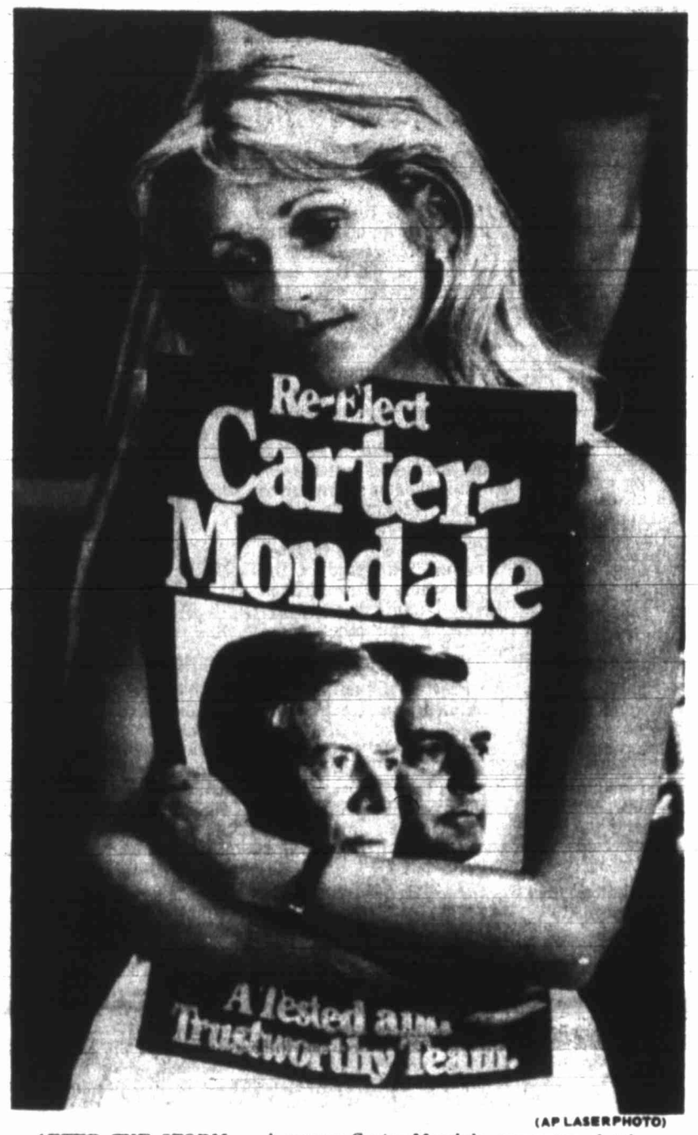
Kennedy will work for Carter



(AP LASERPHOTO)

AFTER THE STORM — A weary Carter-Mondale supporter clutches a poster on the floor of New York's Madison Square Garden Wednesday night after the Democratic Convention chose President Carter as their nominee.

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter is launching his fall re-election campaign today with the endorsement he sought so fervently from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and, at least seemingly, the party unity he needed to meet the twin challenges from Republican Ronald Reagan and independent John Anderson.

"I will support and work for the re-election of President Carter," Kennedy said in a post-midnight statement.

That, perhaps even more than the declaration of nomination, was what Carter and his lieutenants wanted to hear to cap their anxious efforts to bring the Massachusetts senator aboard the campaign after the long and bitter struggle for the nomination.

The often-turbulent Democratic National Convention concludes tonight with the formal renomination of Vice President Walter F. Mondale and the winners' acceptance speeches.

And while there was no definite word, it was widely assumed Kennedy would seal his support with a closing appearance on the podium with the ticket he wanted to displace.

For Carter, Wednesday night's convention session was a triumphant moment in his embattled presidency but one he was forced to share with his defeated rival.

As the roll call of the states was read for the presidential nomination balloting, the cheers often were louder for Kennedy than for Carter.

When the heads of delegations called out their votes, they consistently referred to Carter as "the next president of the United States." For Kennedy, they used words like "gallant...eloquent...courageous."

The loudest cheer for Carter came when the Texas delegation announced shortly after midnight that its 108 votes had put Carter over the 1,666 he needed for renomination.

At that, the delegates waved Carter-Mondale signs and shouted and stomped about the floor as Carter's wife grosalynn, his mother, Lillian Carter, and other members of his family watched in Madison Square Garden.

But the cheers of these unity-hungry delegates grew into a roar of relief a few minutes later when House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., the convention chairman, interrupted the demonstration with a message from Kennedy:

"I congratulate President Carter on his renomination. I endorse the platform of the Democratic Party," O'Neill read from the five-sentence statement. "I will support and work for the re-election of President Carter. It is imperative that we defeat Ronald Reagan in 1980. I urge all Democrats to join in that effort."

Then, the speaker added, "And so, united we stand."

That was only mostly true.

A short time later, when the Minnesota delegation offered the traditional motion to make Carter's nomination unanimous, delegates shouted, "No, No, No."

There was a pause. Delegates milled about. Finally, there was a stir in the Massachusetts delegation and Lt. Gov. Thomas O'Neill, the speaker's son who had been Kennedy's New England campaign coordinator, asked for recognition.

He told the delegates that he had just spoken with Kennedy and "it is his wish in the interest of harmony and unity and success in 1980" that Carter's nomination be made unanimous.

With a roar of approval, the delegates acceded to Kennedy's request.

The platform adopted earlier in the day was the key to Kennedy's endorsement. Carter had defeated Kennedy with unexpected ease in a string of early primaries. By the end of the primary election season, the president had amassed more than the convention majority he needed for renomination. But Kennedy refused to quit.

Only after failing to defeat a rule that required delegates to abide by preconvention commitments did Kennedy give up. Carter had the votes and he was certain of keeping them, but he still didn't get them all.

The roll-call vote on the nomination was 2,129 for Carter, 1,146.5 for Kennedy, 2.5 for Rep. Ronald Dellums of California and 51 for others.

Only Carter's and Dellum's names were placed in nomination. Kennedy formally released his delegates from their obligation to him, but most supported him anyway.

And even in losing, Kennedy put his stamp on the platform, including a call for a $12 billion anti-recession program to 800,000 jobs that Carter eventually accepted in principle if not in particulars.

There had been reports after Carter flew to New York on Wednesday that Kennedy made the jobs program the price of his endorsement.

Finally, in compliance with a party rule the president had accepted in an earlier concession to Kennedy, Carter issued a statement in which he said he supported the "thrust and ideals" of the platform.

On the jobs program, Carter said, "I support the intent...and plan to pursue policies that will implement its spirit and aims."

He promised to soon announce his own program to create "hundreds of thousands of jobs in the next year," but said the cost "will necessarily depend upon economic conditions."

That proved enough for Kennedy and for organized labor. The AFL-CIO issued a statement saying, "We are glad the president's statement accepts the principles and objectives" of the jobs plank.

The setting for Carter's victorious night was the same arena where he won the presidential nomination four years earlier at a Democratic convention marked by an extraordinary degree of unity.

Carter left that convention with a 30 percent lead in public opinion polls over incumbent Republican Gerald R. Ford.

He will leave this convention as the underdog to Reagan and the most vulnerable candidate to Anderson's courtship of disaffected Democrats.

Anderson met for one hour on Wednesday in New York with former Wisconsin Gov. Pat Lucey, former deputy campaign chairman for Kennedy. Lucey said he would study Anderson's record and then decide if he could support him.

Carter, Mondale may show up for delegation's party

Harte-Hanks Election Team

NEW YORK — Texas Democratic chairman Billy Goldburg sat smiling in the midst of national convention hoopla last night and predicted that a Texas caucus party set for today would be "a love fest."

He didn't explain, but it leaked out this morning that both President Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy had been invited to the Texas celebration.

Texas party executive director Garry Mauro confirmed that there was a good possibility of both showing up.

Another staff member who has been on the telephone trying to work out the arrangements said the Carter camp sounds positive about an appearance by the president and Vice President Walter Mondale would attend if Carter cannot.

The party was scheduled for 1 p.m. Big Spring time at the delegation hotel, the New York Hilton.

It was not known this morning among the Texas leadership whether the Texas party would be the first joint appearance by the former foes for the Democratic nomination. A big national victory luncheon was scheduled for noon today.

The decision to try to get Carter and Kennedy to attend came from the three co-chairmen of the Texas delegation — Goldburg, John Hill and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby — and Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, a strong and longtime Carter supporter.

They were looking for ways to heal the wounds of the fight for the nomination.

Carter won about two-thirds of the Texas delegates in the May-June convention process but Kennedy's 38 backers remained loyal to the end and unhappy with the president's national convention victory.

Texas party leaders admit that the Carter-Mondale team faces an uphill fight to capture the state in November against Ronald Reagan. But they say victory will come if the party is united.

Today's party is seen as a first step toward that unification.

Escapee crashes car through barricade, killing woman

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A man who escaped from the Blanco County jail crashed a stolen sheriff's car through a barricade and into another auto Wednesday night, fatally injuring a 54-year-old woman.

Betty Finnigan died in the collision at the end of the chase in which 20 law officers pursued David Morgan, 22, of San Antonio, at speeds up to 100 mph. She was dead at Bexar County Hospital at 11:20 p.m.

Morgan was treated for minor injuries and then charged with capital murder and jailed in lieu of $100,000 bond set by Night Magistrate Quon Lew.

Blanco County deputies said Morgan scaled a 7-foot fence at the jail in Johnson City and purloined a sheriff's patrol car which was parked with its engine running near the jail. Deputy Charles Gunby had parked the car outside the jail while he went inside to pick up some papers.

The stolen car was equipped with police radios and had a .38-caliber revolver laying on the front seat, Blanco County Sheriff W.J. Haas said.

The fleeing automobile crashed through roadblocks on Texas Highway 46 and Loop 1604 as the ensuing chase moved toward San Antonio. The chase ended in San Antonio when local patrolman Buck Conrad set up a road block on West Avenue.

The stolen car slammed into Mrs. Finnigan's automobile, causing it to hit another car, then the fleeing patrol car veered of the pavement, smashed into a cedar fence and sheared off a telephone poll.

Drive for funds is slowing down

Four more gifts for the Bible Fund have arrived at the Herald, bringing the total committed to the campaign to $2,391. The goal is $10,000.

Among donors is the Airport Baptist Church, which forwarded a check for $100.

The drive is scheduled to formally end Aug. 31. Sponsoring organization is the Howard County Ministerial Association.

Check can be made out to The Bible Fund and forwarded either to Dr. Kenneth Patrick, c-o First Baptist Church, Big Spring, or to the Herald, Box 1431, Big Spring 79720. The Herald is helping coordinate the drive.

Latest gifts included:

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Safer salad

Q. What can be done to make potato salad safer on picnic outings? Seems a lot of people get food poisoning from such dishes. What are some of the other foods to be especially careful about?

A. Potato salad should be stored in shallow containers so that it becomes chilled throughout the mixture. Potato salad is usually made up and stored in a large deep dish. If the ingredients are warm when the potato salad is mixed, it takes a long time for it to chill thoroughly. Moist foods, high in protein, such as milk, milk products, eggs, meat, poultry, fish, shellfish, cream pies and custards all spoil easily.

Calendar: Trustees call meet

TODAY

Big Spring School Board Trustees will meet at 5:15 p.m. at the high school for regular meeting.

La Leche League of Big Spring, an organization providing support for breast-feeding mothers, will meet at 7 p.m. at 2906 Stonehaven. All interested women are invited to attend.

Open house for mothers of Big Spring High School football players, 6:30 p.m., varsity dressing rooms of Steer Gymnasium.

TODAY AND FRIDAY

The Singing Moralez family will be performing at the La Fe Mexican Baptist Church, 1011 N. Scurry, today and Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Tops on TV: Convention

Convention coverage continues on all three networks, yet not without some respite. Part two of a rousing film, "The Rebels," airs at 8 p.m. on channel 11. Otherwise, it's the same old sixes and sevens.

Inside: Allen costs

WHEN SOUTH TEXANS finish ringing up the bill from Hurricane Allen, damages and overtime costs will run into the hundreds of millions of dollars. That tally is from a storm that failed to live up to its advance destructive billing. See page 10-A.

TERRELL COUNTY SHERIFF Dalton Hogg says Hurricane Allen may have brought death and misery to hundreds in the Caribbean, but it was good to the people in his isolated Southwestern county. See page 10-A.

Outside: Rain?

Chance of rain this afternoon and Friday. High today in the upper 80s, low tonight near 70. High Friday in the low 90s. Winds will be from the south at 15 to 20 mph this afternoon through Friday, except 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Man strips, slips jail

MINERAL WELLS, Texas (AP) — A New Mexico prison escapee turned the odds in his favor twice, and slithered nude through a window in the Palo Pinto County Jail where he was being held on aggravated robbery charges.

Toby Sammie Barelo Jr., 21, apparently broke an inch-thick, reinforced glass window in his cell and slipped through the 6-inch by 15-inch hole sometime Tuesday night, deputies said.

Motorists along U.S. 180, west of Palo Pinto, reported a naked man in a roadside park knocking on car windows during the night, before deputies were aware that Barelo had escaped.

Police said a man later commandeered a car not far from Mineral Wells and and left the driver bound and gagged.

Barelo, who had been serving a five year term at Roswell Correctional Center in New Mexico, escaped from the minimum security prison in June and had allegedly taken part in a three-county Texas robbery spree until his arrest in July, officials said.

Palo Pinto County deputies Wednesday searched a roadside park along U.S. 180, west of Palo Pinto, after discovering the empty cell at around 7 a.m.

Barelo was awaiting trial on three charges of aggravated robbery when he escaped.

Freeway killer case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A third defendant in the Freeway Killer case has pleaded innocent to six counts of murder and three counts of robbery.

Vernon Robert Butts, 22, entered his plea Wednesday. Municipal Judge Barbara Jean Johnson ordered Butts held without bail and scheduled an Oct. 31 preliminary hearing.

Butts is charged in six of the 14 deaths to which co-defendant William Bonin has pleaded innocent. James Munro, who also has pleaded innocent, is charged in one of the slayings in the case, in which the bodies of 44 young men were found along California freeways.

Searching for Titanic

NEW YORK (AP) — High winds and choppy seas aren't deterring an American team searching for the Titanic in the depths of the North Atlantic, says the leader of the expedition.

Mike Harris told The Associated Press via ship-to-shore phone that the research vessel H.J.W. Fay experienced "some equipment damage" in last weekend's 12-foot seas.

The search has resumed for the famous liner that sunk in 1912 after hitting an iceberg about 400 miles southeast of Newfoundland. Harris said the crew remains "highly optimistic," although another storm with eight-foot swells began Wednesday.

Crisp joins Anderson

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Crisp, who resigned in tears last month as co-chairman of the Republican National Committee, was named today to a senior post in John B. Anderson's independent presidential campaign.

Anderson announced that Ms. Crisp would become chairperson of his campaign with responsibilities for political strategy, fundraising and personal speechmaking appearances. It was the latest move in the Illinois congressman's effort to put new life in his campaign and encourage support from disenchanted Republicans and Democrats.

At a news conference where her appointment was announced, Anderson said Ms. Crisp "would have broad responsibilities" in his campaign.

Standing at Anderson's side, Ms. Crisp attacked the Republican platform as "outrageous ... it is an insult to the American people."

PLUNGE STOPPED — Twenty-year-old Cathy Olds is captured in net, preventing her from dropping the 12 stories to the street from a hotel window in New York Wednesday. The woman was lured from the window with the offer of a cigarette. The rescue team dropped a life net from a room above hers and as she saw the net drop she sprang from the window again and leaped out, but was pinned by the net to the side of the building and then hauled to safety, police said. She was then taken to Bellevue Hospital for observation.

Police beat

Drugs are confiscated

Combined efforts by local and state law enforcement agents netted seven pounds of marijuana, six mature plants, a number of prescription pills and a variety of drug paraphenalia in a bust, Wednesday morning.

"This was the biggest amount of marijuana we have confiscated in a long time," said Jimmy Lockhart, member of the local Major Crime Task Force.

According to Lockhart, he and fellow task force member Mike Eggleston, got wind of what amounted to a marijuana assembly line in early February. During that time, the two detectives mounted steady surveillance of the suspect's home.

When they were ready to make their move, they called on State Undercover Narcotics Officer C.V. Moore, State Trooper Glen Redmon, Detective George Quintero and others for assistance.

Arrested was Narciso Cevallas, 47, who resides four miles north of Big Spring on Snyder Highway.

Cevallos was arrested, 10:25 a.m. Wednesday, and was charged with felony possession of marijuana that same morning. Bond was set at $20,000 by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin.

Charles Tate, 1018 Birdwell, believes he knows the man and the car that rammed his pickup, 9:10 a.m. Wednesday at Third and Goliad. Cost of the damage has not been estimated.

Thieves stole a wire, animal trap from the home of Johnnie F. Rawls, 100 Brown, sometime Wednesday. The trap was valued at $50.

Vandals tossed a rock through the bedroom window of the Clifton McPeak home, 800 Lorilla, 9 p.m. Wednesday. Cost of the damage has not been estimated.

A man walked into the Seven-Eleven Grocery, 700 N. Lancaster, 11:50 p.m. Wednesday, and shoplifted two 12-packs of beer. Loss was estimated at $10.25.

Two mishaps were reported Wednesday.

Vehicles driven by Kenneth Miller, Lubbock, and Reginald Cranford, Chaparral Road, collided at 1610 Canary, 3:39 p.m.

Vehicles driven by Sherri Callihan, Sterling City Route, and Charlotte Hensley, Moss Lake Road, collided in the College Park Shopping Center, 11:33 a.m.

Singing family will perform

The Singing Miralez Family will be at the La Fe Mexican Baptist Church, 1011 N. Scurry, tonight at 7:30 p.m. through Friday night.

The singing family began their career in 1973 in their hometown of Freer, Tex. They went to a full-time concert tour in 1978.

The family consists of three boys, four girls and their parents, Eddie and Adelfa Miralez.

Coahoma pep squad to meet

COAHOMA — Coahoma High School girls who plan to be in the pep squad this fall are being reminded to attend an organizational meeting in the Coahoma Junior High Library at 6:30 p.m., Tuesday.

Materials to be used in the girls' dresses, styles and related subjects will be discussed during the hour-long meeting. Mothers are also being invited to be in attendance.

Early signoff is scheduled

Big Spring Cable TV Channel Eight will sign off early for the next three weeks, said Jim Lancaster, manager of the local service, today.

According to Lancaster, the Dallas station is in the midst of replacing its broadcasting tower, and has begun signing off for the day at midnight. The station had previously broadcast shows 24 hours a day.

Following the three-week construction project, the station will resume normal broadcast times, said Lancaster.

Probated term given Freeman

Leo Lester Freeman, Levelland, entered a plea of guilt Wednesday in 118th District Court to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

He received a six-year probated sentence from District Judge Jim Gregg.

Freeman was arrested July 30 and transferred to county jail the next day.

Freeman stole a 1974 Ford Pinto from Vicki Heintz July 21. The car was recovered in Henrietta.

School zones clearly defined by BS council

The Big Spring City Council has formally designated school zones that already exist.

During its regular meeting, Tuesday night, the council voted to formally establish school zones at every school in the city.

"This actually legalizes the zones we presently have, but I think it's a good idea to do this before school begins," said City Manager Don Davis.

Davis said that portions of one zones will have to be revised later in the winter because of inequities. In some cases, he explained, the zone is longer for northbound traffic than for southbound traffic on the same street.

The council also granted a temporary permit for the installation of a mobile home by Gary Shaffer at 1500 E. 4th, behind an Exxon Station there. The station will serve as the new headquarters for Shaffer Ambulance Service, and the mobile home will provide sleeping quarters for employees.

Council members voted to allow D&C Carpenters to rent the former Webb AFB carpentry shop at the Big Spring Industrial Park. Rent will be $300 a month.

Two city employees were honored at Tuesday night's meeting, Raymond Torres, a warehouseman with the city for 30 years, received a gift for his long, devoted service.

