2nd storm blasts city

Forecasters expect 4 to 6 inches of snow to fall

■ Because high may only reach the mid-20s, snow won't melt as quickly as it did Saturday, NWS says.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland was expected to dawn a snowy scene this morning, as the first big snowstorm to hit Texas this year blasted the Panhandle Sunday night.

The storm, which dropped a foot of snow in Amarillo, was expected to dump 4-6 inches of snow in the Tall City early this morning, as the front began a southward path into the state.

Unlike Saturday's 3 inches of snow in Midland that melted away by late afternoon, snow falling today and tonight is expected to stick due to colder temperatures, according to a National Weather Service meteorologist at Midland International Airport.

Saturday night a winter storm warning was issued for the region between Lubbock and the Midland-Odessa area.

"Blowing snow should continue through Monday in Midland, and cold temperatures, no higher than the mid-20s should allow the snow to accumulate," the meteorologist said. "But it will warm up and the northern cold front should move out of Midland by Tuesday."

But for today, bundle up. Falling snow and gusty northeast winds up to 25 mph are expected to give Midlanders a real taste of winter. After a high of 52 on Sunday, today's high is not expected to break 26.

By nightfall the temperature is expected to drop to a low of a brisk 15, and this is discounting the windchill factor. The storm, which blanketed parts of the Panhandle in snow, is expected to move into Midland slowly.

Amarillo was already reporting up to 8 inches of snow by 8 p.m. Saturday.

Double time

Dallas wins second straight Super Bowl

By Michael A. Giarrusso
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Dallas Cowboys fans strutted and talked of a dynasty, while Buffalo Bills fans shuffled home Super Bowl losers for the fourth straight year Sunday night.

"It's going to be fine," said Tom Boyle, a Bills fan from Grand Island, N.Y., after his team lost to Dallas, 30-13. "We'll be back for a fifth time."

"How 'bout them Cowboys!" Barry Brewer of Dallas said. "We'll be back at least three more times."

Brewer, who paid $3,600 for two upper-level seats, was one of the lucky fans with tickets. Thousands of others loitered outside in a desperate — and often fruitless — search for tickets.

Steve Campbell, a Bills fan from South Bend, Ind., hadn't found a ticket two hours before game time, although someone offered to sell him one for $15,000.

"I thought he added a zero, but that's what he wanted," he said.

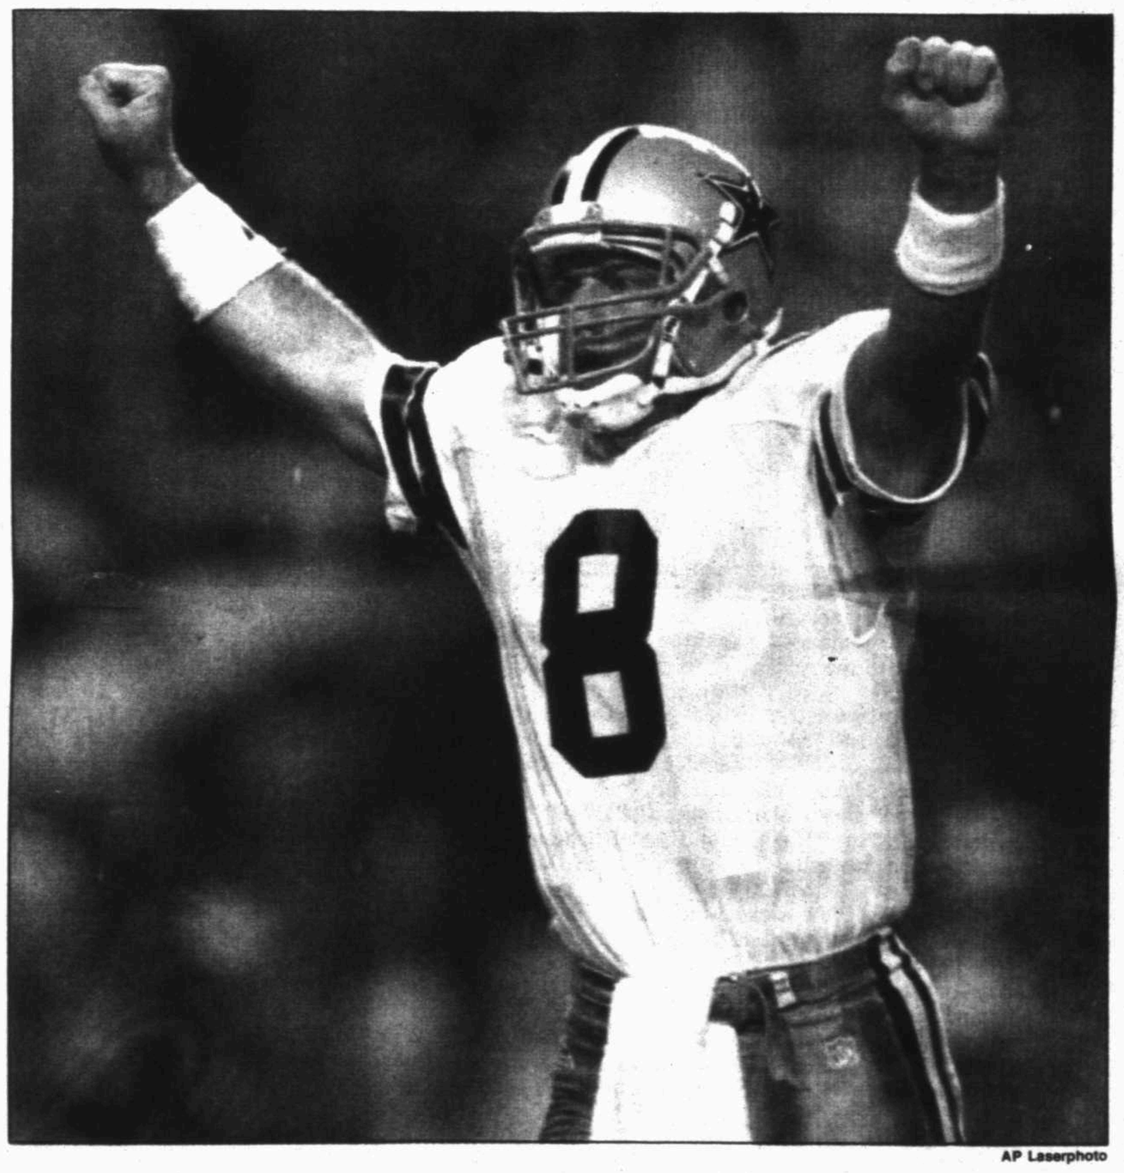

Temperatures were 40 degrees outside, but that made little difference in the climate-controlled dome.

"This is beautiful weather," Frank Budwey of Buffalo said. "Last week it was 32 below zero at home."

Outside the dome, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson and about 100 others protested the presence of the Georgia state flag, which includes the Confederate battle emblem.

"This is the Confederate swastika," said state Sen. Ralph

Taco Bell deaths

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. — Four employees of a Taco Bell restaurant were found shot to death Sunday in an apparent robbery. The employees, a man and three women, one of whom was pregnant, were each shot several times, police told the Clarksville Leaf-Chronicle. The restaurant safe had been blown open and 20 or more spent shells from two weapons, a shotgun and a 9mm pistol, were strewn about the restaurant, police said. The victims had been working the Saturday night shift. A manager noticed their cars in the parking lot when he arrived for work Sunday and called police. The bodies were found in two storage rooms, the newspaper reported. "I've seen some terrible things in my 28 years, but nothing this brutal," Tennessee Bureau of Investigations Special Agent Jim Taylor said. The employees were identified as Patricia Price, 28, Marsha Klopp, 22; Angela Wyatt, 22, and Kevin Campbell, 22. Ms. Wyatt may have been pregnant, police said.

Men remain jailed

Two Midland men charged with the murder of James Zachery remained in jail late Sunday night. Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bond for $50,000 for Terry Earl Stewart, 25, on Sunday. Stewart was also wanted for a federal parole violation, officials said. Duann Dwayne Stewart, 17 — no relation — also had not posted a $50,000 bond on Sunday. Both suspects were charged in connection to the death of Zachery, who died from a blunt force trauma to the head, according to a preliminary autopsy. There were no new developments in the case Sunday, according to police spokesman Sgt. David Garcia. A Dallas medical examiner is continuing autopsy tests on Zachery.

Forum to consider Midland's problem of juvenile crime

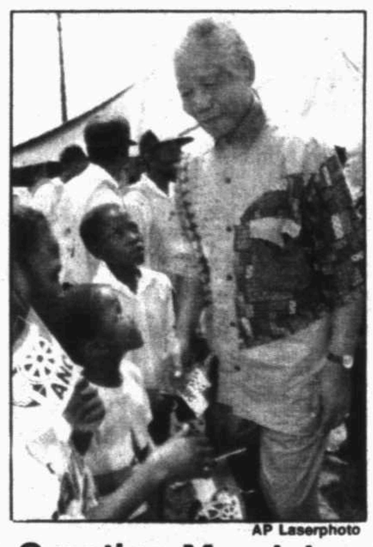

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Midland citizens are urged to join state lawmakers, teachers, school administrators and local criminal-justice officials in attending a public forum to deal with the growing problem of juvenile crime.

The City Council Parent Teachers Association is sponsoring the forum, which will allow citizens to ask questions and gain insight from a panel that is to include state representative Tom Craddick; Midland Independent School District Superintendent Joseph Baressi and some of his staff; judges John Hyde, Al Wolvoord and Robin Smith; Mayor J.D. Faircloth and other representatives of Midland's teachers, school board and law enforcement.

The forum is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 10 at the Lee High School Auditorium.

Arafat, Peres are ready to finalize agreement

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Yasser Arafat and Shimon Peres signaled today that they had reached a breakthrough in their bid to wrap up an agreement on Israel's withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho.

After negotiations that lasted into the early hours today, the PLO chairman said he and Peres, the Israeli foreign minister, would meet again in about a week in Cairo to finalize the deal.

Peres played down remaining differences and said he was more optimistic than ever before.

"There had been very complicated problems," said Peres. "We were able to negotiate many of them, maybe most of them."

When asked what the two sides disagreed upon, he laughingly said "the drafting."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa also told reporters that the PLO-Israel talks had cleared all the major hurdles. Egypt has been a key facilitator in the Mideast talks.

Israeli sources said the outstanding issues related to technical border questions. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said an outline agreement had been reached on the size of Jericho to come under Palestinian autonomy and on security questions — key problems that had stymied the talks.

Towns hope to lure road in their direction

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — West Texans south of Lubbock view a pending highway study as a paved route to prosperity.

Groups of cities and towns — in the broad swath from Pecos to Abilene — have teamed up to tout their locations as the best way to link Interstate 27 with I-10.

Boosters say a new north-south highway through West Texas could spur unprecedented economic growth and smoother access to oil fields, farms and air bases.

The attitude is "not so much do we need this facility, it's where are we going to put it?" said Will Hagood, senior vice president of HDR Engineering Inc. of Dallas.

The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation contracted Hagood's firm last month to study whether a new route of some sort needs to link Lubbock with curving I-10 from El Paso to San Antonio.

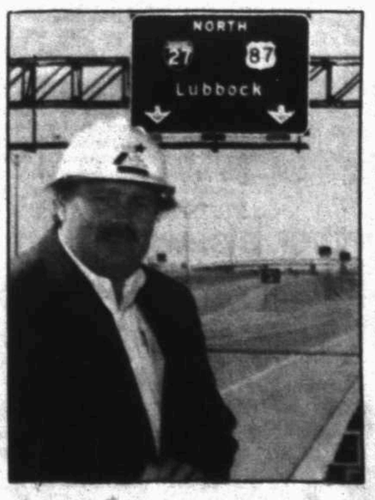

Officials say the route wouldn't necessarily be an interstate extending I-27, which currently runs the 120 miles from Amarillo to Lubbock.

A new highway could simply follow existing roads in some places, officials say, or blaze a new trail.

But it's a prospective trade boost tantalizing enough to cause some jockeying among neighbors.

"The most immediate gain would be increased trade with Lubbock and Amarillo," said Charles Perry, chairman of the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance.

TALKS: Peres says he's optimistic and business leaders from around the world.

(From 1A)

But they also met to negotiate some of the long-standing problems inhibiting implementaion of the PLO-Israel accord on granting autonomy to parts of the occupied lands.

"We are on our way to bypass all the obstacles which had been raised in the last weeks . . . to have very soon, very soon the final agreement to start directly the implementation of the peace agreements," Arafat told the World Economic Forum after a morning of talks with Peres.

During two days of talks, Arafat and Peres have shown a new friendliness during joint appearances in this snow-covered Alpine resort.

The PLO leader took Peres by the hand Sunday to lead him up the stairs to the stage for a joint appearance before economic forum.

The brotherly gesture contrasted with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's hesitation to shake Arafat's hand at the Sept. 13 signing of the Israeli-PLO accord that set up the current talks.

In Davos, Peres also translated into English questions for Arafat from a French reporter and enthusiastically shook hands with the PLO leader for photographers. Both leaders smiled and appeared relaxed together.

And the Israeli paid a tribute to Arafat that once would have been unthinkable, saying the PLO leader "personalizes the great suffering of the Palestinian people."

Among major issues in the negotiations between Arafat and Peres are security arrangments for the new Palestinian areas that will meet Israeli demands for keeping out terrorists while not infringing on the Palestinian sense of sovereignty.

Peres told Israeli television that both sides made sacrifices. "With all the concessions, each side was faithful to itself," he said.

The Israeli team had "conceded on issues of image, of feeling," he said, apparently referring to more Palestinian flags and a greater Palestinian presence at the borders of the autonomous zones.

He said the Palestinians "gave in on security issues." Israel has demanded it must have the powers to keep out terrorists from border crossings on the Gaza Strip and Egypt. The Palestinians have insisted this must not infringe on their sovereignty.

The issue of security was resolved by an agreement that would keep Israeli agents from being visible at border crossings, Moussa said, apparently referring to suggestions that they would be behind one-way mirrors.

Israel Radio cited Egyptian sources as saying there would be joint Israeli-Palestinian patrols in Gaza, apparently referring to securing roads to Jewish settlements.

Moussa said an agreement could be signed within 10 days in Cairo.

"This really is the final stage," he said, adding that all the major issues had been resolved and only some "finessing" remained.

After both sides reported a good start Saturday night and possible agreement by midday Sunday, the Israelis started emphasizing the many areas of disagreement that must be addressed before Israel will agree to pull its troops out of the areas to be ceded to the Palestinians.

Sunday's negotiations see-sawed frantically. In the evening, Arafat reportedly appealed to Turkish President Suleyman Demirel for help in putting pressure on Israel. The Palestinians apparently feared the Israelis might be backtracking on some promises.

STORM: Snow may last until Tuesday, according to NWS

(From 1A)

The accumulations around Amarillo made some roads near impassable, while the falling snow and a whipping northeast wind reduced visibility to less than one mile, a Lubbock meteorolgist said.

Department of Public Safety dispatchers in Amarillo said no roads were closed by nightfall, although travel was slow and hazardous. Some trucks had slid off the road, though no major accidents were reported, the DPS said.

Since it was Super Bowl Sunday, having poor road conditions wasn't such a bad thing for some professional drivers. The bad weather gave them a legitimate reason to stay inside and watch the Dallas Cowboys play the Buffalo Bills.

"We're putting a TV in the third dining room," said Carisa Lee, a cashier at the Petro Truck Stop near Amarillo.

