OFFICIALS OF BIG PROJECT WANT ACTION

Irrigation Board Notifies Waggoner to Either Talk Trade or Condemnation Proceedings Will Follow.

Waggoner Holdings in Baylor Are on Site Proposed for Big Reservoir; Attack Issued Saturday.

Directors of the Wichita Falls irrigation district answered the circulation of an attack on the irrigation project, mailed out to tax payers in the Water Improvement District No. 1 over the name of R. L. More of Vernon, manager of W. T. Waggoner interests there, by authorizing the sending of a letter to Mr. Waggoner advising that unless he was willing to talk trade on the Baylor county lands which will be needed for the reservoir, that condemnation proceedings will be initiated against it.

The action follows attempts to make an amicable trade with Mr. Waggoner which have been carried on intermittently for the past two years—attempts which to this time have been without success.

The lands, which are for the most part broken grazing lands, necessary for the building of the main reservoir and the diversion reservoir, will be roughly about 20,000 acres.

Early Start Expected

The expected early completion of negotiations for the sale of the bonds, and the consequent starting of the work, necessitating an early action on the land matter, has probably more than the attack by Mr. Waggoner's Vernon associate to do with the sending of the letter at this time, according to those closely in touch with the affairs of the irrigation board.

The latter, sent out in envelopes bearing a Vernon postmark, gives what is alleged to be chemical analyses of water which Mr. More says that he took from the Big Wichita river, in which it is claimed that the water is unfit for use by reason of the large content of sodium compounds and other solids.

This report was one with a number, along with the statement that no dam could be constructed here to hold back the amount of water proposed for the impounding reservoir, which were circulated prior to the voting of bonds, and promptly proved unfounded at that time.

Granting that the water was taken from the river under the conditions Mr. More points out, the analyses are probably correct, they say.

Old Story

It is the old, old story, they say, and was the first problem on which Mr. Kemp got expert scientific advice when he first proposed the irrigation system nearly 30 years ago.

The fact that the More statement says that the water was clear shows that the samples were taken when the river was in a low water stage, for that is the only time when Wichita river water is clear. When it is in a low water stage, they say, it is highly saturated with alkali solution—bearing the residue of the alkali from all the water that has passed over the river bed before and after. This has been the case in all dry territory where irrigation has been found necessary, notably in West Texas and the west generally.

The remedy is absurdly simple, they point out. In a body of water containing nearly half a million acre feet, several miles long and over a mile wide, and 85 feet deep in the deepest places, the alkali and solids which made eight parts in a thousand in three feet of water three feet deep in the river bed would barely be detectable in the most complete

SENATOR KNOX LAID TO REST WITH HONORS

By Associated Press.

VALLEY FORGE, Pa., Oct. 15.—U. S. Senator Philander C. Knox was buried in Valley Forge memorial cemetery this afternoon. The body of the senator, who died in Washington Wednesday night, lay in the back room of his residence here during the morning, where many friends paid their last respects.

Shortly after 2:30 p. m., when simple services had been held at the house, the coffin was conveyed to the cemetery followed by members and friends of the family.

As the cortege passed Valley Forge memorial chapel it was joined by the congressional delegation from Washington, headed by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, chairman of the foreign relations committee.

PARTICIPATION IN KLAN ACTIVITIES ILLEGAL-CURETON

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Oct. 15.—In the event "any order, organization or body of individuals agree and confederate among themselves to do any act which would be in violation of the laws of the country, each and every act of every individual composing the conspiracy in the furtherance of the conspiracy, would be illegal. This would apply to masked parades where such parade is a part of, and in furtherance of a purpose to do some act which would be in violation of the law," held Attorney General C. M. Cureton, in an exhaustive opinion today defining the legal status of Ku Klux Klan.

General Cureton quotes at length from the constitution of the state and the penal code bearing on unlawful assemblies, constitutional rights, riots and conspiracy. Then continues: "We therefore conclude that all efforts of persons under any name they may have assumed to better the moral conditions of the country through the medium of threats, intimidation and personal violence in violation of the spirit and letter of the constitution and laws of our state and each and every act done and performed by them carrying out or furthering any illegal purpose, or which has for its object the doing of any act forbidden by law, would involve the guilt of all participating having knowledge of a general purpose to do illegal acts or actual knowledge of the doing of an illegal act."

Attention is called by the attorney general in the opinion to samples of notices, threats, anonymous communications sent to the department by county officials and alleged to be klan matter, then he held in the opinion.

Text of Opinion

"If any of these means are thought to be applied by frightening person in disguise, article 446 of the penal code would be violated.

"If the purpose of the assembly be to effect any illegal object not named, the parties would likewise be guilty of violating article 448, penal code.

"If the meeting is called for a lawful purpose and three or more persons are assembled and afterwards agree to do some unlawful act, all parties are equally guilty of the offense as defined in article 435, penal code prohibiting unlawful assembly.

"If the effect of the notice is to prevent any person from pursuing any labor, occupation or employment, or intimidate any other person from following his daily avocation, then such act would violate article 460, penal code.

"If the parties assembled attempt to do any unlawful act, all that are engaged in such unlawful act would be guilty of riot., article 481, penal code.

"If any person engaged in a riot shall commit any illegal act, other than these mentioned in the articles defining unlawful assembly and riot, shall be guilty of violating article 462, penal code.

"If several parties engaged in any riot whereby an illegal act is committed, all parties are guilty of any act committed by by any one of the participants under article 464, penal code.

"If any person shall be unlawfully or riotously assembled together, it shall be the duty of any magistrate or peace officer, as soon as it may come to his knowledge, to go to the place of such unlawful assembly and compel the party to disperse under article 468, penal code.

Neff's Statement

In conclusion with the opinion Governor Neff gave out a statement to the peace officers of Texas, calling their attention to the opinion through the press.

"Charged as I am, with a constitutional responsibility," the governor's statement said, "I call upon you, the peace officers of Texas, to enforce the laws. I earnestly ask all right thinking citizens of every cult and creed and color to uphold the hand of our officers in their efforts to maintain the supremacy of the law. It is my fervent hope that we may all work together for law and order throughout the confines of our commonwealth."

SCOTTY AND FIELDS ARE REMANDED

Special to the Record News.

HENRIETTA, Oct. 15.—H. T. "Scotty" Scott and Sewell Fields, widely known Wichita Falls characters, were returned to the county jail here this afternoon following a preliminary hearing in justice court on charges of having robbed Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Givens, proprietors of a general store at Dean on the night of October 10.

At the conclusion of the hearing, which lasted one and half hours, Justice of the Peace Clay Coleman remanded the two men, against whom several indictments and charges are pending in Wichita county, to the county jail without bond to await the action of the grand jury, which convenes here Monday, October 24.

Mrs. Jim Lemons of Wichita Falls, arrested as an alleged accomplice in the highjacking, was released on $500 bond by agreement of state and defense attorneys. According to information from defense attorneys habeas corpus proceedings will be instituted the first of the week in the 30th District court to secure Scott's and Fields' release on bond.

Scotty entered the 30th District court room where the hearing was held in his usual "happy go lucky" manner. A black left eye was silent evidence of the beating he is said to have received on Monday night at the hands of a fellow prisoner at the city jail of Wichita Falls when on his entrance to his cell he announced that he was a "bad man."

He laughed with others when one of his several attorneys referred to the eye as a "birth mark" in the course of his cross examination of one

STOKES CHARGE FALSE ASSERTS SCHOOL HEAD

Gatesville Superintendent Upholds Methods of Twyman in Testimony Before Control Board.

By Associated Press.

GATESVILLE, Texas, Oct. 15.—Flat denial that he had made overtures to boy inmates regarding their testimony to be given before the board of control now inquiring into conditions at the state juvenile training school was made by C. E. King, superintendent of the school, when the hearing was resumed today. He also testified he had repeatedly watched H. C. Twyman, former drill master, and other employes at the institution, and that he had never seen any objectionable punishment administered to boys.

King said he had investigated every rumor and complaint and had found them groundless; except in a few instances where he had discharged the employes to blame for mistreating the boys. He said he had recently talked to a numrer of boys and advised them to not let the death of Dell Thames, 14-year-old boy, break down their morals or discipline. Twyman is charged with murder in connection with Thames' death.

Charges made before the board yesterday by Eddie Stokes of Dallas that certain officials of the school had urged boy inmates to "bias their testimony," also was denied by L. Taylor, 17, another inmate. Taylor, who was mentioned by Stokes as having been offered his freedom if he gave certain testimony, on the stand today declared he "had never been offered a parole to change my testimony; such charges are untrue."

The board expects to conclude the hearing late today.

KU KLUX KLAN DENOUNCED BY TEXAS C. OF C.

Resolution Condemning Activities of Order Introduced by President Cullinan, Is Adopted.

Citizens Should Elect Competent Officers and Support Them, Is Sentiment of Meeting.

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 15.—A resolution bitterly denouncing the Ku Klux Klan and its activities in Texas, introduced by President J. S. Cullinan of Houston Thursday was adopted without change by the Texas Chamber of Commerce at the city hall auditorium Saturday morning.

George W. Armstrong of Fort Worth was the only speaker against the resolution. He declared that he was not a member although he had been invited to join the Klan in Fort Worth and had attended one of its meetings.

These men in the Ku Klux Klan mean well, he said, and I do not think we ought to pass a resolution outlawing them. Armstrong asserted that the laws were not being enforced by constituted authorities and that the Ku Klux Klan would continue as long as the need for it existed. No man connected with the Ku Klux Klan organization anywhere has been connected with any crime.

H. B. Dorsey of Fort Worth attacked the klan, saying that it offered an opportunity for a man not a member of the klan to injure his enemy under disguise.

He criticized the citizens of Fort Worth for not going to their officials to secure the enforcement of the law rather than joining a secret organization. How many men in Fort Worth, members of the klan, go to the polls upon election day to vote for good officials? he asked. We do not need a Ku Klux Klan to enforce the law. We should elect good officers and stay behind them.

James Z. George of Dallas, general manager of the Texas Chamber of Commerce, said that the resolution should be approved unless the chamber favored abandonment of the present system of government. John V. Hughes of Dallas also favored the resolution.

Armstrong then moved to table. Four men voted with him to table the resolution. About 50 were pres-

KELL ASKS ALL BUSINESS MEN TO TAKE STOCK

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH. Oct. 15.—The agricultural livestock finance corporation, organized here under the war finance corporation to make loans available to farmrs and cattle men of the southwest, announced tonight that half of the $1,500,000 capital had been pledged in Fort Worth.

Business men of Wichita Falls and other points in this section are urged to subscribe to the stock of the Agricultural-Livestock Finance corporation which is being organized as a duty both to themselves, and to the interests which are the principal foundations of their business and that of their district, in a statement issued by Frank Kell Saturday night.

Mr. Kell was one of the moving spirits in the organization of the corporation, even though at first he favored another form. He has subscribed liberally to the stock of the institution.

"This stock, in my judgment, will pay 25 or 30 per cent dividends the first year, in addition to proving the means of saving these interests from their threatened crisis, an drelieving the banks of the burden of carrying them."

The proportion of the capital stock to be subscribed at Fort Worth has been pledged, according to messages received Saturday night by Mr. Kell and the Record News from John F. Sparks, chairman of the organization committee of the corporation. The books are now ready for subscriptions he says.

SAYS ROADS CAN OPERATE DESPITE EMPLOYEES' STRIKE

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The railroads will be able to continue operation despite the nation-wide strike called by sixteen railroad labor organizations, in the opinion of Samuel M. Felton, president of the Chicago Great Western, one of the principal roads included in the first group on which the rail employes will walk out on October 30.

FIRST WALKOUT ORDER EFFECT NATION-WIDE

Virtual Tie-Up in Every City and 42 States Oct. 30 by Plan Proposed by Union Leaders.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The first walkout in the progressive general railroad strike, scheduled to begin at 6 a. m., October 30, would find virtually every large city and 42 of the 48 states in the nation affected. Only the New England states would be untouched in the strikes planned for the roads in the first of the four groups of carriers.

The strike is planned to extend along every border of the country with the exception of the extreme northeast and to cover every interior state.

The seventeen roads which first would be affected have a total mileage of 73,431 miles, approximately 36 per cent of the trackage of the country including all of the railroad

CITY CHICAGO GIVEN SETBACK IN LIBEL SUIT

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Judge Harry Fisher today sustained the demurrer of the Chicago Tribune to the $10,000,000 libel suit brought by the city of Chicago. He declared the city had no cause for action and denied it the right to amend its petition.

The city brought identical suits against the Tribune and Daily News, claiming that the papers had printed false statements regarding Chicago's financial standng and thereby injured the city's credit.

Judge Fisher declared the portion of English common law and status which restricted the liberty of the press had not been inherited by this country. "This action," he said, "is not in harmony with the genuis, spirit and objects of our institutions."

The decision was of far-reaching importance to newspapers as the suit was the first of record in which a municipality sought to restrict the right to criticize its corporate act.

The court held that libel was applicable only to private persons or corporations and he concluded that the city might not sue for libel, "unless, by some legal fiction, the plaintiff is to be regarded, for the purpose of this suit, as a private person, in which even the publications are defamatory and libel without lie."

Judge Fisher extolled the part which newspapers play in modern industrial and social developments and in times of national stress, such as the recent war. He said that with increased power of the press had come naturally increased abuses of power. He pointed out that often a great portion of press is led to serve economic interests to the detriment of the public but he added that the harm it could do was limited by the fact that existence of a newspaper depended upon public favor.

SEVERE RIOTS REPORTED IN MEXICAN CITY

Two Lives Lost in Disorder Which Is Demonstration Against Government's Taxation Rate.

Majority of Stores Closed and Food Supplies Are Said to Be Very Nearly Exhausted.

By Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 15.—A desperate situation, which already has cost two lives from violence, is reported today at Puebla, where demonstration is against the state government's excessive tax law continues. A majority of the stores have been closed, the bread and milk supplies are said to be exhausted, and food of all kinds is extremely scarce.

Street cars are not running, according to reports, which add that incensed leaders hourly are exhorting shouting throngs to take aggressive action against the state government. One of the most prominent of these leaders is said to be Jose Maria Sanchez.

More than 30,000 persons are said to have held a mass meeting yesterday afternoon and to have staged a parade. Their line of march was guarded by soldiers in trucks.

If reports from that city are true, conditions are said to be such that a proclamation of martial law may be expected before nightfall.

Another formal appeal for relief was despatched by Puebla business men to President Obregon yesterday, but the president is not known to have directed any measures looking to that end. Federal officials here, including President Obregon, apparently regarded the protest against the Puebla tax law with its accompanying industrial paralysis, as more drastic than the facts warrant.

MEMPHIS BUSINESS CONDITIONS IMPROVE

By Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Texas, Oct. 15.—The general business conditions in Memphis are showing a healthy upward movement but are not normal by 50 per cent yet. The railroad and express companies show a good advance over last year's business at this date, but practically all other interests have not reached normal. The coal business is 75 per cent less at this time than last year.

Cotton has been moving fast and is much earlier than last year, a total of 6,000 bales have been received in Memphis to date. Daily receipts run around 400 bales. Bank deposits are slightly over one million to date. Maize is bringing $7.00 per ton and cotton seed $30.00. Seed receipts to date are heaviest of any former season. The farm bureau has shipped 591 bales to date. Practically all the local cotton is being sold at once.

COMPLETE TIE-UP BY NOV. 2ND PLAN OF UNION CHIEFS

By Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—More than half a million American railroad men were today ordered to initiate a strike October 30, while other unions whose membership brings the total to about two million, announced unofficially that they were tonight preparing to follow suit and make the walkout general, on the same date.

Under this program, the tie-up would be complete, according to union predictions, by November 2.

The hour was fixed for 6 a. m., October 30, except for one Texas line, whose trainmen were authorized to go out October 22.

The railroads listed in the first group on which the strike is to become effective, touch 42 of the 48 states, with a trackage of 73,000 miles out of the total United States trackage of approximately 200,000 miles.

The New England states comprise the group that is virtually untouched in the first walkout.

The strike orders were issued to the five big brotherhoods, oldest and most powerful of the railway unions, and they specifically include mail trains in the walkout. Their provisions instructed strikers to keep away from railroad property with a warning that "violence of any nature will not be tolerated by the organizations."

The strike was announced following an overwhelming vote, said to be upwards of 90 per cent favoring a strike because of an approximate 12 per cent wage reduction authorized by the United States railroad labor board of July 1, and after it was declared by the association of railway executives in session yesterday that a further reduction would be sought by the railroads. It was said that the strike decision was made before the announcement of the further intended cut. Printed instructions as to conduct of the strike, issued in Chicago, were dated yesterday, October 14.

"I fear it will be one of the most serious in American transportation history," said W. G. Lee, president of the railroad trainmen, who during recent weeks has sent circulars to his men warning them of the critical nature of the steps they contemplated.

The country was divided into four groups, in which the men were authorized to walk out progressively, one group every 24 hours. The names of the groups were not made public, but unofficially the identity of roads in the first group to go was learned, subject to changes, which union officials said would be few. This first group included some of the country's greatest rail systems, from coast to coast, and from Canada to the gulf.

Roads First Out.

These were:

Chicago & Northwestern; Texas & Pacific; Kansas City Southern; Pennsylvania; Missouri Pacific; International & Great Northern; Southern Pacific, Atlantic and Pacific lines); Southern Railway; Louisville & Nashville; St. Louis Southwestern (whether Texas lines included was not stated); Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul (lines east and west); Northern Pacific; Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; Seaboard Air Line; Erie, Chicago Great Western.

The unions issuing the strike call today were:

Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginmen; Order of Railway Conductors; Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Switchmen's Union of North America.

The eleven other organizations, whose chiefs have been in session here and who said unofficially that they will join the strike, are:

GORE CAN'T SEE BENEFIT OF MEET

MIAMI, Okla., Oct. 15.—The approaching armament limitation conference called by President Harding will be a sort of "Alphonso and Gaston" performance, according to the prediction today of former senator Thomas P. Gore, of Lawton, Oklahoma. "Disarmament and the end of war" the blind statesman said, "is something that everybody wants but nobody does. It will be 'you first, my dear Alphonz.'"

Strike Call Outlines Duties of Members Following Walkout

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The strike call for the railroad walkout outlines the following duties of "members and officers" in conduct of the strike. It is dated at Chicago, October 14, and is in part as follows:

1—No man in road service involved in the strike will perform any service after the hour set to strike unless he has already begun a trip and has actually left the terminal. If train has left the terminal he will complete the trip and deliver the engine and train at the end of the run, or tie-up point, if tied up under the law, after which he will perform no further service until the close of the strike. Men in other than road service will leave the service at the appointed time.

So far as your legal right to strike is concerned, there is no difference between a mail train and freight train. You have identically the same right to refuse to perform service on a mail train as you have to refuse to perform service on a freight train.

2—All men on strike will keep away from the company's property, except men as are designated certain duties to be performed by authorities of the organizations.

3—Every man should understand that the laws of the organizations involved must be obeyed. Acts of violence of any nature will not be tolerated by the organizations.

4—The local representative will arrange for a hall for meeting purposes at all terminals, using one of their own lodge rooms if available. Immediately after the strike becomes effective all men will assemble at the hall obtained for meeting purposes. When thus assembled an organization will be perfected by the election of a chairman, vice-chairman and secretary. No persons will be permitted to be present in the meeting halls other than those who are on strike, except by permission of the assemblage.

5—The secretary will arrange a roll call (alphabetically)—with each organization on a separate sheet. Roll will be called twice daily, morning and afternoon. The names of the non members will be kept separate on the roll from the names of those who are members of the organizations.

All strikers will be required to answer the roll call and also to be in the halls, where halls are provided, during the day at all times, unless excused by committee action or by chairman of the meeting. The secretary will also keep a record of the proceedings from day to day.

6—In the conduct of every strike

STRIKE CALL GIVES RULES FOR EMPLOYES

there are numerous irresponsible persons, not members of the organizations, who take occasion to engage in acts of violence and disorderly conduct and such actions are usually attributed to members of the organizations, and great care should be taken by every member of the organizations to avoid associating with such persons and such conduct should be discouraged so as not to cast reproach upon our cause.

7—Some railroad officials may endeavor to coerce or mislead the men by asserting that men at other points have not quit or that they have returned to work. Such information should be discounted and all strikers should apply to their officers and committeemen for information and be governed accordingly, and no member or non-union man will return to work until the strike is officially declared off, when all will return at the same time without prejudice and with all former rights.

Duties of Local Chairmen

1—The local chairman of each organization on each division of railroad will jointly supervise the prosecution of the strike on the territory over which they have jurisdiction.

2—Local chairmen are expected to keep in close touch with the situation and will report daily, preferably by night telegram letter, to the representative general chairmen as to the condition of affairs. Whenever it is possible for local chairmen representing all of the organizations involved at any terminal to report to their respective general chairmen jointly in one communication, it should be done.

3—Expense incurred for telegrams will be borne jointly by the organizations involved.

4—When deemed advisable the local chairmen will agree on assistant chairmen for the respective organizations to locate at outlying points, and said assistant chairmen will report to their respective local chairmen.

Clearly defined cases of disloyalty or inefficiency on the part of any representative of the organizations, should be reported to the other organizations and necessary action, either as to discipline or safety measures taken at once.

Duties of General Chairmen

1—A general chairman of each railroad involved in the strike will supervise and be responsible for the conduct of the strike upon the line of railroad over which he has jurisdiction and will make reports by night telegram letter to the grand officer have general supervision over that line or road. Expenses incurred in so doing will be paid in accordance with the laws of the respective organizations.

2—On roads where because of the number of strikers involved it becomes necessary for the general chairman to have assistance he may designate other officers and members of the general committee as in his judgment may be necessary to successfully carry on the strike.

3—In the absence of instructions from the grand officer in charge of the district, the general chairmen will agree between themselves as to the points at which they will be located during the strike and they will immediately advise the officer in charge of district and each of their local chairmen where they are located and the proper address. The general chairmen should keep each other advised as far as possible as to their location or movements.

AGUILA OIL CO. EMBARGO HAS BEEN LIFTED

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 15.—Officials of the state of Vera Cruz have lifted the embargo they placed on the properties of the Aguila Oil company last Saturday following legal proceedings brought by the firm, a British corporation. The embargo was ordered as a security for back taxes totalling 3,000,000 pesos which it is alleged had not been paid.

Further relief against adverse action by the state authorities of Vera Cruz apparently was obtained by the Aguila company yesterday, when it secured a reversal by the supreme court of a decision by a lower tribunal relative to the validity of certain decrees issued by Vera Cruz officials. Some of these decrees dated as far back as 1912. It was said here last night the action of the supreme court without doubt cleared the way for other decisions involving controversial points, concerning back taxes, unfulfilled contracts and disputed jurisdiction.

The supreme court voted 7 to 2 in reversing the finding of the lower court. A prominent oil man declared last evening that "the supreme court does not consider that its decision of May, 1917, established either the validity or legality of alleged derogatory decrees against which protest has been made. The court appears to uphold the contract entered into by the Aguila company and the state of Vera Cruz in July 1912."

It was upon this contract that the Aguila company based its claim for exemption from certain state taxes which the Vera Cruz officials had passed.

It is admitted the supreme court's decision may not be the final word in the oil company's case, but in the main it is held to have established the error made by the lower court in handing down its decision. The lower court has refused to hear the company's suits, asking for protection against the action of the Vera Cruz government.

The City National Bank of Commerce welcomes Savings deposits in any amount and in the thirty years it has been in business has had the pleasure of seeing many small accounts grow to very large size. The bank pays 4% compound interest and provides complete protection for deposits.—Adv.

Firemen and Oilers; Brotherhood of Railway Signalmen of America; United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes and Railroad Shop Laborers; Order of Railroad Telegraphers; Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers of America; International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers.

Chairmen Have Orders

Five hundred general chairmen of the big four brotherhoods and the switchmen's union were on their way home tonight from a week's conference in Chicago with the signed authorizations for a strike in their pockets.

No further orders will be necessary, the brotherhood chiefs said, to call out rail workers on every big line in the country.

Printed instructions were handed every general chairman to govern the men's conduct. These authorized a progressive walkout, the first at six a. m., October 30, to be followed by the other three secret groups, each 24 hours, October 31 and November 1 and 2.

Every chairman carried in a sealed pocket a code word for use if the strike is called off. In event of receiving the code from headquarters, each chairman is to open his pocket to identify the word.

No reservations are made in the strike authorizations. Skeleton service outlined in the by-laws of the unions is to be maintained, but otherwise every man is expected to walk out. The instructions declare the men have "identically the same right to refuse to perform service on a mail train as you have to perform service on a freight train."

Arriving at their respective headquarters, general chairmen of the brotherhoods and switchmen will immediately issue system orders over the general chairmen's signatures, carrying the hour and date of the strike. These orders will go to local chairmen who will pass them to the rank and file.

Although complete plans for the walkout of the eleven of the sixteen standard railroad organizations were incomplete tonight, it was said the general procedure would be much like that of the brotherhoods.

Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the engineers, declined to comment on the conferences of this week. He said an announcement might be made from the Cleveland office later.

Sanction Final.

"We're all through," Mr. Stone said. "I can't tell you anything now, but the die is cast."

W. G. Lee, president of the trainmen, said he had used every influence to avert a strike on the basis of the 12 per cent wage reduction of July 1, 1921, but that he felt any further reductions would justify a walkout.

"I want it understood that I used every influence to avert a strike on the wage reduction of July 1," Mr. Lee said. "I preferred to accept that reduction with an assurance that there would be no further wage reduction or change in our working rules for a reasonable period.

"I felt that if the railroads got through their business conditions, they would be in a position to pay the present rates of pay."

Mr. Lee refused to comment on the strike orders, although he admitted that he had already sent out one authorization to strike to trainmen on the International and Great Northern. Trainmen on this road, which operated between San Antonio and Palestine, Texas, asked to strike at noon, October 22, independently of the other groups. Mr. Lee gave his authorization several days ago, and it still stands. The road, however, is included in the first group scheduled to walk out, and the trainmen may defer action until October 30.

L. E. Sheppard, president of the conductors, said he could say nothing, reiterating his announcement of several days ago that no official statement would be given out here.

T. C. Cassen, head of the switchmen, and W. S. Carter, president of the firemen, declined to comment.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Public representatives on the railroad labor board and interstate commerce commission members, meeting to discuss adjustment of railroad rates and wages by direction of President Harding, adjourned their discussions late today after the commission members had appointed a committee to continue the conference Monday.

President Harding today assumed active leadership in the government's efforts to settle differences between the railroads and their employes, and designated as the best available agencies to avert serious labor complications the public group of the railroad labor board and the membership of the interstate commerce commission.

The president brought together the three public representatives on the wage board and the full membership of the commission in a meeting to consider not only the threatened nation-wide strike, but the whole question of a readjustment of railroad rates and wages.

The three wage board members, Chairman Barton, G. Wallace W. Hanger and Ben W. Hooper, came to Washington at the president's urgent request and went with him to the offices of the interstate commerce commission where all the members of the commission were waiting. The president remained in the conference for fifteen minutes and then returned to the white house where a statement was issued declaring his move was part of a general effort at realignment of the railroad situation.

"The purpose of the meeting," said the white house statement, "was a broad consideration of the possibility of an early adjustment of railroad rates and wages, in the expectation that it would contribute to the industrial revival."

No specific mention of threatened strike was made in the statement although it was indicated that the situation precipitated by the virtual decision of the employes' unions had brough Mr. Harding's plan to a head. It was assumed that the strike proposal formed the principal topic of discussion at the conference.

The statement issued at the white house outlined the president's belief that the public group of the wage board and the members of the commission could do most for the public welfare if they worked in co-operation. It also emphasized the opinion held in administration quarters that a readjustment of the whole rail situation would be of the greatest possible aid toward a general industrial rehabilitation.

STRIKE VOTE ORDERED BY SIXTEEN RAILROADS

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Sixteen more railroad unions have taken a secret strike vote and authorized their officers to order a walkout if deemed advisable, C. J. Manlon, president of the Order of Railroad telegraphers, announced today.

Although the sixteen will act independently of the four big brotherhoods, a joint meeting has been called for 2 p. m. today at which the brotherhoods will submit their plan of action to the other organizations.

One high union official announced that the date for the strike had been set, but declined to reveal it. October 30 has been reported as the day.

Th brotherhoods have also selected th list of ten roads on which the strike will be effective the first day, the same union official said. It is understood that strikes will be ordered on additional units of ten roads every 48 hours until the roads either give in or the walkout becomes nation-wide.

Union leaders who had been hopeful of averting a strike some of whom had even opposed it, declared today that the action of the railroad executives yesterday in deciding on further wage reductions has destroyed the last hope of peace.

A suite of offices in a prominent downtown building was opened by the four brotherhoods today with the designation "special joint committee" on the door. The names of the organizations appeared underneath. Harry P. Daugherty, assistant grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is in charge of the committee.

Brotherhood officials denied that the new offices were intended as strike headquarters, saying that the committee was established to transact routine business, principally with the railroad labor board here.

"It will be the greatest strike in history," W. G. Lee, president of the trainmen, was quoted as saying today when he left the union conference. "It is a life and death struggle for our organization and we are not going into this with our eyes closed. Our house is in order and we are ready."

The sixtetn unions involved have a total membership of about 2,000,000 men.

Mr. Lee has consistently opposed a strike, up until the last twenty-four hours. He withdrew from the meeting of the brotherhoods chiefs here July 5 when they voted to issue strike ballots and prepared a separate ballot for his men. On that occasion he told the other union leaders they were "camouflaging." Ninety-five per cent of the trainmen, however, voted to walk out.

