Carter Orders Crackdown On Iranian Students

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, concerned that demonstrations in the United States could have an adverse effect on American hostages in Iran, ordered the Justice Department Saturday to deport Iranian students who are violating the terms of their entry visas.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said there is good reason to believe "many" of the 50,000 Iranians in the United States on student visas are violating immigration laws.

He said the Justice Department was ordered to "take the necessary steps to commence deportation proceedings" against those who have violated immigration laws.

The order applies only to students, and presumably to persons here on student visas who are

Powell noted that simply participating in a legal demonstration would not be cause for deportation, since a person legally in this country is deemed to have the same constitutional rights as a U.S. citizen. However, a student visa does impose certain requirements the students must meet to remain in good standing.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service will issue a notice requiring Iranian students to report their location and status to the nearest INS office, Powell said. He did not know precisely when that would happen.

Additional steps, such as contacting college officials, will be taken to find Iranian students and determine their status, he added.

"For students found to be in illegal status, deportation proceedings will be conducted in accordance with constitutional due process requirements," Powell said. He conceded that could take some time.

"I think there is good reason to believe that there are many Iranian students who are in violation of their visas," Powell said.

Asked for an explanation of the action, Powell said:

"I think the activities past and planned for the future here are not in the best interests of our principal goal (of securing the release of 60 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran). There is an obligation to enforce the law."

The administration is known to believe that demonstrations may further escalate tensions and adversely affect the safety of the hostages. Protesting Iranian students already have clashed with American citizens the last few days, and more demonstrations were planned.

Carter last week ordered a demonstration permit revoked for Iranian students in the nation's capital. Apparently he felt that did not go far enough.

A White House official, who did not wish to be identified, said the administration "considered carefully" whether the deportation order would result in retaliation against the hostages.

"There is also concern that the activities here may not have the best impact," the official said, apparently referring to demonstrations.

The White House is known to believe the action is a legitimate way of dealing with a sensitive situation it feels is compromised by public demonstrations and possible violence.

Powell, announcing the action to reporters, said:

"The president has directed the attorney general to identify any Iranian students in the United States who are not in compliance with the terms of their entry visas and to take the necessary steps to commence deportation proceedings against those who have violated applicable immigration laws and regulations.

"As an initial measure, the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Justice Department will issue a notice requesting all Iranian students to report their present location and status immediately to the nearest INS office and will take additional steps to locate and identify such students to determine their legal status."

Hostages' Petition On Shah 'Invalid'

By The Associated Press

A PETITION said to have been signed by half of the American hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran appealed to the Carter administration Saturday to "release" the shah in exchange for their freedom. Presidential spokesman Jody Powell dismissed it as having "absolutely no validity."

President Carter ordered the Justice Department to deport all Iranians in the United States on student visas who are not complying with the visa requirements. The move was seen as an attempt to prevent demonstrations and reduce tensions that might jeopardize the hostages.

Powell said officials believe many of some 50,000 Iranians in the United States on student visas have violated immigration laws, which require that they be full-time students.

Bickering broke out among the Iranians occupying the embassy after a week-long test of nerves with Washington, according to a Palestine Liberation Organization official in Ankara, Turkey. The PLO has a three-man delegation in Tehran conducting behind-the-scene talks for the release of the hostages.

The officials, who asked not to be named, said some of the embassy invaders argued for setting a deadline on their demand the U.S. government send deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from his New York hospital bed back to Iran to stand trial for his life, while others wanted to release some hostages as a good-will gesture.

In an ominous development, one of the Iranian militants in the embassy was asked in a telephone interview with a Swedish reporter if the hostages might be killed if the demands are not met and he replied, "Maybe." The comment may have been unauthorized or may have reflected growing frustration among the anti-American mob occupying the embassy.

Occupation leaders and Iranian officials have repeatedly said their captives would not be harmed unless the United States mounted a military operation to free them.

Angry Americans staged new anti-Iranian protests and marches across the United States on Saturday. American longshoremen continued to refuse to handle Iranian ships. Minnesota Gov. Al Quie, who was the target of a foiled kidnap attempt Friday by four Iranians, counseled against hostility. All four were arrested, but a Sudanese detained with them was released.

A State Department spokesman said Saturday the embassy hostages include 60 to 65 American citizens, one Italian and 35 to 40 Indians and Pakistanis who were employed at the embassy because of their fluent English and clerical skills. The PLO source said 15 women were among the hostages. The State Department reported an undetermined number of Iranians also employed at the embassy had been released soon after the takeover last Sunday.

Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini told an envoy from Pope John Paul II that if Jesus Christ were alive today he would condemn the Carter administration's refusal to extradite the ousted shah, Tehran Radio said. It broadcast a recording of the ayatollah's remarks. The pope sent Archbishop Annibale Bugnini to Iran to seek the release of the hostages.

Khomeini gave Bugnini permission to visit the embassy, but told him the shah plundered Iran for 37 years and should face revolutionary justice. The broadcast, monitored in Kuwait, also said Khomeini went into seclusion in the holy city of Qom, 100 miles south of Teh-

Bankruptcy Threatens Morton

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MORTON — This oil and cotton community has gone the way of New York City and Cleveland — bankrupt — thanks largely to what city officials are calling "absolutely no planning," "a complete lack of insight" and some "questionable financial practices."

Some of the 2,800 residents, though, aren't nearly as kind in their evaluation of the matter and are complaining of the unexplained disappearance of funds, conflicts of interest and "just plain foolhardiness" on the part of the city governors.

"This city council must be the most uninformed ever," commented one woman, while another man said, "I don't really understand how those guys could have done business this long and not seen any problems coming. How blind are they?"

Less than six months ago, the city's books were as black as the oil pumped from the many wells in the surrounding area. Now, the small town about 65 miles west of Lubbock could be as much as $200,000 in debt — almost three times its total annual tax collections of $78,000.

"There really aren't any bad guys who got us into this mess," said Carroll Shelton, a certified public accountant who has performed audits on city books since 1968. "We did have a lot of problems and we still do, but there's no point trying to go back and figure out exactly who's responsible for what."

Meanwhile, Morton is without Mayor J.A. Love, who has been hospitalized out of state for a good portion of the year. And since an emergency city council meeting Oct. 29, the city also is without a police department and 14 of its other 24 city employees. The city manager — Morton's third in four years — also stepped down during that emergency gathering two weeks ago.

No one is certain exactly how deep the city's debt is, but the cash situation was so bad at one point that City Secretary Troy Price said, "For a while we were so broke we couldn't even afford to buy stamps to send out the utility bills." She estimates the city is down about $112,000, while the $200,000 figure is Shelton's.

Those utility bills, or lack of revenue from them, to be more precise, is what most Morton residents are pointing to as the real culprit. The city bought its antiquated and dilapidated natural gas system from a commercial contractor about 35 years ago, and since then it has been leaking between 25 and 50 percent of all the gas run through it each year, costing the city a fortune in revenue.

There are, however, several other factors that may have contributed considerably to the geyser of red ink at city hall. According to audits, they include several instances in which cash has been reported missing from city funds; an inefficient system of making small purchases with city money; a complete turnover of the city office staff; and, mostly, the apparent inability of the city governors to confront and act on the snowballing money problem.

The situation broke wide open, at least to city employees, in early October, when their paychecks began bouncing. The First State Bank, the only bank in Morton, stopped accepting city checks "because the warrants we had issued for the city exceeded the amount of money the city could make back by collecting its complete tax roll," said bank president D.E. Benham.

Warrants, which serve as credits for overdrawn accounts, can be issued to the city to keep the cash flowing, even when the city overdraws its accounts, Benham explained. He refused to say how much money the city owed the bank when he ordered his workers to stop cashing the checks, but the official audit for the city for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, shows that Morton's tax roll totaled about $78,000.

Another person closely connected with the city's financial dealings said the bank generally issues warrants to the city for about $25,000, but that the city owed the bank about $88,000 when Benham clamped down. Benham refused to confirm or deny those figures.

"People really panicked when city checks began bouncing all over town," said Mrs. Price, who noted that even though two payroll checks were a little late every city employee was paid in full.

Lubbockites Angry Over Iranian Deed

By RAYNIE HARDESTY and ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LUBBOCKITES ARE UNIFORMLY alarmed — in many cases downright irate — at the seizure of American hostages in Iran, a telephone poll conducted by The Avalanche-Journal shows.

However, the sampling of opinions from 50 city residents provided no uniformly held observations on how the U.S. government should deal with the demands of Moslem students who for a week have held 60 to 65 Americans as hostages in Tehran.

At the top of the militant students' demands is the return of exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran for trial. The students' stance is backed by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, supreme leader of Iran's Islamic republic, and his secretive Revolutionary Council.

Responses of Lubbockites, when asked how the tense situation should be handled, varied across a spectrum from "start the Seventh Fleet and give them a 72-hour ultimatum," to "I am willing to trust those in authority."

Of those persons contacted, only two favored meeting the demands of the students and returning the ailing shah to his native country. "It seems awfully hard to hand a dying person over for someone to kill," one woman said. "There are different ways to look at it, but it might be better to give one person over to them than to let that many die."

At the opposite extreme was the answer from a man who asked not to be identified: "I think they ought to get Khomeini and hang him. That's all I've got to say."

Two said they feel the shah should be asked to leave the United States when he is again able to travel, but that he should not be "forced to return to Iran."

Respondents split almost equally into three categories:

— Those who favor some form of forceful or military action against Iran.

"I feel we're being a little weak about this," said Mrs. Jimmy Ballew. "It's about time we showed a little military force, and I hate to say that because my husband is of military age. I think that's what it is going to take and I don't think we will get them (the hostages) back any other way."

F. H. Lowry offered a similar opinion: "I don't think we ought to be blackmailed. It may cost some lives, but if it was up to me I'd load up the army and

Story Of China Trip Delayed

WILLIAM S. MORRIS III, president of Morris Communications Corp., parent organization of The Avalanche-Journal, recently returned from a 16-day junket to the People's Republic of China as part of an Associated Press exchange mission.

Morris was to report on the visit in a special 32-page supplement to today's edition of The A-J. Due to technical difficulties, however, the supplement has been delayed. It will be published in the near future.

Morris has said the trip left him with an optimistic attitude regarding the future relations between that country and the United States.

Repeat Of Snowfall Not Likely Today

SURPRISED by an unexpected snowfall Saturday, Lubbock area residents today can look forward to slightly warming temperatures and no liklihood of precipitation.

The light snow that fell over the South Plains was the result of a large high pressure system, centered over northeastern Oklahoma and moving eastward.

Upslope winds combined with low level moisture and cool temperatures to push scattered snow across the area, said a spokesman in the National Weather Service in Lubbock.

"But we had thought all of this would have cleared out by Saturday," the spokesman explained.

The forecast for Lubbock calls for skies to be partly cloudy today with a high temperature in the mid 50s. The low tonight should be near 30. Winds should be westerly 10 to 15 mph.

Temperatures in Lubbock Saturday afternoon reached a high of only 33 degrees.

The areas of snowfall extended from about 50 miles southeast of Lubbock up through the Panhandle and into central Nebraska, the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Accumulations of as much as three inches of snow were reported near Amarillo Saturday.

Only two weeks ago, a snow storm moved into the Texas Panhandle and dumped two inches in the area. An estimated 15,000 cattle died because of the storm, mostly from driving winds that suffocated many younger cattle.

Although cattle losses from Saturday's storm were expected to be light, ranchers will be forced to begin winter feeding their cattle earlier.

Strong north winds brough cooler temperatures to most of the state Saturday. Forecasters predict a general west-to-east clearing today. Rainfall was scattered throughout the state.

The South Plains and Panhandle are due another chance of rain or snow on Tuesday, with below seasonal temperatures to continue through next week.

Jury Finds Gordon Guilty Of Murder

By DON CUNNINGHAM
A-J Correspondent

KERRVILLE — A five-man, seven-woman jury found Jim Gordon guilty of murder in the Christmas Eve 1977 killing of William Drew "W.D." Young and recommended a 15-year prison sentence Saturday in 216th District Court here.

The jury deliberated about two hours on guilt and 2 1/2 on punishment during the sixth day of the trial, which was moved from Lubbock on change of venue.

Gordon's wife Sandy, who had viewed the entire testimony, began weeping and was escorted out of the courtroom by a friend.

Gordon was allowed to remain free on his $50,000 bond. His attorney's have 10 days to file motions on appeal.

Six persons were indicted for the death of the alleged "biker" and member of a motorcycle club by a Lubbock grand jury in March 1978.

Kenneth Herndon, 37, convicted of the murder last February, testified for the defense Friday that he accidently fired the shot which killed the 28-year-old victim, while Gordon was questioning Young about money taken from one of Gordon's nightclubs.

Defense attorney Gerald Anderson called his client during the punishment phase of the trial to take the stand and testify he had never been convicted of a felony.

When asked by prosecution attorney Jim Darnell why he was seeking probation, Gordon replied, "because I don't think I am guilty of anything."

Anderson, making a plea for leniency, asked the jury to consider a similar sentence for his client to that assessed the three state's witnesses.

Three others who were in the office of the Salt River Saloon when Young was killed, Homer and Tico Lowrance and Ian Payne, agreed to probated sentences in exchange for guilty pleas and their testimony.

The first of the six to go to trial, Kenneth Owen Jaycon, was found guilty of participating in the murder in April 1978 and was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Young's body was found in the trunk of his smoldering car about 10 p.m. Dec. 24, 1977, on a dirt road about 7 miles south of Lubbock.

Relatives Of Hostages Urging Restraint; Americans March

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer

As fearful relatives of American hostages in Iran echoed President Carter's plea for restraint Saturday, scores of frustrated Americans marched and chanted in more protests on the seventh day militant Iranians occupied the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

In the face of continuing protests around the nation, President Carter ordered the Justice Department Saturday to deport Iranian students not in compliance with their entry visas in an apparent attempt to deter further violence.

In Charleston, S.C., about 100 demonstraters rallied peacefully Saturday in support of the 60 American hostages in Tehran. The rally was aimed at offering "a way for citizens to show support for our fellow citizens in captivity," according to organizer Doug Olsson.

In Chicago's Federal Plaza, protesters carried signs urging U.S. military intervention to free the 60 American hostages. About 30 marchers joined in the protest called by the anti-Iranian Remember the Embassy Committee.

American anger boiled over into fierce protests last week as militant Iranians continued to occupy the U.S. Embassy and demand the extradition of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who is undergoing cancer treatment in New York.

The Denver Committee of Americans for the Extradition of the Shah planned to march on Saturday because they were "alarmed at attacks against Iranian people in this country," said spokesman Martin Eder.

Eder said the group "feels that if Iranians in this country were to get hurt, lives of Americans in Iran would be in jeopardy. We don't support the specific tactics being used (in Tehran), but we do support extradition of the shah. He should be brought to trial."

After clashes between Americans and Iranians from opulent Beverly Hills to the nation's capital, relatives of some of the American hostages in Tehran issued pleas for restraint on Saturday.

"We are urging Americans not to demonstrate, to realize that their protests are endangering the life of my father and the other hostages," said Allyssa and Katie Keough, daughters of educator William F. Keough Jr., one of the hostages.

Allyssa, 18, and Katie, 19, both students in Boston, said they feared the anti-Iranian protests could worsen their father's plight.

In Pueblo, Colo., Theresa Gallegos, the mother of one hostage, said she feared the U.S. backlash could endanger her son's life and said of the protesters: "Why don't they ask us? He's our son." Billy Gallegos, 22, was among the Marine guards assigned to the embassy.

Press secretary Jody Powell said Friday that "The President expects every American to refrain from any action that might increase the danger to the American hostages in Tehran."

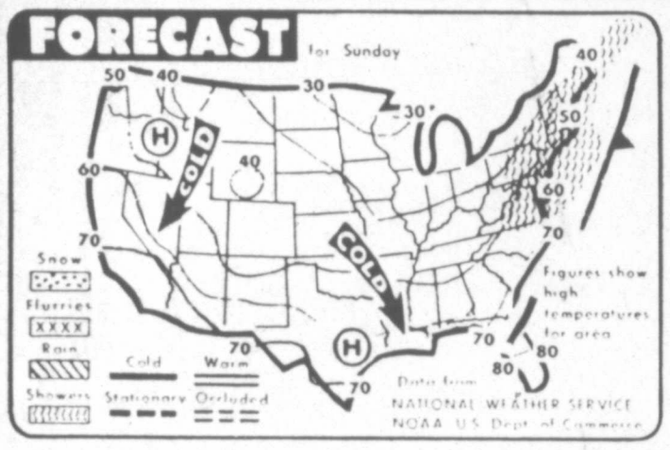

An Iranian ship remained docked Saturday with empty holds at Port Newark, N.J., as longshoremen continued to protest by refusing to work on the ship until the U.S. hostages were released.

In Denver, the women employed at the Cat's Meow escort service said Saturday they would refuse dates with Iranian customers. "We may lose money on the deal, but we feel this country has been kicked around long enough," said their boss, Mort Karman.

During marches Friday in Houston, Los Angeles, Cape Cod, Mass., Seattle and Philadelphia, protesters carried signs with messages such as "Punch Persian Punks," "Death to Khomeini," "Deport Iranian Students" and "Nuke Iran."

In Los Angeles, 130 Iranians and 15 Americans were arrested Friday when a march turned into a melee between the two groups.

Pilots Begin Search For Lubbockite's Plane

The Colorado Civil Air Patrol launched a 10-plane search, trying to locate the twin-engine plane. The plane has been missing since Oct. 30, on a flight from Grand Junction to Lubbock.

The Civil Air Patrol identified the pilot as David A. Jones, 33, of Lubbock and the only passenger as Michael O'Keefe of Bremerton, Wash.

"The concentrated effort is in the immediate area of Grand Junction, where he (the pilot) landed to take on fuel" Oct. 30, said Ken Clark, search coordinator in Pueblo for the Colorado CAP.

"We are covering all possible routes of flight through the mountains," Clark said. He added that the search has been hampered by the pilot's failure to file a flight plan with the Federal Aviation Administration.

At the request of the CAP, Lubbock law enforcement agencies checked to see if the missing Cessna 310 was at local airports, but did not find it.

So far, no Lubbock CAP volunteers have been asked to search for the missing plane. "We couldn't have done anything today anyway because of the weather," local deputy commander John Henson said Saturday.

Officials could not explain why the missing aircraft was not reported until Friday.

The Air Patrol and the FAA still worked Saturday to retrieve information from a flight computer it was hoped could provide record of the last radar contact with the missing plane, Clark said.

CAP officials in Santa Fe, N.M., said planes were searching across the northern part of the state between the Santa Fe and Farmington areas.

Exiled Composer Buried In Spain

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP — Pablo Casals' remains were laid to rest Saturday at nearby El Vendrell, his birthplace, six years after the exiled cellist, composer and conductor died in Puerto Rico.

Hundreds of persons attended the ceremony at the small cemetery, including Spanish Culture Minister Manuel Clavero.

Casals' widow, Marta Montanez, accompanied the remains from Puerto Rico, where the cellist died Oct. 22, 1973, aged 96.

Fight At Area Club Results In Stabbing

A 22-year-old Lubbock man was in serious condition Saturday evening at West Texas Hospital with stab wounds he received Friday night during a fight in an East Lubbock club.

Ricardo R. Rivera of 3114 Emory was stabbed about 11:30 p.m. Friday while fighting with another man in the Dos Amigos club at 400 Quirt Ave.

Police reports indicate that Rivera's mother was hit on the head when she tried to stop the fight.

Two Lubbock High School students told police that an angry mother fired gunshots at them Friday night striking one of the youth's car.

Police reports indicate the 16-year-old girl had gone to bed and was talking on the phone to a 17-year-old friend when the girl's mother came in the bedroom, unplugged the telephone and told the youth to get dressed. The woman reportedly struck the girl several times.

Reports indicate the woman told her daughter she was taking her some other place to spend the night, threw a trashcan at the girl and left the room.

The teen-ager reportedly plugged in the phone and called her friend to tell him about the incident and ask him to pick her up.

When the youth arrived at the girl's house, the woman told him he would have to leave.

The woman then reportedly went to another part of the house to get a gun, and the two youths ran outside and got in the boy's car. The youths told police they saw the woman carrying a gun and heard shots fired.

The young pair reportedly drove around for a while, then informed the boy's parents of the incident and called police.

The owner of a Lubbock pickup truck dealership told police a test drive cost him about $4,000.

Max Hood, owner of Pickups of Lubbock at 1711 Ave. Q said a man and woman came to his business about 10 a.m. Saturday and asked to drive a 1975 black and silver Dodge Ramcharger.

Reports indicate that the woman told Hood her husband had driven the vehicle, valued at $4,000, Friday afternoon.

Mistaken Identity Could Have Led To Shooting Of City Man

A 48-year-old Lubbock man, who was shot in the head on the parking lot of a downtown Lubbock car dealership Saturday afternoon, may have been the victim of mistaken identity.

Police reports indicate that Nelson and his daughter were shopping for a new car and drove onto the Gene Messer Ford lot at 1902 Texas Ave. about 1:30 p.m. when a pickup truck drove in behind Nelson's vehicle.

Nelson got out of his vehicle and was approached by the suspect who reportedly accused Nelson of following his wife. Nelson told the suspect that he didn't even know the man's wife and said, "Look, I've got my daughter in the car. Do you think I would be messing around with your wife with her (Nelson's daughter) in the car?"

Reports indicate the suspect then shot Nelson with a 20-gauge, sawed-off shotgun. The suspect got in his truck and drove away.

A Department of Public Safety trooper arrested the suspect near Loop 289 and Idalou Road.

Various Ways Of Buying Home Explained

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although the availability of money is scarce and expensive for a conventional home loan, potential Lubbock home buyers still have some options left for purchasing that first home.

That was the cautiously optimistic message of a two-hour seminar last week sponsored by the Lubbock Board of Realtors for new home buyers.

About 180 persons heard one local lender say funds are available for the purchase of a new or used home through FHA/VA financing.

John Neal of Sentry Savings Association suggested at the Thursday night seminar that a Realtor can help a person decide if he qualifies for FHA/VA financing.

"Sure there is probably more red tape if a person decides to go this route, but probably not much more than if they were trying to obtain a conventional home loan," Neal said.

The lender said his association is probably doing more FHA/VA financing than ever before, adding that "now is as good a time as any to buy a home."

Another Lubbock lender said that there is conventional home loan money here, but it is "scarce and expensive" because of the federal government's actions driving up interest rates to curb inflation.

Marlon Ribble with the loan department at Lubbock National Bank added that Texas' usury law limiting mortgage rates to 11.25 percent also has made home loan money tight in Lubbock.

Lending institutions say it is unprofitable for them to lend mortgage money because they must pay even higher interest rates to borrow. The prime interest rate — the rate banks charge their most credit-worthy corporate borrowers — is currently at more than 15 percent.

"But any loan officer worth his salt will try his best to obtain a home loan for someone," Ribble said. "We try to consider each borrower on their own merits. Today, a lender doesn't care about a person's sex, age, race or marital status; all that matters is that you're a responsible person."

He advised potential home buyers to first make a list of the minimum requirements they want in a home and then get a Realtor who can help a person decide whether he can afford to buy a home.

Ribble says he is optimistic about the availability of home loan money here because of what Lubbock's economy is based on.

"We're having a record cotton crop this year, and unemployment is low here compared to other cities," he said.

Owning a home doesn't cost as much as you think it does, a Texas Tech University accounting professor told the group.

Dr. John M. Malloy said that owning a home offers a person a significant tax advantage.

Another advantage in owning a home is inflation because of the probable appreciation of the home, he added.

Arlene Callaway with First American Title Co. advised the group to know their contract in the sale of the house since the type of contract determines closing costs.

She warned that more problems seem to occur when a Realtor is not involved in the closing of the sale.

"You need a Realtor to negotiate for you," she said.

Insuring a home is important because it is probably the largest investment a person will make, a local insurance agent said.

"Your lender and your insurance agent can help you insure your home for the proper amount," said Mike Woolley with the Farmers Insurance Group.

He said a person should know and understand what is and is not covered under his homeowner's policy.

County Dads Slate Tax Assessment Board Selections

Appointments to the new county-wide tax assessment board will be considered in a 10 a.m. Tuesday meeting of Lubbock County commissioners at the Lubbock County Courthouse.

Under a law passed in the recent session of the Texas Legislature, the board will oversee a county-wide property reappraisal beginning Jan. 1 for anew system to become effective in 1982.

Other action in the meeting, scheduled a day later than usual because Sunday is Armistice Day and Monday a legal holiday, will include consideration of work done at the new Lubbock County Youth Center reform school.

Three weeks ago commissioners examined earth moving work at the center which may have been done without proper authorization, according to commissioners. Payment for the work was authorized to Page & Wirtz Construction Co. of Lubbock. Tuesday commissioners are scheduled to consider the supervision contract the county has with Austin architect Lamar Youngblood for construction of the $1.2-million center near University Avenue and North Loop 289.

Lubbock County returns from the special election on constitutional amendments last week will be canvassed.

EARTHQUAKE

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — A small earthquake rattled parts of Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia around Ashland, Ky., the U.S. Geological Survey says. There were no reports of damage from the tremor, which measured 3.3 on the Richter scale. The quake occurred about 4:30 p.m. Friday and was reported felt in the area where the three states come together, Don Finley, a spokesman for the survey, said Saturday. The area has had small earthquakes in the past, he said.

Kissinger Visits Shah In Hospital

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger paid a private visit Saturday to exiled Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi of Iran in his guarded 17th-floor room at New York Hospital.

A spokesman said the Kissinger visit lasted "half an hour to an hour." Kissinger is a longtime supporter of the ailing former monarch whose return to Iran for trial is being demanded by Iranian students holding more than 60 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

In Washington, White House Pess Secretary Jody Powell said Kissinger "was not a representative of the administration, I can assure you of that."

Speaking to reporters afterwards, Kissinger said the shah should not be turned over to Iran and that he supported Carter administration efforts to free the hostages.

Kissinger, considered by many protesting Iranian students as one of those responsible for the shah's long reign, had lobbied for asylum for the shah in the United States after he fled Iran in January.

The shah, recovering from gall bladder surgery and being treated for lymph cancer, was reported Saturday to be considering an offer from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to fly to Egypt to take the pressure off the United States.

As the crisis in Iran grows, the shah spends much of his time watching old movies and news reports on television.

OPEC Killer To Begin Alcohol Production

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PADUCAH (Special) — The "OPEC Killer", what several farmers are calling the answer to the fuel shortage, will begin producing alcohol Saturday before more than 1,500 spectators.

The $14,150 machine will be displayed next weekend by Cottle-King Agri-Fuels Inc., at the old Fell Spraying Service airplane hangar, 11 miles southeast of Paducah on FM 1278.

The 42 members of the new organization purchased the portable processor several months ago from a manufacturer in Buena Vista, Ga., while searching for an alternative to expensive fuels needed to operate farm machinery.

Almost 2,000 persons requested more information on the unit, which produces up to 300 gallons of ethyl alcohol in each batch, while the facility was on display at area fairs.

Those persons are being notified of the event and are receiving maps of the location, said James A. Long, president of the organization sponsoring the day-long event.

Representatives from state and federal agencies regulating alcohol production also are expected to attend the demonstration to explain requirements for acquisition of permits and licenses necessary before alcohol can be produced, Long said.

Since the Paducah area farmers purchased their machine and displayed their new machinery to others across the South Plains, similar organizations near Hale Center and Stamford also have purchased OPEC-Killers from the Paducah group. At least 14 others have been ordered.

The portable facility is capable of producing 300 gallons of ethyl alcohol per week as it is equipped now, but with the addition of more fermentation tanks, it should produce up to 600 gallons per day, the farmers say.

Many are calling the alcohol it produces "agri-fuel" because it is produced from crops.

Although the ethanol production requires 50 to 60 bushels of feed stock, or any grain crop containing starches and sugars, only the starch is taken from the grains and the leftover mash can be used as a feed for cattle, hogs, fish, fowl or even humans.

The processor is powered by "anything that'll make a fire," Long stressed.

The only other resource needed to produce the fuel in the machine is about 30 to 35 gallons of water per bushel of grain.

The farmers' experiments have shown that diesel tractors can burn up to 95 percent alcohol in their engines and "because alcohol burns cleaner and dryer, the oil in the tractor will last three times longer," Long said.

Long also said the OPEC-Killer fuel is a renewable resource because it is made of other renewable resources. He said the product is a nonpollutant for the same reasons.

Soviets, Britons Jittery Due To Missile Alert

MOSCOW (AP) — An apparent computer foul-up that caused a false missile alert in the United States prompted the Soviet Union on Saturday to warn that another such error could have "irreparable consequences." Two British lawmakers in London also expressed concern.

The Soviet news agency Tass claimed the Pentagon was having trouble reassuring people about the episode, which resulted in 10 U.S. and Canadian jet interceptors taking off from their bases.

"No matter how hard the Pentagon spokesman tried to assure newsmen, they were not soothed by his statements," Tass reported from Washington. "In reporting the incident, the press said that such an 'error' may lead to fatal consequences.

"Another 'error' by the computer might have irreparable consequences for the whole world," Tass said.

At the White House, Press Secretary Jody Powell was asked about the adverse reaction.

"Given the fact that our people are sitting over there," he said, referring to 60 Americans held hostage by students at the U.S. Embassy in Iran, "anybody who is angry with us is not going to get a long hearing."

The North American Air Defense Command in Colorado was using a test tape Friday when the apparent computer malfunction caused a warning of the simulated Soviet missile attack to be transmitted to other commands and federal agencies, the Pentagon said.

The foul-up was corrected within six minutes and the false alert never reached the president, but in that brief time the jets assigned to fight attacking bombers were sent aloft.

From the statement the Pentagon released, it appeared the NORAD commanders always were aware it was only a test. However, Tass reported, "Only after six minutes had passed, did the NORAD Commanders become aware that a mistake had occurred and that there was no attack."

Defense officials said the false alarm did not appear to have resulted from any human error. A Pentagon spokesman told a reporter there have been other false alarms that have not been announced, but that Friday's incident was publicized to make clear it had nothing to do with the crisis in Iran.

The Soviet news media have reported previously that U.S. servicemen with access to sophisticated weapons were found to be drunk or using drugs. The Tass report on the missile incident basically followed the version of events issued in Washington, with no indication of whether the alert was spotted by the Soviet military.

The Soviet Union is waging an all-out campaign against plans by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to deploy some 600 long-range Pershing 2 and Cruise missiles in Western Europe.

Two British lawmakers said Saturday, after the false alert, that Britain should reduce nuclear tension by scrapping plans to update its nuclear force.

British legislator Robert Cryer said in London the false alert "shows beyond doubt that if we don't start to reduce the number of nuclear weapons, some will sooner or later be used and then there will be no winners because we shall all be losers as part of a radioactive cinder heap."

Cryer, a member of the opposition Labor Party, said because of "this alarming incident" he will urge Defense Secretary Francis Pym to drop plans to replace Britain's nuclear weapons when the Polaris missiles are phased out.

A Labor colleague, Martin Flannery, said, "The horrifying miscalculation by the Americans, which could have plunged the whole world into Armageddon, is the inevitable result of the panic and hysteria created by their developing anti-Sovietism."

Tech Magazine Workshop Slated Nov. 28-29

Writing, designing and editing of magazines will be the subject of a workshop scheduled for Nov. 28-29 in the Mass Communications Building at Texas Tech.

Ray Dorn, author of "How to Design and Improve Magazine Layouts," and a columnist for "Editor's Journal," will preside at the Nov. 29 workshop on design.

Presiding at the Nov. 28 workshop will be Don Ranly, professor of Journalism at the University of Missouri and high school and college instructor and lecturer in the fields of newswriting and editing, public affairs reporting, mass media and communications.

The workshop, sponsored by the Mass Communications Department at Texas Tech, is especially prepared for editors, writers and designers of magazines.

Registration will be limited to the first 100 applicants, the fee is $50 for the two days, $40 for one.

Applicants who wish a critique of design or writing by the workshop speakers must furnish copies of the publications to be critiqued by November 16 for forwarding to the speakers, according to Mrs. Cathryn Buesseler, magazine workshop director for the Mass Communications Department.

Hearings On Energy Savers Scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charging that the federal government has done "as little as possible" to remedy chemical contamination at Love Canal in upstate New York, Rep. John LaFalce on Saturday called on President Carter to take charge of the project personally.

In a highly critical six-page letter to Carter the Niagara Falls, N.Y., Democrat said he had "reached the limits of my endurance" in trying to deal with the federal bureaucracy.

"I have seen approximately 2,000 of my constituents — 500 families — suffer needlessly over the last several years because the federal government has not responded adequately," LaFalce wrote. "I see no prospect of this situation resolving itself without your direct intervention and forceful leadership."

Carter declared the Loe Canal nighborhood of Niagara Falls a disaster area in August 1978 after chemicals buried there decades earlier began percolating to the surface, creating health problems for residents and students at a school on the site.

Federal Attorney Appearing In Opera

BALTIMORE (AP) — Marylanders attending the opera "Fidelio" at the Kennedy Center in Washington might find that the second soldier from the right looks a bit familiar.

He's Barnet Skolnik, the federal attorney who won racketeering convictions against former Gov. Marvin Mandel and five co-defendants.

Friends say his appearance as the black coated and booted soldier in "Fidelio" is fulfilling a long-time dream of performing on stage with a first-class opera company.

But the 38-year-old Skolnik doesn't like to discuss his opera career. "This is my private life," he says. "I'm not doing it as part of my public person."

His friends say he had wanted to appear in an opera since his student days when he sang in several stage performances.

A 22-year veteran of Lubbock's police force was cleared of charges that he was intoxicated while off duty and was reinstated to his position as police sergeant Saturday by the Civil Service Commission.

Earl G. Eubanks, who was on "indefinite suspension" after allegedly being intoxicated while off duty in the early morning hours of Oct. 4, faced almost certain dismissal from the police force had his appeal been denied by the commission.

Commissioners Joe Minkley, Max Addison and Luis Trejo deliberated less than 30 minutes in open session, after hearing testimony from some 18 witnesses over a 1 1/2-day period.

The three members voted 2-1 to clear Eubanks of the charges, and then voted unanimously to reinstate him to his position. Eubanks is four years away from being eligible to retire.

Addison cast his vote in favor of the city's contention that Eubanks was intoxicated when he was pulled over by two police officers after he allegedly ran a red light.

"If four experienced police officers testify under oath that a fellow officer was intoxicated, in addition to Sgt. Eubanks admitting (he had consumed alcohol during the time in question), I have no problem with accepting the charge as proven," Addison said.

Minkely and Trejo, however, said they doubted whether the first officer who stopped Eubanks that morning could determine he was intoxicated after talking to him less than 20 minutes.

"I have a problem regarding whether or not the charge is true, based on a decision made by the first officer in a fairly short amount of time. Perhaps that judgment was accepted as fact by the other officers," Minkley said.

"In terms of consequences, I'm afraid that assessment snowballed," he told the audience in the hearing room.

After discussing whether they could order "some kind of discipline" for Eubanks, commissioners agreed that because he had been cleared, their only choice was to reinstate the veteran officer to his position.

In testimony Saturday morning, Eubanks' wife Martha said her husband was "upset" but "not intoxicated" when he was driven home by the two police officers who arrested him shortly after midnight Oct. 4.

Mrs. Eubanks told commissioners her husband, who had been awake with only a short nap since 5 a.m., was worried about a family decision he needed to make, and concerned about her own continuing treatment for cancer. But, she said, she "noticed nothing abnormal" about his behavior or driving that morning.

Police Chief J.T. Alley, who was present during the entire hearing, acknowledged the commission's ruling "could possibly have" a strong effect on police department affairs. "It depends on how the other (officers) take it."

Leaving the room after shaking hands with a relieved Eubanks, Alley said the department "would abide by the commission's decision."

Sentiment within the police department reportedly was "running 50-50" for and against the suspended officer.

Texas Democratic Party Unity Splitting Until Election Day

Analysis

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — For Texas Democrats, party unity is a goal pursued like the Holy Grail was sought by medieval knights — with much earnest discussion, good intentions and great hope, but with only brief, fleeting glimpses of the desired object.

And like the medieval questors, Texas Democrats frequently turn aside for interludes continuing in 1980, with supporters of President Jimmy Carter and challenge Sen. Edward Kennedy smashing one another hip-and-thigh.

Kennedy supporters on the State Democratic Executive Committee are reportedly incensed over scheduling of SDEC meetings to coincide with visits of the First Family to Texas.

That happened Oct. 29, when Rosalynn Carter was in Houston for fundraiser — and it apparently will happen again Dec. 8, when the President is expected to be in Austin for a fundraiser (in conjunction with his planned four-day nationwide announcement tour).

That latter meeting choice is particularly upsetting to the Kennedyites, since there is a possibility the senator will be in San Antonio that day, at a celebration (Our Lady of Guadalupe) featuring Archbishop Patrick Flores.

Kennedy supporters reportedly asked State Party Chairman Billy Goldberg to invite Kennedy to speak to the SDEC at the Dec. 8 meeting — with Goldberg vetoing the request.

At the present, Carter appears to retain the support on a majority of the SDEC, with former party head Calvin Guest saying 34 of the 64 members are "solidly" for Carter, with 12 for Kennedy and the other 18 neutral.

Some more indications on that may come this spring, when the SDEC is expected to vote on putting a non-binding presidential preference primary on the ballot — a plan which was rejected earlier on the premise it would be better to wait and see if there would be a contest for the presidential nomination.

Kennedy and Carter supporters a like will be keeping tabs on the SDEC and its committees, especially as the time nears for selection of delegates to the national convent on.

While that anticipated "straw vote" won't have any legal effect on selection of delegates it's conceded by party officials that a strong showing by any presidential candidates won't be hesitant to use the results of that vote to their advantage.

Both Kennedy and Carter supporters are putting considerable effort already into local organization; Kennedy backers rallied in Austin over the weekend to set up communications and to coordinate efforts among the various "Draft Kennedy" committee throughout Texas.

So far, there's been little showing or organized support (or much support organized or unorganized) for California Gov. Jerry Brown.

Brown has made several stops in Texas recently, attempting to overcome the general perception of him as an offbeat, hippy-ish liberal.

Some Texas liberals had been saying Brown — despite his talk about really being a conservative — but Kennedy's entry into the race appears to have relegated him to an also-ran spot, even before he has a chance to run.

Meanwhile, Carter supporters announced a "steering committee" composed of a wide spectrum of Texas Democrats, including various oilmen, legislators, local officials, Bankers and minority group members.

Kennedy supporters anticipate gathering the majority or the minorities, with some Carter backers conceding that's likely to be the case.

Others, however, argue Carter can point to the selection of a number of minority group members for various posts — so that Kennedy isn't automatically assured of the black and Mexican-American vote in Texas.

In any event, skirmishing is well underway, and quite a few blows will be exchanged before 1980 is over.

And then, whoever the winner of the Democratic nomination turns out to be, Texas Democrats (or at least most of them) will start talking again about party unity, until time for the next election.

The Market Meter

Negative News Events Hamper Stock Market

By J.L. HUTCHESON
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.

Efforts to secure the release of hostages in the U.S. embassy in Tehran were complicated by the resignation of the Prime Minister, Mehdi Bazargan, and the continued refusal by the Ayatollah Khomeini to recognize anyone as having authority to discuss the subject. Demonstrators threatened to execute the Americans if the U.S. tried to rescue them, and fears of fresh oil-supply shortage mounted.

J.L. HUTCHESON

All things considered, stock prices have behaved remarkably well in view of the fact that the market has lost almost 100 points and is being constantly bombarded with negative news events from all sides.

Some of the gambling issues fared well this well as defense, chemical, computer, tobacco and savings-and-loan stocks.

Analysts continue to view the current application of monetary restraint as an influence which should prove favorable in the long run but will most likely be painful over the near-term as the economy adjusts to tight money. The conservative fiscal policy that the Fed has adopted makes it much more probable that the trend rate of inflation won't get materially worse than the average 7% to 8% which the nation has experienced over much of this decade.

It has become increasingly important to remember that the most publicized recession in history is already a part of the stock market and unless these many companies are not going to have any earnings at all, stocks are one of the best bargains around.

More and more, economists are coming to the conclusion that a long-term cure for inflation won't be accomplished through monetary policies only. They maintain that the Fed's recent action last month was only a first step which must be followed by others to insure that a permanent reduction in inflation is achieved. Excessive growth in government spending must be reduced and the barriers to capital investment removed through a restructuring of the tax system to provide greater investment incentive.

There is also increasing evidence to believe that inflationary expectations will be curbed earlier than previously thought and this could lead to a stabilized period in long-term bond yields. Short-term rates could fall to the 9%-10% level by spring.

Increase In Capitol Spending Urged

One basic problem with the U.S. economy today is the lack of investment. Capitol spending has been disappointingly sluggish since the recession of 1974-75. The latest figures, compiled by the Economic Department of McGraw-Hill Publications, Co. show that capital spending is turning soft just when it may be needed to keep the economy from sliding into a severe recession. This underlines the fact that today's faltering economy will get no support from investment. It also supports the argument that the runaway pace of inflation will not be moderated by any major increase in productivity.

The slowdown of capital spending and the speedup of inflation are two halves of a viscious circle that is weakening the U.S. economy and eroding its standards of living. Double-digit dollars with anything like the value the originally paid. Also, the slow pace of capitol spending feeds inflation by delaying modernization and innovation that would cut costs and step up productivity.

Two things must be done to break this vicious circle. One is to shorten the payback period for investments that will contribute to higher productivity. The main way to do this is to take some of the tax rate. Along with a lower rate, investors should get shorter depreciation times and a reduced capital gains tax, in order that they can recover their money faster.

In addition, management at the many corporations that have turned timid at thoughts of capital investments have to develop the resolve required to make the investments that will increase productivity and create jobs.

Increased capital spending, which invaribly will result in increased productivity, will do more to fight inflation than all the talking done by a group of politicians.

Hopes Rising For Interest Rates Peak

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — After a series of false alarms in the last several months, hopes are rising again on Wall Street that interest rates are near a peak.

These hopes stem partly from the most recent data from the Federal Reserve, which show some tentative evidence that the growth of the money supply is slowing in response to credit-tightening by the Fed.

Late this past week most major banks raised their prime lending rates again, from 15¼ to 15½ percent. But the optimists point out that New York's Citibank, under the formula it uses for setting the basic charge on blue-chip loans, could have posted an even bigger increase.

The fact that the bank, New York's largest, chose not to do so was interpreted by some of the optimists as a signal that maybe its policy-makers figured money rates might soon be headed downward.

That message may have a familiar ring. Similar hopes have built up on several occasions this year among stock and bond traders, only to be wiped out each time by a fresh surge in interest rates.

The last time, in October, the money markets experienced their "greatest trauma in living history," in the description of Morris Cohen, chief economist at Schroder Naess & Thomas.

But since late October, money rates have steadied, and some have even declined a bit. The stock market, likewise, has shown signs of recovering its balance after a two-week slide of about 83 points in the Dow Jones industrial average in mid-October.

The Dow, faced with the tense Iranian situation, slipped briefly below the 800 level this past week to its lowest closing level of the year.

But it cut its losses with a rally on Friday, to finish the week with a net drop of 12.46 points at 806.48.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .45 to 57.74, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was down .30 at 208.74.

In most cases, analysts' hopes for an early peak in interest rates are not based on any presumption that the Federal Reserve, under Chairman Paul Volcker, is about to switch abruptly to a policy of easier money.

Indeed, many Wall Streeters contend that the Fed should stick with its present position at least until there is evidence of real and substantial progress in getting inflation under control.

The common theory, instead, is that as the effects of the recent credit-tightening moves begin to work their way through the financial system, market forces themselves will begin pushing rates lower.

"As bank lending growth rates begin to diminish, nonproductive loans are turned down, lending risks reappraised, inflationary expectations start to diminish, all this should show up in the marketplace," said Cohen.

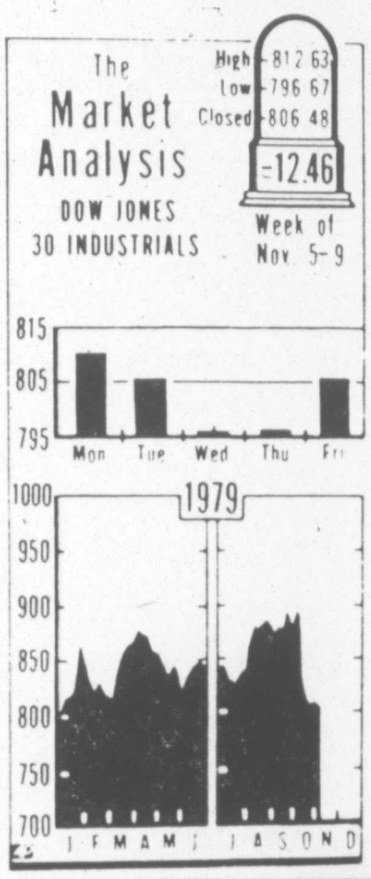

"Thus, Volcker is right when he says that the marketplace will be where the rates start to show a reversal and head downwards, and that the Fed itself will not initiate such a reversal."

After posing the question "have interest rates peaked," economists at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York answered with "a qualified yes.

"The worst of the interest rate and bond price spasms appear to have subsided, more orderly conditions prevail, and the markets have been forcefully reminded that curbing inflation is the premier policy priority.

"In this sense, future reactions to central bank initiatives will probably seem anti-climactic.

"On the other hand, the Fed's arsenal is far from being depleted and future initiatives can be expected if the most recent measures are not effective — generating even higher interest rates, lower bond prices, and greater uncertainty."

TRW AGREEMENT

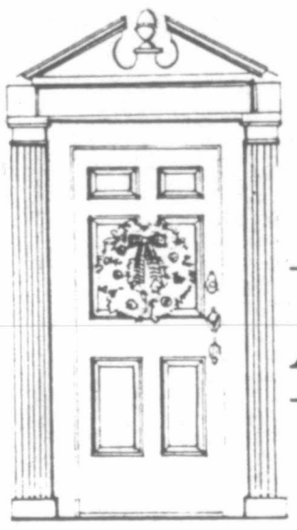

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tentative agreement has been reached between TRW Inc. and 4,300 striking workers at four of the company's Cleveland-area plants. TRW spokesman Mike Jablonski said negotiators for the company and the Aircraft Workers Alliance reached agreement early Saturday after an all-night bargaining session. He said no details of the agreement would be revealed until the union members voted on the proposal Thursday.

Public Debt Leaps Record Amount In September

NEW YORK (AP) — Some economists see the latest figures on consumer debt as a classic example of the buy-in-advance psychology which has developed as inflation became more permanently fixed in the U.S. economy.

Even though recesion forecasts were widely publicized, the public increased its debt burden by a record amount in September, according to a government report released this past week.

Consumer installment debt — for such things as auto and personal loans, and credit card purchases — jumped a record $4.45 billion during the month. At the end of the month, the total due amounted to $303.90 billion, or 15 per cent more than a year earlier.

The September debt total represented both a 3.8 percent increase from the previous month in new credit taken out and the same percentage decrease from August in the rate of repayments and other liquidations of already existing loans.

For the entire third quarter, which ended in September, consumer credit grew at an annual rate of 13 percent, the Federal Reserve reported.

Not very many years ago, the response of consumers to an oncoming recession was to reduce their debt, increase their savings and build up a "nest egg" for the expected hard times ahead.

But the persistence of high inflation has apparently convinced many consumers to buy now, even if it means borrowing, in order to avoid higher prices later.

Although the latest consumer credit figures were more than a month old when they were reported this past week, they represented something of a surprising trend to economists who had been predicting a slowdown in buying.

"Sometime earlier this year we believed consumers had pretty much reached a peak — that they couldn't handle any significant amount of further debt," said Allan McKinnon, senior vice president of Merrill Lynch Economics Inc.

But the lure of bargains — particularly auto rebates — and some catch-up buying from earlier shopping deferred during the summer gasoline shortage aparently ontributed to another "bit of a binge," McKinnon said.

Despite that, his forecasting firm is predicting a slowdown in consumer spending — particularly for automobiles — and a slower rate of increase in consumer debt in the current quarter, which began in October.

At Data Resources Inc., Bennett Davies also believes that consumers are "reaching the threshold" of amounts of debt they can handle. The Lexington, Mass. forecasting company predicts a decline in consumer spending beginning in the current quarter and continuing through the spring of next year. In the quarter ended September 30, consumer purchases rose 4.3 percent.

Whether consumers have already taken on too much debt is debated by economists partly because shifts in population and the work force make historical comparisons difficult.

McKinnon, doesn't foresee any "significant" problems developing in the near future. He notes, for instance, that shifts in population have gradually resulted in a larger proportion of people in their 30s, an age group which traditionally borrows more heavily than other age groups.

Total consumer debt as a percentage of personal income is now running around 15 percent, up from about 11 percent in the mid-1960s and around 13 percent through the 1973-75 recession.

At Data Resources, Davies suggests that in light of its prediction of a recession next year, there may be reason for creditors to be wary for signs of growing delinquencies.

There has already been some indication of concern, according to the American Collectors Association, a group which represents collection agencies. Trends in the first half of the year indicate that retailers, doctors and others are sending in overdue bills to collection agencies more quickly than they did in the past, although there has not been a dramatic increase in dollar amounts out for collection, after adjustment for inflation.

In other business developments this past week:

•Retail sales fell 1.7 percent in October, the largest monthly decline since March 1975. The Commerce Department reported that sales last month totaled $75.45 billion. Slowing sales of automobiles was cited as a major factor in the drop from September's sales of $76.75 billion. In March, 1975 sales fell 1.9 percent.

