taken to the hospital Monday and had slipped in and out of a coma since then. They said Tuesday afternoon that his condition was improving.

It was not known whether Douglas previously had been diagnosed as a diabetic or which form of the disease he might have. In some cases, if diabetes goes untreated, the victim may go into a diabetic coma, which can lead to death.

Douglas' father, Bill Douglas, could not be reached for comment. A man who answered the phone at Bill Douglas' home Tuesday morning identified himself as a friend of the family and said he knew nothing of Douglas' condition. He would not confirm that Douglas was in the hospital. There was no answer at the home Tuesday afternoon.

Messages seeking comment from the fighter's business manager, Lawrence Nallie, were not returned.

Ramos recovers

DANA POINT, Calif. — Tab Ramos will be sidelined for a minimum of two months with a slight skull fracture and could be out of action for up to six months, U.S. national team spokesman Dean Linke said Tuesday.

Ramos, a 27-year-old midfielder from Hillside, N.J., was injured when elbowed by Leonardo during Brazil's 1-0 victory Monday at Stanford Stadium. He was held overnight at Stanford University Medical Center and was due to be released late Tuesday.

He then was to return to the U.S. team's training base in Mission Viejo and was scheduled for a CT scan on Wednesday at the office of U.S. team physician Dr. Bert Mandelbaum in Santa Monica, Calif.

Ramos, who plays for Real Betis in the first division of the Spanish League, was hurt when he and Leonardo scrambled for the ball in the 43rd minute. While Ramos was holding Leonardo, the defender spun Ramos around and elbowed him in the left temple.

Baseball owners ready to stand firm

■ Owners say they need to dig in to save the game, and the result could be a strike into 1995.

By Larry Stone
San Francisco Examiner

SAN FRANCISCO — In the midst of the 1972 baseball negotiations, St. Louis Cardinals chairman Gussie Busch emerged from a joint owners meeting and declared to reporters, "We're not going to give the players another red cent."

Busch's bluster, of course, seems foolish in retrospect. In reality, baseball's owners have given players millions of red cents (and green dollars) since 1972, when the first strike in the history of organized sports began to erode the owners' total control of the game's financial structure.

When Busch spoke, the average salary was $31,543. It currently is $1.2 million.

Now, with the players poised for yet another strike — this one would be their fifth, to go along with two lockouts by management, most recently in 1990 — owners claim they are ready, once and for all, to stand firm in an effort to regain some measure of control of an industry they say is on the brink of financial disaster.

"There's more of a chance of the Padres winning the pennant than avoiding a strike this season," says Wall Street Journal reporter John Helyar, author of "Lords of the Realm," an account of baseball's labor history.

Cardinals president Stuart Meyer, who now runs the Busch empire, predicts that, if and when the strike hits, it will be a long one, lasting at least until the end of 1994 and possibly into 1995. The longest previous strike was the 50-day stoppage of 1981 over the issue of player compensation for free agents.

No longer are the owners naive enough to say they won't give the players a red cent. Their new effort is at least to gain equitable division of the wealth in the form of revenue sharing tied to a salary cap.

"The players up until now have never had a labor work stoppage in which the owners haven't backed down," said Meyer. "I don't know why they would

Baggio ties, wins game for Italians

■ For the second time in the tournament, Italy overcomes playing a man short to win, this time 2-1 in extra time over Nigeria.

By Piero Valsecchi
Associated Press Writer

FOXBORO, Mass. — Roberto Baggio proved Tuesday that stars, even the falling ones, can do wonders.

Baggio turned an upset that would have been considered a shameful defeat back home into an heroic, overtime 2-1 victory for Italy over Nigeria. The win salvaged his reputation, spared coach Arrigo Sacchi a humiliating second-round elimination, and got Italy into a quarterfinal match against Spain, keeping alive hopes of a record fourth World Cup title.

Baggio, unimpressive in previous World Cup matches and for most of Tuesday's game at Foxboro Stadium, tied it in the 89th minute and spurred the action that gave Italy a penalty kick in overtime, which he converted.

He showed no emotion as he put in the game-winner, but then rushed toward the Italian bench for an emotional embrace.

"We already were at the airport, we were mentally prepared to return home. I took them all down from the plane," Baggio said after the exhausting, tense match that drained the players and tested the coronary systems of Italian supporters.

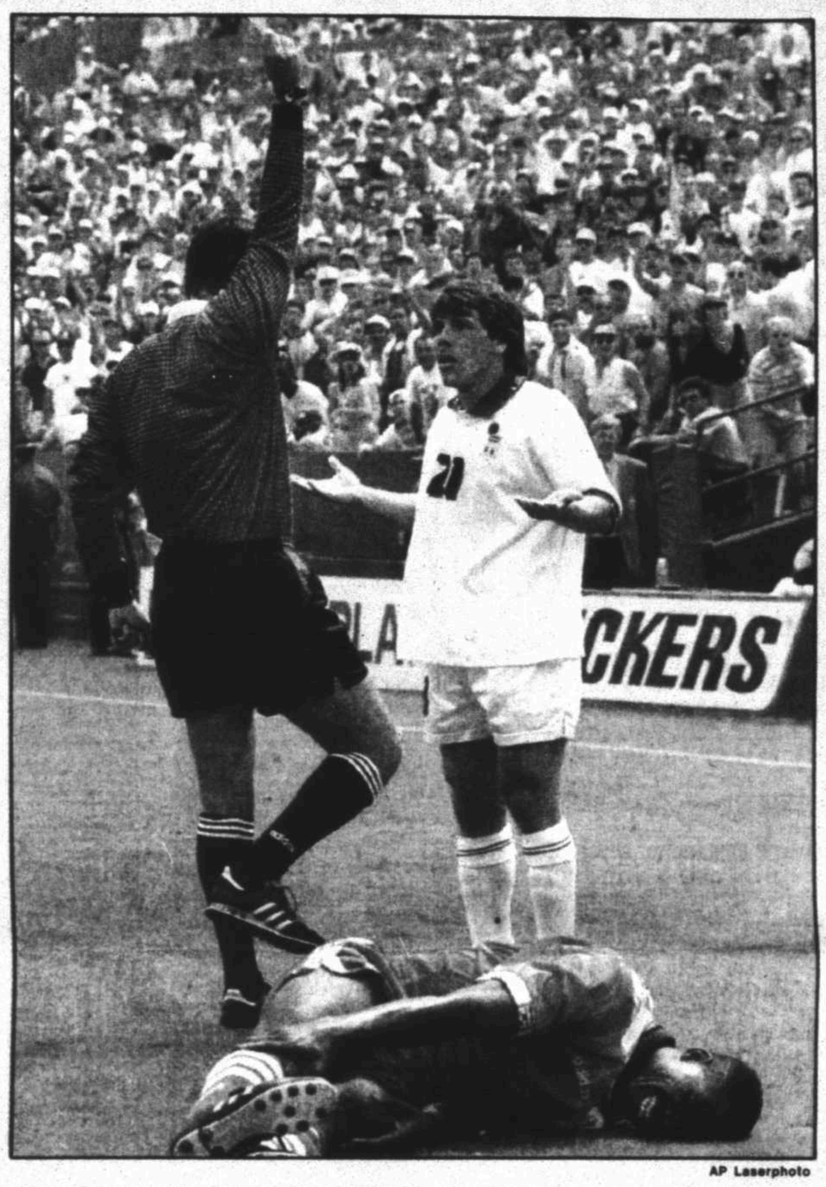

■ World Cup '94 updates and scores can be heard on CITYLINE, 560-2400, Categories 8096-8098.

Baggio also said Tuesday's victory probably took him out of the dark tunnel of a psychological crisis, touched off by by an inflamed tendon, an eight-game scoring drought and by severe criticism for his lackluster performances.