While the vote was being taken, Mr. Lee sent a circular letter to his men pointing out that present high wages were based on war-time standard; that they were granted to meet the increased cost of living; that government reports showed a sixteen per cent decline in living costs, and that five million men were reported out of work.

The railroads will post their notices announcing the cut in thirty days and then invite the union committees to conference to discuss the cut. In event the union men refuse to accept it, the dispute will then be referred to the labor board for adjustment, the cut being automatically suspended until either approved or denied by the board.

Decision by the board may take from one to six months, or even longer, depending on the amount of evidence taken, and the condition of the board's docket.

of the state's witnesses. In his usual friendly manner he offered a state attorney a fresh cigar during the hearing and as he returned to the jail following the refusal of the request for release on bond he told out of town newspaper men to send him copies of the "write up" in Sunday papers.

Those who had hoped to see him in action on the witness stand were disappointed. After the state had concluded by placing Mr. and Mrs. Givens, the victims of the alleged highjacking, and George Hawkins, city policeman of Wichita Falls on the stand, the defense rested without introducing any testimony.

It was the first time that Scotty has failed to obtain bond for any of the numerous crimes and misdemeanors that he is alleged to have committed in this section during the last two years, but the fact failed to disturb him apparently.

His alleged partner, Fields, however, was obviously nervous during the hearing and seemed surprised at the court's order at the conclusion.

The two men were represented by an array of legal talent which included R. E. and C. O. Taylor and H. M. Muse of this city. John Davenport and Shields Heyser were the defendants' attorneys present from Wichita Falls. The prosecution was in charge of District Attorney H. R. Wilson of Wichita Falls and Vincent Stine, county attorney of Clay county.

The testimony of the aged proprietors of the Dean store, both past sixty-five years of age, was substantially the same as the statements they made to police officers at Wichita Falls Tuesday morning following a few hours after the alleged holdup late Monday night.

They said they had gone to bed Monday night and were awakened between 10:30 and 11:00 o'clock by two men who they identified as Scott and Fields. They said the two men wanted gasoline and when Mr. Givens opened the door to go out and wait on them they entered. Fields first with Scott following carrying a pistol in his hand. Claiming that they were officers, Morgan and Belcher of the constable's office at Wichita Falls the two men then searched the store and living quarters for whiskey, according to the testimony.

The two men in addition to stating that they were searching the store for liquor also asked Mr. Givens if he had a license to sell tobacco, according to this testimony. When told that they did not, Scott and Fields then told them they were going to arrest them for that and take them to Wichita Falls, he said. Later they testified Fields told Scott to keep the old couple in the living quarters while he searched the store again.

Givens testified then he went back into the store however, and found Fields searching the jewelry case. He said Fields struck him with his hand when he told him that "there was no whiskey in there."

"Don't run over him he is an old man," both witnesses declared Scott said to Fields following the alleged assault.

"The older they are the easier they are to handle," was Fields reply according to the testimony.

Then Fields, according to the witnesses, snapched Mr. Givens taking between $20 and $25 from his pocketbook and left, driving off in a large car accompanied by a woman. Mr. Givens said he attempted to follow them in an automobile owned by neighbors.

George Hawkins, city policeman at Wichita Falls told of the arrests made by the police department and of the identification by the Givens couple of Scott and Fields as the two men who committed the alleged highjacking.

By cross examination of the state witnesses the defense attorneys sought to substantiate their plea that the state had not shown that robbery had been committed with firearms. In his argument to the court, Attorney R. E. Taylor conceded that he believed that enough evidence had been introduced to justify holding the two men under bond to await the action of the grand jury, but declared that the state had not introduced testimony to show that a serious enough crime had been committee to warrant the defendants being remanded to jail.

chemical laboratory. This was pointed out by experts nearly thirty years ago, and has been verified by every engineer since.

The same thing applied to Holliday creek before Lake Wichita, and the miniature irrigation system in connection with, it was constructed by the damming of the creek. The alkali was barely sufficient to taste. It was removed from the city water by treating, and in the irrigated gardens was sufficient only in the amount considered by agricultural experts as beneficial to agriculture.

Enormous Amount Water

The amount of water in the Baylor county reservoir, which it is proposed to build on Mr. Waggoner lands, will be 30 times the amount in Lake Wichita, while the amount in the diversion reservoir will be three times this amount.

This is the third sign of opposition to the irrigation project, which has come from Vernon, the first two following reports in which the Vernon people were lead to believe that the building of the reservoir would inundate their road to Seymour. They were assured at the first that this would not be the case. The reports were revived, however, and the backers of the system, to fully assure them, promised a roadway across the dam if the present roadway was inundated, quieting the fears from this source.

The source of these two reports has never been satisfactorily determined by backers of the irrigation project.

organizations, in the neighborhood of 750,000 men would walk out on the first day, union leaders estimated, although it has not been decided definitely yet whether the eleven minor unions shall carry out their walkout in all details the same as the big brotherhoods and the Switchmen's Union of North America.

The largest of the roads listed in group one of the Railroads is the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, which has a trackage of 10,661 miles and runs through most of the states in the northern part of the country between Chicago and the Pacific coast. The Chicago and Northwestern, covering the central and north central states, is the second largest, its mileage totalling 10,155.

The Southern Pacific lines have a larger mileage than either of the above roads, but part of their lines run into Mexico and it is not known whether the strike will affect that country.

The only states not reported by the roads on which the strike is scheduled to begin are Massachusetts, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

ent. The resolution was then adopted.

Other resolutions favored reduction of railroad rates upon specific commodities such as building materials, appreciation by the state to improve the spot upon which Texas independence was declared, establishment of a state park in the Davis mountains, strengthening of trade relations with Mexico, and institution of a course in agricultural journalism at A. & M. College.

State fair officials say that with fine weather the coming week there will be a large surplus in the treasury after all expenses are paid.

AUCTION SALE

KRUGER JEWELRY CO. MUST RAISE $150,000

The Kruger Jewelry Co. is making a drastic effort to raise $150,000. The sale will continue until this desire is accomplished —Tremendous crowds packed our store on Saturday at the opening of our supreme auction sale. Enthusiasm ran high as the people saw rare jewels and jewelry sacrified at only a fractional part of their real worth.

WE MUST RAISE $150,000 IMMEDIATELY

—We have a very definite object in view in putting on this auction sale. We must raise $150,000 immediately and we must reduce our stocks, which were bought on the basis of the business which was done here during the boom days. If need be we will sacrifice every item in our stock in order to raise this money. We shall accept our loss regardless of what amount. Every article is included. Patrons may make their own selection between sales and these will be put up and sold for whatever they will bring.

BUY YOUR CHRISTMAS GIFTS NOW AT BIG SAVINGS

—Buying Christmas presents now is indeed profitable. Patrons may save from 100 to 200 per cent on everything. Selections can be made in Vanity Cases, Cigarette Cases, Mesh Bags, Gold and Silver Pens and Pencils, Pearl Necklaces, Solid Gold Rings, Bar Pins, LaVallieres, Scarf Pins, Cuff Buttons and hundreds of other items exceptionally appealing for Yuletide gifts. Those not ready to purchase now for Christmas, may select any article desired, and buy it in and at whatever price they care to pay, and we will hold same until Christmas, requiring only a small deposit on same from the purchaser.

NOTE

As has been stated above, the Kruger Jewelry Co., is making a drastic effort to reduce stocks and raise cash. After the sale we will continue making friends in our present location, with the same high-class merchandise that has placed us to the fore.

Comfortable chairs for the ladies attending this sale. Every courtesy will be shown visitors and every effort will be made to make your attendance interesting and profitable. Ladies especially invited to attend this sale.

NOTE

As has been stated above, the Kruger Jewelry Co., is making a drastic effort to reduce stocks and raise cash. After the sale we will continue making friends in our present location, with the same high-class merchandise that has placed us to the fore.

With World's Series Over, World Problems Claim Nick's Attention

Is Somewhat Intrigued by Problem of the K. K. K., but Is Not Worried to Any Considerable Extent by Rail Strike.

By "NICK" CARTER

Me, I'm glad the baseball season's over so's now I can get back in the educated circle where I belong and hobnob with the highbrows and use correck English and read the front page of the paper mornings and keep posted on the big problems of the United States like the disarmament conference and the price of oil and the needs of more jobs and Fatty Arbuckle and the state fair and the Kay Kay Kay and the railroad strike only the latter don't mean nothing to me 'cause I ain't going no where.

But anyways I don't have to worry no other man's batting average no more and try to guess who is the pitchers for today and I guess if I'm going to write Sunday features for the paper which is what the Boss says, it's going to be pretty soft for me on account of my features always being as you might say prominent which is a good joke if you ever seen my nose—and so anyways I went out last night to get me a bowl of chilli and a cup of coffee and I though I'd talk over some of the big problems with my old friend Dan Duffey that runs the feed joint down by the railroad station him having been one time janitor in the library at Texas University and being so to speak a well-read man and I figured this would give me food practise in case the paper should ask me some day to interview some prominent man like Ben Neal or Dick Bailey or Pete Rogers maybe.

So I got me the chilli and crackers and the cup of java and I engaged Dan Duffey in polite conversation:

"Dan," I says, "I guess the conference is sure going to make 'em disarm, eh?"

"Time," Says Dan.

"And a good thing it is, too," says Dan. "Them oil field hi-jackers is too numerous and besides I ain't saying anything against Scotty nor nobody else but this is getting to be a civilized country and I. X. L. or a Barlow jackknife is enough arms for any guy to carry."

Which give me the big laugh Dan having got me all wrong like that and so I didn't want to show him up for being so ignorant about how hte disarmament conference was trying to take the guns away from the marines and the police force and fix up the bonus bill and so forth and I didn't say nothing more about it.

Stutters.

"The way I figure this K-K-K—" I remarks.

"'Tis no wonder you stutter over his name," says Dan Duffey, "for the showing George Kelley made in the world series is a disgrace to Ireland; him whose grandfather shook a grand shillaleh in the old country batting no better than .233! Give me your cup and have another little drop of coffee on the house to the memory of Mike Devlin and Willie Keeler!"

And me and Dan Duffey inhales our coffee and talks a while about the old days when a man could buy a good steak dinner for thirty cents and see the best movie in town for a thin dime which now he's got to pay a dollar for a thin steak and leave two bits on the table and cough up a dollar and a half for a movie ticket not counting the war tax and then get stuck twenty-five cents more for a program with pictures of the movie acktors in it, and I tells Dan how I'm going to be a acktor in this "Springtime" play which the Business Women's Club is putting on.

Well, after Dan Duffey has got through sympathizing with the audience which will pay good jack to see me on the stage I'm feeling sarcastic myself and so I says:

Real Tightwad.

"A clam is loose compared to you, Dan Duffey. You wouldn't pay five cents to see Judge Scurry play fullback for Harvard," and he gives me a dirty look and points at the dishes.

"Is that all," he says.

"Yes," I says.

"Here's your check," he says.

Which I took the check and it says chilli fifteen cents two cups coffee ten cents, him charging me for the cup of coffee which was on the house. So I paid the check and went out and I hope I choke if I ever eat again in Dan Duffey's joint down by the railroad station.

Slightly Accommodating.

"Your daughter seems to be a strictly modern miss.'

"She misses some concessions to old fashioned ideas," said Mr. Dubwhite.

"How is that?"

"She occasionally permits me to meet some of the young men she runs around with."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The second failure of the house within a year to increase its membership beyond 435 virtually means there will be no addition, according to the view expressed today by leaders of the fight to keep the number at its present total. Having rejected overwhelmingly a proposal to jump the total to 483, the house last night refused to make it 460, sending the bill back to committee with the certainty that it would not be reached this session.

PREMIER OF ULSTER MAY PARTICIPATE IN IRISH CONFERENCE

BELFAST, Oct. 15.—Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, in an address here today dealing with the Irish conference in progress in London, and with Ulster's position regarding it, made remarks which were regarded as a strong intimation that he expects to participate in the negotiations.

During Sir James' address he said he might not have an opportunity of making another public speech for some time, "as I may be engaged in most delicate operations regarding the future of our beloved country."

"If I am asked to go into conference with the prime minister and his cabinet," Sir James continued, "it may be that my lips would be sealed while the conference is proceeding. Remember this: 'Don't be over elated if you remember that Ulster is up and Sinn Fein down, and don't be downhearted because the rumor gets abroad that Sinn Fein is up'."

He declared he would see that Ulster's rights were not interfered with.

HAM LEWIS 'LOWS TRADE PICKING UP

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—James Hamilton Lewis, former United States senator from Illinois, after an extended trip through the east and south yesterday brought this message to Chicago.

"Business is good. Everywhere I have gone there were unmistakable signs that we are entering upon an era of prosperity.

"A spirit of optimism pervades every field of business. In the south cotton prices have advanced and placed the cotton growing industry upon a firm foundation again. The watch word in other southern agricultural industries has become initiative. New enterprises are being undertaken every day in confidence of success."

The former senator likewise gathered from his trip that the prohibition laws have not found much favor with the general public in the east and south.

"I can safely prophesy," he said, "that these two sections of the country will send at least twenty representatives to congress this fall to fight the enforcement of the dry act."

The serious illness of his father, Major John C. Lewis, in Georgia, occasioned the trip.

FEAR OF "MEDICINE WOMAN" IS BELIEVED MOTIVE FOR SLAYING

By Associated Press.

YAKIMA, Wash., Oct. 15.—Supposed exercise of supernatural powers attributed by Indians in this section to Mrs. Eliza Yohiowyan, an aged Indian, are believed to have supplied the motive for her slaying, according to officers investigating circumstances of her death recently. The aged woman was found dead in her home near White Swan, in the Yakima Indian reservation, today, her skull crushed and her house rifled. Her two sons, Colwash and Jacob, and another Indian, were held pending further inquiry.

The Churches

The congregation of the Floral Heights Methodist church will observe "Rally Day" and "Rally Night" today. The church will sound the rally note at the evening services. A special sermon on the topic, "The Call of the Christ" with special music will feature the evening services, which will be church joining night, when a number of new members are expected to be received into the church at this time.

Several have expressed a desire to join at this service, according to Rev. Tittle, the pastor who states that he feels that it is an appropriate time to join the church as it is the beginning of the new conference year. Rev. Tittle expressed himself as being very enthusiastic over the prospects of the church which he organized less than two years ago, and says that the church is now ready to enter upon an era of progress and helpful service.

The morning program will begin at 10:50 and the evening program at 7:30 as follows:

WICHITA HIGH COMES TO LIFE, UNCORKS SMASHING ATTACK AND LICKS BURKBURNETT 7-0

Waiting until the third period of the game to come out of the slump in which the eleven had been for three weeks, the Wichita Falls high school football team battered its way through Burkburnett high yesterday afternoon at Burkburnett for a 7 to 0 victory. Using a number of line bucks, tackle plays and a new forward pass formation developed by Coach Harry Viner in the last week, the Wichita backfield marched steadily down the field and drove the ball over ten minutes after the second half started.

During the first half the local boys were outplayed by their Burkburnett rivals, who showed more aggressiveness and generalship. The Burkburnett backfield made repeated gains around the ends. The Wichita Falls eleven played a lifeless game on the offensive, but fought desperately on the defense and succeeded in keeping their goal line out of danger.

Between halves "Bill" Viner, brother of the new coach who was in Fort Worth refereeing the T. C. U.-Trinity college game, "read the riot act" to the boys—and when the second half started, the red and black eleven launched a ripping, smashing, lightning attack that tore the Burkburnett line to shreds. End runs and tackle plays by Basbara and Springer, a brilliant 30-yard run by "Shorty" Chewning, and a 20-yard forward pass carried the locals swiftly down the field and across the Burkburnett goal line. The line plunging of Moore, Wichita Falls fullback, throughout this half was the finest displayed this season by any Wichita backfield man.

In the final period the Burkburnett quarterback intercepted an attempted Wichita Falls forward pass, and broke clean from the entire field. Springer in a brilliant burst of speed ran him down from behind after he had more than forty yards, and with a beautiful tackle, stopped the Burkburnett star on Wichita Falls' 25-yard line. Wichita Falls then held for downs and kicked out of danger.

All in all, the game was one of the most interesting played this season. Burkburnett showed splendid training on the offensive, especially in interference work. Wichita Falls, lacking this to a large extent, showed a consistent ability to gain on line bucks and tackle plays.

Wichita Falls presented a new backfield, with the exception of Shorty Chewning, quarter. Springer, Basbara and Moore with only a week of training in the backfield, more than made good.

According to a number of fair-minded men who witnessed the game Wichita Falls was the victim on several occasions of some dirty work in the line—but the local boys kept their heads and played their own game in clean, hard-driving fashion. Spectators from this city were highly pleased with the results Coach Viner has obtained in the short time he has been working with the backfield material.

At a late hour last night it was impossible to get the complete line up of the team, and the substitutions made—but every boy who got in the game gave a splendid account of himself.

CECIL GRIGGS HITTING LINE HARD FOR CANTON BULLDOGS

By C. F. CARTER.

Cecil Griggs, hard-working Spudder outfielder and 'Gene Leopold's "Man" is again making good with a crash as a professional football player. Cecil is playing right halfback for the Canton, O., Bulldogs, and his name is listed in the line-up with ex-collegians who have either been accorded All-American honors or who have received honorable mention from the experts who annually select these famous mythical elevens.

Carl Stoecker, whose store on Ohio avenue has been the Mecca of baseball players and fans during the last two Texas league seasons, received from Griggs yesterday, a copy of the Canton Daily News of October 3, containing a description of the manner in which the Bulldogs smeared the Massillon Blues, semi-pro football title holders of Ohio, 48 to 0 in the first game of the Canton season.

Some idea of the abilities of Cecil Griggs as a football player may be gained from the mere fact that he played the entire game in company with the following wizards: Steele, of Harvard, left end; West, of Colgate, left tackle; Kellison, of West Virginia Wesleyan, left guard; Osborne, of Penn State, right guard; Henry, of Washington-Jefferson, right tackle; Higbins, of Penn State, right end; Kempton, of Yale, Quarterback; Morrow, of Pittsburgh, left half, and Smith, of Center, fullback. Add to these names Carroll, of Washington-Jefferson; Edwards, of Notre-Dame; Hobb, of Penn State, and "Pie" Way, of State, the last named Walter Camp's selection for All-American half, as Bulldog substitutes—and, well, I rather guess Cecil Griggs is playing the old game in swift company, eh?

"It took the Bulldogs just six minutes to tally the first touchdown in the first period," according to the News' report of the game. "The Bulldogs made three first downs on straight football with Morrow, of Pittsburgh, Griggs, of Texas, and Smith, of Centre, doing the advancing * * * "a forward pass, Griggs to Higgins, good for 22 yards, put Canton on the way to her second touchdown * * * *"

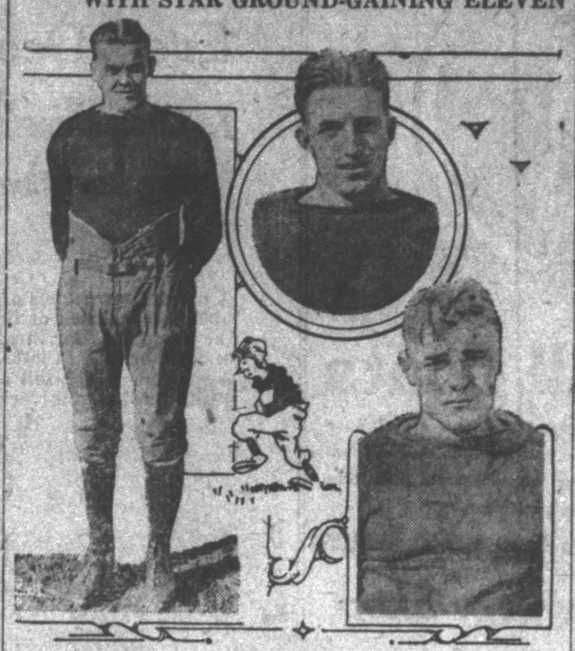

"Smith and Griggs played a big part in the production of the third touchdown. Starting the second period, Griggs circled Massilon's right end for 14 yards, and on a fake pass Smith hit the Blue line for 17. In all, the Bulldogs' backfield worked five consecutive first downs, Way finally making the third touchdown, a drive through Massilon's left tackle for five yards."

Referring to the fourth touchdown the writer says:

"Way then reversed matters, skirting Massilon's wing for 200 yards, after which Griggs pounded center for nine yards and then Griggs took the ball over for the fourth touchdown on the same sort of smashing play."

Yes, that lad Griggs, gang, must be a wild one when he smells blood!

With several dependable veterans and a wealth of green material at his disposal, Coach Zuppke hopes to develop a winning eleven for Illinois this year despite the fact that he lacks o dependable punter or drop-kicker. Captain Walquist has succeeded Bobby Fletcher at quarter and will fill that bill. Kaiser, barred from athletics for a time, is eligible and is a star backfield man. Vogel, who was the Babe Ruth of the baseball team, is one of the best linemen out.

HERE ARE THE GAME LAWS, GANG; WATCH 'EM CLOSELY

With the duck season opening today, the sporting editor of the Record News has received many telephone calls for general information regarding the state game laws. For the benefit of the shooting fraternity, therefore, the following digest is published. Cut it out, and paste it on your gun stock.

Texas Game Laws

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

Oh, I'm so tired and sleepy, and the baseball season's over, and I feel blue and weepy and life's a fearful bore. No more are stories coming, pepp up with baseball brew, with home runs gayly humming to cheer the long night through; no more does Big Boy soak 'em, and bust 'em on the nose, no more does Babe Ruth poke 'em, those mighty circuit blows. Oh, how I loathe this lifeless, and dry, dull time o' year, when every day is strifeless and baseball's in its bier. This period of stagnation, it surely gets my goat, I can't take a vacation because I owe a note. I can't do this, I can't do that, and now I hm so line, I cannot even end this verse, which makes it soft for YOU!

Ho, hum (business of yawning sleepily), why did the weather change so suddenly? That rush of heat that arrived around noon yesterday, after the recent cool snap, just naturally was filled with germs of hookworm and the sleeping sickness. At 4:30 yesterday afternoon I couldn't even get a thrill from the fact that Boston College was then leading Baylor University 14 to 7 at the end of the second period—despite the fact that once I had a glass of "musty" in the old Adams House bar in Boston, while one summer I was a shamefully dishonest conductor on the street car line between Norumbega Park in Auburndale and the Park street subway station in Boston! That was in the days when young college tramps used to be street car conductors, and sing merrily that grand old song:

"One for the company, two for myself.
Give the company the transfers,
Keep all the pelf.
One for the company, two for me,
Bribe the inspector and Go scot free!"

Aw, be quiet, you old hypocrite! Don't you dast to criticize mub for this honest declaration of dishonesty. Times were tough in those days on young fellows trying to gain sufficient education to earn indifferent livings later as newspaper men!

And, anyway, I always helped all the old ladies (Yes, and the young ones too, y'betcha!) on and off the cars, and I always called the streets loudly and clearly—BEFORE the car passed 'em!

Ho, hum, once more. Who cares if High Commissioner Landis does believe the world series should be limited to seven games, and that John Heydler, president of the National league, disagrees with him? We all know, don't we, gang, that Prexy Heydler likes to hear the merry click of the turnstiles at the gates as the thousands pour in to witness those two extra games? Asocertainly! You and I, we'd be satisfied with a seven-game series. It's nothing in our young Irish lives, is it? No, all you and I ask if that the team we pick wins—and if it don't, well, there'll be other years.

Just rambling on in this idotic fashion, I wonder if any baseball players belong to the Ku Klux Klan. Silly? Oh, I don't know; some of these temperamental ball players like Rube Marshall might do anything; and if they belonged to the K. K. K. whenever a non-member became "tight" with his spittin' terbacker they could send him a note ordering him to leave town that night—and if here was a doubleheader booked for the next day he'd probably be glad to go!

Boxing? Thou fain wouldst have a little comment on the art of creating the cauliflower ear and the flattened proboscis? I have nothing to say. In all my life (which my father-in-law says is an erroneous expression since all of my life is not yet spent) I never saw but three ring affairs worth watching. Two were in the army, and t'other was the annual amateur championships staged by the Denver Athletic Club—and all the professional bouts, quite a goodly number I've seen, are merely faded memories. I never even HEARD of a prizefighter I'd spend five cents to see in action.

I would like to see a bullfight, though. Prize fighters are mostly bull, I know—but I mean a reg'lar Mexican bullfight. I was in Juarez once, but Hubert Harrison, Jim Marlow, Frank Johnson and I don't see a single bull. I guess the Mexicans don't let the bulls in the cafes!

Have you had enough? I'm willing to quit whenever you are, gang. Or, I'd just as soon keep on rambling along:

Oh, I'm a giddy toreador,
With sports my life is full;
I earn a living rambling on

Ha, Ha! Fooled yah! Guess I'll quit. My one brain cell is all clogged with carbon.

Resolution of Thanks

Whereas the American Legion of Wichita Falls, Texas, has tendered to us the use of their hall for a house of worship until such time as we may secure a suitable house of worship,

Therefore, be it resolved by the congregation of the House of Jacob that we sincerely appreciate such offer and gladly accept the same, and we hereby tender to the American Legion our sincere thanks for the same.

BAYLOR LINE BREAKS UNDER FIERCE ATTACK

DALLAS, Oct. 15.—In their first appearance in Texas, Boston college defeated the Baylor university eleven by straight football, 23 to 7 here today. There was nothing spectacular about the playing of either team except for the scoring of Baylor's touchdown which came before one minute of play.

Bradshaw received the kick off and carried the ball to the 33-yard line. A fine buck put the ball on the fifty yard line. Williamson made a 50-yard end run and scored the touchdown through a broken field.

Boston was noticeably affected by the warm Texas weather. Both teams were penalized several times for roughing and Cairnes, Baylor right end, was put out of the game by Umpire Utay and Captain Comerford of Boston was warned several times.

Boston's first touchdown came in the first quarter after successive line plunge. Liston carried the ball over the line and Batten kicked goal. The second touchdown was made in the same fashion in the second quarter. In the third quarter, Kelleher made a touchdown but Patten failed to kick goal. This was followed by a drop kick by Patten from the 40 yard line.

Baylor carried the ball to within five yards of the goal line in the second quarter but was penalized 15 yards when three substitutes talked to their teammates before the play was made. This is a new rule in the southwestern conference.

The line up:

Boston	Position	Baylor
Kehane	Left tackle	Williamson
Doyle	Center	Kirk
Kelly	Right guard	Weathers
Paten	Right tackle	Blallock
Kezlowsky	Right end	Cairnes
Patten	Quarterback	Bradshaw
Darling	Right half	Strickland
Mathews	Pullback	Pittman

Score by period:

Boston	7	7	9	0—23
Baylor	0	0	0	7—7

Summary: Scoring—Boston touchdowns, Listen 2; Kelleher 1. Goals from touchdown, Patten 2; missed. Field goals, (drop) Patten 1. Baylor Touchdown, Williamson. Goal from touchdown, Weathers.

Officials: Referee, Rix (Dartmouth); umpire, Utay, (Texas A. M.); field judge, Dyer (Texas University); head linesman, Garrison (Texas A. and M.) Time of periods 15 minutes.

Promotion of Gen. Martin Is Well Received

Special to the Record News.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Texans in Washington were much pleased when Secretary of War Weeks announced the selection of Colonel Charles H. Martin for appointment to brigadier general.

General Martin for the last year has been in charge of the recruiting service in the adjutant general's department. General Martin commanded the Ninetieth division, Texas-Oklahoma national army overseas.

In the World War, General Martin rose to a major general and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Upon the entrance of the United States into the World War, General Martin was assigned as senior instructor of the first officers' training camp at Leon Springs, Texas. At its conclusion he was made a brigadier general and assigned to command the 86th division. On April 30, 1918, General Martin was promoted to major general for his efficiency and placed in command of the 86th division, completing its training and taking it to France. The division arrived in France in October, too late to participate in the Meuse-Argonne offensive, but General Martin was called to First Army headquarters for duty in that offensive. After the armistice, he commanded the 82nd division for a short time and later was assigned to command the 90th division in the Army of Occupation. It was for his services to the Army of Occupation that General Martin was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal with the following citation:

"For exceptional, meritorious and distinguished service. As commander of the 90th division during the greater part of its services with the Army of Occupation, by his ceaseless energy he performed his duties with the utmost efficiency, giving the closest personal supervision to the training, discipline, and equipment of the division. His brilliant, professional attainments and steadfast devotion to duty were reflected in the high standards maintained throughout the organizations under his command, rendering important services to the American Expeditionary Forces."

HARD FIGHTING MARKS CLOSE OF CLAY CAMPAIGN

Road Bonds Question in Clay County Will Be Decided Upon by Voters On Tuesday of This Week.

Special to the Record News.

HENRIETTA, Oct. 15.—After a strenuous campaign which has been carried to all parts of the county both by its supporters and its opponent the proposition of issuing $2,000,000 bonds for the permanent improvement of Clay county roads will be submitted to the voters next Tuesday, October 18.

Few predictions are made as to the outcome of the election. Supporters of the bond issue are confident that it will receive the support of a majority of the tax paying voters of the county but are not so confident that it will receive the required two-thirds vote.

Last minute efforts were being made by both sides today and the campaign pro and con will be waged up to and on election day. Considerable literature has been sent oeut out throughout the county with advertisements in local papers expressing the attitude taken by those who inaugurated the movement for improved roads in the county and those who are opposing it.

In general, the same reasons for and against the good roads program are being brought to the attention of the voters, as have been used in other counties where similar programs were considered. Its supporters declare that mony advantages will accrue to the town and farm residents pointing to the experience of other counties to support their contentions. The opponents are contending that taxes will be excessive and also declare that wages and materials are still too high for an economically expenditure of road bond issue.