•The nation's major banks raised their prime lending rates ¼ point to a record 15½ percent despite criticism by Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee. He said the increase did not show the restraint banks could use to reduce the chance of a serious recession. The prime rate is the rate charged by banks to their most credit-worthy corporate borrowers, and is not directly related to consumer and mortage loan rates.

•The Home Savings and Loan of Los Angeles, the nation's largest savings and loan association, cut its prime mortgage rate from 13 percent to 12¾ percent to "let people know we have money to lend." Others savings institutions did not immediately match the cut.

•Iran, which supplies an estimated 3.5 to 5 percent of U.S. needs, said it was cutting back its deliveries to major U.S., Japanese and European customers by 5 percent in the fourth quarter. The National Iranian Oil Co. cited "operational" problems as the reason for the cutback.

Chill Homecoming

Some Want Deadline Set On Shah's Return

ran, and would not receive any visitors for a week.

Abolhassan Bani Sadr, Foreign Ministry supervisor and a member of Khomeini's powerful Revolutionary Council, said the papal appeal "shall not alter anything" and the ayatollah had no desire to discuss the embassy problem.

Four foreign ambassadors who visited the embassy Saturday to check on the hostages' well-being were given copies of the petition, purportedly signed by 33 of the American prisoners.

The militants said only two persons had refused and the rest of the hostages would be asked to sign "later," Japan's Kyodo news service reported from Tehran. The authenticity of the 33 signatures could not be determined.

"We request from our nation to release the Shah of Iran. In this way we will be free," the document said, according to a Tehran source reached by telephone from Nicosia, Cyprus.

It was unclear whether the petition called for the extradition of the shah — something the Carter administration refuses to do — or simply his departure from the United States.

White House spokesman Powell told reporters in Washington that if the document is authentic "it's understood that statements made under duress have absolutely no validity."

No Shah Return

State Department Hodding Carter said the administration would not try to convince the shah to return to Iran or to his exile home in Mexico. The shah, who fled Iran in January, took up residence in Mexico in June and in October entered a New York hospital, where he is undergoing treatment for cancer.

The shah has accepted an invitation from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to travel to that country after his cancer reatment, Cairo's daily newspaper Al Ahram reported. On Friday, Sadat called Khomeini a "lunatic" and said his actions were a disgrace to Islam.

Khomeini's revolutionary guards warned the Iranian people of what they called "new plots" by "imperialist and Zionist elements," and ordered them not to demonstrate or march near foreign embassies. Tehran Radio reported. There have been daily demonstrations by thousands of Iranians outside the U.S. Embassy compound.

No Health Complaints

Swedish Ambassador Kaj Sundberg, who visited the embassy Saturday with the ambassadors of France, Algeria and Syria, said of the hostages in a report to the Swedish Foreign Ministry: "We received no major complaints about their health. Of course, they were tired, which is natural. But our impression is their condition was generally good under the circumstances."

The ambassadors said the women hostages were held separately, two to a room, guarded by Iranian women in head-to-toe Moslem veils.

The PLO source in Ankara said the three PLO envoys and the ambassadors from Syria, Pakistan and Turkey were meeting at the Foreign Ministry with Bani Sadr and representatives of the militants.

Argue Against Deadline

The negotiators argued against setting a deadline for the return of the shah, telling them it would inject a dangerous new element into the crisis, said the source.

He said the militants were skeptical of the seriousness of the shah's illness, and the mediators told them they could try to confirm his condition through a third party.

President Carter, who canceled a trip to Canada this weekend because of the Iran crisis, received a report on the situation from national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski in Washington.

In Istanbul, Carter's special envoy Ramsey Clark, former attorney general, was kept informed of developments in Tehran by PLO officials. Clark's peace mission to Iran had been barred by Khomeini.

In other mediation efforts, a U.N. spokesman said Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was ready to go to Tehran if he had assurances he could discuss the situation with authorities, and Tehran sources said ambassadors of European Common Market countries called on Bani Sadr and demanded Iran abide by "normal international law" and end the embassy occupation.

Texans Stage Iran Protest

By The Associated Press

Cold, blustery weather only slightly diminished anti-Iranian sentiment as demonstrators gathered Saturday to demand deportation of Iranian students and action to free hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

For the third straight day, Houston demonstrators marched or drove cars around the Dresser Tower building which houses the Iranian consulate, chanting anti-Iranian slogans and carrying homemade anti-Iranian signs.

Police reported no violent incidents during the noisy but orderly demonstration which involved about 150 people and lasted a little over an hour.

"This is harmless," said one Houston police officer as he prepared to drive away from the scene. "There's no reason for us to be here."

Airmen Write To President

Open Letter to The President:

Americans living on American soil have been invaded and imprisoned! An American Embassy is American soil. Have we as a nation become so weak in heart as to let the "Irans" of this world determine our destiny? Americans have too long endured the contempt and blatant disrespect of the other nations of the world. Another nation has publicly humiliated and degraded this nation in an overt act of aggression, defiled our flag and committed atrocities upon people of the United States. Yet we, as a nation, are passively accepting this.

The question is why? Why, in the name of all that this nation has stood for, for almost 200 years (the last 15 years excepted) do you and others who have sworn to uphold this nation, not meet the challenges of these other nations? Iranians, with the approval and guidance of their government, have attacked American soil and American citizens as surely as the Japanese did by attacking Pearl Harbor. An immediate declaration of war against the country of Iran is demanded. Give them 24 hours to release all hostages; if not released, take whatever actions are necessary to secure their release. There is more at stake than 60 hostages in one embassy. We have embassies and diplomats all over the world. There is a greater chance of escalation from the timid, nondirectional approach you insist on taking, than from a positive show of strength which the situation demands. Bow down or side step this type of action and you open a "Pandora's Box" full of similar terroristic threats.

This nation is rapidly falling apart. It is time to show this world that wer are not the spineless, quaking giant that recent actions have led us to be perceived as being.

Take stock of our resources, values, courage and pride of the vast majority of our country and do something!

Morton On Brink Of Bankruptcy

meeting indicate that councilman Ray Luper "declared there was a financial crisis and that emergency measures were to be taken." The councilmen then laid off 17 of Morton's 27 city employees, including its three-man police force, and accepted the resignation of City Manager Wiley Hodge, who is now working on the city's gas system.

When the city policemen were laid off, city officials said they hoped Cochran County would assist them by hiring some of the officers and adding protection. That, however, has not come about. The county force added a fourth officer, but he wasn't one of the three ex-Morton policemen.

One look at the city books provides a fairly complete story of the city's dramatic loss of cash in recent months. As recently as the end of May, both Morton's general fund and utility fund were in the black, even with the gas leak problems. Yet both were in the red a month later, and have remained so ever since.

According to City of Morton financial records, the utility fund was $7,300 in the black at the end of May, but plummeted to:

— $13,300 in the red at the end of June.

Meanwhile, the city's general fund was $10,387 in the black at the end of May but fell to:

Hodge explained that some of the loss could be blamed on "the fact that we usually sell about $80,000 worth of gas to irrigation farmers in the summer, but we had a wet summer this year and didn't sell a drop."

Mrs. Price said, "The bills kept piling up during the spring, so the council decided to pay them all at once. Rita Scott, the assistant secretary, who handles those finances, was sick during that time, so Mr. Hodge ended up working from an incorrect financial statement. In effect, the council was paying two months worth of bills at once.

"We're making progress in recouping some of those losses, but only because we're not paying all the bills," she said. "We owe El Paso Natural Gas about $90,000, I think."

El Paso Natural Gas spokesman John McFall refused to confirm or deny $90,000 as the size of the debt, saying only that his company would release those figures if they decide to file a non-payment claim against Morton.

The city's strained financial system also has been victimized by some "bad bookkeeping over the years," said Shelton, who in his audit report for the fiscal year 1979 wrote, "I have satisifed myself that a proper system of internal control is lacking," and listed several improprieties in the books. They include:

— "The utility fund was not reconciled correctly. I found enough March 1979 checks in the April 1979 bank statement to see this account was overstated by at least $283.56."

— Accounts receivable. "The control account was short $12,146.12, which cannot be accounted for."

— "I requested inventories (of gas and water materials and supplies) but never received any."

—Depreciable assets. "There are old (gas) lines and meters that should be removed from these accounts as they are replaced, but no records are kept of what is removed."

— Uniforms. "I noticed that office personnel are paid $20 per month for uniforms and I didn't notice uniforms."

At the end of his two-page letter, Shelton wrote, "I am sure there are many other errors besides the above we could not detect because of confusion in the books."

About those remarks, Shelton said, "The idea is to have a system where the money can be checked and double-checked rather than were just one person is handling it. $12,000 is missing from that control account. A better system that ensures better bookkeeping might have prevented that."

The city books are kept by Mrs. Price and Mrs. Scott, both of whom took their jobs in 1978 in the wake of the stormy departure of former city manager Lois Dunlap, who held the job about two years before resigning under pressure.

"There were seven people in this office when I came here in June 1978 from an attorney's office," Mrs. Price explained. "I had never done anything like this and they knew it. I started as a clerk, but by September the whole office staff of seven people turned over and I was the only one left. I recruited Rita (Mrs. Scott) from the bank because she had some background with books like this."

Shelton said he can document nearly $3,000 more that is inexplicably missing from the books while Dunlap managed the city. "He was known to borrow money from those funds and replace it with a debit slip," he said. "You don't borrow money from the city."

Mrs. Price and Mrs. Scott said they have "no idea at all where that money could have gone," and agree with Shelton that the system of handling city funds leaves much to be desired. "Sometimes we get pretty disenchanted," Mrs. Price said, because, "They (the city governors) just don't listen to us."

Mrs. Price has implemented some changes, though, making it much easier to trace the flow of cash into and out of city accounts. "The first thing we did is require that all purchases made by city employees be made only with an approved purchase slip," she said. "In the past, city employees could just charge things without a purchase order or without anyone really knowing. We were always getting all sorts of bills we had no idea were coming."

"For instance, we got a bill for four car batteries once, and we only had two police cars," said Mrs. Scott. "We asked to get this system set up several times but no one ever listened. We just needed someone to be able to say 'No' and stand by it, like a parent."

And some local residents have complained of a possible conflict of interests involving members of the city council who own businesses the city sometimes patronizes. After similar complaints were raised last spring, the Morton School Board voted to prohibit its board members from voting on purchases that could be made at their businesses.

Little documentation exists on how much trading the city may have done with businesses owned by councilmen because very few such financial records were kept before Mrs. Price began her purchase order system.

"On matters like that, we just try to be practical," said Mayor Pro-Tem Hazel Hancock. "If there is only one place in town to get something and a council member owns it, we're probably going to go there instead of all the way to Levelland or Lubbock. We'll be saving money, then."

Morton's city leaders have a tendency to roll their eyes and sigh when asked of their financial straits. "It's pretty hard to believe all this is going on at once," Hancock said. "But it is and there's no denying it. We're sure stuck for the time being."

Monday: A look at the biggest culprit of them all — the gas system — and how Morton plans to rebound.

Chrysler Loan Hit On Wage Contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's chief inflation fighter Saturday said federal loan guarantees to struggling Chrysler Corp. should be withheld unless the company and the United Auto Workers scale down their new wage settlement.

Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, called the pact "outrageous," and said Chrysler would be informed officially on Monday they are in probable non-compliance of the administration's anti-inflation guidelines.

The administration, Kahn said, is insisting "we get genuine contributions and sacrifices" by Chrysler and the UAW in return for $1.5 billion in government loan guarantees.

Congress is considering Carter-backed legislation that authorizes that guarantee, if Chrysler raises an additional $1.5 billion, partly by concessions from their workers.

Not Sacrifice Enough

I want to emphasize my firm belief that the UAW-Chrysler contract does not remotely approach the kind of sacrifice that I think has to be demonstrated as a condition for being bailed out," Kahn told reporters.

He said President Carter agrees with him and "may well refuse to authorize the loan guarantee (if the legislation passes) unless we get more of a contribution."

UAW leaders in Detroit said they were shocked by Kahn's remarks about the agreement.

Chrysler spokesman Wendell Larson said, "Until we find out what Kahn has said, we will not respond."

Union President Douglas A. Fraser and Marc Stepp, director of the UAW's Chrysler department, issued a joint statement saying Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Treasury Secretary G. William Miller "did not in any way express any unhappiness with that agreement" during a recent briefing on it.

Statements "Shocking"

"In the light of that meeting, Alfred Kahn's statements today (Saturday) are absolutely shocking and incomprehensible as well as reckless and insensitive," the statement said.

The UAW added that "Kahn apparently does not understand the Chrysler agreement" and he "would better serve the American people if he addressed himself to the windfall profits being made by the oil companies instead of going after the Chrysler workers who have already indicated their willingness to make substantial sacrifices."

Kahn's strong blast at the ailing automaker and the UAW comes as presidential challenger Sen. Edward M. Kennedy intensifies his criticism of the Carter administration's anti-inflation program.

Kennedy last week said the Carter administration has failed to criticize a single wage or price agreement that violated voluntary guidelines.

"I just have to speak out," Kahn told reporters as he listed a series of council statements and press releases over the past year criticizing unions and companies for not complying with the wage and price standards.

Oil Tanker Still Afire

GALVESTON (AP) — Fire fighters gave up trying to extinguish a 10-day-old fire on a crippled tanker Saturday, saying they would let the blaze burn itself out while trying to keep it from spreading.

The tanker, the Burmah Agate, has been burning and spilling oil into the Gulf of Mexico since Nov. 1, when it collided offshore with the freighter Mimosa and exploded.

Thirty-two sailors were believed killed in the collision, but so far only 16 bodies have been recovered.

The tanker carried 390,000 barrels of light crude oil, and officials said Saturday that if the fire spread and the entire load caught fire, it would take three or four more weeks to burn out.

"This oil has a low flash point, and foam has been useless to put it out," said Paul Preus, a supervisor of salvage operations for the tanker's owner, Burmah Oil Co. of London. "So we are using the technique called 'off-loading by burning.'"

Preus said the anchored tanker, which was grounded in 40 feet of water for several days after the accident, has refloated and swung into the wind. That shift is helping to contain the fire, which has been confined to the aft section.

Preus said officials were debating whether to move the flaming tanker from its present position — about five miles from the entrance to the Houston Ship Channel.

Coast Guard Capt. Roger Madson chairman of an oil spill task force trying to minimize coastal damage, said a lack of equipment delayed fire fighting efforts immediately after the collision.

"Fire fighting efforts were completely frustrated in the first 48 hours after the collision by this country's complete lack of salvage equipment at its major ports," Madson said. "They had to call in a company from the Netherlands, and they had to bring in and outfit two foreign flag vessels to handle the fire."

Madson said the fire fighters had been doing as much as they could to control the blaze. But several state senators questioned that assessment.

Oil continued to spill from the stricken tanker Saturday, but Coast Guard Lt. j.g. Don Zelazny said the oil was forming only a light sheen on the surface.

Lubbockites Angered By Iran Takeover Differ On Solution

— Those favoring retaliation against Iran, but through means which would not necessarily include confrontation within that country's borders.

"I don't like the fact that Americans are being held there and being run out. I think we've got to make them remember that we're the big boy and they're the little boy," said Lt. Blaine McKinney, a Reese AFB student pilot who stopped short of advocating military action.

Laura Baker said she feels the United States should "be a little more aggressive and take action against the students over here. I think we should send them home. And we should quit importing their oil."

Joel Baldazo's answer was slightly more forceful. "I think we should send all the Iranian students back or keep them hostage until they send all the American hostages back. I don't know about sending military forces over there because the Soviet Union is so close and that probably would start a war."

Gloria Ordonez said: "Maybe we should hold some of the Iranians over here hostage. Something should be done with the Iranian representatives over here. Something should be done, what else can we do?"

— Those who feel the situation can be handled only by negotiations between the two governments.

"Leave it to Carter, he'll work it out," answered George Wortman.

Brett Stalcup, a Texas Tech student, offered a somewhat harsher version of the same solution and included the possibility of military intervention: "If Carter's son was a hostage, I don't think he would be doing what he is. Carter needs to be making some sort of definite decision and do something. If it takes military, do it."

"It's real tough with the hostages," said Linda Tubbs. "We could get them killed by sending troops over there. It is going to take lots of negotiating."

"It is in the hands of people who have studied the situation more (than I have) and I am willing to trust those in authority," said Mrs. T.A. Baber.

A sidelight that crept into almost every answer, regardless of the person's views on ending the standoff, was the issue of Iranian students in American universities and demonstrations by those students during the last year.

The consensus held that the students should be allowed to continue their studies in this country as long as they avoid protests or political activities.

Lt. McKinney's thoughts were typical. "Some of the Iranian students are causing more trouble than they're worth and they ought to be quelled. As long as they're not violent and they're sincerely trying to get an education they've got a right to stay here."

Mrs. M. Barbee added, "If they want a fight, let them go back where they came from. They don't appreciate what we do for them."

Ironically, the telephone survey included an Iranian student at Texas Tech. His responses indicated he is walking a political tightrope.

He explained that the U.S. government should have realized the ramifications of allowing the shah to enter the country, "but I don't think Americans over there should have to pay for this mistake. Those people didn't make the mistake."

"I fully support anyone who hates the shah," he continued. "I am not in favor of the shah but that doesn't mean what the Islamic Republic is doing is right."

"I sure wish the shah could go back to Iran and pay for his crimes, but this isn't the right way of getting him back over there," the student said.

Many of those contacted in the poll added an aura of fatalism to their responses: "I think they are going to be harmed or killed anyway. Chances are 50-50 whether they can escape under any circumstances."

"I feel like they have been lost. It is a hopeless situation."

As the roundup of Americans in Iran continued, and while diplomats continued apparently fruitless attempts to put a peaceful end to the stalemate, a comment by Linda Hovious may have provided an indirect summation.

"I'd hate to be in the shoes of our American officials" who are making the decisions, she said.

I'M SHOCKED — Barry Bowlus, left, portrays a playwright who has written a nude scene into his new play in "The Shock Of Recognition," one of three one-acts comprising "You Know I Can't Hear You When The Water's Running" at Lubbock Theatre Centre. In the above scene, producer Michael Pennington, center, introduces Bowlus to aspiring actor Jon Whatley. The one-acts are adult in tone, but entertaining, according to A-J theater critic William Kerns. LTC One-Acts Delightfully Risque, Not Average Menu

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

A-J THEATER REVIEW

Lubbock Theatre Centre's current production of "You Know I Can't Hear You When The Water's Running" whisks by at a nice breezy pace which perfectly complements its rather lighthearted, breezy content.

Unfortunately, some of the adult situations in the collection of three Robert Anderson one-acts didn't settle well with about a dozen ticket holders Friday night, who indignantly walked out of the theater at an even faster clip — which has to be something new for Lubbock's community theater, especially since the material was not that risque. It was more innuendo than euphemism, well handled and perfectly timed. Obviously, the "shock of recognition," which just happens to be the title of the introductory one-act, was too much for those expecting more traditional material.

But the fact remains, it was funny. Short, sweet and funny — with some nice statements regarding censorship, pretentiousness, sensationalism and even commercialism if anyone cared to look beyond the guffaws. The one-act deals with playwright Jack Barnstable (Barry Bowlus) being told by producer Herb Miller (Michael Pennington) to delete the nude scene from his new play. At one point, the producer even brings in a visiting actor (Jon Whatley) from the waiting room and asks for his reaction to the part.

The acting is very good, as is the stage direction by James Prior. Bowlus and Pennington key off each other well, with well-timed expressions and retorts. But the real hilarity arrives with Whatley's interest, who (sorry Jon) couldn't have been better cast as a "ridiculous" sort of leading man. Almost slapstick in nature, the entire tone changes to anything-for-a-laugh comedy as Whatley agrees to anything in order to get the part — even to auditioning in the proper dress. His enthusiastic claims of "I can shrink inside my clothes" are as funny as they are unpredictable.

And his revelation that he, too, has told his spouse not to talk when the water's running is an absolute gem.

The second one-act, called "The Footsteps Of Doves," was a well-acted piece centering on a husband and wife who have reached a decision to give up the double bed for two singles. At least, the wife has come to that decision. In often hilarious terms, the husband explains the assets of sleeping together in the bigger bed — and we learn the possible adulterous conclusions to the wife's proposed actions when a younger woman explains she, too, likes bigger beds. It's a well-acted, but naughty piece with innuendoes flying fast and furious. Michelle Pennington is a standout as the wife.

Most impressive of all, however, were the performances of Bill Nowell and Ricque Brister as an elderly married couple in the final one-act called "I'm Herbert." The play finds the two having problems piecing together their lives: what they did when and with which spouse. Resembling the old "Who's on first?" routine at times in sheer pacing and hilarity, it is beautifully timed and totally effective. The conclusion is absolutely charming, and without a doubt the highlight of the evening.

Mind you, it's not the average entertainment we're used to seeing at LTC. It's more simple and direct, and definitely a bit naughtier. But the set design is clean and effective, making good use of open spaces. The direction is excellent, the casting perfect and the performances first rate. It's all over by 9:45 p.m., but it's still 90 minutes of good fun.

Bentsen, D-Texas, said the hidden economy "ranges from clearly criminal activities such as prostitution, narcotics smuggling and loan sharking to 'off the books' employment, skimming receipts and the covert rentals."

Guardsmen Positioned For Funerals Today

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Nearly 1,000 police and National Guardsmen moved into this normally placid city Saturday in advance of a funeral procession for five persons slain at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally.

Communist demonstrators, planning to parade their dead comrades through the streets today, said they would be armed despite police demands that they keep their guns at home.

"We will guarantee the security and armed defense of the march ... if we are attacked we will respond," said Nelson Johnson, a member of the Communist Workers Party, organizers of the procession and the earlier demonstration that turned violent.

Col. Kenneth Newbold, commander of the 500 National Guardsmen, mostly from the furniture town of Hickory, said his troops would carry unloaded rifles but officers would distribute ammunition if he gave the order.

Police expect about 1,000 persons for the 2.5-mile march, which will start in downtown Greensboro at 1 p.m. A police spokesman said Saturday his department had received no reports of any planned attempts to disrupt the march.

Concerned about a possible confrontation, city officials on Saturday prohibited the sale, display and use of all guns. Police Chief William E. Swing said city officials had declared a "state of emergency," but he stressed that it concerned only firearms and did not include a curfew.

He told an afternoon news conference that any citizen found with a gun would be arrested.

Nearly 300 members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People are holding their state convention in Greensboro this weekend. Kelly M. Alexander, state president, said the group was not taking an active role in the protest but that some of its members may participate in the march.

Posters distributed by march organizers urged sympathizers to "turn the country upside down to beat back the new wave of KKK, Nazi and FBI attacks."

Five members of the leftist group — four white men and a black woman — died after gunmen opened fire on a crowd at a "Death to the Klan" rally Nov. 3.

Fourteen white men, many claiming to be Klansmen or Nazis, were arrested after the shooting and police said they were looking for at least one other suspect.

Horned Frogs Tie Sluggish Red Raiders

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

James Hadnot's mouth had to be watering. Texas Tech's senior fullback was only inches and seconds away from his dream vacation, his first visit to the end zone this season — an odd statistic considering Hadnot has packed his bags some 238 times and journeyed endlessly in 1979.

Unfortunately, Hadnot's visa to touchdown land was canceled by an unsympathetic Texas Christian University defense. Six seemingly certain points so very close, yet so very far away.

And for the second consecutive contest, Tech's offense sputtered during takeoff to that almost forgotten narrow strip of real estate known as the end zone. The aborted flight continued the Red Raiders' touchdown drought and cost them seven days of basking in the glow of victory's golden rays.

The TCU Horned Frogs, unable to mount any serious scoring threats during the first 54 minutes of action, threw together an 81-yard drive on their final offensive possession and Greg Porter capped the march with a 28-yard field goal with only 21 seconds remaining Saturday to lift the Frogs to a 3-3 tie and obvious spiritual victory over he Red Raiders in Southwest Conference play.

An estimated Tech homecoming crowd of 40,000 braved swirling snow flurries and temperatures in the lower 30s to watch as the stingy Red Raider defense fought deligently for two and a half quarters to protect a slim 3-0 lead.

Then early in the fourth quarter it appeared those die-hard fans would be rewarded with a touchdown and Tech's greedy defense could breathe a sigh of relief. But it was the stubborness of the underrated TCU defense that prevailed.

B SPORTS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Sunday, Nov. 11, 1979

On first down, Hart, who started in place of the injured Ron Reeves and played every offensive down, tried to run over his left guard and was stopped for no gain. Sophomore tailback Mark Olbert took a pitch from Hart on second down and raced aroud around the right side of the Tech offensive line for five yards.

Olbert's run left the Red Raiders with a third-and-goal at the 1 yard mark. Hadnot's number was called on third down and the crowd roared as he slammed into a wall of TCU defenders in search of his first TD. Hadnot, who was held to 92 yards rushing on 22 carries — his lowest totals of the season, was thrown back hard after gaining only a foot. That made it fourth-and-goal from the two-foot stripe.

Hart immediately called time out to discuss the situation with his offensive coaches. The decision was made to forget the chip-shot field goal and go for six.

The Horned Frogs were stacked on the line of scrimmage waiting for Hadnot to come charging through. Instead of sending Hadnot up the gut with the ball, Hart faked a handoff to his fullback up the middle in an attempt to suck in TCU's defense.

Hadnot was decked hard and Hart sprinted to his left. TCU cornerback Kim Deloney pinched in quickly and forced Hart to pitch the football to trailing tailback Olbert. Hart released the ball before Deloney got his hands on him, but the pitch was a yard behind Olbert.

Hart made a mad dash at the bouncing pigskin, finally falling on it at the Frog 15. The Frogs took possession and Tech never threatened again.

"I felt we played a good defensive game, we just didn't take advantage of the opportunities when we had them," Tech boss Rex Dockery remarked. "They were crowding everybody inside (on the fourth-and-goal play). We had the touchdown made if we made the pitch."

Two plays after the Red and Black were denied the end zone, strong safety Tate Randle put the Tech offense back in business at the Red Raider 48 with his fifth interception of the season.

Tech moved down to the TCU 34 before Maury Buford was sent in to punt on fourth-and-three. Buford shanked the ball and it rolled out of bounds at the Frog 27 — a seven-yard punt.

TCU running back Craig Richardson coughed up the hoghide on first down at the TCU 27 and free safety Ted Watts grabbed the turnover, giving the Red Raiders another excellent opportunity — this time at the TCU 33.

A holding penalty pushed the Red and Black back to the Frog 42 and Buford was again forced to punt. Buford's kick bounced out of bounds at the 8. With 5:55 left to play, it didn't seem like the overly generous Frogs would ever be to able to muster a scoring drive. But behind the sharp passing of quarterback Steve Stamp, the Frogs jumped downfield.

After fullback Jimmy Allen bolted for 10 yards and a first down at the TCU 23, Stamp hit reserve tight end Chester Strickland with a 20-yard bullet. From the Frog 43, Stamp tossed seven yards to flanker Phillip Epps and then six yards to running back Michael Wright for a first down at the Tech 44.

Stamp and Richardson teamed up for a seven-yard gain and Wright, who hadn't seen any action until TCU's final drive, broke off tackle for 12 yards and another first down at the Red Raider 25. Wright ran for three more yards and hauled in a nine-yard Stamp aerial for another first down at the Tech 13.

The Frogs moved to the Tech 9, but were thrown back to the 11 on third down. From there, Porter lofted his kick through the uprights to knot the score, cast a pale over the homecoming festivities and chill the already cold fans at Jones Stadium.

"They hit some passes," Dockery admitted. "Their quarterback (Stamp) made some good throws when they had to have them. For us, it's the same thing that's been happening all year. You have to do something with the football when you get it down deep and we just didn't do anything."

"We've been a long time coming as far as we have, to be able to beat, or in this case tie a Southwest Conference team as good as Texas Tech," TCU's happy head coach F.A. Dry said following the thrilling comeback. "The tie helped us and our program, probably more than it would Tech. But it is a step forward for us."

Both teams squandered excellent scoring opportunities in the first half.

TCU moved from its own 21 to the Tech 45 on the game's opening drive, but fumbled the ball away at the Red Raider 41. Cornerback Larry Flowers caused the fumble with bone-crunching tackle on Richardson and linebacker Jeff Copeland recovered.

The Raiders moved from the Frog 39 to the Tech 20 later in the first period. On third-and-three from the 20, Brown took a pitch and rambled around his right end for a first down at the 15. But Brown fumbled as he went down and the Frogs pounced on the loose ball, killing the drive.

Early in the second quarter, a fumbled punt by Randle allowed the Frogs to sustain a drive. The Frogs moved from their 20 to the Tech 9. On first-and-goal from the 9, an illegal procedure call backed TCU up to the 14. On second down, Haney tried to hit Epps, but Copeland stepped in front of the pass at the 7 and returned it to the 17.

Bill Adams scored all of Tech's points and gave the Red Raiders a 3-0 lead with 1:09 left in the second quarter when he climaxed a 54-yard drive with a 29-yard field goal.

Tech Players Disdain Tie

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Jim Hart came out of Jones Stadium with a nasty-looking blackeye Saturday afternoon.

But he wasn't the only one.

Texas Tech's offensive unit also had a shiner that a 97-pound chuck roast couldn't even start to hide, muchless cure.

For the second consecutive week, the Red Raider offense failed to put a touchdown on the scoreboard and in the process had to settle with a 3-3 tie against hapless Texas Christian, a 14-point underdog coming into the Hub City. Only a Blade Adams field goal prevented the Frogs from hurling a shutout at their hosts.

"I thought we moved the ball pretty well in the middle of the field," said Hart. "But we just couldn't put the ball in (score).

"It really got frustrating."

Drawing his first start of the year at quarterback after spending most of the season backing up Ron Reeves (injured last week against Texas), Hart hit 8 of 14 passes for 96 yards and picked up 67 yards on 23 carries mostly around the end. Hart felt the performance wasn't that bad, considering the circumstances, but...

"I guess I didn't (play that well) because we didn't win," commented the freshman from Irving.

But the Raiders didn't lose, either.

"It feels like we did," continued Hart. "I guess that's what hurts the most. We should have beaten these guys. Against Arizona (a team Tech tied 14-14) we had to hang on. But I thought we had control of the game (against TCU)."

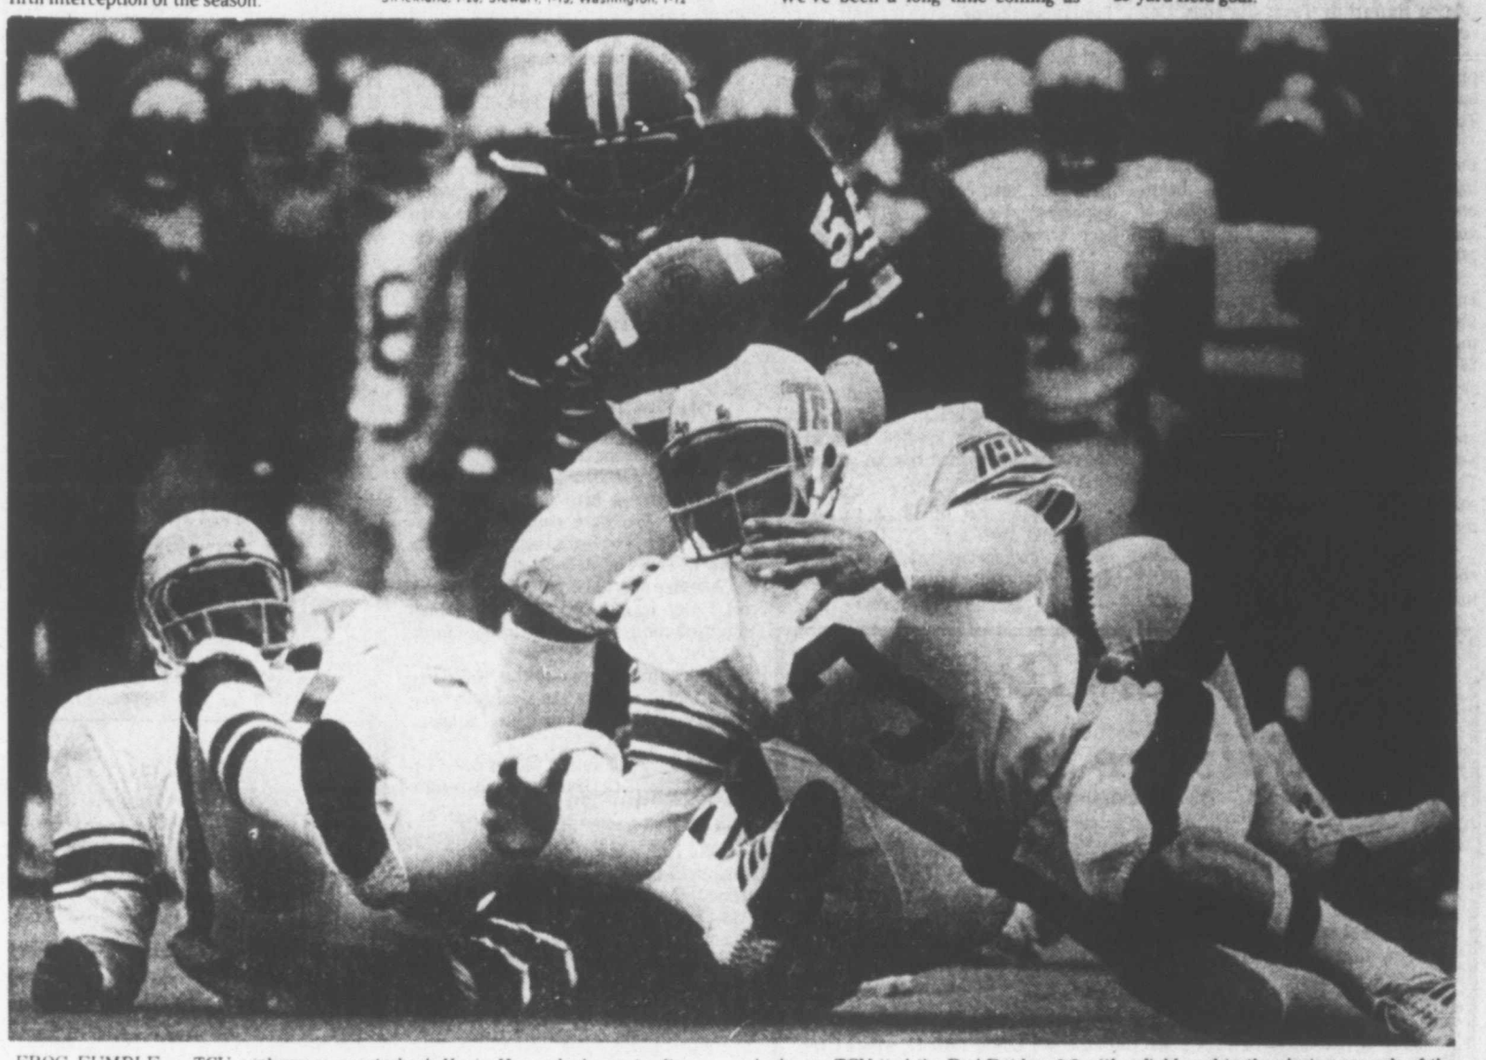

Hart moved the Raiders into excellent scoring position with 10:33 left in the fourth period. But on fourth-and-goal at the one, Hart's pitchout to running back Mark Olbert went high and outside — and so did the Raiders' shot at the touchdown. Hart ended up recovering the loose ball 15 yards back of where the play had started.

"We'd gone to James (Hadnot) on the play before so we knew that they (the TCU defense) would be waiting for him again," explained Hart. "I tried to get the ball out to Olbert, but the pitch bounced off his shoulder pad."

Hart said the play was never intended to go to the Tech's 230-pound battering ram, Hadnot.

"I was supposed to either keep it or pitch it out," said Hart. "But there

TEXAS DROPS COUGARS 21-13

Longhorns Throw Conference Into Tie

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' pressure-proof defense intercepted three Houston passes, including two by Derrick Hatchett and quarterback Donnie Little scored two touchdowns as the No. 8 ranked Longhorns knocked the 5th-rated Cougars from the unbeaten ranks 21-13 Saturday night.

The victory kept the Longhorns alive in the Southwest Conference race with a 4-1 league record and Houston was dropped into a tie for first with Arkansas, which defeated Baylor 29-20 earlier Saturday.

Houston, normally cautious in the first half, opened up when quarterback Delrick Brown completed a 51-yard pass-run to Lonnell Phea to set up Ken Hatfield's 18-yard field goal.

Houston eventually paid for its abandon as the Longhorns rallied for a 14-10 halftime lead on Little's 5-yard run and a 6-yard touchdown by Jam Jones.

Houston's Terald Clark rushed 46 yards for Houston's only touchdown in the second quarter after Donnie Love had intercepted a pass at the UH goal line.

Texas' Ricky Churchman intercepted Brown for the first time in the third quarter before Hatchett followed with two more. Hatchett's second theft set up a 25-yard field goal try by Texas' John Goodson, the nation's leading field goal kicker.

But Goodson's attempt was wide.

Texas is 7-1 for the season and Houston dropped to 8-1.

The offenses of both teams dominated the first half but defense took over in the third quarter when Churchman and Hatchett got interceptions for the Longhorns and Houston linebacker Grady Turner recovered a fumble by Texas' Jam Jones.

The Cougars started their final scoring drive late in the third quarter, highlighted by a run of 20 yards by Allen Polk.

Houston reached the Texas 12 before it was forced to settle for Hatfield's 36-yarder.

In the first quarter Phea would have scored had he not stepped out of bounds at the Texas 3.

The Longhorns also diverted from their conservative offense with a 77-yard scoring drive spiced by a 17-yard shoestring catch by tight end Lawrence Sampleton.

Little eventually scored the touchdown on a 5-yard run. He was able to go in standing after he faked a pitch to trailing Jam Jones.

The Longhorns then got a chance to expand their lead when defensive tackle Kenneth Sims blocked the first of two punts by Houston's Mark Ford at the Cougar 9. But Love's interception at the goal line ended that threat.

Ford had to field a dribbling center snap in the second quarter and this time it was blocked by Conny Hatch at the Houston 27 to set up Jam Jones' 6-yard run.

"It was really good to do it here," said Little, who scored on a 5-yard run in the first quarter and added a 15-yard score in the fourth period.

"I owed the Houston area fans something and I owed the Cougars something. This was an emotional game for us."

The victory kept the eighth-ranked Longhorns in the running for the Southwest Conference title with a 4-1 record and dropped the Cougars from the unbeaten ranks and to a tie with Arkansas and Texas for the SWC lead.

"I hope we have enough class to get out from under this defeat," Houston Coach Bill Yeoman said.

Amazing Hog Comeback Upends Baylor 29-20

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Quarterback Kevin Scanlon and wide receiver Robert Farrell hooked up on a 60-yard pass play with 3:22 left in the game as ninth-ranked Arkansas rallied to beat 17th-ranked Baylor 29-20 in a wild Southwest Conference contest.

The victory kept alive Arkansas' hopes for a share of the Southwest Confrence championship and a major bowl bid.

The Razorbacks are now 5-1 in the Southwest Conference. Baylor dropped to 4-2.

Baylor led 17-0 five minutes deep in the third quarter. But Arkansas was on top 20-17 less than six minutes deep into the fourth quarter. Then, Robert Bledsoe kicked a 35-yard field goal with 4:46 left in the game to tie it 20-20.

Arkansas took the ensuing kickoff and started from its own 25. Darryl Bowles made a measured third down at the Arkansas 36. On second down, Scanlon faked inside, rolled to his right outside the Baylor containment and threw deep for Farrell down the right sideline.

Farrell was behind Kirk Collins and caught the ball in full stride about the Razorback 20.

Moments later Jeff Goff tripped Baylor punter Ron Stowe in the Baylor end zone for a safety after Stowe mishandled a bad snap.

It was Scanlon who ignited Arkansas midway through the third quarter when he stepped inside a Baylor defender and hit Bobby Duckworth for a 32-yard touchdown pass with Arkansas facing fourth and 5. That made it 17-6.

A Randy Wessinger interception set up a field goal, and Goff hit Baylor quarterback Mike Brannan and forced a bad pitch which Danny Phillips recovered in the Baylor end zone for another Arkansas touchdown.

Farrell's leaping catch of a 2-point conversion pass tied it 17-17.

Walter Abercrombie, who carried 24 times for 131 yards, scored two touchdowns in the first half to give Baylor a 14-0 lead. When Geoff Gandy partially blocked an Arkansas punt on the Razorback's first possession of the third quarter, the Bears took over at the Arkansas 45. Ten plays later, Bledsoe kicked a 27-yard field goal that made it 17-0 with 10:01 left in the third quarter.

At that point, Arkansas had not crossed the Baylor 40 under its own power.

Suddenly, the Razorbacks began moving the football against a Baylor defense that had confused them in the first half. The Razorbacks overcame two 5-yard penalties at the start of a 66-yard touchdown drive. On third down from the Arkansas 46, Scanlon hit Farrell crossing the middle for 17 yards.

Then, on fourth and five, Scanlon and Duckworth com-

Bulldogs Punish Dunbar Panthers 34-0

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

For the eighth time this season, the Dunbar Panthers took it on the chin Saturday night at Lowrey Field — and it was no soft blow that sent the Panthers tumbling to the canvas either.

This time it was the Borger Bulldogs who dealt out the pushiment as they pummeled the Panthers 34-0. Actually the game could have been even more one-sided as the Bulldogs led 27-0 at the half — but sent nearly all of their first-teamers to the sidelines in the second half.

The win raises Borger's season mark to 4-5 and evens its District 1-AAA record at 2-2. The Panthers drop to 1-8 on the year and 0-4 in loop play.

It has now been 10 quarters since the Panther Pack scored a single point. And in that same time span, the Dunbar opposition has put 82 points on the board.

Fortunately, the season will end for Dunbar next Friday night in Dumas.

Borger wasted little time in letting the host team know who would dominate the contest as they returned the opening kickoff 81-yards for a score.

Sophomore Doug Walker was the hero of the moment as he took a handoff on the kick and scampered untouched 81 yards untouched. Following the PAT it was 7-0 and on Dunbar's first possesion Leniel Forsythe intercepted a Barry Pillow pass to put the 'Dogs back in business.

Borger quickly marched 71 yards in only five plays as quarterback Shawn Herrington put on a one-man show. Herrington ran for 31 yards himself and passed for 35 more before Mike Plumley plunged over from the one. With two minutes gone in the game it was already 14-0.

SCORING SUMMARY

First Quarter

BHS — Doug Walker 81 kickoff return (Plumley kick)

BHS — Mike Plumley 1 run (Plumley kick)

BHS — Shawn Herrington 4 run (Plumley kick)

Second Quarter

BHS — Sedrick Love 33 run (kick failed)

Third Quarter

BHS — Mike Meek 10 run (Plumley kick)

On their next possesion the Bulldogs went 73 yards in eight plays before Herrington carried it in himself from the four. Plumley's PAT made it 21-0.

Following another Borger interception, the 'Dogs went 60-yards in four plays as the Panthers consistently refused to make their tackles.

Sophomore Sedrick Love capped the drive by bursting 33 yards for the touchdown. Even though the kick failed, Borger led 27-0 with over 10 minutes still to play in the first half.

But after that, the Bulldogs lost their killer instinct and the rest of the game was nothing more than an exchange of fumbles, interceptions, missed tackles and scoring opportunties that never produced.

But the way that Borger dominated the opening half was nothing less than awesome. The 'Dogs piled up 205 yards rushing and 69 passing for 274 total yards while holding the Panthers to a meager 27 yards of O.

Borger ended the game with 406 yards of offense while Dunbar managed to come up with six first downs and 101 yards. In fact, the Panthers moved down inside the Borger 20 three different times in the second half, once advancing as far as the 10.

But once the Panthers got close to a score, they coughed up the football. Dunbar lost five fumbles in the contest and had three passes picked off.

The final Borger score came on the Bulldogs first possesion of the second half when they marched 65 yards in 12 plays. Actually the Bulldgogs scored twice, but the first time the score was nullified by a penalty. But Mike Meek was not to be denied the endzone.

After his 22 yard scoring gallop was called back, he burst over from 10 yards out for the final score of the night.

Seven different Bulldogs carried the ball, but none were as effective as Love. The sophomore carried the ball 16 times for 157 yards and had another 30 yards called back on penalties.

Quarterback Harrington had 10 rushes for 64 yards, Meek added 58 on seven totes and Plumley had 33 on nine carries.

Fabian Garcia, the Dunbar workhorse, gained 39 yards on 13 rushes. Duriel Harris had two catches for 33 yards.

Horned Frog Coach, Players Happy To Tie Red Raiders

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The instant replay theater of Coach F.A. Dry's mind was granted a last-minute reprieve Saturday afternoon at Jones Stadium.

The not-so-fond memory of the interception thrown by Texas Christian University quarterback Kevin Haney in the second quarter had done enough to plague the Frogs' coach. That turnover had robbed TCU of possession at the Texas Tech 14-yard line.

His mind's eye kept replaying the botched opportunity to the point of exhaustion, but an unexpectedly happy ending for the latest in a collection of generally dreary TCU game films was in production.

The Frogs' offense had treated the end zone as though it were a distant planet prior to a climactic 81-yard scoring drive that resulted in Greg Pryor's 28-yard field goal with a scant 21 ticks of the clock left in the game.

Those points made the final score 3-3 and averted defeat for TCU, 1-4-1 in the Southwest Conference and 2-6-1 overall. Those points also ignited smile after smile in the squad's post-game dressing room.

There, the scoreboard was the only shred of evidence to indicate that TCU had, in fact, tied and not won the game. The Frogs were jubilant; heads were held high; all that was missing were the hats and horns.

No one dared dampen Dry's spirits. Following the game, he was asked which — if either — team might take credit for a victory, of sorts. He answered, without hesitation, "We do."

"I'd rather have a win than a tie — I'm not that stupid — but we've worked a long time to compete in the Southwest Conference and make this a better team," he said.

"It would've been a great disappointment to me if we hadn't scored that field goal, but I can't say that I feel disappointed about the tie. This is a big step forward for us."

The Frogs had taken few steps forward during the first 54 minutes. The only player to consistently move the ball for TCU was punter Cameron Young, whose 300th career punt during the first period broke a NCAA record.

That's why, in a fourth-and-eight at the Tech 11-yard line in the game's closing moments, Dry elected to kick the field goal rather than risk an attempted first down or scoring play.

"My job, first of all, is to tie the game and then win it," Dry said. "I couldn't take away what our offense had done — that long drive — by being dumb.

"I never considered anything but the field goal. We had a chip-shot and I wasn't gonna blow it. My mind was made up."

Dry certainly would've preferred a victory, but his mood and the mood in the TCU locker room — total contentment — displayed no reservations.

"They say a tie is like kissing your sister, but we've been down so long that to tie a team like Texas Tech makes us feel great," said Mike Dry, TCU linebacker and son of F.A.

"I'd rather have seen a TD at the end, but we're plenty happy with three points. We lost to Arkansas and Baylor, but neither of 'em scored a touchdown on us. We didn't just work hard on defense today; we worked hard on defense all year."

Steve Stamp, who replaced Haney at quarterback and engineered the final scoring drive, would not second-guess his coach's decision to kick the field goal.

"Our team just couldn't take another defeat," Stamp said, "and that's why we couldn't try for the touchdown.

"It was a tough situation, because we'd worked so hard to move the ball downfield. We were doing our job together and concentrating more. We knew we could move on Tech."

Another cherished replay for Dry and his Frogs was the goal-line stand that throttled the Raiders early in the fourth quarter.

Tech's first-and-goal at the TCU 6 became fourth down at the 1-yard line following three short-yardage running plays.

A faulty pitch-out on fourth down by Tech quarterback Jim Hart and resulting 15-yard loss preserved the Frogs' hopes.

"We had a great defensive effort all day, and especially on the goal line. We denied them," Coach Dry said. "That was clutch. If they score there, the party's over; turn out the lights."

"They hustle and everything, but their offense is limited to James Hadnot (Tech fullback). He's at least three-quarters of their offense, so all you have to do, really, is concentrate on him. They don't have any other big threats ... their tailback never carries the ball. Still, I think we did pretty well to hold them to three points."

And that will enable F.A. Dry to hold onto a happy memory, at least until next week.

bined for Arkansas' first touchdown.

Four plays after the kickoff, Brannan ducked under Jim Elliott and threw an ill-advised pass that Wessinger intercepted and returned 28 yards. Four plays later, Ordonez made it 17-9.

The next time Akrkansas got the ball, Bruce Lahay kicked Baylor into a hole at the Bears' 6. Baylor made one first down, then was penalized back to the Bears' 10 for an ineligible receiver downfield. From the 13, Brannan started right and was hit by Goff. Brannan's pitchout bounded into the end zone and Phillips covered it for a touchdown with 13:54 left in the game. The two-point conversion tied it 17-17.

Arkansas forced Baylor to punt and the Razorbacks started from their 45. After gaining a first down at the Baylor 40, Arkansas faced third and 8, and Scanlon converted when he hit Duckworth for 9 yards.

Ordonez ended that drive with his 40-yard field goal that made it 20-17 with 9:15 left.

The Bears came right back. On third and 19 from the Baylor 23, Brannan backed up and dumped a screen pass to Abercrombie, who raced 43 yards to the Arkansas 34.

Phillip Ward made 15 yards and 13 yards on consecutive runs but a clipping penalty moved the ball back to the Arkansas 27.

Red Raiders Hoping To Salvage Season was no way I was going to score if I'd kept it."

Hart said the fact that he was starting his first game as a collegian did not effect Saturday's performance at all. (Hart's last start came a year ago when he lead Irving High against Duncanville.) His knuckles were white because of the 32-degree temperature and the gusty winds.