"I think to have overcome the problems, I feel reborn," said the imaginative Baggio, voted the best player in the world last year.

Mexico loses in shootout

By Fred Lief
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Finally, after 120 minutes of exhausting play in which even the goalposts came tumbling down, the game was left in the hands and heart of two goalkeepers.

Penalty kicks. On soccer's biggest stage. A goalkeeper waits a lifetime for such a moment.

"Saving penalty kicks is the greatest thing in your career," Bulgarian goalie Borislav Mihaylov said.

"I apologize," said Mexican goalie Jorge Campos.

The Bulgarians beat Mexico 3-1 on penalty kicks Tuesday, the first game at this World Cup settled in a shootout.

Bulgaria advanced to the quarterfinals, where it will play defending champion Germany at Giants Stadium on Sunday.

"The champions from Germany should be aware, Bulgaria is a very good team," Mihaylov warned.

After regulation play and two 15-minute overtimes ended with the score 1-1, the matter was left to Campos and Mihaylov.

The Mexicans missed their first three attempts in the five-round shootout. After Claudio Suarez kept Mexico alive in the fourth round, Iordan Letchkov hit the left side of the net to win it.

Mexico's Alberto Garcia Aspe missed the first penalty kick. After the game, he began recounting the wild finish, then became choked with tears.

"It's going to be hard for me to overcome this," he said. "I can barely talk.'

Added Suarez: "It's so sad. I don't know what happened."

Campos lay face down on the turf for several minutes before he rose to be consoled by teammates and opponents alike. Eventually, he walked off the field, embraced by Romanian striker Hristo Stoitchkov.

The Bulgarians, winless in the World Cup until this year, are now in the quarterfinals, where seven European teams occupy the final eight spots.

"The Bulgarian team made it happen, the best success we have had in the World Cup," Mihaylov said. "I didn't expect this in the beginning, but soon I realized we were better."

Ready or not, NFL camps opening soon

■ Two teams start training this weekend and the Dallas Cowboys open their camp in Austin on July 14.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Don't look now, but NFL training camps open this weekend with the Los Angeles Raiders and Los Angeles Rams welcoming rookies on Sunday.

On July 13, four more teams — Indianapolis, Minnesota, San Diego and Seattle — start practice with the Vikings opening camp for all players.

The Arizona Cardinals, who open training camp on July 27, are the last of the 28 teams to begin workouts.

Four NFL teams — Chicago, Green Bay, Kansas City and New Orleans — will again train in Wisconsin as the "Cheese League," while the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys open camp on July 14 at St. Edward's University in Austin, Texas.

NFL training camps have proved to be a lucrative business for several cities. State officials in Wisconsin estimate that $6 million is brought into the four cities that host NFL teams in July and August. In Austin, officials estimate that more than $3 million is generated by the Cowboys' stay.

Opening the preseason is the Hall of Fame game between Atlanta and San Diego at Canton, Ohio, on July 30. On July 31, Denver plays the Raiders in Barcelona, Spain.

The regular season opens Sept. 4, with the Super Bowl set for Jan. 29 at Joe Robbie Stadium in Miami.

Coles hits 3 homers

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Seldom-used Darnell Coles hit three home runs a day after dislocating his finger and the Toronto Blue Jays routed the Minnesota Twins 14-3 Tuesday night.

Coles hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning and solo shots in the eighth and ninth. Coles had the second three-homer game of his career, having done it in 1987 with Pittsburgh. He became the sixth player this season to homer three times in a game.

Coles dislocated the little finger on his left hand Monday night in Kansas City. He began the game batting just .145 (8-for-55) with one home run and six RBIs.

Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston checked before the game and Coles said he was OK to play. Coles started at third base while Ed Sprague, Toronto's regular third baseman, was in California with his wife, who gave birth Monday.

Paul Molitor hit his second career grand slam and Joe Carter followed with his 18th homer of the season, highlighting a six-run seventh. Molitor also had two singles and a double.

Randy Knorr also homered for Toronto, which has won consecutive games for the first time since June 9-10.

Pedro Munoz homered for Minnesota, which has lost five in a row.

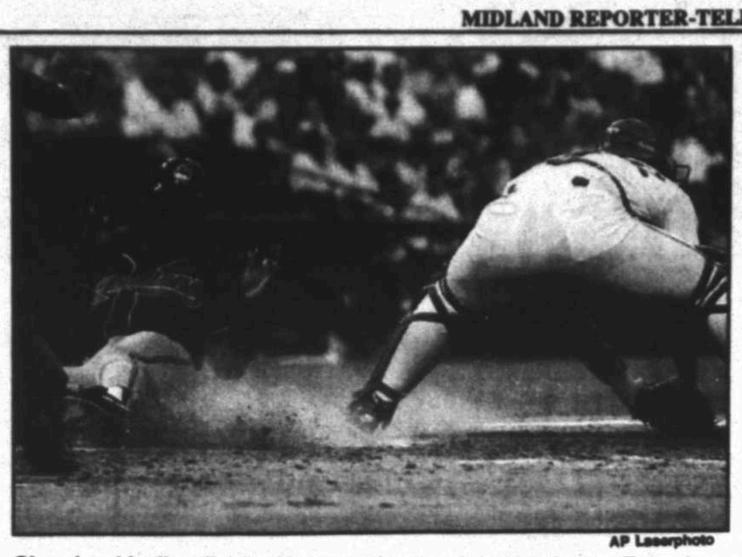

Rangers 4, Indians 3

ARLINGTON — Kevin Brown, who spent the morning with his ailing father in Georgia, tied a career high with 10 strikeouts and pitched Texas past Cleveland.

Brown left the team Monday to be with his father, Gerald, who had a heart attack at home. There were doubts that Brown would make it back for his start, but he took an afternoon flight to Texas to take his regular turn in the rotation.

Brown (6-8) gave up seven hits and walked one in his second complete game of the season. It was his first win since June 10.

Texas overcame three errors by third baseman Dean Palmer and won for the fifth time in six games.

■ AL Roundup

The Rangers ended Cleveland's five-game winning streak.

The first five Rangers in the sixth inning singled off Mark Clark (9-3), who was 7-1 in his previous 10 starts. Palmer sinlged home a run and Rusty Greer's RBI single broke a 3-3 tie.

Orioles 5, Mariners 2

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken drove in two runs, Brady Anderson homered and Jamie Moyer got his first win since May 25 as Baltimore beat Seattle.

Ken Griffey Jr. had his second successive hitless game for Seattle and has now gone a season-high 10 straight games without a homer. He still leads the majors with 32 home runs.

Baltimore has won three straight and nine of 12. Dan Wilson homered for the Mariners, who have lost three in a row after winning four straight.

Royals 10, Brewers 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bob Hamelin drove in three runs with a homer and one of Kansas City's four doubles as the Royals beat Milwaukee and handed Bill Wegman his first loss of the season.

Wegman (6-1) was stopped one victory short of the Brewers' record for consecutive wins to open a season. Milwaukee hit six doubles, and the combined 10 doubles were one short of the Royals' record for one game.

Athletics 8, Yankees 7

NEW YORK — Geronimo Berroa hit a go-ahead, two-run homer off Greg Harris in the seventh inning, rallying Oakland over New York.

Ruben Sierra also homered for the Athletics, who won for the 10th time in 11 games. Matt Nokes homered twice and Danny Tartabull also connected for the Yankees, who have lost five of six.

Angels 10, Red Sox 3

BOSTON — Chris Turner, who came in batting just .138, went 5-for-5 and became the first California catcher ever to steal home, leading the Angels past Boston.

Turner doubled twice, drove in two runs and scored two. The Angels broke a 10-game losing streak against Boston, including seven defeats this season.