NAVY LICKS TIGERS IN GAME MARKED BY FIERCE ATTACK

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 15.—The Annapolis midshipmen avenged last year's defeat by Princeton by taking the measure of the Tigers in a fiercely fought game on Farragut field today. The score was 13 to 0. The Middies scored a touchdown and goal in the second period, the touchdown being the result of a blocked kick.

In the fourth period King's right toe counted for the other six points. He kicked two placement goals from the 25 yard line, after the Princeton players had braced and checked the heavy Navy onslaught.

Navy completely outplayed Princeton in the final period, four times rushing the ball inside of the Tigers' 20 yard line. However, at these stages Princeton braced, and King, Navy's right tackle, succeeded in two out of three attempts at field goal from placement. Princeton at no time had a chance to score.

COLONELS EVEN COUNT OF LITTLE WORLD'S SERIES

BALTIMORE, Oct. 15.—Louisville evened the count in its post-season clash with Baltimore by taking this afternoon's game, 3 to 0, and making the count three each for the junior series. Both Tincup and Groves pitched good ball, but both were wild. The Orioles, however, were unable to produce hits at the right time.

IOWA HEADS FOR BIG TEN TITLE BY WHIPPING ILLINOIS

By Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Oct. 15.—Iowa triumphed over Illinois in their annual football game here today by a score of 14 to 2. Iowa's victory on top of the win last week over Notre Dame, puts the Hawkeye team in position for western championship conference honors. Iowa's touchdowns, coming in the second and third periods, were carried over Illinois goal line by Fullback Locke. Illinois scored its only points in the final period on a safety.

WORLD'S RECORD ON DIRT TRACK SET AT DALLAS

DALLAS, Oct. 15.—Sig Haugdahl today established a new world's record on the Texas state fair speedway when he negotiated the mile distance in 44 seconds flat. He drove his new six cylinder machine, which he calls the HDS special.

The previous record for the mile officially recognized by the International Motor Contest association and the other sanctioning body, the A. A. A., was 44 3-5 seconds, made on the Bakersfield, Cal., track by Tommy Milton.

LONGHORNS DEFEAT HOWARD PAYNE'S "SURPRISE" ELEVEN

AUSTIN, Oct. 15.—Playing second string men through the greater portion of the game, the University of Texas Longhorns defeated Howard Payne's "surprise" eleven by a score of 21 to 0 here this afternoon on Clark field. Coach Berry Whittaker sent his first string men in late in the second and third quarters.

The Brownwood eleven worried the Longhorns with its trick plays and good aerial work, but lacked the necessary punch to put the ball over the goal.

SIXTY-YARD BROKEN FILED RUN WHIPS TEXAS AGGIES 6-0

By Associated Press.

BATON ROUGE, La., Oct. 15.—Louisiana State today defeated the Texas Aggies 6 to 0, the touchdown coming in the final period, when McFarland, quarterback, ran sixty yards through the Aggies' line. The Aggies threatened to score in the second period when a fumble and forward passes gave them the ball on Louisiana's 15-yard line, but penalties for offside saved the Tigers.

GEORGIA U. LOSES TO HARVARD FIRST GAME IN 2 YEARS

By Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 15.—Harvard defeated the University of Georgia today by three points, being scored on by the Southwesterners for the first time this season. The final score was 10 to 7. The Georgians' points came on a touchdown made by a forward pass, J. Reynolds to Hartley, with a run of 12 yards by the latter to Harvard's goal. Pew completed it with a goal from touchdown. Harvard's scoring was in the early periods, Fitts scoring a touchdown by catching a blocked Georgian punt and running 30 yards and Pfaffman kicking a field goal after Harvard's recovery of Georgian punt.

T. C. U. ROMPS OVER TRINITY IN GAME OF MANY FUMBLES

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct. 15.—Texas Christian university defeated Trinity university, 19 to 3, the locals displaying superior football throughout the game. Several fumbles marred the game, twice costing T. C. U. touch-downs and another time giving them one. Fowler, Adams and Ryan advanced the ball for the Horned Frogs, while Bishop, Ogan and Houtchens made most of the Tigers' plays. Fowler broke loose in an off-tackle play and crossed the Trinity line in the first quarter. Honey scored for T. C. U. from the 36-yard line in the third and Cantrell went to kick goal. Morrison drop-kicked scoring for Trinity. Ryan carried the ball over in the last quarter, and Cantrell again failed to kick goal.

RICE NOSED OUT BY TULANE 7 TO 6 ON BLOCKED PUNT

HOUSTON, Oct. 15.—In a close game here today, Tulane university of New Orleans defeated Rice Institute by the score of 7 to 6. Tulane scored in the second quarter when Legendre blocked a punt which Talbot recovered and fell over the goal line for a touchdown.

Rice resorted to aerial play in the last quarters. With but two minutes to play, Kennedy, Rice fullback, tossed a forward pass 20 yards to McGee, who ran forty yards for a touchdown. Kennedy missed the goal from touchdown.

KANSAS MINE WORKERS SPLIT INTO FACTIONS

By Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Kan., Oct. 15.—A new acting president of the Kansas district of the United Mine Workers of America is expected here to take charge of the district Monday, it was learned from a reliable source today. President John L. Lewis of the international organization is understood to have designated a Pennsylvania official to come to Kansas.

The northern miners, meeting yesterday at Franklin, adopted unanimously resolutions commending the suspended administration, upholding its refusal to turn over district headquarters to George L. Peck, designated by President Lewis to take charge of the district; and reiterating the policy of opposition to the industrial court. Another resolution adopted would permit Missouri miners of the district to return to work.

Last night southern miners, meeting at Scammon, adopted a report by John Masterson, their delegate to the recent international convention at Indianapolis, who voted against the policy of Howat in regard to a strike in two Kansas miners. The Scammon meeting was adjourned because of uproar created by a party of about 200 men whom, leaders asserted, came from the northern end of the field and who refused to permit Rube Fern, an international organizer, to explain the international's position. Later the group adopted resolutions similar to those passed at Franklin.

Supporters of the provisional regime said the resolutions were illegal, however, as the regular union meeting had been adjourned.

Such bitterness has been displayed by the Howat partisans against Peck, who has been an opponent of Howat for a year or two. He formerly was a supporter of Howat. The sending of an outsider, however, to supersede Peck is said by union leaders to be in the line of procedure followed by the internation in the past.

The funds of the district organization now are believed to be firmly tied up against either side. Both sides have notified the banks which have the funds not to pay out money on the order of the other side. The banks it is said, may require legal action before they will cash any checks of the organization.

OHIO STATE STAGES GREAT COMEBACK BEATING GOPHERS

By Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 15.—Ohio State's football team did the unexpected here this afternoon by defeating the strong Minnesota eleven, 27 to 0. Minnesota started the favorite because of Ohio State's defeat last week by Oberlin, 7 to 6. The Buckeyes put a new line-up in today and played a wonderful forward passing game. The surprised Gophers were unable to hold the Buckeyes in the first two periods when Ohio State scored three touchdowns, but stiffened their line and held Ohio State scoreless in the final two periods.

JOHNSON URGES WOMAN FOR ONE OF LEGISLATORS

Tells City Federation Could Name Several Who Would Make Showing in Texas Legislature.

Several Important Decisions Marks First Meeting of Year by Local Club Federal Body.

That a woman be chosen as one of the representatives from Wichita county was the suggestion made by Representative Johnson, speaking at the City Federation Saturday afternoon. Mr. Johnson added that he could suggest the names of several women who would make admirable representatives for the county, and further stated his belief that it would be only a short time until there would be several women representatives in the legislature, and that Wichita county might as well take the lead.

This suggestion, which was more than half serious, was a part of a highly interesting, illuminating talk given by Mr. Johnson on his legislative experiences. His account of the attempt to slash the University of Texas appropriations was heard with considerable interest, as was his humorous side lights on some of his efforts to introduce some innovations.

A bill which would have regulated real estate operations, and which would prevent many irregularities which were practiced locally in boom times, he declared, was hooted and jeered at by some of the representatives, one old farmer getting up and saying, "Well, you might as well pass a law tryin' to make all chickens lay after six o'clock."

"Men, Not Measures"

"I used to hear as the watchword in all elections, 'Measures, Not Men,'" said Mr. Johnson, "but I have learned that this is wrong. If you elect real men, you will get the right measures. And the time to work for good government, I don't care whether it's city, county or state, is before election, not after. All the telegrams and interviews in the world won't do much good, after the wrong man is elected. And it isn't enough to elect a 'good' man. A man may be good, and still not think along properly constructive lines for the good of the state. The state of Texas has been held down too long by a governing body that isn't big enough.

"There are in the two bodies, the house and the senate, some very progressive, fine spirited men, who are serving at considerable sacrifice. There are also the 'five dollar a day men,' who are making more at five dollars a day in the legislature than they can at home. And there are some retired farmers, who haven't anything else to do, and many other kinds of representatives, too numerous to go into detailed description. The results tell plainly enough the fight that is waging all the time, between progressiveness and retrogression."

Important Actions Taken

Several important business matters were acted upon at the first meeting of the Wichita Falls Federation of Women's clubs held Saturday afternoon at the First Baptist church, the session proving of much interest, though the attendance was limited.

Several changes were made in the personnel of the officers due to resignations, and two changes voted in the constitution.

The election of officers, set in the constitution for December, was changed to the first of each year, to conform with the other clubs' schedule, and a special election was set for the November meeting, the officers to take charge immediately. A nominating committee is to be appointed immediately by Mrs. Barron to make a report at the November meeting.

Mrs. J. J. Perkins was elected to represent the City Federation at the state meeting, to be held in Fort Worth next month.

Mrs. Hugh Larkum was appointed treasurer pro tem, in the absence from the city of Mrs. T. P. Adams, and took over the financial business at the meeting.

Mrs. Priddy Secretary

The resignations of Mrs. C. N. Alexander as corresponding secretary, and Mrs. W. M. Priddy as second vice president, were read and accepted.

The day of meeting was changed from the third to the fourth Saturday in each month, to take care of a conflict with the meeting of another club.

A request was made that each club make appointment immediately of its representative to the City Federation, in addition to the president of the club, and that the name of the new president, and the new representative be sent immediately to Mrs. F. T. Datson, the secretary, so that the federation's rolls can be brought up to date. Clubs of more than 20 members are entitled to a third representative.

The business session followed an interesting program of which Representative B. F. Johnson was the principal speaker. Mr. Johnson's talk was in the nature of an informal discussion of the makeup of the Texas legislature, and the part that women could play in the state government.

MAKES RECORD FOR SHORTHAND COURSE

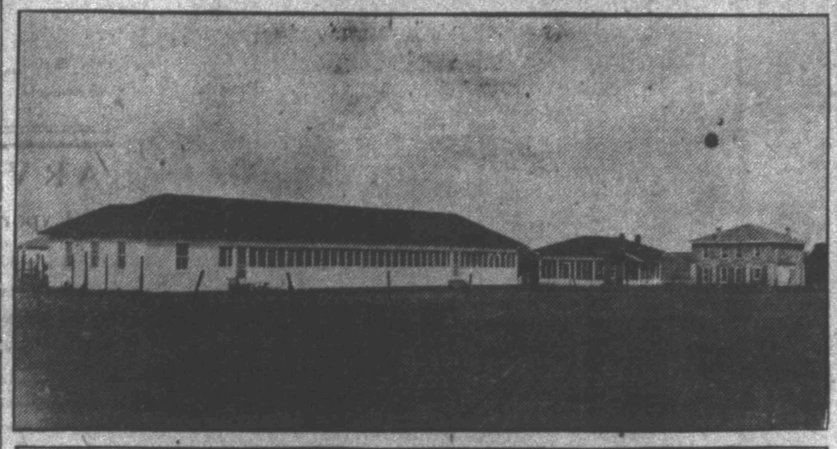

What is declared to be a record for the chain of schools to which he belongs, has been made by J. W. Akin Jr., in learning to write shorthand at the rate of 125 words per minute, in exactly 60 days 'time, according to announcement by H. Holmgren, manager of the local Draughon business school.

"We have had some who finished the course in three months," he said, "but this is the first one who has finished in this time in the history of any of the schools."

Young Akin will be associated with the firm of Kay, Akin and Kenley, of which his father, Judge J. W. Akin, is a member.

NEW AND PRACTICAL METHODS MIXED WITH APPLIED HUMANITY MAKE WICHITA COUNTY FARM A PLEASANT HOME FOR ALL WHO MAY COME WITHIN ITS CARE

Located two miles south of the downtown district of this city a ten minute ride by automobile from the courthouse square is located a farm belonging to the residents of Wichita county but of which the average resident of the county knows little or nothing.

The 156 and fraction acres is known as the Wichita County Farm. Thus it is designated on the official records of the county and thus reads the sign on the entrance to the farm.

The conception of the average citizen of a county farm is perhaps best expressed in verse by a certain contemporary poet in a poem entitled, "Over the Hill," which recently was realistic to local residents following a long run of a movie production dramatized from the subject matter of the famous poem.

To the so-called average citizen a place which everbody tries to avoid from his youth. They call it a 'poor' or a "pauper" farm and in their conception it is a place of filth, poor food and lodging, presided over by a "hard boiled" overseer who lack certain human characteristics.

Should Visit Place

But such an opinion if it still exists locally is wrong. A visit to the Wichita County Farm will convince the most sceptical.

The request of Louis M. Jernigan, county farm superintendent, to the writer that he refrain from using the terms "poor" or "pauper" in referring to the farm perhaps best illustrates the spirit which prevails in the control of the institution. To the superintendent inmates are "dependents" who unable to support themselves and who for that reason are spending their remaining years as "guests" of the county.

To state that Wichita county has one of the most elaborately equipped county farms in the state would create a false impression. Comparatively little of the tax payers' money has been spent at the farm and for that reason one can not point to large buildings, expensive equipment and the like as idicating the county's desire to care for its dependents.

But residents of the county and outsiders who have inspected the farm have said that no farm in the state excels in cleanliness, convenience, food and other necessities required to furnish inmates with average comforts.

New Building Completed

During the last week the latest building on the farm was completed. It is known as the second dormitory and will be used as a loging for additional men and women who are expected to require care during the winter months. The building which consists of seven double rooms with a ward, will accommodate 25 people and in case of emergency the screened porch shown in the picture can be closed in to accommodate 10 more. The other dormitory provides accommodations for 10 patients.

The two-story brick structure shown is the hospital for contagious diseases, furnishing accommodations for 25 people. Thise building was erected two years ago. The smaller brick structure is the hospital for tubercular patients with accommodations for six people. Each room in the hospital has a screened porch providing the important sleeping accommodation in connection with the treatment of the disease. A small frame structure some distance from the other buildings is maintained for the care of negroes.

The home of the superintendent, fronting on the main road completes the buildings used by employes and inmates.

In spite of the general financial depression of the country there are only nine men and women being cared for by the county at present time. The contagious and tubercular hospitals have no patients at present as is generally the situation at this time of the year. Contagious diseases flourish during the winter and the capacity of the hospital is generally taxed during those months.

All buildings have modern conveniences. A sewerage system has been completed which is connected to every building. All buildings have separate baths for the men and women with hot and cold water. Natural gas is used for heat and light connections being made with the mains running to this city.

Water System.

A miniature water system similar in plan to the city water works places running water in all buildings. An irrigation ditch runs through the farm. Water is taken from the ditch into a concrete tank where it is given the same chemical treatment as that used by local residents. It is then pumped into a tank erected high enough to give the required pressure at all points. Drinking water is obtained from a cistern at the superintendent's home.

As the name indicates the 156 acres constitute a farm in addition to an institution for the care of dependents. As yet the possibilities from irrigation have only been partially developed. Mr. Jernigan, by making over a truck engine, has completed a pumping arrangement whereby he irrigates the garden and lawn of the farm that part being higher than the level of the irrigation ditch which enters the northwest corner and leaves the farm at the southeast corner. In addition 12 acres of the farm is now ready for irrigation.

No attempt is made to extensively cultivate the remainder of the farm although the county has a substantial income from yearly crops. The farm out-buildings art models as to cleanliness and arrangement. Several head of cows more than furnish the dairy products used at the farm.

A large flock of chickens are also a source of income to the county and furnish the little work that inmates are able to do. Enough horses and mules are kept to do what farming is done under the supervision of the county superintendent. Part of the farm is leased.

The county farm has efficient management under Louis M. Jernigan, who is also in charge of the court house. A county official who will not testify to the efficiency of the Jernigan management during the last four years that he has been in charge cannot be found at the court house. It is conceded that the present desirable condition prevailing at the farm is due to his plans approved by the county commissioners' court.

Some of his ideas are new in county farm management, but Jernigan has a habit of being first in things that he does. Records show that he was the first policeman of the city in 1907. The city had a chief of police previous to that time but Jernigan was the first real "cop." Later he was the first night chief of police.

County records show that in 1909 he organized the first county road camp under D. E. Thomas, who was commissioner from Precinct 1 at that time. He took charge of the county farm on August 1, 1917, succeeding W. H. Vickers and most of the present improvements have been made under his supervision.

Instance of Efficiency

An idea of his worth to the county can be obtained from figures from the office of County Auditor Murphy, which show that the latest dormitory to be constructed at the farm cost $4,239, completed under his supervision, representing approximately half the contract bids submitted.

Dr. M. M. Walker, county health officer, has charge of the hospital work at the farm and to him and the members of the county commissioner courts who have had general supervision of the farm credit is also due.

The 156 acres that comprise the farm cost the county $4,100 in 1908. In February of that year 80 acres was purchased from S. A. Haines and later an additional 76 acres.

Previous to that period the county cared for its dependents on a block of land owned by the county near the present Burnett street bridge. Mr. Critington was in charge there for a number of years. According to county records the block was disposed of and the farm purchased because residents objected to the presence of the institution within the city limits.

M. F. Yeager, present deputy clerk of the county courts, was judge of the county court at the time the farm was purchased. J. D. Avis, of this city, commissioner from Precinct 1 at that time, was largely responsible for the purchase of the farm. H. G. Karrenbrock, E. A. McCluskey and E. A. Dale were other members of the court.

STUDENTS TO TRAIN FOR CONTESTS

With student literary and athletic clubs well under way teachers and students of Wichita Falls city schools are now making plans to train students for participation in interscholastic events which are to take place during the winter and spring months.

The Wichita Falls City schools will enter the district events as a unit in competition with Wichita and adjacent counties, and teachers and students alike are counting on wing a number of places for representation at the Austin contests which annually end interscholastic events.

The officers of the city interscholastic league are announced as follows: C. E. Danheim, director general; Mr. Harbaugh, director of athletics; Miss Juanita Kinsey, director of debating; Pete Maddrey, director of essay writing; Miss Kate Burgess, director of spelling; Miss Henrietta Pyle, director of music.

CHAIRMAN I. AND G. N. TRAINMEN TO AWAIT ORDER OF PRES. LEE

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 15.—B. D. Frame, general chairman of the trainmen on the International & Great Northern here, said tonight that while he was authorized to call a strike of trainmen on the International and Great Northern for October 22, he would not do so until he had received further word from W. G. Lee, president of the brotherhood. He is expecting word from President Lee and will act promptly as soon as he hears from him, he said.

Humble Reported Building Line To Bunger; Will Make Fourth in New Young County Oil District

ELIASVILLE, Oct. 15.—The fourth pipeline connection in the Bunger field is promised within the next few weeks, the Humble Pipeline Company having started construction on a line. This new line will run from Eliasville, the present terminus of the Humble from the Stephens county fields, to Bunger, where present drilling operations seem to insure considerable new production in the next few weeks.

Lines already in the new Bunger district include the Sinclair, the Prairie and the Texas companies. At present there are three producing weels, the Ross and Tyrell, the discovery well, the Hedrick and Spoonts, and the Union Oil Company's Askew well, the first to get the sand, though the two others were completed before it was finally brought in.

AUXILIARY TO LEGION SALE NETS $55

With customers still coming in and asking for the products offered for sale, the local Woman's Auxiliary, American Legion, closed their sale of doughnuts, cakes and other crispy edibles Saturday with a net profit of $55. The sale was held for the benefit of the auxiliary treasury and the products supplied by the members.

One aim of the sale, according to members, is to raise funds to defray the expenses of the local delegate to the national convention which meets in Kansas City October 31 for a four day session. "Ma" Burdick was elected a delegate to this convention at the state conference at Houston.

TRAINLOAD OF GASOLINE SENT TO NEW YORK

One trainload, of 35 tank cars of gasoline, billed to New York points, formed the only movement of any size from the Wichita Falls refineries this past week, according to information from refinery sources, the week being very unusual. The market is dormant with practically no inquiries coming in for any refined products, except fuel oil, and these inquiries, it is said, do not seem to come from parties with any intention of placing orders, immediately, but rather actuated by curiosity.

No attempt to quote any set prices is being made, with the reluctance of jobbers to place orders, and no information has been received from the conferences which are part of the meeting of the Independent Oil Men's association, in Chicago this past week, it is stated. However, some relief from the situation is promised this week.

GOVERNMENT REPORT BOOSTS WHEAT PRICES

Special to the Record News

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Wheat has made a sharp advance in price this week owing more or less to government figures showing that the 1921 yields of wheat and corn were smaller than had been looked for. Compared with a week ago, wheat this morning was 5 3-4 to 6c higher, corn down 7-8c to 1 1-8c, oats up 1-8 to 1-2 and provisions unchanged to 37c lower.

In addition to the notable decrease in estimated production of wheat and corn, general belief prevailed that a further report from the government today as to stocks of wheat on hand in all positions would have a decided bullish aspect. Such consideration led to a good deal of talk that the United States wheat surplus had been sold out. On the other hand, bearish constructions put upon an address by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace failed to exert more than a transient influence and so likewise did a railroad embargo against Galveston because of temporary congestion of elevator and track facilities there.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Uncertainty regarding farm reserve figures credited to the government but not officially issued from Washington, gave an advantage to bears in wheat today during most of the session. Weekend evening up, however, caused a rally. The close was unsettled at 1-8c net decline to a like advance, with December $1.15 5-8 to $1.15 7-8 and May $1.19 5-8 to $1.20. Corn finished off 1-8c to 1-8@1-4c up and oats gained 1-8c to 1-4@3-8c. In provisions the outcome varied from 2 1-2c decline to a rise of 10c.

Corn and oats were governed chiefly by action of wheat.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Overnight developments in the railroad situation unsettled today's stock market session, rails of the investment division reacting one to three points.

The reversal extended to steels, equipments and numerous allied issues, but domestic oils followed their recent movement into new high ground. Several of the foreign oils, especially Mexican petroleum, also were substantially better. Elsewhere trading was a desultory character, specialties tending mainly downward with a new low record for American sugar. Pierce-Arrow common and preferred were unusually active at material advances. Sales amounted to 275,000 shares.

Aside from the 3 1-2s which rose slightly over fifty points, dealings in liberty bonds were dull and featureless. The general bond market was irregular. Another sharp rally in British rates, with demand sterling at 3.89 1-4 or almost five cents over the week's minimum and the further slump in German marks to a level approximately 65-100th cent directed renewed attention to chaotic conditions abroad. Most other European rates were better on limited dealings. Total sales par value, $7,162,000.

CORN USE AS FUEL ALL BUNK, DECLARES FARMING OFFICIAL

TOPEKA, Kan, Oct. 15.—"Rumors that corn will be used for fuel are all bunc," said J. C. Mohler, secretary of the state board of agriculture, who has just returned from a trip which carried him almost from the ast to the west border sof the state. "I know Kansas farmers have not the remotest idea of using corn for fuel, and cannot conceive that any farmer anywhere has such an idea. Even at the present price it would be an economic loss for a farmer to use corn for fuel rather than sell it and buy fuel.

"The low price of corn has resulted in a pronounced increase in hog feeding. There is a great demand for hogs to consume the corn, and at prevailing prices there is a good profit in it. Many farmers who anticipate the need of corn for feeding purposes are storing their corn which they are buying because the price is low."

USEFUL CLAMP.

A very useful article to have in the tool box is the type of clamp variously known as a C. clamp or U. clamp. There are numberless uses for the part, but possibly its greatest value is to hold a large monkey wrench to the running board, the wrench acting as a vise. The clamp takes up little room in the tool box, costs so little and is so very useful when its time does come that every car owner ought to have one.

Cotton

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—There was a further rally in the cotton market during today's early trading, but the demand from shorts became less active on the advance to 19.45 for December, or about 59 points above yesterday's low level. Late fluctuations were irregular, but there was scattered southern selling and renewed liquidation in late trading, and December closed at 19.21 or 24 points off from the best. The general market closed barely steady, net unchanged to 15 points higher.

The opening was steady at a decline of 7 points on December but generally 3 to 19 points higher on covering for over the week-end and trade buying. Reports of an improved spot demand in the south late yesterday and rather vague reports that a tropical disturbance was developing in the Carribean Sea, probably promoted buying to cover short contracts. On the whole, however, local brokers attributed the advance chiefly to a firmer technical position after the heavy liquidation of the past two weeks and when the demand from shorts subsided the market soon turned irregularly. January sold up to 19.22 during the mid-morning with active months generally showing net advances of 20 to 30 points, but the close was fifteen or 20 points off from the best.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 15.—Pronounced firmness was shown in early trading in cotton today. At highest the trading months were 27 to 32 points over the close of yesterday, December rising to 19.03. After the middle of the session values gradually tapered off under renewed selling for short account and realizing by these who took on long contracts around the opening. The close showed net gains on the day of only two to nine points on the more active months. December's last price being 18.81.

On the first call it was plain that the short interest was buying considerable cotton and brokers generally set the demand down as resulting from uneasiness over the very favorable tone of wetkly and monthly statistics.

Week-end reviews of trade in general were called very favorable, especially in their reference to textile conditions.

Highest prices of the day were reached on telegrams from Texas claiming the crop of that state was ninety per cent ginned and on telegrams from Oklahoma saying that ginning would be finished there in 15 days.

COTTONSEED OIL

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Cottonseed oil was fairly active and firmer on buying due to expectations of a bullish government report and firmness in lard. The close was five to 15 points net higher. Sales 5,600 barrels. Prime crude 7.00; prime summer yellow spot 8.40 bid; December 8.81; March 9.04 and May 9.20, all bid.

COMPANY ORGANIZATION

is the important step to business success. Without it you cannot cash in, even when you hit. Organize as a civil law company under the laws of Louisiana—simpler to organize and easier to operate than either a corporation or common law trust syndicate. Especially suitable to oil enterprises. Eliminates bothersome forms, State reports, organization delays, franchise taxes, and is legal in any State.

Under this form of organization, skill, knowledge and experience serve as a basis for issuing shares so that organizers control. Write today for particulars.

As Expected-- Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value

EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY

This Car at This Price Is by Far the Most Remarkale Motor Car Value in America Today

The Nash Four was designed, built and perfected as a lightweight, high-quality car and created a new standard of value at its original price of $1395.

From the first public recognition of the wonderful worth embodied in the Nash Four kept the demand always far ahead of our steadily increasing production.

Production Makes New Prices Possible

Now this production has reached a volume where by handling this car to buyers practically at cost we are able to make this new price effective immediately.

Like money has never before purchased such great value in a high grade light motor car.

In every quality of appearance, comfort and performance this car displays its commanding supremacy and expresses that superior excellence which so conspicuously and invariably distinguishes a Nash-built product.

The beautiful body, finished in dark, lustrous blue, is unusually roomy. The thick upholstery of its wide, restful seats is of finest materials.

Superior in Every Outstanding Quality

The famous Nash Perfected Valve-in-Head Four-Cylinder Motor, the acknowledged performer among light-four engines, is now refined to the last degree. Its wonderful acceleration, fine speed, power on the hills and unusual flexibility in throttling down, leave it without a rival in its field.

Remarkable Riding Comfort

See This Car Today—Drive It

Then you will recognize by how wide a margin it surpasses all the other light cars. It is the outstanding automobile value today—a real leader in the automobile industry.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION
The State of Texas
To the Sheriff or any Constable of Wichita County, Greeting:
YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to summon P. W. Harris and W. B. Dennis by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the 30th District Court of Wichita County, to be holden at the Court House thereof in Wichita Falls on the third Monday in December, A. D. 1921, the same being the 19th day of December, A. D. 1921, then and there to answer first amended petition filed in said Court on the 28th day of Sept., A. D. 1921, in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 8383-A, wherein R. E. Huff and W. M. McGregor are Plaintiffs and B. C. Gaither, Alma Gaither, P. W. Harris, W. R. Grice and W. B. Dennis are Defendants, and said petition alleging that on June 22nd, 1915, defendants B. C. Gaither and Alma Gaither, made, executed and delivered to J. D. Summers their negotiable promissory notes, payable one note for $180.00 payable June 22nd, 1915, five notes for $300.00 each, payable on the 22nd day of the years 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920 and 1921, respectively, each and all of said notes bearing interest from date until paid at the rate of 8 per cent per annum payable annually as it accrues and providing for 10 per cent interest per annum after maturity and for 10 per cent attorney fees if collected by attorney ets. That by assignment plaintiffs are the owners and holders of said notes, that all of said notes are due and unpaid to plaintiff's dam-

THE WORDS of a Business Man

"I feel that the money I place in the Building & Loan Association is rendering a small service in the way of assisting some one to purchase or build a home. I also feel that as a business man it is my duty to place a part of my savings in the Association which in turn is immediately loaned to assist some one to own a home.

"Furthermore, I realize that my investment of $1200 per year, paid in monthly payments until maturity, will earn me on the average of $800 per year. So I am frank to say that I am proud to make an investment of $100 per month which will earn $66.67 per month.

"I will further state that all of my employes carry Building & Loan accounts and I shall be glad to cooperate with and render any service I can to the Association."