"Any time you try to step in and fill Ron Reeves' shoes you are going to feel some pressure," noted Hart. "But it disappeared pretty early in the game."

TCU, which now owns a 2-6-1 won-loss record, started what would be its game-tying march on the Frog 8 and moved down to the Tech 11, where Greg Porter booted a 28-yard field goal with 21 seconds left on the clock. The drive covered 81 yards in 11 plays.

Until that final march, the Tech defense had held the Frog offense to 139 yards, forced three fumbles and a pair of pass interceptions. But as time was running out, the Raiders couldn't halt the Frogs' aerial attack.

"I felt we played a good defensive game," said head coach Rex Dockery. "But they hit some passes; their quarterback (Steve Stamp) made some good throws when they had to have them."

And, as they say, the rest is history.

"It's a hard thing to explain," explained cornerback Willie Stephens. "I thought we had them stopped a couple of times, but they just kept coming back. This is just like losing."

At times, the Tech defense got a little "frustrated" with the Raider offense, Stephens said, especially after it was unable to capitalize on the turnovers.

"We felt a little letdown," said Stephens. "But you'd just have to go back out there and play. Now we just have got get after it next week. We're still trying to have a good season."

The Raiders travel to Dallas next week to meet Mustang Mania.

Boilermaker Defense Cools Wolverines

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue's defense, sparked by Bill Kay's three pass interceptions and one fumble recovery, shut off Michigan's attack Saturday as the 14th-ranked Boilermakers held off a furious rally and upset the 10th-rated Wolverines 24-21 behind tailback Ben McCall's two touchdown runs.

The victory gave Purdue a second-place tie with Michigan, one game behind Big Ten Conference leader Ohio State going into next week's season wind-up.

McCall, a junior reserve pressed into action by injuries to the Purdue regulars, scored the first touchdown in the opening period and added another score on a 9-yard run early in the fourth quarter.

Purdue also scored on a 1-yard sneak by quarterback Mark Herrmann and a 29-yard field goal by John Seibel.

The powerful Wolverines, who had averaged more than 275 rushing yards per game, were held to a minus-7 yards on the ground in the first quarter by the swarming Purdue defense.

Big Ten

Michigan's first drive, aided by a Purdue penalty for roughing punter Bryan Virgil, went to the Boilermaker 41 yard line before Kay made his first interception off quarterback John Wangler.

Purdue then launched its first scoring drive from its own 35. Herrmann completed a pair of short passes, then hit Wally Jones on a 25-yarder that put the Boilermakers at the Michigan 25.

Three plays later, Herrmann fired nine yards to Young, who fumbled out of bounds at the Wolverine 12, and four straight runs gave Purdue a first down at the 2. McCall then went in for his first touchdown and a lead Purdue never lost.

Michigan, which managed just four first downs and 21 rushing yards the entire first half, never made it past midfield the rest of the second quarter.

The Wolverines finally scored in the third quarter on a 6-yard pass from Langler to Doug Marsh and in the fourth quarter on a 1-yard run by Roosevelt Smith and a 2-yard plunge by Butch Woolfolk.

Michigan pulled within three points with a minute to go when Herrmann was tackled in the end zone for a safety, and the Wolverines never made it past midfield on the following kickoff.

"We won, that's my comment," a relieved Purdue Coach Jim Young said after watching the Boilermakers build a 21-6 lead in the fourth quarter before the Wolverines made an almost unbelievable comeback.

"It certainly was our best effort of the year in all phases of the game," said Young, whose Boilermakers remained in

Ohio State Whips Iowa

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State's league-leading defense, sparked by freshman Marcus Marek, forced Iowa into 10 turnovers Saturday in a 34-7 college football rout that gave the third-ranked Buckeyes at least a Big Ten Conference co-championship.

The undefeated Buckeyes ran their overall record to 10-0 and can clinch a Rose Bowl berth next week by winning at Michigan, which suffered its first league loss at Purdue as the Boilermakers scored a 24-21 victory.

Ohio State is now 7-0 in the Big Ten while Michigan and Purdue are tied for second with 6-1 conference marks with one week remaining.

Marek, a linebacker, intercepted two passes and recovered one fumble as Ohio State had the issue settled by halftime as the Buckeyes took a 27-0 margin.

Ohio State forced Iowa quarterback Phil Suess into two lost fumbles and three interceptions, which led to the Hawkeyes' worst defeat of the season and dropped Iowa to records of 4-6 overall and 3-4 in the Big Ten.

Sophomore quarterback Art Schlichter became Ohio State's all-time passing leader when he connected on an 8-yard toss to Ty Hicks in the opening moments of the game. Schlichter now has 2,573 yards in the air. Don Unverferth set the previous record of 2,518 yards from 1963-65.

Schlichter ran 1 yard for a touchdown and passed 34 yards to Doug Donley for another score. Donley's catch was his ninth career scoring reception and tied a school mark established by Bruce Jankowski from 1968-70.

Iowa's only touchdown came with less than five minutes remaining when third-string quarterback Pete Gales passed 40 yards to Keith Chappelle for a 40-yard scoring play that foiled the Buckeyes' bid for their third shutout in four games.

The jittery Hawkeyes lost the ball on six straight possessions in the first half and Ohio State took advantage of the turnovers to roll up its 27-0 margin in the first 30 minutes.

Besides Schlichter's touchdown run and pass, Vlade Janakievski kicked field goals of 29 and 46 yards and fullback Ric Volley ran 1 yard for a touchdown.

The Buckeye defense was so dominating that Iowa did not manage a first down until 12:55 remained in the third quarter. The Hawkeyes did not cross midfield until fullback Dennis Mosley, the Big Ten's leading ground-gainer, ran 15 yards to the Buckeyes' 46-yard line early in the third period.

Indiana Blasts Illinois 45-14

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Tim Clifford passed for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth Saturday as Indiana enhanced its bowl prospects by overwhelming Illinois 45-14 in Big Ten football.

The victory boosted the Hoosiers' season record to 7-3 and their conference mark to 5-2. Representatives of the Garden State, Peach and Sun bowls were at the game.

Clifford threw two touchdown passes to Bob Stephenson and one to Nate Lundy. The junior quarterback completed 14 of 19 passes for 241 yards to establish new Indiana passing records.

Wisconsin Clobbers Northwestern 28-3

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Mike Kalasmiki passed for 265 yards and two touchdowns and ran for another score, leading Wisconsin to a 28-3 Big Ten college football victory over Northwestern Saturday.

Kalasmiki, voted Wisconsin's most valuable player in 1978 but sidelined for four games this year with a broken right thumb, completed 17 of 23 passes for the Badgers, 2-5 in the Big Ten and 3-7 for the season.

Northwestern, down 14-0 at the half, scored on a 26-yard field goal by Sam Poulos with 4:22 left in the third quarter.

However, the Badgers converted two Northwestern turnovers into fourth quarter touchdowns on a one-yard run by Gerald Green and a 30-yard pass from Kalasmiki to Tom Stauss as the Wildcats slipped to 0-8 in the Big Ten and 1-9 overall.

Michigan State Stomps Gophers

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Tailback Derek Hughes stormed for four touchdowns — the third a 70-yard game-breaker — as Michigan State repulsed a second-half Minnesota comeback Saturday to down the Gophers 31-17.

Hughes, a speedy sophomore who has alternated between tailback, flanker and kick returner, raced for 213 yards in 31 carries to spark Michigan State's ground attack. The Spartans did not complete a pass.

It was Hughes' finest day as a collegian, and the first time since 1971 a Spartan ran for four scores in a single contest.

Minnesota, meanwhile, sputtered on the ground and only quarterback Mark Carlson's league-leading passing kept the Gophers in the game.

Michigan State now is 5-5 on the year while Minnesota dropped to 4-5-1. Both are 3-4 in the Big Ten.

Neither team scored in the first quarter, but Michigan State got its ground game clicking to move 63 yards to paydirt early in the second quarter. Hughes dived over from the 1 to give the Spartans the lead.

Minnesota cut the lead to 7-3, mainly on Carlson's arm. He hit split end Elmer Bailey for 16 yards, then lofted another to flanker Jeff Anhorn for 36 yards to set up a 23-yard field goal by Paul Rogind.

Rutgers Blanks Cadets 20-0

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — David Dorn and Albert Ray each ran for one touchdown and Kennan Startzell booted two field goals Saturday leading Rutgers to its first college football victory ovr Army in 88 years, a 20-0 decision at Giants Stadium.

The Scarlet Knights had dropped eleven straight games to the Cadets since taking the initial meeting 27-6 in 1891. The victory, following last week's upset over highly-regarded Tennessee, keeps the 7-2 Scrlet Knights' bowl hopes alive.

Rutgers is in contention for its second straight Garden State Bowl invitation, and also is reportedly under consideration for an invitation to the Hall of Fame Bowl in Birmingham, Alabama.

Tennessee Surprises Fighting Irish

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Second team fullback Hubert Simpson ran for 117 yards and scored four touchdowns to lead Tennessee to a 40-18 college football upset Saturday over 13th-ranked Notre Dame.

Simpson ran for touchdowns of 24, 1 and 1 yards to spark a 23-point scoring blitz in the second quarter, giving the host Volunteers a 30-12 halftime lead. The 204-pound junior's eight-yard run for a fourth touchdown in the third quarter tied a school scoring record set by Bob Lunds in 1945 and matched by Harold Payne six years later.

Halfback Vegas Ferguson scored all three Notre Dame touchdowns on runs of 1 and 2 yards in the first half and 10 yards in the final quarter.

But Tennessee's defense held Ferguson, the nation's fourth-leading rusher with an average of 5 yards each carry, to 89 yards the 22 times he had the ball.

The victory was a strong comeback for the Volunteers, 5-3, who suffered a 13-7 upset loss to Rutgers a week ago. Notre Dame, which a year ago came from behind to beat Tennessee 31-14 in its first game ever against the Vols, fell to 6-3.

South

Tennessee quarterback Jimmy Streater scored a five-yard touchdown on the Vols' opening drive and set up Simpson's second score with a 51-yard run before leaving the game on crutches in the second quarter with a twisted knee.

Tennessee moved out in front 21-6 after Lemont Holt intercepted a pass from Notre Dame quarterback Rusty Lisch four minutes into the second quarter.

Streater's 51-yard run two plays later set up Simpson's second touchdown.

Alan Duncan booted the following kickoff to the northwest corner of the field and the Irish's Bernie Adell, not realizing how close he was to the sideline, ran the ball out of bounds at the 1. Defensive end Brian Ingram then dumped Lisch in the end zone for a safety on the next play.

Duncan booted a 35-yard field goal seven minutes after the second half opened to give Tennessee a 33-12 lead before Simpson and Ferguson put the final points for each team on the scoreboard.

Tennessee faces Ole Miss next week at Jackson, Miss., while Notre Dame hosts Clemson in South Bend, Ind.

Simpson may have led the Volunteers to the stunning upset, but the death blow was struck with 20 seconds left in the first half when the defense of the host Volunteers, ahead 30-12, stopped the Irish from scoring six inches short of the goalline.

"It was a big defensive series for us," Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors said. "A touchdown would have given Notre Dame the impetus to build on and come back."

But Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine said an Irish touchdown then would not have made much difference. "I don't think it would have taken any of the zip out of Tennessee," he said. "Our inability to tackle and defend hurt us most."

Entering the game after Terry Daniels incurred a pinched nerve in his neck the first time the Irish kicked to Tennessee, Simpson drove for 117 yards in 27 carries the rest of the game.

"If it was not for our line today, I wouldn't have been able to do any of this," Simpson said. "We were just busting them up the middle."

Pittsburgh Upends West Virginia 24-17

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Defensive back Jo Jo Heath returned an intercepted pass 46 yards to set up Freddy Jacob's short-range touchdown midway through the fourth quarter Saturday as 12th-ranked Pitt held on to defeat rival West Virginia 24-17.

Playing before the largest crowd in West Virginia history, the Panthers twice built seemingly insurmountable leads only to see the underdog Mountaineers, 5-5, battle back.

The game, the final one at West Virginia's 55-year-old Mountaineer Field, drew a crowd of 38,681. The largest previous crowd in the stadium, which has a listed capacity of 34,000, was 38,500 for the 1971 Pitt game.

Jacobs' four-yard touchdown run with 9:12 left in the game came just a minute after West Virginia had cut Pitt's lead to 17-10 on a 19-yard touchdown pass play from Oliver Luck to Cedric Thomas. West Virginia began the drive on its own 20.

Pitt, 8-1, playing before scouts from four bowl games, had built a 17-3 lead early in the fourth quarter behind the passing of freshamn quarterback Dan Marion.

Starting for just the second time in his college career, Marion threw an eight-yard touchdwon pass to Benjie Pryor with 50 seconds gone in the final quarter. The touchdown ended an 11-play, 76-yard drive highlighted by Marino completions of 24 yards to Ralph Still and 17 yards to Pryor.

Before a 22-yard field goal by West Virginia's Steve Sinclair early in the second half, Pitt had taken a 10-0 halftime lead behind as Marino consistently threaded passes through the Mountaineer's secondary.

Clemson Tigers Kick North Carolina 19-10

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Clemson's Obed Ariri booted four field goals, three after North Carolina turnovers, to spark the Tigers to a 19-10 Atlantic Coast Conference victory Saturday.

Ariri, a junior, became Clemson's all-time field goal kicker with a total of 33. He had kicks of 30, 33, 17 and 43 yards as the Tigers ran their record to 4-2 in the conference and 7-2 overall.

North Carolina, dropping to 1-3 in the ACC and 5-3-1 on the season, was eliminated from the conference championship race.

McEnroe Upends Nick Saviano

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Defending champion John McEnroe made short work of unseeded Nick Saviano 6-1, 6-4 Saturday and moved into the semi-finals against Wojtek Fibak of Poland in the $210,000 Stockholm Open.

The top-seeded McEnroe turned in a superb display of serve-and-volley tennis at the Royal Tennis Hall.

Fibak downed McEnroe's doubles partner, Peter Fleming, 6-2, 7-5 in their quarterfinal. Fibak was the only non-American to reach the round of eight.

Brian Gottfried faced the winner between Tim Gullikson and Gene Mayer, who played the last match during the evening session here, in Sunday's other semi-final.

Gottfried battled down to the wire against Harold Solomon, winning a tight three-setter on a decisive tiebreaker 7-5, 6-7, 7-6.

Gottfried prevailed as Solomon played one of his best matches ever on a fast surface. Normally the strongest on fast courts, Gottfried ran out of gas in the first tie-breaker after double faulting on the first point. Solomon took it 7-1.

The second tie-breaker could have gone either way in the second tie-breaker. Gottfried, getting off to a better start this time, won it 7-5.

McEnroe was challenged only once by Saviano, the only unseeded player to reach the quarters. That was in the eighth game of the second set when the 23-year-old Saviano passed McEnroe at the net with two sizzling cross-court shots to make it 15-40.

But the U.S. Open champ, calling on his tough, angled first serve, ran off four straight points and zipped to a 5-3 final-set lead.

McEnroe only dropped nine points in his service games and won four of them to love during the 55-minute match.

Bulldogs Tasting Sugar

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Buck Belue fired three touchdown passes as Georgia took advantage of mistakes by the Florida Gators and moved to within one victory of clinching a Sugar Bowl berth with a 33-10 regionally-televised victory Saturday.

It was the fifth straight Southeastern Conference triumph for the Bulldogs, who have lost all four of their games against outside competition. But a victory over Auburn next week will assure Georgia of no worse than a tie for the title with top-ranked Alabama.

Georgia could claim the Sugar Bowl invitation by virtue of a last-appearance clause contained in the contract between the SEC and the Sugar Bowl.

Belue's scoring passes covered 6 yards to Carmon Prince, 40 yards to Lindsay Scott and 3 yards to Norris Brown.

The Bulldogs scored on six of their seven possesions in the first half to take a 33-10 lead at intermission.

Rex Robinson kicked two field goals, covering 48 and 28 yards, to tie the conference record of 35 career field goals set by Auburn's Jorge Portela against Florida last week.

Robinson also kicked three extra points, extending his consecutive streak to 63, two better than the old SEC record held by former Georgia kicker Allan Leavitt.

Florida's scoring came on a 13-yard pass from Larry Ochab to Chris Faulkner and on a 47-yard field goal by Brian Clark. The Gators fell to 0-7-1 for the season and 0-5 in the SEC.

Last-Second Field Goal Gives Penn State Win

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Herb Menhardt kicked a 54-yard field goal on the final play of the game Saturday to give Penn State a dramatic 9-7 victory over North Carolina State, which had scored with just 1:18 remaining to assume its only lead of the afternoon.

Menhardt, whose earlier field goals of 38 and 37 yards had accounted for all the scoring by Joe Paterno's Nittany Lions, skinned the right upright with a kick that had plenty of distance to spare.

It looked as if the Lions, now 6-3, were all but dead when N.C. State's Scott Smith capped a 72-yard drive by scoring on a keeper from two yards out after setting up the touchdown with a fourth-down completion of 30 yards to Mike Quick.

But the Lions, faced with an even more difficult task (fourth down and 27 yards to go), got into position to win when quarterback Dayle Tate threw a 39-yard pass to Terry Rakowsky.

It gave the Lions a first down at the N.C. State 37. After two incomplete passes, one second remained on the clock. Then Menhardt stunned the crowd of 51,200 with with the second longest kick in Penn State history.

Linebacker Matt Bradley intercepted a Smith pass and recovered a fumble by Andre Marks to key the Penn State defense, which held the Wolfpack, now 6-4, in check until Smith's late heroics.

Tulane Crushes Mississippi Rebels 49-15

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tailback Marvin Christian ran for 95 yards and two touchdowns to lead Tulane to a 49-15 rout of Mississippi in a regionally televised college football game Saturday.

Christian's first touchdown, which came on a 20-yard run midway through the first quarter, put Tulane aheead 7-3 and the Green Wave never relinquished the lead.

Christian scored again on a 33-yard burst with five minutes left in the third quarter after Tulane had already put the game out of reach.

Quarterbacks Rich Hontas of Tulane and John Fourcade of Mississippi fought to a virtual standoff in their personal duel of nationally-ranked passers. Fourcade accumulated 248 yards, half of that after Tulane substituted liberally in the late going.

Hontas accounted for 196 yards in three quarters of play.

Fourcade, the Southeastern Conference leader in total offense, came into the game averaging 182 yards a game, while Hontas has averaged 222 yards a contest through the season.

Mississippi's scores came on a 42-yard field goal by Hoppy Langley four minutes into the game, and a 52-yard pass from Fourcade to split end Ken Toler midway through the final quarter and a 7-yard pass to freshman flanker Michaeel Harmon with 22 seconds left in the game.

Aside from Christian's two runs, Tulane scored on a 22-yard run by fullback Reggie Reginelli in the second quarter and a 61-yard sprint by reserve tailback Terry Harris with two minutes left in the first half.

Wide receiver Alton Alexis scored on a 23-yard pass from Hontas two minutes into the third quarter. Reserve quarterback Nicky Hall then lobbed a 1-yard scoring pass to tight end Rodney Holman shortly before Fourcade's touchdown bomb to Toler.

Syracuse Whips Navy

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Syracuse quarterback Bill Hurley ran for one touchdown, passed for another and guided the Orangemen to a 30-14 victory over Navy Saturday.

Hurley, who supplanted Ernie Davis as the third leading rusher in Syracuse history, moved his team 51 yards in just four plays for the first score late in the opening quarter. He set up the touchdown with a scamper which broke Davis' career mark of 2,385 yards rushing and then hit tight end Anthony Sidor on an 18-yard scoring pass.

Early in the second period, the senior quarterback carried over from the four-yard line for a touchdown which he set up with a 65-yard pass to Art Monk.

Three field goals by Gary Anderson and a six-yard scoring run by Joe Morris accounted for the rest of Syracuse's 30 points, the most given up by Navy in nine games this year.

The victory gives Syracuse a 6-4 season record. Navy is 6-3 for the year.

Navy's punchless offense got just four first-downs and 91 yards offense the first half, but opened up somewhat in the second half when quarterback Bob Powers began connecting on some passes.

Rambling Wreck Beats Air Force

ATANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's freshman running back Ronny Cone rushed for 156 yards and a touchdown and quarterback Mike Kelley threw for another score Saturday, powering the Yellow Jackets to a 21-0 college football victory over the Air Force Academy.

Cone, a 6-foot-2, 195-pounder from Statesboro, Ga., capped a 70-yard drive with a 20-yard TD scamper on Tech's first possession. The freshman had 51 yards in four carries during the eight-play drive.

Tech, 3-5-1, made it 14-0 late in the opening period when Kelley connected on a 19-yard scoring toss to Matt Rank in the end zone. Cone keyed the 80-yard, six-play drive by rushing for 41 yards on three carries.

Air Force, 1-9, had only one scoring opportunity in the opening half. It failed when Jim Sturch missed a 24-yard field goal attempt eight seconds before intermission.

Record Trapping Catch Expected

The 1979-80 fur-bearing season opens for mink and muskrat in November and Texas trappers/hunters are expected to harvest another record catch this winter.

Included in this rich variety of animals designated as furbearers are badger, beaver, foxes (gray, red, kit and swift), mink, muskrat, nutria, opossum, river otter, raccoon, ringtail, and skunk (striped, spotted, hognosed and hooded).

Although not classed as furbearers, coyotes, bobcats and weasels are also marketed for their furs. The 1979-80 bobcat season is set for Nov 15 through Feb. 15.

The mink season is set for Nov. 15 - Jan. 15; muskrat is Nov. 15 -March 15; and all other designated furbearers may be harvested for the sale of their pelts from Dec. 1 -Jan. 31.

A $5 resident trapping license is required of those who take for the purpose of barter or sale, and those who sell or offer for sale or trade the pelts of any Texas fur-bearing animal.

A $200 non-resident trapping license entitles non-residents to take for the purpose of barter or sale the pelts of any fur-bearing animal in Texas during the season.

This is the second year Texas will require hunters, trappers and fur dealers to tag their bobcat pelts. The tags are required by ESSA (Endangered Species Scientific Authority) to make Texas bobcat pelts eligible for international trade.

Persons taking bobcats during the legal season of Nov. 15 -Feb. 15 should find it easier to obtain bobcat pelt tags this year as the TP&WD Commission has authorized registered fur dealers to issue tags.

Dealers must obtain a free bobcat pelt tagging permit from TP&WD district or regional law enforcement office prior to the tagging of any bobcat pelt. The permits may be obtained now, and the tags which are free, issued to the dealers Nov. 1.

Only retail and wholesale fur dealers who possess a valid Texas dealers license for the current year are entitled to be a bobcat pelt tagging agent. The dealers should bring their license number and type of license information when applying for this bobcat tagging permit. The dealers with the bobcat tagging permit are required to tag, free of charge, all bobcat pelts presented as being legally taken in in Texas.

For further information on tagging procedures call the TP&WD offices across the state or contact John Roberson, TP&WD, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, TX 78744, or call (512) 475-4871.

NMMI Edges LCHS 21-20

ROSWELL, N.M. (Special) — The New Mexico Military Institue Cadets rallied to overcome to Lubbock Christian touchdowns in the third quarter and emerged with a narrow 21-20 victory.

The win raises NMMI's record to 5-5 while LCHS fell to 6-4.

It was the passing of quarterback Sam Stollenwerck that spelled doom for the visiting Eagles. Stollerwerck passed for all three Cadet scores and a two point conversion.

The last TD strike was a 52-yarder to Jose Campos with 7:48 remaining in the contest that tied the game at 20-20. Kicker Leonard Salazar's kick split the uprights and NMMI owned a 21-20 victory.

Trailing 14-6 at the half, Lubbock Christian rallied for 14 points in the third quarter before the Cadets put the clamps on. First Shawn Williams hauled in a 19-yard TD pass from quarterback Brian Mathis. The Eagles got two points following the score as running back Barry Sikes lobbed a strike to Williams.

That tied the game at 14-14 and when Williams ran underneath a 68 yard pass from Mathis the Eagles led 20-14. The run for two points failed though — costing LCHS the game.

Stollenwerck completed 13 of 22 passes for 219 yards and three TD's as NMMI piled up 280 yards of total offense to the Eagles 208 total yards.

Fire Hazard Grows After Drought Season

By J.D. PEER
TP&WD Information Officer

Very little rainfall since early August has created potential fire hazards for both hunters and landowners in northwest Texas.

An excess of moisture last spring and summer furnished the ingredients for lush weed and brush growth. This growth is now turning brown and dry.

The dry conditions also contributed to nostril problems for bird dogs as the Texas quail season opened Oct. 27 in regulatory counties. Hunters using bird dogs while afield should carry extra water to wash the dust from the animal's mouth and nose every hour or so.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department suggests anyone hunting during this dry period follow the rules of fire prevention such as no campfires near brush or grass and no smoking afield.

Another hint to prevent wild fires is to drive vehicles only on established, cleared, roads. Side trips through weeds or grass with the new model vehicles equipped with catalytic converters increases the potential for fire. These pollution control devices become red hot while the vehicle is running, and often remain hot long after the engine is shut off.

Hunters usually check with the landowner as to the location of birds or game and this is a good time to locate water sources on the property in case of a wild fire. Also, carry an extra shovel which can be used to cover or smother a small fire.

Most counties now have a volunteer fire truck and crew of local residents. These rigs can roll on a wild fire and, if given enough warning, can usually control or contain the fire before it threatens building, livestock and people.

Hunters should be especially careful when high winds are encountered while hunting. Wild fires can cover ground faster than a man can run under these dry conditions. The P&WD suggests sportsmen consider the potential for fire hazards before going afield.

Texas game wardens found few quail hunters in northwest Texas during the opening weekend of the season which could be due to the dry, hot conditions found on the plains.

SCHOOLBOY FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Plano Makes Playoffs Again

By The Associated Press

The win gave the Wildcats the top berth in the tough District 13-4A and assured Plano — picked by many observers to finish completely out of the 1979 playoff picture — a bi-district matchup later this month.

Plano, ranked sixth among 4A teams in The Associated Press schoolboy football poll, was not the only Dallas-area team to nail down a district title Friday night.

Using an outstanding defensive performance, No. 8 Dallas White clinched District 11-4A with a 28-0 whitewashing of arch-rival Dallas Hillcrest.

The Longhorn defense forced six turnovers and limited the Panthers to minus 20 yards rushing on 30 attempts. Hillcrest did not make its initial first down until midway through the third period.

"Our defense was just great," White Coach Harold Hill said. "They've been improving every week, trying to get better and better with experience."

Bubba Hill ran up 246 yards on the ground and scored two touchdowns as second-ranked La Porte blitzed Clear Creek, 47-0.

Running back Mike Klein scored from a yard out with 28 seconds left as Spring Klein, ranked seventh, tied No. 3 Conroe, 14-14. Klein advanced by virtue of its 14-12 lead in first downs after both squads finished even in penetrations.

Nebraska Upends Tough Kansas State

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Defensive end Lawrence Cole rambled 60 yards for a touchdown and Andra Franklin set up another score with a 38-yard pass enabling No. 2 Nebraska to overcome stubborn Kansas State Saturday, 21-12, in a game filled with 13 turnovers.

The Huskers, now 9-0, led only 7-6 at the half and fell behind 12-7, at the outset at the third quarter as their much-vaunted offense consistently stopped itself with mistakes.

E. J. Brown, capping an 80-yard drive, dived over from the 1-yard line to put the upset-minded Wildcats on top, 12-7, with 10:15 remaining in the third quarter. A 2-point conversion pass was good, but nullified by an illegal procedure penalty, and the next try failed.

Nebraska was forced to punt on its next possession, but a fumble by quarterback Darrell Dickey was recovered for the Huskers on the Wildcat 15 by Jimmy Williams, and three plays later Tim Wurth went over from 3 yards out for Nebraska.

Nebraksa, with Franklin going 38 yards to the 11, was threatening in the fourth period when quarterback Tim Hager fumbled to the Wildcats. But Darryl Black fumbled it back to the Huskers on the next play and with 7:29 left, Franklin took it in from the 1.

Oklahoma Crushes Kansas 38-0

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Billy Sims rushed for 128 yards and scored one touchdown and tackle John Goodman highlighted a devastating Oklahoma defense with a 56-yard touchdown run with a midair fumble recovery as the Sooners whipped Kansas, 38-0, in a Big Eight football game Saturday.

The victory didn't start off easy for the sixth-ranked Sooners, who led only 3-0 after the first quarter on Mike Keeling's 30-yard field goal and 10-0 at the half on a four-year run by quarterback J.C. Watts.

Big Eight

But Oklahoma pushed ahead 17-0 in the third quarter on a one-yard plunge by Sims, the nation's leading scorer, then exploded for 21 fourth-quarter points that began when Goodman picked the ball out of the air after reserve Kansas quarterback Kevin Clinton lost control of it at the Oklahoma 44. Keeling's kick made it 24-0.

Backup quarterback Kelly Phelps scored on a one-yard plunge and Darrell Shepard, the former Houston signal-caller seeing his first duty as a Sooner, raced 63 yards on his second possession to complete the scoring.

Despite getting favorable field position for much of the contest, the Sooners — who hurt themselves with several untimely penalties and turnovers — had little success running wide against the rugged Kansas defense.

Perhaps the key play in the game came in the third quarter when the Sooners faced a third and goal situation from the nine after being assessed a five-yard penalty. Watts clawed his way to the one where Sims then plunged over and Keeling's kick gave the Sooners breathing room at 17-0.

Missouri Edges ISU 18-9

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Ron Verrilli, who took over the placekicking chores three weeks ago, booted a school record four field goals and Terry Hill scored on a short run to give Missouri an 18-9 Big Eight Conference victory over Iowa State Saturday.

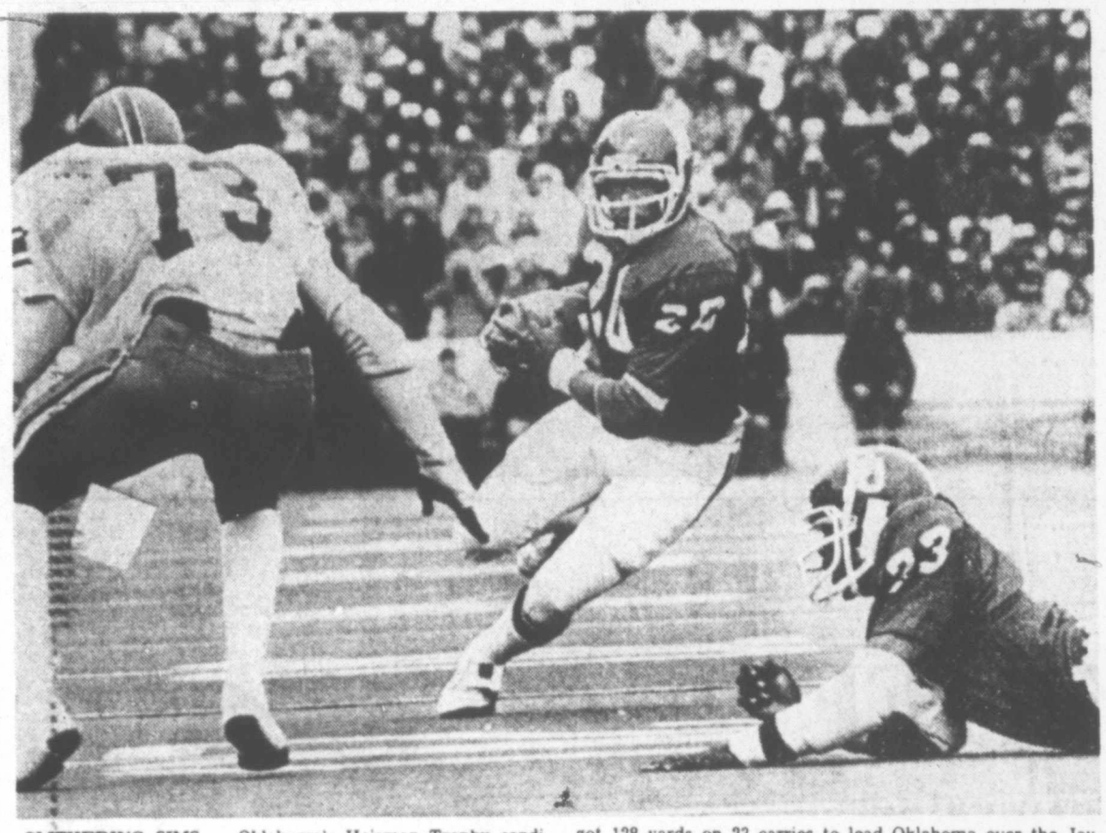

Verrilli, a junior who transferred to Missouri from Boston University, kicked field goals of 36, 32, 29 and 26 yards in the regionally televised game as Missouri sent its season record to 5-4 and its Big Eight mark to 2-3.

Missouri had to overcome three fumbles and a pass interception to beat the Cyclones, who fell to 3-6 and 2-3. Iowa State controlled the ball for much of the second half and was marching toward what would have been the go-ahead touchdown late in the game, when Missouri's Kevin Potter at the Tiger 30 to stop the drive.

After the fumble recovery, which came with 5:23 left in the game and Missouri leading 15-9, the Tigers drove to the Iowa State 9 and Verrilli kicked his final field goal, a 26-yarder.

That kick tied the Missouri school record set by Henry Brown in 1969 and matched by Jack Bastable in 1970.

Trojans Smell Like Roses After Win

SEATTLE (AP) — University of Southern California clinched its 10th Rose Bowl bid in 14 years Saturday with a 24-17 victory over Washington's Huskies as quarterback Paul McDonald passed for two touchdowns and tailback Charles White rushed for 243 yards on 38 carries.

The fourth-ranked Trojans improved their record to 5-0-1 in the Pacific-10 Conference and 9-0-1 overall while the 15th-rated Huskies dropped to 5-2 in conference play and 7-3 overall.

With the score 17-17, the Trojans drove 80 yards in seven plays for the final touchdown on a 10-yard run by fullback Marcus Allen with 11:50 left to play.

On USC's game-winning drive, White carried the ball three times for 58 yards, reeling off runs of 30 and 26 yards.

Washington quarterback Tom Flick completed 18 of 28 passes for 245 yards and one touchdown. He was intercepted twice.

After USC went ahead 24-17, Washington got to the USC 1-yard line. But then the Trojans stiffened.

On a second-down and 1-yard situation, Husky tailback Vince Coby was thrown for a 1-yard loss. Coby then was thrown for a 3-yard loss. On a fourth and five situation, Flick completed a pass to Coby but he was stopped for a 5-yard loss and the Trojans took over the ball with 3:11 to play.

McDonald had scoring passes of 19 yards to Kevin Williams in the third quarter and eight yards to Dan Garcia in the second quarter for USC's other two touchdowns. Eric Hipp kicked a 31-yard field goal in the second quarter for the Trojans.

HUSKIE RECEPTION — Washington wide receiver Aaron Williams (91), brings down a pass from Tom Flick as USC's Jeff Fisher (40) tries to knock out of his hands during first quarter action of Saturday's Pac-10 showdown between USC and Washington. Oregon Shocks Stanford 16-7

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Defensive end Gordon Bledsoe turned a Stanford offensive gamble into a nine-yard loss preserving a 3-point Oregon lead in the second half, and quarterback Reggie Ogburn ran for a late touchdown to give the Ducks a 16-7 upset victory Saturday.

Oregon, 5-4, moved a step closer to its first winning football season since 1970 by virtually shutting off the powerful passing threat of the Cardinals. The Ducks, 3-2 in the Pacific-10, play UCLA and Oregon State in their final two games.

Oregon took a 10-7 lead with 10 seconds left in the first half when Doug Jollymour kicked a 25-yard field goal, soon after the Ducks recovered a Stanford fumble at the Cardinals' 24-yard line.

Late in the third period, with freshman John Elway at quarterback in place of injured Turk Schonert, Stanford drove 60 yards to the Oregon 7.

On a fourth-and-four play, at the nine, Stanford ran a pass play instead of going for a field goal and Bledsoe dropped Elway for an 11-yard loss.

Ogburn scored on a 2-yard run with 4:19 remaining in the game after Oregon recovered another fumble deep in Stanford territory.

Tailback Dwight Robertson, who rushed almost 150 yards, opened the scoring with a 48-yard touchdown run for Oregon in the first period. Schonert threw a 20-yard touchdown pass to Ken Margerum in the second period before suffering a concussion.

The loss dropped Stanford to 5-4-1 and probably killed any bowl hopes.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Dave Cappelen booted four field goals, including a 50-yarder, and fullback Mark Lyles rushed for 135 yards Saturday night to lead seventh-ranked Florida State to a 27-7 victory over South Carolina.

Lyles plunged for a 1-yard touchdown early in the first quarter to give the 9-0 Seminoles a quick lead they never relinquished. Cappelen hit field goals 20, 29 and 50 yards in the first half, and added a 29-yarder in the fourth quarter.

Mania Shocks Shockers

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Eric Dickerson ran for two touchdowns and Jim Bob Taylor passed for another to lead Southern Methodist to a 34-0 win over hapless Wichita State in a non-conference football game Saturday afternoon.

Dickerson, a freshman tailback who had been injured much of the season, scored on 1 and 23-yard runs and narrowly missed a third tuchdown wen he fumbled diving over the goal line from the 1.

Eleven of 14 pass completions for 180 yards in the first half led the Mustangs to two second period touchdowns while the SMU defense held Wichita to only 65 yards offense in the opening half.

The Mustangs, 4-5, first scored early in the second period, driving 65 yards in six plays after returning a Wichita State punt to the SMU 35. Taylor hit wingback Emanuel Tolbert with a 26-yard scoring pass. Eddie Garcia, who kicked 37 and 40-yard field goals in the second half, missed the extra point.

SMU missed another score minutes later when Dickerson fumbled on the dive play from the 1. Wichita's Jeff Townsend caught the fumble in the air 5 yards deep in the end zone and returned it 105 yards for a touchdown, but the tally was nullified by a clipping penalty.

Wichita, now 1-9, was unable to move the ball and punted to the SMU 43, from where the Mustangs drove for their second touchdown.

Crimson Tide Blanks Stubborn LSU 3-0

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Alan McElroy, who missed two field goal attempts in the first half, kicked a 27-yarder in the third period Saturday night to give No.1-ranked Alabama a rain-soaked 3-0 victory over Louisiana State and make Bear Bryant the first college football coach in modern times to win 100 games in a decade.

A combination of a steady rain, 55-degree temperatures, a brisk wind, a slippery grass field and a couple of turnovers hampered Alabama's high-powered Wishbone offense. But the Crimson Tide's defense, ranked third nationally, only permitted LSU out of its own territory twice — the Tigers' deepest penetration was to the Alabama 42 — and intercepted two passes in the final seven minutes to preserve its fourth shutout of the season.

Alabama, 9-0 for the season, boosted its winning streak to 18 games, longest in the nation, and remained tied with Georgia for the Southeastern Conference lead. However, Georgia will represent the conference in the Sugar Bowl if it defeats Auburn next Saturday regardless of what Alabama does in its final two contests.

TECH WRESTLERS WIN

'Two-Man' Oilers To Host Hot Raiders

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers, with a scoring attack led by a portly 5-8, 196-pound Austrian and Earl Campbell, and the Oakland Raiders, trying to overcome the horrors of playing on the road, meet in a National Football League game in the Astrodome today.

The Oilers, 7-3, remain a strong contender for a playoff berth despite a sputtering offense that has had to rely on the rushing of Campbell and the kicking of Toni Fritsch.

Fritsch, the No. 3 scorer in the American Football Conference, has been responsible for three Oiler victories this season, including Monday's 9-6 victory over Miami when he kicked field goals of 46, 48 and 31 yards.

Fritsch also kicked the Oilers to a pair of overtime victories over Cincinnati and the New York Jets. Campbell retained the AFC Rushing and scoring lead despite a pulled leg muscle that caused him to miss one game.

The Oilers relied almost exclusively on Campbell and the ground game against Miami. Campbell rushed for 120 of Houston's 179 yards and carried on 32 of the Oilers' running plays.

"We need to throw better and catch better, but I thought we displayed good judgment against Miami," Phillips said. "We seem to play better against a class football team. I don't know why, I just hope I can keep getting them to do it."

Oiler tight end Mike Barber suffered a knee injury against the Dolphins and was a questionable participant for Sunday's game but the Oilers will get little sympathy from the Raiders, who had 13 starters sidelined at one time early this season.

Strapped by injuries and losing three of their first four games, all on the road, the Raiders have since rallied with a two tight-end offense behind quarterback Kenny Stabler, who is the No. 4-rated quarterback in the AFC with an 82.8 rating.

Oakland will take a 6-4 record into the game, including victories in five of its last six games. Overcoming their road slump won't be easy in the Astrodome, according to Raider Coach Tom Flores.

"One of the big keys is to contain Earl Campbell but you can't put all your concentration on him," Flores said. "I think Pastorini is a quality quarterback and the threat of him passing to (Ken) Burrough is too much to overlook."

Pastorini, with a 47.0 quarterback rating, hit six of 10 passes for 11 yards against the Dolphins.

Dallas Cowboys To Face Eagles, Jinx

They've never won a game from the Dallas Cowboys in the stadium which replaced the Cotton Bowl nine years ago as the home of the National Conference Eastern Division powerhouse.

In fact, Dallas hasn't lost at home to Philadelphia since 1965, or a span of 13 consecutive games.

Dallas has won nine consecutive games from the Eagles.

Such is the scenario for Monday night's meeting between the two teams. It's a must win for the Eagles to keep Dallas from making the NFC East a November runaway.

Dallas has a two-game bulge over Philadelphia and Washington in the division. The Cowboys are 10-point favorites to make it a three-game lead over the Eagles.

Quarterback Roger Staubach has a 13-2 career record against the Eagles.

But the Eagles have one thing working for them: Dallas is usually horrific on Monday nights.

Cleveland strapped Dallas 27-7 in October on a Monday night to drop Dallas' record to 7-7 on such nationally televised outings.

The last time the Eagles beat Dallas was on a Monday night in 1974.

"We've got to play to the maximum of our ability or we won't win," says Eagle Coach Dick Vermeil.

The Eagles have lost three straight games but Vermeil said his team at least played "Eagle" football in last Sunday's 24-19 loss to Cleveland.

"It's a helluva disappointment to play with the intensity we had and still lose," said Vermeil. "I feel like we are back on the track. We are still one game ahead of where we were last year. But let's not kid ourselves. Dallas is still the class of the division.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said "The Eagles have sort of been down in a valley which happens to you over a 16-game schedule. They are out of it now. We are going to catch 'em at the top of their game. If we're not at the top of our game, we're not going to win."

QB Rutledge To Start For Rams

By The Associated Press

The long line of Alabama quarterbacks who've moved on to meaningful work in professional football gains another name this week when Jeff Rutledge moves into the starting job with the Los Angeles Rams.

Rutledge, who led the Crimson Tide to college football's national championship last year, was drafted by the Rams and moved directly to a seat on the bench behind incumbent Pat Haden and No.2 man Vince Ferragamo.

But Ferragamo suffered a broken hand and Pat Haden broke the little finger on his passing hand last week and that makes Rutledge the Ram starter against the Chicago Bears today.

Elsewhere in the National Football League's 11th week of play, the matchups are split along division lines.

Rutledge hopes to follow in the tradition of NFL quarterbacks bred at Alabama. The club includes trailblazer Dixie Howell, Bart Starr, Joe Namath, Scott Hunter, Ken Stabler and Richard Todd.

After taking over for the injured Haden in last week's game against Seattle, Rutledge completed three of nine passes for 22 yards with one interception. For insurance, the Rams have signed journeyman quarterback Bob Lee, who was a free agent.

Chicago has problems with its passing game, too, with both of its starting wide receivers sidelined by injuries. Golden Richards has missed the last several games with a torn-up knee and James Scott broke his leg last week. The replacements for the Bears will be Brian Baschnagel, who caught two passes for 28 yards last week against Detroit, and Steve Schubert, who returned a punt 77 yards for a touchdown in the game against the Lions.

Sunday's game between Chicago and Los Angeles is important for both teams. Both take 5-5 records into the contest and are in the thick of their division races — LA tied for first in the NFC West with New Orleans, one game ahead of Atlanta, and Chicago second in the NFC Central, two games back of Tampa Bay.

The key game in the AFC will be a clash of division leaders in Denver with New England playing the Broncos. The Patriots, with a 7-3 record, are one game ahead of Miami in the AFC East, while the Broncos, also 7-3, share the AFC West lead with San Diego.

Miss Nichols Wins PBA

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lorrie Nichols, rolling three consistent games, edged top qualifier Pat Costello by a single pin Saturday, 237-236, for the $6,000 first prize in a Women's Professional Bowling Association tournament.

Miss Nichols, of Island Lake, Ill., had a 710 series on games of 237, 236 and 237. She entered the finals as the No. 3 qualifier with a pinfall of 9,418 for 24 games.

Miss Costello, of Union City, Calif., had earned a spot in the championship with 9,539 qualifying total.

In the first match, Betty Morris of Stockton, Calif., defeated Toni Gallard of Beverly, Ohio, 226-193, and then Miss Morris lost to Miss Nichols 237-192.

Nichols advanced to the final with a 236-214 victory over Nikki Gianulias of Vallejo, Calif., rallying after falling behind by 30 pins eary in the match.

In the championship, Miss Costello entered the 10th frame needing two strikes to win. She got the first, then left a wobbling 10-pin on the next ball.

She got $3,000 for finishing second. The $65,000 total purse for the tournament was the largest on the women's pro tour this year.

UT Swimmers Submerge Tech

AUSTIN (Special) — The Texas Tech women's swim team lost to the University of Texas 84-56 here Saturday.

Tech, 1-1, had defeated Southwest Texas State 97-32 in a season-opener Friday night.

Tech will host TCU at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Aquatic Center.

Dirt Go-Kart Race Set Next Sunday

Go-kart sprint racing, in a hiatus here for more than four years, will attempt a comeback next Sunday in a program of dirt track events at Lubbock Speedway.

The switch to dirt is something new for the karters, who normally compete on flat, paved courses having both left and right turns. Lee Christian, a veteran member of the karting fraternity here, said that the sport was reintroduced as a dirt track event this fall at Amarillo and Dumas.

Dunbar Earns District Title

The Panthers defeated Dumas 15-9, 15-10 and Estacado 15-13, 13-15, 15-10 and will face a still-to-be-determined opponent in the regional tournament later in November at Texas Tech.

Westerners Win Golf Tourney

Coronado was second at 171, followed by Hereford at 173. Alex Gumula of the Mustangs was the medalist with a 39.

NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
The City of Lubbock, P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, Texas 79457, Tel. 762-6411 proposes to request the Department of Housing and Urban Development to release federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the following project:
Installation of Traffic Signal at Avenue A & 23rd Street $32,000.00.
It has been determined that the request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the City of Lubbock has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).
The reasons for the decision not to prepare a Statement are as follows: (a) overall effects of the projects are beneficial; (b) beneficial effects are long-term and the adverse effects are short term and environmentally insignificant, being related primarily to activities necessary to construct the projects; (c) since the projects will occur at the neighborhood level, the short-term adverse effects will be confined to limited numbers of people; (d) historic and environmentally critical areas will not be affected; (e) no viable alternatives to the projects, including the no-action alternative, exist.
An Environmental Review Record for the projects has been made by the City which documents the environmental review of the projects and more fully sets forth the reasons why the Statement is not required. This Record is on file at the Municipal Building, 916 Texas Avenue, and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, in room 207 between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.
All interested parties disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City of the Community Development Coordinator, P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, Texas 79457, by 5:00 p.m., November 26, 1979. All comments will be considered and the City will not take any administrative action on the project prior to the date in the preceding sentence.

Jordan Enjoys Neutrality

JORDON

"I enjoy wallowing in my neutrality," he said.

At a news conference Wednesday, he said the League, as a "non-profit, tax-exempt" organization, stays away from political endorsements.

Jordan said he has advised other black leaders to hold off on endorsements until the 1980 election is near.

"It's too early to make commitments." He said blacks should "bide our time" and wait for candidates to approach them about issues.

Ducks Mean Bucks

That's the amount the 38-year-old artist is expected to recieve for his small painting of two ducks.

Plasschaert's acrylic, featuring a pair of mallards winging over reeds, was voted the winner of the Interior Deparment's annual "duck stamp" art contest. The painting will be featured on next year's "Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp."

The five-inch by seven-inch painting was selected from more than 1,300 entries in what is one of the world's richest art contests.

Plasschaert, 38, who lives in Waseca, Minn., works in a printing plant. He paints at night and on weekends. This marked the first time he entered the contest.

His earnings will come primarily from sales of reprints of the small painting. The reprints are eagerly sought by collectors. The Interior Department only awards the winning artist a sheet of stamps.

Notified at work of his victory, Plasschaert said, "I'm going to walk on the ceiling about a minute from now. I'm at a loss for words."

He also said he would soon quit his job and devote his full time to wildlife painting.

'You can count on it," he said.

Duck stamp are purcased primarily by waterfowl hunters. Federal law requires all duck and goose hunters over age 16 to purchase one. They cost $7.50 each.

Ex-Big Leaguer Wins Seat

FORT THOMAS, Ky. (AP) — Jim Bunning thought he knew what winning was all about. After all, as a major league pitcher he won 224 games in his 17-year baseball career.

BUNNING

But he never felt as good as he did Tuesday when he won a seat as Kentucky state sentator.

"I never felt anything quite like the feeling I had when I won," said Bunning, 47. "As a professional athlete the elation, generally, is from accomplishments that are your own.

"Sure, as a pitcher, you needed men to catch the ball and score runs. But here there was the involvement of so many people, all of them volunteers. I just never had that feeling before."

