BACKUP WITHHOLDING

Remember last winter, when the mail was flooded by banks and savings and loan associations with IRS forms requiring certification of Social Security numbers? That was in response to 1983 legislation requiring payors to withhold 20 percent of interest payments if the payee did not provide the payor with a taxpayer ID number.

Small business owners and farmers should be aware that this paper-work problem and potential liability applies to their business as well.

If the business has borrowed from individuals, including stockholders, withholding will be required unless the individual completes an IRS Form W-9. (A W-9 is not needed if interest payments do not exceed $10 for the year). These forms should be kept in the business files.

If a business fails to obtain the required paper work, the business may be liable for the 20 percent tax that should have been withheld if the tax is not paid by the recipient. In addition, the business will have to prove that the tax was paid by the recipient to get off the hook. Even if the business avoids liability for the withholding tax itself if the recipient pays the tax due, the business will be subject to penalties and interest for failure to withhold. The backup withholding does not apply if the interest is paid to a corporation.

One of the biggest traps in the backup withholding law is the requirement to withhold on payments other than dividends or interest—such as payments for personal services if Form W-9 is not obtained. This would include payments to consultants and others who are tested as independent contractors for payroll tax purposes. Here there is a threshold amount of $600.00 annually.

The backup withholding requirement is tied in many ways to the requirement that 1099 information returns be submitted to payees. Those forms are due by January 31, even if the payor is on a fiscal year. The forms are to be filled with IRS by February 28.

Veterans Administration Question And Answers

Q: Is there any way I can increase the face value of my World War II National Service Life Insurance?

A: Your annual dividend may be used to purchase additional paid-up life insurance. A benefits counselor at any VA office will assist you in requesting this conversion.

Q: My brother, who receives compensation for service injuries, has lost the ability to make sound decisions. He squanders his money and no longer understands its value. What can I do?

A: This information, along with any medical evidence, should be sent to the VA regional office where his records are maintained. The VA will then investigate the need for the appointment of a fiduciary—a person or institution which would manage your brother's finances.

Q: Are common-law marriages recognized by the VA?

A: Yes, if the relationship was established in a state that recognizes common law marriages.

County Agent Report

By Richard Spencer

A good crowd of Fisher County farmers attended the County Cotton Meeting last week. Fertility, furrow diking, weed control, varieties and insects were discussed in detail. It was pointed out that the mills want a strength of at least 24,000 gpt and all cottons grown in this area are near or above this level. Mills don't care about micronaire or bark, but yet what do we get docked on.

The average yield of Fisher County Cotton Varieties for 5-9 years are as follows: Western-44-575#, SP 21-523, GSA 71-512, Cascot L-7-500, Paymaster 303-469, Cascot B-2-452, SP 37-446, Paymaster 145-398, LX 571-379, Lockett 77-359 and Wesburn M-335. We have 9 years data on GSA-71, 8 years on Western 44 and SP 37, and 6 years on SP21.

Read Matthew 16:24-26 Jesus said, "Whoever would save his life will lose it, and whoever loses his life for my sake will find it." —Matthew 16:25-26 IT was June 30, 1950, only five days after the beginning of the civil war in Korea. At a North Korean outpost, a heated discussion was going on between a senior officer and a seminary student. The officer concluded the discussion by putting a pistol to the chest of the student. "You do not have much time. Now make up your mind. Do you want to die by believing in Jesus or want to live by denying him?" asked the officer. "I want to live by believing in Jesus." "You misunderstand me. If you say you believe in Jesus, I will shoot you. But if you deny him, I will let you live." "If I deny Jesus, I die forever. But if I believe in Jesus, I live even though I die, and I inherit eternal life." The student closed his eyes. A few seconds later he heard the blast of the gun, yet he was still standing. When the student opened his eyes, the officer said, "I like your commitment. I believe you will make a dedicated Communist like me." He was mistaken. The student became a minister and still prays for the officer. PRAYER: Lord, as You have given Your life for us, help us to dedicate our life to You. In Jesus' name. Amen. Hustling Around Hobbs

By Joy Walker

Well, we have sure been having some stormy weather, and some folks got flooding rains, and lot of fields around Hamlin, Anson and Noodle are under water. It rained hard on Wednesday and then Friday night we got a terrific thunderstorm with lots of high wind, rain and some people even reported hail. The old saying is "if it thunders in February," and it did a number of times, "we'll have frost in April", so be prepared. Congratulations to Sheila Clawson and Wayne Nichols who were married Friday night at the Hobbs Baptist Church. Sheila is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Blackie Clawson of the Hobbs community. Buck Cave from Newcastle has been here visiting with this sister, Mrs. Vida Boyer. He spent two days here, and Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Cave also visited with them while he was here. Mrs. Bea Hardin went to Sweetwater last Monday with Mrs. Mark Nowlin.