Tigers 6, White Sox 2
White Sox 6, Tigers 4

DETROIT — Frank Thomas hit his 30th home run and Jack McDowell struck out a career-high 11 as Chicago beat Detroit 6-4 for a split of its doubleheader.

The Tigers won the opener 6-2 as Cecil Fielder and Tony Phillips homered in a four-run first inning.

Astro combination wins

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Pete Harnisch and two relievers combined on a four-hitter and Steve Finley had a home run and two RBIs as the Houston Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals 3-1 Tuesday night.

Craig Biggio led off the game with his fifth home run for the Astros, who have won four in a row and six of seven. The Cardinals lost their fourth straight game to fall to .500 and eight games back of the NL Central-leading Cincinnati Reds, their largest deficit of the season.

Harnisch (4-4) allowed only a fluke run in the second inning to win on the road for the first time this season. Harnisch, who entered the game 0-2 away from the Astrodome with 14 earned runs allowed in 11 innings, gave up a run on four hits with three strikeouts and a walk in six innings.

Todd Jones pitched two hitless innings and John Hudek pitched the ninth for his 13th save as three Astros pitchers combined on a four-hitter, retiring the last 12 Cardinals hitters.

Pirates 3, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Jay Bell had a two-run triple and Pittsburgh held off Atlanta in a game delayed three times by rain for nearly four hours before being called after 6 1-2 innings in the opener of a scheduled doubleheader.

The Pirates, 39-41 overall, beat the Braves for the sixth time in seven meetings this season. Atlanta has the best record in the majors at 50-30.

The second game was postponed

because of the inclement weather and the two clubs were scheduled to play a doubleheader on Wednesday beginning at 4:05 p.m. EDT.

Bell had one of only two hits off John Smoltz (6-8), who went seven innings. The Atlanta right-hander gave up three runs — two earned — walked four and struck out six.

Rockies 9, Cubs 6

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Howard Johnson tied the game with a three-run, pinch-hit home run and Andres Galarraga hit his 23rd homer to cap a six-run seventh as Colorado rocked Chicago.

The Cubs led 5-2 when Joe Girardi singled and Vinny Castilla walked off Chuck Crim (3-3) before Johnson hit his 10th homer and fourth as a pinch-hitter this season.

Padres 7, Phillies 2

SAN DIEGO — Eddie Williams, who was playing semi-pro ball last fall after being out of the majors the previous three seasons, hit his first career grand slam for San Diego.

Luis Lopez and Scott Livingstone also homered to back Joey Hamilton (5-3), who won for just the second time in five starts.

Williams, hitting .375 with five homers and 19 RBIs since being promoted from Las Vegas three weeks ago, homered off Bobby Munoz (4-3) with two outs in the fifth inning.

Reds 9, Marlins 4

MIAMI — Kevin Mitchell led the way with two of Cincinnati's five home runs as the Reds won their fifth straight game, beating Florida.

Pete Schourek (4-1) pitched six scoreless innings, striking out four and scattering six hits, to hand the Marlins their fourth straight loss.

Cincinnati jumped ahead 2-0 in the first as Barry Larkin and Hal Morris hit back-to-back homers off Florida starter Charlie Hough (5-8).

Hough also allowed home runs in the second inning to Tony Fernandez and in the fourth to Mitchell. The four homers were the most allowed by a Marlins pitcher this season.

Mets 4, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — All-Star right-hander Bret Saberhagen allowed two hits over eight innings and hit a run-scoring double to lead New York to a victory over San Francisco.

Saberhagen (9-4) struck out eight and walked none while pitching a perfect game for six innings. Darren Lewis led off the seventh with a home run to left on a 2-2 pitch, his second of the season.

Dodgers 2, Expos 1, 10 innings

LOS ANGELES — Raul Mondesi homered in the 10th inning off John Wetteland after Montreal starter Jeff Fassero had retired 22 consecutive batters, as Los Angeles beat the Expos.

Wetteland (2-6) entered the game to start the 10th and got Tim Wallach on a fly to right before Mondesi drove a 2-1 pitch to right field for his 14th home run and fifth in his last 13 games.

Missions rally with 2 in ninth for come-from-behind win

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — Michael Moore's one-out single to center field scored Chris Demetral from second base to spoil the pitching of starter John Fritz and give San Antonio a come-from-behind 2-1 win over Midland here Tuesday.

San Antonio, which has won two straight from the Angels, moves into sole possession of second place in the Texas League's Western Division with the win while Midland drops to 7-8 in the second half.

Midland scored in the top of the first to take a 1-0 lead. That held until the ninth when San Antonio score twice for the win.

In the ninth, Missions' first baseman Jay Kirkpatrick drove a no-out, 3-2 pitcher over the left field fence to tie the game at 1-1.

Demetral then walked and was sacrificed to second base on a bunt by Billy Lott. Moore followed with a single to center field which rolled under the glove of Marquis Riley as Demetral scored for the win.

John Barfield (3-3) picked up the win for San Antonio, allowing one hit in two innings while striking out three. He relieved 1993 Texas League All-Star pitcher Ben Van Ryn in the eighth.

Ron Watson (0-3) picked up the loss as he blew only his second save of the season in the ninth.

Midland scored in the top of the first as Riley reached on an infield single. Tim Harkrider sacrificed him to second. Jim Walewander walked and Chris Pritchett reached on an infield single to load the bases with one out.

Today, Midland's newest pitching find, Omar Bencomo (1-0, 7.20) of the Mexican League, will start while San Antonio counters with Darren Dreifort (1-0 1.00). Dreifort started the season with the Los Angeles Dodgers as a reliever, but was recently sent down to San Antonio.

American wins at LL tourney

Midland American used strong pitching for Tony Zarate to defeat El Paso Frank Manning 2-0 Tuesday evening in the District 3 Little League All-Star Baseball Tournament 13 to 14-year-old-division at Redfern Field.

In other action, Big Spring overpowered Lamesa 11-1 as T.J. Aguirre picked up the win for Big Spring.

Today, Midland National will play Odessa Salinas at 5:30 p.m. and West Odessa meets Floyd Gwynn of Odessa at 8 p.m. at Redfern Field.

Low, Walker play McDonald's game

Midland Lee product Sean Low and Rankin graduate Baylor Walker will play in the 1994 McDonald's All-Star basketball and football games in Houston.

Low will play forward for the North basketball team at 7:30 p.m. July 25 in Hofheinz Pavillon. Walker will play running back in the 7 p.m. July 26 football game at the Astrodome.

Other area athletes in the football game are Odessa Permian wide receiver Sheldon Bass, Wink's Shane Haynes and Reagan County's Jeremie Ellison. Players are selected by the Texas High School Coaches Association.

LUBBOCK — The Midland Freshman cheerleaders and mascot recently attended the UCA Cheerleading Camp at Texas Tech University, bringing home a slew of awards.

The squad received seven superior ratings and one excellent rating. They also were presented three spirit sticks, two trophies and an invitation to participate in the 1994 Hollywood parade.

Allen's 101 sets hoop record

■ Olympic Festival

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Kent Ferguson and Patty Armstrong gave a lesson or two to the younger divers in the field Tuesday while Ray Allen put his name in the basketball record books in the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Ferguson, 31, won the gold medal in the 3-meter springboard and the 26-year-old Armstrong won the gold in the platform competition.

Allen scored 27 points for the East, giving him a Festival-record 101 for the tournament. But his team lost to the South 87-81 in the gold medal game.

Ferguson, of Miami Beach, Fla., is competing in his ninth Festival. He was world champion and Pan Am Games champion on the 3-meter in 1991 and an Olympian in 1992, and his experience showed.

He took the lead in the eighth round of dives and went on to score 672.95 points to beat Kevin McMahon of Freemont, Neb., who had 641.20. Rob Siracusano of Southern Illinois University won the bronze with 632.35.

