Teenage drinking

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The Alternative School class grows, and grows and grows. The caseload in the juvenile probation office grows, and grows and grows. The time needed to investigate complaints of teenagers drinking grows. And grows. And grows. The worrying that some day, some night, some child will run out of luck and be killed in an alcohol-related accident grows. And grows. And grows.

Frankly, city, county and school officials have run out of patience waiting for parents to take the initiative to do something about under-age drinking in Deaf Smith County. They are ready to lead parents in a direction to help them help their children.

Adults who ignore pleas and warning may suffer immediate financial consequences. The fine for furnishing alcohol to someone under age 21 is from $100 to $500. For persons found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, the punishment can be up to 180 days in jail and a fine up to $1,500.

Officials feel that parents and other adults don't know how accountable they can be if they are responsible for providing alcohol for a party. Adults may be liable for letting teens have a party while knowing they will, illegally, possess or consume alcohol.

Adults who look the other way when kids drink add to the burden. Parents don't have to provide the beer, or furnish a barn or a house.

"If they know about and do nothing, they are just as guilty," said Susan Robbins, counselor for the Alternative School and Migrant programs for the Hereford Independent School District.

"I see it every day in Alternative School," said Robbins. "The effects of alcohol show up there every day. ...It's not just one group of kids. I see kids with an IQ of 140 or 150 who are barely making a 70. That's because they've made their choice to use alcohol."

Cindy Simons sees the affects of alcohol and drug use every day. She is the Student Assistance Programs Coordinator at HHS. Her door is open to confidential counseling for any student for any problem. Most of her problems stem from alcohol use.

"The parents aren't talking to their kids about alcohol. The kids don't know what alcohol can do to them," Simons said.

She explained that a 12-year-old can become addicted much more easily than an older person. According to Simons, the 12-year-old is more subject to peer-pressure than a 16-year-old.

"Between the physical differences and the mental differences, the younger person has a tendency to go off the deep end and do it quickly," Simons said. "A 16-year-old isn't much different. A 16-year-old is still subject to easier addiction. The penalties are more severe, too."

The penalties can include exclusion from school activities. Alcohol use this spring has led to punishment of students involved in Athletics, National Honor Society and other programs. A slew of minor in possession charges has led to teens being placed on probation on their driver's licenses.

"It all comes back to accountability," Simons said. "The kids have to know when they choose to drink, this is what it can lead to."

Some of the consequences can be bigger than running laps or bleachers or other punishment.

"I think there is a high correlation between teenage drinking and teenage pregnancy," said Robbins. "When you drink you lose your ability to make sound judgments. I think the two go hand-in-hand here in Hereford."

The school officials also want the accountability factor, the consequences, dealt with evenly.

Officials say they'll do that. During the next two weeks, parents of children at Hereford Junior High and Hereford High will get a letter signed by District Attorney Roland Saul, Hereford Chief of Police Caydon Brush and Deaf Smith County Sheriff Joe Brown.

They, too, are tired of waiting. Saul said he's tired of the excuses.

"The big thing we hear is, 'There's nothing for the kids to do,'" said Saul. "Well, they're dealing with the same problem we are down in Travis County. There's plenty for kids to do in Travis County. That must not be the problem."

"I'm talking as someone who has to deal with law-breakers, and as the parent of a teenager. We have to work hard to provide alternatives. If the parents and other adults want to work hard on this, we can do it."

City tax rate is same for 7th year in row

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

When Hereford City Commissioners conduct a hearing Monday night on the budget for the next year, the proposal they offer the public is as bare-bones as it can get.

For instance: -- Not since 1987 have capital expenditures been as low as the $291,344 proposed. In the '87 budget, capital expenses were $246,965.

-- Operations and maintenance expense is pegged at $3,559,813, a decrease from the $3,813,187 of the current year, fiscal '92, and barely more than the '91 budget of $3,351,856.

-- Water and sewer costs are estimated at $1,142,982, lower than any of the previous four years.

And, the 42-cent tax rate is expected to remain intact for the seventh consecutive year.

Before changes in law that required entities to use 100 percent valuations for taxing purposes, the city rate was 65 cents per $100 of value. In those days, though, the tax rate was applied to 45 percent of the appraised value.

Overall, the city's budget crept upward during these years while the tax rate remained static. A single increase in water rates and one hike in trash collection charges were imposed during the same period.

Costs of improvements and equipment in the new budget nosedive from the $960,000 in the current year which ends April 30. The '91 figure was $689,655 and in 1990, capital expense was $412,654. In the '89 budget, capital expense was $561,380 and 1988, $450,325.

Water and sewer expense is covered by revenue produced by the utility services. A bond payment of $147,000 for the water department also is paid by funds generated through water sales.

Additionally, water revenues are used to supplement the general operations and maintenance of the City of Hereford. Funds are transferred from water sales to help meet the cost of city government.

The budget which will be the subject of a public hearing Monday at the regular 7:30 p.m. meeting of the City Commission projects revenues to the general fund of slightly more than $3 million.

Besides ad valorem taxes of $922,000, the city expects to receive $650,000 from sales and mixed drink taxes.

Garbage billings, golf course fees and other city resources fill in the total revenue picture, excluding water and sewer.

Water and sewer billings are separate and, with interest from investments, property rentals and other resources, add up to $1,455 million.

Significant in the 1993 fiscal year budget is a determined effort by the city to put the John Pitman Municipal Golf Course on a self-sustaining basis.

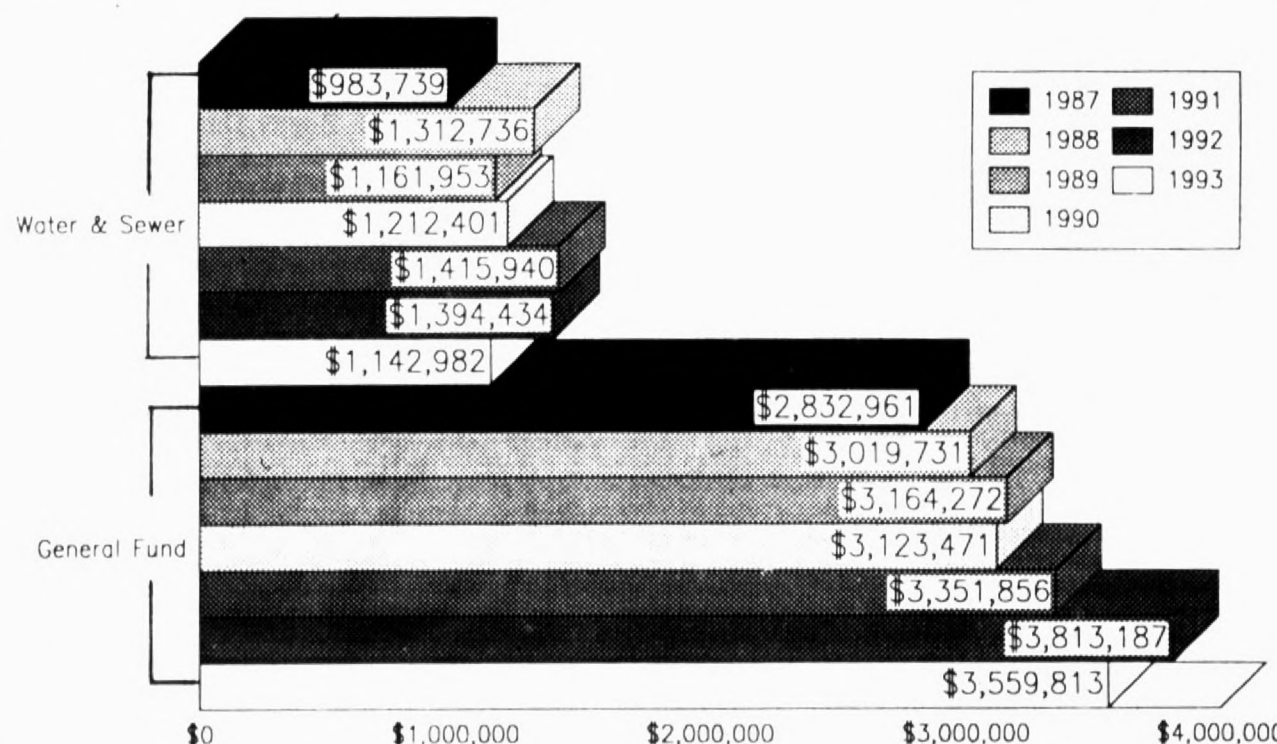

By assuming operation of the course with a pro in the employ of the city, commissioners hope to make expenses equal revenues. Golf cart rental and increased greens fees are expected to raise revenue opportunity.

The budget projects revenue of more than $250,000 for the year, a figure that is about $110,000 more than the 1992 income.

After the public hearing at the commission meeting Monday, action to adopt the budget and set the tax rate will be taken at the April 20 meeting.

The graph at left indicates the expenditures of the City of Hereford in budgets since 1987. Despite increases in costs, the city's tax rate has remained at 42 cents per $100 valuation.

Hospice program will start soon in Hereford

A dream of several Hereford residents for many years may be about to come true with hospice in Hereford.

Volunteer training will be offered in Hereford April 11 and April 25 for persons interested in assisting with hospice.

"Hospice is not a building, it's a method of caring for the needs of patients and their family," said Sharla Roselius, president of Crown of Texas Hospice. She has been working with several Hereford residents. She recently hosted a meeting of volunteers to explain how the company can work with volunteers to provide hospice in homes, hospitals and other settings.

Volunteers will go through training from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on April 11 and 25 in the lounge at the Hereford Community Center. Amy Gililand, who is helping the Hereford volunteer program, said volunteers must complete both sessions.

"Volunteers will make the hospice program possible," said Gililand. "We invite everyone to become part of this rewarding work."

Hospice volunteers will be needed for more than assisting with patient care and comfort. "Many times the family and friends need more relief than do the patients," said Roselius. "A big part of the work of volunteers may be to provide relief to the family, give them a few hours out of the house."

Volunteers can also help with friendly visiting; escorting the patient to the doctor, beauty shop, store or elsewhere; running errands for patients or their family; reading and writing; hair care; telephone reassurance; bereavement follow-up; and other duties as appropriate.

Volunteers who work with patients must receive a small amount of certified training to fall within Medicare and Medicaid guidelines. Hospice care is one of the few areas that can be paid 100 percent by government programs, but much of the work can be done by volunteers.

Roselius, Gililand and others said persons who want to assist with patient care and comfort are needed.

Brand honored at PPA convention

BROOKS

A Hereford Brand photo of a young girl singing to her father at a Desert Storm welcome home rally last April was named the Spot News Photo of the year for the Panhandle Press Association.

The Brand was also honored for advertising initiative and community service at the PPA's annual convention Saturday at the Harvey Hotel in Amarillo.

John Brooks, managing editor of the Brand, was installed as the PPA's 83rd president at the group's closing luncheon. He received the gavel from Tom Higley, publisher of the Sayre (Okla.) Journal. Brooks is the seventh person from the Brand to lead the regional press group. Others from the Brand include Mauri Montgomery, 1988-89; Paul Sims, 1980; O.G. Nieman, 1975-76; Jimmie Gillentine, 1943-44; Mrs. Seth B. Holman, 1940-41; and Seth Holman, 1921-22.

"It is an honor to lead this group," Brooks told the crowd of over 100 persons at the luncheon. "This is a difficult time for newspapers all over, but we can work our way through these hard times."

The winning photo was taken by Brooks at an April 27 welcome home ceremony at Sugarland Mall in Hereford. Sgt. Feris Zepeda was one of eight men honored at the ceremony. The picture featured his daughter Clarissa, 6, singing "Wind Beneath My Wings" to her father. Clarissa made it through the first verse just fine, then broke into tears as she reached the chorus.

