. . . Son of a gun . . .

Here is a picture of Lajos Jakusovszky, 39-year-old Hungarian displaced person who arrives in Sonora today. He will be employed at the News office as a printer. From all our good friends in Sonora we would like to ask a favor: Say "hello" to this man when you see him and help us try to make him feel at home. He probably won't understand what you say for some time yet, but a smile is understood in all languages everywhere. With your help we'll try to show him what all the world isn't as bad as the the part he came from.

Soil Conservation District News

Paul Turney's ranch shows evidence of good range management. He has a good cover of the better grasses in all his pastures, and the good condition of his livestock reflects the good condition of his range. He has had to feed very little to-date.

Turney planted K.R. bluestem and slender grama in an old field last spring. These grasses have come up to a fair stand and are looking good despite dry weather and heavy weed infestation.

* * *

Old grass has a definite value during drouthy periods. Some green feed can still be found at the base of grasses with a good cover. Ranchers with a good cover of grass have been able to postpone feeding longer during the current dry spell.

When feeding becomes necessary grass is a cheap filler to be used with concentrates.

If and when it rains, ranges with old grass insure an earlier spring. They are in shape to soak up more water in the first rain. Temperatures under grass are higher and more constant, enabling grass to start growth more quickly.

Erosion of soil is reduced considerably under grass cover. The force of the raindrop is broken before it has a chance to detach particles of soil. Loss of water through runoff is reduced making more water available for plant growth.

E. J. Hardgrave is more than a little pleased with the results of applied range conservation practices on his ranches in the District.

As a result of moderate stocking and deferred grazing, a reserve feed supply has been built up, which Hardgraves says is enabling livestock to winter "unusually well."

Which proves again that grass ungrazed is not lost, but merely providing for the future.

The decision of ranchers to organize another Soil Conservation District at Sanderson last week is just another reason why the Sonora Work Unit of the Soil Conservation Service apparently has such a large staff.

The Sonora office is one of 2 or 3 locations in the State where SCS rangemen are trained to assist Soil Conservation Districts in West Texas.

New range conservationists are located here for periods up to a year and then transferred to new locations.

In this manner the experience of ranchers cooperating with the Edwards Plateau Soil Conservation District is made available to ranchers over much of the western part of the State.

To-date men have gone from this District to the Upper Llano, Devil's River and North Concho Soil Conservation Districts.

Six Grass Fires In Ft. Terrett Area Monday

Firemen and volunteers from Station B spent Monday night putting out six grass fires, all of mysterious origin, located in the Fort Terrett area.

The first alarm came at 11:50 o'clock Monday night for a fire 39 miles east of Sonora on the Station B road. Volunteers from Station B had put the fire out before the local department arrived, but in a short time another fire broke out on the Sawyer ranch. About the time this fire was brought under control, another fire was spotted on the Mayfield ranch.

Each of the succeeding five fires broke out upwind from the last one and lookouts stationed on windmill platforms could see some of them ignite at a distance of a mile or two. Due to the vigilance of these lookouts and alertness on the part of the firefighters, only about 50 acres were burned off. Distance from the first to the last fire was estimated at about 6 airline miles.

Firemen did not return to town until 6 o'clock Tuesday morning. At 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon they were sent out again to fight a grass fire near the Sonora Wool and Mohair Company warehouse.

Feeding Of Salt - Cottonseed Meal Mix To Cattle Getting Popular

Although livestock men differ in opinion as to the value of self-feeding a mixture of salt and cottonseed meal to cattle -- particularly to breeding animals -- the practice is growing in popularity.

The practice is aimed at reducing the amount of labor normally required for feeding supplements to range cattle. Mixing a high percent of salt with protein supplement or grain limits the amount of feed consumed when the mixture is fed free-choice. The value of this method of feeding depends on whether or not cattle suffer ill effects from a high intake of salt over a long period of time.