And he never felt the pressure in his baseball career that he felt running against four-term incumbent Don Johnson.

"Nothing ever so totally consumed me as did the race for the state senate," said Bunning.

"Even my sleep patterns were disturbed. Me, I never lost any sleep before. I always felt I could sleep on a white picket fence. But I had difficulty sleeping during this thing."

Bush Gets Endorsement

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — George Bush picked up somewhat of an endorsement Thursday. But it probably won't do him much good in his race for the Republican presidential nomination since it came from the Texas Democratic chairman.

Billy Goldberg said during a press conference at the Democratic National Committee meeting that Bush, a fellow Texan, belongs in the Democratic Party.

"I think he's a Democrat at heart," said Goldberg.

Asked why, Goldberg explained that Bush is a "compassionate" man who is concerned about the people.

"Because of these characteristics he is not going to be nominated by the Republican Party," added Goldberg.

Bush is not really considered one of the Republican frontrunners, but former Texas Democratic governor John Connally is. Connally switched parties in 1973.

Asked if Connally also was a Democrat at heart, Goldberg quipped, "That's another story. Let's just say he's flexible."

No Cheap Thrill

Women pay a $2 cover charge the one night a week the male dancers perform. Male patrons must pay a 250 times more and so far no men have anted up.

The nightclub began the male dancing last week.

Pops' Dates Corrected

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Associated Press on Wednesday erroneously reported the dates of the first concert of the newly created Philly Pops orchestra as Nov. 18 and 19.

The Philly Pops, created by impresario Moe Septee and directed by jazz pianist Peter Nero, actually will open Nov. 25 and 26 with an all-Gershwin program at the Academy of Music.

Cancer Firm Sues ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — A firm specializing in cancer insurance filed a $275 million libel suit against ABC on Wednesday, basing its complaint on a televised network series on insurance frauds.

American Family Life Assurance Co. of Columbus, Ga., charged in a suit filed in state Supreme Court that a three-part "Closeup" series aired on "World News Tonight" on Nov. 27-29, 1978, libeled and slandered the company.

American Family chairman John B. Amos said the company "will take appropriate action to protect the integrity, good name and reputation of our company and the equity of our policies in force from being further maligned.

'Who Knows?' Says Ford

DETROIT (AP) — Edsel Ford II, the 29-year-old great-grandson of Henry Ford, is bored with speculation on whether he eventually will take over as chairman of Ford Motor Co.

"I mean, I don't know," he said. "Who knows? It's not up to me to decide anyway."

His father, Henry Ford II, stepped aside Oct. 1 as chief executive officer but remains chairman.

Edsel, assistant manager of Ford of Australia, was in town for Ford's annual budget dicussions. He said he is more interested in doing his job than worrying about his future.

"I enjoy Australia," he said. "I'm doing a good job there, I enjoy living there. I'm not the prince or whatever they like to call me; I don't consider myself that, and I'm just tired of people asking the same question time after time after time — because I don't have the answer."

Irate Cellist Cancels Show

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cellist Mstislav Rostropovich, furious about having to perform in a large auditorium, abruptly cancelled a recital here Wednesday and flew home to Washington.

ROSTROPOVICH

More than 3,000 ticketholders were told Rostropovich was "indisposed" when they arrived at Miami Beach Theater of the Performing Arts.

The Russian artist was "smiling and joking when he got off the plane" Wednesday afternoon, said Judy Drucker, director of Temple Beth Shalom's great artist series.

But "When he heard the recital was at the Theater of the Performing Arts he blurted, 'I told you last year I would never play there again...Nobody can hear me past the fifth row!'"

Rostropovich was apparently under the impression he would be playing in the 1,500-seat temple sanctuary.

Miss Drucker said the cellist offered to perform two back-to-back concerts in the sanctuary, but it was too late to make the change.

Tourist Hits Jackpot

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A California tourist hit a $1 slot machine for a $295,000 jackpot in what was described as the largest slot playoff in history.

Moreen Singer of Seal Beach, with an initial investment of $40, had been playing the slot at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel for about one hour early Wednesday when she lined up four triple bars for the win, a hotel spokesman said.

The $1 slots at the Las Vegas and Flamingo Hilton Hotels have paid out $2.6 million to 16 jackpot winners in the past 18 months, the spokesman said.

Will The Real Joe...

STOW CREEK TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Joseph W. Veight III, a write-in candidate for Stow Creek Township clerk, got 39 votes in Tuesday's election.

Joseph W. Veight had 29 votes.

Joseph Veight III received seven votes.

Joe Veight III got five votes.

The question is, should all 99 votes for Veight be counted for the same candidate?

Veight, 29, an attorney, said state election law says voters must use a candidates' legal name — in this case, Joseph W. Veight III.

But he said his supporters obviously meant to vote for him — after all, he's the only Veight who campaigned for the job and the only Veight in the whole county.

If a Superior Court judge rules in his favor, he would win the post over Richard D. Gray, 35, who received 53 write-in votes with only two misspellings.

Governor Pays Off On Bet

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday he's not sure who won the bet he had with Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh on the Texas-Oklahoma football game.

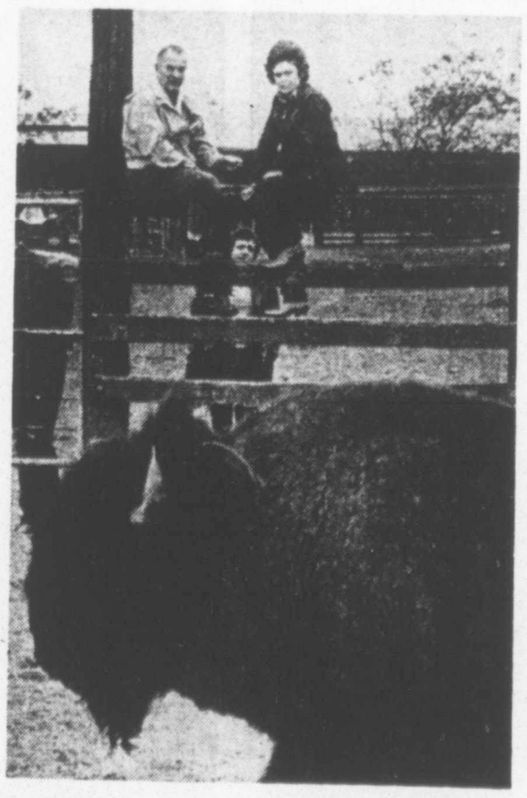

Texas won the game, 16-7, and Thursday Nigh lived up to his end of the bet by sending an 1,800-pound buffalo to Clements. The Texas governor had promised to send a longhorn steer to Nigh if Oklahoma won.

"He doesn't look too good to me," Clements said of the buffalo.

"He's 14 years old and he's mean and ornery and spooky," he said at his weekly news conference.

The governor previously promised the buffalo would be the feature course at a barbecue for the UT players, but now he's not sure.

Iran Group Detained In Kidnap Plot

ST. PAUL (AP) — A Sudanese arrested with four Iranian students was released Saturday but the others were held in an alleged plot to kidnap Gov. Al Quie.

Police Sgt. Thomas Winters said Antoun Stamboulish, 25, was freed Saturday afternoon on orders from the Assistant County Prosecutor Paul Lindholm.

Lindholm said there was "no evidence whatsoever" to suggest Stamboulish was involved in the alleged plot. Stamboulish, along with two of the Iranians, had been invited to the mansion, Lindholm said.

Earlier, a school official had said Stamboulish was active in tryingto ease tensions between Americans and Iranians over the holding of more than 60 hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

The five, all students at Mankato State University, were arrested Friday during a reception for foreign students at the governor's mansion in St. Paul. They were booked at the Ramsey County jail on charges of conspiracy to commit kidnapping, conspiracy to commit assault, and possession of a pistol without a permit.

Authorities refused to release details of the investigation, including how they were tipped off. They would not say whether the alleged plot was thought to be related to the American hostages held in Tehran.

Quie, meanwhile, counseled against hostile reaction, saying, "So often people will say 'All Iranians or all Iranian students are bad.' I suspect most would not want to participate in this kind of activity ... Let's not panic."

The governor, who is normally accompanied by a State Patrol officer, declined to add to his security staff.

Quie called for today as a day of prayer in Minnesota churches for the 60 hostages in Iran. He asked that church bells be rung at 10 a.m.

Besides Stamboulish, authorities identified those arrested Friday as Hormoz Asadi, Feraidonoon Ghodoosi, Mohammad Noori and Hady Heidary, all Iranians.

Stamboulish and several Iranian students — it was not known if those arrested were among them — had met with school administrators Friday morning. They discussed what could be done to soothe strained relations between student factions because of resentment by Americans over the Americans being held hostage in Tehran.

There are about 100 Iranians among the 11,000 students at the school in Mankato, a community about 60 miles southwest of St. Paul.

Kuhn Lee, university director of international student affairs, said Saturday, "I don't know why they took Antoun. He was assisting us. I hope nothing will happen to put our friends in danger."

Richard Fisher, vice president for student affairs, said he had talked with Stamboulish prior to the arrests about protecting Iranians from potential harm. But, he added, it was decided "nothing extraordinary was needed."

Fisher said he hoped the three-day weekend would permit time "for cooler heads to prevail."

However, despite the calls for calm, a member of the student senate, Lee Hillier, said he would try to stage a rally. He predicted that "a lot of disturbances will be coming up. We want to beat them (Iranian students) to the punch, before they come up with a demonstration of their own."

Stamboulish, in an interview Friday with the student newspaper, the Mankato State Reporter, had said: "They (Iranians) already are feeling intimidated. American students are calling them names, telling them to go home, and it's gonna get worse. There are radicals here, too."

Quie, tipped off about about the alleged plot, was at the Capitol late Friday when the arrests were made. Mrs. Quie was kept in an upstairs room of the mansion until the five were apprehended — three inside and two in a car outside.

Polic said the case would be presented to the Ramsey County attorney's office for prosecution, possibly as late as Tuesday.

Tom Jensch, a reporter for the university newspaper, said he rode to St. Paul in the same vehicle as Stamboulish. He said they were friends and that they were together throughout the reception, until the arrest of the Sudanese student inside the mansion.

Two shotguns and a handgun were taken from the suspects' car when the arrests were made, said St. Paul Police Chief Richard Rowan.

House Member Says Rescue Try Useless

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Saturday it's no use hoping for an Entebbe-like military effort to rescue the American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Any attempt to match the Israeli commando raid that rescued about 100 hostages in 1976 at the Entebbe airport in Uganda would probably lead to the deaths of Americans being held by Iranian students, he said.

A few helicopters might make it to the embassy from a carrier in the Persian Gulf or from Turkey, he said, but "none could make the return flight without refueling — which would be more than difficult in Tehran at the moment."

What's more, he said, if a raiding party did get to the embassy grounds and "seized the wrong building first, the hostages would not likely survive."

House Panel Slates 'Expert' Testimony

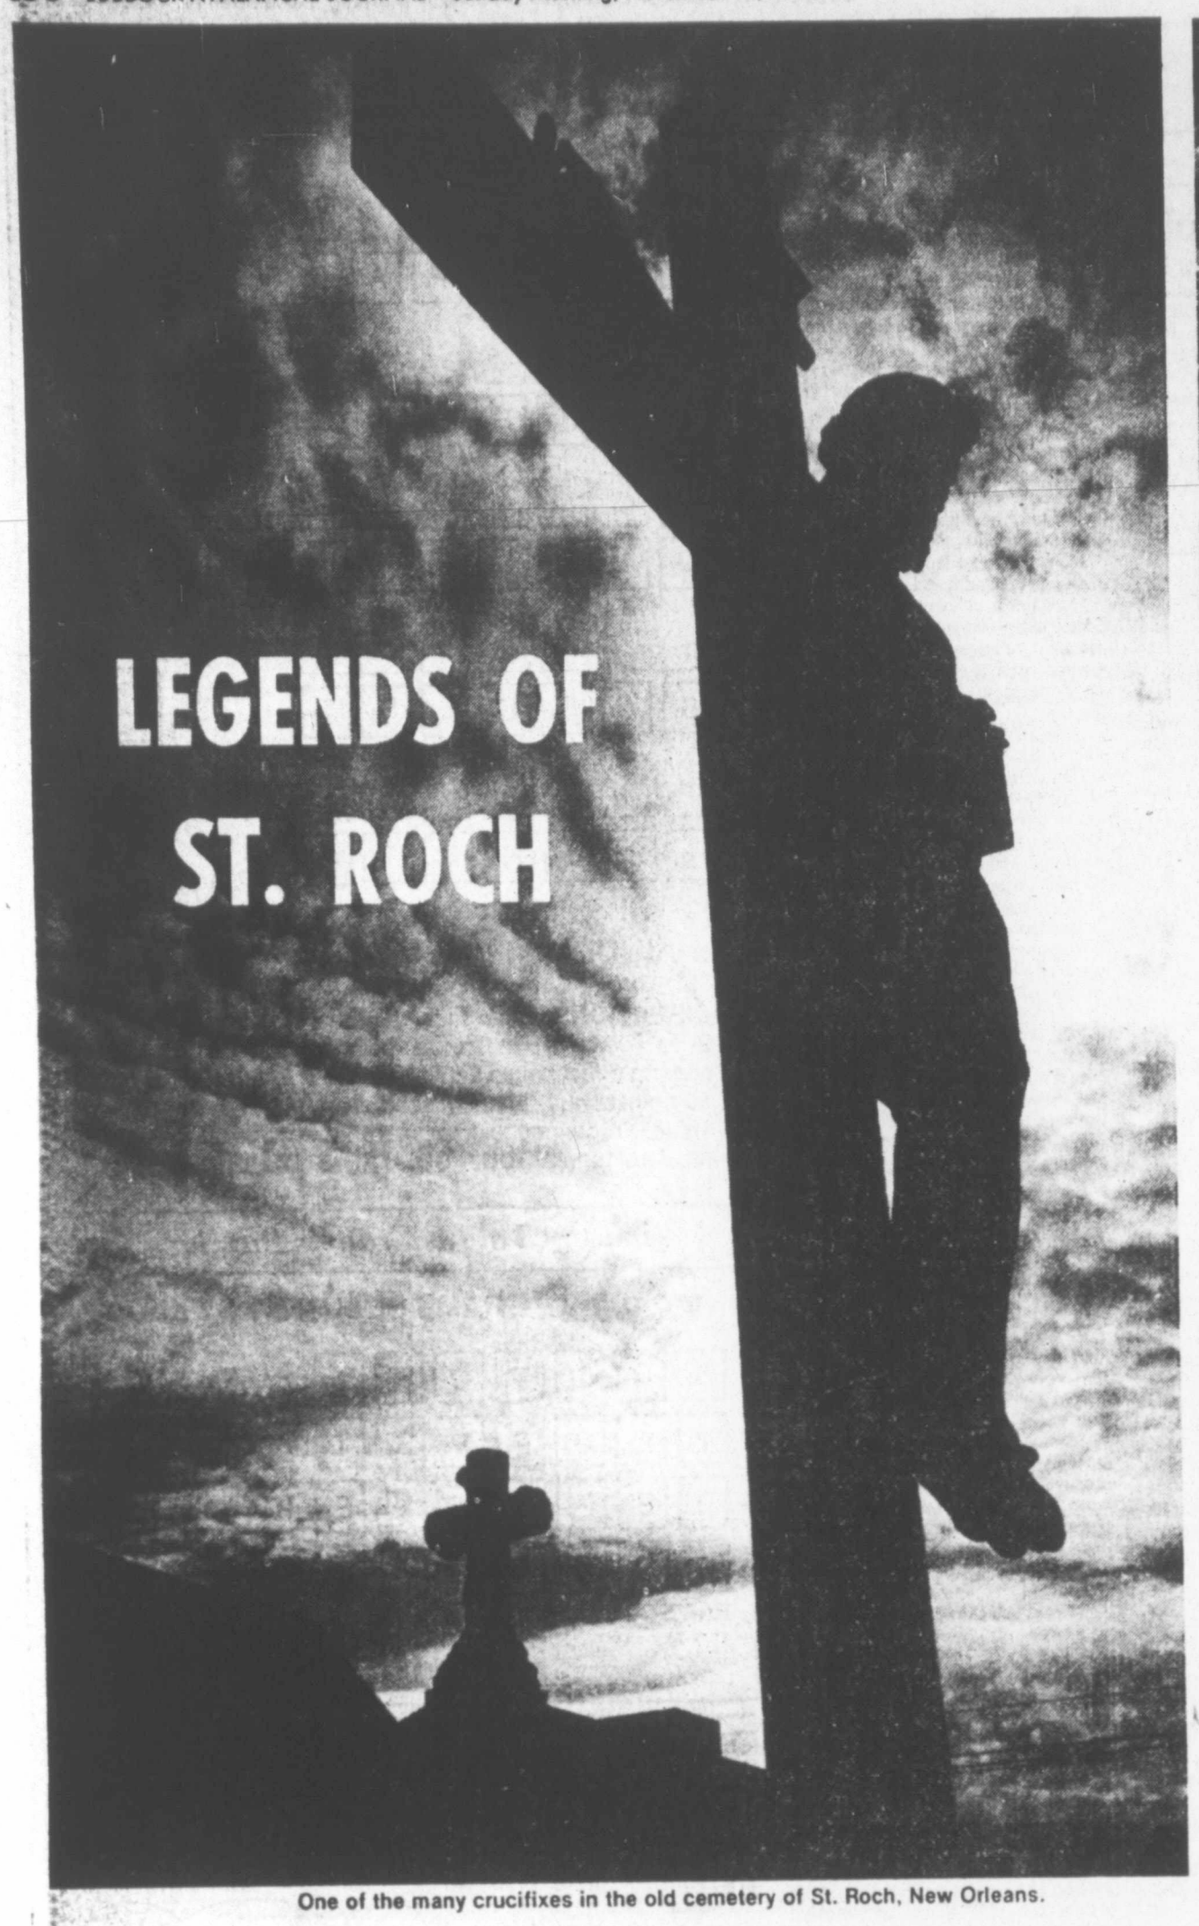

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's hard to question the expertise of a panel of witnesses who will testify this week before the House Select Committee on Aging: They're all at least 100 years old.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., the committee's chairman, said Congress wants to find out "what factors come into play in increased longevity and what these people think of the services available to the elderly."

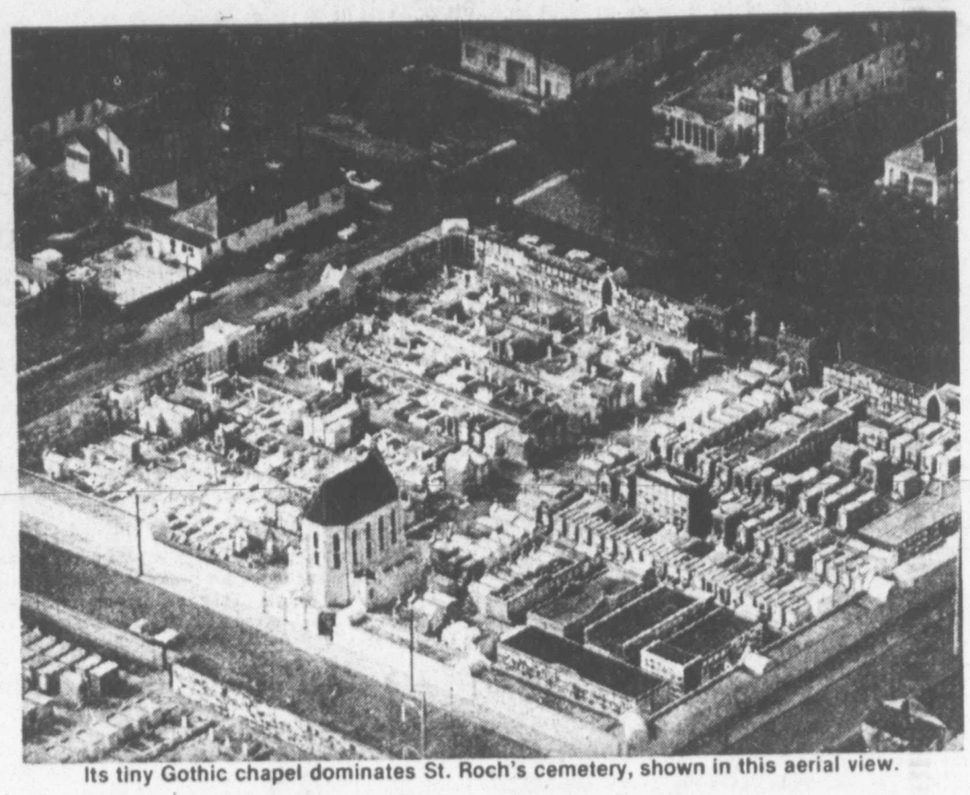

The group of residents from eight states and the District of Columbia will include a 101-year-old practicing physician and will range in age up to a 112-year-old retired fireman, Pepper said.

He said there are about 13,000 Americans at least 100 years old today compared to about 3,000 a decade ago.

LEGENDS OF ST. ROCH

The old cemetery of St. Roch in New Orleans and its tiny Gothic chapel have been the source of many legends since their founding in 1876. One refers to Good Friday: it's said that if a young girl makes a Good Friday pilgrimage to the chapel and searches for a four-leaf clover nearby, she'll find a husband before the year's out.

The legend of St. Roch himself is that he was a holy man of the Middle Ages, devoted to the care of plague sufferers. Next to the altar in his chapel in the New Orleans cemetery is an alcove full of offerings from those of more recent times who believe St. Roch has cured their disabilities or diseases—replicas of human limbs, discarded crutches and braces, left as tokens of gratitude. The floor in this little chamber is paved with small marble plaques inscribed simply with "Thank you," or "Merci."

Cancer Society Sponsors Day Off From Smoking

Thursday has been designated "The Great American Smoke-Out" by the American Cancer Society, which encourages smokers to take a day off from smoking in the hopes that some may be able to stop smoking for another day, or a week, or forever.

Locally, the observance will be promoted in a variety of ways in an effort to remind the public of the dangers of smoking and the benefits of quitting. Local businesses and offices will encourage employees (and their bosses) to refrain from smoking for a day. Tech's Angel Flight will sponsor special activities in the University Center, with a rally, information on stopping smoking, and decals and candy for participants.

As a followup, there will be a smokers' cessation self-help program at Health Sciences Center cafeteria from 7-9 p.m. Thursday. The next three Tuesdays (Nov. 20, 27, Dec. 4) there will be stopping smoking clinics sponsored by the American Cancer Society. To register or for more information call 762-0825.

Even the kids can take part in the Great American Smoke-Out by entering the Cartoon Coloring Contest sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Coloring Contest Winner To Receive $50 Prize

The American Cancer Society is sponsoring a coloring contest for kids to draw attention to "The Great American Smoke-Out" Thursday.

Mayor Dirk West has drawn a "take a day off from smoking" cartoon for the kids to color with crayons, pencils or paints. Best entry will rate a $50 savings bond for a local youngster.

CONTEST RULES: Children must be ten or under to enter. Entries must be postmarked no later than midnight Sunday, Nov. 18. Entry should contain your name, address, parents' names, phone number, and age.

Sisterhood Plans Annual Food-A-Rama Wednesday

Wednesday is the day that Lubbock gourmets have looked forward to all year. Shaareth Israel Sisterhood will hold its 11th annual Food-A-Rama from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. at the Congregation Building at 23rd Street and Avenue Q.

The women of the Sisterhood have been cooking and baking for months to have on hand a variety of foods sure to delight everyone who enjoys ethnic cooking. Because of the popularity of the event, the Food-A-Rama will open an hour earlier this year, according to Mrs. Albert Skibell, coordinator.

The Food-A-Rama will feature foods which have been pre-prepared, carefully packaged, and quick-frozen so that the purchaser can either hurry them home to the freezer or serve them at once.

On the menu will be such delicacies as cabbage rolls, cheese blintzes, potato knishes, noodle kugels, matzo balls, cakes, cookies, pastries, breads and bagels. Other items will include chopped liver, Liptaur cheese, salami, pepper beef, beer sticks, and many new food items.

"We feel this is a real service to the people of Lubbock, as well as our own fund-raising event," said Mrs. Skibell. "Many Lubbock people enjoy ethnic, traditional Jewish foods, which are not available locally."

"Of course foods unsuitable for freezing, such as chopped liver, will be fresh," Mrs. Skibell said. "There will be directions for those dishes which require special handling, re-heating or preparing."

The event will also feature a gift shop with a wide variety of Israeli gift items, the planners announced. There is no admission charge to the Food-A-Rama.

The Sisterhood is the woman's organization of the Congregation, and is associated with the national Temple Sisterhood. The local organization has about 100 members.

Funds realized by the women through the Food-A-Rama are used to support various special projects of the Sisterhood. Among other programs, they send a Lubbock child to leadership camp at Camp Kutz, in Warnick, N. Y., each summer; and another to Greene Family Camp in Brucewood, Texas. The local organization also supports such projects as Meals on Wheels, the Lighthouse for the Blind and the Braille Institute. A special interest at present is providing equipment for baseball for the blind.

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

IF YOU SUFFER FROM "holiday burnout," you may be a candidate for the "Alternatives Celebrations Catalogue," which Mary Vines loaned to me a few weeks ago and I finally got around to reading.

Now in its fourth edition (and even that is not new) the catalogue suggests "life-supporting ways to celebrate Christmas, weddings, funerals, birthdays and other events...leading toward a lifestyle of voluntary simplicity for human justice and world peace."

WHETHER OR NOT YOU give a hang about human justice and world peace, you may find in the catalogue an answer to the question, "why am I so miserable on holidays when everyone is supposed to be happy?"

The book offers the hope that it can be done differently, that your family can run its holidays instead of being run by them, that Christmas does not have to be a hassle.

Whose celebration is it, anyway?

EVEN IF YOU ARE A CONFIRMED TRADITIONALIST, a glance at the news stories after Halloween may have convinced you that holidays have gotten out of hand. If you are still not convinced, take a look at Saturday morning television fare, and the barrage of toy advertisements to which the kids are subjected from now until Christmas.

The book, a large paperbook which sells for five dollars (previous editions, on the same subject but with different materials, may still be available from a friend or the library) is full of articles, suggestions, ideas, lists, bibliographies, recipes and addresses, all designed to "encourage people to celebrate life by practicing voluntary simplicity, consume less, share more, create more cooperative structures, increase involvement in justice and peace projects."

BOB KOCHTIZKY, a Mississippian who put together the books, writes in his introduction: "sometime in the past we lost the ability to create our own gifts, or give ourselves as gifts, or give simply for the sake of others. We have forgotten the original purpose of birthdays as joyful affirmation of a person's life...celebrations have become mechanical and materialistic instead of responsive and life-affirming..."

What the alternatives group is all about is not just simplifying life and returning a spirit of creativity and individuality to our clebrations; they are also interested in diverting some of the money we spend on gifts and other holiday trinkets to people who are needy and the organizations that are trying to help. In the process they would also like to help save the earth, preserve natural resources, and reduce waste and pollution.

The suggestions they offer should interest any family caught in the holiday crunch — mamas exhausted trying to live up to their own and others' expectations, papas practicing the post-Christmas credit scramble. Surely lots of people shre the feeling, "there is something wrong with the way we do this"; what they need is the courage to determine to do things differently.

BACKERS OF THE BOOK and the movement are, to a large extent, church people, and many of the suggestions come from religious families or churches who are interested in trying to build a more responsible, and thus more moral, lifestyle. One of the suggestions offered, for instance, is that congregations, instead of sending cards to each other, post a giant card with all their signatures, and donate the money saved to a worthy cause.

Craft fairs are another suggestion used by church organizations to make their own gifts and sell gifts made by people in depressed areas. Food cooperatives are also discussed.

"A CELEBRATION," the book states, "should have measures of seriousness and laughter, of strong commitment and sheer fun. It should be a time of acting out the high moments of meaning in life, a time to affirm who we really are and what we value. Celebrations are a time to give love and to give of ourselves."

The alternatives offered by the catalogue emphasize doing away with wasteful, meaningless customs and substituting individual, creative ones, such as giving a gift of your time to your child instead of a toy. The Christmas checklist includes drastically reducing spending, making gifts, learning how to give yourself, sponsoring a craft fair, shifting gift-buying to self-help craft groups, giving alternative gift certificates, organizing an alternative Christmas or Hanukkah in your congregation; establishing a family tradition of giving "unspent" income to hunger and human welfare projects; creating new family traditions which are person-oriented.

ONE FAMILY WRITE THAT SINCE 1972 it had been "Hello, St. Nicholas; good-bye Santa Claus," at their house. They wrote letters to friends and relatives early in December, explaining that instead of exchanging cards and gifts they would use the money for other purposes. They talked about St. Nicholas rather than Santa. They gave five percent of their December income to a world hunger project. For this family, the results were a relief from the Chrjstmas rush, a new rationale for giving, a return to concentration on Jesus. "Santa Claus hasn't come to our house for five years," Kate Sherer wrote. "We haven't missed him a bit."

ALTERNATIVES is a non-profit organization founded in 1973 to work for alternative celebrations, lifestyles and community institutions in support of a just and peaceful world community. Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: A year ago I was a poor student, shy, lonely, friendless, unhappy and I never smiled. I wrote to you, and you gave me the best advice I ever received. Here it is:

"The key to being popular with both sexes is: Be kind. Be honest. Be tactful. If you can't be beautiful (or handsome), be well-groomed, tastefully attired, trim of figure and KEEP A SMILE ON YOUR FACE!

"Be clean in body and mind. If you're not a 'brain,' try harder. If you're not a great athlete, you can be a good sport. Try to be a standout in something. If you can't dance or sing, learn to play an instrument. Think for yourself, but respect the rules. Be generous with kind words and affection age gestures, but save the heavy artillery for later. You'll be glad you did. If you need help, ask God. If you don't need anything, thank God.

LOVE,
ABBY

I followed your advice step by step, and kept it handy when I felt low. I am now president of the sophomore class, and I play the guitar. Smiling comes naturally to me, and I have a boyfriend who is kind and respectable. My grades are better, and I have more friends now than I ever dreamed I'd have.

Abby, you're not the only one who helped me. God helped me. He answered my prayers.

CAROL

DEAR ABBY: After reading your column on HOW TO DRIVE A SALESPERSON CRAZY, I felt compelled to give the customer's side of it:

HOW TO MAKE A CUSTOMER'S DAY

• If a customer approaches, run and hide in the back room.

• Continue to chat with other salespersons about what you did last night.

• Never smile. A deadpan stare (or frown) will discourage customers from bothering you.

• Never offer assistance. Wait for the customer to ask for help.

• Never serve customers in the order they enter the shop. Wait on whoever has the nerve to elbow their way up to the front.

• Don't stop stocking and taking inventory to serve customers. The fact that their purchases pay your salary is immaterial.

• Forget the motto, "The customer is always right." They are always WRONG, so don't let them put anything over on you.

• Chew gum, eat candy or sneak a smoke while you're on the job. As long as your boss doesn't see you, it's OK.

• If a teenager (or someone who's not very well dressed) wants to be waited on, either ignore them or don't waste much time with them. They're probably "just looking" anyway.

• If you do all the above, the customer will surely shop somewhere else and you won't be bothered writing up any sales.

SORE AT SALESPEOPLE

DEAR ABBY: You said, "The younger man should apologize to the older man" if they have had a falling out and neither wants to make the first move.

Abby, if a person is wrong, no matter what his age, he should apologize. Why should a person have to give in just because he is younger?

I think respect should be earned, not automatically given to people just because they've been breathing for a long time.

YOUNG BUT STILL LEARNING

DEAR YOUNG: If you honestly feel that age doesn't entitle one to any special consideration (and a modicum of respect), you still have much to learn.

• • •

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Church To Sponsor 'Remarriage' Seminar

The seminar, "The Challenge of New Beginnings," is open to all interested persons but especially for those who have recently entered their second (or subsequent) marriage, and persons who work with such people in pastoral or counseling situations.

It will begin with registration at 8:30 a.m., and feature speakers and resource persons from several areas of interest which concern the recently remarried.

Dot Thompson, minister of education and Jerry Wilkinson, seminar chairman, said in announcing the seminar:

"Statistics gathered in Lubbock County for 1978 indicate that almost half of the marriage licenses issued during that year involved a couple in which one or both partners had been previously married. The trend for 1979 seems to be the same.

"Remarriage, following divorce or the death of a mate, includes some unique challenges: how do you blend families? how do you combine finances? how do you accommodate your extended families? how do you find the balance between independence and dependence that spells interdependence?"

The seminar is designed to help couples find the answers to these and other questions which may trouble them in their new relationship.

Among the resource persons are: Joe Ayres, Texas Commerce Bank; Byrnie Bass, attorney; Dr. Hardy Clemons, senior pastor; Gene and Ed Crow; Lee Pennington, certified financial planner; Bob Powell, marriage counselor; Lane Powell, doctoral student in family studies at Texas Tech University, and Gary West, doctoral student in pastoral ministry at Texas Christian University.

They will lead discussions of such subjects as blending families, living out the role of step-parenting, dealing with former spouses; marriage without surrender, learning to risk honestly, loopholes and dollar signs, financial planning, legal realities, using trusts and insurance effectively, building new friendships as a couple; holding on and letting go of old friendships and maintaining spaces in togetherness.

The registration fee will include a barbecue luncheon; child care is also available to those needing it (parents should bring a sack lunch for each child). Advance registration is $12.50 per couple; registration at the door will be $15 (less $3 if only one person can attend.)

Proclamation Honors Operating Room Nurses

Mayor Dirk West has proclaimed Wednesday as Operating Room Nurses Day in Lubbock. The proclamation will honor 56 members of the local Association of Operating Room Nurses and will be a part of a nationwide recognition of the role OR nurses play in patient care.

Of all the masked faces hovering over the patient during surgery, the operating room nurse has a special role. The operating room nurse speaks for the patient when he or she cannot speak for himself.

Heading the OR team is the registered nurse. When the patient arrives in surgery, the nurse is there to greet him and provide emotional support as he is anesthetized. Then the OR nurse manages the patient's nursing care during surgery, as the surgeon works closely over the incision. The nurse anticipates needs of the other team members and helps in this way to avoid delays in the surgical procedure.

The OR nurse guards the sterile environment. The nurse knows the patient's health history and special needs. If the surgical procedure is being done with local anesthesiza, the ORN may monitor vital signs — blood pressure, heart rate and breathing.

Surgery doesn't really begin and end in the operating room. Before surgery, patients may be fearful and distraught. Afterwards, they need to know how to participate in their own recovery.

Increasingly, registered nurses are coming out of the operating room to meet with patients before and after their operations. They explain what the operating room will be like and how the patient will be cared for. After surgery, the OR nurse may visit patients to see how they are doing and to evaluate nursing care given in the operating room.

"Operating Room Nurse Day" is sponsored by AORN, a professional specialty nursing organization with more than 28,000 members nationally. Brandy Conley is president of the local chapter of AORN.

City Salons Provide Tanning Alternative

By LYNN HOHERTZ
Family News Staff

Self-awareness seems to be the key to success today, with emphasis placed on diet, exercise and a healthful glowing appearance.

But how does one glow during the winter? The answer to that question has skyrocketed the sun tanning industry into the limelight across the nation — including Lubbock, where two such establishments have opened.

The process is based on a system of small lighted booths where the body is exposed to midrange ultraviolet light. According to Gary Evans and Kay Mitchell, managers of Sum Tan and Sundance, respectively, a tan is caused by a dark brown pigment known as melanin produced by melanocyte cells in the base layer of the skin. When exposed to the ultraviolet rays, the melanin is activated and combines with protein cells that rise to the skin's surface producing a tan.

"This type of fluorescent light was developed by Westinghouse during World War II for Veterans' Hospitals for certain healing effects," Evans said, "however our purpose is strictly cosmetic."

When you enter a salon, a technician assesses your skin type to determine the amount of exposure. You may be required to fill out a questionaire and if, for example, you plan to sunbathe nude, exposure will be made more gradual. (It should be noted that small children and pregnant women may be refused.)

"We try to individualize each schedule as much as possible," Evans said.

You will then enter the private booth, disrobe (or change into a bathing suit), pull on the protective eye goggles and stand there for the alloted time.

"Each minute in the booth is equivalent to an hour's sun," said Mrs. Mitchell. The average person will begin with from one-and-a-half to two minutes. The tanning time is increased slowly at each subsequent visit. The maximum time allowed for one visit is 15 minutes.

"During the first week of tanning appointments are made for every other day," Evans explained, "as it takes 48 hours for the effects to show up. After one or two trips, one should see a slight redness. After five or six trips, the skin should noticeably turn darker. It may take 12 to 15 trips for a 'total' tan," he said. Like regular tanning, however, ultraviolet tans start fading in about three weeks and the rest of the visits are used to maintain that healthy glow. Most of the tanning packages are sold in 20 visit plans with prices $35 or $40.

Another feature which may attract one to the salon is that little peeling takes place; however, Evans cautions that some dry skin may occur in which he recommends the use of moisturizing cream following a session. "Dry skin also tends to slow down the tanning process," he added.

Although these tanning salons offer an alternative for people who long for golden skin and have little time for sunbathing, they are not without risks.

Dr. Joe Cannon, assistant professor of the Department of Dermatology at Texas Tech School of Medicine, cautions that the end results are much the same as those from the sun's rays.

"I think it should be used carefully," he said, "especially for people with fair complexions and those who tend to freckle as there is the risk of common skin cancers and premature aging of the skin."

He especially urges those who have a history of skin cancers in their families to avoid excessive exposure.

So now, as in the past, the choice of tanning is an individual one.

CHILDREN'S CONCERT SCHEDULED — The first 1979-80 Children's Concert of the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra will be presented at 9:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Thursday in the Municipal Auditorium. Lubbockites Show Support Of Libraries

Lubbock City-County Library has invited Lubbockites to join people across the nation and "be with a book for a day" Thursday.

The day marks the beginning of the first White House Conference on Libraries and Information Services called by President Carter and Congress. From Thursday through Nov. 20, delegates representing every state will meet in Washington D. C. to discuss what people want from their libraries and to formulate plans for library improvement.

Lubbock has a special interest in the conference because a local woman, Betty Anderson, has been chosen to participate and serve as vice-president of the Texas delgation.

To show local support for libraries, Mayor Dirk West will proclaim Thursday the day to "be with a book for a day" in Lubbock. Everyone is encouraged to go by one of the Lubbock City-County Libraries before then to check out a favorite book and carry it to work or school that day. Bookmarkers and stickers will also be distributed and posters placed throughout the city.

Mrs. Anderson will be among 570 delegates, 19 of them Texans, attending the Washington conference this week. To encourage citizen input for the conference at the grassroots level, "town hall" meetings were held in almost every community throughout the country last fall. At these meetings, people discussed what libraries meant to them, and what services they wanted from libraries now and in the future, and made suggestions for improving their local libraries.

Following the local meetings, statewide pre-White House conferences were held. Delegates from Texas communities met in Austin last winter. Issues such as the needs of Mexican-American library patrons, the importance of sharing materials among libraries and sources of funding for libraries were found to be important to Texas library users.

Delegates to the White House Conference were chosen from community representatives at the state meeting. Two-thirds of the official delegates are citizens not involved in library professions while the remaining one-third is composed of people with various library or information specialties. The ratio further ensures that the Conference will be directed to the wants and needs of the library patron.

One of the main topics the Conference will discuss is how libraries can make information about new and innovative services available and what role the government should play in providing and paying for these services.

Another important issue delegates will consider is the proposed National Library Act, introduced by Senators Jacob K. Javits and Edward M. Kennedy. This bill would establish a National Library Agency, make more money available for library construction and operations, strengthen interlibrary loan and fund special library programs.

Since the bill is not in its final form, comments and suggestions for people concerned about libraries are being sought. The sponsors have agreed to consider all recommendations made by delegates to the White House Conference.

As mandated by Congress, the primary goal of the White House Conference is "...to develop recommendations for the further improvement of the Nation's libraries and information centers and their use by the public." The pre-White House Conferences have enabled delegates to find out how their fellow citizens think this goal should be accomplished and at the same time, public understanding of library services has increased.

Library News

The Lubbock City-County Library will sponsor a yoga demonstration and lecture featuring Josephine Houghton and J. R. Walker of the YWCA at 4 p.m. Thursday in the Community Room of the library, 1306 9th St.

Admission is free and open to the public. For more information call Joseph T. Page, 762-6411, ext. 2834.

Magazine Article Informs Consumers On Food Additives

WASHINGTON (Special) — When you're enjoying a meal, you probably don't stop to think about the additives that may be in your food. But, they're everywhere — for instance, take a look at a lunch of a sandwich, instant soup, gelatin and a cola drink.

It's full of additives — and what these additives are as well as many others are spelled out in a new free reprint from the FDA magazine, the "FDA Consumer." For your free copy of Food Additives, write Consumer Information Center, Dept. 685 G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Now then, back to that lunch. The bread is fortified with vitamins and an additive keeps it fresh. The margarine has been colored pale yellow. If you use salad dressing, it's made with emulsifiers to keep it from separating. The luncheon meat may contain nitrites. There's an additive in the soup to keep it from becoming rancid. And, the gelatine contains food coloring and artificial flavoring. Finally, if you take away the coloring, flavoring, sweeteners and artificial carbonation from your favorite cola, what do you have? Just plain water.

FDA says that additives are generally used to maintain or improve nutritional value, to retard spoilage or for appearances. Many foods are fortified with vitamins and minerals that may have been lost or destroyed in processing. And, preservatives such as sodium nitrates and nitrites protect cured meats, fish and poultry from contamination.

To keep a watchful eye on the additives in your diet, read the labels on the food you buy. Most foods will include a list of ingredients.

If you have a question, write to or contact the consumer affairs office of the Food and Drug Administration, listed in the telephone book under the U.S. Government or write to the manfacturer.

As an informed consumer, you can exercise your right to buy or not to buy. You might chose to purchase bread containing sodium propionate if you know this additive prevents mold.

Chili Con Carne Remains Southwest Favorite

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

The true origin of the southwestern favorite — chili con carne — is hidden deeply in the shadows of time. But it is known that in the 1800's, Texas adventurers going to California's gold fields pounded dried beef, fat, peppers and salt into brick forms and later boiled the concentrate in pots along the trail.

For several decades, chili was only a "poor people's dish." However, in the late 1800's, chili making became a commercial venture, and the dish was served at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893.

Sounds routine, doesn't it? Well, it wasn't, because word soon got around that chili might not be a healthy substance to put in one's stomach. And, when parents heard this, they forbade their children to eat chili at the fair. Newspapers editorialized, and even ministers preached against it!

The furor died down, especially with the closing of the fair, but by that time the taste buds of devotees were so titillated that chili has been around and gaining in popularity ever since.

Of course, there is no doubt that "the bowl of red" grew in status when then President Lyndon B. Johnson and his wife, Ladybird, began serving chili to visiting dignitaries at the Johnson's Pedernales ranch. In fact, you weren't "in" if you hadn't partaken there.

Then, too, Frank Tolbert (writer and expert on the Southwest) sharpened the appetites of chili-lovers everywhere when he wrote an article entitled "A Bowl of Fire Called Chili" for a national magazine. Tolbert says that after publication he received 29,000 letters from all over the world, most relating nostalgic experiences with chili.

Also, as most people know, Tolbert went on to become one of the founders of the Chili Appreciation Society, International; and later wrote the classic book, "A Bowl of Red."

What are the usual ingredients of "real" Texas-style chili: ground beef or other meat, oregano, cumin seeds, garlic, tomatoes, onions; and don't forget the most important ingredient — the chili peppers. Without the latter, you wouldn't have chili.

Okay, you say, but what makes chilies hot? It's something called "capsaicin" that is found in the seeds and of ribs of chili peppers. You want more chili trivia? Okay: a smaller pepper is hotter than larger ones; chilies are rich in Vitamins A and C (though "C" is lost when peppers are dried); and the heat of the chilies is never lost and high flavor corresponds with high color.

Also for the uninitiated: To prepare peppers, wash pods and remove stems and seeds. Boil in water until the skins can be easily removed (approximately a half-hour). Drain and chop the pods. (If you ever touch your eyes or have cuts on your hands, you'll know the next time what not to do.)

About the now-renown "chili cook-offs," one has to admit these contests have further intrigued the minds and stomachs of chili-lovers everywhere. But rather than to get into the controversy of whether the events or naughty or nice, it is a well-known fact that some highly imaginative recipes have come from cook-offs.

Be that as it may, two illustrious cooks have given us permission to use their favorite recipes. So, here are the following:

ROSALYN CARTER'S FAVORITE CHILI

1 lb. round steak,
cut in bite-sized cubes
3 tbsps. corn oil

Add the following:
1 4-oz. can green chiles, chopped
1 8-oz. can tomato paste
1 small onion, chopped
1½ cups water
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
½ tsp. cumin
½ tsp. oregano
Approximately ¼ tsp. pepper
½ tbsp. sugar
1½ tbsp. flour
1½ tsp. salt
2 tbsps. chili powder
Simmer in heavy pot.

From The Governor's Mansion in Austin, Mrs. William P. (Rita) Clements writes:

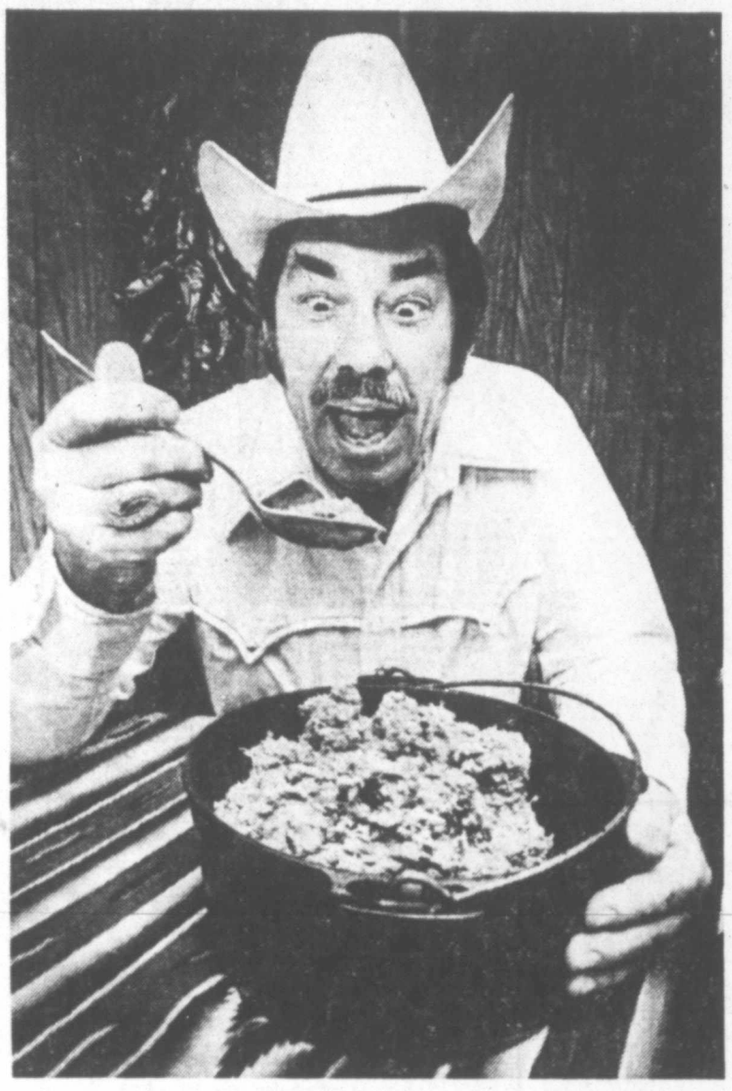

"Thank you so much for your letter requesting my recipe for 'Chili'. For your article I am enclosing my daughter, Barbara's recipe that is always enjoyed by the family."

BARBARA'S CHILI

4 lbs. chili meat
30-oz. can of tomato sauce
1 cup water
1 tsp. red pepper sauce
3 tbsps. chili powder
1 tbsp. comino (cumin)
2 chopped onions
Garlic to taste
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. cayenne pepper
4 red peppers
Dash of Worchestershire

Add tomato sauce and water to meat, then add all other ingredients. Simmer all ingredients for one hour and fifteen minutes. Add thickening of 2 tablespoons flour and water, and simmer an additional 30 minutes.

In 1977, a bill was introduced and was finally passed in the Texas legislature designating chili as the official state dish of Texas. So, chili is your dish, too!

Cost Of Cranberries Declines Slightly

There'll be plenty of cranberries this month, more than enough for all your needs, says USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. Supplies reach their peak in November — just in time for the holiday season.

As of Oct. 31, at wholesale fruit markets in Dallas and Denver, cartons of 24 one-pound bags of cranberries sold between $10.50-11, with prices expected to decline with the seasonal increase in supplies.

USDA estimates that this year's crop will be one percent larger than last year and about 18 percent more than the 1977 crop. In 1978, 123 thousand tons were produced and slightly more than 20 thousand tons were consumed fresh.

Keep them on hand for holiday nibblers. They contain just enough fat to make them filling and are good sources of protein.

There'll be record-large crops of almonds, peanuts and pecans this year, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Your pecan pie lovers should be easy to satisfy this year. Pecan production in the Southwest more than doubled last year's crop. Coupled with large cold storage carry-over stocks, the supply picture for pecans looks very good, reports USDA.

The "almondine" of gourmet tables, the accent of Epicurean delights — rich cakes and tarts and delicate pastries — the almond is breaking supply records this year, too. The crop is over 93 percent larger than last year, quite an adequate offering.

Roasted or toasted, salted or blanched peanuts pack protein power in every diet. Production will rise only three percent, but supplies will be plentiful or more than enough for all your needs.

