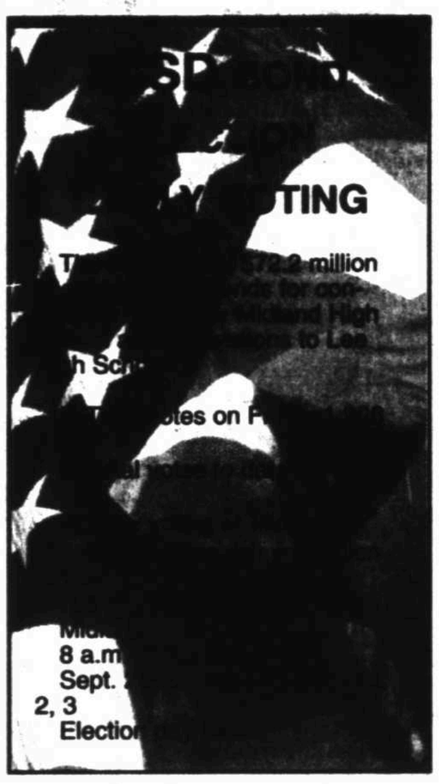
PAC reports $30K in donations



By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Our Kids, Our Schools, Our Future campaign to promote the Midland Independent School District's $72.2 million high school bond proposal in the Oct. 7 election has generated more than $30,000 in contributions.

Of the total, $15,099.56 in donations of $1 to $1,000 from 92 contributors was reported a week prior to the election by David Sledge, treasurer of the Our Kids political action committee. He listed $13,795.40 in campaign expenditures.

In the previous reporting period 30 days prior to the election, the Our Kids PAC listed $14,941.48 in contributions and $10,556.09 in expenditures.

"It's going well," Sledge, who is a Midland independent oil and gas investor, said of the campaign. "And people have been real generous with their contributions. I'm hearing lots of positive comments.

"I know the naysayers have been making a lot of noise," he said in reference to the opposing political action committee, Citizens for Fiscal Responsibility. "But I'm very optimistic. We will see what happens in a week."

Voters a week from today are to decide the fate of the $72.2 million bond proposal to build a new Midland High School and to renovate and expand Lee High School.

Sledge filed the Our Kids financial report a day before the deadline on Texas Ethics Commission forms with the office of Art Martin, MISD's executive director for business services.

The comparable CFR report was to be filed by its treasurer, David Porter, a Midland certified public accountant, with the Texas Elections Commission in Austin.

Filing deadline was 5 p.m. Friday for the reporting period eight days prior to the election. TEC General Counsel Karen Lundquist said the report must be postmarked by 5 p.m. Friday to be considered timely filed. Porter, who said earlier Friday that he hoped to get the report to the post office by 4:45 p.m., did not provide a copy of the report to this newspaper despite a request.

However, once physically filed with the TEC, the CFR report will be available to the public, Ms. Lundquist said, and the newspaper is to publish CFR's lists of contributors and expenditures prior to the election.

As an ongoing general-purpose PAC founded in 1996, CFR files its financial reports with the Ethics Commission, Ms. Lundquist noted. However, the single-purpose Our Kids PAC with a limited life files with the MISD taxing entity.

Midland's St. Ann's Fair still entertains after 52 years in city

By Mary Maddox
MRT Correspondent

Fifty-two years ago, parishioners at St. Ann's Catholic Church organized a yearly ice cream social where regular attendants of the church could get to know each other. What began as a small gathering of parishioners slowly evolved into the St. Ann's Fair and Carnival, an annual four-day-long bash which draws hundreds of people and dazzles downtown Midland.

According to Barbara Ransbottom, principal of St. Ann's school, the fair actually predates the school, which was begun in 1950, and requires the aid of thousands of volunteers. Electricians, construction workers and others all volunteer their time and talents to set up the fair, and all bingo prizes are donated from community organizations.

"There's a whole lot of man hours," Mrs. Ransbottom said. "We get a lot of community support."

Man dies in plane crash near Stanton

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

The pilot of a crop-dusting plane died after he crashed while dusting a field east of Stanton Friday.

Robert Allen Jennings, 28, formerly of Ballinger, was killed when the plane he was flying crashed about four miles east of Stanton, according to Texas Department of Public Safety Lt. Judy Altom.

About 10:27 a.m., Jennings was dusting a field south of Interstate 20 near mile marker 161.

He had made one pass at the field and was flying north, according to reports. In an attempt to turn the aircraft around, the plane struck a guy wire on a cellular phone tower north of the interstate and dislodged the right wing and landing gear, Ms. Altom said.

The plane crash-landed about 100 yards west of the tower.

According to DPS Trooper Bradley Willis, the plane was totally burned.

Next of kin have been notified.

AirSho just one week away; attendees expected from all over the world

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

Only one week to go before an expected 30,000-plus attendees convene for the annual AirSho at the Confederate Air Force at Midland International Airport.

This will be the 37th annual AirSho. The first was held in Mercedes. The AirSho has been held in Midland every October since 1991, when CAF moved from Harlingen.

More than 130 planes, including vintage World War II warbirds, will take flight at the Fina-Confederate Air Force AirSho 2000 Oct. 7 and 8.

Highlights of the show will include the flights of the three Russian Polikarpovs — World War II fighter planes.

Bill Coombes, AirSho chairman, said the three planes are among nine that were recently rebuilt. It will be the first time ever that the Polikarpovs have been flown in the United States.

"The emphasis is on World War II warbirds," Coombes said. "These Russian airplanes, the Polikarpovs, don't exist anywhere else in world. Three of the nine that were rebuilt are here. It will be the first time they're flown anywhere outside of New Zealand and Russia."

A CAF press release states that the Polikarpov is recognized as the first Russian fighter to appear on the world stage. The Polikarpov I-16, at its peak from 1936 to 1939, was a match for any similar fighter in the world at that time.

Also appearing will be professional hang glider Dan Buchanan, a paraplegic. The press release states that he flies an Australian-built Moyes Sonic Hang Glider. He will "launch his hang glider from a moving trailer on the runway and lift off the vehicle at 35 miles per hour, climbing to 1,500 feet," the press release states.

Tina Corbett, director of marketing and communications, said the AirSho's significance is in the planes it flies, not in the size of the crowd it attracts.

"We have people coming from Switzerland, England, France, Japan. They literally come from all over the world to see these planes," she said. "We tend to draw the true aviation

Despite getting the parts two days late, Brown said they will have the Russian plane assembled and flying in time for next weekend's AirSho 2000.

Commissioners deny pay raise for sheriff

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County Commissioners' Court voted 4-0 Friday to reject earlier 6-0 recommendations by its own court-appointed salary grievance committee to give a $5,000 salary raise to Sheriff Gary Painter and a $1,200 pay raise to Justice of the Peace Michael Wallace.

Painter said that he was "not at all surprised" by the commissioners' decision to keep his base salary at $52,000 and not tack on the recommended $5,000. With longevity pay, his salary is $52,900.

"It's our discretion," County Judge Bill Morrow said of the Commissioners' Court's action on the committee's non-binding recommendation.

"We followed the statutes strictly," Morrow said. "If there had been nine members present and nine members voting for it, then it would have been binding."

Three committee members were absent from the hearing earlier in the week.

Jury sentences Robert Wayne Harris to lethal injection

DALLAS (AP) — A fired employee was sentenced to lethal injection Friday after being convicted of killing two former coworkers at an Irving car wash.

The Dallas County jury deliberated several hours before sentencing Robert Wayne Harris to death. He could have received life in prison.

Harris, 28, was found guilty Tuesday of two counts of capital murder in the deaths of Mi-T-Fine Car Wash employees cashier Rhoda Wheeler, 45, and assistant manager Augustin Villasenor, 36, in March.

Also killed were Villasenor's brother, Benjamin Villasenor, 32; Roberto Jimenez Jr., 15; and 48-year-old car wash manager Dennis Lee. Harris was not tried for those three deaths, although he is charged in those slayings. He has also been charged in the unrelated death of an Irving woman.

The car wash workers were shot in the back of the head just three days after Harris was fired from the business.

Relatives of the victims said they were pleased with the jury's decision.

"His face is the last thing my mother saw and I'm going to make sure I'm there on the day he dies so my face is the last he sees," said Charity McFadden, Wheeler's daughter.

Harris has confessed to the killings several times, although he pleaded innocent when the trial began Monday.

On Thursday, defense psychiatrist Dr. Jay Crowder testified the 28-year-old Harris suffers from depression and anti-social behavior, which are compounded by a low IQ. Crowder also said Harris' stutter was the result of Tourette's syndrome, a neurological disorder characterized by exaggerated tics.

■ More State/8C

Defense attorney Brad Lollar said Harris was "borderline mentally retarded."

"I think we have sent another person to death row who has a mental illness," Lollar said.

Harris' brother, William Harris, testified about the pair's difficult upbringing, including the violent death of their father, who was strangled.

William Harris, 30, was questioned about the capital punishment being considered against his brother.

Baby scalded after fall into pot of hot menudo

MCALLEN (AP) — A South Texas mother has been charged with injury to a child after her one-year-old girl fell into a pot of scalding menudo.

Samantha Torres suffered second-degree burns and an injury to one of her eyes that prevents her from opening it, according to officials in McAllen. She is in stable condition at Mission Hospital, officials said.

The girl fell face first into the 12-inch-deep pot of hot soup while riding in her mother's van Tuesday, according to The Monitor of McAllen.

Mirella Torres, 28, told police her daughter was standing up on the seat and fell into the pot — which was set on the floorboard — when her vehicle ran across a dip in the road.

Menudo is a tripe stew popular in Mexico.

Torres, an undocumented immigrant from Monterrey, tried to treat the child's injuries with home remedies and did not take her to the hospital until Wednesday evening, police said.

But police charged Torres because she didn't strap Samantha into the car with a safety belt or a car seat. If convicted, she could be sentenced to up to 20 years in prison and $10,000 in fines.

Torres, a single mother of three, told police she was on her way to a catering event and had taken the menudo off the stove just minutes before the accident.

She said she stopped the van and took the baby out of the pot. She said she began removing what she thought was pieces of menudo from Samantha's face, but realized it was skin.

Border Patrol exceeds recruiting forecasts

NY Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — The U.S. Border Patrol says cyberspace and an emphasis on recruiting helped it double the number of new agents from last year.

The addition of some 900 agents brings the patrol's size to 9,061 — the largest in its 76-year history — but it is still scrambling to meet a congressional call for 10,000 agents by this time next year.

"This year has been a remarkable turnaround," Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman Sid Waldstreicher said from Washington. "We far exceeded what we thought we would be able to hire."

Approximately 40,000 people — 80 percent of the patrol's prospects — applied over the Internet as the agency posted want ads on its Web site and a dozen other sites dedicated to sports, minorities and employment.

"If you want to call them the millennium generation, this is how they are recruited," Waldstreicher said.

Using the Internet, applicants answer questions ranging from educational background to willingness to pay relocation expenses. The patrol also is branching out with ads in movie theaters and on television and radio.

In addition to marketing, the patrol has assigned 200 agents to recruiting duty. This week, a recruiting team is visiting military personnel in South Korea.

Beginning agents earn from $25,000 to $35,000 per year, depending on experience, and must be based along the U.S.-Mexico border.

'It is important to recognize the outstanding efforts and success of the Border Patrol this year, but let's not overlook the fact that they have failed to hire the amount of agents mandated by Congress over the past few years.'

— Silvestre Reyes, state representative-D

Approximately 900 agents joined the agency during the fiscal year that ends Saturday, compared with about 400 last year, according to the INS.

The increase occurred as the patrol, a branch of the INS, which itself is part of the Justice Department, is competing with a healthy economy to meet a five-year congressional mandate to become of force of 10,000 agents by October 2001.

Lawmakers said the INS has dragged its feet recruiting.

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, head of the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, said the Clinton administration has taken too long to make the Border Patrol a priority.

Smith said he would introduce legislation next year to continue to increase the strength of the Border Patrol.

"Right now, we are still shifting agents around depending on the latest pressure point," he said. "I don't think there is anybody that would argue seriously we have enough now."

Rep. Silvestre Reyes, D-Texas, who was chief of the patrol's McAllen and El Paso sectors before being elected to Congress, also said the patrol needs to do better.

"It is important to recognize the outstanding efforts and success of the Border Patrol this year, but let's not overlook the fact that they have failed to hire the amount of agents mandated by Congress over the past few years.

"The problem areas along the border, the areas that are still not under control, are a direct result of the INS' inability to follow through on (a) congressional mandate," Reyes said.

enthusiast, which is why we get so many people from overseas."

And all the fun won't be in the air. Coombes said there will be plenty of attractions for West Texans who have little interest in airplanes.

Saturday evening the Bellamy Brothers, a country act, will entertain the crowd. There will also be fireworks.

Two new events have been added to the AirSho: an airplane pull and the an anti-drug rally for DARE and D-Fy-It students. Both will be held Friday at the CAF.

The drug rally will feature a 40-foot tall, 30-ton mechanical transforming dinosaur named Robosaurus. Robosaurus eats cars and spits fire.

Discount tickets for the AirSho will be $12 for adults, $4 for children at 7-Eleven stores. Tickets at the gate will be $15 for adults, $6 for children.

NHTSA opens probe into another Firestone tire brand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government opened an investigation Friday into another brand of Firestone tires after receiving reports they were involved in accidents in which two people died and 12 were injured.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said it has received 167 complaints about the Steeltex R4S and A/T light truck tires since Aug. 1.

"The majority of the complaints occurred at highway speeds and allege a blowout, tread separation or other major failure," NHTSA said in its investigation report.

Similar reports led Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. to issue a recall of 6.5 million Firestone ATX, ATX II and Wilderness AT tires last month. Those tires, standard equipment on the Ford Explorer and several other Ford models, have been linked to 101 U.S. traffic deaths and more than 400 injuries.

Bridgestone/Firestone officials say they still have not determined the cause of the problems but have focused their investigation on manufacturing shortcomings at its plant in Decatur, Ill.

The R4S and A/T tires are original equipment on Ford F250 and F350 pickups, the Ford Excursion, General Motors Suburban and GM G Van, a commercial vehicle.

The R4S is a mud and snow tire and the A/T is an all-terrain tire with an aggressive tread. Both models are available in 15-, 16- and 16.5-inch sizes.

NHTSA had no estimate of how many of the tires have been produced.

Bridgestone/Firestone officials appeared caught off guard by the announcement. They later issued a statement stressing the investigation "is not a finding of a defect but rather is a process to determine the facts surrounding complaints that have been filed with NHTSA."

Spokeswoman Anitra Budd said the company "will continue to have a policy of being open and responsive" to NHTSA.

NHTSA, the agency in charge of auto safety, has seen a surge in tire complaints since the Firestone recall was announced.

"Obviously, there's certainly a heightened sense of awareness about tire problems, and we've seen an increase of complaints across the board," said an NHTSA official who did not want to be identified. "However, this increase is much more significant than we've gotten with any other brand."

NHTSA's investigation report showed a total of 169 complaints involving the Firestone tires since Jan. 1, 1998, with all but two occurring in the last two months.

GM spokesman Greg Martin said his company had received "no reports or any information that suggests any problems with these tires."

"We monitor the performance of our tires, and we haven't seen any indication of a problem," he said.

Ford spokesman Mike Vaughn said the tires are used on all the Excursions and 40 percent of the F-series trucks and Econoline vans. Vaughn said Ford is cooperating with NHTSA's investigation.

Ford received harsh criticism after the Firestone recall was announced because it acknowledged ordering its own recall of the same tires in 16 other countries after receiving reports of problems. The foreign recalls began more than a year before the U.S. recall, but Ford never alerted NHTSA.

Bridgestone/Firestone has been criticized for not ordering a recall sooner, even though the company's data on claims for injuries and property damage indicated problems with the tires at least as early as 1997.

NHTSA also has been faulted for not being more vigilant in its oversight of the companies.

"After falling asleep at the wheel, it looks like NHTSA finally has both eyes on the road," said Ken Johnson, spokesman for Rep. Billy Tauzin, R-La., leading a congressional investigation of the case.

Joan Claybrook, president of consumer advocacy group Public Citizen, also credited NHTSA with "getting more aggressive" on the recall.

NHTSA opens any investigation with a preliminary inquiry in which it gathers information from the manufacturer. The investigation can continue to an engineering analysis, where government engineers examine the product. That is the stage of NHTSA's investigation into the ATX, ATX II and Wilderness AT tires. An investigation eventually can lead to a recall.

Bridgestone/Firestone voluntarily recalled the 6.5 million tires but balked at NHTSA's request to add another 1.4 million more tires. NHTSA issued a consumer advisory for those tires on Sept. 1, saying they had a high failure rate and could pose a safety problem.

FAIR: Volunteers put entire fair together

(From 1A)

In addition to these volunteers, people are also needed to organize the fair every year. Traditionally, one family in the church is asked to chair the event. This year, Pat and Shelley Worrell were given the honor.

"It's a yearlong preparation," said Mrs. Ransbottom, whose family chaired the operation in 1993. Pat Worrell, whose three children attend St. Ann's school, agrees.

"It starts right after the last fair ends," Pat Worrell said. "It takes three to four hundred volunteers to get our portion of the fair off the ground."

While school officials and fair volunteers did not put a dollar amount on the fair, Pat Worrell said the fair's revenues "directly offset operating expenses." Even though the fair is a church function, the profits made go directly to St. Ann's School, which recently expanded its facilities to include a junior high.

"The amount that it brings in enables us to keep our tuition affordable," Ransbottom said. "The money goes right into school budget."

The addition of the Pride of Texas Carnival, which includes such favorite rides as "The Zipper" and "The Gravitron," was made 20 years ago and has become a major part of St. Ann's fair.

"A lot of these people who were working (the fair) can remember riding the rides when they were kids," Pat Worrell said. Both Pat Worrell and Ransbottom said the fair was a major alumni event, attracting St. Ann's graduates from all over Texas and the United States.

However, the fair is not just for St. Ann's members. Midland High School senior Laura Hooper remembers attending the fair every year since early childhood.

"It's kind of a part of your childhood that you revisit every year," Hooper said. "It's become such a big part of Midland."

Admission to the fair is free, and this year, the donation of one can of food to the Midland Food Bank is worth a $2 discount on bracelet prices. "The Zipper," a constant favorite, will return to the fair this year, and a ride called "Kamikaze" will be making its debut.

RAISE: Painter says he accepts decision

(From 1A)

"It was done fair," said Painter, who noted that the committee was composed of former grand jurors. "If nine members had been present, I would have had the opportunity to have a fair presentation. Anyway, this is the process. The commissioners don't have to accept it (the recommendation) — they rejected it."

The reasoning behind the Commissioners' Court's not granting the pay increases, Morrow noted, is that the court had granted sliding-scale pay increases for hired county employees for fiscal year 2001. And for FY 2002, the court is to consider pay raises for elected officials.

Commissioner Mike Bradford, who cited "big discrepancies" among salaries of the county's elected officials, said that to grant pay raises "piecemeal" would get the salary structure "out of balance."

In the county's annual Planning Conference at onset of the year, Morrow noted that the elected officials had agreed that the county's No. 1 priority was an increase in pay for county employees.

And Morrow said that he in turn pledged that the court would "consider raises for elected officials. And I hope we will have the money for it."

In his appearance before the salary grievance committee, Painter had sought a $10,000 raise or whatever the committee would recommend. Wallace, whose salary is pegged at $39,500, had wanted a $1,200 raise that would conform with the sliding-scale pay raise which the county granted county employees in FY 2001.

