Texas in first recession since '50s

OPEC fails to reach agreement

BRIONI, Yugoslavia (AP) — OPEC today ended a six-day series of oil talks without reaching full agreement on how to reverse the decline of oil prices, sources said.

The ministers of the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries planned to hold another conference in late July, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani, appearing briefly at a balcony outside the hotel meeting room, said a final communique was being written. He declined to give details, but said there would be no more sessions in the current talks.

Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, told reporters before the end of the session that if OPEC failed to reach a unanimous agreement in Brioni, oil prices would stagnate, or fall further, during the summer.

Asked what Iran would do on its own to try to push prices higher, he said, "First of all we will pray."

Yamani said Sunday the crucial question of how any production pie would be divided among the members was unlikely to be resolved. Without a full agreement on a new production policy, OPEC is unlikely to reach its goal of raising prices.

"What we have to do is for every minister to go back home and consult with his government and meet again, probably in a month's time, to take a deci-

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas economy has slipped into a recession for the first time since the 1950s, and the House-approved tax overhaul is likely to make things worse by eliminating breaks for the oil and gas industry, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says.

A Southern Methodist University study, released by the Texas Democrat, indicates the state's economy has shrunk for at least two consecutive three-month periods and that it is in an "official" recession.

"This is the first time Texas has recorded two consecutive quarters of negative growth since the 1950s," said Bernard L. Weinstein, director of the SMU Center for Enterprising and Edwin L. Cox School of Business.

He said Texas' gross product fell slightly during the first quarter of 1986 and is expected to continue declining during the second quarter at an annual rate of 1 percent.

Weinstein estimated that Texas' unemployment would reach double digits by mid-summer. He attributes the economic slide to falling oil prices.

Bentsen, who released the SMU study over the weekend, says the House-passed tax overhaul legislation will increase taxes on oil and gas producers.

"Now if you go to that conference and you add more taxes onto the oil and gas industry, as the House bill does, you just add to the problem and further the problem in Texas," said Bentsen.

The House and Senate are expected to meet in conference in mid-July to wrangle over differences in their two versions of tax overhaul legislation.

The Senate bill would leave preferential oil and gas taxes in place, which the Reagan administration supports. The House version would phase out or reduce them.

The tax overhaul legislation is aimed at reducing overall tax rates while eliminating many deductions.

U.S. oil presence in Libya ends today

Pilot's body allegedly washes ashore

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — Libya's official news agency said today that the body of an American airman who took part in the U.S. bombing raids on Libya had washed ashore on a remote Tunisian beach.

The JANA report, broadcast by Radio Tripoli on Sunday night and today and monitored in Rabat, said the body was found on a sandspit near Ben-Gardane, 12 miles west of the Libyan border.

JANA said the airman belonged to the crew of "one of the tens of planes which launched the barbaric American-NATO aggression against Tripoli and were shot down by our air defenses" on April 15, when U.S. jets attacked Tripoli, the Libyan capital, and Benghazi.

U.S. officials have said only one American plane — an Air Force F-111 with two men aboard — was lost in the the raids on Libya. Libyan news media claimed earlier that the body of one American airman was found May 6 on a beach near al-Zawiyah, Libya.

NEW YORK (AP) — The presence of U.S. oil companies in Libya comes to an end today under orders from President Reagan.

All five American oil companies still retaining Libyan interests said late last week that they would follow the administration's order and close down their operations in the North African nation by the deadline.

"The law says we have to cease operations on June 30 and we fully intend to do that," said William Ryder, a spokesman for one of the companies, Marathon Oil Co., a unit of U.S. Steel Corp.

The other companies are Amerada Hess Corp., W.R. Grace & Co., Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Conoco Inc., which is a subsidiary of Du Pont Co.

Today's deadline primarily represented a bookkeeping change for most of the companies, since they had not had American workers in Libya for several years.

The Libyan interests of Amerada Hess, Conoco and Marathon are minority stakes each company held in an oil company controlled by the Libyan government, Oasis Oil Co. of Libya Inc. Grace and Occidental also hold minority interests in other oilfield projects in Libya.

The interests primarily entitled the U.S. companies to sell a certain portion of the oil produced in those areas.

Local leaders hopeful about relation with Chinese sister city

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Amy Weldon, left, and Susan Atchison greet Mayor Carroll Thomas and members of a business delegation that returned late Sunday from a 16-day trip to Midland's Chinese sister city. The group is hopeful that an outlet has been found for the area's unused petroleum expertise.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Business leaders returned from a trip to Midland's Chinese sister city late Sunday, hopeful that an outlet has been found for the area's underused petroleum expertise.

The delegation hopes an agreement signed by Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and his Dongying counterpart, Tang Shenglai, will boost Midland's petroleum industry needs in the wake of declining oil prices. The agreement calls for an exchange of technological data in oil and gas production, distribution and equipment.

Dongying, located about 200 miles from Beijing in Eastern China, is about 15 times the size of Midland and lies near the Shengli oil field, the second largest in the People's Republic of China.

Richard Dunbar, who coordinates the Midland Chamber of Commerce's International Affairs Committee, said the Shengli field accounts for 22 percent of that country's oil production.

"We have invited them to the oil show in October and we hope they come to see the cutting edge of oil technology," Joan Baskin, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, told the Associated Press.

"We have invited (Dongyinh, China, officials) to the oil show in October and we hope they come to see the cutting edge of oil technology."

— Joan Baskin, Chamber of Commerce president

The 30 Midland representatives, including Thomas and Mrs. Baskin, went to China June 13 and, although they did not strike any firm business deals with their Chinese hosts, friendships were established and the stage is set for future trade, Dunbar said.

"This is an opportunity for Midland and the Permian Basin to start a major effort toward economic diversification through economic trade," he said. "We hope we can disseminate the information fast enough for the businessmen who are interested to become involved."

Mrs. Baskin likened the Shangdong Province to Mexico in that it's poor, but ambitious.

"It's very flat and very dusty, somewhat like Midland might have been in the 1930s," Mrs. Baskin said. "Everything is being built and developed. It is not by any means a garden spot."

Mrs. Baskin said she was impressed with city's "pragmatic" approach to economics, however, and hoped it would eventually serve as a marketplace for Midland businessmen to sell their products.

Ineorporated in 1983, Dongying ies in the north of Shandong Provnce near the Yellow River and borders Binzhou City on the west and Zibo City and Weifang City on the south.

Since the opening of oilfields in the 1960's, Dongying has been the site of increased oil production with the present annual output at 27 million tons of crude oil. By the 1990s, officials estimate output will be at 40 million tons.

"They work in five-year plans. Their goal by the 1990s is to increase oil production by 50 percent," said Thomas. "They now have 52 producing areas (in the Shengli field). They have some areas that need development, so they'll be a market for oil equipment."

The mayor talked with Chinese officials about sharing technology for shrimp farming and said a similar operation could be set up in Midland using brackish water.

And the two cities agreed to exchange by September a list of products and services each has available, the Associated Press reported.

The group also struck up agreements to implement educational and cultural exchanges between the two cities, Thomas said.

By 1987, two Chinese scholars will travel to West Texas to study English and teach Chinese through the university's continuing education program. Also, a senior high school student is expected to participate in a similar exchange in Midland's public schools.

State's legends have become warped with the passing of time

Associated Press

The view of broad grasslands from a jumble of sandstone boulders at the top of Pilot Knob in Denton County hasn't changed since 1878, when train robber Sam Bass hid from pursuit.

But while time hasn't changed the site, the 108 years have greatly warped the truth about the legendary outlaw.

"People still believe that Sam Bass hid his loot up here on the lookout," said Mabel Erwin, who has lived with her husband, Charles, at the base of the wooded knoll for 23 years.

As the Erwins have learned, the imagination of others has been the source of many small-town yarns greatly embellished over the years.

"But that didn't stop 8,000 people from coming up here to look for his hidden gold. Neither did the fact that no one found anything."

Take the case of the beautiful and increasingly grotesque images of a woman's face on the Ellis County Courthouse in Waxahachie — reputedly the work of a stone carver's unrequited love for his landlord's daughter.

Or an old bank building in Cedar Hill, now a pizza parlor, where holes in the tin ceiling and walls supposedly were caused by shots fired during a pair of bank robberies in 1932.

Legend has it that a remote hillside cemetery near Aurora in southwest Wise County contains the grave of a 19th century space traveler.

And only a few people probably have heard of the Great Cotton Gin War — fabricated by Addison Mayor Jerry Redding.

Although he had been dead more than 80 years, Sam Bass still posed a problem for the Erwins when they moved to Pilot Knob in 1963 to run the 5,000-acre ranch where the hill sits.

"There's a little cave up on the knob where Sam Bass supposedly hid his gold," Mrs. Erwin told the Dallas Morning News. "When we first moved here, we let anybody come up here to look for the gold. Every Sunday it was thick with people wandering around with metal detectors."

Born in Indiana, Bass was orphaned at a young age and moved to Denton with an uncle, historians say. He worked as a cowboy and a teamster, then began racing a horse known as the Denton Mare.

Eventually burdened with gambling debts, he joined a gang of six outlaws led by Joel Collins. In 1877, the gang robbed a Union Pacific train at Big Springs, Neb., and escaped with $60,000 in gold coins. He formed his own six-man gang in Texas, and robbed four trains in the Dallas area, historians say.

Thomas: City employee wage reduction needed

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

Mayor Carroll Thomas told city officials today he thinks at least a 3 percent salary reduction of city employees is needed.

The request met opposition from several city officials, including Mayor Pro-Tem Katie Heck and city councilman Robert Rendall.

The talks were a part of the first day of the city's annual budget hearings. No decision on any move was made.

"I don't agree," said Ms. Heck. "You want to ask less people to do more work to maintain current service levels."

Thomas said city employees understand there is a problem with the economy.

"A lot of people (in private sector) are going through a reduction," Thomas said. "Some employees expect some reduction of salary."

Rendall and Deputy City Manager Fred Poe also said they oppose across the board salary reductions.

"By cutting the lower wage people," Rendall said, "You do more damage to the department than the monetary value saved."

Officials also disccusesed giving pay cuts to only management and department heads.

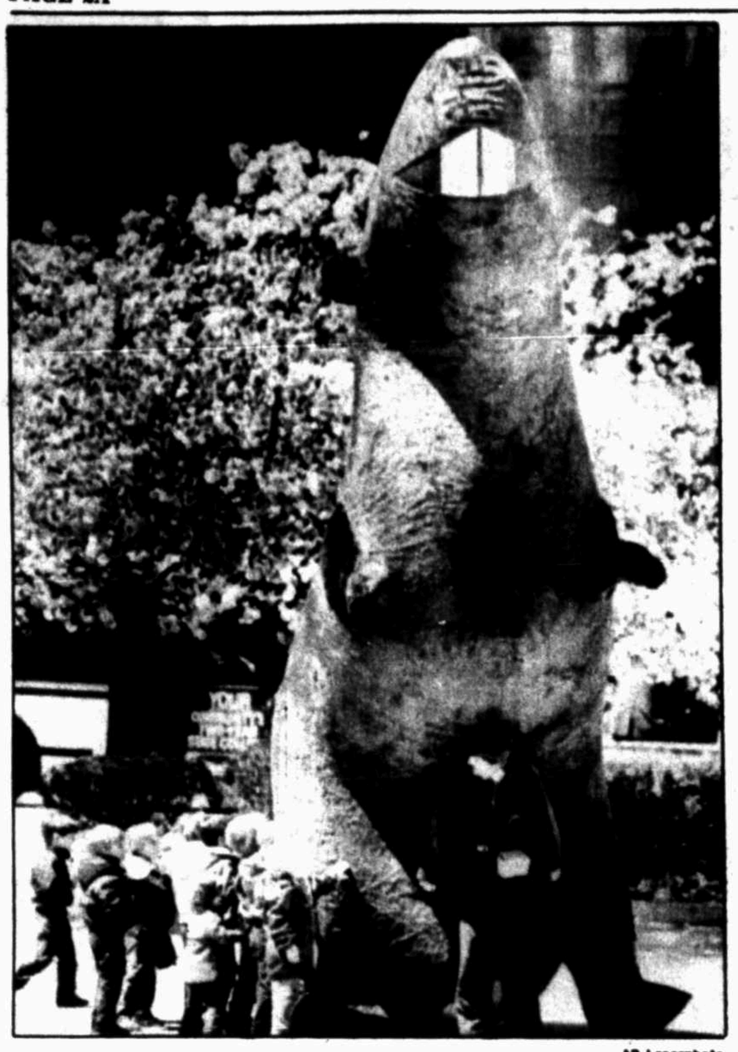

Another option, officials discussed, was a 3 percent salary reduction to the staff, and a 5 percent pay cut to higher-paid employees.

In addition, a local group today called for consolidation of city and county services, including the elimination of county commissioners.

The Taxpayers Awareness Group, citizens who are against any tax hikes by the local government, recommended the consolidation along with five other suggestions.

The presentation was the first item in today's budget hearings. They are expected to last through the week.

Big beaver

Kurt Latham, dressed as a beaver, stops to chat with a group of school children as he tries to steady a 20-foot-tall inflatable beaver recently at the Ohio statehouse in Columbus. Latham was part of a group of demonstrators hoping to have fur trappers' use of steel jaw leg traps outlawed.

White pledges to solve money crisis

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White interrupted a crucial political appeal to Texas Democrats to pledge he would take "whatever steps necessary" to solve the state's worsening money crisis.

"We are facing some bad problems in our state budget right now," White said Saturday in departing from his prepared speech for the state Democratic convention.

"I assure you I propose to take whatever steps are necessary to see us through," he added. "I also assure you the leadership of our Legislature is dedicated to that task."

White, after hearing the state faces a $2.3 billion gap between expected revenue and current spending plans, has said he will call a special session of the Legislature to deal with the crisis. No date has been set.

White directed his attack Saturday at his Republican opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements, who he unseated in 1978.

"Now that we are down to two, we've been hearing a lot about the 'new' Bill Clements," White said. "Well, they can make him smile, but they can't make him care."

The rousing reception of White's speech was the only significant spot of enthusiasm of the two-day meeting. Party officials had stressed they wanted a serene and harmonious session to concentrate attention on the 1986 races, not the 1988 presidential contest.

The only roll call of the convention came when State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle was elected to a fourth term. Slagle got 5,619 votes and John "Preacher" Hays, a Dallas public relations man, got 25.

The third announced candidate, Coleen Gibson of Dallas, a follower of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, got no votes but several booes and hisses when she tried to talk.

White also stirred applause from the convention with an apology to Texas teachers for competency tests.

"We asked you to take a test, and honestly, I didn't realize the intensity of the stress that it would cause," White said. "For this I am genuinely sorry."

He congratulated the 97 percent of the state's certified teachers who passed and added, "They are not going to have to take a test again."

Teachers who failed the exam the first time took it for the second time on Saturday.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who introduced White, drew applause for saying President Reagan's lack of a coordinated world trade policy had cost the nation and Texas money and jobs.

"This administration has created a crisis in world trade," Bentsen said. "They are not exporting products, they are exporting jobs."

White carefully pointed out that a number of the state's present problems existed while Clements was governor from 1972-78, including with schools, roads and water systems.

"Didn't he care?" White asked. "What did the Republicans do with all the oil revenue pouring in four, six and eight years ago?"

Massey on Democratic committee

From Staff Reports

Janet Massey, who has served as the chairwoman of the Democratic Party for Midland County since 1984, was elected to the party's state executive committee during the state convention over the weekend in Austin.

Gerald Ratliff of San Angelo was re-elected as the male representative to that committee. Mrs. Massey and Ratliff were among the 66 elected to two-year terms on the committee.

Lavern Peterson of Burney was Mrs. Massey's opponent, and she said the vote was 72-39. "I got Midland's unanimous support," she said. "I consider it a great honor, though I do not plan to resign my county post. The county will continue to come first."

Strake: GOP can learn from members

DALLAS (AP) — George Strake, who warded off a challenge from religious conservatives and kept his position as chairman of the Texas GOP, says the party can learn a lot from its new members.

"I think our net gain out of that group (religious conservatives) is going to far exceed any negative that might come out of it," he said after his victory Saturday at the annual state Republican convention.

Strake won by a wide margin over challenger Sam Hoerster, an Austin minister. Vice chairwoman Diana Denman, who had opposed Strake with the backing of the conservatives, pulled out of the race late Saturday after preliminary reports showed her running second.

After the roll call vote, which was preceded by boisterous debate over rules and procedures, Strake was still chairman of the party and Ms. Denman had narrowly won re-election as vice chairwoman on a floor nomination.

Strake said it is important that Republicans smooth over differences and concentrate on the November elections. He said the religious conservatives bring a concern about moral issues to the party.

"A lot of them are new to politics," he said. "They came in kind of like a roaring lion to try and get their message across."

Earlier Saturday, Vice President George Bush referred to the rift in the party and also said Republicans they must unite for the November campaigns.

"We can fight like cats and dogs in our primaries and we can battle in this convention for positions of leadership, but when those battles are over, we must join together and send a signal to all Texans that we are the party of inclusion," Bush said.

Bush said that in a growing party there are bound to be some internal differences but added those feuds are a healthy sign that Republicans aren't afraid to exchange ideas.

Bush, who has courted the more conservative wing of the party since he announced an interest in the 1988 presidential race, leaned on his Texas connections saying he raised his family in West Texas and has voted in Texas ever since 1948.

The vice president said Republicans are bound together by the fundamental values of family, hard work, education and patriotism.

Bush and former Gov. Bill Clements traded compliments during their appearance before the convention.

Clements, who followed Bush on the podium, blasted Democratic Gov. Mark White's performance in office and blamed him for the present budgetary problems.

"Mark White is like the captain of the Titanic. He has shipwrecked the Texas economy," said Clements, who faces White in the November gubernatorial contest.

Godfrey elected to GOP committee

From Staff Reports

David F. Godfrey of Midland was elected to the State Republican Executive Committee this weekend at the GOP's state convention in Dallas, according to Dean Rucker, the chairman for the Republican Party in Midland County.

Rucker said Godfrey, who ran unopposed, will serve on the 62-member body for a two-year term. "The convention was excellent," Rucker said.

"It was very unified, very cohesive and we are very happy about it."

OPEC

sion," Yamani said in a telephone interview with CBS's "Face the Nation" from this secluded Adriatic island.

A majority of OPEC members support a target price $17 to $19 a barrel — up from the current range of $11 to $14.

But any target price would be virtually meaningless unless OPEC could agree on production quotas.

A nine-member majority has said it favors limiting OPEC's overall production to 17.4 million barrels a day this summer and 17.9 million a day for the final three months of the year. The 1986 average would be 17.6 million barrels daily.

That compares with OPEC's estimated current output of 19 million barrels a day — its highest total since 1983.

Iran, Libya and Algeria have argued that production must be cut more drastically to restore prices to the $28-per-barrel level that prevailed last November.

Gabonese Oil Minister Etienne Guy Tchioba, who left the conference after Sunday's session, told reporters he suggested OPEC set a target price of $20 to $25 a barrel.

The split in opinions on pricing and production policy has virtually paralyzed OPEC. Its two previous meetings this year, in March and April, ended in confusion and disarray.

Algerian Oil Minister Belkacem Nabi left the conference on Saturday, saying he had more important business at home.

Aghazadeh, Iran's oil minister, said Sunday he would never accept the majority's position on prices and production.

Besides opposing the basic outlines of the OPEC majority's plan, Iran is a key obstacle to any agreement on how to set production quotas.

Aghazadeh reiterated Sunday that any increase in production by Iraq — Iran's enemy in a 6-year-old war — would be doubled by his country. Iraq insists that it be given a bigger share of the OPEC production pie, as do the United Arab Emirates, Ecuador and others.

OPEC's inability to unify its position on how to raise oil prices has hurt its chances of winning cooperation from major oil producing nations outside its ranks.

Yamani said Sunday he still hoped OPEC could work out an agreement with non-OPEC producers such as Britain and Mexico that in recent years have grabbed a bigger share of the world oil market at OPEC's expense.

LEGENDS

Pursued by posses and Texas Rangers, Bass was gunned down by Rangers on July 21, 1878, near Austin.

Legend has it that he stopped to bury his loot on Pilot Knob. The locals say otherwise.

"The real attraction up here now is these rocks," Mrs. Erwin said, pointing to boulders with names carved in them. "Some of them are over 100 years old."

In Waxahachie, Dupree Davis is director of the county museum across the street from the sandstone and red granite Ellis County Courthouse. He has become the keeper of the legend of the courthouse faces.

"The story is that the contractor who built the courthouse in 1895-1896 hired three sculptors from Italy — the one in Europe, not the one to the south of here — to do the decorative carving," Davis said. "One of the sculptors was named Harry Hurley — not a very Italian-sounding name — and he fell in love with the daughter of the woman who ran his boarding house. Her name was Mabel Frame."

Taken with the features of the girl, Hurley carved her face in the sandstone arch above the east entrance. But Miss Frame discouraged his attention, and some of the town's young men made sure he got the message by roughing him up.

Soon, David said, new faces began appearing. Their's were images of scowling, ugly women and snarling men.

"The legend has it that he was trying to get back at her," Davis said. "There was no confirmation of this legend. Then last year, Mabel Frame's daughter came here for the Gingerbread Trail celebration and told us the same story."

In Cedar Hill, an upper corner of Mr. Jim's Pizza parlor is riddled with small holes, supposedly made by buckshot from a shotgun wielded by bank robber Raymond Hamilton.

"Those holes in the tin ceiling and some holes in the plaster behind it were supposed to have been made by bullets during one of the robberies," said Ann Permenter, whose husband, W.S., is part owner of the building.

"But no one really knows if they are actually bullet holes."

The only thing factual about the legend of the Aurora spaceman is the existence of the legend itself, says 79-year-old Waymon Reese.

"It was started back in the late 1890s by a bunch of spittin' whittlers sitting around a country store," Reese said. "In those days, people were worked out by the time they were 60 or so, so they hung around and told stories.

"Well, someone came up with a story about a spacecraft that crashed over near San Angelo, and each time it got repeated it got a little closer to Aurora. Next thing you knew, it was crashing into Proctor's windmill over on the next hill. Only the people that lived here then said Proctor never had a windmill."

People later started pointing to a half-unearthed stone in an old hilltop cemetery as the remnant of the grave where the spaceman was buried.

At the opening of the Marriott Quorum Hotel several years ago, Addison Mayor Jerry Redding said he didn't have anything interesting to say. So he made something up.