Ms. Lee was worried about how she'd be able to get home in time for kickoff.

"There's just a ton of snow," she said. "I live in Canyon, which is about 30 miles away. I'm going to have to drive home at about 20 mph."

North Texas expected snow on Saturday and by Sunday night the region was still waiting. The weather service said it could begin falling overnight or Monday.

An overnight snow advisory was in effect, and snow was expected today with temperatures ranging from the mid teens to highs in the low 40s.

Other areas hit Sunday were Dalhart with about 6 inches and 4 inches in Plainview and Floydada.

South Texas, meanwhile, was relatively balmy by comparison. Temperatures reached into the 60s and could get that high again today, though overnight lows were expected to be in the 20s and 30s.

Midland's forecast for today is for blowing snow with accumulations of 4-6 inches, northeast winds 15-25 mph and gusty, and a high in the mid-20s, the NWS said.

Tonight's forecast calls for a 20 percent chance of more snow, mostly cloudy, with a low near 15.

Tuesday's forecast is mostly cloudy with a high in the mid-30s.

Yesterday's high was 52, compared to the record high of 80, set in 1971. The record low for today's date is 8, set in 1985.

NATION

Arctic air moved into the central United States on Sunday bringing freezing temperatures to the Plains and upper Mississippi Valley and snow to the Rockies and southern Plains.

A sharp frontal boundary extended across the central Florida Peninsula, bringing some snow to the mid-Atlantic coast and strong thunderstorms to Florida.

Snow and sleet fell from western North Carolina into Virginia and Maryland. Snow continued to fall across portions of the northern and central Rockies at midday. Snowfall amounts by early morning included 6 inches at Cripple Creek, Colo., and Wendover, Utah; 4 inches at Woodland Park, Colo.; and 2 inches at Monument, Colo.

Heavy snow fell in the Texas Panhandle. Up to 9 inches of snow accumulated by afternoon in Amarillo, Texas, 7 inches at Dalhart, Texas, and 4 inches at Plainview, Texas.

Snowfall amounts across New Mexico included: 8 inches near Mora and Gascon, 3 inches at Cimarron, Las Vegas and Santa Fe, and 1 inch at Clayton.

Early Sunday, sub-zero cold spread as far south as portions of the Central Plains and the middle Mississippi Valley.

Record lows were set in Duluth, Minn., 35 below zero; Huron, S.D., 29 below zero; Sault Ste Marie, Mich., 25 below zero.

The cold spot in the Lower 48 states Sunday morning was 42 degrees in Tower, Minn.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

DALLAS: Protesters oppose Georgia flag

(From 1A)

David Abernathy III, the son of the civil rights leader. "This flag offends every red-blooded American because it is a symbol of a dark period of American history."

About 60 reporters left the press box during the national anthem to protest the Georgia flag.

Nearby, about 75 people were protesting alleged attempts by Atlanta police to sweep homeless people from the streets during Super Bowl week. Anita Beaty, president of the National Coalition for the Homeless, said they were also protesting the use of tax dollars to build the Georgia Dome and other venues for the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta.

Police blocked off the protesters with barricades. Other barricades were put up surrounding the dome, and as kickoff approached, no one without a ticket was allowed near the stadium.

Security officials also blocked off all the prime parking lots around the dome. Many were still empty before the game, with just a few limousines carrying some of the celebrities in town for the weekend.

Among the stars sighted were Michael Jordan, Muhammad Ali, Frank Sinatra, Don Rickles, James Brown, Bobby Brown, Kevin Costner, Jack Kemp, the NBC "Today" show cast and Rush Limbaugh.

Georgia musicians provided a variety of music during the pregame festivities. Atlanta-based rap duo Kris Kross performed before country star Charlie Daniels played "The Devil Went Down to Georgia."

Natalie Cole sang the national anthem.

Country music stars took center stage during an 11-minute halftime show that featured the reunion of Naomi and Wynonna Judd, and hundreds of dancers wearing cowboy hats.

Clint Black, Tanya Tucker and Atlantan Travis Tritt also performed. Rhythm and blues artist Stevie Wonder joined the country stars on stage for the finale.

Fireworks capped the show.

Outside the Georgia Dome before the game, scalpers were numerous.

Bills fan Mark Piorkowski of Toledo, Ohio, said he was willing to pay about $600 for a ticket that had a face value of $175. A scalper offered him a ticket for $2,000, but Piorkowski declined.

'I was really proud of you,' Clinton tells team

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton, who watched the first half of Sunday's Super Bowl with a football on his lap, congratulated the Dallas Cowboys for showing "a lot of heart" in their 30-13 victory over the Buffalo Bills.

"I was really proud of you," the former Arkansas governor told owner Jerry Jones and Coach Jimmy Johnson, both University of Arkansas graduates. "I can relate to that getting down and coming back — and you didn't quit."

The president, who missed a good part of the game to attend a black-tie dinner for the National Governors' Association, spent the first half in an overstuffed chair beside Georgia Gov. Zell Miller. The Super Bowl was played in Atlanta.

Despite Arkansas' ties to the Cowboys, the president refused to take sides before the game.

"If both teams play as well today as they did last week, it's going to be the best Super Bowl in 20 years," Clinton said, cutting his first-quarter analysis short when the Cowboys recovered a fumble from the Bills.

"Penalty — Buffalo!," Clinton announced to no one in particular.

The president telephoned the winners' locker room after the game, and invited the team to the White House.

"You had a great, great day today," he told Jones and Johnson. "You played a good football team and they played a good first half, and you just came back and showed enormous character and strength and determination."

He added: "You showed a lot of heart tonight."

The president waffled on his Super Bowl choice last year, when the same two teams played. "I've got to be for (Dallas). Of course I am," Clinton said a month before the big game in 1993. But while watching last year's game, he refused to take a side, saying, "I have enough tough decisions to make."

Jones made his fortune in the oil and gas business in Arkansas, and was politically connected in Clinton's home state. Arkansas does not have a professional football team, and Dallas is about a five-hour drive from Little Rock, Ark.

ROUTE: Towns team up to lure highway

(From 1A)

"Secondly, it would create a better corridor of trade with Mexico. Third, an interstate highway is an excellent economic development tool."

Midland and Odessa head the westernmost camp, which recommends a route that cuts through the two big Permian Basin cities and then heads through Crane and McCamey.

To the east, Abilene joined forces with Sweetwater and Roscoe to lure the proposed route that direction.

And in the middle, Big Spring and San Angelo are promoting a straight shot to Del Rio.

Everyone mentions the North American Free Trade Agreement as a reason to improve roads to Mexico.

"The interstate highways in this country were mostly built going east to west," Perry said. "Not only do we need to add to I-27, we need to add other north-south routes."

"With NAFTA coming on line, it's a very viable project," said Abilene Chamber of Commerce President Charlie Dromgoole. "If NAFTA had failed, it probably would have been a mute point."

A federal act in 1991 earmarked $2.9 million for what is now called the "Lubbock to IH-10 Route Study."

The engineering firm hopes to narrow down the best corridor — a strip 10-15 miles wide — by Aug. 31. A precise route wouldn't be selected until August 1995.

Factors under study include the region's topography, environmental sensitivity and population centers.

FORUM: Craddick to attend Feb. 10 event

(From 1A)

The forum was organized to address growing concerns about juvenile crimes, said Amelia Belizaire, parent education coordinator for City Council PTA.

"Juvenile crime is becoming much more serious. We're not just talking about pranks anymore," Ms. Belizaire said.

The incidents of juvenile violence such as murder have reached frightening levels, except in Midland, Ms. Belizaire said.

"That's the kind of world our children are living in," she said.

The forum is designed to address the fears and questions of area citizens and hopefully find some solutions to the problem," she said.

"We hope to explore some of the mandates by which the school system and judicial system operate," Ms. Belizaire said. The event is an educational opportunity for the community, she added.

"We hope to shed some light on the problem of juvenile crime, which seems to be pervasive in our nation and to become part of the solution to this problem," she said.

The forum will begin with opening remarks from Baressi and a panel will take questions from the audience and direct them to the appropriate panel member.

The last part of the forum will be open dialogue between audience members and panel members, Ms. Belizaire said.

Father kills his children, police say

MIAMI (AP) — A father gunned down his three children and a family friend and injured his wife Sunday before killing himself.

Police said they didn't know William Gutierrez's motive for the rampage at the family's apartment.

He shot each of his children, ages 5, 4 and 1, in the head. Police said he killed the friend, an adult, with a shot to the chest.

His wife, Mary Diaz, 22, was shot in the arm. She was treated and released, said Jackson Memorial Hospital spokeswoman Adrienne Ferguson.

At the end of the shooting spree, Gutierrez, 31, shot himself in the head with the semi-automatic handgun. He died several hours later at the hospital.

"A shooting like this that takes the life of three kids 5 years old and under, it leaves a police officer speechless," police spokesman Dave Magnusson said. "There are no words. It just sickens you."

Magnusson said investigators were trying to determine the exact relationship between the friend and the Gutierrez family. The friend's name wasn't released.

"There was nothing to indicate that this was her (Mary Diaz's) boyfriend, nothing to indicate that he was nothing more than a friend," Magnusson said.

Group rejects offer of vote on white homeland

KHUMA, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress offered Sunday to let pro-apartheid whites vote for their own homeland — but said a black government would retain power to veto the results.

ANC President Nelson Mandela appealed to militant whites to accept the offer and avert bloodshed.

But the right-wing Afrikaner Volksfront angrily rejected the proposal and vowed to establish its own homeland by force if necessary to avoid living under black rule.

That militant stance could be fatal, Mandela told an adoring crowd of several thousand squeezed into a stadium in the black township of Khuma on Sunday.

"We know how to fight," he said, referring to the ANC's 30-year guerrilla war, suspended in August 1990 after the white government introduced reforms to end apartheid.

Under the ANC proposal, whites could vote April 27 on whether to establish a whites-only homeland. The ballot would be separate from national elections April 27-29 for a new, multiracial government. The ANC is expected to win those elections.

Whatever the outcome of the homeland vote, the newly elected government would have final say on the issue, a condition unacceptable to white extremists who have threatened war.

"I want to appeal to the right wing not to do anything that would drag our country into a conflict that would kill many innocent people, black and white," Mandela said. "We are appealing to the right wing not to talk about violence so easily. We know what war means."

The ANC, the government and their opponents, including the Afrikaner Volksfront and the black, Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party, were to meet again today in an attempt to end the differences that have raised fears of bloody conflict during the election campaign.

Inkatha and right-wing white groups fear domination by the ANC, which has overwhelming support among South Africa's black majority. They have demanded constitutional guarantees of ethnic autonomy for their followers before they agree to take part in the election. The ANC has refused, saying that would mean a return to apartheid-style homelands.

Inkatha, the ANC's main rival for black support, stopped short Sunday of calling an election boycott but said the party would not participate unless its demands for Zulu autonomy were met.

The Afrikaner Volksfront also is threatening to boycott the vote. It installed its own government Saturday to lead the fight for a white nation.

The offer of a separate vote on a white homeland was made during private ANC-Afrikaner Volksfront talks and was the furthest the ANC has gone toward meeting the group's demand.

The ANC appeared to be gambling on the white minority rejecting the proposal and putting its support behind a multiracial government, as it did during a 1991 whites-only referendum on reforms. In that vote, pro-apartheid white groups were dealt an embarrassing defeat when whites voted nearly 2-to-1 to continue talks on ending apartheid.

Mandela began an exhaustive schedule of what his aides call "American-style" campaigning Sunday with a sweep through the rural and largely conservative western Transvaal.

In Rustenburg, near the border of the Bophuthatswana black homeland, Mandela warned homeland leader Lucas Mangope that his days as head of the autonomous state were numbered. "He has only three months to lead," Mandela told the cheering crowd.

Bophuthatswana is one of four homelands recognized as independent nations only by South Africa.

Under a post-apartheid constitution, the homelands are to be reincorporated into South Africa after the April election. Mangope has outlawed the ANC in Bophuthatswana and vowed to resist reincorporation and keep his homeland out of the election.

The commander of the ANC's army, Joe Modise, warned of a possible military showdown if Mangope tried to keep residents of Bophuthatswana from voting.

In Khuma, near the mining town of Stilfontein, Mandela said private ownership of the country's mineral wealth would revert to state ownership under an ANC government. That policy has drawn sharp criticism from opponents who say it reeks of socialism.

Extremist warns West not to bomb Serbs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Russian extremist Vladimir Zhirinovsky warned the West not to follow through on threats to bomb Serb positions in Bosnia, saying Sunday it would be viewed as a declaration of war on Russia.

Zhirinovsky, who made a strong showing in Russian elections last year, was greeted with an outpouring of Slavic nationalism by frenetic supporters in Belgrade, the capital of Serbia and Yugoslavia.

He also declared support for Serb claims to parts of Croatia and Bosnia, and said U.N. peacekeepers should go home.

Serbs have captured about a third of Croatia and more than two-thirds of Bosnia since the former Yugoslav federation began breaking up in 1991. They have declared their own states in both places.

Zhirinovsky's trip to the troubled Yugoslav region coincides with increased talk of NATO air strikes against Bosnian Serbs. Earlier in Slovenia, a former Yugoslav republic, he said Russia should leave the United Nations if the North Atlantic Treaty Organization conducts air strikes in Bosnia.

In Belgrade, he warned "that bombing Serb positions would mean a declaration of war against Russia."

Hundreds of supporters jammed a press conference in a hall in one of Belgrade's biggest hotels, applauding wildly after nearly every sentence.

"Our attitude is that all Serb countries should be within Serbia and that pressure on Serbs must stop," he told the crowd.

He demanded that international sanctions against Serbia be lifted. The United Nations imposed the sanctions to try to stop Serbia from fomenting war in Bosnia and Croatia.

Serbs and Russians, both Slavs and Orthodox Christians, historically are close. Croats are traditionally Roman Catholic, and the Bosnian government is dominated by Muslims.

While Serb-dominated Yugoslavia is a pariah state for its support of Serbs fighting in Croatia and Bosnia, there is a larger degree of sympathy for it in Russia, especially among nationalists.

Yugoslav officials likely hope Zhirinovsky's visit will boost Serbs by showing them they are not alone. But they also apparently were trying to be careful not to antagonize the West by catering to Zhirinovsky. He did not meet the minister of minorities and human rights, Margit Savovic, as planned, in a sign the government did not want to make an official visit out of the private trip.

The nationalist arrived from Slovenia, a former Yugoslav republic, where he was asked to leave after reports his entourage had damaged property and caused disturbances during a drinking bout.

Zhirinovsky recently was ordered out of Bulgaria because of his extremist outbursts. Germany subsequently denied him a visa.

At Subotica near the Hungarian border Zhirinovsky downed a glass of wine and ate a piece of bread with salt — a traditional welcome.

He was greeted by a group of people as "the greatest friend if Serbs on Earth." They chanted "Serbia, Russia," and young Serbs in folk costumes danced to a traditional Cossack tune.

Zhirinovsky's private trip to Slovenia and Yugoslavia was organized by Vienna-based businessman Petar Ivanovic, a native of Montenegro, which remains part of Yugoslavia. He told reporters Zhirinovsky also would visit Pristina, capital of predominantly Albanian Kosovo province, and Podgorica, capital of Montenegro.

North Korea denounces U.S. plan to send Patriots

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea on Sunday denounced U.S. plans to bolster South Korea's missile defenses as a warlike move and said they must be scrapped if Washington hopes to reach agreement on inspections of the North's nuclear program.

