Crude oil in storage is highest in decades

Drop in refinery output also a contributing factor to oversupply

By Robert Grattan
Houston Chronicle

Crude oil traders and producers put millions of barrels of oil in storage last week, sending crude inventories to their highest level in more than three decades and prompting another drop in oil prices.

Stocks increased by 8.87 million barrels to 406.7 million, excluding crude stored in the U.S. strategic petroleum reserve, according to the U.S. Energy Information Administration's report for the week ending Friday. That's the most in records compiled since 1982.

Analysts surveyed by Bloomberg had projected a much lower increase, with their estimates averaging 3.85 million.

The week before last, inventories rose by 10.1 million barrels. Both weekly buildups were among the largest ever for mid-January, according to data from the Energy Department agency.

"It's crazy," said Carl Larry, an analyst at Frost & Sullivan. "It's just not stopping. This is one of the largest back-to-back weeks of crude builds that we've seen."

U.S. shale production, coupled with a decision by OPEC to keep its production steady, has led to a global oil glut and prices that have fallen by more than half since July.

Oil companies are responding to the plunge in price with budget cuts and layoffs. London-based BP said Wednesday that it has cut an unspecified number of workers in the Houston area — two days

Formal motion to dismiss expected Monday

By Joe Basco

A formal motion to dismiss the Nov. 15, 2012, train wreck trial may come on Monday.

441st District Judge Rodney Satterwhite said Friday morning that he was instructed by presiding Judge James Rush to inform media who went to the Midland County Courthouse on Friday that the jury has been dismissed. Satterwhite was also told that any pending motions from Rush will be made on Monday.

The train wreck trial has been taking place in the 441st District courtroom, but Rush, from Ector County, has been presiding over this case.

Satterwhite had recused himself from the train wreck lawsuit and was not involved in any of the trial proceedings this week.

One such proceeding included the closed door meeting on Thursday, where Rush allegedly told attorneys on both sides that he will be dismissing the jury trial, according to multiple sources with knowledge of the trial who did not want to be named.

Once the dismissal is filed in the District Clerk's Office, plaintiffs plan to file an appeal in the 11th Court of Appeals in Eastland, according to the unnamed sources.

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin decreased 27 this week to 454, according to the weekly rotary rig count released Friday by Houston-based oilfield service company Baker Hughes.

In District 8, which includes Midland and Ector counties, there were 275 rigs, down 10 from last week and 39 fewer than the first rig count of the month, marking a 12.42 percent drop. The Permian Basin's count was down 76 rigs, or 14.34 percent, this month, or 14.34 percent.

At this time last year, there were 481 rigs in the Permian Basin and 842 in Texas. The state shed 145 rigs this month, a 17.26 percent decrease.

The U.S. count fell 90 rigs this week, leaving a nationwide total of 1,543. There were 1,223 oil rigs, down 94; 319 natural gas rigs, up three; and one rig listed as miscellaneous, up one.

By trajectory, there were 235 vertical drilling rigs, down 23; 1,168 horizontal drilling rigs, down 61; and 140 directional drilling rigs, down six.

The U.S. had 1,785 rigs a year ago this week.

The top five basins by rig count were the Permian; the Eagle Ford; the Williston with 148, down five; the Marcellus with 75, down one; and the Mississippian with 54, down nine.

The top five states were Texas; Oklahoma with 183, down 10; North Dakota with 143, down four; Louisiana with 108, down two; and New Mexico with 87, down two.

Abbott urges civility after Muslim rally, remarks

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Republican Gov. Greg Abbott said Friday that "we must have civil discourse" after a freshman Texas lawmaker instructed her staff to ask Muslims who were visiting the state Capitol to declare their allegiance to America.

Abbott did not specifically mention Republican state Rep. Molly White, who drew criticism Thursday after she put an Israeli flag in her Capitol office and told aides they should ask Muslims to renounce Islamic terrorist groups.

White publicized her plans on Facebook before hundreds of Muslims arrived at the Capitol for their biennial lobbying day, but she was not in the building on Thursday.

"We must have civil, open debate of hotly contested issues in this state. Texas values are strong enough that we can have a civil discourse about issues like this," Abbott said.

Ten days into office, Abbott met with reporters after speaking at a Texas Veterans of Foreign Wars Convention in Austin. He received a raucous and warm welcome from veterans to end a sometimes rocky week for Texas Republicans over missteps of their own doing.

The Muslim rally at the Capitol on Thursday coincided with a meeting between supporters of open-carry gun laws and aides to new Republican Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick. The powerful Senate leader surprised conservatives this week when he said there may not be the votes to legalize open carry in Texas, an issue that many Republicans believed was a slam-dunk this session.

The Muslim rally attracted a small but vocal group of protesters, and organizers with the Council on American-Islamic relations said it was the first time the decade-old event drew opposition.

Palin to return to Midland

■ Former Alaska governor to discuss how women are showing 21st century leadership

From staff reports

UTPB's John Ben Shepperd Public Leadership Institute is hosting a lecture featuring former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin on Feb. 12 at the Wagner Noël Performing Arts Center.

As part of the Shepperd Distinguished Lecture Series, Palin, the former Republican vice presidential candidate, will address the topic, "Groundbreakers, Mavericks and Trailblazers: How Women are showing 21st Century Leadership."

The lecture is free and open to the public and begins at 7 p.m. The event will be co-moderated by Patrick Canty, publisher of the Odessa American, and Robert Brescia, executive director of the JBS Leadership Institute.

In March 2010, Palin came to Midland to pitch conservative ideology at an event at the Petroleum Club, followed by a presentation the next day at the Commemorative Air Force.

Palin is currently the host of the television show "Amazing America" on The Sportsman Channel.

Her lecture will examine and illuminate how women continue to exercise great leadership in action. The discussion will examine characteristics and demands of 21st century leadership and talk about how women are meeting those challenges, according to a press release from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

For more information about the Shepperd Distinguished Lecture, contact the Shepperd Institute at 432-552-2850 or visit www.http://aa.utpb.edu/jbs-leadership-institute/.

Officials: Man arrested after exposing himself to female library patron

From staff reports

A man was taken into custody Friday afternoon after allegedly exposing himself to a female patron at Midland County Public Library's downtown location, according to city and county officials.

After the man pulled down he pants and exposed himself, he allegedly approached the female patron and touched her shoulder, said city spokeswoman Sara Bustilloz. The woman declined to press charges because "she thought he had mental health issues," but Bustilloz said police arrested the man because he failed to properly identify himself.

Bustilloz said the man was undergoing a mental health evaluation Friday.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter confirmed that both deputies and police officers responded to the incident. Library officials declined to comment.

Lawsuit: Exploding air bag killed man

By Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press

HOUSTON — The family of a Texas man who died in a minor traffic accident is alleging in a lawsuit that their loved one is the latest person to be killed by shrapnel shooting out of exploding air bags made by Takata Corp. of Japan.

Carlos Solis, 35, died on Jan. 18 in a minor crash in a Houston suburb. A lawsuit filed this week by his family alleges that when an air bag in his 2002 Honda Accord inflated, it sent a piece of metal into his neck. Solis died at the scene.

Takata is under fire for air bag inflators that can explode, shooting out metal and plastic pieces. At least five deaths and dozens of injuries have been linked to the problem worldwide. Ten automakers have recalled about 12 million vehicles in the U.S. and about 19 million globally for problems with the air bags. The company is still trying to determine the cause of the problem.

Solis' death has not been officially linked to the faulty air bags. A preliminary report by the Harris County Institute of Forensic Sciences lists Solis' cause of death as "blunt force injuries of the neck." But a final autopsy report has not yet been completed.

April Strahan, one of the attorneys representing Solis' family, said that she and representatives of Honda and Takata inspected the Honda Accord on Friday and confirmed that the Takata air bag's inflator ruptured in the accident.

While the autopsy report is still pending, the "injuries we have seen that result in fatalities in these accidents (are) consistent with what we are seeing with evidence in (Friday's) vehicle inspection," Strahan said.

In a statement, American Honda said that Friday's inspection confirmed that the air bag inflator ruptured in Solis' vehicle.

"Our thoughts and deepest sympathies are with the family of the driver during this difficult time. Honda is currently in communication with representatives of the family in an effort to further investigate the situation and to address their concerns," the company said in its statement.

Honda has said it mailed recall notification letters to the previous owner of the Accord starting in 2011, but it had not yet sent a letter to the current owner.

Judge: Funeral home wrongly sold Lee Harvey Oswald's casket

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — A funeral home that sold Lee Harvey Oswald's pine casket for $87,468 must return it to the accused presidential assassin's brother, a judge ruled Friday.

Robert Oswald had bought the pine bluff casket for his brother, whose body was exhumed in 1981 amid conspiracy theories that it did not contain Lee Harvey Oswald's body. After a Dallas hospital confirmed the body through dental records, it was reburied, but not in the original casket, which was too water-damaged.

Oswald's family says it thought the original casket had been thrown away, but the funeral home actually kept it in storage before selling it at auction — along with Lee Harvey Oswald's death certificate and the embalming tools and table used in his burial — to an anonymous buyer.

Oswald's brother, Robert, sued Baumgardner Funeral Home after it sold the coffin through an auction house in Santa Monica, California. The auction house still has the coffin, because the lawsuit had put the sale of the coffin on hold. The sale was never completed, the judgment says.

In addition to returning the casket to Robert Oswald, the funeral home must pay him $87,468 in damages, a Tarrant County judge ruled, saying its conduct was "wrongful, wanton and malicious."

It also must pay the auction house more than $10,000 in storage fees.

The funeral home also must cover the expense of transporting the coffin from California to Texas, where the family plans to destroy it, according to Oswald's attorney, Gant Grimes.

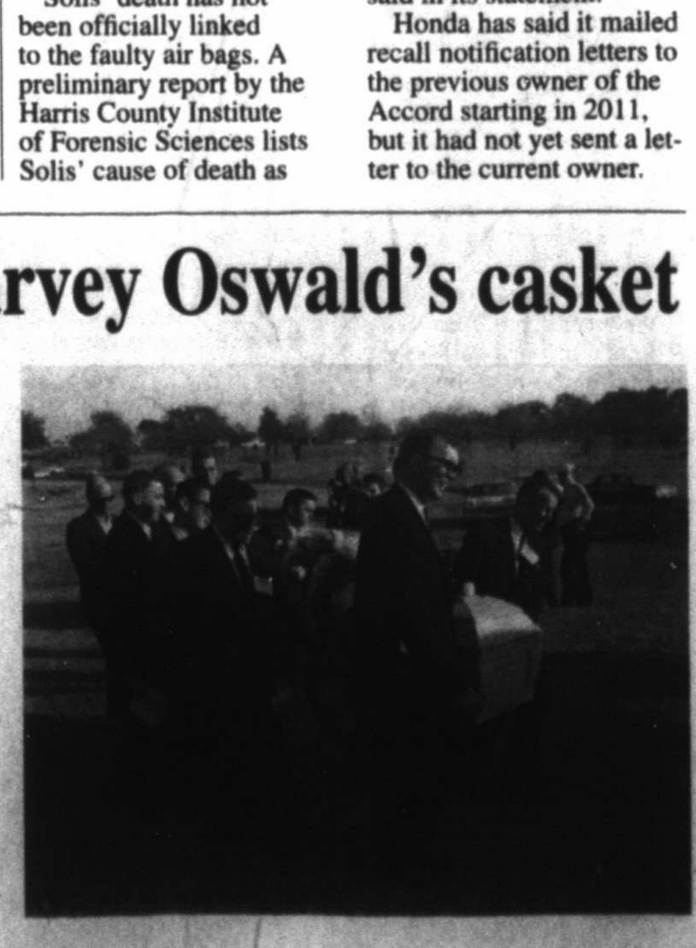

Photo: Reporters who were enlisted to act as pall bearers at the interment of Lee Harvey Oswald carry his casket at the Shannon Rose Hill Cemetery in Fort Worth. A Tarrant County judge Friday said the original casket in which Lee Harvey Oswald was buried belongs to Oswald's brother, not the funeral home that auctioned it off for more than $87,000. The judge ordered the funeral home to pay the same amount of money in damages to Robert Oswald, saying its conduct was "malicious and wanton." AP file photo

Students forced to drop pants after feces found in gym

Officials say two North Texas school administrators are on leave after elementary students were forced to pull down their pants in class in efforts to find out who left feces in the gym.