That was the start of Addison's modern-day legend, the famous Cotton Gin War.

"The hotel was built on old cotton land, and the Marriott officials were opening the hotel by ginning a key of cotton to symbolize that their doors were always open," Redding said.

"So I told them how in 1915, the only gin in the area was charging high fees and that the farmer that owned the hotel site organized his fellow farmers to boycott it."

As legend has it, Redding said, workers at the gin watched in befuddlement as wagons crept past the gin on the opening day of the harvest season, heading for Plano.

The mayor told his listeners that the gin on Addison Road was forced to close for the year.

"At the reception, J. Willard Marriott came up to me and told me he was going to put it in his hotel magazine," Redding said. "I never said a word."

TAXES

The House bill would eliminate the "percentage depletion allowance" and reduce the amount of "intangible drilling costs" now deducted by oil and gas producers.

Intangible drilling costs include such items as labor and fuel. The depletion allowance allows qualifying producers to deduct 15 percent of a well's income each year.

Bentsen and his Republican Texas colleague, Phil Gramm, both say the tax preferences are good for the industry and thus good for national energy policy.

Bentsen favors an oil import fee in addition to retaining preferential tax treatment for domestic producers. Gramm supports tax incentives instead of an import fee.

Gramm says it would be "bad public policy" to increase taxes on the oil industry and is confident the Republican-controlled Senate will agree.

Some observers suggest the Senate version of the tax legislation will have more clout in conference, in part because of its bipartisan support. It passed the Senate 97-3.

Conferees on the tax bill have not been selected. Bentsen is a member of the Senate Finance Committee. Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Austin, and Bill Archer, R-Houston, are on the House Ways and Means Committee.

PILOT

Authorities in Tunis, the Tunisian capital, said they had no information about the new Libyan report. Ben-Gardane is 500 miles south of Tunis and has poor communications with the capital.

Jean Mammen, a spokeswoman at the U.S. Embassy in Tunis, said when reached by telephone from Paris that American officials "have simply seen the reports of the Libyan broadcast" and had no further information.

The Reagan administration said it ordered the bombing raids on Libya in retaliation for Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi's alleged support of international terrorism.

The U.S. Defense Department has identified the American airmen lost in the bombing raids as Capt. Fernando L. Ribas-Dominicci, 33, of Utuado, Puerto Rico, and Capt. Paul L. Lorence, 31, of San Francisco.

Libyan television showed film May 7 of the body it said was found at al-Zawiyah, which was clothed in a flight suit. The television report said that a helmet with the name Lorence printed on it was found near the body.

Western witnesses in Tripoli had reported seeing an F-111 crashing into the sea soon after being hit, apparently by a SAM-5 missile.

The F-111s that attacked Libya flew from bases in England, and were joined by carrier-based U.S. Navy jets.

The Libyan reference to NATO, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, apparently was aimed at Britain, a member of the Western alliance, for allowing the F-111s to use the bases in England.

LIBYA

While the companies no longer operate in Libya, the Treasury Department said they could continue negotiations for selling their assets. But beginning today they must negotiate from outside Libya.

All of the companies said they still were in talks to sell their Libyan interests, but they declined to comment on the status of those negotiations or to estimate if and when a sale might occur.

Reagan's order also bars the companies from selling Libyan oil, making payments to Libya's government or participating in the management of the companies' Libyan assets in any fashion.

President Reagan ordered all Americans and U.S. companies out of Libya last January, after he accused Libya of backing terrorist attacks in Europe.

However, the oil companies and related service firms were allowed to continue operating there to give them time to close their affairs in an orderly manner.

But during the economic summit in Tokyo in May, several U.S. allies indicated they were reluctant to impose economic sanctions against Libya as long as American oil companies retained a presence there. Reagan then set the June 30 deadline for the American companies to get out.

SALARIES

Other suggestions by the group's representative, Jim Gleitman, were a 10 percent reduction in the salaries of city officials who make more than $31,000 annually and the closing of a fire station on LaMesa Highway, north of Loop 250.

City officials and council members said they would consider the suggestions, but noted it would be unlawful to eliminate the county commissioners.

"They (the county) would have to initiate any consolidations between city and county services," said City Councilman Gordon Marcum II. "I'd be hopeful they would do that."

Gleitman also asked city officials to consider salary cuts to managers and department heads.

He said his group recommended a 10 percent decrease in those salaries, and also asked for a hiring and salary freeze for other city employees.

A survey Sunday in the Reporter-Telegram showed that Midland officials are paid better than their counterparts in several other West Texas cities, including Lubbock and El Paso.

Officials also have discussed a salary reduction among the city department heads.

Other recommendations by the group included:

— Establish an austerity policy on capital expenditures.

— Implement a more comprehensive "pool car" policy to reduce the number of vehicles required in city operation.

— Further study to consolidate city services and departments to eliminate duplication of jobs and services.

Beginning today, the city council members and city officials will mull over a preliminary budget report calling for a 6.2 percent reduction in the budget.

The report proposed to carve nearly $3.8 million from this year's city budget.

The budget reduction is because of an anticipated revenue shortfall.

Gleitman also commended city officials for taking a "realistic and fiscal responsible" approach in preparing next year's budget.

"They worked to prepare a budget which reflects no tax increase by reducing where possible without major loss of service."

Navy lieutenant wants second chance for cadet

EL PASO (AP) — A Navy recruiting officer is trying to turn an Army nightmare into happy reality for an unwanted ex-West Point cadet.

Former cadet Francis "Biff" Shea made headlines across the country after the Army booted him out of West Point a few days before graduation over allegations he misappropriated property.

But on Sunday, he was the guest of Navy Lt. Len Le Blanc, a recruiting officer who lives at nearby Fort Bliss and who believes Shea deserves a second chance at a military career.

Shea said Le Blanc's faith in him "has been good for me and my family...to have somebody give a damn."

At Le Blanc's request, he came here to fill out Navy enlistment papers, and the former cadet's story is the subject of a TV movie being made by the producer of "The Love Boat" and "Fame."

Le Blanc says if the Navy takes Shea, he'd attend officers candidate school for 16 weeks, then be commissioned an ensign.

"I don't know his chances, but I don't think the incident at West Point will hurt him," Le Blanc said. "All Washington has said is send him up and we'll look at him. If I had Mister T and Rambo here, they'd say the same thing."

After he was kicked out of West Point, a humiliated Shea went home to Massachusetts after being ordered to sit in the reviewing stand to watch his former classmates graduate.

He maintains his innocence of any intentional wrongdoing. And two months after the incident he was given his diploma and a general discharge under honorable conditions.

He hit bottom along the way, he said, but with the support of people like Le Blanc, he said he wants to show he has what it takes to make a good officer.

Le Blanc contacted Shea about a month ago, after hearing Shea had tried to enter Navy flight school but was turned down.

Le Blanc believes more paperwork and a closer look at Shea by the Navy could get him into another career field, such as surface ships or even supply.

"Last summer I crawled into a little bit of a shell," Shea said.

"My self esteem was low. I worked on a construction crew. It was the first time in my life I hadn't gotten up and looked forward to the day."

As the fifth leading hockey scorer in West Point history, Shea had known success. Harvard, Yale and other Eastern colleges wanted him.

He had graduated from Deerfield Academy, a small but well-known military prep school in Massachusetts.

At West Point, he was slated to become an officer in the Army's 101st Airborne Division.

Then, he said, with just days left at West Point, his military hopes fizzled faster than cheap fireworks.

During a stint on guard duty, a package came for a cadet, but the name didn't match that of anyone in the school.

Shea said he put the package in a lost-and-found bin and forgot about it. Weeks later, the cadet for whom the package was intended was matched up with the parcel, which by that time was short an item — clothing that didn't even fit Shea.

Cuban-born Jesuit ordained auxiliary bishop

HOUSTON (AP) — A Cuban-born Jesuit who has become the first Hispanic bishop in the Roman Catholic diocese of Galveston-Houston had a special message for his Vietnamese parishioners — in Vietnamese.

"I told them I have sympathy with them and I am also a refugee," the Most Rev. Enrique San Pedro said after his two-hour ordination Sunday night. "I understand their suffering."

His audience, smiling with pride, rewarded his multi-lingual efforts with two standing ovations, although the former Vietnamese missionary who left Cuba in 1946 said his command of the Asiatic language was "rusty."

"I think he is great," said Linda Nguyen, 19, of Houston, who came to the United States in 1980.

About 7,000 Catholics — including visitors from Miami, Rome, Venezuela and Cuba — gathered in a downtown convention center to watch the Most Rev. Joseph A. Fiorenza, bishop of the Houston-based diocese, ordain the 60-year-old Jesuit as the diocese's new auxiliary bishop.

"Bishop San Pedro is a very special gift to our diocese," Fiorenza said.

San Pedro, who speaks seven languages and served as a missionary in China, the Philippines and Vietnam, is only the third Jesuit to be named bishop in the United States. One is an auxiliary in Washington, and the other is diocesan bishop in Fairbanks, Alaska.

Among his new duties, San Pedro will serve as a pastor of the Sacred Heart Co-Cathedral, where two Masses are spoken in Vietnamese each Sunday. He will also be vicar for Hispanic ministries and for the Central Vicariate, an area of 36 parishes in heavily Hispanic central Houston.

About 45 percent of the diocese's 600,000 members are Hispanic, and there is also a growing Vietnamese community.

San Pedro has a formidable task ahead of him as Houston, like other American cities, is beset with violence, drug and alcohol addiction, divorce, consumerism and racism, Archbishop Patrick Flores of San Antonio said.

The Rev. Enrique San Pedro, a Jesuit priest fluent in seven languages, is ordained auxiliary bishop of the Houston-Galveston diocese by Bishop Joseph Fiorenza during services in Houston Sunday.

"We are ready to stand by you at all times and support your ministry," Flores said.

Speaking gently to his new congregation in English, Spanish and Vietnamese, San Pedro assured his diverse audience he will try to do his best to help them.

"I have no plans. I can only promise I will try to be a good auxiliary bishop," he said.

His new congregation appeared enthusiastic — especially Hispanics who greeted his speech in Spanish with a loud burst of applause.

"He is the greatest they have ever brought to us," said Matilda Olive, 40, who came to the United States 25 years ago. "He is a very humble person, and he is very willing to help us."

San Pedro was in Miami as a parish priest, a theology teacher at local seminaries and a chaplain for the Dade County Detention Center when Pope John Paul II named him in April to take the place of the Most Rev. John E. McCarthy in Houston. McCarthy is now the senior bishop in Austin.

San Pedro was a professor in South Vietnam from 1965 to 1975. He speaks Italian, French, German and Latin in addition to the three languages he used Sunday. He studied Chinese for two years to become a missionary in China, he said.

"Now I have to get the Texas accent," he joked.

Former TWA hostage Conwell can't forget 17-day ordeal

HOUSTON (AP) — Allyn Conwell, whose name briefly became a household word when he served as spokesman for the hostages on the hijacked TWA airliner last year, says every time he sees an airplane take off, he says a little prayer.

Conwell, who worked as a salesman for a Houston-based oil field services company, was among those taken hostage by Shiite terrorists on TWA Flight 847 from Athens to Rome.

Today, he says he cannot forget the 17-day ordeal. He also is out of work, a casualty of the oil industry recession.

The Houston Chronicle interviewed Conwell, 40, by telephone while he was on vacation with with his wife, Olga, in Greece.

"I think about it every time I get on an airplane," Conwell said of the hijacking. "And every time I see a plane take off, I say a little prayer."

In an article published Sunday, he said he is more aware than before of the vulnerability to terrorists after a group of Lebanese Shiites took over the TWA plane last June. The terrorists were seeking the freedom of other Shiites being detained in Israel.

Conwell was living in Oman a year ago as a salesman for Enterra, a Houston-based oil field services company.

Although he is unemployed, he said the time off has allowed him the first real time to relax with his family since the hijacking.

He said he is looking for a job that will allow him to live in Greece, his wife's native country, but his job search will bring him to Houston this week.

The Chronicle quoted six of the 39 American hostages in its Sunday article.

The former hostages said they remain scarred and changed by their experience. Many said they no longer travel abroad. Others said they are haunted by the memory of how close to death they came and by the slaying of Robert Dean Stethem, a young Navy diver who was killed early in the ordeal.

Robert Gordon Brown, 43, of Stow, Mass., who once traveled around the world in his job as a medical equipment salesman, said he now travels only within New England.

"I'm afraid this is the lull of the storm," he said. "I think Libya will get back at the U.S. for that (April air attack). I think they're designing and planning now."

Robert Trautmann Jr., a 38-year-old developer from Laredo, who was vacationing in Europe with his wife, children and his wife's parents when the plane was hijacked, said his family canceled another overseas vacation in the wake of other terrorist incidents.

"We went to Disneyland instead," he said.

Trautmann's father-in-law, Vicente Garza, said he keeps in touch with a number of former hostages. One former hostage sent him a tie clip engraved with "The Crazy 8s," the name their small group called itself, Garza said.

The former hostages were divided into eight small groups in Beirut and held in separate locations before they were released June 30, 1985.

Number of households hit by crime decreases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of American households touched by a crime of violence or theft in 1985 fell by 600,000 to one in every four, the lowest level in a decade, the Justice Department reports.

In 1985, nearly 22.2 million households were touched by crime, compared with 22.8 million the previous year, the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said in a new report Sunday. The total has been declining since 1982, when nearly 25 million households were affected.

In 1985, households with high incomes and households in urban areas were more vulnerable to crime than others, with black households somewhat more vulnerable than white households. Crime touched 26 percent of black households, 29 percent of households with incomes of more than $25,000 and 30 percent of urban households.

One in 13 households was burglarized in 1985 or had a member who was the victim of a rape, robbery or assault committed by a stranger, a category the government agency labeled "high-concern crimes." The rate of high-concern crimes stood at 10.5 percent of all households in 1981, but declined steadily until 1984. It was unchanged last year.

When the survey was first taken in 1975, nearly one-third of U.S. households were being affected by crime each year. Twenty-five percent were affected in 1985, 26 percent in 1984, 27.4 percent in 1983, 29.3 percent in 1982 and 30 percent in 1981 and 1980.

Most of last year's decrease compared with 1984 was due to a 6 percent drop in the percentage of households touched by personal theft — an overall decline of more than half a million.

A number of factors, including population trends, are contributing to the decline, Alfred Blumstein, a professor in the school of urban and public affairs at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, said in an interview.

One significant factor is a drop of nearly 2 million over the past five years in the size of the 15- to 19-year-old age group, which is most responsible for property crimes, said Blumstein.

More than a million fewer households were touched by crime last year than in 1975, despite the addition of 16 million new households in that period.

"Even though the number of households affected by crime is still far too large, it is encouraging to see the downward trend," Steven R. Schlesinger, director of the Bureau of Justice Statistics, said in a statement. "The evidence is that we are making progress."

The survey, however, is not a measure of the amount of crime occurring in the nation. A household is counted only once, no matter how many times it may be victimized by crime.

Earlier this year, the FBI reported that major crime reported to police rose 4 percent last year compared with 1984. Total crime in America, which includes crimes that aren't reported to authorities, fell slightly in 1985 compared with the previous year, but the decline was not statistically significant, the Bureau of Justice Statistics said.

Sports figures: Deaths should warn others

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The deaths of football star Don Rogers and basketball star Len Bias from apparent cocaine overdoses just eight days apart should be a strong warning to other athletes to stay away from the drug, sports figures say.

A toxicologist said Sunday that laboratory tests showed cocaine was in Rogers' blood system when he died of heart failure on Friday, the day before the Cleveland Browns' defensive back was to be married.

"Yes, there was cocaine found in the body," said James Beede, toxicologist for the Sacramento County coroner's office. "Obviously, it was a lethal dose."

Beede refused further comment, saying he would talk more about the case at a news conference today, when the test results will be released.

Pathologist Dr. Joseph Pawlowski, working Sunday at the coroner's office, said the results of tests on Rogers' blood, bile and urine confirmed his belief that Rogers died of a drug overdose, despite many claims by friends and teammates of the player that he never used drugs.

Rogers, 23, and Bias, 22, were alike in many ways. Friends, teammates and family of both players said that neither ever used drugs, that both were model athletes, respected by their peers.

"We have to get away from the idea that only bad people use cocaine," said Pawlowski. "Good people use it. It's a problem that afflicts the whole society."

Rogers was a Rose Bowl hero for the University of California at Los Angeles, a No. 1 pick by the Cleveland Browns in the National Football League's 1984 college draft, and the AFC Defensive Rookie of the Year. He was twice voted by the Browns as the team's hardest worker.

Rogers died a day before he was to marry his college sweetheart, Leslie Nelson. The wealth he made from football enabled him to live well and buy his mother a home in a nice neighborhood after growing up in a poor area.

Bias died two days after the Celtics chose him and before signing a contract that would have paid him hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

Browns owner Art Modell said he wanted to wait until official results of the autopsy were released before making a statement, but after the toxicologist revealed the finding, Modell said:

"Conditionally, based on that information, I will say that, tragically, in death Don Rogers may have made more of a contribution to society than he could have on the playing field. Let's hope his passing serves as a warning to those who want to try or have used drugs."

High court upholds law making sodomy crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharply divided Supreme Court today upheld a Georgia law that makes sodomy a crime, ruling that consenting adults have no constitutional right to private homosexual conduct.

The 5-4 ruling represented a defeat for the numerous gay rights organizations that had mobilized against the Georgia law.

In other action today, the court also:

— Upheld in a 7-2 vote the time-honored practice of gerrymandering, drawing voting districts to favor one political party over the other. The court said that legislative and congressional districts drawn for partisan advantage generally are constitutional as long as they meet the "one person, one vote" standard for balanced representation. At stake in the case may be control of the House of Representatives, where Democrats have held a majority since 1955.

— Ruled in another 7-2 vote that the public can attend pretrial hearings in criminal cases, even if a defendant objects. The court said that judges may close such hearings in secret only as a last resort to ensure a fair trial and only after telling why such steps are necessary. The ruling carries enormous practical significance, especially for the news media, because nine of every 10 criminal prosecutions are concluded before they reach trial.

— Rebuffed the Reagan administration in a 9-0 vote, making it easier for blacks and other minorities to challenge redistricting plans that may dilute their voting strength. The justices ruled that nearly all of a North Carolina legislative redistricting plan violated the 1982 Voting Rights Act.

In the sodomy case, the court reversed the federal appeals court ruling that the Georgia law, which defines sodomy as "any sexual act involving the sex organs of one person and the mouth or anus of another" infringes on a "fundamental" constitutional right.

Fourteen hurt as car crashes into gambling parlor

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A woman whose car smashed through a plate glass window into a slot machine parlor, injuring fourteen people, is unlikely to be cited for any offense, police said today.

Most seriously injured in the Sunday accident at the Slots-A-Fun Casino was Yvonne Sanchez, 25, of Denver, who lost an eye. She was recovering today at Humana Hospital Sunrise.

One other victim remained hospitalized, while the rest were treated for minor injuries at local hospitals and released. The driver, Beulah Jackson, 66, of New Castle, Del., also was treated for minor injuries.

The accident occurred shortly after 1 p.m. Sunday when a worker at the Circus-Circus hotel and casino asked Mrs. Jackson to move her car from in front of the building, said Las Vegas police Officer James Dwyer.

When she started the car, it lurched out of control, knocked down a low concrete-block wall and careened through the window of Slots-A-Fun next door.

The car struck two pedestrians on the sidewalk, and 12 people inside the casino were injured, he said.

It's a 'winner'

A grizzled editorialist awoke and contemplated that Monday morning with a baleful eye. Choking back the urge to call in sick, he was seized by a panic known in the trade as writer's block, then by a pulsating fear of lapsing into a terminal phase of cliche-mongering.

Groping for an idea, even a thought, he chanced upon a news item from a noted out-of-town newspaper that cheered him. Winning entries in the 1986 Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest — started by a San Jose, Calif. State University professor of English as a way of celebrating, and thereby denigrating, truly bad writing — had been announced, and samples of their craftsmanship were reprinted.

The winning entry, from a French teacher in upstate New York, went like this: "The bone-chilling scream split the warm summer night in two, the first being before the scream when it was fairly balmy and calm and pleasant, the second half still balmy and quite pleasant for those who hadn't heard the scream at all, but not calm or even very nice for those who did hear the scream, discounting the little period of time of the actual scream itself when your ears might have been hearing it but your brain wasn't reacting yet to let you know."

Priceless! One incomprehensible sentence of sublime banality contained hints of Hemingway and his labored efforts at "simple narrative, a strong dose of Faulknerian disdain for the full stop, and the turgid hammering of Mickey Spillane. All of this from a contestant who insisted she wrote it in a mere five minutes and then "sent it out before I had a chance to think twice about it."

Thus inspired, our scribe drove to work in a fever, thinking that if good bad writing can be created so easily, good good writing should be even easier. If only that old Victorian scribbler, Lord Edward Bulwer-Lytton, whose most notoriously bad work began with the immortal phrase, "It was a dark and stormy night," had known that, he might have written a good book or two. And if only it were really that easy, then ...

The grizzled editorialist sank back into despair and contemplated that Monday with a baleful eye.

One day at a time

Long made cynical by the injustices that have battered their little country all through history, the Hungarians are well aware there is no Valhalla for the fallen heroes of lost causes.

It was with quiet resignation, therefore, that they learned last week, on the virtual eve of the 30th anniversary of their abortive revolt against Russian rule, that the executed leaders of that brave effort lie in unmarked graves in a weed-infested patch.

The final resting place of Imre Nagy, the former "moderate" prime minister, as well as 280 other political leaders, students and workers who were hanged by the Russians is a remote, untended corner of a vast cemetery on the edge of Budapest. The few persons who had known about the site were relatives of the victims who had followed their coffins on the final journey.

The Hungarian uprising exploded in October, 1956, and appeared headed for success until the following month when the Soviets dispatched a full army of 200,000 to put it down. In the ensuing street fighting, which saw Hungarians hurling cobblestones at Red tanks, an estimated 7,000 patriots were killed.

The mastermind for the suppression of the revolt and the executions which followed was a KGB agent named Yuri Andropov, who was to be rewarded by the Kremlin two decades later with his elevation to the supreme leadership of Russia.

In recent years, the Soviets have somewhat loosened the reins on Hungary, to the extent that a kind of fierce peace prevails. Many of the revolt activists who fled the country to find a haven in America are now permitted to return for visits with families and even to bring capitalistic gifts.

The Hungarians, who have suffered many times in the past at the hands of the Russians as well as some of their western neighbors, are again taking things one day at a time, on the surface, at least.