"This is the new Kent Ferguson," he said. "This is the 1996 Atlanta Kent Ferguson, hopefully. I'll just keep my fingers crossed."

Armstrong, the oldest female in the 10-meter finals, picked up where she left off during the preliminaries. The Woodlands, Texas diver finished with 427.45 points to beat 19-year-old Joy Burkholder of Mission Viejo, Calif. Burkholder scored 399.65, while Sherry Wigginton of the University of Texas won the bronze with 381.85.

"1996 is my ultimate goal," said Armstrong, who had won Sunday's preliminary round by nearly 50 points. "I've been trying to evaluate the weak points in my diving. With this victory, I think I've made some advances."

Allen, who will be a sophomore at Connecticut, broke the Festival record of 98 points set by Shaquille O'Neal in 1990 at Minneapolis. But James Collins of Florida State scored 19 points as the South (3-1) handed the East its only loss.

Collins' 3-pointer with 9:26 left in the fourth quarter gave his team a 67-65 lead and the South didn't trail again. He was named the tournament's MVP.

"I think defensively they stepped up and did a great job on Ray Allen," South coach Perry Clark of Tulane said. Allen had shot 60 percent in the first three games, but was 10-of-23 Tuesday.

The South women won their third straight gold medal and eighth in the 13 years of the Festival with a 94-92 victory over the West.

"Coming in, there was a lot of pressure put on us," said Rhodes, of Washington State. "There were a lot of calls letting me know that the South hasn't lost here (much) and for us not to be the first."

Kedra Holland of Georgia scored what proved to be the final points with two free throws with 1:27 left. When Stanford's Kate Paye missed an off-balance shot at the buzzer, the South had the victory.

Pashen Thompson of Tennessee had 20 points and nine rebounds for the South (3-1) and was named the Festival's MVP. Marion Jones of North Carolina added 17 points.

Shalonda Enis of Trinity Valley (Texas) Community College led the West (2-2) with 25 points but missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with 27.5 seconds left that could have tied the game.

The West men finally won a game in the Festival, taking the bronze medal with a 127-121 victory over the North.

> '1996 is my ultimate goal. I've been trying to evaluate the weak points in my diving. With this victory, I think I've made some advances.'
> — Patty Armstrong

Dontae Jones of Northeast Mississippi Community College scored 28 and Michigan recruit Jerod Ward added 26 for the West. The West had gone 0-3 in round-robin play, but had lost two games by a combined seven points.

The women's bronze medal went to the East, which beat the North 98-89. Tamecka Dixon of Kansas led the East (3-1) with 23 points. Stephanie White of West Lebanon, Ind., scored 27 for the North (0-4).

U.S. boxing champions Fernando Vargas and Shane Swartz went away with gold medals.

Vargas, 16, of Oxnard, Calif., controlled his 132-pound bout from the start in beating Datris Biagas of the Army 29-15. And Swartz won his second straight Festival gold with a 44-28 victory over Ronald Simms of the Army at 165 pounds.

"Every time I tried to do a combination, he'd start moving. He wouldn't trade punches with me," said Vargas, who has yet to lose in a USA Boxing tournament.

Biagas is nine years older than Vargas, but the champion said that made little difference.

"I'm not intimidated when I fight guys who are 25 or 26. If you can do it, you can do it. Look at (George) Foreman, he's old and he does it. Young people can do it too."

Athletics turning it around — and how!

By Murray Chass
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — About two months ago, Stan Javier approached Ron Darling and another one or two of his teammates with a bizarre thought.

"He came up to us," Darling said, "and said, 'Close your eyes and just think what it would feel like if we came back and won this.' It brought a smile to our faces."

Javier confessed the other day to "feeling foolish" when he made that comment in the Oakland Athletics' clubhouse. But, he said, "It's turning out to be possible."

When Javier spoke to his teammates and for some weeks afterward, the Oakland Athletics had the worst record in the American League. Losing streaks of 12, four, five, six, four and four games plunged them 24 games under .500, to a record of 16 victories and 40 defeats on June 6.

That record computes to a .286 — excuse the expression — winning percentage. That percentage translates to a 46-116 record for a complete season. The most games any team ever has lost were 120, a prized possession of the 1962 expansion Mets.

"We were at the bottom of the barrel," Darling said. "It was ugly."

Four weeks later, the Athletics can see the top of the barrel. With help from the opposition, they have catapulted into a position in which they can make Javier's foolish dream come true.

Since they hit bottom at .286, the Amazing A's have compiled the best record in the major leagues, 19 victories and six defeats entering their game with the Yankees last night. Those numbers compute to a .760 winning percentage.

U.S. biker in fifth, leads surge

CALAIS, France — Belgium's Johan Museeuw took the lead in the Tour de France after the team time trial Tuesday, and American Lance Armstrong moved into fifth place while heading a surge by his team.

In the battle of the two favorites, three-time winner Miguel Indurain of Spain gained a slight edge over Tony Rominger of Switzerland.

The team time trial, the Tour's third stage, covered 41 miles from Calais to the Channel Tunnel.

Museeuw took the overall lead from Britain's Chris Boardman, who had held it since the prologue Saturday. He dropped to 20th position, 54 seconds behind. Boardman's team was more than a minute behind Museeuw's team.

Museeuw held the individual lead by 10 seconds over Indurain. Third was Museeuw's teammate, Dane Rolf Sorensen.

Indurain increased his margin over Rominger because the Spaniard's team was 24 seconds ahead of the Swiss racer's group. Rominger is now 10th, 38 seconds behind Museeuw.

■ Tour de France

Rominger and Indurain are the heavy favorites to duel for the overall title. Most of the early leaders are expected to fade when the Tour reaches the mountains.

Armstrong moved into fifth place, 22 seconds behind.

His Motorola team was runnerup in the team race, six seconds back of Museeuw's GB-MG team, and placed six riders in the top 20 of the overall standings.

Canadian Steve Bauer was sixth, 27 seconds back; Sean Yates of Britain ninth, 34 seconds behind; American Frankie Andreu was 11th, Belgian Michel Dernies 16th, and Australian Phil Anderson 18th.

Armstrong is making a strong showing after recovering from an insect bite that caused swelling in his leg and forced him to curtail training.

The Texan came in a strong 18th in the prologue and is a threat for an individual stage victory.

Last year, at 21, Armstrong became the youngest rider to win a stage victory in the Tour. He went onto win the one-day world championship and wears the rainbow-colored jersey emblematic of the title throughout the Tour.

American Greg LeMond, who won the world championship twice as well as the Tour three times, was back in 40th place, 1 minute, 35 seconds behind.

As a member of Boardman's GAN team, LeMond tried to help the Briton keep the leader's yellow jersey entering England, but the team faltered.

It had mechanical troubles on the road. At one time, Boardman had to take a tool and fix his specialized bike while he was riding.

"It's too bad for Chris," LeMond said. "We lost a lot of time in the last 20 kilometers."

"The team worked a lot yesterday to conserve the yellow jersey for me," Boardman said. "Maybe we were tired."

Boardman was the first Briton since 1962 to have the leader's yellow jersey.

ITALY: Team recovers 'real' Baggio

(From 1C)

Baggio when the striker had difficult times with Juventus of Turin and with the national team, said "after scoring the goal he was extraordinary, as he should always be."

Sacchi said the performance of his players, going 10 against 11 for 44 minutes following the ejection of Gianfranco Zola, went beyond anyone's expectations.

"Several players, including Baggio, ended the game with cramps and (Roberto) Mussi limped as the Nigerians led their final attacks," Sacchi said. "They were somewhat heroic."

Italian Soccer Federation president Antonio Matarrese also praised Baggio "because he never gave up."

"We have recovered the real Roberto Baggio, the player we always wanted to have on our team," Matarrese said.

Matarrese recalled 1966, when angry fans hurled vegetables and insults at the Italian team when it landed in Rome following one of the World Cup's alltime upsets, at the hands of North Korea.