FIRE AT PARIS PROPERTY LOSS NEAR $1,000,000

Flames Are Brought Under Control at 4 O'Clock Saturday Morning After Five Hour Fight.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 15—Property loss estimated at from $500,000 to $1,000,000 was caused here last night by a fire which raged five hours in the business district, then spread to Bonham and Graham streets, residential sections, where it finally was brought under control at 4 o'clock this morning. While there was much excitement, no one was injured in the conflagration which came a little more than five years after the disastrous fire which wiped out a large section of the city in 1916.

Starting from an undetermined cause in the Rodgers-Wade Furniture company five-story building on the northwest corner of the public square the flames quickly spread northwestward, consuming several other establishments, then entering the residence section, burned at least ten residences. Fire fighters from nearby towns assisted the local department in controlling the flames. The largest individual loss was the Rogers-Wade building and contents, valued at approximately $250,000.

Reconstruction of the devastated area is to start immediately, it is understood.

Wire communication was badly interrupted by the fire and connection with the outside intermittent. Fire fighting apparatus from Bonham and Honey Grove, Texas, and Hugo, Oklahoma, was hurried here to assist in checking the flames. The blaze originated from an undetermined cause in the Rodgers-Wade Furniture company's building, a five story structure in the heart of the business district.

Destroying that building, the flames swept northwest into the residence district, burning dwellings on Bonham and Graham streets, five blocks distant from the fire's origin.

Shortly after the flames struck the residence section four dwellings on Bonham street and a large two story residence on Graham street had been consumed. There was much excitement and numerous trucks were hastily loaded with household goods to be rushed to places of safety. Scores of families in the threatened area removed their furniture to the lawns.

Six years ago last night Paris was swept by the most disastrous fire in its history, the loss reaching into millions of dollars. Strangely enough last night marked the closing of a Lamar county centennial celebration, the concluding act of which was "the burning of Paris," reproduced phrotechnically.

SEVERAL FEATURES OF PARIS FIRE PECULIAR

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Texas, Oct. 15.—Fire Marshal Milt Saufley tonight, after careful revision, places the losses on the fire of this morning at half a million dollars. Seven business establishments and eight residences were burned. The insurance statement shows in excess of four hundred thousand. The losses were total and there is no salvage save a little furniture from a few of the residences.

The fire was discovered at the same hour that "the burning of Paris" was being depicted pyrotechnically at the fair grounds as a part of the Lamar fair. This fact has led to many declaring today that there should be no further observances in connection with the disastrous fire of 1916. The fire of this morning started at the exact point where the fire of 1916 left off.

The phone exchange was destroyed, being crushed when the walls of the five story Rodgers-Wade furniture building fell outward. The girls remained in the building until the manager warned them out and none were injured. The phone service to the outside was restored within three hours after the exchange had been destroyed but local phone service is out for at least two weeks, possibly longer. Mayor Crook stated that the water service was satisfactory and that the firemen did their full duty. The fact that they lost the fire was a matter of untoward circumstances, he said.

TO SUPPRESS DISORDERS IN UPPER SILESIA

Inter-Allied Commission Warns Polish and German Factions Demonstrations Must Cease.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—The inter-allied commission in Oppeln, Upper Silesia, has again warned both the Polish and German factions in Silesia, that force will promptly be used to suppress disorders.

A state of siege has been declared in the Beuthen district. The Germans have been carrying on demonstrations there. Renewed agitation has been started in Upper Silesia for a general strike in protest against the league council's decision regarding the region which is increasing the excitement of the German population.

BALFOUR DEFENDS PLAN PROPOSED FOR SILESIA

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Arthur J. the council of the league of nations, said today that he though he would be well if one of the council should explain the decision regarding Upper Silesia.

He denied recently current rumors that members of the council were mere puppets of the various governments.

"There is absolutely no scintilla of foundation, I know, for that rumor," he declared.

Emphasizing the difficulty of the problem, Mr. Balfour says that the Versailles treaty had placed the population first in importance and the industry of that second, and while there was no doubt that western Upper Silesia was German, the southeast was Polish.

The real difficulty arose, he said, regarding the small area which is a fraction of the whole of Upper Silesia, containing a large percentage of population much intermixed as to national characteristics. The council had to cut the line through a highly industrialized region. To be sure, he said, no Englishman could travel in that area and not regard with dismay the severing of the district, there would even be a feeling of horror at this partition, he said.

"If the two parties," he declared, "are prepared to show ordinary prudence and a sense of self-interest, they will be able to make the scheme a working proposition."

Commenting upon expressions of disapproval on the part of Germany, Mr. Balfour said he could not imagine any policy more suicidal if the Germans should attempt to wreck the whole scheme.

HARVARD PRESIDENT DISARMS REPORTERS TO INSURE SECRECY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 15.—President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University, in asking newspaper men not to report a recent address by Viscount James Bryce at the Harvard Union, used his own censorship.

Just before he introduced the distinguished British publicist, Dr. Lowell leaned over to the press tables and told the reporters it was Lord Bryce's wish that none of his remarks be published, inasmuch as it was to be intimate talk to the under-graduates.

To make doubly sure that the Viscount's request would be respected, Harvard's president, with a smile, took the note books from reporters and stuffed them into his pocket. Then, with the reportorial guns spiked, he introduced the speaker.

After Lord Bryce's address, which dealt in an informal way with university life, in England, Germany and this country, and emphasized the need for educated men in public affairs, President Lowell, smiling again, returned the books. The newspaper men did not print the address.

Pointed Criticism.

"I don't know whether this is a compliment or not," said Scribbon. "A reviewer says my latest book reminds him of Thackeray."

"That's fine."

"Wait a moment. He detects a slight similarity in the punctuation."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

SUCCOTH WILL BE OBSERVED MONDAY AT TEMPLE ISRAEL

Succoth, the original Thanksgiving Day of ancient Israel, better known as the Feast of Tabernacles, comes this year on Monday, October 17th, and is observed for seven days, ending with the Day of Conclusion, or Shemini Atkereth.

In the light of its Biblical origin, Succoth is a characteristic harvest festival, having its inception and significance in an agricultural era. It is known in Scripture as the Feast of Ingathering (Exodus 23:16), when the ancient Israelitish farmer gathered in the fruit of his labors of the field.

It is also associated with the early history of the Hebrews with their journey through the wilderness, when they were compelled to live in tents or temporary dwellings. Many observant Jews obey the Biblical command "to dwell in booths" literally, and erect "succoth," temporary huts, in which they serve their meals and offer prayers of thanksgiving.

There will be special Succoth services at Temple Israel, corner Burnett and Eleventh streets, tonight at 7:30, (Sunday, October 16th). Dr. David Goldberg will preach on "The Germs of Prejudice." All are invited.

MONTANA BOY BANDIT ROBS BANK OF $40,000 AND THEN HALF OF LOOT DISAPPEARS

HELENA, Mont., Oct. 15.—The commitment of Charles Stevens, nineteen, of this city, to the state penitentiary, at Deer Lodge, for a term of from seven to fourteen years has renewed interest here in the mystery surrounding the whereabouts of approximately $20,000, half of the $40,000 in currency stolen by Stevens, while acting as messenger for a local bank.

The story of young Stevens' crime the recovery of a portion of the money and the search for an elusive "Mr. Smith," who is supposed to have disappeared with the missing money, was revealed here by detectives following denial by the state supreme court of a new trial for Stevens after he had been convicted of the theft.

Stevens Found Bound

Young Stevens, who was a messenger of the Union Bank and Trust Company of Helena, was found in an alley not far from the bank an hour after he had left the post office with $40,000 in currency consigned to the bank. He was bound, gagged and apparently unconscious. The $40,000 was nowhere to be found.

Stevenes was revived and told a lurid tale of having been attacked, beaten and robbed as he cut across the alleys to the bank. He said two men had attacked him and described them in detail.

Since Helena is a small town and the time was mid-afternoon the story was questioned. He was taken to jail and after two days he admitted that he had evolved the yarn from a movie he had seen.

He had declared that the cashier of the bank had been his accomplice and was to have shared in the spoils.

After a severe grilling, however, young Stevens finally admitted that he had stolen the money and said that he would show the officers where he had hidden it.

Bank officials, officers, newspaper men and a string of spectators followed him to the rear of the building where he had been found. He said the money was concealed in a hole in the wall, inside the building, which was deserted.

Money Disappears

He put his hand into the hole. Then he looked blank, then frightened and finally said there was nothing there. He insisted he had left it there. A thorough search proved that there was no money anywhere on the premises. A grueling cross-examination failed to shake the story and it became apparent that Stevens was telling the truth.

But where was the money?

There were almost as many theories as there were inhabitants of Helena and officers spent a busy two weeks trailing down false clues.

Then the lavish expenditures of a family in a small town near Helena attracted attention. Their story of the sudden death of a wealthy relative was found to be false, and officers began to investigate their sources of income. During the inquiry, which covered several days, it is believed that a detective twice sat on the hidden money—once while he occupied a cushioned chair and again when he reposed on a couch.

"Mr. Smith" Disappears.

The suspected family consisted of husband and wife and a brother of the woman—the mysterious "Mr. Smith." "Mr. Smith" disappeared soon after investigation of the family started.

One day, while a detective was questioning the woman, the husband abruptly left the room. The detective followed him to a heap of rubbish and watched him pull out an old flour sack a huge pile of bills, part of the missing $40,000.

According to the detective the husband related this story:

The man and his brother-in-law, "Mr. Smith," were driving in a truck near the alley, when they saw the bank messenger hide something in the deserted building.

The woman's brother entered the building and seized the package. Arrived in the light, he found it was money. He tossed it into the rear of the truck, under some old quilts, and drove all over Helena, while the entire police and sheriff's force was hunting for the missing cash.

"That night, when we saw the paper," said the man, "we were scared, because the boy said he had been slugged by two men. There were two of us, and we had the money, didn't we? If we'd given it up I guess we'd both be doing time for the job now, wouldn't we?

Started Spending.

"We brought it home and hid it. At first we were afraid to use it. Then the boy changed his story, and we knew he had stolen it. We figured we might as well have some of it, so we started to spend it. Then we decided to divide it. The officers came before we divided it and one of them sat on the money twice. When the officers left we divided the money. "Mr. Smith" taking his share and leaving the city."

And to date neither "Mr. Smith" nor the missing $20,000 has been apprehended.

WOMEN THROUGHOUT WORLD ARE MASSING TO ADMONISH DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

By MILDRED MORRIS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. — The president's armament conference will hear from the women.

Women in the Far East, women in Europe, women throughout the world, will make their demands known. Through world-wide demonstrations they will lift their voices in a mighty clamor for an end of war.

A "Battalion of Death" is now mobilizing to descend on the conference.

Descend On Capital

Thousands of women, representing every section of the country, will descend on Washington, each with the avowed intention to keep up a deadly barrage of "nagging" until the conference takes action assuring future world peace.

Already more than a dozen national women's organizations are at work on plans to "camp on" the conference and "nag" the distinguished delegates into action.

There is even talk of picketing the conference. Gold Star Mothers and disabled veterans on the picket line—this is among the plans under consideration.

Most of the organizations will be satisfied with a programme calling for limitation of armaments. A few demand complete disarmament and nothing less.

Watchdog of Conference

The Women's World Disarmament Committee, the first in action, calls itself the "watchdog" of the conference.

"This conference must be the people's conference," says Miss Emma Wold, chairman of the committee. "It is fast degenerating into anything but a Disarmament Conference.

"It is up to the people to see that disarmament comes out of it. We can do it if we really want disarmament. We must express this gripping, heartfelt desire in a demand which cannot be pushed aside by questions of the Far East, or any other questions."

Huge Demonstration

All of the big women's organizations of the country will take part in the nation-wide demonstration planned by the National Women's Trade Union League, representing 600,000 women, most of them organized women from the trade-union ranks. The league will work with the International Congress of Working Women, which meets in Geneva October 17. Plans for an international demonstration call for mass meetings and parades by women throughout the world on Armistice Day. At the mass meetings the women's demands will be drafted into a platform for submission to the president's conference.

The National League of Women Voters is working through the clearing house recently organized here with all organizations active in the cause of disarmament represented. Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Roosevelt leader and former head of the Forestry Bureau, heads the activities of this clearing house. It will "cooperate" with the administration, it announces, and has elaborate plans to get information of the conference out to the public. Different phases of the conference will be interpreted by experts, whose articles will be sent broadcast.

Women on Committees

Though none of the nine countries as yet has designated a woman to sit in the conference, President Harding has announced that two women will have places on the prominent advisory committees.

On the outside looking in, the women intend to make their voices heard in an emphatic manner. Their attack will be "dignified but determined," they announce.

It is no secret that the activities of the women have aroused not a little uneasiness in White House circles.

"We want no pussy-footing or gum-shoe methods," say the women leaders.

Privately the administration leaders express fear that the woman host will brass bank angles of the conference diplomats deem best to keep secret.

The "Battalion of Death" will be on the job continuously. It will send its forces out to shatter the traditions of diplomacy. Its leaders warn there will be no let-up in the barrage of publicity or verbal ammunition.

Millions of sharp, suspicious women's eyes will be on the conference. Millions of women's voices will speak as one in admonishing world-distinguished statesmen to "walk the chalk-line."

"Nagging," woman's most effective weapon since Eve's day, will be matched against diplomacy.

Downturn of Mark Is Blow To Ex-Kaiser

By Associated Press.

DOORN, Holland) Oct. 15.—The slump in the German mark is beginning to affect the former German emperor, who is endeavoring to combat unfavorable financial conditions by reducing his household and by other radical measures. Today ten members of his staff were dismissed, including the chief gardener, whose place has been taken taken by William himself.

Gardening now has become a hobby with the former emperor, who appears to have tired of sawing and chopping wood.

General Von Gontard, the ex-kaiser's first chamberlain, today gave out a statement saying that William's financial position would no longer allow him to give monetary support to many of the poor of Holland and Germany who continually apply at Doorn castle for aid.

"The Prussia government has seized all the estates and the entire capital of the Hohenzollerns and negotiations for an arrangement still are pending," the statement added.

"The kaiser's only means consist of remittances from Germany and as the rate of German currency is so low that a hundred marks is little more than two florins it is evident the money received is barely sufficient to provide for the kaiser and the crown prince."

Not Uncommen.

"I don't see how actors can stimulate a laugh so heartily."

"Nonsense. Don't we do it every day at funny stories we have heard a dozen times.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Brigadier General William R. Smith, was ordered today by Major General Harbord, acting chief of staff, to take command of Fort Sam Houston, Texas, headquarters of the Eighth corps area training center.

Gidas, a British monk in the latter part of the sixth century, wrote a history of the Saxon conquest of Britain.

TAX PAYMENTS FAR ABOVE ALL PAST RECORDS

Although Goal Not Fully Reached, City Officials Express Gratification at Showing.

Although having obtained slightly less than 60 per cent of the amount desired on the middle of the month the fifteen day campaign of City Tax Collector H. J. Anderson closed Saturday night with a collection more than twice as great as has, in any previous year, been collected by the middle of December.

With collections of $1,702.23 on Friday and Saturday the collections for the first fifteen days of October were brought to a total of $59,379.39.

During 1920 the payments at the end of November, when citizens were being asked for early tax payments, were only $24,047.97, a sum less than half that already collected for this year.

In commenting on the results for this year.

In commenting on the results of the campaign, Mr. Anderson asserted that while he had failed to realize the $100,000 collection which is needed for the city, that he was more than gratified with the efforts made by citizens to meet their payments early and at the co-operative spirit shown by every citizen whom he had approached.

continue his efforts to collect the taxes as early as possible and urged that people begin now in order to avoid the rush which is almost certain to be made during January and February by people who postpone the settlement as long as possible.

Wichitans who made their tax payments during the last two days of the current week were:

E. B. Gorsline, Mrs. E. B. Gorsline, Ira J. Uttz, A. J. Savell, G. C. Dawson, F. A. Sweet, C. I. Francis, Mrs. R. C. Pickett, Mrs. E. R. Lofton, Saul Lebenson, T. J. Edmonsdon, A. C. Bennett, R. A. Findley, A. J. Hanford, L. B. Moore.

Denies Masonry Is Responsible For Klan Order

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Oct. 15.—Andrew L. Randell, grand master of the grand lodge Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Texas, in a statement late today, denied that Masonry, "as credited in some quarters," is responsible for the Ku Klux Klan or any other non-Masonic organization, and declared that "our fraternity must not and shall not be made to stand as sponsor or surety therefor at the bar of public opinion."

Mr. Randell issued the statement he said, in accordance with requests from various newspapers and press associations of Texas for an expression of his attitude regarding the subject.

"No group or lodge of Masons has hesitated to deny responsibility for such an organization," the statement added, "and the actions of the lodges over Texas have shown with what abhorrence they view the claims of non-Masons in some localities that the klan is Masonic either in membership or in methods."

Where They Come In.

"I don't believe much happiness will result from this marriage."

"Why not?"

"She's a flapper and he's an elderly millionaire."

"Oh, I don't know about that. It may not be long before a few lawyers will be rubbing their hands with quiet satisfaction."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The world war caused 70,000,000 men to be mobilized of whom 30,000,000 were wounded and 2,000,000 killed.

Through good times and bad times, for more than thirty years, the City National Bank of Commerce has served the Wichita Falls district, at all times providing absolute security for money entrusted to its care as well as friendly interest and co-operation in the business-building plans of its customers.—Adv.

SECOND DEATH RESULTS FROM BURK BLAST

Employes of Tidal Western Co. at Burkburnett Scoff at Report Explosion Is Caused by K. K. K.

Special to the Record News

BURKBURNETT, Oct. 15.—Without regaining consciousness since receiving his injuries, when an engine exploded here Thursday evening at the local plant of the Tidal Western Oil corporation, James E. Walton, 27 years of age, died at 2:30 o'clock Saturday morning at a local hospital. The deceased suffered a double compound fracture of the skull, when he was struck by a piece of flying iron. He was chief engineer of the plant at this place.

He is survived by his wife and one child, five years of age. The body will be shipped Sunday to Nowatah, Okla. Burial will be under the auspices of the Masonic lodge there of which he was a member. Following the funeral, Mrs. Walton will return to Delaware, Okla., to make her home.

MEN SCOFF AT REPORT OF EXPLOSION

By Associated Press.

BURKBURNETT, Oct. 15.—Reports that the explosion of an engine which wrecked a building of the local plant of the Tidal Western Oil corporation here Thursday night may have in any manner been the result of an alleged white capper of K. K. K. notice pinned to the door of the place some weeks ago, have been scoffed at here by employes of the company.

Employes of the company declare that considerable discussion was held as to the wisdom of attempting to start the engine by air pressure before the accident occurred, and that it was impossible that the explosion could have been caused by an outside agency.

Certain sensational newspaper accounts are responsible for the circulation of this report.

THREE ARRESTS FOLLOW RAID LIQUOR STILL

Said by officers to have been guarding the stills located in a dug out four miles west of Burkburnett on the Brown farm with pistols and a shot gun, J. P. Nobles, D. Shorty, and J. B. Miller were arrested Saturday morning by Ranger McCormick and Deputy Sheriff Weaver.

The officers secured about five gallons of first run whiskey and in addition destroyed a large amount of mash.

According to the officers the two stills, which were of average size, were so hidden that it was difficult to detect the location.

FINE WOMAN $100 ON SPEED CHARGE

A fine of $100 was assessed Saturday morning in city police court against Mrs. Minnie Galbraith on a charge of speeding.

It was alleged in the prosecution of the case that she was driving an automobile several days ago which struck a boy riding a bicycle.

Notice of appeal was filed by attorneys for the defense. Mrs. Galbraith did not appear in court.

250 WICHITANS HAVE OBTAINED HUNTING CARDS

The duck season opens this morning with 250 licenses having been issued to hunters of the county according to information Saturday from the office of the county clerk. Clerks at the office stated that the number issued was considerable less than the total for last year when the ducks season opened. It is expected that the total will be increased during the coming week.

According to the veteran duck hunters there will be the usual number of the game in this vicinity.

SOLDIER WILL BE BURIED AT ARLINGTON

Funeral services for Hugh C. Wharon, son of Mrs. Dora Wharton, 705½ Tenth street, who met death on the battle field while serving with Co. F, 350th infantry, 89th division of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the National Cemetery, Arlington, Va., according to telegraphic information from the war department, received Saturday by Mrs. Wharton.

The deceased spent most of his life in Eastland county, making his home here for a short period of time about two years before his enlistment. He enlisted from Alamagorda. He was killed in battle on the night of November 10, 1918, only a few hours before the Armistice was signed which ended hostilities.

CAFE OWNER IS ARRESTED ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Ranger McCormick and Constable Frank Morgan late Saturday afternoon raided a cafe on Ohio street alleged to have been selling liquor. According to the officers the proprietor of the cafe attempted to destroy a quantity of corn whiskey by pouring it into a sink when they entered. One of the officers was able to obtain some of the whiskey before it run into the sewer.

The proprietor of the cafe was arrested and later released on bond. No formal charges were preferred against him.

DAMAGES ARE AWARDED IN CRASH SUIT

After being out several hours a jury in the 30th District court Saturday returned a verdict in which they awarded L. Creecy of this city $1,869 damages against H. L. Lewis, local oil operator, for alleged injuries to himself and damage to his motorcycle when he collided with an automobile owned by the defendant in August of this year.

The case had been on trial since Thursday morning. The plaintiff alleged that he was forced into a collision with the defendant car at the corner of Tenth and Burnett street due to the fact that the driver turned off Tenth street to Burnett without giving warning.

The Watched Pot

There is an old saying that "a watched pot never boils." That's why a lot of folks keep a savings account.

It is human nature to want to spend money if you have it in your pocket book. If it is where you can handle it and count it, it is like the watched pot. The sensible thing is to put it in a good bank where it is safe yet out of your sight with the temptation to spend it removed. This bank invites you to open an account and deposit your money where it will grow.

MRS. STRINGER HOSTESS TO JUNIOR UNITY CLUB

"International Events" was the subject of the lesson for the Junior Unity club which met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Leslie Stringer. Miss Louise Montgomery read the paper for the afternoon on "The Great World Leaders of 1921," which was followed by a round table discussion of "International Events" by the members.

Miss Agnes Reid gave an interesting talk on "The World's Unemployment," Miss Marion Maer talked on "What France Had Hoped Of America," and Miss Edith Berney talked on "Mexico's Obligations."

Following the program, the hostess served a dainty refreshment course to Mesdames Landon H. Cullum, A. B. ROYAL NEIGHBORS TO GIVE BOX SUPPER

The Royal Neighbors of America will give a box supper at the Swarts-Wood building on Thursday evening.

Smart Carelessness Correct Note Most Important for Country Togs

LILA LEE, leading woman in Paramount pictures, emphasizes that conservatism is smartest in sports clothes. She is shown herewith in her basketball costume.

Each year is witnessing a greater reluctance to give up sports activities with the conclusion of summer. And more and more is it noticeable the fair sex is carrying this playtime far into the fall. Greater interest is being taken on learning how to keep fit after the summer months, and many plans for the wardrobe are being made for days in the country as well as in the gym.

In the matter of country clothes, most engaging outfits have been taken from English designs. It is an acknowledged fact that English women are the best dressed sportswomen in the world, for everything they wear is put on with a knowledge of country life and its necessary outdoor existence.

Country clothes should never look new and should always look right. They must be worn with a careless smartness and this smartness comes form their being conventional rather than from their being different. Too novel sports material, exaggerated cuts, and over-elaborate shapes are bad form. They look theatrical in the country and are very likely to proclaim that their wearer is an amateur in sporting matters.

When she goes into the country she suggests this selection of sport togs sketched here and which will be found to be unusually appropriate. Almost every frock has its own cape. A smart sports costume for any occasion is plain and checked tweed consists of a cape, as is shown by the upper sketch, and a sleeveless chemise frock worn with a separate blouse. The flaring effect of the cape is a decided fashion point for either city or country.

In the matter of knickers, and for greater freedom in the country, it is not surprising that some women are wearin them with their outing rigs. When smartly and practically made, the effect is delightful. The femininity of the woman in knickers depends upon her unconsciousness in them as much as on the fact that she puts them on for a practical purpose.

With both the fishing jacket, which is of rubberized material, and with the hunting costume, with its leather sleeve inserts, knickers are worn. Charm can be brought to this new type of costume by the manner in which it is worn. It demands from the wearer neither shyness nor boldness, and should be worn where suitable for the activities in which the wearer chooses to indulge.

For riding, golf or hiking, knickers are entirely appropriate. But for less active sports, they should be avoided. The wrong clothes always make a difference, but wearing them in the country makes a very great difference indeed!

An interesting program will be given beginning at 8 o'clock, followed by a social session consisting of games and music. A good time is promised, and the ladies are requested to bring a box of something good to eat. The regular third Thursday luncheon has been postponed on account of this supper.

Mrs. P. F. Sprinkle and little son, P. F., Jr., left Friday for Kansas City, where they will join Mr. Sprinkle, who went through overland in automobile, and where they will make their future home.

C. P. Logan made a business trip to Wichita Falls Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. P. Martin and guest, Mrs. Allyn of California, made a shopping visit to Wichita Falls Tuesday.

Among the young people who attended the Burkburnett-Henriettn ball game in Henrietta Saturday, the following formed a happy party with High School Principal Brickley: Misses Florence Urban, Minnie Knaught, Helen Felty, Irma Schwegler and Donald Buckley.

The ball game between Burkburnett and Henrietta had an interesting score record: up to the eighth inning they reported 6 to 0 in favor of Henrietta; the game ended, however, with a score of 0 to 0, owing to a touchdown by the Burkburnett team.

Miss Pauline Gill left Thursday for Dallas, where she will be the guest of Miss Francis Oglesby, a University friend during the fair. She will also visit the Misses Majors of this city, who are students in the Texas Woman's College in Fort Worth, before her return home.

Who Will Drive This Automobile After Oct. 29th?

Capital Prize Haynes Touring Car Sells at $1985

Five beautiful automobiles all to be given away by The Record News in the greatest circulation drive in the history of Texas. Thousands of people in this territory are wondering "who will drive this automobile after October 29th." Not only this one—The Haynes—but four others. Scores of young women from Wichita Falls and surrounding territory are participating in this race. An unparalleled wave of interest and enthusiasm has been created.

A merry whirl from now until October 29. A seething, exciting race that will make your blood leap, your pulse quicken—and five costly automobiles at the end for those who triumph.

The automobiles will be won on earnest effort—so will the other magnificent prizes. Never before has such an opportunity been presented. It probably won't come again.

Pick off an automobile for yourself! There are plenty of chances to win one. Surely you can be one of the fortunate ones who will skim about in a handsome motor car when the race is over.

LAST EXTRA VOTE OFFER OF THE ENTIRE CAMPAIGN

Candidates in The Record News prize race are here with apprised of the last extra vote offer of the entire campaign—25,000 extra votes to each club of $30 worth of subscriptions turned in up to and including October 22nd.

This is the last chance to club subscriptions together and gain extra votes. The magnificent offer opens tomorrow, October 17th, and closes Saturday, October 22nd, just one week before the close of the big campaign

TESTED RECIPES

Squash Pie—Cream a quarter of a cupful of butter with three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and add one whole egg and the yolk of another, one cupful of cooked and sifted squash, half a teaspoonful each of salt and ground mace and one cupful of thin cream. Bake in a deep pie plate lined with pastry as for custard pie. A little grated nutmeg may be sprinkled over the top if desired.

Succotash With Bacon—Shell enough lima beans to make one pint and cook in salted water until tender. Drain and add three cupfuls of cooked corn, cut from the cobs. Season to taste with salt and paprika and add a generous piece of butter. Cover well with thin cream and set over hot water for the seasoning to steam in. Turn into a heated dish and cover the top with slices of grilled bacon. Cream sauce may be substituted for the cream.

Lace Cookies—Two cups rolled oats, one-half cup white corn syrup, one tablespoon melted oleo, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon baking powder, one egg, one teaspoon almond extract.

Mix well and drop from teaspoon on oiled tin. Spread out on tin with a knife blade which has been dipped in cold water.

Bake fifteen to twenty minutes in a moderate hot oven.

TRY THESE

To wash cut glass, place the articles in a pan of soft water, to which a little washing blue has been added, and scrub it with a brush. Dry with a soft cloth and you will have a fine polish without rubbing.

Put rubber-headed tacks on the top of the picture-frames close to the bottom and there will be no holes on your wall paper.

If potatoes persist in sprouting, you can cure them by dipping them in boiling water, leaving them for one minute only, draining and drying thoroughly. The hot water kills the germinating spores and does not harm the potato.

To prevent puddings or custards from sinking in the middle, run a knife around the edge immediately after taking it out of the stove. This is especially good for rice or custard puddings, as it prevents the water from settling in the center.

To preserve the enamel on oil-stoves, wipe over occasionally with a cloth dipped in any kind of grease. Then rub dry with a clean, lintless flannel.

ASK ME

Vogue—Yes, Mae Allison is married to Robert Ellis. An interesting fact concerning him is that he has recently signed a contract to appear opposite the American beauty, "Katherine MacDonald, in her newest picture, "The Infield."

Lilyan—I fear I can't tell you a great deal about Sybil Sealey. I do know that she is 19 years old and Buster Keaton's leading lady in "The Boat," but more I don't know.

Hoover—Marguerite De La Motte is playing opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers." She played the leading feminine role in "The Ten Dollar Raise" and will soon be seen in "A Bride of the Gods." She was born in Duluth, Minn. She has light brown hair and hazel eyes, is 5 feet 2 inches in height and weighs 102.

Pinkie—Florence Vidor played an important part in "The Jack Knife Man." She is the wife of the director, King Vidor. She will soon appear in "Hail the Woman."