Protecting the parks

The prospect of finding a "Closed to Visitors" sign at the entrance to Yosemite National Park may seem unthinkable. But not to William Penn Mott, the man in charge of all the national parks. Mott warns that unless the parks are allowed to raise their entrance fees, budget cutbacks may force the temporary closing of some larger units such as Yosemite or Yellowstone.

Of course park fees should be raised. The bargain-basement $3-per-car maximum has remained unchanged since 1972. Meanwhile, more and more Americans are flocking to the parks: Visits this summer, spurred by cheaper gas and the threat of terrorism abroad, are expected to approach 131 million, a 20 percent increase over last year. Yet the National Park Service, already reeling from a $39 million slash in this year's funding, faces additional reductions that will force cutbacks in park personnel and maintenance. The inevitable result will be a deterioration of park facilities and services.

The administration deserves credit for at least supporting the concept of higher fees (to a maximum of $10 per car). Unfortunately, the Reaganauts would allow the strapped Park Service to keep only 80 percent of the take; the remaining 20 percent would go toward reducing the federal deficit.

A more flexible approach is embodied in a Senate bill that would raise fees by as much as $5 (perhaps not enough), but return all the money to the parks. This plan also has the advantage of allowing some of the $45 million in total annual fee revenues to be spent on protecting resources in the parks, instead of just on hiring more personnel, as the administration proposes.

The Senate approach, however, should be regarded only as a modest first step toward restoring the embattled parks, a source of renewal and inspiration for millions of Americans. Much more money will be needed for land acquisition to accommodate increased visitors and protect parks from encroaching development. Also required is a tougher national assault on the industrial air pollution that is obscuring park vistas and poisoning resources throughout the system. These 344 national treasures deserve tender stewardship, not benign neglect.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1834, the Indian Territory was created by Congress.

In 1906, the Pure Food and Drug Act and the Meat Inspection Act became law.

In 1934, Adolf Hitler began his "blood purge" of hundreds of political and military leaders in Germany. Among those killed was Ernst Roehm, leader of the Nazi stormtroopers and Hitler's one-time ally.

In 1971, a Soviet space mission ended in tragedy when three cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 11 were found dead inside their spacecraft after returning to Earth.

GAO: Energy employee abused funds

WASHINGTON — An Energy Department official resigned last February while the General Accounting Office was investigating charges against her, but Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., doesn't want to let the matter end there. He wants the department to take action against the former official, Rosslee Douglas.

Jack Anderson

Douglas was appointed in 1981 to head the Energy Department's Office of Minority Economic Impact, a special bureau set up in 1978 to study the impact of energy policies and programs on minorities, and to increase minority participation in the department.

A still-restricted GAO report to Dingell, who is chairman of the House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, details several accusations made against Douglas — and the GAO's findings. Our associate Lucette Lagnado obtained a copy of the GAO report. Here are the highlights:

— Examining records of 67 trips Douglas had made during her tenure, the GAO found that she "took 15 trips to her home state of South Carolina at government expense." Though some of these trips "pertained directly to ongoing OMEI program activities," others "did not appear directly relevant to her official duties."

For example, the auditors noted that she took one trip to Charleston to accept an award from a nursing group that "has no official business" with the Energy Department. A former nurse, Douglas took two other trips to Charleston to address a nurses' alumni group and University of South Carolina medical students. On these trips she "remained in South Carolina through the weekend at government expense."

— Douglas, the GAO learned, made "numerous trips" to Puerto Rico, Nassau, the Bahamas, Las Vegas and Hawaii. "Mrs. Douglas made three trips to San Juan, Puerto Rico. ... Her itineraries show she arrived earlier and departed later at government expense than was necessary to complete her official duties," the report notes, explaining: "Her official business on these trips consisted of one-hour ceremonies," yet she stayed several days at public expense.

— In May 1984, Douglas flew to Hawaii to visit two schools with department-related vocational programs. She spent an additional three days in Honolulu at taxpayers' expense. "Two OMEI staff members provided us with signed statements that they arranged the Hawaii school visits after Mrs. Douglas told them that she was going to Hawaii to visit her brother," the GAO reported.

— At one point, Douglas proposed the elimination of the jobs of two women — one a black, the other a Chinese-American. The GAO stated: "Mrs. Douglas told us that she did not propose the (dismissals) to retaliate against two affected employees and we found no direct evidence that retaliation was her motive. However, we found substantial circumstantial evidence suggesting that retaliation may have been a significant factor."

— Douglas took several trips to Las Vegas. One was to take part in a single afternoon workshop; she stayed three days. Another was for an energy seminar; she got there two days early. A third, three-day stopover was "to attend a five-minute viewing of a crater at DOE's Nevada test site and a 45-minute briefing by tour officials," the GAO found.

— On one trip to Puerto Rico, Douglas' hotel bill of about $500 was paid by a private organization funded by her office. The GAO pointed out that this "could give rise to the appearance of a conflict of interest."

Douglas was also found to have abused the Energy Department motor pool privileges. The auditors identified 11 trips between her home and her office and 49 trips that "appear to (have been) for personal business," out of 139 trips studied.

Footnote: Douglas declined to comment, as did Energy Department officials, who said they hadn't seen the GAO report.

UNDER THE DOME: A Dutch bank wants to take over some of the loans held by American farm banks. Officials from Rubbel Bank discussed the idea recently with Marvin Duncan of the Farm Credit Administration Board. In testimony later before the Senate Agriculture Committee, Duncan said he believed the farm loan crisis would best be handled at home. He told Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, that Rubbel had been advised to talk with the farm banks directly; the federal agency would get involved later. Harkin's concern is that foreign banks will buy only the sound loans and leave the bad ones for the federal government to handle.

EVANS & NOVAK

Pretoria regime won't accept Sen. Laxalt

WASHINGTON — When word circulated that Sen. Paul Laxalt might be sent to South Africa as President Reagan's personal envoy, an informal but unequivocal response came from the Pretoria regime: Send Laxalt, and we will not receive him.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The South Africans have nothing against Laxalt, general chairman of the Republican Party and one of the president's closest friends. But they remember him as the American "undertaker" who buried Ferdinand Marcos' regime in the Philippines on a presidential mission to Manila, and fear a trip to Pretoria would be viewed worldwide as another funeral. A new Laxalt mission was suggested by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, chairman of the Senate African affairs subcommittee, and received with interest in the White House.

The South Africans would be willing to receive a Reagan envoy other than Laxalt. Mentioned for the job are U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters and former national security director William P. Clark.

NOT INTRODUCING DOLE

When Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole arrived in Des Moines for the Iowa Republican Convention, he spied a trap and quickly avoided it.

Rep. Jim Leach, one of the most liberal Republicans in Congress, was assigned to introduce Dole. But as a persistent critic of Reagan policies, Leach is anathema to the predominantly conservative delegates. Dole's camp suspected state party leaders, who support Vice President George Bush against Dole for the presidential nomination, were setting up the majority leader. Dole refused to be introduced by Leach, who was replaced by Rep. Thomas J. Tauke.

A footnote: The pro-Bush regular leadership at the Iowa convention lost fights to water down pro-contra and anti-abortion resolutions. Delegates recruited by the Rev. Pat Robertson's Freedom Council defeated the establishment.

HAMILTON JORDAN'S FRIEND

New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo has shrugged off protests in helping Hamilton Jordan, chief of staff under President Jimmy Carter, seek the Democratic Senate nomination in Georgia against front-running Rep. Wyche Fowler.

Fowler, who is assailed by Jordan as too liberal for Georgia, complained about Cuomo's help to a New York colleague on the House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Charles Rangel. But Cuomo, an old friend of Jordan dating back to Carter administration days, was unmoved. "The governor can't imagine anyone objecting to an expression of loyalty," Cuomo press secretary Martin Steadman told us.

Just how much Cuomo has helped Jordan is in dispute. The governor says he merely signed a fund-raising appeal. But a Jordan insider said Cuomo sponsored a New York fundraiser and then contributed $5,000 from his political action committee.

IRAN IN MANAGUA

Just before the latest congressional vote on contra aid, a senior official of Iran's pro-terrorist regime turned up in Managua to make common cause with Nicaragua's ruling Sandinistas.

The visitor was Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati. "The Nicaraguan and Iranian revolutions have great deal in common," said a joint statement issued in Managua. "That is why the U.S. imperialists want to destroy them ...."

The impact was nothing close to the uproar in Washington when Sandinista President Daniel Ortega went off to Moscow. But the same pattern was shown by the Sandinistas, professing to seek Central American peace but hosting a leader of a government which manages a widening terror network.

ANOTHER GOP TARGET

Polls have shown Democratic strategists an unexpected target in their drive to win control of the Senate: Slade Gorton of Washington.

Democratic managers who had considered Gorton, a moderate Republican, unbeatable for a second term were amazed by numbers that show Democrat Brock Adams in hailing distance. Their surprise is heightened because they believe Adams, a former House member and ex-secretary of transporation, is running a poor campaign.

A footnote: Another unlikely Republican target in the Pacific Northwest is Sen. Bob Packwood or Oregon, hero of the tax-reform fight. Packwood's shaky victory in the Oregon Republican primary leads Democratic strategists to consider him vulnerable in the general election against Rep. James Weaver.

CHARLEY REESE

Soup kitchens, cots won't help homeless

The homeless have joined the poor and the hungry on the list of chic causes, but we are making the same mistakes we made in declaring war on poverty and hunger.

Charley Reese

The first mistake is to use such an abstract word as homeless to describe diverse and complex individuals. Calling these people homeless oversimplifies their condition and leads to oversimplified solutions.

The big deal now is to provide temporary public shelters. That, however, is not a solution at all. The Salvation Army and other missions have been providing temporary public shelter for homeless people for decades. Expanding the number of temporary public shelters solves the problem of a shortage of temporary public shelters but it does not even address the problem of the homeless.

To do that, one must find out why someone is homeless. And when you start to do that, you find out, of course, that homeless people are not a homogenous unit with a single problem but diverse individuals with individual problems.

A number of homeless people are alcoholics and drug addicts. You needn't bemoan their homelessness unless you are prepared to fund detox centers and pass legislation that would force them into them.

Another group of homeless people are mental patients who are victims of a fad. Some years ago, it became the fad to empty out mental hospitals. The theory was that most mental patients would receive better care if they lived at home and were treated as out-patients in community-based mental health facilities.

It was a popular but unsound idea. In the first place, in many communities, there were no community-based mental health facilities and no inclination to build and staff them. In the second place, it was optimistic, at best, to suppose that people with impaired mental functioning would have the self-discipline to maintain their treatment outside an institutional environment. In the third place, institutions are far more cost-efficient than community-based facilities.

If the institutions were chronically underfunded and had difficulty recruiting and keeping qualified staff, it was nothing short of stupid to suppose that dozens of local governments would raise the funds to recruit and keep what collectively is an even larger staff.

The answer for these homeless people is either re-institutionalize them or build and staff the community facilities and find some way of forcing them to utilize them.

Some of the homeless are just bums and by that I mean people who are lazy, mean and shiftless. They are homeless on purpose. They live the way they prefer to live and nothing short of religious conversion is likely to change them. Take one of these characters into your home and, if you survive, you'll find out why they are homeless. Nobody can stand to live with them.

Homeless people who are homeless simply because of economic dislocation are, if they exist at all, a tiny fraction and the easiest to help. They need a short-term stake and a job.

What I see happening is the usual oversimplification and the usual exploitation of people for political purposes. What I don't see happening is any serious effort to provide solutions, mainly because the solutions are expensive and because most people prefer to verbalize their compassion and stage public relations stunts, rather than paying taxes and fighting political battles.

Soup kitchens and cots are not answers. Street people are adept at finding temporary shelter and a meal. They have lots of time to do it and if they weren't able to do it, they'd be dead instead of standing in front of TV cameras and snoozing between church pews. They know how to survive — probably better than the good-hearts who feel sorry for them. What they don't know how to do, or are unable or unwilling to do, is lead responsible lives.

Warm weather in area forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warm temperatures will accompany a small chance of afternoon thunderstorms through Tuesday, forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal report.

Tonight will be partly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The low will be in the low 70s and winds will be from the southwest at 5 to 15 mph, becoming light and variable after midnight.

Tuesday calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high in the mid 90s. Winds will be from the southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

Sunday's high of 93 was 16 degrees cooler than the record of 109, set in 1946. The morning low of 68 was 12 degrees warmer than the record of 56, set in 1982.

STATE

Early this morning, skies across much of Texas were clear as an upper level area of high pressure remained anchored over the state, the National Weather Service reported.

High clouds were visible over the High Plains, while low clouds covered the Hill Country of south central Texas. Scattered thunderstorms were confined to the eastern Panhandle and the Guadalupe Mountain range of Far West Texas.

North Texas is forecast to have partly cloudy days with isolated thunderstorms and lows in the 70s, highs in the 90s to near 100.

The weather service predicted South Texas would be partly cloudy and continued hot with scattered daytime showers or thunderstorms and highs ranging from the 80s to near 100.

West Texas was forecast to have partly cloudy skies with scattered thunderstorms and lows in the 60s to 70s and highs in the 90s to near 100 along the Rio Grande.

NATION

Heavy thunderstorms across the nation's midsection raised fears of flooding today after spinning off tornadoes, while other patches of storms dampened sections of the East and West.

Heavy rain prompted a flash flood warning in southeast Nebraska, while flash flood watches were issued for much of Iowa and east central Nebraska.

Thunderstorms ranged across Iowa, southeast Nebraska, north central Kansas, southeast Minnesota, southwest Wisconsin and northwest Illinois.

Midland shortstop Jeff Schaefer zeros in on high-bouncing grounder during Sunday's 11-4 Angel victory over Beaumont.

Big blasts rocket Angels skyward

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Trailing 1-0 after half an inning, Midland's Kevin King and Dante Bichette drove in six runs with a pair of homers en route to an 11-4 Texas League victory over Beaumont Sunday at Angels Stadium.

With Pete Coachman on second with a double, King brought him home with his booming blast well over the center field fence, just right of the "Little Green Giant."

Two walks and a Raul Tovar single later to load the bases, Bichette connected for his second round-tripper since being called up from Class A Palm Springs. His grand slam cleared the green wall King missed to give the Angels a 6-1 lead.

King, who added a solo homer over the left field fence in the fifth inning, his 13th of the year, has hit six home runs in the last six games and has a hitting streak now eight games long.

But, the bat he's been swinging has been sizzling longer than that. In the past 12 games, since manager Joe Maddon moved King from near the bottom of the order to leadoff or the No. 2 slot, the payoff has been tremendous:

•21 hits in 53 at bats, .396 average, to improve his average to .288 for 61 games.

•15 runs scored and 13 RBI for totals of 40 and 62.

•Two doubles, six home runs and a .623 slugging percentage, improving his totals to seven, 13 and .512.

"I HOPE he does it all the way to the big leagues," said Maddon. "This has been a year of transition for him. He's trying to accomplish some things but he's been struggling. He's shown some signs of this kind of hitting before but not with the consistency of the last 12 games.

"He's not over-swinging and he got rid of his upper cut. He's swinging level," continued Maddon. "With his strength level, all he needs to do is maximize his contact and the bat, bat speed and strength level will take care of the rest."

While King gets credit for the game-winning RBI, Bichette gets credit for giving starting pitcher Sherman Corbett, 5-4, a comfortable margin to work with. A five-run spread that proved necessary before the game was over.

"He took good swings all night long," said Maddon. "I'll take one hit and five RBI any time. Run production, that's what we stress."

Bichette's fifth RBI came in the fifth inning when he grounded out to shortstop Mike DeButch to score Al Romero.

Pitcher Cook Anaheim-bound

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

When Midland pitcher Mike Cook reported to the Angels Stadium club house Sunday afternoon for the evening game with Beaumont, he was informed of his selection to the 1986 Texas League Western Division All-Star team by manager Joe Maddon.

The news that followed was what every minor leaguer is hoping to hear.

"I came to the park today and Joe called me into his office and said I made the All-Star game but couldn't go because I was leaving," said Cook. "I said, 'to Edmonton?' and he said 'no, Anaheim.'"

Cook is the fourth Angel in the last two weeks to be promoted. However, unlike Mark McLemore, Billie Merrifield and Glen Walker, Cook is skipping Class AAA Edmonton for a possible shot in the California Angels' starting rotation.

And, rumor has it he'll be starting on Tuesday when the Angels host the Chicago White Sox.

"It's not definite he's starting on Tuesday, but it's possible," said Maddon.

"Joe said there's a chance I'll start on Tuesday but if not, it will be later in the week," said Cook. Either way, I'm happy to be up there."

And, is the 22-year-old Angel nervous about the move?

"Not right now but I imagine when I get there and get on the mound it will be a different story for a couple of innings."

COOK IS being called up after a brief, but busy stint in the minors. In two years in the pros, he has yet to complete a season.

In 1985, Cook was the second first round choice of the Angels — 19th pick overall — out of the University of South Carolina. The Charleston, S.C., native was sent to Quad City where he stayed two weeks before a golfing accident ended his season.

"Last year I was at Quad City about two weeks before I broke my ankle playing golf and sat out the rest of the year," said Cook. "I went home and didn't come back until they sent me to the big league camp (at the end of February)."

Breaking a leg playing golf?

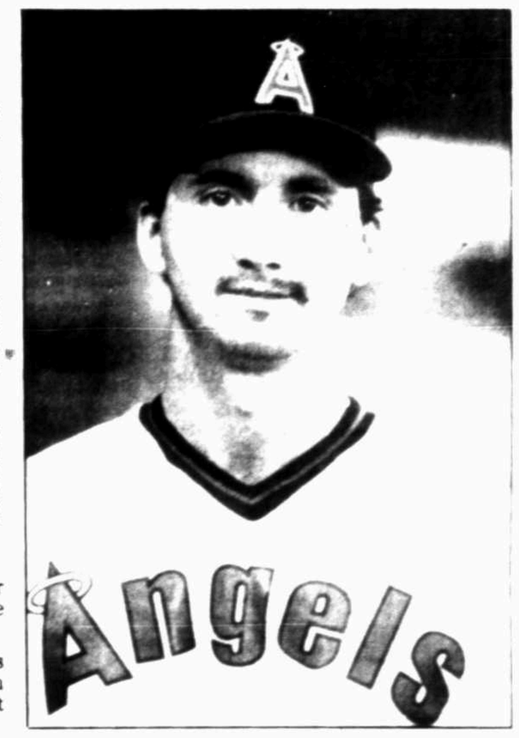

"We were riding in a golf cart on an off day last year and were looking for a golf ball and weren't paying attention and got to close to a tree," said Cook. "It snapped it in half. I tried to play a couple more holes but my ankle wouldn't work. It was swelling up too much."

COOK OVERCAME the injury and, after spring training, was sent to Midland where he became the team's work horse pitcher.

In 15 games, Cook, 4-6, pitched 105⅓ innings and allowed 41 earned runs for a 3.50 earned run average. He gave up only two home runs but allowed 52 walks while striking out 82.

While the low number of home runs allowed makes him happy, Cook isn't as satisfied with himself for all the free passes he's given up and blames them for his sub .500 record.

Sports in Brief

BASEBALL

BALTIMORE — The Boston Red Sox, seeking more pitching help, despite a big lead in the American League East, acquired 306-game winner Tom Seaver Sunday in a trade with the Chicago White Sox.

The 41-year-old Seaver, a three-time Cy Young Award winner, has a 306-198 career record with a 2.84 earned run average. This season he is 2-6 with a 4.38 ERA. The White Sox obtained outfielder Steve Lyons in exchange for Seaver.

The New York Yankees, unable to acquire Seaver, also made a deal Sunday, trading disgruntled outfielder Ken Griffey to the Atlanta Braves. In return, the Yankees got Claudell Washington and shortstop Paul Zuvella.

FOOTBALL

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Cocaine killed Cleveland Browns football star Don Rogers, a toxicologist confirmed Sunday.

Laboratory tests showed that the drug was in Rogers' blood system when he died of heart failure Friday, the day before his wedding, said coroner's toxicologist James Beede.

STANFORD, Calif. — Jack Christiansen, a Hall of Fame defensive back who helped the Detroit Lions win three National Football League championships in the 1950s, died Sunday at Stanford Medical Center after undergoing surgery for cancer. He was 57.

Christiansen was a standout defensive back and punt returner for the Lions for eight seasons, heading a secondary that was dubbed "Chris' Crew." He was selected All-Pro six times, played in five Pro Bowl games, and was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1970.

GOLF

OAKVILLE, Ontario — Bob Murphy, a non-winner on the PGA Tour for 11 years, shot a 71 and scored a 3-stroke victory Sunday in the Canadian Open Golf Championship. (Story on 4B).

Australian Greg Norman took a double-bogey 7 on the fourth hole and finished second. He won $84,000 and increased his earnings this year to $547,779, breaking the record of $542,321 set by Curtis Strange in 1985.

INDIANAPOLIS — Sandra Palmer made a 12-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday and defeated Jan Stephenson and Chris Johnson to win the $350,000 LPGA Mayflower Classic golf tournament.

AUTO RACING

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Danny Sullivan, fighting a broken clutch nearly all the way, bumped past Bobby Rahal 26 laps from the end and went on to his first victory of the season Sunday in the Chase Meadowlands Grand Prix Indy-car race.

Sullivan, winning for the first time since the 1985 season-finale at Miami, crossed the finish line 10.29 seconds ahead of second-place Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, who got past Rahal on lap 82.

SWIMMING

HANOVER, West Germany — Olympic medal-winning swimmer Michael Gross of West Germany set a world record Saturday in the 200-meter butterfly race.

Gross, competing in West Germany's national swimming championships, posted a record-breaking time of one minute, 56.94 seconds, breaking his own world record by 41-hundredths of a second.

Boris Becker's trouble is double fault

By ROBERT MILLWARD

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending Wimbledon men's tennis champion Boris Becker has dropped only one set in three matches in defense of his title.

Yet, according to weekend reports, he faced a crisis going into the second week of the tourney because of problems with his serve.

In today's fourth-round action, Becker, seeded No 4, faced Sweden's Mike Pernfors, the No. 13 seed.

Ivan Lendl, the top seed and the top-ranked player in the world, met American Matt Anger, while Sweden's Mats Wilander, the No. 2 seed, clashed with rejuvenated Australian Pat Cash.

Much of Becker's success depends on his destructive serving power. After the 18-year-old West German served 12 double-faults in his four-set victory over Australian Paul McNamee on Saturday, his critics brought out the knives.