The court did, however, adopt the recommendation by the committee that Constable Angel Hernandez not get a pay raise. Hernandez had sought a salary increase to $33,150 from $24,000.

Commissioner Louisa Valencia referred to the 10-year salary history the county's 26 elected officials.

Painter, who 10 years ago was earning a $44,100 salary, got a salary raise in 1998 to $52,000 to match the pay of the neighboring Ector Court sheriff.

Salaries of the justices of the peace were upgraded in FY 1999 to $39,500 from $35,000 but had been $39,180 in the four previous years.

In FY 1999, the salary of each of the four constables was increased to $24,000 from $7,259. Earlier in the 1990s when Midland County had only one elected constable, the constable's pay was about $36,000.

After the court's votes on the Salary Grievance Committee's recommendations, Wallace said that the "Commissioners' Court did not listen to the voters of this county — the salary grievance committee voters."

Mrs. Valencia had said that it "would be an injustice" give pay raises to a couple of elected officials and not to the others.

However, Wallace said that the elected officials, just as he did, "all had an opportunity to come before those individuals (on the Salary Grievance Committee) to grieve their salary."

In referring to the county's Planning Conference, Bradford noted that the elected officials "unanimously, not a majority, unanimously" agreed that employee pay raises would be first and ahead of any raises for elected officials.

"We will have to absorb that (increase to the budget for employee pay raises) and then get to the elected officials. We were in agreement. That's the deal I made. I gave 26 elected officials my word, and I'm going to stick to it," Bradford said.

Firefighters battle chemical blaze in Odessa

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

WEST ODESSA — An on-again, off-again evacuation kept residents out of a 12-block area after the chemicals inside a prefabricated storage building caught fire Friday afternoon, according to Sgt. Roy Gladden, of the Ector County Sheriff's Department.

Gladden said that a 911 call at 3:40 p.m. alerted the Sheriff's Department and West Odessa Volunteer Fire Department to an explosion and possible structure fire at National Hydro-Vac Corporation at 527 Farm-to-Market Road 627 South.

Once they were on the scene, the firefighters requested assistance from the Odessa Fire Department Hazardous Material Team.

At 4 p.m., police evacuated the area north of Interstate 20, east of State Highway 1936, west of "L"Street and south of 10th Street.

Lanny Phillips, battalion chief for the Odessa Fire Department, said there was yellow-orange smoke coming from the 15-foot by 40-foot building and the fire caused at least two small explosions.

The building contained pallets of chemicals including: sodium nitrate, sodium hydroxide and ammonia bi-flouride. Firefighters used a forklift, then a frontend loader, to remove the pallets from the fire inside the building.

Residents were told they could return to their homes at 7:30 p.m., Gladden said. But subsequent reports said a flare-up caused authorities to extend the evacuation until 10:30 p.m.

Drug testing of pregnant women goes before U.S. Supreme Court

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Lori Griffin was about to go home from the hospital after an overnight stay for premature labor pains. Instead, she was slapped in handcuffs after testing positive for cocaine.

"They told me I was under arrest for distributing to a minor," Griffin recalled. "They put me in handcuffs and shackles and put me in a wheelchair and took me to jail."

Eleven years later, the U.S. Supreme Court will hear arguments Wednesday on whether testing pregnant women for drugs and reporting the results to police violates the Constitution's protection against unreasonable searches.

The justices' decision, expected next year, could determine whether other hospitals can adopt similar practices.

The South Carolina attorney general contends such programs help prevent babies from being born addicted. The state has used its child-endangerment law to prosecute pregnant women who use drugs, and South Carolina doctors must report as child abuse drug use by women late in pregnancy.

Opponents say the tests discourage pregnant drug users from seeking prenatal care.

"People are very frustrated with addiction and drug use and they want as big a stick as they can get," said Susan Dunn, a lawyer for Griffin and other women whose case is before the court. "This would give a new power of coercion."

The American Medical Association, in a friend-of-the-court brief, also said the state's drug-testing policy "forces physicians to compromise their commitment to patient confidentiality."

Griffin was a patient at the public Medical University of South Carolina, where officials in 1989 decided to help prosecutors battling the crack epidemic. If a woman's urine test indicated cocaine use, she was reported to police and arrested for distributing the drug to a minor.

> 'Do we put mother's privacy first or the baby's right to a normal life?'
> — Bobby Hood, attorney

The program — run by the hospital and city prosecutors — tested women who had a history of cocaine use or whose prenatal exams suggested use.

In 1990, the policy was changed to give drug-using patients a choice between arrest and treatment. But 10 women sued the hospital, saying tests performed without court warrants violate the Fourth Amendment.

The women all signed a consent form, said Dunn, "but it was not adequate to consent to a search."

The hospital's program was ended in 1994 after the federal government threatened to take away $18 million of the school's research money. During the five years, 253 pregnant women tested positive for cocaine. Most chose treatment, but 30 were arrested.

Griffin did not accept immediate treatment and sat in jail almost three months before giving birth. A relative took custody of the infant and Griffin was released to get treatment.

She and the other women have lost two rounds of the court battle, with the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals saying officials had a substantial interest in reducing drug use because of the costs of caring for cocaine babies. The searches were reasonable under a "special needs" exception to the Fourth Amendment, the court said.

"Do we put mother's privacy first or the baby's right to a normal life?" asked Bobby Hood, a lawyer representing the hospital and others.

Attorney General Charlie Condon said that no matter the outcome of the court case, testing will continue under a statewide program that now refers women to Family Court instead of criminal court. A judge then can order women into treatment.

Condon, who has said "the unborn child has a constitutional right to protection from its mother's drug abuse," said authorities will get search warrants if the women do not give their consent.

U.S. appeals court to rehear case of Randy Weaver

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court Friday agreed to rehear arguments on whether an FBI sharpshooter who killed Randy Weaver's wife during the 1992 standoff at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, can be prosecuted on manslaughter charges.

In June, a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled 2-1 that Idaho prosecutors could not hold Lon T. Horiuchi responsible for actions taken in his official role as a federal law enforcement officer.

On a request from prosecutors, however, the full 11-member appeals court will rehear the case at an undetermined time.

Horiuchi has maintained that he did not see Vicki Weaver when he fired at Weaver cohort Kevin Harris. But Boundary County, Idaho, prosecutors argued that Mrs. Weaver was killed by "a wild-headed government sniper in violation of our Constitution."

During the weeklong standoff at Weaver's cabin, federal agents were trying to arrest the white separatist on weapons charges.

In 1995, the government paid Weaver and his three surviving children $3.1 million in the killing of Weaver's wife and son.

Maryland becomes first state to compile bullet fingerprints

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Beginning on Sunday, with every new handgun sold in Maryland, the manufacturer will have to give state police a spent shell casing carrying the weapon's ballistic fingerprint.

Under the law — the first of its kind in the nation — the unique markings on the casing will then be entered into a database. When detectives find a bullet casing at a crime scene, they can go to the computer and instantly identify the gun it came from.

"Countless hours of investigative work can now be eliminated from the process of identifying the crime gun and who may have been in possession of it," State Police Superintendent David Mitchell said.

A similar New York state law takes effect March 1.

Five months after the Maryland law was signed, questions remain about its effectiveness.

There are no criminal penalties for noncompliance by manufacturers, and state police have told dealers they can continue selling guns even if manufacturers do not pack shell casings with the weapons.

State Police spokesman Maj. Greg Shipley said manufacturers have been told it is their responsibility to make sure guns sold in Maryland are accompanied by a casing.

Gun owner Jim Purtillo of Silver Spring questioned the value of the law. "It's about making it harder for people to buy guns," he said. "Bad guys typically don't leave shell casings from a revolver at a crime scene."

The National Rifle Association did not return several calls for comment.

Maryland gun dealers have worried that manufacturers or distributors may stop shipping guns into the state. But at least two major manufacturers are making efforts to comply: Smith & Wesson, the nation's largest maker of guns, and Beretta USA.

Beretta USA said it will pack shell casings with handguns it knows will be sold in Maryland, but warned that its distributors are scattered throughout the country and guns sent elsewhere could wind up back here.

"If we get an order from Florida, we don't have any way of knowing that gun is going to Maryland. It will not include the shell casing," B a spokesman Jeff Reh said.

Neither company could say whether its gun prices will increase as a result.

Sanford Abrams, vice president of the Maryland Licensed Gun Dealers Association, said the ballistics fingerprints may have little legal value because a shell casing will travel through so many hands from the manufacturer to state police.

"The chain of custody stinks," he said.

Abrams also questioned whether ballistic fingerprints will have any practical value because the markings left on shell casings by firing pins change after repeated firings.

The requirement is part of sweeping new gun legislation in Maryland. Sunday also is the effective date for laws prohibiting handguns from being sold without an external trigger lock and barring anyone under 30 with a juvenile record for violent crimes from buying a handgun.

Beginning in 2002, Maryland residents also will have to complete a state-approved gun safety course before buying a weapon, and the following year, all handguns sold will have to be equipped with built-in locks.

Whitney Houston charged with pot possession

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii (AP) — Pop singer Whitney Houston could face 30 days in a Hawaiian jail and a $1,000 fine for allegedly possessing half an ounce of marijuana, discovered by security staff at the Keahole-Kona International Airport, police said.

The drug was found Jan. 11 in Houston's bag during a routine search as the recording star prepared to board a plane for San Francisco, First Deputy Prosecutor Charlene Iboshi said. The petty misdemeanor charge was filed Tuesday.

Staff kept the bag, but Houston departed before officers had arrived, police said.

Prosecutors and Houston's Honolulu attorney, Brook Hart, had earlier agreed to set an arraignment and plea hearing for Oct. 26. Houston has until that hearing to voluntarily turn herself in, Iboshi said. If she doesn't, prosecutors say they will seek the judge's permission to have an arrest warrant issued.

In Boston, some home-sellers share profits with poorer neighbors

BOSTON (AP) — Buy low, sell high: It's a homeowner's dream that is coming true in this city thanks to soaring property values. But while sellers profit, the poor struggle to pay rising rents.

In Boston's resurgent Jamaica Plain neighborhood, however, some homeowners are donating some of their windfall profits to help poor neighbors keep their homes.

The Affordable Housing Fund in Boston has collected about $35,000 since it was established last year, including two $10,000 donations this week.

It has helped pay for tenants' legal battles, as well as security deposits and rent. The money will also be used to hire someone to organize tenants to fight unfair rent increases or evictions.

"I haven't heard of anything like that. It sounds like an interesting answer to the problem of gentrification," said Sheila Crowley, president of the Washington-based National Low Income Housing Coalition.

To Steve and Deborah Eisenbach-Budner, who are moving to Oregon and have donated to the Boston fund, the project is about fairness. They said the people who helped improve the neighborhood — and boost housing values — should not be forced to leave because of rising rents.

"It's part of the basic concept: You benefit, you give back," said Deborah Eisenbach-Budners.

That attitude is rare, according to Randy Shaw, president of Housing America, an affordable-housing advocacy group in San Francisco, where the market is also extremely tight.

San Francisco residents have seen housing values triple in the past 10 years but often view their profits as a result of their own "genius," and don't think about helping the neighborhood, Shaw said.

"Once people hear about this, maybe other people will think about it," he said.

Jamaica Plain's fund grew out of an effort organized two years ago by a tenants group, City Life/Vida Urbana. City Life got several landlords to sign a pledge promising to keep rents affordable. Then the organization realized that homeowners might be willing to help as well.

The neighborhood has a strong sense of community, Steve Eisenbach-Budners said. "If you don't have a sheetrock bucket over your head, you'll walk down the street and see five or 10 people you know," he said.

Blacks, Hispanics and various European immigrant groups all have deep roots in the neighborhood, and many have endured widespread blight and crime in the 1980s and early '90s.

Since then, improvements in public transportation, the creation of green space, and reduced crime have made Jamaica Plain a desirable place to live. But the demand — combined with a citywide vacancy rate of about 1 percent — has driven up housing costs.

Between 1995 and 1999, the average price of a three-family house in the neighborhood rose 85 percent, from $118,000 to $220,000. Average rents for a two-bedroom apartment rose about 50 percent between 1995 and 1999, from $861 to $1,288.

Poorer residents simply cannot afford to pay market prices, said Elliot Roman, 46, who has lived in Jamaica Plain for 30 years.

"It seems like every time a community improves, poor people get pushed right out of it," he said.

Last year, Roman's 6-year-old daughter and his ex-girlfriend were nearly evicted from their apartment after a rent increase. But money from the fund was used to hire a lawyer, who was able to thwart the eviction.

"If it wasn't for people donating their funds, my family would be out on the sidewalk or in a shelter," Roman said.

Company agrees to buy back biotech corn crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under pressure from the government, the company that makes the biotech corn linked to a massive recall of taco shells agreed Friday to buy all of this year's crop of the grain to keep it from getting into the food supply.

Federal officials say there is no known health risk from the corn produced by Aventis CropScience, but it has not been approved for human consumption because scientists are unsure whether it might cause allergic reactions.

The Agriculture Department and the Environmental Protection Agency issued a joint statement saying that Aventis had agreed to reimburse farmers for this fall's harvest of the StarLink corn. About 300,000 acres of the corn were planted, 0.4 percent of the total corn acreage.

The corn is worth an estimated $68 million at current prices, according to the National Corn Growers Association.

"This action is a prudent and responsible step to prevent the current crop of StarLink corn from being used in processed foods," the statement said.

The corn will eventually be sold for cattle feed or for production of ethanol, a gasoline additive, USDA officials said. The department will purchase the grain from farmers and then oversee its shipping to buyers to ensure that it doesn't get mixed up with food-grade corn. Aventis will reimburse the government for all its expenses, including shipping and storage costs, and in turn will get the proceeds from the corn's sale.

Aventis issued a statement saying that its "responsible, voluntary action" will "provide additional confidence in the integrity of the country's food supply."

Kraft Foods recalled millions of packages of taco shells that are sold in stores under the Taco Bell name after tests showed that some were made with the Aventis variety, and Taco Bell Corp. said it was replacing all of the shells in its restaurants.

The EPA approved the crop for commercial use in 1998 with the condition that it only be used for animal feed. The corn contains a bacterium gene that makes it toxic to insects.

It is one of eight varieties of genetically engineered corn that have been approved by the government and the only one that is not approved for use in food.

Four Palestinians killed in clashes at Jerusalem holy site

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli riot police stormed a major Jerusalem shrine Friday and opened fire on stone-throwing Muslim worshippers, killing four Palestinians and wounding 175 in the worst bloodshed in four years at the walled compound at the center of the deadlock in Mideast peace talks.

Forty-four police officers, including the Jerusalem chief, were hit by stones. The violence quickly spread to Jerusalem neighborhoods and the West Bank, further dimming prospects for an Israeli-Palestinian peace treaty.

The Palestinian Authority accused the Israeli government of having ignited a "religious war" and called for a general strike and a day of mourning in the Palestinian areas Saturday. Israeli officials said they were trying to cool the situation. Peace talks have been stalled since July over the issue of sovereignty over the shrines.

Tension has been running high since Thursday, when the hawkish Israeli opposition leader, Ariel Sharon, toured the Jerusalem shrine, revered by Muslims and Jews, to demonstrate that Israel is in control.

Friday's violence began after Muslim noon prayers when the compound was filled with 20,000 worshippers. Several hundred Palestinians began hurling stones at Israeli riot police huddling behind Plexiglas shields at the compound's Moghrabi Gate. Officers fired barrages of rubber-coated steel pellets and snipers shot live rounds. Police, many wielding clubs, then charged, chasing stone-throwers.

In the mayhem, Palestinian protesters hit by rubber bullets fell to the ground and were carried away on stretchers. One young man was unconscious, his forehead smeared by blood. Others slumped on the cobblestone plaza, holding their stomachs and heads in pain. Shouts of "Allahu Akbar," or God is great, mixed with the sounds of gunfire.

As news of the clashes spread, riots erupted in other areas of traditionally Arab east Jerusalem and the West Bank. In the biblical town of Bethlehem, rocks littered the main road and thick clouds of black smoke from burning tires rose into the skies. One stone-thrower, his face covered by a black hood, was taken into a chokehold by Israeli troops.

By day's end, four Palestinians were dead and at least 175 were wounded by rubber bullets and live rounds, most shot in the upper body, hospital officials said. Forty-four Israeli policemen and 15 civilians were hurt by stones. Eight cars, including police vans and ambulances, were set on fire or had windshields smashed.

One of the dead, Bilal Afani, 26, was a Palestinian laborer from the West Bank suburb of Abu Dis. Before leaving his home Friday, he had talked about having a party later in the day for his daughter's first birthday, said Bilal's brother, Ahmed.

"I don't know if I am sad or happy, because my brother gave his blood for Al Aqsa (the main Jerusalem mosque), and this is an honor for the family," said Ahmed Afani after thousands attended his brother's funeral.

The 36-acre walled shrine is known to Jews as the Temple Mount, site of their former biblical Temple, Judaism's holiest site. To Muslims, it is Haram as-Sharif, or Noble Sanctuary, home to two major mosques that mark the spot where tradition says the Prophet Muhammad ascended to heaven.

The Palestinian Cabinet said after its weekly meeting Friday that Israeli troops opened fire "without warning and without justification in a planned attack, and after the failure of Sharon's visit."

As the clashes raged, Sharon defended his visit to the shrine. "The state of Israel cannot afford that an Israeli citizen will not be able to visit part of his country, not to speak about the holiest place for the Jewish people all around the world," Sharon told CNN.

Jerusalem's hawkish mayor, Ehud Olmert, a member of Sharon's Likud party, accused Palestinian security forces of orchestrating the violence.

However, Israel's police minister and acting foreign minister, Shlomo Ben-Ami, said he believed the riots were spontaneous. "Our assessment is that this is largely linked to this visit (by Sharon)," Ben-Ami said, adding that neither the Palestinian Authority nor the Israeli government had an interest in an escalation.

Friday's clashes were preceded by two deadly attacks on Israeli troops. On Wednesday, an Israeli soldier was killed in a bomb attack in the Gaza Strip. On Friday morning, a Palestinian policeman opened fire on Israeli colleagues patrolling the West Bank town of Qalqiliya, killing one of the Israelis.

Israel barred its citizens from entering Palestinian-run areas to prevent further friction, and Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak ordered more police to be deployed in Jerusalem. The violence came at the start of the Jewish New Year which ushers in a 10-day period of contemplation and prayer.

Ben-Ami and Arafat spoke separately by phone with U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright on Friday. Ben-Ami tried also tried to reassure the Palestinians, saying Israel was not trying to challenge the right of Muslims to worship at the Haram as-Sharif.

The violence came at a time of increased tensions between Israelis and Palestinians, and at a time of deadlock in peace treaty talks. The negotiations are hung up because of rival claims to sovereignty over the mosque compound. Both sides have said they would not grant the other sole control. U.S. mediators have floated compromise ideas, but none has been accepted by both Israel and the Palestinians.

Honda shows off fuel-cell car as competition, cooperation power up

HAGA-MACHI, Japan — Honda Motor Co.'s new experimental car doesn't have the roar of a gasoline engine — or the polluting exhaust. Instead, it purrs with the soft whir of a fan and the only thing coming out the tailpipe is water vapor.

The Japanese automaker showed its FCX-V3 to reporters Friday as part of a project with Ford Motor Co., DaimlerChrysler and other automakers to test out a technology of the future: the fuel cell.

Though the automakers won't be sharing fuel cell technology, they will be helping each other cross other hurdles such as developing fueling systems, winning public acceptance and studying possibilities for commercial production.