"It's number one because of the human expression involved," said the judges from the Gulf Coast Press Association. They considered entries from over 20 other daily and semi-weekly papers in choosing Brooks' photograph.

The Brand was awarded second place in advertising initiative behind the Perryton Herald. The Brand was honored for work including the special edition saluting persons from Deaf Smith County involved in Operation Desert Storm; the "Hereford Holiday Happenings" edition in November, and other work for advertisers through the year.

Judges praised the Brand for layout of the ad, work done to make each ad distinctive, and the work by the Brand staff to support special sections with appropriate news to benefit readers and advertisers.

The Brand was also honored by judges for its support of the annual Operation Christmas Greeting program in Deaf Smith County. The Brand has served as the collection point for donations and has provided free support to boost the cause. Hundreds of county residents are directly helped by the program each year.

The Brand also earned an honorable mention in use of photography from the judges.

City of Hereford Update

BY CHESTER NOLEN
Hereford City Manager

The City Commission has been considering the 1992-93 budget in the last several workshops. Overall, the budget is going to be about 7 percent less than the past year's budget.

In the last several years, the City of Hereford, in addition to other cities, has drawn a flat blank in the area of Community Development funding. This past year has been no different. We proposed approximately $245,000 in street and drainage improvements to be funded by the block grant program. However, a bill has been introduced in Congress that will fund all of the small cities' requests nationwide. This would certainly be of help to Hereford.

Weather sirens were tested last week and not all were working. Those are currently under repair and we will test again in the near future.

Street department crews are working on storm drains and appreciate your courtesy in proceeding slowly in areas where they are working. Thanks!

Hope you've had a good day!

but other volunteer areas are just as important.

"Sometimes we just need someone to mow the lawn or go to the grocery store," said Roselius. "That is very important."

Roselius said Crown of Texas will be establishing an office in Hereford in the near future.

"It won't be much, because hospice isn't a building or an office or anything like that," she said. "Our office in Hereford may be someone's home, a nurse or someone we contract with. We will provide skilled nursing care because our main concern is to assist the patient. Our main concern is not an office or a building. We focus on people."

There is no need to pre-register, but persons who feel the need to talk to someone may call Gililand at 364-3717 or Ann Meyer at 578-4486.

CCA announces concerts

Professional artists featured during the 1992-93 Hereford Community Concert Association season will be (clockwise, from upper left) The Maggini String Quartet, The New Christy Minstrels, Dance Through Time and Laura Spitzer.

New attractions planned for 92-93

The Hereford Community Concert Association is offering four outstanding concerts during its 1992-93 concert season. Top professional musical attractions will be offered to local CCA members through the association with Columbia Artists management.

The annual CCA membership drive is being held throughout this month. The renewal campaign begins Monday and continues through April 18. The new membership drive is scheduled April 19-May 2.

Residents interested in joining the local association may sign up during the drive at campaign headquarters located at Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, 701 N. Main St. You may call the chamber office, 364-3333; Ann Meyer, 578-4486; or Majorie Mims, 364-1803.

Membership dues are $15 for adults; $7.50 for students through grade 12; and $40 for families. The association stresses that there will be no individual performance tickets sold; one must purchase a membership during the drive April 19-May 2. Attendance at the concerts is by membership card only. If the member cannot attend a concert, the card may be lent to another person.

Besides the advantage of being able to attend a series of live, professional concerts at the lowest possible cost to members, a CCA card holder may also attend concerts in area towns including Plainview, Pampa, Borger, Dumas and Dalhart.

Professional artists featured during the 1992-93 CCA concert season are The Maggini String Quartet, The New Christy Minstrels, Laura Spitzer and Dance Through Time.

The Maggini String Quartet was formed in 1988 by violinists Thomas Bowes and David Angel; Martin Outram, who plays the viola; and cellist Michal Kaznowski. The Maggini String Quartet has established an artistic identity recognized throughout Europe. The group has performed at major British festivals, broadcast extensively on the BBC and toured Spain. The members are known for their amusing and anecdotal spoken introductions at concerts.

Since its beginning in 1961, the New Christy Minstrels has surpassed virtually every major milestone of professional achievement and continue to entertain audiences throughout the world as one of the most exciting and versatile groups in show business. Over the years the Minstrels have appeared with Bob Hope, Andy Williams, Danny Thomas, Vikki Carr, The 5th Dimension, Alan King, Connie Francis, Jimmy Durante, Joey Bishop, Jose Feliciano, Dinah Shore, Julie Andrews, Foster Brooks, Buddy Hackett and Phyllis Diller. Each of the Christys is a strong solo performer in his or her own right. A look at some of The New Christy Minstrel alumni is proof of that: Kenny Rogers, John Denver, Kim Carnes, Karen Black and Barry McGuire.

Laura Spitzer may look like any other tall and slender female pianist, but the resemblance ends there. She is a one-woman act who trundles her own six-foot grand around the country playing to audiences from New York City to Ely, Nev. She engages every concertgoer with her music and commentary. A distinguished graduate of the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, she has won several European competitions and has toured throughout Europe and North America.

The theatrical dance company Dance Through Time was founded in 1980 by dance historian and choreographer Carol Teten. The non-profit performing company's unique artistic mission is to research, preserve and authentically present the dances of European and American heritage from the last 500 years. The company has grown from a core of two dance apprentices to a highly respected company of eight professional dancers now based in San Francisco, Calif.

National news briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's unemployment rate held at 7.3 percent in March, the worst in nearly seven years, the government said Friday, underscoring the halting pace of the economic recovery.

The number of unemployed people stood at 9.2 million, also unchanged from February. That's 2.5 million more than when the economic downturn began in July 1990.

TEENAGE

The letter is explicit. All drinking parties will be investigated. Criminal charges will be filed on all violators. Parents of all minors attending the parties will be notified, whether or not their child was drinking.

"Under-age drinking affects everyone, sometimes with disastrous results," says the letter. "Alcohol use threatens our children's lives, disrupts our schools, shatters families, and in some areas shatters communities. We cannot expect the law enforcement agencies to do the job without the help of parents and other community groups."

"We are asking for your support by talking with your children and explaining to them the consequences of under-age drinking."

The job market has failed to rebound so far despite signs of life elsewhere in the economy, including increases in retail sales, factory orders and housing construction.

"What we're seeing is a relatively flat economy. It's certainly not continuing to fall, but we're not seeing any substantial improvement either," said economist Robert LaLonde of the University of Chicago. "We're not like the Titanic going down in the storm. It's more like our engines have shut down and we're stranded on the ocean."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - President Bush said Friday that members of Congress should shorten their annual sessions and retire after 12 years. "Our Founding Fathers never considered elected government service to be a career," he said.

Bush, who has been in government for most of the past quarter century, presented himself during a day trip away from Washington as an advocate for sweeping change, seeking to end what he called "a failed status quo."

"We do not need a career Congress; we need a citizen Congress," said Bush, who has been fighting the Democratic-controlled House and Senate for more than a decade, first as vice president and then as president. He spoke Friday at the birthplace of the nation's first legislature, the Old House Chamber in Congress Hall.

He proposed overhauling congressional schedules so lawmakers can spend more time at home, called for a ban on special-interest campaign donations and said Congress should abide by the same laws it applies to others.

MOSCOW (AP) - President Boris N. Yeltsin on Friday fired deputy premier Gennady Burbulis, the second-most powerful official in the Russian government and the second top economic expert to be sacked this week.

Burbulis became the third Cabinet member to lose some responsibilities this week.

But since he will retain another powerful position, the reshuffling could simply be cosmetic. In fact, it appeared aimed at heading off a move to curb Yeltsin's powers at a key parliament session next week.

Texas literacy program reaching out to families

Illiteracy begins at home, and that's where some Texas literacy groups are attacking the problem -- by working with entire families.

Programs in family literacy, a new approach that attempts to teach reading skills to illiterate adults as well as their children, are being tried in communities around the state.

"Family literacy seeks to address the literacy needs of the entire family rather than working with only children or only adults," said Dr. Peggy Owens, literacy education specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "This approach tears down barriers and gets the teacher, parent and child working toward common goals."

At a family literacy conference held in Kingville last month, representatives from a range of public and private organizations shared successful strategies and programs that are working in their communities.

One innovative program, Project Even Start, works in three states to help migrant families improve their literacy skills. The pilot program, now in its third year, is a cooperative endeavor among state education agencies in Washington, Michigan and Texas. It is funded by the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Migrant Education.

Project Even start is designed to help parents recognize that they are effective teachers in their children's lives. The program also teaches parenting skill and helps children learn in a school environment.

"We teach parents to teach their children," said Roman Cruz, child development specialist and program coordinator in south Texas. "They work together and are motivated together."

Cruz explained the program also tries to identify and remove barriers to learning in the home, because sometimes they influence whether a person, especially an adult, stays motivated to learn.

"We actually go into their homes to see what needs to be done -- whether it's a problem with running water or having food to eat," said Cruz, who works with 63 families around La Joya in Hidalgo County. Cruz and another teacher, Victoria Marleas, were only supposed to teach 20 families in the pilot study, but were overwhelmed by the number of families wanting to participate.

Both teachers grew up in migranti families, and they travel with the families as they work from state to state.

"We get to go where the kids go, so we now what they go through," Cruz said.

"We've been able to learn from the families," he said. "Literacy has to come from within. Poverty doesn't matter. People want to best for their kids no matter what and are willing to work at achieving that goal."

As a result of the program, children no longer fear what will happen when they go to school, he said. Parents have gained confidence in their abilities to assist their children with learning, and both parent and child have a more positive home environment.

Breaking the illiteracy cycle could help reduce social and economic problems, Owens said. Jails, for example, are overcrowded with people who can't read. Some 85 percent of Texas' prison inmates have not completed high school.

Thirty-six percent of the adults in Texas have not completed high school, Owens said. Sixty percent of those in poverty have not finished high school, and of those, 63 percent are on welfare.

The picture is not bright for the coming generation, Owens said. In Texas, about 80,000 young people drop out of school each year. High school junior scores are at or below the national average in reading and writing, and 13 percent of all 17-year-olds are functionally illiterate.

"Children who don't have the basic developmental skills when they enter school are three to four times more likely to drop out later," Owens said. "Over 50 percent of children living in poverty enter school two or more years behind their peers."

Owens said that if current trends continue, this is what will happen to 100 children entering kindergarten today in Texas:

* 18 will drop out of school before the eighth grade.

* 27 more will drop out of high school before graduation.

* Of the 55 who graduate, seven will be unable to write.

"Family literacy means parents and children learning together," said Sylvia Cuellar, extension associate in literacy education.

"We Care"

To many, the road to happiness may seem to be a complicated maze of negotiations, manipulations, goals and attainments. However, is it correct to allow our sophistication to confuse the issue of a life of contentment? At its very basis, life is no different now than it was 200 years ago. We are, at our core, in need of but a few simple virtues to make life worthwhile. As Henry David Thoreau observed, "To be a philosopher is not merely to have second thoughts, nor even to found a school, but so to love wisdom as to live accordingly to its dictates, a life of simplicity, independence, magnanimity and trust."

Never before has the public been so preoccupied by youth and health. Today, all of us want to look terrific, and with some of the new scientific advances available, it's now becoming possible.

Here's a sampling of what's happening across the country to anew a youthful glow:

-Thigh liposuction, a tummy tuck, nose job, eye and face lift have helped Joan Rivers become the frank, confident woman she is today.

WHEN THE GOING GETS TOUGH

When there are fewer buyers in a softer market, real estate professionals really get a chance to exercise their know how. This means an extra effort to make properties more noticeable and more desirable to buyers. I may advise a home owner to do a little repainting, clear away clutter within the home, and get rid of rusty garden tools and old fireplace wood cluttering up the garage. I may initiate a special advertising program targeted to business transferencees buying in this area. I may even ask the home owner to agree to a series of "open house" events. The truth is, most motivated sellers do eventually find buyers. But it takes a little extra effort these days to move a property fast and to get top dollar for it. Sell-it-yourself home owners, have a vary hard time in a tight market. Smart sellers put expert real estate professionals to work for them and forget all hassles.