Parents said the administrators separated the fourth- and fifth-grade boys from girls Monday and checked their underwear for evidence linking them to the mess on the gym floor.

WFAA-TV reported that some parents raised concerns at a board meeting Thursday night that the administrators went too far, while others said they did their best under the circumstances.

The Gustine Unified School District said two administrators are on leave following the incident. The superintendent is investigating the matter.

Councilman draws ire over Hitler video spoof

A Galveston city councilman said he didn't mean to cause offense when he played an Adolf Hitler spoof video during a public meeting that was carried live on TV and online.

The video that Norman Pappous played during a city council workshop Wednesday on rewriting land-use rules made light of bureaucracy. The clip, taken from the 2004 movie "Downfall," shows an actor portraying the German dictator ranting in the waning days of the Third Reich. Hundreds of parody videos have been created from this clip, carrying usually amusing English subtitles that veer away from the original script.

"I have nothing to apologize for," Pappous told the Houston Chronicle on Thursday.

The meeting was broadcast live via Galveston's municipal cable TV channel and streamed online.

"I thought it was pathetic, and I thought it was offensive to anyone who lost family during the Holocaust," said former Galveston Mayor Lewis Rosen.

A recording of the broadcast is usually posted on the city's website. City spokeswoman Kala McCain told the Galveston County Daily News that the video was removed following complaints.

"It is available at the city secretary's office," McCain said.

Mayor Jim Yarbrough said he'll apologize at an upcoming council meeting for allowing the nearly five-minute video to be played.

"I truly believe it was just a spoof and a parody on our (planning) process and our City Council," Yarbrough said. "But pictures of Hitler and his inner circle group is something that shouldn't have continued."

Exxon Mobil updates anti-discrimination employment policy

Exxon Mobil Corp. has updated its corporate policies to protect employees from discrimination for sexual orientation or gender identity.

Spokesman Allan Jeffers said Friday that the Irving-based oil giant added these protections to comply with federal law.

In July, President Barack Obama signed an executive order that expanded protections for gay and transgender employees of federal contractors.

Exxon Mobil, which has federal contracts worth millions of dollars, had said it would comply with the order but wouldn't say if it would formalize that with revised corporate policies.

The company had maintained that its stated zero-tolerance standards ensured protections without having to specify them.

Deena Fidas of the Human Rights Campaign called the update a "calibrated response" to maintain Exxon's federal contracts.

Rick Perry's attorneys again seek dismissal of felony case

Former Gov. Rick Perry's legal team for the third time is seeking to have felony abuse-of-power charges against him quashed.

Attorneys filed a motion Friday raising minor but potentially key legal issues about the case. That came three days after state Judge Bert Richardson refused to void the matter on constitutional grounds.

Richardson ruled it was premature to determine constitutionality. He has previously refused to toss the case on technicalities.

But the judge also raised concerns about the language of the indictments. Perry's attorneys seized on that to file their latest motion to dismiss the case.

They also are appealing Richardson's decision letting the case continue to an Austin-based appeals court.

Perry left office Jan. 20 but plans to announce as soon as May an expected run for president.

North Texas city orders closure of alleged swingers club

Operators of an alleged swingers club in an upscale North Texas neighborhood have been told to halt the adult house parties.

Arlington city officials on Wednesday cited zoning issues and ordered a stop to parties at the nearly $500,000 house, dubbed Eutopia.

Neighbors complained about parties since last May. The home's front lawn was paved to allow parking for as many as 70 vehicles.

City officials said the site advertises online and is a commercial business providing food, beverages and condoms in the single-family residential area.

David Esopenko, who leases the house, said Thursday it's not a swingers club and he'll appeal. He says the weekend parties are geared toward people more open with their lifestyles.

He says there are no employees and visitors are not charged.

Donations are accepted.

Gov. Abbott declares Feb. 2 'Chris Kyle Day' in Texas

Republican Gov. Greg Abbott says he is declaring Feb. 2 as "Chris Kyle Day" in Texas to honor the late U.S. serviceman whose life is depicted in the blockbuster film "American Sniper."

Abbott made the announcement Friday while speaking to a Texas Veterans of Foreign Wars Convention in Austin. Hundreds of veterans in a hotel ballroom greeted the news with a standing ovation.

Kyle's hometown was the Fort Worth suburb of Midlothian. He was 37 when he was killed in 2013 at a North Texas gun range. A former Marine charged in his death goes on trial in Stephenville next month.

Abbott said the state will commemorate Kyle's life on Monday.

Kyle did four tours in Iraq and is considered to be the deadliest sniper in U.S. military history.

State names interim head of Department of Health Services

The Texas Department of State Health Services has named an interim commissioner to temporarily replace David Lakey, who helped coordinate state response to the first case of Ebola in the U.S.

The department announced Friday that its associated commissioner, Kirk Cole, will replace Lakey effective Sunday.

Forthcoming is the appointment of a chief medical executive licensed to practice medicine, who will advise Cole on health issues.

Lakey was in charge of the department when Liberian Thomas Duncan was confirmed to have Ebola and later died in Dallas. Lakey announced his resignation Jan. 7 and joined the University of Texas System.

His stepping down wasn't related to an ongoing no-bid contract scandal at Health and Human Services that has prompted the resignation of several officials.

Former Waco High School assistant band director Jason Hodges is charged with having an inappropriate teacher-student relationship, indecency with a child and possession of marijuana.

The Waco Tribune-Herald reported school officials say they first learned of the accusations against Hodges on Jan. 12, and that he resigned the same day.

Police: Officer shot; suspect killed

Fort Worth police say that after an officer responding to a call at a home was shot, other officers returned fire, killing the shooter.

Interim Police Chief Rhonda Robertson said the officer, a 19-year veteran, was in stable condition after the shooting Thursday night. He was shot at least once.

A statement from Corporal Tracey Knight said officers went to the home around 6:15 p.m. after a residential panic alarm call. But the homeowner told the officers the alarm appeared false.

The statement said officers were dispatched to the same home a half hour later after the homeowner asked for help with a welfare check involving her adult son.

Tracey said when officers attempted to check on him, the man opened fire, hitting the officer. The other officers returned fire, fatally injuring him.

Man gets nearly 7 years, must repay $4.6M in Ponzi scam

A North Texas man must serve nearly seven years in federal prison and repay $4.6 million for running an oil and gas Ponzi scheme.

Jeffrey Watts of Fort Worth was sentenced Thursday. The 41-year-old Watts last July pleaded guilty to wire fraud in a scheme operating since 2011.

Prosecutors said Watts, who was arrested last May in Eugene, Oregon, presented himself as the founder of a company named Blue Alpha Energy.

Watts claimed to be making investments with another legitimate firm, but instead funneled the money to sham accounts and businesses.

Investigators said Watts duped more than 40 investors, plus several business partners and employees who believed the operations were legitimate.

Mexican man gets life term over immigrants held in city

A Mexican man has been sentenced to life in a U.S. prison for leading a human smuggling ring that held more than 20 immigrants hostage in Houston.

Samuel Castro-Flores was sentenced Thursday in Houston.

Castro-Flores last March was convicted of 18 counts including conspiracy to commit hostage taking, hostage taking and other charges involving smuggling immigrants and firearms.

Prosecutors said Castro-Flores led a group responsible for stashing more than two dozen immigrants at a locked home with boarded windows. The victims, who were rescued on Sept. 7, 2012, were under armed guard and threatened amid extortion demands to their relatives.

Land Commissioner George P. Bush takes part in a school choice rally at the Capitol on Friday in Austin. School choice supporters called for expanding voucher programs and charter schools statewide.

George P. Bush adds star power to 'school choice' rally

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

AUSTIN — New state Land Commissioner George P. Bush lent national star power to Friday's rally supporting school vouchers and charter schools, initiatives championed by top Texas conservatives that have previously stalled in the Republican-controlled Legislature.

Organizers promised the "largest ever" rally on the issue, but the crowd of teachers, students, activists — even a school marching band — on the Capitol steps looked to only number in the hundreds.

The son of possible 2016 presidential hopeful Jeb Bush, George P. Bush is a former public school teacher in Miami and served on the board of one of Texas' largest charter school operators. His office oversees Texas' Permanent School Fund, which helps pay classroom costs and which recently surpassed a Harvard University fund as the nation's largest educational endowment.

Bush promised to use his "voice and the platform of the Permanent School Fund to encourage more education reform" statewide, adding that "school choice must be a part of that conversation."

"The majority of our students are trapped in schools that are underperforming," said Bush, who switched gracefully between English and Spanish. "Some schools don't work and refuse to change, and that's why we need school choice."

Many at the rally wore "National School Choice Week" scarfs, and Friday's was one of many similar gatherings being held throughout the country. One of the organizers of Texas' event was the Libre Initiative, a national group funded by the conservative mega-donor Koch Brothers to woo Hispanics to conservative causes.

New Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick likens school choice to the civil rights movement and says low-income parents should be able to remove their children from struggling public schools and get state money so they can afford private alternatives.

Last legislative session, lawmakers dramatically overhauled public education, including approving a major expansion of charter schools. About 200,000 students attend 600-plus charter schools statewide, though supporters say more than 100,000 others are on waitlists.

Meanwhile, much-ballyhooed voucher proposals died when lawmakers passed a bipartisan resolution to keep public funding in public schools. Democrats often partner with rural Republicans who fear hurting their district's traditional schools.

A key Patrick ally, state Sen. Donna Campbell, attended Friday's rally and said the traditional public school system is "a tragedy created by government."

Teachers unions and civil organizations counter that fixing struggling public schools shouldn't involve siphoning funding away for private alternatives. Jimmie Chadwell, superintendent of Eagle Mountain-Saginaw school district, north of Fort Worth, said that while private schools often can select who they educate, public schools take all comers — even kids from the most problematic of backgrounds.

"Most conversation about our public schools tends to be negative," Chadwell said in a phone interview. "Not because it's based upon facts but because it's about extremes."

RIG COUNT

From 1A

In the U.S., there were 1,482 rigs on land, down 86; 12 in land waters, up one; and 49 offshore, down five. There were 47 rigs in the Gulf of Mexico, down six.

after announcing a pay freeze affecting most of its 80,000 employees worldwide. Other producers and oil field services companies also have announced thousands of layoffs this month.

Further contributing to the oversupply is a recent drop in refinery output.

Refineries processed about 15.3 million barrels per day last week ago, 88 percent of their capacity, up from the previous week's 85.5 percent, but down from the 90 percent levels common in previous months.

Less crude demand by refineries means more goes into storage tanks, said Michael Cohen, an analyst at investment bank Barclays. And with refineries nearing the start of scheduled winter maintenance, their oil use could fall even further, he said.