Walnuts — those tasty nuggets that stud brownies, fudge, fruit cakes and a host of holiday dainties — will also be in good supply. The crop is expected to be 38 percent larger than last year.

To compare the cost of shelled versus unshelled nuts, remember as a good rule of thumb, two pounds of unshelled tree nuts make one pound (three to four cups) of nutmeats. If the cost of two pounds of nuts in the shell equals the price of one pound of shelled nuts, they are equal in cost. If the shelled nuts cost more, the difference is what you pay for shelling.

People Collect Free Firewood

CHICAGO (UPI) — People who live near public forests can often get free firewood. Many state and national forests allow collecting and cutting of downed or marked wood free or at a nominal cost, says the Fireplace Institute a trade association representing manufactuers.

To locate a source near you, the institute suggests contacting a district forest ranger station or forest supervisor's office to see if a permit is needed.

Other contacts include the local agency that oversees public lands in your area; the county cooperative extension office; construction sites, dumps, landfills, farmers and local crews from telephone and cable TV companies that clear trees from roadsides.

Our professional salon can offer you the experienced, well-trained, and talented cosmetologists you want and deserve. These professionals are Shirley Andrews, George Bethel, Jana Sharpley, and Belinda Walton. George comes to us after three years of experience from Borger. Upon graudating with honors from Jessie Lee's, he immediately began to work and soon became owner of his own salon. We are delighted that George has joined our team.

Jessie Lee and the other stylists are available at different times during the week, including after 5:00 P.M. on some days. Call for these available times.

Services at Jessie Lee's Hair Design are priced in two separate catagories: the student prices and the professional prices. These student prices for all services are 1/2 that of the professional services. For example, student service perms range from $12 to $25.00 (depending upon the number of additives). This same service would be $50.00 in the salon. Fresh additives are added to add the valuable essential fatty acids to keep the hair pliable and shiny.

We have another special price for perms given only during the Perm Training Class on Monday and Fridays at 1:00 P.M. These perms will cost from $6.00 to $14.00 for the same quality perm given to you in the salon or school. This price includes only the perm, not the set and style. Your finished set would need to be done in the Senior or Advanced Senior Department, unless you desire for your hair to dry naturally without styling.

The perm from the Senior and Advanced Senior Departments includes the finished hair style. Because quality is our goal, our students do not cut corners in perms. The perm prodedure and results are checked continually by the instructors.

Call 792-6311 for an appointment with our professional or our student services for the top quality style, cut, color, and perm.

ASK Offers Hope For Female Alcoholics

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

It is late evening; Joanne sits alone in her family room, half-watching the television set. Her children are in bed asleep. Her husband is out of town again; he is a salesman and spends every other week on the road.

Joanne is drinking. Before this long night is over, she will have finished the bottle and drunk herself into a stupor. It is a familiar pattern, one she has repeated many times before and is beginning to recognize.

Joanne thinks about her sleeping children, wondering if she will be awake and well enough in the morning to deliver them to school on time. This afternoon, when she picked them up, she had already had a few drinks, and her little girl had given her that look that Joanne has come to recognize.

It is a look that tears Joanne apart. Though she is careful not to drink again during dinner and the children's baths, she can hardly wait for them to get to bed.

WARM UP TO WINTER — Snuggle up in this cozy coat that looks like raccoon from Russel Taylor. In a luxurious pile fabric of modacrylic and acrylic, it goes anywhere, day or night. Lightweight and practical, the long-length coat is double-breasted and has a plush shawl collar.

Joanne knows she has a drinking problem, and she is pretty sure how this evening will end. It is, perhaps, that knowledge that makes this evening different, or perhaps it is the look on her little girl's face that gives her the impetus to go into the kitchen and pick up the telephone.

"Hello," Joanne says. "I...need to talk to someone. I drink. I need to talk to a woman."

Within a few minutes, her call is returned. The voice on the other end of the line is female, friendly, unaccusing. The caller is, she tells Joanne, a recovering alcoholic herself; she knows how it is with Joanne. She does not accuse Joanne of being a worthless person; she does not pass judgement. At the end of the conversation, the woman asks her, "Do you think you can get through the night without drinking any more?"

"I think so," Joanne says.

It is, Joanne says later, a foolish question and perhaps a foolish answer. And yet it had made all the difference in her life. From that day, she became a recovering alcoholic. She knew that someone understood where she was, that someone cared about her, and that there was hope for her life. Those factors made it possible for her to begin her long battle against her drinking problem.

Until recently, Joanne's midnight call might have gone unanswered in Lubbock. And, as Joanne herself says, that might have meant an opportunity lost that would not come again for months.

"There is that psychological moment," she says "and if you don't get a response then, you may not get the courage to try again for a long time."

"Luckly, I lived in a town that had a 24-hour service," she says. "If I had lived in Lubbock, I would not have found anyone to talk to."

Now, a group of Lubbock women, all recovering alcoholics, have established a service for other women like themselves. Through CONTACT LUBBOCK and the Lubbock Council on Alcoholism, they have begun Alcoholic Services Knocks for Women, a 24-hour information disemination program. Volunteers are available at all hours to answer questions and offer counsel and help on alcoholism. They will follow up on all calls (which are, of course, confidential) and help the person in need find the community or private agency which can help them with their problem.

ASK also provides help to the families of alcoholics. If a woman's problem is a drinking husband, volunteers will put her in touch with Al-Anon. If the person needs moral support to, for instance, attend an AA meeting for the first time, her new friend will go with her. Above all she will offer friendly, non-judgemental support in helping the female alcoholic deal with her problems.

Women alcoholics, researchers are beginning to note, are different from, and require different treatment than, male alcoholics. For women, as Joanne points out, the problem is often associated with loneliness and isolation. Because there is greater stigma attached to female than male alcoholism, the female is more apt to be a "closet drinker," to drink behind closed draperies, in her own home. Her family, which shares the community's judgment of the female alcoholic, will go to great lengths to protect her. As her isolation increases, and her feelings of guilt, worthlessness, hopelessness increase, so does her drinking problem.

Where alcoholism treatment programs exist, they tend to be geared toward the needs of men, rather than of women. Many of the counselors available are also male. There is no halfway house or similar live-in facility for women in Lubbock; and it is the hope of the ASK volunteers that the group can work toward such a service for women.

There is a real psychological advantage to having women work with the female alcoholics. Not only is this good for the caller, who is likely to respond more openly to another woman, (some of the research on female alcoholics indicates that at least part of their problem may be with men, and the way they relate to them) but it serves a real purpose for the woman volunteers.

"This gives us a real sense of purpose, a sense of being needed," Joanne says. "The more we are able to help other women, the weller we become. It is part of our own rehabilitation, too."

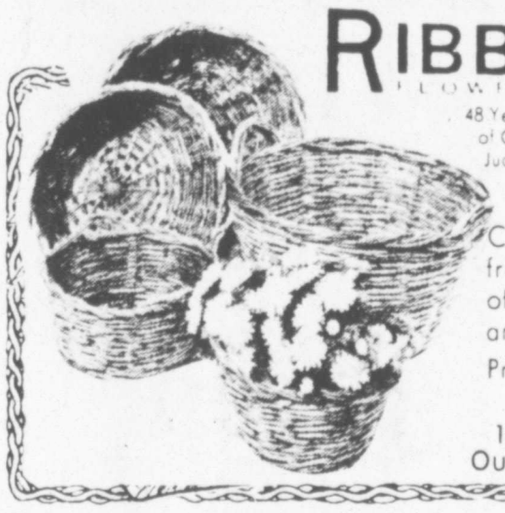

For women like Joanne — and it is likely that there are many such women in the Lubbock area — the new ASK for Women program offers a real hope of battling the disease of alcoholism.

LEAVING HOSPITAL — Harvey and Janie Boulware carry out boxes of toys that daughter Rachel received during her long stay in St. Mary's Hospital. Rachel received injuries in a July accident in Snyder but recovered remarkably after going through long hours of therapy. (Staff Photo by Linn Scherwitz)

Snyder Girl Makes Remarkable Recovery

By JACQUE HUTCHINS
Family News Staff

It was a rainy day in Snyder on July 17. Harvey Boulware was on his way to a staff meeting when a co-worker looked out the window and noticed an accident a few blocks down the street. What the co-worker saw were two pick-ups that had collided head-on. What Boulware saw was that one of them resembled his own pickup.

Boulware ran out the door and down the street. "I nearly tore the walls down trying to get out," he said. "I kept hoping that it wasn't my pickup." But as he grew closer, he realized that it was his pickup.

When he got there they were putting his little girl, Rachel, in the ambulance. "It was the most horrible feeling. I hope nobody has to ever go through it," he said. He later found out she had received a serious head injury and broken jaw from being thrust to the floorboard on impact.

Because of the serious nature of her injuries, she had to be transferred to the Methodist Hospital in Lubbock. Boulware and his wife, Janie, accompanied Rachel in the ambulance to the hospital. "They said they doubted that she would ever make it outside of town," Boulware said. But that strong little six-year-old did make it and is now at home again after spending almost four months in the hospital.

Rachel went through a lot during that long stay in the hospital. She was in a coma for 66 days. Her mother stayed faithfully by her side the whole time and her father visited on weekends. "We did a lot of praying," Boulware said. There wasn't much else they could do until Rachel regained consciousness.

Boulware explained that Rachel couldn't remember much about the accident when she woke up. In fact she didn't even know her mother and father. "The doctors said she might not know us, she might never know us," Boulware said. "But within about a week she began to recognize us."

When she woke up she wanted to know what had happened, why she was here and why she couldn't open her hands or move her legs," he said.

After Rachel regained consciousness she was moved to St. Mary's Hospital to begin therapy. Donna Ethridge, head nurse for the rehabilitation unit at St. Mary's, said Rachel's age was a big factor in her waking up and her remarkable recovery. "When children come out of a coma, they improve with leaps and bounds. Rachel is in a period of growth and transition anyway, so she healed quickly," the nurse said.

"Rachel has made some good friends here. She is the first youngster we've had, we've never had any this young before. She is certainly an inspiration to us all."

When Rachel became strong enough, she had to learn to eat, walk and talk all over again. The injury to her head had caused her to develop problems in these areas. Rachel did not undergo any actual brain surgery, but she did have several operations that resulted in her regaining her motor skills again.

Judy Janson, Rachel's occupational therapist, worked with Rachel daily. "Rachel couldn't button her blouses or reach down to pull up her pants because of the problems with hand coordination," she said. But in time Rachel was learning to pick up beans from a box on the therapy room table and practice her cognitive skills by stringing beads.

Rachel had to wear hand splints to keep her hands stretched out. Her one to two hours of therapy each day helped her to loosen up the muscles in her hand. "At first Rachel wanted people to do everything for her, but this didn't last because she realized that she could do it herself," said Miss Janson. As Rachel improved, her therapy became more fun to her. "She really loved pecking out her name on the typewriter. And she got involved with finger painting and she's progressed to riding a bicycle with training wheels," Miss Janson said.

Although Rachel has progressed remarkably, she will have to continue her therapy at home until she has total use of her motor skills. For the Boulware's, it will be a family effort to mold Rachel into that active six-year-old she was before. "We just want to be a family again, to enjoy life like it was before," Rachel's father said. "I hope someday Jane and I can repay all the kindness that people expressed."

OLD DECALS

Old decals can be removed easily by simply painting them with several coats of white vinegar. Give the vinegar time to soak in. After several minutes the decals should wash off easily.

Onion Combinations Make Zesty Dishes

DALLAS (Special) — You'll need some zesty vegetable dishes to serve at Thanksgiving and onions provide a delicious side dish for roast chicken, turkey or ham. Diet watchers will be happy to have at least one low-calorie dish that is high in nutrition — onions. One raw onion 2½ inches in diameter provides only 40 calories and offers good amounts of potassium, calcium and phosphorus.

A plentiful supply of onions will be featured in local food markets, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Plan to take advantage of the availability of this versatile vegetable in such dishes as Casserole Baked Onions and Sour Cream Onions.

CASSEROLE BAKED ONIONS
6 med. yellow onions
½ cup white vermouth or dry sherry
3 tbsps. butter
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. fresh ground black pepper

Peel and slice the onions thin. Butter an ovenproof casserole with one tablespoon of the butter. Layer in the onions, dotting with the remaining 2 tablespoons of butter as you go along. Sprinkle on salt and pepper, pour on the wine and cover tightly. Bake 1 hour at 325 degrees.

SOUR CREAM ONIONS
16 small sweet white onions
1 cup dairy sour cream
Salt and pepper to taste
Dash of nutmeg

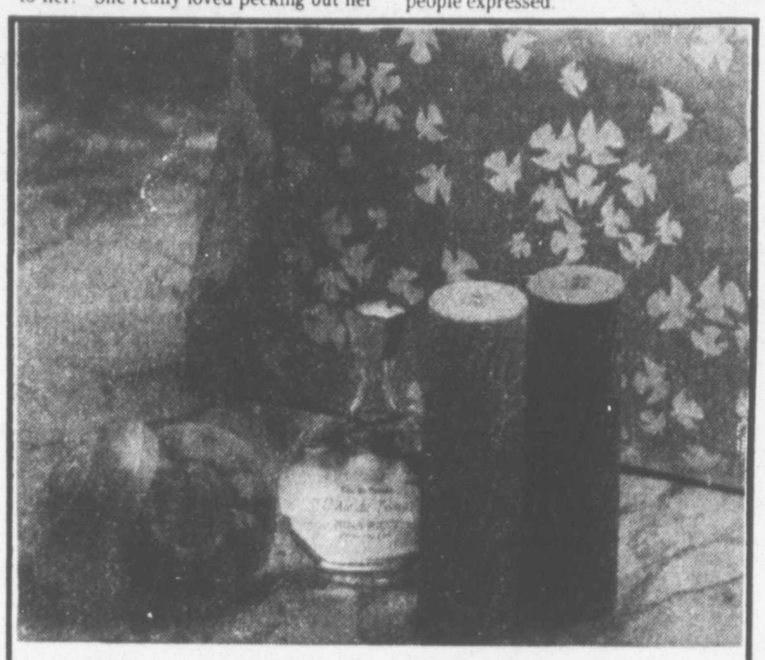

Peel, score and boil the onions until just tender. Drain (reserving the liquid for later use in soups, stews or sauces), then add the sour cream and salt and pepper. Warm until the cream is hot, but do not allow to boil, as sour cream will curdle at that point. Sprinkle a dash of nutmeg over the onions just before serving.

HOLIDAY GUESTS

Make breakfast interesting for holiday guests. Add nuts, ham cubes, cooked sausage or fruits such as strawberries, chopped apples, blueberries or crushed pineapple to your pancake batter. Sprinkle cinnamon or nutmeg into French toast batter. Top cereals with favorite fruits of the season. Stir chopped nuts such as peanuts, pecans or walnuts into cooked cereal.

Expert Offers Tips On Poultry Storage

COLLEGE STATION — Laboratory studies have shown that broiler chickens can be stored longer in a refrigerator if first rinsed in cold tap water.

Dr. James H. Denton, poultry marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, notes that this procedure resulted in the lowest bacterial count after broilers were refrigerated at 40 degrees for eight days.

The different procedures included leaving the chicken carcasses in unopened retail packages; opening the retail packages to permit air circulation during storage; repacking broilers in air-tight plastic bags; and washing the carcasses in cold, running tap water for 60 seconds, then repacking in air-tight plastic bags.

Bacterial counts after eight days storage exceeded spoilage levels on all groups except the washed carcasses, reports Denton. Washing the birds reduced the initial bacterial population, thereby extending their shelf life, he explains.

All other treatments did not extend shelf life. Repacking caused a slight increase in bacterial numbers, apparently due to increased handling, believes Denton.

Joggers Avoid Low Salt Level

LA JOLLA, Calif. (UPI) — Dietitian Jill Garrie-Seagren says a water jug is preferable to salt tablets for joggers or other sports enthusiasts concerned about their bodies' chemical balance.

"I discourage the use of salt tablets, even for joggers who run 10 to 15 miles at a time," says Miss Seagren, a marathon runner herself who has served as nutrition consultant to the Los Angeles Rams and the San Diego Chargers.

"You would have to run off about one pound of body fluids per hour before worrying about salt," she said, adding that the average American consumes 37 grams of salt daily, making plenty available when the body needs it.

Consumers Rediscover Value of Barley

CHICAGO (Special) — The rich texture and full grain flavor of barley are being discovered as consumers seek out foods that are nutritious and economical.

But, actually, barley is being rediscovered! The truth is that its history is entwined with that of many nations and peoples. For instance, did you know that it figures prominently in Jewish biblical history. It formed part of the diet of David's army (II Samuel 17:28) and of those who cut down the timber of Lebanon for the Temple of Solomon (II Chronicles 2:9). It is also believed that the "first fruit of the harvest" (Leviticus 23:9-15), reaped on the second day of Passover, was a reference to barley.

Seasons at one time were even marked by it. Of the cereals grown in biblical times, barley ripened first and the "barley harvest season" was designated as a sign of spring (Ruth 1:22).

Back then, barley was a staple food. It, like the wheat that eventually gained more widespread usage, was baked into bread after being ground into flour. There was a time, though, that barley was so extensively cultivated that the value of a field was estimated on the basis of the amount of barley required to sow it.

Because barley is such a hardy cereal grain (belonging to the family Gramineae), it figures in the history of many other lands and times, too. It grows in poor soil and under poor conditions, so it is common to both subtropical and arctic regions.

Barley is mentioned in writings dating back before 3,000 B.C. It has nourished the Chinese, the Scots, the Scandinavians and the Turks. The Lake Dwellers of Switzerland, about 1,000 B.C., knew at least three kinds.

Later, it was destined to sail with Columbus into the New World and later still to travel westward across the prairie with pioneer settlers.

As modern processing methods have been improved, barley has been increasingly easy to use — to the point that it is prepared in 10 minutes when quick barley is chosen. Regular barley, ideal for those rich, wonder soups that Jewish and other good cooks have perfected through time, takes about an hour.

But whether you use barley as a thickener in soups, in a main dish or casserole or as a rice or potato substitute, you are getting an interesting historical food. And a nutritious one, too. Barley is a source of protein, thiamine, niacin, phosphorus and iron. It's a hearty grain food that is coming into its own — again — after many years.

TOO SWEET

Use white vinegar to cut the sugary sweetness and bring out the flavor in desserts such as pecan pie or maple syrup pie. About a teaspoon will do it.

Things that are Reflective

Pumpkins Need Care

This is the time of the year poets wax forth about the beauties of frost upon the pumpkin. But taken literally, frost can really mess up your pumpkin, warns Dr. Roland Roberts, area vegetable specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Pumpkins and winter squash are usually killed by just a few hours' exposure to temperatures below 32 degrees F., the specialist said.

Harvest and cure pumpkins, gourds and winter squash at prime maturity to retain the rich colors, pleasing shapes and full flavor, Roberts urged. After pumpkins and winter squash attain full maturity, they are usually hurt by additional exposure to intense sunlight and to the moisture coming from morning dews and fall rains.

Exposed fruit can be scaled by the direct rays of the sun when the leaves wilt and die. Prolonged contact with moist soil places these hard skinned fruit in constant danger from attack by soil borne fungi and bacteria.

"Care is the watchword when you harvest," Roberts said. Cut the vine away from the hard stem with sharp clippers or a sharp knife. An attempt to cut the hard stem will usually result in the stem being broken completely from the fruit or cause a bad crack in the fruit where it attaches to the stem, he cautioned. Then you've lost the attractive stem if it's a pumpkin, or caused a wound which will rot instead of heal if it is a squash.

When the stem attachment of a winter squash is cracked during harvest it is best to break it off cleanly so that the wound will be exposed to dry air and eventually heal over, the vegetable specialist said.

"Some folks pile their pumpkins and squash on the floor in the corner of the garage or tool shed," he said. "This is okay if you are going to use them in a week or two. But, for long term preservation of high quality, cure all the winter squashes except acorn squash. Cur ing hardens the skin and heals cuts and bruises in the skin.

Squash and pumpkins should be cured for about 10 days at 80-85 degrees F., the vegetable specialist said.

"To get temperatures in this range you can set up a portable heater in your tool shed or in a small home greenhouse. If you use your greenhouse, erect a shade over the fruit. If this is not practical, cure them on the floor of your furnace room where either the water heater or furnace will keep the temperature a little higher than the rest of the house."

Afte curing is done, drop the temperature or move the squash to a dry place where the temperature can be kept between 55-60 degrees F., Roberts said. "If you do not cool them like this, they will start to shrivel from loss of moisture after a few weeks," he warned. If the temperatures drops under 50 degrees for very long, the fruits will suffer chilling injury and rot.

Never store squash by resting them directly on concrete. The water which condenses there encourages rot. Set them on boards, in wooden boxes or on shelves, he advised. Don't store squash in your underground root cellar. It is too humid and will get too cold there for squash by midwinter, he said.

Ventilate the storage area during the day to prevent buildup of humidity, the specialist urged. Circulate the air around and between the squash by running a fan in the room for a few hours every few days.

"You will enjoy the rich flavor of nutritious winter squash all winter if you take the time to properly cure and store the fruits now," Roberts said.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Raney of Welch will mark their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception from 2-5 p.m. today in the home of Ronald Raney, son of the couple. Jeff Raney of Lamesa, son of the couple, cohosted. The former Lee Anna Mitchell and Raney were married Nov. 16, 1929 in Lovington, N.M. They have nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Plain Shirts Favorite Among Men

NEW YORK (AP) — The average man now has 12 shirts in his wardrobe, according to a men's-apparel specialist.

Of that dozen, six are white or light shades of blue, three are striped and the remainder are beige, tan, light shades of yellow, pink or gray, reports Marvin A. Blumenfeld of April-Marcus, a merchandising consulting firm.

Blumenfeld says that floral shirts, which were popular a few years back, have fallen out of favor and are all but extinct in today's male wardrobe.

Lubbock Businessmen Renovate Old Building

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

A businessman may spend as much or more time at his office as he does at home. Unfortunately, in most of the places where people work, no attempt is made to create a pleasant atmosphere.

This pattern has been challenged, however, by two attorneys and a businessman who not only tried but succeeded in the attempt to make their place of business an attractive spot for those who work there as well as visitors, and benefited their city as well.

The three are how happily settled in their own offices, and the rest of Lubbock can also enjoy the spectacular results of their efforts.

Steve Cone, Tom Richards and Jack McClendon are the Lubbockites who put their collective heads together in hopes of coming up with a workable plan to either build or purchase a building to be used for offices.

At first, the business partners looked around at building lots with the idea of constructing a new building "from scratch." They talked with firms which had built recently in the Civic Center area, which was particularly attractive to them because of its central location.

But, when they considered the cost of building, the threesome decided to investigate alternatives. One possibility that occurred to them was an older, but well-constructed building which could be renovated, preferably somewhere in Lubbock's downtown area.

If the proposed location just happened to be on Broadway, that suited the partners. "Not only would this give us easy access to most of the places where we normally do business — banks, state and federal office buildings and the courthouse — we'd also be centrally-located to the whole downtown area," Richards explained. "Then, too, we felt Broadway was a strong street, one that would remain strong in the future.

"In retrospect, we definitely wanted a two-story building. Certainly, the building had to lend itself to particular specifics of renovation, if we were to project the kind of outside image we all wanted."

When the group spotted a building for sale at 1306 Broadway, it appeared to satisfy many requirements. The building was older, centrally located, well constructed, and had excellent possibilities for redecorating, both inside and out.

"And," Richards commented, "when we heard the purchase price and compared it with the costs involved in constructing something new, we decided the old structure was a much better buy."

Richards says that there is now a tax credit program available for persons planning to buy older buildings for renovation purposes. He suggests that persons considering such a move should avail themselves of this information. "Unfortunately," Richards added, "we did not qualify, since the law had not been passed at the time we bought."

As soon as the purchase had been made, the partners hired an architect — "one of the best" — and renovation got underway.

"We did have definite ideas about what we wanted," Richards said, "but again we got our collective heads together to come up with a decor which suited all of us. While I was the only one who had actually lived in New Orleans, both Cone and McClendon had visited the city many times. So, with this idea in mind — I admit it was 'something different' for West Texas — we began travelling back and forth to New Orleans to collect ideas for our renovation of the building. We also took many photographs around the city, including in the French Quarter."

So, what you see today on a busy downtown Lubbock street is a "transplanted" and unique New Orleans-style office building. In typical architectural motif of the southernmost city, a balcony graces the upper story which is complete with wrought iron. A bricked sidewalk reaching to the street and flower boxes accent the decor.

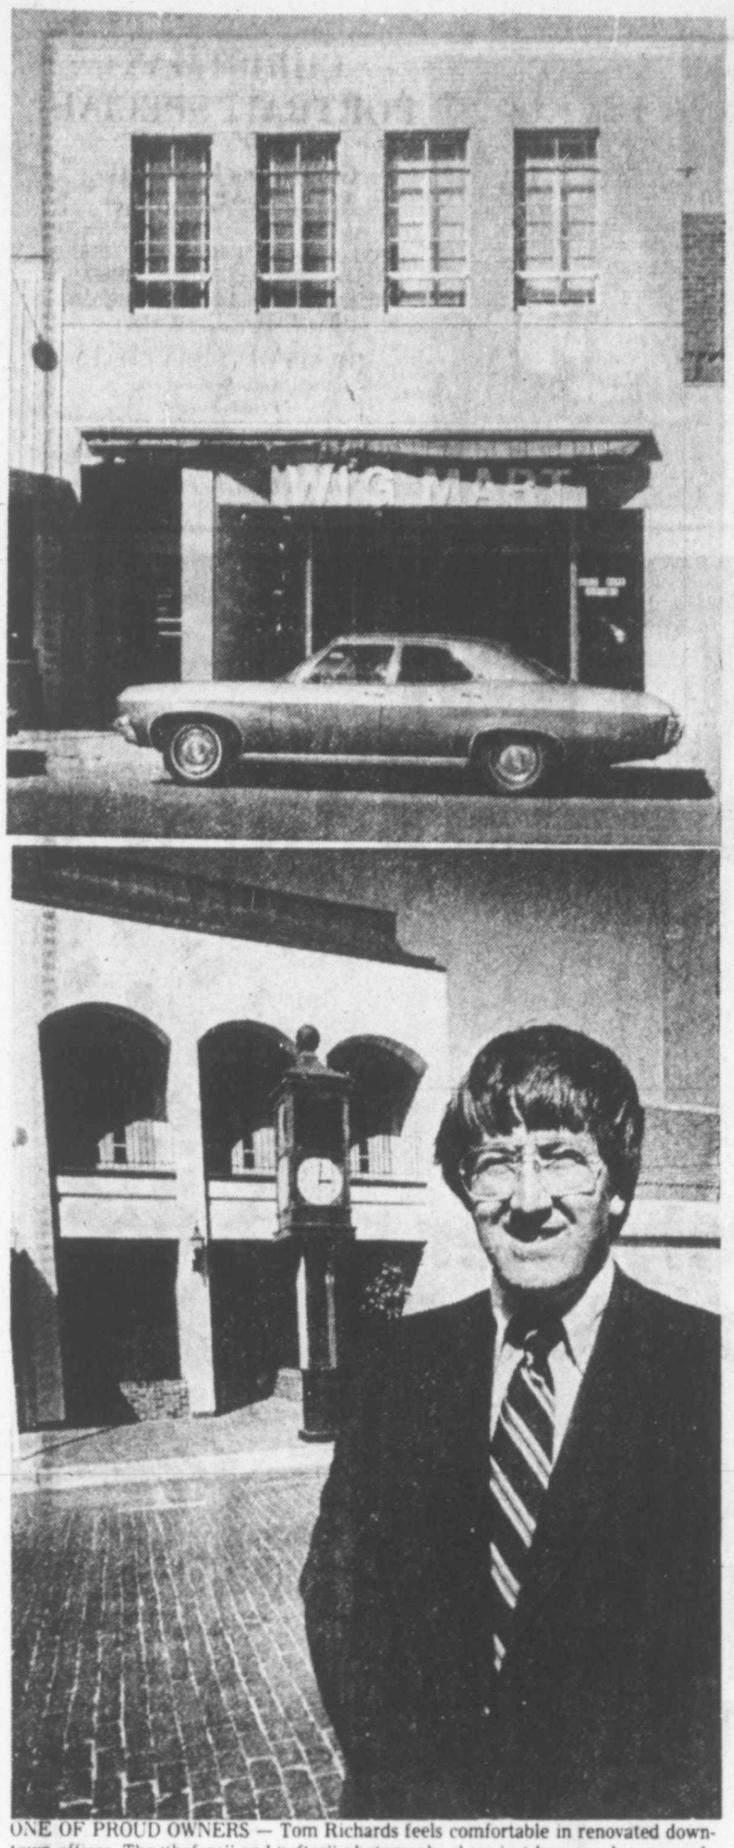

Two heavy doors "front" the entrance to the offices; and although their last resting place was the Paducah, Texas courthouse, the doors (purchased at thirty dollars each), seem at home in the new surroundings.

Just inside, an amazing, hand-wound clock sends impulses to the antique clock outside. The latter contains four motors to move the hands, but only when the indoor clock directs. (Passersbys will note that the outdoor clock is always correct.)

Showing the visitor inside, Richards says the waiting room probably is "Early West Texas." However, as noted throughout the building, the high ceilings have been retained from the original. In addition, cedar ceilings, warm paneling, deep-toned carpeting accent white, rough-textured walls.

Instead of the long hallway usually positioned from front to back of buildings, an unusual "jog" gives a pleasing airiness and change from what could be monotous."

Speaking for Cone, McClendon and himself, Richards said, "I think I can speak for all of us and say 'Yes, we'd do it again!'."

ONE OF PROUD OWNERS — Tom Richards feels comfortable in renovated downtown offices. The "before" and "after" photographs show just how much you can do with an old building, if you are innovative and creative. Owners include Richards, Steve Cone and Jack McClendon. Speaking for the group, Richards said, "Yes, I think we'd do it all over again." (Staff photo by Paul Moseley)

3 tbsps. soft butter
½ tsp. onion salt
¼ tsp. white pepper
¾ tsp. dill weed
1/16 tsp. nutmeg
¼ cup finely chopped fresh mushrooms
1 small onion
Few celery tops
½ cup chicken or turkey broth
1 tbsp. lemon juice

Carefully loosen skin of turkey breast using point of small sharp knife to start from neck end, then gently push fingers or plastic handle of rubber spatula to loosen skin away from breast meat. Mix 2 tablespoons soft butter with onion salt, pepper, dill weed and nutmeg. Mix in chopped mushrooms. With small spatula, spread in butter mixture over breast meat under skin. Place onion and celery tops in body cavity. Skewer opening and tie legs. Turn wing tips back under body. Place on roasting pan and rub skin with remaining tablespoon butter. Roast in hot oven 30 minutes, until turkey begins to brown. Reset thermostat to moderately slow (325 degrees) and continue roasting for about 1½ hours, basting occaionally with mixture of broth and lemon juice. Serve 8.

SALMON TURNOVERS

As a hot snack or an accompaniment to soup or salad, these Salmon Turnovers provide a delightful change of pace. Pinch together the triangle sections of 2 packages (10 oz.) refirgerated crescent rolls to form 8 rectangles. Drain and flake 1 can (7¾ oz.) salmon; combine with 1 chopped hard-cooked egg, ¼ cup sliced ripe olives, ¼ teapsoon salt and ¼ cup mayonnaise. Portion evenly onto one half of each triangle; fold dough over to form triangles or rectangles. Seal edges well. Bake at 425 degrees 12 minutes. Makes 8 turnovers.

Christmas Budgeting Topic Of Seminar

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

Does the very thought of the approach of Christmas and gift buying create anxiety for you?

For many people, expenditures on gifts, extra food and all the other customs of the festive holiday do indeed prove to be tension-producing, according to Betty Lowder, financial counselor for the Family Services Association of Lubbock.

In an attempt to prevent these tensions, at least for some people, this year, Mrs. Lowder is coordinating a "Before Christmas Money Management Course" which will be offered Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon at the First United Methodist Church, 1411 Broadway.

"Some people are still paying off last year's Christmas expenses," Mrs. Lowder said. And other persons in counseling confess that the onslaught of Christmas bills and expenses create or intensify emotional problems, she added.

Mrs. Lowder advocates that planning for Christmas spending should follow the same pattern as over-all planning for family expenditures. During a family conference which includes the children, the family should agree on how much can be spent in total Christmas expenses. "In setting this figure, be sure to include all the incidentals — such as cards, stamps, wrap, tape, and postage," she said.

Children taking part in this sort of planning will have a better appreciation for the value of money and the realistic limits of the family income. These lessons will stand the children in good stead when they are adults and have their own money to manage, the counselor said.

The word "manage" is a very important key to the success of this kind of planning, according to Mrs. Lowder and several other sources which contain hints on financial planning. "If your money is not doing for you what you want it to, it is managing you. You must start to manage your money... make it do for you what you want it to. You are the management and responsible for the results in the long run no matter how many emergencies or unexpected expenses occur. Planning is the key."

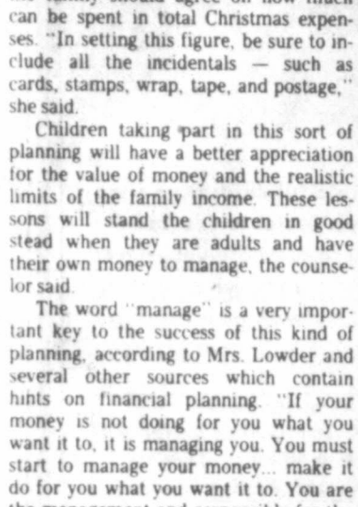

One part of Saturday's seminar will deal with setting up a general plan for family money management. Participants will be encouraged to look realistically at their total income and expenditure picture. The seminar leaders will provide some help for each family to evaluate the findings of this inventory and to decide if any categories are excessive.

Sam Norman, also a counselor with Family Services, will lead a segment designed to help people explore their feelings about money and its use.

Shelley Fillipp, coordinator for the Expanded Nutrition Program of the Extension Service, will discuss ways a family can save money on food purchasing. She also will give some holiday menus which use thrifty foods.

Beth Watson, a consumer studies student at Texas Tech University, will discuss special Christmas schemes and how to evaluate them to see if they really are bargains for you.

The fee for this seminar is $10 per couple or $7.50 for an individual. Registration and additional information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Lowder at the Family Services Association at 747-3488.

MRS. BETTY LOWDER

UNEXPECTED GUESTS

The homemaker who likes to be prepared for any emergency is likely to have canned boned chicken on the pantry shelf. Not only is she ready for unexpected guests or quick meals for the family, she also invested her food money wisely. The National Broiler Council advises: read the label carefully and buy the canned product best suited for the intended use. For instance, "Boned, solid pack chicken," is 95 percent meat; "boned chicken," 90 percent; and "boned, with broth," contains at least 80 percent meat.

Lawn Furniture Cleans Easily

NEW YORK (UPI) — Most outdoor furniture should be cleaned and stored before cold weather sets in — and treated to prevent rust, if necessary.

The soap and detergent manufacturers trade association recommends these steps:

— Wash wrought iron with suds and water, dry completely and apply a coat of rustinhibiting paint.

— Wash plastic chairs and chaises and removable vinyl cushions, then rinse and dry. Wipe the metal parts with a cloth dampened with mineral oil.

— Store all outdoor furniture in a dry area, and keep cushions off the ground or floor.

9. B. is untrue — although Rathbone's pal Nigel Bruce was in the picture.
10. Both were played by Richard Boone — Styner the narrator on "Medic." Paladin the hired gun of "Have Gun, Will Travel."

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

It's not that often one comes across an actor who believes his roles arrive via divine providence, much less one who readily admits acting comes easily. But Albert Hall, currently on screen as boat pilot Chief in "Apocalypse Now," is evidently not yet famous enough or jaded enough to fall into the rut of predictable answers. A young black actor who left Broadway starring status to try his luck in Hollywood, Hall did not gripe at all about the perhaps over-publicized problems which plagued the filming of Francis Ford Coppola's Vietnam epic, instead insisting the experience was as enjoyable as it was meaningful.

In Lubbock last week to help promote the film, Hall tackled the question of transitions from stage to screen by saying, "It was really no problem at all. . .The whole acting thing to me is just not a problem. It's so easy, because I relate it to what I was doing before acting."

Asked to elaborate, he said, "Basically, I was a garbage collector. I worked city sanitation. And from there I was promoted to the water department, where they gave me a jackhammer and a 12-pound sledge and I busted cement. Coming from there, acting is sweetcakes, brother." But don't make the mistake of thinking the jump from manual labor to the thespic community was a quick one. Hall did not act professionally until he completed graduate work in theater arts at Columbia University in 1971.

From there, he hit the off-Broadway shows and New York Shakespeare Festival Productions before clicking in a featured role in Broadway's "Ain't Supposed To Die A Natural Death."

While most would have stayed with the Broadway success, Hall made the move west because, as he put it, "of the intuitive urge and feeling within me, as though there is something higher for me to do, as though I'm not just here on this earth to waste time. I always felt I was doing something that was empowered by the powers above. That was the main thing that moved me to Hollywood. Also, in a more practical and mundane sense, I'd have to say I had climbed the heights of everything you could accomplish in New York. New York is primarily for the stage, and the highest you can get is Broadway. I've done that, and created a very good name for myself."

There was nothing in particular about the role of Chief which drew Hall to the part, not even the fact it was a character in a Coppola film "because I didn't really know about the man; I made inquiries afterwards." But Francis Coppola has gone on record as saying no one left the film unchanged or unaffected, and Hall is quick to agree.

Temporarily ignoring the apple pie room service had brought to his Hilton Inn suite, he said, "It's very much true because, when we were over there, people were having all kinds of experiences in their lives. I don't attribute this to the production or to Coppola. It was a time in the world; I attribute it to the cosmos. People were undergoing experiences and revelations and soul-cleansing. Cats were saying stuff like 'I finally came to look at something in myself that I haven't been able to look at in years' or 'I've overcome some hangups or blocks in my mind.'

"For me, it was just a greater expansion of my own awareness, and a greater development of my own sensitivity. But I believe these things can be attributed to divine providence, not the movie."

He has only the highest praise for Coppola, though, describing the writer-director as "a man who surrounds himself with the best minds. He tells us what he wants physically and also from a philosophical viewpoint. A lot of directors want to take a selfish claim on intellectuality, moving you in blindness and darkness like a puppet. But Francis has the minds and says, 'Let them (the cast and crew) bring it forth and help because I don't make the world tick by myself alone.'

"Motivation is his talent, his gift. A movie is only as clear as the mind which puts it together. And Francis may make you reach to understand a philosophical or abstract point, but the man knows exactly how to affect your emotions. Technically, the man is a genius, as far as knowing his craft. He's thoroughly prepared, man. There is very little flaw in his work."

And "Apocalypse Now," he indicated, is very much a Coppola film not only because of the direction, but also because of the "extensive re-writing" performed on the script. Hall explained, "In fact, the script we started out with was about 80 per cent re-written by Francis. Because when he really got in the situation of shooting that movie, he realized the script of 'Heart Of Darkness' was one script, and what he wanted to shoot and film was basically another story. So he re-wrote it from what he felt and what he learned from the technical assistants he'd found in the Phillipines who were veterans from Vietnam."

Delving into his interpretation of the film, Hall leaned forward and stated, "The word 'apocalypse' is synonymous with the word 'revelation,' from the last book of the Christian Bible. I think the movie came about as a divine vehicle to make that impression and statement to the world. I think divine providence gives us eyes to see that the apocalypse mentioned in Revelations can be now. For me, as I look around and see what the world is about, I have that realization anyway. I believe we're at that point."

Told that this writer felt almost manhandled by the film during the first viewing, Hall, obviously more excited, said, "Yeah, everybody did. And again, what you're talking about is the reason the man made the film. The issues he's bringing up — about life, about civilization, about morality — are ones folks normally won't look at. But Francis had the wit and the wisdom to put this in a movie, and you don't have any choice once you're in that theater. He wrote all that in the movie just so it would shake your (stuff) and make you pay attention.

"He makes statements on the human condition. When Martin (Sheen, playing Willard) goes in the trenches and looks for the captain and the soldier says 'ain't you the captain?' he's commenting on leadership. We're supposed to be so advanced and intelligent in the 20th century and yet Chief gets killed with a spear. These are things he's laying out there so we can take a look at ourselves. That's what I think the importance of this movie is.

"One person told me the movie's not over. And perhaps it isn't. It might be ushering in a change. That's one reason he asks these questions. But he poses no solutions, and he obviously shouldn't. Who can answer another man's question on morality? I think each man has got to go inside himself and say, 'You better hurry up and get your (stuff) together before you really create a dangerous situation in the world.'"

Yes, but will people get that message from a mere motion picture?

"I wouldn't want to say no," he countered. "I wouldn't want to predict doom. That's a question I can only answer from my faith in the scriptures, from the holocaust predicted in Revelations. Man has a free will to change things. We all have free will. The question is: will we change? And will we change in time?"

Despite press reports of unbearable filming conditions in the Phillipines, Hall revealed the making of the movie was "a good time." Filming on the boat was difficult, only because a camera and six technicians had to be squeezed on board the small craft with the cast. But Hall added, "The rest was fun, riding the boat and driving the boat. Those technical cats taught me how to spin that boat on a dime, man."

He later elaborated, "Everybody thinks it was hard and gruesome over there. No one knows how much fun we had. There were resorts we could visit; we could splash in the water with all the conveniences we have here. But everybody wants to think we were deep in the jungle with the mosquitoes and snakes and crocodiles. Man, it was a pleasure. We were in some dense places, yeah, with coconut groves and high grass. But we had good living quarters. Cats were going off to Australia all the time for R&R."

Hall described Martin Sheen as a "brilliant actor and a special man with a good heart. He never had his head in the clouds because he was a star. The people in the Philippines are very poor, and he would help make sure they received equal consideration on the crews. I liked that." He also was impressed with Marlon Brando, labeling the thespic legend "good people. I found the technical people didn't like him; they thought he was a pain in the (rear). But I liked the humility I saw in the man. Like if he saw all these classes of people, he would go off with the lower class and live off the land."

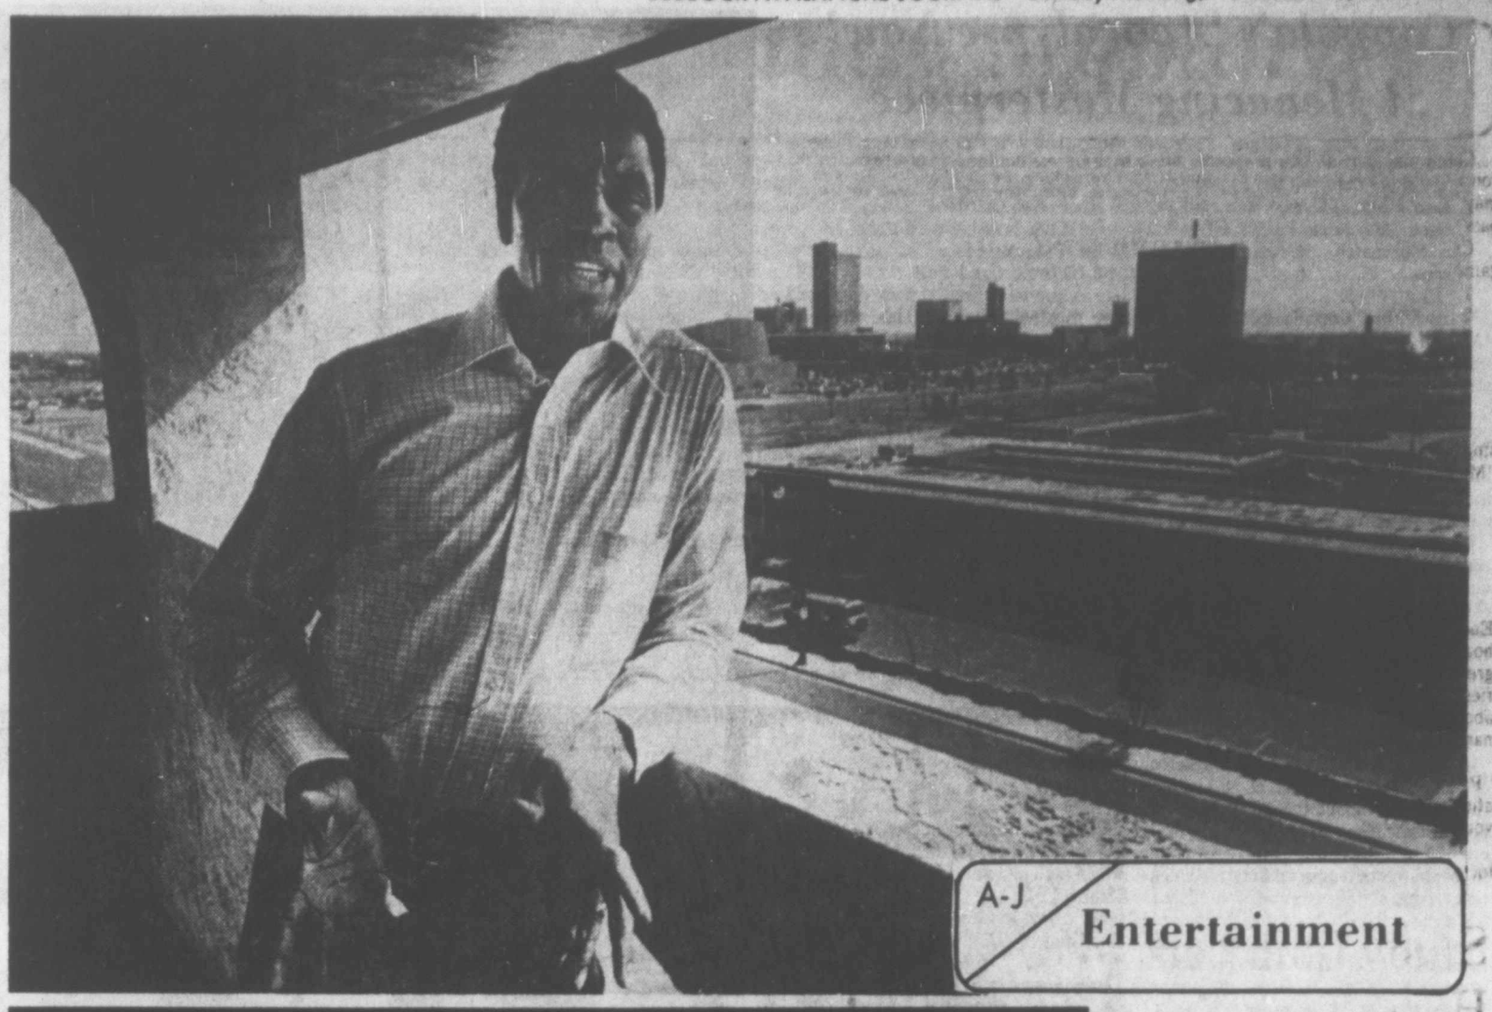

But Hall, who recently wrapped up shooting a TV mini-series called "Sophisticated Gents" which should air next March, doesn't have the same sort of praise for those in power in the television industry. Not only because of the condensed shooting schedules and commercialism, but because he sees television as a white medium designed to entertain white audiences. As he put it, "The Nielson ratings — man, that's just white middle class homes. And yes, the medium is establishment owned by a status quo. Perhaps coincidentally, that status quo is all white. I would prefer to stay away from racism, but the in-crowd is predominantly white. They put out what pleases them.

"What I see in my vision is not what TV programmers see these days. That's why, as an actor, I've been on unemployment and I've put my wife to work — because I will not be condescended upon. The thing that moves me in my soul as an actor are the inequities and injustice of what TV can do to a person.

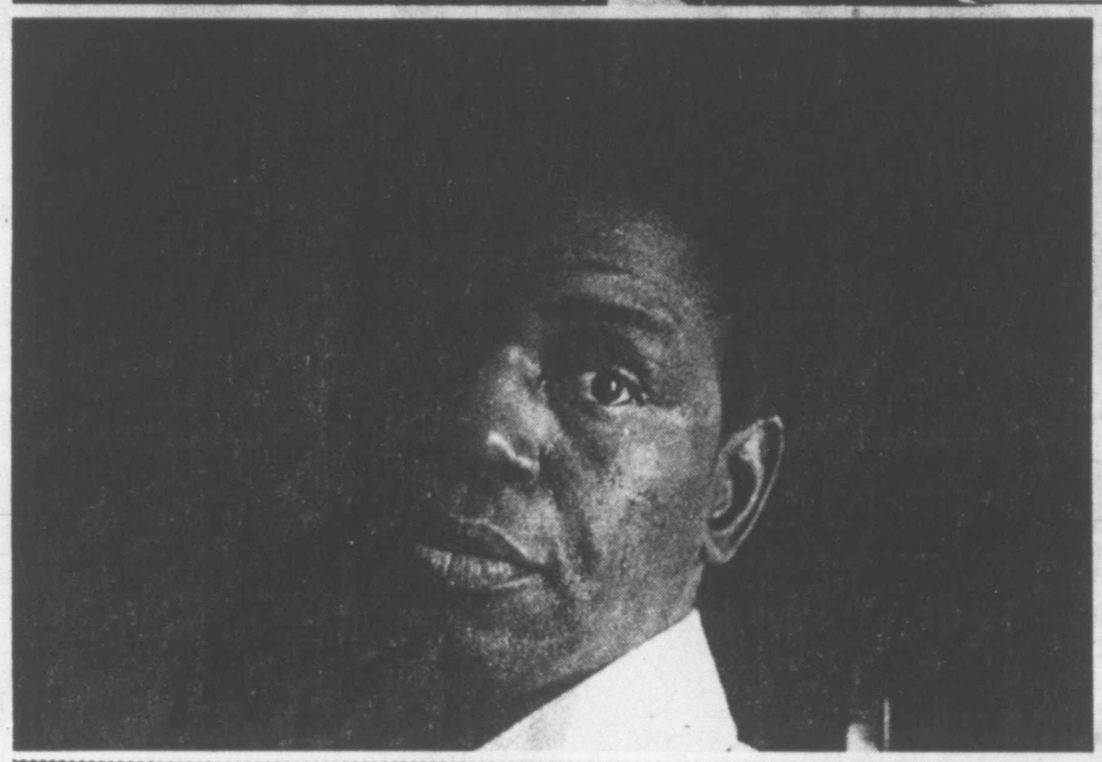

"People see these characters on TV and say 'that's how black folks are' or 'that's how black folks think about themselves.' I'm sick of folks writing scripts and telling me who I am. . .It blows my mind as a black man, but it also effects the white kids watching who say, 'Hey momma, that's how black folks are.' The black characters on TV are basically either spineless or dumb. And of all the beautiful black women in the world today, every one on TV is an Aunt Jemima. And I am here for the cause of changing that, and I would give my life if necessary to change that image. To fight that sort of injustice not just for myself, but for any minority."