Detective David Spilman received a five-year pin from the city after joining the local police force as a patrolman in 1975.

Weather

Southwest Texas hard-hit by rain

By the Associated Press

Heavy thunderstorms dumped as much as 7 inches of rain in far Southwest Texas during the night. More thunderstorms were forecast today for the area hard-hit by lingering rainfall from the remains of once-powerful Hurricane Allen.

A flash flood watch remained in effect for Southwest Texas along and west of the Pecos River today.

The National Weather Service said the 7 inches of rain was reported along the Rio Grande between El Paso and the Big Bend area. Other parts of Southwest Texas got about 2 inches of rain and isolated light showers were reported in West Texas.

Forecasts called for scattered thunderstorms over most of the state today with the thunderstorms most numerous in Southwest Texas.

Highs were to be mostly in the 90s and up to and slight above 100 except along the coastal plains and in far West Texas where readings were to be in the 80s.

Wichita Falls was the state's hot spot Wednesday with 101.

Skies were mostly cloudy over the western half of the state early today and mostly clear over the eastern half.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s although readings in Southwest Texas dipped into the middle 60s. Extremes ranged from 65 at Marfa in Southwest Texas to 83 at Dallas-Fort Worth.

WEATHER FORECAST

WEST TEXAS — Flash flood watch along and west of Pecos River today. Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms through Friday, more numerous along and west of Pecos River today with locally heavy rain possible. Highs 88 to 98 except 80 mountains. Lows 66 to 76. Highs Friday 89 to 95.

Public hearing is set

City tax boost looms

By JAMES WERRELL

The Big Spring City Council wants to raise the tax rate for the upcoming fiscal year.

On Wednesday morning, the council held a special meeting to vote on a motion to announce its intentions to raise the tax rate and to set a date for a public hearing on the issue.

The council had intended to vote the motion through on an emergency reading during its regular meeting Tuesday night, but that required a unanimous vote from all members. Councilman Larry Miller voted against the motion, saying that he wanted more time to gauge the pulse of the community.

The Wednesday vote required only a majority to pass the motion on what constituted a second reading.

The action by the council provides for the publication of a notice of a public hearing on the intent to raise taxes. That hearing will be held at the regular City Council meeting of Aug. 26.

The following is a news release issued by the city explaining its reasons for the proposed tax hike:

The City Council has been presented a budget by the City staff, which calls for expenditures of all funds in the amount of approximately $8,400,000. This is a 13 percent increase from the revised 1970-80 budget. In order to meet these expenditures, the proposed budget anticipates a 22 percent increase in the property tax rate, a 50 cent increase in the residential sanitation rate, an average increase of 45 percent in the commercial sanitation rate (depending upon the size container and number of pickups required), and a 23 percent increase in the price of lots and services at Mt. Olive Cemetery.

The proposed budget does not contemplate any adjustments in the water or sewer rates.

The reasoning behind the proposed rate increases is as follows:

1. The Council feels that, whenever possible, municipal services should pay for themselves. Presently, the sanitation operation, both collection and disposal, are operating at a deficit. This is also the case at Mt. Olive Cemetery. These proposed rate increases will not meet the operational expenses of these departments; however, they will minimize the amount of subsidy that these departments receive from the ad valorem tax.

2. There has not been a rate adjustment in the City of Big Spring since 1977. Since that time, according to the Department of Labor's consumer price index for all commodities, the cost of living has increased by 31 percent.

3. The greatest increase in taxable property within Howard County over the past year has been oil and gas wells. Unfortunately, the City of Big Spring does not have any oil and gas property within the city limits and as a result has not benefitted from these increases. The other growth in our tax roll has not been sufficient to meet the increased cost of our operations.

A large percent of this increase will be in employee's salaries and benefits. An increase of 7½ percent is proposed for the commissioned personnel within the Police and Fire Departments. Other employees would receive a 6 percent increase October 1, and most would be eligible for 5 percent merit increases in February. Additional funds are proposed for increasing the benefits within the employee retirement program.

The other most significant increase in expenses will be for replacement of equipment. The new equipment will allow more efficient and effective use of city personnel, while reducing the maintenance and upkeep costs of the present obsolete equipment.

In addition to the above mentioned highlights included in all funds, there are some programs proposed in specific funds which are summarized below:

1. The General Fund Budget proposes a pilot program of containerized refuse collection in residential neighborhoods. This program would provide a more effective way of collecting garbage, while at the same time eliminating a lot of the trash and debris which presently exists in our alleys.

2. A reorganization and additional personnel are proposed for the water office. These employees would work delinquent accounts, change out dead water meters, maintain and repair water meters, and generally provide more depth for that department.

3. There is proposed in the Airport and Industrial Park Fund the reconstruction of the crosswind runway and the new construction of a Industrial Park entrance.

The public hearing on the budget, including the rate adjustments, is scheduled for the regular City Council meeting of Aug. 26. Anyone interested in the proposed budget is welcome to attend that meeting.

Probated term is handed out

Fred Donald McElwee, Odessa, entered a plea of guilt in 118th District Court Wednesday to auto theft.

He received an eight-year probated sentence. McElwee was arrested July 17 and transferred to county jail the next day. Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Bob West at $7,500.

McElwee allegedly stole a 1978 Ford from Zada Flynt July 11. The car was recovered in Cheyenne, Wyo. when McElwee was arrested there. McElwee was extradited back to Texas.

Samuel Hill appointed to SWCID position

Samuel A. Hill has been named director of counseling for the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf here, according to executive director Doug Burke.

Hill comes to SWCID from the Southwest Center for the Hearing Impaired in San Antonio, where he served as counseling coordinator and placement specialist. He will eventually head a staff of four counselors at the institute, which is scheduled to open in September.

"It is very much needed and in time will be in great demand," Hill said of the new institute. "I am excited about it and I am actively recruiting the other counselors."

Hill explained the importance of having the self-contained program for deaf students which will be offered at SWCID. "Most of the education for the deaf in colleges has been through mainstreaming with interpreters and without the benefits of other programs we have."

SWCID's self-contained program will include counseling in many areas and a program to prepare deaf students for college.

After receiving a bachelor degree in economics from St. Edwards University in San Antonio, Hill completed the masters program in counseling for the hearing impaired at Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C.

While working on his masters, Hill has worked as counselor, instructor, and deaf interpreter at Gallaudet College. He has also worked as dormitory counselor and recreation director at the Texas School for the Deaf in Austin, and as a counselor at Delgado Junior College in New Orleans.

He has also served as a counselor for the deaf at Davis Memorial Goodwill Center in Washington, D.C.

Hill has extensive experience as an interpreter for the deaf and has taught sign language.

He is an honorary member of Theta Nau Tau, a social fraternity for the deaf, and is a member of the American Deafness and Rehabilitation Association.

Hill said he is pleased to be a member of the "well qualified staff" being assembled for SWCID.

COLORADO CITY — Services for Floyd Green, 68, longtime Colorado City resident, who was found dead at his home about 3:30 p.m. Sunday were held at 4 p.m. Tuesday at Mitchell County Cemetery, directed by Kiker-Seale Funeral Home.

The Rev. Robert Bracy, minister of St. James Baptist Church, will officiate.

Born May 18, 1912, in Athens, La., he lived in Colorado City for more than 50 years. He was a general laborer. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include a number of aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews and cousins.

Sammy Forbes

COLORADO CITY — Sammy Joe Forbes, 52, a lifelong resident of Colorado City, was found dead at his home at 7:35 a.m., Wednesday. Death was attributed to natural causes.

Arrangements for services are being completed at Kiker-Seale Funeral Home.

Mr. Forbes was born Feb. 15, 1928, in Colorado City. He was an automobile mechanic. He married Dorothy Roberts June 30, 1944, in Colorado City.

Survivors include his wife, a daughter, Sherry Spivey, Colorado City; two sons, Jimmy Forbes, Colorado City, and Johnny Forbes, Dallas; six sisters, Mrs. H.P. Lee, Carol Hutto, Mrs. Melvin Bearden and Doris Ann Coleman, all of Colorado City, Mrs. Loren Keuker, Olathe, Kan., and Mrs. R.C. Prescott, Chickasha, Okla.; two brothers, Ferron and Donald, both of Colorado City; and six grandchildren.

Kathryn Wright

STANTON — Services for Kathryn Florence Wright, 84, of Stanton will be at 3 p.m. Friday at the Christ Episcopal Church in San Antonio with the Rev. John McNaughton officiating.

Burial will be in the Mission Burial Park under direction of Porter-Loring Funeral Home in San Antonio. Local arrangements were by Gilbreath Funeral Home.

She died Wednesday afternoon at Martin County Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Wright was born Aug. 24, 1895.

A Denver, Colo., native, she moved to San Antonio in 1900 and from there to Stanton in 1979. She had worked for the City of San Antonio and was a member of the Christ Episcopal Church in San Antonio.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. W.S. Decker Sr. of Stanton; three grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

Clara White

Services for Mrs. L.B. (Clara) White, 63, who died at 11:15 p.m., Tuesday in a local hospital following a sudden illness, will be at 2 p.m., Friday in the Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel, with the Rev. Jack Collier, pastor of Birdwell Lane Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Despite new laws, scars dot mining country

By JACKIE CALMES
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
(First of three parts)

Along an isolated road in rural South Texas, a chain-link fence boxes a ten-square-foot cemetery plot, its silver newness contrasting with the weathered-gray of headstones that have fallen among weeds.

Nearby, another fence surrounds the grave of Jane Hardin, believed to have been the wife of Texas outlaw John Wesley Hardin.

Neither enclosure was added by a respectful descendant. The installer was Chevron Resources Co., a subsidiary of Standard Oil of California, which is surface-mining for uranium in the area.

Corporate concern for the past, as well as present and future, is mandated in state laws regulating surface mining and reclamation of uranium and coal fields. The laws, enacted in 1975 and revised in 1979, promise not only to prevent mining that is environmentally unhealthy, but also to perform cosmetic surgery on past scars.

And scars there are, if not on the scale of Appalachia's.

In Milam County near Rockdale, a 2,300-acre moonscape blights the view of an otherwise verdant East Texas countryside.

It is the result of unregulated, pre-1975 mining for lignite, a low-grade coal. Tons of earth, or overburden, that were removed to reach the lignite remain above ground in rows, a warzone of trenches between dozens of defoliated mounds. Runoff water has eroded the slopes and settled in numerous, possibly polluted ponds.

Jerry Hill has flown over the ruin more than once. "It almost makes me sick," says Hill, director of the Texas Railroad Commission's surface mining and reclamation division.

But Bill Millikin, the division's director for South Texas, says the worst-looking piece of land in the state is in his territory.

At a pre-law uranium mine in Live Oak County, piles of naked, eroded earth flank a deep pit. Erosion has sliced the steep pit walls in jagged parallels. Murky water caught far below may be toxic.

The companies responsible for the abandoned sites, Aluminum Company of American (Alcoa) at Rockdale and Exxon Minerals, U.S.A., in Live Oak County, still mine in the areas. They are not liable for land scarred before the 1975 law.

Alcoa began mining East Texas lignite in 1954 to fuel its aluminum plant. The uranium site to the south dates to the 1960s, before Exxon joined with, and then took over from, Susquehanna-Western, Inc.

Last month, Texas became the first state to qualify for the new federal Abandoned Mine Fund. Though the Alcoa site is just one of the 58 on the Railroad Commission's list of coal mines to be restored, its 2,300 acres represent 85 percent of the list's total acreage.

Alcoa doesn't get off scot-free. The federal government taxes production — 10 cents in a ton for lignite — to support the fund. Each state gets half of what is collected from its miners to pay for reclamation of orphan sites.

Hill estimates Texas will pay $40 million to the fund by 1985. A $20 million refund could restore the more than 100 abandoned coal sites so far identified and any abandoned uranium pits, he says.

The pit in Live Oak County will owe its reclamation to other circumstances.

Improved technology and higher prices for uranium have prompted Exxon and Conoco, Inc., to tap old mines for leftover ore. Companies are responsible for reclaiming reopened sites, of which the Live Oak County mine is one.

Texas follows New Mexico and Wyoming in known reserves of uranium ore, the fuel source of nuclear power plants. Most is in South Texas; scattered deposits in West Texas are too small to be profitable.

This year, the state became the nation's top producer of lignite. Near-surface reserves — those no deeper than 200 feet — are estimated at 23 billion tons, running in a swath from Texarkana to Laredo.

West Texas has most of the estimated 12 billion tons of bituminous coal, which is a better heat source than lignite. But the seams are thin, two to five feet, and the coal is higher in polluting ash and sulphur than lignite. Two small surface mines are in Earth and Coleman counties.

Though surface mining in Texas began about mid-century, most activity is ahead as coal and uranium replace dwindling supplies of oil and natural gas. Regulations, however, were born not so much of environmental concern as of state legislators' wish to avoid federal regulation.

The 1977 federal act dealt only with coal and required states to pass similar laws if they wanted the regulatory chores. So the 1979 Legislature adopted a new, more detailed coal law and revised the 1975 state law as a separate uranium measure.

The fact that the Railroad Commission is the regulator rankles many. "A law which gives regulatory authority to an industry-oriented body is worse than no law at all," an environmental group scoffed in 1975.

This spring, commission candidate Jim Hightower charged the commission with sanctioning "rip-and-run, fast-buck strip mining" at the expense of prime farmland.

Hightower and others say the coal law is weaker, thanks to the commission. But Hill says, "If anything, it was strengthened. Before, there was no provision related to prime farmlands and the reclamation standard was less stringent."

The 1975 reclamation standard, which still applies to uranium mining, calls for land to be restored "to the same or a substantially beneficial condition." The new — and, Hill says, improved — standard requires coal mines to be reclaimed to equal "or higher or better uses."

Both standards require that topsoil, the nutrient-bearing layer, be separated from lower soils and replaced after mining to help land regain productivity.

But the lignite law requires that on prime farmland, topsoil and one or two underlying layers be separated.

There are exceptions — or, as critics prefer, loopholes.

First, the coal law's definition of prime farmland is less inclusive than many would like. Second, the commission can — and does — waive the topsoil requirement if companies prove that mixing soils will leave the land as productive as before mining.

Prime farmland is defined to exclude ranges, timberland, pasture and land not cultivated for five of the past ten years. The U.S. Soil Conservation Service unsuccessfully fought that definition, arguing that much unfarmed land could be top-rate with minimal care.

"Prime farmland is prime farmland. It doesn't make any difference what's growing on it at the present time," says James Abbott, assistant state conservationist at SCS's Tyler office.

He estimates that 35 percent of the 62-county lignite belt between Texarkana and Laredo is prime farmland. But three-fourths of that doesn't qualify under the law, he says.

"It is extremely difficult to mix the total overburden and come up with something equal to or better than the situation before land was mined," Abbott says. "I seriously doubt it could be done."

The well-documented danger is that undesirable elements and toxins will end up on the surface.

Mixing is allowed at all lignite surface mines in East Texas — at Texas Utilities' sites in Titus, Freestone and Panola counties, Alcoa's Milam County field and the Harrison County mine of ICI Americas, Inc.

Of lignite miners, only the San Miguel Electric Cooperative in Atascosa County, southeast of San Antonio, and two small operations near Laredo are charged with preserving topsoil.

To date, however, all 32 permits for uranium mining in four South Texas counties (Karnes, Live Oak, Gonzales and Atascosa) require topsoil separation to prevent leftover uranium and toxins, such as arsenic, selenium and molybdenum, from contaminating the surface.

While the topsoil question is debated in environmental terms, the real issue is economic.

A Railroad Commission memo in May estimated reclamation costs, per acre, at $2,300 if soils are handled randomly, $4,300 if a foot of topsoil is separated, and $13,300 if three topsoil layers are segregated.

In 1975, Conoco, Inc., said costly reclamation would force it to leave South Texas, where it is a major employer. The threat caused then-Gov. Dolph Briscoe to consider vetoing the bill.

He signed it. Conoco remains — and reclaims. Its Conquista Project, a joint uranium mining venture with Pioneer Nuclear, Inc., is today a reclamation showcase admired by area competitors Chevron and Exxon.

The showcase lignite mine is Texas Utilities' operation in Freestone County. Reclamation there began several years before required by law.

Neither site is problem-free, says a geologist who has studied both. But Dr. Christopher Henry of the Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin faults the Railroad Commission more than the companies.

"The Texas law is good," he says. "It is capable of doing a good job of reclamation, but it just hasn't been applied very well."

Henry particularly objects to the routine mixing of soils in East Texas. He cites North American Coal Co.'s application in late 1978 to mine 6,200 acres in Henderson County, which included three inconsistent analyses of prime farmland.

Two showed extensive prime farmland, as defined by law and by the Soil Conservation Service. A third, the work of a private consultant, showed just 1.6 percent prime land.

The Railroad Commission accepted the third and approved a permit that allows North American to mix topsoil.

The Bureau of Economic Geology is one of eight entities to which the commission sends permit applications for expert comment. Henry has not responded in over a year.

He says review was a waste of time: the commission never acted on his advice or his complaints that the voluminous applications were incorrect or incomplete.

Others who receive copies are the state's Historical Commission, Air Control Board, General Land Office, soil and water conservation board, and the departments of Health, Water Resources and Parks and Wildlife.

At Parks and Wildlife, biologist Mike McCollum reviewed applications until he resigned a year ago.

Two attend conference

Big Spring Special Educators P.J. Farmer and Mary E. Trim attended the recent conference of the Texas Council for Exceptional Children, held in Dallas.

Dr. Phyllis Newcomer, Philadelphia author, addressed the first general session. Title of her keynote address was "New Emphasis in Special Education." She explored the extreme positions of issues facing education, encouraging educators to extract portions of both extremes in assuming a position.

The second general session featured Dr. Roger Kroth, Albuquerque, who addressed the concerns of "Positive Parent-Teacher Interaction in the Education of Exceptional Learners."

The Saturday morning session featured Texan Dr. Don Hammill. His address was titled "The Special Education yet to come: What to expect of the Eighties." He maintained that education in this country is currently plateaued with most major goals having been achieved, and that leaders will emerge who are able to take advantage of the current state, and lead the profession into regeneration and rebirth.

The Texas Council for Exceptional Children is a state professional organization composed of approximately 5000 members who deal with handicapped and gifted students. About 1000 people attended the conference in Dallas.

$37,000 year mail savings

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — New proposed rules for determining gas well categories in Texas may eliminate 250,000 pieces of mail and save the Texas Railroad Commission $37,000 a year in postage.

The revised proposals for handling gas well records under the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 provides that certain forms must be mailed to the purchaser of a well's gas as well as other sellers under separate contracts.

"This requirement often results in service lists of 200 or more parties in the processing of some applications," said Sandra Buch, section director.

"Such service lists would be pared drastically under the proposed revision."

Public comment on the revised proposal will be invited, she said.

The farmer takes his chances

Despite the fact that the American consumer is wholely dependent upon the efforts of the farmer, he knows surprisingly little about the part of the American economy that keeps him from starving to death.

When prices go up in the grocery store and the meat market, the farmer's good name is abused but the odds are overwhelming that the blame lies somewhere else; that the so-called 'middle man' has begun taking a bigger cut of the product on the way to your table.

CONSIDER THESE FACTS, directly or indirectly concerning the farmer, which are passed along by a publication sympathetic to the farmer's plight and acutely aware of the challenges the farmer faces:

—On the average, an American ate about a half-pound of chicken a year 40 years ago. Today, he eats 37 pounds a year.

—For every $100 consumers spend for food, less than one percent goes for mass media advertising, excluding local newspaper advertising. So says the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

—The value per acre of farm real estate shot up 16 percent nationally last year. That followed a 12 percent boost in 1978 and a nine percent hike in 1977. In other words, the family wanting to return to the soil had to have a lot more in the way of initial investment than did his antecedents.