Oil market strategies also have contributed to the build of crude oil, which is less valuable now than traders expect it to be in the future.

Benchmark U.S. crude — a contract for delivery of West Texas Intermediate next month — fell to $44.45 per barrel, the lowest since March 2009, before rebounding slightly.

But contracts further in the future set higher prices.

When the futures market shows higher prices, investors can make money by purchasing oil and putting it in storage under contract for sale later, said Morgan Downey, commodities trader and author of "Oil 101."

That works until the price for storing oil becomes higher than the value it gains. Storage prices rise as tanks fill, Downey said.

As storage capacity becomes tighter, traders sometimes turn to floating storage, paying for tankers to fill their holds and sit at anchor. That's already happening internationally as storage costs rise, Downey said.

US mulls Middle East-North Africa category for 2020 Census

By Jeff Karoub
Associated Press

DETROIT — The federal government is considering allowing those of Middle Eastern and North African descent to identify as such on the next 10-year Census, which could give Arab-Americans and other affected groups greater political clout and access to public funding, among other things.

The U.S. Census Bureau will test the new Middle East-North Africa (MENA) classification for possible inclusion on the 2020 Census if it gets enough positive feedback about the proposed change by Sunday, when the public comment period ends.

Arab-Americans, who make up the majority of those who would be covered by the MENA classification, have previously been classified by default as white on the Census, which helps determine congressional district boundaries and how billions of dollars in federal funding are allocated, among other things.

Those pushing for the MENA classification say it would more fully and accurately count them, thus increasing their visibility and influence among policymakers.

The Census Bureau plans to test it later this year by holding focus group discussions with people who would be affected by the proposed change. Congress would still have to sign off on the proposal before the change could be added to the 2020 Census.

"We know the challenges," said Hassan Jaber, who runs a Detroit-area social services group and serves on a census advisory board formed to evaluate Americans' changing racial and ethnic identities. "It really does take rethinking ... who we are as a population and what our needs are, (but) there are specific needs for Arab Americans that are not being recognized and not being met."

Associated Press

Hassan Jaber, executive director of ACCESS and a member of a Census advisory board on racial and ethnic populations is shown in Dearborn, Mich., photographed on Thursday. Arab Americans seeking to be counted by the Census are making progress on the policy front but still face political and public obstacles. A proposed "Middle Eastern or North African" category on the 2020 Census is expected to be tested nationally later this year, and the bureau is currently inviting comments on the collection of this and other information.

Jaber's group, ACCESS, and others that serve U.S. Middle Eastern communities have been pushing for the new Census classification, which could also allow people to identify under sub-categories such as Assyrian or Kurdish.

"Frankly, being under MENA will also give us a chance for the first time for minorities within the Arab communities, such as Chaldeans, Berbers and Kurds, to self-identify," said Jaber, a Lebanese-American who serves on the U.S. Census' National Advisory Committee on Racial, Ethnic and Other Populations.

Arabs have been coming to America in large numbers since the late 19th century and their ranks have grown in recent decades due to wars and political instability in the Middle East, with many settling in and around Detroit, New York and Los Angeles. The Census' 2013 American Community Survey, which had a sample size of about 3 million addresses, estimated that 1.5 million people were of Arab ancestry in 2006-10.

Although Jaber thinks the public comment and testing periods should go well, he said it could be difficult getting congressional approval. Some Republican lawmakers are generally critical of the expense and intrusion of the Census and have sought to eliminate the community surveys, which, unlike the main decennial count, aren't constitutionally mandated.

There also isn't universal support for the proposed Census change among those who could identify as Middle Eastern or North African.

Some have expressed concern about sharing such information with the government in a post-9/11 world. And some have said that keeping the status quo would let them feel more American.

"I'm not for it. ... I feel I'm a Mayflower American," said Eide Alawan, a 74-year-old son of a Syrian immigrant whose roots are mostly Arab.

Alawan, a diversity liaison at a Detroit hospital and interfaith outreach coordinator at the area's largest mosque, said he knows there are benefits to having the category, but that he thinks the change would be divisive.

"We're broken down into villages and countries (where we come from)" — I don't like that."

Some older Middle Eastern immigrants or their descendants live with the legacy of U.S. laws in the early 20th century that excluded Asians from entry and at one point included Syrians and others from the eastern Mediterranean. Groups were formed to fight those decisions and eventually the Middle Eastern immigrants were deemed white and were allowed to become citizens.

Sally Howell, an associate professor at University of Michigan-Dearborn and author of several books on Arabs and Muslims in Detroit, said that argument is common among "people that were raised in an America that was more polarized along black and white lines." But she added younger people generally are "less eager to see the world in those binary terms," and the Census should reflect that.

No matter what happens, identity would remain a choice, but she said an evolving population requires asking new questions.

Balloon crew makes history crossing Pacific Ocean

By Susan Montoya Bryan
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A pair of American and Russian pilots has traveled farther and longer in a gas balloon than anyone in history, trying to eliminate any remaining debate over a century of records in long-distance ballooning.

The Two Eagles pilots surpassed the distance and duration records that have held since the 1970s and 1980s, and were aiming Friday for a safe landing somewhere on a beach in Mexico's Baja California peninsula.

Troy Bradley of Albuquerque and Leonid Tiukhtyaev of Russia lifted off from Japan on Sunday morning, and by Friday, they beat what's considered the "holy grail" of ballooning achievements, the 137-hour duration record set in 1978 by the Double Eagle crew of Ben Abruzzo, Maxie Anderson and Larry Newman in the first balloon flight across the Atlantic.

By Friday afternoon, the Two Eagles team had been in the air more than 143 hours and was smashing the distance record, having traveled more than 6,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean.

"The technology has improved so much in the last couple of years. I don't think there's going to be any question about the records," said Katie Griggs, a regional director with the nonprofit Balloon Federation of America.

Associated Press

From left, pilots Troy Bradley of Albuquerque, N.M., and Leonid Tiukhtyaev of Russia smile Jan. 8 before they lift off in a gas balloon in Saga, Japan. The Two Eagles pilots have traveled farther and longer in a gas balloon than anyone in history in a bid to remove the qualifiers that have complicated a century of record keeping in long-distance ballooning. Now they're aiming for a safe landing on the beaches of Baja California.

The world has been tracking their progress online and through social media sites. Still, the official distance and time of the Two Eagles flight must be confirmed by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, which requires staying aloft 1 percent longer and farther than the previous record.

The balloon is outfitted with an array of monitors and other instruments that are tracking its course and compiling the data, using technology that didn't exist in decades past, leaving some claims unproven.

Their first target was the official distance record of 5,209 miles set by the Double Eagle V team during the first trans-Pacific flight in 1981. They surpassed that on Thursday.

The journey has been tough on the pilots, who have been on oxygen for days; high altitude can take a physical toll. But they've been managing to crack jokes when checking in with mission control and their families.

The flight's mission control director, Steve Shope, said their priority now is getting the balloon to a safe landing after bad weather along the U.S. West Coast forced them to make a sharp right turn toward Mexico.

More measles cases found in California

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — More measles cases have been found in California, health officials said Friday.

Figures released by the California Department of Public Health showed there are now 91 confirmed cases in the state, up from 79 on Wednesday.

Of those, 58 infections have been linked to visits to Disneyland or contact with a sick person who went there.

Mexico and at least six other U.S. states — Utah, Washington, Colorado, Oregon, Nebraska and Arizona — also have recorded measles cases connected to Disneyland.

The outbreak, which originated at Disney theme parks last month, is spreading to the broader community.

Measles, which is spread through the air, is highly contagious. Symptoms include fever, runny nose and a blotchy rash.

Mexico cuts spending by $8.4 billion due to oil price drop

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Mexico said Friday it will cut government spending by $8.4 billion this year because of a drop in revenues due to declining oil prices.

Finance Minister Luis Videgaray said the government will put on hold plans for a high-speed rail project that has been marred by allegations of favoritism.

Mexico has seen prices for its oil fall in recent months from around $100 to $38.42 per barrel. The government relies on oil revenues for about a third of its budget.

The cuts, to be borne mainly by the state-owned oil and electricity companies, are equivalent to about 0.7 percent of Mexico's GDP.

Labs testing Yellowstone River fish after oil spil

By Brett French
Associated Press

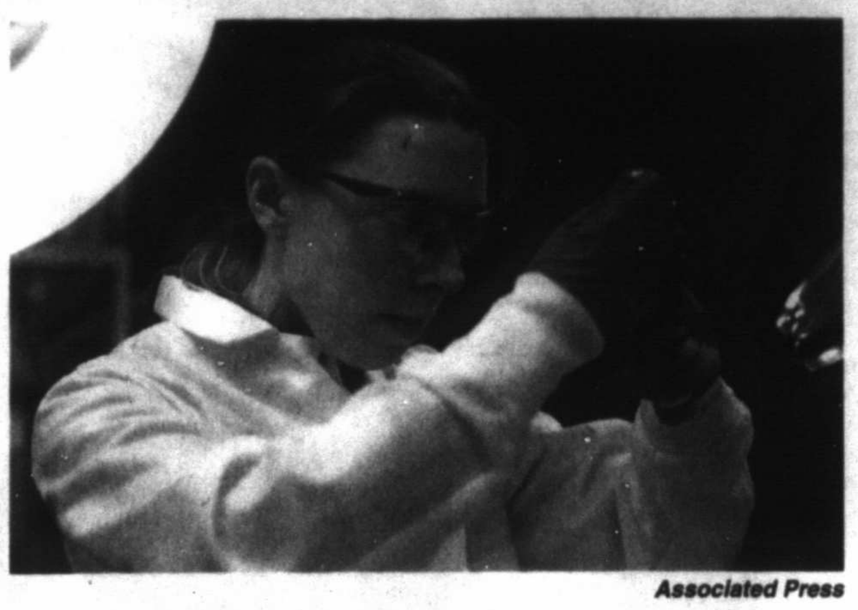
BILLINGS, Mont. — In two laboratories on Billings' South Side, tissue samples taken from fish netted in the area of the Yellowstone River oil spill near Glendive are being analyzed to determine their exposure to the toxic hydrocarbons.

An estimated 30,000 gallons of unprocessed crude oil seeped into the river from a broken pipeline under the riverbed on Jan. 17. Crude oil contains a variety of hydrocarbons — some light, some heavy — that have to be extracted and analyzed using different techniques, explained Bill Brown, president of Energy Laboratories.

"We're just lab geeks; we don't take the samples," Brown said. "We leave it to biologists to determine how representative the samples are that they want to send us."

"We have no idea if we're getting samples from above or below the spill, and no idea of what fish it is from," he added.

Biologists put the tissue samples into small glass jars that are cooled for transport. The jars are kept in coolers to minimize volatilization of the chemicals because some of the lighter hydrocarbons can easily vaporize.



Associated Press

Energy Laboratories analytic chemist Josie Pickard works with a sample of fish being tested on Thursday in the wake of the oil spill on the Yellowstone River near Glendive, Mont.

"The samples' integrity is huge for us," said Jeff Blatnick, an analytical chemist at the lab. "They have a custody seal so we know there's been no tampering."

The fish samples, however, were hand-delivered by the client, so no custody seals were involved.

Energy Laboratories has done similar sampling in the past, but the company has a diversified clientele, everything from municipal water and sewage treatment facilities to the Environmental Protection Agency and mining companies.

For any of those laboratory analyses requested by clients, Brown said the company's chemists always "keep their blinders on" about what they are testing, and may not even know where the samples are coming from.

So even with a topic as emotional as a river oil spill that temporarily contaminated Glendive's water supply, analytical chemist Josie Pickard said she and her fellow employees make sure everything is done with the same integrity, no matter the issue.