I. J. S.—Anna May Wong is a real Chinese actress. She is appearing in Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life."

Harry—"The Three Muskateers" was filmed six years ago under the title "D 'Artagnan." It was produced by Thomas H. Ince.

Anxious—The pictures in which Helen Lynch have appeared are "Honor Bound," "What's a Wife Worth," and "My Lady Friends." She is a blond, and as far as I know, is not married.

Virginia—The picture you asked about is "Maggie Pepper," in which Marcia Manon appeared. Shirley Mason will answer your letter if you address her at the Fox Studio, Los Angeles, Cal.

Edna—Rubye De Remer has blond hair and blue eyes. She appeared on the stage before her screen career. She was Zeigfeld Folly girl and also was one of the bevy of beauties in "The Midnight Frolic."

SIR ARTHUR "GETTING HIS"

Publisher George Doran of New York was laughing about Conan Doyle's rampant belief in spiritualism. "Doyle's friends poke fun at him," he said, "but he takes it all in good part. At a dinner in Golder's Green, the Greenwich Village of London, Doyle's host said to him one evening: 'How will you have your roast beef, Sir Arthur? Underdone or——' But here the hostess interrupted: 'It takes no Sherlock Holmes,' she said, 'to tell how he'll have his beef. He'll have it "medium," of course.'"—Argonaut.

An Ideal Wife.

"What sort of a woman is Mrs. Bibbles?"

"A model wife," said Mr. Jagsby.

"Yes?"

"When Bibbles winks at a guest and motions toward the cellar she pretends to be interested in what the phonograph is playing."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

CAUSED 'EM TO HESITATE

"Well, Mose, how'd the races come out yesterday?"

"Putty good, suh, putty good; only some fool drapped a bag o' oats on de track an' all de hosses hesitated."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

EDITORIAL REVIEW OF EVENTS

Governor Len Small of Illinois won his fight for a change of venue and will be sent to trial in a Republican county far from the scene or stage of his political activities. Governor Small is accused of having feathered his own nest while serving as state treasurer. He had millions of the money of the people. He loaned these millions to individuals or private banking institutions. He pocketed the interest money and if he is convicted he will owe the state something like a million dollars. Of course he would never be indicted but for the fact that his political enemies in his own camp turned upon him and threatened to destroy him if he did not resign. Now he is posing as a political martyr, the victim of factional politics and brands his prosecutors as political bandits bent upon getting him out of the way in order that they may plunder the people. It is a political defense and if Small is able to pick a political jury he may win an acquittal. Politics may be a fascinating game but there are men who are willing to admit that it is likewise the most brutal of all sports.

Col. A. E. Humphreys, the Mexia petroleum magnate says that in less than nine years the world will be depending upon Texas for oil and there is no telling just how high the price of crude will go. He says the people of Mexia can hold their oil until hell freezes over, and that purchasers who expect to get the oil for less than it is worth will have little luck. The colonel is determined, so he says, to form what will be the biggest independent oil corporation in the world. In addition to this he says the great anti-Cline, which was once the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, just tapped at Mexia, is the most wonderful storehouse of crude the world has ever known, but the oil is not going to come out at 60 cents per barrel. Colonel Humphreys is a philanthropist. He has assured his friends that he did not come to Texas to make profits for himself but as the servant of the Master and a trustee for his friends. The plain English of this is that the Colonel is working first for the Lord and as trustee he is going to see that the Lord's children get all that is coming to them.

He hasn't anything on John D. Rockefeller.

John D. has been working for the Master, according to his own testimony, since early youth and has given a few hundred millions of his accumulations to spread the light of the gospel in heathen lands as well as in the lands where the gospel has been preached for two thousand years.

Veteran oil men say that the surface of Texas hasn't been scratched; that there are oil indications under the crust of the earth and in more than two hundred of the two hundred and forty-eight counties, and that in coming years the annual output of the wells of Texas will represent a greater value than all the crops of Texas, harvested or gathered every year.

This is the motor vehicle age.

This is the tractor age.

Shipping companies and railway companies have discarded coal for fuel oil and there must be a wild catting on a hugh scale to produce it.

It is a titanic game to be played by Titans who have hundreds of millions at their command and there are thousands of independent producers and thousands of wildcatters waiting for the word to "go," and when the foreign demand for petroleum products increases in volume these wise men say that the petroleum industry is certain to become the greatest in the world.

It is rumored that the Standard Oil corporation made a big bid for the Humphreys interest. He spurned the proposition. It is said the Roxana corporation threw out a lively feeler but the colonel refused to respond.

Now the Roxana is the Dutch-Shell company and the Dutch Shells is supposed to be the only rival of the Standard. It is a Dutch company with Dutch officers and yet some men say that 1 per cent of the stock is controlled by British investors.

If this be true then Dutch-Shells must be feeling its way in Texas. A well known geologist in the service of this company recently paid a visit to the oil fields of Wichita and neighboring counties.

He didn't have much to say.

He did not hunt ducks with a brass band.

He did not let the world know what he was doing but he was here just the same taking notes.

Colonel Humphreys refused to do business with the Standard; he refused to do business with Dutch-Shells. He believes that it is possible to build the greatest independent concern in the world.

Harry Sinclair was of the same opinion.

He changed his mind.

All the big fellows, after floundering about a bit, become the allies of the Standard. Why some bright morning Colonel William Gray may come to the surface as an ally of the Standard and be singing another song. Now the publicity agents or the propogandists are positive that the wells of the Tampico fields have been ruined by salt water.

If so Texas crude, high grade and low grade, is certain to be in demand.

All the politicians have been given the tip that crude is to remain on the free list and that the railroad magnates, as well as the cotton and woolen kings of America, are hostile to a tariff on oil importations. More than 80 per cent of these captains of industry are Republicans but there are ecomonic reasons they say for free crude and just now economic reasons should govern and not political traditions.

Burglary insurance rates have doubled in New York, but this doesn't mean that the cops are demanding twice their former share.

State Senator W. L. Hall of Wharton, is dead. He was a native Texan, one of the old guard, widely known among the legislators of Texas, a courageous man, wedded to the principles of old-time Democracy and never a time server or a political zebra. He represented a constituency who had faith in the man. They never questioned his motives; they never criticized his attitude on matters of legislation. They knew he followed the constitution and the bill of rights and never swerved a hair's breadth. He did not march with the modern procession at all times; he was for his friends all the time when they were right and most of the time when they were wrong. Senator Hall never bowed to a boss. He was his own boss. He was not a political trickster. He loathed political hypocrites and among his warmest friends were men who did not subscribe to many of his views but who always admired the man for his courage, his consistency, his ability and his fairness. Senator Hall wasn't a spot lighter. He did not care for the center of the stage. He never sought to extend a circle of his friends and yet he was never weighed and found wanting.

Fort Worth recallers wish to get rid of Mayor Cockrell and police commissioner John Alderman. Why the tempest in the teapot. Mayor Cockrell is not a politician, he is a sincere and law-loving official and a man who would make his city as clean as it is possible to make a city.

He smashed the old bosses.

He made many snaky enemies.

He challenges criticism.

Police Commissioner Alderman made a clean-up of Fort Worth. He put away the high-jackers. He rid the city of disreputables as well as dangerous characters. He made it a safe place in which to live.

He abolished graft.

He destroyed favoritism.

He made the gamblers move.

He made the boot-leggers go elsewhere.

He closed up many dens of iniquity which masqueraded as respectable lodging houses.

Really the Fort Worth recallers have undertaken a large sized job. There are politicians in the city of Fort Worth who pose as eminently respectable citizens who have no use for Cockrell or Alderman and they were smashed when Cockrell and Auedrman smashed the old machine. It goes without saying that the professional politicians of Fort Worth never had any use for Cockrell. He was a rank outsider and broke into the office of mayor. He had the backing of the women voters of Fort Worth and should a recall election be ordered he is certain to have their backing again. As for Alderman he is well able to take care of himself. There isn't a man in Fort Worth who believes in law and order who would like to see him deposed from office.

Colonel A. E. Humphreys is positive that the world is now facing one of the worst oil famines in history and predicts that within nine years the entire supply will be exhausted. Of course this will call for the disappearance of the motor age of civilization nine years hence.

Why worry.

The colonel may be wrong.

He isn't infallible.

Wild catters a thousand years hence will be bringing in new fields and filling tanks as large as the pyramids with the juice of the golden sands. This is a prophecy, too, made by an individual who knows as little about the future as the colonel and cares less. For one hundred years prophets have been foretelling the exhaustion of the coal fields or mines of the world. Now eminent geologists say the surface of the earth has not been scratched and in China alone there are veins that are inexhaustible and sufficient to supply the demands of the world for a thousand years to come. Why speculate as to the future? Let the future care for itself.

Texas is a billion dollar agricultural state. That is its annual crop of products have a value of a billion dollars. Texas has the greatest agricultural fair and exposition in the world. In connection therewith it is the greatest live stock show in the world. It is something to be a Texan. It is something to be a developer of the latent resources of Texas. Think of a Texas city housing the greatest fair in the world, with General Goethals, the greatest hydraulic engineer in the world, on the ground making a survey of what may be the largest inland lake in the world—that is, the largest lake of impounded water. Texas is in its infancy. There is a wheat belt in Texas, in northwest Texas and the Panhandle and Plains country that some day will produce more wheat than the two Dakotas and Kansas combined. Bread is the staff of life and of wheat bread is made. Texas has 5,000,000 population. In 1940 Texas should have 15,000,000 population and in 1920-it should lead New York in both wealth and population.

Philander C. Knox was one of the distinguished leaders of the Republican party, one of its foremost statesmen and ablest of its congressional leaders. He had served two terms as senator from Pennslyvania, he had been a Cabinet officer in two administrations and he had been looked upon many times as suitable timber for a presidential nomination. He was regarded as one among the most astute lawyers of America, he had amassed a large fortune, he was the close personal friend of President Harding and a power in the higher councils of his party. Philander C. Knox did not believe in a League of Nations; he did not believe in cntangling alliances with foreign nations; he worked early and late to bring about the defeat of ratification of the Versailles treaty when Woodrow Wilson was president of the United States. His death is a distinct loss to his party, to the adminstration and to his country, for regardless of party affiliations he was a 100 per cent American and ever on the firing line of endeavor. Senator Penrose was the leader of the Republican machine in the state of Pennsylvania but Philander C. Knox was the leader of the intellectual forces of the party in that state and the spokesman of the mighty interests of its commonwealth. He believed in a strong centralized government, in the rule of the few for the benefit of the many and he never did believe in what is known as "representative Democracy."

Senator Knox's death sent the "central empire" treaties over until Monday. Senator Lodge is leading the fight for ratification and with the aid of Democratic votes he expects to win ratification regardless of Democratic opposition or the advice of Woodrow Wilson and powerful Democratic leaders. Republicans control the administration. Theirs is the responsibility, so why should the Democrats block ratification.

Small-Town Stuff

BY ROBERT QUILLEN

Uncle Gus

Uncle Gus folded his newspaper carefully, removed his spectacles, gnawed a generous quid from a twist of natural leaf, and leaned back against his favorite water oak.

"Readin' about Congress," said he, "all me like watchin' a man tryin' to whittle with dull knife. It gits on my nerves.

"I wish I was a king—one o' them old-fashioned kind that could chop off heads what appeared to be mostly bone. I believe I'd make a fust-rate kind o' monarch.

"A republic is a long sight the best form o' government folks has invented yit, considerin' man's frailty and inclination to git the swell head, but it ain't no shinin' example o' perfection.

"When things is goin' smooth an' easy and everybody is makin' money, most any kind o' slipshod government works all right; but in time o' stress an' trouble the country needs a boss with a head full o' boss sense and a bone runnin' plum up an' down his back.

"Take that there canal we dug at Panama. One man done it, you might say. Well, suppose folks had elected a committee o' forty men to do the job. Congress would jest now be makin' the fo'teenth appropriation to pay for the preliminary survey.

"An take the big war. Our crowd kept fiddlin' along wittin' licked regular an' frequent until they got a little sense an' made that feller Foch boss o' the job. Over here at home we had to forgit we was a republic, or we wouldn't o' been well started yit.

"Understand, I don't want no king in this country lessen I'm it; but I wish I was. They is a lot o' things I'd like to do.

"I'd fix it so every man could git a job makin' good roads when times was dull, an' I'd fix it so nobody in sound health could eat onless they worked. If men loaf in good times, it proves they are sorry; an' if they loaf in hard times, it proves the whole system is sorry. Next thing, I'd tend to these fellers that robbed the government an' the people durin' and after the war. I wouldn't appoint no investigatin' committee or give 'em a chance to fight in the courts. A man what's got a bale o' money gits treated too darned gentle an' sinciderate in a court room. I'd git the evidence private, and then I'd make 'em thing God was mad at 'em.

"Government is jest a business; an' if I found I didn't have trainin' enough to run it, I'd hire some men what had made a success o' their own business. I wouldn't hire no lawyers jest because they could talk smooth an' eloquent with their mouths.

"And I'd fire all them what wasn't doin' a honest day's work. There wouldn't be no second assistant keepers o' the cuspidor with me feller pay taxes, he'd know he was bossin' things. When I made a n-goin' to git his money's worth. Folks wouldn't kick on payin' taxes if they knowed the money wasn't flung away.

"I'd like to try it, but maybe it wouldn't work. Like as not some liberty-lovin' son-of-a-gun that got put in jail for bein' no account would git up a revolution an' blow me up for bein' a tyrant. But it would shore be one darned fine government while it lasted."

Travel

Travel has a broadening effect because it teaches people that the greater number of their pet beliefs are pure nonsense. Education is chiefly valuable because it takes away our foolish notions.

It is not variety or extent of information that broadens the mind of the globe-trotter. He may travel by boat and train and camel and dog sled to the far corners of the earth; he may learn that one people eats bird nests while another devours grasshoppers; he may find strange tribes that delight to devour travelers, and he may see and smell and taste many curious and wonderful things, but not one of these experiences or one of these bits of knowledge will give greater reach to his mental processes.

He will be broadened, if at all, by learning at first hand a truth philosophers have known since the beginning of recorded history: that the Colonel's lady and Bridget O'Grady are sisters under their skin—that a man is a man for a' that—that all men, everywhere, are inspired and prompted by the same desires and hates and fears and loves and ambitions, and that the man at the edge of the earth, once understood, is twin brother to the man across the street.

Provincialism is ignorance—but ignorance of far places, but ignorance of the fact that all men are formed of a common clay. And this ignorance is the father of prejudice and race hatred and wars.

A German prisoner, captured in the Franco-Prussian war, knelt at night to pray; and one of his captors, seeing him thus engaged, remarked to a companion: "It is a wasted effort; God can't understand that gibberish."

Travel broadens only when it teaches us that we are not, after all, the only decent and intelligent creatures on earth. And if one is possessed of a little wit, he may remain at home and learn this lesson at a smaller cost.

Concerning Kicks

A certain man, who was an important citizen and owned three automobiles and was not abashed in the presence of a butler, had business in a distant city. After finishing his business, he went for a walk to stretch his legs and—judge of the city'sp rosperity, and came presently upona path that led him a devious way through a little wood and so to a sheltered pool. Being warm, the man removed his clothing and dived into the pool to swim. While he thus devoted himself to pleasure a tramp came that way, removed his filthy and tattered garments and made off with the important citizen's clothes.

An hour later the important citizen, who now seemed and felt a tramp, sneaked down an alley into the heart of the city. He was hungry, and being guided by the force of habit, stepped into a restaurant whose front was of plate glass. He went in on faltering feet, but he came out on his ear, with his stomach empty still and his heart full of bitterness. He accosted another prosperous citizen on the street, but before he had said three words the other had scurried away, muttering maledictions.

The man was by now sore vexed, and when a policeman pushed the end of a club against his floating ribs he drew himself up haughtily and snarled: "What do you mean by such impudence?"

"Impudence, is it?" bellowed the policeman. "You dirty scum, I'll learn you a thing or two about manners." And he parked his club against the man's left ear.

All night the prosperous citizen lay in jail, scolding the vermin that crawled upon him and cursing everything a foot high; and it is written that never thereafter he did he have a great deal of respect for human institutions.

The moral is that a few dirty ties and cuss words will transform a fairly good citizen into an enemy of society.

THE FALL STYLES

A mother said unto her child,
Unto her, she did say:
"Remember you are going to
The city far away.
Be sure and wear these flannels, girl,
Up tight around your neck,
The city's cold, so wear these skirts
And woolen socks, by heck!"
The girl unto the city came
And saw how girls were dressed
And straightway threw away the skirt
Also the flannel chest
Protector that her mother made,
And bought a shadow gown
And every day, decollete,

Chorus

"Don't break the news to mother,
For goodness knows I luvver.
I cannot wear the junk she made
Far back there on the loam.
Don't tell her that her dorter
Is wearing skirts much shorter
Than Ben Hur's and she'll never know,

SYNOPSIS OF THE OPERA

Suetonius, whose wife, Julia, is the daughter of Tiberius, loves Drusus. The one person in all of Rome who does not know this is Suetonius. Drusus is famous for his frivolity and dissipation. Julia is beautiful and likes undisciplined frivolity.

Tiberius, her father, gives a feast and offers Drusus a golden cup filled with wine and a little poison. Julia suspects that the beverage is noxious and tries to prevent Drusus from drinking it. Suetonius then realizes that which all of Rome knew and rushes forward and strangles Julia.

Drusus drinks the poison when he sees Suetonius strangle Julia. Suetonius kills himself with his dagger when he sees that Julia is dead.—Marcel Steinbrugge.

JOHN BARTON PAYNE

John Barton Payne has been called to another office to serve, in a great measure, the public. He has just been appointed chairman of the central committee of the American Red Cross by President Harding. Payne succeeds Dr. Livingston Ferrand, who resigned.

Payne was born in Pruntytown, Va., January 26, 1855. Most of his education was obtained in private schools. He was admitted to the bar in 1876 and practiced at Kingwood, Preston County, W. Va., until 1882, being active in political affairs. In 1883 he went to Chicago, practicing law until made judge of the superior court of Cook county in 1893. He resigned in 1898 to engage in private practice again.

When the war broke, Payne became one of the dollar a year men whose brains helped direct the financial and industrial side of the conflict. He was made director general of the emergency fleet corporation Oct. 3, 1917, and served in that capacity until President Wilson made him director general of the railroads. In 1919 he became chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board and held that position until named secretary of the interior in President Wilson's cabinet. He will serve as Red Cross head without salary.

Breakfast Stories

A sea captain, holding a glass of lime juice approvingly up to the light, said:

"Navies are different today from what they used to be. A man was talking to an old sailor. The sailor said:

"'Yes, sir, my boss was in the navy too.'

"'In the navy, was he?' said the man. 'What was his official capacity, may I ask?'

"'Four to five quarts, sir,' said the old sailor."

The wealthy city man had taken a fancy to visit his village birthplace.

"Ah, me! There is the little red schoolhouse, and yonder is the old church. How well I remember them! But the dear, old familiar faces are gone; not one remains to recall those happy——"

The oldest inhabitant approached with the remark: "Ye're Bill Judd, ain't ye? I knew ye the minute I set eyes onto ye. I trusted your father for a codfish in 1883 an' if ye've got the money handy I'd be obleeged if ye'd settle for it."

A movie actor was up before the bar of justice charged with bigamy.

"I'll give you one chance to explain yourself," said the judge. "The records clearly show that you married your second wife a month before you were divorced from your first. How about it?"

"It's this way, your honor," returned the defendant, unperturbed. "In our business we never take the scenes in the order they appear on the screen—sometimes the last is taken first. If you'll only let me call up the continuity man at our studio, I'm sure he can straighten it out."

Misapplied Money.

"Did money ever help you to win an election?"

"On several ocasions," replied Senator Sorghum. "It wasn't money that I spent myself, however. The opodition flourished so large a campaign fund that it made their candidate look like a tired business man instead of a statesman."—Washington Star.

TIMELY VIEWS NOT IN THE NEWS

"JAPAN AND U. S. OBLIGATED TO BE FRIENDLY."

Talk of a possible rupture between Japan and the United States is discounted by K. Kumasaki, imperial Japanese consul general in New York City.

"Don't mind the war cries of the alarmists, jingoes and yellow journalists," says Kumasaki. "There are thousands upon thousands of Japanese who have been here as students, merchants or diplomats, and to whom America is the country of their happiest memories and dearest friends. So there are a great number of Americans who have visited Japan and heave learned to love and admire the Japanese. It is such personal intercourse that works quietly but most effectively to cement international relations.

"After the great war America and Japan have added responsibilities as great powers of the world, because they are the only two which came out comparatively unscathed from Armageddon. It is our sacred obligation to co-operate in the reconstruction of the world. It would be an unspeakable calamity, not only to ourselves but to humanity, if we were by any chance to fall out.

"But the countless friends and the same-minded people on both sides of the ocean must see, and will see to it that there shall be, as there always has been, mutual understanding, sympathy, good will and peace—perpetual peace—between our nations."

THIMBLE THEATER BY SEGAR

A WIFE IN THE MAKING

EVIL SUSPICIONS.

"I have a message for you both," went on Miss Laura, ignoring Ned's remark. "A message from Cherry. She looked high and low for you both this afternoon and Ned wasn't in his office and she couldn't find you either, Sally," turning to Mrs. Randall.

"What is it?" asked Ned, with sudden alarm.

"Why, she's gone off to Chicago. She missed that afternoon train and Arthur Hamlen offered to get her there in his high-powered car, the new one, in a few hours. She had a telegram from her mother. Some one's ill in the family and she simply had to get there. She asked me to give you this message," and here Miss Laura wiped her face again.

For a moment there was dead silence after her words. Ned was the first to break it. His voice was husky.

"I don't know how much you're keeping back from us, Miss Laura, you only know that. But I also know that you and Cherry have been very chummy in my absence, so all I have to say is, is she—is she——"

"Stop right there, Ned Randall; I know what you're going to say and I want to save you from hating yourself after you've said it, too," cried Miss Laura, warmingly, as she rose from her seat and walked majestically over to where Ned sat.

"No, she didn't. No, she hasn't. Is that enough for you? She done just what I said and nothing more. You ought to know the effects of hysterical telegrams by this time. Lord knows you've received them often enough yourself from your mother. I suppose that Mrs. Lawrence sent Cherry one of the same and she took it to heart as you always have."

"And why did she have to have Arthur run off with her?" asked Mrs. Randell, sharply.

"Shame on you, Sally, for a mischievous old woman. Shame on you. You made a mess of your own married life and now you're going to start in spoiling your son's. Well, I have nothing more to say to you as long as you feel the way you do. I'm Cherry's friend. I love the child the way you, her new mother, ought to have loved her and didn't. Don't look shocked. You disliked Cherry from the very first. Same as you'd have disliked any girl that Ned chose for himself, but that's neither here nor there. As that child's friend I'm going to see that you nor anyone else says any untruths about her in her absence. If her own husband won't stick up for her, I will." With these words Miss Laura swept from the room.

Ned's face had gone white as she denounced his mother and himself, but at the conclusion of her speech he sprang forward and without a look at the irate Mrs. Randall, followed Miss Laura out into the November night.

NED'S ANXIOUS NIGHT

"Just a minute, Miss Laura, please," he called hoarsly as he ran up to her. "I want to say something to you."

Miss Laura halted for the fraction of an instant, then walked on. She was in as terrible a temper as she had ever been in her life.

"What do you want?" as Ned caught up with her. "If you've come to make any insinuations against your wife I'm not a going to listen to them Ned, so you may as well know it from the start."

"All I want to find out, Miss Laura is what Cherry said before she left, and if she sent me any message. I don't understand why she didn't leave a note at least."

"There wasn't any time. It was a question of life and death, she told me as they passed the house. She was only one minute with me. Never even got out of the machine and she was as pale as a sheet. That's all I know. Except that I do know Cherry well enough certainly to see how much too good for you she is. If she has anything further to tell you, I reckon she'll write it. And you had better keep your mother's eternal tongue quiet, too, is my advice. Miss Sally'll find herself in all wrong here. We're gossipy, some of us intown, I know but there are some things that we won't stand for." And here Miss Laura flounced off.

Ned walked about alone for many hours after his talk with Miss Laura. There were moments when he thought he would go out of his mind, and others when he felt serene confidence in his wife. Up and down he paced far beyond the town, fighting with himself, ever fighting.

Towards morning he crept into the house and went softly up to his room. He prayed that his mother would not disturb him. He wanted to be alone.

Once in his room he looked through every drawer and corner in the hopes of discovering a note from Cherry, but his search was in vain. It was evident that she had left the place under the stress of some great mental excitement.

What was there for him to do now? If, as Miss Laura had assured him, she had gone at the urgent call of her mother, there was no need to worry. If, on the other hand, she had gone away with Arthur deliberately, as his inflamed brain still seemed to urge him to believe, why?

His agony increased with his thoughts. Back and forth he tossed on his bed of pain. In detail he reviewed every move of Arthur Hamlen since that night of the dance, always with the same results. He was desperately in love with Cherry. There could not be the slightest doubt about it. He was determined to win her away from him. This insolent, rich, young man who had always had everything his heart desired would do anything to gain his end.

No doubt he had sent that telegram to Cherry himself in a clever way through friends in Chicago. That would be simple enough. In so doing he had induced the girl to accept his car to get her to her home in time. That was the most deadly thought that came to Ned. And to antidote it, another one, was Cherry in love with Arthur?

THE RUMOR STARTS.

Towards dawn he finally fell asleep and it was nearly noon when he awoke to find his mother standing at his bedside with a steaming cup of coffee in her hand.

"Good morning, son. I just didn't have the heart to disturb you at eight-thirty. You were so tight asleep and looked so tired. Now drink this nice hot cup of coffee and get dressed easy. No hurry, we'll have lunch whenever you get down." Mrs. Randall patted Ned's shoulder as she turned to leave the room.

"Wait a minute, mother," said he, "I want to ask you something. Something about what Miss Laura was speaking last night. It was too bad for her to turn on you. I'm sorry, but she was distraught, or she'd never have accused you of not liking Cherry, never in the world."

"Miss Laura's an erratic old woman sometimes, Hon," was her only remark as she slipped away.

Just the same the woman's words haunted Ned throughout the rest of that miserable day. Over and over he reviewed the situation and over and over did he try to make himself believe that she had been wrong. His mother was a good woman. She surely would not have permitted herself to dislike any other woman, let alone his wife. Then as he remembered some of their quarrels, and many of Cherry's words concerning the way his mother had of coming between them at the wrong moment, his heart was troubled. This was "the unkindest cut 'of all," if it were forced upon him to believe that his own mother had not been all that he expected her to be as a mother.

Late in the afternoon he went to the office, but at sight of his white, drawn face, Arline begged him to go back home and take care of himself or he would be really ill. Work was out of the question, as he soon saw, and finally he excused himself and returned to his own room.

Once more the old doubt assailed him and backwards and forwards he paced, like a caged lion, thinking, always thinking. His one consolation was that Cherry would write to him immediately and explain everything. She would probably write that very day and he would receive the letter in the morning. Anything was better than this hideous uncertainty.

Several times he started long letters to his wife, but each one was angrily destroyed. There was nothing to say. Why should he be the first one to break the silence? It was she who had gone away. And so it went on, until dinner time came around again.

"What's this they're saying in town about Cherry and Arthur having run away together?" he demanded, glaring at his family. "Nice sort of a burg, where the people are so—so—so—Christian—I suppose you'd call it," he finished scornfully, as he took his seat.

SHOW MAKES PARTICULAR EFFORT TO ENCOURAGE KINDNESS TO DUMB ANIMALS; IS CLAIMED AS REAL MODEL IN TREATMENT ACCORDED ITS ANIMALS

As a means of teaching children to be kind to dumb animals, the Gentry Bros. Show and Wild Animal Arena, which is to exhibit in Wichita Falls on Oct. 18th, is said "to be a shining example, and during its performances here, many new ideas, relative to animal subjugation will be disclosed, so it is promised.

No weapons are used in the education of any of the animals with queered by kindness and patience; nearly all animals have a liking for sugar and other sweets, and these play an important part in their training; the eagerness of the different beasts to do their part in the performance, shows the pleasure they enjoy in their work.

Familiarity with the various members of the animal kingdom is food for the minds of the little members of the household, and kindness to animals should be early inculcated in the youthful minds; knowledge of animal's habits, traits and distinguishing characteristics gives diversion to the mentality, sharpens intelligence and stimulates healthy imagination; many a nursery story is vividly impressed at sight of the animal that was the principal character, and parents should encourage the children's interest in animals of all kinds, as it makes for intelligent and wholesome pastime.

"Civilian Clothes," the comedy drama that had a long run in both New York and Chicago, has been selected by the Gene Lewis-Olga Worth Players when they open their stock engagement at the Wichita Theatre Monday evening, Oct. 24.

This company comes to Wichita Falls after six solid years at their own beautiful Theatre in Dallas, and they are acknowledged to be "America's Finest Stock Company." During the season here Mr. Lewis will produce only the very best of the Broadway successes. He has agents in both New York and Chicago, and as soon as a play is released for stock they are sent on to him to read.

The box office at the Wichita Theatre will be open Wednesday for the sale of ticket and seats can be reserved one week in advance. You can also make a reservation for the entire season, getting the same seats each week.

MISS VIOLA DANA GIVES OUT VALUABLE TIPS TO AUTHORS

For the benefit of those thousands of ambitious authors who flood the big movie companies with all kinds of motion picture stories, Viola Dana, the vivacious little Metro star whose last picture, "The Match Breaker," a Dallas M. Fitzgerald production, will be shown at the Strand theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, tells what kind of stories she thinks stand the best chance of being produced.