Under the headline "King Becker faces double trouble," the Sunday Express said that a string of double-faults against McNamee "left a question mark over Becker's ability to cope with the hard and powerful men he still has to face."

During one service game, the champion served four double-faults and the match, said the Express, "left clouds of doubt over his defense of his Wimbledon crown."

MCNAMEE, MAKING his 10th Wimbledon appearance, was able to cast an experienced eye over the form of the young West German, and added fuel to the argument.

"The empire was ready to crumble today. He is his own worst enemy," McNamee said. "He is letting the pressure get to him and somebody else might exploit it better than I did.

"He is freaking out when it gets close," the 31-year-old Australian added.

Another British newspaper, the tabloid Mail, highlighted an Achilles tendon injury Becker picked up during the match.

Becker, who still is troubled by an inflamed finger, admitted after the match that the tendon strain made it difficult to push off from his right foot for two or three games, but there was no trouble after that.

Becker acknowledged the pressure on him.

"Because I am the champion, people are trying 110 percent to beat me. So I have got to try 120 percent."

Ion Tiriac, his Romanian manager, said Becker's preparation for the tourney was helped because a lot of attention was diverted to the World Cup soccer tournament.

Tiriac reasoned that Becker had little to prove. "Remember, when he is playing well, he is capable of beating any other player in the tournament."

APART FROM the players who are in their first Wimbledon championships — Pernfors and West Germany's Erik Jelen — Becker has the best percentage performance among the last 16, only one defeat in 13 matches.

Argentines toast another World Cup championship

By BARRY WILNER

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Sometimes even the best need help. Diego Maradona got plenty of it, which is why he and his Argentine teammates can call themselves world champions.

Maradona wasn't as magical on Sunday as he had been in previous World Cup games. But he set up two goals, including one by Jorge Burruchaga with six minutes remaining that gave Argentina a 3-2 victory over West Germany and its second world soccer title in the last three tournaments.

"Today you saw clearly that Argentina is not Maradona. It is instead a great team," the 25-year-old striker said after the Argentines blew a 2-0 advantage in an eight-minute span of the second half. Then Maradona's brilliant pass freed Burruchaga behind the defense, and he beat goalkeeper Harald Schumacher from 12 yards for the Cup-clinching goal.

"Argentina's triumph was justly deserved and rewarding any way you look at it, not just for the players but for all of Argentine soccer."

ONE MIGHT have thought Maradona was all of Argentine soccer the way he stamped his greatness on this World Cup. But goal-scorers Jose Brown, Jorge Valdano, Burruchaga and goalkeeper Nery Pumpido were just as important in the championship game.

The emphasis throughout the Argentine camp was on the team victory. Though Coach Carlos Bilardo claimed once more that Maradona "is the best player in the world" — who could argue with him after this tournament — he paid special tribute to the camaraderie of his players.

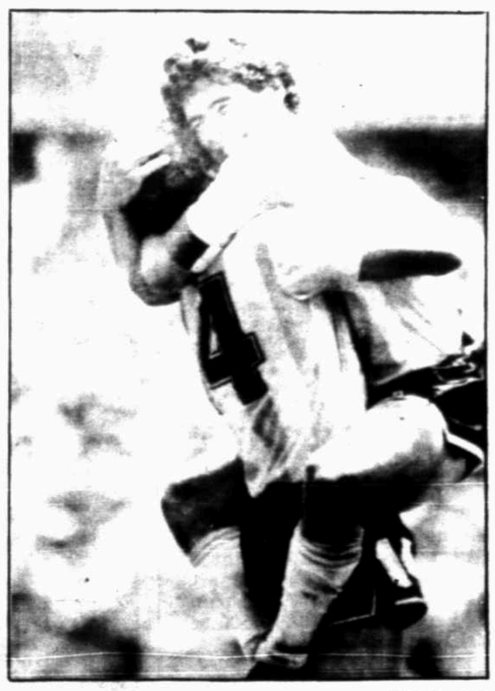

"People in Argentina must now get used to the idea that although it is important to have individual players, the strength of the team as a group is more important," Bilardo said.

Argentina controlled much of the first half and went ahead on defender Jose Brown's first goal for the national team, at 22 minutes off a free kick by Burruchaga.

Valdano made it 2-0 at 55 minutes. He broke free down the left wing after Maradona fed Hector Enrique, whose pass found Valdano. The forward poked the ball past the charging Schumacher for his fourth goal of the tournament.

But the West German offense, dormant for so much of the tournament, woke up in an eight-minute span. Karl-Heinz Rummenigge scored at 73 minutes off a corner kick by Andreas Brehme which was tipped to Rummenigge by Rudi Voeller.

Voeller then got free in the goalmouth and headed home a pass from Thomas Berthold off a corner kick by Brehme.

It's Corporate Bug by a neck

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Corporate Bug, ridden by Kip Didericksen, beat 60-1 longshot Cash Fever by a neck Sunday to win the $640,000 Rainbow Derby at Ruidoso Downs.

When the bell sounded, Mr Victory Devil took the lead by a step ahead of Cash Fever, with Corporate Bug right behind. As Mr Victory Devil began to falter, both Corporate Bug and Cash Fever battled for the lead, with the former putting a neck ahead in the final strides.

Cash Fever finished three-quarters of a length ahead of Throb, a 72-1 outsider ridden by veteran Roy Brooks.

Corporate Bug paid $15.60, $7.40 and $6.80. Cash Fever returned $41.40 and $14.80; and Throb paid $13.40.

Corporate Bug, owned by Jack Munari of California, added $222,000 to his winnings by completing the 440-yard course in 21.94 seconds.

"I don't necessarily feel that he was the best of all the horses running in this race today," Munari said. "But I think he went into the race running at his peak."

Corporate Bug was in the toughest company of his racing career for the 22nd running of the Rainbow Derby. Among the 10 finalists were recent Kansas Derby winner Dashing Phoebe and multiple California stakes winner Raise A Secret.

Gooden sends Cubs back to school, 7-4

Associated Press

Dwight Gooden decided to go to the movies in an effort to regain the form that had made him the best pitcher in baseball. And the result was anything but a happy ending for the Chicago Cubs.

"I regained my rhythm," the 1985 National League Cy Young Award winner announced Sunday after the New York Mets downed the Cubs, 7-4. "I had watched some films with (pitching coach) Mel (Stottlemyre), and learned I had been turning my leg."

So much for a slump that had seen Gooden fail to win in his three previous starts. But in giving up 10 hits and striking out only six, the 21-year-old right-hander still looked mortal ... a far cry from the overpowering pitcher he had been in his first two major-league seasons.

He had plenty of help, however. Darryl Strawberry hit a two-run homer and drove in three runs and George Foster added a solo homer as the Mets maintained a 9½-game lead in the National League East.

The game was a matchup of the NL's last two Cy Young winners with Gooden beating Rick Sutcliffe, 4-10.

Strawberry's 10th homer was his first career hit off Sutcliffe, ending an 0-for-16 drought. It came in the fifth inning after Wally Backman had singled, and lifted the Mets into a 3-3 tie.

Braves 3, Padres 1

David Palmer lifted Atlanta into third place in the West with his bat and his arm. He pitched a four-hitter and drove in the go-ahead run as the Braves completed a sweep of a three-game that moved them a game ahead of San Diego.

Palmer, 4-6, got as break when Tony Gwynn misjudged his liner to right field in the fourth inning. It scored Andres Thomas, who had reached on a two-out triple to center field.

NL Roundup

Expos 6, Pirates 4

Tim Raines was his own hit-and-run man; with a single, double, triple and two stolen bases to lead a 15-hit Montreal attack. And he tried in vain for a home run in his last at-bat.

Andres Galarraga hit his eighth homer of the season and Floyd Youmans, 7-5, pitched five innings for his seventh victory in his last nine decisions. He left the game because of a bruised right thumb suffered while batting. Bob McClure got his third save for the Expos.

R.J. Reynolds supplied most of the offense for Pittsburgh, doubling twice, scoring two runs and driving in two.

Phillies 8, Cardinals 7

After watching St. Louis' Gold Glove shortstop Ozzie Smith make a rare second error in the same game, Juan Samuel was stunned.

But he got over it in a hurry, hitting a grand slam for the Phillies, who were down to their last out.

"That's the best shortstop probably that ever played baseball," Phillies Manager John Felske said.

Smith's, had no excuse for the throwing error.

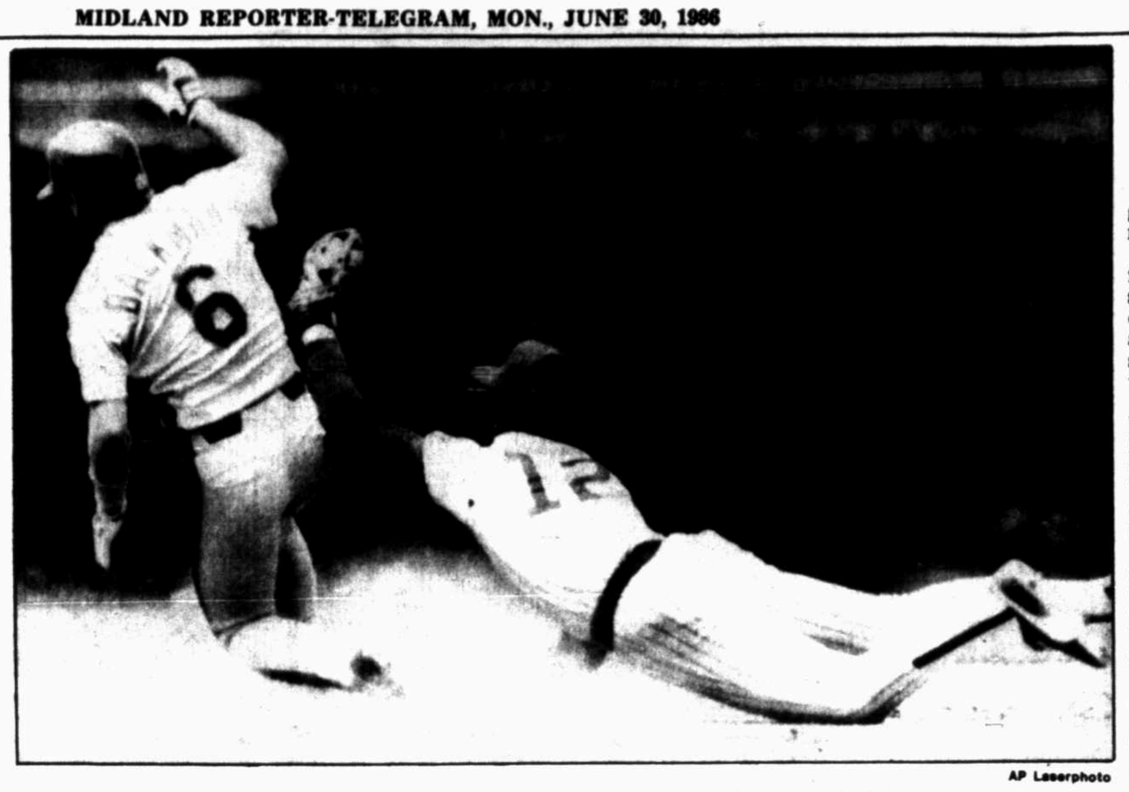

Reds 4, Giants 3

Ron Oester was hearing the boos, so he did something about them.

Oester, whose fielding error led to a pair of San Francisco runs, redeemed himself with a game-winning single that scored pinch-runner Eric Davis in the bottom of the ninth inning.

"I heard the boos" after the error, Oester said. "I just wanted to make contact. I didn't care how I hit it or where I hit it."

Giants starter Mike LaCoss, 7-3, took the loss despite hitting his second home run in his last two at-bats.

Astros sweep; regain lead

HOUSTON (AP) — On paper, the game figured to be a classic pitching matchup.

And it translated perfectly to the field Sunday as the Houston Astros scored two unearned runs in the seventh, edging Fernando Valenzuela and the Los Angeles Dodgers by a score of 2-1 and sweeping their weekend series.

The victory propelled the Astros back into first place in the National League Western Division with a half-game lead over the San Francisco. It was a lead the Astros had relinquished after dropping four straight to the Giants last weekend.

The Astros' Nolan Ryan pitched six strong innings, striking out eight, walking three and allowing only three hits and a run-scoring double by Dodgers rookie shortstop Craig Shipley.

"I am throwing the ball real well and my arm is not hurting," said Ryan, who made his second start since returning from the disabled list.

"Ryan is so important to our club," said Astros second baseman Bill Doran. "It was encouraging to see him throw so well today."

Dodgers first baseman Len Matuszek, a Ryan strikeout victim twice, called it "typical Nolan. You have to lay off his high fastball and make him throw down low. Some of us did and some of us didn't."

Valenzuela, 10-5, pitched a complete game, his 10th of the year. He had a one-hitter going until the seventh inning, when the game fell apart.

Phil Garner led off for the Astros with a groundball to shortstop and reached second base when Shipley threw the ball into the dugout.

Glenn Davis then struck out but reached first base on a wild pitch by Valenzuela with Garner taking third. Consecutive singles by Kevin Bass and Jose Cruz drove in the two Astro runs.

"Valenzuela pitched a super game," said Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda, "I feel bad for him, but you can't give a team five outs in an inning and expect to win."

The winning pitcher for the Astros was Manny Hernandez, 2-3, who pitched one scoreless inning.

Frank DiPino relieved Hernandez to earn his third save and found the sweep very sweet, especially because of Lasorda's recent comment that the Astros were only "renting" first place.

"I felt a little extra confidence," DiPino said.

Twins blast Saberhagen, 9-4

Associated Press

Bret Saberhagen is following his storybook 1985 season with a nightmarish sequel.

Saberhagen, who was 20-6 and captured two World Series victories and was the youngest winner ever of the Cy Young award as a 21-year-old last year, gave up eight runs in one-plus innings Sunday as the Minnesota Twins defeated the Kansas City Royals 9-4 Sunday.

The horrendous inning dropped Saberhagen's record to 4-9 with a 4.13 earned run average.

"I feel like I'm throwing as well as last year, but the stats don't show it," said Saberhagen, who has lost seven of his last nine decisions.

Roy Smalley keyed Minnesota's five-run first inning with a three-run homer after Saberhagen hit Kirby Puckett with the first pitch of the game and Tom Brunansky singled. The Twins made it 5-0 in the first on Mickey Hatcher's two-run single.

Puckett led off the second inning with a single and scored on Randy Bush's triple. A walk to Mark Salas sent Saberhagen to the showers, but he was charged with two more runs when both runners scored later in the inning, on sacrifice flies ry Brunansky and Gary Gaetti.

"I've had every kind of game imaginable," Saberhagen said. "I've won 1-0, lost 1-0, I've gotten a lot of runs early and lost, and I've gotten runs late and won. I don't know what to expect each time out."

Red Sox 8, Orioles 3

Boston won its eighth straight game on the road and increased its AL East lead to eight games by handing Baltimore its fifth consecutive loss.

Tony Armas hit a two-run homer and Dwight Evans had a run-scoring double and an RBI single, backing the pitching of Jeff Sellers, who scattered nine hits for his first victory since being called up from Pawtucket on June 3.

Armas, who has only three homers this season after averaging 31 the last six years, hit his second in the three-game series after Dwight Evans drew a walk in the second inning, giving Boston a 4-0 lead.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 3

Cliff Johnson keyed a three-run outburst with a run-scoring single in the ninth inning, lifting Toronto to its fifth consecutive victory and sending New York to its 10th straight loss at home, the longest ever at Yankee Stadium.

Tony Fernandez added an RBI double and Garth Iorg had a sacrifice fly as the Blue Jays handed the Yankees their third consecutive series sweep at home.

The Yankees, who gave up a first-inning run for the ninth consecutive home game, had a 10-game home losing streak once before, in 1913 when they played at the Polo Grounds.

Indians 6, Angels 4

California stayed in first place in the AL West despite the loss to Cleveland, which got a three-run homer from Joe Carter and solo homers from Brook Jacoby and Andre Thornton.

With the Angels leading 2-1 in the fifth inning, Ron Romanick, 5-6, issued two walks before Carter hit his 12th homer of the season on Romanick's first pitch.

Ken Schrom, 8-2, scattered eight hits, including a homer by Brian Downing, in 7 2-3 innings before getting relief help from Ernie Camacho, who notched his 11th save.

White Sox 6, A's 5

John Cangelosi was hitless in eight at-bats in the three game series, but his sacrifice fly in the top of the 10th inning gave Chicago the victory over Oakland.

A's reliever Doug Bair, 0-1, loaded the bases for Cangelosi with one out by issuing two walks and yielding a single to pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston.

Chicago took a 5-4 lead into the bottom of the ninth, but the A's tied it when Jose Canseco doubled home Tony Phillips from first with two outs off Bob James, 3-4, who went on to post the victory.

Ron Kittle and Carlton Fisk homered for the White Sox.

Tigers 9, Brewers 5
Brewers 3, Tigers 1

Milwaukee ended its five-game losing streak and Detroit's five-game winning skein with the second-game victory.

Ted Higuera, 10-6, took a two-hit shutout into the ninth, but he was relieved by Don Plesac after giving up a leadoff homer to Kirk Gibson, his fifth in six games, and a single. Don Plesac got out of a bases-loaded, one-out situation to post his seventh save.

The Tigers won the first game as Darrell Evans collected two of Detroit's five doubles and drove in four runs. Lou Whitaker added a homer.

Rookie Eric King, 4-0, was the first-game winner, with relief help from Willie Hernandez.

Mariners bullish on Texas

SEATTLE (AP) — Danny Tartabull belted one of the longest home runs ever hit in the Seattle Kingdome and then said he was just getting warmed up.

"I got most of it," said Tartabull, who then laughed and added, "No, I got all of it."

Tartabull's 464-foot home run, his 11th, capped a 9-3 victory by the Seattle Mariners over the Texas Rangers on Sunday.

The long homer landed 40 rows deep in the center field bleachers.

Tartabull was impressed, but he has seen better.

"I've blasted some in my time that I believe went 500 feet," he said.

Rookie Tartabull, a right fielder, earned a promotion to the big leagues after he hit 43 home runs for the Calgary Cannons last year. He got off to a good start for Seattle this season, but was slowed down when he lost 20 pounds because of anemia. Now he is healthy again and ready to start hitting more tape-measure home runs.

Seattle held a 6-3 lead when Jim Presley led off the seventh inning with his 16th homer of the year. Mitch Williams then hit Ken Phelps with a pitch, and Tartabull finished the Seattle scoring with his home run.

Mike Moore pitched his sixth complete game as he scattered eight hits and did not walk a batter while striking out seven to raise his record to 4-7. He allowed five hits and two runs in the first three innings, but finished the game by allowing just three hits in the final five innings.

Texas took a 1-0 lead in the first when Tom Paciorek singled to drive in Oddibe McDowell.

ANGELS

Like the first inning, there were two homers in the fifth, King's solo to open the frame and Doug Davis' shot to knock in the final two runs of the game, his third homer of the year.

CORBETT WENT the distance for the fourth time this year and was only in real trouble in the fourth when Beaumont scored three runs.

After walking Scott Parsons and striking out Frank Castro, Corbett gave up a single to Eric Hardgrave and an RBI double to Bob Grandstaff. One out later, Santos Alomar hit a two RBI single to right, pulling the Golden Gators to within two at 6-4.

Beaumont mounted a small rally in the fifth with a pair of one-out singles, and allowed one hit in the sixth, seventh and ninth but didn't allow another run.

In all, Corbett gave up 10 hits and two walks while striking out four.

"Sherman always has one inning a game when he gives up two or three runs," said Maddon. "It's almost inevitable that it will happen and it could come early in the game or come late."

The four runs he allowed, one of which was unearned, improved Corbett's ERA to 3.50 after 84⅓ innings of duty, now tops on the team.

ANGEL NOTES — Raul Tovar had a good night at the plate, collecting three hits in four at bats, scoring two and knocking in one while Coachman and King for the Angels and Shane Mack, Scott Parsons and Santos Alomar collected two each ...With the loss of Mike Cook to the California Angels, reliever Terry Clark, 5-2, will get his first start of the year tonight for Midland ...According to Maddon, injured Angel Brian Brady, on the disabled list, is getting better and will begin taking batting practice today ...The victory over Beaumont ups Midland's record to 7-3 to hold the Angels' one-game TL West lead over El Paso, 6-4. The Diablos beat San Antonio Sunday, 9-1. Beaumont is in last at 3-8. Three Angels were named to the Texas League All-Star team for the July 9 game in Shreveport. Shortstop Jeff Schaefer and pitchers Mike Cook and Doug Banning...

COOK

"This league has been a challenge because all the fields in our division are pretty much home run parks," said Cook. "In El Paso or here, if you get the ball up just a bit, it's out of here.

"My big problem this year has been walks. I've given up too many. I was only beaten by hits in two games but the other four loses were because of walks."

Cook has made some changes in his style of pitching since coming into the pros. For one, he no longer throws side-arm pitches to get out of trouble.

"This year the pitching coaches made some changes and I lost the side-arm pitch," said Cook. Now, I pretty much go with a fast ball."

However, it isn't the only pitch he throws, just his best.

"If I get two strikes, then I throw the fast ball," said Cook. I don't use it to get ahead of the hitter. I like to throw outside and let the hitter chase it."

COOK'S RISE to the Major Leagues has been rapid and even faster than he expected.

"My goal, when I got drafted, was to make the majors in three or four years," said Cook. "It's very unusual to take a jump up to the majors in your first year. They usually keep a player down a couple of years to help build up his confidence."

Though Midland Angel fans hate to lose Cook, as well as the other three promoted players, they realize it's part of life in a minor league city.

When the announcment was made Sunday, the fans gave Cook a round of applause to wish him well.

Now, the only thing left is to hope he doesn't come back — unless it's to visit new-found friends.

"I've really enjoyed being in this city," said Cook. "The people have been real nice and I've a lot of new friends. I've learned a lot about pro baseball here."

North Korea rejects plan

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea indicated today it was rejecting a proposal by the International Olympic Committee that would make it host to four Olympic events in an effort to avert a possible Communist-bloc boycott of the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics.

The North's rival, South Korea, has been designated official host of the 1988 Games. The IOC had set today as the deadline for North and South to respond to its "final proposal" to solve their dispute, which stemmed from the North's demands to be named co-host for the Games.

"As we have already made clear, the 24th Olympic Games must be co-hosted by the North and South and, to this end, our elementary demand for such basic questions as the title of the Games, division of events, formation of the organizing committee and the opening and closing ceremonies of the Games must be accepted," the paper said. It did not give details of that demand.