"The United States and the South Korean authorities will have to take the full responsibility for the grave consequences to be entailed by their military steps," the official Workers (Communist) Party newspaper Rodong Sinmun declared. It did not elaborate.

Last week, the United States disclosed plans to send Patriot missile batteries to South Korea to boost defenses against a possible North Korean rocket attack.

Tensions already are high over the North's refusal to accept full international inspections of its nuclear facilities, a stand that has deepened suspicions that the country is developing nuclear weapons.

"The latest move of the United States is a very dangerous act which can be seen only on the eve of the outbreak of war," said Rodong Sinmun in a commentary carried by the North's official Korean Central News Agency, monitored in Tokyo.

It said North Korean self-defensive steps would be only natural, and "we love peace, but never beg for it."

North Korea has insisted that the nuclear inspection issue can be solved only in talks with the United States, with which it has no diplomatic relations. Progress in the two sides' talks, however, has been held up by disagreement in talks between the inspection agency, the U.N. International Atomic Energy Agency, over how inspections would be conducted.

"If the United States really wants to see the settlement of the nuclear issue on the Korean Peninsula, it must withdraw its nuclear weapons from South Korea, stop deploying new military hardware there, discontinue nuclear war exercises and come out to dialogue with sincerity," Rodong Sinmun said.

Police: Blackmail suspect may get ideas from comics

BONN, Germany (AP) — It might sound like quackery. But police say a wily blackmailer who has been eluding them for 20 months could be getting his ideas from cartoon ducks.

The criminal is a bomb-laying electronics wizard who calls himself "Dagobert," the German name for Donald Duck's Uncle Scrooge.

Dagobert detonated a pipe bomb at a Hamburg department store in June 1992. He has bombed two other stores since then, demanding money but only getting phony cash. No one was hurt in any of the bombings.

After several near misses, Berlin police almost caught Dagobert again this month.

Following Dagobert's instructions, police placed $800,000 on a battery-powered, shoebox-size contraption built to ride on a train rail.

As the device sped down the track, a police officer gave chase on a parallel road. But the contraption derailed and Dagobert vanished, without the cash.

Thorsten Gerber of Hamburg, a law student and comics expert, told Bild am Sonntag newspaper that the cartoon Dagobert once used a miniature train to transport gold coins.

The criminal Dagobert may also have borrowed an idea from Disney ducks Huey, Dewey and Louie.

He once told police to put money in a Berlin street sandbox. Instead, police put a package with a transmitter inside the sandbox, planning to follow the signals and finally get their man.

According to the German magazine Spiegel, Dagobert had sawed out the bottom of the sandbox and was hiding in a sewer hole underneath. He spotted the transmitting device and escaped.

Huey, Dewey and Louie also once used a false-bottom sandbox, Gerber said.

Avalanche kills 5 skiers, guide

ALBERTVILLE, France (AP) — Five British skiers and their guide were killed when their group was swept away by an avalanche in the French Alps, rescue officials said Sunday.

Only one member of the group survived the avalanche after spending Saturday night in subfreezing temperatures. Charles Ackner was in serious condition in a hospital in Bourg-Saint-Maurice, officials said.

The five skiers — all British doctors — were trekking through mountains above the ski resort of Val d'Isere when their weight brought down a wall of snow, Ackner said.

Ackner said he survived because he was the last one in line and the others were on a slope. He spent the night in a snow hole he dug in the mountainside.

Officials: Welfare cutbacks won't require 2.3 million new jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials are discounting a preliminary estimate that as many as 2.3 million jobs may have to be created for people who will be pushed off welfare under President Clinton's welfare reform plan.

The computer estimate, which has been under discussion at the Department of Health and Human Services, would require a massive public jobs program that Congress probably would oppose as too expensive.

Although administration officials acknowledged the preliminary estimate, they said the number has little significance because it is based on a false assumption about how many people actually will be on welfare when the new policy goes into effect.

"The 2.3 million number is irrelevant and misleading," said department spokeswoman Melissa Skolfield.

The estimate first was discussed at a Jan. 14 meeting at the Department of Health and Human Services.

One official who attended the meeting said the estimate was developed as a preliminary exercise to gauge what impact various policies would have on the size of the welfare rolls.

"It did not account for the effects of current policy, health reform or for other policies," said the official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified further.

The administration plans to propose to Congress this spring that welfare payments be limited to two years and that recipients must find a job after that. Currently there are an estimated 5 million low-income families, most of them single mothers, getting welfare under Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

The Clinton administration still does not know how many parents will be pushed into the job market after the two years expire, the official said. "It's certainly not going to be 2.3 million."

Clinton has said health-care reform will reduce the welfare rolls by 1 million families because mothers often choose welfare, which comes with health insurance, over minimum-wage jobs which often have no such benefits.

The official said that other steps that will shrink the welfare rolls are more aggressive efforts to collect child support payments, a campaign against teenage pregnancy, development of new training programs, and expansion of tax credits for low-income workers.

None of these efforts were taken into account in the early computer model used to develop the 2.3 million figure, which has been suggested is three to four times the number of new jobs the administration hopes will be needed under the welfare reform program, officials said.

But some welfare experts said the administration will may have difficulty reducing the number of welfare recipients.

It will require "a set of very dramatic changes in other policies," said Mark Greenberg, an attorney with the Center on Law and Social Policy, a private research and advocacy group.

"If all the other parts of the president's plan don't come together, the number (of needed jobs) could be significantly larger" than the administration would like, Greenberg said. Even with health care changes and other factors, "there may not be enough jobs in the economy for everyone who needs them," he added.

The preliminary estimate on how many jobs may be needed by women pushed off welfare was first reported Sunday by The New York Times.

The newspaper quoted an unnamed official who said, "They've always said this program is going to work so well that they wouldn't have that many people hit the two-year wall. Now they're beginning to see that this a real problem."

The official was described as an opponent of the work program who has argued it could cost a lot of money without helping the poor.

Historians recover WW II plane from bottom of Lake Michigan

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — It sank a Japanese warship in World War II and survived the Battle of Midway. Then the bullet-riddled dive bomber spent 50 years at the bottom of Lake Michigan.

The one-of-a-kind museum piece, complete with three machine guns, was hauled onto dry land early this month. The National Museum of Naval Aviation here is cleaning up the Douglas SBD-2 Dauntless for display.

"We knew it had a historic significance when we pulled it up, but we weren't really quite sure how historic," museum director Robert Rasmussen said last week.

"This is probably one of the more significant airplanes that we or any other museum in this country have been able to stick together," he said.

He showed a spot where MIDWAY was painted on the engine cowling.

Only a handful of World War II combat-flown planes of any kind still exist and no others from Midway have survived, Rasmussen said.

Museum officials located the pilot who won a Navy Cross for sinking a Japanese light cruiser in March 1942 while flying the plane, Bureau No. 2106, from the aircraft carrier USS Lexington.

Kevorkian kicks off drive from church's pulpit

LIVONIA, Mich. (AP) — Standing like a preacher on a candlelit, flowery pulpit, Dr. Jack Kevorkian began a petition drive to legalize assisted suicide by urging about 700 Sunday churchgoers to join his crusade.

Kevorkian needs more than 250,000 signatures to place a constitutional amendment on the November ballot. In a speech between services at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Kevorkian spoke of the "right not to suffer" and damned the "tyrants" who passed Michigan's law banning assisted suicide.

"It's almost an insult to put this on the ballot. It's an insult to human reason. Why? Because that right exists. We have to remind ourselves that right is there," said Kevorkian, who has been present at the deaths of 20 people since 1990.

The enthusiastic audience gave several standing ovations as Kevorkian, a 65-year-old retired pathologist, spoke in front of a tall wooden crucifix and an open Bible.

Two people holding Bibles over their heads briefly interrupted the program as one yelled, "This church has been cursed today!"

"As a Christian, I think it's a disgrace that he stood in front of the crucifix," Dave Reuschle of Plymouth said after the rally.

But others said Kevorkian's presence showed the church's open-mindedness. Kevorkian was invited to speak by Pastor Thomas Egglebeen, who said the belief of many Christians that suicide is a mortal sin is a fallacy borne of politics instead of theology.

"It's a hoax that's been hoisted upon us by the institutionalized church. It's just not true," Egglebeen said. "There are six or seven incidents in scripture where a suicide is reported and it's treated kindly and tragically. In no way at all is the person condemned."

The Presbyterian Church itself has taken no stand on the issue, but it does favor abortion rights, Egglebeen said. Archbishop Adam Maida of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Detroit has spoken out against Kevorkian and assisted suicide.

After the rally, hundreds of people stood in line to shake Kevorkian's hand, get his autograph or have their picture taken with him. Kevorkian was flanked by two bodyguards.

Kevorkian has been charged four times with breaking the law enacted last year specifically to stop him. Three charges have been dismissed, including two last week when a judge overturned the law as unconstitutional on technical grounds. After that ruling, Kevorkian was freed from house arrest and had an electronic tether removed.

Kevorkian is free on $20,000 bond on the one remaining charge.

The national Hemlock Society and the grassroots group "Friends of Kevorkian" have pledged to carry out the petition drive.

Meanwhile, a statewide telephone poll of 601 likely voters conducted by the Detroit Free Press found that 58 percent supported the concept of assisted suicide. Twenty-two percent believed it should be a crime. Sixteen percent said it is wrong but should not be criminalized.

U.S. government might lay off thousands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government may lay off thousands of federal workers later this year unless Congress approves an employee buyout plan to prompt voluntary departures, officials say.

The Clinton administration has wanted to offer workers as much as $25,000 apiece as an incentive to take early retirement or otherwise voluntarily leave their jobs. President Clinton during his campaign promised to cut the federal work force by 100,000 by the end of fiscal 1995.

But Congress so far has refused to provide money for the buyout program. The legislation stalled last year after the Congressional Budget Office estimated it would cost as much as $519 million over the next five years, largely because of higher pension costs.

Barry Toiv, spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, said that "reductions in force," or RIFs, as the government calls layoffs, are a last resort. But he added, "they are a possibility if they're needed."

"Certainly if the buyout legislation is not adopted, the possibility of RIFs becomes far greater," he said in an interview Sunday.

Toiv declined to estimate how many federal workers might lose their jobs, or in what departments and agencies workers will face the greatest risk of being cut involuntarily.

The Washington Post quoted unnamed administration officials in Sunday's edition as saying that the Agriculture, Interior and Transportation departments as well as the Office of Personnel Management are among seven department and agencies where tight budgets may require layoffs.

Government personnel officials have voiced concerns recently about a drop in the federal work force attrition rate.

Fed ready to raise interest rates, analysts say

By Martin Crutsinger
Associatded Press Writer

WASHINGTON — For President Clinton, the economic news could hardly be better — the fastest economic growth in six years, declining federal deficits and the best inflation performance in two decades.

But the big question is whether Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is about to step in and play the Fed's traditional role of party pooper.

Many economists believe that the central bank is about to start boosting interest rates to slow economic activity and keep inflationary pressures from getting out of hand.

Greenspan was scheduled to give the Fed's assessment of the current state of the economy to a congressional committee today, the first time he has done so since July. In addition, Fed policymakers will meet Thursday and Friday to review their interest rate policies and set targets for money growth for the new year.

Many analysts believe that the central bank is preparing to do something it has not done since 1989 — raise interest rates to dampen economic growth — and that Greenspan could set the stage for that change during his congressional appearance.

"There's a widespread opinion on Wall Street that the Fed will have to tighten at some point, perhaps soon," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch in New York. "If the Fed actually wants to do that, Greenspan is going to have to start explaining why."

That is certainly an explanation the Clinton administration would like to hear. The administration has made low interest rates the centerpiece of its economic program and sees no reason that with inflation remaining low, that situation has to change anytime soon.

When the government reported Friday that the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, expanded at a six-year high of 5.9 percent from October through December, the administration was quick to point out that one-third of that growth came from special factors.

It noted that very strong auto production and a rebound from the Midwest flood had together added about 2 percentage points to GDP growth. Officials said they still believed that the economy in 1994 would grow at a steady, but much slower pace, of around 3 percent, very close to the 2.9 percent growth turned in for all of 1993.

And administration officials took pains to point out that the fourth quarter growth spurt was accompanied by inflation increasing at its second-slowest pace in 26 years.

With the global economy still in the doldrums, with world oil prices falling because of soft demand and with continued weakness in labor markets, the administration insists that consumer prices this year will be as moderate as last year, when they rose just 2.7 percent, the best performance since 1986.

And despite the absence of inflationary pressures now, many private economists believe the Fed is getting ready to make a move. But they think this year's rate increases are likely to be modest because of a belief that the economic recovery is finally on a sustainable footing.

"It's an old-fashioned principal," said David Jones, an economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York. "If you push interest rates low enough and keep them there long enough, you will ultimately see an acceleration in demand."

Analysts noted that all of the economy's momentum in 1993 was supplied by interest-sensitive sectors of the economy, with spending on business capital goods, homes and big-ticket consumer products rising by 12 percent last year.

Many believe it will be growth in those sectors that will propel the economy forward in 1994 as well. That's why the administration is concerned that the Fed not raise interest rates so high that they choke off business and consumer borrowing in these areas.

On that score, private economists are offering reassuring forecasts. While many expect the Fed to begin raising interest rates as early as next month, they anticipate only a small increase.

Many are forecasting that the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other on overnight loans, will go up by only a tiny 0.25 percentage point. The funds rate has been at 3 percent since September 1992.

For the entire year, analysts believe there will be only two or three such small moves in the funds rate in 1994 as the Fed feels the need only to signal that it is vigilant.

"I think a slight amount of tightening would reassure the markets without harming the economy," Steinberg said. "If the economy slows to a more sustainable rate in coming months, the Fed will not have to do more."

Many economists are predicting that banks' prime lending rate, the benchmark rate for many consumer and business loans, will remain near its two-decade low of 6 percent for most of the year and that mortgage rates will hold steady as well.

The national average for 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages is currently 6.97 percent. Jones said he believed that rate would rise only slightly to 7.5 percent by the end of the year.

Russian cosmonaut will join five Americans on Discovery

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The planet's two space superpowers already have exchanged handshakes and hugs, shared borscht and cranberry sauce, and toasted with apple juice — 140 miles above Earth.

This week, 19 years after the Apollo-Soyuz docking mission, five American astronauts and one Russian cosmonaut will pick up in orbit where their predecessors left off.

Sergei Krikalev will become the first Russian to fly on a U.S. space shuttle when Discovery lifts off Thursday on a science mission.

Unlike Apollo-Soyuz, which brought three Americans and two Russians together in orbit in 1975, astronauts and cosmonauts will occupy the same ship from launch through landing.

"This to me is a real landmark, not just because Sergei's on our flight, but because our two countries are working together," said Discovery astronaut Jan Davis.

Both countries say the mission is only the beginning of many joint space ventures.

The ultimate goal is an international space station, to be built using launch vehicles from both countries. Construction is scheduled to begin in 1997 and the station is expected to house permanent crews by 2001.

The two countries agreed on the joint station late last year. They also agreed to 10 shuttle dockings with Russia's Mir space station, beginning in 1995, to exchange crews, do research and upgrade the aging Mir.

The deal expanded on a 1992 agreement that arranged for Krikalev's flight and for an American astronaut to fly on Mir for three months in 1995.

Altogether, five American astronauts are to spend a combined 24 months on Mir. And another Russian cosmonaut — Vladimir Titov, Krikalev's backup for Discovery's mission — already is training for a shuttle flight early next year.