—The U.S. produced 17.1 million tons of red meat in 1979. That was 22 percent of the world's output and 50 percent above that of the USSR.

—The U.S. imported more meat than any other nation. Consumption reached 18.3 million metric tons in 1979, nearly a fourth of the world's total, according to the USDA.

—U.S. cotton exports for 1979-80 were forecast in the eight-million bale range, highest in 47 years.

—U.S. mile production totaled 123.6 billion pounds in 1979, up two percent from 1978.

—U.S. citrus production for the 1979-80 crop year was forecast at 15.6 million tons, 18 percent above the 1978-79 output.

—There are more chickens in the world today than people, and the number of chickens is growing faster than human population.

—There are 40 billion oranges grown in the U.S. each year. That's an average of 80 glasses of juice and 30 eating oranges per person.

—Over 250 million pounds of bread are produced each week in the U.S., and just when a lot of people thought America had gone on a breadless diet.

—The U.S. ranks second behind Russia as a potato grower. China, Poland and West Germany follow in that order.

—THE AVERAGE SIZE of a farm in the U.S. increased from 427 acres in 1975 to 450 acres in 1979. The USDA expects another three acres will be added to the average in 1980.

—Retail food prices rose by 10.9 percent in 1979 while the overall rate of inflation was 11.3 percent. Food remains one of our biggest bargains.

—While 1979 was a near-record income year for U.S. farmers, their costs for production inputs rose much faster than prices they received for farm goods.

The average consumer is prone to take the farmer's successes in stride, as if agriculture is the most predictable science known to man. It's only when the farmer fails that the consumer becomes acutely aware that the farmer constantly plays a Las Vegas type game against the elements, government regulations and the whims of the buyer in the market place — and often against the same kind of odds.

Deceptive

Around the rim

Don Woods

The first cut of "Intimate Strangers," a recent release by saxophonist Tom Scott, is deceptively simple.

Listening without knowing about the record, one would think they had gotten hold of the recording of the last song of a live set.

Scott dedicates the song, "Hi-steppers," to a pretty girl in the audience and goes on with a jazz-rock number that would lead you to believe you've purchased a loose album of recorded live music.

With a high sex note, though, at the end of the song, the realization grows that you are listening to an increasingly sophisticated piece of music.

Using a simple, done-before story line, Scott has put a day dream and the whole first side of a record between the beginning and the end of one high note.

THE STORY LINE concerns a musician who spots a "lovely lady on the third row" and begins to visualize spending time with her. Though the plot itself is not Pulitzer material, it's in the telling that the beauty lies.

The high note soars while the rhythm fades out, the synthesizer picks up the note. It becomes pure, clean sound, vibrating in the mind like a line on a computer screen. The synthesizer broadens the note, flattens it out and accentuates the vibrato.

The note forms the base for "Lost Inside the Love of You," where Eric Gale plays a soulful guitar. Well-known drummer Steve Gadd's fluid rhythm pull the listener down into the measure and back out.

Versatile Scott plays most of the instruments on the piece. The song is as easy to listen to as quiet breathing and represents falling in love at first sight. The music slows down the initial punch of the first cut and contrasts Scott's live-on-stage, jazz-rock style.

"Getaway Day" follows, a song about their day together, probably reminding the listener of sunny hillsides and "young love," according to the sleeve notes. It sounds a heck of a lot like "Hi-Steppers" to me.

The clicking sounds on the track are played with four sticks on the rim of Gadd's snare.

The slyly-title "Night Creatures," grows out of "Getaway" as an E forms the home base and casts a tie from song to song.

The song is about their evening together including sounds of dinner, the street, Harlem and dance music.

Accomplished accoustical bassist Jaco Pastorius plays a solo in the next cut that echoes "Lost Inside the Love of You."

Then on the ballad, "Do You Feel Me Now," Scott again displays his versatility by singing the piece.

Scott left the University of Southern California music school in 1967 to record his first album, "Spirit Feel." In 1970 he won the "down beat" Critics Poll for soprano sax in the Talent Deserving Wider Recognition category. He got it increasingly, when the recorded Great Scott in 1973 and was nominated for the Grammy Award.

He has also won numerous awards through polls by "down beat" magazine. The baby-faced 29-year-old has worked on over 300 albums, including two Joni Mitchell albums and ones by Carole King and Barbara Streisand.

His television scores include "Cannon," "Cade's County" "Barnaby Jones," "The Streets of San Francisco," the final "Baretta" series and the more recent novel for television, "Aspen."

HE HAS A HOST of film scores to his credit, including, "Uptown Saturday Night," "The Nine Lives of Fritz the Cat," "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes," "The Culpepper Cattle Company," and the "Sidecar Boys."

Scott's rhythm section has adopted a decidely East Indian flavor at times, probably because of the effect Ravi Shankar had on Scott's music when he performed with Shankar and George Harrison around the end of 1974.

On the flip side are four songs separate from the story in the "Intimate Strangers" suite on the first side. But Scott's musical genius remains.

Tom's invention, the Lyricon, is played with style on the first song. The Lyricon is a musical hybrid mix between synthesizer, organ and clarinet.

"You're So Good to Me," features a Hugh McCracken harmonica solo that rings with, of all things, a sound like the "Sanford and Son" theme.

"Puttin' the Bite on You," is a strong song with a fiercely conventional jazz-funk sound.

Oh, by the way, after singing the ballad, Tom hits that same high note on the sax heard after the first cut. He has told the girl that their relationship won't work because of the hectic pace of the music man's life. The high note grows shriller and kenner until the listener is transported back to the stage and the live set recorded at the first of the album.

Scott introduces the band and concludes with a blistering release of sax talent that fulfills everything you've wanted to hear from a horn.

The record is satisfying and well-heeled with tasty sax runs and characteristic percussion punch by Gadd and Ralph McDonald clicking cable jacks together on the last song. Handle it around the rim.

Kennedy's choice

Evans, Novak

NEW YORK — A sign that political sanity may be creeping into the inner psyche of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy came during a confidential talk with his advisers last week when for the first time he failed to brush off a discussion about 1984 with an imperious wave of his hand.

On innumerable earlier occasions during his quest for the 1980 presidential nomination, 1984 has been ruled out by Teddy Kennedy as a subject not fit for discussion. This time, he listened as a top aide spelled out the possible verdict on Kennedy if he cuts and runs from a victorious Jimmy Carter after the president's expected nomination Wednesday night. The verdict: You're risking a political death sentence from your party.

THE VALUE OF THAT small clue must be weighed against other pieces of evidence in seeking to unravel what most politicians feel is the last 1980 mystery of Madison Square Garden: Will Kennedy take a powder when Carter rolls to a first-ballot majority? Or will he sheathe his anti-Carter dagger, throw a perfunctory arm around the man he called a "clone of Ronald Reagan" and support the ticket in the fall campaign?

Kennedy's ambivalence is the only political talk there is here, with time closing in. It is an ambivalence that has marked all the stages of a campaign that began in the stars almost a year ago and sank to the depths after New Hampshire. The senator's play-it-by-ear strategy was exposed once again in Washington last week just after his agents concluded their pact with the White House giving Kennedy's forces — meaning principally Kennedy himself — one hour at the rostrum to argue for major changes in the made-by-Carter platform.

Out of the blue, Kennedy suddenly asked: If I should happen to lose the vote on the rules, should I go ahead and speak to the convention anyway?

The self-revelation in that question is staggering. It implied that the senator has truly believed he would win the rules vote and free Carter's delegates of their primary election loyalty pledges, despite all evidence to the contrary. It also raised doubts about his seriousness in asking for the podium for a policy discussion. The core of the White House pact was the proviso, made especially for Kennedy, to allow him to take his case directly to the delegates.

Throughout the Kennedy campaign, this ambivalence has confounded politicians trying to figure him out. After the disgrace of losing the New Hampshire primary in February, he had a well-advertised huddle with Sen. Henry M. Jackson and other defense-oriented Democrats, inviting speculation that he would transform his campaign. Days later, he made his dramatic George Washington University speech laying the foundation for a totally different campaign: Attack Carter for treason to the Democratic Party and demand the party's return to what he called its roots — New Deal, Fair Deal, New Frontier and Great Society politics in an era that clearly has cast that politics out of favor.

THE APPEARANCE OF stark indecision has infuriated major powers in the Democratic Party who have no love for Jimmy Carter. The leader of one major labor union told us that Kennedy's men have "propositioned" him to do "outrageous things" to hurt Carter. "Some of those guys around him are just crazy," this labor leader said. "The Dixie gang has out-slicked them and they don't even know it."

Extra rib a troublemaker

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have trouble with neck pain. My neck cords and muscles are very tight. X-rays show an extra rib in the area. Please explain. I also have a little arthritis in the neck. Does removal of the extra rib help? — R.J.M.

A cervical (neck) rib is an extra one located just above a first normal (top) rib. Many people with the quirk have no symptoms. However, because of its location — at the top of the chest, where large nerves and blood vessels are passing down to the arms — any extra structure can impinge and cause pain and numbness.

There is a test to demonstrate if such a rib is causing pressure of this kind. Your doctor may have done it for you in his office. While the doctor is feeling your pulse at the wrist, you are asked to put your hands on your knees. Then you take a deep breath, bend your head backward, then turn it toward the side where you have the pains.

If there is pressure from the cervical rib it shows as a sudden weakened pulse at the wrist. Why? The contortions cause contraction of certain muscles and pressure against the artery going down to your arm, stopping flow to it. Most people are not aware of this extra rib. In others, it produces the symptoms you get when your arms, chest or neck muscles are used in certain motions.

If your symptoms are severe, such as pain or loss of sensation in the arm or hand, the extra rib can be removed surgically. Yes, your neck arthritis could be another part of the same problem.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Third letter lucky, I hope! Is it possible to have a hiatal hernia that occurs only occasionally? In other words, is it sometimes present only to return to normal, then reoccur? — D.E.N.

First answer helpful, I hope!

I'll bet you are not referring so much to an hiatal hernia as to the chief symptom ascribed to it — heartburn. Heartburn may not be present at all times. It can come and go, but 60 to 70 percent of patients with hiatal hernia report this burning sensation.

A better term for your problem is gastroesophageal reflux, the splashing of stomach contents up into the esophagus. That causes the pain, not all the time, but when the situation is ripe for it. And, of course, you don't even have to have H.H. to have reflux.

In any event, there are some simple mechanical tricks to keep the acid in the stomach where it belongs. Don't strain or bend, especially after meals. Lift with your legs, not with your back. Elevate the head of your bed at night, and if you lie down after meals be sure you prop your upper body with pillows. Some substances promote reflux — peppermint, fat, alcohol, chocolate and caffeine. Eating between meals causes problems, so avoid that. Use antacids as you need them, but not to excess. Losing weight helps. The booklet "Hiatal Hernia and Eight Ways to Combat It" might be helpful. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I want to ask some questions that have come up in conversations. 1. Can a man have intercourse if he has had his prostate gland removed? 2. Can a doctor tell from a pelvic exam whether a woman is having sex with someone other than her husband? 3. If a man is drunk and gets a woman pregnant, will the child be retarded? — E.J.D.

To the prostate question, yes; to the other two, no.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What do you recommend as activity for people who have rheumatoid arthritis? — Mrs. P.R.

That is a tall order. I can only answer generally. The key to mobility for those with arthritis is to give the affected joints sufficient movement without too great a stress.

To learn about the major categories of prostate trouble — symptoms, treatment, how to speed recovery — read the booklet, "The Pesky Prostate." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Editor:

This letter is not to gripe or complain, merely to inform people who may need to know. The gates leading to the emergency room at the VA Medical Center are locked in the early hours of the morning.

If this letter will help even one family I will not be sorry I took time to write.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Ill health has made me almost helpless and I can no longer do the many Christian activities in which I used to engage. Can you suggest anything with which to occupy my mind? — J.T.

DEAR J.T.: I believe these could be the most fruitful and satisfying years of your life. Remember, God is just as concerned about you now as He has been throughout your life, and He wants to bless you and use you. The Bible says, "I will be your God through all your lifetime, yes, even when your hair is white with age. I made you and I will care for you. I will carry you along and be your savior" (Isaiah 46:4, Living Bible).

What can you do now? First, turn your mind more and more to things of God. Possibly your area has a Christian radio station, and this can be a means of blessing to you. If you can still read, remember to set aside a time each day to read the Word of God.

But most of all I encourage you to have a ministry of prayer. How tragic we think that prayer is inactivity, while only work is activity! Quite the opposite is the case. Prayer is work, although it is also our greatest joy when we understand its true place and power. Remember what the Bible says: "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (James 5:16).

I urge you to begin drawing up a list of items for prayer which you can continue to bring before the Lord week by week. Contact some missionaries and get their prayer letters. Pray for your minister and the members of your church. Ask your church to send you their newsletter if they have one so you can pray specifically. Pray for others who have needs, and for other Christian ministries. I would be grateful for your prayers for me and my ministry. The Bible also tells us to pray for government leaders. Wouldn't it be wonderful if Christians would watch the evening news and then pray for the needs of this troubled world?

May God bless you and use you for His glory.

Mud slinging

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Eight years ago, the hero of the Democratic convention was the gentle, genial Sen. George McGovern. He took a shellacking at the polls — the victim of one of the dirtiest presidential campaigns in political history.

Now he is back on the hustings, largely overlooked, running for re-election in his native South Dakota. But he hasn't been forgotten by the implacable forces of the far right who abhor his unrepentant liberalism. George McGovern is as green in their memories as the cash they are pumping into South Dakota to keep him from being re-elected.

AND ONCE AGAIN, he is being splattered with campaign mud. The right-wing ideologues and single-issue zealots are holding poor McGovern responsible for just about all that's wrong in the world. "Unfortunately," lamented one supporter, "if you tell it loud enough and long enough, people will begin to believe it. It is almost subliminal hypnosis."

McGovern's support of federally funded abortions has earned him the epithet of "baby killer" in local newspaper ads. One of the sleaziest tactics has been the distribution by the Life Amendment Political Action Committee of lurid photos of dead fetuses displayed next to a picture of McGovern. These were not only mailed out wholesale to South Dakota voters, but placed on windshields of cars parked outside Sunday church services.

Bankrolling much of the "get McGovern" effort is the National Conservative Political Action Committee. Its headquarters is in Arlington, Va., and it seems to have few ties to South Dakota, other than to have designated state's senior senator its No. 1 target for political oblivion this year.

NCPAC has spent $135,000 so far in its attempt to nail McGovern. Yet Federal Election Commission officials note there are no itemized receipts from South Dakota in the list of contributors that NCPAC filed with the FEC. This suggests that little of the anti-McGovern money is coming from his constituents.

CURIOUSLY, NCPAC HAS not reported to the FEC a single itemized contribution since last October, though it has taken in more than $2 million since then. Experienced fund-raisers express doubt that such a large sum could be raised without at least some big contributors. In earlier FEC filings, NCPAC listed a number of oil and gas firms and other Big Business donors.

Footnote: NCPAC head Paul Dolan confirmed the group's intention to beat McGovern. He insisted that the committee's average contribution is $14, and voiced approval of the right-to-lifers' campaign, telling my associate Lucette Lagnado that McGovern "believes in murdering babies." Dolan expressed surprise that NCPAC had not been filing itemized reports with the FEC and promised the oversight would be corrected. Another NCPAC target, incidentally, is the able Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

REASSESSING RONNIE: Jimmy Carter's operatives were sniffing around in Detroit last month, and came away deciding that the Republican candidate is not, after all, vulnerable to attack as the arch-conservative they had been counting on. Their reports indicated that those in Reagan's inner circle are bright and politically savvy, and are determined to broaden Reagan's political views — or at least the public's perception of them. In other words, this will not be a replay of the Johnson-Goldwater campaign.

THE SCOOP ON 'SCOOP': One of Henry "Scoop" Jackson's backers as an "alternative" to Jimmy Carter was, surprisingly, Ted Kennedy. A couple of weeks ago, Kennedy told his aides he wanted to nominate the Washington senator if it became clear Kennedy couldn't win the nomination himself. Jackson's ties to the Kennedys go back to 1960, when he was JFK's first choice for a running mate. But "Papa" Joe Kennedy and Speaker Sam Rayburn advised JFK to make a "gesture" to Lyndon Johnson. To their surprise, Johnson accepted the second spot on the ticket.

CAREY IN THE WINGS: Like David Copperfield's friend Barkis, New York Gov. Hugh Carey is willin'. He's not only willin' to be the Democratic choice for president, he's even willin' to be tapped by John Anderson as a running mate. What has Carey sitting under a tree waiting for lighting to strike is a private poll of 62 New York Democratic county chairmen. It showed Reagan running first, Anderson second and Carter third.

Found near Post

Claw tipoff of past

LUBBOCK — The clue was a sharp inch-long claw, virtually lost in the red clay soil of a 60-foot-high hill eight miles south of Post, Texas.

A casual passer-by wouldn't have noticed it and a future rain would have washed the 180-million-year-old claw into an infrequent creek at the base of the hill. But th three Texas Tech Universith leontologists one hot July afternoon were no casual passers-by. For a month they had been looking for something just like that seemingly unimportant sliver of bone.

The claw was an indication that the eroding hillside contained other fossils. The paleontologists — Dr. Sankar Chatterjee, his wife, Sibani, and research assistant Dave Proctor — were looking for 180-million-year-old proof that arid West Texas once was covered by a sub-tropical coniferous forest similar geologically and climatically to now-distant India and Europe.

Three weeks' digging not only uncovered further evidence for the theory of continental drift — that the earth's land once was joined in one super continent, only to slowly separate and drift apart — but also uncovered a bonus as well. The scientists found what they believe is a new genus of rauisuchid thecodont, a meat-eating giant reptile that roamed what are now the South Plains during the Triassic period.

Key to their belief is the rotary-joined ankle, unlike the hinged ankle of dinosaurs, common to the one adult and three younger rauisuchids unearthed from their primordial burial ground.

Rauisuchids, which Chatterjee says grew to a full length of about 30 feet, were almost identical to dinosaurs except for different ankle joints. The rotary-jointed rauisuchids walked in a semi-erect posture, while the hinged-jointed dinosaurs walked erect. This erectness probably gave dinosaurs greater speed and mobility, a factor that may have led to their eventual dominance of the earth and the extinction of the rauisuchids, Chatterjee said.

The tell-tale claw belonged to one of three young, 10-foot-long reptiles. Parts of their skeletons, plus the skeleton of the still-growing 20-foot-long adult, were found in a common "grave."

Rauisuchids are a relatively new-found form of reptile discovered in Brazil, Argentina, East Africa, Switzerland and perhaps China. Rauisuchid fragments first were reported in North America in 1979 in Wyoming, and now in 1980 in West Texas. Unlike other rauisuchids found so far, however, those near Post were bipedal — they walked semi-erect on their hind legs, not unlike the later Tyrannosaurus rex.

Two years will be needed to do comparative studies to catalog his finds and publish a paper establishing discovery of a new genus of rauisuchid, Chatterjee said. One significance of the West Texas discovery is "the excellently preserved skeletons, which will give detailed interpretation of this animal's anatomy."

Chatterjee's team began in June to explore the area south of Post — a red clay and sandstone region that is part of one of the most extensively exposed continental Upper Triassic formations in the United States. A National Geographic Society grant provided funding for the summer-long dig, which Chatterjee hopes can be re-funded for another three or four years.

Reason, he said, is that he suspects at least two other previously unknown reptile species lie buried about 20 feet away.

Where the team is digging — a formation known as the Dockum rocks — is one of only four late-Triassic paleontological sites in North America. The other three formations are the Chinle rocks in Arizona and New Mexico, the Newark group on the East Coast, and Chugwater rocks in Wyoming.

The Dockum rocks were chosen not only for their proximity to Texas Tech University, but also because this now-dry landscape once teemed with fish, amphibians, and aquatic and semi-aquatic reptiles. A full understanding of animal life in that region's distant past, Chatterjee said, will provide "a more sufficient basis for interpretation of relationships to contemporary and later vertebrates in different parts of the globe."