An experiment was conducted at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, College Station, during the winter of 1949-50 to compare the results of hand-feeding two pounds of cottonseed meal daily with self-feeding a mixture of salt and cottonseed meal.

Thirty-five Angus, Hereford and Shorthorn cows were used in the test. They were divided into two groups as nearly alike as possible with respect to age, breed, weight and expected date of calving. The groups were run during the winter on two 200-acre Brazos County upland pastures. An abundance of dry winter forage was available, and the groups were alternated every two weeks to reduce the effect of the different pastures.

One group of 18 cows was hand-fed two pounds of cottonseed meal per head daily in feed bunks. The other group of 17 cows was given free access to a mixture ranging from 15 to 35 percent salt and 85 to 65 percent cottonseed meal. Water was obtained from a stream about a quarter of a mile from the feeding location.

In order to limit the daily consumption of cottonseed meal to about two pounds, the beef cattle specialists increased the sale content of the mixture as the cows consumed more feed. As feed consumption dropped off later in the spring, the salt content was reduced.

The self-fed group consumed an average of 2.19 pounds of cottonseed meal and .95 pounds of salt per day over the 107-day test period. The hand-fed group received two pounds of cottonseed meal per day over the period.

Since the dry winter forage was low in nutritive content and somewhat unpalatable, the cows did not consume enough to maintain their weight. The average loss in weight per cow was about the same for both groups, 155 pounds.

Thirteen calves were dropped in the self-fed group and 12 in the hand-fed group. The calves from the salt-fed group averaged 162 pounds at 79 days of age, while those from the hand-fed group averaged 164 pounds at 85 days of age.

Five cows of the salt-fed group scoured periodically. One cow started scouring January 16, was too weak to weigh January 27, and died February 6. No scouring was observed in cows of the hand-fed group.

The specialists concluded from this experiment that self-feeding mixtures of salt and cottonseed meal may cause scouring and death losses of breeding cows when the salt intake is one to one and one-half pounds per day and the pasture and water conditions are similar to those existing in this trial.

However, they think that this system of feeding supplements might possibly be practical under ideal conditions of feed and water supply. More experiments with the use of salt-cottonseed meal mixtures are now being conducted.

A LOOK AT THE BOOK

By DR. BOB JONES, JR.

PRESIDENT OF BOB JONES UNIVERSITY — GREENVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA

Discouragement is the great enemy of achievement. We start out with so much enthusiasm and when we do not immediately see the results or if the obstacles are greater than we anticipated, the temptation is to say, "Well, I cannot do it anyway," and give up. Most of us are tempted by discouragement to quit. Oftentimes the difference between the man who is a failure and the man who is a success is that one yields to the temptation and the other resists it. This holds not only in the struggle for material things, for fame and knowleldge, but also in the struggle to live a victorious Christian life. We grow weary in well doing.

It was discouragement which caused Elijah under the juniper tree to pray for death. "It is enough," he said, referring to the opposition of the rulers of Israel to his message and the power of the priests of Baal and the hardness of heart of the people. "It is enough," he said, meaning "I have had all I can stand. I cannot take any more." Any man who tries to accomplish anything for God in the world feels like making the prophet's wail a duet by blending his cry with the discouraged Elijah's "It is enough." This is the cry of a weary body and tired mind and heavy heart. It is the cry of the man who has given up the struggle with the goal unachieved or who is despondent because of the difficulties and the trials that harass him. It is the cry of surrender, of defeat, and failure.

But, there is another cry, the cry of victory and fulfillment, the peal of triumph when the job is done. This is the cry of the Lord on the cross seeing man's redemption accomplished and the price of sin paid. "It is finished" (John 19:30). This is no languid sigh. It is a shout of triumph. What an example of perseverance to the end we find in this and the circumstances which went before it! "He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem" (Luke 9:15) to die. "As a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so He openeth not His mouth" (Isaiah 53:7); beneath the blows of the lash, the jeers and the persecution, and the piercing of the thorny crown. He never hestitated. He "endured the cross despising the shame" (Herbrews 12:2). There is no word of complaint, but at the end the shout of victory. How much better the cry "It is finished," when the task is completed than the sigh, "It is enough," when the work is only half done.