NASA has trained Krikalev and Titov as full-fledged shuttle crewmen since their arrival in November 1992. Both are pros: Krikalev already has spent 463 days in space and Titov 368 days.

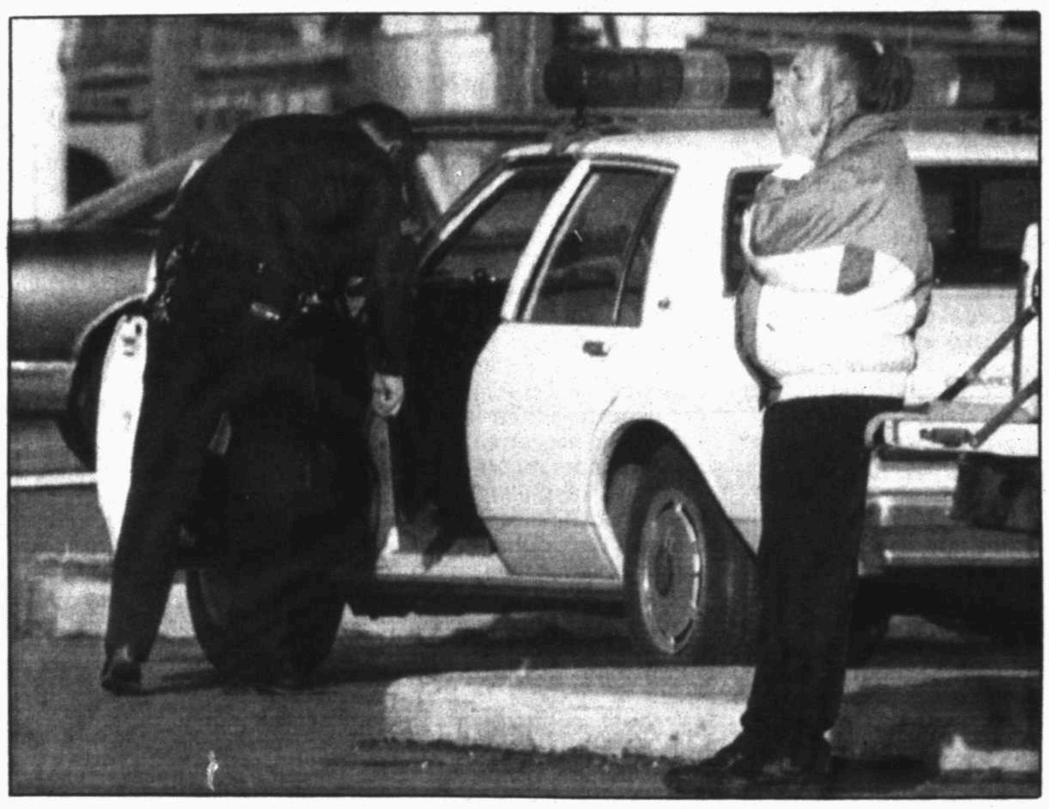

"What is most interesting part of this mission for me is flying on space shuttle itself," Krikalev said. "I have long period of time flying on Mir station. I flew on Soyuz vehicle. But this is new vehicle, new hardware, new experiments."

Marcia Smith, a specialist in space policy for the Congressional Research Service at the Library of Congress, said the cosmonaut and astronaut exchanges make for good foreign policy.

But she said it's risky to build a space station with the Russians given the country's political and economic instability.

"Apollo-Soyuz was not supposed to be a one-time deal. It was supposed to be a new era of detente. It was supposed to lead to other things . . . but it never did lead to anything at that time," Smith said. "The same thing could happen again."

Krikalev has the crucial job of using Discovery's robot arm to retrieve a satellite deployed by the crew during the eight-day mission. The satellite, called the Wake Shield Facility, is being flown to see if it can create an ultravacuum

Resisting attackers may not always help women, experts say

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — More than 60 percent of women who resisted an attacker verbally or physically think they improved their situation, but experts warn that it's hard to tell when fighting back will help.

Some 23 percent of women who resisted a rape, robbery or assault by arguing, reasoning or fighting back believed that self-protective behavior did not help their situation, and 16 percent weren't sure, according to a Justice Department study released Sunday.

The report comes as the case of Lorena Bobbitt, the Virginia woman who cut off her husband's penis, has expanded public debate over women who fight back. And Congress is working on a crime bill approved by the Senate with new rules of evidence for rape cases, funding for battered women's shelters and training for judges and police about family violence and rape.

The data on women who have resisted comes from 400,000 individual interviews during 1987-1991 with a nationally representative sample of women in the Bureau of Justice Statistics' National Crime Victimization Survey. The bureau estimated 2.5 million women a year were victims of violent crime.

But Dean Kilpatrick, director of the Crime Victims Research and Treatment Center at the Medical University of South Carolina, pointed out that a small but important minority — the 5,000 or so women murdered in each of those five years — were not available to be asked whether they resisted their attackers.

"What if you knew more than 60 percent found resisting left them better off, 20 percent or so were worse off, but some were killed resisting? What would you do?" the clinical psychology professor asked.

"It would be great if there was an easy answer to the question of when to resist. But it's difficult because it depends on the situation, and each woman faces a unique situation with unique circumstances."

If someone's intent is clearly to kill, a woman might as well resist, Kilpatrick said.

"But some sadomasochists are inflamed to greater violence by resistance," he added. "Broad generalizations are not useful."

Kilpatrick and Diane Alexander, assistant director of the National Victims Center in Arlington, Va., agreed that the results of the Justice study support a trend in recent years away from uniformly advising women not to resist attacks.

"That's why there's been a boom in self-defense courses," Ms. Alexander said.

The best of these courses do not advise fixed responses, like "five things to do to stop a rape," she said. "You have to use basic instincts. It depends on the person, on the situation and on the rapist's motivation."

Sometimes that motivation is unexpected, Ms. Alexander said. She recounted the case of a rapist who had preyed on a hospital nursing staff but came to the defense of a nurse being attacked by a robber. "He saw that attack as harming the woman but didn't recognize that his own actions were harmful."

The Justice study found that four out of five women took some protective action when their attacker was an intimate or other relative; just under three out of four did so when an acquaintance or stranger attacked.

Women victimized by an intimate or another family member were about twice as likely to put up a physical defense compared to those assaulted by a stranger. They were most likely to argue or reason with attackers who were strangers.

Women attacked by an intimate — boy- or girlfriend, spouse or ex-spouse — were injured 59 percent of the time, but less than half that, 27 percent of the time, when attacked by a stranger.

The report said the incidence of injury was reversed in the case of rape: Strangers caused injury far more often, 60 percent of the time, than those known to the victim.

'Deal' smacks of superstar justice

The civil settlement between Michael Jackson and the 14-year-old boy who claims Jackson molested him settles none of the disturbing questions that have been raised about the singer's conduct. It only raises equally troubling ones.

Legal experts believe the agreement could thwart any criminal case against Jackson, and that should cause the public to wonder whether Jackson bought something — namely, silence from a potentially incriminating witness — that most people in legal trouble cannot afford.

By law, the out-of-court settlement, rumored to include payments of at least $15 million, cannot include anything that would impede a criminal case against Jackson — such as an agreement that would keep the boy from testifying at a trial.

But it strains credibility to think that a person facing possible criminal prosecution would pay millions of dollars to an alleged victim without at least assuming he would be getting something tangible in return — such as the victim's tacit agreement not to testify.

Entertainment attorney Steve Gelfand put it bluntly in an interview with Daily Variety: "It's hush money," Gelfand said. "The last thing Jackson wants is the specific acts detailed by the boy in a public record, as it would be if the criminal aspect went to trial. This way, the boy is happy and the investigation has been for all intents and purposes thwarted."

Jackson's lawyers say their client agreed to the deal so he could get on with his life. Perhaps. But as a general rule, people who profess their innocence do not agree to settlements that leave a cloud of suspicion hanging over their heads. That's particularly true of celebrities who have reputations to guard and who want to discourage similar lawsuits in the future.

Child molestation cases, like others involving sex crimes, tend to turn on the testimony of the alleged victim, often with little corroborating evidence. A case can evaporate without such testimony, and California law prevents courts from forcing alleged victims to testify through threat of imprisonment. That means the truth about what Jackson did or didn't do may never be revealed in a court of law or any other public arena. It seems that a double standard of justice is at work here for the rich and famous.

Russian leader may be KGB crony

WASHINGTON — U.S. intelligence sources now believe that Russian ultranationalist Vladimir Zhirinovsky was once a KGB "asset," and that much of his current financial support comes from elements of the old KGB and the current Russian intelligence service.

Anderson

Zhirinovsky's Liberal Democratic Party won a quarter of the vote in last December's parliamentary elections, more than any other political party. It rang alarm bells across the world, because Zhirinovsky's stands include threatening war with Germany, Japan and even the United States.

The latest volley against Zhirinovsky came from the respected reformist mayor of St. Petersburg, Anatoly Sobchak, who alleged in a recent interview with a Russian newspaper that Zhirinovsky was a "reserve" KGB captain who created the LDP in 1990 at the behest of his bosses.

Unfortunately, Sobchak offered no documentation to support his charges and gave details of which he could have no intimate knowledge. These include statements made in closed-door meetings of the Politburo during the Gorbachev era. Sobchak has been a long-time opponent of Zhirinovsky.

Sobchak claims his information was culled from "trustworthy" sources, and his statements may not be far off the mark. CIA sources shared part of a classified profile of Zhirinovsky with our associate Dale Van Atta:

Zhirinovsky spent his early years at Moscow State University's Africa and Asia Institute, a KGB-affiliated section of the university that trained some of its most gifted agents in foreign languages and cultures. The CIA believes this is when he may have been initially recruited. He would have been an attractive find because of the early facility he showed for languages. Zhirinovsky is reportedly fluent in English, French, German and Turkish.

Later he excelled as an interpreter in Turkey, where he worked his way up from a low position at the local Soviet Cultural Center to a top position with a Russian trade delegation. The fact that he was allowed to work abroad in the '70s after college, especialiy in a NATO country, would have required KGB permission at a minimum. Turkish journalists have since established that he was arrested for making "Communist propaganda and distributing Lenin badges" during his stint there, though Zhirinovsky claims he never officially joined the Communist Party.

The most compelling evidence against Zhirinovsky, however, surround the 1990 formation of the Liberal Democratic Party, which was the first opposition party allowed in the Soviet Union. There are three undeniable facts about this:

First, intelligence reports claim that the KGB was busily looking for agents to form political parties once it was clear Gorbachev was going to allow multiple parties.

Second, within months, several key supporters in the LDP leadership quit the party, claiming Zhirinovsky was a KGB agent.

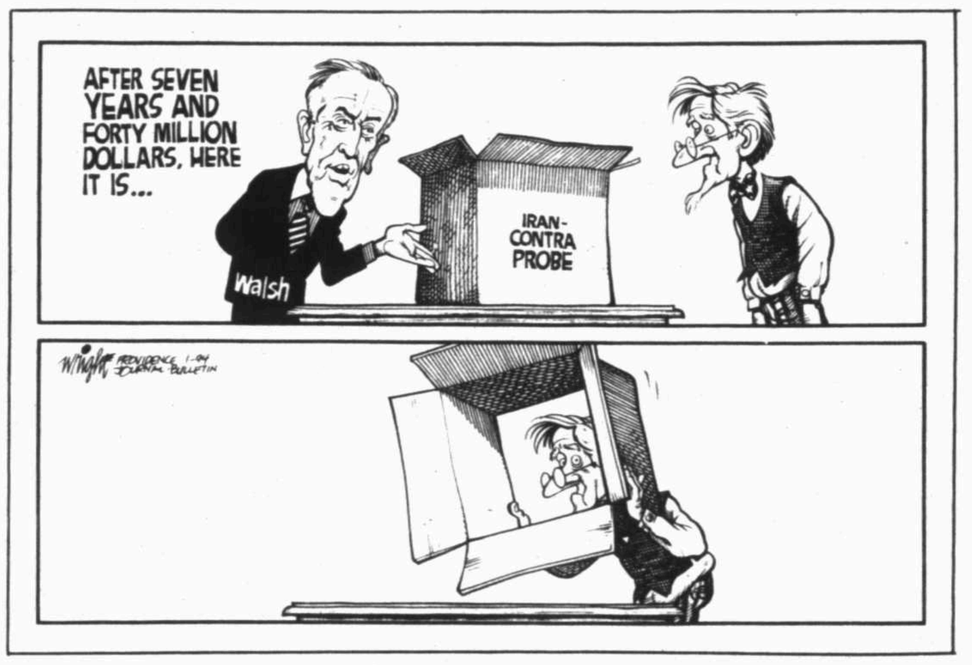

Just two weeks before the 1991 coup attempt that drove Gorbachev from office, Zhirinovsky met with then-KGB Chairman Vladimir Kryuchkov.

Zhirinovsky has also vowed that if he ever becomes president, beating Boris Yeltsin in an election, he would revive the KGB.

Experts are still divided whether Zhirinovsky's sudden rise in Russian politics is a fleeting diversion or a serious harbinger of worse things to come. But one thing is becoming increasingly clear: If Zhirinovsky ever gains executive power, he is likely to bring the most unsavory elements of the old Communist regime with him.

Americans could lose all to ignorance

One of the problems with multiculturalism is that too many Americans aren't educated about their own culture.

There's nothing wrong with learning about other cultures. In fact, you should learn about other cultures after you have learned about your own. But there is plenty wrong in learning about other cultures instead of your own.

Reese

All the institutions of American government are derived from our European culture. None come from Africa or Asia or from Native Americans. The ignorance of American and European culture was reflected recently in an otherwise excellent Turner Broadcasting film about the Iroquois. In it, it was implied that our forefathers derived the idea of the U.S. Constitution from the Iroquois Confederation.

This is one of those preposterous products of the pothead pseudo-intellectuals of the 1960s. It's not even worthy of comment except to point out that only a person nearly 100 percent ignorant of American and European history could make such a dumb statement.

Tribal alliances for the purpose of making war against other tribes are as old human history. The superbly educated authors of the American Revolution had nothing to learn from a primitive tribal alliance. Try Montesquieu's "Spirit of the Laws" instead. The American Revolution was the culmination of a great intellectual ferment that began in Europe with the Renaissance.

No one can said to be educated about Western European culture who hasn't read "Spirit of the Laws," or "On Liberty," by John Stuart Mill or "The Social Contract" by Jean Jacques Rousseau. No one can be said to be educated about American history who hasn't read "The Federalist Papers."

We are today — in the twilight of the 20th century — more illiterate and generally less well-educated than Americans of the 18th and 19th centuries. The Frenchman Alexis De Toqueville remarked that in his travels through America in the 1800s, almost every frontier cabin — no matter how humble — contained two well-worn books: the Bible and a volume of Shakespeare. A Frenchman touring today would find a television set and Nintendo.

Thomas Jefferson spoke the truth when he said you need not expect to remain free and ignorant. Virtually all the problems that beset us today — including the deficit and public debt — are basically a result of our general ignorance of our own history and of the philosophy and principles of the American Revolution. Unless we educate ourselves and reverse the process, our dwindling liberties will soon be nonexistent.

Liberty, pure and simple, is the freedom to make decisions. Laws, pure and simple, are a restriction on the freedom to make decisions. Americans have been somewhat beguiled because their freedom to make decisions has been restricted over a period of time in little bits and pieces, rather than in one fell swoop. But death by a thousand small cuts is just as dead as death by one, forceful chop.