Indeed, respect is evidently a more important commodity to Albert Hall than fame — though it seems his fine performance in "Apocalypse Now" may bring him both. "There won't be no more sitting around for months waiting for work," he said when asked how the picture would affect his career. "This is the type of movie where yesterday I was a nobody and today I'm a star. Now people are sending me scripts, saying 'Would you please do this, Mr. Hall?'

"So, even though I've been acting since 1971, this is the beginning of my career. And I don't expect it to stop. In fact, I know it won't. I know that I will be catapulted from 'Apocalypse Now' and ascend ever higher and higher heights. Because it's my time to do my thing."

The Nutcracker Story

The story of "The Nutcracker" is fairyland come to life. It opens on a Christmas Eve, and the parents of a young girl named Clara are giving a party for friends and relatives. One friend brings dancing dolls and a puppet-like nutcracker for Clara. The girl's brother, jealous of the gift, breaks the nutcracker.

After the guests leave the house and the children are supposedly in bed, Clara returns to the living room to repair her nutbreaker. Upon entering, she sees the Christmas tree alight and the nutcracker battling giant mice. When the mice appear to be winning, she sides with the nutcracker and kills the mouse king. The nutcracker suddenly turns into a prince and asks Clara to journey with him to the Land of Sweets.

Scene Two represents their journey as they pass through the snowflakes and the cold country.

In Act Two, the Sugar Plum Fairy holds court in the Land of Sweets. She welcomes Clara and bades all of the good things to eat to come and dance in her honor. A number of characteristic dances are performed by sugar, tea, and spices. The act ends with the Waltz of the Flowers, after which Clara and the prince leave for home.

Francis Ford Coppola gambled his fortune, his reputation and his career on "Apocalypse Now" and the audiences staggering out of theaters across the country, still uncertain about the soul-baring they've just witnessed, are proof that the gamble has paid off. Indeed, Coppola has emerged with an epic vision of war and morality, of the madness hiding within the shadows of both, which is nothing short of overpowering.

It is a film which must be seen from beginning to end and, more importantly, a film which must be digested more than once since the viewer initially finds himself manhandled by images — treated as though he was nothing more significant than a piece of paper the film could easily wad into a ball and toss into a lonely corner.

Here, at last, is a serious film with a purpose. And if the concept seems just a bit pretentious at times, it must be said "Apocalypse Now" nevertheless demands both cerebral and physical reactions from its audience. No one can simply watch this film; instead, it must be experienced in both the heart and the gut, then rewarded with haunted thought long after the screen goes black. Indeed, Coppola, who already has one American classic to his credit with "The Godfather: Part Two," has given us a war epic which stands out as a mesmerizing, murky masterpiece in a class by itself.

No other film in my memory boasts comparable power or scope.

The skeleton of "Apocalypse Now" is born of Joseph Conrad's 1902 novel titled "Heart Of Darkness," in which a sailor named Marlow navigates a dangerous African river in search of Kurtz, an evil ivory trader now dealing in human horror. But the flesh and blood of "Apocalypse Now" is born of Coppola's vision. His Marlow — now named Benjamin Willard and brilliantly portrayed by Martin Sheen — joins a crew of four on a Navy patrol boat and travels up river from Vietnam into Cambodia to locate Kurtz, a Special Services colonel driven mad and now commanding an irrational army of deserters and Montagnard tribesmen.

We have already been told by a general that "there is a conflict in every human heart, between the rational and irrational. Good and evil. And good does not always triumph. . .Every man has a breaking point." But even before Willard is issued his order to kill Kurtz, we know the one man's story is tied in to the other's — that, as Willard puts it, "If his story is really a confession, then so is mine." So with an assassin assigned to kill a murderer within the hallucinatory boundaries of the Vietnam war, we engage in our search for Kurtz by tripping over the reasons for his madness.

Sheen is accompanied up river by four sailors: Chief (Albert Hall), the Navy boat pilot who tries to stay all-business; Chef (Frederic Forrest), a New Orleans saucier misplaced in the jungle; Clean (Larry Fishburne), a ghetto rock'n'roller just 17 years old and already dodging bullets; and Lance (Sam Bottoms), a California surfer scrambling his brain cells on too much acid in a vain attempt to cope with the war. Together, these four comprise a microcosm of the American military and travel from a world of sanctioned madness to one of unsanctioned madness, from a world of modern technology to primeval conditions still too recognizable for comfort.

The insanity witnessed on the trip up river is vital to our understanding of Kurtz's motivation and Willard's all-telling hesitation on the temple steps late in the film.

A-J Film Review

The first conflict comes with the crew's introduction to Robert Duvall as Lt. Kilgore (what a name), commander of an Air Cav unit of Huey helicopters used to annihilate enemy strongholds. In one of the most intimidating battle sequences ever filmed, a squadron of helicopters, as beautiful as they are ominous, bear down on a VC village at dawn. With Wagner blaring out of the Huey loudspeakers, we feel the burning of the napalm and the burning question of why men would, even in wartime, attack a village for surfing privileges.

Already, Willard questions his mission: "What did they have against Kurtz? It wasn't just insanity and murder; there was enough of that to go around for everyone." Coppola's images also create tug-of-wars within each viewer, as we see women and children killed and yet also women as saboteurs — not to mention the church service held outdoors amidst the smoke and the dead.

Frederic Forrest comes close to cracking when surprised by an unexpected enemy in the jungle: a tiger. And how ironic that the boat crew stops shooting and feels safe only when made aware the enemy is a jungle beast and not men? Clean is erased in heartache, shot even as a taped letter from his mother is played on a portable recorder — and Chief exits via the most unsophisticated of weapons, as though Coppola was saying that, no matter how advanced our technology, war is still the same ugly, primitive battle it has always been. In the middle of nowhere, a USO show finds Playmates turning on the men, and we question the sense in reminding fighting men of what they've left behind. In such an environment, it is almost easy to understand how these men can, out of fear and dulled feeling, shoot up a sampan and then try to save the wounded.

Conflict after conflict arrives and, by the time we meet Kurtz, we've already come close to understanding him.

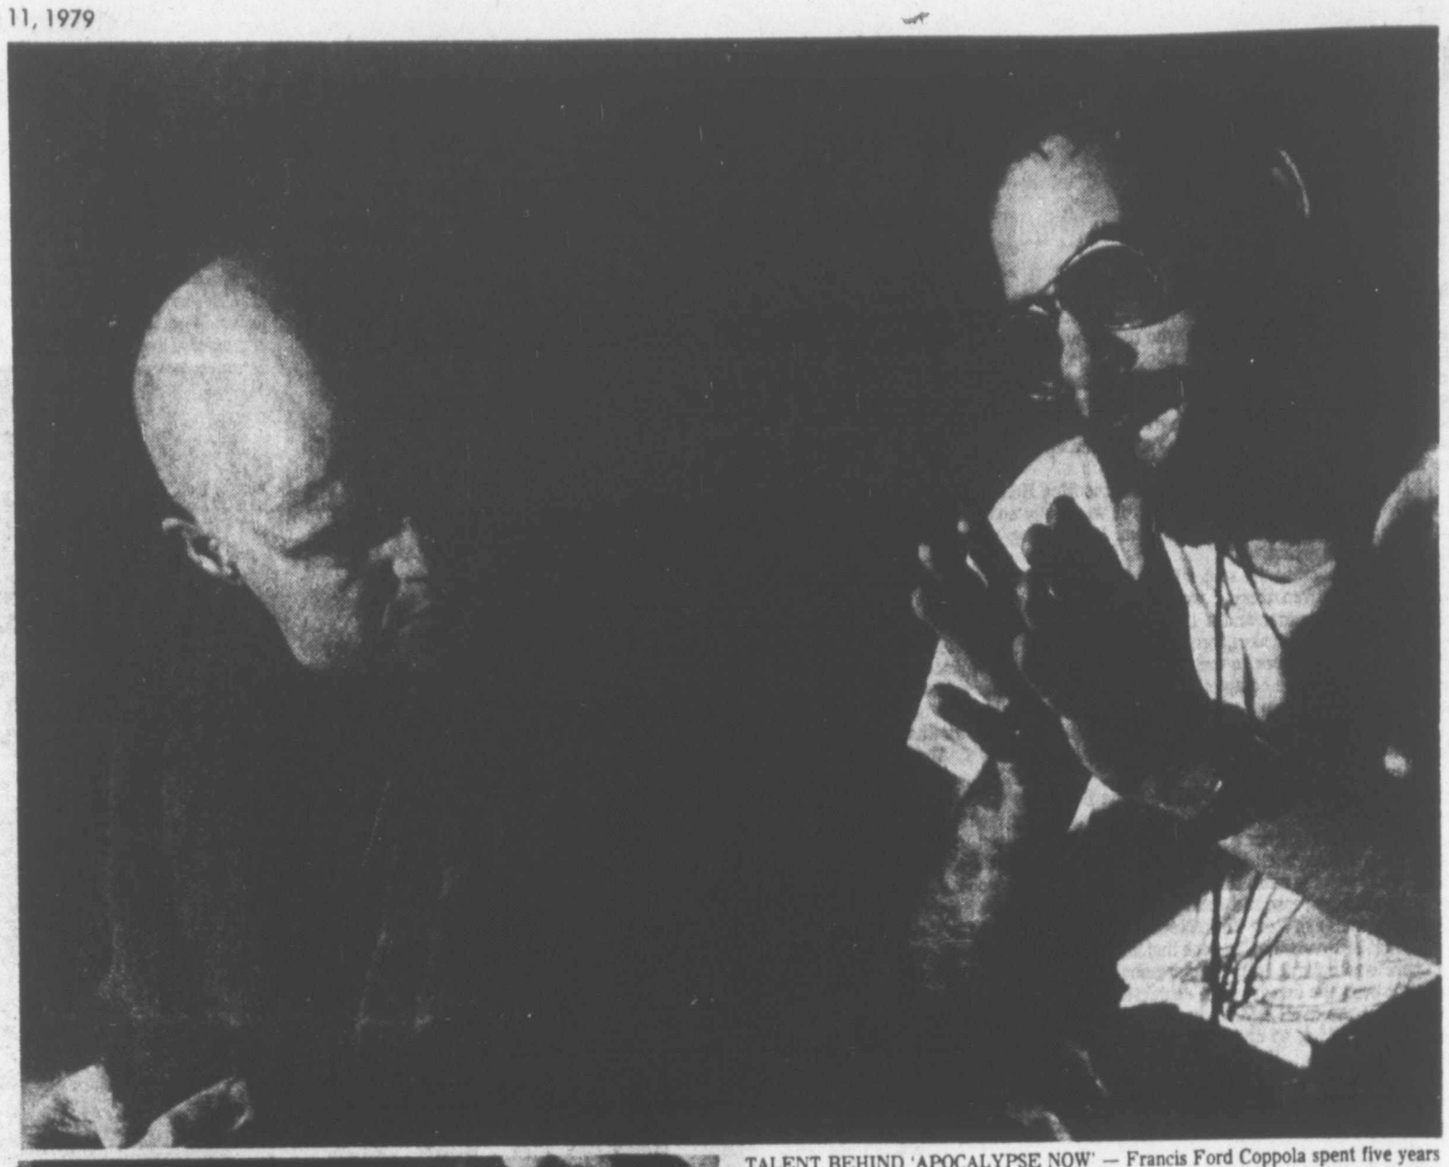

When finally we meet Kurtz, entering a compound which is as terrifying an inferno as Dante ever knew, we recognize the insanity born partly of too much wisdom. Marlon Brando, an enigma cast in shadows with his head shaved and his body bloated, tells us that men must be able "to kill without feeling, passion or judgment — because it's judgment that defeats us." And we see the truth in that statement: the amoral naturally have better odds in battle. But Kurtz has made a friend of horror and terror, and the final conflict comes in his expectation that Sheen, who has seen much of what he has seen, can do the same.

Indeed, Willard's hesitation on the temple steps after the ritualistic slaughter, temptation kneeling before him, may be the most telling part of the film.

Though it is senseless to make comparisons to other films, one can't help but feel "Apocalypse Now" will reap the benefits of many Oscars in the spring. The acting, especially that by Sheen and Duvall and Forrest, is stunning. The surrealistic visuals provided by cameraman Vittorio Stararo are rich in color and anger. The production unit and sound crews are all first rate, and the use of The Doors' "The End" as the apocalyptic theme song was a stroke of genius.

But most of all, "Apocalypse Now" is Coppola's statement. It is through his efforts that our epidermal layers are scraped away and we are forced to confront the potential darkness in our own hearts. His film is not about Vietnam as much as it is about the moral issues of any war, any time. It is a sensitive and yet menacing epic which shakes us by our very lapels, ordering us to wake up and examine both personal and national anguish. "Apocalypse Now" attacks the conscience, the nerve centers — and we do not leave unaffected. It is, ultimately, a breathtaking ravishing of the senses which carries more import with each successive viewing.

Mel Blanc: 42 Years Creating Cartoon Memories

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

For more than a year, the man in charge of voices at Warner Bros. Studios wouldn't give Mel Blanc the time of day, much less time to audition. Then, as Blanc put it, "he died" — and a whole new career in memorable cartoon vocal characterizations was born.

The new man at the studio, Leon Schlesinger, gave Blanc a try and there followed first The Drunken Bull, then Porky Pig — and then a constant onslaught of cartoon classics like Bugs Bunny, Tweety, Sylvester, Speedy Gonzales, Daffy Duck, Yosemite Sam, Wile E. Coyote and Pepe Le Pew. Blanc supplied the voices for all these and more, and his fame was never more evident than when 693 fans swarmed to Texas Tech's University Center theater last week to pay raucous tribute.

In an exclusive Lubbock interview after his lecture, Blanc explained the factors which drew him to cartoons and the one which almost saw him leave. Mind you, a Mel Blanc interview in print can in no way express the humor radiated by the man in person. Now 73 years old, the bags under his eyes as deep as Bugs' rabbit holes, Blanc will oftentimes answer questions in one of his cartoon characters' voices.

He still does a great deal of commercial work — one Tech student earned laughs by asking if he really owned an American Express card — and handles new voices like Captain Caveman on the Saturday morning cartoons and Twiki on the "Buck Rogers" movie and TV adventure series. But things were not so easy in the beginning.

"I always loved vaudeville when I was a kid," he said. "When Jack Benny came through doing vaudeville, I'd go see him twice a week, never dreaming I'd one day work with him. In the beginning, though, it wasn't a matter of learning voices as much as it was dialects. See, you've got to remember that this was even before cartoons were out.

"The only things in cartoon back then was Felix The Cat and Grandpa something-or-other, and they very seldom had voices. Disney was the one who started the voice thing, then Warners came along. . .I did a lot of straight parts on radio in the beginning to keep me going; then I discovered there was more money in comedy."

The real money came, ironically, after his request for a raise in salary was denied. "Instead of a raise, I asked for screen credits," he recalled. "And that was the best thing to ever happen to me. I was the first person to ever get a screen credit for a cartoon voice, and this helped publicize the Warner Bros. cartoons and also helped get the word out about my talent." Even so, though his vocal characterizations were helping cartoons win Academy Awards, he never received an Oscar of his own until a director willed him one.

Asked if he was hurt by the award-givers' traditional snubbing of vocal efforts, he said, "Yes, it pains me very much because, after all, the voice is a very important part of these pictures. I've spent 42 years finding that out. The art work and writing was great, but they don't mean a darn thing without the voices. It's just a fact that only the producer and director get Oscars. I wish someone would have suggested otherwise, but I doubt whether anyone would have listened.

"Even though the toughest part about doing this was understanding the directors. I actually had to improvise, because I couldn't understand what they wanted."

Blanc has also had to suffer the pain of being imitated with no recourse, saying "You can't sue someone for copying your voice in any country outside of France, and only there if something defamatory is said. I'd be a multi-millionaire if I could sue people for stealing my voices. But a lot of directors now will just say, 'Give me something like Mel Blanc doing this character.' Nothing I can do."

The vocal expert was told by a doctor once he had the same throat construction as Enrico Caruso, enabling him to "always get his voice back within an hour of losing it." This was quite an asset when directors had him taking days to do individual voices, rather than the mere hours it takes him today. Then there were the inherent problems of his favorite character, Bugs Bunny. Initially called The Happy Rabbit with more protruding teeth, Blanc had a hard time making his voice understandable. Then the character was re-drawn, the "what's up doc" line was devised and a new problem arose — carrots.

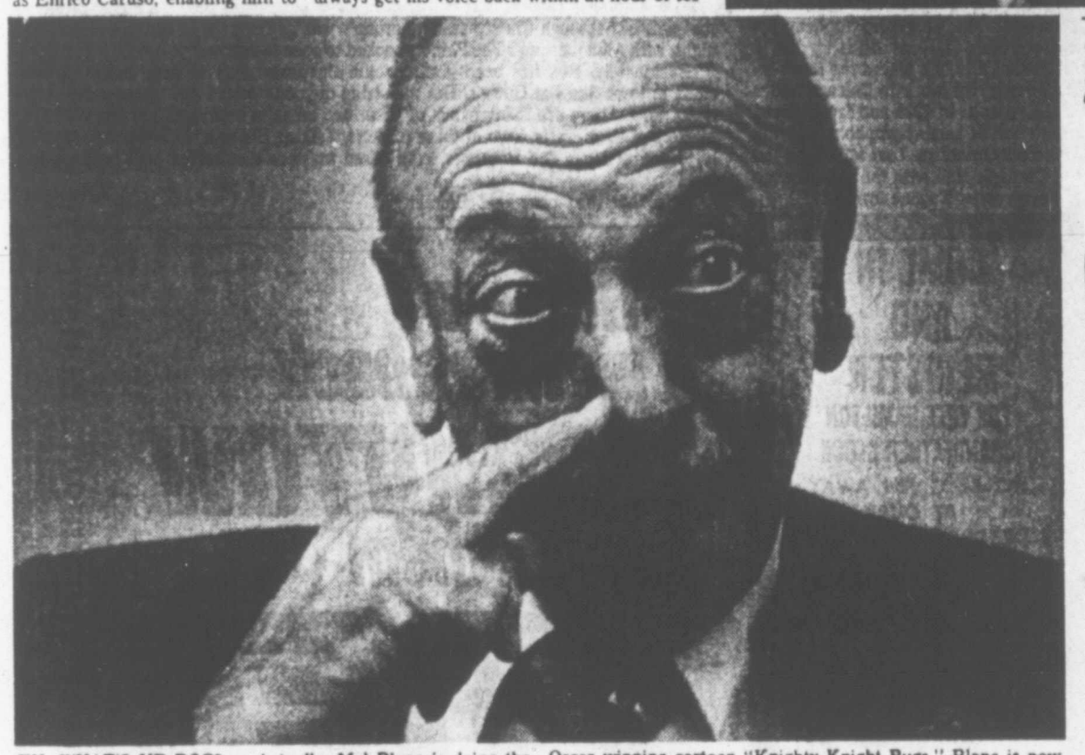

He said, "When Bugs makes that chewing sound, we learned the only thing that sounds like a carrot is a carrot. You can't use celery or lettuce or apples. But every time I'd take a bite of carrot and do Bugs' line, the carrot would get stuck in my throat and I couldn't talk. So when I was recording cartoons, I used to keep a wastebasket next to me so I could spit out the carrot and continue.

"I used to fill up wastebaskets."

And don't look for Blanc to stop working anytime soon. Insisting that he only wants to be remembered as "the man who created Bugs Bunny," he has never stopped fighting ever since that first studio executive slammed the door in his face. Even in 1961, when a car accident left him unconscious for 20 days and in a full body cast for one year, he found himself being "propped up in bed with a remote mike doing 'The Flintstones' two months after I left the hospital.' Indeed, Mel Blanc says, "I love my work too much to ever retire."

So it'll be a while before he says "Th-th-that's all, folks" and means it.

Country Style

By Russ Parsons

"You've gotta go see this Boxcar Willie guy," a friend told me one slow afternoon. "He dresses like a hobo and sings songs about trains."

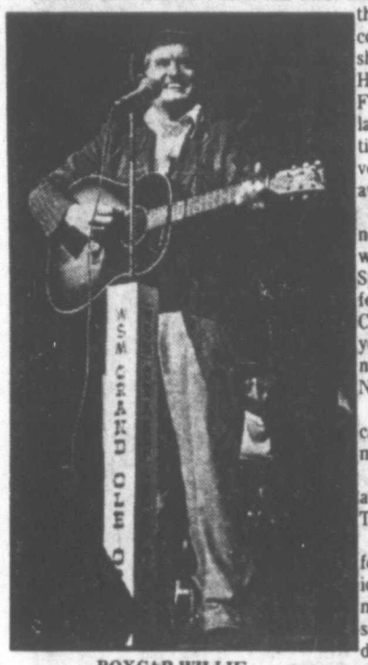

Hmmmm.

An interesting gimmick, but it must have been done before. I had visions of Emmett Kelly doing a rousing verse of "Casey Jones" while leaning on a broom. Or maybe Johnny Cash dressed in rags, black of course.

What I got was much better than either. Okay, so Marty Martin does dress like a bum, and he does do some songs about trains, and he can imitate different train whistles vocally. But there's more. Once into the Red Raider Nightclub to watch the show, I was astonished to find how well this guy can sing. It sounds ridiculous, but he sounds a lot like Willie Nelson, a comparison he begs with a Nelson imitation number.

Martin (aka Boxcar Willie) has three albums in the top 10 in Britain and is one of the top attractions for the rabid English country fans. This year he stopped the show at the Wembley Country Music fair. He is headlining the British Country Music Festival, an honor held by Dolly Parton last year. He is nominated for the International Artist of the Year award at their version of the Country Music Association awards ceremony.

BOXCAR WILLIE

Not impressed? He has two albums nominated for Album Of The Year, along with records by Don Williams, Billie Jo Spears and Marty Robbins and he is the feature guest of the BBC Country Music Christmas show. Don Williams did it last year. And perhaps most impressive, his new album entered the English charts at No. 5.

"It's just incredible, the success Boxcar Willie is having over there," he admits.

Why is it he's a big star in England and a virtual unknown in the United States? The answer appears to be twofold.

First, there's the English predilection for hard-core country. "There is not one iota of anything besides hard country in my act and that's what they love," Martin says. "They don't like the crossover. They don't like the horns. They don't like the orchestration. They like hard country and that's the reason for the success I've had over there. I've never played a rock and roll song on stage because I don't know how to play rock and roll. It's not part of my repetoire.

"I play pure country music. They love those train songs, they love that train whistle. They really like those old Jimmy Rodgers songs.

"I told you my album jumped into No. 5 over there, the reason it did was on one side there's five Hank Williams songs and on the other side there's five Jimmy Rodgers songs. It was the songs that sent the album in there at that ridiculous high number. I don't think it was the singing of Boxcar Willie."

The other half of the problem deals with his American record label. Although he is reluctant to place any blame, it's easy to see he doesn't feel that he's received the promotional backup necessary to make a hit in the States.

Martin grew up in a small town just south of Dallas. As a young child his father worked for the railroad, thus his love for the big trains.

"The railroad bought us a little old house right beside the track," he remembered. "The track wasn't but six feet from the house. Of course everytime the train would go by I'd run out and go 'whoo, whoo'. I can remember sitting around that danged ol' house, just us and the wood stove. We didn't even have a radio, or if we did they were just saving the batteries for Saturday night to pick up the Opry with. We'd try and stump my dad, he played the fiddle. Most of the songs we knew were religious songs or Jimmy Rodgers and Roy Acuff songs. We'd try and stump him for hours, there wasn't a song we wouldn't try.

"I can still see him hold that fiddle up to the fire and warm it. Then he'd hold it up and spit on them keys to make them hold. That was our entertainment."

He got into the entertainment business through his cousin, who ran a string of bands in the Dallas area. His parents were church-going people and didn't cotton to their young son playing music where alcohol was served. So he did what any red-blooded American boy would do.

He snuck off and did it.

"I would tell my momma and daddy I was going to a Boy Scout meeting; then I'd hitchhike to a place called 'Little City,' a string of beer joints just south of Dallas," he said. "I'd go in and sing with my cousin's bands. They'd give me 50 cents and I'd jump on out of there and hitchhike home.

"Well, you know, you're bound to get caught. This guy told my dad one time, 'Boy, that boy of yours sure sings good.'

"Daddy said, 'Yeah, he sings pretty good.'

"The other fella said, 'I sure enjoyed him the other night, he had that club really jumping.'

"My daddy said, 'No, you must be thinking about somebody else.'

"'Nah,' he said, 'That was your boy up there.'

"Well, that was my first professional job and my last for quite a while," Martin concluded. "I'll always have to believe mother didn't ever like me playing in bars. But momma knew how much I love music and she knew there wasn't anywhere much else to play, so she never said anything.

"But she never came to see me in a night club. She passed away in 1970. I made her a promise I'd perform on the Grand Old Opry. I'm just sorry she wasn't around to see me, but I told her I would."

Yes, this story has a happy ending. After Wesley Rose saw Boxcar Willie in action at Wembley, he arranged a meeting with Roy Acuff where Martin was invited onto the Grand Old Opry.

"Acuff gave me a five-minute introduction," he says. "I felt like my knees were going to buckle under me. And then I got two standing ovations. It was just Wembley all over again. Tears were just streaming out of my face."

Sounds kinda like a train song.

Mary Cassatt To Be Subject Of Rabbi Kline's Seminar

Impressionist painter Mary Cassatt will be the subject of Rabbi Alexander Kline's art seminar at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Texas Tech University Museum. There is an admission charge.

Miss Cassatt was the daughter of a wealthy Philadelphia couple. She settled in Paris and became one of the few artists to work under Edgar Degas.

Her most frequent motif was a mother caring for a child, and "La Toilette" is typical. She painted it in 1892 and it hangs in Chicago's Art Institute. She paints other aspects of domestic life and the theater, however, with a warmth of feeling and a sharp eye for detail. She caught gesture and shape with unerring skill.

Objects fill her canvasses and run out of the edges of the composition, creating an effect of casual intimacy. Patterns are sharp and clear-cut. She frequently painted a setting from above, giving familiar objects unfamiliar shapes.

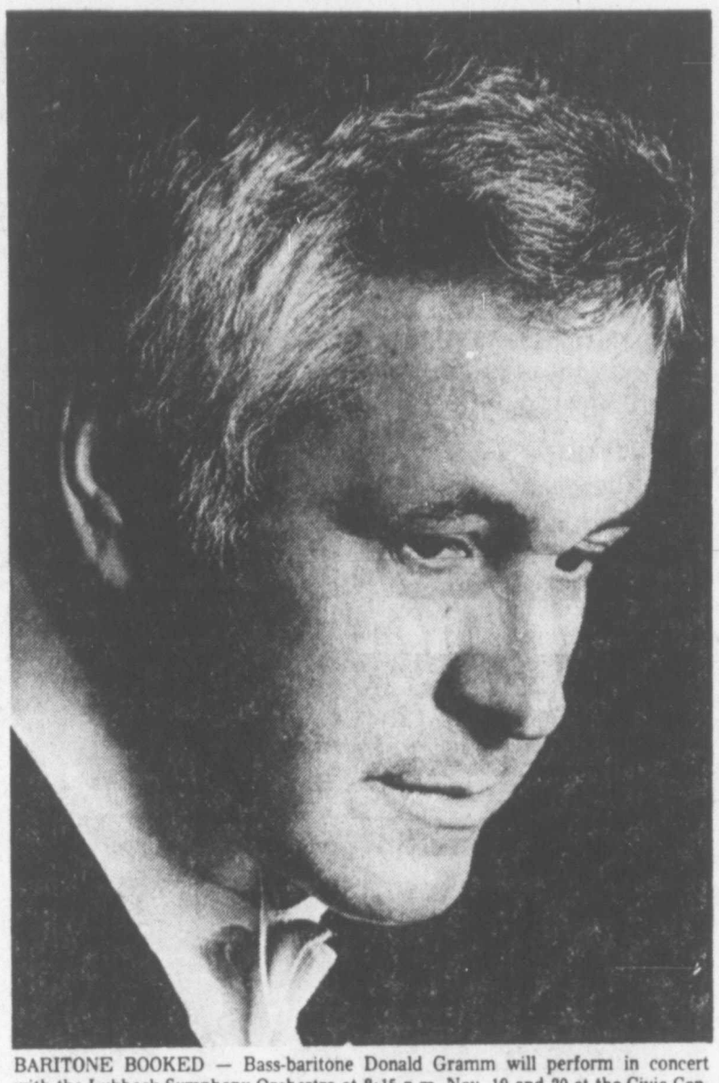

Her prints are considered as unique and personal as her paintings; but Miss Cassatt had few followers. She was better known in France than in America, and critical acclaim came later.

Miss Cassatt's "The Boating Party" hangs in the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. The influence of the Japanese color print, evident in a great deal of the European art of her time, is particularly visible in "Woman Doing Her Hair."

Local Writer To Be Speaker

The featured speaker at Monday's 7:30 p.m. meeting of the South Plains Writers Association at the Garden & Arts Center will be Etta Lynch, local author of "The Power Behind The Comb" (1970), "Help Is Only A Prayer Away" (1972), "Tender Tyrant: The Legend Of Pete Cawthon" (1976) and "Gene A. Howe: The Tactless Texas" (1979).

She has sold more than 150 articles and short stories, some of which were award winners. She has conducted writing workshops in Amarillo, Odessa, Snyder and Canyon. She is listed in World Who's Who Of Women, 2,000 Women Of Achievement and also Personalities Of The South.

BARITONE BOOKED — Bass-baritone Donald Gramm will perform in concert with the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m. Nov. 19 and 20 at the Civic Center theater. Ticket information is available by calling the symphony office at 762-4707. (Photo by Christian Steiner)

Frederick Chrislip Sets Recital At LCC Monday

Frederick Chrisplip, billing himself as a "classical troubadour," will appear in recital at Lubbock Christian College 's Moody Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.Monday. A tenor and classic guitarist, Chrislip will perform songs ranging from Elizabethan lute songs to songs of the 20th century.

There is no admission charge.

Born and reared in Oklahoma, Chrislip was awarded a National Merit Scholarship and graduated from the School of Music at Northwestern University. He has spent two summers at Tangelwood, where he studied singing with Phyllis Curtin.

During the recital he will perform several songs which are rarely heard. Included will be two songs by Stephen Dodgson on verses by the English rural poet John Clare. Chrislip will also perform four recent compositions based on words from Shakespeare's play, "Love's Labour Lost."

He will also sing and play some songs of Franz Schubert, which were originally published in versions not only for voice and piano but also for voice and guitar.

Chrislip was in Odessa the summer of 1978 as resident musician for the Globe of the Great Southwest. He served the Shakespeare Festival there as singer, guitarist, composer and actor.

In October, Chrislip played tenor banjo with the Chicago Symphony for the recording of Final Alice by David Del Tredici. Chrislip played the first performance of the work in Chicago under Sir Georg Solti in 1976 and later played it with the St Louis Symphony and the Minnesota Orchestra. Last fall he played it at Carnegie Hall with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy.

Rock-It

By Doug Pullen

The movements frequently called "punk" and "new wave" have existed for several years, despite the only recent commercial successes of acts falling under such classification. Some obviously derivative pop music, like that of The Cars, has transcended these forms, especially new wave, to commercial heights, bringing about a considerable amount of exposure to their roots.

Those roots are, of course, the groups and singers who pioneered the forms; the same people who made the initial breaks, the ones who continue to make them, but sometimgs go unnoticed.

The Ramones fall into this category. In 1976 they became one of the first punk bands to sign a recording contract with a major label. The group recorded and released a debut album regionally in its home area of New York, and Sire Records repressed it for national distribution in April, 1976.

The album steered a great deal of attention by the public and the media in the direction of The Ramones and groups like them. The debut was rough in quality and limited by the band's studio inexperience. But it contained enough raw power to attract a small, but substantial following across the country.

And the group's fame spread to Europe as well, a place where the English-led punk movement is much more deeply entrenched in politics and social awareness than the American version. The Ramones' obvious sense of humor and energetic delivery attracted enough attention to warrant a noticeable amount of anxiety on the part of the press regarding the band's follow up album, "Leave Home."

The Ramones echoed sentiments of bleak futures and bland daily lives, but stated them in a simple, almost elementary fashion. Singer Joey Ramone's nasal voice is adolescent in nature, lending to the snotty, punkish image the band projects visually as well as musically.

"Leave Home" was a well-crafted album with a theme of separation not only from the home where one's parents might live, but from the musical home in which the band had been raised.

"Rocket to Russia" followed later in 1977, continuing along the message-filled lines of "Leave Home." This year's "Road to Ruin" is an all out different kind of album for the band. Drummer Tommy Ramone left the band, dropped his phony last name and adopted his real name, Erdelyi. He's the T. Erdelyi credited on all the band's albums. Erdelyi took over the group's production, allowing the addition of versatile, powerful drummer Marky Ramone.

"Road to Ruin" featured a more listenable approach to the band's music, with experimentation and deviation from the group's norms.

The Ramones are about simplicity. The group strives!for repetitive, not repititious, music. The group was raised on the pop-rock of the '60s, and stresses a return to the quality of that music. Such has been the base of The Ramones' music from the start, though early days in the small club circuit must have meant rough, violent music with little control.

The Ramones have become one of punk's pioneers, recently venturing into the world of film (as did The Sex Pistols) with the "Rock 'N' Roll!High School" film.

A new album is set for a February release. The as yet untitled album may not become the first "punk" release of the new decade, but chances are it will become one of the most adventurous of the lot.

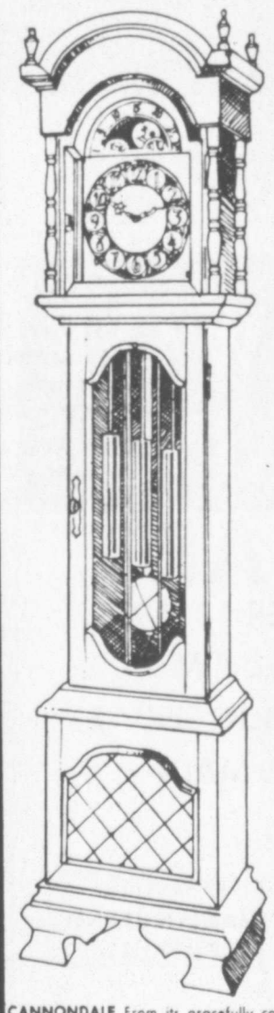

• • • • • • •

The Ramones' current tour will stop in Lubbock tonight before a string of dates that will last thsough Christmas. The group's will be featured in concert at Rox tonight, with Albuquerque's The Planets booked to open the show.

Fortunately, Rox has been getting some significant acts of late, as have other clubs in town like Fat Dawg's. But the string of good "punk" and "new wave" acts is not long. There are many bands of these two areas in existence, but few who are masters of their crafts. Two of those masters, Talking Heads and Clash, have recently played at Rox. The Ramones, considered masters themselves, will be here tonight.

After that, the pickings get slimmer.

Grisly Sightseeing: Inquisition Museum

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Lima's grisliest historical site is the Museum of the Inquisition on Bolivar Square. Closed for centuries, the subterranean torture chambers of the 16th century Holy Office of the Inquisition were excavated 10 years ago and opened to the public by the Catholic Church.

Church figures indicate about 1,500 suspected infidels and heretics died at the hands of the Inquisition. Most were tortured with bizarre mechanical devices.

Admission is free and English placards provide a full explanation of the religious fanaticism of the past.

Just Shake it and Let it Fall Into Place. The Precision Haircut.

Precision haircutting is a technique for cutting the hair in harmony with the way it grows. Your hair eventually grows out but it doesn't lose its shape with a precision haircut. Consequently your haircut will look as good after five days as it does after five minutes. And because the hair falls naturally into place you won't have to keep fussing with it. Usually a shake of the head does it.

At Command Performance we shampoo, precision-cut and blow dry your hair for fourteen dollars, whether you're a gal or a guy. And no appointments are ever necessary.

We also offer permanent waves, coloring, frosting and conditioning. But we really shine with precision. And so will you.

ART TALK: By La Wanda Murfee

When drawing is reduced to the simplest basic shapes, its execution heightens the understanding, enlightens the mystery and lessens the difficulty.

In all the world there are only four basic shapes. Modifications of those shapes create the objects as we know them. By elongating, scaling down or up, ellipsing the circle, overlaying, combining, things take on familiar forms we recognize as given objects. Reduced to such simplicity the artist finds the task of drawing becomes an exercise in arrangements of shapes.

In drawing an apple for instance, its simple shape is a circle. Within that shape modifications change the appearance to resemble a variety of fruit, a Winsap apple, a Delicious apple, or the squattier Roman Beauty. Even those varieties have their individual characteristics from which likeness comes. However, A Delicious painted blue would still be recognized as a Delicious apple.

Bottles are primarily cylinders, having a top and bottom. Drawing straight lines to proportion of a selected bottle, makes it much easier than a struggle with exact outline. Within the straight lines quick changes can capture the identity of that bottle.

Most houses are first drawn as cubes, having sides, top and bottom. By adding numerous cubes, a basic house can be planned. Then dreaming can follow and become ranch house, shanty, mansion or high rise apartment.

Most trees appear as cones placed over a cylinder, the trunk. Some species might fit into a circle, or an elipse. Poplar trees might be drawn first as a vericle elipse, while an oak tree fits better into a rounder shape.

'Long Day's Journey' To Be Staged Here

Eugene O'Neill's American classic, "Long Day's Journey Into Night" will be performed at 8:15 p.m. Friday through Nov. 20 at the Texas Tech University Theatre.

O'Neill wrote "Long Day's Journey Into Night in 1940." The characters and tragic relationships portrayed in the nightmare world of the play are autobiographical. O'Neill was born the son of the actor James O'Neill, who after a promising start as a versatile tradedian found himself trapped in the single role of the "Count of Monte Cristo." The playwright was born, literally, on Broadway in 1888. During his childhood and young manhood, he was subjected to shattering stress and distress.

His father, always haunted by the fear of poverty, furnished his family with only a cheap, second rate living. His mother became a drug addict; his brother was a derelict and a drunkard. In 1912 it was discovered that O'Neill had tuberculosis. The next several months, he spent in a sanitorium. It was during this crucial period in his life he decided that playwriting was to be his life's work.

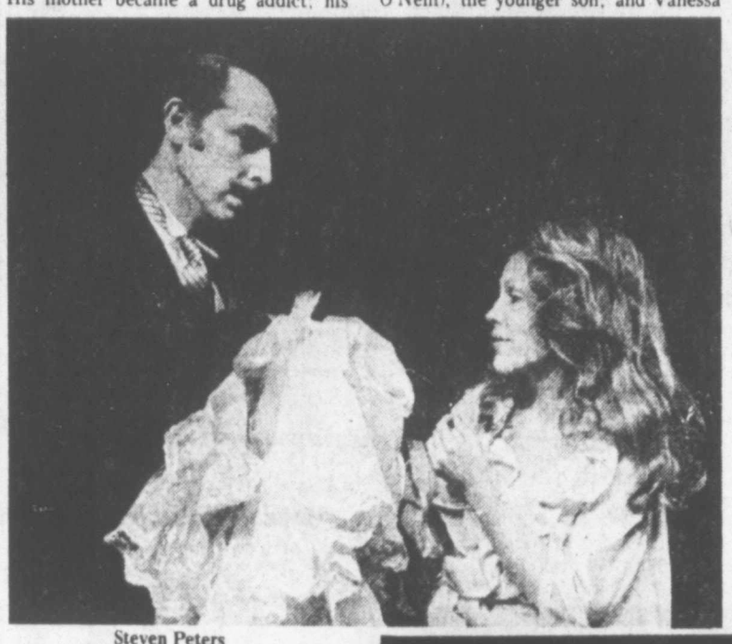

The action of the play takes place during one day in August 1912, in the family summer home. The play follows the struggle of the family trying to survive. It was because of these struggles and his suffering that O'Neill wrote the play in an effort to understand and forgive his family.

Direction is by George Sorensen. The cast includes Steven Peters as the father, James Tyrone; Mary Anne Mitchell as the mother, Mary Tyrone; Jerry Cotton as James, the elder son; Matthew Posey as Edmund Tyrone (Eugene O'Neill), the younger son; and Vanessa Hill as Cathleen, the serving girl.

Eugene O'Neill, considered one of America's greatest playwrights, received four Pulitzer prize awards. In 1936, he was awarded the Nobel Prize in literature — the second American to win the literature prize and the first American dramatist to do so. Although he was too ill to atttend the award ceremonies in Sweden, O'Neill sent an acceptance speech stating:

"This highest distinction is all the more grateful to me because I feel so deeply that it is not only my work which is being honored but the work of all my colleagues in America — that the Nobel Prize is a symbol of the coming of age of the American theatre."

For ticket prices and further information call the University Theatre box office at 742-3601. Early reservations are advised.

Ken Hamilton Named To KoKo Inn Post

The KoKo Inn, 5201 Ave. Q, has announced the appointment of Ken Hamilton as general manager.

HAMILTON

Hamilton, a native of Rankin, attended Rankin High School and Angelo State University, where he majored in business.

He has extensive experience in the grocery marketing field, having held positions as the evening store manager in the "M" System Food Stores at San Angelo, drug and general merchandise clerk for Furr's at Lubbock, drug and general merchandise manager for Furr's at Levelland, and manager of the drug and general merchandise department for Furr's Family Center at Roswell, N.M.

Hamilton was most recently a buyer for Waples-Platter.

KoKo Inn has initiated a holiday special on room rates which will continue through Jan. 7, 1980, according to Hamilton.

The motel has listed its single rooms for $9.95, doubles for $13.95, and two-bed rooms for $16.95.

Hamilton said the above special includes color television sets and "long-boy" beds in every room.

Hamilton said that with gasoline and food prices being elevated by inflation and energy shortates, travelers will need to be able to save on motel rates.

The motel accepts major credit cards such as Master Charge, Visa and American Express.

In addition to its 144 rooms, the KoKo Inn has an enclosed garden area with a heated swimming pool for year-round use by guests. A restaurant at KoKo also provides 24-hour service.

. . .But How You Pray The Game

AMERICAN GENERAL WAS, I mean, tough. Those guys were big and quick and good, and they were well-drilled. Besides that, they had added incentive. We got the jersey colors they wanted.

Somewhere during the course of the game, it occurred to me, our coach, that we just might get beat bad. On offense, these guys were getting inside our 1-3-1 and, on defense, they kept intercepting our across-the-lane pass. I, our coach, didn't like much of anything that was happening, so I called a time out like they do in the NBA.

• • •

AT COURTSIDE, I stared into five sets of young eyes bearing anxious looks. Mike, Donny, Chris, David and Scott. Inevitably, it was Scott who spoke up.

"Yeah," added Donny. "Out there."

"Hold it," I said. "What do you guys mean 'out there'. . .?"

"Nuthin'," said Chris, a good kid.

"Yeah. Nuthin'," Scott agreed. "But. . .uh, Pop. . .have you ever beat Mr. Higgins. . .?

• • •

AS MOB BASKETBALL coaches go, I was a veteran, a man both strengthened and broken by many games such as this one tonight. Higgins and I were, in a number of ways, quite similar. We both had been at it since the program began. We both had coached at every age level.

And our styles were similar, too. . .similar, at least, to the extent that we both watched the game action from over a pair of these half-lense glasses which, admittedly, are more common to the Cyrus Vances of the world than they are to the Al McGuires and John Woodens.

• • •

WHAT HAS HAPPENED to me in previous games with Higgins should never happen to, say, Gerald Myers. And, as Scott points out, likely never would.

There was a time in a close game years ago when Bodie, after missing a clutch free throw, sprinted from the line to the bench, jumped into my lap and started crying.

Third-graders sometimes take basketball too seriously, I thought.

At other times, though, they don't seem to take it seriously enough.

Bodie's missed free throw was not fatal that night, but it did keep us from padding a one-point lead with the seconds ticking away.

Higgins' team came down the court, missed a shot and we had the ball, with just a minute and something to play. We had one time out remaining, and I was feeling kinda good.

As my guard came by the bench, I told him to run the clock down to ten seconds, then use our time out. They didn't have one left.

But instead, he immediately calls time out—our last time out!

"WHAT HAVE YOU DONE?," I yelled.

"I called time out, Coach," he explained.

"But why NOW?," I demanded.

"Because," he calmly replied, "NOW is when I had to go to the bathroom."

• • •

BUT, BACK TO THE situation tonight, our team and American General were pretty dog-goned even, as they should be.

After all, Higgins and I both had good positions in the player draft, he picking right behind me.

We had an equal advantage going into the draft, too, as our respective wives already had provided us both with a pretty good play-making guard to build from.

On first call, I took Mike and left him Johnson, and that was a tough decision. But I knew Mike better, personally, and he is a youngster of exceptional character and upbringing. So is Johnson. But Mike, I figured, would provide me with a unique individual challenge: I'm dern near 6-4, and Mike would be the first kid I ever coached who was taller than me.

Such challenges are inspiring.

Next I took Donny and he got Dement, and those kids may have been the best second-round drafts in all of MOB history. The third round is when you have to cash in your "freezes," or sons, as the case generally is. That meant Scott and Martin, who've been playing each other face-to-face since either can remember.

• • •

ONE MIGHT WONDER, or (as some papas did) even ask, why I, a relative amateur coach, would run such a complicated defense as the 1-3-1 zone. In it, as you obviously know, a team has to play keenly heady and enthusiastically well at all three corners. And all five players must function with the 1-3-1's concepts constantly in mind. I selected it because, if I may peek momentarily over this cloak of required humility, I knew I could coach it.

Of course, I also knew that I had drafted three kids from Wilson Junior High, and the 1-3-1 was the defense they had just got through running in the public schools program.

"It used to," Scott said, "until you adjusted it."

• • •

EVIDENTLY, MY adjustments suited Johnson and Dement. All night long, Johnson was standing wide open right in the middle of it. And Dement . . . man, that kid, from the corner, is a better shot than Minnesota Fats.

Now maybe you have the picture that, at the time I call this time out, things aren't going too well. Embarrassed, perhaps, by Scott's timing in asking me whether I had ever beaten Higgins, Mike asked for the floor.

"Coach, may we have a short prayer?"

Being of a nature to neither fear the Supreme Court nor to respect the ACLU, I agreed. Mike's offering was brief, articulate and asked no special favors except faith in each other.

• • •

BACK ON THE floor, either their shooting cooled or our defense stiffened. Donny found the range, and Chris and David zipped in a couple of long ones. It grew into the kind of game it should have been, not even stopping completely when the clock ran out.

The tumult was followed by the shouting and, when all settled, we had won!

Chest out to an expansion befitting the occasion, I accepted Higgins' congratulations and swaggered proudly across the floor. Another MOB coach approached me, a little less awed than he could have been, and said:

"So you finally beat Higgins."

Just as I started to open the car door, one of the papas approached, proud of the team, proud of his son, proud of the victory.

"That was a great win," he said. "But for a long time there, I didn't think you had a prayer."

Man Designs Upholstery Machine

"You get a piece of metal where you can, as close to what you want as you can find. Then, you saw it, grind it, drill it and file it and make it into the piece you want.

"When it's all working, you start refining it to make it smoother to manufacture."

It took five years, with a two-year time out for a slow-healing broken arm, to get the machine into production and spread into a national market with an international market eagerly waiting.

"The manufacturer said it would take five shipments to get it all worked out. We're on our third shipment."

All machine work, including casting of parts, is done in Taiwan where Thompson went for help after a Lubbock manufacturer couldn't get the machine into production.

Each machine then goes to Thompson's workbench for refining to make it do what he wants it to.

"They're working on it on the other end. There's a lot of fine craftsmen over there."

There also is a lot of correspondence—by mail, telegram and telephone—going on to work out difficulties.

"By the time the fifth shipment is done, the machine should come from the factory ready for the market."

Until it does, Thompson refuses to export his products to markets already opening in foreign countries.

When machines are flowing smoothly from factory to customer, Thompson already will be kneedeep in production of an improved model—the same size with a different feed system and a compound needle system.

But, the Thompson machine will sew anything that will go under its foot, up to eight thicknesses of heavy fabric-backed upholstery plastic.

The presser foot is a Thompson original, a walking foot with two parts, one to go up and down to press fabric for the needle and one synchronized with the feed dog to feed fabric evenly and smoothly.