During the Late Triassic period, West Texas was covered with thick coniferous jungles. Meandering rivers, swamps and lakes dotted the landscape and torrential rains, with flash floods, frequently occurred. Thecodont reptiles were especially abundant in the hot and humid forests.

Commonest forms, Chatterjee said, were phytosaurs — aquatic, long-snouted, crocodile-like creatures, and aetosaurs — plant-eating, armadillo-like reptiles covered with bony spikes.

The newly-found rauisuchid may have been the chief predator in the Late Triassic jungle, using his sharp, serrated teeth and recurved claws to tear into his prey. The lightly boned rauisuchids could run relatively swiftly on their hind legs, easily catching their slower four-legged victims, Chatterjee said.

The Triassic was the crucial period of vertebrate evolution when reptiles past their evolutionary peak had evolved into various rather specialized lines, Chatterjee said. Along these lines may have been the ancestors of crocodiles, dinosaurs, birds and mammals. A full understanding of West Texas' Dockum fauna will form a sounder basis for establishing this evolutionary succession, he said.

Chatterjee has discovered and described fossil vertebrates from the Late Triassic period in the Maleri Formation of India, where the fauna are "exceedingly similar to the Dockum fauna," he said. Chatterjee and his wife came to Texas Tech in 1979 from Washington, D.C., where he worked for the Smithsonian Institution.

Proctor comes from Berkely, Calif.

EXPLORING THE LONG-AGO — Dr. Sankar Chatterjee of Texas Tech University and his wife, Sibani, examine a piece of sandstone rock at an archeological site near Post, Texas, for 180-million-year-old fossils. Chatterjee believes he has found a new genus of reptile from the Late Triassic period in the Dockum rocks formation. (TECH PHOTO)

Tower claims Demo platform will turn off Texas voters

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — There's little in the Democratic platform to attract Texas voters, says Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, who was chairman of the Republican platform committee.

"It is pretty clear that the (Democratic) convention philosophically and spiritually supported Sen. Edward Kennedy whether he got the nomination or not," Tower told a news conference.

Tower said the Democratic platform approved so far "it pitched toward the older areas and large cities of the Northeast while the Republican platform if more national in scope."

The senior senator from Texas predicted Texas voters would reject Democratic platform planks backing national health insurance, calling for a $12 billion full employment program, "the federal approach to energy with no incentive to produce," and the lack of a call for increase in defense spending.

"This year the platforms clearly reflect the consensus of thinking in the two parties," Tower said.

"The Democrats call for more central government more deficits and more handouts while the Republicans approach is to stimulate the private sector of the economy," he said.

Soaring highway construction costs could jeopardize pay raises for state employees

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Soaring highway construction costs, coupled with reduced revenues from gasoline and automobile taxes could jeopardize pay raises for state employees, a Bexar County legislator contends.

Sen. Bob Vale, D-San Antonio, said Wednesday he was shocked at projections of state finances in an August bulletin from the Texas Research League.

Vale said the Highway Fund was eating state revenue in such large gulps that prospects are dim for any end-of-budget surplus that could be used for salary increases over the next two years.

"Where is the money coming from with a governor who is on a no tax kick?" Vale said. "I want to see what kind of Houdini act he can come up with."

Vale said that Gov. Bill Clements has proposed that the state raise additional funds by changing the state gasoline tax to a percentage basis from the current flat rate.

"I don't take kindly to an increase of 400 or 500 percent in the gasoline tax, he said, noting it has been suggested it might take 25 cents a gallon in taxes to put the Highway Fund back in order.

The budget drain by the Highway Fund can be traced back to the 1977 legislature which guaranteed revenue to the fund from the state's general income if sufficient money was not collected from gasoline and automobile taxes to reach a predetermined level adjusted for inflation, the legislator said.

Two slain in Pecos

PECOS, Texas (AP) — Two men were killed and two others wounded in a gun battle at a hamburger-drive-in restaurant, police said today.

Police Dispatcher Wanda Fickling said two other men were in custody following Wednesday night's shooting.

"The shooting occurred at 10:08 p.m. at Al's Drive-In, but I don't know what started it," Mrs. Fickling said.

The dead were Clifton Edwin Glenn, 25, and Jaime Javier Villarreal, 23, both of Pecos.

Two wounded in the outburst were taken to the Odessa Medical Center. David Mendez Chavez, 20, was in critical condition, and Steve Leonard Prewit, 21, was in fair condition with bullet wounds in both shoulders. Both are Pecos residents.

Glenn and Villarreal were pronounced dead at the scene, Mrs. Fickling said. Both bodies were sent to Dallas for autopsy.

She said an investigation was under way.

Crippled cop works back into life after severe accident

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — With the tenacity of a bull terrier, Bob Green has struggled for more than a year to return to active duty as a police officer from near-death.

Green, a lieutenant with the Marshall Police Department, whiled away 11 months of his life "bored ,frustrated, but thankful to be alive" after he was involved in a two-car collision while answering an early morning disturbance call Sept. 16, 1979.

Four hours of surgery to repair a crushed left arm and hip, numerous broken bones and massive internal injuries left 39-year-old Green facing "something I'd never had to deal with before."

After returning to a 40-hour work week in May, Green overextended himself and had to undergo another bout of surgery when complications developed in his left leg.

"I started back to work again this Friday, only this time I'm taking it a lot slower than before," said Green, who now is stapled together with metal plates and pins.

The spunky lieutenant says he "had to learn a lesson in patience" during a two-month hospital stay, and many more hours of slow, painful rehabilitation.

"I was used to being so active, then all of the sudden, there I was flat on my back with nothing to keep me occupied," he said.

Boredom breeds mischief, and Green said he wasted no time getting into trouble at Schumpert Medical Center in Shreveport, La., where he spent the first few months after the accident.

"I'm not a usually devious person, but after all that time on my back I had read everything there was to read, and could tell you how many tiles were in the wall ... I just had to release some of that frustration."

Green began to work with the arm and leg least injured in the accident.

"After a while I could get around on one leg ... and just heel-and-toe my way down the hall," he said.

But rehabilitation wasn't enough to keep Green from creating such a ruckus that doctors finally released him three months before planned.

"I was in a wheelchair, and using a stick to push buttons I could go anywhere in the hospital on the elevators," Green said.

"One day I slipped outside and was rolling along down the road and realized I couldn't get back up on the curb, so I crossed the street and there were these beautiful roses in the median and I picked one, — which is against the law in Shreveport," he said.

A passing patrolman stopped Green and took him back to the hospital.

Parkview residents have surprise party

The Retired Senior Volunteer Program hosted a surprise party for residents of Parkview Manor Nursing Home, Aug. 8.

Refreshments of cake and punch were furnished by RSVP Volunteers Truman Wood, Zula Mae Wood, Lyndoll Dittrich, and Zelda Day. Mavis Hayes, guest of honor, was presented a large climbing ivy by the Resident's Council. Mrs. Hayes is leaving Parkview to reside with a sister, Lucille Merrick at 1410 Nolan.

Approximately 60 residents attended the event. There were 11 RSVP Volunteers present who assisted with the refreshments. Janie Hale and Beverly Grant, Parkview Manor activities directors and Julia Johnston, administrator, attended.

RSVP has training program August 11

Westside Day Care Center was the site of an orientation and In-Service Training Program for RSVP Volunteers August 11th. Volunteers attending the orientation were: Walter and Suncha Christensen, Truman Wood, Christine Perez.

RSVP Staff Joy Decker, Clarie Conger and Ozella Wagoner, served refreshments of punch and cake.

Pat Lawliss, Day Care Center Director, conducted the training. Melinda Hernandez led the group through the facility.

Pierel to conduct watercolor workshop in Colorado City

The Colorado City Brush and Palette Club is having Austin watercolorist Pierel for a three-day workshop Aug. 28-30.

Pierel has had numerous one-woman shows in Houston, Austin and Fort Worth, Tex., as well as in Tennessee, Georgia and Rhode Island.

She has studied with such noted artists as Bud Biggs, Berl Schachelford, Ed Whitney, Morris Shubin and Vera Wise.

Those interested in participating in this workshop should contact Mrs. Warren Costin, 728-2037, or Mrs. Orin Feaster, 728-8477 for further information.

Promises are to keep

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

TEENS: Did you ever accept a date with someone — and then cancel the night before? Ever promise to keep a secret — and then tell everyone you know?

Everyone breaks a promise now and then. But when it becomes a regular habit, you make big trouble — for yourself and for those around you, says Seventeen magazine.

What are the consequences of a stream of broken promises?

— You annoy, anger, hurt and often alienate the people around you. Acquaintances are more irked by your neglect of a promise than they are pleased by the original offer. Friends get angry because they counted on you and are hurt because they take the broken promise as a personal dig.

— You create constant anxiety for yourself. When you accept dates with two different people for the same night, you may feel you've bought yourself some time to smooth out the situation, but you've also given yourself the worry of how to wriggle out of it.

It isn't easy to change this pattern of undependability. Psychologist Bernard Dunne, of Smithtown, N.Y., urges that you begin trying to confront issues on the basis of how you really feel, learn to take the consequences imeediately. This doesn't mean you should yawn in someone's face and tell her she's boring. It does mean thinking twice before promising to call her later in order to avoid talking to her now.

Beyond that, the solution is simply not to make any more promises that you don't fully intend to keep!

Dr. Wallace: I'm 17 and have been dating this sweet guy for almost two years. I'm a junior in high school and he is 20 years old and living with his parents. We are engaged and plan to marry after I graduate.

His family life is very troublesome and his parents are always throwing him out of the house. He has a job but is not making enough money to support himself so he can't move out.

Because of his miserable home life, he says that he wants to join the Navy. This hurts me because my junior and senior years should be the two most enjoyable years of my life and I want my fiance as part of them. I have big plans for the junior-senior prom and I wouldn't allow anyone but him to take me. I need this guy and don't want him to leave me. Help! — Jane, Pottstown, Pa.

Jane: It's clear that your boyfriend must get out on his own. If he can't find a male roommate or can't get a better-paying job, then I think the Navy is a good choice.

There are programs that will allow him to serve two years and more importantly, allow him a certain freedom that he needs at this time.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TwEEN 12 and 20, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Abby

Three in Marriage Bed One Too Many

DEAR ABBY: I'm 34 and this is my first marriage. I have been married for three weeks to a wonderful woman (29) with a 7-year-old son by a previous marriage.

The boy and I get along very well and he is a fine youngster, but from the night his mother and I returned from our honeymoon (which we shared with him, by the way) he has been coming into our bed to spend the night.

At first we let him stay, thinking he was frightened or lonely, and perhaps after a few nights of comforting and reassurance, he would stay in his own bed. No way. He has been sleeping with us every night!

The last four nights I have been going into the boy's room to sleep. I suddenly realized that this kid has pushed me out of my rightful place.

Abby, I love my wife and realize that she has to consider her son's feelings, but what about mine? Any suggestions will be considered and appreciated.

NEWLYWED AND SLEEPING ALONE

DEAR NEWLYWED: The "kid" has problems sharing his mother and accepting the fact that she now has another love. He needs therapy. Explain this to your wife. And if she disagrees with you, she needs therapy, too. Your marriage depends on it.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am 24 and just had my fifth baby. My husband is 26. I had him all talked into getting a vasectomy; then the day before he was supposed to have it done, the guys at work told him he was a fool to risk losing his manhood.

The way our doctor explained it to us, it wouldn't hurt my husband's manhood at all. Is there some question about this, or are the guys at work right?

One thing is for sure, we can't afford any more kids, and I'm plumb worn out from those I have. Thank you.

TIRED IN TOPEKA

DEAR TIRED: Tell your husband to quit listening to the guys at work and listen to his doctor. A vasectomy in no way reduces a man's manhood.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Last winter I met a very nice guy in a club, and we became very fond of each other. He asked me out several times, and the more we dated the more involved we became with each other.

We are engaged to be married, but I'm not sure I can go through with it even though I'd like to. We love each other, Abby, but he is four years younger than I. (I am 22 and he is 18.)

His parents like me very much and I get along great with his whole family. My parents didn't say anything directly to me, but I can tell they don't really approve of the relationship because I am four years older.

I don't understand how life works. If he were four years older than I, there would be no problem. However, since I am the female, it seems almost a crime to marry a younger guy.

I am truly confused. Do you think love should be based on age? Is it wrong to marry a younger guy?

HAVING DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: First, no, it is not wrong to marry a younger guy, but since you are "having doubts," I advise you to postpone marriage until you have absolutely no doubts whatsoever!

Self-exam is best for breast

A woman can feel the difference between the skin over her eyeball and the skin on her nose. That's the basis of a simple "eye-and-nose" test featured in a current Family Circle magazine how-to-article, "The Best, Breast Self-Examination."

Developed by Dr. Albert Milan, attending obstretrician and gynecologist at the Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore, this test is part of a comprehensive breast self-examination, described step-by-step in Family Circle, that only takes 10 minutes per month. The Family Circle feature is excerpted from the Breast Self-Examination book published by Workman Publishing Co.

Women should examine their breasts once a month by using a "Palpation" (examine by touch) technique, insists Family Circle. Palpate by using the flat surface of two or more fingers and gently press them downward so the skin is moved along with the fingertips over the underlying structures.

Studies have shown that women who examine their breasts once a month greatly increase their chances of detecting a cancerous growth early enough to effect a cure. The chances of a complete recovery are 85 percent to 90 percent if a malignant lump is discovered while it is still localized in the breast tissue itself. The cure rate plummets to 40 percent if the cancer has spread to other organs.

Here's how to give yourself the "eye-and-nose" test to determine if you have harmless lumps, or attached, possibly harmful ones:

Gently move the eyelid over the eyeball's surface, and you'll feel how slippery the eyeball is and how the eyelid glides smoothly over it. Then pinch your eyelid to lift it away from the eyeball's surface. Notice how it lifts freely and easily. These are similar sensations to the ones you'll feel from touching normal mild glands and ducts of the breast and harmless, slippery breast cysts as well.

Now place the ball of your fingertip on the end of your nose, and try to move the nasal skin with your finger without moving the tip of your nose. It won't go, notes the article. It is fixed, and the tip of the nose moves with the skin. The next step is to try to lift the skin on the tip of your nose. Pinch it between your fingertips — the same way you did with your eyelid. It can't be lifted.

This is a very important differentiating feature, says Family Circle. If you feel any lump in your breast that doesn't move, that is attached to the skin or underlying structures and above which you can't lift the skin, it should be examined by your physician immediately. Not all fixed lumps are malignant, so don't panic if you find one. But don't out off seeing your doctor. Also see your doctor about lumps situated in the breast tissue. These are difficult for you to differentiate by self-examination.

Bouillon flavored vegetables stretch food budget

Vary menus and add color

The number one riddle in America's kitchens today is how to stretch the food budget and at the same time serve nutritious, tasty and satisfying meals.

Some of us are solving this riddle by serving one vegetable meal per week. As this seasons' home-grown gardens yield a variety of vegetables, this is an idea worth adopting. Cook the vegetables in instant flavored chicken or beef bouillon or use bouillon to flavor-up vegetable casseroles.

The famous French chef, August Escoffier, once wrote that "Stock (or bouillon) is everything in good and well-flavored cooking. If one's stock is of good flavor, what remains of the work is easy; if on the other hand, flavor is lacking or merely mediocre, it is quite hopeless to expect anything approaching a satisfactory result."

Here are three vegetable combinations developed by Borden home economists. When served, accompanied by ample quantities of warm French or Italian-type crusty bread, these can appease the heartiest of appetites while providing ample nutrition. Here's how:

FOOD BUDGET STRETCHERS — The above pictured vegetable casseroles, flavored with bouillon as a change from expensive meats, provide ways to use fresh garden vegetables as well as stretch the family food dollar.

PEAS AND MUSHROOMS IN CREAM

(Makes 6 servings)

1 (10-ounce) package frozen green peas, thawed and well drained
1 pound (about 4 cups) fresh mushrooms, sliced
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup (½ pint) whipping cream
2 teaspoons Wyler's Chicken or Beef-Flavor Instant Bouillon or 2 Chicken or Beef-Flavor Bouillon Cubes
Pepper

In large skillet, cook onion in butter until tender. Add mushrooms, cream and bouillon; boil on high stirring about 6 to 8 minutes until liquid is thickened and reduced by half. Add peas and pepper; heat through. Serve immediately. Refrigerate leftovers.

SAVORY SCALLOPED TOMATOES

(Makes 6 servings)

1 (28-ounce) can tomatoes, broken up or 2-pounds fresh tomatoes, pared and cut up
4 slices bread, cubed and toasted
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped green pepper
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 teaspoons Wyler's Beef-Flavor Instant Bouillon or 2 Beef-Flavor Bouillon Cubes
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon marjoram
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons flour
¼ cup water
½ cup crushed corn chips

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In large skillet, cook celery, onion and green pepper in butter until tender. Stir in tomatoes, bouillon, sugar, marjoram and pepper. Cook and stir until bouillon dissolves. Stir flour into water; add to tomatoes. Cook and stir until thickened. Stir in bread cubes. Turn into 1½ quart baking dish. Top with corn chips. Bake 20 minutes or until bubbly. Refrigerate leftovers.

FRENCH ONIONS WITH MUSHROOMS

(Makes 4 to 6 servings)

1 large sweet onion, thinly sliced (about 1-pound)
8 ounces (about 2 cups) small fresh mushrooms, whole or sliced
2 teaspoons Wyler's Beef-Flavor Instant Bouillon
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
⅛ teaspoon pepper
One-third cup butter or margarine
1 to 2 tablespoons dry sherry
Chopped parsley

In large skillet, cook and stir onion, mushrooms, bouillon, garlic and pepper in butter, over medium-high heat, until onions are tender. Stir in sherry and parsley. Serve immediately. Refrigerate leftovers.

POTATOES AND ZUCCHINI AU GRATIN

(Makes 6 to 8 servings)

1 pound potatoes, cooked, pared and sliced (about 3 cups)
1 pound zucchini, sliced ½-inch thick (about 3 cups)
One-third cup water
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon Wyler's Chicken-Flavor Instant Bouillon or 3 Chicken-Flavor Bouillon Cubes
1½ cups milk
1 cup (4 ounces) mild Cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
½ teaspoon thyme leaves
Canned French fried onions

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In medium saucepan, cook zucchini in water 5 minutes or until tender. Drain. In medium saucepan, over medium heat, melt butter; stir in flour and bouillon. Gradually stir in milk. Cook and stir until bouillon dissolves and sauce thickens. Remove from heat; add cheese, pimiento and thyme; stir until cheese melts. In 1½ quart baking dish, layer half each of the potatoes, zucchini and sauce. Repeat layering. Bake 25 minutes or until bubbly. Top with onions; bake 2 minutes longer. Refrigerate leftovers.

When you want to add a dash of color to pale foods, the handiest "make-up" is a sprinkling of paprika. Deviled eggs, creamy stews, omelettes, potato salads ... all become more appetizing when brightened with the "cosmetic" spice. Paprika, a member of the capsicum family, can range in flavor from sweet to nippy. Here in America the majority vote goes to sweet, or mild paprika, but for those who want more flavor, some spice lines offer a choice.

Here, we've used sweet paprika (usually labeled simply "paprika") to pretty up two low-cal salad dressings .... pink and creamy against the greens of summer. The Paprika-Cucumber Dressing has a base of cottage cheese pureed in a sieve or blender and spiced with instant minced onion, paprika, black pepper and a tang of lemon juice. Diced cucumber is stirred in before the dressing is given a thorough chilling in the refrigerator. It's perfectly paired with cooked and cooled vegetables such as broccoli, green beans, asparagus, or over mixed greens or lettuce wedges.