And the tendency is clearly obvious: It is toward more restrictions and less liberty, and we had better decide soon if we wish to be free or wish to be serfs.

To be free involves risk, for it means we must assume responsibility for our own lives. The subtle siren call of the oligarchs are, "Relax, we'll take care of you." That's true. The slaveowner took care of his slaves for the same reason he took care of his livestock. He fed and sheltered them, just as he did his livestock, and if they got sick, he doctored them, just as he did his livestock. The question is, do you wish to be a human being or livestock? If you wish to be human, you must take care of yourself.

The first step is to educate yourself about your own Revolution.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Barbecue cures appetite that's lost due to illness

The doctors have said eat. The reason they have said that is I weigh 11 pounds.

Actually, that's not true. I weigh 11 pounds naked. When I put on the clothes it takes to sheild me from this recent heinous freeze, I weigh 24 pounds.

Grizzard

Still, that's pretty thin for a 6-1 frame, so the doctors have told me to pig out.

I don't have any diet restrictions. People think I should have diet restrictions because I have to have heart surgery every three months or so. But what is wrong with my heart has nothing to do with what I eat, so I can eat anything I want.

The trouble has been, after three weeks in the hospital and an entanglement with an aneurysm in my innards, I haven't wanted to eat.

My friends have tried.

Usually, when people bring food to the house in that quantity, it means somebody's dead.

Elvis is dead. I merely look like I should be.

Then, Dudley and Camilla came to see me. I go back to Eisenhower with both of them. They came from down home in Coweta County, Georgia.

They wanted to know if there was anything they could bring me to eat.

I had an idea.

"Sprayberry's," I said.

Ah, Sprayberry's. It's located in Newnan, Ga., and it is merely the best barbecue joint on Earth.

I'm fussy about my barbecue. If it's not pork, it's not barbecue. You don't put coleslaw on barbecue. The sauce should never be sweet. If a barbecue place also serves a seafood salad, you can figure the barbecue isn't going to be very good.

Dudley and Camilla came with 5 pounds of Sprayberry's barbecue.

"I'll eat what I can," I said.

I put some sliced meat between two slices of King Thin white bread. I splashed on some of Sprayberry's sauce — tangy, not sweet. I piled several spoonsful of the stew on my plate and had at it. It all went down splendidly.

"I think I'll have another sandwich," I said.

"Grizzard Goes Back for Second Helping!" Nourishment News would scream out in headlines the following morning.

Not only did I eat two barbecue sliced pork-pig sandwiches, I had another helping of the stew and then a large portion of the lemon pie.

I suppose Dudley and Camilla just knew. They knew a man reared on Sprayberry's barbecue could not right himself gastronomically without first returning to his barbecue roots.

After eating, I felt stronger than I had in weeks. The appetite was back.

I might have turned a corner here, and how the Lord has blessed me with friends.

Collider's political monument

I read with interest the article on the front page of Monday's paper (Jan. 24) concerning the governmental expenditure of $2 billion, and then the abandonment of the super collider project down by Waxahachie.

I don't know why everyone is so upset. That $2 billion hole in the ground is more than we've gotten out of most government ventures, and we can see it. Maybe we should encourage them to spend another $10 million putting up a sign, making a monument to politicians.

Rep. Smith OKs abortion

Congressman Lamar Smith has tried to straddle the fence too long on the abortion issue. Because of his voting record in Congress, I can no longer let him get away with it.

Recently Philip Barron accused him of voting federal funds to provide abortions through Planned Parenthood. Smith's chief of staff, John W. Lampmann in his letter of last Sunday (Jan. 23) claimed that this is not true. This may be technically correct but in 1991 alone, he voted tax dollars to fund abortion activities in seven separate House bills according to National Right to Life.

He voted to give foreign aid for "Population Control" with no restrictions on its use (funding abortions.)

He also voted to fund family planning clinics under the Title 10 program which would have allowed the clinics to sell their clients on having an abortion. I was told by his local assistant over the phone at the time that he was opposed to abortion but thought it was all right for tax-funded "Health Clinics" to recommend an abortion. Planned Parenthood, the nation's largest provider of abortion services, fought hard to keep the support of federal tax dollars and still be able to counsel toward abortion. Fortunately, President Bush vetoed the measure after it passed. Lamar Smith promotes abortion by his actions in Congress and cannot be considered to be in the pro-life camp.

The other pro-abortion bills he voted for are part of the Congressional Record. Anyone can check the record that bears out the fact that he is not what he says he is.

If you believe in the sanctity of human life and want to protect it, then be sure you know what your candidate stands for. Pro-lifers have a chance to replace Smith the next time they vote.

Governors demand funds for illegal immigrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Governors demanded Sunday that the federal government pay the medical, education and prison costs of illegal immigrants and warned President Clinton not to require jobs for welfare recipients before states can cut off benefits.

Impatient with Washington's health-care calendar, leaders of the National Governors' Association also sought more leeway to launch their own reforms, seeking more flexibility to experiment with Medicaid and new authority to tax and regulate health benefits offered by large employers.

And they also criticized a centerpiece Republican prison-building provision in pending crime legislation, saying it improperly meddled in state affairs.

On a busy, first full day of their annual meeting, the governors were assured by the Clinton administration that its welfare reform initiative would "pay for itself" and would complement, not interfere, with state welfare experiments. Later, President Clinton feted the governors at a black-tie dinner in the State Dining Room.

Taking a shot at the Washington establishment, Clinton commended the governors for "talking seriously about issues, presuming one another's good faith, searching for honest answers, disagreeing based on principle — not personal or political factors. We could use a lot more of that here in Washington.

"I hope your spirit pervades this place," the former Arkansas governor said in toasting the state executives.

South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, a Republican, told Clinton, "Although on occasion we may disagree on the methods of doing things, we will do it on the highest plane."

Seeking to appease critics of the White House welfare reform efforts, Mary Jo Bane, an assistant secretary of health and human services, told governors earlier Sunday that the administration had no estimate yet as to how much it would cost to find private-sector jobs or create publicly funded ones for welfare recipients.

Several governors said states would not be able to afford the plan if finding jobs for welfare recipients was as absolute precondition to limiting benefits to two years.

Oklahoma Gov. David Walters, a Democrat, told Bane the White House should "not make it a precondition that we guarantee a job because we can't."

"Put a time limit on it and mean it," said North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, another Democrat. "We will make it work in a humane way."

For years, the governors have complained about mandates passed on to the states by Washington without federal money to implement them. That is a major worry of the governors on health care reform, and increasingly in the area of immigration because of the soaring costs of services states are required to provide illegal immigrants.

"The federal government has imposed upon the states an entitlement program for illegal immigrants in a number of areas," said California Gov. Pete Wilson, the architect of the new NGA immigration policies. But with little or no federal money to cover the costs, Wilson and other governors said they were forced to trim essential services to legal residents.

"We shouldn't have to plead," Wilson said. "It is a federal responsibility."

One of the health-care policy amendments demanded that states no longer be forced to pay, under Medicaid, up to 50 percent when illegal immigrants are given emergency medical care.

And the association's Human Resources committee approved a toughly worded statement demanding that the federal government either provide federal prison space for illegal immigrants convicted of crimes, or reiumburse states for their costs.

The new policy statement also demanded reimbursement for educating the children of illegal immigrants, as is required by a 1980s Supreme Court decision.

"The only reason these immigrants are in the country is because of the failure of the federal government to control the border," Wilson said.

In addition to Wilson, a Republican, the Democratic governors of Texas, Florida and New York are leading advocates of the new policies. The governors hope to enlist Clinton's support for their effort during meetings with the president Monday and Tuesday, but are skeptical because of the federal budget crunch.

It was also the governors's opposition to federal mandates that brought the criticism of a Senate crime bill provision calling for construction of 10 regional federal prisons.

Sponsored by Texas GOP Sen. Phil Gramm and now a centerpiece of the Republican anti-crime agenda, the provision would allow states to use the regional prisons, but only if they adopted "truth in sentencing" laws requiring felons to serve at least 75 percent of prison terms.

While saying they would welcome additional prison space, the governors said the sentencing requirement was an intrusion on their right to set state crime policies.

North blames 'lies' during Iran-Contra on Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate hopeful Oliver North blamed former President Reagan on Sunday for the lies North told members of Congress in the Iran-Contra scandal.

North acknowledged during an appearance on CBS News' "Face the Nation" that he had lied to members of the House Intelligence Committee who were inquiring in 1986 about reports North was involved with assisting the Nicaraguan Contras.

North denied to the lawmakers that he was assisting the rebels. In fact, at the time the White House staffer was running a clandestine operation to keep the Contras supplied with weapons during a congressional ban on U.S. military assistance.

"I was asked questions that I had been told from the president of the United States could never be revealed, OK?" the former National Security Council aide in the Reagan White House said in explaining why he lied.

"Who made you do it?" host Bob Schieffer asked.

"Well, the president of the United States," North replied. He noted that Reagan had secretly requested money for the Contras from the government of Saudi Arabia — and that the president told his top advisers such assistance should never be revealed.

North is seeking the Republican nomination for the Senate seat from Virginia held by Democrat Charles Robb.

In the interview, North played down his misstatements to the House members — which came during a meeting in the White House Situation Room on Aug. 6, 1986.

North called it "an informal, off-the-record" discussion .

Bush, Baker get Germany's highest award from Kohl

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Bush and former Secretary of State James A. Baker III received the Order of Merit, Germany's highest award, from Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Sunday.

"Mr. Chancellor, to this unemployed, retired guy you've given us one heck of a day," the former president told Kohl before a gathering that included officials of his administration.

Kohl emphasized the contribution of Bush and Baker to the reunification of Germany and the destruction of the Berlin Wall.

Bush, who now rarely speaks in public, explained a bit of history:

"I remember when the Berlin Wall fell ... Some thought I was being unemotional and too restrained for not going to Germany to celebrate and express how the American people felt. In my view that would have been disastrous. What we did do was begin to work even more closely with this principled chancellor of Germany to facilitate the reunification of Germany . . ..

"And if we had overreacted or if we had misread the Soviets in all of this, or forced them into a position that might have felt good for the U.S., we could have well inhibited the eventual reunification that means so much to Germany and certainly means so much to the United States."

Among the guests were Brent Scowcroft, who was Bush's national security adviser; retired Gen. Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Elizabeth Dole, former secretary of transportation and now president of the American Red Cross; her husband, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.; and Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas.

Educators, community leaders eye new U.S. education goals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drawing maps of a community, understanding the difference between solids, liquids and gases, performing folk dances from around the world — they're just a few of the academic standards being proposed for children leaving fourth grade.

Educators, community leaders and academics are drawing up similar voluntary standards for subjects ranging from math to languages and history to the arts.

The standards would establish what students should know after finishing grades 4, 8 and 12, and fulfill one of the national education goals adopted in 1989 by then-President Bush and the nation's governors.

The Senate is expected to consider legislation this week that would write into law the education goals and the panel overseeing their implementation, and provide $400 million in federal grants for states and local governments that want to reform their education programs. A version of the legislation already has passed the House.

Education Secretary Richard Riley has traveled around the country campaigning for the Goals 2000 legislation, and the Senate version of the bill has bipartisan support, including that of Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, the ranking Republican on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

There have been rumblings that some Republicans might try to block passage to avoid giving President Clinton a victory on a bill that had its origins in a Republican administration.

Opponents say the legislation gives the federal government too much control over education, traditionally a state and local issue. But even they expect it to pass.

"It is essentially an attempt to use a benignly titled program to nationalize the educational industry," said Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H.

"Traditionally the federal government has not tried to design or dominate the way education is delivered at the elementary and secondary school level," he said. "Parents know best what their children should learn and local principals and teacher know best how to teach it."

Gregg plans to introduce several amendments, including one to ensure that the standards are truly voluntary and one that would bar lawsuits seeking to force communities to adopt them.

The legislation also is likely to attract amendments on such controversial issues as tuition vouchers for private schools and prayer in public schools.

Riley calls the legislation the "fundamental centerpiece for all educational reform in the Clinton administration."

"We expect children to learn more and better," he said earlier this month. "We absolutely believe all children can learn."

Report: State parole system needs more repair

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The number of prisoners paroled have decreased over the past three years, but the system is still a mess, says one prison board member, allowing thousands of murderers and other violent criminals to roam the streets.

"The criminal-justice system in Texas is still broken even though there have been great strides to improve (prison) capacity," said San Antonio lawyer and Texas Board of Criminal Justice member Allan Polunsky.

"A lot of people have no faith in the system. They are upset and I don't blame them."

In San Antonio, nearly 4,000 convicted felons are living freely, having been paroled after serving only a fraction of their prison sentences, the San Antonio Express-News reported in Sunday's editions.

Among the 1 million people living in the city, eight have been convicted of capital murder, 61 of murder and about 800 have been convicted of rape or other violent crimes.

While thousands of parolees are living in communities around the state, statistics show the parole board has actually been reducing the number of prisoners paroled in recent years as the state continues building new prisons.

In 1993, 20,794 were paroled. That's a decrease from 23,486 in 1984, according to figures provided by the pardons and paroles office. In 1990, paroles peaked at 38,041.

The state's parole system has made front-page news in past years with such controversial releases as those of Raul Meza and Kenneth McDuff.

Meza was mandatorily released from prison after serving 11 years of a 30-year sentence for the rape and murder of 8-year-old Kendra Page of Austin in 1982. After being run out of several Texas towns, including San Antonio and Uvalde, Meza now is under parole supervision in Austin.

McDuff, sentenced to death in 1966 for the shooting deaths of two teen-age boys and the rape-strangulation of their young companion, was twice paroled after his sentenced was commuted to life in prison. Last year, he was convicted in the 1992 slaying of a Waco convenience store clerk and returned to death row. McDuff is currently on trial.

Alamo City carjacker loses, courtesy of car's stick shift

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man whose alleged carjacking attempt was foiled in part because he didn't know how to drive a stick shift was recovering from a gunshot wound Sunday and faced several serious charges.

Jerome Larry Carr, 19, was in stable condition at Brooke Army Medical Center. He was shot in the back Friday night by an off-duty police officer.

Carr was charged by proxy with attempted capital murder and aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. Magistrate Mary Elizabeth Fuentes set bond at $100,000.

According to police reports, Carr approached a woman around 10:30 p.m. Friday in a night club parking lot.

The woman, driving a new Volkswagen Jetta, said a man approached her as she was getting out of her car and put a gun to her head. She reportedly gave the keys and fled to another nearby club.

A doorman and the woman returned to the lot, where they noticed the car's window wipers going and the car "hopping like when you try to start it in gear without the clutch being pushed in," according to the police report.

When Detective Gregory Charleville, approached the scene, the gunman started to flee.

"As he (the suspect) was running, he pointed the gun at the officer," Brown said. "Charleville shoots one time and hits him."

Richards, GOP counterpart agree on many issues

By Herb Jackson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Gov. Ann Richards and a Republican counterpart ended up agreeing more than disagreeing during a nationally televised discussion on health care, welfare and crime proposals offered by President Clinton last week.

Appearing on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," Richards, a Democrat, and New Jersey Gov. Christie Whitman both challenged positions put forward by their respective party's leaders in Washington.

Each argued that states need more freedom to pursue their own solutions.

At one point, after Richards said federal welfare reform would not work "until they get the boot off the necks of the states," ABC reporter Sam Donaldson asked, "Wait, which one is the Republican here?"

Whitman and Richards both expressed concern that federal "reforms" — especially mandates on small businesses — could endanger economic recovery in their states.