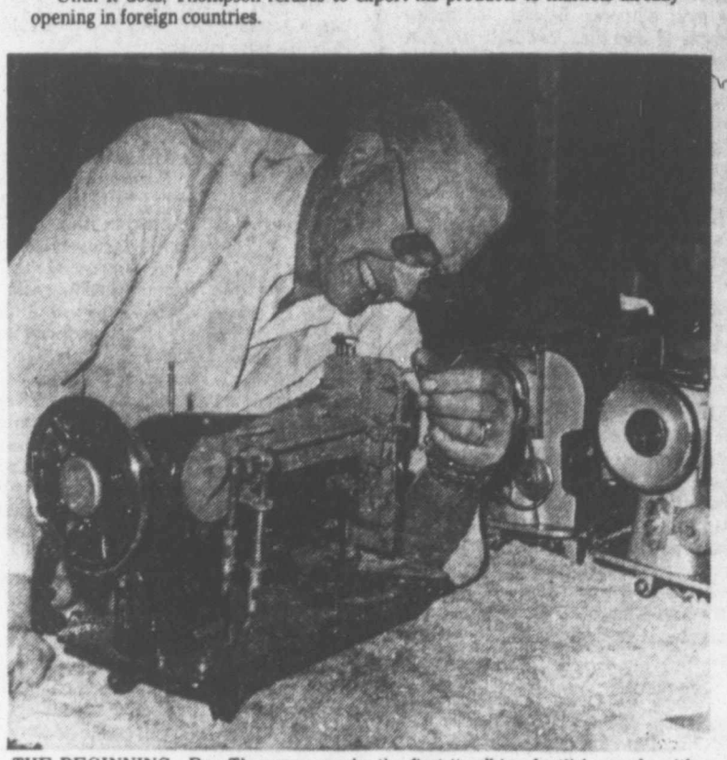

Idea for the machine, like no other on the market, came while Thompson operated a sewing machine shop on Avenue Q with spare hours to fill.

"It was a rough idea. I redesigned it. Took his idea and built a machine."

Taking his model and plans to a Lubbock manufacturer, Thompson ran into lots of difficulties in production but met the man who was to become his

BUYING, BUILDING, REMODELING?

The heat pump

It's time to consider the heat pump. Southwestern Public Service Company can suggest the system that will give you the most for your energy dollar, and come up with some accurate information on installation and operating costs.

The heat pump is the electric savings machine. And usually a machine of such sensitive operation calls for a lot of space and some pretty technical installation procedures. NOT SO WITH THE HEAT PUMP! "Split systems" — most adaptable to homes — consist of an outdoor and indoor section, easily tucked away in a closet, garage, basement or attic. The single package unit looks very similar to a central air-conditioning unit that's placed outdoors. Both systems can be installed in most every home or office that has central air ducts. If you're buying, building or remodeling, it's time you said . . .

Tension Between Groups Hurt CB

By MIKE WENDLAND

The airwave tensions between CB single sideband (SSB) operators and the more numerous AMers are continuing, with the latest development being an AM plan to take over sideband channels 31-40.

The ominous talk of airwave warfare can do nothing but hurt the hobby. While the two sides are bickering, the FCC, which is considering sweeping, beneficial changes to the CB service, is watching.

Ever since two different transmission modes were authorized on the CB band, sidebanders and AMers have been at one another's throats. The two modes are incompatible on the same frequencies at the same time. For a while, when the more costly sideband sets were relatively rare, the conflicts were minimal.

But as the superior range characteristics of sideband became known, more and more operators began trading up to SSB. First, sidebanders, by a sort of gentleman's agreement, settled on Channel 16. Then, they added 18. Finally, as the popularity of sideband skyrocketed, the users unofficially made channels 31-40 their home.

But AMers, who outnumber sideband operators almost 5-to-1, have long opposed the so-called hogging of the CB band's top quarter. Now, according to several AM CB groups in different parts of the country, the AMers want the top 10 channels back.

One of the proposals the FCC is considering would create an SSB-only band above channel 40. Since that is expected to happen, many of the AMers say, it's time to take over the present sideband frequencies.

Sidebanders disagree. HF International, their nationwide organization, is circulating a newsletter urging sidebanders to keep the frequencies.

The rumors about the impending battle are traveling wide.

It's in the interest of responsible CBers—be they AMers or sidebanders—to keep the peace and show the FCC that CB has become a mature hobby which not only recognizes different philosophies, but tolerates them as well.

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: I don't think the 900-MHz band being considered by the FCC is worth even considering for CBers. Its line-of-sight range would just not cut it for most purposes. Besides, the radios capable of operating that high will cost way too much. Let's stay at 27 MHz, but let's also get more room. It's too crowded.—R. T., Eugene, Ore.

• • •

Dear Static: All this talk about UHF-CB and the plans to make a 900-MHz band obscures the fact that, at 462-468 MHz, there already is an FM CB service. It's the General Mobile Radio Service, and it uses repeaters and everything. To get a GMRS license all you have to do is apply to the FCC. Of course you can't use it for hobby chatter, but for keeping in touch with the home or office it can't be beat.—R. E., Denver.

• • •

Dear Mr. Wendland: I'm a scanner fan and I'm glad to see that you'll be doing articles on public service band monitoring. The thrill of discovering confidential frequencies used by such outfits as the FBI and the Secret Service is really something. I've heard organized crime surveillances, drug busts and even a blooming office romance between an FBI agent and his radio dispatcher. Scanning is really fun.—T. R., Alexandria, Va.

Q. I want to get a Canadian CB license, as we plan to visit Niagara Falls, and I would like to take my radio with me. What do I do?—T. S., Madison Heights, Mich.

A. The FCC has a reciprocal licensing agreement with its counterpart agency in Canada. Write: Regional Superintendent, Telecommunications Regulation, Department of Communications, Toronto, Ont. The announcement followed a recent special board meeting called by Chairman Jerry Powell.

CONNER

GAULDING

Gaulding last month was moved to a new position as vice chairman of the board and chief executive officer.

Conner was previously associated with a local bank for 23 years where he resigned in August, 1979, from the position of executive vice president.

In announcing the appointment of Conner, Gaulding said, "We are pleased to have a person of Mr. Conner's banking background, and especially his experience as a mortgage banker, join us in this capacity at Sentry."

Conner is a 1952 graduate of Texas Tech University and a 1963 graduate of the School of Mortgage Banking at Northwestern University.

He has been a faculty member of the American Bankers Association's National Mortgage School and Texas Tech's Intermediate School of Banking. He was a charter member and officer of the real estate lending section of the Texas Bankers Association. He is past president of the Lubbock Mortgage Bankers Association, Lubbock Retail Merchants Association and Lubbock Economics Council.

Gaulding is a 1960 Texas Tech graduate. He began his banking career at a local bank in 1957 and became manager of its mortgage loan department in 1968.

Gaulding has served as president of the Lubbock Mortgage Bankers Association for two terms and is a past director of the Texas Mortgage Bankers Association. He has served as an officer of the Texas Bankers Association and served on various committee appointments of both the Texas Mortgage Bankers Association and the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

"We went to the World Trade Center at Dallas and got a list of sewing machine manufacturers. We ran down the list and picked one of the smallest but one of the oldest. We wrote to the company and they were interested. We made plans to to go Taiwan. We took the prototype and a set of plans."

The rest is history for the small upholstery machine designed to fill the gap between home sewing and the heavy industrial machines. Now, manufacturers of the large machines buy the Thompson machine to add to their line, recommending it for beginning production not yet ready for big-machine outlay.

Thompson deals with eight national wholesale distributors throughout the country and puts a hold on inquiries from other countries until the machines are further along.

While Thompson is customizing each machine, his partner works with shipping and assembly, though most of the assembly work is done by Thompson's daughter-in-law, Pam.

While the machine was designed to fill an industrial need, Thompson finds more and more women interested in its ability to handle the tougher end of home sewing.

"There wasn't one like it on the market so I started work on the idea. It is the only one light enough to put in a case and carry."

Trend Towards Diesel Trucks

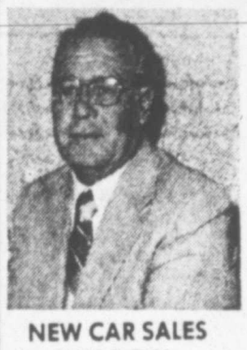

BLUE BELL, Pa. (UPI) — In an effort to control rising operating expenses, owners of mid-size trucks in the United States are switching to diesel-powered vehicles, says an industry executive.

He says the change is being made because diesels can often double fuel mileage and halve maintenance costs in comparison with gasoline-powered vehicles.

"As many as 48 percent of mid-range trucks registered in 1985 could be diesel-powered, up from the current rate of around 10 percent," says Raymond S. Reardon Jr., president of IVECO Trucks of North America, Inc.

Reardon adds that close to 50 percent of all trucks on the continent are diesel-powered.

Most Home Designs Flexible Enough To Permit Changes

Planning a new home can be exciting. It's not only fun but easy to dream as you search for the design that is just right for your family.

When searching for a home, one should keep in mind that no one ever builds a home exactly as shown in the plans. When selecting a design, one should concentrate on the floor plan layout as exteriors can easily be changed during construction. Other common changes which your contractor can also make are alterations in size, type, material and location of windows and doors; rearrangement of kitchen and baths; eliminating or relocating a fireplace; making rooms smaller or larger by redimensioning; relocating the garage; use of a different roof design and material; reversing the layout of the home; substituting a different exterior wall covering and many other similar changes.

In this plan, the living room-dining area has been located at the front of the house with the family room-kitchen at the rear. If preferred, the location of these rooms could be interchanged.

All bedrooms are of generous size to accommodate twin beds and the huge master bedroom suite is located at the rear of the plan for more privacy. The dressing area has a long wardrobe and a pullman lavatory. The bath backs up to the family bath. None of the bedrooms have a common wall.

The exciting Spanish exterior with its arches, wrought iron railing and tile roof would be an exceptional addition to any neighborhood.

Complete working drawings for plan 31275 can be purchased for only $19.95 for the first set and $10 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until March 11, 1980. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $4. Also available are six home plan books illustrating nearly 1,000 plans — a $13 value — for only $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J, Northridge, California 91328.

Seminar Slated On Exchange Of Property

AUSTIN (Special) — A property exchange short course and a marketing session all in one package are scheduled at the Austin Hilton Inn, Dec. 10-13.

Sponsored by the National Farm & Land Institute, Texas Chapter 22, and the Texas Property Exchangors, the seminar will include three days of lecture and a one-day marketing session.

"This is the first time that the National FLI course, 'Exchanging Farms, Ranches and Rural Properties,' has been offered in Texas," said James Glanville, Houston, Texas FLI president.

"Two nationally acclaimed real estate leaders, Vernon C. Allen, Glasgow, Mo., and Leslie L. Matheney, Jackson, Miss., will serve as instructors," Glanville said.

"With today's high interest rates, those of us in the farm and land brokerage business are especially eager to hear about innovative techniques that can aid us in effecting transactions for our buyers and sellers," he said.

New PDM Steel Service Center Opens Here

A new PDM Steel Service Center has opened for business in Lubbock at 408 Amarillo Highway, according to an announcement by John Kent, district manager.

The primary objective of the center is to supply steel products to those customers who find that obtaining small quantity shipments from mills is uneconomical, too time-consuming, or do not wish to stock material, he said.

In addition to an extensive inventory, the service center is equipped to conduct first-stage operations, such as shearing, cutting and burning of material to size or shape.

The Lubbock facility will service customers in the West Texas, Eastern New Mexico, and the Oklahoma Panhandle.

The management team also includes Cordell Wilcox, inside supervisor, and Harold Allee, plant supervisor.

Second Mortgages Gaining Popularity With Buyers

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Second mortgages are gaining popularity with homebuyers caught up in the current high-interest-rate, tight-mortgage-money market.

Dr. Jack Friedman, head of the research division of the Texas Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M University, said the financing dilemma facing buyers, sellers and brokers has caused some relativey new firms offering mortgages for homebuyers to crop up. A few established savings and loan associations are offering second mortgages as well.

In Texas, a second mortgage can initially be used to purchase a homestead or improve it.

"The second mortgage route can be especially convenient, said Friedman, "for buyers who want to assume an existing loan but do not quite have enough cash for the assumption. For example, suppose a buyer wants a $75,000 home with a $50,000 mortgage against it but only has $15,000 cash. That buyer needs $10,000 to complete the transaction. A second mortgage can be used to provide the $10,000"

Each lender has individual guidelines, appraisal requirements, down payments and terms. Maximum second mortgage amounts generally are up in the $30,000 range. Maximum terms are 10 to 20 years. Typically, no discount points are required.

$41 Billion To Be Spent On Home Improvements

WASHINGTON (Special) — A total of $41 billion—the equivalent cost of building 600,000 single-family homes—will be spent this year to maintain, repair, add to, alter and make major home improvements, Dr. Jack Carlson, executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, says.

"The economics of home ownership is not confined merely to buying and selling homes, but the daily upkeep and improvement of property impacts heavily on this nation's economic well-being," Carlson said. "The level of expenditures this year marks a gain of 9.3 percent from 1978 and is triple the amount spent just 10 years ago."

Additions and alterations to existing homes in 1979, he said, will account for expenditures of more than $16 billion, the equivalent cost of a quarter-million new homes.

Social Security . . . Out West

By BILL WEST
S.S. Field Representative

HAVE YOU EVER WONDERED how much money you have paid into the social security trust funds and how much it would have amounted to if you could have invested it in secure savings accounts and certificates of deposit?

If you paid on maximum earnings and retired at age 65 in 1979, your monthly benefit amount would be $553.30. Do a little division and see just how quick you get your social security tax dollars back and also how fast your savings account would be depleted if you drew it out at the rate of $553.30 per month.

Realize, of course, that social security benefits are paid for life and that once a savings account is gone, it is gone. Also, realize that if your wife is age 65 and not insured on her own record that she would receive one-half of $553.30 or $276.70. (Benefits are rounded to the next highest dime)

EASY DOES IT

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Most Halloween accidents result from children darting between cars, says Rollie Schneider, an extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Schneider suggests parents follow National Safety Council guidelines for a safe holiday. They include reviewing pedestrian safety rules with the kids, including crossing streets only at crosswalks, never between cars; and using sidewalks, not streets, for going from house to house. Lots of reflective tape on their costumes and trick or treat bags also make them highly visible. At least one child in a group should also carry a flashlight, Schneider says.

GHOSTLY TALE

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — More adults than children believe in ghosts, if a recent informal survey by a card manufacturer is to be believed. Only 21 percent of a group of grade schoolers, average age, 7 years, said they believed in spooks, compared with 57 percent of the adults and half the high school seniors queried for the Hallmark cards study. Forty-four percent of the high schoolers said they had actually seen a ghost and 28 percent of the adults claimed similar sightings. But only 13 percent of the grade schoolers said they had seen a ghost.

Anderson To Head Surveyors

Tommie E. Anderson of Lubbock was appointed chairman of the Texas Surveyors Association Committee for Public Information at a short course held recently in Austin by the organization.

Anderson is president of Hugo Reed and Associates Inc., a Lubbock-based surveying and engineering firm.

In appointing Anderson, John Jakubik of Houston, TSA president, said, "I am establishing this public information committee to work with the Board of Registration for Surveyors. This committee will assist the board in establishing a public information program for the purpose of informing the public regarding the practice and regulation of land surveyors in the state, including a standard complaint form that shall be made available to the general public."

Also attending the short course from the Lubbock area, were: C. A. Tubbs, John Wilson, Robert L. Smith, Bernard Gradel Jr., J. Stan Piper, Gary Wilson and David Goyette.

Mrs. Lasher To Lead Fellowship Meet

Claire Lasher of Spokane, Wash., will lead the Thursday meeting of the Women's Aglow Fellowship. The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. in Room 101 of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Mrs. Lasher teaches several weekly Bible study classes for women of all denominations and is an author and editor.

Women's Aglow Fellowship is for women of all denominations, according to Dorinda Crump of the local group.

In the last three decades of this century, the world's population is expected to double — to 7.6 billion.

OUR PLEDGE

We pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation, under God, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Days Of Indecision Upon Us

IF ANY GOOD is to come from America's tragedy-laced humiliation in Tehran, it will have to be in learning well the lessons it teaches for the future.

Never again can we tolerate an administration so inept and ill-prepared to deal with street mobs that take American soil by force of arms, depriving our citizens of life, liberty or the pursuit of happiness.

And, with the 1980 elections approaching, voters desperately need to understand that our national survival is threatened unless we elect Congressmen and a President who put America first.

That includes changing our foreign policy and adopting energy and tax policies which treat American oil companies and their profits not as enemies but as a source of strength in preserving our independence.

A FEELING OF helplessness swept over the nation this last week as the realization sank in that our government had few if any options in seeking the safe release of 61 Americans taken hostage by the Ayatollah Khomeini's fanatics.

All of the cards were held in irrational hands, by barbarians with a 7th Century mentality unwilling to observe the rules of modern civilization.

The United States had inadequate protection for its embassy personnel, no contingency plans for dealing with such a predictable crisis, nobody and no place to turn to for help.

PRESIDENT CARTER himself, his maneuverability at such a late date obviously limited, failed miserably to evidence any degree of leadership in the situation. He was at the mercy of Khomeini and other trigger-happy terrorists and knew it.

Perhaps he was closeted all the while with his political advisers and speechwriters trying to figure out new ways to verbally abuse the oil companies and inflame voters' emotions to support confiscatory windfall taxes.

IT WAS TOO LATE for the President and Congress to undo the damage they have inflicted on the nation the last few years.

Had American business and industry been unshackled after the 1973 Arab oil embargo, six years would have been ample time to make our economy less dependent on foreign oil.

We would not now have to be walking on egg shells lest we offend an Iranian religious fanatic or the Arab sheiks and have our supply lines severed.

Hindsight, someone says? No, foresight ignored. The question now is whether the latest humiliation will cause our government to implement the foresight available to it so that future, and worse, situations of this sort can be avoided.

WHILE LOOKING ahead to the election of a Congress and an administration that will get their heads out of the sand, Americans must insist on immediate steps to prevent another Tehran.

Until Iran has a more stable government, its diplomats should be barred from American soil and its dissident "students" should be sent back home.

The problem with such retaliatory measures, of course, is that the United States is dealing from a position of weakness in that regard, just as it was from the first in trying to secure the release of the hostages in Tehran.

Are we willing to pay the short-term price of a policy of non-appeasement in order to regain our self-respect and protect the free world's economy and political stability in the long run?

WE LIVE IN A world in which hard choices must be made. However much we would like to drift with the tide, America can not afford to trust its future and world peace to erratic dictators of undeveloped countries.

Leadership is required. If we continue to avoid that leadership role and shirk our strategic responsibilities, the whole free world stands in danger of being held hostage to the likes of the street mobs in Tehran.

This is not a world in which what happens in Tehran or Tel Aviv or Cape Town, not to mention Moscow or Peking, can be left to chance or to someone else's strengths.

America needs a foreign policy of enlightened self-interest, based on its traditional goodwill but backed by its great military power, while it restores from within its own moral fiber and self-reliance.

The alternative is to knuckle under to the economic, political and even military demands of those who would despitefully use us.

ART BUCHWALD:

Chrysler Panhandler Drives Hard Bargain

WASHINGTON—"Hey, mister, could you spare a billion and a half dollars to get me through 1980?"

"Out of my way, you bum. Why don't you get a job like everyone else?"

"I have a job making Chrysler cars."

"Then why are you standing here with a tin cup asking decent folks for money?"

"Nobody seems to want to buy my cars."

"In the capitalist system, my good man, it is the survival of the fittest. If you can't sell a product, then you don't deserve to be in business.

"SUPPOSE I DO give you a billion and a half dollars. How do I know you won't use it for drink instead of building better cars?"

"Don't worry about that, mister. You give me the money and I'll go right to the plant and produce one of the most beautiful automobiles you've ever seen."

"Why didn't you produce one before?"

"That's a long story. I'll tell it to you if you put a billion and a half dollars into my tin cup."

"It seems to me that is a lot of money to pay for a hard luck story."

"I'll also give you a new pencil.

"DON'T THINK it's much fun being out here on the street, mister. But panhandling for car money is all I can do. The banks won't give me none, and a lot of people think I'm a loser.

"But if I can just get a little nest egg, you won't see me on this corner again."

"You were going to tell me your story."

"Only if you gave me a handout."

"I want to hear your story first."

"Okay. What happened was that once upon a time, I was a happy, prosperous auto maker. I made some of the best cars on the road. The kids used to whistle when I went by."

"Get on with it. I'm late for dinner."

"BUT THEN something happened. I guessed wrong on what people wanted. I made little cars only to discover they wanted big cars. Then I made big cars just when everyone decided they wanted small cars.

"I couldn't figure out what the public wanted, and it drove me to drink. I started cutting costs—a little here and a little there—and pretty soon not even Ricardo Montalban could move them out of the showroom."

"If I give you a billion and half dollars, what will you do differently?"

"I have great plans for the new models. I even have an updated slogan: 'Buy the car that is guaranteed by the United States Treasury.' How does that grab you?

"Look, a billion and half dollars is tip money for someone like you, but it could change my whole life."

"I GUESS I'm always a sucker for a hard luck corporation story. You know, if you had been a little guy I'd have let you starve to death."

"I appreciate that, sir. The minute I saw you walking down the street I said to myself, 'There's a man who cares about the big guy when he gets in trouble.'"

"Let's see what I have in my pocket—one hundred million, two hundred million, three hundred million, four hundred million, five hundred million. You don't have another cup, do you—this one seems filled up."

"Yes, sir, right here."

"Six, seven, eight, nine—one billion—one hundred, two hundred, three, four, five. There you are. Now you be careful how you spend that, you hear?"

"Yes, sir. Thank you, sir. God bless you, sir—and, sir."

"What is it?"

"Don't forget your pencil."

Conference Will Catalogue Public Library Priorities

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Thursday is a very important day for the citizens of Lubbock and the nation: 570 delegates from every state will meet in Washington, D.C., for the first White House Conference on Library and Information Services.

At this meeting, plans will be made and priorities set for library service in this country in the coming decades.

Libraries are a vital national resource, providing education, information and recreation to millions of our citizens. And yet, many libraries, particularly public libraries, are under severe pressure from taxpayers to cut back on staff and services.

The White House Conference will discuss ways to relieve these budgetary pressures, paying particular attention to the proposed National Library Act which would have the federal government and state governments assume a greater share in funding public libraries.

Lubbock will send a delegate, Betty Anderson, to the White House Conference on Library and Information Services.

As chairman of the Lubbock City-County Library Board, I am asking that Lubbock citizens be aware of the conference and be prepared to support recommendations for the future of libraries in this country.

Pastor Refutes Comments In Letter Of Rejoinder

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Jo White's rejoinder to my letter is factually and logically incorrect.

First, Lubbock Bible Church had nothing to do with the Probe activity at Tech, leave alone being called "headquarters" for it. Having access to the information she does, she ought to know this point. Other fine Christian groups in our community organized it and financially supported it.

Second, she begs the question. The question I raised had nothing to do with special religious exercises in public institutions. My letter simply questioned the commonly assumed dogma, which Miss White apparently believes enthusiastically, that the educational process can be "sanitized" of all religious influence.

Her remarks on children being taught to read dramatizes the point. As an evangelical Christian who daily must face God in His literary collection called the Bible, I would love to have all children taught to read it themselves. It would make my job so much easier. In fact, that used to be the objective of American education, before the modern humanists imposed their belief-system upon the law through Jefferson's overworked remark on separation of church and state.

To refute my point she should have shown how any subject can be taught without making philosophical assumptions of religious importance. Merely repeating the slogan that there exists some sort of make-believe land of neutrality is just another assertion of a belief.

His Cream Puff Is For Sale To Buyer Of Teddy's Story

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

The other night I listened with tears in my eyes while the honorable senator from Massachusetts explained what "really happened" at Chappaquiddick. If anybody out there believed his story, I wish they would give me a call as I have a real cream puff of a used car for sale.

If Sen. Kennedy had been driving my car it would have saved him a lot of embarrassment. You see it's a Volkswagen. If you are out with your girl and you happen to drive off a bridge, a common occurrence in some states, you needn't worry as this Volkswagen will float.

I also have a set of used crib notes from a very prestigious law school for sale, cheap. Remember also that if you get caught using my notes and are kicked out of school, you can, in all probability be elected to the U.S. Senate and even someday run for President. Gee, only in America.

KISS Turns Other Cheek After Controversial Concert

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

We would like to thank Bill Kerns for his interest in contacting us. As I'm sure you can imagine, people in the public eye like us are so often talked about that all kinds of stories develop. Unfortunately, few people go to the trouble of going to the source as he did.

The letters K-I-S-S mean just what they say: "kiss," as in "to kiss." They don't stand for anything other than the obvious. We chose the name because we felt that a kiss represents life, emotion, and communication between people. KISS is a "people" band. KISS truly appreciates its fans and the fans always come first. That's one reason why we appreciate the opportunity to clear up any misconceptions.

As far as the evil connotation of the idea that KISS means "Kids (or knights) in Satan's Service," it's an imaginative interpretation but we want to state for the record that there is absolutely no truth whatsoever to that notion. We are a rock group and want nothing to do with Satan or any other evil influence.

We'd like to tell you a little about our outrageous costumes and make-up. The KISS mystique is built on the enjoyment of fantasy. Each of us plays a role on stage and the costumes and make-up help us to look the part.

Ace plays a man from outer space whose music vibrates with other worldly sounds. Peter attacks his drums like a tiger and thus plays the role of a cat. Rhythm guitarist Paul is the man who loves everyone and is loved by everyone in return, so he is the KISS love object. Gene grew up on Lon Chaney movies and, as a continuation of that childhood interest, chose to play a monster on stage. His heavy bass guitar and fire-breathing talents add to that image. All of our music, of course, is loud and rhythmic and inspiring to fans because that's what rock 'n' roll is all about.

Since we are so involved with fantasy, it's easy for us to understand how KISS fans (or non-fans) might be inclined to impose some fantasies of their own—and that's how KISS is sometimes misinterpreted. But the band's only desire is for fans to listen to our music, come to our shows, and have a good time.

We hope that we have finally "cleared the air" on this subject. Thank you very much for giving us the chance to explain our viewpoint and to set the record straight that KISS is in no way working with or serving the cause of Satan.

If You Like Rock 'n' Roll, Says Fan, You'll Like KISS

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I disagree with the idea that KISS makes it only by their concerts and not by their music. No one buys a KISS album to see all the gimmicks at a KISS concert.

They buy the album for the music inside! All those gimmicks are just to attract attention.

I saw the KISS concert here and I went to see them and hear their music not to see the gimmicks. You may think they don't sing good, but I do! So do many other fans. That's why they sell so many records.

I would like you to correct the statement that they can't sing worth a flip. If they can't sing worth a flip why do they sell so many records?

I am a little girl who is 11 years old and I would like you to listen to one of their records. If you like rock and roll you'll like it. If you don't like rock and roll you will not like it.

Mayor's Muleshoe Caper Welcome Change Of Pace

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Thank you for the opportunity to have a good laugh.

Your reporting of Mayor West's "Eat-Out at Muleshoe" was a welcome change from reading about wars, taxes, and busing.

Time For A Recess

DALLAS—They're playing a new game in economic circles these days called "catch the recession." Everybody says it's here (or coming...or on the way out), but nobody seems to be able to find it.

As recessions go, the 1979 model is an economic "flasher," a now-you-see-it-now-you-don't riddle that has the charts-and-graphs boys gnawing on their erasers.

By the end of the summer, they were sure they had it cornered—They added up their scorecards and, aha, the GNP was down 0.6 percent for the year; housing starts were off 21.6 percent; retail sales had slumped 9.2 percent; and consumer prices had shot up 14 percent.

Not only that, auto sales were a disaster. Corporate profits fell 2.4 percent. And the dollar was turning into funny money.

THAT'S WHEN the experts pounced. This is it, they said, all those weaknesses meant the recession was out in the open and moving fast enough to drag us into a king-sized slump. Any day now, they warned us, unemployment would start going up.

But this recession doesn't play by the rules. Just when everybody thought it had passed "go," it disappeared again. Now there's a new set of statistics out—and look what's happening:

The gross national product is up 1.4 percent.

Unemployment is down to 5.8 percent, a figure some economists feel is about as close to "full employment" as this country's ever going to get. (And, interestingly enough, hiring for financial executives is up 60 percent for the year.)

NEW HOME construction shot up a startling 4.2 percent, sending everybody back to their tea leaves. Building permits, which signal future intentions, went up 4.8 percent.

And that's in spite of sky-high mortgage rates, not to mention the increasing cost of building materials and labor.

Factory production is up to 85.1 percent of capacity, a small improvement, but still a plus. (The peak month was March, when it hit 87.1 percent.) Even auto sales improved 3.6 percent, thanks to Detroit's giant rebate and discount "bargain days."

Consumer sales are up, too, which is not the way you're supposed to play the recession game. Shoppers are supposed to be scared off during hard times. Traditionally, they stop spending and start saving.

BUT THAT'S not the way it's working out at the moment. The savings rate fell 5.4 percent in the second quarter and, if the forecasters are guessing right, that will slip even further in the third quarter to 4.6 percent.

Folks are still out there spending, prodded by fears that if they hold off it's going to cost them even more. Apparently they've got the money; private wages and salaries went up 0.8 percent last month.

That means the September income of Americans increased $12.2 billion to an annual rate of $1.96 trillion.

They spent a lot of it in the stores. Retail sales around the country shot up 2.2 percent in September, on top of a 3.1-percent increase in August.

THAT'S THE biggest jump so far this year and it keeps cash registers jingling often enough to stall off cutbacks in production which, in turn, keeps workers from being laid off in great numbers.

The sales figures are so strong, in fact, the Fed may have to turn the screws on credit a little tighter. Then maybe things will get bad enough to suit the economists.

It's very embarrassing, you know, to have a recession that won't stay recessed.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

BURGLARS, ARSONISTS, rapists do not prefer to commit their crimes in the deepest darkness, contrary to widespread belief. They can find their way around better with at least a little light.

This is said by some authorities to be why night crimes tend to be higher during times of the full moon. Has nothing to do with the lunar influence on the mind, they aver, sensibly.

Garage Apartment Curbs Draw Protests

FOR THREE DECADES city officials have ignored, and even tacitly condoned, the illegal proliferation of garage apartments in neighborhoods zoned for one or two family residences.

But now, at the insistence of neighborhood groups, city officials are attempting to correct the past errors and crack down on the illegal apartments.

Already suits have been filed against two owners of garage apartments in single family (R-1) zones and a subcommittee of the Planning and Zoning Commission has been struggling to find a legal way to eliminate the apartments causing problems, allow the apartments to remain which do not adversely affect the neighborhood and prevent the construction of any additional apartments without correct zoning.

There are no statistics on how many garage apartments there are in Lubbock, but estimates on the number range from the hundreds to between 1,500 and 2,500.

ALTHOUGH THE GREATEST concentration of rear apartments are in the Overton South and Unit neighborhoods, the apartments exist all over Lubbock.

P&Z Chairman Jim Ratliff explained many of the apartments came into existence following World War II and during Texas Tech University's booming years when housing for students and veterans was needed.

Lubbockites with garages or servants quarters were urged to convert the structures to apartments to help ease the housing shortage.

Since that time, the apartments have remained a source of inexpensive housing for students, in most cases within walking distance to Texas Tech.

"They are a very valuable source of housing," Ratliff said.

"We have to be real careful," he said, adding finding a solution to the problem of gargage apartments "could be one of the stickiest things we've handled."

Ratliff said his parents have a rear apartment behind their house which is always rented to a Tech student who helps with maintenance of the property.

"APPARENTLY WE HAVE some which are not idyllic situations which we need to deal with," Bass said.

"I think we're pretty much in consensus some are all right in some instances and some are not," he said.

With the agreement among subcommittee members that there are both good and bad garage apartments and that the problem which exists now will only worsen if action on the problem is postponed, the subcommittee tentatively agreed on a solution to the problem.

Under the subcommittee's suggestion, garage apartment owners would be required to register the existence of the apartments with the city within a specified time.

Those apartments which are registered could continue to exist during an amortization period designed to allow property owners to recoup their initial investments.

OWNERS OF THE APARTMENTS would have the option of asking the Zoning Board of Adjustment to approve the structures as legal nonconforming uses if the structures are deemed appropriate for the neighborhood or if they were in existence before 1941 when the city's first zoning regulations were adopted.

Without ZBA approval, the apartments could not be used as rental units following the end of the amortization period.

However, subcommittee members must determine what would constitute a fair registration period and amortization period.

Subcommittee member Mary Vines said she feared the registration period would be used to construct other apartments before the period ended.

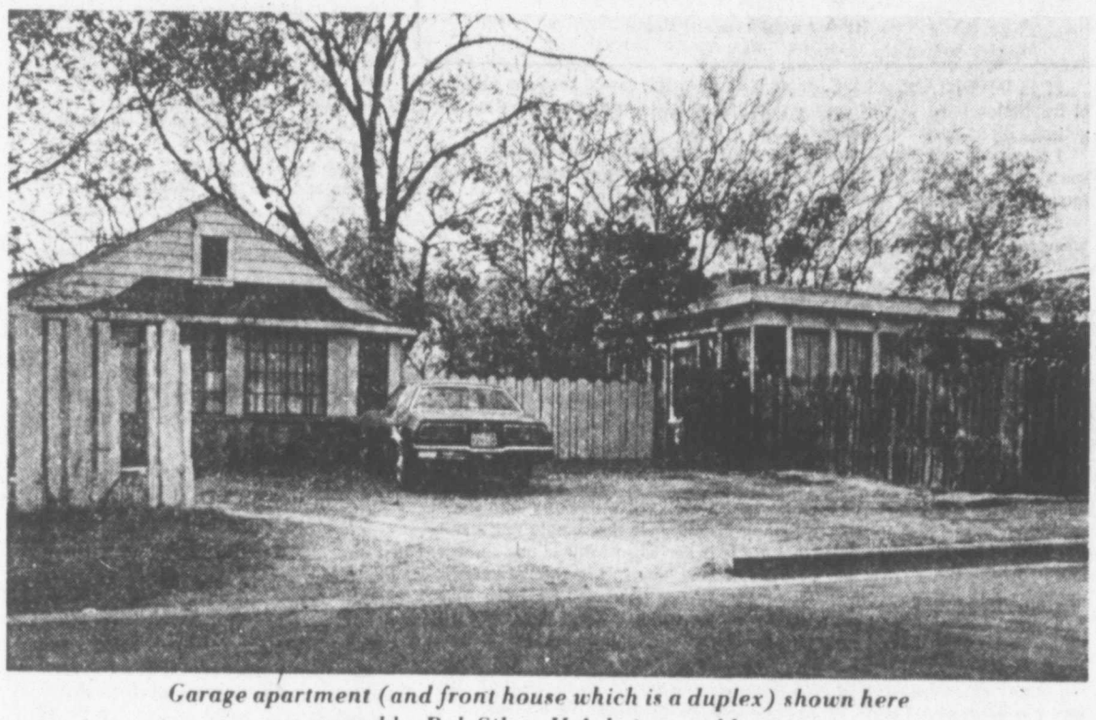

But Assistant City Attorney Leon Bean said that was unlikely because the amortization period would not allow apartment owners to make a profit, but only to recoup their investments.

The subcommittee will hold a public hearing on the proposed amendment in the coming weeks, then make a recommendation to the full planning commission.

'Harassment' Charged By Apartment Owners

GARAGE APARTMENTS are an emotional and controversial subject among apartment owners and neighborhood groups.

The Unit neighborhood association, which has protested the existence of the apartments most loudly, sees the apartments destroying property values and the stability of their neighborhood.

However, apartment owners say their properties often are in better condition than adjacent single family residences and any damage done by the existence of the apartments was done many years ago.

Neale Pearson, chairman of the Unit neighborhood association, said the illegal garage apartments often are behind houses which are illegally converted to more than one unit.

The additional occupants on a lot designed for a single family increases the population density in the neighborhood, Pearson said, and results in increased traffic on neighborhood streets and parking problems.

ALSO, HE SAID THE "population makeup" of the neighborhood is changed. Instead of families with children, there are Tech students "and other transients" living in the area.

"Students' lifestyles are very different from those of families with children," he said.

Absentee owners who rent out property in the neighborhood "don't keep up their property the way a resident owner would," Pearson said, and renters have little incentive to maintain property either.

Pearson said the apartment owners "have disrespect for the zoning ordinances" of the city.

"Over a long period of time, the neighborhood starts to undergo a process where people buy houses for their income potential, not for places to live," he said.

The problem of garage apartments is severe on selected streets and areas in Unit, bounded by University and Indiana Avenues and 19th and 34th Streets, he said.

The problem of garage apartments and the illegal conversions of single family homes to apartments has resulted in the city's Intensified Code Enforcement Program aimed primarily at Unit and Overton South.

SINCE THE PROGRAM began in April, more than 100 zoning citations have been written, including two on garage apartment owners Bill Bethune and Bob Sikes.

Most recently the city filed suit against the two men for zoning violations after the Planning and Zoning Commission and the City Council refused to legalize the apartments with a change in zoning.

However, Sikes and Bethune say they have done nothing hundreds of other apartment owners have done, namely buy apartments as investments.

The relative newcomers to Lubbock both purchased properties in Unit less than a year ago which consist of a front duplex and a rear apartment. Unit's R-1 zoning permits only one residence per lot.

Both men also made an effort before purchasing the properties to be sure the apartments were legal.

Bethune said he was told by three real estate agents the zoning didn't matter since the apartments already existed when Bethune purchased them.

"I took every step to protect myself," Bethune said, including a title search and securing a loan from one of the city's largest financial institutions based on the income from the apartments.

FROM THE APARTMENT Bethune purchased, four other rear apartments can be seen on the same block, he said.

"Why not assume, if it had been existing that it was not illegal?" he asked, adding he assumed the loan would not have been approved if the zoning were a problem.

"I was thoroughly convinced I'd done nothing illegal," he said.

Then he received notification from the city's zoning department the apartments were illegal and he should "tear out the plumbling and close down the unit," Bethune said.

Following conversations with zoning officials and attorneys, Bethune said he and Sikes were told to file for a zone change on the property or he would be prosecuted.

"I began to feel I was simply being harassed," he said.

"I wanted to request legal nonconforming use. I didn't want a zone change," he said.

"I just wanted to operate like hundreds of others in Lubbock," he said.

HOWEVER, HE SAID Pearson stirred up neighborhood residents by claiming Bethune was attempting to get zoning for a "high-rise multi-family apartment."

Pearson also told Unit residents with garage apartments that their units were not in violation of the zoning ordinance to stimulate opposition to the zone change request, Bethune said.

He said he produced proof for the Planning and Zoning Commission that the apartments had been in existence and continuously rented for the past 26 years.

Although the commission seemed sympathetic to his plight, Bethune said it denied his zone change but set up a subcommittee to examine the problem of garage apartments.

Bethune said he was told the council would take no action on the zone change request until the P&Z formulated its garage apartment recommendations and he wrote a letter asking for a postponement.

As a result, Bethune said he was in Amarillo on business when the council decided to hear the zone request and denied it without hearing from the proponents.

"Pearson told them I was there and snuck out," Bethune said. "Pearson's got them (city officials) in his back pocket," Bethune said.

AFTER BEING TOLD by city zoning officials he would not be prosecuted pending the P&Z subcommittee "I haven't done anything all the rest of the people in Lubbock aren't doing," he said. "I'm being discriminated against and harassed. I don't think I'm being treated like other citizens."

"I haven't changed the neighborhood," he said, adding he has improved the property to attract a higher class tenant.

UNDER AN AGREEMENT suggested by a Planning and Zoning Commission subcommittee, Bethune said he would have to close one unit of the front duplex immediately.

"I'm going to take a financial loss because a neighborhood association put pressure on the city," he said.

The owner of a single family residence "has no more right to tell me to take a loss than I have the right to tell them to put a garage apartment in the back of their lots."

If the suggested amortization period for the apartments is approved, Bethune said the incentive will be gone for property owners to improve their apartments and a "potential slum environment" will be created.

Instead, Bethune said he favors allowing existing apartments as legal nonconforming uses, but not allowing any more similar apartments.

That would "protect those who purchased property, protect the future of the neighborhood and protect single family residences," he said.

"It isn't fair to make somebody who invested last year pay the price because (the city) didn't do its job for 30 years" and didn't enforce the zoning ordinance.

BETHUNE SAID HE'S in a can't-win situation. Fighting the city's lawsuit will cost between $3,000 and $5,000, he said.

If he loses, his property will be worth $7,000 less when he must quit renting one of the units.

"You can go commit a crime an get off for half that fine," he said. "It seems to me the politicians here are interested in saving faces — they listen to the loudest voice," he said.

Since garage apartment owners are not organized, and many refuse to believe their apartments are illegal, Bethune said he thinks the City Council likely will adopt the subcommittee suggestion.

Bethune said he feels he's being made an example for other owners. A former city zoning inspector told Bethune he was told to select some nice looking garage apartments so the owners would be able to afford a court fight, he said.

"I'm never buying any more property in Lubbock," he said. "I'm not buying any more with a city council which operates like this.

Vocal Neighborhood Associations Apply Pressure On City Officials

INCREASED ENFORCEMENT OF THE city's zoning ordinance, including a crackdown on illegal garage apartments, has resulted largely from pressure on city officials applied by highly organized and vocal neighborhood associations.

Perhaps the best known and most organized of any group in Lubbock is the Overton South Neighborhood Association formed in 1975.

Chairman Roger Loter said the organization was formed to combat high density apartment development in the area.

Four years ago, he said the neighborhood was viewed as a prime area for speculative buyers who would purchase houses then demolish them with hopes of building large apartment complexes.

In the land use study, now being reexamined by the Planning and Zoning Commission, Loter said the amount of commercial and apartment zoning in the neighborhood was reduced and it helped the area stablize as a predominantly residential area.

THE ASSOCIATION ALSO has succeeded in having more modern street lights in the neighborhood replaced with replicas of lights in place when the area first was developed.

At the request of the association, seven structures in the area have received tentative city council approval as landmarks and Loter said he is hopeful the area eventually will become a Design-Historic district.

Within the past three years, approximately 70 new families have moved into the area, Loter said, and the percentage of owner-occupied homes is up in relation to rental structures.

The primary aim of the association is the "revitalization of that entire central city area, particularly Overton South," Loter said.

"Once we get Overton South on the way, we hope it will be contagious," Loter said.

The energy crunch and the escalating price of housing "are two things to our benefit," Loter said.

He noted the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) has said it will begin making loans available for the purchase and rehabilitation of homes in Overton South.

WITHOUT THE ASSOCIATION, Loter said the neighborhood would be "totally apartments — high density apartments — and another Tech Ghetto."

The organization has succeeded through "diligence, perseverence and hard work," he said, but added it still faces a problem with city officials.

He said the association must convince city officials to "make an unyielding commitment that this will remain residential," he said.

"We are the only neighborhood completely surrounded by commercial," he said, "and we are under constant threat."

The formation of the Unit neighborhood association came about the same time as that of the Overton South organization.

Neale Pearson, association chairman the past two years, said the catalyst to the group's formation was a developer's attempt to have three lots in the area zoned for apartments.

SINCE THAT TIME, Pearson said the group's aims have been the "preservation and improvement of the neighborhood as a place to live and to educate children."

In the absence of a ward system of electing council members, Pearson said a neighborhood association such as Unit insures the interests of the neighborhood will be protected.

Other battles being fought by the association include finding a solution to declining enrollments in three area schools and the city's "inability and unwillingness to enforce its weed code."

The association currently is attempting to secure federal Community Development funds for the construction of sidewalks along streets such as Boston and Flint Avenues, Pearson said.

Pearson also said there has been an upswing in enrollment at Roscoe Wslson Junior High School after three or four years of a decreasing student population.

CITY PLANNING DIRECTOR Jim Bertram said the neighborhood associations have been successful in calling public attention to older neighborhoods worth saving.

Residents of those neighborhoods complained of real estate agents steering people away from homes in Overton South or Unit, but Bertram said that attitude also is changing.

Stabilizing and revitalizing such neighborhoods is beneficial to the entire city because the tax base is increased and the existing housing stock is preserved, Bertram said.

New York City is the model of what occurs "when you are unable to reverse the process" of neighborhood deterioration, Bertram added.

He attributed the success of the neighborhood organiztions to the general "reasonableness of their requests" and the fact that association members have common concerns and a consensus of opinion when they appear before city officials with a request.

HOWEVER, HE SAID THE leaders and members of such organizations have a responsibility to seek what is best for the whole city, not just self-serving.

"There is a danger they would become negative or no longer taken seriously," he said.

"We have a model of what would happen in North Overton," he said. "I hope they're successful, because the alternatives are too frightening to imagine."

Mayor Dirk West said City Council members and city staff pay close attention to the requests of neighborhood groups like Unit and Overton South.

"Involvement by a total neighborhood usually gets immediate action," he said, adding the associations have been very effective.

"For the most part, they've done a great deal to improve certain areas of Lubbock," he said.

IN PREVIOUS YEARS, councils heard only from "self-appointed spokesmen who presented them as speaking for an entire neighborhood of the city," West said.

"We probably do give preferential treatment to neighbors who make an effort to get organized and to speak on behalf of certain areas," West admitted.

However, he said the requests of the groups have been reasonable so far. It's up to the council to determine whether a request is beneficial to the entire city and in the best interest of the entire city, West said.

The mayor said he views the neighborhood associations as a healthy phenomenon in Lubbock.

"There's an old saying there's strength in numbers," West said, "and in politics that's absolutely true.

"When you're dealing with folks running for office, and trying to stay in office, they are apt to look at the numbers involved," he said.

Human Development Aid Sought

Catholic churches in the Amarillo Diocese will join with others around the nation in taking a special offering for the Campaign for Human Development Nov. 18. Sister Regina Foppe of Lubbock is diocesan director for CHD.

"The issues of inflation, energy shortages and lack of adequate housing only compound the difficulties facing poor and powerless people in our society for whom survival already is a daily struggle," said the Rev. Marvin A. Mottet, CHD executive director.

"It is incumbent on us in the private sector to redouble our efforts to work together with others in our communities and nation to make our institutions more responsive to the needs of poor people," he said.

Among its 1500 self-help groups are legal aid, health care, education, housing, social development, economic development and communications programs.

In addition to funding self-help programs, the campaign, through its educational component, serves as a clearing house for information on poverty in the United States. It also provides justice education materials and information to 161 CHD diocesan directors.

Of the funds collected for this special offering, 75 percent of the amount is sent to the CHD office for national allocation and education programs. The remaining share is retained by the diocese.

The 1978 offering in the Amarillo Diocese came to just under $16,000, Sister Regina said.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

IT IS IMPORTANT AS WE go along through the day to keep the sources of inspiration open. We all need certain methods of perking ourselves up, of getting a lift or a new injection of courage.

I have been collecting from various people methods of how they keep their spirits up in the routine of every day. And I have tried out some of these methods; they certainly do the job.

For example, I was interviewed by a young reporter. He was a wondeful young fellow — lovable, eager, you might say radiant, in spirit.

"How do you get this way?" I asked.

A bit differently, he pulled out his wallet and showed me two pictures, side by side; one of a beautiful girl, his wife, and the other of Christ.

"When my spirits dip down," he explained, "I just take a look at those pictures. I'm working for those two and they are my support."

All I said to him was that any young man who carries a picture of Christ and of his wife in his wallet won't go wrong. He has a constant source of inspiration.

MY FRIEND JESSE SCHWAYDER, well known luggage manufacturer, carries a beautiful agate in his pocket. Around the agate is a gold band on which are the words, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." He has given this pocket piece to each of his salesman. I also have one and it is a reminder of the great truth that life is richer when we love one another and treat each other fairly and kindly. This businessman's method of keeping inspiration alive is a good one.

I carry a small aluminum cross among my change. When I pull out my money and see the cross lying among the coins, I give a second thought to how I spend it. One day, buying a paper at a newstand, I noted that the rough-looking proprietor was quarreling with his wife, who served as his assistant. His face was black with a scowl when he handed me my paper. When I took out a handful of change to get my nickel, the man saw my cross among the coins. He stared at it, then lifted his eyes to mine in a sort of surprise look. Slowly, a smile crossed his face. It was like sunlight after a storm — a beautiful smile — and I thought I saw a reflection of a man's soul in his eyes. I went away inspired by his reaction, and I know he was moved to patch up his argument with his good wife.

A FRIEND OF MINE who runs a small business making wooden novelties figured out an effective inspiration stimulator. He made a small sign with raised letters which reads, "Trust God and Live a Day at a Time." He places his sign at the foot of the stairs in his home where he can see it as he goes up to bed and comes down in the morning to begin his day. He made one for me and I have it in my office across from my desk where I can often look at it. That sign has a strong "keep you going," quality.

Perhaps you have a workable method of keeping the source of inspiration open during your day. If so, I would like to hear about it. The purpose of this column is to help everyone enjoy confident living and that purpose can be served by a sharing of spiritual techniques that have proved helpful.

Pastor May Get Second Chance

WASHINGTON (Special) — President Carter's pastor, ousted by a vote of the congregation of First Baptist Church in the nation's capital Oct. 28, may have a second chance to argue for his retention.

According to church moderator, Frank McAnear, the liklihood of a second vote on renewal of Charles A. Trentham's contract arose when a church member who voted against the pastor sought to have the church's action reconsidered before the Oct. 28 meeting was adjourned.

The member, who according to McAnNear was unhappy that he and others were not allowed to speak during the debate, has now indicated that he will reintroduce his motion to reconsider at the next regularly scheduled business meeting Nov. 28.