Fuel cells produce energy from a reaction between hydrogen and oxygen, a clean technology that is expected someday to replace the gasoline engine.

But the technology is not likely to take off for at least another decade, in part because it needs a whole new system of fueling. Gas stations would have to make way for fueling stations for hydrogen.

But all the world's major automakers are rushing to work on fuel cell technology.

Honda showed the FCX-V3 to reporters Friday at a research center north of Tokyo.

The model will be among the more than 50 fuel cell vehicles tested over the next three years under the California Fuel Cell Partnership — a Sacramento-based project joining the state of California, automakers, fuel-cell makers and oil companies. A road test there is scheduled to start in November.

Analysts say the automakers are competing intensely to keep up in a still uncertain, futuristic technology. So far, observers aren't picking any winners in the fuel cell race.

"It's too early to tell which automaker is ahead of the others," said Masato Ogasawara, auto analyst at Daiwa Institute of Research in Tokyo.

Honda said its new fuel cell car is quieter, nimbler and lighter than its previous models. Maximu speed is 80 mph. It stores the hydrogen in a high-pressure tank in the back of the car, where the trunk normally is.

But having the tank in the trunk could be dangerous in an accident, as hydrogen is volatile. So Honda is working on a better, safer way to store hydrogen so the tank can be placed lower in the car, where a gas tank usually is, said executive chief engineer Yozo Kami.

"But with this model, we are getting closer to a commercial product," Kami said.

Honda acknowledged the fuel cell car needs more work: it doesn't work well in cold weather and travels just 110 miles before refueling. Another issue is cost: Honda refused to say how much the fuel cell or vehicle cost, except to say that they were still extremely expensive.

Honda has set 2003 for commercial production of fuel cell vehicles.

The company's domestic rival, Toyota Motor Corp., has shown experimental models of its fuel cells and has an agreement with General Motors to exchange fuel cell technology.

Toyota is putting 2003 as the target for a prototype that may lead to commercial production. Ford plans to begin a production program of fuel cell cars by 2004.

Honda may be at a disadvantage compared to larger automakers boasting more clout in setting industry standards, says Masaaki Sato, who has written books about Japan's auto industry.

"It's not good enough to just come out with a quality product," Sato said.

PAROS, Greece (AP) — The captain of a ferry that slammed into a rock and sunk admitted he was asleep just before the accident, according to testimony reported Friday. Divers pulled more bodies from the Aegean waters, bringing the death toll from the accident to 75.

Some of the victims died while desperately trying to escape the sinking ferry Express Samina, and their bodies were found caught by their lifejackets in the wreckage, divers said. Other bodies were floating in the remote coves that dot this holiday island, where the ship sank Tuesday with more than 560 people on board.

At least 14 people were known to be missing, mainly Greeks but also an Albanian, a Russian and a Spaniard, the Merchant Marine ministry said. But rescue crews were unsure of how many people were aboard the ferry. Rescuers brought 108 foreign tourists and 365 Greek passengers to safety.

The Samina sank in rough seas two miles off the coast after crashing into rocky islets marked with a light beacon. The accident is Greece's worst maritime accident in 35 years.

The captain, first officer and two crew members have been charged with murder, neglect of duty and violation of maritime procedures amid reports officers were watching a soccer match and the ship was on automatic pilot as it headed toward port.

Captain Vassilis Yannakis told investigators he was taking a nap and his first officer was off the bridge flirting with a passenger, according to testimony carried in the daily Ta Nea on Friday.

"I went to sleep for a bit, for ten minutes, because I wasn't feeling well," Vassilis told investigators, quoted by Ta Nea. He was woken by first officer Anastasios Psychoyos, who said strong winds were causing problems.

The article in the Athens daily, one of Greece's most respected newspapers, did not explain how the testimony was obtained. However, the paper has previously obtained similar information through confidential sources.

"Before I managed to get there (to the bridge), I heard a 'boom'," Yannakis said.

He said he was told by a crewman later that Psychoyos had been "in the lounge flirting with a woman."

Psychoyos told reporters late Thursday that "the weather pushed us on the rocks. We had maintained a safe distance."

The first officer told investigators he saw the rocks at the last minute and ordered the helmsman to turn the ship. "When I saw the ship was headed for the two rocks I personally grabbed the wheel and turned hard left. The bad thing happened though. It is my fault," he was quoted by the daily Eleftherotypia.

For two days, divers were hampered by gale force winds and strong currents that prevented them from descending to the wreck. High winds also kept local fishing boats and other vessels from joining the rescue effort.

In improved weather Friday, divers found the 345-foot, 4,407-ton Samina lying on its side in the sand in 115 feet of clear water. A gash ran the length of its bottom right side.

"We found three people wedged in the railings, stuck by their life vests as they tried to squeeze through. Another woman was in a life raft," said diver Lazaros Christodoulou. "It was shocking."

'We found three people wedged in the railings, stuck by their life vests as they tried to squeeze through. Another woman was in a life raft. It was shocking.'
— Lazaros Christodoulou, diver

The water's surface was still rough, with 20-foot waves and high winds. Underwater, the current was so strong that it ripped one body from divers' hands and had to be recovered on the surface far from the wreck, Christodoulou said.

"It was chaos down there with debris," he said.

The ferry's operating company, Minoan Flying Dolphins, has also come under pressure after another of its passenger ships, the Express Artemis, ran aground near Paros late Thursday at the nearby island of Naxos. Other ships took its 1,081 passengers to ports near Athens. Last month, a hydrofoil also owned by Minoan caught fire and 76 passengers abandoned the craft unharmed.

Survivors from the Paros ferry disaster claimed the evacuation was badly organized and that many life vests were filled chunks of wood.

Foreign tourists who survived the crash were leaving the island, many angry with the captain and the crew but happy to be alive.

"We are going to live life grande, its a shame so many people had to die," said Joanne Calabrese, 26, an occupational therapist from Georgetown, Mass. She was on a backpacking tour of Europe with her fiancee, 27-year-old chiropractor Roger Mercaldi.

Seamen's unions strongly dispute assurances by Minoan and coast guard inspectors that the 34-year-old Express Samina was seaworthy.

Yannis Iriotis, Minoan's chief legal adviser, believes the company bears no responsibility, saying the evidence "points to human error shown by the crew."

From actors to coal miners, Yugoslavs strike to force out Milosevic

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Blocking roads and shutting down shops, movie theaters and coal mines, tens of thousands of Yugoslavs heeded opposition calls for a nationwide strike Friday to force President Slobodan Milosevic to step down.

As opposition leaders explained the campaign to 25,000 supporters in Belgrade's main square, students rallied in the country's south, shopkeepers closed down in the east and television workers cut off transmissions in the north.

The opposition called the protests to pressure Milosevic to admit that challenger Vojislav Kostunica won Sunday's presidential election. Milosevic admits he finished second, but his government says no candidate won a majority so an Oct. 8 runoff is necessary.

"Cease your work, come out and stay on the streets, so that this country will find its path to future," opposition leader Zoran Djindjic told the Belgrade crowd. "Serbia must stop for us to unload Milosevic out of a seat he no longer has a right to."

Serbia and the smaller Montenegro make up Yugoslavia.

The actors' guild declared a strike, and most theater and cinema owners said they would shut down. Several roads were blocked in northern and southern parts of Serbia and over 7,000 coal miners stopped work in Kolubara, 25 miles south of Belgrade.

Two protests, one in the afternoon and the other in the evening, attracted a total of 50,000 people to Belgrade's main Republic Square.

Police briefly blocked one of three main bridges over the Sava River, trying to prevent people and a column of about 100 taxi drivers from joining the evening protest in the capital.

Outside Belgrade, thousands of high school students shunned classes in Nis, Serbia's third largest city, and spilled into the streets — some jumping out of first floor classroom windows in their haste to attend the protest.

Waving anti-Milosevic banners, they chanted: "Save Serbia and kill yourself, Slobodan," while taxi drivers blockaded adjoining streets.

"I know why you are not in school today," Mayor Zoran Zivkovic told the students in Nis. "You refuse to accept injustice!"

Walkouts — joined by shopkeepers and company employees — were staged in a dozen other cities and towns, including the opposition strongholds of Cacak and Kragujevac.

Southern Valjevo was completely blocked and thousands protested in Kraljevo. In Novi Sad, state television employees stopped work.

A main highway in western Serbia was blocked for one hour by some 60 cabbies as a "warning."

Also Friday, Serbia's opposition lodged an official complaint with the Federal Election Commission, providing their own tally that showed Kostunica beat Milosevic 51.34 percent to 36.22 percent in Sunday's vote.

If the commission fails to respond to their complaint, the opposition plans to press the case in the country's constitutional court.

The opposition said it would dispatch delegations to army headquarters, the Interior Ministry and Serbian state television with documents proving their election victory.

An opposition member of the commission, Nebojsa Bakarac, told reporters that Milosevic had falsified more than a hundred thousand votes from polling places that never opened in Albanian-populated towns in Kosovo and that there was proof of ballots "cast" by dead voters.

Another critic of Milosevic, Bernard Kouchner, the U.N. administrator of Kosovo, accused the Yugoslav president of manipulating votes cast in that southern Yugoslav province.

Kouchner said that although the Milosevic camp said 140,000 people voted in Kosovo, the maximum was no more than 45,000 — and probably much fewer — according to the 300 teams of U.N. observers counting voters last Sunday.

"This man is a liar," Kouchner said of Milosevic. "We were there. And exactly for this particular reason, to avoid manipulation in Kosovo."

Kostunica urged an independent recount of the ballots, appealing "especially to neighboring Greece" to help ease tensions caused by the differing election figures.

"It is more than necessary to count the votes again and examine the entire balloting material," Kostunica said in a letter made available to The Associated Press.

Greece, a NATO member with close cultural and religious ties to Serbia, has suggested the opposition consider the possibility of taking part in the runoff if international election observers are allowed. Bakarac — the commission's opposition member — rejected Greece's initiative, saying the opposition would not bargain with Milosevic on a runoff: "The truth is the truth and it's not negotiable."

U.S. Defense Secretary William Cohen has praised the growing anti-Milosevic movement, and noted, without giving specifics, that American forces were "prepared for contingencies."

Many foreign leaders, including President Clinton, have promised to lift sanctions if Kostunica's victory is respected.

Croatia on Friday added its voice to nations recognizing Kostunica's victory, calling it a "vote for democracy."

'Serbia must stop for us to unload Milosevic out of a seat he no longer has a right to.'

— Zoran Djindjic, opposition leader

Controversy in the beer tent: Officials rail at Oktoberfest's growing elitism

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Bouncers wielding walkie-talkies with lists of VIPs, deciding who's in and who's out, certainly aren't unusual at hip venues.

Only these bouncers aren't guarding the velvet-rope frontier of a New York nightclub. They're wearing Lederhosen and patrolling the festive tents of Oktoberfest, where the right to drink beer, dance on the table and roar out an ode to the frothy stuff has been a sacred rite for nearly two centuries.

But increasingly, it's become invitation-only — to the chagrin of Munich city leaders and Oktoberfest organizers who are vowing steps to prevent the world-famous Volksfest from turning into a VIPfest.

They complain that events staged by record companies to promote musicians, or shows featuring ladies doffing their Dirndl dresses, are threatening the core of a tradition dating to 1810.

"We don't want to have the Oktoberfest become a show-biz event. We are not Las Vegas, we are not Woodstock, we are not a mega-disco," says Gabriele Weishaeupl, Oktoberfest's general manager, herself the picture of tradition in a smocked green Dirndl. "We want a traditional Bavarian Volksfest."

In a way, Oktoberfest has become a victim of its own popularity. By the time the 167th Oktoberfest ends on Tuesday, more than 6.5 million people will have passed through the blue-and-white gates marking the entrance to "Wiesn," the Bavarian word for field. And they'll have chugged down 5 million of the massive liter-sized beer mugs.

But don't expect to just walk into the popular Hippodrom or Kaefer tents. Tables are booked months in advance, many by companies in large blocks. And the non-reserved sections in the middle of the tents are already filled by afternoon. Beer hall owners then simply shut the doors to new arrivals.

'We don't want to have the Oktoberfest become a show-biz event. We are not Las Vegas, we are not Woodstock, we are not a mega-disco. We want a traditional Bavarian Volksfest.'

— Gabriele Weishaeupl, Oktoberfest's general manager

While only a handful of the Wiesn's 14 tents are violating the Oktoberfest spirit, Weishaeupl says she will sit down with all the tent owners after the 18-day festival ends for a serious talk. City lawmakers have already called for the tents to set aside more unreserved tables.

The clash with tradition reached a head last year after a performer at the Hippodrom dropped her Dirndl, flashing her breasts for the crowd. Mayor Christian Ude derided the spectacle as a striptease — and took issue when the Hippodrom started issuing VIP bracelets to allow unlimited access for a select few, a sort of season's pass.

Hippodrom owner Sepp Kratz abandoned the bracelets under pressure and says he regrets the flashing incident last year. But he and other owners defend their attempts to regulate admission as a step against overcrowding.

"I am sorry that it happened — such things don't belong to Wiesn," Kratz said. Still, he insisted, "we are caring for Bavarian tradition."

Standing in the Hippodrom tent, Johann Niedermeyer of Munich can't remember ever missing an Oktoberfest in all his 63 years.

"It used to be cozier, not such a huge event," Niedermeyer says, wearing a well-worn pair of Lederhosen.

On stage, a performer with the stage name Antonia from Tirolia performs a song in a short-short dress, then jumps up and down, threatening to free her bosom from its fabric confinement.

"There weren't such things in the past," Niedermeyer says as he claps along. "But I like these things too."

Later in the evening, Susanne Tusche from the nearby town of Memmingen stood outside the Hippodrom tent, already off-limits to non-ticket holders, viewing the revelers swaying merrily to the music through a window.

"This has no Volksfest atmosphere when you stand here before closed doors," she said.

But her mood changed when a friend came out carrying the all-important reservation bracelets, and suddenly she was on her way to grasp yet another beer mug between her hands.

"See, it's all who you know," she said.

MHS seeks turnaround, not turnovers, tonight vs. Lubbock Coronado

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Guess what Midland High head football coach David Browning says is the key to the Bulldogs' non-district game with Lubbock Coronado at 7:30 p.m. today in Lowery Field?

Here's a hint.

"Don't turn the stinking ball over," Browning said.

Browning will not mince words here. There's no need to. Purple-colored glasses couldn't disguise the fact that his Bulldogs basically stunk up the joint last Friday night, committing eight turnovers in a 34-10 loss to Lubbock Monterey. It was certainly a bad experience.

Midland High Football

"In the last 29 years, I have been through that one other time," Browning said. "That is when we played Marshall (University) at their place (when Browning was an assistant at Appalachian State University). The good thing about that bunch is that they turned it around and won five games in a row after a horrific game. We will see if we are up to the test."

The test on this night for the Bulldogs is to beat a struggling Coronado and remove the cloud of uncertainty which has been hovering over the MHS program since the mistake-filled loss.

"I am disappointed with last week's game because of the turnovers," Browning said. "We generally are one of the top teams in the district as far as turnover margin. Last week, we had a season's worth of turnovers. Last year, we had a total of 13. We had eight last week and just two in the first two games. I can't explain it to you."

But Browning can do something about it. Browning says there will be changes. Colter Lange will replace Chris Howard as the team's starting quarterback. Howard threw three interceptions last week. At running back, sophomore Troy Barber gets the start ahead of Tony Joseph.

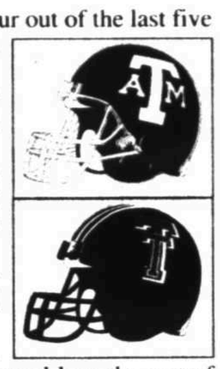
Texas Tech's recent success intensifies Aggies for matchup

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M is starting to understand just how fired up Texas Tech gets for their annual encounter. A&M coach R.C. Slocum is glad to hear it.

The Red Raiders have beaten the Aggies four out of the last five times, including 21-19 last year after Texas A&M visited Lubbock with a No. 5 ranking.



"I cried after that game," A&M linebacker Jason Glenn said. "I've never cried after a game, but I cried after that one."

Texas Tech (4-0) hopes for more Aggie tears Saturday when it faces Texas A&M (2-1) at Kyle Field. The Aggies have not lost a home game since Tech beat them 13-10 in 1996.

The Red Raiders' recent success has intensified the rivalry between the schools and prompted some realizations in Aggieland.

"Those guys really hate us," Glenn said. "Most of them say if they just win this game and lose the rest of them, they would still think they had a good season."

Slocum said it's about time his team understood what this game has meant for the Red Raiders.

"That's what I want," he said. "It's been a little frustrating for

Benson Runs into History Books

Reb RB breaks 5A rushing record; Lee stomps EP Franklin

When Midland Lee running back Cedric Benson runs into the state's football record book, he does it in style.

Benson gained 209 yards in a 44-7 Lee win over El Paso Franklin at Memorial Stadium Friday night to become the all-time leading Class 5A rusher in Texas.

LEE

Midland Lee	44
EP Franklin	7

The record came with 1:51 left to play in the third quarter on an 11-yard touchdown run. He didn't play again in another lost quarter of state history.

Benson now has 6,194 career rushing yards, passing the 6,189 yards set by Jerod Douglas of Converse Judson in 1983. Ironically, Douglas got his record yards in the state title game that year against Lee in Texas Stadium.

Benson is the first back in District 4-5A history to crack the 6,000-yard barrier. It was the 11th time in his career that he has had 200 yards are more rushing. He also scored three touchdowns, and he has had three or more in a game 17 times.

And he knew he had the record when the moment arrived on a squirming 11-yard TD run that featured balance, power and that ultimate gift of scoring.

"No one really told me I had the record, but I had that feeling when the crowd let me know," Benson said. "That was a good feeling."

Benson's record-setting performance wasn't announced until after the game was over, but the crowd seemed to know, probably from the KODM radio broadcast. Benson climbed up on a trainer's cart and waved to the crowd from the sideline. Those

Big Spring downs Andrews to open District 4-4A play

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ANDREWS— Friday night here at the Mustang Bowl proved that even though they may find themselves in different districts every two years, Big Spring and Andrews will somehow remain linked.

And that's the way it should probably be.

Finding themselves in the odd position of opening district against each other, the Steers and Mustangs gave yet another worthy effort, but it was the visitors who came out making the biggest statement in the District 4-4A opener, as Big Spring escaped with a 21-13 victory. Since Big Spring coach Dwight Butler and Andrews coach Mike Lebby are such good friends, any sort of victory for either team could be considered bittersweet.

With both teams carrying 1-2 records into the game, it was up to somebody to make a statement, and as much as Butler hated beating his old pal Lebby, he put his sympathy on simmer.

"It feels really good to be able to win any game right now," said Butler, whose team had lost two straight to ranked teams. "It's really nice after the way (the Mustangs) beat us over here last season."

Last October, Lebby claimed bragging rights for the year as

Andrews running back Jaime Bueno is buried under a sea of Big Spring defenders Friday night during a district game in Andrews.

Andrews crushed Big Spring 31-6 in what was then a District 5-4A showdown. While both teams went on to make the playoffs last season, this September game might have even bigger future implications than last year's.

Big Spring (2-2 overall, 1-0 in district) can use this game as a springboard into what promises to be a rough district schedule, while Andrews (1-3, 0-1) now has little margin for error the rest of the way. Neither team, though, shamed itself in a

MCHS beats up 'big dog' Stanton

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Stanton coach Mark Cotton probably summed it up best: "They just whipped us. What more can you say?"