The cooperation of the City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County officials could not have been better. Judge Tom Simons and Mayor Tom LeGate were great leaders in their roles of vice chairmen of the group. We hope the group, or at least many of them, will stay "hooked to the wagon," as we strive toward other goals in the community.

We've published some of these hints before, but they bear repeating. You know that you're aging...

Just when we thought no one was reading....

No, Wal-Mart isn't coming to Hereford.

Some of you caught on early.

"I saw that headline and I read the last paragraph and I knew it wasn't true," said My Significant Other. (No, we in this business don't share secrets with anyone.) I faxed her a copy of the story soon after 1 p.m. Wednesday. She had it on display at Colortyme, just to see how folks would react to the story.

Some readers reacted angrily. One woman said she would cancel her subscription; we're sorry you were upset. A man said he didn't think it was right for us to do something like that; we're sorry you were upset.

Some reacted angrily for just a second. Some were upset when they realized they had been taken in. (We apologize a little to you, too. We didn't mean to upset anyone.) I understand one woman said my posterior was gonna be in a sling; she said it right after I broke the news to her that it was, after all, April Fool's Day.

A man called wanting to know just exactly why we didn't print "the whole story."

"I think you're covering up for the county," he said. "We want to know how much this is going to cost."

I thought I'd string him out a while longer and not tell him it was a joke. "They haven't settled on a firm price yet," I told the caller.

"I know why they're building it over there at the Bull Barn. It's in that tax abatement deal. I'm calling Tom Simons and I'm gonna let him have it."

That's when I had to break the news to him. I told him to look closely at the date the story said Wal-Mart would open.

June 31.

Ain't no such thing.

And, while Wal-Mart may have more billions than anyone else, they

An AP News Analysis

Clinton battles 'slick Willie' image

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Long before his scarred presidency, Richard Nixon wrote the book on political image problems. Now Bill Clinton is struggling with a sequel. Tricky Dick, meet Slick Willie. Clinton's challenge in seeking to dispel an image he calls a creation of strangers repeating the worst about him may be tougher than that confronted by Nixon in 1960 and 1968.

While Clinton works on repairs, rival Democrat Jerry Brown keeps trying to bang new dents into the voter impression of the Arkansas governor. Party leaders are worried he'll succeed and damage the man they still think likely to top the Democratic ticket next fall.

With denials and explanations, Clinton has dealt with questions about an alleged affair, his Vietnam era draft status, his business dealings, actions as governor, and most recently, his admission that he tried marijuana as a student at Oxford.

All of that has hit in 10 primary campaign weeks, forcing Clinton to deal with character questions that divert him and deflect attention from his ideas on national problems and issues.

It happened again Wednesday, when television host Phil Donahue pressed Clinton on the alleged affair. "I believe the measure of character is not whether you've always been perfect but whether you've made an honest effort to have convictions and to live by them," Clinton said, a standard answer to a nagging question.

The toll shows in the public opinion polls. Even while Clinton has been winning a delegate lead of more than 6 to 1 over Brown, and three major rivals have withdrawn from the race, the character issue has persisted.

Clinton says adverse perceptions are understandable given the barrage of "bad stuff" voters have been told about him by the news media. "I have been a punching bag in New York and all across this country," he said Monday after deciding to go head-on with Brown in a series of New York debates.

Despite the risks, Clinton said at least the debates would put his views on the issues directly to the people.

On NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" program a week ago Sunday, a questioner told Clinton that changing positions may account for the "Slick Willie" label first applied to him back in Arkansas. Clinton disputed the premise, saying he'd been consistent. "And, you see, one of the reasons that you get a Slick Willie attack is if someone like you mischaracterizes my position," he said.

But he certainly did nothing to dispel the impression with his handling of the marijuana question, repeatedly evading by saying he'd never broken state or federal law, then acknowledging on Sunday that he had broken British law at Oxford by trying it a couple of times. "No one had ever asked me the direct question before," he said.

Clinton's image problems are more personal and have been more concentrated than the "Tricky Dick" impression that dogged the early Nixon. That had nothing to do with Watergate; among its origins were the tactics of his initial campaigns for the House and Senate in California, the "Nixon Fund" controversy that almost pushed him off the 1952 ticket, and his vice presidential role as a political tough guy.

It was firmly implanted by 1960 when he first ran for president, and he already was saying he'd changed, he hoped for the better. "All right, they still call me Tricky Dick," he told columnist James J. Kilpatrick before his 1968 comeback. "It's a brutal thing to fight. If anyone takes the time to check my public record fairly ... he'd have to conclude that on the great issues of the past 20 years my record is clear and consistent."

No major primary opponents goaded him on the character question in either of those campaigns, and Nixon was the incumbent in 1972 when he won the term truncated by his Watergate resignation.

Looking back, John P. Sears, the Washington lawyer who managed Nixon's 1968 primary campaign, said trust was a problem that year, and the antidote was to concentrate on competence to do the job.

That's Clinton's emphasis now, as he tells Democrats he is the man who can manage the changes the nation needs made.

ALBANY, N.Y. - Democratic rivals Bill Clinton and Jerry Brown attack each other's honesty as the rhetoric heats up on the last weekend before presidential primaries in New York and two other states. Clinton also schedules a meeting with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, with whom he has clashed in the past.

WASHINGTON - Local United Way affiliates say they're pleased the national charity is taking steps to correct mismanagement and restore public confidence, but few seem ready to jump back into the fold right away.

UNITED NATIONS - Grim negotiators trying to organize a global effort to rescue the environment meet into the night in a smoke-filled room, trying to salvage an agreement ahead of an Earth Summit in June. But the chief U.S. delegate says the talks are stalemated over how to foot the bill.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - With little fanfare, white public schools have become private institutions and the government has given parents the power to keep classrooms segregated.

MOSCOW - President Boris N. Yeltsin has reshuffled his Cabinet in preparation for a key parliament session that is expected to open Monday with demands that he be stripped of some powers and his second post of premier.

WASHINGTON - Like ordinary people, Secretary of State James A. Baker III will be at the mercy of commercial airlines from now on when he heads out of town for relaxation.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am writing in support of improvements proposed for our golf course. The improvements are needed if the course is to be maintained. The sprinkling system would save water and with the shortage of water in our area, it is an important consideration. It would also cut down on the routine maintenance costs.

The golf course is an asset to our community. The argument that it serves only a small segment of our society is not true. Corporations, businessmen and women, retired people, students and children all use it.

This is a sport that has no age limitations. It is definitely something to occupy our young people and it is a wholesome activity. No one speaks of our parks or swimming pools paying for themselves but this is always an item when speaking of the golf course.

The golf course was certainly a consideration in our deciding to retire in Hereford and it draws other people, too. Amarillo people use our course on a regular basis and pay to do so. It's one thing that does not take money out of Hereford but brings money in. The tournaments draw people from a wide area and people spend other monies besides what they spend at the golf course.

With our new management arrangements at the course, I feel that the course could be on a break-even or even a profit in the future.

Sincerely,
Bernice T. Orel

Dear Editor:

I have received a number of inquiries as to the reason for my resignation from the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors.

I found my two years on the board both challenging and frustrating. I advocated an economic development program that encouraged more openness and greater involvement from the general public and both city and county governments (very similar to the current Prison Task Force), and more accountability and self-evaluation to determine the Chamber's effectiveness.

I also requested a survey be sent to the membership (as Amarillo recently did) to ascertain their priorities and feelings and asked for stricter adherence to the by-laws by reviewing the job performance of the executive vice president on an annual basis. Each of these items dealt with response to the low regard that this community has towards its Chamber.

Each request was met in a defensive and uncooperative manner by the executive vice president. Needless to say there was a difference of philosophy, with each side having both positive and negative merits. These were not the reasons I tendered my resignation.

As the City was reviewing the next fiscal year's budget, I was surprised to learn that the City gave the Chamber of Commerce an average of $15,000 annually in tax money. These funds are required by state law to be spent on "promotion of tourism and the hotel and convention industry" in Hereford and this vicinity. This tax is levied on people who stay in local motels, is rebated from the state back to the city and they, in turn, give it to the Chamber.

As a Chamber board member I never saw an accounting of these funds nor did I know of their availability. In further review of the city files, I discovered that approximately 50 percent of the money designated for the promotion of our community was going to a chamber administration fee. This charge ranged from $875 to the current $600 per month and goes toward paying the general operating expenses of the chamber. The remaining funds went to pay for a variety of items including litterbags, key rings, golf tees, Bull pins, concert tickets, Town & Country Jubilee, and billboards. This represents but a few of the items--a complete list as provided by the chamber has been given to The Hereford Brand and KPAN Radio.

We have many fine assets to promote in this community, such as Senior Citizens Center, National Cowgirl Hall of Fame, the Museum, E.B. Black House and our golf course, to name a few. I was both embarrassed and outraged to learn of the use of this tax money and how it has been accounted for in the past. The report on the funds contains only 12 of the past 21 quarters. The city has no record of the other reports but they have been requested from the chamber.

This is not a vendetta against the Chamber of Commerce, only a request for accountability. Our citizens need jobs, our motels need customers, our merchants need occupants, and our cultural centers need visitors and deserved recognition, all of which are affected by the use of these tax dollars.

I will make a motion Monday at the City Commission meeting recommending that further funding to the chamber be suspended until a complete accounting of these funds is provided and until state law is met by providing a proposed budget to be approved in an open meeting of the City Commission. The city, I don't believe, wants to be in the tourism and promotion business but it is their responsibility to insure the proper expenditure of these funds. I felt very uncomfortable by what I saw and therefore believe this information should be available to the public.

This was the reason for my resignation. I had to choose who I want going to represent and I opted for the taxpayers and the community.

Sincerely,
James McDowell

Casual dining popular

Nearly one in four American children today live in single-parent households. Some three in four mothers of children over six, and about 60 percent of mothers with children under six, are in the labor force. Those are two good reasons time together may be more precious than ever for modern American families. They want to have as many meals together as possible. They also don't want to spend a lot of time cooking.

According to one recent poll, half the parents surveyed said their children under 13 were "very influential" or "somewhat influential" in a family decision to eat out. In fact, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, households with children account for 35 percent of all U.S. households, but 43 percent of all spending on food away from home.

Children were also revealed to have a strong influence in what restaurant the family would choose. All this has led to an increase in the number of meals families tend to bring in or have delivered. It's also brought about a change in the kinds of restaurants frequented. Families are turning more and more to casual, child-friendly places.

The earliest known mention of tea appeared in Chinese literature of about A.D. 350.

Long jump

Hereford eighth grader Amy Andrews takes flight in the long jump event in the girls' junior high track meet at Whiteface Stadium Friday. Andrews took third place in the event.

7th-graders second at HJH track meet

Hereford's seventh-grade girls' track team took second in the Hereford Invitational Track Meet Friday at Whiteface Stadium.

Hereford finished with 110 points, only 15 behind winner Dumas. Plainview was right behind with 105 points.

In the eighth-grade competition, Hereford was third with 91 points. Pampa won with 149 points, followed by Borger with 132. Valleyview was fourth with 82, followed by Plainview with 61, Canyon with 43 and Dumas with 31.

Rounding out the seventh-grade field was Borger with 90, Pampa with 61, Canyon with 37 and Valleyview with 18.

Perhaps the best individual performance of the day was turned in by Hereford eighth-grader Aimee Alley. In winning the 3,200-meter race, she broke the district and meet record by nearly 30 seconds. She ran the race (about two miles) in 13:27.53, beating the old record of 13:56.0, set by Hereford's Gina Haschke last year.