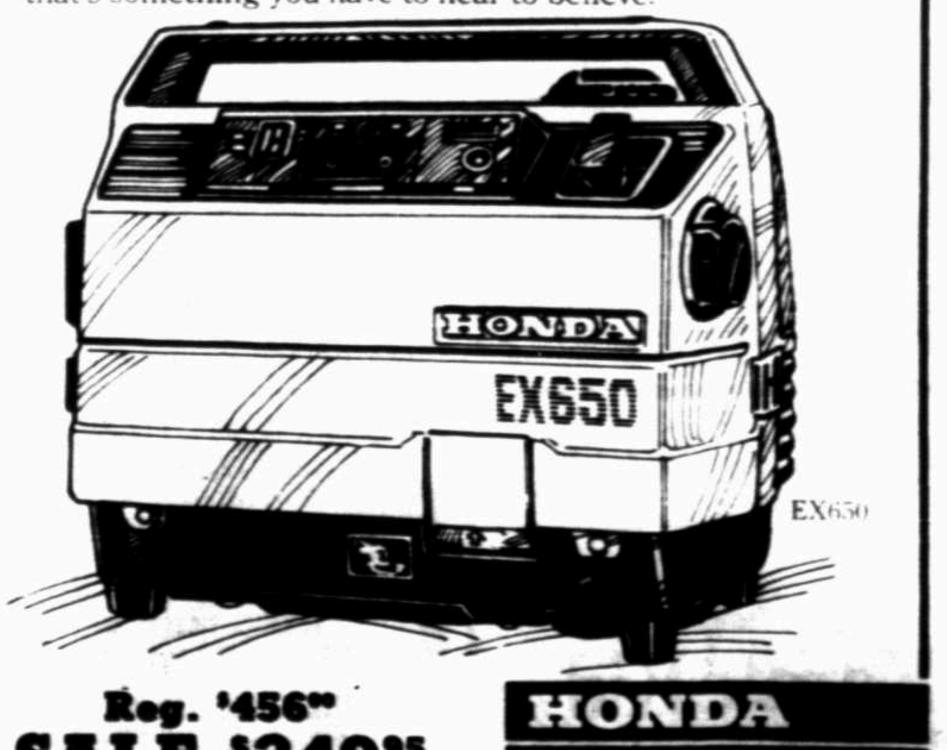

The Rodong Shinmun commentary, broadcast in part by the North's official Korean Central News Agency and monitored in Tokyo, denounced the South's insistence on being the sole sponsor.

"The Olympic movement must never be abused for the perpetuation of the division of Korea," it declared.

The South has no diplomatic relations with the Communist countries, and the North has said some countries would not participate in the 1988 Seoul Games.

Murphy snaps 11-year skid

Canadian Open

By BOB GREEN

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Bob Murphy's victory in the Canadian Open ended a frustrating, injury-plagued 11-year non-winning streak during which he seriously considered retirement from golf.

"I thought I might not ever win again, and I wondered why," the 43-year-old Murphy said Sunday after putting an end to the doubts and frustrations with a three-shot victory in the Canadian Open.

"It's hard to fight your way through injuries," said Murphy, who, at one time or another has had thumb, hand, wrist, shoulder and back problems. Even now, after winning again at last, he is bothered by a pinched nerve in his neck.

"I fought through the problems to be a player again," the chunky Murphy said, a wistful smile creasing his face.

"But there's nothing like winning. That's the thing. This is a very happy occasion."

Murphy won the tournament, and the check for $108,000 (U.S.) with a patient, tenacious final round of 1-under-par 71 while his would-be challengers self-destructed around him.

Murphy's first victory since the 1975 Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic came on a 280 total, eight under par on a Glen Abbey Golf Club course that was lashed by a brief, violent thunderstorm on Sunday that caused a 40-minute delay in play.

GREG NORMAN, the Australian who has been on a rampage in recent months, came on to claim second alone with a hard-won 73 and a 285 total.

He pulled out of a tie for second with a last-hole birdie, an effort that enabled him to set a new, single-season money-winning record for the PGA Tour.

Norman won $64,800 to advance his winnings for the year to $547,779, breaking the record of $542,321 set by Curtis Strange last year.

Norman, who hit out of bounds and made double-bogey 7 on the fourth hole, was one of five who led or shared the lead over the final round.

One by one they dropped back, with Mac O'Grady the last to go.

He was tied with Murphy for the top spot when they returned to the course after the storm delay.

O'Grady was short of the green on the par-3 12th, pitched across the green into a bunker and eventually made double-bogey 5.

That staked Murphy to a three-shot lead and the canny veteran brought it home with ease, nailing it down with a birdie-4 from a greenside bunker on the 16th.

"It's been a long, long time," Murphy said. "I felt good about my chances, but I've been in this position about 25 times and ended up not winning."

HE SAID he didn't count this one won until he was on the back of the 18th green "and figured I could 4- or 5-putt from 12 feet to win.

"Then, all of a sudden, I got very nervous, all tingly, real uptight. I didn't want to have those kinds of feelings, so I thought, 'This one is for Mama and the baby.' "

Andy Bean, Mike Donald and rookie Davis Love III tied for third at 284. Bean matched par 72, Donald had a closing 73 and Love a 74.

O'Grady dropped back to 285 after a struggling 75. He was tied with Clarence Rose and Brian Claar, each of whom had a 70.

Jack Nicklaus, a seven-time runnerup but not yet a winner of this national title, was well back at 287 after a 74.

Jackson debuts as a Chick

By JONATHAN VITTI

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bo Jackson, on the last day before his professional debut, was in his Memphis uniform Sunday but not eligible to play in the Chicks' Southern League game with the Charlotte Orioles.

Jackson will play his first professional game Monday night, a game that Chicks President George Lapides said will be "the most covered game in the history of minor league baseball."

The former Auburn running back, who signed with the Kansas City Royals last week, will play his first few games as a designated hitter, Memphis Manager Tommy Jones said.

"THAT WAS basically decided up in Kansas City," Jones said, "because he just hasn't had that much time in the outfield yet.

"It's been since early April that he's been in a competitive game," Jones said.

"His baseball instincts right now are a little rusty."

Jones said all he has seen of Jackson as a player is one batting practice session on Friday that he called a "totally incredible power display."

The 6-foot-1, 220-pound Heisman Trophy winner hit nine baseballs out of Chicks Stadium in Friday night's practice.

HE LEFT town Saturday for an awards banquet, and returned Sunday. His Sunday batting practice was scheduled after the game as a promotion. Fans were invited to stay and watch.

"Obviously, when a Heisman Trophy winner walks into your clubhouse, it makes for a different environment," Jones said.

Jackson, whose debut has attracted many more reporters than the Chicks are able to accomodate, did not make himself available for comment Sunday.

His mother was at the game, but also declined to speak.

He has been ineligible to play because he was placed on the temporary inactive list while the Royals decided where to place him in their system. Once on the list, a player may not play for 10 days.

AS FOR the pressure on Jackson the attention creates, Jones said the 23-year-old "seems to be handling everything pretty well."

Reserved tickets for Monday's game have been sold out for days. Only standing room is available in the stadium, which seats about 9,600 people.

Lapides said over 150 journalists will cover the game.

Both Jones and Lapides said there is no schedule for Jackson's progression to the majors.

"Everything is going to be judged by how much success he has here," Jones said.

Jones said that if, as has been speculated, the Royals make Jackson a September call-up, "It would be in his best interest to see some pitching at the Triple-A level."

Douglass nips Player in U.S. Senior Open

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The U.S. Senior Open golf tournament was scheduled to be a 72-hole medal-play event.

But the last few holes turned into a match play, golf glove to golf glove duel between Dale Douglass and Gary Player.

Douglass ended up the winner, taking a 1-stroke victory and his first major championship with a final-round 1-over-par 73 Sunday, for a four-round total of 5-under-par 279. Player ended up second after a closing 1-under 70.

Midland's George Clark of Misson Country Club finished well behind the leaders with a final round 82, but still earned a check of $1,106.

"Gary Player was right there," Douglass said after his victory. "Thank goodness I had as big a lead as I did because I needed it."

Douglass, a 50-year-old Senior Tour rookie, started the final day with a 4-shot margin over Player. The Colorado resident had led the tournament all the way, with an first-round Open record of 66 followed by rounds of 72 and 68.

BUT DOUGLASS, Player and Harold Henning were all in the same threesome, and the final 18 holes became a battle of wits as much as a battle of drives and putts.

By the time they reached the 408-yard, par-4 15th hole at Scioto Country Club, Douglass was staggering at 6-under, one shot in front of Player and three up on Henning.

But Douglass blasted out of the trap to within five feet of the hole. Player then lined up his putt, only to be interrupted when a car accident occurred a few hundred feet away on a nearby street.

He stepped back to his putt and hit it accurately but too hard, with the ball rimming the cup and rolling six feet past the hole. He then missed the comeback putt, giving him a costly bogey. Henning, too, missed his 6-foot putt and had to settle for a bogey.

"After they both missed, it was all up to me," said Douglass.

Age before beauty in OT

LPGA

By HANK LOWENKRON

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Add Sandra Palmer to the list of veteran athletes who will cherish the memory of 1986.

A 12-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole in the $350,000 LPGA Mayflower Classic golf tournament put the 45-year-old Palmer in a group that includes Kentucky Derby-winning jockey Bill Shoemaker (54), Masters champion Jack Nicklaus (46) and Ray Floyd, at 43 the oldest ever to win the U.S. Open.

"Overall I probably played four rounds as well as I ever had," said Palmer, who finished 72 holes with an 8-under-par score of 280.

Chris Johnson and Jan Stephenson, who each made birdie putts on the final hole after just missing eagle bids, also had 280s after four trips around the 6,186-yard Country Club of Indianapolis layout. Johnson closed with a 68, including a 3-under 33 on the last nine, to pull even while Stephenson matched Palmer's 72.

"I was very determined today," said Palmer, whose 21st career victory was worth $52,500 and made her the 13th LPGA player to top the $1 million mark. She almost doubled her 1986 earnings — now $113,124 — and moved to eighth on the season money-winning list.

"I really didn't make many putts," said Palmer, who had two birdies, a pair of bogies and 14 pars in her final round.

Even though she is past 40, there are no thoughts of retirement.

"As long as you take care of yourself and you're somewhat in shape, and feel good, I don't see any reason why you can't compete," she said.

Johnson, who like Stephenson earned $28,000, had no complaint over the ending.

"She has a real special position in my heart," Johnson said of Palmer. "When I played the fourth round in Phoenix (in 1984), she turned to me and said, 'I know you can do it.' What a compliment from someone like her. I was rooting for her all week long and all day long."

Stephenson, who failed for the third time in as many tries to win a playoff, didn't take part in the post-tournament interviews and presentations.

Jockey's bite worth $50

MIAMI (AP) — A woman jockey received a tetanus shot after a colleague bit her right arm during a battle inside the lounge of Calder Race Course, officials said.

Jockey Dodie Duys was fined $50 for biting Laurie Paynter. Officials said the incident in the jockey's TV room had been sparked last week over a race in which Duys fell and suffered a bruised upper back.

Calder stewards levied the fine against Duys on Saturday "for causing a disturbance in the jockeys' quarters." Three years ago, Duys was suspended for 60 days at Gulfstream Park after beating on jockey Jack Beuviere with her whip during a race.

Duys blamed her fall from Silk Pleasure last Thursday on Paynter. But race films showed that Silk Pleasure had been bumped out by Curtain View, ridden by Victor Molina.

Silk Pleasure then clipped heels with Taiwan Prospect, guided by Paynter, and fell.

After the films cleared her from blame, Paynter insisted Friday that Duys apologize for her accusations, said State Steward Walter Blum.

Head of South Africa's largest labor union jailed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The head of South Africa's largest labor federation has been detained under the state of emergency, the union said today, and it warned that the government crackdown could spark widespread strikes.

In Durban, two bombs planted on a pedestrian crossing spanning a freeway exploded early this morning, wrecking water pipes but causing no injuries, officials said. It was the ninth bombing since the emergency was imposed June 12.

The president of the mainly black Congress of South African Trade Unions was picked up at his home in Carltonville, a mining town west of Johannesburg, on Friday night, congress spokesman Frank Meintjies told The Associated Press.

The union chief, who may not be identified by name under state of emergency curbs, was the most senior labor leader to date jailed without trial during the emergency.

Monitoring groups report about 920 union members are among at least 1,500 people held without charge. For two weeks, workers at dozens of retail outlets in Johannesburg have staged sit-down strikes in protest.

The congress, which claims a membership of 500,000 and is affiliated with the United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition, accused the government in a statement of a "direct and concerted assault on trade union freedom in South Africa."

The labor congress "has warned, seemingly to no avail, that the continued clampdown on our activities and the detention of leadership could spark widespread and spontaneous worker reaction around the country," the statement said.

Meintjies said more that 20 members of the congress' national executive, many of whom are in hiding to avoid detention, still planned to meet at a secret location on Tuesday to plan their next move.

"Of course the detention of our president is a setback, but there will be no turning back," Meintjies said.

The detained congress leader is also vice-president of the 250,000-member black National Union of Mineworkers, the most potentially powerful labor group in mineral-rich South Africa.

WORLD

In Durban, the first explosion at 3:15 a.m. thundered across Westville, a mainly white surburb near the Indian Uniersity of Durban-Westville, witnesses said. As police cordoned off the area, a second bomb exploded.

"I was woken by a huge bang. I looked out and saw water spraying into the air," said Mike Watson, who lives near the pedestrian crossing north of the Indian Ocean port. "Twenty minutes later there was a second blast."

In Pretoria, the government Bureau for Information reported the two explosions in a brief statement and said no one had been injured. The Bureau for Information is the only source of official information on unrest since the state of emergency was imposed.

Durban has been the prime target of bombings which have hit four cities in a 16-day period. In the most serious attack, a June 14 car bomb on Durban's main boulevard killed three people and wounded 69.

The outlawed African National Congress, the main black guerrilla movement fighting South Africa's government, has refused to say whether it is responsible for the bombing campaign.

In Johannesburg, 11 blacks wounded Sunday when militant youths stoned and hurled a gasoline bomb at buses carrying supporters of moderate black leader Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi remained hospitalized, a hospital spokesman said.

The clash came after Buthelezi held a rally of 13,000 members of his Inkatha movement in a soccer stadium in the heart of Soweto. The government exempted the rally from its ban on political meetings imposed under the emergency.

Buthelezi, the hereditary leader of 6 million Zulus, called for an end to violence by blacks against other blacks.

"I know that if we do not do something about the high toll of deaths of blacks at the hands of blacks, we are on the verge of a civil war situation which will never be stopped, even if liberation (from white domination) is achieved tomorrow."

Denouncing calls for international economic sanctions, Buthelezi added, "We will never be freed by marching armies from abroad."

Rabin says force may have been used

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Sunday that Israel might have responded with force against Syria if the attempt to blow up an El Al jetliner in Spain last week had succeeded.

"The man who brought the suitcase to Spain with the explosives came with a Syrian passport," Rabin told a conference on terrorism at Tel Aviv University. "And I presume those who gave him the passport knew who they were giving it to."

Without mentioning Syria by name, Rabin went on to issue a warning to states that help terrorists by providing weapons, safehouses, use of diplomatic mail or passports.

"Israel would have been in a terrible dilemna had it discovered footsteps leading to whatever country: would we have gone to war over that, or what would we have done?" he said. "Israel's aim can only be maximum prevention of terror attacks and maximum damage to anybody who tries to harm it."

A bomb exploded Thursday at El Al's check-in counter at the Madrid airport, wounding 13 people, including El Al's local security chief. The bomb, placed in a suitcase, was timed to go off after the plane left on its weekly flight to Tel Aviv.

Nasser Hassam Al-Ali, a Palestinian, was arrested Friday in Madrid and is accused of paying $1,000 to a Spaniard to carry the luggage on the flight. Spanish officials said the Spaniard was told only that he was delivering drugs to Israel.

Rabin's statement was the first official comment on reports attributed to Spanish police in Madrid newspapers that Al-Ali carried a Syrian passport in another name.

Earlier this year, Rabin touched off a war scare by publicly blaming Syria for playing a role in the April 5 blast in a West Berlin nightclub in which two American soldiers and a Turkish woman were fatally injured, and the attempt to blow up an El Al airliner in London on April 17.

Jaruzelski: Solidarity's influence waning

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski told a Communist Party congress that Solidarity's influence had waned, but thousands of the independent labor movement's supporters clashed with police in Poznan and thousands more gathered to pray in Warsaw.

Jaruzelski opened the first Communist Party congress since Solidarity was crushed in December 1981 by declaring Sunday that some political prisoners might be freed because of Solidarity's loss of influence.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev joined 1,776 party delegates at the session.

However, in Poznan riot police battled thousands of Solidarity supporters who marched through the city behind a banner reading, "Law, Freedom and Solidarity." Several demonstrators were beaten and detained by police.

Earlier in Poznan, Roman Catholic Cardinal Jozef Glem celebrated Mass to mark the 30th anniversary of bloody anti-government protests. Glemp criticized the government's conduct during the 1956 "food and freedom" riots that left more than 50 people dead.

At a church in Warsaw, the Polish capital, about 8,000 people prayed for the release of political prisoners and the restoration of Solidarity. After Mass at St. Stanislaw Kostka Church, workers' delegations carried Solidarity banners past the grave of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, a murdered pro-Solidarity priest, in the church's courtyard.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachrv, left, sits with Polish Communist leader Gen. Wojceich Jaruzelski at the 10th Congress of Polish United Workers Party which began in Warsaw Sunday.

Four secret police officers are serving prison terms in connection with the kidnapping and killing of Popieluszko in October 1984.

The crowd in Warsaw dispersed peacefully.

Gorbachev, whose appearance at the party congress indicated that the Polish Communist Party had regained Soviet confidence after five years of turmoil, was applauded warmly when he was introduced.

At the last party congress in July 1981 the Polish leadership was openly criticized by the Soviets for not cracking down on Solidarity.

Jaruzelski said a prisoner release was justified because national unity is increasing, and because of "the progressing decomposition and social isolation of anti-state groups."

He said Solidarity had lost its support in Polish society.

He provided few details of the amnesty, but said it would exclude repeat offenders, apparently barring some senior Solidarity activists. He said some common criminals also would be freed.

The party leadership, he said, "thinks we could create one more chance for a return to normal life for those who committed defined categories of crimes against the interests of the state."

Opposition sources estimate there are 350 political prisoners, compared with fewer than 200 early in the year.

Poland lifted martial law in 1983. It freed about 630 political prisoners under an 1984 amnesty and more than 200 late last year. However, many senior Solidarity figures were excluded. Increased arrests followed each amnesty.

Jaruzelski also addressed Poland's economic problems, including low productivity, sagging exports and a $30 billion foreign debt.

WORLD in brief

Columbia preparing for pope's week-long visit

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Police swept vagabond children from city streets and public workers painted over pro-guerrilla graffiti as Colombia spruced up for the arrival of Pope John Paul II on Tuesday.

The pontiff, speaking Sunday from his window overlooking the Vatican's St. Peter's Square, said he was preparing for his seven-day, nine-city tour of Colombia with great joy.

In major Colombian cities, police on Sunday rounded up vagabond children, prostitutes and the mentally ill from streets that the pope will visit in the first pilgrimage to Colombia by a head of the Roman Catholic Church since Paul VI came in 1968.

Public works employees daubed paint on guerrilla slogans splashed on walls and firemen were washing off campaign posters from the May 26 presidential election. Street repair crews were filling in potholes and painting light poles.

President Belisario Betancur and President-elect Virgilio Barco will be among 300 people meeting John Paul Tuesday night at the presidential palace a few hours after the pontiff arrives on a flight from Rome.

The Vatican has said that the pope will give special priority to the poor. For most of his visit he will be visible to families surviving on less than $100 per year and living in grass huts and tarpaper shacks.

Five injured in explosion

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A bomb exploded on a bus in Tel Aviv today, slightly wounding five people, police said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but Israel Army Radio said 80 Palestinians had been rounded up.

The medium-sized bomb, wrapped in a plastic bag, was placed at the back of the bus running between the suburb of Petah Tikvah and Tel Aviv's central bus station, police official Aryeh Bibi said.

It exploded about 6:30 a.m., before the morning rush hour.

Dr. Nahum Winter of Ichilov Hospital's emergency ward said the five people injured would be released later today.

Bibi, head of the Yarkon police district, said a number of Palestinians from the Israeli-occupied territories were detained for questioning.

"We hope the culprit will be among them," he said on Israel Army Radio.

Kohl: Mexico to get aid

MEXICO CITY (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said his government will help Mexico as much as possible to overcome its latest economic troubles.

Kohl arrived Saturday in Mexico City to watch the West German national soccer team play against Argentina in the championship game of the World Cup soccer tournament.

He told a news conference that "Mexico is a nation with a great future and I am sure it has strength enough to come out of this crisis."

Kohl was expected to meet with President Miguel de la Madrid before returning to Bonn.

Cabinet shuffle expected

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, his government tumbling to within four points of the third-place NDP in one weekend poll, is expected to announce a midterm cabinet shuffle today.

There has been wide speculation the changes will begin right at the top, with one published report saying Deputy Prime Minister Erik Nielsen, who is also defence minister, may be shipped off to the Senate.

Transport Minister Don Mazankowski, an Albertan, is frequently mentioned as a possible successor. He has also been acting industry minister since the resignation last month of Sinclair Stevens over conflict-of-interest allegations. Energy Minister Pat Carney, who canceled a weekend trip home to Vancouver to remain in Ottawa, is also expected to move.

CHARLES A. SPENCE
PRESIDENT PUBLISHER

Dear Midland citizens:

We at the Midland Reporter-Telegram are excited about saluting the Midland area with our upcoming special section, Good News Midland.

Spreading the "good news" about Midland's schools, churches, arts, entertainment and people starts with you. Together we have worked to make Midland an enjoyable place to live. We have a great many things to promote about Midland and we want to do so in conjunction with you.

Our special section, Good News Midland, to be published Sunday, July 27, will be a salute to all of us. We will proclaim our pride in Midland. There's lots of good news about Midland and occasionally we need to pause and reflect on all the things which make our community such a great place to live. Image building, like charity, begins at home. We must first believe in our community ourselves if we are to face the challenges ahead.

FARMERS' MARKET

Fresh Texas produce and meat is available to consumers at the Midland Farmers Market.