To further ensure technical quality, there are several quality assurance samples that follow each tested sample through the process. For example, a quality assurance sample called a method blank is extracted and tested with the sample to measure any background constituents that could have contaminated the sample while in the lab.

Energy Laboratories employs about 100 people at its Billings facilities, a company that Brown said has been around in one form or another since 1952. Since the 1980s and the advancement of computer technology, though, what the lab is capable of processing is considerably more finely detailed than in those earlier years.

Dating himself, Brown said he can remember using "Trash 80" personal computers, made by Radio Shack, for "anything we could figure out how to hook them up to." As computers and their operating systems have become continually more complicated and capable, the tasks the machines perform for chemists has become more and more specific and detailed.

Government sells scandalized Teapot Dome oilfield for $45M

By Mead Gruver
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — A private company finally will be able to drill legally for oil at Teapot Dome, a remote Wyoming oil field that remains best known for a political scandal that embroiled the administration of President Warren G. Harding in the early 1920s.

The Energy Department announced Friday that it had finalized the sale of the 9,481-acre Teapot Dome oil field to New York-based Stranded Oil Resources Corporation for $45.2 million. Stranded Oil was the highest of nine bidders last fall.

Most of the easily accessible oil in the oilfield 35 miles north of Casper already has been tapped out since drilling resumed in the mid-1970s. Stranded Oil specializes in enhanced oil recovery, or recharging depleted oil fields with techniques such as injecting carbon dioxide underground.

Extensive data on the characteristics of Teapot Dome exists from decades of research and development projects at the oilfield, Stranded Oil President and Chief Executive Officer Mark See said in a press release.

"By targeting properties with known characteristics, we reduce the uncertainty and risk generally associated with oil exploration," See said.

Several aging oilfields in Wyoming have benefited from enhanced oil recovery. The technique in recent years has helped push Wyoming oil production upward after 20 years of decline.

Few oilfields anywhere have a history like Teapot Dome.

The site was once one of three federal government oil reserves that were to be left untouched except with the exception of use as emergency fuel supplies for the U.S. Navy.

In the early 1920s, Harding's interior secretary, Albert Fall, accepted $400,000 in "loans" from prominent oilmen Edward Doheny and Harry Sinclair to secretly open the oil reserves to drilling. Fall was convicted in 1929 of taking bribes and served a year in prison.

The leasing of Teapot Dome became public knowledge in 1922, but Harding died unexpectedly in 1923 before a congressional investigation could reveal full details about the scheme.

The U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the Teapot Dome leases in 1927 and the oil field went undeveloped until 1976, when drilling resumed. The Navy transferred Teapot Dome to the Energy Department in 1977. In 1993, Teapot Dome became the site of the Rocky Mountain Oilfield Testing Center, where the government tested oil development technologies including enhanced oil recovery.

Weak oil market leads Tulsa company to lay off 2,000

TULSA — Oil drilling rig maker and operator Helmerich & Payne Inc. this week announced plans to lay off 2,000 employees.

In a conference call with analysts Thursday, CEO John Lindsay said that the layoffs are due to the decrease in crude oil prices, which has led to reduced rig use, the Tulsa World reported.

The planned cuts equal about 17 percent of the company's total workforce, which includes 500 employees in the Tulsa area. The company did not say how many Tulsa-based employees would be impacted, but did say that most of the jobs affected would be in the oil fields.

"This is without question the worst part of the downturn," Lindsay said. He said oil prices at six-year lows have affected drilling activity, and the company expects that to negatively impact results for the rest of the 2015.

The company will reduce the number of drilling rigs it produces from four to two per month.

Former Republican Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney; his wife, Ann Romney; and Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., left, greet supporters Nov. 2, 2012, at a campaign stop at The Square at Union Centre in West Chester, Ohio. Romney will not run for president in 2016. Three weeks after unexpectedly saying he was considering a third campaign for the White House, the former Massachusetts governor told members of his staff during a Friday conference call that he is out of race.

Romney not running: Former GOP nominee out of 2016 race

By Steve Peoples
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Mitt Romney ended his roller-coaster return to presidential politics on Friday, declaring his party would be better served by the "next generation of Republican leaders" and concluding his unlikely comeback as suddenly as it began.

Aides said it was a deeply personal and even painful decision for the 2012 Republican presidential nominee. He insisted he could win the next election if he ran, but his announcement followed a three-week fact-finding effort that revealed significant resistance to a third campaign.

"I believe that one of our next generation of Republican leaders, one who may not be as well-known as I am today, one who has not yet taken their message across the country, one who is just getting started, may well emerge as being better able to defeat the Democrat nominee," Romney told supporters on a conference call. "In fact, I expect and hope that to be the case."

The remark was both a recognition of his own limitations and an indirect swipe at the man who created the urgency behind Romney's brief flirtation with a third presidential campaign. That is former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, the son and brother of former presidents, who is speeding toward a campaign of his own.

Bush and New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie would have served as Romney's most likely rivals for the support of the GOP establishment, and both men felt an immediate impact. The announcement sparked a rush of activity by Romney loyalists — operatives and donors alike — suddenly freed to support another White House hopeful as the crowded 2016 field begins to take shape.

Devoted Romney supporter Bill Kunkler, part of Chicago's wealthy Crown family, said he was disappointed by Friday's news but now was all-in for Bush.

"I'll work for Jeb. Period. And no one else," Kunkler said, noting that he planned to attend a Feb. 18 Chicago fundraiser for Bush hosted by former Romney backers.

Bobbie Kilberg, a top GOP fundraiser based in Virginia, quickly settled on Christie.

"We had long and deep ties and friendship with Mitt," she said. "That has changed obviously, at 11 o'clock this morning."

Romney's aides insist there was no specific incident that caused Friday's abrupt announcement, which came during a late morning conference call with close supporters and former staffers.

The former Massachusetts governor, who is 67, shocked the political world three weeks earlier, when signaled interest in a third presidential run during a private meeting with former donors in New York.

That followed what aides describe as several months of strong encouragement from Republicans as he toured the country raising money and energy for GOP colleagues.

"No one asked McCain to run again," said longtime Romney aide Ron Kaufman, a reference to 2008 nominee John McCain. "Thousands of people asked Mitt to run again."

The surprise announcement of Romney's interest three weeks ago in the office of New York Jets owner Woody Johnson was the first public step in a fact-finding mission meant to assess the 2016 outlook. Romney, a longtime business executive, has typically followed a scientific approach to challenges — political and otherwise — and demanded data before making a decision

This file image taken from an online video reportedly released by the Islamic State group's al-Furqan media arm on Tuesday but lacks their logo, appears to show the group threatening to kill two Japanese hostages that the militants identify as Kenji Goto, left, and Haruna Yukawa, right, unless a $200 million ransom is paid within 72 hours. Far from the high-tech, slickly edited videos involving beheaded Western hostages through which the group impressed supporters and terrorized opponents, recent messages purporting to be from Japanese hostage Kenji Goto have been through digitized, audio dispatches featuring either still photos or text. Experts who examined this video said it was more likely filmed in an indoor studio with a false backdrop.

IS hostage drama shows change in propaganda technique

By Zeina Karam
Associated Press

BEIRUT — The latest Islamic State hostage drama involving a veteran Japanese war correspondent and a young Jordanian pilot marks the first time the group has publicly demanded prisoner releases. It also signals a change in the extremist group's propaganda technique.

Far from the high-tech, slickly edited videos involving beheaded Western hostages through which the group impressed supporters and terrorized opponents, recent messages purporting to be from Japanese hostage Kenji Goto have been through digitized, audio dispatches featuring either still photos or text.

A change has been noted even before.

The first video involving the Japanese, released on Jan. 20, conformed to previous Islamic State group videos and bore the logo of its al-Furqan media group, showing both Goto and Haruna Yukawa, another Japanese hostage, kneeling next to a masked militant holding a knife. A $200 million ransom demand was made.

At first glance the video appeared to be filmed in the same location as those showing American hostages James Foley, Steven Sotloff and Peter Kassig, and British captives David Haines and Alan Henning.

Experts who examined the video, however, said it was more likely filmed in an indoor studio with a false backdrop.

"There's a chink in the armor," said Veryan Khan, editorial director for the Terrorism Research and Analysis Consortium.

"The Islamic State's media arm is a full-fledged wing of their government ... the United States doesn't even put as much effort into their media wing as the Islamic State does. There's been something messing up in their video production machine," she said.

The following two videos, released Jan. 24 and Jan. 27, did not conform to previous Islamic State group videos and did not bear the logo of al-Furqan. In those audio messages, the group dropped its demand for ransom and demanded instead that Jordanian authorities release an Iraqi woman prisoner, Sajida al-Rishawi. The message also said that Yukawa had been beheaded.

The Associated Press could not independently verify the messages' contents, though Japanese government officials said it was highly likely they were legitimate, without elaborating.

The messages have raised questions on why the group was changing tactics, resorting instead to what appeared to be unprofessional rush jobs.

"This is typical in hostage situations like this where videos are being produced at a rapid pace in response to unpredictable events," said Ben Venzke, CEO of IntelCenter, a company that provides counter-terrorism intelligence.