Alley got the only win for the eighth-grade team. There were several winners for the seventh-grade team: Katie Bone in the 400-meter dash, with a time of 66.68; Bethany Townsend in the 1,600, with a time of 6:19.86; Missy Lemons in the 100-meter hurdles, with a time of 17.44; the 800-meter relay team (Lemons, Courtney Gearn, Shawna Don Juan and Courtney Crawford), with a time of 1:57.36; and the 1,600 relay team (Bone, Creata Crox, Marie Crox and Christina Kuper), with a time of 4:38.05.

Complete results of the meet will be printed in Tuesday's Brand.

Herd JV blasts Canyon, 12-0

The bad news is that Hereford's junior varsity baseball team only got six hits. The good news is that four of those hits brought home two runs each.

The good news outweighed the bad Friday at Whiteface Field as the JV romped over Canyon's JV 12-0 in five innings. Josh Tice, Stacey Sanders, Anthony Tijerina and Ray Hastings each had two-RBI hits.

More good news: Hastings was on the mound. He pitched the complete game, striking out nine batters and allowing three hits and one walk.

With help from pretty good defense (only three errors, one of which was his), he ran his record to 5-0. The team is 8-4.

"He's the best pitcher I've got," Coach Henry Perez said. "I like to pitch him a lot."

The Herd started with five runs in the first. Chris Vallejo singled, Kyle Hansen reached on the shortstop's error and Vallejo was forced out at third when J.J. Rico grounded to short. Hastings and Elias Reyna walked (Hansen scored on a passed ball between the walks). Tice singled home two runs, and one batter later, Sanders singled home another two.

In the second, Rico and Hastings walked, and Tijerina followed with a high double to center field which brought home two runs.

Hereford got five more in the third. Sanders reached on an error. Vallejo singled and Elijah Walker walked before Sanders scored on a passed ball. Hayden Andrews walked, loading the bases to set up Hastings' two-run single.

Shama Hernandez walked, setting up two more runs. Tice grounded to deep short, and the shortstop tried to get Hernandez at second. The throw was late and Hernandez was safe, but instead of sliding, he rounded the bag.

Since there was no force-out, Andrews scored from third on the play, and Hernandez stayed in a rundown long enough for Leon Trevino to score. Trevino, running for Hastings, was on second when the play started. Hernandez was tagged out a few feet from third.

That ended the scoring.

Girls' golf team falls into third

Hereford's girls' golf team shot 392 Friday and dropped into third place in the district race after two of the four district rounds.

Hereford was six strokes off the lead after one round, but the team is now 22 strokes off. Borger shot 368 at Pampa Country Club Friday to move into second with a two-round 733 (Hereford is at 753). Pampa shot 376 Friday and kept a two-stroke lead in the district race.

The girls were to play a third district round at Phillips Country Club in Borger Saturday.

Also on Friday, the boys team played in the Amarillo Relays. They were to play in a five team consolation tournament Saturday after failing to finish in the top six after the first day.

Hereford totaled 352 Friday at Amarillo Country Club, 11 strokes off of what they needed to stay in the running for the Division I title.

Monterey shot 319 to lead the pack, followed by Amarillo High "A" (324), Pampa (333), Borger (334), Amarillo High "B" (340) and Wichita Falls Rider (341).

Randall, at 342, just missed the cut and will join Hereford, Coronado (343), Tascosa (347) and Plainview (351) in the consolation tournament at Southwest Golf Course in Amarillo.

Those teams not making either cut were Lubbock High (355), Palo Duro (370), Caprock (370), Wichita Falls (387) and Dumas (394).

Following are individual scores for Hereford players:

Boys:
Clay Cantrell: 85
Mikel Walser: 86
Jayson Mines: 87
David Bone: 94
Santry Hacker: 98

Girls:
Paula Britten: 91
Jennifer Prater: 96

LSU's O'Neal chooses NBA

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - All-American center Shaquille O'Neal is saying goodbye to college basketball to join the NBA, where he's expected to attract big money as the No. 1 draft pick.

"I feel that in my heart it's time for a change and it's time for me to move on," the 7-foot-1, 300-pound O'Neal said, announcing he intends to skip his senior year of eligibility at Louisiana State.

O'Neal, 20, with his family by his side, made the announcement Friday in a gym at Fort Sam Houston, the Army post where his father is stationed and where O'Neal played high school basketball.

Some of his high school teammates and family friends attended the news conference. Many looked on silently, and others took photographs and congratulated the soft-spoken college superstar.

O'Neal said he made up his mind to leave LSU earlier this week.

"I said to myself, 'Are you having fun?' And I reviewed in my mind this past season and I wasn't having that much fun," he said. "I was taught at an early age, if it's not fun, do something else."

He said he would resign from LSU next week but will pursue his business administration degree during his off-seasons.

"I think the experience was very much needed, but now I'm ready to take what I have learned on with me to the NBA," he said, adding that he will explore all his basketball options, including playing for a foreign team.

O'Neal said he discussed his decision Sunday in San Antonio with his family and LSU coach Dale Brown, who O'Neal said supported whatever decision he made.

A few weeks ago, Brown reportedly advised O'Neal to turn pro because of what Brown perceived as the undue pounding O'Neal received from opposing teams, which often triple-teamed him. But Brown said he remained neutral during Sunday's meeting with O'Neal.

O'Neal said triple- and quadruple-teaming often prevented him from showing all his basketball talents. But he said that wasn't the main reason for his decision to turn pro.

"I'm not making this decision out of anger or frustration, but everyone who saw the SEC tournament, they know that an injustice was done," O'Neal said.

In a tournament game against Tennessee, O'Neal was grabbed around the waist, triggering a bench-clearing brawl. O'Neal was ejected from the game for fighting, meaning he was automatically suspended for LSU's next game, a semifinal loss to Kentucky.

O'Neal averaged 24.1 points, 14 rebounds and 5.2 blocked shots for the Tigers this past season, his junior year. The Tigers lost in the second round of the NCAA tournament to Indiana.

It is thought O'Neal could be the highest paid rookie in NBA history.

O'Neal said he has high expectations for his NBA career, although at first he expects it to be a learning experience.

In the next couple of months, he said, he plans to attend a "big man's" basketball camp on the West Coast to prepare himself for pro basketball.

O'Neal stressed his plan to complete his education at LSU.

His father, Sgt. Philip Harrison, supported his son's decision.

"It's a sad moment for me because we stressed education in our family," Harrison said. "Shaquille had to do what he had to do. He made the right decision, and whatever decision he's made, we're going to stick behind him 100 percent."

Jazz jump Suns

By The Associated Press

Karl Malone and the Utah Jazz got back on track against the Phoenix Suns.

Malone, held to 10 points in his previous game, didn't score a basket in the first 21 minutes against the Suns Friday night. But the All-Star forward then snapped out of his slump, getting 21 points in 14 minutes to lead the Jazz to a 113-94 victory at the Delta Center.

Malone finished with 32 points for the Jazz, who had lost their two previous games by a total of 51 points.

"I think I didn't get into the offense, and I tried to rush my shots (in the first half)," he said. "Then I got into a groove and took what the defense gave me. It was a big win for us and we needed it."

Malone was held to four free throws until late in the second quarter, when he started his 21-point burst. By the time he left for a rest with 1:08 left in the third quarter, the Jazz held a comfortable 84-67 lead.

The victory pulled Utah closer to Phoenix and Golden State in the battle for playoff position in the Western Conference. The Jazz now trail the Suns by a half-game and the Warriors by two games.

"It was a crucial game to beat a team like Phoenix that has been playing well and that we are trying to beat for a position in the playoffs," said Jeff Malone, who had 25 points for Utah.

Dan Majerle scored 18 points for the Suns.

In other games, it was New York 115, Atlanta 94; New Jersey 122, Milwaukee 103; Washington 119, Detroit 85; Cleveland 103, Miami 100; Indiana 101, Boston 97; Chicago 114, the Los Angeles Clippers 103; Minnesota 104, Dallas 95; Orlando 113, San Antonio 106 in overtime; Seattle 96, the Los Angeles Lakers 91; and Golden State 124, Sacramento 116 in overtime.

Bulls 114, Clippers 103

At Chicago, Scottie Pippen scored 24 points as Chicago tied a franchise record with its 61st victory of the season.

Michael Jordan was held to 15 points, half his average.

Timberwolves 104, Mavericks 95

At Dallas, Pooh Richardson scored 22 points, including two free throws with 23.7 seconds left. Herb Williams led Dallas with 26 points.

Magic 113, Spurs 106, OT

At San Antonio, Anthony Bowie scored 24 points and Orlando made nine of 10 free throws in overtime. Antoine Carr led the Spurs with 30 points, 10 rebounds and five blocks.

Bullets 119, Pistons 85

At Landover, Ledell Eackles scored 29 points and Michael Adams had 21 as Washington posted its most lopsided victory of the season. Harvey Grant added 22 for the Bullets.

Knicks 115, Hawks 94

At New York, Patrick Ewing scored 19 of his 29 points in the first quarter as the Knicks beat Atlanta. Ewing had three three-point plays and made eight of 11 shots in the first period as the Knicks overcame a 9-0 run by the Hawks to lead 35-27.

Nets 122, Bucks 103

At East Rutherford, Drazen Petrovic scored 26 points and the New Jersey Nets used a third-period surge to hand the Milwaukee Bucks its 22nd straight road loss.

Mookie Blaylock had 21 points and 10 assists for the Nets, who outscored the Bucks 36-12 in the third quarter.

Cavaliers 103, Heat 100

At Miami, Cleveland survived a flurry of 3-point tries by the Heat in the final 20 seconds. On the Heat's final possession, Glen Rice missed a 3-point attempt, Grant Long missed an inside shot, Rice missed while standing on the 3-point line, and Rice missed again from beyond the line. Mark Price led Cleveland with 21 points and 11 assists.

Ryan: Rangers 'should win' this season

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) --Nolan Ryan has a country saying for it. He calls it "bacon saving time."

For the talented Texas Rangers, it means there can be no excuses for not contending for the American League Western Division title this year.

"The pitching is the key," said Ryan, who will decide at the end of the season whether he will pitch again next year. "We've got the hitters. But the pitching has to come through and we've got to play better defense. But this team should win. There shouldn't be any excuses if we don't. It's bacon saving time."

Manager Bobby Valentine, who has been manager of the Rangers longer than anyone, said, "I would expect us to win. We've got the team to do it."

"It's time to win," said Rangers general manager Tom Grieve. "The talent is there to win. We have depth, we have power, and we have a good blend of veterans with the young guys. We're going to be there (in a pennant race) this September."

Julio Franco, who led the AL in batting with a .341 average, said, "If we stay healthy there's no way anybody stops us. We can hit. Our fielding and our pitching will be better."

Franco has rested most of the spring because of bursitis in his right knee. But he said he will be in the lineup opening day.

"I'll be there, you can count on it," Franco said earlier in the spring.

However, there are some doubts. The Rangers have groomed Monty Farris and Jeff Huxton to play second until Franco returns.

The Rangers were 85-77 last year, yet finished 10 games behind the world champion Minnesota Twins.

Texas had a team batting average of .270, third best in the majors behind Minnesota's .280 and Milwaukee's .271. The Rangers led the majors in runs scored with 829.

"We can have a great team this year and I think we will," said Ruben Sierra, who will make $5 million this year thanks to arbitration. Sierra will become a free agent if the Rangers don't sign him before the season is over.

"I want to have such a good year that they (The Rangers) will have to pay me," said Sierra, who is looking for a five-year guaranteed contract at about $6 million per season. "I feel good. I feel ready."

The pitching staff needs to pick it up for Texas to have a solid run at the pennant.