Clinton's health plan would require all businesses to provide insurance for their employees, something business advocates and many politicians say will lead to layoffs.

Richards said business coverage should be optional in the new purchasing collectives the Clinton plan envisions, and any mandates from Washington should be phased in.

She and Richards also said welfare must be reformed at the same time.

Financial ills? Look to the inner you

N.Y. Times News Service

■ Curing personal financial problems may be easier if behavior — rather than checkbooks — are examined.

By Mary Rowland
N.Y. Times News Service

Improving personal finances was the No. 1 New Year's resolution by Americans for 1994, reported John C. Norcross, a professor of psychology at the University of Scranton. He began studying resolutions a decade ago, and this was the first time that financial matters took the top spot on his list.

"There was a decisive move away from losing weight and quitting smoking to improving finances," Norcross said. The professor, whose study was conducted this year in conjunction with Gallup, said that money concerns reflect the hard times of the last few years.

Although Norcross did not look at what Americans plan to do, another expert, who specializes in personal bankruptcies, has some advice.

Tahira K. Hira, a professor of personal finance and consumer behavior at Iowa State University in Ames, contends that people with serious financial problems might do better examining their behavior than their checkbooks.

Ms. Hira has spent several years looking for similarities among people who get into financial difficulties, particularly those who file for bankruptcy. In the process, she has studied personal bankruptcies in Scotland, Japan, the United States and Canada.

"Although people who get into financial trouble come from all walks of life, there are some very consistent patterns," Ms. Hira said. Many of them had weak family relationships as children, an unhappy social life in school and suffer from low self-esteem, she said.

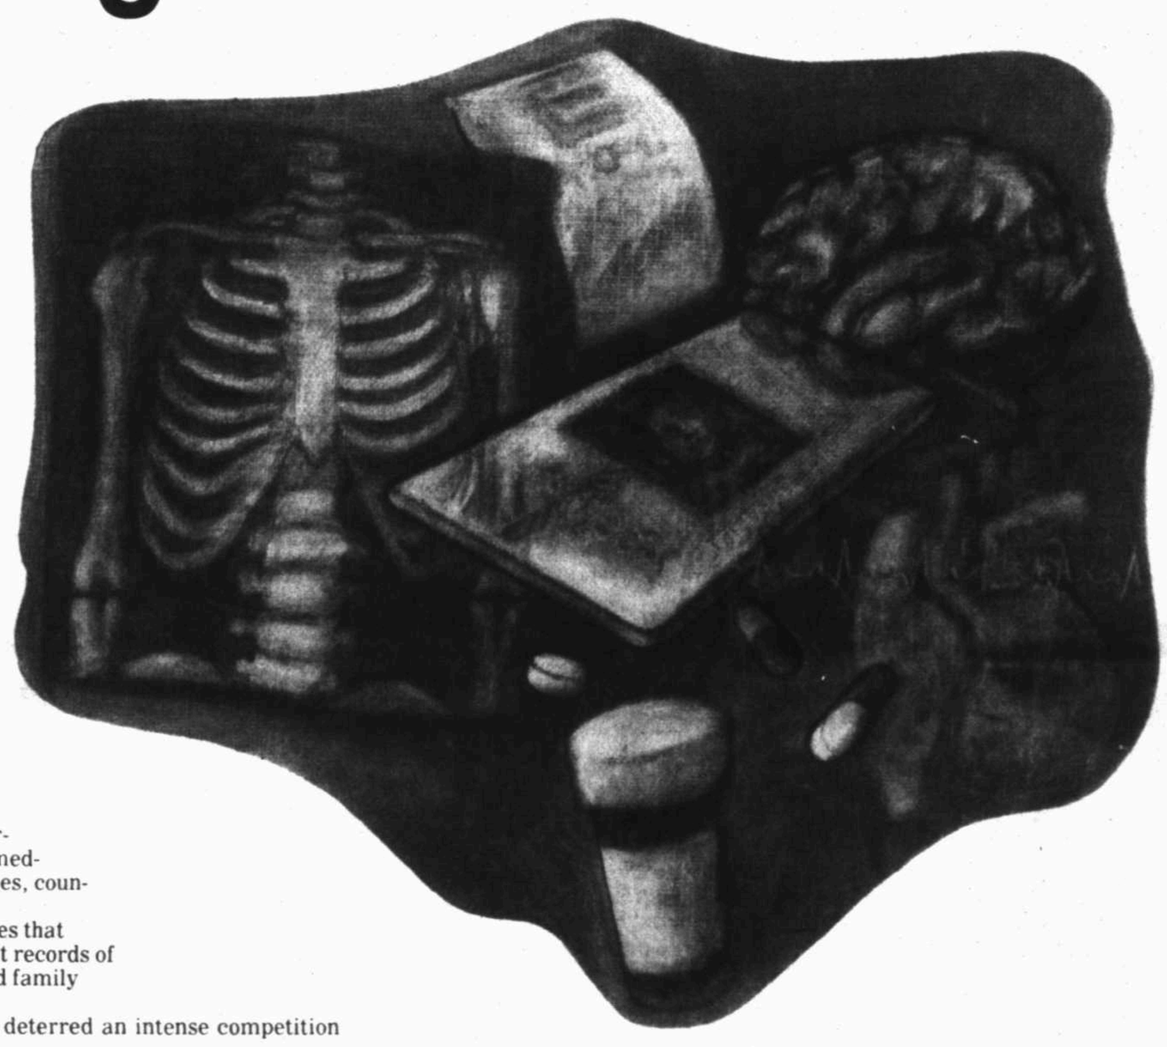

"The way we have been dealing with the problem — negotiating with creditors and working out a payment schedule — is just not adequate," Ms. Hira concluded. "We need to sit down and understand why this person seems to have a consistent financial problem. If we focus only on the financial

A plastic guarantee for care

■ If President Clinton's health care reform is eventually passed into law, "Health Security" cards are likely to be a regular feature of wallets and purses.

By Jeffrey Bair
Associated Press Writer

President Clinton holds all the cards in the administration's campaign to give each American a uniform health insurance identifier.

His health reform agenda, which is bound to spawn a medical bureaucracy into the next century, includes an obscure but important detail: the need for factories that can churn out plastic "Health Security" cards guaranteeing access to care.

The card, which will resemble a credit card, is likely to become a staple of every wallet, as common as a Social Security card and driver's license. But who makes the card, and what type of information it conveys, aren't clear yet.

The information question is particularly important because of the sensitive nature of personal medical histories and the potential for abuse by thieves, counterfeiters and other con artists.

The health card will provide access to databases that not only contain a person's height and weight, but records of medications, substance abuse, mental health and family histories.

Still, the uncertainty about the cards hasn't deterred an intense competition

Devilish details can block a mortgage

By Andree Brooks
N.Y. Times News Service

Dr. Daniel Fass, a radiation oncologist with a private practice in Greenwich, Conn., and his wife, Jessica, expected to breeze through the mortgage process for their first home. After all, he had the money for a down payment, a squeaky clean credit history and a rock-solid career.

The lender sized up the situation far differently. Fass was rejected because he could not show that his practice had been profitable for at least two years, the customary requirement for someone self-employed. "It was a real Catch-22," he said, explaining that his office had been open only a year.

Like many first-time home buyers, the Fasses learned that anything unusual can stymie a mortgage application and that lenders have changed since the free-wheeling 80s. "The screws have definitely been tightened," said Paul Havemann, vice president of HSH Associates, a mortgage tracking company in Butler, N.J. He cited as reasons the increases in both delinquency and default rates during the recession and the regulatory pressure on lenders.

First-time buyers get particular scrutiny, Havemann said, because they are notorious for fudging the facts out of fear of being rejected. And many of the people flooding into the housing market, where sales rose to a seven-and-a-half-year high in November, are first-timers, as low rates and low prices combine to make housing more affordable. This week, the average fixed rate on 30-year mortgages fell below 7 percent.

For the millions of Americans considering a home purchase this year, self-employment is just one of the potential stumbling blocks. Problems may arise over an incorrect or a tarnished credit report. Even a history of paying bills on time may be insufficient. Sometimes lenders balk at multiple credit cards, which expose the potential for future debt.

With some persistence, such obstacles can generally be surmounted. The Fasses, for example, ultimately triumphed with the help of a mortgage broker who found a more accommodating lender.

The hassle, though, could be costly. If your mortgage appli-

Health cards

Facts about the types of health cards whose makers are competing to produce the national health care card:

MAGNETIC STRIPE CARDS — Major producers are Malco Plastics of Baltimore; Perfect Plastic of Chicago; Kirk Plastic of Rancho Domingo, Calif.; NBS Card Services Inc. of South Plainfield, N.J.; and Colorado Plasticard Inc. of Littleton, Colo. ... Used in the United States as credit cards, debit cards, automated-teller cards, drivers licenses, workplace identification cards and health insurance cards. ... Readers are relatively inexpensive and widely available. ... Vulnerable to loss of data if the stripes are scratched with paper clips or keys or the cards come near small appliances or magnetic door catches. ... Nearly one in 10 transactions fails because of card damage, according to card security specialist XTEC Inc. of Miami.

SMART CARDS — Major producers include AT&T; DataCard Corp. of suburban Minneapolis; Gemplus Card International Corp., of France; Dallas-based MicroCard Technologies Inc., a subsidiary of France's Group Bull; and Toshiba Corp. of Tokyo ... First worldwide patent issued to French journalist Roland Moreno in 1974. ... Marine recruits in Parris Island, S.C., and Club Med vacationers have bought supplies with smart cards.

OPTICAL CARDS — Major producers include Canon Inc. of Tokyo; LaserCard Systems Corp. of Mountain View, Calif., a subsidiary of Drexler Technology Corp. of Mountain View; and Dai Nippon Printing Co. of Tokyo. ... Invented by LaserCard founder Jerry Drexler in 1981. ... Used for health insurance in parts of Scotland and Taiwan. ... Has enough memory to hold a complete medical history and a digital image of a patient's face for identification.

Hearty times

Investment managers seeking profitable opportunities in health care will converge in early February for a conference on cardiovascular disease treatments, which have expanded in recent years as new technologies have won government approval.

The New York conference, sponsored by the Piper Jaffray Inc. investment firm, features presentations on procedures ranging from tiny balloons that clear clogged arteries to implantable devices that control irregular heartbeats. But the the conference isn't necessarily for the faint-hearted.

The three-day agenda at the posh Plaza Hotel includes nightly cocktail receptions and a deli buffet.

What crime?

High-profile murder and robbery of Florida tourists last year spooked the entire travel industry, raising fears of a slump that would affect businesses ranging from hotels to rental car companies.

But the world's third-largest car renter says travelers are surprisingly unconcerned about tourist crime. The 1994 Travel Barometer Survey by Budget Rent a Car shows an overwhelming majority of business and leisure travelers haven't changed plans over fear of crime. But many say they will be more careful about avoiding specific areas.

IRA Withdrawals

Q: What is the minimum amount that must be withdrawn annually from an individual retirement account when I reach age 70½?
— Roslyn Schlansky, New York, N.Y.

A: Although you can start withdrawing funds from an IRA at age 59½, withdrawals must begin by April 1 of the year after the one in which you reach 70½. The minimum distribution is based on the account's balance on Dec. 31 of the previous year.

Distributions in any single year may not exceed $150,000, with a penalty of 15 percent on larger amounts. And if you fail to withdraw enough to satisfy the minimum requirement, you will have to pay a penalty tax of 50 percent of the amount that should have been withdrawn.

"The minimum distribution for each year must be calculated in one of three ways," said Martin Leventhal, head of a New York accounting firm bearing his name.

"You can use the life expectancy of the owner, the life expectancy of the owner and a beneficiary or a specific period less than either of the first two categories."

Information on calculating the minimum distribution is available by calling (800) 829-3676 and asking for IRS Publication 590, Individual Retirement Arrangements.

Ending partnership deals

Q: Am I condemned to carry a dormant partnership investment for the indefinite future or is there some way of claiming a long-term capital loss? — J.J. Boddewyn, New York, N.Y.

A: The interest in a limited partnership can be abandoned, but there are potential pitfalls. For example, you may have to satisfy a potential tax liability on deferred income that you never received, called a recapture tax.

In addition, "when you abandon the investment, the limited partner is responsible for his or her share of the liabilities," said David Scott O'Bryon, president of the American Association of Limited Partners. "There may also be offsetting losses and gains. Most investors try to write off their investment as worthless, which is hard to prove."

Willing real property

Q: In my will, I am leaving my condominium unit to a person of limited financial means. Until the will is probated and he receives a cash bequest, how can he be protected against mortgage foreclosure?
— Morton Moskowitz, Brooklyn, N.Y.

A: Personal property passes to the heirs at the time of distribution, which is often not made until the legal and financial affairs of the estate are settled. Title to real property, like a condominium, usually passes at the date of death.

You "could provide in the will that the estate is responsible for all of the carrying charges — common charges, real estate taxes, mortgage interest and amortization — for a fixed period of time or until administration is complete," said Laurence Keiser, a partner in Greenfield Eisenberg Stein & Senior, a New York law firm.

"Another alternative would be to require the executor to make preliminary distributions as advances against the cash bequest."

As a practical matter, creditors are normally more understanding when an estate is involved and will try to avoid foreclosure under such circumstances.

Tracking information on a company stock

By Bill Doyle

Q: About 30 years ago, my father purchased shares of stock in a small insurance company for $2,500. No dividends have been paid on the stock for quite some time. The company has changed hands several times. During the last change, I could not find the stock certificate and I posted a surety bond with the bank that is the company's stock transfer agent. After that, I heard nothing from that bank.

Doyle

I do get annual reports from the company, so I know I am listed as a stockholder. I believe it is common stock, but I am not sure. How can I find out exactly what kind of stock and how many shares I own?

A: The natural move would be to contact the company. The annual reports you receive might list a stockholder relations department or some similar unit that handles queries such as yours.

If you can't find such a listing, write the office of the corporate secretary at the company's home address. Under U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission rules, that information must be printed in annual stockholder reports.

Receiving those reports is an indication you are a stockholder. But it's no guarantee. Many companies mail their annual reports hither and yon, especially to people who request copies.

In this case, we will assume you are a shareholder and that your father either bought the stock in your name or transferred the shares to you at some later time.

Once you find out how many shares you own, determining their present value will be a snap. Another SEC requirement is that an annual report disclose where the stock is traded -- on a particular stock exchange or in the over-the-counter market. Just multiply the per-share price you find in newspaper stock tables by the number of shares you own.

And get in touch with with the stock's transfer agent again. When you posted a surety bond, you should have received a replacement for the certificate you could not find.

Q: What advice do you have about common stock vs. preferred stock?

A: Common stock is the better investment for most people.

Both common and preferred stocks represent ownership in corporations. As the term indicates, preferred stock has preference over common stock in certain matters. Dividends must be paid on the preferred before common stock receives dividends. And, if the company is liquidated, the preferred shares must be paid off before the common.

Most preferred stocks pay dividends at fixed rates. Two exceptions are participating preferreds and variable-rate preferreds. So, owners of preferred stocks know precisely how much income their investments will produce. But they have no hopes for growth in value.

On the other hand, dividends on common stock can be raised, lowered or omitted depending on the earnings of the company. Increased earnings and dividends send a common stock's market price higher.

Over the long haul, ownership of common stocks has been much more rewarding than ownership of preferred stocks for individual investors.

Q: You wrote, "Utility companies do not pay dividends in shares." I suggest you check Citizens Utilities, which pays quarterly stock dividends.