With plenty of adrenaline pumping through them, the Midland Christian Mustangs did what Cotton said they did to his No. 9 Buffaloes Friday night at Mustang Field. On defense, the Mustangs stepped up to the challenge of slowing down the Buffalo running tandem of Jeremy Hull and Clay White. And on offense, Midland Christian launched a balanced attack as the Mustangs won 24-12 in what has to be their biggest victory since they moved up to 11-man football four seasons ago.

Gunter

"We've played some tough games in the past against some big dogs," McClendon said. "We said point blank 'In order to be a big dog, you've got to beat a big dog.' Tonight, we beat a big dog.

"Coach Cotton and his coaches have a class program, and it's without a doubt one of the finest programs in Texas, and tonight we did what we needed to do. We're headed where we need to go."

It all started with the Mustang defense as they held the Buffaloes (4-1) scoreless through three quarters before Jon Cotton and Clay White scored on passes from Keith Cook. Other than that quarter, the Buf-

Jones' attempt for five is bronzed ... 8B

SYDNEY, Australia — The silliest question anyone asked Marion Jones when her golden five-gold quest ended with a bronze in the long jump was whether she had any regrets.

She looked more surprised at that notion than she ever did when she lay sprawled in the sand Friday night and saw the stiff, impassive judge holding up a red flag to indicate each of her six jumps.

U.S. men have nightmare game ... 8B

SYDNEY, Australia — One of the greatest upsets in the history of basketball came within inches of happening. The mighty American men, the team that couldn't lose, almost did just that.

In a game that wasn't decided until the final shot missed by about a foot, the United States edged Lithuania 85-83 Friday night to reach the gold medal game.

Surprise, surprise: unbeaten Gamecocks head to Alabama

By Richard Rosenblatt
AP Football Writer

A most unusual set of events has turned South Carolina's visit to Alabama into one intriguing matchup.

Call it the Role Reversal Bowl.

Before the season, this was a gimme — as in gimme the Crimson Tide and who cares about the point spread. Four games into the season, this Southeastern Conference matchup has gone topsy-turvy:

—South Carolina, which began the season carrying a 21-game losing streak, is 4-0, ranked No. 23 and Lou Holtz, master rebuilder, is a miracle worker.

—Alabama, ranked No. 3 in the preseason off its SEC championship, is 1-3, off to its worst season since 1990 and coach Mike DuBose is offering to resign.

"I'm mad at myself because I'm not doing the job the way the job should be done. ... I've got to do a better job of coaching," DuBose said this week.

Nobody has done a better job of coaching than Holtz, who showed up in Columbia, S.C., last season but failed to win a game. Now, South Carolina has beaten all comers, including Georgia and Mississippi State — both ranked before showing up at Brice-Williams Stadium.

On Saturday, Holtz's hotshots hit the road for the first time. The last road win was nearly three years ago — 39-13 at Arkansas on Oct. 18, 1997.

Which is probably why Holtz, the former William & Mary, North Carolina State, Arkansas, Minnesota and Notre Dame coach, has been pooh-poohing the Gamecocks' first Top 25 appearance since 1993.

"If we're 23, there's a lot of bad football teams, because I don't think we're the 23rd best football team in the country by any stretch of the imagination," Holtz said this week.

It should be noted that at each stop, Holtz took his team to a bowl game in his second season as coach. Last year, DuBose's third, he took the Crimson Tide to the SEC title and the Orange Bowl. Year Four has been a nightmare, and will get a lot worse with a loss in front of the home crowd.

We can hear the 'Bama fans now: "We want Holtz! We want Holtz!"

MHS netters battle Cooper; Rebs take on Abilene High

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

The District 4-5A high school team tennis picture should become much clearer today as Midland High hosts Abilene Cooper.

The Bulldogs, 2-0 in district, could take a big step toward the region's team tournament with win over the always-powerful Cougars.

In another match, which could also prove pivotal to the 4-5A race, Midland Lee travels to Abilene for its match with defending district and state champion Abilene High. Both matches begin at 11 a.m.

Right now, MHS (2-0) is a half-game back of AHS (3-0) for the top spot in District 4-5A. Cooper is 1-1 as is Central. Lee is 1-2, but still not out of the regional picture. The top two teams qualify for regionals, which will be held in November.

"This is a real big week for us," Midland High tennis coach Tom Heiting said. "Cooper is always a tough opponent."

It is especially big since Midland High has not been to regionals in recent memory and a win today would remove a very big obstacle in the path of the Bulldogs. With a win, MHS would just need victories over Odessa High and Central to clinch a region spot.

4-5A Tennis

"We started thinking that way (about regionals) as a team, but realized that it was a bad idea," Heiting said. "We will do what we have been doing all year long — worry about one match at a time."

Heiting also said the match looks even on paper. Both have wins over Central and Permian at some time this season.

"On the boys side, we look a lot stronger," Heiting said, "and their girls look like they should be strong."

The difference might come down to two things. First, by virtue of MHS' win over Cooper in 1998, the younger Bulldogs aren't under a great deal of pressure to end a long losing streak against Cooper.

Second, MHS is playing at home. Just two weeks ago with home court advantage, MHS annihilated Permian, 18-1.

"We are comfortable playing at our home courts, more so than years' past," Heiting said. "So far, in every match we have played at home, they have taken it to teams we have played."

LEE TO ABILENE

While MHS is slugging it out with Cooper, an improved Lee team travels to Abilene for its match with the Eagles.

It should be a tough one considering Abilene High's status as a state power, but Lee coach Steve Buck is ready to see what his team can do. Lee has lost only four dual matches this season, and lost by the narrowest of margins (10-9 to Amarillo Tascosa, 10-9 to Amarillo High, 11-8 to Midland High and 10-9 to San Angelo Central). That is four losses by a total of six matches.

"We are looking to have some good luck for a change. Our luck HAS to change," Buck said. "We could have won that one at Midland High and the same goes with San Angelo."

Buck knows that his team's district prospects can easily change with a win today.

"We are not out of district by any means," Buck said. "Both us and Midland will beat Cooper and Permian is due some wins."

No. 13 Longhorns continue to perfect quarterbacking combo

By Jim Vertuno
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Chris Simms can't offer much enlightenment on Texas' rotating quarterbacks. He's sticking to his pat answer.

"I just take it as it comes," said Simms, who has been sharing time this season with Major Applewhite. "I've said that quote so many times I'm going to be the Zen master here pretty soon."

No. 13 Texas needs its two-headed quarterback system to find itself Saturday against Oklahoma State. The Cowboys (2-1) have the nation's stingiest run defense, giving up just 30.3 yards on the ground.

"Texas has two excellent quarterbacks," said Oklahoma State coach Bob Simmons. "One is a little bit more athletic than the other one. I think Simms is a big lefty that can take off and run, and I have a lot of respect for (Major) Applewhite. He is to me a proven quarterback and when he comes in he makes good decisions and right reads."

The play of the quarterbacks and the passing game is made even more important by the Longhorns' struggles to run the ball this season. Texas ranks near the bottom nationally with 65.3 yards per game.

The Simms-Applewhite rotation has produced mixed results through the air. They have combined for nine touchdowns and six interceptions. Simms has started two games but has played significantly less than Applewhite overall. He threw two interceptions in Texas' 48-0 win over Houston.

"We have seen Chris' athletic ability, but very few quarterbacks that are that young are consistent," said Texas coach Mack Brown. "He is an outstanding young guy with his worst enemy right now being himself."

"I try to look at the positives at all times," such as his three touchdown passes, Simms said. "All great quarterbacks have gone through adversity."

Applewhite's time in the pocket has been solid if not quite the spectacular performance of 1999 when he earned offensive player of the year honors in the Big 12. He passed for four touchdowns in a season-opening win over Louisiana-Lafayette and rallied Texas to a fourth-quarter lead against Stanford before the Longhorns ultimately lost.

Against Houston, both players struggled to move the offense as the defense carried the day with three touchdowns on turnovers.

"I think I've played inconsistent," Applewhite said. "It's different."

Even so, Longhorns players are quick to name Applewhite the leader of the offense.

"He's the guy we look to when we need a big play," said tailback Hodges Mitchell, who quickly adds that Simms has had some bad luck with receivers dropping passes. One of them bounced into straight into a defender's hands.

"I feel bad for those guys. They can't go to school or go to eat without people messing with them about who will start on Saturday," Mitchell said. "If it was me, I'd just stay in my room and not come out until practice started."

Baylor opposes 3-0 Iowa State

Associated Press

WACO — Iowa State and Baylor have long been regarded as the bottom-feeders in the Big 12, as Cyclone coach Dan McCarney recently said about his team, thought of as nothing more than "cannon fodder" and homecoming opponents for the conference's powerhouses.

But this season the teams, which meet Saturday night in Waco, have a combined 5-1 record. Although the opposition may not have been the toughest around, both the Cyclones and Bears say these victories are crucial in the long-term development of their programs.

"We're trying to accomplish the feat of learning how to win," said Baylor coach Kevin Steele, who is 3-11 in his second season with the Bears. "We've managed to get a 2-1 record, and some people would say that's not much. But you've got to start somewhere, and it's huge here, just with the attitude of our players and their mindset."

McCarney, who has a 16-42 record in six seasons of attempting to resurrect a moribund Cyclone program, understands exactly what Steele means.

"So much of it is confidence, attitude, belief," he said.

But McCarney, whose Cyclones are seeking their first 4-0 start since 1980, also noted that a positive mental attitude is just part of what makes a winning program. What also separates the champs from the chumps, McCarney said, is the talent.

"It has a little bit to do with us, four years ago, giving up 45 points a game defensively, and giving up 17 now. It has a little bit to do with those guys who are out there tackling people now," he said. "We thought we were pretty good coaches then, but we look like better coaches now.

"If you don't have players, if you don't have depth, if you don't have playmakers, if you don't have speed; you can't play in this league," McCarney said.

Baylor is coming off a 28-19 victory against South Florida, a game notable for the splashy debut of redshirt freshman quarterback Guy Tomcheck. Making his first collegiate start, Tomcheck completed 20 of 28 passes for three touchdowns and 223 yards while not throwing an interception.

Tomcheck was playing because the Bears' projected starter, senior Greg Cicero, broke his collarbone the week before in a loss to Minnesota.

"(Tomcheck) set his jaw the whole game. I mean, he played like a seasoned veteran," Steele said. "The biggest key to that performance is that it shows what he can do. But you have to do things week after week after week. There's been a lot of one-game wonders."

Said McCarney: "You turn the tape on and watch him, and it does not look like his first start, he does not look like a redshirt freshman. He plays like a veteran. Obviously, he made a lot of good decisions in the game, so we're very impressed with him."

ISU is coming off a bye week, during which McCarney made a priority of improving the play of some special-teams units.

No. 16 Horned Frogs, RB Tomlinson make rare East Coast appearance in Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Heisman trophy hopeful LaDainian Tomlinson and 16th ranked Texas Christian visit winless Navy Saturday — the teams' first meeting.

Tomlinson, who led the nation in rushing last season, has the attention. This season, he is averaging 186.3 yards per game — second in the nation — and leads all current collegians with 3,664 rushing yards. He holds the Horned Frogs record for touchdowns (39), and needs only 86 yards to become TCU's career rushing leader.

The Horned Frogs are 3-0. They are trying to match their 4-0 start of 1991, and extend their overall winning streak to nine games. TCU is on its longest winning streak since 14 in a row from 1937-38.

Navy, on the other hand, is 0-3, and has lost 28 straight against ranked opponents. The Mids' last upset of a ranked team was a 17-13 win over 20th ranked Virginia on September 28, 1985. Navy has faced at least one ranked opponent in each subsequent season. The focus will be on Tomlinson more than his teammates.

"I think he's a heckuva back," Navy coach Charlie Weatherbie said of Tomlinson.

"They'll try to get him the ball 25 times or more. They're gaining 445 yards a game, and he's gonna have the majority of that," he said.

"He reminds me of Earl Campbell. He's a physical guy with great speed," he added. "They don't want to compare him with Campbell because Earl played at Texas."

Navy has managed only three touchdowns in as many games, while TCU is averaging almost 45 points a game.

AREA FOOTBALL GAMES

Garden City 13, Trinity 7

GARDEN CITY — The Garden City defense turned in another fine performance on Friday, holding the Trinity Chargers to only one touchdown in a 13-7 non-district victory.

The Bearkats had shut out Water Valley and Irion County in their last two games before Trinity brought its prolific offense to town. The Chargers actually outgained Garden City, 248-160, in total offense, but the Bearkats won on the scoreboard. Four turnovers hurt the Chargers, although Garden City also committed four turnovers.

Garden City improved to 3-1, while Trinity fell to 4-2.

The teams were tied 7-7 at halftime, and the Bearkats were the only team able to score in the second half. Curtis Eggemeyer's nine-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter provided the difference.

Eggemeyer rushed for 125 yards on 24 carries. For Trinity, Clint Adcox carried 25 times for 99 yards, and Matt Midkiff had 159 yards passing, including a seven-yard touchdown pass to Clint Kitto in the second quarter.

But Garden City's Roger Alvarado returned the ensuing kickoff 88 yards for a touchdown.

Greenwood 14, Crane 7

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood Rangers picked off two Crane passes as the defense held tough and held off the Golden Cranes, 14-7 Friday night.

Justin Outlaw and John Mark Hopper picked up the interceptions for the Greenwood defense, which has allowed just 13 points in the last three games.

Offensively for the Rangers (3-2), Brandon Audas scored on a 3-yard run and Colt Harrison caught a 38-yard scoring toss for all the offense the Rangers would need on this night.

For Crane (2-2), Harold Jeffery scored on a 1-yard run as he finished the night with 116 yards rushing.

Rankin 34, Forsan 17

RANKIN — Rankin got two touchdown runs each from Ruben De La Paz and Chris Mendez as the Red Devils overwhelmed Forsan, 34-17.

Alex De La Paz also got into the act, returning an interception 50 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter to put Rankin up 21-9 at halftime.

Ruben De La Paz ran for 179 yards for Rankin, including TD runs of three and one yards. Mendez' TD runs were of 31 and 9 yards, and he ran for a two-point conversion.

Midland Lee defensive lineman Dwight Washington brings down El Paso Franklin tailback Jacob Armendariz for a loss during Lee's 44-7 victory Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

LEE: Defense almost posts shutout who understood the moment gave him a standing ovation.

(From 1B)

"The record is a neat thing, but the win was more important," Benson said. "I didn't think we were hitting on all cylinders in the first half, and we needed to come out and re-focus. The record doesn't mean much if you lose the game.

"Still, the record is nice. To be the (all-time) leader in Class 5A is really good since that's where I play my football."

Lee coach John Parchman said, "Cedric is very deserving of a record like this, but he owes all of those linemen and quarterbacks he has played with over three years. They've helped him get a lot of those yards. Still, that's something special.

"That's really another monkey off our backs. We wanted to get this out of the way and go on to other things."

The Lee defense was again superb. Ask any Lee defender, and they will say they threw the shutout. Franklin's only TD, late in the fourth quarter, came on a bad snap from center and over the head of quarterback Fletcher Pendergras. Sean Grantham picked it up and raced 26 yards for a touchdown.

"After last week in Louisiana (a 38-6 loss to West Monroe), we had to suck it up and play some football," said Lee defensive lineman Fred Thrweatt. "That was the real Rebel defense out there tonight."

The Lee defenders forced five turnovers, including two interceptions. Defensive back Justin Rossiter picked off a Travis Magden pass and returned it 33 yards for a touchdown, the first of his career.

Lee's passing game, however, was not a pretty sight, completing only one of 12 passes for 65 yards. However, the one completion was to tight end Eric Winston, who looked like a fleet running machine while running down the far sideline for a 65-yard score off a screen pass, the longest reception-run of his career. The 280-pound junior didn't even need oxygen at the end of that run.

"Our passing game is going to cause us some problems down the road if we don't get better at it," Parchman said. "We're really struggling in that area right now."

Lee makes one more long road trip before District 4-5A play begins in two weeks when the Rebels head to El Paso to face Coronado next week.

"After that trip to Monroe, it will be nothing to go to El Paso," Parchman said. "That's going to be like a quick trip to the corner Kent Kwik."

STEERS: Big Spring wins 4-4A opener

(From 1B)

game which went down literally to the last half-second.

"We're going to be in the middle of every one of (the district games)," said Lebby. "We've got to make some plays if we're going to win."

That was the difference in a game in which both teams had to work for everything they got and the Mustangs actually outgained the Steers (260-239). Trailing 14-13 thanks to a blocked extra point, Andrews took over with 2 minutes and 36 seconds left at its own 10-yard line with a chance to still win in regulation.

Four plays later from their own 25, though, disaster struck the Mustangs when Ryan Newbrough's screen pass for Jamie Bueno was picked off by Big Spring tackle Jade Hughes, who returned it to the Andrews 5.

"It was an accident to tell you the truth," said Hughes of his interception, which he said was the first of his competitive football career. "I was covering (Bueno) once earlier in the game and I missed the assignment, so when I saw him coming out again, I decided to pick him up.

"I almost had a heart attack, thinking that a lineman had caught the football."

On the next play, Jaroe Parnell carried it in for a touchdown with exactly a minute left to give the Steers a 21-13 lead after Jason Woodruff kicked the extra point.

After the kickoff, Andrews got as close as Big Spring's 34 on an 18-yard completion from Newbrough to Ben Huddleston, the only Andrews pass play which gained yardage all night. But three plays later, Newbrough's desperation pass into the end zone was picked off by Brandon Mendoza with 0.5 seconds left on the clock to seal Big Spring's win.

"They came back and they challenged each other," said Butler of how his players responded after last week's 20-6 loss to Abilene Wylie. "Last week we just didn't play well or have any intensity of emotion at all. Andrews has got a great ball club but we just hung in there."

The two clubs looked quite similar for most of the evening. After both offenses were stuck in neutral in the first quarter, Big Spring and Andrews put the ball respectively in the hands of Jaroe Parnell and Jamie Bueno respectively.

Each back carried the ball 29 times and scored a pair of touchdowns, with Parnell picking up 158 yards and Bueno gaining 220. Since Bueno had already surpassed 200 yards in his team's win over Borger his performance wasn't such a shock. Parnell, however, was substituting for Woodruff, whose knee injury kept him from performing anything other than his straight-ahead placekicking duties.

"What a tremendous night he had," said Butler of Parnell. "The credit goes to the guys up front. They don't get a lot of credit when things go well but they hear about it when they go wrong."

Parnell didn't start off well, gaining only one yard on his first five carries, but he came to life after that.

"I was nervous and not into the groove," said Parnell, who scored his first touchdown on a 2-yard run 20 seconds before halftime to give the Steers a 14-7 lead. "(The line) was awesome tonight. They did a great job stepping up and making holes as the game went along."

The game overshadowed an excellent effort by Bueno, whose 3-yard run in the second quarter tied it 7-7 and who scored on a 28-yard dash on the first possession after halftime. But it wasn't enough for the Mustangs.

"If you like high school football this was pretty good," admitted Lebby after he had lost to his friend Butler. "We had the ball down there where we wanted it. We just didn't execute."

MCHS: Mustangs beat No. 9 Buffs

faloes couldn't get much going offensively. Three times in the game, the Buffaloes went for it on fourth down and three times the Mustang defense stepped up and stopped them.

The biggest stop on fourth down by the Mustangs (4-2) probably was in the second quarter after Josh Gunter had scored from one yard out to give MCHS a 7-0 lead. Stanton had driven from its own 21-yard line all the way to the Midland Christian 6. Four straight running plays by the Buffaloes only netted two yards.