Texas was 11th in the American League with a 4.47 earned run average. The pitching staff gave up 814 runs and 662 walks, the most in the majors. Rangers hurlers also served up 151 homers.

"We had injuries, we had all kind of problems," Grieve said. "But we have pitchers with major league credentials and it's time for the law of averages to even out. There's no reason why this staff can't do the job."

Starter Kevin Brown, who has the best potential in the organization, had a 9-12 record and a 4.40 ERA last year. Brown has been much better this spring as he concentrates on throwing strikes, and as he says,

"being aggressive like I was in college."

Starter Bobby Witt made just 16 starts with a 6.09 ERA before hurting his arm. He had arthroscopic surgery to remove a bone spur from his elbow in September.

Witt has been healthy this spring and showed flashes of top form from two years ago when he won 12 straight games.

When Ryan, 12-6, was healthy, he teamed with Jose Guzman, 13-7, who bounced back from two years absence because of arm troubles, to give the Rangers a formidable 1-2 punch.

But Ryan twice hit the disabled list because of injuries.

Also, projected starter Scott Chiamparino lasted only five starts before needing elbow surgery.

Jeff Russell was the big horse in the bullpen with 30 saves. Kenny Rogers was the stopper from the left side with five saves.

Russell has been a worry this spring because of a bone spur on his pitching elbow. He was held out for two weeks and given a cortisone shot to try and solve the problem.

The only major move in the off-season brought shortstop Dickie Thon, who hit .252 with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"Dickie has had a tremendous spring," Valentine said. "He's shown he can move and has hit the ball well."

Thon even hit a homer off Ryan in an intrasquad game.

The Rangers will return Julio Franco at second; Rafael Palmeiro, who hit .322 at led the major leagues with 49 doubles at first; young Dean Palmer, who took over for the traded Steve Beuchele and hit .187 with 15 homers at third; and Ivan Rodriguez, who hit .264 as a rookie, at catcher.

In the outfield, Texas will have Sierra, who hit .307 with 25 homers; Juan Gonzalez, who hit .264 with 27 homers; Kevin Reimer, who hit .269 with 20 homers; and Jack Daugherty, who hit .194 with one homer. Reimer has had a big spring and could play almost every day.

"It's important that this team get off to a good start," Grieve said. "It could really get the fans behind the team."

Texas was leading the AL West at the All-Star break last year then faded over the second half of the season.

"We know what the potential of this team can be," Grieve said. "Now, we have to go out and do it."

As Ryan says, it's bacon saving time.

Astros to stay patient with youth

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Astros like to attach mottos to each season.

The official advertising tag this year is "Get Into the Game" but a more accurate alternative could be "Deep Breath Two."

The Astros took a deep breath last season and went with unproven rookies and entry level minor leaguers. They took their lumps with 97 losses.

This season, General Manager Bill Wood will again load up on patience and go with the kids.

"Our entire crowd is fighting off the gray hair syndrome," Wood said. "It'll drain your patience but you have to recognize that this is a part of the factor."

"To do things the way we've done them, you'd better be patient or you shouldn't have gone down this road in the first place."

But the Astros won't be as laughable this season because of the Atlanta Braves, who lost 97 games in 1990 before finding themselves in the seventh game of the World Series last season.

There is no groundswell of support for the Astros to duplicate the feat. The Astros face 200-1 odds of reaching the World Series, the same numerical chance that confronted the Braves a year ago.

The Astros are generally expected to finish last in their division for the second straight year, despite the development of several players last year and the addition of power hitter Pete Incaviglia and closer Doug Jones.

Further complicating the Astros hopes is a 26-game, 28-day mid-season road trip while the Republican Party holds its nominating convention in the Astrodome. Houston managed only 28 victories away from home last year.

The Astros expect improvement in right field, an RBI sinkhole last season.

"Pete Incaviglia has been a totally pleasant experience for me," Wood said. "He's in great shape, he's busted his tail every day. He's a quality addition for our organization."

Incaviglia is returning from a season of horrors. He was cut by the Texas Rangers, picked up by the Detroit Tigers and cut after an injury-filled season.

"He doesn't have the range to compare with the great right fielders but he's got a plenty of arm and he's a better athlete than anybody gives him credit for," Wood said.

Unproven rookies from last season--first baseman Jeff Bagwell, shortstop Andruw Cedeño and left fielder Luis Gonzalez--have a year's experience. Bagwell earned Rookie of the Year honors and Cedeño gained valuable playing time at shortstop.

Craig Biggio has shifted from catcher to second base and having a young shortstop has complicated his learning process.

Cedeño had the unfortunate experience of committing six errors in three games against Atlanta as the Braves were clinching the pennant. He's still fighting to gain consistency.

"If Craig played with a veteran shortstop it would be easier but he's playing across from a shortstop who has a lot to learn himself," Wood said. "We recognize that will be one of the big stories about our club, the uncertainties in the middle of the diamond."

Catcher Eddie Taubensee, obtained in the off-season from Cleveland, is the new face in the lineup.

Jones shows promise of returning to his 1990 form when he was the Cleveland Indians' save artist. Al Osuna, (7-6 and 12 saves) returns to the bullpen.

Gonzalez will be in left field, Finley returns to center field and Incaviglia will fill a 1991 void in right field. Ken Caminiti returns to third base.

Stops A Nation

MELBOURNE (AP) - The Melbourne Cup, run every November, is rated Australia's greatest horse race and is called "The Race That Stops A Nation."

Just about everything in the country does stop for the few minutes it takes to complete the course of 3,200 meters, a little less than two miles.

Currently known as the Foster's Melbourne Cup, the purse value has reached the $2 million mark. The starting field is limited to 24 horses. The race is run at handicap weights.

Jake Gibbs, who caught major league baseball, played on three winning football bowl teams at Mississippi.

Former boxing great Mickey Walker was nicknamed the "Toy Bulldog."

The one-time middleweight champion, Caferino Garcia of the Philippines, features the "bolo punch."

The original name of the great middleweight, Tony Zalc, was Anthony Florian Zaleski.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm writing about something that has brought a lump to my throat. It won't go away until I have a good cry about it.

Last night my husband and I were having a late-night talk when the conversation shifted and I asked him if his parents had ever told him that they loved him. We've been married several years, and I have never heard either one of his parents tell him they love him.

I didn't realize what an old wound I had opened until he told me that every once in a while his mother tells him that she loves him, but his father never has. Tears welled in my eyes and I sensed the hurt in his voice.

He told me that once when he was a teenager, he tried to tell his father that he loved him, but his father made a joke of it and changed the subject.

I know how he feels. My father died when I was 20, and even though I had told him I loved him, I only heard him say it to me once. I was miles and miles away from home, and he said it over the telephone. I have treasured that memory for the past 16 years. I hoped he'd say it again, but he never did. That one time, however, will sustain me forever.

I am pleading with your readers, Ann, to tell a son, daughter, mother, father, relative, friend, anyone who is loved, that he or she IS loved. And don't say, "Yeah, you, too."

If you find you just can't say it yet, hand someone you love this column.

I love you, Ann. Thank you for listening.--S.B.S., Indianapolis, Ind.

DEAR S.B.S.: And I love you for writing.

The British unconditionally surrendered Singapore to the Japanese Feb. 15, 1942, during World War II. It was a major blow to the Allies because the island controlled an important sea route.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm an attractive, well-thought-of woman, 41 years of age. The problem? I shoplift like crazy. I was finally caught two weeks ago and am now facing petty theft charges. In spite of all this, I am still doing it.

I need to stop before I'm caught again. Can you help me?--No Name, No City

DEAR N.N.: Contact Shoplifters Anonymous, founded on the basic 12-steps of Alcoholics Anonymous. The address is: Shoplifters Anonymous, P.O. Box 24515, Minneapolis, Minn. 55424. Write for information today.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a female with a very deep voice. I am married, have three daughters and have no masculine tendencies whatever. The older I get, the deeper my voice becomes. Inevitably when I make a telephone call, I am called "sir."

I work in a department store and my job is answering phone calls from people inquiring about merchandise. I often say, "When you come to our store, please ask for me, Linda." The caller usually says, "I beg your pardon?" I repeat, "My name is Linda." The response is always the same--"Would you spell that for me?"

This morning I called my daughter's school and the secretary called me "sir" three times. Finally, I said, "My name is Linda." There were several seconds of silence. I decided the woman was either embarrassed or deaf, so I just told her my daughter would be out today because of the snowstorm. She ended the conversation by saying, "Thanks for calling, sir."

Do you have any advice for me?--Disgusted in Maine.

DEAR MAINE: Yes. Learn to live with it.

Gem of the Day: The best way to find something you've lost is to buy a replacement.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Stone, Reed exchange wedding vows Saturday

Shala Dion Stone of Hereford became the bride of Jeremy Lee Reed of Friona during an afternoon ceremony Saturday at the Church of the Nazarene. Dr. David Slamp of the church officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stengel of Route 5, Hereford, and Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Stone of Lubbock. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Parker of Preston, Kan. and Duane Reed of Friona.

The church altar was decorated with brass spiral candelabra and a rainbow arch candelabrum accented with dusty rose and teal flowers and bows. A brass stand held the unity candle.

Kristin Jesko served as maid of honor and the groom's father, Duane Reed, was best man.

Kerri Lange and Angie Boggs were bridesmaids and groomsmen were the groom's brother, T.J. Reed, and Jeremiah Norwood.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brother, Tracy Stone, and Scott Short.

The bride's sister, Micah Stengel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stengel, was flower girl, and ring bearer was the groom's brother, Christopher Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Parker.

Candles were lit by the bride's brother, Robby Stengel, and Sheena Jesko.

Susie Merrick and Diana Kimmel, accompanied by Lori Poarch, sang "The Rose", "The Wedding Prayer" and "Forever Is As Far As I'll Go."

Given in marriage by her father, Johnny Stone, the bride wore a formal gown of white antique satin. It was fashioned with a fitted bodice, which was enhanced with Italian lace, a sweetheart neckline and short puffed sleeves. The bodice was fitted to a widow's point at the waist. Cascades of satin fell down the back of the skirt which was marked by a large designer's satin bow.

The tea-length veil of bridal illusion formed a delicate pouf at the back of a lace headband which came to a frontal point.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white magnolias and white roses with touches of teal and dusty rose miniature roses. The arrangement was enhanced with baby's breath and bridal net.

Her jewelry consisted of diamond earrings belonging to her stepmother. Bridal attendants were attired in teal dresses which featured open back necklines, back bows and graduating hemlines. Each carried a single large dusty rose colored rose with teal ribbons.

Brandi Clark invited guests to register at the reception in the church fellowship hall.

The bride's cake was served by Ruby Lee and Sheree Goforth served the groom's cake. Luane Carter poured punch and Denna Vardeman poured coffee. Ruby Lee was the wedding coordinator.

The bride's three-tiered heart shaped white cake was decorated with teal and dusty rose rosettes and topped with bride and groom figurines. The groom's German chocolate cake was iced in chocolate.

Leaving for the wedding trip, the bride wore a fitted double breasted print top with contrasting teal binding and a tapered matching skirt.

The couple will make their home in Hereford.

The bride is a May candidate for graduation from Hereford High School and is employed by Ford-New Holland.

The groom is also a May candidate for graduation from Friona High School. He is employed by Racer Truck Wash in Friona.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. W.W. Frazier of Littlefield; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Harrell and Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Richardson, all of Anton; Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Marion Stone, all of Kress; Rita Thompson of Weatherford, Okla.; and Linda Kernell of Lubbock.

Breakfast bulletin

Nutritionists agree that breakfast is the most important meal of the day. But the problem compounded by two-career families' hectic schedules remains: how to get kids to eat the nourishing food that's good for them without those morning hassles that leave everyone with frazzled nerves.

Here's one approach that works: take the ideas behind their favorite foods, then turn them into healthful, appealing morning fare. You'll find that mild, smooth melting cheese is especially helpful.