Miss Dana does not believe the best results can be obtained by just writing the story regardless of the person who is supposed to play the part.

"The best photoplays today are those written for the star," emphatically declares Miss Dana. "This helps the actor or actress in being natural. The principal character should be drawn as nearly like that of the one who is to portray it as possible. Then all the star has to do is to be herself throughout the picture and act as she would in everyday life under similar circumstances."

According to the "Peter Pan of the Screen" some really good stories have been given displeasing presentations because the principals playing them endeavor to act parts which had not been written them with the result that they gave the impression they were acting and not being natural.

"The Match Breaker" was adapted by Arthur J. Zellner from the story by Meta White. John Arnold was the photographer and A. P. Manta art director.

Burning Topic Promises to Figure Prominently in Discussions During Coming Week.

Wichita Falls during the past week has been a shining example of the changed and enlarged viewpoint which American participation in the world war has brought the American people. For during the past week, and the prospect is part of the coming week, they have been hotly split on a burning issue, and an issue which is not a local one, nor one of state or national interest, but an international one, if you please!

The issue is over the proposed parade favoring disarmament, to be staged on November 11, Victory Day, and the day the International Disarmament Conference convenes in Washington to consider the question of limiting the armed forces, by land and air and sea.

All angles of the question have been hotly argued from both sides since the matter started in last Monday's meeting of the council. At this time the local trades and labor council requested the city council to ask all Wichitans, of whatever age, creed or political affiliation, to join in the parade they, as well as other central bodies, are having at the behest of their national executive committee.

Council Asks Advice.

The council made no decision. They discussed the matter at some length, and defered action, seeking council from the civic organizations of Wichita Falls.

Mayor Cline expressed himself individually as opposed to the idea of the council, as a government body, taking action in the matter, although approving of the issuance of a permit to any and all organizations as such who wished to hold the parade.

In taking this stand the mayor expressed himself as personally in favor of disarmament—of America laying down its guns if other nations would do as much. He expressed himself as feeling that the labor council was to be congratulated in taking the lead and showing an interest in a question of such import to the country.

But a general demonstration, at this time, he thought, would handicap the representatives of the American people at the forthcoming conference, through its effect, if the parades were carried out here as elsewhere, on representatives of foreign powers.

Question Not of Favor.

The wish to disarm was first expressed, he brought out, by the American government, the American people everywhere are almost universal in this. So the question will not be to get American's to agree to disarmament, but to get the "other fellows to agree to lay down their guns" so the Americans can do it in safety. Furthermore, he brought out, the American government is about the only one who has already taken any steps to disarm, having reduced its army to little over 100,000, while many other powers not so strong and rich have over a million men under arms, equipped and ready for instant war.

Should the representatives of these powers get the impression, from demonstrations, that the American people will force this government to disarm anyway, there will be no incentive for them to do so, as there would be were they to see that America could and would outstrip them all on land and sea, but was willing to call it off if they would.

Says Private Move Harmless.

He further said that he could see no harm in private organizations as such express themselves in favor of disarmament, as would be the case with official and government cooperation, such as the city government in its sphere would bring about by officially joining.

Four organizations have had the matter up since the mayor and councilmen asked for their council. The University club, the first approached, decided in favor of participation after this side of the question had been very forcefully presented by F. G. Swanson. No opposition was in evidence. The Knights of Pythias took a similar stand.

The Rotary club, after a fight pro and con, decided to take no action on the matter. The side against participation was argued by W. M. Priddy and T. B. Smock. Favoring participation in the movement was Judge P. A. Martin. The majority in favor of the club's taking no action on the matter was a clear one, over the ones voting for no general participation in the parade, while the side favoring participation mustered only three votes.

The fourth organization to take the matter up was the American Legion post here, which passed it up to the executive committee—this action being taken before the matter was presented to the city council. Although the executive committee has as yet taken no action on the matter, several members indivated a view of the matter along much the same lines as expressed by the mayor, before he had yet expressed his sentiment.

Organizations which are yet expected to take action are the Kiwanis and Lions clubs, which meet Monday noon, and the Wichita Club, which meets Monday night.

In all the argument which has come out, adherents to the mayor's view declare that effort has been made by those in opposition to cloud the issue by trying to make it one in favor of disarmament, or in favor of the disarmament sessions being public ones. The only issue, they say, is whether or not public demonstration will or will not handicap the American statesmen, to which the task is entrusted, in their effort to get other nations to disarm. They say, are in favor both of disarmament and of the meeting being public ones.

The American representatives themselves favor disarmament, they say. So the demonstration over the country would have no effect on them. As for the foreign representatives, including those from Japan, which is in a large measure the key to the whole problem, don't care a hoot, what the American people want—and will agree to less themselves if they think the American people will force disarmament and give their own country an advantage. The Japanese, they point out, are responsible to no one but their own emperor, who with his ancestors is literally and figuratively their god, and owing no responsibility at all to the people of that country.

Another significant thing in connection with the whole question shows the effects of a lesson bitterly learned by the way. No one, in the disarmament discussion, has advanced the theory that the United States can solve the matter for itself and by itself alone. All seem to be convinced that it must be mutual among the nations to be safe, and are convinced that no matter what it costs the United States must not sink into another state of unpreparedness that it could be forced into another bloody 35 billion dollar war through failure to keep a force that will constitute a sufficient hands off sign to all concerned.

And so the matter goes, and Wichita Falls organizations are arguing and planning to continue arguing as international uestion.

CORK IS FOUND IN MOTOR OF AIRPLANE INTENDED FOR WAR

(By International News Service)

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 15.—A report is expected to be made soon to the Post Office Department in Washington of an investigation here of a mysterious engine cult in an air mail acc ane which was discovered following the narrow escape from death of H. C. Chandler, air mail pilot, when he was forced to volplane to an emergency landing in Federal, Wyo., twenty northwest of this city, while en route with mail to Salt Lake City from Cheyenne.

Investigation has revealed, it is said that a cork had been purposely placed in the circulating system of the plane's Liberty motor, between the third and fourth cylinders.

The cooling system er is attached between the first and second cylinders and gave no warning that the mechanism had been tampered with.

The obstruction caused the bearings on a piston to burn out and a hole was made in the crank case, allowing the lubricating oil to escape.

It was learned that the motor, built during the war for use in a fighting machine overseas, had reposed in a War Department storehouse until recently when it was shipped here for use in the Air Mail Service.

It is believed at the obstructing cork was placed in the circulating system by a wartime alien enemy agent with the intention of causing the loss of a fighting airplane. The cork was so cunningly placed that its presence would not be disclosed by an ordinary test of the motor.

Movieland

Ernest Torrence.

Ernest Torrence, famous for his portrayal of Scotch comedy roles, having scored tremendous successes in the "Only Girl," "The Purple Lady" and as the Scotch captain in the celebrated Broadway success, "The Night Boat," makes his debut in motion pictures as a heavy in Richard Barthelmess' initial independent starring vehicle, "Tol'able David," soon to be released.

Mr. Torrence is here seen in the role of Luke Tatburn, a Virginia mountaineer, a characterization which is said to rank as one of his greatest histrionic achievements. "Tol'able David" was adapted for the screen by Joseph Hergesheimer from his story of the Virginia mountains which ran in the Saturday Evening Post. It was directed by Henry King.

ALL RIGHT, NORMA

Norma Talmadge, who will wear some beautiful gowns in her next First National, "The Wonderful Thing," directed by Herbert Brenon, has a most interesting theory concerning clothes and their color. She believes that the range of human emotions has a direct and vital relation to the colors of the spectrum.

Every emotion has its color-tone equivalent, and in the making of a photo-play one must dress one's emotions in corresponding hues under the blue lights of the Cooper Hewitts.

MOVIE NOTES

I "The Sign of the Jack O' Lantern," which Lloyd Ingraham is directing, Mrs. Raymond Hatton, wife of the noted character actor, takes a prominent part.

Once before Richard Harding Davis' play, "The Doctor," which will be filmed with Wallace Reid in the title role, was put into pictures with John Barrymore playing the chief part.

Estelle Taylor, who has been playing consistently in the productions filmed in the Fox eastern studios, recently left for California, where she will continue her work before Fox cameras.

Royal Flush Has Fatal Effect on Aged Poker Fan

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Philip Brenner, 67 years old, a retired tailor, sat in a family poker game with Matthew Kantrowitz, his nephew, and Benjamin Levey, his son-in-law, at the nephew's home.

Brenner dealt. There was 30 cents in the pot. Kantrowitz tossed in another dime. Levey raised 10 cents. Brenner peeped at his five cards and released a dime. Nobody drew cards Suddenly the cards fell from Brenner's hand and he slid under the table.

An ambulance surgeon from St. Joseph's Hospital pronounced Brenner to be dead of apoplexy. The medical examiner of Queens, who also was called, attributed death to excitement over the cards he held.

The nephew and son-in-law examined Brenner's hand, where it fell on the table. The cards were the ace, king, queen, jack and 10 of hearts—a royal flush—the highest hand possible in a poker game.

The Major Knew

It was officers' mess on the transport going over, and the shiny young second lieutenant was getting pointers from the grizzled old major.

"Tell me, major," he asked anxiously, "what does it feel like when one is under fire for the first time?"

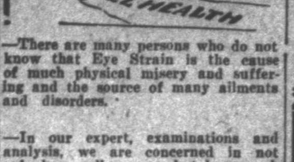

"Well," said the major, "it feels like one wanted to be a baby again—back in the states—and a girl baby at that."—American Legion Weekly.

LEGIONNAIRES WILL FIGHT IT OUT ON BONUS

To Take Final Stand at Club Rooms Tuesday Night, Just Previous to Kansas City Meet.

Many Members Arrayed on Both Sides of Question Who Are Likely to "Express" Sentiments.

Members of the Pat Carrigan Post, American Legion, will meet in the club rooms on Ohio avenue Tuesday night to "fight it out" on the question of the bonus—or adjusted compensation, however you want to look at it.

The decision reached there is expected to be final, so far as the local post is concerned. The decision made there will bind representatives from Wichita Falls who attend the national convention in Kansas City, where the question is expected to be very much to the front.

As there is a liberal interpretation of parliamentary rules, and a latitude of expressing strong feelings, in vogue at the club meeting, the debate promises to express it mildly, to be an "interesting" one.

Some Strongly Opposed.

For the question has many advocates, both pro and con. Many of the older members are strongly opposed to the bonus, or adjusted compensation, or anything else under any name which they consider smacks at putting a price on the services which they feel donated through patriotic feeling during a time of need. They feel that to ask or receive anything from the government based solely on this service will place a taint on something which is their's, and which money could not buy. This, according to this element, is an intangible something that they place above the extra money obtained by those who made more money in the shipyards and elsewhere during the war.

These were the ones principally concerned in the stand taken by the post nearly two years ago, when the program was condemned—a decision from which the advocates of the program are now appealing for reconsideration, as one made a long time ago, and not representing the feelings of new members.

Of those advocating adjusted compensation, as it is called officially in the legion, those advocating the payment of a cash bonus are apparently in a small minority, judging by the demonstrations in previous meetings where this matter has come up.

"Compensation" Has Advocates.

But those favoring adjusted compensation, allowing borrowing from the government for the building of homes, buying of farms, or scuring further educations, or an alternate of the gift of so much paid up life insurance, are evidently to be reckoned with by those working for a decision against any sort of a bonus.

"The former soldiers were in the army, nearly all at a great sacrifice, when the great majority of the workers of the nation were getting big wages brought about by the war, either for the government in shipyards, or from private enterprise, whose wages were forced up by the war's stimulation," they argue. "There should be something done to make up to the soldiers this economic difference as between those who served, many at risk of life and limb, and those who remained at home and at work for high wages."

Furthermore, they say, the soldiers were thrown back into civil life, after two years without opportunity to obtain the high wages prevailing, just as the post war inflation carried all prices to highest levels. In addition to their lack of funds, proponents of the compensation argue, they had during the two years "lost touch" with their several trades and professions, which caused a great many employers—not all, they are frank to admit, pointing to a number of distinguished exceptions—to give preference to the workers who stayed at home, and had not so lost touch.

Say All Welcome.

So on the argument goes, and has gone for months. So the post has decided to have it out Tuesday night, beginning at 7:30.

Former service men outside the legion are welcome to attend and take part in the discussion, say members of the post. The post does not go very strictly to technicalities.

As to the voting, they say, it does not take many minutes to make any former service men with an honorable record of service, an honorable discharge, and who since the war has not been convicted of crime, an active member.

SUCCESS FOR "SPRINGTIME" WILL SPELL SUCCESS FOR FEW STRUGGLING BUSINESS GIRLS

"Springtime's" success in the fall, will mean the springtime success of the fall plans of the Business Women's clubs, and the spring, summer, fall and winter happiness of some several sorts of folks. All of which may sound complicated to any one not in on the how.

But the truth of the matter is this, if the folks in Wichita Falls turn out to see "Springtime" which they will have an opportunity of doing on Friday and Saturday of this coming week, in large enough numbers, the Business Women's club, which is sponsoring the musical comedy, will have money enough to do several things they have planned.

They will equip this coming spring one of the city parks, which one to be designated by the park commission, and will make it a happy all the year around play ground of lots of kiddies.

They will put some more girls, who must become self sustaining, through business college, so that the Y. W. C. A. Employment Bureau can find work for them, when they are qualified. Already several business college scholarships have been given by the club to girls not so fortunate and satisfied in their work, and it is hoped that this year there can be a material increase in the number of scholarships.

They will furnish the club room of the Y. W. C. A. so that all of the clubs, not theirs alone, may have a pleasant meeting place. This club room was the last attended to when the budget for 1921 was being worked out, and as the money ran out before the club room was reached, it just naturally had to do without. Now the Busines Women's club is hoping that "Springtime" will relieve the extreme barrenss of the club room.

Now isn't that a sufficiently long, and sufficiently good [illegible] reasons for everybody that likes a good show going to see "Springtime."

And that's just the altruistic reasons why the show should be attended. There are a large number of reasons which will appeal to those who are mainly interested in knowing whether it will be worth giving up an evening, and anywhere from four bits to a dollar and a half, to see.

There are the various song and dance specialties, the brilliant passages of real, genuine wit, the beautiful scenic effects, the choruses, the collection of clever little tots, and the interesting high school boys and girls and the principals. There will be a lot of brand new talent to Wichita Falls in "Springtime," some of it talent that has been here all the time, and just now newly discovered, and some of it just arrived from other points.

LAUNDRYMEN TO BE HOSTS TO CUSTOMERS

During "Visit Your Laundry" week, every department of the city's laundries will be open for inspection. The day's work will proceed as u[illegible] and guests will be given an opportunity to see a modern laundry in actual operation.

Pink teas and other social graces are not usually associated with the laundry. In fact, not many years ago mention of a laundry conjured up a vision of a bequeued, almond-eyed celestial, pursuing his more or less mysterious ways in a dingy little shop on some side street.

But the modern laundry as Mawruss would say, is "something else again." It usually occupies a somewhat pretentious plant, well located, to insure a place in the sun. It represents a considerable investment, often running into six figures, and it employs in the simple process of washing and ironing, scors of ingenious machines which are as far removed from the washboard "and" iron as the twentieth century twin-six is from the humble wheel-barrow.

Because laundry owners feel that in spite of a vast amount of advertising and considerable other publicity, both favorable and unfavorable, the modern laundry is still an institution about which there is much misunderstanding, they have resolved to throw the doors of their plants open to the public for one week, October 24-29, and to invite everyone to come in and get acquainted.

Co-operating in this movemen[illegible] are national, state and city associations in all parts of the country. Governors in all the states have been requested to officially proclaim "Visit Your Laundry Week," in the interests of better sanitation and health.

Record Run Set On Iowa Park to Electra Paving

Featured with a record run of 278 feet at the west mixer of Potts and Prentice on the Iowa Park-Electra road on Thursday approximately 9,000 feet of 18-foot pavement was completed on the county roads during the last week. The record of 723 feet was made after the same cre[illegible] had broken all previous records for one mixer with a total of 643 feet on Wednesday. The work on this mixer is being rushed in order that the work may be completed at that end of the road at the same time the east end is finished by another mixer.

Of the total for the week 5,800 feet was completed by Potts and Prentice on the Iowa Park-Electra road; 2,500 feet by the McCullom Construction company east of Electra; 600 feet by the Zimmerman Construction company at Iowa Park; 400 feet by N. Gullstrap on the Burkburnett-Clara road west of Burkburnett. It is expected that the latter subcontract of 1,800 feet will be completed during the coming week.

County Auditor Murphy and County Engineer Isbell are being pushed to keep enough materials on hand to keep the main and subcontracts in operation. A stone shortage was indicated the latter part of the week.

"CARAMBA! YOU'RE OUT!" IS MEX STYLE

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 15.—Teams of baseball players which came here from Texas for a series of exhibition games in connection with the Centennial celebration found the real American game was played here, even though with a Mexican accent. S[illegible] of the players expected to find a city unaccustomed to baseball [illegible] a public attending the games merely out of curiosity to see the sport that sets all the United States on its ears for so many months each year.

Instead they found a city with at least ten first-class diamonds, two full-fledged leagues and a number of independent clubs—all of them Mexican or Spanish. They met critical rooters who were not loath to tell the umpire that his eyesight wa[illegible] lost or to "pan" a runner for making a poor slide to third.

Baseball is a popular sport in Mexico and has been for many years. Introduced by Americans it was readily taken up by the Mexicans and for some time a city league has been maintained here which each year meets the champion of a league comprised of outlying cities such as Vera Cruz, Puebla and Monterey.

President Obregon, several months ago, offered a silver cup to the winner of the city series and the El Deporto nine won it. This entitled it to play the winner of the San Antonio-Dallas series which was staged here by the clubs which represented those cities in the Texas league.

He Was the First One.

FORD RUNS 34 MILES ON GALLON GASOLINE

Start Easy in Coldest Weather—Other Cars Show Proportionate Saving

A new carburetor which cuts down gasoline consumption of any motor and reduces gasoline bills from one-third to one-half is the proud achievement of the Air-Friction Carburetor Co., 2338 Madison St., Dayton, Ohio. This remarkable invention not only increases the power of motors from 30 to 50 percent, but enables every one to run slow on high gear. It also makes it easy to start a Ford or any other car in the coldest weather. You can use the very cheapest grade of gasoline or half gasoline and half kerosene and still get more power and more mileage than you now get from the highest test gasoline. All Ford owners can get as high as 34 miles to a gallon of gasoline. So sure are the manufacturers of the immense saving their new carburetor will make that they offer to send it on 30 days' trial to every car owner. As it can be put on or taken off in a few minutes by anyone. All readers of this paper who want to try it should send their name, address and make of car to the manufacturers at once. They also want local agents, to whom they offer exceptionally large profits. Write them today.—Adv.

SAYS CALOMEL SALIVATES AND LOOSENS TEETH

The Very Next Dose of This Treacherous Drug May Start Trouble.

You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone strengthens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Adv.

AUTO AND OIL SECTION

NEW STRENGTH INDICATED IN TIRE BUSINESS

Annual Statements of Manufacturers Are Likely to Contain Agreeable Surprises.

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 15.—As the time for the annual statements for the year draw near the rubber industry is gradually gaining the impression that revelations will be contained in the balance sheets which will be agreeable surprises to the stockholders and public in general.

During the past week the same authority which predicted that the Miller Rubber Company would show a decrease of more than $5,000,000 in bank debt from $8,500,000 for the first half of the year has made the statement that the next letter received by the Miller stockholders will show the floating indebtedness down to less than $1,500,000.

Are Keeping Up.

Miller officially reports that orders for September will easily equal those of August and although rapid changes might alter conditions the October sales will probably be as as large as those for the month just passed. It is also authoritatively reported that Miller is working on the last $1,000,000 worth of high-priced fabric and that the end of the year will see the company buying material in the open market.

Goodyear during the week made the announcement that production had been curtailed to 16,000 tires a day. No statement further than this was made. E. G. Wilmer, however, reiterated that production will be kept very closeto the sales ticket and that the policy of manufacturing for stock is not to be considered at the present time. This statement was made previous to the announcement at Washington that manufacturing for stock is one of the remedies suggested by the nonemployment conference as a means of curtailing idleness during the coming winter.

Nothing Doing.

It is doubted generally, however, whether the rubber industry will follow this section of the recommendations, although the others have been a feature of the industrial plan for the past year. If the government wants stocks manufactured to help the idle, let there be a reduction in freight rates and let the Federal reserve system lose some of the huge pile of reserves now being piled up to make it possible to extend credits. This is the attitude of manufacturers generally take in their private conversations regarding the suggestion.

Goodrich during the past few days has shown signs of revival, which were not apparent during the past few months. Production has stood around 6,000, 7,000 and 8,000 tires a day at Goodrich for several months without any large number of indications that increases were to be expected.

A Good Sign.

During the week, however, the company has sent letters to former employes asking if they wish to be kept on the call list in the future, but at the same time warning them not to come to Akron until they were actually sent for. The mere fact that the company is reviving its call list and the fact that the Raymonds have been known to make statements that the difficulties during the coming winter have been exaggerated, are looked upon as tangible indications that Goodrich will soon be increasing production, because of an increase in orders.

Firestone continues to ride on the wave of prosperity to a certain extent made by Henry Ford, and the plant continues to make 25,000 tires a day, according to official announcement.

Reports to the Akron Varnish Company indicates that higher-priced automobile manufacturers will make as many cars during October as during the past month. The company has comitments from practically all high-priced automobile factories.

BIG OLDS ORDERS FROM WEST COAST

LANSING, Mich., Oct. 15.—Olds Motor Works reports an order for fifteen carloads of Oldsmobiles received from the Olds dealer in Portland, Oregon this week. The shipment will consist of all Olds products including all models of passenger cars and trucks. About sixty units will be shipped. The order calls for immediate delivery.

Business on the Pacific Coast has made rapid strides in the past few weeks, according to Oldsmobile officials, and this market is fast becoming one of the most lucrative in the country.

Walter Zimmerman of the Olds Company reports favorably on conditions in Central Indiana after a two weeks' trip in the Hoosier state. While in the state he made an extensive study of industrial conditions.

TIRE DEALERS PLAN.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 15.—One thousand tire dealers are expected here October 18, 19 and 20 to attend the first convention of the National Tire Dealers' Association, Phillip O. Deitsch, secretary of the association, has arranged for a list of speakers which will be headed by E. G. Willmer, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, and W. O. Rutherford, vice-president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

BLOW-OUTS FROM AUTO ROW

BY COLD PATCH.

Scott Bower of the Munger Auto Co., announces that this week will mark the arrival of a new type 61 Cadillac Roadster. The roadster will be on display at the salesrooms of the local concern the first of this week.

Frank Queisser, manager of the Motor Supply Co., reports the expansion of his firm. Additional space was found to be necessary and so the building formerly occupied by the Oklahoma Garage, just adjoining the used car department of the Motor Supply Co. was leased and will be used for second hand car storage and setting-up of new cars. The new addition is located just across the street from the general offices of the company.

Paul Von Allen of Eckman and Von Allmen, was all smiles when we saw him this week. Paul has had a good week and is at peace with all the world. A Hup Coupe was delivered in Iowa Park and a Hup Touring car went to a local motorist. Since that knee of Paul's has mended and Eckman has returned from his jaunt to Mexia, things will pick up for these boys.

F. D. Keim left Saturday afternoon for Amarillo, where he will spend a couple of days putting on some work for a newly organized class of Knights of Columbus. Frank hopes to be back by Tuesday.

Charlie Nolen will give a song and a dance at the Shrine show on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. A person who is not willing to pay the price of admission for this one feature of the entertainment alone is sure "some tight." The only thing we fear is that some young thing in the audience will leave her heart at the Wichita Theater upon going out.

Walter Daugherty brough back the good news from Dallas that the Overland Motor Car Co., has established a factory branch at Dallas. This will mean much to the Overland Motors Co., of this city, as a large stock of both cars and parts will be kept in Dallas.

The Reiter and Holden Tire Co. have outgrown their quarters. This week the boys have been busy in building tire racks to care for their additional stock. They are doing business in the Robinson Building at 612 Indiana. In a very short time they will have a stock sufficiently large to care for their patronage. "Good tires at a low price" is their motto.

L. L. Dixon spent several days in Dallas the past week on business. He reports a very optomistic feeling around the Buick Motor Car Co. branch there. Prospects for future business is said to be excellent.

We are sorry to have to say good bye to genial Carl Thompson, who has won a place in the affection of every member of the automobile fraternity. Carl is now in Mexia, letting the folks of this newest oil town have some Hudsons and Essexes.

The Cochran Motor Co., is now comfortably established in their new quarters at 808 Lamar. The Chevrolet is being handled exclusively and sales are reported as being very satisfactory.

"Dan" Rubsam, the genial manager of the Marshall Huff Motor Co. reports brilliant prospects for the new Oakland Sport Model. "Dan" is spending much of his time out of town now visiting his recently established agencies, and says that enthusiasm is running high.

King and Weaver Motor Co. have just unloaded a carload of new Nash Six models. The shipment included Sport models, roadsters and five-passenger touring cars. These new models have many improvements over the 1921 models, according to Hugh Weaver.

Hugh Weaver and James King attended a dealers' meeting in Dallas last week, where C. H. Voorhese, vice president and general sales-manager of the Nash Motor Car Co., was the principal speaker and guest of honor.

POPULARITY OF INCLOSED CAR IS INCREASING

With the approach of fall, attention of the automobile buyer is centered on the inclosed type of vehicle. Dealers generally throughout the country anticipate an increasing demand for the sedan and the coupe this season. They point out that the closed car has been growing in favor each year with the buying activity heaviest in the cooler months.

"A few years ago the closed car was looked upon as a luxury to be indulged in only by those who could afford two cars—one for winter and one for summer," said Charles B. Voorhis, vice-president and general sales manager of the Nash Motors Company. "At that time production of inclosed vehicles was limited and the cost of manufacture was relatively higher.

"Since then the inclosed type of motor vehicle has become more widely accepted by the automobile owner as a car well fitted for requirements of all seasons. This has been due, in a large measure, I believe, to the development of the art of coach-building. Refinements have been made from year to year in the outward appearance of the closed car and in the matter of comfort.

"In winter months and in stormy weather the sedan of today offers comfort almost comparable to that of the modern living room; in mild or warm weather there is freedom from dust and protection from rain.

"That, perhaps, is why we see today on the main street of a small town in Kansas or Ohio or Oregon as many inclosed cars in proportion to the population as there are on Michigan Boulevard or Fifth avenue."

PRICE CUT STIMULATES HUP SALES

The substantial reduction in price on all Hupmobile models has had a very marked effect in stimulating sales, both wholesale and retail, according to J. R. Overstreet, distributor for the Hupmobile in Fort Worth, who was a visitor here this week.

"It should also be born in mind that the value of the Hup is additionally enhanced by numerous improvements. These include cord tires, plate glass in top, windshield cleaner, motometer, Marshall spring cushions and outside door handles. In my honest opinion the Hupmobile is one of the greatest values on the automobile market."

The great Hup factory at Detroit is one of the few automobile plants that is being operated continuously, and this activity is the result of an international demand for the car.

Of the many automobiles that are daily coming into Texas from the East bringing winter tourists and new residents, a large share of the newcomers are arriving in Hupmobiles, it is asserted.

Graham, formerly of the Pierce Arrow Motor Company has resigned his position with that company and joined the Chandler Motor Car Company organization in the capacity of vice president in charge of sales and advertising.

REO CARS WIN BIG PRIZES IN BEAUTY SHOW

Taking prizes in a beauty contest is a new and rather unique roll played by a Reo sedan and touring car. But this is what happened at the International Wheat Show in Wichita, Kansas, the other day, and a description of the beauty parade has just been received by D. L. Fritz of the Fritz Motor Company, local Reo distributors in a letter from the Wichita distributor.

The Reo touring car was entered in the $1,000 to $2,000 class, and the new Sedan was entered in the $2,000 to $3,000 class. The points upon which the judges based their decision were appearance, smoothness of operation and ease of control. The Reo sedan took first prize and the new Reo light seven outranked everything in its class. The automobile fashion parade and contest were features of th wheat show in Wichita. More than one hundred cars of different makes were entered in the show.

According to reports and newspaper comments from Wichita, the Reo passenger cars which were exhibited during the fair attracted unusual attention. Particularly the new Reo light seven was an object of considerable interest among the auto enthusiasts. During the exhibit every car entered in the beauty contest was put through its paces the same as at a horse show and both the Reo sedan and the new Reo light seven surpassed the other entries in point of appearance, both models scored heavily in regard to smoothness of operation and ease of control, and established the new Reo line of passenger cars as the most beautiful in America.

A RISING MARKET WILL BOOST SALES

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The long expected revival of sustained automobile buying will not occur until there is a recurrence of a rising market, declares Walter P. Chrysler, head of the Maxwell-Chalmers reorganization forces.

"That there is buying power at the surface is evidenced by improvement in sales of the higher priced cars," said Mr. Chrysler.

"Some manufacturers," says Mr. Chrysler, "are selling cars at less than cost.

"In the hurry to keep up with the procession many jumped down too fast, and although sales responded temporarily, the advantage was quickly lost when a competitor cut under. Meanwhile, dealers and public both got the impression that price cutting had become a periodical event, regardless of whether decreases in prices of materials and other costs would justify the cuts."

RATTLE IN SHACKLES.

Spring shackle play or looseness between the spring and the shackle may give much annoyance until the seat of trouble is discovered. Rattling caused by this looseness will be more frequent and distinct when the car is riding over fairly rough roads. A good method of taking up the play is to place shims between the spring end and the shackle. Or the play may be removed by tightening the spring bolt. Watch the shackles and do not allow mud to accumulate for small particles of finty grit in the mud make their way into the working parts and cause excessive wear. Lubricate the shackle bolts generously.