"Our defense played four quarters of football," McClendon said. "They gave no huge runs, no really big plays and when they did, they bowed right up. They were a unit tonight, all night long."

Cotton said that his team kept going for it on fourth down because he didn't think his team could stop the Mustangs.

"We had to score," Cotton said. "I think each time you go for it on fourth down, it's a big momentum turn. If you make it, you're in good shape. If you don't make it, then you miss out on a big gamble."

The Mustangs took a 10-0 lead at the half after a 25-yard field goal by Greg Ross late in the second quarter.

After rushing for more than 400 yards in last week's game against Iraan, the Buffaloes only rushed for 171 yards on 42 carries and were forced to go to the pass. Cook, the Stanton quarterback, was 12-of-21 passing for 174 yards.

"We were tough tonight and God bless us," said Mustang defensive lineman J.D. Machacek. "The coaches worked us hard all week."

The Mustang offense did what it needed to do — run a balanced attack. Midland Christian rushed for 149 yards and threw for 139 yards. Gunter carried a big load for the Mustangs with 149 yards and three touchdown runs of 1, 17 and 53 yards. The 53-yarder was a Stanton back-breaker early in the fourth quarter for a 24-0 lead.

"First of all, the (offensive) line did a heck of a job," Gunter said. I tip my hat to the entire o-line. They were awesome today. Their linebackers did a heck of a job. Their defense was tough, and I just tried to find the holes."

"Josh did a great job, but if anybody played awesome, it was (fullback) T.J. Midkiff with his blocking," McClendon said. "And I thought we kept them on their heels with the passing game. (Jamie) Beeghley and the receivers did a great job."

This was the first regular season loss for the Buffaloes since the 1998 season when they lost to Seagraves in a district contest. After coming off a huge win over Iraan the previous week, Cotton admitted his team had a letdown but refused to use that as an excuse for the loss.

"My hat's off to the staff and players at Midland Christian," Cotton said. "They out-coached us, out-played us and out-hit us. Give them (Mustangs) all the credit. They didn't do anything we weren't expecting. I look back in the third quarter and my running back is on the ground and there's four-five blue jerseys on top off him. I've got eight or nine white jerseys just standing up. That's pretty typical on how the whole night went."

For Midland Christian, this win is another big confidence boost for the Mustangs considering all the injuries and the tough losses they endured early in the season.

"This win was definitely huge," Gunter said. "We look forward to this game every year. This is an awesome feeling."

DISTRICT 4-5A GAMES

Monterey 31, Permian 13

LUBBOCK — Lubbock Monterey scored 21 points in the fourth quarter to hand Odessa Permian its second loss of the season, 31-13, at Lowrey Field Friday night.

Monterey now has District 4-5A notches in its belt for the second consecutive week after beating Midland High, 34-10, last week in Midland.

Monterey held a meager 3-0 lead at the half on a 45 field goal by Marvin McCurry. The Plainsmen got a one-yard TD from Marcus Woodard, a 21-yard TD interception return from Benny Smith and a 37-yard TD run from Steve Sanders in the fourth quarter to break the game open.

Permian, now 3-2 on the season, is open next week. Monterey is now 4-1 on the season.

OHS 28, Coronado 14

ODESSA — The Odessa High Bronchos completed its non-conference football schedule at Ratliff Stadium Friday night with a 28-14 win over El Paso Coronado.

Coronado, 3-1, will host Midland Lee in El Paso next Friday.

OHS climbed to 2-3 for the season.

OHS is apparently good against teams named Coronado. The Bronchos had a 7-0 win over Lubbock Coronado earlier this season.

OHS' James Fazenbaker scored two touchdowns for OHS in different fashions. He had a 1-yard TD run and returned an interception for 55 yards for another score. Both came in the third quarter of play.

LOCAL VOLLEYBALL TODAY

Abilene Cooper vs. Midland Lee

When: 2 p.m. (approximately)
Where: Lee High School Gym
Records: Lee is 3-2 in District 4-5A and 9-11 overall; Cooper is 3-2 and 10-14.
4-5A Significance: The winner of this match ends the first half of district play alone in third place.
Notes: Lee is coming off a good road win, beating Odessa Permian, 15-13, 15-2, on Tuesday. Cooper played outside of district on Tuesday and got pasted, 15-4, 15-4, by Amarillo Tascosa — the school that knocked Lee out of the playoffs last year... Last year, Lee and Cooper fought for the district championship. Cooper beat Lee twice in the regular season, but the Lady Cougars also lost to Midland High and Abilene High, while Lee beat everyone except Cooper. They finished district at 10-2 and played one match to decide the district championship, and Lee won... Lee has no players back from that team, and Cooper also lost some to graduation, including 1999 District 4-5A MVP April Coffield...
Next: Lee will play at Midland High Tuesday, starting at about 7:15 p.m.

Midland High at Abilene High

When: 2 p.m. (approximately)
Records: Midland High is 5-0 in District 4-5A and 23-2 overall; Abilene High is 5-0 and 15-5.
4-5A Significance: The winner of this match ends the first half of district play with sole possession of first place.
Notes: Midland High had an easy time on Tuesday, beating Odessa High, 15-2, 15-3. Abilene High defeated San Angelo Central, 15-4, 15-11... AHS defeated MHS in both district meetings last year. That was the difference between AHS finishing with a 9-3 district mark and making the playoffs and MHS staying home at 7-5... MHS and AHS will meet again on Oct. 24 in Midland. That match, the final one in district play for both teams, could determine the district champion...
Next: Midland High will host Lee on Tuesday to start the second half of district play. The match will start at about 7:15 p.m.

Indians stay alive with 8-4 win

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Manny Ramirez and the Cleveland Indians aren't ready to say goodbye just yet.

Ramirez, who may leave as a free agent following the season, hit a two-run homer and Jim Thome added a two-run shot Friday night as the Indians stayed alive in the AL wild card chase by rallying for an 8-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Indians trailed 4-0 in the second inning but came back and pulled within one game of the Oakland Athletics in the wild card standings. The A's played host to Texas later Friday.

Time is running out for Cleveland, which has just two games left and — realistically — needs to win them both if it hopes to make the postseason for the sixth straight year.

■ AL Wild Card Race

Devil Rays 8, Red Sox 6

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The Tampa Bay Devil Rays ended Boston's hopes of catching New York in the AL East, rallying from a four-run deficit Friday night to beat the Red Sox 8-6 and give the division title to the struggling Yankees.

Randy Winn's two-run double off Jeff Fassero snapped a seventh-inning tie as Tampa Bay won its sixth straight game against teams battling for playoff spots.

Down 8-4, the Red Sox rallied for two runs in the ninth and then put two runners on base with two outs. But Trot Nixon struck out against reliever Roberto Hernandez to end it.

After winning three of four against Toronto last weekend, the Devil Rays swept three games from New York to help the Red Sox stay in the race.

Angels 9, Mariners 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The Anaheim Angels prevented Seattle from moving closer to a playoff spot as Troy Glaus hit a three-run homer — his AL-high 46th — and Bengie Molina also hit a three-run shot in a 9-3 win over the Mariners.

The Mariners began the day with a half-game lead over Oakland in the AL West. The A's were home against Texas.

The Angels' Darin Erstad became the first leadoff hitter in major league history with 100 RBIs in a year when he had a sacrifice fly in the sixth. Glaus also reached 100 RBIs.

Garret Anderson added a solo shot as the Angels battered Paul Abbott (9-7) for eight runs on eight hits and two walks in five innings.

MHS: Bulldogs take on Coronado

(From 1B)

Browning did say he expects all four to see playing time tonight.

"The bottom line is we have been a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde team," Browning said. "Two weeks ago, we play as good of a game as we can play, and last week, we play as bad of a game as we can play. Hopefully, we go into a situation where we don't have some many peaks and valleys. I want to be consistent."

For Midland High, this week's opponent may be just what the doctor ordered. Coronado is 1-3 and not exactly playing the football it is known for.

The Mustangs opened the season rather inauspiciously in a 37-0 loss to Abilene Cooper. It was the first time a Mustang team was shut out since 1992. The Mustangs showed the offensive performance wasn't a fluke when they were shut out by Odessa High one week later.

"We are starting to make progress with the offense. That is the most positive way I can say it," Coronado head football coach Butch Henderson said.

Last week, Coronado fell to El Paso Del Valle, 35-25. For the season, Coronado has scored 54 points and allowed 93.

"We made a big jump last week, and we need to make a big jump this week," Henderson said.

Coronado is last in District 3-5A in passing (92.8 yards a game) and total yards (193.8 yards a game). Henderson even lost his first-string quarterback (Blake Crawford) last week. Chase Campbell is his replacement.

"The biggest thing is which team executes and which team doesn't turn the ball over," Henderson said.

We've heard that before.

CORONADO NOTES: Coronado has had just one losing season in Henderson's 13 years... Coronado is averaging 193.8 yards a game and giving up 293.8... The Mustangs' leading rusher is Tyronne Brooks (36.5 yards a game), Ben Bratcher (31.3) and Marlon Walker (28.8) are second and third respectively... Blake Crawford was averaging 59.5 yards a game passing before his injury... Gabriel Hall and Jim Morgan are the team's leading receivers at 23.5 and 20 receiving yards a game respectively... Michael Peres has kicked three field goals and three extra points... Defensively, George Smitherman has 56 tackles (an average of 14 a game). Keegan McInroe has 51 (an average of 12.8)... Coronado is off next week. It opens District 3-5A play against Lubbock High on Oct. 13...

MHS NOTES: Tony Joseph leads the Bulldogs with 357 rushing yards. Troy Barber has 88... Chris Howard has 325 passing yards... Lamar Hickey has nine catches for 64 yards, and Colter Lange has seven catches for 94 yards. Lange will start at quarterback tonight... James Gripp has punted eight times for a 43.4 average... Defensively, Matt Bose has 41 tackles and Michael Forrest has 37... David Browning is 18-23 in his four-plus seasons at MHS... Midland High travels to Amarillo High next week...

GAME NOTES: This is the seventh meeting between the two teams. MHS owns a 4-2 advantage, thus far... MHS defeated Coronado last year 29-14... Browning's MHS teams are 1-1 versus Coronado... The game was originally scheduled for 1 p.m., but has been moved back to 7:30 p.m... KCRS (AM 550) will broadcast the game...

TECH: Red Raiders face toughest test

me that we've played this team every year, and it seems like one of those ho-hum kind of games. I think it's high time we recognize they get fired up for games, and they play to win.

"We need to have the same kind of resolve when we go out there," Slocum said.

The Aggies, who traditionally rely on strong defense and a running game, have been achieving better balance offensively in recent contests. Texas A&M is averaging 172 yards per game on the ground and 214 passing.

If Tech's success against the Aggies the last few years isn't enough to fire up Texas A&M, it can look to its 51-6 loss to Oklahoma last year. Mike Leach — the Red Raiders' first-year coach — was the Oklahoma assistant who drew up the successful offensive plan for the Sooners in that game.

"We got on a roll, and everything just went right," Leach said. "It was like everything we touched turned to gold."

Leach's team this year is undefeated but has shown little of the offensive firepower that Oklahoma had last year. The Red Raiders are 61st in the country in scoring offense — notching only nine offensive touchdowns in four games.

"We're going to have to play our best game to beat A&M, there's no doubt about that," Texas Tech quarterback Kliff Kingsbury said. "That goes for me, especially. I've got to step it up."

Texas Tech will try to get its ground game rolling with running back Ricky Williams after falling to 11th in the Big 12 in rushing.

"We'd like to have a breakout game in the running department," Tech running backs coach Art Briles said. "We just need to be patient and wait for that to happen. We have to make plays as running backs, create yardage and big gains. It'll happen. It just hasn't happened yet."

Texas A&M is aiming to see that it doesn't happen this week.

"Tech ruined our season last year, plus Oklahoma got us bad last year," Aggies cornerback Jay Brooks said. "I guess we owe them both. There is a lot of feeling in this game for us."

Jones has no regrets about bronze medal

By Steve Wilstein
AP Sports Writer

SYDNEY, Australia — The silliest question anyone asked Marion Jones when her brazen five-gold quest ended with a bronze in the long jump was whether she had any regrets.

She looked more surprised at that notion than she ever did when she lay sprawled in the sand Friday night and saw the stiff, impassive judge holding up a red flag to indicate fouls on four of her six jumps.

Jones could have played it safe, run away from the Olympics quite happily with her golds in the 100 and 200, and maybe the relays on Saturday, and not risk damaging her body or her reputation hurtling into the shifting wind.

But that's not the way Jones thinks. That's not the way champions act.

She had a chance at the long jump gold and she went for it, swinging her arms at the start, flapping in the air, doing it her own unpolished way, but going for it with the critics-be-damned attitude of a true athlete.

She knew, as everyone else did, that she lacked the slick technique and buoyant lift of Germany's Heike Drechsler, the gold medalist way back at Barcelona in 1992, the silver medalist way, way back at Seoul in 1988, and still going strong at 35.

So what?

Jones has the kind of speed that sometimes propels her off the launch pad and sweeps her into the air far enough for a medal. That soaring speed brought her the bronze at the world championships last year and the U.S. championships this year.

If she could harness that speed this time, if she could just fling herself off the white bar and ride the wind, maybe, just maybe, she could come up with a Beamonesque leap into history.

A crowd of 110,000 track-savvy fans waited for it to happen on this warm, muggy night, wondering if she could win her third gold on the way to five and join Jesse Owens and Carl Lewis as the only Olympians to win the 100, 200 and long jump.

The fans groaned when Jones barely fouled on her first jump, but they got pumped up with anticipation when she secured a spot in the final round with two legal jumps, the better one 22 feet, 8 1/4 inches.

Drechsler led with a 22-11 1/4 leap on her third attempt, and Italy's Fiona May was second with a jump that matched Jones' best but with a better second jump. Maybe, the fans thought, this was all just a prelude to a can-you-top-this finish in the last three jumps.

No such luck. Drechsler and May never jumped farther, and Jones never landed again without seeing the red flag go up.

She tried mightily on her last attempt, and the slim hope rose among those wanting to see something special that she would bust one the way Bob Beamon did in 1968, when his 29-foot, 2 1/2-inch flight shattered the world record by nearly 2 feet.

Jones cleared 23 feet, good enough for gold, and she looked up with a hopeful half-smile that quickly turned into a frown.

"On the last jump, you've got to lay it all on the line," she said. "This is what every athlete dreams of, just coming back on your last jump and jumping farther than you ever have in your life. I took off well. It was a very aggressive jump. I ran down the lane very fast. I saw the 7 meters, and I turned around and saw the gentleman raise the red flag and it dashed my hopes."

Jones didn't try to hide her disappointment and didn't make excuses. As gracious in defeat as she was in victory, she congratulated Drechsler and said "I can tell my grandchildren in 30 years that I competed against one of the best long jumpers ever."

U.S. long jumper Marion Jones lands in the sand after faulting on her final attempt in the women's long jump final at the Summer Olympics Friday. Jones won the bronze medal in the event.

CANOE-KAYAK: After reaching the finals for the first time, the United States team finished sixth in the 1,000-meter four-man kayak Saturday (Friday night EDT). With one race to go for the Americans, they finished out of the medals in each attempt Down Under — the second straight Olympics where they have failed to win anything.

TRACK: The Americans prevailed in the Olympic pole vault for the first time since 1968, with Nick Hysong taking the gold and Lawrence Johnson winning the silver.

In track's other story, Moroccan Hicham El Guerrouj's three-year winning streak in the men's 1,500 meters ended when he finished second to Noah Ngeny of Kenya. Ngeny set an Olympic record to snap El Guerrouj's reign.

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL: Playing for the bronze medal, the Americans were overmatched against Brazil in a straight-set loss, 25-18, 25-22, 25-21 on Saturday (Friday night EDT). The U.S. fourth-place finish was still cause for some celebration, since the team — which had only two players with Olympic experience — was ranked 10th in the world and not expected to challenge for a medal until Athens in 2004.

SOCCER: The U.S. men's soccer team ran out of surprises.

After making the Olympic quarterfinals for the first time, then winning to make the semifinals for the first time, the Americans head home without a medal after a 2-0 defeat to Chile.

Still, the Americans demonstrated that they are slowly but surely gaining ground on the traditional soccer powers from around the world.

Chile took the bronze medal behind a pair of goals from Ivan Zamorano, the 33-year-old striker known as "Ivan the Terrible." Zamorano, the tournament's leading scorer with six goals, made a penalty kick in the 70th minute and scored again in the 84th.

Cameroon's Indomitable Lions lived up to the name, taking the Olympic gold with a shootout victory over Spain. After tying 2-2 through regulation and overtime, Cameroon's 5-3 edge in penalty shots gave them the Sydney title.

Spain's Ivan Amaya, who scored an own goal, was also the only player to miss in the shootout. As a result, Africa keeps the Olympic title after Nigeria's historic victory at Atlanta '96.

BOXING: The Americans came to Sydney intent on winning more than just a single gold medal — their "haul" in each of the past two Olympics. With the finals this weekend, they still have a chance.

In a wild, high-scoring punchfest, U.S. 139-pounder Ricardo Williams defeated Cuban Diogenes Luna 42-41 to make the gold medal fight. And 125-pounder Rocky Juarez outpointed Kamil Dzamalutdinov of Russia for his own shot at Olympic gold.

Preventing a U.S. sweep of their three fights was 156-pounder Jermain Taylor, who was outclassed by Yermakhan Ibraimov of Kazakstan. The fight was stopped early in the fourth round on the 15-point rule, with Ibraimov leading 29-14.

Taylor, like teammate Clarence Vinson at 119 pounds, winds up with a silver. The four medals are two fewer than American boxers got in 1996, but one more than they earned in 1992.

SAILING: Mark Reynolds, and crewman Magnus Liljedahl were assured of at least a bronze medal at the start Saturday (Friday night EDT), but they refused to settle. Reynolds, a four-time Olympian, emerged from the 16-boat fleet and took advantage of a wind shift on the course — one that his competitors had not anticipated.

CYCLING: Lance Armstrong came to Sydney determined to win a gold medal. He's going home with bronze.

The two-time Tour de France champion fattened his crowded trophy cabinet by finishing third in the 33-mile Olympic time trial Saturday (Friday night EDT), but it wasn't the goal he set for himself at the Olympics.

Viacheslav Ekimov of Russia, who races with Armstrong on the U.S. Postal Service trade team, won the gold medal with a time of 57 minutes, 40 seconds over the 33-mile course.

Lithuania almost shocks U.S. team

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

SYDNEY, Australia — One of the greatest upsets in the history of basketball came within inches of happening. The mighty Americans, the team that couldn't lose, almost did just that.

In a game that wasn't decided until the final shot missed by about a foot, the United States edged Lithuania 85-83 Friday night to reach the gold medal game.

The potential winning shot was taken from 3-point range by Sarunas Jasikevicius and appeared to leave his hand after the final buzzer. But one of the referees held his hand up to signal that the shot would count if it went.

It didn't, and the Americans escaped with their closest victory since NBA players started competing in the Olympics in 1992.

"If somebody had told us coming to the Olympics that we would lose to the U.S. by two points, nobody would have believed him," Lithuania's Tomas Masiulis said. "But tonight, we even had a chance to win."

Coming into these Olympics, no one really believed it was possible to play a close game against the U.S. men, who had never won by fewer than 22 points in the two previous Olympics.