"You can imagine what could have happened if we were eliminated by an underdog team such as Nigeria," he said. "We must be proud of this team and today's victory, but we must not get overly excited. We just did our duty by defeating Nigeria."

"We have three victories in 10 days," Stoitchkov said. "The Germany game is next and everybody is happy."

MEXICO: 10 cards tie Cup record

scored in the first half of a rough game in which both teams showed considerable daring on attack and grittiness on defense.

Referee Jamal Al Sharif of Syria responded accordingly to the rugged play, although perhaps a bit quickly with his yellow and red cards. In all, there were 10 red and yellow cards, tying a World Cup record.

Most of the second half and beyond was played with each team a man down. Bulgaria's Emil Kremenliev was hit with his second yellow card in the 50th minute, bringing expulsion. The advantage didn't last long for Mexico. In the 58th minute, Luis Garcia was handed a red card for kicking Ivaylo Iordanov.

In the 1986 World Cup in Mexico, these teams also met in the second round, with Mexico winning and going on to face Germany. Now the Bulgarians go on.

The game was played on a hot and hazy day at Giants Stadium, awash in the red, white and green colors of Mexico. Mexican banners flew, Mexican flags draped the stadium decks as if this were Azteca Stadium in Mexico City. One banner in the crowd of 71,030 paid tribute to Andres Escobar, the slain Colombian soccer star. "Our Prayers Are With You — USA," it read.

One of the odder moments in this World Cup, and perhaps any other, came midway through the first half when the Mexican goal apparatus collapsed. In the 21st minute, Bulgaria had a corner kick from the right side. Marcelino Bernal cleared the ball, sending it over the net. His momentum carried him into the goal and his foot got caught in the netting.

One of the upper sidebars became dislodged and, before long, the whole goal needed to be dismantled. Out trotted assorted officials and maintenance workers, with a new goal put in place six minutes later.

The Bulgarians opened the scoring in the seventh minute. Iordanov sent a long, crisp pass that split the Mexican defense. On the receiving end was Stoitchkov, who ripped a 15-yard shot into the center of the net for his fourth goal of the tournament.

Eight minutes later, the Bulgarians nearly had a two-goal lead, but the shot by Emil Kostadinov smacked off the left post. The net stayed standing.

Then it was Mexico's turn. Kremenliev brought down Luis Alves in the box. A penalty kick was called and Garcia Aspe converted in the 18th minute, sending the ball into the upper right corner of the net. He would not be so fortunate in the shootout.

Early on, the Mexicans got good support in the net from Campos, whose dazzlingly colored jersey could illuminate a cave. And Mihaylov preserved the tie in the 90th minute when Jorge Rodriguez sent a dangerous low pass toward the goalmouth.

"I'm not flashy or colorful," Mihaylov said. "I just feel comfortable in what I do."

The Bulgarians played without three starters — defenders Trijon Ivanov and Tzanko Tsvetanov and midfielder Zlatko Iankov — all suspended with two yellow cards during the first round.

After losing their opening game of the tournament to Nigeria, the Bulgarians have reeled off wins against Greece, Argentina and Mexico. The biggest test awaits.

Prices mixed

NEW YORK — Prices for crude oil and refined products finished mixed on Tuesday in a slow day of post-holiday trading at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

News of an oil-worker strike in Brazil had little effect on the market, which heard union threats of a walkout last week. In Yemen, an oil field damaged by an air raid last week resumed operation, but a second field was closed as a precaution.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August rose 9 cents per barrel to settle at $19.62. Contracts for delivery in the winter were lower.

Natural gas prices were lower, with August-delivery contracts settling at $2.131 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 8.5 cents.

Dollar eases

NEW YORK — The dollar was mostly lower Tuesday, fading along with trader hopes that the Federal Reserve would move to support the beleaguered currency.

Dealers doubted that the two-day meeting of the Fed's policymaking board, which ends Wednesday, would yield a coordinated U.S.-Germany interest rate move or further dollar-buying to prop up the weak greenback.

Many market players were unwilling to make any major trades until results of the Fed meeting were clearer.

Gold prices were lower. On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold for current delivery fell $1.20 a troy ounce to $385.50.

The dollar fetched 98.90 yen in New York, compared to 98.55 late Friday.

Late dollar rates in New York compared to Friday: 1.5803 German marks, down from 1.5955; 1.3255 Swiss francs, down from 1.3385; 5.4170 French francs, down from 5.4683; 1,566 Italian lire, down from 1,581; and 1.3871 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3823.

The British pound fetched $1.5434, up from $1.5375 Friday in New York.

On the New York Comex, silver for current delivery fetched 5.321, down from $5.405 on Friday.

Stocks edge up

NEW YORK — The stock market chalked up scattered gains in a subdued session Tuesday as rising bond prices offered some encouragement to investors.

Speculation about the outcome of a Federal Reserve policy meeting tended to keep investors from making major commitments to the market.

Stocks spent most of the session at mixed levels with buyers favoring blue chips and other big-name companies over smaller issues.

The buying temporarily faded in the afternoon but the Dow Jones industrial average still managed to end with a minor gain of 5.83 at 3,652.48.

Baby Bells want court role to end

■ Companies want freedom from restrictions in antitrust agreement that bar them from entering long-distance business, manufacturing equipment.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A battle to bring consumers futuristic telecommunications products and services is moving to a second front: the courts.

Four of the nation's largest telephone companies — including San Antonio-based Southwestern Bell Corp. — plan to file a suit Wednesday, seeking to abolish legal restrictions on the products and services they may provide consumers.

The Baby Bells have been trying to get Congress to do away with the restrictions for years. While Congress is the closest it has ever been to doing this, through sweeping telecommunications reform legislation, passage this year is not certain.

"There's no guarantee that Congress will act, so we owe it to our shareholders to pursue all avenues," said Nynex's top lobbyist, Thomas Tauke, in an interview on Tuesday.

Tauke said the suit complements the phone companies' legislative efforts. But other telecommunications executives said it is an attempt to hedge bets should reform legislation not be enacted this year.

The suit, to be filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, challenges the continued usefulness of a consent decree that broke up the Bell System in 1984, said phone company executives.

The decree bars the phone companies from engaging in a number of businesses, including providing long-distance service and manufacturing telecommunications equipment.

The crux of the companies' argument is that technology and the telecommunications marketplace have dramatically changed since 1984. As a result, the consent decree is no longer necessary, executives said.

It could take years for the court to issue a ruling, lawyers on both sides of the issue said.

Affidavits from leading academics contained in the suit seek to prove that "The consent decree is discouraging, rather than encouraging competition in the telecommunications marketplace," Tauke said.

Among the academics' findings is that consumers have paid between $38 billion and $58 billion more than they should have for long-distance service over the last 10 years due to lack of competition and inefficiencies on the part of long-distance companies, said a phone company executive, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

AT&T Corp., which historically has opposed Bell companies' efforts for greater freedoms in the telecommunications business, said it was not surprised by the impending suit.

Lexus, Infiniti, Saturn 1-2-3 in car-buyer satisfaction poll

DETROIT (AP) — For a reliable drive and friendly dealers, Lexus, Infiniti and Saturn ranked one-two-three for the third straight year in a widely watched survey of car buyers.

Lexus, Toyota's luxury car line, scored 176 points in the J.D. Power and Associates 1994 Customer Satisfaction Index, which was released Tuesday.

Nissan's Infiniti line was No. 2 with 171 points and General Motors' Saturn followed with 155 points. Honda's Acura luxury line and Germany's Audi filled out the top five.

The survey of 25,000 buyers of new cars ranked their satisfaction with repairs and reliability, and with how they were handled by dealers during the first year they owned their cars. The highest possible score is 202.