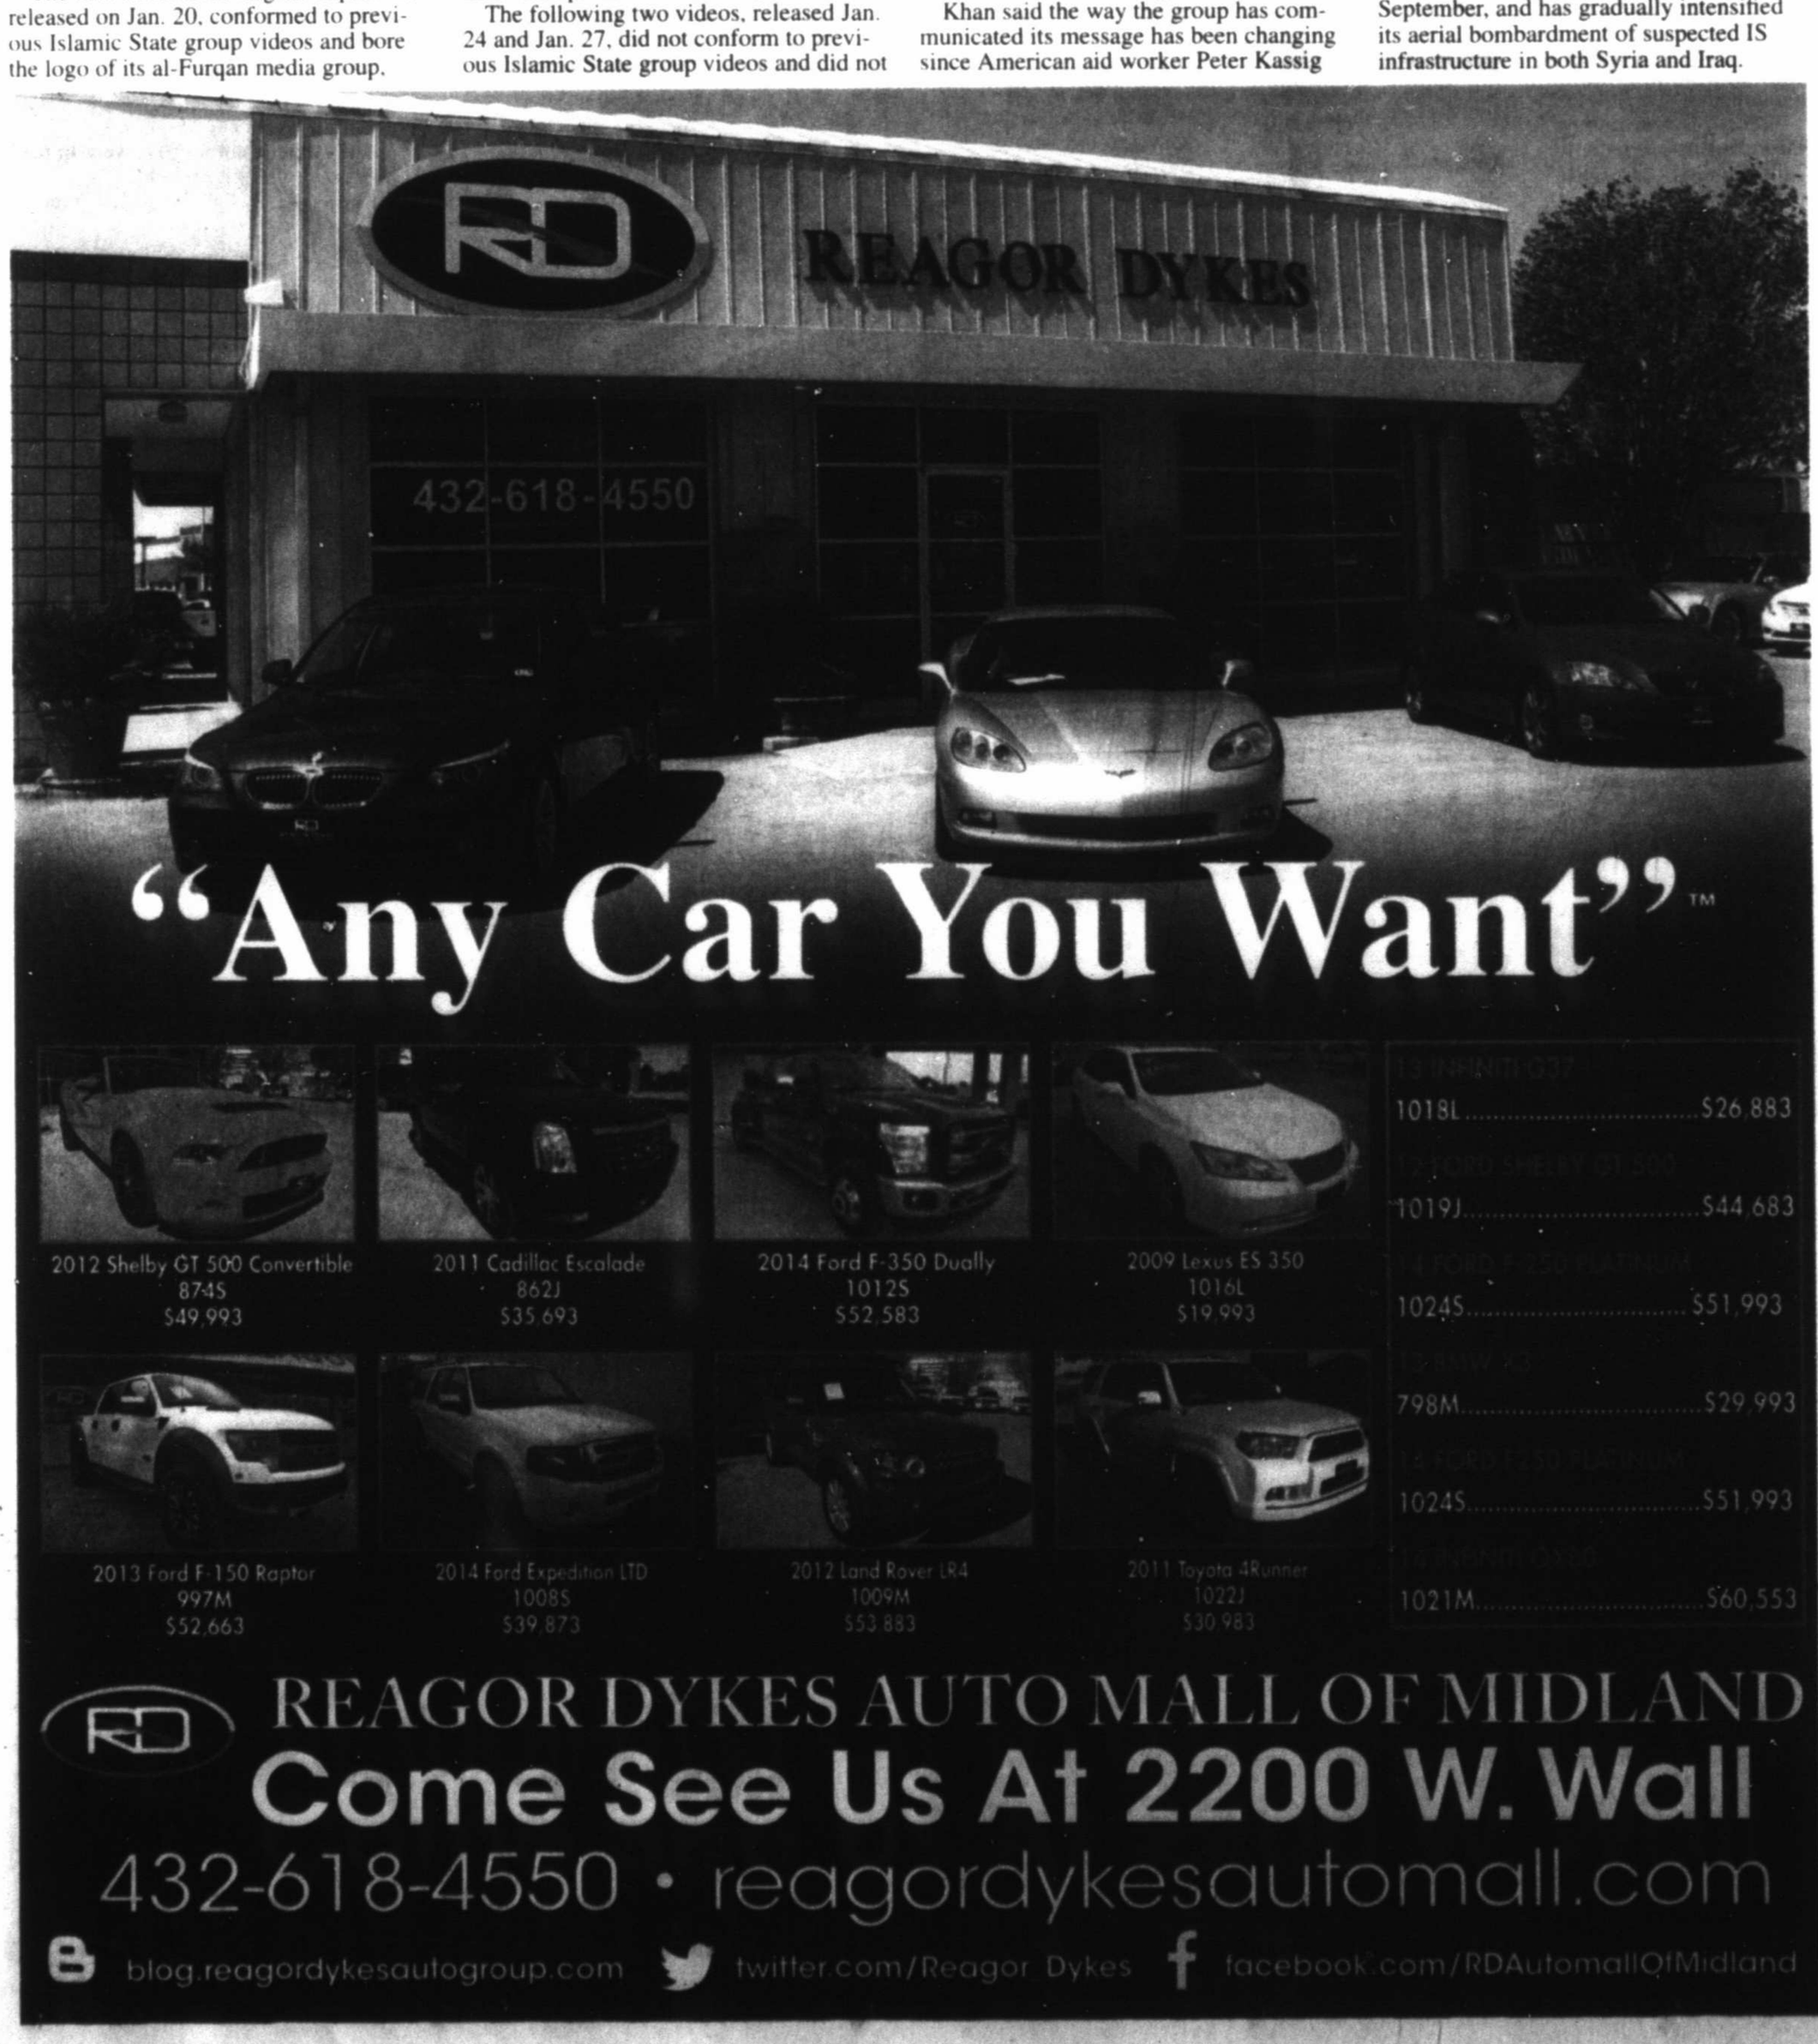
Khan said the way the group has communicated its message has been changing since American aid worker Peter Kassig was beheaded in September. He was the last of the Western hostages to be killed.

Previous videos showed the hostages delivering a message with the same militant man standing next to them, before they are killed. Their severed heads were then showed placed on top of the body.

The beheading of Kassig was tacked at the end of a full feature-length, high-definition video showing foreign fighters beheading more than a dozen Syrian soldiers simultaneously. The same video then showed the same militant, a man speaking with a British accent, standing near Kassig's head.

Kassig's body is never seen nor is there any message from him.

Some experts said the changes may be a reflection that the group is feeling squeezed. The U.S.-led coalition began targeting IS militants in Syria in mid-September, and has gradually intensified its aerial bombardment of suspected IS infrastructure in both Syria and Iraq.



Texas Tech football team to return to Grande

■ This is the only chance for fans to see team in public

From staff reports

The only opportunity for Texas Tech football fans to see the Red Raiders this spring will be at a scrimmage on March 28 at Grande Communications Stadium, Texas Tech announced on Friday.

The scrimmage, which will begin at 11 a.m. and televised by Texas Tech TV and Fox Sports, will be the only open practice the Red Raiders will have during spring practices, which will begin on Feb. 28. This will be the third straight year the Red Raiders will hold a spring workout at Grande.

Due to the replacement of seating inside Jones AT&T Stadium, the annual Spring Game has been canceled and there will be no other open practice opportunities for fans.

Individual practice dates will be determined on a week-by-week basis in order to accommodate sophomore quarterback Patrick Mahomes' baseball schedule. Mahomes will pitch and play in the outfield for the preseason No. 5 Texas Tech Baseball team this spring.

Tech is coming off a 4-8 season and missed out on a bowl game for the first time in three seasons. It will also mark the third spring practice for coach Kliff Kingsbury.

New spark for MHS

Tatum shakes up starting lineup, Dawgs win

Bulldogs 54
Bronchos 42

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt.com

After blasting his team for not hustling in its 35-point loss to Odessa Permian on Tuesday, Midland High head boys basketball coach Charles Tatum made a bold move to start his bench on Friday night against Odessa High.