I have been participating in that goodie for many years. The advantage is that I do not have to pay income tax when I receive the stock dividends and will pay the lower capital gains tax when and if I sell the shares.

A: You are right. As many readers wrote in to note, I goofed. Citizens Utilities has two classes of stock -- A and B -- listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Both pay quarterly stock dividends. Owners of the Class B stock can arrange for the company to sell the shares received as dividends. It is a most unusual arrangement.

DEBT: Some need psychological help

problems, the same person will be in trouble again in five or six years."

Among people who run into financial difficulties, Ms. Hira estimated, 25 percent have serious problems and need psychological counseling. Most of the rest simply need to face up to what led them into trouble, she said.

Ms. Hira approached the subject of financial counseling in the traditional way for years, emphasizing how to budget and to get out of debt. She changed her approach after working on a consulting project with the Canadian consumer bankruptcy office in 1990. That study convinced her that psychological factors were of utmost importance.

Ms. Hira was hired to help the agency determine why the number of bankruptcy filings was growing so rapidly. "The government wondered if they were making it so easy for everybody, so they could just go ahead and file for bankruptcy because the consequences were positive rather than negative," she said.

In two weeks of exit interviews with people who had filed for bankruptcy, Ms. Hira and other interviewers focused on three things: Who are you today? What kind of experiences did you have growing up? How do you feel about yourself? "I heard some very consistent patterns," Ms. Hira said. "Even though the people were very different."

Most of the bankruptcy filers had extremely low self-esteem. One or both parents were absent — either physically or emotionally — as they were growing up.

And they had not had happy social experiences in school. "I was disturbed by this," Ms. Hira said. "If it held true in the wider population, then doing financial counseling for people in financial trouble was not enough."

When she returned to Iowa State, Ms. Hira decided to test the results in a lab that was part of an undergraduate degree program in financial counseling. In the lab, students — with assistance from teachers — counseled people from many walks of life who needed financial help.

Ms. Hira developed a questionnaire to elicit personal information from these people. The same questionnaire was given to a control group of students whom she believed had a healthy attitude about money.

The students comfortable with money had many similarities. "They had a pleasant growing-up experience, an intact family, one parent had taken a great interest in developing the child as a person, telling them, 'You're beautiful, wonderful, capable, you can do it,' " she said.

Generally, these students had had a positive money experience at a young age. A parent, for example, "had taken them at a very early age and helped them open a bank account and plan for a goal," she said. "They had a role model. And they had an underlying value system."

For the people who came to the lab for financial counseling, low self-esteem often played a role.

"We noticed that in the women's situation, they were becoming attached to men who needed picking up and cleaning up," she said. "Then the man would walk away, and they would pick another puppy who was bruised."

Men, on the other hand, typically got into debt by buying things for themselves, she said. "A lot of men were paying for cars that were long gone," Ms. Hira explained. "All they had to show for the things they'd purchased was a pile of debts. In both cases, these people were trying to prove something to themselves."

Facing up to financial problems puts some people on the road to recovery. Hira described one seemingly poised and confident woman who discussed budgeting and cash flow in three financial counseling sessions with one of Ms. Hira's students. At the end of the third session, the student asked: "Can we talk a little bit about you and how you feel about yourself?"

Try a week on the cash cure

Tahira K. Hira, a professor of personal finance and consumer behavior at Iowa State University, said the wide availability of credit is one reason that more people are getting into financial difficulty. "It's not that people have changed," she said. "It's the environment."

In the 1930s and '40s, people could not as easily compensate for personal inadequacies by spending money. "If you wanted to please a man or please yourself, you couldn't just go out and buy a new outfit if you didn't have money in your hand," she said. "Today I can walk into the mall and buy an outfit with the salary I'll be earning 10 years from now."

Most spenders have no idea of how much their purchases really cost, she said, because they use credit cards.

CARD: 'Smart' health cards start at $1.50 each for this potentially lucrative government work. The battle lines have been drawn between producers of the magnetic-stripe card, which is the format for credit cards and automated banking cards, and two newer technologies — the smart card and optical card.

(From 1B)

The stripe card is the least expensive, costing 50 cents to $1.50 each and holding the equivalent of a few lines of type. Data is stored on magnetic tape on one side.

The smart card contains a silicon chip that's read with a computer, and will hold three to four pages of typewritten data. Popular in Europe, the card's U.S. use largely has been limited to military bases or colleges.

Smart cards cost about $1.50 each but can cost much more. A Wyoming food-aid program, for example, paid $10.34 apiece for smart cards.

The harder-to-find optical cards cost about $4 each and are similar to smart cards, except they're read with expensive lasers. Optical cards hold the most information of any card. Just one, for example, can hold three texts of John Grisham's "The Pelican Brief."

The Clinton "Health Security" blueprint says the card will be a magnetic-stripe card that contains a personal identification number and the name of an individual's health plan.

That doesn't mean the smart card has been eliminated from consideration. Smart-card manufacturers have hired a Congressional lobbyist.

Moreover, the administration has shown interest in smart cards. A member of Clinton's health task force inquired about a plan to issue smart cards for health insurance in North Dakota, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Nevada, said Tom Singer, research director at the Western Governor's Association.

Vice President Al Gore, the administration's lead proponent of the computerized information age, has said the smart card is the best way to deliver government benefits.

The International Card Manufacturers Association, which represents stripe- and smart-card makers, is neutral on which card should be used, Association President Robert Blum said.

But under his other hat, as president of stripe-card maker Colorado Plasticard Inc., he said magnetic-stripe cards will be adequate.

"The job would have to be broken up among a number of manufacturers, and it would take them awhile," he said in a telephone interview from Littleton, Colo. "I certainly couldn't do it alone."

If a magnetic-stripe card is used, a doctor's office or hospital would obtain an account number from the card to tap into a computer medical file over a telephone line. The Clinton book said access to records will be limited to health professionals "who have a legitimate need to see them."

Makers of the newer cards say the security of such a network is vulnerable to abuse and telephone-line disruptions.

"That system will be breached. No doubt about that," said Stephen Price-Francis, North American marketing manager for Canon Inc.'s optical cards.

"What if a company doesn't want to hire someone with AIDS? All they have to do is look at what medications that person has taken, and they will know right away," said Janet Sayles-Falls, executive director of the Smart Card Industry Association.

A security consultant to stripe-card makers said the claim that smart cards are safer than stripe cards is nonsense. He said the smart card can be copied easily.

"The simple, low-cost smart card is based on simple algorithms that can be broken by any hacker," said Denise Jeffreys, president of XTEC Inc. of Miami. Jeffreys also acknowledged that many stripe cards can be compromised "with equipment you can buy at any Radio Shack."

Patients with smart or optical cards would carry their medical life stories. But losing the card could mean rebuilding your story.

In Oklahoma City, smart cards are already sold as portable file cabinets for medical information.

MORTGAGE: Delinquent payments need explanation

cation is delayed, someone else may step in to buy the house you so desire. Or interest rates may rise while you smooth out problems. And if the lenders with the best rates completely reject you, you will wind up paying more.

A few simple steps can help make the most of your situation.

Among the easiest problems to detect is an error on a credit report. Margaret Scott, president of Mortgage Advisory Services of Manhattan, advises people to contact the three big reporting agencies — TRW, Equifax Inc. and the Trans Union Corp. — before they even apply for a loan. A mortgage broker can also screen your record through available data bases.

DIVORCE: There are some advantages for husbands known by the initials QDRO and pronounced quadro.

(From 1B)

This type of court order allows a specified amount to be paid to a spouse or former spouse from a pension or profit-sharing plan or any other tax-favored retirement plan.

"It's a vehicle that can satisfy both parties," said Milt Pickman, senior tax partner in Anchin Block & Anchin, a New York firm of certified public accountants.

In a recent case described by Pickman, a company president who divorced his wife to remarry had $1 million in a profit-sharing plan.

Under a QDRO, the plan's administrator paid $500,000 into an individual retirement account set up for the ex-wife. She was 56, so the financial settlement was structured for her to receive alimony until she was 59½, when she could begin withdrawals from the IRA without penalty.

"The basic advantage for the wife is that she got control of the money," Pickman said.

"She can withdraw it as she needs without worrying about whether he'll send a check every month, and she can leave money in the account to her children. For the husband, the advantage is that it is pretax money, like alimony."

In this case, there is another advantage for the husband.

Under the 1986 tax law, people may generally set aside up to $750,000 in tax-favored retirement plans, but people whose accrued benefits exceeded $562,500 on Aug. 1, 1986, were allowed to make "grandfather election."

Satellite might bring rural health care

SPACE CENTER (AP) — A satellite deployed by the space shuttle Discovery last year could eventually help provide health care to remote areas of the world without actually going there, NASA scientists say.

Six Houston medical specialists tried out the $363 million Advanced Communications Technology Satellite on Saturday by examining patients in Boulder, Colo., more than a thousand miles away.

Color images of the retinas of five patients from the Fitsimons Army Medical Center in Denver were beamed to the Johnson Space Center, where doctors spent about 45 minutes examining them.

On four of the five cases, the local medical specialists arrived at the same diagnoses as doctors in Colorado. In the fifth case, the examination was interrupted by patient's constant blinking.

During a similar exercise last weekend, the Houston doctors were right in five of six cases.

NASA believes that the technology might soon allow remote areas access to health care from such institutions as Houston's Texas Medical Center, one of the world's leading medical complexes.

Dr. Roger Billica, chief of medical operations at Johnson, said "that is one of the biggest challenges in medicine right now."

"Telemedicine" has been used for decades, but such medical advances as CAT scans and ultrasound have outpaced the transmission limits of traditional phone lines and many satellites.

NASA's new satellite, deployed in September, provides transmission beams 20 times more powerful than standard satellites and allows individual users to hook up to each other with space-based switchers.

ACTS also uses an uncluttered part of the spectrum with bands five times wider than those used in traditional transmissions.

Such advances are only now allowing doctors to use high-resolution imagery, such as retinal photography, to diagnose patients many miles away.

"The whole intent here is to see whether we can provide health care to remote sites of the world or country without having patients travel long distance and do it at a cost that is comparable to traditional medicine or cheaper," said Charles Lloyd, a NASA medical projects office manager.

In future tests of the satellite, military doctors will try to transmit ultrasound images of patients' eyes.

Daughter seeks conviction of mother for dad's murder

TYLER (AP) — Tammy Russell is seeking retribution for the death of her father 15 years ago. Her justice, she says, will come in seeing her mother convicted of his murder.

"Nobody's listened in 15 years and someone's listening ... finally," said Ms. Russell, now 25.

Ms. Russell's father, Jack Edward Russell, was found dead Jan. 22, 1979, following a fire at the family's mobile home. But it's only now, Ms. Russell says, that law enforcement authorities have come to realize what she always believed — his death was no accident.

Ms. Russell's mother, Mildred Laverne Russell, 49, has been indicted on charges of murder and arson in connection with her husband's death.

"I never thought I'd get to see it," Ms. Russell said in Sunday editions of the Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph. "Before Mildred was arrested (last month), I kept everything inside. It was like I hid part of my life. Now I'm relieved that I don't have to hide it anymore."

Tyler police and fire investigators, along with Smith County prosecutors, reopened the case last month after a family member other than Ms. Russell urged them to reinvestigate. They would not reveal the name of the family member.

Retired Tyler Fire Marshal Tom West, who handled the initial investigation, said Russell was alone in the house at the time of the fire. According to West's report, the blaze resulted from carelessness with a cigarette, which ignited a couch. West said the victim's body was found in a back bedroom.

Mrs. Russell said her husband was asleep in the back bedroom when she left the house between 10 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. on Jan. 21, 1979.

But after reviewing the original autopsy report, Dr. Stephen Bolesta, a Tyler pathologist, found "the autopsy was not a thorough autopsy."

Bolesta, in an affidavit filed Dec. 15, 1993, said what had been described as "an abrasion or first-degree burn to the forehead (in the first report) is consistent with blunt trauma to the head."

Investigators say a second autopsy performed last month after Russell's body was exhumed supports the initial ruling of smoke inhalation as the cause of death. But the cause of the wound to the victim's forehead has not been determined.

In a telephone interview from the Smith County Jail, Mrs. Russell told the Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph her husband was drunk on the night of the fire.

She said she took their four children and left the family's house when Russell threw an ashtray at her. Mrs. Russell claims she returned to find the house had burned and her husband was dead.

But Ms. Russell, who was 11 at the time of the fire, says her mother left her father to die in the fire.

Recalling that night 15 years ago, Ms. Russell said she remembers her parents fighting, a scenario which usually resulted in her mother leaving the house alone.

"I was surprised and honored that she wanted me to go with her — it was like a dream that she wanted me to go with her," she said.

"We rode behind the house, up and down the street, about a 100 times, slowly. We stayed driving in that area of that house all night long ... I told her two times that the house was on fire and she wouldn't stop. She said it was the neighbor's chimney."

Ms. Russell said she eventually jumped out of the car and ran to the house. "The house was on fire," she recalled.

Ms. Russell said her mother had given her a fabricated story to provide investigators if she were questioned about the fire.

"She said to tell them I was standing in a hallway when my father threw a stereo and that I saw a cigarette butt fall on the couch," she said. "She said if I didn't do what she said, my brothers and sisters would be placed in an orphanage."

Ms. Russell said her family was torn apart after her father's death.

Residents of small town watch sadly as library dies

SPLENDORA (AP) — Former Councilwoman Hazel McCracken worked so diligently to start a public library 14 years ago that the building was named after her.

Now, Mayor Grace Myers and the current council have decided to shut down the library, which costs $25,500 to run annually, because they could find no room for it in a $912,000 budget.

"A community that doesn't have its own library is about one degree short of being civilized," Ms. McCracken said.

"A lot of people use that little library. There's a good county library branch close by in New Caney, but I feel strongly that every community ought to have its own library."

The decision has shocked and angered many of the 1,000 Splendora residents, but the mayor said there was no other way to make ends meet, considering that the town has no property tax.

"Closing the library was a very hard decision that nobody on City Council wanted to make, but we had to do it," Ms. Myers said.

Budget cuts also include firing one of two paid police officers, which in addition to the library closure will save about $48,000, Ms. Myers said.

The town has taken other measures, such as increasing water service rates. That should allow Splendora, about 50 miles north of Houston in Montgomery County, to stay afloat without a property tax.

Sandy Martin-Springer, who resigned from the council recently in protest of what she calls "the raping of the community by council," said there was a way to save the library without new taxes.

She said all it would take is for Ms. Myers and the council to "tuck in the belt" and manage city coffers more efficiently.

Her plan, nixed by the mayor, called for sparing the library by generating 24 percent of its operating income from donations and fees.

But Ms. Myers said that when the library solicited donations in an effort to avoid closing, about $1,590 in cash, checks and pledges was collected. That fell far short of annual costs, which include a $17,847 salary for one librarian.

Ms. Myers said 12,000 books and other materials will be sold to libraries that have been invited to examine the stock and submit bids.

The 80-year-old McCracken said she is saddened by the whole affair.

"It's a sad commentary that they don't realize the importance of a library to a city, but the decision's been made whether I like it or not," she said. "But some ladies are looking into whether it would be feasible to buy the books from the city and open a private library. I'm in ill health and don't get around much, but I'll do whatever I can to help that cause."

DEAR ABBY

'Living together' doesn't necessarily equal sin

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to "Old-Fashioned," who wrote about the "in-your-face immorality" of living together prior to marriage.