USE only new genuine bearings when replacements are necessary.

EASIER DRIVE IS BIG CHANGE IN HUDSON CAR

There are many important changes and refinements in the new Hudson Super-Six, but principally the engineers have concentrated on those things which make the car easier to drive.

In carrying out these changes, the entire front compartment has been re-designed and the details of the control mechanism have been so improved as to provide easier steering, easier starting, pedals which take less effort to operate and a gear shift with a long lever, handily placed.

In addition to these improvements in the control mechanism of the car, the exterior appearance of the new Hudson emphasizes still further advancement in beauty of line. Deep crown fenders that are really mud guards, have replaced the previous type. The front fenders have aprons that extend to the extreme front ends of the spring hangers. There is a splash shield placed between the front spring horns, which not only adds to the appearance of the car but also affords further protection.

The shape of the instrument board has been changed so as to group the instruments in the center, allowing more knee room for passengers. The instruments are now nickel finish, and the dash light, with an adjustable reflector, lights the dials at night without back glare.

The Super-Six engine which has been in use since 1916 has been continued without any fundamental alterations. Important changes, however, have been effected in connection with carburetion, incorporating a new air heating arrangement and reconstruction change in the intake manifold. There is also a different spark plug arrangement. These changes give easier starting under adverse weather conditions and an increase in gasoline mileage. They also effect to a marked degree the formation of carbon and the consequent fouling of spark plugs.

It has previously been Hudson practice to use cold air for the carburetor. On the new car all the air is pre-heated. In making this change the Hudson engineers have taken into consideration the fact that one of the main objections to the use of all hot air is the tendency towards restriction in the air intake manifold, which takes place particularly at the elbows.

In order to avoid this difficulty, globe elbow transmission shaft. This shaft has a pilot bearing in the clutch and carries the driven discs on a die cast aluminum drum. These driven discs are the light weight thin discs, while the heavier discs which carry the cork inserts are now the driving discs. Formerly, the driven discs carried the cork inserts and were the heavier of the two sets. The aluminum drum also carries cup-shaped inserts which act as clutch spring retainers.

There are eight clutch springs spaced equally about the aluminum drum, giving a balanced pressure entirely around the clutch. The clutch release spider depresses these clutch springs by relieving the pressure on the clutch during disengagement. Actual separation of the clutch plates is taken care of by small springs placed between the clutch discs. The use of these springs gives a balanced disengagement which prevents any tilting of the discs. In addition to the disengaging springs there are also anti-rattle springs placed between the discs so as to prevent noise when the clutch is disengaged and relieved of pressure.

The clutch thrust bearing grease cup used in previous models has been eliminated by incorporating a large annular ball throw-out bearing automatically lubricated by the clutch oil.

The new transmission gear set is not materially different from the old. Some of the changes in the gear set have been made to accommodate the new clutch. The transmission shaft is extended forward as described and the shifter mechanism is now mounted in a sub-assembly with the top cover plate.

The speedometer drive is now enclosed with the gear box. This is an advantage over the old arrangement because lubrication is taken care of automatically, the parts being lubricated by the transmission oil.

The gear shift lever has been lengthened and the ball handle placed close to the driver's hands, making gear shifting considerably easier, not only because of lightened clutch action but also of the more accessible and longer lever.

Another change concerned with the ease of operation of the car is in the emergency brake lever. In addition to having greater leverage, the ratchet has now been made heavier, and the ratchet teeth larger. In order that this change does not affect the number of positions in which the brake lever may be placed, there are now two pawls employed which come into action alternately and give the effect of twice the number of teeth on the ratchet, making it easy to secure the lever so as to hold the car on an incline and also making for an easier release.

Ease of steering has been secured by lowering the ratio of the steering gear from 7 1-2 to 7 to 9 1-2 to 1. This not only has the effect of making the wheel easier to manipulate, but also results in a heavier worm wheel with consequently better wearing qualities.

With the easier steering control and the clutch and service brake pedal action responding to a lighter pressure of the foot, the handling of the car has been made a much lighter task. The accelerator pedal is now placed to the right of the brake pedal and is designed to allow for a restful foot position; and the new pedal arrangement permits resting of feet on the inclined floor boards which gives an added advantage through making long drives less tiring.

The lubricating points on the chassis are taken care of by a new type oiler which needs only weekly voir and wick feed. A new type of pump oil can is provided with the car so that the oil is forced into the oil cups, and then is fed from the reservoirs, which are contained in the cups to joints are now used, giving a large volume of piping at the turns and avoiding any tendency towards restriction in the manifolding. There is also another globe at the point of maximum depression just before entering the carburetor, this being the largest of the three globes used in conducting the air from the hot air stove (which is intergral with the exhaust manifold) to the carburetor located on the left side of motor at the center of the block. Thus, the hot air is conducted over top of the engine to carburetor.

Air pressure balance on the carburetor is secured by a compensating tube which connects the air intake with the float chamber. This is an economy feature as it conserves gasoline on quick throttle opening.

Internally, the manifold has been altered so that a heated surface is provided between numbers 1 and 2, and 5 and 6 cylinders. The intake manifold at these two points is brought into close proximity with the exhaust and a pocket formation is provided in the intake so as to revaporize any condensation of gasoline at these points. This aids materially in shortening the warming-up period.

While the clutch employed in the new Hudson is fundamentally the same as that on the old, considerable change has been made for the purpose of making gear shifting easier. This has been accomplished by reducing the weight of the parts which revolve with the transmission shaft.

In the new construction, the transmission shaft is continued forward and forms the clutch shaft, eliminating the three-jaw slip joint used formerly as a connection between the clutch and the points to be lubricated by means of the wick feeds.

The wheel base of the car remains the same as do all of the major specifications. The tire size remains the same also, but the tires now provided are cords as standard equipment in place of fabric. There have been a few changes in the detail work of the body and windshield parts.

The door jams are now pressed steel in place of wood and consequently more durable and solid. Open model equipment includes both inside and outside door handles, facilitating the opening of the doors with the weather curtains in position. The windshield is now fitted with a metal strip, with a rubber interlining between the two windshield glasses and extending around the windshield posts. This gives complete weather protection at the front end.

SUNDAY AUTO TRAVEL GREATEST; TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY LIGHTEST

If you are going on an automobile trip and want to avoid all possible traffic you should go on Tuesday or Wednesday. Such is the conclusion reached from a study of a traffic census taken recently by the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, on one of the most traveled roads in the United States. If you want to go at an hour when there will be the least traffic, start between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning.

Traffic increases in amount steadily from Wednesday to Saturday, the census shows, and then jumps into big volume on Sunday. The volume on Sunday is about twice that on Tuesday or Wednesday. On Monday there is a decided drop from the Sunday figures and on Tuesday the lowest ebb is reached.

There is less traffic on the road between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning than at any other time of day. From 3 o'clock to 5 there is a slight increase; then a steady climb until 11. Between 11 o'clock and 1 there is a slight drop, and then an increase again until the peak is reached between 2 and 3. After 3 o'clock traffic drops slightly until 7 when the decrease becomes more pronounced. By midnight traffic has almost reached its lowest point.

Ninety per cent of the day's traffic, the census shows, rolls over the road between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m., and 52 per cent between 1 p. m. and 8 p. m.

SPRING SEAT LUBRICATION.

Many present-day cars are fitted with springs mounted on seats that oscillate. These spring seats usually have some means of lubrication, but many car owners never take the trouble simply to turn up the grease up provided. While it is not necessary to turn the cup each day it is advisable to give this part a little attention now and then. In cantilever suspensions the center bearing of the spring should be well oiled. Usually this bearing operates upon a small steel shaft extending out from the frame. In some cases a tube running transverly of the frame is used, either a grease cup or an oil hole will be found.

ROYAL CORDS FOR FORDS ON MARKET

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—The first United States Royal cord clincher tire, size 30x3 1-2 for Ford cars, is now ready for distribution, after about four years of experimenting and testing, according to Elmer Filgo, manager of the Filgo Tire Co.

"During the years of experimenting and testing, there have been fleets of cars on the road in practically every part of the United States, traveling over all kinds of roads and under any and all conditions, testing these tires," he said. "I recall that one of these cars was in Wichita Falls about two years ago, equipped with experimenting tires. One may only vaguely guess at the expense attached to the testing of tires under such exacting conditions. "It has been, and is, the policy of the United States Rubber Company, never to place any tire on the market, unless it is fully up to the company's high standard, and most certainly that would comply particularly as far as Royal cords are concerned. You may be assured that it will be a success." Shipments are already on the way from the factory to the many branches in all parts of the country and orders are now being booked. The orders are said to be very heavy on the advance information given out.

Advance orders for all makes of tires, both automobile and truck, as well as the company's various lines of merchandise, are said to be excellent, as far as this territory is concerned.

FORM NEW CONCERN.

Formation of the Fayette Painting and Trimming Company, a new subsidiary of the United States Automotive Corporation, to take over exclusive painting and trimming of Lexington motor car bodies for the Lexington Motor Company, another subsidiary of that organization, has been announced. Frank B. Anstead, head of the "Minute Man Six" factory, as well as the parent corporation, is president of the new concern, it is stated.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

One-Ton Truck Chassis $445

F. O. B. Detroit With Pneumatic Tires and Demountable Rims

The One-Ton Truck

The Ford One-Ton Truck first made its appeal to the farmer and the merchant because of the merits of Ford Cars. And it made its wonderful reputation and great sales record because it lived up to every claim made for it.

The reliable Ford Motor, the special Ford steel chassis, the aluminum bronze worm-drive, all combine to produce a truck of unusual power, capacity and strength—a truck that lasts in service; a truck that solves the haulage problem at a very small operating and upkeep expense. Hence the demand for the Ford One-Ton Truck is constantly on the increase.

For the good of your business, whether it be farming, merchandising or manufacturing, you should come in and look over the Ford One-Ton Truck—NOW!

IMPORTANT

We are prepared to furnish the Ford Truck equipped either with Standard or Special Gearing. The Standard Gearing gives the truck a maximum of power. The Special Gearing increases the speed of the truck from five to seven miles an hour, converting it into a Fast Delivery Car.

The Logical Basis For Popularity

These are the days when every article—from kitchen commodities to drawing room luxuries—is given minute study from the standpoint of values. On this basis the new Paige Lakewood reveals so many advantages that its popularity is a matter of nation-wide comment.

Men and women who are selecting the Lakewood readily recognize it as a truly fine motor car. In demonstrations they prove its unequalled powers of performance, ranging from remarkable flexibility to new record-making speed.

Finally they note the price—$2875—and, checking up all that the Lakewood offers in beauty, comfort, performance and economy, the conclusion is unescapable—a bargain in real values that can not be ignored.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

WITH WATER PLENTIFUL 30 RIGS ARE RUNNING IN BUNGER POOL; IN OLDER POOL ALSO ON THE MEND

With water connections completed to all parts of the field this week, there are now about thirty rigs running in the new Bunger district this week, and making good speed, assuring developments of interest within the next few weeks in this new field. Operations are also on the ment in the older South Bend field, though there have been only a few completions.

The east side of the South Bend pool is coming in for the new developments, several new rigs being reported starting up this week, with still more in prospect for the near future.

With a sand showing up for a 150 or 200 barrel well in the 2100 foot level, the North American, Roxana No. 11 Ford, in the east side of the pool, is drilling for the 2300 foot sand, which has been found more productive than the top sand in other tests. The Petrol Company's No. 6 McCluskey, joining the Ford on the west, is reported doing better than 100 barrels in the 2130 foot sand.

The Oklahoma Petroleum and Gasoline Company is deepening its No. 3 Keller, producive in the 1900 foot sand, to the deeper sand, the well now drilling around 2550 feet. The Eureka Production Company's No. 3 McCluskey, is reported a 160 barrel producer in the 2150 foot sand.

The Seaboard Oil and Gas Company's No. 6 Graham, west of the Clear Fork, completed for 150 barrels in the 2100 foot sand last week, was shot the last of this week, and the result has not yet been reported.

Bunger Oprations.

In a short time new completions will begin to appear in the Bunger district report, several wells getting down below the thousand foot mark, and some below 1500 feet during the past week. The long delay for lack of water has spurred many operators on to unusual speed to overcome lost time, and with good results.

The Paragon Oil company's No. 1 Vick, is still fishing around 2250 feet, but a rig is moving on the No. 2, in the southeast corner of the lease, closest to the first wells of the district in the 1900 foot sand. The Applegate and Hedrick No. 1 Whittenberg, north of the Paragon, is reported drilling around 1360 feet.

The Hedrick Oil Corporation's No. 3 Owens, is reported drilling around 1150 feet, and the No. 2 drilling around 400 feet.

The Sun Company's No. 1 Driver, is reported drilling around 840 feet.

The No. 1 Grimshaw of Chaney and Miller is reported drilling around 510 feet and the No. 2 a new location.

Rosell Near Sand.

The Rosell Petroleum Company, originally Ross and Tyrell, drillers of the discovery well, has two new wells down to where the next week or so should see them on the sand. The No. 1 Owen, lease B, is reported drilling around 1630 feet, and the No. 1 Askew is reported drilling around 1650 feet. The No. 2 Askew is a location.

The Sims Oil Company's No. 2 Owens, is reported drilling around 775 feet, and the No. 1 this lease, drilling around 340 feet.

The Chaney and Miller No. 1 Grimshaw, is reported drilling around 520 feet. The No. 1 is a location.

About a couple of thousand feet from the Union well on the Askew, M. G. Chaney and others are reported preparing to start drilling on their No. 1 Askew, Greenwade survey. The Union well is reported still shut down. The Texas company line is at the well, ready for connections.

A new location is reported on the Askew, Hodnett and Varble's No. 1 location made this week, and derrick timbers moved on.

T. C. R. Burton No. 1 Whittenberg, is reported rigged up, and the No. 1 Grimshaw, of C. M. Edgett is reported a rig.

The Parsons No. 1 of the Barnes Production Company is reported still shut down around 2200 feet.

The Lisle test of Jackson and Cathcart is reported shut down around 3,100 feet.

The state lands test of the Union Oil Company is reported still on the fishing job, around 2750 feet.

North Graham Wildcat.

Drilling has been resumed in the Farmer wildcat, four and a half miles north of Graham, which had been shut down around 1,000 feet for some times. This test is reported down around 1680 feet.

A new test has been started north of the Clear Fork, across from the Panhandle's McCluskey lease, by A. Bevarque, now down around 1350 feet, and temporarily held up by boiler trouble. This test is just under the hill, south of the Vandervort and Seale No. 1 Stovall, which was drilled some months ago, and is now shut down around 2,800 feet.

The Vandervort and Seale had several showings, some of the sands being around 30 feet thick, according to reports. The showings were at 2120, 2190 and 2690 feet respectively.

The Kanowa Oil Company's test on the Stovall, north of the producers in the South Bend pool, is reported drilling around 2860 feet. This test has been drilling for some time failing to show production in the regular sand depths.

The New Domain test, north of Ellisville on the Addie M. Graham, is reported drilling around 3550 feet. Five inch pipe will be set around 3600 feet, according to present plans, and drilling will be continued for the black lime, which should be encountered around 3750 feet.

OIL CITY NOW HAS TELEPHONE CONNECTIONS

OIL CITY, Young County, Texas, Oct. 15.—Oil City, brought into being with the discovery of the new Bunger pool, in the South Bend district, now has telephone connections, with South Bend and with Graham.

The Sims Oil Company, the Ross and Tyrell interests and the Stephens Water Company united on the line from South Bend, and the Graham telephone company made connections with the oil field town.

The settlement is growing rapidly, with the increase in operations in the pool, and with the bringing in of a few more wells, and the consequent widening of the pool, which now has a two and a half mile stretch, northwest and southeast, more growth and activity is anticipated.

COLLINS NOW PRESIDENT OF PEERLESS CO.

DETROIT, Oct. 15.—R. H. Collins, former president of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, whose acquisition of control of the Peerless Motor and Truck company of Cleveland created a stir in automotive circles this week, is en route to the west to establish Peerless and Collins cars in the chief centers of distribution there.

In Presidency.

Mr. Collins has assumed the presidency of the Peerless company, succeeding B. G. Tremaine, who has retired. The new board of directors comprises R. H. Collins, his son, Wilbur H. Collins, F. A. Trester, F. J. Miller, and A. C. Earhart of Detroit, and C. E. Sullivan, president of the Central National Bank, Savings and Trust Company of Cleveland. The following former members of the board were elected: Roland T. Meacham, H. A. Tremaine, W. H. Staring, George B. Siddall and Walter C. Baker.

Under the agreement with the Peerless company, Mr. Collins will purchase from B. G. Tremains and associates, a minimum of 50,000 shares and a maximum of 80,000 shares at $50 a share. The initial payment, it is said, will be at least 80 per cent, and the balance of the payments will take the form of serial notes, bearing 6 per cent interest and secured by collateral by the stock purchased.

Same Regimen.

Mr. Collins, it is stated, will continue to make his headquarters in Detroit and will continue his plans to manufacture the new Collins car from the former Cadillac plant here.

During negotiations for the purchase of control of the Peerless company the names of the General Motors Corporation and W. C. Durant were mentioned in the same connection, but it is asserted that Mr. Collins acted solely for himself in the deal.

Resumption of operations of the Peerless plant will have a heartening effect of the Cleveland automotive district. Another favorable sign there is the improvement in collections. This is especially true of the truck business.

Hitting Normal.

The White Motor Company reports that collections are better than normal with the percentage of current open accounts lower than in any year since 1916, which was one of the most prosperous of the war period. The company states that notes on time sales are being met with increasing promptness, and the lower percentage of past due bills was reached in August. All of which indicates that truck buyers are in funds and paying for what they need.

CAPT. LANGFORD ACQUIRES MINERAL WELLS CONCERN.

Negotiations have been completed whereby Captain W. S. Langford, owner of the Motor Supply Co., of this city, has taken over the Rogers Motor Co., of Mineral Wells, Texas, distributors for Ford cars and Fordson Tractors for that section of the state.

W. B. Omohundro, of the Motor Supply Co., organization is temporarily in Mineral Wells looking after the newly acquired property.

WINDSHIELD SUPPORTS.

On many makes of cars the windshield is held in place by steel arms which protrude through the cowl and are fastened on the under side by a nut and lock nut. Sometimes these nuts work loose from the vibration present, with the result that the shield is allowed to move slightly. The first evidence of this is seen in cracked finish in the vicinity of the windshield supports. In making the necessary periodic inspection for loose nuts and bolts the windshield supports should not be forgotten.

PRAIRIE IN STEPHENS AND CAMP IN WICHITA FURNISH WEEK'S BIG COMPLETIONS FOR NORTH TEXAS

Increasing its flow from 125 to 600 barrels, after a 100 quart shot, in the 32000 foot pay, the Prairie Oil and Gas Company's No. 3 Veale, Lease C, was South Stephens' stellar completion, also the best completion for the week reported from the district. A second large well from the south part of Stephens was reported for Mohlstadt et al the No. 2 Baker, making around 500 barrels, after a heavy shot.

Several other wells for the deep pay, were reported from South Stephens, including the Texas Company's No. 9 Black, 150 barrels; the No. 1 Bradford of the Hamon Estate, 130 barrels; and the No. 1 Bolder of Talmadge et al, 150 barrels.

Wichita county's best well reported for the week was the Camp Oil and Gas Company's No. 4 Dodson, swabbing between 300 and 400 barrels from the 150 foot sand, in the South Burkburnett-Texhoma field. This same sand produced a 150 barrel well, the No. 4 Beach of the Old Colony United Oil Company, and in this same district a third completion is reported, the Weowna Oil Company's No. 11 M. K. & T. 100 barrels, from the 1370 foot sand, in the north end of the field. The Weowna Company has a lease on the Katy right of way, through the shallow fields, and also through the townsite, and during the first months of the townsite boom, had heavy flush production from their townsite right of way wells.

Three in Texhoma.

Three new wells in the Archer county-Texhoma field were rigging up to pump this week end. The J. J. Perkins No. 4 Coffman, the far west well on the pool at present, is estimated good for 100 barrels, and depth 1640 feet, slightly deeper than the other producer.

The two other new wells are in the east side of the pool on the W. H. Taylor. Both the Harper and Jones 2 Taylor, and the Kentucky Oil Company's No. 1 Taylor are estimated good for more than 100 barrels.

As has been the case for several weeks operations in the South Electra field, here recent new sand discoveries have added materially to the value of the district, are hampered considerably by lack of water, some of the leases, which have just started operations, and do not have the advantage of old water connections, being at a loss for an adequate supply. A natural replenishing of the water supply has been expected for some time, and there have been threats of rain, which, however have so far failed to materialize.

Producer Holding Up.

The new 1810 foot sand, opened up by the Bridwell and Heydrick well on the W. T. Waggoner, in the west side of the South Electra shallow field, has held up well on the pump, the discovery well being reported doing around 150 on the pump. The Delaney Brothers well, three quarters of a mile east of the Bridwell and Heydrick, showing for a fair producer, presumably establishes the new deep sand for a nice extension to the east. The Delaney well got the sand around 17[illegible] feet, according to reports.

In the extreme south edge of the pool, on the Collett, the Gulf Production Company is drilling around 1500 feet in their No. 5 Collett, to be put down to the 1900 foot sand from which the No. 4 is producing.

The Gladiolus No. 28 Burnett, on the 1650 foot sand, is reported completing, and No. 29 is to be drilled immediately. The Bridwell and Heydrick No. 2 Waggoner, producing in the 1400 foot sand, is to be put down to the 1650 foot level, it is reported

REO SHIPS 60 PER CENT OF TRUCKS TO CANADA

According to statistics which have just been released, 60 per cent of all trucks exported into Canada from the United States during the month of August were Reo speed wagons. The records of the Reo Motor Car Company show that the number of trucks exported into Canada in August this year represented an increase of 150 per cent over the number that were sent to Canada from the United States in August of last year.

DETROIT, Oct. 15.—Charles E. Wagner has joined the sales staff of the Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation and the Chalmers Motor Car Company, Mr. Wagner has been with the Willys-Overland Company for the past nine years, serving in many capacities ranging from factory representative to distributor. He brings to the Maxwell-Chalmers Companies a thorough knowledge of the problems confronting the automobile dealer.

SATURATION POINT NOT YET IN SIGHT

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 15.—Saturation point in the automotive industry is not yet in sight because the automobile has by no means reached the end of its development, according to H. H. Franklin, president of the Franklin Auto Company.

The use of motor cars is going to broaden still more as the result of increasing efficiency, lower prices, and cost of operation, in Mr. Franklin's opinion. The building of more and more good roads will also encourage an increased use of automobiles as years go by.

Mr. Franklin's suggestions are said to be fundamental and more convincing than any of the many groups of statistics compiled in an attempt to figure out saturation point in the automobile industry.

The Frenchman Pare in the sixteenth century invented three kinds of artificial eyes.

HIGH PRAISE GIVEN STUDEBAKER SERVICE

The following letter was sent to the Excelsior Motor Co., Studebaker dealers for this territory by Mr. Joseph McReynolds of Washington. The letter speaks for itself and tells a wonderful tale of Studebaker performance.

Dear Mr. McReynolds: I would be lacking in appreciation if I failed to tell you of the wonderful service I have received from my Studebaker car.

I have driven one of your Studebaker 7-passenger touring cars, with an average load of six passengers and baggage, more than 163,000 miles in my Washington-Frederick Bus Line business, over rough roads and heavy grades, rain or shine, in making my daily schedule and numerous side trips. Despite this very heavy usage, its gasoline consumption has been very economical and, including the time required to burn carbon and make minor repairs, the car has been out of continuous daily use less than one week.

This Studebaker car is now in excellent running condition, and my patrons and myself have long since learned by actual experience to confidentially depend upon it to handle this traffic.

When I consider that I have driven this car in all kinds of weather, through heavy snow, and under a wide range of road conditions, I feel sure that I have received more than money value.

As this car has stood the test of time and traffic and has clearly proved its worth to the public and to me—proved to be the best by test—and as it has just completed 1541 consecutive trips between Washington and Frederick without a skip or a break, I have decided to add Studebakers to my fleet when I make my next purchase.

With best wishes,
The Frederick and Washington Bus Line."

MOTHER! CLEAN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Adv

"Pape's Cold Compound" is Quickest Relief Known

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and sniffling! A dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" taken every two hours until three doses are taken usually breaks up a cold and ends all grippe misery.

The first dose opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages of head; stops nose running; relieves headache, dullness, feverishness, sneezing. "Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known and costs only a few cents at drug stores. It acts without assistance. Tastes nice. Contains no quinine. Insist upon Pape's—Adv.

Miracles Don't Happen in Trade

The laws of trade and commerce are just as well defined as the laws of nature.

There are no such things as miracles in trade. If a product gains the topmost pinnacle in the minds and hearts of the American people, it is because it merits that position.

There are two outstanding causes for Studebaker success:

1. The outstanding cause is the value of Studebaker Cars, in quality, style, performance, durability and price, demonstrated by the complete satisfaction and enthusiasm of nearly one-half million owners who know values.

2. The universal respect for and confidence in the integrity of the name Studebaker which for seventy years has been the symbol of quality and fair dealing.

Studebaker cars are standing up in service and staying out of repair shops, to a degree unexcelled, we believe, by any cars of whatever price.

Leviathan Was Not a Whale But a Crocodile—The "Dragons" of the Bible—Did King Solomon Import Elephants From India—What "Fish" Swallowed Jonah—The Unicorn.

BY RENE BACHE

RECENTLY naturalists have made a special and particular study of the animals of the Bible, with a view to their satisfactory identification. For there has been much confusion of ideas on the subject, involving errors—as, for example, the generally-accepted notion that "leviathan" means whale.

Nothing could be more admirable than the translation of the sacred manuscripts which, done with utmost conscientiousness and rare literary skill, has given to us the Bible as we know it today. But the men who did the work were not naturalists, and the Hebrew and Greek names of Scriptural beasts puzzled them mightily. They knew not the crocodile or the hippopotamus—facilities of travel being few in their time—and when they came to the word "behemoth," they simply let it stand, unable to determine the animal to which it referred.

Behemoth was the hippopotamus. In every circus menagerie nowadays one sees that label in large letters on the hippo's cage. Job, describing the beast, says: "He eateth grass like an ox. He lieth under shady trees in the covert of the reed and fens. Behold, he drinketh up a river." And, in another passage: "He liveth and delighteth in the water, and nets are set for him there as for fish, which by his great strength he pierces through." Evidently Job knew the hippopotamus well.

By No Means A Whale

But how about the "leviathan?" Turn to the fifteenth chapter of the Book of Job, and you will find a description of that formidable creature:

"Who can open the doors of his face? His teeth are terrible round about. His scales are his pride, shut up together as with a close seal. One is so close to another that no air can come between them. They are joined to one another (so closely) that they cannot be sundered. The arrow cannot make him flee. Slingstones are turned with him into stubble."

Does that read like a description of a whale? Well, hardly. It is a picture of the Egyptian crocodile, in all its magnitude, ferocity, and indolence. Those gigantic lizards often attain a length of thirty feet. Doubtless Job had seen great numbers of them sunning themselves on the banks of the Nile.

The translators of the Old Testament MSS. came repeatedly upon a word meaning "monster," which they handled with puzzlement, not knowing exactly what to make of it. Probably because Ezekiel speaks of the creature as having scales, they decided to call it a dragon, and thus in the Bible we find several references to "dragons"—in one instance metaphorically, where Pharaoh, King of Egypt, is spoken of as "the great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers."

Ezekiel's description of "dragons" as "lying out in the rivers watching for prey" is in itself enough, together with his remark about their scales, to identify them with crocodiles. Thus it appears that "leviathan" and "dragon," in the Bible, both mean crocodile.

What Swallowed Jonah?

Who originated the notion that Jonah was swallowed by a whale? The Bible does not say so.

Jonah was the first Hebrew missionary sent to a heathen country. He was born about 825, B. C., which fixes the date approximately. The Lord ordered him to go to Nineveh; but, being afraid of what might happen to him in that unfriendly metropolis of Assyria, he fled in an opposite direction, and, making his way to Joppa (the seaport of Jerusalem), went aboard "a ship going to Tarshish."

The upshot of this performance was unfortunate for him; for, as the Bible tells us, "the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah"—after he was thrown overboard in the storm—"and Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights."

This story has given rise to a great deal of acrimonious discussion. It will suffice to say here that a sperm whale is a carnivorous animal (though its ordinary food is cuttlefish and other small fry), and has a gullet large enough to admit the passage of a man. But the great white shark, which attains a length of thirty feet, has been known to swallow men whole, and seems to fill the specifications for Jonah better than the huge cetacean.

The Bible says: "The King (Solomon) had at sea a navy of Tarshish. Once in three years came the navy of Tarshish, bringing gold and silver, and ivory, and apes, and peacocks."

Elephants And Peacocks

The word translated "ivory" (in the above quotation) is "shenhabbin," which, say the Biblical commentators, properly means elephants. Are we to suppose that those pachyderms—perhaps baby elephants—were fetched to Palestine from Ceylon? It seems entirely possible. On ancient Assyrian monuments have been found representations of elephants.

In 170, B. C., Antiochus Epiphanes used elephants in war against the Jews of Palestine, who had revolted from his rule. They carried wooden towers strapped on their backs, each holding four or five bowmen and slingers. The officer in command was called the "elephantarch." Antiochus marched upon Jerusalem, captured it, profaned the sacred temple, carried off the holy sacramental vessels, and massacred nearly all the inhabitants of the city.