But that's what happened on this incredible night in a dramatic, riveting game in which neither team led by more than three points over the final 15 1/2 minutes.

The final minute was like a game unto itself, with Lithuania's best free throw shooter missing two out of three when he had a chance to give his team a three-point lead with 43.4 seconds left.

Some 18 seconds later, the pressure got to Kevin Garnett, too, as he missed a pair from the line with a chance to put the U.S. team up by three.

Antonio McDyess, who had fouled Ramunas Siskauskas in 3-point territory moments earlier, atoned for his blunder by converting Garnett's second miss to make it 84-81.

"I was feeling so low, my heart was in my shoe," McDyess said. "I knew I had to come out and make a big play. I knew if he missed the second I had to get the ball, and I said, 'Ain't nobody gonna stop me from getting this ball.'"

Jasikevicius, who led Lithuania with 27 points, decided to forsake a tying 3-point attempt and drove through traffic for a layup that made it a one-point game with 11.4 seconds left. The Lithuanians then fouled Jason Kidd, and he made only one of two with 9.4 seconds left.

The teams scrambled for the rebound of Kidd's miss and a jump ball was called, and Lithuania got a final chance when McDyess was called for a jump ball violation.

Jasikevicius, closely guarded by Kidd, dribbled away almost all of the remaining 5.2 seconds before getting off his shot from about 22 feet away.

When it missed, U.S. coach Rudy Tomjanovich pumped his fist, Carter pointed to the sky and the Americans celebrated at center court as if they had just won the game of their lives.

And indeed, they had.

The United States moved on to face France in the gold medal game Sunday.

Lithuania, which lost to the Americans by just nine points in the preliminary round, will have to settle for the bronze medal game against Australia.

Ministry to use contemporary methods to bring Gospel to teens

■ Student Conference to explore the Book of Acts.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

"The Mission: Acts and Beyond" is the title and the focus of Shepherd Ministries, Student Conference at Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

The event begins 10 p.m. Oct. 13 and concludes 8:30 p.m. Oct. 14.

Shane O'Brien, youth leader at Kelview Heights and a team leader for the Irving-based Christian organization, explained that the late night beginning is just one of the ways that the Student Conference steps outside the box and uses contemporary methods to bring the Gospel to teen-agers in a way that speaks to them.

"In West Texas, we're simply not going to ask our people to compete with something that so many West Texans are accustomed to doing on Friday nights," he said. "We're encouraging (students) to go to the football game and then bring someone back here to the Student Conference with them."

The conference, for junior and senior high school students, will feature illusionist/evangelist Mark Matlock, the Christian praise band Mercy Me and dramatist Kevin Galloway in an exploration of the Book of Acts.

"Whether they've ever studied the Book of Acts or not — and most kids that age probably haven't — I promise you, they're going to take home an understanding of God's word that they can use in their lives, in a way that they've never had before," said O'Brien.

Shepherd Ministries began about 15 years ago as a support organization to local churches throughout the United States supplying video equipment, worship enhancements, training materials and resource-packed discipleship conferences for teen-agers and adults.

Every conference presents some aspect of discipleship, with the emphasis on biblical principles.

Presenter Mark Matlock has been involved in youth ministries since 1991 and has used his skills as an illusionist and storyteller to meet teen-agers where they live. O'Brien said that although Matlock is "one of the best illusionists I've ever seen, not a magician, but more like Houdini," he never strays from his purpose of teaching the Bible.

"There is some very intense teaching in this conference and a totally different perspective on the Book of Acts," said O'Brien. "I've watched crowds of junior high and high school students listening so intently, you wouldn't believe it."

Matlock is an ordained minister, and the author of several books, videos and audiotapes. He has been teaching with Student Conference for three years.

The praise band, Mercy Me, got its start in Christian music in 1994 and the players define themselves as "lead worshipers — not entertainers."

Dramatic presenter Kevin Galloway is the latest addition to Shepherd's Theater, with contemporary vignettes that will complement the teaching and music to present Scripture lessons in total immersion.

Friday's presentation will begin with registration, a brief orientation and

'Faces of Children'

Prayer service to highlight plight of kids of the world

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

A child dies in Midland under suspicious circumstances. Two children are found chained to a bed in Houston, starving and near death. In two weeks' time, news reports come in from Pakistan, China, Afghanistan, Atlanta and Washington, D.C., of forced prostitution of children, kiddie porn and thousands of children infected with AIDS in Africa.

Midlanders increasingly concerned with the state of the world's abused, neglected and exploited children have begun meeting to inform themselves, to pray and to take a pro-active stance for the end of such abuse. In hopes that others will join them, they've invited four internationally known speakers and a group of Midland's own activists for children to come together for prayer and suggestions on what to do.

■ Related story/2C

To begin the process of praying for children, a prayer service is planned for Oct. 13 and Oct. 14 at First Presbyterian Church. The event is being presented by "Faces of Children," a local interdenominational prayer ministry.

The public is invited to attend.

Out-of-town speakers are Phyllis Kilbourn, founding director of an international ministry to children in crisis; Sterling Lands, developer of programs to provide inner-city youth with tools and resources for resisting destructive influences in their environment; Irma Rivera-Carlisle, who works to end child prostitution and abuse through the Presbyterian Church Women's Ministry; and Dr. Charlie Clements, president of

Four child activists to give presentations

The four children's activists set to arrive in Midland for the Faces of Children prayer convocation have seen the results of humankind at its worst, yet they continue to hold out hope, and to work for a better world for children.

■ Phyllis Kilbourn, Ph.D. has served with the Worldwide Evangelization for Christ (WEC) International since 1967. In 1992, she founded Rainbows of Hope, a ministry of WEC International for children in crisis. She said the ministry was really born in Liberia, where she saw children as young as 5 conscripted into the army.

"However, through several incidences the Lord revealed to me his heart was for all the abused children of the world — the street children, the child laborers, the children impacted by HIV/AIDS.

"My heart was so torn when I visited a new squatter camp cemetery in South Africa a few weeks ago ... We counted over 300 children's graves, but most heart-wrenching was the row of freshly dug graves, just waiting for the next children.

Clergy to bless pets in honor of St. Francis

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

"May I love the animals;
Thou has given them the rudiments of thought and joy untroubled;
Let me not harass them.
Let me not deprive them of their happiness,
Let me not work against thine intent."
— Dostoevsky's Prayer of All Things printed in St. Nicholas Episcopal Church's Sunday bulletin

St. Francis of Assisi, born Oct. 4, 1182, is one of Christendom's most fabled saints, with animal lovers the world over invoking his name whether or not they belong to a liturgical church.

This year, animals and photos of animals will be making their way to churches to be blessed.

Blessing of the animals is planned for 5:15 p.m. Sunday at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, 7 p.m. Wednesday at St. Ann's Catholic Church parking lot and 10 a.m. Oct. 7 at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church.

The tradition has been going on the longest at St. Ann's. Parishioner Theresa Thetford said she remembers bringing pets to be blessed when she was a child attending St. Ann's School.

"I always had cats and dogs that I would bring, and still do. And of course, all the animals in the school's science classes were always blessed," she said. "There have been snakes and iguanas and small furry creatures that were brought over from the school. There are snakes that have been blessed many times over."

First United Methodist Church is not participating in the blessing of the animals this year because their principal animal blesser, the Rev. Molly Krueger, has moved away. But in the past the streets around the church parking lot were filled with horse trailers and Ms. Krueger had to climb a step ladder to bestow the blessings. Sometimes her prayers were drowned out by barking and cat cries, but every participating animal received a treat and a certificate.

At Holy Trinity, the animals traditionally have not been quite as large. The only equine animals ever to come forth to be blessed are Bonnie and Orman Hubbard's tiny Sicilian donkeys — genetically endowed with black hair crosses on their shoulders — that are overshadowed in size by their great Dane.

The Rev. Stockton Williams, rector of Holy Trinity, said he has been called on to bless snakes of various orders, lizards, parakeets and mice.

"I don't always actually lay hands on every creature," Williams explained. "I bless the birds by laying hands on the cages and I'm perfectly happy to bless a snake or a worm while it's still in its box."

On several occasions, the clergy at all churches have blessed proxy animals for tearful children who couldn't catch their pets.

Gail Sorensen, a parishioner at St. Nicholas, said the one and only time she brought a pet to be blessed was years ago, when the Rev. Buddy Schley was rector.

"Our puppy tried to bite Buddy, and we were really embarrassed about that.We liked Buddy a lot."

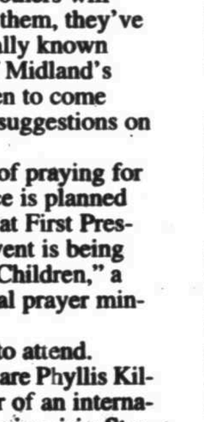
St. Ann's suggests that owners of large animals (or those that may not take to the noise and confusion of crowds) bring photos of their animals to be blessed.

St. Ann's celebration will be a part of the ongoing Make a Difference program to benefit Lone Star SPCA, Midland SPCA and Midland Animal Shelter. Organizers request that pet owners bring donations of cash or checks, or shelter needs such as cat or dog food, collars, litter boxes, cleaning supplies such as bleach or old towels, and pet toys.

Also, offerings will be taken at St. Nicholas to benefit the Humane Society of the Permian Basin.

LESLIE WILLIAMS

Energy is best spent defending the faith instead of fighting one another



Williams

Through the eyes of children. Two weeks ago, a friend brought her foster child to church. A bright girl in the second grade, this child managed to cut across centuries of theological debate concerning styles of worship. She stood at the back of the church staring wide-eyed as the processional began. In the Episcopal tradition, the choir, acolytes, lay readers and ministers wear liturgical garb such as albs, cassocks, stoles and robes — all from the earliest centuries of Christianity.

"Is this a costume party?" she asked. Later she said, "At our church, they just stand up and shout about all the stuff you're not supposed to do."

High church, broad church, low church; those on fire with the Spirit and God's frozen chosen; dunkers and sprinklers — it's all part of the same feast and festival of worship. When I was 11, I attended four different churches that year: Nazarene, Quaker, Methodist, and Episcopal. The Nazarenes prayed with fervor, joining each other with loud "Amens!" The Quakers prayed in hour-long silences; the Methodists came up with original prayers read out loud by the minister; and the Episcopalians prayed together straight from a book.

The point is, they all prayed.

How clever of God to allow His church to branch into different styles of worship. That way there's something for everyone.

Our previous church used a loaf of bread for Communion instead of wafers. (As a baby, our daughter once cried out, "Snack! Snack!" when she saw her daddy, the priest, passing out the bread — but that's a different story.) An intensely moving account of worship I read about took place in a prisoner of war camp, when the men gathered together deep in the jungle. They used nothing at all for the elements because they had nothing to use. Situations like that sort of cut down on the arguments.

The worst church fight I ever witnessed was over where to hang a banner the youth had made. People left the church over it. The problem is that it's so much more fun to be right than to love each other.

Contemporary Americans aren't forced to worship in underground graveyards like the catacombs under threat of death if discovered. Instead, we have a smorgasbord of legitimate and prayerful choices of worship styles and communities. Our energy is best served, it seems to me, in defending the faith against a culture eager to convince us that each person creates his or her God within — a culture ready to discount the authority of Scripture and to reduce Jesus to a nice, moral teacher with good advice instead of God who loved us so much that He died for us.

The words of a children's song haunt me when we adults get into disagreement over non-essential matters of faith or styles of worship. When the great 20th century theologian, Karl Barth, came to the United States, a newspaper reporter asked him to sum up his multi-volume systematic theology in one sentence. He replied, "Jesus loves me this I know, for the Bible tells me so."

Amen.

FUMC plans 'Children's Sabbath'

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

This year marks the ninth annual celebration of the national observance of Children's Sabbath, a weekend of worship, education, outreach and advocacy on behalf of children.

First United Methodist Church of Midland will celebrate Children's Sunday on Oct. 8.

Children's Sabbath, as opposed to a "youth" or "children's" Sunday, is more than just an opportunity to involve children in worship, although children are central to the service, according to Julie Jones, FUMC's director of Children's Education. Children's choirs will be performing, the sermons will befor children and there will be prayers for children.

"On Children's Sabbath, the theme is 'Joining hearts hands and voices' to leave no child behind and we will be doing that at all our Sunday services," she said.

"There will be a short testimony by someone in a ministry for children such as Moms In Touch (a prayer ministry in which mothers get together to pray for school children), or some other children's advocacy group, in which they will tell how they minister to children," Ms. Jones said.

"There will be an opening medley of children's songs, children's messages and youth and children's choirs will being singing at every service. Inserts in the bulletins will list various ministries in which members of the congregation can become involved.

"And our Prayer Bear ministry is inviting congregants to bring stuffed teddy bears to church that day, to be sent to Cook's Children's Hospital" in Fort Worth.

Ms. Jones thinks the timing is particularly appropriate because Children's Sabbath is planned for National Children's Day.

Children's Sabbath is a prelude to the ecumenical children's prayer event hosted by Faces of Children, on Oct. 13 and Oct. 14.

Faces of Children is a prayer ministry of First Presbyterian Church.

Church in Austin in 1984.

He has worked throughout his pastoral career for non-violent social change and character-centered development to provide young people with the tools and resources to counter destructive influences in their lives as they struggle toward adulthood.

"Right now, young people across this country are faced with the dilemma of trying to define for themselves when they reach adulthood. I believe it is the public's responsibility to define those lines, and too often we don't do that. When you identify yourself as an adult, you can begin to act as an adult," he said.

"Over the years I've watched young people fall short of achieving the hopes of parents, and I've watched young parents attempt to raise children when they themselves have never had the fullness of character-centered training. We must provide that training."

■ Irma Rivera-Carlisle, a children's librarian by trade, has just completed her first two years at San Francisco Theological Seminary. For the past five years she has served as representative to the Global Exchange Program through the Presbyterian Church (USA) Women's Ministry, studying and speaking on the subject of child prostitution. Her life's passion has been to volunteer with various agencies to end domestic violence and child abuse.

"For those who prey on the world's children, every child is vulnerable," she said. "From rural America to the outskirts of Zimbabwe, the safety of children is threatened by forces of consumerism, commercialism, tourism and greed. Whether by promises of jobs, clothes, money or love, our children are at risk of being seduced into the heinous world of slavery-prostitution."

■ Dr. Charlie Clements, a public health physician, has spent much of his professional experience dealing with issues of war, human rights and humanitarian needs of refugees. He is cofounder of the International Medical Relief Fund, he served as director of Human Rights Education of the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee and he has served on the board of Physicians for Human Rights, a cofounding organization of the International Campaign to Ban Landmines. He represented PHR at the signing of the Treaty to Ban Landmines in Ottawa, Canada, and at the Nobel Peace Prize ceremony in Oslo, Norway.

"There is a very important role for Americans in the (International Campaign to Ban Landmines), as the U.S. has yet to endorse this treaty, just as we have yet to endorse the International Covenant on Children, which prohibits the use of child soldiers defined as anyone under 18 years old," he said.

Clements, who joined the military at age 17, said in retrospect he feels he was "probably not capable of giving informed consent at that age." Now a Quaker, he is the author of "Witness to War," published by Bantam in1984, and was the subject of a 1985 Academy award-winning documentary of the same title produced by the American Friends Service Committee.

PLIGHT: Prayers wil be recited for children

Physicians for Human Rights, which started the International Campaign to Ban Landmines. The campaign was awarded the 1997 Nobel Peace Prize.

"Faces of Children "will begin at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 13 with opening prayers and special music by Midland Independent School District's fifth- and sixth-grade honor choir.

Ms. Kilbourn's address, entitled "God's Best Gifts or Markets of Exploitation?", will explore a biblical strategy to show how hope can be extended to the millions of the world's children exploited for cheap labor, sexual abuse, pornography, prostitution and as child soldiers.

The session on Oct. 14 begins at 8:30 a.m. with prayers and music, followed by Lands' description of his "Rites of Passage," a model for "providing inner-city youth with the tools and resources to diminish destructive influences while accessing the fullness of their humanity — a model for going beyond intervention to prevention."

Next on the agenda Oct. 14, Ms. Rivera-Carlisle talks on "Seduced into Slavery," in which she explains that all children are vulnerable to the forces of commercialism, tourism and greed, whether they live in rural America or in the outskirts of Zimbabwe.

After lunch (which is available for $5), Joan Baskin will moderate a panel discussion. Panel members will be Lael Cordes-Pitts, executive director of Casa de Amigos; Karen Campbell of Midland's CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates); Detective Robert Porter of the Midland Police Department's DARE program; and Judy Warren of Midland Area AIDS Support.

Ms. Kilbourn follows the panel discussion with thoughts on how the church can face the challenge of children impacted by HIV/AIDS.

Clements will then present "Children of War — We Can All Give Them More Than Hope," in which he discusses the ways in which faith-based organizations worked together to make the Treaty to Ban Landmines a reality.

Throughout the event, there will be prayers, Scriptures, music and opportunities to sign up as prayer sponsors for the children.

Crowds gather at apartment building to pray to Virgin Mary

PERTH AMBOY, N.J. (AP) — For days, hundreds of people have been gathering outside Romona Collado's two-story apartment to pray to the Virgin Mary.

The people say they see the image in an upstairs window of Collado's home.

The image appears to be God's face, the Virgin Mary and an angel, said Felix Prats, Collado's son-in-law. "You look from right outside to the window and you see it."

Several people filed into Collado's home to reach out and touch the window, which appears to show changing colors when the light hits it. Spectators set up candles on a downstairs ledge and many people came with rosaries.

"I don't know if it's the virgin or not, but it helps the faith. It gives inspiration," the Rev. Michael Scott of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church told The Home News Tribune.

Rayanne Damianno, a spokeswoman for the Archdiocese of Metuchen, said the diocese had no comment on the apparition.

Prats said that Collado's son, Ramon,was paralyzed after falling from the window more than a year ago. Ramon Collado had a conversation with the Virgin Mary three weeks ago, he said.

She told him "we got to be prepared 'cause she's coming and her son is coming," Prats said.

Saturday's session begins at 9 a.m. and includes breaks for lunch and dinner during which participants will be on their own. O'Brien said he's been taking teen-agers to Student Conferences in Lubbock and Amarillo for 10 years, and that Kelview Heights agreed to host the event because of the numbers of Midlanders who have been involved in previous years. This will be the Student Conference's first time to come to Midland. O'Brien said previous registrations have been received from all over the Permian Basin, San Angelo, Lubbock, Hobbs and Snyder.

The registration fee for the Student Conference is $33 per person in advance and $35 at the door. The fee covers the cost of materials and study guides.

CAMPAIGN 2000

Bush announces Alaska drilling plans; Gore rejects idea

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Texas Gov. George W. Bush announced details of plans to spur U.S. oil production by drilling in Alaska and elsewhere Friday, asserting the Clinton-Gore administration had left America "at the mercy of big foreign oil."

Vice President Al Gore shot back that former oilman Bush just wanted to let oil companies "invade precious natural treasures like the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge."

With winter approaching and fuel prices high, energy politics took center stage in the battle for the White House with dueling speeches by the two presidential candidates.

It was the second time in two days that Bush and Gore spoke on identical issues — on Thursday it was the economy — in a preview of lines likely to be heard in Tuesday's first presidential debate.

Bush stood at a lectern on the concrete work floor of the Wright-K Technology manufacturing and engineering plant in Saginaw. Gore spoke from the woodsy preserve of the Audubon Society just outside Washington.

The Texas governor said Gore "believes the consumption of energy is the problem and must be discouraged by taxes and regulations. It helps explain why he has never made energy production a priority. It is the reason he views American oil producers as adversaries and the automobile as a threat."