Rather than going with his typical starting five, Tatum opted to start the game with juniors Jamel Jones, Daveone Bass, Tyree Young, and seniors Adrian Reyes and Trevor Abney. That strategy of accountability ended up working out fine for the Bulldogs (13-9, 4-1 District 3-6A), who secured a 54-42 win, however ugly, over OHS (6-18, 0-5 in District 3-6A).

"It was one of those games where we needed to put things in perspective," Tatum said. "We've been a team of entitlement. These last couple days, I really wanted to see who was going to step in and earn a spot. For the last couple of days that group had done some pretty good things and I thought they deserved to play. I think that raises the elevation of our skill (starting) group."

The second unit provided an immediate spark for MHS to open the game. The Bulldogs did everything they didn't do against

Laird leads, Woods misses the cut

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Rain wasn't the only thing that put a damper on the Phoenix Open on Friday.

The rowdiest event on the PGA Tour goes into Super Bowl weekend without Tiger Woods, who had the worst score of his career and missed the cut by 12 shots. Also gone is Phil Mickelson, who had his worst round on the TPC Scottsdale in six years.

Martin Laird carried on nicely without them.

Once the rain stopped, Laird played his best golf and he doesn't think that was a coincidence. He ran off four birdies in a five-hole stretch until making his first bogey of the tournament on his final hole for a second straight 5-under 66.

That gave him a two-shot lead over Daniel Berger (69), with Justin Thomas (68) another shot behind. Both 21-year-old rookies received sponsor's exemptions. A trio of Masters champions — Bubba Watson (71), Zach Johnson (70) and Angel Cabrera (69) were in the group four shots behind.

That's not who the crowd came to see.

Woods was playing the Waste Management Phoenix Open for the first time in 14 years. "Welcome back!" the gallery shouted to him on Thursday. "Thanks for coming!" was the refrain on Friday as he walked off his final green with an 11-over 82.

It was his highest score in 322 official tournaments in his career.

"We all have days like this," Woods said after a day unlike any other he has had in his career.

Mickelson had a 76, his highest score in this event since he opened with a 76 in 2009 and missed the cut. Neither are going to the Super Bowl. Mickelson flew home to San Diego. Woods to Florida, and both will meet up next week in Torrey Pines.

It was the first time since The Greenbrier Classic in 2012 that they missed the cut in the same event.

"Hopefully, we will be able to get it turned around for next week."

Djokovic reaches 5th Australian Open final

MELBOURNE, Australia — Novak Djokovic reached a fifth Australian Open final, avenged a long and arduous loss to Stan Wawrinka and ensured he'd renew an old rivalry with Andy Murray.

The top-ranked Djokovic was so absorbed in the moment, he lost track of the score during Friday's semifinal. His mental lapse after the third set probably cost him the fourth, but the four-time Australian Open champion recovered with three service breaks in the fifth set to beat defending champion Wawrinka 7-6 (1), 3-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-0.

"Sometimes these things happen, you get carried away by a moment," Djokovic said, trying to explain his perplexed expression after he'd taken a lead of two sets to one. "I was very confused when I saw the security on the court.

"The circumstances, obviously playing Grand Slam semifinals against the defending champion ... a lot of emotions going around. Sometimes you can't keep track of the score."

Djokovic has a 100 percent winning record in finals at Melbourne Park, claiming his first Grand Slam here in 2008 and winning three straight titles from 2011 before losing in the quarterfinals last year to Wawrinka. Only Roger Federer and Stefan Edberg had reached five men's finals at the Australian in the Open era.

The previous two meetings between Djokovic and Wawrinka at the Australian Open had gone to five sets and lasted a combined nine hours. Friday's match lacked that kind of intensity and memorable moments.

"Strange," Wawrinka said. "Not the best."

At times Wawrinka got on top of Djokovic, who sometimes looked lethargic. Despite dropping serve in four of the five sets, Djokovic kept his composure in the 3-hour, 30-minute match as Wawrinka blasted 42 winners but offset that with 69 unforced errors.

The momentum shifted suddenly in three of the five sets, with both players struggling to turn service breaks into big leads and wasting breakpoint opportunities. Djokovic hit 27 winners — none in the fourth set — and finished with 49 unforced errors.

"The battle was great ... in terms of fighting from both sides," Djokovic said, "but the level of performance was not where I wanted it to be."

It was good enough to increase his career record to 17 wins in 20 matches against Wawrinka, who won his first major title here last year. The Swiss player didn't advance past the quarterfinals at his next three Grand Slam events, and will drop to No. 9 when the next rankings are released.

"There's no pressure for that," Wawrinka said of the burden of defending a title. "But, no, for sure we had some great battles here last two years. Today was strange match. He was there playing good enough to win and he deserve to win and play the final."

Murray is moving in the other direction, restoring his position in the so-called Big Four of major winners that includes Djokovic, No. 2 Federer and No. 3 Rafael Nadal, who dominated the Grand Slam titles for so long.

Sixth-seeded Murray, who has lost three Australian Open finals, moved into the championship match with a fiery four-set win over No. 7 Tomas Berdych on Thursday night.

MHS stomps OHS, clinches playoffs

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt.com

The Midland High girls basketball team jumped out to a 20-6 lead against Odessa High on Friday night at Chaparral Center, and the rest was history.

The Lady Bulldogs rolled to a 66-22 victory that clinched them a playoff spot out of District 3-6A.

At one point in the first quarter, MHS (24-5, 6-1 in District 3-6A) had nearly as many steals as points. Head coach Wes Torres subbed in his bench frequently throughout the game, often completely swapping out the five players he had on the court. With OHS (3-19, 0-7) likely being the weakest team in the District, Torres knew he had an opportunity to get more players court time.

Elliott

"We've talked about us getting better, regardless of who we're playing and that's what we're looking at," Torres said. "There are some things we weren't very sharp at tonight, so we're just working on getting better."

MHS wasn't close to its best for most of the night. The Lady Bulldogs failed to cash in on several easy shots created from OHS turnovers. Still, MHS did more than enough to get the win against a clearly overmatched Lady Bronchos squad.

Aubrie Elliott led MHS with 14 points, while Claire Lancaster added 11 points in the win. Bethany Ontiveroz paced OHS with five points.

The Rebels (2-21, 1-4 in District 3-6A) were down 21-5 after the first quarter as the two teams were called for a combined four technical fouls in the quarter.

The game calmed down and Lee began to chip away at the lead over the final three quarters.

Lee outscored the Bobcats 47-36, including 21-12 in the fourth quarter but it wasn't enought overcome the big first quarter deficit.

James Lydia led Lee with 12 points and Sema'J Davis and Jordan Trimble each had 10 points in the loss.

San Angelo Central is 10-15 overall and 2-3 in District 3-6A and is one game ahead of Lee in fourth spot in the 3-6A standings.

Lee will try to stay in the playoff race as they take on district-leading Odessa Permian at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

BULLDOGS

against Permian — they beat OHS to all the loose balls, they went up strong on the offensive glass , and they used active hands to pick off a few errant Bronchos passes. Still, OHS' starters hung in tough and trailed 10-8 after the first quarter.

Reyes, who got the rare start, said he was just happy to get the opportunity from his coach.

"It felt great," said Reyes, who didn't score. "It was good to actually get to play and get some minutes in. I'm always trying to play to the best of my ability and coach (Tatum) realizes that."

Both teams struggled to find much of an offensive rhythm throughout the first half, as MHS led 25-17 at the break. The Bulldog starters didn't see much time in the first 16 minutes and seemed to have a difficult time getting comfortable, having to share time with the backups. Tatum's bench did most of the damage in the first half.

In the third quarter, OHS went on a 7-2 run to cut MHS's lead to 27-24 and briefly, the prospect of a Friday night shocker was on the horizon.

Tatum said he was never concerned that his bench wouldn't come through when it was needed.

"I knew that the guys would respond," Tatum said. "We had a very, very intense couple of days of practice and I knew that whichever group was on the court, it would make some plays."

But senior Gary Ringo, began to assert himself as he collected layups on back-to-back possessions midway through the third quarter. Then, he nailed a huge buzzer-beating 3-pointer to push the Bulldogs' lead back to 13 points heading into the final frame.

Ringo scored all 11 of his points in the second half and was the only MHS player in double figures. AD Johnson added eight points for the Bulldogs. Marcos Aguilar led OHS with nine points.

MHS junior guard Shawn Rivers, who had missed the last few weeks do to academic ineligibilty, returned to action tonight.

LAIRD

From 1B

Mickelson said.

Laird would seem to thrive in such wet, chilly conditions based on his birth certificate alone. He was born in Scotland, though he played college golf at Colorado State and has been living in Arizona for the last 14 years. He didn't even play a European Tour event until he had his PGA Tour card.

But living in Scottsdale, surely he has experience the occasional cold, steady rain like Friday.

"The weather is so good here, when the weather is like this we don't play," Laird said. "I really don't remember a day where it's just been that kind of drizzle. It was a very Scottish day today. We get rain, but it's not sort of an all-day thing."

Laird was at 10-under 132.

Look a little further down the leaderboard, and the absence of golf's two biggest names — Woods and Mickelson — was another reminder that the sport is in the midst of a generational shift, assuming it hasn't already happened.

Berger and Thomas are proudly part of the class of '11 — that's high school, not college.

They played often together as juniors and at college — Berger at Florida State, Thomas at Alabama. Berger made it through Q-school after two years of college and easily earned his card through the Web.com Tour. Thomas did the same after leaving Alabama.

Not too far back was Jordan Spieth, another 21-year-old who already is among the top 10 players in the world ranking and a Ryder Cup veteran. He scrambled his way to a 68 and was six shots behind. Spieth put on a clinic with his short game playing in the same group as Woods, and it makes Woods' shortcomings stand out even more.

Woods either stubbed his chips or bladed them, the worst of it coming from behind the fourth green. He had 35 feet to the flag, tried to hit a baby flop shot and sent it 47 yards away, leading to a double bogey.

Mickelson steadily dropped shots, tried to rally with a birdie on the 15th that put him one birdie away from making the cut, and then hit his tee shot in a bunker on the 17th that led to bogey. That bunker wasn't even in play for Mickelson on Thursday, but the weather was such that players were hitting two or three clubs more.

Laird was part of the pack until his late run. He made a 20-foot birdie putt on the par-5 13th, hit wedge to a foot for birdie on the par-5 15th, and then made 7-foot birdie putts on the next two holes to give himself a little separation.

Ryan Palmer (72) and Ryan Moore (67) were in the group at 136, while Geoff Ogilvy (69) was among those five shots behind.

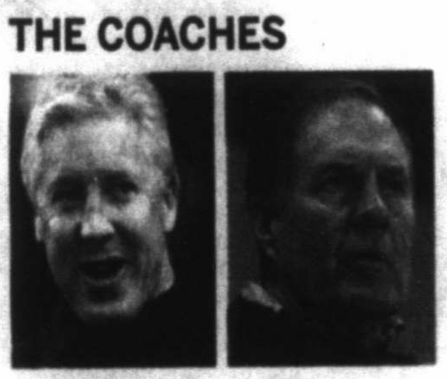
THE QUARTERBACKS

WILSON vs. BRADY

New England's Tom Brady is one of the best quarterbacks in NFL history. A consummate winner, he is a two-time NFL and Super Bowl MVP who has a knack for keeping his cool in tight spots. Russell Wilson has become one of the NFL's best players in a short time, the prototype in the new era of mobile quarterbacks after leading the Seahawks to the Super Bowl twice in his first three NFL seasons. –The Associated Press

THE COACHES



New England's Bill Belichick and Seattle's Pete Carroll are two of the NFL's best tacticians. Belichick is known for his complicated offensive schemes, dour public persona and occasionally stretching the rules. Carroll is an aggressive play caller who put together one of the NFL's stingiest defenses and wears his emotions on his sleeve.