For example, it is easy to create breakfast cheeseburgers using vegetable-based "sausage" patties, grilled with a slice of cheese on a fortified bun.

Good health doesn't just happen, you have to work at it. Today, more Americans work it, eat better and take better care of themselves to look and feel healthy.

There is plenty of help available. National Medical Laboratory Week, April 12-18, 1992 honors over 250,000 health care professionals who work behind the scenes to help you stay healthy. Music department tunes up for 12th annual showcase

Every spring, music patrons grab their spring calendars and jot down important dates to remember--Easter, Mother's Day, Memorial Day and the West Texas State University Showcase of Music.

"Each year, I look out over the crowd and I see a lot of familiar faces," Dr. Harry Haines, head of the WTSU department of music and dance, said. "Showcase has become a tradition. It's the same high-quality, entertaining variety show with all new music."

The 90-minute musical extravaganza, featuring approximately 300 WTSU students and faculty members in one or more of 18 different performances, begins at 8 p.m. Friday, April 10 at the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium. An informal preconcert show will start at 7:30 p.m. in the lobby.

BRAD STANFORD

Stanford receives degree

The grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Scott of Hereford, Brad Lane Stanford, recently received a bachelor's degree in pharmacy at Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford, Okla.

Stanford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Stanford, is a member of Phi Delta Chi and received its Alpha Omega Award in 1991. He is also a member of Rho Chi, an honor student fraternity.

Stanford is listed in "Who's Who Among American College and University Students" for 1991. After graduation in May, he will attend Ohio State University in Columbus, Ohio, where he will pursue a doctorate in pharmacology.

Variety has been the hallmark of previous Showcase concerts and 1992 will be no different. Music will vary from classical to jazz, small groups to large and vocal to instrumental.

Program selections include "Fanfare for Showcase" by Nelson and performed by the Trumpet Choir, "Egmont Overture" by Beethoven performed by the WTSU Orchestra, "Never Mind the Why and Wherefore" by Gilbert and Sullivan performed by the Opera Workshop, "Christus Factus Est" by Bruckner and performed by the Trombone Ensemble, "Armenian Dances" by Reed performed by the Concert Band, "Purism" by Dedrick performed by the Saxophone Quartet, "March to the Scaffold" by Berlioz and Ellis performed by the French Horn Choir, "There Shall a Star From Jacob Come Forth" by Mendelssohn and performed by the Collegiate Choir, "String Quartet in A minor Op. 13" by Mendelssohn performed by the Dance Ensemble and the Harrington String Quartet, "The Next Generation" by Courage and Goldsmith performed by the Double Reed Ensemble, "North Shore Morning" by Harris performed by the Jazz Band, "Cantate Domino" by Hassler and Farmer performed by the WTSU Chorale, "Dan-u-el" by Mechem performed by the Chorale and the Collegiate Choir, "Solfeggietto" by Bach performed by the Clarinet Ensemble, "Ku-Ka Llimoku" by Rouse performed by the Percussion Ensemble, "Ku-Ka Llimoku" by Rouse performed by the Percussion Ensemble, "Edelweiss" by Rogers and Turk performed by the Flute Ensemble, "From a Distance" by Gold performed by the Music Therapy Club, "Symphony No. 5" by Shostakovich performed by the Symphonic Band and "Battle Hymn of the Republic" arranged by Wilhousky and performed by combined ensembles.

The final slot on the program will be filled by the winner of a student ensemble contest sponsored by the department and will be announced at a later date.

The Amarillo Globe-News continues its sponsorship of the event, and Bill Sexton will serve as the master of ceremonies for the 12th consecutive year, adding his own brand of humor between acts.

Although Showcase originated in 1982 to acquaint the community with the quality of WTSU's music and dance department, it has become an important source of scholarship revenue. To date, income from Showcase has accounted for more than $60,000 in music scholarships, aiding hundreds of students in their pursuit of a quality education.

MR. AND MRS. KEVIN CANSLER

Cansler, Wilson wed in Hartley March 21

Former Hereford Brand employee, Dancer Wilson, and Kevin Cansler were united in marriage Saturday evening, March 21, during a private ceremony held in First United Methodist Church of Hartley.

Pastor Gene Amerson officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Danny and Rebecca Garvin of Canadian and the bridegroom is the son of Charlie and Carolyn Cansler of Hartley.

The bride was attired in a casual winter white knee-length dress with a fitted bodice accented with gold buttons running to the waist in the back of the dress. She was escorted to the altar by her father.

Her arm bouquet consisted of pink, teal, cranberry roses, pink and teal rose buds, daisies, eucalyptus, baby's breath, blue and white status, pearl seed strands and cranberry beads. The bouquet rested on a pink Bible given to the bride by her parents as a wedding gift.

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a double chain-link necklace and pearl earrings set in gold.

The church was decorated with pink paper bows, two family candles and the unity candle at the altar. Pink paper bows with teal streamers and wedding bells were placed on the pews.

Serving as matron of honor was Melissa Schniederjorn of Hartley. She wore a casual pink dress with a fitted waistband. She carried a small hand-bouquet of pink roses, eucalyptus, pink and teal rose buds, cranberry beads and baby's breath tied with a pink paper bow.

Mark Schniederjorn of Hartley was best man.

The bride's son, Reese Wilson, was ring bearer.

Sherry Frantz of Hartley played the piano.

The reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride's table was covered with a pink cloth and decorated with the bride's bouquet and the double tiered white wedding cake trimmed with pink roses and topped with cowboy and bride figurines.

The groom's table featured an Italian cream cake made by his mother, Carolyn Cansler.

A buffet of meat balls, dips, chips, vegetable tray and punch was served to guests.

YOUR EYES

COLOR DEFICIENCIES

People aren't really color-blind. Everyone sees some color, but certain individuals are color-deficient: they have difficulty differentiating between specific colors. The most common problem: being unable to tell red from green.

As it happens, in our automotive society, it is particularly important to be able to distinguish between red and green, stop and go, danger and safety. Color-deficient pedestrians and drivers must learn to interpret whatever it is they see in place of those colors so they can function on streets and roads.

Your optometrist will test your eyes for color deficiency. The usual test is a chart on which numbers made up of dots in various shades of green are integrated into a background of dots in various shades of red. Most people have no difficulty picking out the number; those who do are color-deficient to some degree. Males are more likely to be color-deficient than are females.

During last week's concert, fans of the heavy metal rock group dangled an usher by his ankles from a balcony, trashed seats and caused other damage, arena director Joanne Grant said.

ANDREA BORDEN, MARK PROCTOR

Engagement announced

Connie Renee Zinser and Charles Carlyle McDowell, both of Dallas, plan to wed June 27 in Amarillo.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Gene Zinser of 501 Westhaven and Karen Zinser of Amarillo. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Jim McDowell of 127 N. Texas and Nancy Russell of Amarillo.

Miss Zinser, a 1985 graduate of Hereford High School, received a bachelor of science degree in education from Texas Tech University in 1989. She is employed by Richardson Independent School District.

McDowell, a 1983 HHS graduate, received a bachelor of arts degree in communication from the University of Oklahoma in 1987. He is employed by Lincoln Property Co.

Shape child's cultural values

Music is a form of beauty. Music, too, stirs the memory of our people. It connects us to our history, our traditions, our heritage. It is a dominant force in the world, shaping every culture's senses as well as the values of its children as few other forces can.

It is critically important that our children understand their place in today's world by making these connections. In the folk songs of Appalachia, in the emotional reverberations of the blues, in the soaring spirituality of Leonard Bernstein's Mass, in the vigor of Aaron Copland's Rodeo, our children can awaken to a knowledge of themselves - their community and their world - in ways that cannot be duplicated. We want our children to know and understand music precisely because it has intrinsic value on these and many other levels.

Yet, today, only nine states in the U.S. require arts courses for all High School students; 55% of all school districts in the nation do not have even one full time music instructor. This is more alarming when you consider that studies in other countries have demonstrated that along with these cultural benefits, there is a significant relationship between music instruction and education performance in reading, spelling, mathematics, listening and verbal abilities, and motor skills.

What can you do to encourage band and orchestra in your child's school? Among other things, make sure the school board, administrators and local politicians know of your commitment to music education.

Naval hero Oliver Hazard Perry was born in 1785 in South Kingstown, R.I.

Diabetics should take preventative measures

For diabetics, there is no sidestepping good foot care. "Fifteen to 20 years into the disease, poor circulation and nerve damage can threaten the limb," said Dr. Glenn Cunningham, an endocrinologist at Baylor College of Medicine and the Houston Veterans Affairs Medical Center. "But proper preventive measures can help patients avoid foot problems."

Because nerve damage causes loss of sensation in the feet, diabetics are often unaware of blisters, cuts and other foot injuries. Such damage may lead to infection, gangrene and amputation, if left untreated.

"Fifty to 75 percent of diabetic foot amputations can be avoided through proper care and early detection and treatment of foot problems," Cunningham said. Foot injuries become dangerous when the diabetic has poor circulation.

"Healing can not occur without a significant increase in blood flow, and poor circulation in the less and feet makes this increase impossible," he said.

To lessen the chance of foot injury, Cunningham encourages diabetics to practice the following methods of preventive foot care daily:

- Wear comfortable shoes with good arch support and proper fit.
- Wear clean socks or hose.
- Check inside shoes for pebbles, tacks or tears in lining.
- Wash feet with luke warm water and soap, dry well. Use lanolin-based cream after bathing, but do not put cream between toes. Keep feet warm and dry.
- Cut toenails straight across to prevent ingrown nails.
- Buff down corns or calluses with a pumice stone or emery board. Do not cut them or use a chemical corn remover.
- When outdoors, use sunscreen on feet.

"Every Day, diabetics should inspect their feet for any type of damage," Cunningham said. "If there is any kind of opening in the skin, they should see a physician or podiatrist immediately."

Treatment for infected foot ulcers often involves antibiotics. But, healing still remains a problem.

"Circulation can sometimes be improved by surgery to bypass obstructed leg arteries, or surgeons can clean out obstructed vessels," he said.

Cunningham maintains that a patient's best defense against serious foot problems is consistent preventive care.

CRYSTAL KITTEN, RICKY BACKUS

June wedding date set

Crystal Kitten of Lubbock and Ricky Backus of Hereford plan to exchange wedding vows June 20 in Holy Family Catholic Church in Nazareth.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Clarence and Carol Sue Kitten of Slaton and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Hubert and Joan Backus of Nazareth.

Miss Kitten, a 1987 graduate of Lubbock Cooper High School, is currently attending Texas Tech University and is a May candidate for graduation with a degree in physical therapy.

Backus, a 1985 graduate of Nazareth High School, received a bachelor's degree in business management from Texas Tech University in 1990. He is presently employed as an agriculturist with Holly Sugar.

Hospitals adding doctors of chiropractic to staffs

A trend among hospitals is developing in which doctors of chiropractic are being offered access and/or staff privileges. It has been spurred by three developments according to a national chiropractic leader: the increased number of medical studies showing that chiropractic procedure is a highly effective method of health care; the recent settlement of the anti-trust act against the American Medical Association (AMA) which has led to a change in the AMA's code of ethics governing the medical practitioner's relationship with doctors of chiropractic; and, economics.

Donald J. Krippendorf, D.C., Hospital Relations spokesperson for the American Chiropractic Association said, "We estimate there are more than 50 medical and osteopathic hospitals throughout the U.S. which now have chiropractors on staff, and in some cases chiropractic departments, and the numbers are growing. In just about every case that I know of, it has worked out very well with full cooperation between the medical and nursing staff, the administration and the doctors of chiropractic."

According to the chiropractic leader, who himself serves on a hospital staff, the movement toward on-staff privileges for chiropractors, cross-referral between the professions, and cooperative treatment of patient is one that started in local areas and is growing rapidly.