Bush said the United States imports 56 percent of its oil, more than ever before, and "our production is dropping. Our imports of foreign oil are skyrocketing. And this administration has failed to act. As a result, America more than ever is at the mercy of foreign government and cartels — at the mercy of big foreign oil."

To increase supplies, he urged opening 1.5 million acres of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge for drilling, which experts say could yield possibly 10 billion barrels of oil.

Bush said the Energy Department should review other restricted federal lands to see if they, too, could be opened for oil and gas exploration. And he said he would streamline federal regulations to encourage more refining capacity and pipeline construction.

He also proposed tax credits and other congressional legislation to encourage alternative fuels, reduce pollution from coal burning and help poor people pay for fuel to heat their homes. In all, his plan would cost $7.1 billion, his campaign said, with about $3 billion offset by fees and royalties charged to energy companies.

Gore rejected Bush's approach. "We don't have to degrade our environment in order to secure our energy future," the vice president said. "And that is one of the most important differences in this election."

"The other side now proposes to misuse high oil prices as an excuse to let oil companies invade precious natural treasures like the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge," the vice president said. "If you entrust me with the presidency, I will not let that happen."

Contrasting his vision with Bush's, Gore endorsed development of alternative energy sources and technologies aimed at producing cleaner cars and trucks that can travel 80 miles on a gallon of gasoline. "But we'll never get there," he said, "if we're weighed down by old-fashioned energy policies and held back by those who want to put short-term profits over the long-term interests of our economy and our families."

Gore defended his call to release oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve to help homeowners beset by soaring heating costs. He said President Clinton's decision to release the oil already has lowered prices about $5 a barrel, to $32. But he also said the nation must cut its dependence on oil.

"We don't have to build our lives around a fuel source that is distant, uncertain and too easily manipulated," he told the Audubon Society audience.

Bush said that tapping the stockpile was "a calculated political move" that leaves America "even more vulnerable to foreign suppliers, including Saddam Hussein," the president of Iraq. Bush said every barrel of oil taken from the reserve "is one less barrel we have for threats to our security."

A background paper released by his campaign said some 7 percent of America's imported oil comes from Iraq. Despite a U.N. embargo, Iraq has been allowed to sell fuel on the world market in a program to provide money for food.

Bush also has proposed:

■ Tax credits worth $1.4 billion over 10 years for electricity produced from alternative fuels.

■ A $1 billion expansion over 10 years in the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, in part using oil and gas royalties from new exploration.

■ Spending $2 billion over 10 years to research "clean coal" technologies to reduce emissions.

■ Establishing a privately managed Northeast Home Heating Oil Reserve, costing $100 million over 10 years.

Republican presidential candidate Texas Gov. George W. Bush shakes hands after arriving at MSB International Airport in Freeland, Mich., Friday, before attending a campaign event at Wright-K Technology in Saginaw, Mich.

The candidates' running mates also raised their voices on energy Friday. Sen. Joseph Lieberman went to a park within sight of Houston's oil and chemical refineries to criticize Bush's environmental record and ties to the oil industry back in Texas. Dick Cheney said Bush inherited pollution problems in Texas and there has been significant improvement.

Presidential debate: Americans ask Gore and Bush one question

WASHINGTON (AP) — Al Gore and George W. Bush would face some blunt questions about truthfulness if average Americans were doing the asking in the debate Tuesday night. But the dominant topics would be the issues the candidates argue about every campaign day.

People want to know in detail what the presidential nominees would do to preserve Social Security, provide prescription drug benefits to seniors, improve health care and education, control energy costs and either cut taxes or pay down the national debt.

They also would ask about honesty and whether campaign promises really count, a thread of cynicism that led some people to say they had nothing to ask because it wouldn't make any difference.

"Will you keep your promises?" Jeri Peters, 32, a hair stylist from St. Clair Shores, Mich., said she'd ask. "Because the candidates will say anything to get your votes, but then what happens?"

"Are you really telling the truth?" asked Florence Barnes, 50, a teaching assistant in Louisville, Ky. "The main thing in my mind is trust and truth."

"What would make the promises that they're making any different than all the rest of the promises other politicians have made throughout the years?" Berwin Cooley, 52, an electrician in Tucson, Ariz., asked. "And how would they see it that they come to fruition?"

Melissa Volker, 37, of Boston, where the first of the three Gore-Bush debates will be held Tuesday night, said she'd want them to "tell me how you're different. "You seem to have meshed into one ambiguous animal," said Volker, who described herself as an independent. "Tell me what you're passionate about."

Those were among the questions people framed when Associated Press reporters asked what they would ask the candidates if they had one question at the debates.

After Tuesday's opening in Boston, Bush and Gore meet again in Winston-Salem, N.C., on Oct. 11, and in St. Louis on Oct. 17, the last in a town hall setting in which the questions will come from an audience of voters who say they are undecided between the two candidates.

In the AP interviews, the specific issue raised most often was that of health care and prescription drug benefits.

Melissa Heminway, 46, a part time pier manager in Cape Porpoise, Maine, said she'd want to know what the candidates would do for ailing elderly people and those who care for them, as she does for her 75-year-old mother. "I'm kind of curious how things could be simplified," she said. "The paperwork is ridiculous."

Another frequent question was about the future of Social Security, with younger working people wanting to know whether they can count on getting benefits when they retire.

"Are they going to keep putting enough money into Social Security so that those of us who've been paying into it since we were kids get something back?" asked Dave Meyer, 36, a Realtor from Albuquerque.

Education, what the nominees would do to improve schools and help parents pay for college, was another frequent entry. "I would ask just what improvements they plan in making in the public education system," said Caroline Castaneda of Phoenix, 25, a senior at the University of Arizona. "Bush seems to think that we're in an education recession right now."

On taxes, some of the proposed questions reflected what the candidates have been saying.

"We have a tax surplus," said Dave Wichard, 45, a barber in Cheyenne, Wyo. "Why don't we get a refund?" That is in line with Bush's tax plan.

"Why don't we work harder at getting rid of the deficit instead of talking about tax relief?" asked Slim Powers, 63, a cattle hoof trimmer from Nampa, Idaho. Gore favors a smaller tax break than Bush, and says he would do more to pay down the national debt.

Kim Bauer, 33, taking a break from his job loading grain in New Salem, N.D., said he is worried about heating his home this winter. "If I could ask a question, I'd ask what would you do to bring gas prices down," he said.

George Frankenstein, 57, a San Francisco stockbroker, said he'd have one question for each candidate. He said he'd ask Gore how he and running mate Joseph Lieberman can "live with yourselves, bashing the entertainment industry for the last 10 years and turn around and take their money." His question for Bush was as confrontational: "How can you overcome the image of being such a dunce?"

Virginia Wentz, 55, of Riverton, N.J., put the Bush question a bit more gently. "I would ask Bush about his competence," she said. "I think he's not competent enough, from what I've heard, from how I've heard him speak."

Jerry Labinger, 57, a New York City schoolteacher who retired to Albuquerque, said he'd just like some plain talk. "Would you ever like to express what you really feel, about the country, education, drugs, the environment?" he'd ask. "Is there ever a time when you would like to unbutton your collar and say what's really deep in your heart instead of what you think is the right thing to say or the expected sound bite?"

"Can you be honest?" Rella Snetsinger, a Mobile, Ala., retiree, would ask. "There should be some way they are penalized if they don't tell the truth, but there isn't."

Melissa Heminway, a 46-year-old part time pier manager, says she would ask the presidential nominees what they would do to help sick elderly people and those who care for them. Talking to reporters Thursday, in Kennebunkport, Maine, the undecided voter, who cares for her 75-year-old mother, says, "I'm kind of curious how things could be simplified. The paperwork is ridiculous."

Bush uses TelePrompTer to sharpen speech skills

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Texas Gov. George W. Bush has been using a TelePrompTer recently to help him sharpen his speech delivery. But why stick to a script all the time?

In a speech, Bush said he would not tear down energy-producing dams merely to protect fish.

"I made it clear to the citizens of the Pacific Northwest that I oppose breaching those dams," the governor said. And then he ad-libbed: "I know the human being and fish can coexist peacefully."

Later in the speech he called carbon dioxide "carbon bonoxide," but quickly corrected himself.

BY THE NUMBERS:

$2.3 million — The amount given to candidates by the trial lawyers' political action committee, more than any other PAC has given, from Jan. 1 to June 30.

VOTER'S VOICE:

"He is running on his father's name and he has the smirkiest face I've ever seen." Betty Woods of Potomac, Md., an Al Gore supporter and longtime Democratic voter, on why she doesn't like Bush. Woods volunteered at the Gore campaign when it was based in Washington. She helped clean out the refrigerator — full of green mold — when it moved to Nashville, Tenn.

FRIDAY'S ROUNDUP:

Both camps accused each other of faulty energy policies. Gore took his message to the Audubon Naturalist Society in Chevy Chase, Md., telling supporters they don't have to "choose between a clean environment and energy security." Bush, in Saginaw, Mich., continued his criticism of the Clinton administration's policies. "America is at the mercy more than ever of foreign governments and cartels, at the mercy of big foreign oil," he said.

In Bush's home state, Democratic vice presidential nominee Joseph Lieberman criticized the governor for his environmental policy. "I suppose it's not surprising he would leave Texas to talk about energy and the environment," Lieberman said. His Republican vice presidential rival, Dick Cheney, said Bush inherited environmental problems in Texas.

WEEKEND TRAIL:

Gore is in Sarasota, Fla., and Bush in Texas to prepare for Tuesday's debate.

Cheney is in Wyoming. Lieberman is in Connecticut on Saturday and Kentucky on Sunday.

Bush prepares for debate in T-shirt and jeans

AUSTIN (AP) — George W. Bush is hunkering down at his ranch for a weekend of debate preparation, but it won't exactly be a dress rehearsal.

Sure, he'll be standing behind a lectern during at least one 90-minute practice session against "Al Gore," played by Sen. Judd Gregg of New Hampshire. But he'll be doing it in his own laid-back style — in a T-shirt and jeans — at the ranch near Crawford.

Senior aides, including communications director Karen Hughes and media adviser Stuart Stevens, will observe and offer tips during the sessions, to be held in what they call "the bunker" — a building that's usually used as an exercise room. A stationary bike and bunk beds will be shoved off to the side.

"There aren't very many frills except coffee," Hughes said Friday. "We usually sit on the floor."

The informality contrasts with the real thing: the candidates' first debate Tuesday night in Boston. The candidates will appear behind lecterns of prescribed 48-inch height, responding to questions from moderator Jim Lehrer of PBS and abiding by strict rules.

The Bush campaign has been trying hard to lower expectations for the Texas governor's performance so he will be more likely to look good by comparison.

"We all know that the vice president is a world-class debater," Hughes said. "He is acknowledged to be the most experienced debater in American politics today and we expect that he'll have some of the best lines that Hollywood can write at his disposal."

She also tried to plant an expectation that Gore wouldn't debate fairly.

"I think that one of the problems of debating a lot is that people catch on to your tricks," she said. "Governor Bush is prepared for the vice president to misrepresent his record."

In contrast, Hughes said, Bush will go into the debate "speaking from the heart."

Each man debated his primary election rivals 10 times. Bush also debated opponents in campaigning for the Texas governorship, including incumbent Ann Richards, who Gore has repeatedly said is a much better debater than he.

As Bush practiced in Texas and Gore prepared in Florida this weekend, a controversy over the governor's previous practice sessions shadowed both campaigns. The FBI is investigating how a copy of a videotape of Bush's other practice sessions, along with some debate strategy documents, was sent to Gore headquarters in early September.

— Karen Hughes, communications director for Bush campaign

Former Rep. Tom Downey received the material and said he immediately turned it over to the FBI. Hughes said Friday, "We hope that others in the Gore campaign did not see the materials."

"But if it is by grace, it is no longer on the basis of works, otherwise grace is no longer grace"
Romans 11:6

A story has been told of a man who, attempting to sail across the Atlantic ocean, found his boat stalled by a lack of wind. Frustrated by his slow progress, he tried to make his small boat move by pushing against the mast. Through strenuous efforts, he succeeded in making the boat rock. The rocking motion created waves. The waves created a sense of motion. Feeling the boat rock and seeing the waves upon the water, the boater assumed he was making progress. So, he vainly continued his efforts. Exerting himself to the point of physical exhaustion, he was getting nowhere fast.

So it is with the one who lives the Christian life through exhaustive self effort. There is an appearance of progress and often great physical exertion, but this one gets nowhere fast!

That word grace (charis in the Greek) carries with it the thought of undeserved favor. It is something freely given. Salvation is by God's grace through faith alone (Ephesians 2:8,9). There is nothing we can do to save ourselves. We are "justified as a gift by His grace (charis) through the redempion which is Jesus Christ (Romans 3:24). The wages of sin is death, but the free gift (charisma) of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord (Romans 6:23). A gift earned is no gift at all.

The source of the Christian's life lies in God's grace alone. Our getting somewhere doesn't lie in exerting our own willpower; not in efforts of personal discipline; not in any other type of self-effort. It is all by God's grace alone through faith alone in Christ alone.

Do you feel as if you are on a little boat in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean? Do you believe that the only way to get anywhere is to push relentlessly on the mast of your boat? That's salvation by works. God's discipline in our lives and the desire to pursue holiness is the inevitable result of receiving God's gift of salvation by faith. He says, "Be still and know that I am God" (Psalm 46:10)

Martin Luther one of the 15th century leaders of the Protestant Reformation, has been quoted as saying, "We are saved by faith alone, but the faith that saves is never alone."

It is by God's grace from first to last.

We invite you to come worship with us each Lord's Day, every Sunday morning, at 10:50 a.m. where we joyfully celebrate the free gift of God's grace - new life in Jesus Christ.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Sept. 30, 2000:

Listen to your inner voice. You focus on money and often spend it trying to relieve pent-up anger. Learn when to say no to a risk and when to say yes, or you could do considerable damage. If single, you could tumble into a most unconventional relationship. If attached, discuss your feelings and work on communication. Allow more of the unexpected into your life. SCORPIO adores you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Use your energy constructively. Throw yourself into a project and delight a loved one. Taking time to please another and yourself adds to the quality of your bond. Join friends, but expect the unexpected. Learn to work with surprises. Tonight: Make it an early night.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Allow others to express their enthusiasm, and allow yourself to respond spontaneously. You might not be in control, but you certainly have a great time. Think about a parent or older relative who might be somewhat dependent upon you. Express your concerns. Tonight: Go along with plans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Don't worry about lying low and getting an important project done. Just relax. Do what you want and not what others expect. A surprise call could change plans. Work with the unanticipated, even if you might be disappointed. Return calls and digest news. Tonight: Recharge your batteries.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You're full of ideas. You have no problem expressing what is on your mind. Another's reaction might set you back, but you do know how to work with this person. Stay clear when dealing with finances and partners. You might not like the long-range consequences. Tonight: Be a kid again.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Establish priorities with money. Another seems to only add confusion to a domestic matter. Realize that this is his style. Indulge family, but establish limits. The unexpected affects your interpersonal relationships. Maintain a sense of humor. Tonight: Stay close to home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Your high energy pushes you beyond your normal limits. Though you cut through projects and accomplish all that you want to do, don't be surprised if you are tired. Another might make a request that makes you feel uncomfortable. Say no if you'd like. Tonight: You don't have to go far.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Financial matters come to the forefront. What you consider a good gamble could backfire if you aren't careful. Avoid all financial and emotional risks. A child or loved one has a tantrum. You know what to do. Be careful about how you verbalize your irritation or anger. Tonight: Fun can be inexpensive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ A friend clears things up. Of course, you decide that you want to join this person. Allow more fun in. Being with others can sometimes be stressful, especially in large groups. But, in this case, you might prefer to be out instead of dealing with an uproar closer to home. Tonight: Someone aims to please.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Do what you must with a parent or boss. You understand what this person needs, so make it happen. But take some personal time off for yourself. Unexpected jolts force your hand. Take your time and remember that you need some R&R. Don't get boxed into any situation. Tonight: Take a night off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Join friends, even though you might need to take off and visit with others. Your sense of humor comes out with a loved one who can be unusually perverse. You want to indulge someone, but set a limit as to how far you'll go. You get unexpected financial news. Tonight: Where your friends are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Others see you as a mover and shaker. You seem to flow into situations easily. An irate associate could be upsetting to deal with, but mobilize this person's energy in a positive way. Your actions surprise others. You, of course, know what you are doing. Tonight: In the spotlight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Reach out for someone at a distance. Your sense of humor comes out with a loved one. Help this person lighten up. You might not be sure about how to handle another's anger. Detach and imagine what it must be like to walk in his footsteps. Opt for the unusual, rather than the tried and true. Tonight: Where the music is.

Thornton hospitalized for infection

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Sling Blade" Oscar-winner Billy Bob Thornton is recuperating at home after being treated at a hospital for a viral infection.

Thornton, 45, left a Los Angeles hospital Wednesday, according to publicist Michelle Bega, who denied reports that Thornton's ill health was due to an eating disorder.

The actor-writer-director said several years ago that he once suffered from anorexia nervosa.

Thornton was hospitalized last weekend and his wife, "Girl, Interrupted" Oscar-winner Angelina Jolie, rushed from shooting a movie in England to be at his side, Bega said.

Billy Bob Thornton was released from a hospital following a bout with a viral infection and was recuperating at home.

"He's doing wonderfully," Bega said, adding that Thornton intends to join Bruce Willis in a couple of weeks to work on the film "Bandits."

Thornton, who won a 1996 Academy Award for the screenplay of "Sling Blade," directed "Pretty Horses," starring Matt Damon and due for release Christmas Day.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Toni Morrison says she doesn't believe in a magic formula for successful writing.

"There is (none), or we would have bottled it and every book would be a bestseller or very, very good," she told a crowd at Purdue University on Thursday. "Creative people know instantly, or at least very quickly, what is best for them."

Morrison won the Pulitzer Prize in 1988 for "Beloved," the story of an escaped slave who tries to kill her children rather than have them returned to bondage. She also won the Nobel Prize for literature in 1993.

Morrison said she often begins a book not knowing what the beginning will be, but she always has an end in sight.

"Writers seem to like chaos in their lives," she said. "They were created to have this place in the center that is peaceful, though they create chaos in their writing."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A diverse group of actors and directors, including Jimmy Smits, Billy Dee Williams and James Coburn, are being honored for their efforts to bring diversity to film and television.

Nine people will be honored at the eighth annual Multicultural Motion Picture Awards ceremony on Oct. 23 in Beverly Hills.

The others are actors Halle Berry, Omar Epps, Diane Ladd and Greg Kinnear and directors Todd Solondz and Miguel Arteta. Williams, the gallant star from the "Star Wars" series, is being given the organization's lifetime achievement award.

"These honorees bring with them a vast array of talent, diverse perspectives and symbolize all that is right this industry," MMPA President Jarvee Hutcherson said.

The MMPA is a group of cinematographers, writers, directors and actors devoted to broadening the industry by promoting diversity and providing opportunity for aspiring filmmakers.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jerry Springer still has a hankering for politics, but acknowledges that his fight-filled television talk show might cost him votes if he runs for office again.

"The Jerry Springer Show" may have permanently tainted him in the eyes of some voters, Springer said after a speech Thursday at the Ohio AFL-CIO's convention.

"If people focus on the show, the answer is no. If they focused on issues, then maybe," he said.