The Farmers Market, located at the intersection of Loop 250 and Princeton, opened June 20. It opened the next day in Odessa at the Ector County Coliseum.

The market will be open every Tuesday and Friday in Midland and every Thursday and Saturday in Odessa. It will stay open until 8 p.m.

Earnest Kiker, Midland County agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said the farmers market is a direct marketing tool for area farmers.

"We've got the capability of raising top-quality crops. We've got the climate to produce top-quality produce," he said.

Kiker added that the market is in the growing process. "The produce is ripening.

Items offered at the market include beans, peas, corn and tomatoes. Ornamental plants also may be marketed. Fruits, cantaloupes, melons and additional vegetables will be offered later this summer.

"Any agricultural commodity, including livestock," can be sold, he said.

Unemployment fund may borrow federal cash

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas may have to borrow cash from Washington this week to keep its unemployment insurance trust fund afloat and unemployment checks flowing, officials say.

A giant jump in claims prompted by the state's sagging economy is taxing the fund, which is expected to give out in a matter of days, said Texas Employment Commission administrator Bill Grossenbacher.

With a balance of only $22.7 million, the fund is having to support daily payments of $6 million, and most of the employer taxes have already been collected for 1986, he said.

An 80 percent increase in claims was caused by a weakened Texas economy that pushed up unemployment to a record 9.6 percent in May, Grossenbacher said.

The situation is even worse in Louisiana, where dropping oil prices sent the jobless rate above 13 percent, the highest in the nation. Last week, its unemployment insurance fund reached a deficit of $585 million, said Dudley J. Patin Jr., Louisiana secretary of labor.

"We keep going into deficit to the tune of $100 million a year," Patin said. "It will take four to five years with a tremendous turnaround in the economy."

Oklahoma's unemployment insurance fund appears to be the healthiest of the three Southwestern states hardest hit by oil industry and related layoffs.

Although unemployment claims are up about 42 percent from this time last year, the fund's balance last week was $109.9 million, said Will Bowman, chief of research for the Oklahoma Employment Security Commission.

In the past six weeks, Oklahoma has been paying unemployment insurance benefits of about $5 million a week, Bowman said.

"Any time our fund balance drops below $25 million, the next quarter we implement a surcharge to bring it back up again," he said.

For Texas, the unemployment fund's impending deficit is serious, but there are mechanisms set up to allow benefits to continue, Grossenbacher said.

"We're concerned, but not so much about the trust fund as we are about the economy of the state. What caught us is that we now have back-to-back recessions," Grossenbacher said, referring to the 1982-83 economic downslide.

Currently, the number of workers drawing unemployment benefits hasn't surpassed the levels reached during the 1982-83 recession, Grossenbacher said. "But the payout is higher because the nature of unemployment is different from the last time. More higher-income workers are being laid off, particularly in the oil and gas industry."

During the 1982-83 recession, unemployment benefits averaged $4 million or $5 million a day, below the current $6 million a day, he said.

The amount of weekly unemployment benefits an individual can draw is directly related to his or her previous pay level. The average unemployment benefit check in Texas has been rising since January, Grossenbacher said. In January, the average weekly check was $149, and last month, the average payment was $160 a week.

The state's fund was in a deficit position in 1982 and 1983, and a temporary recovery in Texas' economy in 1984 and early 1985 allowed the state to pay back funds borrowed from the federal government. The trust fund remained in the black from August to January.

In March and April, the fund's balance dropped into a negative position only temporarily, because employer taxes were still coming into the state's coffers at a steady rate, Grossenbacher said.

To meet benefit payments through October, the Texas Employment Commission has applied for a $340 million line of credit at a 9.97 percent interest rate from the Unemployment Insurance Service, a branch of the Department of Labor.

Bush tempers political pitch with some old-time religion

DALLAS (AP) — Vice President George Bush wrapped up his latest swing through Texas, a three-day visit that included political pitches for campaign riches, with two doses of old-time religion.

Bush spoke Sunday to a leadership group of the Greek Orthodox church, meeting in Dallas for the 28th Biennial Clergy-Laity Congress, and then went on to greet a standing-room-only crowd at the First Baptist Church downtown.

Earlier in the weekend, he gave the keynote address at the annual Texas Republican convention Saturday and later one at a fund-raising dinner for U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, an Ennis Republican running for reelection.

At the Greek Orthodox gathering Sunday, Bush said he came to pay respects to Archbishop Iakovos, the spiritual leader of the church in the Western Hemisphere.

"I have found him in a very personal way...to be a tremendous source of wisdom," Bush said, adding that he was limiting his political pitch to a commendation for grassroots party workers.

But he did speak about national politics, saying he believes the Soviets will respond positively to the recent announcements that the United States will not feel constrained to follow the SALT II treaty after the end of the year.

Bush said he expects the Soviet government to respond to the action by agreeing to a meeting.

"I believe there is going to be a meeting, a meeting that can take a great step toward world peace," he said. "The reason I feel so strongly is it's in the Soviet interest, it's in our interest and it's in the interest of peace among men."

At the Greek Orthodox Congress, which runs through July 3, Archbishop Iakovos presented Bush with the Cross of St. Andrew strung on a red velvet cord. The cross is a mark of distinction that is awarded by the archbishop of the denomination.

At the First Baptist Church, Bush received a more Protestant kind of present, a pair of matching "his and her" copies of the Criswell Study Bible, prepared by Dr. W.A. Criswell, pastor.

Pews were packed and some people stood in the aisles at the downtown church as Bush gave a short invocation at the start of the morning service.

"The next time you see him here he'll be the president of the United States," Criswell said. Bush has made no formal announcement of his 1988 intentions.

Bush also made a brief stop Saturday at the office of a job-finding organization for youth. The organization receives most of its assistance from the private sector.

Religious right continues fight against magazines

By KIT FRIEDEN

DALLAS (AP) — In Tyler the sight of a bare-breasted woman in an ad for "Obsession" perfume was enough to zap Texas Monthly magazine temporarily from the shelves of local 7-Eleven stores.

At the University of Wisconsin at Madison, feminists raised a ruckus over girlie magazines on sale in the two student unions.

Across the country, chain stores like Revco, 7-Eleven and Thrifty have dropped from their merchandise Playboy, Penthouse and other adult magazines that have been mainstays for years.

"The phenomenon we are currently observing...is a trend in the last several years of the country moving to the right," said David Leibowitz, an analyst and senior vice president of American Securities in New York.

"It's a sign of the times and is not something I expect to last an extended period," he said.

But religious groups like the Mississippi-based National Federation for Decency believe the dropping of adult magazines from store racks marks a return to moral stability. Now they've set their sights on the Circle K Corp., a convenience store chain second in size only to Dallas-based Southland Corp.'s 7-Eleven convenience stores.

Since April, when Southland announced it was removing issues of Penthouse, Playboy and Forum from the 4,500 7-Elevens it owns and encouraging its 3,600 franchise-run 7-Elevens to do the same, bundles of letters have been arriving each week at the Phoenix, Ariz., office of Circle K senior Vice President Ray Cox.

Most of each week's letters come from one small town or another, and Cox said he believed they are written by churchgoers in response to Sunday sermons.

"Three weeks ago, for example, most of them came from Alta, Fla.," Cox said.

But Cox said Circle K, which operates 3,435 outlets in 25 states, has no plans to follow Southland's lead and halt sales of the seven adult magazines it stocks. They are Penthouse, Playboy, Playgirl, Oui, Genesis, Gallery and Forum.

Another chain, the Lawson Co., which operates almost 700 convenience stores in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Pennsylvania, said a recent poll of its customers indicated 55 percent favored continued sales of adult magazines, with 35 percent opposed and 10 percent who didn't care. The company pulled the magazines for the three-week balloting and said it would resume sales after "re-evaluating our merchandizing strategies."

Revco D.S. Inc. — the nation's largest drug store chain — Rite Aid Discount Pharmacies, People's Drug Stores, Dart Drug Corp., Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores and Gray Drug Fair all followed 7-Eleven's lead.

The Rev. Donald Wildmon of the National Federation for Decency contends that some 10,000 stores nationwide have pulled "pornography" from their shelves in the past few months and that a total of 20,000 stores have stopped selling adult magazines in the last two years.

An estimated 100,000 retail outlets, mainly drug and convenience stores, around the country sell adult magazines, according to John Harrington, executive vice president of the Council for Periodical Distributors Associations, an industry trade group in New York.

"Wildmon and (the Rev.) Jerry Falwell are reprogramming America," complained Bob Guccione, publisher of Penthouse.

But Wildmon says he isn't naive enough to expect to banish adult magazines from retail outlets — he just wants to make them as hard to get as they used to be.

"The difference between now and then is it was not socially acceptable. It was under the counter, it was in the sleazy shops, you got it from a sleazy person," he said in a telephone interview from his Tupelo, Miss., headquarters.

The magazines have responded to the campaign against them, claiming Southland and the others dropped their products after receiving letters in February from the U.S. Attorney General's Commission on Pornography, notifying the stores they had been identified as vendors or distributors of pornography.

Joined by the American Booksellers Association, both Playboy and Penthouse have sued the commission and Attorney General Edwin Meese III, accusing them of acting to censor and suppress distribution of the magazines.

Guccione and Playboy spokesman David Salyers said the letter from Alan Sears, executive director of the commission, would have a "chilling effect" on any company that received it.

In an editorial in the July issue of Playboy, Hugh Hefner, the magazine's founder, accused the pornography commission of making "the first successful use of a blacklist since the McCarthy era."

Firemen survey the scene of a train derailment Sunday in Orchard in which 34 cars containing sulfur and potash left the tracks, closing State Highway 36 and forcing the evacuation of nearby homes.

Train derailment forces evacuation of residents

ORCHARD, Texas (AP) — Dozens of residents were evacuated after 34 cars of a Santa Fe Railway train, some carrying molten sulfur, derailed near this town about 30 miles west of Houston, officials said.

No one was injured in the accident Sunday which also forced the closing of parts of a state highway nearby, said Jeannette Garcia, a Fort Bend sheriff's department spokeswoman. Residents returned to their homes at about noon Sunday, officials said. Officials expect state Highway 36 to remain closed today, Garcia said.

She said 26 of the train cars contained molten sulfur while the remaining eight were carrying potash.

She said two local fire departments and other emergency personnel kept the flammable substances from igniting.

Authorities believe a lost wheel on one of the cars caused the accident, Garcia said. Santa Fe officials were at the scene Sunday helping with the cleanup, she said.

Dyess AFB gets used to bombers

ABILENE (AP) — The huge B-1B bombers fly in and out of Dyess Air Force Base here daily, but they don't attract as much attention as they did a year ago when the first one arrived.

In the year since the first supersonic bomber arrived with a crowd estimated at 45,000 looking on, much has changed at Dyess Air Force Base.

It was June 29, 1985, when the world's most modern bomber landed to the cheers of the crowd. It was supposed to be a plane called the Star of Abilene, the second plane to roll off the assembly line, but problems sidelined that plane at Omaha, Neb., and the first plane built was flown here from Edward AFB, Calif., instead.

It was the first of 29 supersonic bombers scheduled for delivery to the 96th Bomb Wing here. Now there are seven of the bombers assigned to Dyess.

Instructors of the 4018th Combat Crew Training Squadron are flying them to train pilots, offensive and defensive systems officers the techniques of handling the huge Strategic Air Command bomber.

Abilene residents don't pay as much attention to the bomber's comings and goings because they see the B-1s daily as new crewmen go through training.

Almost 700 hours' flying time has been logged — first in the training of the instructors, and now in training crews to fly the 100 aircraft that will eventually be located at Dyess and three other Strategic Air Command bases.

The coming of the B-1 has brought great changes at Dyess in facilities, including expansion, construction, renovations and improvements.

Despite apology, teachers not ready to back White

HOUSTON (AP) — Teachers here are happy with Gov. Mark White's apology for stress caused by the competency test, but they say they aren't ready to endorse him for reelection.

"The big question is whether teachers are going to accept his apology," said Gayle Fallon, president of the Houston Federation of Teachers. "He finally understands it is a very difficult thing to tell people their entire career hinges on a test."

In an address to Texas Democrats meeting in Austin Saturday, White paused after a series of rebukes of his Republican opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements, and said: "Let me say a few words to our teachers.

"We asked you to take a test, and, honestly, I didn't realize the intensity of the stress that it would cause," White said. "For that, I am genuinely sorry."

Fallon said she believes meetings the governor's wife has held with teachers around the state brought home to White the intensity of the educators' feelings.

Linda Gale White met with Houston area teachers Friday. She indicated that White would work to give teachers and administrators more local control over student disciplinary problems, a major complaint from teachers about the reform law.

MARKET

Kiker encourages anyone wishing to sell produce to set up a stand.

"Just because they are not members of the association (Permian Basin Farmers Market Association) does not mean home-growers are not eligible to sell."

Producers who would like to sell in the market may contact Kiker at the TAEX office at 687-1351 or Ector County TAEX Agent Tommy Perkins at 335-3091.

Members of the association are required to pay a $10 fee each day they sell, Kiker said, while non-members pay $20.

Police Roundup

The Midland County Sheriff's Office Monday reported the burglary of a habitation. Sylvia Irma, 4822 W. Storey, told authorities a combination radio, record player and tape player was taken from a trailer house.

In other reports, Midland police reported the theft of an automobile. Leroy K. Minnix, 2500 Quail Point, told police a 1981 Mercury four-door sedan was stolen from 2700 N. Big Spring. The theft apparently occurred between 7 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Kay Purdy, 1903 W. Texas, told police a Winchester .30 caliber rifle valued at $140 was stolen from a residence at 4612 Seminole. The item was apparently taken Sunday between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Midlander injured in one-car mishap

From Staff Reports

An 18-year-old Midland man suffered minor injuries late Sunday in a one-car accident.

Police said James Randy Holman, 2438 Whitmire, was eastbound in the left lane in the 4200 block of Loop 250 when his vehicle drove off the roadway, swerved back to the right and hit a curb at the intersection of Stillmeadow Dr. His vehicle rolled over, threw Holman out and landed on the median, police said.

He suffered multiple contusions and lacerations and was treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital, a MMH spokeswoman said.

Robots begin rolling into homes

King Features Syndicate

"Hello. I am Hero 1, your personal robot," drones the gnome-like android. "I have a brain, just like you. I do just as I am programmed."

The two-foot-tall computerized robot, which resembles R2-D2 of Star Wars, stretches an extendable arm and flexes its mechanized hand as its electronically synthesized voice cheerfully announces, "It sure feels great to be out of that damn carton."

Aside from tossing out wisecracks, Hero 1 can converse in several tongues. Its ultrasonic sensors enable it to follow you around the house while avoiding tables, chairs and other obstacles.

It can sing songs, recite nursery rhymes, remind you of birthdays and anniversaries. It can serve you a drink and it can be programmed like an alarm clock to trundle its way to the edge of the bed to nudge you awake each morning.

Domestic robots still can't do major housework, iron or mow the lawn, but they're cute — if expensive — additions to the household. Some day in the future they may be able to take over the chores, but not yet.

The 18-kilogram Hero 1 boasts its own artificial intelligence in the form of an on-board microprocessor with a keyboard, which can be used like a regular computer. And at night, punch in a code and the robot becomes a vigilant protector of home and hearth. Should its light, sound and movement detectors indicate the presence of an intruder, the robot issues a verbal warning; if it doesn't hear the correct password, it triggers a remote burglar alarm.

CNB Graphic

ONCE RESTRICTED to fanciful science-fiction movies such as "Forbidden Planet" and "Star Trek," robots that walk, talk and compute are no longer merely products of the imagination.

Dozens of the smart, personable robots are being used by Canadian companies for promotional appearances in shopping malls and at trade conventions. Hero 1, designed primarily as an educational aid, is on display at the Ontario Science Center in Toronto and in the Future Pod exhibit at Ontario Place.

The Toronto Humane Society and the computer science division of Centennial College also use robots for instructions. (Five hundred Heroes have been sent to Japan to help train assembly-line workers.)

Canada's sole model of ComRo TOT — a diligent domestic that can vacuum carpets and perform other light household chores — currently resides at Paslode Canada, an electronics firm in Scarborough, Ont.

The ComRo can be rented out for house parties: When it finishes greeting guests and wheeling around drinks and snacks, its compact, built-in TV and cassette player provide the entertainment.

High-tech companies are competing for the lead in domestic robotics, an industry teetering on the threshold of the future.

Androbot Inc. of San Jose, Calif., founded by Nolan Bushnell, inventor of the video game and prime mover of the Atari Corporation, makes a robot called BOB (Brains on Board).

The Heath Company manufactures Hero 1, and ComRo Inc. is the proud parent of ComRo TOT. Although such products are still in their infancy, says Garry Harris, marketing manager of the Heath Company, "there is no question that the personal robot is here to stay."

THE PRICE of these early offspring of the future ranges from about $1,800 (for a Hero model with an arm and a voice) to $6,000 for the more sophisticated ComRo TOT.

Industrial robotics experts used to say that a really useful household robot that could wash the dishes and make the beds would have to cost from $50,000 to $100,000 and would need to be far more complicated than the factory marvels.

(Industrial robots have been around for years, operating mainly in factory assembly-line settings. Most of them are powerful mechanical arms that work precisely and tirelessly, not cute little mechanical men like Hero 1, which would be useless on a factory floor.) Still, the current domestic androids are a start.

The first wave of personal robots feature elaborate visual sensors that can tell an object's shape, size and distance. This means they can be programmed to do such things as pick up a drink and carry it to you out on the patio. The glass, however, must always be picked up in exactly the same spot and delivered to the same precise location.

So far, only about 1,000 North American households have opened their doors to the pioneer robots. Purchasers of domestic robots include high-tech hobbyists, educators and parents. A few enthusiasts have even built their own.

Fourteen-year-old Andrew Jones, who assembled his Hero 1 from a kit, finds his friends much impressed by his unique companion, which has been named Herman.

"I once got home and found a whole herd of people gathered around it," Andrew recalls. "They were trying to get it to repeat its routines. It was kind of funny, because Herman just stood there."

ALTHOUGH HERMAN doesn't get around the Jones house too much (Herman isn't too happy about the thick carpeting; the traction isn't very good), the android has become a welcome addition to the Jones family.

Says Andrew's mother, Lillian, a widowed homemaker, "Andrew has been working with electronics equipment since he was 8. I figured he needed something to do in the summer because he's not interested in sports, and thought the robot would be an excellent pastime."

As it turns out, Herman has provided "an education for my daughter and myself, as well. Maybe one day it will be able to clear the table of dishes and wash them too," she suggests, "although Herman has already told us it doesn't vacuum or do windows. Still, goodness knows where we're going from here!"

Several obstacles must be overcome before the robot-about-the-house can scrub washrooms or polish the silverware.

Robot vision is a thorny problem for inventors. To operate safely in an apartment or home, robots must be able to distinguish between, say, a picture window and a solid wall, or to recognize a rare antique.

Even the most visually advanced of today's home robots, Androbot's BOB, can have difficulty negotiating a standard living room.

"I see these little machines — personoids, as I prefer to call them — as representing the last phase in the complete mechanization of society," concludes Arnold Rockman, a sociologist at York University's Atkinson College.

PROFESSOR ROCKMAN believes that in our lifetime we will witness an invasion of mass-produced domestic androids selling for less than $100. Robots, he says, are not only practical — they appeal to our sense of personal power.

"On a deep, mythic level they allow us to be like gods or sorcerers who command and are instantly obeyed. You can have these little slaves, yet feel perfectly moral.

DEAR ABBY

Parents' vacation no picnic for offspring

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I would be writing to you, but I just had to after reading the letter from the mother who wanted to know how long was too long for a vist with her children. She kept saying how she was no trouble — she didn't need her own room, and liked to spend the day watching game shows, having morning coffee, reading, and going to movies and playing cards. Abby, she may think that is no trouble, but please read on:

My husband and I live in a small two-bedroom apartment, 3,000 miles from my in-laws. They stayed with us for two weeks, and it was the worst two weeks of my life. They acted like they were on vacation and I was the hotel maid. I'm sure they felt that they were perfect houseguests, but that was not the case.

They stayed in the second bedroom and had the TV on constantly (and loudly), which almost drove me crazy, especially when I was trying to work or sleep. When they were not watching TV, they wanted us to go with them to places I had no interest in going to. If I said I did not want to go, they tried to make me feel guilty about it. Cooking for four is much more work than cooking for two. They offered to help after all the work was done. Let's not forget the digs about my working instead of staying home to clean, cook and raise a family.

Please, Abby, tell parents that if they want a vacation, the best place for them to stay is in a hotel. Sign me ... THE REST OF THE STORY

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Perplexed Mother" who heard through the grapevine that some of her children think she overstays her welcome in their homes: She should ask herself these questions, and be completely honest when answering them:

1. Does Mother invite herself? (It's natural to resent houseguests who come to visit when it's convenient for them without considering their hosts.)

2. Is Mother critical of her married children and their spouses? (Some mothers assume they have a right to criticize their children's cooking, housekeeping, child-rearing, clothing, friends, habits, etc. They refuse to accept their children as the adults they are.)

3. Is Mother inflexible in her habits? (If she cannot tolerate changes in her daily routine, she should stay home. It's unreasonable and rude to expect a whole family to alter its routines to accommodate her. By the way, this applies equally to children visiting their parents.)

4. Does Mother disappear once in a while to allow her children some private time together?

Please print this, Abby. I want to send it to my mother-in-law. She also insists that she's "really no touble at all." If that were true, it wouldn't take us weeks to get over one of her "short" visits: So, "Perplexed Mother" — clean up your act, and your children will welcome you with open arms. — NOT PERPLEXED AT ALL

DEAR NOT PERPLEXED: Read on for the flip side of that problem:

DEAR ABBY: I know that not everyone is what he or she appears to be, but the woman who signed herself "Perplexed Mother" sounds like she's very easy to get along with. My parents visit us once a year — twice if we're lucky. And when they do, we give them our bedroom and bath (if we can convince them to take it). We arrange to take our vacations while they're here, so we can spend as much time with them as possible. We even plan a few outings during their stay, but we never seem to have enough time together, and when they leave, we are all teary-eyed.

God gave most of us very loving, unselfish parents with no guarantee of how long we'll be blessed with them. I hope children everywhere, grown and not-so-grown, will take stock of how much love and respect they give their parents. Children get only one chance to return some of the love, patience, sacrifice and concern their parents have dished out while raising us, so don't wait until it's too late. — THEIR "GROWN-UP" CHILD IN MARRERO, LA.