Mrs. Opal Phillips, Mrs. Marie Thornton and Mrs. Bea Hardin all attended the bridal tea which was given for Sheila Clawson and Wayne Nichols on Monday night. It was held in the home of Mrs. M.B. Maxwell of the Hobbs School. Mr. and Mrs. James Ratliff and Teresa all went to Clyde for the weekend and visited with Mr. and Mrs. Jim Ratliff and baby. While there they attended a Wheelchair Basketball game at Clyde in which Jim Ratliff participated. The Ratliffs sure enjoyed the game, and seeing Jim play and they also enjoyed playing with their grandson, who is now talking and beginning to learn to walk. Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Etheridge went to Brownwood on Thursday night to watch the girls play Mansfield; Sweetwater won. Mrs. Lealon Wilburn and Kenneth Wilburn and two boys from Anson went with them. Then they all went to Lamesa the next week and watched the Sweetwater girls play Andrews; Sweetwater won this one too. It was sure a good game and now the Sweetwater girls go to the State Play-offs; they will be playing Thursday night in Austin, and we hope that they can win. Mr. and Mrs. James Sherrill of Sweetwater and Mr. and Mrs. David Yearwood, Josh and new baby daughter, Lacy, from Levelland, all attended the ball game at Lamesa. Mr. and Mrs. Randy Etheridge and Monte Maze-ska from Fort Worth all visited with the J.W. Etheridges on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Sims from Hawley visited all day Saturday with the J.D. Kincaids. Jim and I went to Sweetwater on Tuesday. We killed a big rattlesnake in the road on Tuesday evening, just about 1 1/2 miles west from the house. We went to Snyder Tuesday night and watched Roscoe girls vs. Borden County. It was a real good game with Roscoe coming out on top. We visited with the David Briggs for a short while at the ballgame. They used to teach at Hobbs, and are still at Borden County; was good to see them again. Highland girls won their game against O'Donnell, so Roscoe and Highland advance to the Regional play offs in Levelland. Wednesday we went back to Sweetwater and did it rain over there, much more than we got here. We got a good rain, but at Sweetwater all the fields were full, also their tanks were running around, and there was a lot of water on the roads. We also went to Snyder on Wednesday, and they didn't get as much rain there. We went to Abilene on Saturday, and around Hamlin and on to Anson, all of the fields looked like lakes. With the warmer weather we have been having, the wheat should really begin to grow now.

Golden Haven Home

We were all glad to have the rain last week. Visiting Johnnie Mula-nax-Gail Lobdell of Sweetwater. Visiting Addie Seibert-Mel and Rie Mathies of Rotan. Visiting Hazel Smith-Royce and Joyce Smith of Merkel. Visiting Elizabeth Hale-Bill, Gloria, Casey and Bryan Hale of Lubbock, Geraldine Haag of Mt. Home, Idaho, Skip, Linda, David and Blandon of Rembert of San Angelo.

Visiting Eva Chapman-Sill and Bertha Carlile of Sweetwater. Visiting Ezell Whitten-Fay Doiser, May Hurst of Sylvester, Ivy May Early of Abilene. Visiting Letha Meek-Judy Justiss and Misty Peoples of Sweetwater. Our bingo winners were Eva Chapman and Octavaneous Harrell. Tempie West

National Cotton Council Seeks Way To Reduce Federal Deficit

The National Cotton Council today called on President Reagan to appoint a bipartisan commission to recommend ways to reduce the federal deficit and restore sound fiscal policy.

The Council said congressional, administrative, and Federal Reserve Board actions are urgently needed to restore a reasonable balance between the value of the dollar and other currencies. The industry-wide organization pointed out that the overvalued dollar is having a devastating impact on cost, reducing the industry's competitiveness and stimulating overwhelming growth of textile imports.