THE HALFTIME SHOW

Katy Perry will be the latest big-name star to perform at halftime of the Super Bowl and will be joined by Lenny Kravitz. They join an illustrious list of performers that includes Bruce Springsteen, Prince, The Who, Madonna and Beyonce. Bruno Mars performed with the Red Hot Chili Peppers at last year's game.

THE COMMERCIALS

The commercials have become a cultural phenomenon as companies have tried to one-up each other with spots that range from quirky to inspirational. This year's ads, which cost advertisers about $4.4 million for 30 seconds, will include a return of Anheuser-Busch's Clydesdales, a rumored spot with Lindsay Lohan, and blockbuster movie trailers.

THE BOWL HISTORIES

New England is in the Super Bowl for a record-tying eighth time. The Patriots have won three, most recently in 2005. Seattle is attempting to become the first back-to-back Super Bowl winner since New England in 2004-05.

THE STADIUM

The University of Phoenix Stadium in Glendale, Ariz., has a retractable roof and a field that is rolled in and out on a giant tray so the grass can grow in the sun. Built in 2006, the stadium is one of four with a retractable roof in the NFL, joining Dallas, Indianapolis and Houston.

THE FANS

New England has been known for its sports-crazed fans for decades, and the Seahawks fan base - The 12th Man - has become the loudest in pro football. In last year's Super Bowl, Seattle fans invaded New York City and partied long after the game was over.

Think you know the Super Bowl? Take the quiz

TIM DAHLBERG
Associated Press

PHOENIX — By now, even the most casual fan has learned that Marshawn Lynch is interesting only because he refuses to say anything.

Richard Sherman? He talks all the time and provides far more insight to the Super Bowl than Tom Brady, who figures to spend the game trying his best to avoid throwing to him.

But do you really know everything you need to know about this Super Bowl? Here's a pop quiz to keep next to the chips and dip on game day:

Why does Bill Belichick wear a hoodie?

A—He's trying to establish some street cred.

B—Makes him feel like he's in Beast Mode.

C—Much of the $500,000 fine for Spygate came from his clothing fund.

Why are the Vegas bookies always so spot on with the point spread of the game?

A—The NFL tells them in advance what the score will be.

B—They have inside information on the PSI of the game balls.

C—Marshawn Lynch calls often to talk.

Why is Katy Perry the halftime act?

A—She appeals to the NFL's leering middle-aged male demographic.

B—The Rolling Stones aren't allowed out past 5 p.m.

C—Roger Goodell's first choice, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, is booked on Sundays.

Goodell makes $44 million a year, though it's uncertain most of the time what he really does. What are his responsibilities for the biggest NFL game of the year?

A—Pushing the button that closes the roof at the University of Phoenix stadium.

B—Turning off the power if it looks like the game is getting out of hand.

C—Making sure TMZ has its credential for the game.

What will be the best proposition bet on the game?

A—Idina Menzel will flub lines while singing the national anthem.

B—The ball boy for the Patriots will get more airtime than New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie at a Cowboys game.

C—Brady's wife, model Gisele Bundchen, will tweet out blame for everyone but hubby for the underinflated footballs.

Why are people so interested in Brady's wife?

A—They want to know if she dresses him for media interviews.

B—They're trying to figure out which member of the power couple has the better hair.

C—Because after looking at sweaty football players since September, why not?

What will be NBC's defining moment Sunday?

A—Cris Collinsworth will throw his headphones down and storm out of the booth in disgust after a receiver runs a bad route.

B—Al Michaels will admit that he really doesn't believe in miracles.

C—Johnny Weir and Tara Lipinski will trade outfits before filing reports from inside the team locker rooms.

Who is in charge of inflating footballs?

A—Belichick, who does it orally, hence the perpetually pained look on his face.

B—Goodell, because at $44 million a year he has to have something to do.

C—Some locker room guy so if there's any problem the NFL can throw him under the bus.

Which commercial will people be talking about at the office Monday morning?

A—The one with cute dogs, strong horses and beer that will make you want to cry.

B—The one with strong dogs, cute horses and beer that will make you want to cry some more.

C—Any involving Victoria Secret models.

What will Marshawn Lynch have to say after the big game?

A—I just played because I didn't want to get fined.

B-What part of Beast Mode don't you understand?

C-You mad, Bro?

What will Tom Brady say if he loses his third straight Super Bowl?

A—It's not that big of a deal. This isn't ISIS, after all.

B—OK, so I'm now officially a three-time loser. But Gisele is waiting for me outside the locker room, so who really is the loser here?

C—We would have won easily, but there was something wrong with the balls.

Goodell seeks to look past 'tough year'

By Howard Fendrich

NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell participates in a news conference for NFL Super Bowl XLIX on Friday in Phoenix.

PHOENIX — As if wishing made it so, NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell described his league — and himself — as having addressed missteps on difficult matters such as domestic violence and being ready to move on.

"As an organization, and as an individual, it's been a tough year," Goodell said Friday during his pre-Super Bowl news conference, "but a year of great progress, and I'm excited about the future."

Nearing the end of a season he acknowledged was filled with "plenty of challenges," Goodell was asked whether he thought he deserved a pay cut — "That's up to the owners," he replied — and whether he could envision resigning or being fired.

"No, I can't. Does that surprise you?" Goodell said. "We've all done a lot of soul-searching, beginning with yours truly. And we have taken action."

Goodell brushed aside a question about whether there are conflict-of-interest problems with paying those who head up "independent" investigations, such as into the league's handling of the Ray Rice case or the ongoing look at the New England Patriots' use of deflated footballs in the AFC title game.

"We have had people who have had uncompromising integrity" run those inquiries, Goodell said. Then, speaking directly to the reporter, he added: "Somebody has to pay them ... unless you're volunteering, which I don't think you are."

Rice is the former Baltimore Ravens running back who punched his now-wife in an elevator, drawing an initial suspension from Goodell of two games. Goodell changed that to an indefinite ban after video from inside the elevator was posted by TMZ. Rice later appealed, and an arbitrator reinstated him.

That and other domestic violence cases led the league to design a new personal conduct policy, which was approved unanimously by owners but has been criticized by the players' union.

"We've made enormous progress," Goodell said Friday. "We're in a good place."

On the main topic of conversation heading into Super Bowl week — the deflated footballs used by the New England Patriots in the AFC championship game — Goodell said: "Whether a competitive advantage was actually gained or not is secondary in my mind to whether that rule was violated."

A resolution will not come until after the Super Bowl.

"We don't know enough in this investigation to know who was responsible or whether there was even an infraction," Goodell said.

Patriots owner Robert Kraft has said he expects the investigation to determine his team did nothing wrong — and he expects an apology from the NFL. Kraft did not attend Friday's news conference.

Another issue that won't be resolved until after the season's final game, Goodell said, is whether Seattle Seahawks running back Marshawn Lynch will be fined for refusing to answer any questions at required media sessions this week. The NFL docked Lynch $100,000 earlier this season for not talking to reporters.

"I understand it may not be on the top of his list," Goodell said, "but everyone else is cooperating, everyone else is doing their part."

On other topics, Goodell said:

■ Any club's move to Los Angeles, without an NFL team for 20 years, would have to be approved by owners, and "there have been no determinations of us going to Los Angeles, any particular team going to Los Angeles or going to any particular stadium." The St. Louis Rams, Oakland Raiders and San Diego Chargers have been viewed as the teams most likely to try to head to L.A. Goodell also noted that San Diego needs a new stadium, as does Buffalo.

■ The league will take a look at possibly expanding instant replay reviews to include whether a penalty was committed and consider rotating officiating crews during the regular season. Crews currently work together all season long.

■ Adding more playoff teams is also on the table, but there are concerns, including "the risk of diluting our regular season and conflicting with college football in January."

■ The league is hiring a chief medical officer to oversee health-related policies.

Seau, Warner, Pace first-time Hall eligibles

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

PHOENIX — When Junior Seau's name is mentioned as a first-time Hall of Fame candidate, people nod in recognition of his career achievements.

Then they shake their heads with sadness.

Seau spent 20 seasons in the NFL as a dominant linebacker, winning Defensive Player of the Year honors for San Diego in 1992, making six All-Pro teams, and the league's All-Decade team of the 1990s. His reckless abandon defined his career.

Seau committed suicide in 2012 and was found to have developed chronic traumatic encephalopathy (a brain disease).

"He was a phenomenal player, teammate, friend," Tom Brady said during Super Bowl week of Seau, who finished his career in New England. "His attitude was infectious. He brought enthusiasm every day in practice. You'd show up in the weight room and he'd be the first person there at six in the morning, on the treadmill, running, going into his 18th year in the league.

"He had a love for life and he's missed by all of his family and friends and certainly by me, all the guys that had a chance to be around him. He was a special person. I have no doubt he'll be elected. If he can't make it, nobody can. He's truly one of a kind."

Joining Seau among the first-year eligibles for Saturday's vote are quarterback Kurt Warner and tackle Orlando Pace — who protected Warner when he was winning MVP awards in 1999 and 2001 with the Rams.

At the other end of the spectrum is veterans' committee nominee Mick Tingelhoff, who retired in 1978 after starting all 240 games of his career as Minnesota's center.

Fellow nominees among the 18 finalists include stars of recent vintage (Marvin Harrison, John Lynch, Jerome Bettis, Will Shields); less-recent standouts (Charles Haley, Tim Brown, Kevin Greene, Morten Andersen); coaches Tony Dungy, Don Coryell and Jimmy Johnson; and contributors Bill Polian and Ron Wolf.

Also a finalist is running back Terrell Davis, the key (along with John Elway) to Denver's NFL championships in 1997 and 1998.

Davis, the 1998 league and Super Bowl MVP — he rushed for 2,008 yards and scored 22 touchdowns — retired in 2001 after only seven pro seasons. This is his first time as a finalist.

"Yeah, it's very different," Davis said. "The first time I was a semifinalist, I was excited about that because to be in the conversation was something that I had never dreamt of it, and it never really became something that I was focused on or ever worried about. But then I got on that list, and I was like, 'Wow, this is pretty special.'"

Davis isn't one to analyze his chances of being inducted, but he was exhilarated to find out how far he'd gotten in this year's balloting.

"So then I've been at this for seven, eight years, but every year being on that list was exciting. Well, get to this year and take the next step," he said. "I didn't think I'd feel the way I felt when they told me: 'You're a finalist.' And yeah, I was like, 'Wow, man. I don't know, wait a minute, could this be a possibility that one day I can get that (gold) jacket?'

It's certainly possible, as it is for all the nominees.

The panel of 46 media members will spend much of Saturday discussing the merits of each candidate, beginning with Tingelhoff, who must receive 80 percent of the ballots to be elected.

Same thing for Polian and Wolf, general managers who built Super Bowl champions and will be considered next.

Then come the other 15 modern-era candidates. After further discussions, their number will be reduced to 10 and, eventually to five.

Those five will receive yes or no votes for selection, just as Tingelhoff, Polian and Wolf do earlier in the meeting.

The class of 2015 will be announced at the NFL Honors TV show Saturday night during which The Associated Press individual NFL awards will be handed out.

Inductions in the Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, will be in August.

Carroll says decision is Sherman's if baby arrives early

By Tim Booth

Seattle's Richard Sherman answers a question during an interview Thursday in Phoenix.