The Lexus score of 179 in the 1992 study was the highest ever achieved by any model. The Lexus 176 this year is the second-highest.

A similar report based on a survey of 10,000 light truck owners was to be released by Power on Wednesday.

Industry sources said it showed Chrysler and Toyota tied for No. 1 in the category, which includes minivans, pickups and sport utility vehicles. Oldsmobile, Mercury and Plymouth completed the top five in the truck survey, the sources said.

In the car survey, the average score for the industry was 135, unchanged from a year ago. Above that average were five U.S. cars, six Japanese and six European. Fifteen car lines were below the industry average, with Suzuki at the bottom of the list with 108.

General Motors cars averaged 136, the first time in the history of the survey that a U.S. car maker was higher than the industry average. Chrysler averaged 128 and Ford, 125.

"The domestics have increased consistently over the last eight years, and are challenging the Asians as well," said J. David Power III, president of the Agoura Hills, Calif., marketing firm.

The Big Three average in 1986 was only 94.

Asian brands, including Korea's Hyundai, scored an average of 140, 18 percent higher than in 1986, and the domestic Big Three scored 132, a gain of 51 percent.

The average score for European cars was 139, up 30 percent since 1986.

"We've noticed a trend of improvement on the part of the European manufacturers, both in the quality of the vehicles and in the way the customers are being handled in the dealerships," Power said.

Overall improvement for the European brands also reflected that Yugo, Renault, Peugeot and Sterling were no longer sold in the U.S. market. Those cars did not compete well on quality or customer satisfaction and they pulled down the European average in earlier surveys, Power said.

Federal Reserve again meets to weigh need to raise short-term interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve began a two-day meeting Tuesday to review the condition of the U.S. economy and the dollar and decide whether there is any need now for higher short-term interest rates.

The Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank's policymaking body, is meeting behind closed doors amid worries over the falling dollar and at a time when many signs point to slower growth for the economy.

Many analysts predicted in advance of the meeting that the Fed would take no action on interest rates, instead preferring to study the economy's performance from the sidelines for now.

The Fed already has pushed short-term interest rates up four times this year, from 3 percent to 4.25 percent. Three moves were announced immediately following meetings of the committee, composed of Fed governors in Washington and five of the Fed's 12 regional bank presidents.

The dollar has tumbled to record lows against the Japanese yen. But many analysts said the Fed is more likely to focus on the strength of the economy in setting a course on interest rates.

President Clinton, as he prepared to depart for Naples, Italy, for a meeting with leaders of the world's industrialized powers, questioned the need for government intervention to bolster the dollar.

Southwest could add cities, longer flights

DALLAS (AP) — Facing a West Coast challenge by a low-cost United Airlines subsidiary scheduled for launch this fall, Southwest Airlines Co. said Tuesday it is prepared to make longer flights and start serving new short-haul markets in California.

Officials with Dallas-based Southwest, which has grown into the nation's only consistently profitable airline by offering low-fare, short-haul service, said they must wait and see what UAL Corp.'s U2 does when it starts service, scheduled for Oct. 1.

But the carrier's plans have appeared sufficiently threatening that Southwest is weighing its responses, chief financial officer Gary Kelly said.

"There's plenty of evidence out there that they're going to come into our markets in a very aggressive way," Kelly said.

The airline particularly wants to protect its dominance in California.

If you eat fish, your risk of heart attack drops.

Most authorities have credited fish oil's anti-clogging activity in arteries. But now there's mounting evidence that fish oil wards off deadly heart attacks in an entirely different way — by helping block "ventricular fibrillation," irregular heartbeats that can trigger sudden death.

So suggests new research by George E. Billman at Ohio State University. Testing dogs, Billman found that 87 percent of the animals infused with fish oil did not have potentially fatal heart fibrillation following a heart attack. Billman noted that the fish oil seems to work by reducing the heart rate and by direct chemical effects on heart cells.

Although nobody knows for sure, researchers speculate that fish oil may work similarly on humans. One British study, for example, found one-third less mortality after a heart attack in those who ate fatty fish such as salmon two or three times a week. One reason may be fish oil's inhibition of ventricular fibrillation, Billman theorized.

If so, eating fatty fish might help save some 300,000 heart attack victims yearly from fibrillation and sudden death.

Pregnant advice

What should women do about weight loss when pregnant or breast-feeding infants? Here's the latest advice from nutritionists Kathryn G. Dewey and Megan A. McCrory of the University of California at Davis:

Never diet when you are pregnant, even if you are obese. Restricting food could damage the fetus. Purdue University researcher Avanelle Kirksey adds that even a "moderate dietary deficit during pregnancy" can seriously affect the infant's motor coordination and mental behavior.

Breastfeeding women should eat 1,800 calories a day and avoid liquid diets and weight-loss medications.

It's all right to diet moderately if you are breastfeeding, after milk production is established — which is during the first few weeks. But weight loss should be slow — no more than 4.4 pounds a month in overweight women. Also, be alert for weight loss in the baby or signs that the baby's appetite is not being satisfied.

One danger: Losing weight during breastfeeding could liberate chemical pesticides and contaminants from a mother's fat tissues into the breast milk, adversely affecting the infant.

Praise for kale

Try putting a little kale in your life. It's one of the most underrated disease-fighting vegetables, according to recent research.

Kale comes out tops among vegetables for lutein content, says Frederick Khachik, researcher at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

And what is lutein? It's an increasingly respected antioxidant in the large family of chemicals called carotenoids, which include beta carotene. Kale also has lots of beta carotene.

Khachik says lutein is a more powerful antioxidant than beta carotene in discouraging diseases such as cancer.

You can also get large amounts of lutein from spinach. But kale still wins on other counts.

On the other hand, kale is low in oxalates and is an excellent but largely neglected source of calcium. In fact, you absorb more calcium from kale than even from milk, according to research.

Three-step CPR

At one time, there were 37 steps in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). Now it's as easy and ABC, according to the July issue of Reader's Digest:

- A is for Airway: Lift the chin to open the airway.
- B is for Breathing: With the airway open, pinch the nostrils closed and blow slowly twice into the mouth until the chest rises.
- C is for circulation: Press 15 times on the middle of the chest between the nipples to force blood to circulate throughout the body.

About two-thirds of deaths caused by cardiac arrest occur before victims reach a hospital. And about 60 percent of heart attacks resulting in cardiac arrest occur in the presence of a witness who — if that person knew CPR — might be able to save the victim.

Incorrectly used, digitalis can be poison

By Keay Davidson
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The United States was less than a decade old when British doctor William Withering introduced a new treatment for heart disease: digitalis.

During the next two centuries, a medical revolution blossomed from digitalis, which is found in the dried leaves of a garden flower, the purple foxglove — technically known as Digitalis purpurea.

Digitalis may have played a role in the deaths of five elderly San Francisco men, according to San Francisco police, who suspect a murder-for-profit scheme in which the men were slowly poisoned to death. Four of the bodies have been exhumed for toxicological tests for the drug, they said. Tests were also conducted on the body of the fifth man, which has not yet been buried.

A fixture of cardiovascular medicine, digitalis is routinely prescribed for heart patients in synthetic forms called digitoxin and digoxin. These digitalis drugs boost the strength of the heart, regulate the rhythm and rate of heartbeats, improve blood circulation and ease joint swelling in cardiac patients.

But like any effective drug, digitalis can be misused. Some doctors prescribe it to patients to help them lose weight, but "it should never be used in this way. When used improperly, digitalis can cause serious problems," warns the "Complete Drug Reference" published by Consumer Reports Books.

Its side effects range from skin rash or hives to nausea, vomiting, exhaustion, diarrhea, blurry vision, depression, fainting and — in extreme cases — death.