The Pink Poppy Seed Dressing is a refreshing blend of orange juice and yogurt blushed with paprika, crunchy with poppy seed and including a surprising bit of vanilla. It's beautiful over fruit salads, scoops of cottage cheese, or combinations such as oranges and watercress, strawberries and bibb lettuce, avocados and endive.

PAPRIKA-CUCUMBER DRESSING

1 cup lowfat cottage cheese
2 teaspoons instant minced onion
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ cup skim milk
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup peeled, seeded and diced cucumber

Into a small bowl press cottage cheese through a fine sieve with the back of a spoon. Add onion, paprika, salt, black pepper, milk and lemon juice; mix well. Stir in cucumber. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Serve over mixed greens, lettuce wedges, sliced tomatoes, chilled cooked broccoli or asparagus, etc.

Directions for preparation in blender:

Place cottage cheese, onion, paprika, salt, black pepper, milk and lemon juice in the container; cover and blend until smooth. Stir in cucumber. Yield: 1½ cups, 3 calories per teaspoon.

PINK POPPY SEED DRESSING

1 cup lowfat plain yogurt
¼ cup orange juice
½ teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon poppy seed
½ teaspoon pure vanilla extract

In a small bowl combine yogurt, orange juice, paprika, poppy seed and vanilla extract. Cover and refrigerate until serving time. Serve over vegetable or fruit salads. Yield: 1¼ cups, 3 calories per teaspoon.

Allen price tag runs into millions of dollars

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Hurricane Allen may have fizzled before hitting South Texas, but residents, businesses and governments will shell out several hundred million dollars to pay for the havoc it left behind.

Many public officials in the Lower Rio Grande Valley said firm damage figures can't be totalled until floodwaters recede. But county officials in the region that caught Allen's force now are trying to compile damage reports and start federal assistance funds flowing to those who suffered in the storm that killed two Texans.

After surveying the damaged area, Gov Bill Clements said he expected damage to run about $600 million.

The American Insurance Association said Wednesday in Austin that the insured damage in the seven coastal counties worst hit will total about $42,474,000.

"Our figures don't include flood damage, risk to oil platforms and properties or commercial boats," said Regional Manager Frank Lewis. Coastal castastrophe insurance is covered by a pool of insurance companies.

Lewis said the total insured loss from Raymondville in Willacy County — at the top of the lush Lower Rio Grande Valley — south to the border totals almost $20.4 million. The remaining $22 million loss was suffered in counties from the Valley to north of Corpus Christi.

The Red Cross in Dallas reported Wednesday a preliminary estimate of $2.5 million to provide food and shelter.

Allen lived up to only a fraction of its advance billing, due largely to a path that sent the strongest winds through the largely unpopulated rangelands between here and Kingsville.

"We are truly blessed," Clements said of the state's escape from worse destruction.

The last major storm to hit southern Texas, Hurricane Celia, wreaked $450 million in property damage in 1970. Hurricane Allen likely will top that mark in reported losses due to its wider area and inflation. Public officials say there is no way to compute the dollars spent by evacuees on housing, gasoline, flashlights and other emergency provisions.

Allen caught this fertile agricultural area with almost half the season's cotton crop yet inharvested in some counties.

"It's not as severe as it could have been, but it's severe enough," said Gattis Guffey of the Hidalgo County Extension Service.

Hidalgo County possibly suffered the worst agricultural damage. Farmers there lost about $14 million in cotton, about 40 percent of the crop, he said. The county gorws about 90 percent of Valley citrus, including the ruby red grapefruit.

Losses in fallen fruit will to mature probably will fill out and bring more money per pound to growers, he said.

Cotton, citrus and vegetable losses in Cameron, Starr and Nueces counties alone so far total at least $20.8 million, according to local county agents.

That figure promises to go higher as waters recede and damage can be assessed.

The sprawling ranches of South Texas apparently suffered few livestock losses, said Dr. W.M. Warren, executive director of the Santa Gertrudis Breeders Association in Kingsville.

Many operations, including the famous King Ranch, remained without phone service Wednesday and had not reported conditions, said Warren. Cattle generally know how to take care of themselves in bad weather, he added.

"I think the cattlemen would call this a plus overall," he said. "We desperately needed a lot of rain and it should result in quite an improvement in the pasture conditions."

For the South Texas tourism industry, Allen came almost a year to the day after the first traces of an oil spill washed ashore and put an early end to the season. Some large hotels apparently sustained minor damage from the storm but others may require three weeks or more before reopening.

Steve Andrews, manager of the Tiki Motel on South Padre Island estimated the resort community is losing at least $300,000 a day in tourist dollars.

Property damage reports remained sketchy Wednesday as disaster assistance offices began operating. The bayfront and coastal communities had early estimates totalling $77 million in losses at South Padre Island, Port Isabel, Port Mansfield, Port Aransas, Aransas Pass, Corpus Christi.

An obvious sign of the storm's fury was at the Cameron County Park just north of the town of South Padre Island.

"They'll have to get the surveyors out just to find it," said Cameron County Sheriff's Deputy Cleo Beauford of the wasted area. The storm's raging tides tore at least four, 50-foot cuts across the narrow island into the bay and ripped apart a two-lane highway.

County Judge Ray Ramon estimated damage to county facilities at $500,000 on the island.

In Corpus Christi, Nueces County Commissioner J.P. Luby said it might take $10 million to repair a 4,217-foot seawall punctured with 15-foot gaps from the storm surge.

The small fishing village of Port Mansfield on the Laguna Madre showed the most concentrated damage with 50 residences destroyed and more than 200 others with major damage, said Willacy County Judge Bill Rapp.

"It's horrible. It makes you sick," he said.

Port Mansfield Harbormaster Jack Carpenter offered a conservative damage estimate of $2 million and said he expected another $2 million would be claimed as residents take inventory.

The Texas National Guard ran up $100,000 in expenses as it was called up to protect areas against looting, evacuate people and otherwise aid storm victims.

All of that money likely will be reimbursed by the federal government.

Local governments must find funds to pay overtime put in by civil defense, fire and police departments and clean-up crews before, during and after the storm.

"It will be a lot of unbudgeted expenses," said McAllen Mayor Othal Brand.

Harlingen City Manager Harry Savio put his city's losses to public facilities at $420,000 and said it would cost another $100,000 for clean-up and civil defense operations.

Brownsville City Manager Neil Haman estimated the Valley's largest town suffered up to a $4 million loss.

Flooding hurt some towns more than winds. Edinburg Mayor Ronald Case said some sections still have 4 feet of standing water and estimated the community will sustain $65 million in damages.

Private property losses have been slow in assessing.

"The damage is a lot less than we thought but when we do add everything the dollar figures probably will be impressive," said Clint Dare of the Texas Insurance Information Institute.

Southwest Texas gets needed rain from Allen

SANDERSON, Texas (AP) — Terrell County Sheriff Dalton Hogg says Hurricane Allen may have brought death and misery to hundreds in the Caribbean, but it was good to the people in his isolated Southwestern county.

"We hate that they had trouble down below, but it's been good for us. I've been sheriff here for 20 years, and it's the best rains I've ever seen. Everything about it has been good," Hogg said late Wednesday.

The Haitian government said 67 people were killed when Allen raged through the Caribbean before it weakened near Texas and arced through South Texas into northern Mexico.

Two people drowned in Texas.

Gov. Bill Clements, after a helicopter inspection of the hurricane path through Texas, estimated the damage toll from the storm might hit $600 million in Texas.

Six Texas counties have been declared disaster areas and aid has been requested for three others. A claims office was set up in Corpus Christi Wednesday to provide claims service to insured Texans who lost property in the hurricane. Disaster service centers were opened in Harlingen, Aransas Pass and Alice.

Further into the state, however, Allen brought only much-needed rains.

"I drove 175 miles around the county tonight, and I haven't seen any flooding at all. We got a real smooth, slow rain for two or three days, and the only part that ran off was what the ground couldn't hold," he said.

Hogg patrols Terrell County, which sits along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend of Texas, adjacent to the Mexican Border. The county is 100 miles wide at one point and has 2,391 square miles.

"You couldn't draw a picture and get it any better than this rain has been for us," Hogg said.

Hurricane Allen pushed into Texas 625 miles to the southeast near Brownsville in the Rio Grande Valley and became a tropical depression in Mexico, south of Sanderson, touching off thunderstorms over a wide region.

"It looks like we're pretty well over the rain. We had no bad effects from the hurricane at all. It was a blessing to us," said Maggie McBeath of Eagle Pass, about halfway oetween Sanderson and Brownsville.

"It gave us some rain, which we hadn't had in six months. Everything was so dry here it wasn't even funny," she added. The Rio Grande slightly overflowed its banks Tuesday at Eagle Pass, and minor flooding was reported near the Kickapoo Indian village near Eagle Pass.

Much of Southwest Texas was under a flash flood watch Wednesday because of the rains and runoff associated with Hurricane Allen, but officials along the Rio Grande reported no major problems.

A drought that had the river at below-average levels apparently enabled the Rio Grande to handle the heavy rains of the past several days.

Hurricane Allen passed northwest of Laredo and into Mexico Sunday, triggering thunderstorms that drenched the area.

"It was the hardest rain I've ever seen. It began raining at midnight Saturday, then kept on for a good 20 straight hours," said Stacy Maloney, a newsman for the Laredo Times. As much as 8 inches of rain was reported from the storm.

"The ranchers welcomed it for sure. The farmers got a little more than they wanted," he added.

Homosexuals, Indians, coal miners, veterans

Special interests pushing causes at convention

NEW YORK (AP) — Some came to the Democratic National Convention to push rights for homosexuals and women, some to lobby for or against abortion and some to campaign for socialist ideals or Puerto Rican statehood.

They came as delegates and as Democrats, their main task to nominate a presidential candidate. But for many, that purpose seemed at times almost incidental: They were here to nudge the party i their direction.

Thus it was that Anne Wexler, President Carter's special assistant for public liaison, stood before a roomful of homosexuals pleading for their votes and reassuring them that the policital system considered them worth wooing.

"We would like to have you in the campaign," saying to a caucus of male and female homosexual delegates. "We need your help. We want to work with you. We want you to tell us when you think we're being insensitive."

Also courting attention are American Indians, Cal miners, veterans, Asian-Pacific Americans, Hispanics and blacks. They see the convention as a chance to sell their ideas to the party, to catch the ear of administration leaders, to gain national visibility, to make friends and contacts and to map plans for future shows of strength.

Not all got what they wanted.

Fran Noonan of Despers, Mo., a leader of Democrats for Life — an anti-abortion group — resigned as a delegate to protest a platform plank pushed through by pro-abortion forces.

But even Mrs. Noonan felt she had achieved a lot. "We've become better acquainted with one another," she said. "We've enlarged our network considerably."

The biggest winner at the 1980 convention was the womens movement. About half of the delegates were women, and they showed their muscle in platform and rules victories that:

— Will require equal representation for women at every level of the party.

— Deny party funds or campaign assistance to any candidate who does not support the ERA.

— Put the party on record as favoring federal funds for abortions for the poor.

"I still don't believe the male leadership of this party knows what has happened," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women. "The people on the rostrum look down and see people, but they don't realize they're not the same old easy-to-control people who used to be there.

"Four years ago, when we got equal representation passed, everyone said, 'It is not practical, it will not happen.' But they were wrong," she said. "Now we've got to make sure these new reforms get implemented."

If women were happy here, not all blacks were — especially when Carter forces postponed a meeting between the president and black delegates.

"I sense an awful lot of black frustration here," said Ron Nichols, spokesman for the Congressional Black Caucus.

Added Conrad Mallett, the party's director of black affairs: "Black people are going to have to start planning for 1984 the minute this convention ends — just the way the women did."

Most of the special-interest groups were crowded into rooms on the seventh floor of the New York Statler Hotel — "the floor of fringes," they called it.

It became an around-the-clock caucus of causes constituting the full political spectrum.

By accident or design, the anti-abortion lobbyists were across the hall from the pro-abortion lobbyists. Passersby could sense the icy relations between those neighbors.

Some groups were satisfied simply to circulate their literature or find other means of publicizing their goals, such as the occasional chant "Coal!" arising from United Mine Workers members in the West Virginia delegation.

Michael Harrington, leader of the Democratic Socialist Organizing Committee, said he had identified 35 or so delegates or alternates who are socialists. He presided over a standing-room-only socialist caucus during the convention.

"Rather than always being on the fringe of American society, we prefer being a segment of the compromising institution that is the Democratic Party," Harrington said.

As for the homosexuals, what did they gain?

"We got a plank on gay rights," said Bill Kraus of San Francisco, co-chairman of the Lesbians and Gays Caucus. "We were able to distribute material telling how that plank is being violated by laws passed by Congress and by institutions like the military, which discriminate against gays."

And what's more, he said, "We also got some visibility in the media, and that's important because people tend to see us as stereotypes."

On the light side

Beer-guzzling pig dies

ROCKY MOUNT, Va. (AP) — Arnold, the beer-guzzling, cigarette-smoking, bubble gum-chewing pig, is in Hog Heaven.

Bethel Mason's 1,000-pound pet porker died "sometime Monday night or Tuesday," said Mason's wife, Geneva.

Arnold was laid to rest in a homemade metal coffin Wednesday at Mason's Texaco service station, 12 miles south of here in Franklin County, with about 60 mourners and a real minister officiating, Mrs. Mason said. Arnold had made Mason's station his home six years ago by repeatedly jumping a fence behind the place.

Cause of death was unknown, but Mrs. Mason said Arnold's diet was rife with many un-hoglike goodies. Besides the beer and cigarettes, Mrs. Mason said Arnold "chewed bubble gum. He loved chocolate milk and apple pies, chocolate pies, those fried pies."

'Early Squirts' earn green

BROKEN ARROW, Okla. (AP) — Five youngsters from this Tulsa suburb have figured out a way to benefit from watering restrictions brought on by the area's extended heat wave and drought.

When the city instituted a schedule allowing outdoor watering only from 4 a.m. to 6 a.m., the young entrepreneurs, ages 9 to 11, saw their chance last week and went into business.

The youngsters realized most adults would rather be sleeping at 4 a.m. but still would want their lawns watered. So the kids rise before the sun, split into teams, and man sprinklers for their paying customers.

Customers — eight so far — pay what they think the service is worth.

And the name of this service? "Early Squirts," of course.

Lewis ordered to yield bond

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis has been ordered to forfeit a $400,000 bond and has been found in contempt of court after failing to appear at a hearing about a contract dispute.

George Cunningham, owner of the now defunct Whiskey Club, filed suit against Lewis in 1978 after Lewis allegedly failed to make a scheduled appearance. Cunningham won a $453,000 judgment against Lewis later that year.

Cunningham contends that Lewis has paid him only $2,000 and a hearing was held Monday to find out why.

When Lewis failed to appear, an Oklahoma County District Court judge found him in contempt and ordered him to forfeit bond.

Lewis's attorney, Tim Kline, said he hadn't been able to find the entertainer since June. Kline resigned as Lewis's lawyer during the hearing.

Dorland sues over default

Howard County rancher and oilman D.L. Dorland has filed suit in 118th District Court against Hoyle Nix, local musician.

Dorland claims Nix owes him $14,511.45 on a $15,784.24 loan from Western State Bank of Midland granted Aug. 2, 1978. Dorland was assigned the note on the loan by the bank.

Dorland also claims he is due interest on the loan since July 25 and attorney's fees.

Med examiner to exhume Oswald's body, paper says

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County Medical Examiner Dr. Charles Petty plans to exhume the body of accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald from his Fort Worth grave, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Quoting sources, the newspaper said in a copyright story that Petty proposes the exhumation Friday in an attempt to determine whether the body is actually that of Oswald, named by the Warren Commission as the lone assassin of President John F. Kennedy here Nov. 22, 1963.

Petty would not confirm nor deny the report, the newspaper said.

The newspaper also said Petty had not planned to announce the exhumation until tests were complete to determine the identity of the body.

Michael Eddowes, a British author and attorney, five years ago raised the question of the identity of the body buried in 1963 in Rose Hill Cemetery on Fort Worth's east side.

Eddowes, who filed suit in state district court at Fort Worth in an attempt to have the body exhumed, said he believes the body buried there was not Oswald but a Soviet secret agent who returned to the United States from Russia in 1962, posing as Oswald.

A state district judge dismissed the suit, saying Eddowes had no standing in court since he was a British citizen. A state appeals court later upheld the dismissal of the suit.

Oswald defected to Russia in 1959 and once sought Russian citizenship before he returned in 1962 with a Russian wife.

The News said the exhumation plans were shrouded in secrecy and required only an order signed by Petty and a consent form signed by Oswald's widow, the former Mrs. Marina Oswald. The widow is now married to Kenneth Porter and lives in Rockwall, a small town northeast of Dallas.

Mrs. Oswald could not be reached for comment, the newspaper said. But the newspaper said its source revealed that she had signed the consent form to eliminate any liability for Dallas County officials for the exhumation.

The newspaper said dental X-rays taken of Oswald in 1958 when he was in the U.S. Marine Corps would be the key to identification of the body. The copyright story also said Petty would take Oswald's body to his office in Dallas where the X-rays would be used for comparison.

In his civil suit filed in January of 1979, Eddowes claimed the body measured in Dallas after Oswald's death in 1963 was two inches shorter than Oswald's height when it was measured during his military service.

Oswald had been charged with murder in the Kennedy assassination and was being moved from the Dallas City Jail to the Dallas County Jail Nov. 24, 1963 when Dallas nightclub operator Jack Ruby shot him to death as he walked, handcuffed, between two law enforcement officers.

Ruby was convicted and sentenced to death, but won a new trial. He died of cancer before the second trial was held.

Special skills needed by SWICD instructors

Helping deaf students achieve their career objectives sounds like a simple mission for the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

The process, according to Douglas Burke, coordinator, in a talk to the Downtown Lions Wednesday at Howard College, is delicate and intricate. So many of the deaf have been isolated from the mainstream that special techniques and skills are required to make them full partners in society.

Much of the work here will be preparatory, such as career analysis, which involves identification of interest and aptitude, information and counselling. Then students will be prepared for vocational, technical and medical technology skills. The latter is innovative for deaf education, and Burke predicted great possibilities for it.

Some of the courses will be integrated into Howard College, the parent institution, and deaf students will have both interpreters and note takers to assist. If Howard College students should take course offered only on the institute campus, the reverse would be true. It is possible, said Burke, that ultimately some training might extend beyond the college sophomore level.

He described communications as being at the heart of the success of the program and the integration of students into the community.

The institute has $2,000,000 to get started and Dr. Burke was hopeful that the budget for the next year will be approved and funded by the state. So far, 31 of 51 staff places have been filled and 98 percent of these are skilled in sign language (although only about half of them are deaf). There have been some 200 applicants for these jobs from all over the nation.

"Lots of people apparently prefer to live in smaller cities," he observed. The payroll for the institute will approximate $1,200,000. The campus will be on part of the former Webb AFB near the hospital area. So far 20 students have signed, another 20 are being screened, and Dr. Burke figured the target of 50 will be attained. By January he thinks there might be a waiting list of students.

Dub Martin, president, said the club will sponsor a Pee Wee football field. It has under consideration a communications system for the deaf institute coordinator.

Varied items on agenda

COAHOMA — The regular meeting of the Coahoma City Council is scheduled today at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Jim Lancaster of Big Spring Cable TV will meet with the board to discuss modification of the franchise's contract.

Ronnie Dodson will be appointed to supervise the city's outside employees.

Members of the Lion's Club will talk about the future of the scout hut in the city park.

Plans for signs rerouting trucks off Culp Street will be formulated. Details about a Sewer school in Big Spring Aug. 19-20 will be offered. City employee lodging and travel expenses is another item on the agenda.

Councilmen will also look into a census form which the city likely will have published in a community newspaper.

Renteria out of state pen

Manuel Renteria, convicted of burglary of a motor vehicle in Howard County April 11, 1978, has been paroled to Dallas County.