"Patients are not too tolerant of the division between the health disciplines that has existed in the past. They realize that no single profession has all the answers to the complex health problems of the human body, plus they are looking for the most cost-effective way of having their illnesses treated. The most logical answer is cooperation. Each profession should do what it does best," Dr. Krippendorf said.

In the past, members of the American Medical Association were prohibited in their code of ethics from cooperating with doctors of chiropractic, and hospitals followed suit. Recent developments, including a federal case in which the AMA was found guilty of violation of U.S. antitrust laws, has led to a new and more permissive code of ethics.

Dr. Krippendorf pointed out that the change in attitude of organized medicine is tantamount to a revolution in the health industry. Chiropractic is a separate and distinct healing art which fills a major void in health service available under the hospital setting.

"With health-care costs growing out of sight, it is obvious there are going to have to be many changes in the health industry. For over 20 years, by patents have been asking, 'when are you guys going to get together?' Progressive hospitals are recognizing this and opening their doors to new ideas and new philosophies of health care. The addition of doctors of chiropractic to hospitals and encouragement of health-team cooperation will serve to enhance patient care and reduce health cost," Dr. Krippendorf concluded.

Dr. Krippendorf practices in St. Petersburg, Florida.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

From The Mailbag

I goofed, and the calls and letters came pouring in. In the recent column "To Inc. or not to Inc.," I missed another ownership option that is available to Texas and Kansas leaders. It may soon be available to readers in Oklahoma and Illinois as well. The additional legal structure is called a limited liability company.

The limited liability company (LLC) offers much of the protection and many of the advantages of incorporating. However, LLCs have fewer restrictions than S corporations and are less expensive to form. In the state of Texas, the filing fee for an LLC is only $200 versus $400 for a corporation.

Other significant advantages surface when comparing LLCs to S corporations. For example, the S corporation is limited to one class of stock, whereas the LLC can have both preferred and common shares. An S corporation is limited to no more than 35 shareholders, but there are no restrictions on LLCs.

If you are thinking of incorporating, a limited liability company may offer another option well worth considering. My thanks to Amarillo attorneys Mark R. Ensign and T. Alan Rhodes who provided summaries of the LLC legislation and a handy guide to compare the different forms of ownership.

If you would like additional information on LLCs in Texas, please send a self-addressed envelope with at least 52 cents postage on it. Write to LLCs, c/o Minding Your Own Business, P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105. We'll be happy to send copies to you. Kansas readers should contact the office of Secretary of State in Topeka. All other readers should encourage your legislators to consider similar legislation.

We Hit A Nerve

Two other recent columns brought in a lot of reader comments. The first was the column headlined "A Polite Customer." This column pointed out that it was often the little things that cause a customer to get fed up with a business.

L.W. from Texas shared several recent experiences involving major purchases he had made. One occurred on a new car lot. L.W. wrote that the car salesman acted as though he had insulted his mother when he mentioned that the dealer's price was not competitive with the price 'Consumer Reports' had suggested. The salesman said that they couldn't get a better price if they went all the way to the factory in Tokyo. L.W. tried another dealer 125 miles away and saved $1,100.

The "polite customer" column also brought our first piece of hate mail. An anonymous reader spewed three pages of pent-up venom in which she - surprised from the pretty penmanship - called me (expletives deleted) a spoiled, picky and selfish baby. Although this reader missed my point altogether, I apologize for any offense taken.

More Lost Sales

The "Lost Sale" column also generated notable amounts of reader response. L.G. from Oklahoma wrote that when clerks are too busy talking to wait on her, she simply walks out of the store and finds what she needs down the street. More lost sales.

A.G. from Texas wrote and gave three examples of merchants who didn't care enough to return calls that could have led to significant sales. One of those "lost sales" was a $60,000 automobile. It went to a more customer oriented dealer 300 miles away.

One final note about mail. I enjoy your letters and value your comments. Thanks for writing. Please write to your local paper and let them know if you enjoy a particular column or the column in general. Those of you who read this column are our customers. The publishers, editors and I all need your input. As long as you keep reading our column, we'll keep providing it.

You may write to Don Taylor in c/o "Minding Your Own Business," P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

If April showers bring May flowers, what do Mayflowers bring? Pilgrims! And April will be bringing good times to Deaf Smith County Library. To begin with, April 5-11 is Texas Library Association meeting, and that means the librarian will be out of town. While she's gone, we're going to throw a party!

This Thursday, April 9, the library will be the scene of a Meet Felicity party. Felicity Merriman is the latest addition to the "American Girls" series, and we will be formally welcoming her books to the library with this affair. Children are invited to bring their dolls and/or come in costume of their favorite "American Girl." The Friends of the Library will be assisted by the DAR in hosting this event where participants will "make colonial-style 'mob caps' and marble bags, view the colonial-set and will last about an hour. It will be held, appropriately, in the Heritage Room of the library. By the way, the Meet Felicity party is really in recognition of National Library Week, not in celebration of the librarian's absence!

We have a new display for April. Matt Baird, son of Ernest and Mary Ruth Baird is exhibiting part of his collection of Civil War items. He has been collecting for about four years and his favorite item, he says, is The Civil War Day by Day, an almanac of the war period. Matt is a seventh grader at Hereford Junior High.

The Family Film for the month is Where the Red Fern Grows, and will be shown on April 16. This is a true story of a young boy's ambition to own a pair of hunting dogs, and the difficulties he encounters. Everyone I have talked to informs me that this picture is deeply moving.

Of course, the first thing the library is going to do this month is put out some new books. Harold Coyle is back with a new military adventure novel, Trial By Fire, in which, for the first time, he brings war to American soil with an all too plausible Mexican revolution.

"Compelling" comes up again in the jacket blurb of Charlotte Vale Allen's new offering, Leftover Dreams. This is the story of three generations of unique, strong-spirited women whose individual histories combine to evoke tears and laughter.

Biographies sweep the non-fiction this week, though you probably won't recognize the names. The Sign and the Seal is the story of Graham Hancock and his search for the Ark of the Covenant. Claims to have found it, too.

Arlene Brickman is the focus of Mob Girl by Teresa Carpenter. Subtitled "A Woman's Life in the Underworld," the book relates Brickman's experiences with kingpins and hitmen. Definitely for the "sex and violence" devotees.

And speaking of the Mob... Double Cross is promoted as "the explosive, inside story of the mobster who controlled America." The man was Sam Giancana, and the book is co-authored by his godson and brother. It claims to be the first to solve "the sensational, hitherto unsolved mysteries behind the deaths of John and Robert Kennedy, and Marilyn Monroe. Exposes deals! Names names! Personally, I'm a little skeptical, but it probably makes a pretty good story.

Bargain of the week - for the cost of a trip to the library you can learn 1001 Things Everyone Should Know About Science. Collected and presented by James Trefil, this little volume contains tons of tidbits that you probably never cared about before, but now find out you should know them. Surprise your spouse! Amaze your friends! Share with them your newfound scientific knowledge, and tell them things they should know, too.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Filmmaker Blake Edwards, whose movie themes have touched on everything from middle-aged angst to slapstick comedy, will be honored with a retrospective of his work at next month's annual Cannes Film Festival.

Edwards' 1968 film, "The Party," will open the 10-film retrospective on May 10 in honor of the writer-director-producer. The 45th annual festival begins May 5 in Cannes, France.

Other films in the retrospective include "Breakfast at Tiffany's," starring Audrey Hepburn; "Days of Wine and Roses," starring Jack Lemmon; and "10," starring Dudley Moore, Bo Derek and Edwards' wife, Julie Andrews.

Edwards will begin work on his 48th film, "Son of the Pink Panther," after the festival, publicist Gene Schwam said Wednesday.

Other Edwards' films include "The Return of the Pink Panther," "The Pink Panther Strikes Again," and "Revenge of the Pink Panther."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I would like to know how long spices can be stored before they need to be thrown away.

I moved about a year ago and boxed up the spices and kept them in a cool basement for over a year. In a few months I would like to use them. Please tell me how I can tell if they're still good. — L.M., Olympia, Wash.

Spices don't spoil, but they lose potency. The only way to check them is to smell them and see if they still smell strong. You can add them to a recipe and if it has a flavor difference, then the spice probably should be tossed in the garbage.

To keep spices longer, store them away from the stove, sink or dishwasher. Instead store them in the pantry. Also, replace the spice-container lid as soon as possible after each use. — Heloise

Ways to help homeless

Practically all people have thought about helping the homeless, yet it seems hard for a lot of us. Homeless advocates say if more people realized just how easy it is to help the homeless in their communities, much more would be done.

Elaine L. Jack, general president of the Relief Society, the women's organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is one such advocate. Her organization has been helping the homeless for 150 years since it was formed in 1842. She said getting involved is much easier than most people think. "It's easy and extremely rewarding to help the homeless. Just take it a step at a time. Too many people feel like they have to do everything."

One simple way to help is to donate needed goods. All donated items should be in good condition. Check your phone directory or community services column of your local newspaper for addresses and phone numbers of homeless shelters. Then contact the local group to confirm the best way to donate your items and/or items.

Mrs. Jack said most people can get started by picking one or two items from the following suggestions.

- * Donate clean coats, gloves, mittens, and woolen hats during the fall and winter months.

- * Give new or used clean sleeping bags, pillows, and blankets.

- * Donate cosmetic samples.

- * Household cleaning supplies such as liquid cleaners, rags, and paper towels are welcomed by homeless people.

- * If you travel, save the small soaps and shampoos to give to the homeless shelters.

- * Encourage children to give a new toy, other gift, or nutritious snack to homeless children.

- * When buying socks or underwear, buy another package to donate.

- * Buy and give local mass transit passes and/or tokens.

- * Donate extra garden produce to local agencies against hunger or your local homeless shelter.

- * Food for surplus canned goods you may have at home. If they are not very outdated, they are welcomed by the homeless.

- * Organize a fund raiser in your neighborhood. Designate the funds for milk, children's socks, mass transit passes and tokens, woolen hats, etc. to an agency of your choice.

- * If you have employment opportunities homeless people could fill, contact your local employment agencies and other outreach programs.

- * Interest members of your club, church, civic organization, or family in "sponsoring" an agency serving homeless or low-income people. This sponsorship can involve volunteer activities, donations of needed goods, or financial support.

- * If you own a truck, pledge at least one trip a year to help a homeless family move.

- * Volunteer time to serve food, answer the telephone, or provide help at different shelters and agencies.

- * Pots, pans, eating utensils, dishes, and old furniture are appreciated by the homeless when they are able to move into an apartment or their housing unit.

Hospital to offer screenings

It's been said often enough that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Deaf Smith General Hospital has taken that advice to heart.

On the second Wednesday of each month, the hospital hosts free blood pressure and glucose screenings. As individuals get older, these important areas should be monitored more closely. Changes in glucose levels or in blood pressure often signal the possibility of serious problems. If those situations are assessed early enough, damage to your health often can be prevented.

The hospital will provide these important screenings from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. April 8 at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center. Residents of the community are encouraged to stop by the center.