PHOENIX — Seattle Seahawks coach Pete Carroll said Friday it will be Richard Sherman's decision whether to play in Sunday's Super Bowl if his pregnant girlfriend goes into labor with the couple's first child sooner than expected.

Carroll said during a joint news conference with New England coach Bill Belichick that family comes first and "if (Sherman) is faced with that decision, we'll support him."

"He has an opportunity to face a big decision and whenever our players have a personal, family issue that comes up it's always about family first and they can decide what is best for them and I support that," Carroll said. "However he goes with that, if he's faced with that decision we'll support him and we'll see how that goes."

Carroll also added, "I can't wait to see little Petey."

Sherman said on Thursday that the baby — a boy — isn't due for a couple of weeks and "he was going to do his father a favor," and wait to be born until after the game. In an interview with KING-TV in Seattle, Sherman's girlfriend, Ashley Moss, said, "I told him to play the game."

Carroll's comment regarding Sherman was the biggest news to come out of the final media availability with the coaches as both were extremely complementary of the other. Carroll was clearly the more talkative of the two, although Belichick added quips through the 34-minute availability.

"I think everyone knows how much respect I have for Seattle and Pete and the job that they do," Belichick said. "I don't think fun is the word that I'd use. It's been a huge challenge. It's a tough team to prepare for, but I certainly have all the respect in the world for them. I could see why they were champions last year and why they are here again this year. They do so many things well on so many levels."

The pair also spoke glowingly of their owners — Paul Allen for the Seahawks and Robert Kraft for the Patriots — and the support they have provided to both franchises and their intertwined pasts. Carroll was the coach in New England before being fired by Kraft and replaced by Belichick.

"The passion that he brings, he's there on a pretty regular basis with the team, with the players, with the coaches, with the staff," Belichick said of Kraft. "He's an integral part of everything that we do. We have a great relationship."

Carroll said the preparations for the week had a very similar feel to last year in New York prior to the Seahawks' victory over Denver.

"The process that we go through is very much the same. What changes is the team that you're playing and the challenges they present, which are extraordinary," Carroll said. "We really do have a process and a way we go through it and a mentality and feel like we've come through it now and we're wrapping it up and it's gone the way we like it to."

Girlfriend kept in shadows begins to see the light

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am 21 and confused. My boyfriend, "Ethan," and I broke up five months ago, but we recently got back together. The problem is, he hides the fact that we're together. I'm not allowed to put anything on Facebook or even comment or "like" anything on his page. He hardly even talks to me or comes to see me, and when we do talk we act as each other, we end up in a fight. We used to be great together, but things are no longer the way they were.

Ethan insists he's not cheating on me, but it's hard to believe him, because when we got back together he had been talking to a girl who lives a few miles away from him. I don't want to end our relationship. Ethan says he loves me and doesn't want to leave me, but I don't know what to think anymore. Any advice? — DRIFTING IN OHIO

DEAR DRIFTING: Yes. Wake up, honey. The relationship you cherished with Ethan is over. A man who is in love with a woman sees and talks with her often, and doesn't hide her from the world or get into a fight with her every time he sees her. That he would forbid you to mention that you are back together on Facebook and refuse to permit you to comment on his posts is a huge red flag.

You asked my advice, and here it is: Take a giant step backward and see Ethan for who he is — a person who doesn't tell the truth and is very likely a cheater. If he was sincere, he'd be telling the world the happy news about your reunion.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old girl and a junior in high school. I love my best friend and we are very close with each other. How do we maintain a strong friendship when we go to college? We are planning on going to different colleges, possibly in different states. We don't want to lose what we have right now. — GOOD FRIEND ON THE WEST COAST

DEAR GOOD FRIEND: Do it the way everyone else does — through instant messaging and social media. But understand that both of you will have new responsibilities that will occupy your time, and you will be meeting new people and forming additional relationships. It doesn't have to have a negative impact on your close friendship if you both approach it with the right attitude. College is a time for growth and expansion. When you see each other during vacations from school, you can share that with each other.

DEAR ABBY: While driving with my son when he was in fifth or sixth grade, I spotted a bumper sticker on the car ahead of us at a stoplight. It had the "My child is an honor student" message with his school's name on it. I said to him, in a not-too-subtle hint about his grades, "I'd like to have a bumper sticker like that to put on my car, too."

I realized he was developing a wicked sense of humor when he replied, "I'll see if I can steal you one." It's one of my favorite memories. — OH, THE MEMORIES IN LA GRANGE, N.C.

DEAR MEMORIES: Funny! And what has he become? A lawyer, a politician or a comedian?

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 31, 2015:

This year you break precedent and decide to add more variety to your day-to-day life. You might feel as if a certain area of your life is less exciting, or even boring. Many of you could develop a new hobby and/or get involved in a new area of expertise. If you are single, you enjoy going out and about, and you meet many people this way. 2015 could be a significant relationship year, if you are open to greater commitment. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from a new mutual interest. A project around the house also could take on greater significance. CANCER sometimes gets sappy with his or her feelings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You might have to plow through a lot of information to get to the gist of a story. Do yourself a favor and leave it alone, unless you really want to know all the details. Your intuition will guide you when dealing with a family member. Tonight: A must appearance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ You might want to try to see a personal matter in a different light. You could take the issue at hand and turn it upside down, but the result will be the same. Confusion surrounds financial matters. Ask questions, but avoid all commitments. Tonight: Meet friends for dinner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ You could be taken aback by someone's financial inquiries. You don't need to get involved in what is going on. Laughter surrounds a personal matter, and you'll see a whole new path as a result. Did you make a situation harder than it needed to be? Tonight: Make it your treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You could be confused by someone's continued prodding. You might not know what to do with his or her questions; just answer them openly. Start planning a vacation or trip that you have often dreamt about. The time is now. Tonight: Feeling your Wheaties.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ Maintain a low profile, especially as you might want to re-evaluate a situation in your life. Be aware of what is not being said, not only by friends, but also by you. A partner or dear friend might choose to express his or her feelings. You'll be delighted! Tonight: Be a duo.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ You often are so busy with responsibilities that you rarely kick back and enjoy yourself. Give equal importance to your friendships, relationships and well-being. You will become far more content if your decisions come from a centered place. Tonight: Where the party is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Check in on an older friend or relative. How you feel about this person could change because of a misunderstanding that is likely to arise between you. Don't get caught up in gossip; instead, just accept people as they are. Let your feelings flow. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Reach out to a friend at a distance. How you see a situation could change as a result of hearing this person's preconceived notions about it. Look again with a new clarity. Consider taking a long-distance trip. Tonight: Follow the music. Be entertained.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ A loved one can't help but express his or her feelings openly. You'll discover that a discussion that starts off on a difficult note is likely to work itself out. A family member easily could reveal a secret. Tonight: Happy at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You might not be in the most comfortable position in a conversation among a group of peers. Let someone else involved take the lead, as that is likely what he or she wants to do anyway. Tonight: Out and about with a favorite person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You could get a strong reaction when interacting with a colleague. You will enjoy getting to know this person better. Make sure you both know where you are meeting and what the plan is; otherwise, a misunderstanding could happen. Tonight: Let the party go on.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You might have been reluctant to make any unusual plans this past week. Today you will change your mind. Make calls, but don't be surprised if you need to make adjustments anyway. Tonight: Be where there is music.

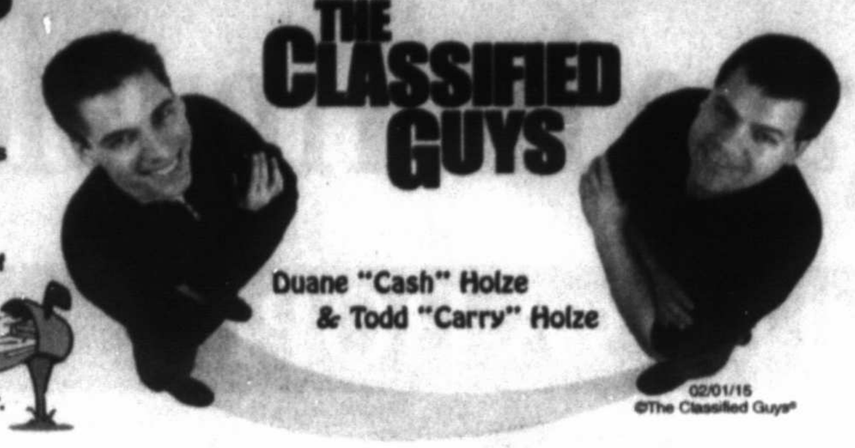
Ask the Guys



Dear Classified Guys,
I hate to admit it, but I've been around long enough to remember the switch from vinyl records to 8-track tapes. And as you know, that lead to cassette tapes, CD's and MP3's. Things seem to change faster than my suit styles (I have a collection of those as well). The same thing happened with computers. I can't tell you how many PC's I have in the closet, each outdating the other. When I upgrade, I can't bring myself to throw out the old. If you can't tell, I'm a collector of stuff. Granted, my first IBM XT computer with a 5¼" floppy drive isn't going to get internet access, but it does work. I tried it the other day for laughs. I've offered these things to my kids and grandkids, but no takers. I don't want to just throw them away or recycle them. How do I find someone who might be interested since most of them still work?

Cash: Considering your collection, you already know that technology changes quickly. And with your habits, it's likely you still have some 70's leisure suits hiding in the closet as well.

Carry: Unfortunately, unlike fashion, your IBM XT is not likely to come back into style. And hopefully the 1970's polyester shirts won't either!

Cash: Since most electronic devices change due to improvements rather than appearance, outdated equipment typically has limited use. Take televisions for example. While many of the cathode ray picture tubes still work perfectly fine, most people are craving a large-screen LCD or plasma television.

Carry: Most computers follow similar trends, being obsolete by the time they're delivered to your door! And although your IBM XT may still work, most people wouldn't know what to do with it if it can't get email.

Cash: That's not to say that your antiquated equipment can't find a home outside of your closet. Many people still have some use for older electronics. They may need them for parts or simply want them for their own collection!

Carry: Place a classified ad offering your items to those interested and you're likely to have some options present themselves. For computers that are still usable by today's standards, consider donating them to schools or other local organizations who may use them for training purposes.

Cash: And if you're successful in cleaning out your entire electronics closet, maybe you can work on your wardrobe closet next!

Fast Facts

Trash Talk

If you're like most people, you've had several cell phones in the past few years. The disposal of consumer electronics is a continual problem. Americans dispose of nealy 30 million TVs, 200 million computer products and more than 100 million cell phones and PDA's each year. Only about 20% of all those electronics are actually recycled. The rest are thrown in the landfill alongside typical kitchen garbage.

Phone Manners

With the global increase in cell phone usage, telephone etiquette has gotten out of hand. It's common to overhear any number of private conversations while shopping, walking down the street or even watching a movie. According to an annual survey, cell phone etiquette is still evolving. The number of people who deem it acceptable to talk in restaurants is about 28% while calls on public transportation are okay but nearly 50%. Fortunately, people conversing during movies is only about 6%, but conversations in the supermarket are still acceptable by well over 50% of cell phone users.

Drink Mail

After my first day on a new job, a co-worker and I stopped by a nearby pub to celebrate. At the bar my new friend pulled out his cell phone, put it on the counter and placed his drink on top. Not sure what to think, I inquired about his strange coaster.

"It never fails," he explained. "If I stop at a bar, my wife somehow knows to call and find out when I'll be home."

Sure enough within minutes, the phone vibrated below his drink. "Aren't you going to answer it?" I asked.

"Not until the fourth vibrate," he replied watching the glass. "If she's going to keep calling me, the least she can do is mix my drink!"