Salary raise granted Cee City's Tarter

COLORADO CITY — Brenda Tarter, acting city manager of Colorado City, has been awarded a $250 monthly pay increase by city councilmen.

She previously had been paid $1,230 monthly. She has served as the acting city manager since Aug. 1.

Miss Tarter announced the appointment of Sgt. Jimmy Roundtree as assistant chief of police Tuesday. Don Hamilton was selected as a police sergeant.

Ms. Tarter said that the incoming chief, Robert Bailey of Clifton, would bring two patrolmen with him when he arrives Monday.

In other action, councilmen voted a 20 percent increase in city retirement benefits and improved death benefits for survivors of city employees. The audit made by Joe Morren, CPA, was approved.

The council authorized the purchase on 1,156 feet of pipe valued at $17,499. It will take the place of worn out pipe in the city water system.

Graver times facing nation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 1980s will be a more precarious time for the U.S. military than the 1970s or 1960s, according to Adm. Stansfield Turner, director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The threat will come from growing Soviet military strength and reduced economic growth in the free world, Turner said Monday in a speech at the San Francisco Press Club.

Turner advocated passage of legislation that would reduce the number of congressional committees that must be informed of the agency's activities and free the CIA from some provisions of the Freedom of Information Act.

The bill would also bar the disclosure of the identities of CIA operatives overseas and protect CIA secrets from disclosure during court hearings.

Importance of complete census count stressed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas cities should carefully review the preliminary population figures and file protests where undercounts can be shown, Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Victoria.

"For the first time, state and local officials are in a position to challenge preliminary census figures before they become final," said Von Dohlen, head of the House redistricting committee. "The critical importance of a complete census count for Texas cannot be overemphasized. Legislative redistricting next year will be based on the 1980 census and the distribution of billions of federal dollars in Texas is affected by population figures."

He said the House committee was working with the governor's office to review the preliminary figures and assist communities with protests.

Enrollment could show gain in Forsan schools

FORSAN — Forsan Schools will officially open with the first day of school set for Aug. 25. Previous to this opening, football and band students will have completed two full weeks of pre-school drill, school employees will have completed a week of in-service and preparation, registration of new and high school students, and plans will have been made for an effective school year.

Of special interest to the total community will be the annual ice cream supper sponsored by the Elbow PTA and the Forsan Booster Club for Thursday, Aug. 18 at 7:30 p.m. on the high school tennis courts. This is an informal community gathering to get acquainted, welcome newcomers, recognize certain members of the school staff and certain student body leaders.

Parents will be receiving the customary forms to complete and return to the school. This year will mark the return to the semester system and to report cards on a six weeks basis. Parents are encouraged to take an active interest in school work and school events. The school board meetings are open to the public. The board meets once per month in regular session on the Monday preceding the 20th of the month in the board room at Forsan High School at 7 p.m.

Buses will run Aug. 25 on the same route and schedule as last year. If modifications are needed, they will be made in the second week of school. The cafeteria will be open for breakfast and lunch. Prices this year are 25 cents for breakfast and 50 cents for lunch.

Students at the Junior-Senior High School will follow a different procedure for lunch and breakfast accounting this year. They will purchase a ticket for meals for up to one month for breakfast and for lunch.

Enrollment for the district is expected to be up slightly as movement into the Tubbs addition continues. Facilities have received extensive care during the summer and an exciting year is upon us. We look forward to the many stimulating and rewarding associations that we will have this year.

Firms refuse audits, Dallas triples taxes

DALLAS (AP) — More than 1,000 Dallas businessmen who refused to comply with a special audit of their inventories are being told the city plans to triple the assessments now on file.

The Dallas city council ordered an audit after indications that business personal property valuations were far below their true market value.

But after city tax assessors began an audit of 2,500 firms, they expressed surprise at the differences they found — some by millions of dollars.

Lawrence Watson, city tax department supervisor, said the city decided to triple the 1979 valuations to insure that the 1,125 businesses that refused to open their books to auditors "will get an increase in their taxes."

"We hope we'll have it high enough where they'll let us look at their books," Watson said.

The businesses will have 10 days to contest the tripled valuations, but Watson said some probably will stay quiet because the tripled assessment will "still be too low."

Many of the businesses increased their 1980 valuations as much as four or five times since 1979, but he said he feels tripling the figures for resisting firms is adequate.

Letters were sent Monday, informing the uncooperative businesses of the tax department's actions, Watson said.

Shocked that inventories on the 1980 city tax roll were so undervalued, Watson said he asked the Texas Legislature to give the countywide appraisal office power to regularly investigate firms.

Watson said the legislature needs to give the new countywide appraisal office power to conduct regular audits, instead of relying on the old "honor system" in which business owners have valued personal property in the past.

"It's next-to-impossible to perform our job without the threat of an audit," he said.

Billy giving deposition to Senate investigators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billy Carter met with Senate investigators today on his dealings with Libya and told reporters, "I haven't done a damn thing wrong."

Lawyers for a special Senate Judiciary subcommittee took Carter's deposition at his lawyers' office today in preparation for his public testimony possibly late next week.

The president's brother said he talked to the Senate investigators informally for about seven hours in Georgia over the weekend. He said this session was to provide them his deposition under oath.

The president's brother may testify to the Senate subcommittee late next week, according to Richard Paul, an aide to Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

Paul said the schedule for hearings next week has not been completed but said the investigators want to hear Billy Carter's testimony early in the investigation.

President Carter has said he also is willing to testify publicly in an effort to dispel questions of White House involvement in his brother's dealings with Libya.

But Bayh has said he does not know if the president's testimony will be needed.

Billy Carter told reporters Wednesday that Libyan officials agreed to talk to him about a business deal in which he would supply Libyan crude oil to the Florida-based Charter Oil Co. But he said Libya made no commitment to supply the oil.

"The Libyans have at no time reneged on any commitment," he said. "They really never made a commitment. ... They said we'd talk about it."

Asked if he still has any expectation of getting the oil, he replied, "I have no expectation of anything."

The subcommittee is investigating the brother's delayed registration as a foreign agent for Libya, his acceptance of $220,000 from that country, and the Carter administration's handling of the affair.

Billy Carter has said the $220,000 was a business loan and has denied he was an agent for Libya. He said he registered as a foreign agent only under pressure from the Justice Department.

President Carter says his brother's relationship with Libya has not influenced U.S. policy, although Billy Carter did arrange a White House meeting with a Libyan official on efforts to free the American hostages in Iran.

Students must bring records

The Immaculate Herat of Mary School will enroll students for the 1980-81 between the hours of 1 and 4 p.m., and 7 and 9 p.m., next Tuesday and Wednesday in the school cafeteria.

All new students will need immunization records plus baptismal records (if Catholic), birth certificates and copies of their most recent report cards.

Students must be prepared to pay for a book and the $35 registration fee at the time they sign in.

Additional details regarding the opening of school will be issued during registration hours.

Those with additional questions can call Sister Lucy by dialing 263-6012.

Football moms special guests at fieldhouse

The Big Spring High School football program will be hosting an open house tonight for any interested parents or fans to view the newly decorated dressing room and training room facilities.

Steer head football coach Ralph Harris sets the emphasis on tonight's meeting for the mothers of the local gridders, but others are welcome.

The mothers and others will be shown not only the dressing room, but the protective equipment being used today, as well as training procedures. Sir Everett Blackburn, athletic trainer for the BSHS program, will also give a presentation on the training room.

The tour of the BSHS facilities will begin at 6:30 p.m. Hopefully, enough parents will attend that a move to the gymnasium stands will be necessitated.

The varsity dressing rooms are located on the east side of the Steer Gym at 11th Place and Benton Street.

Local gridders will officially begin workouts next Monday from grades nine through the varsity level. Gridders on these ages were supposed to pick up their shoes and be issued lockers last night. For now, the athletes will be working without the coaches supervision.

The football players will then begin two-a-days in shorts next Monday, with the pads being donned next Friday.

Area gridders don pads tomorrow

Many area football teams will be putting on the pads tomorrow morning as they continue their two-a-day workouts in preparation for the 1980 season.

All Class A, AA, AAA and AAAA teams were allowed to begin workouts in shorts last Monday. Area schools included in this group were Coahoma, Forsan, Stanton, Sands, Lamesa, Garden City, Colorado City, Klondike and Grady. Big Spring, which is a AAAAA school, is not allowed to begin workouts until next Monday.

The local weather, thanks to Hurricane Allen, cooled off dramatically on Monday morning, enhancing the working conditions for the gridders. But it apparently will get back to normal by workout times in pads tomorrow.

The Coahoma Bulldogs, who have been realigned into a four-team district, have early plans to two-platoon, a system they have not tried in recent years.

With seven non-conference games, however, it gives the Bulldogs plenty of time to experiment with different players and different ideas before their district slate opens in late October.

Watson hoping to rally in Westchester Classic

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Tom Watson has a golden opportunity to make up some lost ground this week, but golf's leading performer over the past three seasons has some problems, too.

"My short game isn't all I'd like it to be. And I'm not putting all that well," Watson said.

"And that's what this golf course requires, a good short game and good putting.

"I'm driving it well, and I'm hitting the irons OK, but I'm not that sharp around the greens," he said before teeing off today in the first round of the $400,000 Westchester Classic.

The 6,603-yard, par-71 Westchester Country Club course offered him a perfect target to overtake the absent Lee Trevino in one major seasonal race, and could provide him with an opportunity to put some distance between himself and the absent Jack Nicklaus in another race.

The relatively short, hilly course often yields some of the lowest scores on the tour, with the winning total usually in the low 270s. Watson needs some low scores, but his short game could hold him back.

"It's a feel thing that can come back quickly," said Watson, who, despite his problems, remained the heavy favorite for the $72,000 first prize. "We'll just have to wait and see."

A relatively poor performance — by his standards — in last week's PGA dropped Watson behind Trevino in the standing for the Vardon Trophy, which goes to the man with the low stroke average on the Tour. Trevino has a 70.09 average. Watson, with 70.11, trails for the first time in four years.

For the first time in four years, he's in a race for the player of the year designation.

With five American victories and the British Open title, Watson has 60 points. But Nicklaus, winner of the U.S. Open and PGA, has 50. Both seem certain to gain more from the money-winning list in the complicated point system used by the PGA to determine player of the year. Bonus points, a total of 25, will go to the winner of next week's World Series of Golf. A Nicklaus victory there would give him a shot at it.

Should Watson win here, however, he'd virtually clinch a fourth consecutive title.

NL nixes DH rule again

DETROIT (AP) — Baseball purists may recoil, but the designated hitter rule appears certain to be adopted by the National League within two years.

For the time being, however, the senior circuit will continue to let pitchers bat for themselves rather than allow another player to bat for him as the American League — and most of the rest of organized baseball — has done since 1973.

National League owners voted down the DH rule at the conclusion of the summer meetings Wednesday, leaving the NL and the Central League in Japan as virtually the only two leagues anywhere in organized baseball to eschew the DH.

But, it's coming. Larry Claiborne, the St. Louis Cardinals general manager who voted for it, and Bill Giles, the Philadelphia Phillies vice president who abstained from voting, both are certain the rule will pass eventually.

"By the next year, I expect the National League to have the DH rule," said Claiborne, who formerly worked for Boston and Oakland in the American League and who was responsible for placing the issue on the agenda this week. "I'm going to keep putting it on the agenda until they pass it."

Claiborne said Atlanta, New York, St. Louis and San Diego voted in favor of the DH while Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Montreal and Cincinnati voted against it. Pittsburgh, Houston and Philadelphia abstained.

"You watch, we'll be back and we'll have the DH in the National League," said Claiborne, who admitted he thought he had the simple majority needed to pass the DH before the meeting. "We had three key passes (abstentions) who we thought were going to vote for it. We were surprised."

Giles said the Phillies would have voted for the measure if there was a chance it could have been put into play by next year.

"Basically, the Philadelphia club is in favor," Giles said. "But we found out that it cannot be implemented until 1982, so we thought it was better to wait until the winter meetings.

"I didn't think the issue would be as close as it was. I didn't realize there was that much sentiment for it. We're in favor of trying it for for one year to see how Philadelphia fans like it."

Giles said the Phillies also were influenced by a poll taken in Chicago where fans, who have an opportunity to see the game played both with and without a DH.

Rangers trade Gaylord Perry to Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Forget the allegations and controversy about the spitters and the greaseballs. Forget seven years ago, when they tried to make life difficult for him. The New York Yankees have a new message for Gaylord Perry: "Welcome."

Perry, the only pitcher in baseball history to win the Cy Young award in both leagues, was acquired by the Yankees from the Texas Rangers Wednesday night in exchange for minor league pitcher Ken Clay and a player to be named later.

"We are pleased to be able to acquire a pitcher with Gaylord's ability and experience," said Cedric Tallis, New York's executive vice president.

Manager Dick Howser echoed the message.

"You like the experience he has and I think his being in a race will help him and us."

But the Yankees always weren't so happy to see Perry — or the stuff they claimed he put on a baseball.

Back in June 1973, the Yankees installed a special closed-circuit camera at Yankee Stadium to monitor Perry's pitching and determine if he was using any foreign substance on the ball.

The camera didn't find anything but the Yankees were never satisfied Perry was pitching by the book — that is until now.

"Having Gaylord as another right-handed starter will allow us to go back to our original plan of having an experienced left-hander (Rudy May) in the bullpen," said Yankees General Manager Gene Michael.

Perry, who will turn 42 next month, has a 6-9 record with the Rangers this season with a 3.43 earned run average. He is the winningest active pitcher in the majors with 285 victories and is tied for 16th place on the all-time list.

Perry, who won the Cy Young in 1972 with Cleveland and 1978 with San Diego, is second on the all-time strikeout list, trailing only the legendary Walterg johnson. He also is only one of four pitchers to win 100 games in each league. The others are Young, Jim Bunning and his former Texas teammate Ferguson Jenkins.

Perry had mixed emotions about the trade.

"I disappointed that they (Texas) don't think I can help the club," Perry said. "I'm excited that I'm still playing baseball. I just hope I can go there and win some games for them."

He'll get his first chance Saturday, pitching the third game in the Yankees all-important five-game series with Baltimore. New York has a 3½-game lead in the American League East Division entering the series, which starts tonight.

Orioles Manager Earl Weaver had little to say about the trade.

"You don't know until the season is over," Weaver said. "It might be good, it might be bad. Gaylord is tough. I thought we were done with him this year."

Reds regain lead in Wild West

By the Associated Press

If the Cincinnati Reds go on to repeat as National League West champions this year, they can look back on the last three nights as the turning point of the season.

While their closest rivals for the title, the Los Angeles Dodgers and Houston Astros, both lost three games in a row to second-division clubs, the Reds swept a three-game set from the San Diego Padres to take over first place.

On Wednesday night, Mike LaCoss allowed only three hits over six innings, one of them a three-run homer by Jerry Mumphrey, and Mario Soto, 6-5, got the victory with three innings of hitless relief as the Reds beat San Diego 4-3. The Cincinnati runs came on a two-run single by Joe Nolan in the fourth inning and a two-run homer by Ray Knight in the eighth.

In other NL games, the San Francisco Giants completed a series sweep by beating the Astros 6-5 in 12 innings, the Atlanta Braves won their third in row by blanking the Dodgers 2-0, the New Yrk Mets defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3, the St. Louis Cardinals outscored the Montreal Expos 7-5 and the Chicago Cubs edged the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

The Reds now lead Los Angeles by a half-game and Houston by one as they took over first place for the first time since May 16. On June 22 they were seven games out.

Knight's homer, his 11th of the season, came off Bob Shirley, 9-8, and gave the Reds their eighth straight victory over the Padres and their 12th triumph in 14 games with San Diego this year.

Nolan's key bases-loaded hit followed consecutive singles by George Foster, Dan Driessen and Dave Concepcion. Nolan, who joined the Reds June 14 as a free agent from Atlanta, is batting .500 in the last 11 games he has started and is hitting .341 since joining the team.

Giants 6, Astros 5

San Francisco completed a sweep of its three-game series with Houston when Rennie Stennett singled in the bottom of the 12th after singles by Jack Clark and Darrell Evans.

The Astros took a 5-3 lead in the 11th on a run-scoring single by Enos Cabell and an RBI double by Terry Puhl, but the Giants tied it again in the bottom of the inning when Stennett doubled in a run and scored on Jim Wohlford's single.

Mike Rowland got credit for the victory, his first major league decision.

Mets 5, Pirates 3

Lee Mazzilli and Jerry Morales knocked in two runs apiece to pace New York over Pittsburgh despite being outhit 12-4.

Mazzilli, who had to leave the game in the fifth inning when he was spiked on the heel at first base, had a two-run double in the first inning and later scored on Morales' sacrifice fly. A single by Steve Henderson, a double by Frank Taveras and ground balls by Morales and Dan Norman brought in the other two Mets runs in the sixth.

Cards 7, Expos 5

Ken Oberkfell knocked in three runs with a single and a two-run double to lead St. Louis over Montreal, which remained tied for first with Pittsburgh in the NL East.

Oberkfell's double highlighted a three-run seventh inning that broke a 4-4 tie. He also had an RBI single in the third, when Ted Simmons added a two-run double.

Braves 2, Dodgers 0

Atlanta completed a three-game sweep and knocked the Dodgers out of first place as Tommy Boggs pitched a five-hitter for his second shutout of the season.

Burt Hooton, who had won seven of his previous eight decisions, gave up a two-run homer to Glenn Hubbard in the second inning. The Dodgers right-hander now has allowed 19 homers this season, a career high.

Cubs 2, Phillies 1

Jerry Martin hit a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning to give Chicago its victory over Philadelphia.

Rick Reuschel and Dick Ruthven, who suffered his eighth loss in 18 decisions, were locked in a scoreless tie through seven innings before Larry Biittner doubled in a run in the eighth and Mike Schmidt tied it in the top of the ninth with his 30th homer.

Indians take no prisoners in win

CLEVELAND (AP) — On those occasions when Cleveland hitters allowed him on the mound, Indians pitcher Wayne Garland responded admirably. The problem, however, was all the time they made him spend on the bench while they took batting practice against the Texas Rangers Wednesday night.

"I was just sitting in the dugout a long time between innings," said Garland, who combined with Mike Stanton on a six-hitter as the Indians thrashed the Rangers for 19 hits and a 14-3 victory.

Cleveland scored in each of the first five innings, including a three-run first and a five-run fifth, posting Garland to a 12-0 lead.

"With a big lead like that, it's very easy to go out and lose your concentration," said Garland, 6-4. He left the game in the seventh after Buddy Bell led off with his 13th home run of the year and Pat Putnam's fly ball scored Rusty Staub from third base.

"I started hanging some pitches," Garland said. "Buddy hit a hanging screwball."

The 29-year-old right-hander carried a one-hitter into the seventh inning. Only Staub had reached second base previously, on a walk and a groundout in the fifth.

Garland credited his curveball — "the best I've had this year" — and the defensive work of shortstop Jerry Dybzinski for his success during the early innings.

"Dybber made a hell of a lot of great plays behind me," he said.

Stanton allowed one run through the final 2 2-3 innings.

"We got our tails kicked," said Texas Manager Pat Corrales.

The Indians jumped on loser Doc Medich, 9-7, for three runs in the first inning on RBI singles by Mike Hargrove and Toby Harrah and a run-scoring double by Ron Hassey.

"He (Medich) was up with his pitches. His location was bad," said Corrales.

Cleveland added single runs in the second and third, two in the fourth, then exploded for five in the fifth on three straight walks, a sacrifice fly and four consecutive singles. The Indians wrapped up their scoring in the eighth on Hargrove's two-run double and Dave Rosello's sacrifice fly.

Second baseman Alan Bannister led the Cleveland attack with four singles. Hargrove, Harrah and Rick Manning had three hits each

Nielson expected to resume workouts soon

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Backup Houston Oiler quarterback Gifford Nielsen, who dislocated his shoulder in a pre-season game Monday against Tampa Bay, expects to start throwing next week — if he can get some sleep.