These must have been Asiatic elephants, which are docile beasts and easily domesticated. The African elephant has never been successfully domesticated until within the last few years, on a small scale as an experiment.

The peacocks received by King Solomon presumably came from Ceylon, to which island they are native. The word in the original sacred manuscript was "tukkiyim," a slight modification of the name given to the birds in Ceylon today.

Puzzle Of The Unicorn

The "unicorn," mentioned repeatedly in the Old Testament, is another puzzle, which cannot be said to have been satisfactorily solved. Was it the rhinoceros? The word, of course, means "single-horned;" but Deuteronomy refers to the beast as having two horns. Some rhinoceroses, however, have two horns, while other species have only one.

Some authorities identify the unicorn with the addax antelope which today roams the deserts of Northern Africa in large numbers. It is white with a brownish-gray neck and a heavy tuft of curly hair on its forehead. This animal, as big as a fair-sized pony, was domesticated by the ancient Egyptians, and, represented in profile on their monuments, its two horns appear as one. Undoubtedly from this source was derived the unicorn on the British coat-of-arms, whose single spiral horn is obviously copied after that of the addax antelope. To go back for a moment to the aforementioned "ivory," it is worth noting that Noah, when he built the Ark, laid in a large supply of vine branches, to provide a pair of elephants on board with their favorite food.

Presumably Noah was not a naturalist, but his menagerie was certainly more extensive and complete than any collection of animals since made for zoo or circus. Just how he got it together is not explained, but he must have been a resourceful person, having had a long experience of life and affairs. He was tenth in descent from Adam, and was 600 years old at the time of the Flood, having been born 3,115, B. C.

Moses And His Boat

Among the ancient Egyptians there was a superstition to the effect that the papyrus reed—growing abundantly in the shallows of the Nile, as it does today—was held in mysterious reverence by crocodiles. It may have been on this account that the mother of Moses placed her baby in a small boat or basket of papyrus leaves, thereby insuring his safety from the "dragons." This was at Heliopolis, where Moses was born in the year 1733, B. C.

Among the Movie Stars

HOBART BOSWORTH AND MADGE BELLAMY IN "BLIND HEARTS"

RAYMOND HATTON

"Disraeli"—"Everything for Sale"—"Blind Hearts" "The Matrimonial Web"—"A Trip To Paradise" —"The Half Breed"—A Versatile Player.

THE star cast supporting George Arliss in the screen version of "Disraeli," is "topped off" by dainty little Louise Huff, who holds a place in the heart of every motion picture "fan." Miss Huff has the role of "Clarissa, Lady Pavensey, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Glastonbury." Upon Clarissa and Disraeli falls the task of taking "Charles, Viscount Deeford," a rich young nobleman with exclusive ideas, and making a human being out of him. The great statesman not only urges a life of activity upon Charles but compels him to become his secretary and thus Charles is embarked upon a very stormy career from which he emerges finally, with flying colors and wins the girl of his heart. But many things happen in the interval.

"Everything For Sale"

Helen Wainwright is a young girl who has been given a conventional, finishing school education and is now expected, by her worldly minded aunt, to make a rich marriage with Lee Morton, a hard young millionaire who believes, with Mrs. Wainwright, that money can buy anything that he wants. He wants Helen. At first the girl is somewhat dazzled by his attentions, but soon she realizes that she does not really love him, but her childhood pal, Donald Scott, now a poor young architect. Helen's fight to give her heart where she chooses rather than sell it in the marriage market makes a story of strong dramatic appeal. May McAvoy is the star.

"Blind Hearts"

Lars Larson and John Thomas make a fortune in the Yukon. On returning each find an addition to their family, Larson a girl, Thomas a boy. On account of a birthmark Larson suspects that Thomas is the father of his daughter. Years pass and the young people fall in love. Larson refuses his consent and a fight takes place on his yacht. The following morning the yacht is discovered burned and a charred body is found. This is supposed to be Larson, and young Thomas is arrested charged with murder. The body, however, is not Larson, and the latter thinks he has a good way to avenge himself on his friend. Young Thomas is condemned, but as the time of execution draws near, the anguish of Larson's daughter softens his heart and he repents. He is ready to give his own life when he discovers that his daughter is entitled to the birth mark as a heritage from her mother and that the rancor he has carried for years has been for nothing.

"The Matrimonial Web"

Alice Calhoun proves in "The Matrimonial Web," that she is a sportswoman of the first caliber. Motorboats and canoes handled by the young star with great skill are some of the most interesting features. There are smugglers about and Miss Calhoun as the heroine sets out to do her part in bringing them to justice. With a concealed wireless station on a deserted island the smugglers ply their nefarious trade. The heroine and the hero find themselves in hard straits on the island and the apparent prey of the smugglers. There are many tense situations including a fight in which the pluck of the girl saves the day for her lover. The denouement reveals the little heroine as not only a destroyer of smugglers but in reality a smuggler herself—a love smuggler.

"A Trip To Paradise"

Bert Lytell takes the part of "Curley" Flynn, the hard-boiled, slangy "barker" of a side show. The scenic railway is known as "A Trip to Paradise" and "Curley's" glib tongue brings in the crowds. He meets pretty Nora O'Brien, a resort waitress, and, when she loses her job and her home on his account—they stay out after twelve o'clock—marries her. But "Curley" quarrels with his employer, the Widow Boland, and, his reputation for honestly ruined, goes down hill. Jobs are few and men plenty—a timely touch to appeal to the audience. In desperation he is persuaded to rob, but is badly wounded. Then comes the paradise scenes. The court sits to decide whether he should be allowed to live or die, while [illegible] double exposure shows his body on the operating table on earth.

The picture ends as he is allowed by God's Court to continue his life on probation. His old job is given back to him and he is once more the smooth-tongued barker and the crowds pour in to take the exhilarating ride to "paradise." Virginia Valli plays opposite the star.

"The Half Breed"

A little wisp of an Eastern society girl won where civilization's mighty institutions failed—she upset accepted traditions. "The Half Breed" tells the story of a birth barrier raised against a college graduate whose mother was an Apache squaw and father was one of the scouts of conquest in civilization's westward rush. Wheeler Oakman appears in the role of the half-breed who is saved from a sheriff's posse by the Eastern girl visiting the range country and caught in the vortex of the events which she did not understand or care about. The latter role is filled by Ann May. Mary Anderson, she of "sunshine girl" fame, is seen in tears at last in the part of a little mother.

Raymond Hatton

Raymond Hatton, who is playing the feature part in "His Back Against The Wall," has portrayed a greater variety of character roles than any other player of the screen. Hatton always preferred to do the unusual things, though they are always more difficult. Among his many distinctive characterizations there is one that will go down in the history of the photo-drama, as Joseph Jefferson's interpretation of Rip Van Winkle will be recorded in the annals of the stage. This is interpretation of John Trimble, the convict in "The Wispering Chorus," which is generally conceded to be the finest characterization in screen history.

AS SPORTING EDITOR, NICK CARTER TELLS THE WORLD HE'S SURE A FINE "ACKTOR"

By C. F. ("Nick") Carter.

I couldn't find me no good warm place to pitch a tent, so's I could earn an honest ten thousand berries telling fortunes this winter, and Mr. Fitts 'lowed as how setting up a tent was a violation of the traffic ordinances anyway, him figuring the crowds wanting me to read palms and pick foothall winners would overflow into the street—and so I got me a new job, and I'm counting on you baseball fans to gimme strong support.

You couldn't guess what this new work of mine is, although in a sense it ain't work for me but just play, me having hid my light under a bushel, as the feller says, and not having told the public before how many different things I can do right clever, and so I ain't going to ask you to guess what it is but I'm going to slip you the news right out.

I'm going to be a acktor. Florence Jackson and my wife and a feller named T. T. McKinney from Castoria, O., which is the state where some of the world series games was almost played in, framed me up on this job, and I bit like a cat fish—which is the same as me saying that I saw something I thought looked good and grabbed it, and now I can't let go. And if someone had of put ether in my gasoline tank, as Harry Smith says, I couldn't be more blowed up, maybe, than what I am right now.

You see, I have always been a member in good standing of the Business Women's Club of Wichita Falls on account of me making the club a speech last winter and telling the girls a lot of funny stories that I got out of a book which Bess Lauck lent me and which I ain't returned yet hoping some other club might ask me to make a speech some time but none of 'em ain't done so yet and I guess I'll return the book. Well, as I was saying, my speech got me in strong with the Business Women's club, only I saw their Year Book for this year and they got the whole year's program printed out but my name ain't in the book for no speech, and I don't see Walter Cline's name in the book either, so I guess he and Walter must have fell flat as public talkers or something. But anyways my good looks or the way I wear my clothes makes a hit with the girls, 'cause when they decide to put on a play to make some coin they hunts me up right quick and asks would I be the comedian. And I says I hope you don't think I'm no Roscoe Arbuckle, which was kinder raw but it got a laugh as you might say—and then I weakens and says sure I'll be the comedian, only you got to have a play which is suitable to my style of beauty. That makes my wife laugh, and pretty soon we're all good friends.

Then the girls gets the John R. Rogers Company, of Castorin, O., to ship 'em the sweetest play they had which is called "Springtime" and you can take it from me, gang, that play's a curly wolf. It's got so many people in the cast that if it don't go big the opening night we're going to let the audience in free and charge admission to the acktors and clean up a lotta jack.

I'm a funny bird in the play which is a musical drama and am called Bobby Brewster. I'm supposed to be a lion with the ladies which, if I do say it myself, don't mean nothing to me but just acking natural. And this play, see, covers fifty years and I'm a young comedian and a middle-aged comedian and an old fool in it. I been a young comedian as my mother knows, and I'm getting along towards middle age right now and I guess I won't have much difficulty being an "old fool." I ain't been to all the rehearsals yet, so I ain't sure how many times I get married in this "Springtime" but from what my wife says, I guess Kid McCoy and Nat Goodwin in the flash never had nothing on me in the spirit, as you might say about my acking.

I get treated sorter rough in spots as a acktor because when I'm an old fool some of the young girls in the cast what I try to give the bright and sparkling eye to they just pours it on me and I got one wife Zenobia in "Springtime" what sure has me eating out of her horny fist as the feller says. Mrs. Grace Higgins she's Zenobia and I guess she and me ain't going to be on speaking terms after this show's over. But every time them young girls treats me rough I come back with a line of jazz that's sure rich. Some of it ain't in the play 'cause I just put in my own stuff and of course that makes all the acks and seens very much yet 'cause being a principal and having a big part I gotta work hard and help the director who is this T. T. McKinney what I spoke of earlier. I got to calling him "Mac" right away and we get along fine and I think he's a swell director and he thinks I'm a swell acktor so they ain't no friction in the play which is sometimes what hurts these plays what is mostly filled with amateur talent as you might call 'em.

This "Springtoime" play is going to be played by me and my fellow acktors at the Wichita Theater on October 21, first, and October 22, second, and you should all go to see it for two reasons, first because if you didn't go then you wouldn't never see my acking unless I decide to stay on the stage professionally which I can't do because professional acktors have to have too many clothes and I ain't got but two suits which is one suit of underwear and my outside suit and in the second place you should see the play called "Springtime" because the money that the Business Women's Club will get from the people that wants to see me ackt is going to be spent on some worthy cause like paying a girl's way through business college or hiring detectives to help the city council find the owners of them Ford automobiles or something.

I am a very happy man as I say in the play and I hope Zenobia is the same.

SURE ENOUGH.

Marriage and Divorce While You Are Waiting

One of the fastest romances, courtship and marriage on record, with an even faster separation, is the story of "Wedding Bells," Constance Talmadge's latest release and which will be shown at the Olympic Theater, commencing Monday.

"Love at first sight" can hardly express the instantaneous way in which Rosalie Wayne and Reginald Carter fell in love with one another. And there is absolutely no phrase yet written to describe how quickly they fussed and separated. Nor is there anything but Salisbury Field's clever play that can do justice to how they were finally reconciled.

Those who have been fortunate in seeing the stage play will be glad to know that such favorites as Harrison Ford, Emily Chichester, Ida Darling, James Harrison, William Roselle, Polly, Van Dallas Welford and Frank Honda were chosen to interpret the screen roles. The production was directed by Chet Withey.

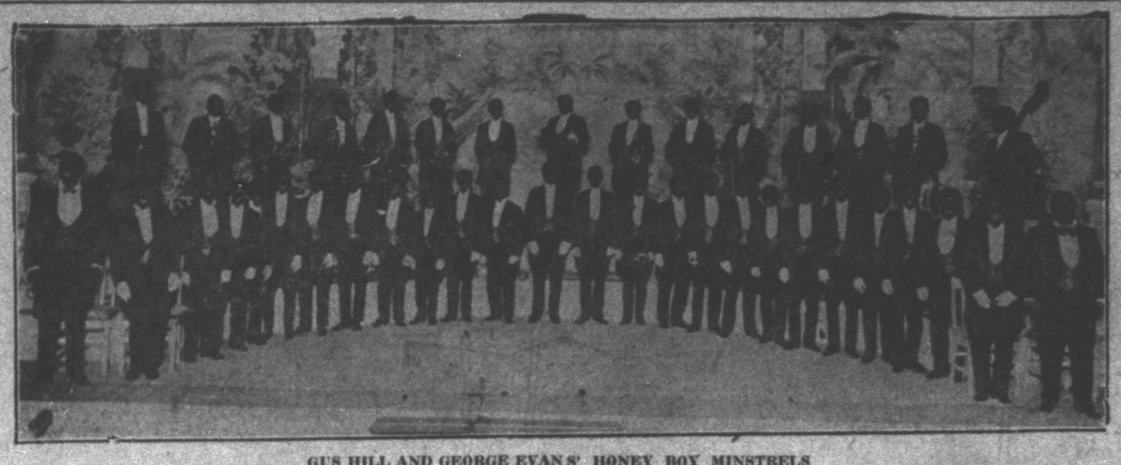

"Wedding Bells" will be the attraction at the Olympic through Wednesday.

Fight fans who thought the Willard-Dempsey mill was too one-sided, should pay a visit to the Gem Theater on Tuesday where "The Egg Crate Wallop," Charles Ray's latest Paramount-Arteraft photoplay will be on view. Thomas H. Ince produced the picture, and he is strong for realism. He has staged in this film a full-fledged prize fight from preliminaries to knock-out, with such principals as Al Kaufman, Cliff Jordan and Izzie Glasser, the West Coast featherweight champion, in the ring and five hundred dyed-in-the-wool fight enthusiasts occupying the bleachers

MINSTREL SHOW WILL OPEN WEEK AT THE WICHITA

Not satisfied with basking on the top wave of popularity with his famous minstrel show Manager Gus Hill has formed a coalition of interests with the late George Honey Boy Evans Minstrels. The result has been the unity of two of the greatest organizations of its kind in America thereby making an advancement in this style of entertainment seldom attempted or rivalled by any other purveyor of up-to-the minute theatricals. The two shows, which will be the superlative attractions at Wichita Theatre one night only, Monday, October 17, will be known as the Gus Hill and George Honey Boy Evans Minstrels. The personnel, of course, will be composed exclusively of men, forty all told. They are said to be the cream of burnt-cork talent whose gifts range from creating side-splitting mirth to enthralling audiences with an insight to negro life and customs one does not usually expect to find in the confines of the theatre. Besides reviews, bits, travesties, music, revelries, frolic, infectious laughter, music features par excellence, novelties, electrical and mechanical effects, surprises there will be other innovations sure to create more than passing talk. A spectacular street procession in which the entire company will take part, is also announced.

"WHERE LIGHTS ARE LOW" BY A NOTED AUTHOR

Lloyd Osborne, Step-Son of Robert Louis Stevenson Wrote Story for Hayakawa Play.

Lloyd Osborne, author of "Where Lights Are Low," Sessue Hayakawa's most recent R-C Pictures Corporation release, dates his influence on the world's literature back to the days when he was a mere slip of a boy.

When but a boy his father died and a year or so later his mother married Robert Louis Stevenson, who then was unknown to fame and who moved his little family from this country to Scotland where he continued to struggle for recognition as a writer.

In those days Lloyd Osborne was not as strong as other boys and spent most of his time with his stenfather, who was the idol of his young life. For hours he would sit watching him write stories and wondering what happened to them after they were finished for he had never been able to find anyone who had ever read or even heard of his step-father's works. Never did Stevenson write a story, however, that Lloyd Osborne didn't ponder over it.

But Stevenson knew many stories that he did not write in those days. They were stories of wild adventure, of thrilling incidents that made the lad hold his breath in wonderment.

"Why do you write such uninteresting stories when you know so many things of interest?" he often asked his step-father. "I think if you would write the stories that you tell me, other people would be just as interested in them as I."

One day little Lloyd was taken ill and as he lay in bed his kindly stepfather found him with a box of paints, fashioning on cardboard the map of some imaginary islands. Taking it from the boy, Stevenson started marking out the place where a treasure was concealed and told Lloyd a wild tale of the island and how a band of pirates had made it their rendezvous.

Lloyd was thrilled. He pleaded with his step-father to write the adventure as a fiction story. Without answering Robert Louis Stevenson left the room, taking with him the bit of cardboard with the painted island.

Out of this little incident grew "Treasure Island," perhaps the most famous of all Stevenson's works. It grew slowly day by day until the manuscript was finished.

In "Where Lights Are Low," the original title of which was "East is East," he deals with the adventures of a Chinese prince who comes to this country to be educated and who, through Fate, is cast into that crucible of San Francisco's Chinatown where he becomes little better than a coolie. In the hands of a writer of lesser ability the theme of the story would promise little but Osborne's masterful treatment has made it one of the most powerful vehicles in which Sessue Hayakawa ha sever appeared.

"THE TRUTH ABOUT HUSBANDS," STRAND

This Monday to Wednesday the attraction at the Strand Theatre is "The Truth About Husbands," adapted from Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's brilliant stage play, "The Prolifigate." It is a Whitman Bennett production released through First National and hs an exceptionally well balanced cast headed by May McAvoy.

It deals in a startingly interesting way with the age-old problem of how a man before marriage cannot have his fling without the danger of his escapades confronting him after marriage. The denouement of the play is perhaps as thrilling a climax as ever screened in a society drama. H. E Herbert plays Dunstan Renshaw, a wealthy bachelor who is supposedly typical of his, class. He is not vicious, merely worldly.

STUPENDOUS SETS USED IN "THE THREE MUSKETEERS"

Those who view Douglas Fairbanks' latest United Artists Production, "The Three Musketeers," will be given a film tour of Paris as it was in the early Seventeenth Century; of the palace of King Louis XIII; of Buckingham Palace and several ancient and picturesque continental towns.

To meet the requirements of this story, three acres of exterior sets and one acre of interiors were built, all duplicated from ancient engravings of historical buildings of that time.

"All told," said Robert Fairbanks, production manager and brother of the famous Doug, "we built 37 interiors and 40 exteriors, every one of them costing at least three times as much as any other set ever constructed on the Fairbanks' lot."

It is believed by the management of the Palace Theatre, where this stupendous film spectacle will be shown for one week starting next Monday that "The Three Musketeers" will not only represent an overwhelming photographic drama, but that it will also afford a golden opportunity to review the early history of France.

No more vivid impression could possibly be given of the gates of Paris, or of the quaint streets and picturesque buildings of the city than that conveyed in the scenes wherein D'Artagnan and the three musketeers give battle in slashing duels to the Cardinal's guards.

The Louvre, with its vaulted ceilings and impressive arches was reproduced in a set nearly two hundred feet long, and the scene depicting the court ball with ladies of rank and men of nobility is said to be one of the most colorful and magnificent ever screend. With the king and queen looking on from the throne, two hundred gorgeously costumed couples occupy the floor.

Many unique problems confronted the research department in connection with the building of these sets. One of these was to find out what kind of paving stones were used in the Paris streets at that time; also the type of lettering used on shop signs and the proper wording for these signs.

"The features that stamp the sets for this production as different and superior to anything yet built for film purposes," said Robert Fairbanks, "is the fact that practically all replicas of buildings were constructed with four sides and that most of the interiors were built with ceilings, all of which show in the picture."

Perhaps the most unique set of all, however, is the ship in which Doug as D'Artagnan stages a terrific battle with Barbara La Marr as Milday for the royal jewels which she has stolen and which are the basis for one of the most interesting complications of the plot. Both the exterior and interior of this ship are shown upon the screen, figuring in one of the most thrilling episodes of the play.

Do They ALL Want to Marry Him?

One Says "Mrs. Vanderbilt," Another "Mrs. Brooks"; But General John J. Pershing, Much-Prized Widower, is Silent While Society Guesses.

Gen. John J. Pershing.

Mrs. Louise Cromwell Brooks, a Society Widow of Washington, D. C., Who Is Regarded by Many as the Most Probable Future Mrs. Pershing.

Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt, Who Has Entertained the General Very Often at "Biltmore," the Vanderbilt Estate.

Because He Has Never Forgotten His West Point Deportment, the General Would Fit in the Pretentious Vanderbilt Mansion, "Biltmore," at Asheville, N. C.

Above—Miss Anita Patten, a California Beauty, Whose Hospitality at San Marino Ranch Gen. Pershing Recently Enjoyed.

SOCIETY is setting its cap for Gen. John J. Pershing. The eligible matrons, and some of the maids, of the several smart sets, society, army and business, have looked in the direction of the tall leader of all of the armies of the country, and found him attractive as a possible companion in the delectable occupation of sitting on the doorstep and watching the sunset, with the sunset a long way postponed on the law of averages and insurance table prospects.

For the veteran cavalryman has not hurried Time along any as he went his martial way, and the advances of years do not by any means show with him as they might with one who had been chained to the desk, or merely to the pursuit of happiness.

So, when milady who has mourned the proper time for a departed mate, and the maid who has waited for mature years to ripen judgment before making a selection, looks over the list of eligibles, none stands in a more attractive light than the General, and he finds himself sought on all sides for social affairs.

Plans are made in many quarters where the busy folk who select other people's mates mentally assign futures for their friends. It would be just too fine if Mme. Blank or Miss Dash could come into the proud post of first lady of the army, and upon this line of action there is just now more speculation upon which of the potables will win the groom than usually comes with respect to mere man. Usually, it is the other way around, and the gossip centres upon what lucky man will win a fair bride—or a rich one.

Society naturally thinks that it is up to Sir Galahad to pick his Queen of Love and Beauty, just as all knights have done in the past when they came home from the wars, fresh with the laurels of battle and promotion. But Society is not content to let him do the selecting, and there are many fair rivals in the lists who seem more than willing to make the pathway to the altar one of ease and comfort for the doughty warrior.

Wealth and Family Seek Him

Among those who have entertained the General, and who have been among the invited to other people's entertainments where he would be present, are two recognized figures in the realm of great wealth, and some others who have family and position, without the background of millions.

Those in the graces of the elect say that there is much angling for invitations to the functions whereat the General is carded to appear, and especially at such house gatherings as afford more opportunity for closer communion than a merely formal crush in some restricted town house.

Prominent among the social lights who have rushed to the stage of entertainment, and with the availability factor on her side, is Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt, who has been much in the official set at Washington and knows more of the inside ropes of its affairs than most of the purely Society set. It was noted that her magnificent estate, "Biltmore," lying at the base of the North Carolina mountains, was one of the first places to which the General was invited after he had time to settle himself in the new task of head of the armies, following the rather arduous work of trying to persuade foreign powers that an American army was able to walk alone.

From the time that she came to Society as Miss Edith Stuyvesant Dresser, Mrs. Vanderbilt has been a striking figure in the world of fashion. She is a sister to the Countess D'Osmay and to Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, and after having had all of the experiences that comes with a commanding place in social affairs, she finds herself a mature woman, with a huge estate on her hands, and some millions of unspent money, quite the ideal setting for a home-making with a General in the foreground.

The United States, England, France, Belgium, Italy, Japan, and the lesser lights of world force have all hung their traditional decorations on the breast of the cavalryman. The city of London has added a gold sword, and he has, by and large, more trophies of war than any other man ever brought back from a single campaign. There is nothing left in the field of martial glory for him to win, and with this remarkable list of dazzling attractions there goes along a man who, learned how to dance back in the cadet days and never forgot the social graces of the drawing-room and the ballroom.

So the gossips took more than usual interest in the invitation that came from Mrs. Vanderbilt for him to run down to Biltmore and pass a few days. She had already placed her Point d'Arcade estate at Bar Harbor on the market, and the old Vanderbilt farm at New Dorp, Staten Island, has been loaned to a summer home for girls in which her friend, Mrs. W. A. M. Burden, is deeply interested.

The widow has shown a general tendency to divest herself of all of the landed estate cares that might be possible, centring on the vast Biltmore property as quite enough.

There has never been any apparent liking on the part of the widow for the society of the Metropolis. Aiken has claimed her for its own, and Newport is always a part of her regular schedule, while Paris is as familiar to her as any of her American haunts. Since the expiration of her period of mourning her name has been linked with the official set almost exclusively in matters of the heart. Admiral Grayson, White House physician under the Wilson regime, was presumed to have been in line for the future mastery of Biltmore, but his marriage to another set at rest all gossip of the kind.

Then came the Pershing visit to Biltmore, and it seemed to be a likely match for the feminine matchmakers.

Biltmore, the silent pawn in this possibility, is one of the show places of all the world. It now holds only 50,000 acres, since the widow gave to the United States government half of the original extent for use as a National Park. The government is already putting under way an extensive forestry project there. The wonderful property lies in the heart of the Southern Appalachian Mountains, seventeen miles from Asheville, N. C.

Among the other women who have come and gone in the procession of possibilities was Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the former President. Little has been heard of this idea since President Wilson retired to the practice of law.

But there is, on the other hand, a striking contrast to Mrs. Vanderbilt in Mrs. Louise Cromwell Brooks. She has youthful snap and dash, beauty and the verve of the younger regime to set against the mature charms of Mrs. Vanderbilt. And then there is the huge Stotesbury estate which stands behind her as a financial bulwark. The support of the Morgan group in finance belongs to the Stotesbury holdings, and there is little left, either in grace or the more substantial something for a rainy day, that Mrs. Brooks does not hold for a basis for a marriage settlement.

A Formidable Possibility

When, as Louise Cromwell, she was married to Walter B. Brooks, Jr., all of the society set at Washington was on hand. It was one of the notable affairs of the season and nobody missed it unless by the act of Providence prevented. New York's smart set worshipped at her shrine when she was a debutante, and she was one of the attractive bridesmaids at the Gould-Decies marriage.

Her mother married Edward T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, one of the partners in J. P. Morgan & Co., and the Philadelphia representative of that firm. Stotesbury has been strong for society and had been a leader for many years. He went especially to the horse show events, in which he was, and is, a recognized leader. Stotesbury has been famous also as a breeder of fine horses, and some of the best in the land are in his stables.

It was a perfectly natural thing for Mrs. Brooks to drift across the lifeline of the General when the Armistice came and the chief of the forces found himself in Paris with more time for social affairs than the war had afforded. He was installed in the magnificent Ogden Mills home in Paris, with its beautiful garden and handsome appointments. Soon the lawn parties at the Pershing home began to attract the leading figures in international social and official life. Society began to note that one of the most prominent figures at these gatherings was Mrs. Brooks, and that the lady and the General made an uncommonly handsome couple as they walked together over the lawn.

Pershing was always a stickler for correct military dress. His garb bespoke the last word of the tailor, and the woman, painted by the masters and etched by Helleu, gave a finish to the picture that nobody overlooked.

It was noted that when the General came marching along Pennsylvania avenue, in a parade that will be a part of history, there watched it, as the personal guest of the Commander, Mrs. Annie Peeples Boyd, widow of Col. Carl Boyd, who died in France while serving as an aide-de-camp to Pershing. Mrs. Boyd and her daughter were early arrivals for the parade and she attracted general interest when it became known that she was the personal guest of the General.

Nor does the capital and New York hold all of the possibilities. One of the General's early tours was to the San Marino Ranch, not far from Los Angeles, California, where he was a house guest at the estate of George A. Patten. Lt. Patten, son of the owner of the estate, had served with Pershing abroad, and there was a friendly family interest in the visitor.

But there was a greater interest in the person of Miss Anita Patten. The daughter of the host was gracious to the General, and her name came to be added to the list of those who might be considered with great care when the time came to make a final guess as to the name that would occupy the other side of the marriage license.

"Stones" That Are Softer Than Biscuits

WHEN snipers disguised themselves with garments that made them look like stones so as to deceive the enemy in the world war they were, after all, merely doing exactly what the "stones" in the accompanying picture have done. For these objects that look like stones are not stones at all, but edible plants known by the polysyllable name of mesembranthemum bojusil.

Photograph Showing the Remarkable Mimicry of Stones by the South African Plant Mesembranthemum, That the Eye at First Glance Cannot Pick from Among the Rocks.

Because they appeal to the appetite of the beasts that roam their native South Africa, particularly the Simians, the plants, through the process called by Charles Darwin the theory of natural selection, gradually, through tedious evolution, have assumed the shape of the stones. That put it up to the monkeys to sharpen their eyesight so as to attain the perspicacity necessary to tell the difference between teeth breakers and appetite sharpeners.

The plant even reproduces, one might say, like a stone. Little stones are formed by big ones breaking apart, generally. That's how the plant procreates. It separates into two smaller stones which grow to proper size and in turn separate.

Yet these stone plants are only an example of the great camouflage of nature. One sees it in the "walking stick," which looks like a twig suddenly come to life; in the wings of the grouse, which imitate the color of autumnal leaves; in the countless bugs and moths that have adopted the color of the plant on which they are parasitical. And, by the same process, the opposite effect of atrophy of useless members of plant and animal life is observed. Men once had tails like monkeys. The ears of the house dog once were rigidly erect. But, nature did her own lopping off or wasted away that which was not needed.