The call for bipartisan action was among 11 special trade resolutions adopted at the Council's annual meeting by delegates from 18 cotton-producing states.

Other actions advocated were: (1) a temporary surcharge on imports to help restore competitiveness and reduce the deficit, (2) Section 22 action to eliminate interference with the operation of the government cotton program and to reverse the decline in the quantity of cotton processed by U.S. mills, and (3) evaluation of a tariff assessment only on the value added by foreign processing of imports made from U.S. yarn and fabrics.

Council delegates also urged accelerated public, private, and industry-sponsored research to improve U.S. cotton's competitiveness, intensified communications on textile imports, and stepped-up program to expand cotton consumption. Support was pledged to the "Crafted with Pride in U.S.A." campaign to boost domestic consumption of U.S. cotton, and to an increase in resources for Cotton Council International, Cotton Incorporated, and the International Institute for Cotton to help build worldwide cotton consumption.

Regarding 1985 farm legislation, the Council continued to favor a market-oriented program that would retain the current concepts of target price and determination of cotton's price support loan rate. Delegates also supported legislation that would deny farm program benefits on newly broken-out fragile land planted to program crops.

The Council further (1) called for establishing an industrywide committee to review USDA classing programs, and (2) opposed any imposition of origination fees on exports credit guarantees, saying they would nullify the program's effectiveness in expanding cotton exports.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, House Agriculture Committee chairman, told Council delegates that some people are advocating a dramatic and quick cut-back in farm programs on the grounds that they are too costly.

"These costs are a very minor part of the federal budget," he said, "and if you don't use common sense in dealing with this issue, you could wind up driving thousands of people off the land without making any really substantial new contribution to the deficit problem."

A similar view was expressed by Sen. Howell Heflin (D-Ala.), member of the Senate Agricultural Committee, who said he was disturbed over proposals to cut back Agricultural Committee, who said he was disturbed over proposals to cut back agricultural research, soil conservation, and other vital programs.

"In the long range, the future of farmers depends on research and development—especially in the area of cost-cutting," he stated.

Carl J. Kensil, president of Ciba-Geigy's Agricultural Division, also warned against cutbacks in agricultural research.

"It would be shortsighted indeed to rob future generations of the benefits of research to pay off debts of the present," he said.

Discussing farm legislation prospects, Rep. Tom Loeffler (R-Tex.) urged cotton leaders to make their position known forcefully in Washington.

"Agriculture has a lot of convincing to do, and the unity demanded of you in agriculture is far greater than ever before," he said.

Bob Boslet, Cotton Incorporated president, said his organization's market-expanding program has increased cotton's share of the retail household and apparel market from 34 percent in 1975 to nearly 40 percent.

"Our five-year plan calls for hitting a 45 percent share of the market by 1990," he said.

Boslet asked Council delegates to help in a beltwide educational effort concerning an increased producer assessment for the program, saying additional funds will assure CI's ability to reach its goal.

Samuel Hollis, Memphis warehouseman, was elected Council president succeeding John S. Barr, III, who advanced to board chairman. New vice presidents are Thomas W.

Smith, Bakersfield, Calif., cooperative leader, and William H. Houston, Tunica, Miss., cotton producer. Re-elected were Vice President Lloyd Cline, Lamesa, Texas, producer; Treasurer James H. Sanford, Prattville, Ala., producer; Executive Vice President Earl W. Sears, Memphis; and Vice President/Operations Gaylon Booker, Memphis. The Council's 1986 annual meeting was set for Jan. 26-28 in Orlando, Fla.

New Educational Opportunities Offered In Ag. Dept. At WTC

By Frank Casas

The agriculture department of Western Texas College acquired an 80-acre stretch of land that will provide new educational opportunities for the agriculture department.

"Ag majors will use the plot as a farm lab and to gain 'hands-on' experience," said Bob Doty, ag instructor.

Dr. Carl Dillaha leased the acres to the ag department for a $10 per acre annual fee. The farm is located a few miles from campus, west of the Brick Plant Road.

Dillaha had leased the land to the ag department 10 years ago when the department had a Farm and Ranch Management program. After the program was dissolved the farm was released.

"In the past, the ag department relied on area farms and ranches for the observance of their lands, cattle, sheep, and swine. Now the students have a place to raise animals and crops," Doty said.

"The farm is a tremendous opportunity and benefit to help enhance the students education.