In a 1991 article in the San Francisco Examiner poison expert Dr. Olga Woo recalled the story of a wife who mistook digitalis leaves in her garden for mustard greens. She added them to her husband's salad, and "he got pretty sick," Woo recalled. "But fortunately, he did not die."

Digitalis "certainly is a very potent poison, and people do die from it," said Dr. Kent Olson, a toxicologist who is medical director of the San Francisco-Bay Area Regional Poison Control Center at San Francisco General Hospital.

"The plant, the foxglove, is a very common and very beautiful plant with big, grainy, green leaves," Olson said. "People have died from using the leaves to make a tea; they put too many leaves into the brew — intentionally or otherwise. It has been used for suicide."

Unlike the legendary "untraceable drugs" of Agatha Christie novels, digitalis isn't unusually difficult to spot via toxicological tests — if such tests are conducted, Olson said.

In fact, a digitalis-identifying procedure — called a "digoxin blood test" — is "a simple laboratory test conducted by clinical laboratories."

"Typically, when someone dies unexpectedly, and foul play is suspected, it would be commonplace for the medical examiner to conduct what's called a 'toxicology screen' — a screening test for a wide variety of poisons," Olson said. "It's like casting out a net and hoping to catch some fish."

Most kids out grow epilepsy

By Dr. Orrin Devinsky
N.Y. Times News Service

Parents of children with epilepsy can be reassured in knowing that most children grow out of the disorder; some may even be able to go through childhood without medication.

The brain's nerve cells communicate via electrical and chemical messages. Epilepsy is the term for a group of disorders that cause sudden discharges of brain electricity that alter behavior — more commonly known as seizures.

Epilepsy can be caused by injury after birth or congenital or metabolic disorders. Other causes include infections and degenerative disorders. (Epilepsy caused by a tumor or stroke occurs primarily in adults.)

In a minority of cases, epilepsy may have a genetic source. A child whose mother, father or other close family member has epilepsy is at risk for the disorder.

Diagnosis is made by taking a careful history of the child and family, and in many cases, other tests, such as an EEG.

A child may be considered to have a seizure disorder if he or she has had two seizures without clear factors that

Neck ties with coolant inside are hot exercise items

By Lynn Bulmahn
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO — The newest fad among fitness buffs is to tie a scarf around their necks when working out in hot weather.

Products recently introduced are neck ties that have a cooling device inside them.

Although they vary, the basic concept is to refrigerate or freeze the coolant or dip it in ice water, and then tie it around your neck.

The idea is that the product will keep you cool when you would otherwise overheat while exercising, running, doing yard work or manual labor.

"It'll keep you from overheating," said Debbie Rhodes, a distributor of Theradyne Cold Neck Wrap, a polyester neck tie filled with a crystal that becomes a gel when moistened. "It will keep your body temperature down a little bit."

Dipping the wrap in tap water makes it swell, she said. A person using it then stores it in the refrigerator, or dips it in ice water, to get it cold.

It can be worn around the neck, as a headband or anywhere else that cold would feel good, Rhodes said.

A similar product is the Cool-dana, sold by Personal Comfort Corp. of Orlando, Fla. It contains a "micro cooling strip" in the pocket of a neck tie. The strip is placed in a refrigerator or freezer for at least two hours before use, then inserted into the necktie and tied around the neck. Instructions say the item provides "up to an hour" of cooling relief.

The company says it is helpful to have a device that cools the blood in and around the neck through the carotid arteries. It says the product has been known to be worn by people who Use common sense exercising in heat

By Lynn Bulmahn
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO, Texas — Whether or not you use a cool-down scarf around your neck, common sense rules apply to exercising in the heat.

The safest times to run, work out or exercise outdoors is in the early mornings or evenings, when the temperatures are cooler, said Dr. Michael Attas, a cardiologist who is also an avid runner.

If you're out in the sunny parts of the day, run in shade when possible, he said. Wearing a hat or a visor will help dissipate the heat.

Also be aware of the humidity, since high humidity can make it feel hotter than the temperature indicated on a thermometer.

Save your spandex or synthetic workout clothes for cooler seasons. In summer, lightweight cotton is the rule.

"The main thing to stay hydrated," Attas said "Stop every two to three miles for water.

If you will run for more than 20 minutes, he said, you'll need to map a route where you can stop for water along the way.

Attas said he drinks a glass or two of water before he runs

Older people make gains in dental health

By Dr. Michael Freedman

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Institute of Dental Research has some good news to report: Far fewer Americans are losing teeth now than a generation ago, with particularly impressive gains among older people.

The use of fluorides, sealants, better nutrition and better consumer education apparently have made a huge impact in the past few decades on holding down tooth decay and gum disease.

The findings by NIDR are another indication of the dramatic improvement in the oral health of Americans in the past several decades.

According to the NIDR study, the findings may indicate that Americans are keeping their teeth as many as 10 years longer than they used to.

L. Jackson Brown, director of epidemiology and oral disease prevention at the institute, said that perhaps the most encouraging aspect in the study is that prevention of tooth loss is extending to a part of the population that had been most at risk.

'Don't drink the water' not enough when traveling

By Dr. Geoffrey Chazen
Associated Press

Leaving your troubles behind is one of the pleasures of vacation travel.

However, if you are visiting an undeveloped or Third-World country, you should be careful to avoid the problem known as traveler's diarrhea.

A common ailment, traveler's diarrhea usually can be prevented by taking simple precautions that, like using foreign currency, are easily integrated into your routine abroad.

Traveler's diarrhea results when you ingest pathogenic or disease-causing bacteria, parasites or viruses. Third-World nations, especially warm weather countries, tend to have these kinds of organisms in their water supplies as well as in their unprocessed foods.

The symptoms of traveler's diarrhea depend on the kind of bacteria that has infected you. Most commonly, infected people experience frequent and watery bowel movements and cramps that go away within 24-72 hours.

Other, less common signs of the illness, may include bloody or mucous bowel movements and be accompanied by fever and vomiting. Typically, these bacterial infections take a week or so to go away and may require antibiotic treatment from a physician.

Whatever kind of traveler's diarrhea, if the illness persists, see a doctor abroad or your physician upon returning home.

To avoid bacteria and diarrhea, drink only bottled beverages, preferably carbonated drinks. These drinks are more likely to have been processed and decontaminated. If you must drink tap water, boil or treat it with commercial iodine or chlorine.

"Don't drink the water" is not enough of a prevention against traveler's diarrhea. Also avoid ice, and brush your teeth with bottled water.

Raw vegetables and fruits are OK to eat only if they have a thick skin which can be peeled off. For instance, bananas and oranges are safe, berries are not; avocado is fine, lettuce is not. In general, eat only hot foods because cooking kills bacteria. Dairy foods, such as cheese and milk, are OK too, but only if they have been kept well-refrigerated.

Traveler's diarrhea cannot be prevented by inoculation, but you can take an oral vaccine for typhoid before traveling. Typhoid is a bacterial infection that causes an extreme form of traveler's diarrhea and usually requires antibiotic treatment. In the event of traveler's diarrhea, you can alleviate some of your suffering until the illness goes away. Anti-motility agents, such as loperamide, firm up stool and reduce the number of bowel movements.

Also, drink bottled fruit juices and soda to avoid dehydration. If you don't drink plenty of fluids, you may prolong your illness.

Avoiding traveler's diarrhea is also a way of avoiding the more serious cholera, which is currently an epidemic in certain South and Central American regions. Traveler's diarrhea is inconvenient but cholera, which is marked by a large volume of diarrhea and rapid dehydration, can be incapacitating and can even be deadly.

TIES: Cool neck ties made for hot days spend time in hot and humid climates and want to relieve the symptoms of heat stress.

Massage therapist Hannah Phillips sells the Theradyne to her clients and says she often wears one herself.

"I like to wear it around my neck, and in addition to or instead of just that, I sometimes wear one around my forehead like a sweatband," she said. "It seems to keep me cool."