"If I keep it tight now," Nielsen said Wednesday, talking about the sling around his left arm, "it will heal tight." The problem is, he says, sleeping with the awkward sling.

"I'm hoping I can throw some next week," he said, "though I know I won't be ready for contact. This is a little frustrating. I need the work."

EXPLANATION OF TAX INCREASE

In compliance with state law your county must run in a public newspaper the amount of income increase for the 1980-81 county budget. The Commissioners' Court wants all taxpayers to note your local taxes have dropped from $.2375 per hundred dollar evaluation to $.20 per hundred. This amounts to a 15% decrease in your taxes. In the "Notice of Tax Increase" adjacent to this notice you will note a 44% proposed increase. This increase is due to mineral evaluation in our county and not an increase in your taxes.

If your property did not increase in value (all property owners who had increases were mailed notices of that increase during May 1980), then you will have a $.0375 per $100 or 15% decrease in taxes owed for 1980.

There has not been an increase in the last 11 years but this will represent the second decrease during this 11 year period.

NOTICE OF TAX INCREASE

The Howard County Commissioners' Court proposes to increase your property taxes by forty-four (44) percent.

A public hearing on the increase will be held on August 22, 1980, at 5:01 P.M. in the Commissioners' Courtroom at the Courthouse, Big Spring, Texas.

The Howard County Commissioners' Court has considered the proposal and voted in a meeting of the Commissioners' Court as follows:

FOR the proposal to increase tax rate:

Bill Tune, County Judge
O. L. Brown, Commissioner Precinct No. 1
Paul Allen, Commissioner Precinct No. 2
William Crooker, Commissioner Precinct No. 3
David Barr, Commissioner Precinct No. 4

AGAINST the proposal to increase tax rate:

BILLY GETS THE LAST WORD — Oakland manager Billy Martin gets the final word with an umpire during last night's game with the Minnesota Twins. Martin was disputing a called strike on Rickey Henderson. It didn't matter, however, as Oakland managed a 6-2 win.

F.A. Dry has gradually turned the program around

TCU no longer the whipping boy

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — "Frog Fever...catch it."

So goes the word at Texas Christian, where Coach F.A. Dry has methodically molded a footballl team from the ashes of a program long in flames.

"We've closed the gap," said Dry, launching his fourth year at TCU and promising a Southwest Conference competitor, if not yet a contender.

Dry does not suggest that 1980 is the Year of the Frogs, but he insists that the nightmare era has ended.

"We won't be on the same level as Texas, Arkansas, Houston, and Texas A&M," he said. "They are well established with strong programs and proven talent.

"But we do feel like we can step on the field with them."

Such was not the case in 1977 when the Horned Frogs began the Dry era on the heels of a 0-11 campaign.

Opposing teams occasionally beat TCU by 40 points or more and still dropped in the national rankings.

Although 2-8-1 last year, TCU rode a powerful defensive unit into memorable scraps with several SWC heavyweights, including Houston and Arkansas.

"We just didn't have the manpower and depth to hang on," he said.

TCU returns five defensive starters, including Dry's linebacker son, Mike, and two all-conference contenders in linebacker Kelvin Newton and tackle Charles Champaine.

Another talented linebacker, sophomore Darrell Patterson, returns along with tackle John McClean and noseguard Garland Short.

It is on offense that the Frogs must necessarily improve, and Dry is convinced that they have.

Six starters are back, including quarterback Kevin Hanev.

"We've got some experience and depth at the key position offensively," Dry said, pointing to Haney's running and leadership ability and the proven passing of Steve Stamp.

"Another big plus for us at quarterback is Rueben Jones. Rueben runs the option extremely well and has a quick release as a passer. We also have Eddie Clark, who has the strongest arm of any of them."

Elsewhere, the returnees are flanker Phillip Epps, split end Bobby Stewart, guard Donald Ray Richard, and tackles Dudley Stephenson and Steve Wilson.

Dry said the most glaring weakness is at tight end where he may start a freshman.

"We still lack the necessary performances we must have to win at this point," he said.

Dry said at the outset he would be content if the offense could improve its yardage productivity by 40 per cent.

"If someone comes through at tight end," he said, "we could make that much of a gain."

In non-conference play, TCU will meet Auburn and Tulsa at home and Georgia on the road.

"We have six home games and we start at home and we open with a non-conference game. Those are all pluses," Dry said.

As an opposing coach suggested recently: "TCU won't be in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day but the Frogs will help decide who is."

Borg wins again in Canadian Open

TORONTO (AP) — Bjorn Borg of Sweden advanced to the third round but hopes for another Borg-John McEnroe final at the Canadian Open tennis championships vanished when McEnroe had to retire in his match because of an ankle injury.

Borg beat Tom Gullikson 7-6, 6-1 while McEnroe retired in the first set against Erik Van Dillen, leading 4-2.

LA Olympic Committee confident

ATLANTA (AP) — Every nation in the world is expected at the 1984 Olympic games in Los Angeles, the president of the Los Angeles Olympics Organizing Committee said Wednesday.

Peter Ueberroth also promised that the Los Angeles games would play down commercialism and be operated and financed for the first time ever by a private group.

Ueberroth commented at an Atlanta news conference Wednesday while introducing the animated eagle Sam, the official mascot of the 1984 games, who is on a 24-city tour that began last week.

"These Games will be different, obviously much different than the Moscow Games in every way," he said.

For the first time in the history of the Olympics, he said, the Games will be financed and administered by a private non-profit organization, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, with $400 million budgeted for the July 28-Aug. 12, 1984, event.

Ueberroth said the committee already has sold the television rights to ABC for $225 million and has received close to $100 million from corporate sponsors.

Cowboys begin work for LA

DALLAS (AP) — Veteran fullback Scott Laidlaw practiced Wednesday in the Dallas Cowboys' final "two-a-day" workout of pre-season drills after receiving 10 stitches under his left eye Tuesday.

Laidlaw was hit by the point of another player's shoulder pads.

Rookie offensive lineman Kurt Peterson of Missouri became hydrated during morning practice and did not work out in the afternoon.

The Cowboys will taper off Thursday and Friday and play their first game ever in Anaheim Stadium Saturday night. Dallas plays the Los Angeles Rams in the 35th annual Los Angeles Times charity game. It will mark the Cowboys' ninth apearance in the charity contest.

The Rams lost 35-31 Monday night to New England in their debut in their new home.

After Saturday's game, the Cowboys will have one more week of training camp before leaving on Aug. 22 for Dallas.

US athletes highlight Switzerland track meet

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Tatyana Kazankina of the Soviet Union smashed the women's 1,500-meter world record, Britain's Sebastian Coe just failed in his attempt on the men's 1,500 meter mark and American athletes dominated the Zurich international track and field meet.

Olympic champion Kazankina won the 1,500 Wednesday night in 3 minutes 52.47 seconds, 2.53 inside her own record of 3:55.00 earlier this year.

Mary Decker, 22, of Eugene, Ore., finished second in 3:59.43, an American record, but was nearly seven seconds adrift of the majestic Soviet.

Tatyana Providokhina of the Soviet Union set the early pace, and it was the Soviet tactics that beat Decker so decisively.

"They went out too fast," Decker said. "I wasn't aware the second Russian was going to drop out."

Coe, the Olympic champion, won the men's 1,500 in 3:32.19, just fractionally outside the world record of 3:32.1 he currently shares with his great British rival, Steve Ovett.

Steve Scott of the United States was second in 3:33.33, the second fastest time by an American over the distance. John Walker of New Zealand, former world record-holder, was third in 3:33.49.

Americans won six of the 19 major events on the card. West Germans and East Germans won four each.

Nine Olympic champions competed at the meet, the most prestigious of the post-Olympic competitions, and a sell-out crowd of 26,000 was treated to a number of outstanding performances.

Renaldo Nehemiah won the 110 meter hurdles in 13.21, the fastest time in the world this year. Gregg Foster (13.36) and Rod Milburn (13.67) completed an American sweep.

Stanley Floyd, beaten by British Olympic champion Allan Wells in the 100 meters at Cologne last weekend, got his revenge and became the first American to beat the Scotsman in post-Olympic competition.

Floyd clocked 10.19 to edge Wells by two paces. The Briton was second in 10.30 with American Harvey Glance third in 10.34.

"I enjoyed that," Floyd said afterward.

Edwin Moses, unbeaten for three years, won the 400 meter hurdles in 47.81, leading an American sweep. Soviet Olympic silver medalist Vasily Arkhipenko could finish no better than sixth.

Other American winners were Don Paige in the 800 meters (1:45.80), Steve Williams in the 200 (20.33) and Larry Myricks in the long jump (27 feet 3¼ inches, fourth best in the world this year).

Moses, Floyd and Nehemiah all were inside the times that won Olympic gold medals in Moscow.

West German doctor Thomas Wessinghage won the 5,000 meters in 13:20.93, just inside the Olympic winning time of Miruts Yifter of Ethiopia.

Wessinghage edged Kaarlo Maaninka of Finland (13:22.74) and Dick Buerkle of the United States (13:23.2).

Ralf Reichenbach, also of West Germany, won the shot put with a distance of 68-3 while his compatriot Karl-Hans Riehm won the hammer with 264-7½, beating Sergei Litvinov of the Soviet Union, Olympic silver medalist.

Gaby Bussmann in the women's 400 meters (51.10) was the other West German victor.

New favorites emerge in Pac-10 race after probation shake-up

By The Associated Press

The Pacific-10 Conference run for the Roses has been cut in half, but that doesn't necessarily mean a representative of the Big Ten is finally going to win a Rose Bowl game.

The Pac-10 ruled Monday that perennial powerhouse Southern California, as well as UCLA, Arizona State, Oregon and Oregon State were ineligible for the conference title as well as postseason play this year. However, Washington and Stanford have both shown they can win in Pasadena on New Year's Day.

Pac-10 teams have won the past six Rose Bowls and 10 of 11. Stanford triumphed in Pasadena in 1971 and 1972 while Washington won in 1978.

Southern Cal went 11-0-1 last year, defeated Ohio State in the Rose Bowl and figures as a contender for the national championship this season. The Trojans don't have an experienced quarterback and if for no other reason aren't a lock to finish atop the Pac-10 standings.

Stanford and Washington appeared to be the top challengers to Southern Cal before Tuesday's ruling. Now, the Cardinals and Huskies will probably fight it out for a Rose Bowl bid.

Coach John Robinson's Trojans, despite losing quarterback Paul McDonald, Heisman Trophy winning running back Charles White and a host of other fine players, will still be loaded.

Fullback Marcus Allen moves to tailback. Keith Van Horne and Roy Foster will lead what figures to be an outstanding offensive line. The defense, led by linebackers Rikki Gray and Chip Banks and backs Ronnie Lott and Dennis Smith, should be solid.

Walk-on senior Gordon Adams, who threw one pass last season while playing 15 minutes, emerged from spring practice as the first-string Southern Cal quarterback. If he can play even reasonably well, the Trojans will be difficult to beat.

Washington was 10-2 last year and upset Texas in the Sun Bowl. Tom Flick, who became the Huskies' first-string quarterback in the eighth game in 1979, returns and will team with running backs Toussaint Tyler and Willis Ray Mackey to give their team what figures to be a potent offensive backfield.

The Huskies' defense, traditionally strong under Coach Don James, was hit hard by graduation, but the coach has expressed confidence that last year's second-stringers will be solid starters in 1980.

Stanford was only 5-5-1 a year ago and will play under its third head coach in three seasons — former Cardinal Paul Wiggin. The team figures to be much better this year.

Darrin Nelson, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in 1978 and caught 50 passes for more than 1,000 yards, returns after missing last season because of a torn hamstring. Sophomore quarterback John Elway, who many believe is a future All-American, has a year under his belt.

There are other offensive weapons — flanker Ken Margerum and split end Andre Tyler give Elway two excellent receivers. Sophomore running backs Mike Dotterer and Vincent White lend depth in that department.

California figures as a darkhorse challenger for the Pac-10 Rose Bowl berth. The Golden Bears were 6-6 a year ago and played in the Garden State Bowl. Their 1980 chances likely hinge on the abilities of quarterback Rich Campbell, who completed 67 percent of his passes last year.

Matt Bouza and Michael Buggs give the Bears a pair of fine, seasoned wide receivers, but there isn't much experience at running back. Fact is, there isn't much experience at a lot of positions. Freshmen and sophomores will make up about 75 percent of Coach Roger Theder's team.

Arizona and Arizona State both have new head coaches after going through a nightmarish year. At Arizona, Larry Smith replaced Tony Mason, who resigned in the spring following allegations of misuse of football funds. At Arizona State, former Michigan State Coach Darryl Rogers takes over in the wake of last fall's dismissal of Frank Kush.

Arizona was 6-5-1 including a 16-10 loss to Pittsburgh in the Fiesta Bowl.

Debate on prayer

Congressman

Charles W. Stenholm

Congressional Comment

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Everyday that Congress is in session, the session begins with a prayer. There is no law that requires that daily prayer nor is the content that prayer dictated by any law. It is a simple reminder of the faith in God that this country was built upon.

It seems an extreme contradiction for that same governmental body to refuse the same freedom of spiritual expression to every schoolchild in this country. That is the reason that I support current attempts in Congress to force debate of the school prayer issue before the full House of Representatives.

Until 1962, it was common in many public schools to open the day with a classroom prayer. Then, in 1962 and 1963, the Supreme Court struck down this practice, on the grounds that state-sponsored religious exercises in the public schools violated the First Amendment of the Constitution. It is argued that the Court did not prohibit individual, private prayer by students during the school day, but rather any type of state-sponsored religious practice. It is that argument that I support being debated in Congress and the freedom of voluntary prayer absolutely established as the law of the land.

The means for accomplishing that goal, the Helms Amendment to the Supreme Court Jurisdiction Act, is not, I'll be the first to admit, perfect. It would, basically, remove jurisdiction over such questions from the Federal courts, reaffirming states' rights in deciding this sensitive question.

That amendment, at present, is being held up in the House Judiciary Committee and I have joined some 174 other members in signing a discharge petition which would force the bill to the floor for consideration.

Controversy has surrounded this issue for far too long and a generation of our children have been denied this basic freedom guaranteed by the writers' of our Constitution.

Our country was built on three great principles. The first of these was faith in God; the second was Constitutional government and the third was the right of private ownership of property. We have witnessed a dangerous erosion of those three principles over the years and a return to school prayer is one step toward rebuilding the strong moral foundation which sustained our country through its formative years and can be relied upon in the days ahead.

I do not advocate any form of mandatory, sectarian, state or federally dictated prayer, but a simple recognition that our faith, as individuals and as a country, is placed in the God of one's understanding. We must also remember that while our Constitution guarantees freedom of religion, it also protects those who choose freedom "from religion." The rights of all must be maintained.

Beauty pageant investigation

HOUSTON (AP) — A beauty pageant that failed to materialize after offering contestants $1,000 and a trip to Las Vegas is being investigated, according to an assistant district attorney.

"It is a very unusual case," Assistant District Attorney Russ Turbeville said in Thursday's editions of the Houston Post, when asked about the "Miss Black Texas Pageant" that was cancelled Sunday.

The contest, organized by Texas Southern University law student Ricky Thurmond, 24, involved about 20 contestants who each paid a $350 fee to enter the pageant.

But Thurmond, who was a contestant in a "Bachelor of the Year" contest last week at a Houston disco, said the event was called off after "I got in over my head."

"It boils down to the fact that there was no one coordinating the contest," said Thurmond, the executive director of the pageant. "I had no one to depend on and work with."

Thurmond said the winner of the pageant would have received $1,000 and gone to Las Vegas to compete in the "Miss Black Galaxy" contest.

He said he never intended to "rip anyone off...I think it would have been real uplifting for the black culture."

Contestant Marilyn Greene of Odessa, Texas, said she spent $350 to enter the pageant and another $800 on clothing, only to arrive in Houston and find out the contest had been cancelled.

Natalie Wade, 18, of Orange, Texas, said no one showed up for a press party that was supposed to host 3,000 persons. "We went to the party and the only people to show up were the girls," she said.

"I really began wondering about it when nobody had even heard about the pageant in Houston. There had been no advertising at all."

Thurmond said he tried to get backing for the pageant from about 3,000 local businesses, then spent $11,000 for hotel reservations and another $1,900 to rent a hall where the pageant was to be held.

But he said he realized by mid-week that he would not have enough money to cover expenses, so he had to call the contest off.

He said some of the contestants stayed in the hotel until Wednesdsay, then returned home.

"I really do feel bad because I wanted it to come off," Thurmond said. "I had asked people for advice, but nothing seemed to work...but there was no intent to fraud."

"If there had, no one would have seen me and I wouldn't be trying to help now."

Turbeville said his office was asked to look into the pageant because entry fees had been collected from the participants.

He said Thurmond was trying to pay off debts the pageant incurred, but declined to say whether he would prosecute.

"Restitution can't hurt his posture," Turbeville said, "but I can't make guarantees on whether or not I will prosecute. He asked for time to demonstrate his good faith."

Athenian floated, tanker stuck

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Another oil tanker stumbled onto a hidden shoal 25 miles north of Port Mansfield early today, the Coast Guard said, bringing to four the number of such ships disabled because of Hurricane Allen.

"This is just another case of shoaling, caused by the hurricane," said Coast Guard spokesman Dan Dewell.

The Chemlink 404, leased out by Chemlink Inc., of New Orleans, ran aground in the middle of the Texas intracoastal waterway between the long strip of islands and the mainland coast, Dewell said.

"There is no tug in attendance at this time, but the ship is in semi-protected waters so we don't expect any real damage to the ship or oil spillage," Dewell said.

Coast Guard and Marine Safety officials are scheduled to fly to the ship Thursday morning to determine whether any of the oil must be transferred to barges in order for the ship to float.

"We know she (the ship) is loaded with heavy crude oil in excess of 500 barrels, but we don't know the exact amount she's carrying," Dewell said.

The Athenian, a 735-foot Liberian tanker loaded with 350,000 barrels of crude oil, was floated around midnight Thursday after Coast Guard barges took 25,000 to 30,000 barrels of oil off the ship.

"It took only a few thousand barrels to refloat her, and the operation went smoothly with no spillage," Dewell said.

The tanker ran aground Monday night on an undetected sandbar in Aransas Pass created by the swirling sands churned up by Hurricane Allen.

Barges and tugboats rigged the grounded Liberian tanker Mary Ellen with beach gear and other equipment Wednesday. The Coast Guard said pumping of 510,000 barrels of oil was scheduled to begin Thursday on the ship, located off the north end of Padre Island.

Coast Guard ships and oil containers will circle the ship, in case of spillage.

"We don't know how badly damaged the ship is, so we are taking necessary precautions," Dewell said.

The Mary Ellen tried to outrun the hurricane but was tossed ashore four miles south of Aransas Pass.

Letter is 44 years late

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Yarda Ervin's letter brought a smile to the faces of her aunt and uncle even though it was delayed by 44 years.

Mrs. Ervin, 54, was a 10-year-old in Tustin, Mich., when she wrote the letter to her uncle Theodore Anderson on Aug. 28, 1936. At the time, Anderson was employed in Manistique in the Upper Peninsula.

The letter recently was delivered to the Andersons' current residence in Tustin, a small town in Osceola County about 130 miles south of Manistique.

At the post office in Tustin, clerk Ardythe Anderson said the letter evidently never left town.

"They're tearing down an old vacant building here that used to house the post office," said Mrs. Anderson, no relation to the author of the letter. "That's when they found it. Stuck in a wall or something. Some way or another it got lost in that old building."

Postal workers familiar with the family delivered the long-lost letter.

Response was unexpected

SEATTLE (AP) — Investing in gems may be a good hedge against inflation, but the owners of a new jewelry store couldn't give diamonds away this week.

Mike Mafune and Buzz Remde said they planned to give away 100 low-grade diamonds a day to promote the store. The diamonds are valued at $35 each.