"On a small scale, the work like the students do will be a lot like farming. We'll have good and bad farming years, depending on the climate. It will have the same conditions experienced on other farms and enterprises," said Doty.

The main enterprises that will be added to the farm are cattle, sheep, and swine. Pens for sheep and cattle already exist. The ag department expects to build farrow pens for their swine.

They also plan to grow crops such as alfalfa, wheat and sorghum for feed purposes.

Plans for the new farm include keeping it in operation for future students and eventually sustaining it through profits earned from the sale of animals.

$500 Million Bond Proposal Will Be On November '85 Ballot

A unanimous 30-0 vote in the Texas Senate this week approved a resolution by Sen. Lindon Williams (D-Houston) that will place a $500 million bond proposal on the November 1985 ballot that will provide continued funding for the Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program.

"At a time when all state government is concerned with belt-tightening," Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said, "it is important to remember that the VHAP not only provides home loans to deserving Texas Veterans but, equally important, doesn't cost the taxpayers a penny."

Sen. Williams and State Rep. Frank Tejeda (D-San Antonio), the original sponsors of the legislation creating the year-old VHAP, introduced the joint resolution in the Texas Legislature to place that amendment on the November 1985 ballot authorizing an additional $500 million in funding for the highly successful Veterans benefits program.

The Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program has been called the greatest single Veterans benefits program to be enacted by a state World War II. It enables eligible Texas Veterans to borrow $20,000 at less than 10 percent interest (currently 9.97) to apply toward the purchase of a home.

When combined with a conventional VA loan, it enables a Veteran to purchase a home with no down payment.

After completing a review of the program, the state Sunset Commission recently recommended the additional bonding authority.

Administered by Mauro through the Veterans Land Board, the popular program in funded with general obligation bonds and with fees from participating Texas Veterans. More than 13,000 Texas Veterans purchased homes through the program during the VHAP's first year.

EXTENDED COVERAGE

By JOE DALE BURK
Rotan Insurance Agency

Check your homeowner's insurance. Many companies have made major revisions in their so-called "standard policy".

On the whole, premiums remain the same, but coverage is somewhat different. Deductibles are up, to discourage small nuisance claims, but many coverage limits have been broadened. (The $100 deductible is still available for an extra charge.)

Because of inflation, for instance, the basic limit per occurrence for personal liability resulting from injuries or damages to others has risen from $25,000 to $100,000. For medical payments the basic limits are up from $500 to $1,000.

The maximum coverages for jewelry, silverware, and money have also been raised in the new policy, though most people are advised to carry personal article floaters for expensive items.

Some coverage has been specifically excluded, to tighten up ambiguous language in past policies. Spouses may not sue each other under the same policy, nor will insurance cover "negligent entrustment," such as letting an underage driver use the family car.

How will these changes affect you? Let's talk about your homeowner insurance at:

Audiologist Steve Brown Travels To Jamaica

Audiologist Steve Brown, from Anna, Ill., recently traveled to Jamaica with the Christian Medical Society, a non-denominational volunteer group based in Richardson, Texas. One of 50 volunteers from the United States and Canada, Brown is the son of Rev.

and Mrs. Fred Brown. The two week mission to provide health care, supplies and medical equipment to the residents of southwestern Jamaica took place last fall from Oct. 27 to Nov. 10. Five health care professionals from the Cape

Girardeau, Mo., area volunteered in the Christian Medical Society's Jamaica project including the doctor with whom Steve Brown works, ENT specialist Dr. Richard Martin. Others from Cape Girardeau were a pharmacist, pediatrician and general helper. Brown also mentioned that several Illinois residents from Centraillia and the Chicago area attended. Each volunteer paid his own travel expenses to Jamaica and back and they donated their services as health care professionals. "Quite a bit of medical supplies were donated by the manufacturers," said Brown. All in all, 75 boxes and crates of medicine and equipment were sent to Jamaica with the volunteers.

After landing in Montego Bay, the volunteers traveled by bus to a rural section of the country. From 6 a.m. to around 6:30 p.m. each day the volunteers, divided into teams, visited area clinics, hospitals, and special schools throughout the region. "We saw a lot of small area," said Brown, a 75 mile radius of Black River. At night the Americans stayed in a church camp.