Twenty-five million cups like the ones being held by this pretty student nurse from a Hackensack, N. J., hospital will be stockpiled in strategic warehouses for use if bombs fall on America. Paper cups and food containers are essential not only for medical care but are also necessary for emergency feeding when water supplies are cut off or contaminated. They are being voluntarily stockpiled in 12 to 15 strategic locations by the paper cup and container industry and will be available for disaster use by Civilian Defense, Red Cross or Public Health officials.

Now is the height of the season for pruning, watering and fertilizing many of the shrubs and trees used in landscaping the farmstead.

MORE and BETTER COTTON . . .

SEED ROT kills many cotton seeds before they can sprout

Why do some of the cotton seeds you plant fail to come up? Seed rot is the answer in a great many cases. Disease organisms in your soil attack the seeds and make them rot or decay, before the seeds have any chance to sprout or germinate.

The rot-producing organisms can attack your seeds in any kind of weather. Their effects are worst in a spell of cold, damp weather shortly after planting time. But even in fine weather, they can cut down your cotton crop before it ever starts to grow.

There are several kinds of harmful bacteria or fungi that can live in your soil. You cannot see them without a microscope. But you can see their effects all too clearly, by scooping up some dirt from a spot where you planted seeds that never came up. Just by looking at them, you can plainly see how the seeds have decayed.

Fortunately you can prevent much or most of this seed decay, and at a low cost for the chemical – less than 10¢ per acre. Just treat your seed (or have it treated) before planting, with an organic mercury dust. This will protect your seed from the bacteria that cause decay. Ask your County Agent about the value of this treatment and where you can get your seed treated.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS FROM VETERANS ADMINISTRATION

Q. During World War II, I served 45 days and then was discharged. In 1949 I went back into the Army. If I get out before the training cut-off date, will I be eligible for GI Bill training?

A. No. A veteran who has less than 90 days' wartime service must have served at least 90 consecutive days, part of which was within the war period (September 16, 1940 to July 25, 1947) or have been discharged for service-connected disability, in order to be eligible for GI Bill benefits. Your wartime and postwar service were not consecutive; hence you would not be eligible.

Q. May I waive my disability compensation for each Saturday only, the day I expect to perform inactive duty in the Air Force Reserve?

A. Yes. Public Law 844, 81st Congress, permits you to waive compensation for those days on which you are engaged in "active duty or drill . . . or other duty." Also, your right to compensation remains unimpaired by reason of such duty or pay. The provision covers any period between July 1, 1947, and September 28, 1955.

The next National Jamboree of the Boy Scouts of America is scheduled for the summer of 1953, the third such encampment.

Who in your family has a birthday this month?

Make your birthday gift the present with a future!

CANDLES ON the cake this month for someone close to you? One of your youngsters, or a favorite niece or grandchild? Make your gift the one that keeps on growing birthday, after birthday. A United States Savings Bond, the present with a future!

Bond buying is the easiest gift shopping in the world. You can make the purchase conveniently at any bank or post office or at your place of employment. There's a price for every pocketbook—from $18.75 to $375. And bonds are always on sale at 25% off ($18.75 buys a bond worth $25 at maturity).

Make it a habit to give U. S. Savings Bonds—for birthdays, for Christmas, or for any special occasion.

Put yourself on your gift list, too!

Start now to give yourself the gift of future security. Start saving regularly, safely, systematically, by buying U. S. Savings Bonds in your own name. Use the Weekly Payroll Savings Plan where you work or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you bank.

Your bond gift grows from birthday to birthday

(For simplicity, the table below shows only bond value increases at two-year intervals. Actually, the cash value of a U. S. Savings Bond increases every year after the first year.)