Robert's Rules of Order provides that a person voting on the winning side may move reconsideration of the issue at hand. McAnear told Baptist Press officials that the matter could have been disposed of Oct. 28 had not another member quickly moved adjournment, a non-debatable motion which takes precedence over any other. When the congregation voted overwhelmingly to adjourn, the door was left open for the Nov. 28 prospect of reconsideration, McAnear said.

The congregation voted not to renew Trentham's contract when it expires Feb. 15. He was dismissed by a narrow 166-140 vote.

McAnear said that numerous members want to avoid another showdown over the matter and that there remains an "outside chance" that the individual who wants to move for reconsideration will not go through with the motion.

Task Group Endorses 'Open Border' Policy With Mexico

EL PASO (Special) — Participants in the recent conference on border issues sponsored by the Texas Conference of Churches made some proposals for changing laws and policies at national, state and local levels and made some proposals for educating church people and the general public to problems of undocumented immigrants.

A task group of the conference studying employment and economics endorsed an "open border" policy with Mexico similar to that existing between the U.S. and Canada. That group also urged an increase in the state minimum wage law to make it closer to federal guidelines. This increase would eliminate the need for child labor, a spokesman for the Texas Farm Workers Union said.

The Civil Right Task Group recommended pressure be put on law enforcement agencies to eliminate abuses and suggested drawing up a code of ethics for Immigration and Naturalization Service employees.

The education study group urged the support for insisting that public schools admit children of immigrants. About nine law suits are currently in progress over this issue.

The Human Development Task Group recommended that churches develop alternative support programs for persons ineligible for government benefits because of their status.

High priorities were also given to educating Texas Conference of Churches constitutiencies about border issues through the media, through cross-cultural dialogue, and by research on the economic impact undocumented persons have on Texas human resource systems such as welfare, food stamps, health care and legal services.

The group studying family reunification faced the fact that some categories of applicants for visas have had to wait as long as 9 years for their papers to be processed. TCC representatives will testify at a Dec. 17 hearing in San Antonio before the Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Law.

Other recommendations from the El Paso conference were to set up an information system to sensitize the churches, general public, the media and INS to the needs of families to be united, and to establish a development fund to assist citizenship programs.

Methodists Seek Budget Cut

NASHVILLE (Special) — Cuts in personnel and program are being projected by the United Methodist Board of Discipleship in order to trim $500,000 from its 1981 budget. Meeting here Oct. 23-26, the board approved major points in a redesign of internal operations calling for the elimination of divisional structures, three associate general secretary positions and the office of communications.

Dr. Melvin G. Talbert, general secretary, said the $3.64 million World Service allocation being recommended by the General Council on Ministries for 1981 will fall "far short of our bottom line request...needed to sustain the ministry of our board at its present level." He proposed eliminating 10 professional and five support staff jobs.

According to board treasurer, Ike Brown, the agency will need to use $300,000 from reserve funds accumulated in 1977 and 1978 to cover expenses for 1979, and an additional $647,120 in reserves will be needed to cover projected 1980 costs, thereby exhausting the reserve fund by 1981.

Rev. Carlisle Assumes Post

Celebrating his first service as vicar of Lubbock's Episcopal mission, Church of the Holy Cross, the Rev. George L. Carlisle Jr. begins his ministry here today.

Carlisle was graduated from the University of Texas at Austin and the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest.

The new priest will be installed officially on Nov. 25.

The Church of the Holy Cross meets at Winfrey School, 83rd Street and Toledo Avenue. Services are held at 11 a.m. each Sunday.

Choir To Present Concert

A panel of three speakers will discuss the theme on Monday. Participating in this panel will be Sister Vianney Martinez of the Franciscan Sisters of Mary Immaculate, Dr. Harvey Joanning of the Texas Tech University Home and Family Life Department, and Margaret Elbow of Family Services Association of Lubbock.

The group will take a tour of the new St. John Neumann Church Monday. The church will be dedicated Nov. 18.

Publisher Asks National Day Of Prayer, Fasting Nov. 18

Richard A. Viguerie, president of the Viguerie Company which is a direct mail advertisng agency, and publisher of "Conservative Digest," has called for a national day of prayer and fasting to be observed Nov. 18.

In his editorial in the October issue of the politcal journal, Vigurerie said he was asking the support of "thousands of conservative leaders, journalists, priests, rabbis and ministers" for what he hopes will be a day to "abstain from all food. . . a day to devote completely to prayer meditation, thanks and repentence for our sins."

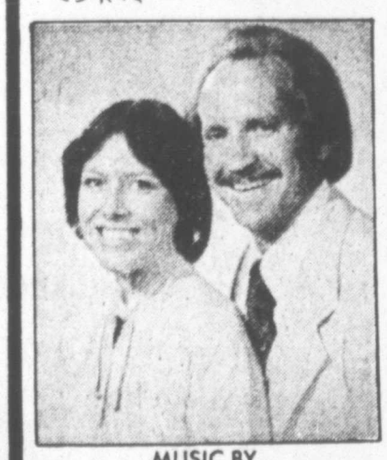

The publisher also asked his readers to enlist the help of congressmen and senators and local government officials in promoting this special observance. Readers also were asked to write to newspaper editors, call radio and television stations and make requests of their civic and service organizations to support this proposal.

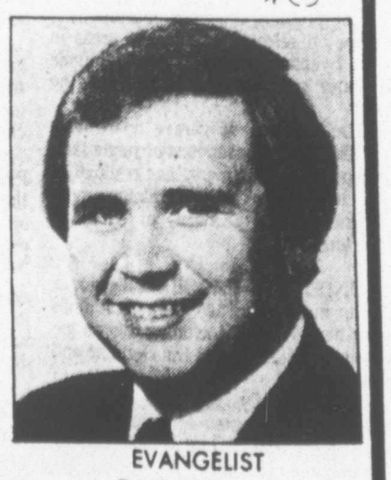

"It will be a true and appropriate commemoration of the Thanksgiving season. And I feel it will make the spirit of Thanksgiving more meaningful to us," he said.

CONNECTIONS
COURSES BY NEWSPAPER

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 10th in a series of 15 articles exploring "Connections: Technology and Change." In this article, Eugene S. Ferguson, who has been both a professional historian and an engineer, discusses why technical considerations sometimes take precedence over social problems in engineering projects. This series was written for Courses By Newspaper, a program of University Extension, University of California, San Diego, funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities. A related 10-part television series, "Connections," is being carried on PBS stations this fall. Check your local TV Listings.)

By EUGENE S. FERGUSON

Engineers have a greater effect on the kind of world we live in than most of us recognize. Less than one American in 100 is an engineer, but because they are decision-makers, engineers are far more influential than their numbers suggest.

Many engineers deny this influence, insisting that they merely carry out the instructions of others — of politicians, for example. Yet in fact, engineers write a politician's shopping list by furnishing alternative solutions to particular problems — solutions that require engineers to carry them out!

Most of us highly approve of the world our engineers have built for us. Yet some of us become angry and frustrated when technical systems often seem to demand that we adapt to the system's needs, rather than the other way around.

To understand why technical considertions in engineering projects tend to submerge social or human needs, we must examine the controlling principles, or imperatives, that shape the way engineers think. Engineering imperatives are often more powerful than the needs and wants of those who use what engineers design.

An engineer (1) strives for efficiency, (2) designs labor-saving systems, (3) tries to design the control of a system into it, so the user will have limited choices.

THE ENGINEER IS ALSO FASCINATED by his or her ability to disregard human scale, so he (4) favors the very large, the very powerful, and (in the electronic revolution) the very small.

Finally, because an engineering problem is inherently interesting, (5) it becomes an end in itself, rather than a means to satisfy a human need.

Let us consider these imperatives.

(1) Efficiency comes easily to the technical mind, even though it is one of the slipperiest words in our language. High efficiency means high output for a given input. For example, if a quantity of fuel is the given input to an automobile engine, the power output from a diesel engine will be the highest; from a conventional gas engine one—third less; and from a gasturbine engine, one-half that of the gasoline engine.

"Efficiency" as used in engineering also has a rhetorical meaning. It may mean "more powerful" or "better performance." When an engineer seeks efficiency, his ideal is flexible — enabling him to think of a machine or system that performs the way he thinks best (high torque, satisfying roar, whatever) as "most efficient." Gas turbines have their advocates, and most engineers continue to choose gasoline engines over diesels.

(2) Labor-saving systems are generally preferred by engineers, with no serious thought given to alternative possibilities. Thus, machines are being developed in agricultural experiment stations to eliminate workers, particularly in harvesting fruits and vegetables. The consequent drift of displaced farm workers to city slums is not seen by engineers as part of the problem.

MANY ENGINEERS BELIEVE that labor-saving without limit is a positive and unquestionable good.

In 1916, for example, the president of A. O. Smith Corporation, a maker of automobile frames, sought to build a "plant that would run without men."

Bankers advised against spending money on so costly and uncertain a goal, but company president L. R. Smith and his engineers worked doggedly to build an automated factory of unprecedented mechanical complexity.

Ten years and several million dollars later, Smith proudly unveiled a vast machine that turned out a thousand automobile frames per hour. It required so few men to tend it that the labor cost per frame was less than 25 cents! The plant was a marvel of the particular "efficiency" that obsessed Smith, which was to eliminate all workers.

(3) Control is an imperative that guides the design of systems such as an assembly line and the new Metro subway in Washington, D.C.

ENGINEERS DECIDE WHO WILL do what on an assembly line. Subdividing work into minute tasks that require mere dexterity and minimum training and skill goes back 200 years to the French pin-makers who supplied Adam Smith with his often-quoted example of the division of labor. Drawing the wire to proper size, straightening it, cutting it to length, forming the head — each was assigned to a different worker.

The assembly line was brought to its logical extreme by Henry Ford in 1914. It took charge of both a worker's time and his sense of timing. The assembly line moved inexorably, dragging work along on a chain, and pacing the workers. Aside from doing as told (efficiency engineers called it "cooperation"), the worker had no opportunity to use choice or judgment.

Paradoxically, designing an assembly line provides an absorbing challenge to the engineer who decides how work will be subdivided. In so doing, he reduces to a minimum the mental effort required of people who spend their working lives on the line.

WASHINGTON'S NEW METRO subway is operated by computerized controls, but Metro yielded to public pressure and put an attendant at the head end of each train. On a recent trip on the Metro, I noticed that the head of the train stopped automatically at the center of each station platform. After a delay, the human being in the front car regained control momentarily and inched the train forward to the proper position.

Difficulties with the Metro train operations pale, however, before the nightmare of the fare-card system. A magnetically coded card is purchased from a machine, shoved into a slot to gain admittance and into another slot for departure from the station. The record of broken-down card dispensers and unresponsive turnstiles has forced management to admit that its fare-card system is its "Achilles' heel."

But rather than replace the system with responsive persons, the next move (in stereotyped phrases of management) is to redesign the system to make it "more efficient."

(4) The urge to transcend human scale is as old as engineering. Some famous structures whose builders were guided by this imperative include the Egyptian and Mexican pyramids, the enigmatic statues on Easter Island, and the Eiffel Tower.

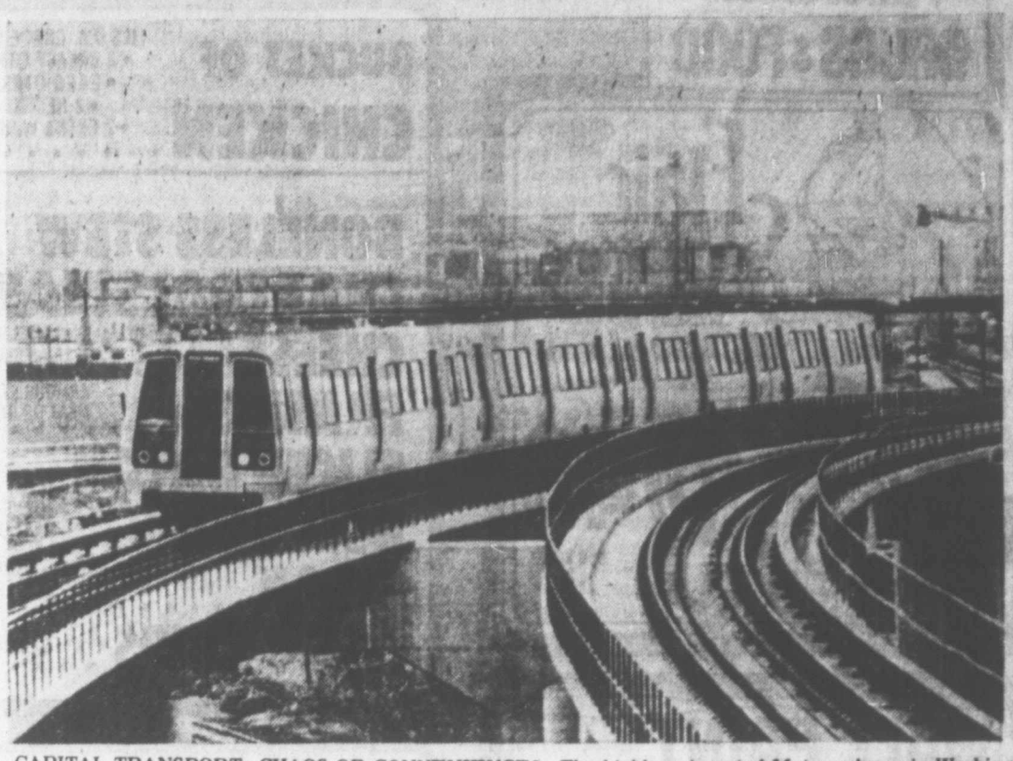

SINCE 1957 AND SPUTNIK, a new imperative has been added: Space vehicles requiring small, light, extremely complex instruments pushed engineers toward miniaturization of electronic computers and instruments. Small and large, the imperative of nonhuman scale is powerful.

(5) Despite their frequent disclaimers of emotional involvement in the work they do, engineers are conscientious workers and can hardly escape the inherent interest of the problems with which they are concerned. Engineers' devotion to their work helps explain why so much engineering is so good, and changes and innovations so frequent and ingenious.

When an engineering project goes sour from a social standpoint, the trouble is often in the engineer's absorption in the technical aspects of the project and his forgetting or misjudging the human dimensions.

YET IS IS PRECISELY THESE human aspects that have become of concern. Instead of massive, centrally controlled systems, some of us are now calling for simpler solutions on a human scale. We want to see more solutions that fit the problems.

Social problems can have social solutions, which usually require discussion and compromise. Unless we insist on this, we can expect technological solutions to all problems because they are easiest to devise.

CAPITAL TRANSPORT: CHAOS OR CONVENIENCE?—The highly automated Metro subway in Washington, D.C., which opened in 1976, has had major problems with its train operations and its fare card system.

Farm Women To Gather Here For National Meet

Women Involved in Farm Economics will hold the third annual national convention Friday through Sunday at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, according to Texas W.I.F.E. president June Saylor of Muleshoe.

W.I.F.E. WORKSHOP — Texas chapters of Women Involved in Farm Economics will host the third annual national W.I.F.E. convention Friday through Sunday at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Discussing preliminary plans are, from the left, convention co-chairman Charlotte McLaughlin of Petersburg, state president June Saylor of Muleshoe, and co-chairman Esther Ruth Henson of Brownfield. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley.)

More than 600 members of the nonpartisan group are expected to attend the three-day meet from as far away as Montana. The public is invited to the convention, Mrs. Saylor said.

Discussions on gasohol will kick off the convention Friday night with speeches by Dr. Bob Soleta, director of the alcohol division of Iowa Corn Growers Association, and Dr. Lance Crombie.

"Gasohol has been W.I.F.E.'s number one priority," said Mrs. Betty Majors of Osecola, Neb., national president. "Our purpose in having the alcohol still along with the gasohol information is so we can go home with plans, knowledge and expertise to enable us to construct alcohol fuel stills on our own farms and ranches."

"Women in Agriculture" will be discussed by Dr. Frances Hill, University of Texas assistant professor of government, at 10:45 a.m.

Miss Hill is writing a book entitled "A-merican Women on the Family Farm" which is an examination of occupational, cultural and economic bases of the political behavior of American farm women.

A series of mini-workshops will offer instructions in preparing testimony and testifying before legislative committees, chapter activity ideas, parlimentary procedure and how to meet the press and prepare news items.

Texas-style barbeque will be served at 7 p.m. with a speech by Sarah McClendon, White House correspondent.

Miss McClendon, author of "My Eight Presidents — With a Capital Cast of Thousands," owns McClendon News Service, a bureau that serves newspapers in the Southwest.

Other features of the Saturday night banquet will be an all cotton-sytle show and a square dancing performance.

National officers will be elected Sunday followed by a luncheon and a business meeting.

"W.I.F.E. is not a feminist organization and agriculture is not necessarily the only concern," Mrs. Saylor stressed. "We believe time is of essence in preserving the American way of life and all citizens should be involved in this."

Tech Workshop Focuses On Agricultural Taxes

A new law which evaluates agricultural land for tax purposes on the basis of production rather than market value will be the focus of a workshop at Texas Tech Monday through Wednesday in the University Center.

The workshop is primarily for tax assessor-collectors, school officials and administrators of governing bodies needing more information about the new system. It is designed to update assessors in particular on prescribed methods for placing values on open-space land devoted to agricultural production. Pratical examples will be used throughout the workshop and an examination will be given on the afternoon of the third day.

A panel of five speakers and instructors will participate in the workshop.

They are:

— Lonnie Jones of Austin, associate director for Valuations at the School Tax Assessment Practices Board (STAPB). He is a former professor of agricultural economics at Texas A&M University. At STAPB he has been responsible for production and publication of "Guidelines for the Valuation of Open-Space Land" and the upcoming "General Appraisal Manual."

—Rex P. Kennedy of Texas Tech, director of the Division of Agricultural Services and professor of agricultural economics. He is a past president of the Texas Society of Farm and Ranch Managers and Appraisers.

— Larry Luedtke of Austin, director of Technical Programs for STAPB. He is responsible for the agency's ag-use valuation projects. He has been involved in several projects, including the biannual Market Value Study. He coordinated the production of the legislature-mandated "Guidlines for the Valuation of Open-Space Land."

— Merrily Moore of Austin, associate director for Education and Standards at STAPB. She is involved in establishing and refining educational programs for tax assessors and lending technical assistance to assessors and other tax personnel. She, too, is a contributor to "Guidelines for the Valuation of Open-Space Land."

—Marvin Sartin of Lubbock, area economist-management specialist, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. He has conducted seminars and workshops on preparation of agricultural cost and return estimates, as well as a one-day workshop on farm appraisal techniques for the Texas Society of Farm and Ranch Managers and appraisers. He formerly was with the Federal Land Bank in Kansas where he did real estate appraisal.

Topics will include aspects of agricultural use valuation, trends and outlook for land values, factors of production, practical application of ag-use valuation, development of farm and ranch budgets, application to individual parcels and special problems in land ag-use.

More than 125 persons are expected to attend. The program is sponsored by the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences and Division of Continuing Education in conjunction with the School Tax Assessment Practices Board. It is endorsed by the Texas Association of Assessing Officers.

Only two other comparable workshops are scheduled this year. They are at West Texas State Univesity, Canyon; and Texas A&M University at College Station.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

MANY U. S. COTTON PRODUCERS will be deciding their marketing strategies for this year's crop during the next two months.

As always, they will have to decide whether current prices are satisfactory or whether postponing sales to a later period will produce a better return.

Cotton Inc.'s economic research and development staff has evaluated supply-demand fundamentals and other factors in the marketplace in an effort to help producers in their decision-making.

The economists' conclusion as of the moment:

"While the future continues clouded in uncertainty, the overwhelming economic evidence at this time suggests that the odds of lower cotton prices as the harvest advances far outweigh those of higher prices.

"SELLING AT CURRENT PRICES, or fixing prices now with delivery arranged at a later date for tax purposes, will probably be better than selling after harvest.

"If prices do sag from harvest pressure," the econonomists add, "producers may find putting cotton in the (government) loan a second best alternative. Consideration, however, must always be taken of the monthly costs of holding cotton and the price gains that can be expected."

Associate director for supply economics Lawrence Shaw says world production, according to Cotton Inc. estimates, is expected to total 64.7 million bales, 4.7 million more than in 1978-79. The estimate includes CI's projection of the U. S. crop at 14 million bales.

"World production this crop year is expected to exceed consumption by over 2 million bales," Shaw says. "As a result, cotton supplies will be plentiful, with U. S. stocks climbing to the highest level in 10 years."

SHAW ACKNOWLEDGES THAT COTTON PRICES have remained strong in spite of "bearish" fundamentals. But several factors which have been providing that price strength are subject to change, he says.

"The U. S. harvest is late, and many mills and exporters are finding adequate supplies of specific quality cotton difficult to obtain," he points out.

Also, as of mid-October, "exports and outstanding sales were 35 percent ahead of the corresponding period of 1978," he adds. "China alone already had bought a million bales for 1979-80 shipment (and significantly more since), compared with purchases of 280,000 bales a year earlier."

And, says the economist, "continued strength of cotton consumption by U. S. mills has been another factor maintaining cotton prices at current levels. Both foreign and U. S. retail demand for all-cotton textile products has been good."

IN MAPPING MARKETING STRATEGIES, Shaw says, producers should look beyond current conditions and consider these factors:

— Within the next 60 days, large amounts of cotton will come on the market, as the bulk of the U. S. harvest is finished. Current tightness could "turn to glut in just a few weeks."

— While early export sales have been excellent, sales last year peaked early in the season. If they follow the same pattern this year, the impetus export sales have given to the market "could quickly subside."

— Although U. S. mill business still is relatively strong, mill executives are wary of recession. If demand for textile products begins to falter along with other retail items, mills "will not hesitate to cut production to avoid building inventories, especially in light of soaring interest rates."

Agriculturists Question Change To Fewer, Bigger Family Farms

McCALLSBURG, Iowa (UPI) — When Bob Lounsberry walks past the empty feedlots and silos on his Story County grain farm, he's looking at more than the condition of his corn crop.

Lounsberry, the Iowa secretary of agriculture, is looking at modern agriculture — farming that relies on large budgets, sprawling fields, huge machinery and specialized operations.

His farm, like thousands of others in the Midwest, no longer produces a mix of grain and livestock.

Critics say 30 years of mechanization have brought unequalled prosperity to some farmers, but have exacted a higher price in soil erosion, displacement of millions of farm families, and the decay of small towns.

To some, the changes mean the death of the family farm.

A range of observers — Lounsberry, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, Catholic Bishop Maurice Dingman of Des Moines, Iowa, Iowa Farm Bureau President Dean Kleckner and two Iowa State University investigators — question whether some of the changes are beneficial.

However, they say the forces molding agriculture are too powerful, complex and subtle to be described simply as the end of the family farm. Kleckner, for instance, believes the family farm — defined as a one where a family supplies the labor — is going to remain the backbone of U.S. agriculture.

"There's going to be fewer farmsteads ... There also will be fewer and fewer farms. I don't see either trend stopping," Kleckner said. "I wish it wasn't happening."

"I, for one, do not want to see an America where a handful of giant operators own, manage and control the entire food production system," Bergland said.

"My belief is that there's a size in farming that is optimum and you get above that size and you lose efficiency. It's my belief we should find that size and gear all our policies toward that as a national goal."

The Iowa Crop and Livestock Reporting Service recently reported 121,000 farms in Iowa, a drop of 2,000 in one year. The average farm now is 281 acres, up 5 acres from last year.

Dozens of studies document the facts that encourage larger farms. Simply put, farmers know they can make more money by spreading their costs over larger operations. It costs little more to combine 400 acres than to reap 200 acres.

"If you get a $60,000 grain harvesting outfit, you've got to spread that over a lot of acres to keep the cost low," said Dr. Earl Heady, director of the Center for Agricultural and Rural Development at ISU. "We're headed for bigger for now ... I don't see anything to stop this."

The push for bigger farms has produced some startling changes. The Iowa hog farmer, a hallmark of the state producing 25 percent of all the swine in the United States, actually is a minority. Production has remained high because of massive hog-feeding operations. A third of Iowa's hogs come from herds of more than 1,000 head.

The cost of operating a farm is staggering. Kleckner estimated a beginning farmer would start out $500,000 in debt if he was conservative and bought a small farm — say 160 acres — used equipment and fed some livestock to make up for his lack of land.

"You'd pretty near need some off-farm income to get by," he said.

Lounsberry agreed with those figures, but he said it's always been rough getting started.

While the price of farming alarms some observers, others say Americans should pay attention to the effects the changes have had on small towns.

"From 1949 through 1979, 3.7 million farms have disappeared," Bishop Dingman said in a recent speech opening a conference on land preservation.

"We have seen as a result of the urban migration of these families, that some 617,000 rural businesses have disappeared, that schools have closed down, that churches have been emptied and even that whole towns have disappeared or been reduced to empty buildings housing vagrants."

A 1974 study by ISU supplies the statistics suggested in the bishop's speech. Spending in rural communities declines as farm size increases, according to the study by Heady and Steven Sonka.

Off-farm income — the economy of small towns and agriculture-related industries — would drop 1 percent if farmers switch to operations of 520 acres or more. If small farms — 232 acres or less — were dominant, off-farm income would be 15 percent higher.

Empty houses and stores in small communities across the Midwest illustrate the pains of declining rural population, the ISU study said. The number of high school graduates in Iowa will drop 30 percent in five years, one ISU rural sociologist said in August.

Although small farms might be appealing, the study said farm income would be highest under a system of large farms while consumer prices would be slightly lower. There also are financial drawbacks to small farms.

"It would impose a greater burden on the families operating these small farms and their incomes would be levels now characterizing poverty unless special means were used to involve them in part-time offfarm work," the study said. "We're headed for bigger and biggerfor now ... and there's nothing to stop this," Heady said.

Are Bollworms Eating Your Profits?

Call Palmer.

When is the best time to treat your cotton for bollworm?
Which chemical should you use and how often should it be applied?
For the answers call Palmer and Associates, Independent Entomologist, they can assure you maximum return for each dollar spent, by:
FIRST—Regularly scheduled field monitoring procedures by trained entomologist will establish the most economical point to initate control measures.
SECOND—Since Palmer is not connected with any chemical sale organization, they independently analyze each chemical on the market and choose the ones best suited for each job.
THIRD—Routine monitoring throughout the season assures good control. For example: This year through careful monitoring, 42% of the acres under Palmer control was judged not to need treatment at all. Average cost per acre treated and untreated was only $7.15. This resulted in an average net return on treated fields of $18.79 per acre.
Don't let bollworms damage your cotton again next year. Call Palmer and Asscciates today and put the bollworm problem behind you. They can show you case histories of how they have helped farmers in your area control bollworms and increase their net income.

Importance Of Gas Availability Cited By Petroleum Executive

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — James L. Ketelsen says it is vital the nation produce and import all available natural gas.

"We are going to need all the natural gas we can get our hands on, from both domestic and supplemental sources, to help keep the pipelines full, not only to the year 2000 but well beyond," said the Tenneco Inc. chairman.

Ketelsen believes natural gas will be available at near today's volume of 18 to 20 trillion cubic feet a year the next two decades but with supplemental sources, with governmental approval, accounting for nearly one-half the supplies by the year 2000.

"If we don't get the supplements, we will have to increase oil imports by the same amount," he said.

"This is reason enough for this country to go all out for natural gas. If gas supply gets bigger, oil imports go down, and the reverse also is true."

Ketelsen said a lot of domestic gas, possibly 12 to 14 trillion cubic feet a year, will continue to be found.

"Higher prices have stimulated exploration," he said.

"We're drilling more wells, we're drilling deeper, and in coming years we'll be able to produce in deeper water."

Ketelsen said the Oklahoma-Texas Anadarko Basin is a classic example of the upsurge in deep drilling. The number of wells drilled below 15,000 feet, he said, moved from 40 in 1974 to 61 in 1975 and 1976, 77 in 1977, and 133 in 1978.

"The Anadarko has a new field wildcat success rate of 31 percent," he said.

"For the nation as a whole, the number of wells drilled to a depth exceeding 10,000 feet rose 70 percent between 1975 and 1978 while the total for all wells drilled rose only 36 percent."

On the other hand, Ketelsen said, the nation is producing gas faster than it is being discovered, with production twice as great as recent discoveries.

"It is sobering to note that at the end of next year, 10 years will have elapsed since reserve bookings last exceeded production in the United States," Ketelsen said.

In a recent speech before the American Gas Association, Ketelsen said gas prices set under the 1978 Natural Gas Policy Act already are out of date and he called for full deregulation as provided in the act by 1985.

Ketelsen said there is urgent need for access to the best prospects for exploration, most of which involve federal lands. And he said there is need for maximum purchases of natural gas by pipeline from Mexico and Canada.

On liquefied natural gas imports, Ketelsen said, the government should stop rejecting such projects and "make a U-turn and encourage all projects that offer gas to us at a competitive price."

He said large volumes of LNG should over the next 20 years come from the Middle East, Africa, Asia and South America.

"There is good reason to be optimistic about LNG, starting with the plain fact it's there," Ketelsen said.

"We're talking about proved gas reserves, you can't finance a 20-year, capital-intensive project on the basis of what you hope to find."

Ketelsen said the gas not only is there "it's available to us because there's no other large current market."

"Around the world, about 6 trillion cubic feet, equal to nearly one-third of current U.S. conumption, is being burned off and wasted or reinjected into oil formations for lack of a buyer. That's gas that could be coming to the United States, if we act promptly before the Japanese and Europeans buy it."

Since the first large-scale ocean shipment of LNG began in 1964, Ketelsen said, there have been more than 4,000 round-trip voyages without injurious accident.

"LNG projects help the balance of payments, when compared with oil imports, and are a direct offset to oil imports," he said.

New Oil Discoveries Reported By Texas Railroad Commission

AUSTIN (Special) -Texas operators have reported 40 oil and 50 gas discoveries during the Oct. 16-31 period, according to the Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas Division.

In the year-earlier period, 25 oil and 46 gas discoveries were filed with the state's energy regulatory agency.

Through the first 10 months of 1979, Texas operators have reported 996 gas and 429 oil discoveries, against 892 gas and 383 oil discoveries in the year-earlier period. Successful exploratory and field completions in the 10 months of 1979 total 6,916 oil and 4,487 gas, against 6,863 oil and 4,578 gas completions in the same period last year.

Oil discoveries in the last half of October, 1979, included six in deep South Texas, five each in the Midland and Refugio areas and Southeast Texas, four each in the San Antonio and Lubbock areas, three each in West Central Texas and the San Angelo area, two each in North Texas and the Panhandle area and one in East Texas.

Gas discoveries included 14 in deep South Texas, 12 in the Refugio area, nine in Southeast Texas, four in the San Antonio area, three in East Texas, two each in West Central Texas and the San Angelo and Midland areas, and one each in North Texas and the Panhandle area.

In the Oct. 16-31 period, operators reported 223 exploratory and field tests wound up as dry holes. There were 3,086 dry holes reported in the first 10 months of 1979 agaisnt 3,273 a year earlier.

New applicatins for permits to drill oil and gas tests totaled 1,529 in the last half of October compared with 968 in the same period of 1978.

There have been 18,451 applications to drill new oil and gas tests this year, against 16,747 in the same period of 1978. Applications to drill, deepen, plugback and for service wells so far this year total 21,216 against 19,723 in the 10 months of 1978.

The Railroad Commission has announced the modification of two provisions of an interim order under which Whalen Corp. of Dallas may reopen its facilities for disposal of oilfield brines into a playa lake in Andrews County.

Chairman John H. Poerner and Commissioners James E. Nugent and Mack Wallace accepted amendments to their July 11 order, as recommended by Chief Engineer Bob R. Harris and the staff of the Oil and Gas Division, during a weekly conference. The July order set forth 13 requirements that the company must meet before resuming operations at Whalen Lake, an arid, basin-like geological feature that has been used for salt water disposal since 1967.

Containment in close proximity to each discharge point of any visible oil or globules of grease by the installation of a floating boom, construction of a containment pit, or by any other means adequate to ensure the early discovery and prevention of any discharge of any visible oil or globules of grease into the main body of the lake.

Daily random sampling of brine discharged into the lake and testing by commission personnel to determine oil and grease content during the first two weeks of resumed operations at the lake.

The modified directive further reads:

"Random samples shall be taken and tested twice each week by commission personnel for the following 90 days. Thereafter, sufficient random samples shall be taken and tested by commission personnel to ensure compliance with the requirements of our interim order.

The July order required that a floating boom be placed around each brine discharge point. Also, it required the operator of the disposal facilities to sample and test the water for oil and grease content on a twice-a-day basis.

The commission noted in the recent order that the water level in Whalen Lake is now so low that the installation of a floating boom is impractical if not impossible.

The commission, on Oct. 23, 1978, imposed a ban on the use of Whalen Lake as an oilfield brines disposal site after the Oil and Gas Division reported substantial oil and grease pollution.

State and federal leases in offshore and coastal Texas petroleum provinces produced 211,879 barrels of crude oil during July, 1979, in contrast to 126,869 barrels in the same month of 1978, and 249,504 barrels in June, 1979, according to operator reports to the Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas Division.

Gas well gas production on state and federal leases amounted to 60,133,671 Mcf in July against 20,123,706 Mcf a year earlier and 64,186,526 Mcf in June.

THE ROUSTABOUT

MAJOR PRODUCERS OF COAL are planning expansion programs that will at least double current output throughout the world, according to a survey by Mining Equipment International.

The survey indicates that the United States will double its present 700 million metric ton output by 1987, while China plans an increase to 725 million tons per year by 1985, up from the current 500 million ton level.

Russia, the world's largest coal producer with a present output of 800 tons, reportedly has ambitious expansion plans, and such secondary producers as Poland, South Africa and Australia, which mine 200 tons or less annually, also intend to boost output sharply, the coal industry publication says.

The survey shows that methods of mining and using coal are changing, with some countries struggling to meet increased environmental concerns, and others focusing on increasing output as economically as possible.

Mining Equipment reports that Russia, which traditionally has used underground techniques to mine most of its coal, is rapidly switching to less costly open-pit mining. In the United States, open-pit mining also has increased in popularity, but present environmental laws mean that approximately 40 percent of the equipment purchased for an open-pit mine must be devoted to reclamation.

The country reported to be making the most progress in converting coal to a cleaner-burning fuel is South Africa, which has on-line a refinery to produce commercial oil from low grade coal.

The plant now processes 5 million tons of coal annually with yields of 5.5 million barrels of oil. A second plant, which is designed to convert 12 million tons of coal per year, is scheduled for completion in 1981.

TENNECO OIL EXPLORATION and Production has announced the signing of a contract with Gruy Federal Inc. for a joint project to study the feasibility of recovering natural gas and heat from saline water over three miles beneath the earth's surface.

The test, funded by the U.S. Department of Energy, will begin this winter, and is expected to aid in the evaluation of geopressure-geothermal energy as a possible alternate source of energy.

The well to be used for the deep geopressure-geothermal test is located 19 miles southeast of Houma, La. It was originally drilled by Tenneco as a conventional exploratory well for natural gas, but was unsuccessful.

Tenneco reports that during the drilling operation, casing was installed through potential geo-energy resource sands. "Only completion and production testing of the sands are now required. Completion operations are expected to begin this winter and testing will continue into 1980," an official of the company said.

Tenneco is responsible for field operations and will supply the field operating personnel. Gruy Federal is the prime contractor for the test with the Department of Energy and will analyze and report results on the project.

The zone to be tested is between 17,098 and 17,180 feet. Conditions expected to be encountered are temperatures of about 300 degrees Fahrenheit, a static closed-in pressure of more than 7,000 pounds per square inch, and a flow rate approaching 30,000 barrels of water per day.

THE AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE reports that drilling activity, stimulated by rising petroleum prices, last fall reached its highest level in more than 20 years.

"Increased prices of domestic oil and natural gas historically have resulted in increased exploration and development activity by U.S. oil companies," API said in a recent report.

"The correlation between higher prices and expanded efforts to increase production has been especially notable during the 1970s.

"Throughout most of the preceding decade, real prices of oil and gas (adjusted for inflation) were relatively stable or actually declined. Accordingly, exploration and development activity declined," the association said.

Standard Logs Third Quarter Earnings Hike

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (Special) - Standard Oil Co. of California has announced earnings increases for the first nine months and the third quarter.

Nine months earnings were $1.335 billion, up 73 percent from earnings of $773 million for the same period last year.

Worldwide petroleum earnings for nine months represent 5.9 cents on each dollar of sales, or 2.9 cents on each gallon of crude oil and petroleum products sold. U.S. petroleum earnings were equal to 4.8 cents on each dollar of sales, or 2.5 cents on each gallon sold.

Earnings for the third quarter were $576 million, up 110 percent from $274 million for the third quarter of 1978. As in the two prior quarters, the increase resulted primarily from gains in the company's foreign operations.

Per share earnings for nine months and the quarter were $7.82 and $3.38, compared to $4.53 and $1.60 last year.

The improvement in earnings so far this year has enabled the company to increase capital and exploratory expenditures devoted to energy development, particularly in the United States, the company said. The earnings improvement is considered especially important because the company's cash resources were reduced during the quarter by about $1 billion dollars as a result of revised credit terms from some oil producing countries.

Worldwide capital and exploratory expenditures were $1.5 billion for nine months, up 36 percent over the same period last year. U.S. capital and exploratory expenditures increased by 54 percent over last year to $1 billion—two-thirds of the worldwide outlays and almost 2 1/2 times the nine months domestic earnings.

Worldwide capital and exploratory expenditures for 1980 are expected to increase to an all-time high in excess of $2.5 billion.

Improved earnings are reported necessary to support these substantial increases in capital and exploratory expenditures. Independent bank studies have concluded that the oil industry will have to increase its capital investments by 1 1/2 to two times the average for the last three years just to maintain present levels of oil and gas production in the United States.

Supply Uncertainty Results In Guesses

HOUSTON (AP) -The uncertainty over supplies of foreign crude oil is creating guessing games, according to W. F. Martin, chairman of Phillips Petroleum Co.

The petroleum executive believes conservation is the answer to such uncertainty for the immediate future.

"Gasoline shortages are now becoming an everyday prediction," Martin said.

"In early October it was predicted long lines would be reappearing by the end of the month. A few days later there were reports a gasoline shortage was possible next spring. And just a few weeks ago the Department of Energy and the Central Intelligence Agency agreed that gasoline lines would reappear in the early 1980s."

Martin said the predictions were being made despite inventories being higher than a year ago.

"Behind the predictions is a concern about the supply of crude oil," he said.

"The United States now depends on foreign countries for roughly half of its oil. Several countries are now changing their oil exporting policies, or at least talking about changing them."

As a result, he said, there is growing uncertainty about how much oil will be available in the United States in coming months.

"Mexico, a country the United States was looking to as a potential large supplier of crude oil, recently agreed to sell a substantial quantity of its oil earmarked for export to France," Martin said.

The likely result of this arrangement, he added, is less crude oil available for export to the United States.

"Nigeria, which supplies Phillips with around 16 percent of the crude oil needed for its refineries, has announced the amount of oil it will export to a particular country depends on how much foreign aid and technical assistance it receives from that country," Martin said.

"Libya, the world's eighth largest producer of crude oil, has notified its oil company customers that some of its oil previously scheduled to be sold under contracts will instead be used for making government-to-government oil deals."

Like Mexico and Nigeria, Martin said, Libya will likely use its oil to enhance its bargaining power with other countires.

In his "As I See It" report to Phillips employes and retirees, Martin said it perhaps is even more important that Saudi Arabia has threatened to reduce the amount of oil it produces by 1 million barrels a day.

"Such a move could greatly affect the United States, since we rely on Saudi Arabia for 1.1 million barrels a day, or roughly 7 percent of our total needs," he said.

On top of this, Martin added, Algeria has let it be known it will cut the amount of crude it exports because it plans to refine the oil in its new refinery.

"Any one of these actions, or a combination of them, could adversely affect the United States," he said.

"Right now our crude oil demand and supply are delicately balanced because the current economic slowdown and higher prices have reduced our oil requirements by 5 percent below a year ago."

Martin said the question is, "Can we keep our oil consumption in balance with available crude supplies?"

"To a large extent, it depends on how willingly we conserve our available energy," he said.

"As we learned in the past, many small measures, when combined, can bring about large energy savings."

As examples, Martin said wider use of car pooling by itself could reduce imported oil requirements as much as 3 percent a year, and, similarly, lowering home thermostats by three degrees in the winter could bring about a 2 percent reduction in energy use. And, he said, reducing highway driving speeds to 50 miles an hour would mean a 1 percent reduction.

Martin said there undoubtedly will be more predictions of gasoline shortages and as long as the nation is so dependent on others.

Careers

By Joyce Lain Kennedy

"What are the ignored jobs, the ones nobody ever asks you to explore?"

This unusual query came from a corporate personnel director last month at a gathering of the Employment Management Association. I was stumped. After writing about careers for a dozen years and receiving hundreds of thousands of job questions, I couldn't identify offhand more than a couple of occupations that had failed to spark even a single question from readers.

Upon reflection -- and checking a dictionary of job titles — I found many ways to earn a living no one has yet asked me about. Here are examples, from A to Z:

Acidizers, the folks who force acid into an oil well to boost the flow of black gold, have been passed over, as have barkers in a circus. And apparently no reader is much interested in cotton classers, who grade cotton samples, or on dampproof workers, who keehp buildings dry.

Embalmers have been forgotten; ditto film strippers, who are technicians in a photo lab. Glaziers, the constructions workers who cut and install buildings glass, have gone unremarked. Nor has a reader inquired about hammersmiths, the skilled foundry workers who whack hot metal into shape.

IRS agents and jalousie installers are two more wallflowers. Kennel managers at dog tracks are out of vogue, as are letter-sorting machine clerks in the postal service.

Career questions about the occupation of mother have not reached this column, nor have queries on nuclear reactor operators, oil burner mechanics, priests, quarry supervisors, rocket assembly mechanics, or soaking pit operators in aluminum plants.

Time buyers — fairly well-paid people who contract for advertising space or air time — are missing, despite lots of questions about advertising copywriters, artists and executives.

There's been total silence on the subject of urologists, the physicians concerned with human irrigation. Viscera washers in the meat packing industry, along with wax-ball knock-out workers in sports equipment manufacturing are neglected jobs too.

While large numbers of readers ask for the facts on X-ray technicians, not a peep has been heard from would-be X-ray equipment testers.

And finally, I have waited in vain for a reader to suggest I write about Yoke pressers in the laundry business or zyglo inspectors, who discover flaws in metal parts.

So while certainly there are blanks in the mail that comes over my desk, your questions do cover the wealth of territory: from the cloistered nun who wanted tips on earning funds for her convent and the railroad vice president who wanted to take a flyer on franchising model airplane shops, to the boy who asked about starting a skunk farm and the mature ex-stripper whose show business days were over and who now wondered in what direction she should take off.

the COIN Box

By NORMAN DAVIS

Dear Mr. Davis:
I have an 1883 silver dollar in good condition, & wonder if you could tell me if it was worth anything. If you think it is, would you give me the name of a dealer or dealers? — B.A.

This is a common date. The Philadelphia mint produced more than 12 million silver dollars in 1883; the coin costs an average $9-$11 in Fine condition. Branch mint coins from New Orleans (mint mark O above the D in "Dollar") and San Francisco (mint mark S) cost about the same. Those from Carson City (CC) are scarcer, retailing at $13-$15.

Dealers interested in buying silver dollars usually pay $6-$8 for common dates, but prices vary widely. It's best to visit several dealers to increase your chances of finding one who'll offer a good price. Locate dealers through the "Yellow Pages" classified telephone directory.

Dear Mr. Davis:
I would like to know if a 1920 penny would be worth anything. It's a wheat penny. It's kind of worn out on both sides. — K.G.

Cents of 1920 are common, with over 310 million minted at Philadelphia, just under 50 million at Denver (D mint mark below the date), and over 46 million at San Francisco (S mint mark).

A 1920 cent worn down to "Good" condition might retail for 150-250. A dealer who wanted to buy such a coin could offer from 20 up to 100.

Dear Mr. Davis:
Please note the enclosed paper showing a drawing of a coin I have. So far I have been unable to identify this coin. I picked it up in India in 1944...I would appreciate it if you could advice. — C.F.

You have a copper duit issued by the United East India Co. ("Dutch East India Co.") for use in the Netherlands East Indies. The V with arms extending through the O and C is the insigne of the company. The rosette at reverse top is the mint mark of Dordrecht, which struck your coin in 1734.

Most late 18th century duits catalog at about $3-$4 in Very Good condition, but I don't know about earlier dates. I suggest you show your coin to several coin dealers and ask their opinions of its grade and market value.

Please remember to enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope with your question, in order to receive a personal reply.

River Ferry Takes Tourists To Isles

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — One day and a $5 ticket will give globe-trotters with budgeted time a vacation from stopover cities.

It's aboard the Brooklyn ferry on the Hawkesburg River, island-hopping on a 25-mile circuit to deliver and pick up groceries, mail, general supplies and people at riverside settlements.

CHAMBER MUSIC

NEW YORK (UPI) — The PBS "Live from Lincoln Center" TV series will present The Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center in a Sunday afternoon performance Dec. 10. Guest soloists will include violinist Itzhak Perlman. The on-camera host will be Gene Shalit. The program will comprise works by Beethoven, Brahms and Mendelssohn.

QUESTIONS ON TOURNAMENT

1. Is enpassant capturing compulsory if it is the only legal move?

2. Is there a penalty for falsely announcing check?

3. What happens when a player knocks a piece off the board as he makes a move?

4. Do you forfeit if you are at the board but have not made a move in the first hour?

5. What happens if an illegal move is made in time trouble?

6. If you have the privilege of moving first, do you have to play the White pieces? In other words, can you prefer to play Black but move first?

THE ANSWERS

1. Yes. This rule appears in the book of the Fifth American Congress, 1881.

2. No. The same book says that the player who incorrectly announces check may be forced to make another move but this has long since disappeared from the rulebooks.

3. He must return it to the board and to the correct square before pressing his clock. Benko lost a game in just such a manner in a late round of the Curacao Candidates' Tournament in 1962. By the time he got the piece to the board, he had forfeited.

4. No. You only have to show up in the first hour.

5. Depends on the tournament director, whose decision is final.

6. It was legal in the last century — but is no longer.

ICELAND V. COLOMBIA AT ESBJERG

L. Vadasz of Hungary and N. Mestal of England tied for first and second place with 9½ points each in the Esbjerg, Denmark, tournament in September.

R. Westerinen of Finland and H. Mortensen of Denmark scored 7½ each; Sammy Reshevsky of the U.S., and R. Hartson of England, 7 each. Fourteen players participated. Here's a game from that tourney.

WHITE: O. Castro, Colombia
BLACK: N. Sirgurjonsson, Iceland

20.	RxR	QxR

22.	QxRch	BxQ
23.	BxQNP	Resigns

(a) Too soon. P-KR3 first would have served a better purpose.

(b) Does not count on White's next move. Black should have played: 21...N-N3; 22. QxRch, QxQ; 23. RxQch, BxR; 24. BxP, N-B5; 25. B-Q4, NxP; 26. BxRP, B-K2; 27. B-B5, BxB; 28. PxB, N-N4, with some drawing chances.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. P-B7, KxR; 2. N-B6d.ch and mate; or 1. P-B7, RxB; 2. Q-B6 mate, or 1. P-B7, R-QB6; 2. N-K3 mate, etc.

THE SUPERMARKET SHOPPER

By MARTIN SLOANE

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — One of the markets in our area offered Jeno's Pizza on a "Buy One and Get One Free" special. The cost of the pizza was $1.59 and with 45-cents-off coupon I was able to get two for $1.34.

But I didn't stop with this double-play discount. I had a refund form that offered me a free Jeno's pizza for two proofs of purchase. So, I made a triple play and got three pizzas for $1.34!

Being a new refunder, I was really pleased with myself. I want to thank you for all the tips you give in your column. It really helped to get me started. — Jeannie from Latrobe

DEAR JEANNIE — Congratulations on your triple-play discount. Let's hope other new couponers and refunders will be inspired by your money-saving example.

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — I have been couponing for 15 years. I've saved many dollars through the years, but my biggest pleasure is when my teen-age daughters asks if they can check my coupon file before they go shopping.

A few months ago, they needed hair spray and saw it was on sale for 49 cents. It was a good buy at 49 cents, but they decided to check my cash-off coupons. They found seven 15-cents-off coupons and bought seven cans.

The cashier complimented them on the way they purchased their hair spray. They were all smiles when they got home and told us of their shopping experience.

The pride that my husband and I feel can't be put into words. There are so many good lessons that can be learned from couponing and refunding. In our home it has been a wonderful teaching tool.

Now that your column is in the newspaper we enjoy our supermarket shopping even more. — Mary B. and daughters Katherine, Margaret and Elizabeth, Chicago

DEAR MARY — You have taught your daughters a lesson that will always benefit them. You and your husband certainly have a right to be proud.

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — When you list an expiration date at the end of your refund listings, is it the date when the manufacturer must receive my refund request letter or is it the date when I must get the envelope to the post office? — Roberta S., Little Rock, Ark.

DEAR ROBERTA — Most manufacturers require that your request for a refund be postmarked no later than the expiration date. I usually play it safe and mail my refund request a few days before the offer expires.

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — I didn't see the first few columns where you explained about couponing and refunding. Is it possible to run these columns again? I'm sure that I'm not the only one who needs this information. — Barbara, San Diego.

DEAR BARBARA — Rather than repeat the columns in the newspaper, I have reprinted the first five columns that explained some of the basics of couponing and refunding. Anyone can receive these reprints by sending a long self-addressed stamped envelop to Martin Sloane, The Supermarket Shopper, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1149, Dept. U, Great Neck, N.Y. 11023.