"All the people who went were very versatile," said Brown. Dr. Martin found himself doing general practice, physicals and general examinations. Brown, who specializes in hearing testing and diagnosis, also assisted a dentist, pediatrician, and pharmacist. "We did a variety of things—whatever needed to be done," he said.

The rural agricultural area visited by the health teams was different from the tourist areas of the country. "It's really a beautiful country," said Brown, who enjoyed the 80 degree daytime temperatures. The beaches he saw were also inhabited by grazing cattle and goats. "You had to watch your step." In some areas they visited "unemployment was terribly high," he said, nearing 50 percent. "We saw a lot of poverty," but not malnutrition.

Brown noted that due to the government not being able to provide programs for its poor-like in the United States—things like Medicare, Medicaid and public aid do not exist in Jamaica.

For many residents, "general medicine and health care wasn't available to them," Brown said. He said he saw a lot of people on bread lines, but said "things are getting better...People are going through some very hard times, but a lot of hope and faith was getting them through." He continued, "the people there were very friendly and seemed very grateful" for the medical attention the health care teams provided them.

Brown said it was easy to communicate with the people, who speak with a British accent. Jamaica was a British colony until recent times.

Dr. Martin and Steve Brown spent two days working at the Caribbean Christian Center for the Deaf, a school for children funded by non-denominational Christian groups in the United States. At the school they discovered one boy who was diagnosed as having the type of hearing impairment that's curable by surgery. Though the health team couldn't perform the necessary series of operations, which must occur over a period of time, the child was referred to the proper facilities. While in Jamaica, however, the volunteers were able to perform some surgical procedures for the people they served.

In another area, Brown said, there was a very high instance of deafness. Though they weren't sure of the exact cause, the medical personnel thought it may have been genetic. There was a school there for 14 deaf children, "with no electricity or running water, but some well trained teachers," Brown said, who were doing the best that they could.

The Christian Medical Society sponsors projects to various parts of the world, primarily focused on the countries in Central and South America, and the Caribbean. The group is planning another project in Jamaica next fall. "I'm hoping to go back," said Brown.

While in Jamaica, Steve took seven rolls of film, a permanent record of his memorable experience. He said everyone took a lot of pictures. The volunteer work "was really an experience," he said. "I wouldn't have traded it for anything."

State Capital Highlights

When the Legislative leadership asked state agencies last year to prepare for a major belt-tightening, most responded with pleas for more aid, a reflection that budget realities had not yet sunk in.

That was never the case with State Comptroller Bob Bullock, the man constitutionally charged with keeping his finger on state government's economic pulse.

Last week, instead of asking for more money, Bullock returned $4.7 million to the Legislature, saying he had tightened his agency's belt and could "live without" the money. He has set the example for fiscal behavior that the budget leadership hoped other agency heads would display.

"It's a pleasure to be here," Bullock told the Senate Finance Committee last week. "I've come here to give you $4.7 million back. That is $4.7 million the Legislative Budget Board recommended for us which we can live without."

Fiscal Warning

At the same hearing, Bullock warned senators of a continuing fiscal crisis for Texas government that is just starting and "it will be worse in two years."

Bullock also told senators that even though he recently terminated 11 district offices and 149 employees, he expected to bring $34.5 million in added revenues to the state due to automation and pay raises for well-trained employees.

This recent action by Bullock provides a dramatic contrast between him and Gov. Mark White, whom Bullock once hoped to replace. White campaigned on a theme of "no new taxes," but once in office he promoted a record $4.6 billion tax increase. Bullock has forecast fiscal conservatism and tightened his own belt first as an example for others to follow.

Ruffled Feathers
White, for his part, spent some time last week trying to make amends with state senators who felt left out of his appointments process.

Some feathers were ruffled because senators felt White did not consult with them enough in making his selections.

After a meeting with Senate deans Oscar Mauzy and Chet Brooks, White agreed to hire a liaison between his office and the senate.

Name Withdrawn

Meanwhile, former State Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo told friends he withdrew his name from consideration for an appointment to the State Board of Insurance because he was tired of waiting on word from Mark White and decided he did not need the job.

Simpson was the highly respected chairman of the House Committee on Insurance and a conservative Democrat during his legislative tenure.

Mattox Trial

The felony commercial bribery trial of Jim Mattox closed its first week of testimony in which prosecutors attempted to establish that Mattox had indeed threatened to end the multi-million dollar bond business of a Houston law firm.