She wears the cold wrap both indoors and outdoors. "I use it when I do aerobic type exercise at home and when I work on clients to keep me cool when I move around," she said. "I think it's a pretty good idea."

Not everyone is convinced such a device does much good.

"I think there's a media hype involved there," said local cardiologist Dr. Michael Attas, who is an avid runner. "I've seen no scientific article about it. It may make you feel a little bit better, but I've not seen anything in any of the medical journals or running or sports magazines about that."

He said he does not believe such devices do much to prevent dehydration or heat stroke.

What about the claims that a cool neck tie cools down the blood?

"You could probably put it anywhere — across your forehead or on your wrists — and probably accomplish the same thing," Attas said. "I don't think putting it next to carotid arteries will necessarily be any better."

However, the Cool-dana's manufacturer cites studies published in a 1990 exercise journal as saying it has been tested to assist in reducing fever, sweating and hot flash symptoms when placed around the neck.

The idea may be catching on — and then some.

Vendors selling the Theradyne at a hamburger cook-off in Hewitt recently did a brisk business.

"I had two men ask me if I could make them a whole body suit," that would keep them cold, Rhodes said. "I don't think so."

COOL: Stay within limits

(From 1D)

— and another eight to 10 ounces each 20 minutes during his exercise sessions.

He said fluid loss is a serious problem. "You can easily drop six to eight pounds (of water weight) during a hard run in summer," Attas said. "But it all comes back as soon as you replace your fluid."

Summertime is no time to try to suddenly double your usual workout.

"The most common sense advice is to always exercise within your limits and to pace your distance," Attas said. "Don't go out on a hot day and run four or five miles if you're only used to doing two or three."

Instead, gradually work your way up to the longer distance, a little at a time.

Above all, summer exercisers should be on the lookout for signs of heat exhaustion or heat stroke. The first signs are dizziness and lightheadedness. Attas said a danger sign is the sudden stopping of perspiration with goose bumps.

"If you find you're sweating — and then all of a sudden, you're not sweating and you feel chilled, that's a pending heatstroke," he warned. Should that happen, quit your run and seek medical help immediately.

EPILEPSY: Disorder varies

would cause the problem, such as hypoglycemia.

Seizure-induced behaviors vary widely. They can include hallucinations of smells and sounds, distortions of sensory stimuli, momentary jerks or head nods, staring with loss of awareness and convulsive movements lasting minutes or hours.

The frequency and timing of seizures is generally unpredictable. But some may be triggered by such factors as sleep, emotional stress, illness and flashing lights.

The need for medications varies according to the intensity, type and frequency of the seizure. Often, if a child has had only one seizure, medication may not be given in favor of careful monitoring by a doctor and parents.

As a child matures, he or she tends to have fewer seizures and most grow out of the condition completely. The reasons for this are unclear.

In some cases, medications may be required for seizure control, but advances in medications often help reduce the side effects of drug therapy.

Common medications used to control seizures include carbamazepine, phenytoin, ethosuximide, phenobarbital and valporic acid. The exact medication selected for use — and its dosage — is individually adjusted because of the varied way medications are absorbed and metabolized among children.

Medications for seizure control can have side effects, such as nausea, double vision and fatigue. But several newer medications may produce fewer side effects and lessen the frequency for blood tests.

Surgery is considered only if seizures cannot be controlled through medications, or if the side effects of medications severely affect a child's quality of life. Surgical treatment for childhood epilepsy is being used more frequently and often with excellent results.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

New salsa is spicy, flavorful

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

Sometimes I wonder why anyone wants to explore new territories when there's so many interesting new things to discover at the supermarket.

I was drifting down the store's aisles one day when I discovered a whole shelf full of products called Arriba! (with the exclamation point). I'm sure you can tell by the name that these products were part of a new line of Mexican foods — specifically, salsas — that came in all kinds of flavors and several colors, including red, green and yellow (that was the queso). I bought a jar of Arriba! Autentica Chipotle Salsa (Medium-Hot) and took it home to give it a try.

A 16-ounce jar of the Chipotle Salsa cost $2.39, which is pretty much what the jars of the other products cost too.

Advertising information on the label goes like this: "Satisfaction Guaranteed.

"Arriba! Salsas are made with fresh vegetables which are flame roasted over an open grille. This process creates the blackspecs yousee in the salsas.

"Our chipotle salsa combines this process with the unique flavor of a chipotle pepper — a dried and smoked jalapeno pepper.It is a taste you will remember — and love!"

The manufacturer's address revealed the company is based in Houston, so there won't be any of those "New York City!" worries about this product.

As the resident salsa lover at my house, I had this taste-test all to myself. And I have to admit, I loved it. It was just spicy enough without being impossibly hot, and tasted wonderful on my burrito. I sat in my living room, ate the Arriba!-flavored burrito and watched "Sleepless in Seattle." And the salsa was only part of the reason tears were running down my cheeks.

It was wonderful.

DEAR ABBY

Each written thank-you helps to bind wounds of grief

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in response to the letter signed "Still Grieving." The writer cannot believe that anyone would expect a grieving person to acknowledge floral tributes, memorials, etc. My husband and I also buried two children: One was 18, the other was 20. They died two months apart of unrelated causes.

Van Buren

Abby, you are so right when you say that such a double blow is more than the human spirit should be expected to endure. However, I found that writing those excruciatingly painful acknowledgments was therapeutic. I wrote notes to everyone, telling them how I felt. I cried with each note, thus ventilating my grief. Those who received my notes were very appreciative and understanding.

It has been almost 20 years since our children died, and like "Still Grieving," we, too, are — and always will be — grieving to some extent, but we have to go on with our lives and learn to live with our loss. We couldn't have existed permanently with such searing pain. It has taken many years, and we have built new lives, which certainly include the memories of our deceased children.

"Still Grieving" need not give up one iota of the essence of her children. She can have them with her in all their beauty and sweetness forever. And the more she is able to live her life rather than simply exist in it, the more she will be able to exemplify what her children would want. Her life can be a tribute to them. I wish her peace. — STILL GRIEVING IN MICHIGAN

DEAR STILL GRIEVING: Only those who have experienced the tragedy of having lost a child will appreciate the depth of such indescribable pain. But, thank God, it does become more tolerable with each passing day.

Many other readers also wrote to say that they found writing thank-you notes very therapeutic. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: "Still Grieving" wrote concerning thank-you notes for flowers sent at the time of death: "There is absolutely nothing you can say that will make me believe that all those people who sent flowers and cards expect a thank-you note."

Abby, thank-you notes have more than one purpose. Yes, they acknowledge the gift and the giver, but I learned the grieving process is enhanced as you express your thanks, praise another's thoughtfulness and show your appreciation.

I wrote some 500 notes of thanks after our son took his own life. I found that expressing our thanks over and over for the kindness of others helped me through my grieving.

May I suggest that it's not too late for "Still Grieving" to write a few thank-you notes? Thanks, praise and appreciation are timeless. — MARGE Z. IN TOLEDO, IOWA

DEAR ABBY: I could not believe that anyone would think it was inappropriate to wear a military uniform to a formal wedding. Those people would have been quite upset had they attended my wedding. When my police officer husband and I were married in 1972, even though his groomsmen were police officers, we chose tuxedos for their attire.

However, on the morning of our wedding, my husband-to-be was advised that a protest march was to take place downtown, so members of the riot squad were put on alert. This meant they had to wear their uniforms to our wedding.

At first my husband was quite upset, thinking that some of the guests might think ours was a "shotgun" wedding, which it most certainly was not. Then he saw the humor in it — and we still laugh about it to this day! — DEBORAH BURKE IN DALLAS

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "special allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Midland Freshman area.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for anyone willing to work early morning hours. These routes require a small deposit.