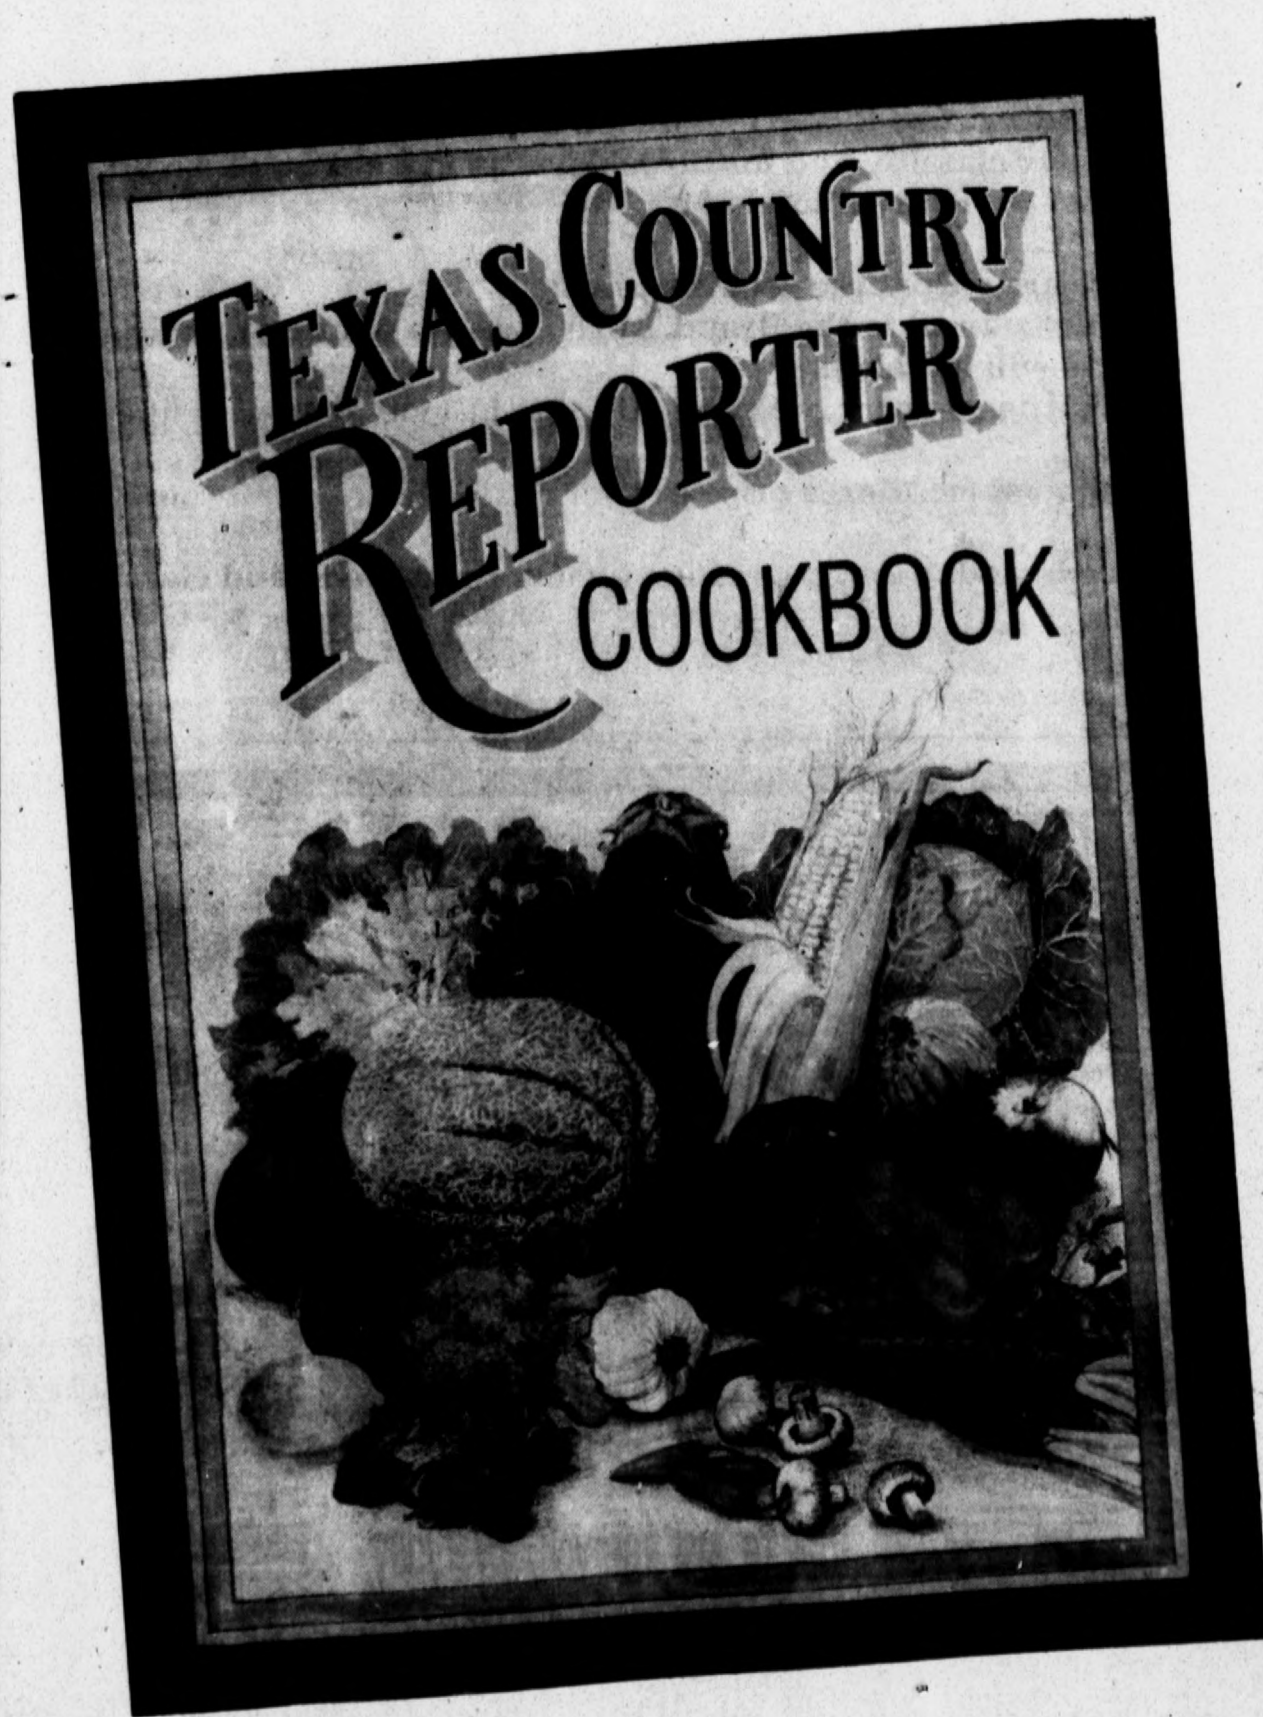

The staff of Deaf Smith General Hospital, your neighbors, are dedicated to caring for your health. Screenings and preventive measures now can make the difference in your health later.

FOUR BEDROOM PLAN SEQUESTERS THE MASTER BEDROOM SUITE

Sundeck Is Direct From Master Bedroom, Breakfast Room and Great Room

© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

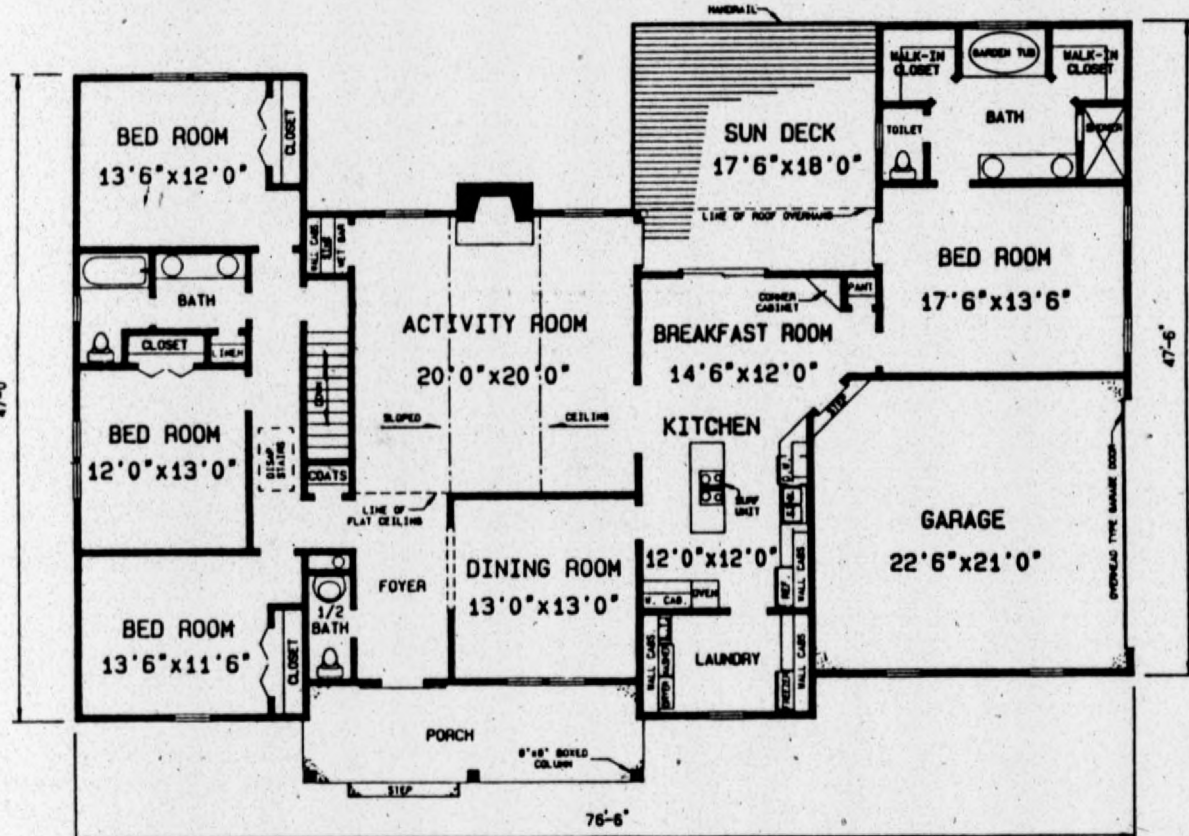

There are four bedrooms in this plan, the master bedroom suite being located in a private wing and featuring a luxury bath. Three other bedrooms are at the opposite end of the plan and a central bath services all three.

The central great room is designed with a sloped ceiling. It is separated from the formal dining room as well as the adjoining breakfast room and kitchen. Notice the island surface unit cabinet and the abundance of cabinets and work area. A large private laundry room is shown with additional storage and exceptional space for wash day duties.

A central stair is to the basement and a half bath is central for day-time use.

The cape cod exterior is shown with a gable roof design, long multi lite windows, horizontal wood siding and a wide front porch.

The plan is Number 2552. It includes 2,555 square feet of heated space and is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Question-Answer

Q. - We want to install a humidifier in our home, since we've heard that moist air requires less energy to heat, is good for plants and might even keep the family from getting so many colds. We talked to our furnace repairman about installing a unit and he adamantly opposed the idea. He says that he'd had to replace $1,000 furnaces because of a $100 humidifier. He claims that small leaks develop in the humidifiers, and water leaks into the furnaces causing them to rust.

I haven't checked the installer's story yet, nor have I gotten a second opinion. What are your thoughts on this?

A. - A humidifier is practically a must with warm-air heat. I'm afraid I can't agree with your repairman. In a Sears humidifier, for example, the tank or pan is outside of the duct. An overflow tube pipes any water overflow away from the furnace. The squirrel cage or paddle wheel is wired into the furnace blower, so it's almost impossible for water to be induced into the system and cause flooding. Sears, as well as many other manufacturers, has two models. One introduces vapor into the return air duct, the other introduces vapor into the discharge side.

I prefer the discharge-side unit, because the heated air can absorb more moisture. Although the installation is geared toward a do-it-yourselfer, Sears will install it for a service charge. Remember though, the humidistat (which turns the unit on and off to preset humidity requirements) must be fastened on the duct's return air side.

The first important radio patent was presented to Thomas Edison on December 29, 1892 for a "means of transmitting signals electrically...without the use of wires."