J. Wiley Caldwell, who heads the bond division of the Fulbright & Jaworski firm and was a top political fund raiser for Mattox in '82 was the chief witness who testified that Mattox "threatened war" over their lawyer's attempt to question Mattox's sister in an unrelated case.

Other witnesses testified they had no evidence that Mattox ever delayed approval of their bond issues during that period, until Thursday when Mattox's former bond chief told the Court Mattox had instructed him to hold the F&J bonds until further orders.

Other interesting highlights of the week included:

North Texas farmer Noel Cowling became the first announced candidate to challenge Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, and Amarillo state Sen. Bill Sarpalis confirmed he is seriously thinking of adding his name to the list.

Hightower responded "if you want to take me on, you better strap yourself to the saddle."

Texas Monthly reporter

Paul Burka, who writes the controversial "Ten Best/Ten Worst Legislators" column, has advised the Legislature to abolish the state's two black universities, Prairie View A&M and Texas Southern, saying the state could save $44 million.

A survey conducted for the Texas Education Agency indicated that Texas school districts raised local property taxes an average 15 percent to help pay for the state's new massive school reforms last year.

Another poll reflected that 75 percent of Texans approve of their local schools.

H. Ross Perot, the Dallas billionaire who headed the education reform committee, suggested the creation of a new panel to overhaul higher education. For starters, Perot would cut out "junk course like the history of rock and roll."

Mixed Intentions For Spring Planting

Texas acreage intentions for the spring-planted crops are mixed this year, as producers intend to seed fewer acres of Upland cotton, rice and soybeans, but to increase planted acres of sorghum, corn, peanuts and sunflowers.

Based on conditions as of February 1, Texas Upland cotton growers intend to plant 5.30 million acres, down 1 percent from last year but 33 percent above the 1983 total. According to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, the 1983 acreage was the lowest since 1967.

Sorghum acreage, at 4.50 million, is expected to increase 3 percent from last year, and corn acreage is projected at 1.75 million, up 4 percent.

The prospective plantings report is merely an indication of farmers' intentions to plant based on conditions around February 1. State statistician Dennis Findley cautioned, and actual planted acreages may vary considerably depending on the weather, production costs, crop prices and the results of the report itself.

Soybean acreage, at 370,000, is down 18 percent from last year, while rice acreage is expected to drop 12 percent to 360,000 acres.

Peanut acreage is up 6 percent to 250,000 acres, Findley added. Texas sunflower producers intend to plant 75,000 acres, and increase of 88 percent from a year earlier.

Cold, wet conditions across the state have delayed land preparation for most field crops. However, soil moisture supplies are excellent this year, compared with the dry conditions at the beginning of 1984, and field work should make good progress when the weather conditions permit.

U.S. Upland cotton growers intend to seed 10.89 million acres, 2 percent below last year but 39 percent above 1983. Sorghum acreage intentions, at 17.90 million acres, are 4 percent above last year.

Corn producers across the nation intend to plant 82.02 million acres, up 2 percent, while soybean producers intend to decrease acreage 5 percent to 64.36 million acres. Prospective peanut acreage, at 1.54 million, is 2 percent below last year. Rice acreage is down 12 percent to 2.47 million.

Disability Information On Social Security

Under the law, the eligibility for people to get Social Security disability benefits is made by an agency of the State in which the person lives. When the available evidence is not enough to support a finding of disability, a special medical examination may be scheduled to help decide if the person meets the medical criteria for disability. The cost of the examination is paid by the Government.

The scope of the examination or test depends on the information needed to arrive at a decision. For some people, a single test lasting only a few minutes may be enough; others however, may need more extensive study.

The job of the physician or other health-care personnel who conduct the examination is simply to obtain the information needed. They do not take part in the disability decision and do not prescribe medication or treatment for the condition. A report on the results of the examination or tests is forwarded to the State agency.

It is the responsibility of State agency personnel to review the information obtained from the special medical examination together with the evidence already on file and to arrive at a decision about eligibility. The person is notified of the decision in writing. A person who disagrees with the decision has certain appeal rights, which can be pursued.

Failure to keep an appointment for a special medical examination may result in a denial of benefits. Therefore, people who cannot keep an appointment should notify the State agency so that an appointment for a more convenient time might be arranged.