When the promotion began Wednesday, Mafune and Remde said they were getting strange reactions from customers, who were returning the diamonds handed to them, apparently because they did not believe the offer was authentic.

"They wouldn't take them — it was an unreal response," Remde said.

Remde and Mafune had given away only 25 diamonds by early Wednesday afternoon, so they called a radio station on which they had advertised the event and asked announcers to say the diamond giveaway was for real.

That broke the ice.

"We had people lined all the way out to the street," Mafune said. "We wound up giving away 121 diamonds, although we had promised to give away only 100.

"A man told us he was driving on the freeway and turned off just to get his diamond," Mafune said.

Texas puts Carter over

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Eyes of Texas" rang out in Madison Square Garden as 108 Texas Democrats cast their votes for President Carter's nomination Wednesday and clinched his bid for four more years in the White House.

The song started the traditional demonstration for the party's nominee at the Democratic National Convention.

Carter's victory was a virtual certainty for two days but not officially clinched until the Texas numbers put it over the 1,666-delegate convention majority in the roll call of the states.

Texas supporters of Sen. Edward Kennedy cast 38 votes for his unsuccessful bid to derail the president's re-election.

Three of the 152 Texas delegates voted uncommitted and two wrote in Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, for the nomination. The freshman congressman from Lubbock was not a candidate.

Former Texas Attorney General John Hill announced the state's votes by first telling the convention that the state was the cornerstone of the Carter-Mondale campaign's victory in 1976.

The delegation steps into the convention's concluding session today in search of the party unity most delegates said is needed to secure a Democratic victory over Republican candidate Ronald Reagan.

"They're our friends; this is not a divided state party," Billy Goldberg, the state Democratic Party chairman, said about the Kennedy delegates after the vote. "That's normal for Democrats to have two candidates."

He said there would be no problem convincing Kennedy supporters in Texas to work for the Carter campaign this fall.

The Kennedy delegates said their votes meant they were standing by their commitment to the primary and convention voters that sent them to New York, despite the senator's withdrawal from the race.

Bill Carrick, Kennedy's Texas campaign manager, had told the senator's delegates in a hallway caucus, "You're all free to vote your conscience."

Billie Carr of Houston, a key Kennedy delegate, replied that they had to follow the "faithful delegate" rule passed Monday that clinched Carter's nomination and prompted the senator to withdraw.

"Let's show unity, tomorrow," Louise Caddell of San Antonio advised about showing support for Kennedy in the roll call.

Ms. Carr said later that many of the Kennedy delegates were irked by Carter's qualified support for the platform changes that passed the convention.

"There's a lot of people who are upset," she said. "It's not the platform that we adopted last night."

The Houston liberal predicted, however, that most of the Kennedy delegates would be satisfied enough to return to Texas and work for the ticket.

Hill, a Carter supporter, said the senator's delegates would reconcile themselves to the convention's outcome.

"Their feelings will probably be hurt for awhile," he said. "It may take awhile, but they're also good Democrats or they wouldn't be here."

Police chief quits

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The decision of Denton's police chief to step down should end the bitter controversy that has riddled the department recently, says the veteran officer named to replace him until the City Council names a new chief.

City officials called a news conference Wednesday to announce the resignation, effective Sept. 30, of Police Chief Rick Miller, who had been embroiled in a summer-long dispute with most of his 61-member force.

Detective Capt. Hugh Lynch, a 28-year Denton police officer, was named acting chief until the City Council hires a replacement, and officials said Miller would operate out of City Hall until his resignation is final.

Miller will coordinate the city's affirmative action program, said assistant city manager King Cole.

Miller's resignation came two weeks after two officers Miller fired on July 11 were reinstated in a move officials hoped would diffuse bitterness between the chief and his officers.

The chief fired the two officers and recommended that a captain be demoted to patrolman after the three supervisors and 51 other officers signed petitions calling for Miller's ouster.

Lynch, who said he does not attend to apply for the chief's job permanently, said he feels Miller's resignation "will satisfy the complaints within the department."

Miller resigned because he felt "no longer able to effectively function as police chief," Cole said at the news conference.

Miller's office was empty after the news conference, and a secretary said he had taken the rest of the day off. He could not be reached for further comment.

Cole said Miller likely will seek a police job elsewhere, since city administration "is not his chosen field."

Miller's officers, most of them members of the Denton Police Association and its state labor affiliate, the Combined Law Enforcement Association of Texas, said Miller was insensitive to their grievances and sided repeatedly with the city administration against his men.

City Manager Chris Hurtung said the officers' efforts were part of an organized campaign to discredit Miller and unionize the city's police force.

Lynch was a member of both the local and state group.

Cole repeated Wednesday the city's hope that Miller's resignation will end the controversy.

Pig rumor starts riot, 85 perish

MORADABAD, India (AP) — At least 85 people were killed in this northern Indian town in Moslem rioting started by rumors that a pig strayed into prayers marking the end of Ramadan, the Moslem holy month, police said today.

A top police official said Moslem mobs battled police and attacked Hindu shops and homes in the Wednesday rioting in this town 100 miles east of New Delhi.

Police Superintendent D.V. Mehta, who said the death toll was at least 85, said many died "in a stampede in the Moslem prayer grounds."

Nineteen children were among those killed, Mehta said, and mobs beat to death a district police official and four constables who tried to quell the rioting. He said 61 persons were injured and that five policemen were missing.

News reports in New Delhi said police used gunfire, baton charges and tear gas to break up the crowd of rioters.

Mehta and other officials said a rumor spread about a pig being driven among the 60,000 Moslems gathered at the Idgah Mosque compound in this dusty town to celebrate the feast ending Ramadan. Pork is taboo for Moslems and a pig at Islamic prayers would be desecration.

A curfew was imposed and army troops and paramilitary troops rushed to reinforce police in the city. Policemen armed with rifles and cane clubs patrolled the narrow, deserted streets.

Kennedy praised from 'our hearts'

Votes cast for 'gallant campaigner'

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Carter got the votes and the nomination to be "the next president of the United States" as everybody knew he would. But for Ted Kennedy the votes were delivered "for that gallant campaigner" and "with our hearts."

The praise for Kennedy was so thick that Rosalynn Carter's face at times bore a cast-iron smile. Praise such as:

—"Madam Chairman, in a tradition consistent with the support of the Kennedy brothers over the years — first John, then Robert, now Ted — Arizona casts 16 votes for Ted Kennedy and 13 for Jimmy Carter."

—"Madam Chairman, the delegates of the state of California, representing the most populous state of our country, cast 140 votes for President Carter and, to emphasize our agreements with the programs presented in his campaign, 166 votes for Senator Ted Kennedy."

That announcement, coming nearly at the 12th hour of the third session of the Democratic National Convention, set off a marathon of chanting, "We want Ted. We want Ted."

Colorado passed. Connecticut counted 28 for Kennedy, 26 for Carter. Delaware went Kennedy four, 10 for Carter. The District of Columbia passed. So did Florida. Georgia cast "62 for a great Georgian, a great president, the next president, Jimmy Carter."

And so it went, until Illinois: Kennedy 16, Carter 163.

This time: "We want Carter. We want Carter."

On the podium, convention secretary Dorothy Bush said good-naturedly, "A lot of other people do too, so let's get on with it."

"Kansas casts 23 votes for the next president of the United States, Jimmy Carter, and, Madame Secretary, with our hearts we cast 14 votes for Senator Ted Kennedy."

Maine split — 11 votes for Kennedy, 11 for Carter. Nebraska gave 10 of its 24 to "the eloquent senator from Massachusetts" and the rest to "that great president of the United States."

New Jersey awarded 45 to Carter "and, as an affirmation of our respect and admiration," 68 for Kennedy. South Dakota cast "10 votes for the president of the United States in 1984" — Kennedy.

And then, Mrs. Bush announced, it was time for "Texas, 153 votes."

"Madam Secretary, here we go over the top," whooped the Texas chairman.

Texas' 108 votes for Carter had indeed put the president over, making his total 1,731.5 votes. He needed 1,666. The senator from Massachusetts at that point had 1,010.5.

Madison Square Garden became a kettledrum of noise. It was 12:05 a.m. Thursday.

Party Chairman John C. White stepped to the front of the platform and swung a copy of the New York Daily News from side to side for all to see. The headline: "It's Carter again."

The band played "Happy Days are Here Again." Rosalynn Carter smiled for real and clapped hands in time to the music. So did sons Chip and Jff. Lillian Carter looked delighted. Amy waved her straw hat. 3 Carter-Mondale signs were everywhere. Women stood on chairs and swayed to the music. In the Nebraska delegation, a man with a farmer's cap and a "No M-X" button read a newspaper, a case of studied indifference in the midst of bedlam.

Devil's River minnow

Citizens elated over victory

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — Folks who get their drinking water from San Felipe Springs are claiming a major victory over a federal agency that wanted to protect breed of two-inch minnows living in the waterway.

"We won, finally," Mayor Herb Whitis said Wednesday after the U.S. Parks and Wildlife Service announced it would not declare the waterway a "critical habitat" for the Devil's River minnow.

"We're just elated. Usually you don't take on the federal government and win like this," Whitis said.

Residents here had voiced vehement opposition to the wildlife department's plan to declare the tiny fish endangered and portions of the Devil's River and San Felipe Creek a critical habitat.

Del Rio draws its drinking water from a natural spring at the creek.

"The public response just united the whole city," Whitis said. "Uncle Sam wanted to come in here and tell us what to do and we don't like that down here in this part of the country."

Plans for a celebration already were underway Wednesday night.

"We're going to have the biggest barbecue this part of the country has ever seen," Whitis said. "And we're going to drink lots of that San Felipe water."

Lynn Greenwalt, director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Interior Department, notified members of the Texas congressional delegation Wednesday he had decided against the proposed declarations.

The proposals sparked angry reaction from Del Rio residents at two public hearings earlier this month.

"The people here were very up in arms about the attitude of the federal government to come in here and try to do something like this. Everything was in our favor," Whitis said. "We knew all along their minds were made up. We were ready to go to the courthouse if the designations were approved.

"There was no reasoning for their logic."

Approval from the Fish and Wildlife Service would have been required for any modification of Del Rio city water works, highway or rail bridges, or urban usage of the creek's drainage area.

Ranchers along Devil's River could have been prohibited from clearing brush or drilling water wells, according to testimony delivered at the two public hearings.

QUEEN IS CROWNED — Leann Biggs adjusts the crown on the head of Natalie Mitchell, who Monday night was named Martin County Fair Queen at the high school auditorium in Stanton. Natalie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Mitchell of Stanton. In all, 20 girls competed for the title. Miss Biggs was the 1979 Fair Queen. First runnerup this year was Tammy Peugh, who attends Sands High School. The fair opens today and continues through Saturday.

1980 E.P.A. estimates. Remember: Compare these estimates to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage, depending on how fast you drive, weather conditions and trip length. Also remember that your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the EPA estimated highway fuel economy.

Police layoffs in El Paso

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The crime rate in this West Texas city was up a hefty 12 percent, so Police Chief Bill Rodriguez asked for funds to hire 70 to 80 more police officers.

Instead, to his amazement, he has been told by the City Council that he may have to fire 76 officers.

"We went to the City Council asking for an increase in manning, and now I find myself fighting just to keep the men I have," the chief said Wednesday.

City leaders have vowed to come up with a budget that does not require a tax hike. They can spend up to $77.4 million — but city departments have submitted requests for $102 million. It means more than $24 million must be slashed.

Rodriguez said if the police cuts are included in final budget Sept. 1, he'll have to lay off among others, all 27 rookies who graduated last May from the city's police acadamy — trained at a cost of $16,000 per cadet.

The mayor, a retired FBI agent opposed to firing any policeman, says he will announce a solution next week that he thinks will make everyone happy. But Rodriguez says in the meantime, other cities are beginning to try to hire away his men.

"Houston and Hobbs (N.M.) have already called us and asked us if they can come here and recruit. I said okay — I'd rather see these men get jobs somewhere," Rodriguez said grimly.

There has not been an academy class since May, but one was scheduled for October. "I've ordered them to cease getting ready for that," Rodriguez said.

Originally the city's Office of Management and Budget, which reviews spending plans and gives them to the City Council with proposed cuts, had recommended that 96 officers' jobs be eliminated.

That would have been a 13.8 percent cut in the city's police force of 695 officers.

"These are uniformed officers, but they are not actually out patrolling the streets," explained John Young, assistant director in the budget office.

DON'T COUNT US OUT YET! Many of our customers have reported that when they inquired as to where we had moved, the answers were vague or an implication that we gone out of business! NOT TRUE! With the help of a higher power, the restraint of our creditors, and the many good friends and customers who have found our new location, we are "HANGING IN THERE"! Furthermore, if we can weather this period of energy "rip-offs" and this planned recession, we will continue to be in business, hopefully, for a long time. We wish to express our gratitude to those who have been so nice through the years and offer our apologies to those we haven't been able to get to. Our new location is on a quieter, safer street, and hopefully more convenient for most of our customers. We want your business, we need your patronage, we appreciate you. Mud wrestling: Discos draw

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mud slinging isn't just a political campaign phenomenon anymore. Women wrestlers are doing it instead of disco dancing at Southern California bars — and notables such as Peter Falk and Andy Kaufman are getting into the act.

The women wrestlers wear bikinis, climb into a muddy pit that looks like a sandbox, and slip and slide to the cheers of hundreds of men. The bars hope the competitions will boost attendance, which has dwindled in the recession.

"If people are going to spend money, they want to do more than dance and drink. They want to be entertained. Otherwise they will go to the movies or play miniature golf," said Ray Grafius, manager of the Rustler's Inn in Riverside, where female mud wrestling has been a Wednesday night standard for a month.

At Chippendale's — one of the first Los Angeles discos to feature male exotic dancing (for female audiences only) — women mud wrestlers draw about 300 customers, mostly men, on Tuesday nights.

Customers pay $6 each to watch the wrestlers, who such names as Boom Boom the Cheerleader, Wicked Wanda and Nancy the Naughty Nurse, dance and strip to bikinis, then slide into a mud-filled ring.

Watching on a recent night were actor Falk and director Robert Aldrich, who are about to begin filming "All The Marbles," in which Falk plays a coach for lady wrestlers.

Asked if he might include mud wrestling in the movie, Falk said: "I'll wait 'til I get on the set to decide that."

On another night, comedian Kaufman, known for his portrayal of Latka on the television series "Taxi," and who once took on a female wrestler on "Saturday Night Live," got in the mud himself.

The night Falk was at Chippendale's, a wrestler known as Bronco Brandy shed her chaps and cowboy hat for a skimpy bathing suit to meet Magic Henderson, who came dressed as a Girl Scout.

It was the 19th match for the 105-pound Brandy, whose real name is Jean Alison. She said she is a professional stuntwoman and claimed to have lost only three mud bouts.

"Mud wrestling is bad for your hair because it dries it up and bad on your ears," Ms. Alison said. "I got a skin infection in my ear. The doctor said it is a common infection for children who play in the mud a lot."

The pay is good — $40 a match — and the tips during the dance routine can total $40. But a good mud wrestler is hard to find.

"Finding and keeping mud wrestlers has been difficult," said club employee Renate Steiner. "But this was true of finding male strippers at the beginning ... The girls are unsure about it. About half the women we use are stuntwomen, aspiring actresses or dancers."

Boom Boom the Cheerleader, elsewhere known as actress-model Jeanette Lorentz, said she got the job through a modeling agency that supplies wrestlers who offer more beauty than brawn.

Ms. Lorentz, a strawberry blonde with thick long hair, spent the afternoon before her second match practicing with a club employee. She lost her first bout, and was determined to win her second.

"I thought it was fun, so I've decided to do it again," she said.

She said her boyfriend was surprised by the muddy turn of her career. "He went back and forth and then said, 'Go out and get 'em,'" she said. "My mother told me I was disgracing the family... She was still yelling when I went out the door."

That night, 300 yelling men surrounded the ring. To the blaring theme from "Rocky," the bout began. In seconds, the wrestlers were a gooey chocolate brown, barely resembling the women who danced minutes before.

Slipping and sliding, the women tried to flip or pin their opponent. But wrestling is not enough — there must also be mud slinging, water spitting and hair pulling. Even the bikinis get out of place.

After three 1½-minute rounds, the crowd applauds to pick the winner, and wrestling talent has little — or nothing — to do with victory.

Some men said they watched out of curiosity.

"I just heard about it and I had nothing better to do," said Michael Fahrenkurd, a 31-year-old lawyer in a three-piece suit. "I thought it was different and enjoyed it because it was unique. But I don't know if I would come back.

"It would get old fast," he added.

Ron Guss, 30, said he would be back. "It made you laugh and get happy, although it was kind of a crowd pleaser," the trucking company owner said.

Electrical engineer Jim Hodges, 29, was more reserved: "As a tourist type thing it was OK, but I wouldn't come on a regular basis. It's too expensive."

'No good mother' hurls baby to death in traffic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 33-year-old woman walked onto a freeway overpass with her two daughters and threw her 2-year-old to her death in rush-hour traffic, then muttered, "I'm a no-good mother," witnesses and police said.

Her 8-year-old daughter walked off the bridge, sobbing, "Oh, my baby, my baby sister," a witness said.

Police arrested and booked Virginia Relanzia for investigation of murder. She was being held without bail at the Sybil Brand Institute, the women's jail.

William Harms, a security guard at the nearby federal courthouse, was among those who saw the incident Tuesday.

"I saw her cross the street ... and go onto the overpass. The next thing I knew she had the 2-year-old up over her head and she threw her onto the freeway," he said.

Another witness said the mother seated the baby on the overpass railing, then pushed her over the edge.

The toddler, Valinda Douglas, was struck on the freeway below by a semi-trailer truck and at least one other vehicle. Her body was dragged 15 to 20 feet after being struck.

The semi-trailer truck that struck her did not stop after the incident, police said. "I don't think the driver even knew it," said Detective Dan Andrews. The body was in such bad condition that the exact cause of death may never be determined, he added.

The woman was despondent over marital problems, Andrews said, and after the baby's death told a bystander, "I just threw my baby."

"She's articulate. She seems fairly logical," said Andrews of the Child Protection Section's Juvenile Division. But he added the woman "could give no logical reason for doing it."

Harms said he thought the woman "was ready to throw the 8-year-old," Marie Windgate, whom he heard sobbing, "Oh, my baby, my baby sister."

The woman was muttering, "I'm a no-good mother. I'm no good to either of you," Harms said.

Andrews said Ms. Relanzia is married to Nathan Douglas, who was at home when police called and was "in a state of shock." Ms. Relanzia has "several other children but they all live with relatives," Andrews said.

After the baby's plunge, the woman walked off the bridge, with her other daughter in tow, onto adjacent Alisio Street, where Harm and another federal courthouse security guard, Gustavo Rivera, detained her until police arrived. She gave up without a struggle, Andrews said.

The 8-year-old was taken into protective custody and would be turned over to foster care authorities, Andrews said.

Texan sentenced to die by injections Sept. 15

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — A man who withdrew his appeal to the Supreme Court has been formally sentenced to die by lethal injection Sept. 15.

State District Judge Paul Ferguson set the date Tuesday for William Jack Hammett, 33.

It was the first death sentence to be pronounced by Ferguson in his 10 years as a district judge.

Hammett drew the death penalty in 1977 in the 1976 fatal shooting of Raymond V. Greer, a Clute salvage yard owner.

Hammett's lawyer, Don Ervin, said Tuesday he still hopes there will be an appeal.

Ervin said he hopes to convince Hammett to appeal in federal court through the American Civil Liberties Union.

"He told me he would rather die than be incarcerated and that's a tragedy," Ervin said.

A second man also is charged in the 1976 murder.

A second trial for James Richardson, now 21, had been scheduled to begin Monday but was postponed until Sept. 2 because of Hurricane Allen. An earlier conviction was reversed in May by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.