The former Cincinnati mayor and 1982 candidate for the governor has said he might give politics another try. He said he'll consider running for public office in 2002 — if the timing seems right.

He would not say what office he might seek but said it probably would be a federal post because he's interested in national issues.

Springer has often been criticized for the violent content of his TV show, including fistfights and chair throwing.

Oilman's water proposal doesn't make it into regional plans

LUBBOCK (AP) — As regional water planning groups race to include public comment and other revisions in their draft water plans due to the state by Monday, there's one proposal a Texas oilman had hoped would make it into the drafts.

But T. Boone Pickens' plan didn't make the cut because regional planning groups have said his plan is not economically feasible at this point in time.

But that hasn't stopped Pickens, of Dallas, from believing his proposal to transport Panhandle-area water from Roberts County to thirstier parts of the state like San Antonio, Dallas-Fort Worth and El Paso could still take flight.

"We're going to sell our water is what's going to happen," Pickens said Friday. "Whether we're in the plans or not."

The state's water plan won't be finalized and submitted to the legislature until Jan. 5, 2002. But the deadlines for the 16 regional groups — whose plans ultimately make up the statewide plan — are coming due.

Draft plans have to be submitted to the Texas Water Development Board by Monday. The board will then take 30-60 days to comment on the plans and return them to the regional boards for adjustments, said board spokesman Leonard Olson.

The finalized plans are then due back to the state by Jan. 5, 2001. From there, the board will create a statewide plan to submit to the legislature.

"The big challenge may be combining all of the regional plans into the state water plan," said Fred Arce, manager of resource development for the San Antonio Water System. "The new process has taken a lot more time, but it was time well spent. Not only did we hash out a regional water plan that had consensus, but you build relationships and see other perspectives."

'The new process has taken a lot more time, but it was time well spent. Not only did we hash out a regional water plan that had consensus, but you build relationships and see other perspectives.'

— Fred Arce, manager of resource development for the San Antonio Water System

In the past, the state water board held meetings in each region and created a statewide plan from there. The new process allows each region to develop it's own plans, forcing municipalities and rural neighbors to work together, Arce said.

"It gave more control to the local communities and made them sit down and bang out the issues," he said. "This is a continual cycle, where every five years we have to do this."

The phases allow Pickens another shot at getting in the 16 regional plans in five years.

But by that time, though, Pickens says he'll already have his water pumping to cities in need — maybe within a year.

Arce said Pickens' water would be welcome in San Antonio, where there is a regional need of 500,000 to 600,000 acre feet. The problem is, it's just too expensive to pump it to South Texas.

"It was just not cost effective for us to bring a pipeline that far to serve us and there were other options available to us," he said. "The only thing that might make it cost effective was if we got federal or state dollars."

However, without Pickens being in a region's plan, the cities within that region cannot qualify for state funds to help offset costs of purchasing water from his Mesa Water company, Olson said.

That doesn't matter to Pickens, who is convinced he can make his water economical for cities who want to participate.

"The Texas Water Development Board wants people in Texas who need water to have it," he said. "We have to get the economics right or we're not going to sell it. I think we can accomplish that."

Pickens and a group of Roberts County landowners have 150,000 acre feet of water, which sits under their West Texas ranchland, up for grabs.

The Canadian River Municipal Water Authority and the city of Amarillo plan to start retrieving water from about three miles south of Pickens' Roberts County ranch in May. The water will go to 11 West Texas cities, including Amarillo and Lubbock.

The rule of capture in Texas allows a property owner to retrieve as much water as desired from under his land, as long as the water is being put to good use.

Tom Beard, chairman of one the regional planning group's for far West Texas, says the economics and specifics of Pickens plan need a little work, but when all is said and done, it's all about water needs.

"I don't think anybody can rule out Mesa Water's plan," Beard said. "Because it may be that El Paso has no choice but to pay for high priced water."

ACLU files lawsuit over massive drug bust

AUSTIN (AP) — A lawsuit was filed Friday against two law enforcement agents, a district attorney and Swisher County for their role in an arrest stemming from a much-criticized drug bust in Tulia in 1999.

Forty-three people were arrested in the bust. Forty were black, and the other three, two whites and a Hispanic, are said to have ties to the black community.

About 40 residents of the northwest Texas town of 5,000 rallied at the steps of the Capitol, as Will Harrell, executive director of Texas American Civil Liberties Union, announced the lawsuit.

They were joined by dozens of others from a group called Journey for Justice, which has been traveling across the state, calling for an end to the war on drugs.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of Yul Bryant, who was arrested in July 1999 for allegedly selling cocaine just a few months earlier.

His case was dismissed, however, when Swisher County District Attorney Terry McEachern found out that undercover agent Thomas Coleman was not 100 percent sure that he had purchased cocaine from Bryant.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court in Armarillo, accuses McEachern, Coleman and Swisher County Sheriff Larry Stewart of falsely arresting, imprisoning and prosecuting Bryant, who is black, for a crime he did not commit. Swisher County also is accused in the lawsuit.

"These unlawful actions were part of a deliberate plan, scheme and policy of targeting members of the African-American community of Swisher County, Texas and removing them from the area using the legal system," the lawsuit claims.

Bryant is seeking $2 million in damages.

The lawsuit claims that Stewart prepared a list of local citizens and others he considered "undesirables" before enacting a policy to strong-arm them out of Swisher County. Most of the people listed are black, the lawsuit claims, and McEachern was part of Stewart's plan.

Coleman was put to work as an "undercover agent" to try and help Stewart, the lawsuit said.

Stewart would not comment on the lawsuit. Coleman did not immediately return telephone calls made by The Associated Press.

McEachern, who prosecuted many of the drug cases, says he does not believe that he did anything wrong and that he dismissed the case as soon as he found out Coleman was not sure Bryant had sold him the drugs.

"I don't seek to prosecute somebody that my undercover agent isn't absolutely 100 percent sure," McEachern said. "He told me he was 90 percent sure but that's not enough for me."

Of those arrested in the same drug bust as Bryant, 17 have pleaded guilty and 11 have been convicted.

'These unlawful actions were part of a deliberate plan, scheme and policy of targeting members of the African-American community of Swisher County, Texas and removing them from the area using the legal system.'

— Lawsuit statement filed against Swisher County.

LaWanda Smith, one of those arrested who has since entered a plea, said the whole situation is unfair because the cases against most of the 43 people rest solely on Coleman's word. She, and many others, say he cannot be trusted.

Smith, who was at the rally, said she pleaded guilty to one count of delivering a controlled substance because she was afraid of the sentence she might receive if she went to trial, but she denies selling drugs to Coleman.

"I have never met the guy," she said. "Not ever."

Big Brother contestant cheered at home

ARLINGTON (AP) — When Eddie McGee was in middle school, doctors were forced to amputate his leg from the knee down when cancer attacked tissue in his knee joint.

When he joined the cast of CBS' "Big Brother" last spring, he intended to have a little fun. But he also wanted to win enough money to help pay off some of his medical bills.

McGee, 21, is guaranteed at least $50,000 as one of the final three contestants on the show in which 10 strangers share a house for three months with no privacy and no contact with the outside world.

Seven have been voted off the show so far.

If McGee makes it past Friday's final phone-in vote, the communications major could return to the University of Texas-Arlington with as much as $500,000.

"He told me a long time ago that if he won, he wanted to help his family pay off some medical expenses," said Jon Rydberg, one of McGee's best friends and a wheelchair basketball teammate with UTA's Movin' Mavs. "That stuff was definitely not cheap."

Rydberg has been notified that he will be flown to Los Angeles to greet McGee coming off the sequestered set Friday — if McGee wins.

So far, his chances look good.

During Wednesday night's vote, McGee was ranked first with an approval rating of 53 percent. Curtis Kin came in second, with only 24 percent of the vote.

Anticipation and excitement are brewing all over the campus located between Dallas and Fort Worth.

One of McGee's classmates, Dena Fugitt, has set up a booth in the University Center to collect donations to call the 900-line to yote for McGee.

Fugitt had collected more than $200 on Thursday, enough for almost 250 votes. A publicist for Big Brother expects a total of almost 3 million votes by Friday.

"The turnout has been really, really good," Fugitt said. "When we first started it (two weeks ago) people weren't real sure what was going on. But as we get closer to the end everybody is very excited and very supportive. Even people who don't really know Eddie."

The show's official Web site, bigbrother2000.com, offers live feeds of the contestants 24 hours a day. CBS broadcasts less than four hours of footage each week, most of it taped.

The show's online traffic has been respectable, but not spectacular.

Although it was the top new site in July, with more than 4.2 million visitors, traffic dropped by half to 2.3 million in August, according to Internet measurement company Media Metrix.

Last week, Big Brother ranked 19 in the Nielsen ratings with an estimated showing in 6.65 million homes. The show is ranked 24th so far for the season.

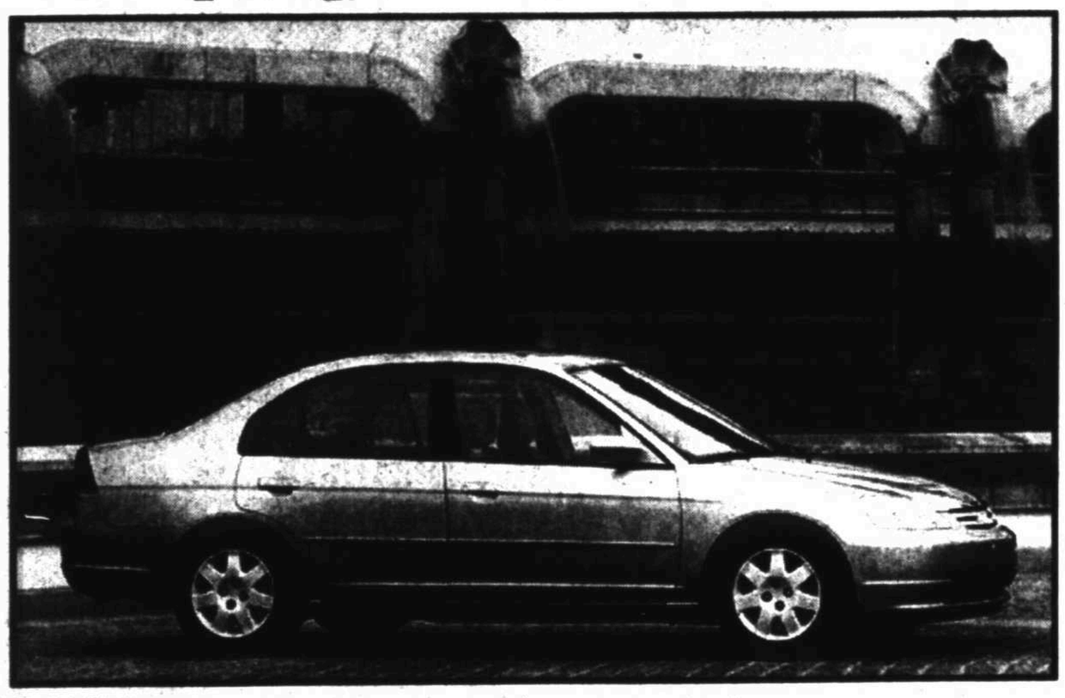
2001 Honda Civic sedan and coupe bump up in size with new designs



By Bob Plunkett
Special to the Midland Reporter Telegram

CORONADO, Calif. – On a run from Coronado at the beach near San Diego to reach twisty Otay Lakes Road in the Jamul Mountains, we played a numbers game with California freeways – south on the 5, east on the 905, north on the 805 – all the while checking off different kinds of numbers that register as our first impressions while steering a new rendition of Honda's mainstay small car, the Civic.

Both a two-door coupe and four-door notchback sedan constitute the new treatment for Civic, which marks the seventh generation. In the course of a long day, we drove many variations on freeways and narrow back roads wrapped around San Diego Country and found in that process that the group exhibited nimble road manners and, in certain versions, gutsy fun-to-drive traits.

Exterior dimensions for these new Civics decrease slightly, although passenger compartments expand in volume to create more spacious cabins fixed with new seats, more comfortable and convenient features, as well as new safety systems such as dual-stage frontal air bags and optional side-impact air bags. Also, four-cylinder engines for the series increase in displacement and fuel efficiency, while earning ULEV (ultra low emission vehicle) certification in every state of the union.

The expanded passenger compartment, which increases in volume from 101.7 to 104.3 cubic feet, elevates Civic from subcompact to compact status.

That size thing is a significant departure for the series, and a remote concept from the original version, Honda's first Civic in America, the CVCC hatchback of 1973 that topped the EPA thrifty fuel-economy list. Subsequent designs in 1980 and 1984 expanded the pint-size CVCC concept, and by 1998, when some production shifted to the United States, the Civic was gaining sophistication.

For the previous issues, traced to sixth generation revisions of 1996, all Civics were made in North America, with a hatchback built in Canada, and sedans and coupes coming together at Honda's engine and assembly plants in Ohio.

Since 1996, Civic has set the pace among subcompacts because of the quality of its construction, the efficiency of its engines, rather nice driving characteristics and comfortable passenger compartments, plus impressive standard features. In all, Honda has produced more than 300,000 Civics each year, so many that the name shows up in the top five vehicles on America's best-seller chart.

In the face of such success, Honda's designers and engineers spent the past several years creating new versions of Civic under a program called "Q10," which in Honda-speak translates to "Improving Quality Ten Times."

Underlying concepts behind all new Civics amount to maximizing room for people and minimizing space for mechanical equipment, developing larger but more efficient powertrains, boosting safety and comfort gear, then enhancing production processes by building cars with refined components and body panels that mesh together precisely.

All new Civics use a four-cylinder aluminum engine that increases in displacement from 1.6 to 1.7 liters and still gets a ULEV score. Three different iterations apply, with the fuel-economy miser Civic HX coupe packing a lean-burn plant that achieves 117 hp, a base DX and more comfy LX coupe and sedan stocking the standard engine at 115 hp but deluxe EX coupe and sedan goosed to 127 hp.

Either a tight five-speed manual transmission or an electronically-controlled four-speed automatic goes into all coupe and sedan editions, save for the HX that uses Honda's remarkable continuously variable transmission (CVT) which approaches a manual shifter's fuel economy but delivers virtually undetectable shift transitions.

Sedan and coupe designs measure the same for wheelbase and share key components, although exterior designs differ because the coupe is slightly wider and lower and its windshield tips farther back for slicker streamlining.

The two also share a structure, yet the coupe contains specific steel reinforcements to counter the lack of side roof pillars. Both show a wedge-like profile with high back and a crimped nose cast low. To work out that steep slant for the hood, Civic's steering gearbox below the hood was reset in a high center spot on the firewall, a short front strut suspension was added, and the engine had to be pared in physical dimensions. These internal changes led to the most obvious styling variance over the former Civic, as the new car's hood dips lower by 2.6 inches.

Condensing the engine compartment led to an expansion of the passenger cabin.

A larger cabin was created by raising the roof, moving windshield pillars forward and devising a flat floor. This extra space mainly goes into the rear seat area, where legroom stretches by almost two inches in the sedan or more than half an inch in the coupe, and room for shoulders and hips increases fractionally. Further, the flat floor carves out more room for feet.

Civic carries twin buckets in front and a bench in back. All seats were rebuilt with more support and stronger bolsters, and cushions were mounted higher so you can slip more easily into a sitting position.

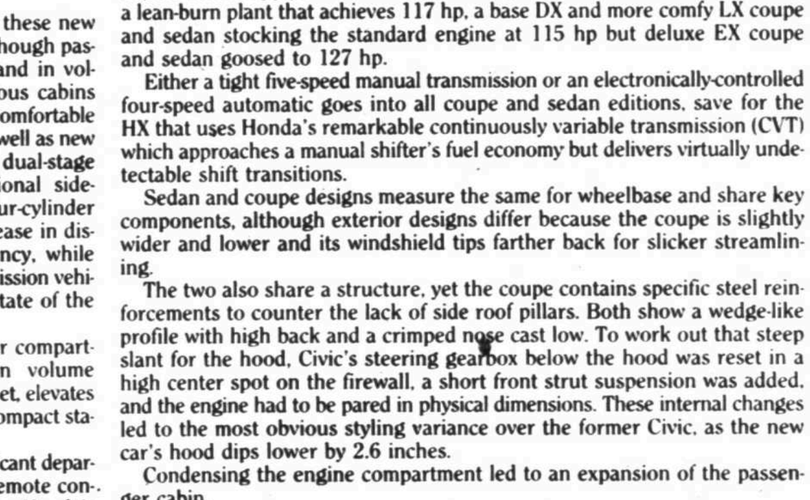
Civic's stiff new structural system supports a new suspension with MacPherson struts mounted in front and a double wishbone design for the back.

The ride quality feels smooth and comfortable, and even rumpled pavement – such as Honey Springs Road that bumps through Bratton Valley near Barber Mountain east of San Diego – failed to upset the Civics we tested.

We also noted the quality of quietness in these designs. A stronger structure, in conjunction with new engine mounts plus special noise and vibration-damping insulation stuffed into Civic's body cavities, work together to tone down sound and vibration, while wind noise has been negated by streamlining Civic's shell. Net effect: At speed, riders may converse in regular voices without noise distractions.

Fresh & distinctive: RoadWorthy!

2000 NISSAN SENTRA



By Bob Plunkett
Special to the Midland Reporter Telegram

Beleaguered Japanese automaker Nissan shows it still packs a punch in the competitive small car market with the introduction of the all-new Sentra sedan. Unveiled to the world at the North American International Auto Show in Detroit this past January, the Nissan sedan is larger and more powerful than the model it replaced.

Available nationally in XE, GXE and SE trim levels, the Sentra was designed to offer the consumer model choices ranging from "Green to Mean." In California, Nissan will market a limited run version of the Sentra sedan – known as the CA (Clean Air) – the first gasoline-fueled vehicle to meet California Air Resources Board (CARB) super ultra low emission vehicle (SULEV) standards.

Manufactured by Nissan Mexicana in Aguascalientes, Mexico, the Sentra is powered by a pair of four-cylinder engines: an all-new 1.8L or refined 2.0L powerplant. Gearbox selections include the base five-speed manual or the $750 optional four-speed electronically controlled automatic. Sharing its platform with six other models in Europe and Japan, the Sentra's overall length has been stretched 6.6 inches, the body widened by 0.8 inches and vehicle height raised 1.1 inches.

Torsional rigidity of the vehicle body has been improved by 30 percent due in part to an additional (third) floor pan member. Roof sides, B-pillars and outer body sill panels have been strengthened and front side crossmembers are S-shaped for improved crash performance. Expandable foam has been utilized in the body pillars along with 56 enhancements applied throughout the new Sentra for a marked reduction in noise, vibration and harshness (NVH).

On the road, the Nissan sedan handles well and delivers unending acceleration. A new subframe with independent MacPherson strut front suspension and coil springs work in harmony with the rear Multi-link Beam suspension, front and rear stabilizer bars and P185/65R14 tires to keep this sedan firmly connected to the pavement. The sporty SE models feature a sport tuned suspension, front strut tower brace and P195/60HR15 tires to increase the Sentra's grip of the road surface.

Inside the cabin, the all-new, larger interior adds more front and rear headroom and legroom as well as added storage compartments. Displays and controls are well laid out with a new gauge cluster design that features larger, easier-to-read figures for enhanced visibility and instant understanding. With 88.5 cubic feet of space in the passenger compartment and 11.6 cubic feet of trunk, the Sentra is now classified by the EPA as compact for the first time.

SE four-speed automatic. Destination charge adds $520. Dealers report good supplies of the Sentra sedan. There are no rebates.