DEAR CHILD: Amen!

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Tuesday, July 1, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will find new peace of mind. A financial situation is reversed. You make steady gains after October. Limit travel and stay close to home as much as possible. Family relationships take on a new luster. You are willing to make concessions that will contribute to domestic harmony.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Barbara Whinney of "St. Elsewhere," actresses Olivia de Havilland, Karen Black and Genevieve Bujold, comedian Dan Aykroyd, Diana, Princess of Wales, actor Jamie Farr, Tab Hunter, choreographer Twyla Tharp.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Security arrangements may need to be revised. Let go of those guilt feelings that are dragging you down. It is time to forgive yourself for a mistake and put it behind you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Nobody loves luxury more than you do, but this is not the time to indulge yourself. Instead, concentrate on building savings. Be prepared to deal swiftly with the unexpected. Romance is triumphant.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Other people will be unpredictable today. Develop a better knowledge of your nutritional needs. Spending too much money on personal pleasures would be a mistake. Ask loved ones' help in keeping expenses down.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A vacation trip may be just what the doctor ordered. Someone who loves you makes a wonderful gesture. Children could be difficult to handle. Current financial conditions favor your efforts. Be persistent.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work quietly and you will become more efficient. Those in charge place a higher value on your services. Staying in the background now will bring big benefits in the near future. Have fun tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Determine your priorities and pursue them with enthusiasm. It is time to get off the fence. You have most of the answers and no longer need to lean so hard on others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do your homework before entering negotiations or attending a staff meeting. You will get a chance to impress an authority figure if you are well-prepared. Wield power in an enlightened way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It is time to get off your own back. Most of the pressure you are under is self-imposed. Recognize your strengths. You are highly creative and possess lots of common sense!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Plan a family reunion but make sure you are not expected to pick up the tab. Self-improvement activities are favored. Make sure your personal appearance is an asset. Get better organized at work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Perseverance makes you a winner! Forget taking shortcuts. Hard work and creativity will bring the financial rewards you seek. Be independent but not stubborn. Good news arrives from a sibling.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A conflict at work is finally resolved. Postpone signing documents and agreements. Let others take the lead for a while. You learn a lot from watching their mneuvers. Relax during your lunch hour.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Additional training will lead to higher income and better job security. Review your options. A real estate sale could affect your earning power. Be careful to give credit where it is due.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1054 ♡J8 ◇AJ76 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Since partner passed originally, we hold out little hope for game. We also feel it is quite probable you have no better spot to play the hand than in hearts—you know partner has at least a five-card suit. We suggest you pass. To bid two spades is unlikely to improve matters, and you are nowhere near strong enough for three diamonds.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK765 ♡AKQJ7 ◇93 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ◇	Dble	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—We are not inclined to remove partner's low-level penalty doubles, especially when we would still be 3-to-1 favorites to win the rubber. However, here your chances for slam are distinct and game seems a certainty. We would advise partner of that by jumping to three hearts.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ6 ♡Q872 ◇Q9 ♣A104
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	?,

What do you bid now?
A.—Not only don't we think your side can make game, we believe even three spades could be too high! You and West have at least 33 points between you, leaving only 7 points for the other two hands combined. Even if partner holds most of those, we doubt whether four spades would be viable. Pass.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ1063 ♡A8 ◇765 ♣Q63
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♡	2 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—East's overcall has stymied you. If you play five-card-major opening bids, you might venture two hearts. Otherwise, you have to pass and hope that partner reopens. The one bid you can't make is two spades; that would be forcing to game except in the sequence where responder rebids his suit at the three-level.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K87 ♡A10654 ◇Q8 ♣742
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East

What do you bid now?
A.—That fifth heart is awfully tempting, but don't let it lead you astray. If you switched it for a low diamond, it would make little difference to the value of your hand and your action would be clearer. Bid two hearts. It needs a move from partner if this hand is going to produce game.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ76 ♡K8 ◇852 ♣653
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	1 NT	Pass
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—If you think partner has a reasonable hand, you are probably mistaken. He did not have the hand for a takeout double of one diamond or a heart suit good enough to bid at the one-level. Therefore, don't penalize him for refusing to sell out to the opponents at too low a level. Pass.

Johnny Carson fulfills salesman's dream

Carson

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — An arts supply salesman wouldn't take 'no' for an answer and after flooding Johnny Carson with requests finally got the part he had long dreamed of: bellowing "Heeeere's Johnny."

John Searing, 36, of Caldwell, N.J., introduced Carson on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" on Thursday night.

He first wrote Carson in 1980, asking whether he could do the introduction, traditionally done by Ed McMahon. He received a photo of Carson but that was it. He renewed his efforts in November.

"I knew more letters would be intercepted, so I had to do something a little bit creative, something a little bizarre, to get somebody's attention," he said Sunday. His attempts to win the role included sending 500 letters and a tape.

"They called me at work and said, 'John, what the heck are you doing? Why are you obsessed with doing this?'" Searing recalled.

Last week, Carson's production company flew Searing to California, and he got his chance.

"It certainly was the highlight of my life, because I'd watched the show for so many years," said Searing.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Kip Adotta will be master of ceremonies at a benefit concert tonight for the families of Rick Nelson's Stone Canyon Band and crew.

Among those scheduled to perform at the $22.50-a-seat show are Mick Fleetwood & The Zoo, which features many alumni from the Stone Canyon Band.

Nelson, 45, his fiancee, 27-year-old Helen Blair, and five members of his band were killed last New Year's Eve on their way to a performance in Dallas when their smoke-filled DC-3 crashed and burned near DeKalb, Texas.

Prince

SHERIDAN, Wyo. (AP) — Reclusive rock star Prince will be here Tuesday as promised for the premiere of his movie "Under the Cherry Moon" even though buses may have to be substituted for limousines, organizers say.

Buses may be used because it has been difficult to find limousines for the yet unidentified celebrities expected to attend the premiere, said Diane Abrams, of Warner Bros. Inc., who is trying to coordinate the hoopla.

Officials also have encountered some difficulties finding a place to roll out the red carpet at the Centennial Twin Theaters, she said.

The visit is the result of a Sheridan girl's telephone call to MTV, the music video cable television station. Lisa Barber was the 10,000th caller in a competition to serve as host for the premiere of the film and act as Prince's escort for the movie and a party.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Hong Kong native Alec Chein dazzled the audience and judges with his light-hearted playing of Saint-Saens' Concerto No. 2 in G Minor to win the eighth Utah Symphony Gina Bachauer International Piano Competition.

Chein, 33, was selected for the grand prize by an international jury. In all, 58 pianists representing 23 countries were selected from 150 applicants for the 10-days of competition.

The six finalists performed their pieces with the orchestra on Friday and Saturday nights.

Chein, who is chairman of the piano department at Allegheny College in Meadville, Pa., received a lengthy standing ovation from the capacity Symphony Hall crowd of 2,800 following his final performance Saturday night.

The grand prize includes a gold medal, $3,000, a Steinway grand piano, a recital debut in the Lincoln Center in New York and a solo engagement with the Utah Symphony.

Chein also won the audience vote and a $500 prize by a 7-1 margin over his nearest competitor

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — When Sarah Ferguson marries Britain's Prince Andrew on July 23, the bride may find herself upstaged by the groom's nephew, 4-year-old Prince William, making his first public appearance as a working royal, People magazine reports.

William, who is called Wills by his parents, Prince Charles and Princess Diana, will be a page at the wedding along with his cousin Peter Phillips, 8, son of Princess Anne; Andrew Ferguson, 7, half-brother of Miss Ferguson, and her nephew, Seamus Makin, 5.

"William's very enthusiastic about things," People quoted Princess Diana as saying of her son in its edition of July 7. "He pushes himself right into it. Harry (the royal couple's second son) is quieter and just watches. No. 2 skates in quite nicely. But the bad luck about being No. 1 is trial and error, so we're open-minded about William."

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell in early European trading today as the market reacted to the unexpectedly high U.S. trade deficit for May.. Gold prices were slightly higher.

Dealers said the market was generally bearish on the dollar and Friday's news that the May trade deficit was $14.21 billion, well above market expectations of around $13 billion, pushed the dollar lower.

But traders said they didn't expect any steep falls because of the possibility of central bank intervention to support the dollar.

In Tokyo, dealers said the Bank of Japan intervened but failed to stop the dollar falling for the fifth trading day.

The dollar closed at 163.95 yen, sharply lower than Friday's close of 165.85 yen and its lowest level since May 15 when it hit 162.70 yen. Later, in London, it was unchanged at 163.95 yen.

In London, the pound was stronger, selling at $1.5335 compared with $1.52875 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates compared with late Friday's:

—2.194 West German marks, down from 2.211

—7.0075 French francs, down from 7.055

—1.3881 Canadian dollars, down from 1.39

Gold prices firmed in nervous early European trading as active speculative buying in the silver market prompted light fresh interest in gold, bullion dealers said.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended trading price of $345.50 a troy ounce at midmorning, up from $344 late Friday.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was also selling at $345.50, up from $345 last Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of $1.72 to close at $345.37 compared with Saturday's $343.65.

Silver prices were also higher in London where the metal was selling at a bid $5.04 a troy ounce compared with $5.02 late Friday.

New orders for machine tools show 7.2 percent rise in May

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — New orders for American machine tools rose 7.2 percent in May from April's level, according to a report released Sunday by the National Machine Tool Builders' Association.

Despite the month-to-month increase, new orders in April were 7 percent below their year-ago level. And total orders for the first five months of the year were down 10.4 percent from the comparable period last year.

"While it is good to see a rise in orders for May, it is important to maintain your perspective when considering these figures," said James A. Gray, president of the association.

Analysts said that the month-to-month gain reflected typical seasonal order habits by customers and was not necessarily a harbinger of better times for the industry. They said the level of new orders would not likely improve strongly until tax legislation was completed by Congress.

They attributed the decline in the five-month period to sluggish industrial growth and uncertainty over how the proposed tax legislation would affect capital spending.

The trade association said that new orders for machine tools rose to $207.2 million, from $193.25 million in April.

Sales of machine tools, power-driven devices used to shape most metal parts from tractor gears to vacuum cleaner motors, are an important indicator of capital spending by producers of metal products, mainly the automobile, aerospace and manufacturing industries.

Gray said that the industry was encouraged by President Reagan's decision to negotiate so-called voluntary export restraint pacts with countries that were principal foreign suppliers of machine tools. "We are optimistic about the positive effects that will be felt in our industry," he said.

Still, these have been difficult times for American machine tool makers, who have complained that imports accounted for about 41 percent of the domestic machine tool market in 1985, up from 34 percent in 1983, when the trade association began to press for import restraints from the government.

"We would have expected things to be a little stronger, but there seems to be a lot of indecision on the part of buyers, mostly because of the tax situation," said John Hinnendael, vice president of the Cross & Trecker Corp., a machine tool maker based in Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

"We feel the inventory of Japanese machines that came in under the old exchange rate is working down and the tax bill seems closer to being passed in Congress," he said. "We think the underlying signs are in the right direction."

Some analysts were less optimistic. "Right now, I don't think there is a lot of optimism in the industry," said Larry D. Hollis, an analyst with Robert W. Baird & Co. in Milwaukee.

Information service links buyers, sellers

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Oil industry buyers and sellers have another new network for making contact with others in the market for virtually anything related to the petroleum business.

The Production Exchange, based in Bakersfield, Calif., is an information service accepting listings for a variety of properties, interests and equipment. The newsletter claims 5,000 contacts throughout the industry, to whom the publication is mailed free of charge every month. Producers and operators, exploration companies, landmen, consultants, geologists, drilling and equipment companies, banks and investment firms are included on the firm's distribution list.

The publication covers the Rocky Mountain, Mid-Continent, and Pacific Coast regions as well as the state of Texas.

Listings are accepted for producing properties; sealed bid packages; development drilling programs; royalty interests; non-producing mineral rights; farmout and farmin prospects; seismic and well data; equipment; and drilling partnerships — all on either a for-sale or want-to-purchase basis.

For a monthly listing fee of $175, buyers and sellers write their own listings, so it reads to their own satisfaction. No commissions or fees are charged in association with sales pursuant to a listing with the service.

Blind return and forwarding service is provided to allow confidentiality for sellers.

Deadline for listing is the fifth of the month for inclusion in the newsletter which is mailed on the 15th.

GM expands financing

New York Times News Service

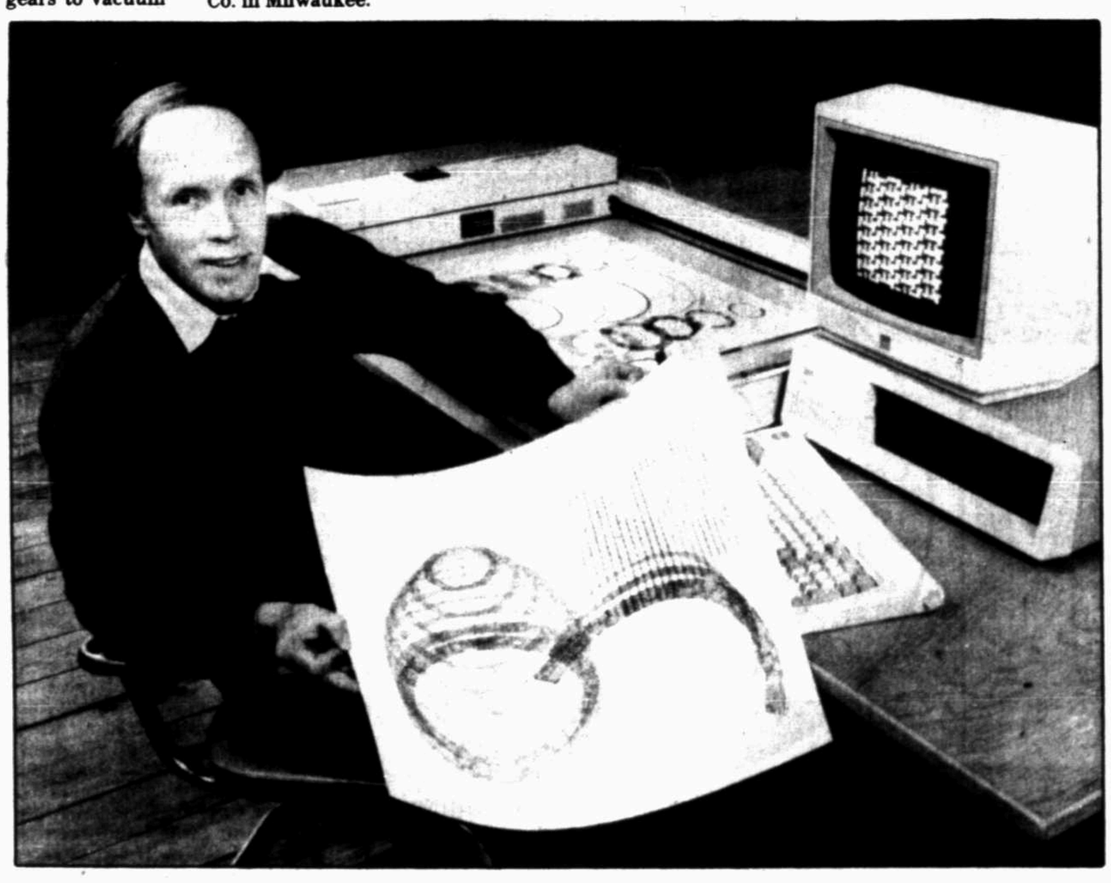

NEW YORK — The General Motors Corp. said on Sunday that it would expand its 5.9 annual percentage rate financing program to six more models starting July 1. The move, which was expected, increases to 10 the number of car models in the program.

The Spectrum, Nova, Chevrolet Celebrity, Pontiac 6000, Oldsmobile Cutlass Ciera, and Buick Century will now be available through the financing program, joining the Chevrolet Chevette, Pontiac Fiero, Oldsmobile Delta 88, and Buick LeSabre.

The 5.9 annual percentage rate is available on 30-month contracts.

In addition, GM will offer 6.9 percent financing on 36-month contracts, 8.9 percent for 48 months and 9.9 percent for 60 months on all GM cars except the Pontiac Grand Am, Oldsmobile Firenza, Buick Skyhawk, and Cadillac Cimarron.

On light trucks, from July 1 through Sept. 24. General Motors said it would offer 6.9 percent financing on 36-month contracts, 7.9 percent on 48-month contracts and 8.9 percent on 60-month contracts.

Six states increase motor fuel tax

Copley News Service

Six states will boost motor fuel taxes July 1, timing the hike to catch not only the family vacationer, but all interstate motor carriers — truck and buses — as well.

After the July 1 increase, the average state gasoline tax will be 12.9 cents per gallon, but the average state tax on diesel fuel, the kind used by truckers, will be 13.3 cents per gallon, according to data collected by the Highway Users Federation.

Increases are scheduled for the cross-country "corridor states" of Colorado, Kentucky, Tennessee and Nebraska along portal states of Connecticut and Virginia.

After July 1, Nebraska will have the highest tax on gasoline, 19 cents per gallon, but Colorado will have the highest motor fuel tax — 20.5 cents per gallon on diesel fuel.

California motor fuel taxes are 9 cents per gallon on both gasoline and diesel fuel. At the low end of the range is Missouri, with 7 cents per gallon tax on both gasoline and diesel fuel.

In addition to the state fuel taxes, users pay federal taxes of 9 cents per gallon on gasoline and 15 cents per gallon on diesel.

A year ago, 11 states — Arizona, Arkansas, Hawaii, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, Oklahoma, Oregon and Tennessee — raised fuel taxes. Increases are being considered in Illinois, Louisiana, New Jersey and South Carolina.

Trucking officials say it is not reasonable to avoid high-tax states in favor of another route because of the cost of additional mileage and lost time. Freight haulers have little recourse but to pay the additional costs and pass them on to shippers, he said.

Arizona is the most expensive state, overall. The cost of driving a five-axle semi-trailer truck 400 miles across Arizona would be $48 based on a motor fuel tax of 16 cents per gallon. At four miles per gallon for a truck, it is four cents tax per mile in addition to a ton-mile tax of eight cents per mile. Buses pay a similar cost, but because they are somewhat lighter in weight, on a lower scale.

Shell dealer switches due to boycott

CHRISTOPHER, Ill. (AP) — A Southern Illinois service station is the second in the nation to switch brands because of a mineworkers' boycott aimed at Shell Oil Co. business in South Africa.

Tim Janello of Christopher took the action when the United Mine Workers' boycott started hurting his sales, said Ken Zinn, a UMW representative in Washington.

"The first was in Varney, W. Va., another coal-mining area," Zinn said. "He decided about three days after we began the boycott in January that he was taking down the signs and, now, he's selling unbranded gasoline."

Janello's wife, Sybill, said they became a Phillips Petroleum Co. dealer three months ago in part because of a sharp drop in sales to coal miners who had been regular customers.

"It wasn't only the boycott," Mrs. Janello, 30, said Monday. "We had other problems with Shell, but it was a major factor."

Sales declined from 2,700 to 3,000 gallons of gasoline daily to 2,200 to 2,500 per day, but returned to normal after the change in brands, she said.

The 250,000-member UMW, with an estimated 18,800 members in Illinois, began the Shell boycott at the urging of black trade unionists in South Africa, Zinn said.

"They're heavily invested in South Africa and also known as a union-buster in that country," he explained. "Our intention is to make Shell's presence in South Africa as unprofitable here as it is profitable for them in that country."

At Shell's Houston headquarters, spokesman Tony Canino said it is the parent company, Royal Dutch Shell, which has holdings in South Africa — not Houston-based Shell Oil.

Canino said the boycott has had little effect on the company but has hurt Shell dealers and jobbers.

"That's most unfortunate and unfair," he said. "Certainly, we are concerned about ones who are picketed or do see a temporary or even a longer-lasting decline in their sales.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Gulf Coast drilling tumbles to record low

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Drilling off the coasts of Louisiana and Texas dropped to a record low last week even before Hurricane Bonnie temporarily forced a halt to work in the area.

Close to one in four rigs in the Gulf of Mexico were under contract last week, according to Offshore Data Services, a Houston newsletter that tracks the offshore drilling fleet worldwide.

Sixty-eight rigs were contracted last week from a Gulf fleet of 246 for a utilization rate of 27.6 percent. Last year, 190 rigs were working in the Gulf and 67 were idle.

Lawsuit filed over Kerr-McGee accident

STIGLER, Okla. (AP) — More than 50 Haskell County families have filed a lawsuit seeking $110 million in damages from Kerr-McGee Corp. for alleged injuries suffered from fumes released during a Jan. 4 accident at the company's Sequoyah Fuels plant.

Businesses seek easing of trade restrictions

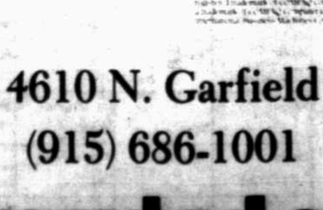

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American businesses, citing President Reagan's pledge to expand trade with the Soviet Union, urged the administration to drop some of its restrictions on U.S. exports to that country.

Stephen DeLaMater, speaking on behalf of the Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association, told a House commerce subcommittee that export restrictions on oil and gas exploration and production equipment have cost U.S. companies more than $100 million in lost sales.

Stock Market Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained more ground today, picking up where it left off in last week's advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 12.24 to 1,897.50 by noontime on Wall Street, once again bidding to break the record closing high of 1,885.90 it set on June 6.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 3 to 2 in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

On several occasions last week, the Dow Jones industrial average made runs past 1,885 toward 1,900. Twice, on Wednesday and again on Friday, it closed less than a point short of a new high.

Panhandle Eastern led the active list and rose ⅞ to 49⅝. An investment partnership offered to acquire the company for $50 a share in cash and preferred stock.

Sanders Associates gained ½ to 51. The company has rejected a $44-a-share bid from Loral Corp.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines was up ⅝ at 147⅝; American Telephone & Telegraph ¼ at 25⅝, and American Express 1¼ at 63⅛.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .80 to 143.98. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .84 at 283.97.

Volume on the Big Board came to 55.45 million shares at noontime, against 62.02 million at the same point Friday.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

CDs in 'gift to minors' accounts custodial until child's maturity

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I became a grandfather for the first time in September 1983. I put $5,000 into a certificate of deposit for the little boy. The CD is registered in my name as custodian for his name under the gift to minors act and uses his Social Security number.

A second grandchild will be born soon. I can't afford the same gift.

The CD I bought for the first grandchild will be worth $10,000 when it matures in 1990. Can I then split the money, leaving $5,000 in a CD for the first grandchild and putting $5,000 in another CD for the second grandchild?

A. Nope. That would amount to stealing money from your first grandchild. When you give money or securities under the gift to minors act, you make an irrevocable gift.

Doyle

The $5,000 you put into that CD and all interest it earns belong to your first grandchild. You can't take part of it and give it to another grandchild or anyone else.

Nor can you use that money for your own purposes. As custodian of the gift to minors account, you are responsible for holding, managing, investing and reinvesting the "custodial property" for the benefit of the minor. Summed up, you are prohibited from dipping into your first grandchild's CD.

When he reaches the age of majority under the gift to minors statutes, which varies from 18 to 21 in different states, you'll be required to turn the custodial property over to him. At that point, he'll be able to demand an accounting of your custodianship.

• • •

Q. I have three sons, seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Every Christmas, I send each a check for $1,000 to $5,000. I would like to start sending them stocks I own.

The stocks were bought many years ago and most have at least doubled or tripled in value. If I give them to my family members, what value must they place on these stocks?

A. The "basis" — cost for tax purposes — of securities received as a gift is the donor's basis, if the securities are later sold at a profit.

Let's say you bought 100 shares of XYZ stock at $10 a share and XYZ's market value now is $30 a share. Say you give those 100 shares to a son. Your basis was $10 a share. His basis becomes $10 a share. If he sells, his profit per share is the difference between his $10 basis and his selling price.

On gift stock later sold at a loss, the recipient's basis is the donor's basis or the market value on the date of the gift — whichever is higher.

• • •

Q. I intend to give stocks I own to family members. Because of stock splits and stock dividends, the number of shares has greatly increased since my purchase. I'm at a loss to figure my basis per share. How do I do this?

A. Very carefully, always remembering that stock splits and stock dividends simply increase the number of shares you own but do not change your original total basis.

Using our old standby XYZ, we'll say you bought 100 shares at $10. Your total basis is $1,000. Your basis per share was $10. We'll say, as the result of stock splits and/or stock dividends, you now own 400 shares.

Your total basis remains $1,000. Your basis per share now is $2.50. The per share basis is arrived at by dividing your $1,000 total basis by the 400 shares you now own.

You should figure the basis on every stock you give away and provide the correct numbers to the beneficiaries of your generosity. They'll have to know the per share basis, so they can report their profits correctly on their income tax returns if they ever sell the stocks.

Calculating the per share basis on some stocks can get mighty complicated, especially when there have been numerous splits, stock dividends, reinvested dividends and such things as "spin-offs." Those situations often require assistance from good accountants.

Travel abroad better than ever due to low rates, availability

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — By now, John Ueberroth says, many Americans are convinced that this isn't the year for a foreign vacation, due in part to terrorism, and to some extent to the dollar's decline.

But this very mental disposition, said Ueberroth, may be a reason for some people to change their plans and go abroad.

Because of canceled reservations in Europe and other areas, hotels are available, trains aren't packed, people are friendlier, and prices might be scaled down, said Ueberroth, president of Carlson Travel Group.

Carlson makes its money on travel, of course, but Ueberroth maintains that his advice doesn't emanate from a vested interest. In fact, his company, which claims to be North America's largest travel organization, could even be hurt.

This year, he maintains, a lot of people are going to have the best vacations of their lives by going to places that others are disinclined to visit, particularly Europe, but also Mexico and some domestic spots.

Mexican travel isn't doing well at all, according to Ueberroth, who helped brother Peter, now the baseball commissioner, build First Travel Corporation, which included the national network of Ask Mr. Foster travel agencies.

In 1979, the brothers sold First Travel to Carlson Companies, Inc., a huge, privately held Minneapolis-based company. John stayed on to run the travel company for founder Curt Carlson, and Peter began staging the 1984 Olympics.

Merged with Carlson's other travel interests, and continuing to grow from within, Carlson Travel Group expects to approach $2 billion in revenue this year.

Exclude American Express' revenue from travelers checks, said Ueberroth — "That's banking, not travel" — and Carlson Group claims to be the largest travel company in the United States.

Among its components are Ask Mr. Foster and Neiman-Marcus Travel Service; P. Lawson Travel Ltd., Canada's largest agency; Cartan Tours, Inc., a packager of deluxe trips to exotic sites; Group Travel Unlimited, a specialist in corporate meetings; Firsttours, a travel wholesaler; and Don's Travel, one of the largest corporate travel agencies.

Presiding over them all, John Ueberroth speaks about travel with the fluency and authority his brother has in sports. And since his companies make money in almost every area of the Earth, he claims to speak impartially.

As an individual and a family man, Europe attracts him. The crowds will be down and the level of danger won't be appreciably higher, he says, adding: "New York City is dangerous too."

Mexico is a buy. For reasons that aren't completely clear, the beach communities of Mexico aren't doing well. Some people, he agreed, think of Mexico as intolerably hot in summer. "It's cooler than you think," he says.

Perhaps because it is apart from mainland United States, Hawaii seems to have been hurt by the fear of distant travel, and so offers an intriguing possibility for the family that had planned to limit their vacation this year.

New York City offers possibilities. With the big Statue of Liberty show scheduled next week, many hotels still have plenty of rooms available, according to Ueberroth. The reason, he feels, is that many individuals and families feared that big media promotions would create a crush.

On the North American mainland there is no question about where the crowds are heading, and that's to Vancouver, B.C. All Carlson Travel tours were sold out by March, even though the company anchored a ship to use as a hotel.

Taking advantage of Mediterranean cancellations, the company chartered a ship belonging to K Lines of Greece, and brought it to Vancouver, where it is expected to house 9,800 tourists for four-day stays over the period of a month.

Program lets college students juggle jobs, maintain courses

BEREA, Ky. (AP) — Evelyn Joran-Thiel studies nursing at Berea College, but 10 hours a week you can find her picking buds off potted plants, watering shrubs or caring for flowers in the school's greenhouse.

The nursing is part of her academic endeavors, the greenhouse work part of the college's unusual labor program.

"I think it's a neat opportunity to learn about different things," said Mrs. Joran-Thiel, 26, a senior from Leesburg, Va. "It's like a double major. It's an opportunity for some variety."

While at Berea, she has worked in a community-service program and food service and as a printer, writer and gymnastics assistant.

"I wanted to learn more about plants, but in the nursing curriculum this was the only way to get some of that experience," Mrs. Joran-Thiel said.

All of Berea's 1,500 students must work a minimum of 10 hours a week in the labor program while enrolled. The requirement is part of the school's heritage dating to 1859.

Berea College, located about 40 miles south of Lexington, was founded by the Rev. John G. Fee and abolitionist Cassius M. Clay for the purpose of providing quality liberal arts education at low cost.

The picturesque college charges no tuition, admits only low-income students and requires all students to work in the labor program. About 80 percent of the students come from the southern Appalachia area and Kentucky.

There are five levels, with 10 grades in each level that marks a student's rank and progress in the labor program.

"We depend on the students to run the programs," said William Ramsay, director of student affairs. "The jobs aren't artificially contrived. They're real and they're important to the college."

Among the many jobs in the 120 labor departments are janitors, landscapers, computer programmers, furniture makers, crafts, teaching assistants and tour guides.

About 300 students work in basic-need areas of food service, health care and maintenance while about 400 are employed in academic programs, 150 in crafts, 100 in community service, 200 in administration and 150 at the Boone Tavern Hotel.

During the past school year, the college paid out $1.8 million to students in the labor program. Student salaries range from $1.20 to $2.75 an hour, depending on level and grade, and they can earn from $380 to $1,800 in an academic year.

"The program is a hierarchy that leads to leadership," said Dorothy Coffey, coordinator of career development. "It's like a mini civil-service system. A student can assume a tremendous amount of responsibility for work on campus."

She said students must agree to a work contract before they can register for classes.

Several schools have labor programs, including Warren Wilson College in Swannanoa, N.C., Blackburn College in Carlinville, Ill., and School of the Ozarks in Point Lookout, Mo. Some other schools feature one but do not require students to participate.

However, Berea's is different from the rest because of the range of positions and the degrees of responsibility it places on students, said Ann Ford, news bureau director at Berea. The labor program also is built into the school's purpose and pays students directly for their work, she said.

Ramsay said most of the students are motivated to excel in academics and the work program.

"Our students see education as a way out" of low-income levels, he said. He added that number of students dropping out "is very, very low. Usually a person failing in work is failing in academics."

While Mrs. Joran-Thiel prefers different labor experiences, many of the students are involved in work programs directly related to their studies.

Kenneth Rogers, 22, is a senior hotel-management major from Brevard, N.C. He has spent his Berea years at the college-owned Boone Tavern, starting as a waiter and working up to a desk manager.

"When I leave here, people (employers) will be impressed with the work I have experienced," said Rogers, who will work on a cruise ship in California this summer.

Americans take liberties for granted, Justice Burger says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren Burger foresees a revolution in America if government tries to restrict the liberties Americans enjoy.

But as he nears retirement after 17 years on the Supreme Court, Burger says even he "tends to take for granted the liberties" secured by the Constitution.

"I don't stop to appreciate them enough," Burger said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

And he thinks most Americans are guilty of the same shortcoming.

"It's hard to fully appreciate something that you've had for so long and take for granted," Burger said.

Nevertheless, the Chief Justice thinks Americans are very protective of their freedoms and would forcibly resist any attempt to restrict them.

"If there were any effort, and it would have to be by governmental power to limit our liberties, you'd have another revolution in this country," Burger said.

But he doesn't see any real threat to liberty in America.

"This country wouldn't stand for it very long," he said.

The 78-year old Burger will soon mark his last Fourth of July as Chief Justice of the United States. He stunned the legal world by submitting his resignation to President Reagan on June 17. It designates July 10 as his date of departure.

He will devote his time thereafter to serving as chairman of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

With that in mind, Burger agreed to a rare interview to reflect on the state of freedom and liberty in America.

"The freedom and liberty we have in America is, beyond any question, the greatest of any country or any society in the world," he said.

He concedes there are restraints on that liberty, but he has difficulty thinking of any restraint that is not "legitimate and necessary."

What we have in America, said Burger, is "an ordered liberty."

"If you just had liberty without order — you've got anarchy. I see this country as having the best balance of any society that I've ever observed."

Burger said he recognizes that some people's freedoms are limited by their health or economic status. But Burger said a greater percentage of people enjoy freedom and opportunity in this country than in any country in the world.

"But we've got to make it better," he said.

Burger takes part this week in ceremonies marking the 100th birthday of the Statue of Liberty.

On historic Ellis Island in New York Harbor, the port of entry to millions of immigrants to the United States, Burger will administer the oath of citizenship to some 200 newly naturalized Americans. Tens of thousands of others will take the oath from him via a satellite transmission to sites around the country.

"I'll enjoy the occasion, I assure you," said Burger, who traces his own roots back to Ellis Island.

Just before the Civil War, his grandfather, Joseph Burger, came to America from Austria as a small boy.

"All my grandparents came from Europe. And my wife's parents came from Europe. And we should all take pride in...this great melting pot. That term has become a cliche, but that's what it is."

Burger said he swells with pride when he sees the Statue of Liberty.

"Oh, I do. I do."

He was asked if he's ever tempted to think that sometimes Americans might have too much liberty for their own good.

"In some respects, you can have too much liberty."

But Burger said that is not the case in America.

Yet his crowded court calendar is proof that many Americans feel their liberties are being violated.

But Burger said it's the nature of Americans to reach out for more liberty.

"In 200 years, we're always reaching for more. Whatever it is we've got, we want more of. More automobiles, More homes. More everything.

"There's nothing bad about that," he said.

'Gay-lesbian pride day' parades attract supporters around U.S.

Associated Press

"Gay-lesbian pride day" parades attracted throngs of supporters and some counter-demonstrators in several U.S. cities, marking the anniversary of the birth of the homosexual rights movement 17 years ago.

No serious incidents were reported between pro- and anti-homosexual groups during demonstrations Sunday in New York; Columbus, Ohio; San Francisco; and Seattle, but three people were arrested in Chicago when fighting broke out among spectators at a Ku Klux Klan rally held to protest the nearby gay-rights parade.

In New York, demonstrations for and against homosexual rights were held on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral after a federal court gave a Roman Catholic homosexual group the right to stand in front of the church during the parade.

Almost 2,000 police officers were on hand to keep the demonstrations at the cathedral peaceful. Aside from some shouting and several raised fists, there were no problems, said Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell, a police spokesman.

"It's a wonderful event. We're here to celebrate being both gay and Catholic," said Rourk Simon, a member of Dignity, the Catholic homosexual group.

"It's an immoral lifestyle and they want a license to perpetrate immorality," said Herbert McKay, a member of Decency, the group that staged a counter-demonstration after the Dignity demonstration.

As a result of the agreement worked out Friday, 25 members from each group were allowed to demonstrate at the cathedral. The parade down Fifth Avenue drew an estimated 12,000 marchers.

The parades marked the anniversary of the 1969 riots at a New York gay bar called the Stonewall, where patrons responded to a police raid with beer cans and rocks. The riots mark the beginning of the militant gay rights movement.

The San Francisco parade drew some 30,000 participants calling for more efforts to fight acquired immune deficiency syndrome and protesting a proposal to quarantine AIDS patients and ban suspected AIDS victims from school and food service jobs. The proposal recently qualified for placement on the November ballot in California.

Close to 100 people marched in a group carrying signs proclaiming that they had AIDS.

"I think the major issue is the fact that people with AIDS have to be considered an active part of the gay-lesbian community," said Richard Rector, co-director of People With AIDS. "We have to make a statement that we are active and that we have hope."

Reagan administration reassessing U.S. policy toward South Africa

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The Reagan administration has made contact with elements of South Africa's black opposition as part of a high-level reassessment of U.S. policy toward that white-ruled nation, a top Reagan aide says.

President Reagan, who is returning to Washington today at the end of a five-day vacation at his California ranch, will get the results of the review within the next several weeks.

Pressure has been building on Capitol Hill for new sanctions or other action against the government of President P.W. Botha, who declared a nationwide state of emergency June 12.

More than 1,900 people — most of them black — have been killed in the two years of violent protest against the apartheid policy of racial separation.

The senior administration official, who has been involved in the high-level study, says it is geared toward opening new avenues of communication to both black and white communities in South Africa in order to further a dialogue in that racially torn nation. The official disclosed the policy evaluation Saturday in a session with selected reporters using ground rules requiring he not be identified by name.

He said the administration has had "low-level" contacts outside of South Africa with members of the outlawed African National Congress, the coalition of black activists seeking an end to white minority rule in South Africa.

The Reagan aide ruled out the possibility Reagan would impose any economic sanctions as a result of the review or that any specific action was imminent.

"We are opposed to apartheid...We are also opposed to sanctions," the official said.

The administration is "trying to find out what we are for" in terms of furthering a negotiated settlement, he said, adding there was no intention of abandoning the U.S. policy of "constructive engagement" — the quiet, diplomatic effort to seek change in South Africa.

But the review and its effort to contact black opposition groups marks a change of direction for the administration.

The Reagan adviser said U.S. policy was being coordinated with the British government of Margaret Thatcher, who is a close associate of Reagan. Mrs. Thatcher is as staunchly opposed to sanctions as the president, but the United States and Great Britain are two nations who still "have clout"with Botha, the official said.

The official also noted that the British have established contact with Oliver Tambo, head of the ANC underground movement.

The president's low-key policy on South Africa and his refusal to criticize Botha's government harshly have fed intense criticism from Capitol Hill. Earlier this month, the House approved legislation requiring the total withdrawal of U.S. business interests from South Africa.

The House bill would require total U.S. disinvestment from South Africa within 180 days of enactment and impose a trade embargo against that country except for key minerals needed by the U.S. defense industry.

The official said Reagan had ordered the review prior to the House vote.

The senior members of the State Department and the National Security Council conducting the review are to send their proposals to Reagan within several weeks, the official said.

The official said the review came about following the trip to South Africa by the so-called Eminent Person's Group. The group of Commonwealth nation representatives said it saw little likelihood of a negotiated solution to the South African conflict.

The group was set up last October by the 49 nations in the Commonwealth, the association of Britain and former colonies.

Anti-apartheid demonstrators arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — District of Columbia police arrested 13 people outside the South African Embassy in an NAACP demonstration which included marchers who traveled from the West Coast carrying a gray coffin emblazoned with the words "Apartheid Lies Here."

The protest Sunday culminated the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's "March for Human Dignity in South Africa and at Home" that began June 3 in Los Angeles and has met with local anti-racism activists throughout the South.

The marchers were joined by about 50 delegates from the 77th annual NAACP convention, which opened Sunday in Baltimore.

During their cross-country trek, the anti-apartheid protesters said they collected 14,000 signatures for a petition demanding the Pretoria government give its black citizens the right to vote.

The petition was scheduled to be presented to Sen. Charles Mathias Jr., R-Md., today when he addresses the NAACP convention.

Marchers told The Washington Post a few incidents have marred the peaceful trek through 16 states. One marcher was slightly injured when a passing motorist hurled a metal chain in Albuquerque, N.M., according to one protester, the Rev. Tony Minor of Atlanta.

In Nash County, N.C., a man whom police said led the local chapter of the Ku Klux Klan brandished a shotgun and tried to block the road in front of his house, Minor said.

The march was organized by Joseph Madison, head of the NAACP's Chicago-based national voter education project.

NATION IN BRIEF

Just 1 percent of Shrine circus funds go to hospitals

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Only about 1 percent of the profits from Shrine circuses in 1984 went to care for injured children, despite circus promotions loaded with references to charitable work, a newspaper reported today.

Shriners, who run the richest charity in the nation, kept for themselves about two-thirds of the money they raised through all their fund-raising activities, according to a six-month investigation by The Orlando Sentinel.

After Shrine officials learned of the newspaper's probe they started to do some checking themselves.

"We have found some of the things you found...things that could be misinterpreted, and we have contacted the temples," Charles Cumpstone, executive secretary for the fraternity, told the newspaper.

But another spokesman for the Tampa-based fraternity and charity disagreed.

"I don't accept the one-third, two-thirds because I haven't seen the evidence of that," said Robert Turley, Lexington, Ky., attorney and member of the Shrine hospital charity's board of trustees.

According to the newspaper, the tax-exempt circuses are the Shriners' most visible and lucrative source of fund-raising. But temples, or clubhouses, reporting circus revenue to the Internal Revenue Service in 1984 donated only about 1 percent of their profits to Shrine hospitals.

CIA ups aid to Contras

NEW YORK (AP) — Following last week's House vote to give the Nicaraguan Contras $100 million in aid, the Central Intelligence Agency plans to provide the rebel forces with support worth an additional $400 million, Newsweek reports.

In its July 7 edition, the magazine said the CIA, which has been barred from military involvement with the Contras since 1984, will provide support including covert logistical support, training, communications and intelligence.

Newsweek quoted unnamed sources as saying the CIA had rebuilt its intelligence network in Central America and had hired more Spanish-speaking agents. The CIA also will funnel money and supplies to the Contras from their supporters around the world, the magazine said.

The House voted to provide $70 million to buy assault rifles, machine guns, mortars and missiles for the Contras and $30 million in "humanitarian" assistance.

Bundy request denied

MIAMI (AP) — A Dade County circuit judge today denied a request to block the execution of serial killer Theodore R. Bundy, scheduled for 7 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

Judge Edward Cowart's ruling will send Bundy's attorneys back to Tallahassee to seek a stay from the state Supreme Court. Lawyers said they weren't sure when the justices would hear the appeal.

Cowart, who sentenced Bundy to die after his 1979 trial here for the brutal murders of two Florida State University sorority sisters, and the Florida Supreme Court last week rejected stay requests because Bundy's attorneys hadn't filed any appeals raising new challenges to his conviction.

James E. Coleman, Bundy's Washington, D.C. attorney, argued for 30 minutes today that there were grounds for a stay and an appeal because Bundy received ineffective legal help at his trial and there was no legitimate effort to decide his mental competence.

But Cowart said there had been hearings on those issues here and said, "the petition is inadequate in its assertions for a hearing" because there were no serious specific examples to support the claims.

Murdoch sells Sun-Times

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Sun-Times has been sold to Publisher Robert E. Page and a group of investors for $145 million, officials said today.

Reports about the sale of the Pulitzer Prize-winning daily by Rupert Murdoch's News America Publishing Co. to the Page syndicate had been circulating in recent weeks.

A closing was set for Wednesday in the sale of the nation's 11th-largest newspaper and its assets, officials said.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

The Plymouth Horizon, now in its 10th year, has a new name and a few new surprises.

New amunition for economy car market

by Tom Cooper

1987 Plymouth Horizon America. For years the American car makers have had little amunition to throw at the foreign car makers. They have been making little cars longer than our domestic companies have, and they have gotten quite good at it. But here is a car that seems to have reached that level of quality.

This car is special in several ways. It has been unique since it's introduction in 1978. It was the first American-built, front-wheel drive subcompact car, and still managed to offer a space-efficient interior. And the Horizon America Blazes a new trail for 1987 with one of the biggest price cuts in automotive history. The 1987 model has been reduced $710 to a low base sticker price of $5499. In addition a number of special features have been included at no charge, which makes the 1987 model $1394 less than a comparably equipped 1986 model. Some of those standard features include tinted glass, electric rear window defroster, rear window wiper/washer, five-speed transaxle/transmission, and a special instrumentation package.

This accomplishment is due to the collective work of Chrysler Motors, Chrysler-Plymouth, its dealers, suppliers and assembly workers. Each made concessions in order to see the Horizon America become a reality in 1987. One example of this is the restructuring of the assembly plant in Belvidere, Illinois. The plant was redesigned and the workers retrained in order to produce the new vehicle quickly, efficiently and with quality. This was done in order to make the car more competitive in the conomy car market from the cost standpoint. But the goal was not just to make a cheap car, quality was also an important consideration.

And it appears that quality has been maintained, and even imporved. It is difficult to tell from a superficial drive how the car will perform in the long run, but a look at repair records maintained by an independent consumer group shows a steady improvement over the past few years in the dependability of the Horizon. But a superficial drive will reveal a few important details, like an amazingly smooth ride and surprising acceleration from the peppy but economical 2.2 liter engine.

Chrysler Corporation Chairman Lee Iacocca recently called this car "the best buy ever in American subcompacts." While this may well be true perhaps the bigger surprise will be, as boasted by the company, that "Quality is standard on 1987 Plymouth Horizon America."

This feature appears each Monday as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