Van Buren

When I was 24, I became engaged to a wonderful young man named Gary. We started planning our wedding when I felt a small lump in my breast. I went immediately to my doctor, who sent me to an oncologist. My worst fears were confirmed: It was breast cancer.

My parents, who lived 300 miles away, came to be with me for the surgery (mastectomy), but eventually had to go home. They returned as often as they could during my treatments, but they couldn't be with me all the time.

When I was sick from the chemotherapy, Gary stayed with me and slept on the floor beside my bed. He cooked what little food I could eat and held my head when I vomited. He cleaned my house and did my laundry. It soon became apparent that between driving back and forth to my house, caring for me and handling his job, poor Gary was exhausted, so I asked him to please move in with me. Believe me, there was no hanky-panky.

We are now happily married and my cancer is in remission. So, Abby, please tell "Old-Fashioned" that not all people who live together are immoral. And remember, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." (Matthew 7:1) — SHARON

DEAR SHARON: My prayers are with you and Gary. After this is published, I'm sure that thousands of readers will add their prayers to mine. God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: This could save a life — or a family. Please alert your readers to the danger of leaving fireplace ashes where they can start a fire.

A neighbor cleaned out his fireplace and placed the supposedly "dead" ashes in a cardboard box on the back porch. Since the ashes looked dead, he intended to wait until morning to take them out to the trash can.

In the middle of the night, the ashes burned through the box and set the porch on fire. Since the smoke alarms were inside the house, they were useless. The family was lucky to escape with their lives.

Our fire chief said dead ashes are a constant source of house fires every winter. Please alert your readers. — BETTY H. IN PENDLETON, ORE.

DEAR BETTY: Thank you for a valuable reminder. According to the fire officials my staff consulted, ashes should be stored in a metal can with a lid for several days before disposing.

DEAR ABBY: My niece recently married. She is pregnant. The young couple and my niece's parents are planning a large church wedding (with a white wedding dress) and reception to take place 10 months after the original vows, when the baby will be about 2 months old. Is this socially acceptable? If it is, which date would they celebrate as their anniversary? — CURIOUS AUNT

DEAR CURIOUS AUNT: Any time a couple wants to enter into holy matrimony is "acceptable." And they should celebrate their anniversary on the date of their original vows.

DEAR READERS: If you or a member of your family has been treated by a psychiatrist, doctor or other health-care professional for alcoholism or drug addiction, and are willing to describe any problems, mistakes or bad outcome encountered in your treatment, please write and tell me about them. Your name and that of your doctor will be held in strict confidence. I plan to share your letters with the Group for Advancement of Psychiatry, a highly respected group of psychiatrists who are eager to know about your experiences.

Please send your letters to: Dear Abby, Treatment Survey, P.O. Box 539, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Lottery jackpot jumps to $8 million

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 13, 17, 20, 24, 39, 42.

There were 151 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,072. There were 6,546 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $90. And there were 113,872 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $8 million.

Saint Vincent De Paul's thrift store moves to new location after outgrowing present location

For as long as the poor are in the world, there will be Gospel groups, including Saint Vincent de Paul Society, to help the poor and suffering people of the community one person and one family at a time.

"We've got more homeless people here than people realize," lamented Mike Beve, president of the Catholic-affiliated society. "They do get to us," even as the society reaches out to help them, "and we try to assist them in anyway possible. The Lord has been very, very generous."

And part of that generosity in helping the poor is reflected in the society's expanded facility — warehouse and store — in an old telephone company complex at 701 N. Fort Worth St. in Midland.

"They (American Telephone & Telegraph Company officials) gave it to us at a good price, an excellent price," at $25,000, said Victor Brenon, manager of the society's store. "It's a good deal."

At about 15,000 square feet, the complex is at least three times the size of the older store on Midland's far east side.

The society, which was founded in Paris, France, in 1833 by Frederic Ozanam, was inspired by Saint Vincent de Paul, a 1600s French priest who ministered to the poor and who organized a religious order which works in the homes of the poor and maintain schools and orphanages.

"Never be ashamed of the smallness of our works," Ozanam wrote. "Small is great to those who possess little but their needs."

The needs served by the Saint Vincent de Paul Society include the freewill gift of food, clothing, shelter, household appliances, furniture, and the payment utility bills.

"If they need it, we give it to them. No questions asked," said Brenon. "There are so many needs," such as the need for beds. "We just give them away. A lot of people sleep on floors. It's terrible here in Midland."

Once those immediate need are met, society volunteers visit with the people wherever they are: in their home, car, bus stop, motel room.

Beve referred to the proverb: "Give me a fish, and I will eat for today; teach me to fish, and I will eat for the rest of my life."

The society helps people "acquire tools to help them become self-supportive.

"I've seen the poverty (in New York), and I've seen it here," Beve said. The society members are trying "to do the Lord's work and trying to help them (the poor people) as much as possible."

Cooper payback

ABILENE — Thirty-four football coaches have been ordered by Superintendent Charles Hundley to return about $28,000 they received as compensation for Abilene Cooper's four-game run through the state high school football playoffs.

Hundley said at a hastily called news conference Sunday that he ordered the overtime money returned after he learned the extra pay was a violation of University Interscholastic League rules.

The District 4-5A executive committee was summoned for a 7 a.m. meeting Monday to discuss whether Cooper should be hit with sanctions.

Possible penalties range from no action to banning the Cooper program from competition for five years, although precedent indicates the coaches will be forced to make restitution to the school system. Hundley also could earn a reprimand.

"I made the decision alone and I take full responsibility. It's clearly a violation," Hundley said.

Hundley had ordered the overtime for 45 staff members, including 34 coaches, for extra days worked preparing for and performing in the games.

Each of Cooper's 10 varsity coaches were paid for nine days. The payments, based on the daily rate of each employee's contract, ranged from $2,200 for head coach Randy Allen to $1,300.

SWEET REPEAT

Cowboys two-time Bills for back-to-back titles

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

ATLANTA — The Dallas Cowboys have staked their claim as the team of the '90s. The Buffalo Bills grabbed a loser's label that could last longer than that.

The Cowboys and the Bills both made Super Bowl history Sunday, thanks to two unlikely stars, James Washington and a redeemed Leon Lett.

Washington, a backup safety, had a hand in 17 of Dallas' points as they beat the Bills 30-13 and won their second straight NFL title and sent Buffalo to a record fourth straight Super Bowl defeat. No franchise in the history of American team sports has lost a championship game four straight times.

"You have demonstrated you're the team of the '90s," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said as he presented the Vince Lombardi trophy to coach Jimmy Johnson and owner Jerry Jones of the Cowboys.

But defensive end Charles Haley, who played for San Francisco's "team of the '80s," was more hesitant to make the claim.

"It's too early," he said. "Let's see what we do next year."

Emmitt Smith, who surprisingly was named the game's MVP over Washington, ran for 132 yards and two touchdowns as Dallas became the 10th straight NFC team to win the league's title game by outscoring the Bills 24-0 in the second half after trailing 13-6 at halftime.

But it was Washington who turned the game around as the Cowboys became just the fifth team to win in consecutive years and tied San Francisco and Pittsburgh with four Super Bowl victories.

Washington returned a fumble 46 yards for a touchdown, intercepted a pass in the fourth quarter that led to another score, and forced a first-half fum-

Lett in different spotlight

ATLANTA — It's time for Leon Lett to stop hiding, stop breaking into a cold sweat when someone recognizes him, stop worrying about hate letters and rotten hot dogs showing up in his mailbox.

Lett turned the Super Bowl around for the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday, forcing a fumble by Thurman Thomas at a moment when the Buffalo Bills were up by a touchdown and driving for one more at the start of the third period.

James Washington picked up that loose ball and rambled 46 yards for a TD that tied the game and kicked off a Cowboys surge to a second straight championship, 30-13.

When Washington crossed the goal line, Lett had his long awaited redemption. And at the end of the game, Lett slapped hands with his teammates in an unabashed show of relief.

Just a few days ago, Lett couldn't stop sweating when he came out on this same field for team interviews. He's a 6-foot-6, 285-pound giant, yet he was scared of all the people around him, afraid of their questions, sick of the memories they would conjure up. The Super Bowl blooper last year. The mental mistake in the loss to Miami on Thanksgiving Day this season.

He retreated, was persuaded to return, then retreated again, still sweating.

Coach Jimmy Johnson had protected him from interviews since Thanksgiving, coddled him, reassured him he was still needed. No more.

Now Lett can laugh about what happened to him, distance himself not only with time but with an earned sense of triumph.

A year ago, Lett wanted to cry, even

Smith proves worth

■ Once again, Emmitt Smith shows his value to the Cowboys. This time by punctuating a Super Bowl comeback.

ATLANTA — Emmitt Smith knew how much he was worth to the Dallas Cowboys' offense, and on Sunday, he proved it to everybody else.

Again.

■ MVP

Smith, who missed training camp and the first two games in a messy contract holdout, still won his third NFL straight rushing title, and then punctuated his MVP season with a brilliant show in the Super Bowl, including a virtual one-man touchdown drive in the third quarter. He also scored a wrapup fourth-quarter TD on a fourth-down carry in the 30-13 victory.

He became the first player to sweep regular season and Super Bowl MVP titles. Next time, he won't have to argue for his money.

SUPER BOWL XXVIII

Washington TD return gets Cowboys going

ATLANTA (AP) — All the hard work the Buffalo Bills did in the 30 minutes of the first half took less than seven minutes to undo in the second half.

It began with a Thurman Thomas fumble — caused by Leon Lett, of all people — and ended with vintage Emmitt Smith.

"They chose a slow death," Dallas receiver Michael Irvin said. "They came in and were not going to give up the big play. A lot of teams play us that way. That just leaves a lot of room for Emmitt to run."

Last year, it was the second quarter that doomed Buffalo in an eventual 52-17 Super Bowl loss in which the Bills committed nine turnovers. This year, they lasted until the third quarter.

"When you play us, you choose your poison. But you're eventually going to die," Irvin said.

When the poison took effect, the Bills' 13-6 halftime lead had turned into a 20-13 deficit and Buffalo's place in Super Bowl infamy had been secured as a four-time loser.

Dallas won the game Sunday 30-13 for its second straight championship, but it was decided before the halfway mark of the third quarter.

Key play

The Bills did everything they were supposed to do in the first half, led by Jim Kelly's pinpoint passing that helped keep the ball away from the Cowboys' big-play offense.

"There was no panic at halftime," Irvin said. "I said, 'Whoa boys, they came to play.' But I went over to (linebacker) Ken Norton and said, 'We're only seven down. It's important that we don't lose our intensity.'"

Buffalo got the kickoff in the second half and had a chance to add to its lead. But the aggressive Cowboys turned up the heat, jumping around and egging on the crowd. And on just the third play of the period, it all came apart for the Bills.

Thomas, who already had fumbled in the first half to set up a Dallas field goal, came barreling through the line only to meet Lett's big hand; the ball squirted loose and seemed to lay on the Georgia Dome carpet for several tantalizing seconds.

Finally, James Washington scooped it up in mid-stride heading toward the sideline, cut toward the middle, reversed his path again and scooted into the end zone without being touched.

"I'm not the fastest guy in the world," Washington said, "so I've got to read my blocks."

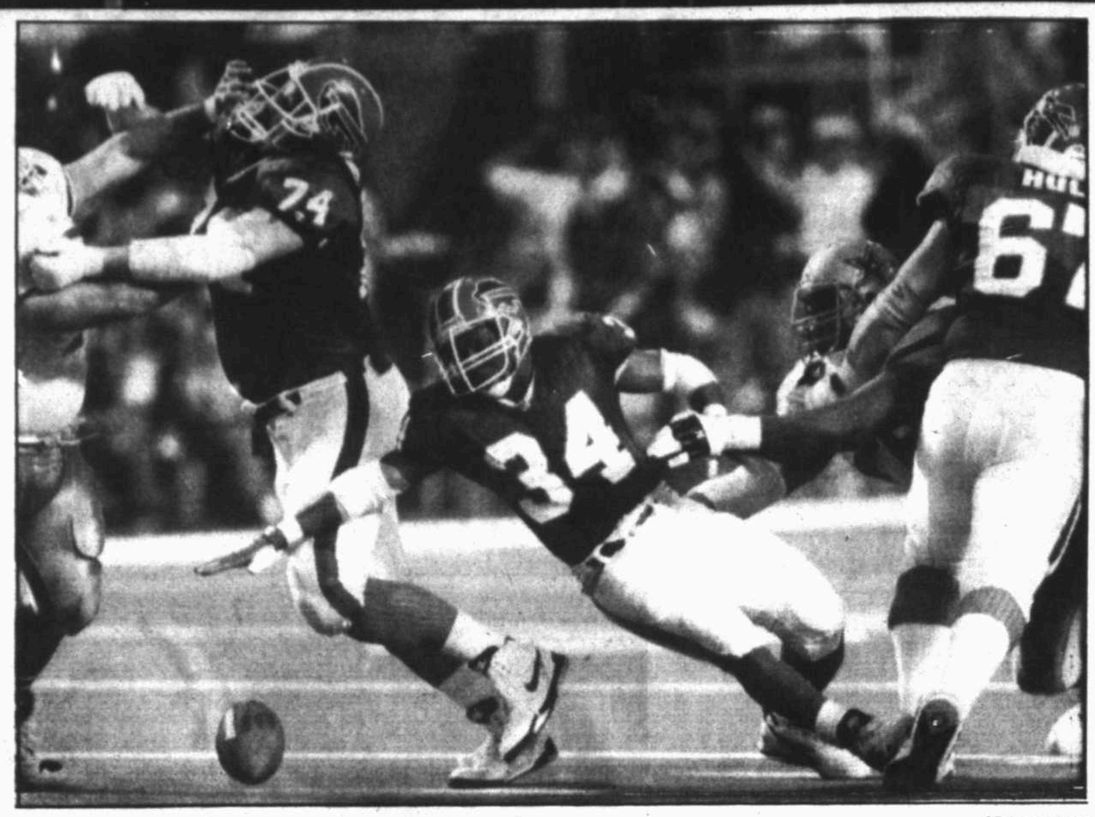

The score was only tied after Washington's spectacular run, but you had a feeling that it was a matter of time before the Bills collapsed.

They did.

"We were letting the momentum slip away from us and you could feel it. It bothered everyone," center Kent Hull said.

Dallas held on three plays, the last a 13-yard sack by the revitalized Cowboys' defense. The offense got the ball back at its own 36 and proceeded to run it right down Buffalo's throat.

Smith carried the ball six straight times for 46 yards, dicing and slicing the defense. A 3-yard Troy Aikman pass gave him a brief respite before Smith returned to seal Buffalo's fate. Nose tackle Jeff Wright had him wrapped up in the backfield, but Smith slipped away.

Buffalo Bills running back Thurman Thomas fumbles the ball in the third quarter of Super Bowl XXVIII Sunday. The Cowboys James Washington recovered the ball and scored a touchdown to turn the game in Dallas' favor.

"That was the same play we used the whole drive. I was able to shake a block, keep my balance and make it to the end zone," Smith said.

While Wright lay on the ground writhing at his missed opportunity, Smith was scooting into the end zone for a 15-yard touchdown run. There was still 8:42 left in the third quarter, but it was over.

The Cowboys defense began teeing off on the Bills, who never got close to the end zone until the game had been decided.

"We pressed them more," defensive end Charles Haley said.

Buffalo's Thomas can only wonder

ATLANTA (AP) — As he sat on the sidelines with his head in his hands, one thought ran through Thurman Thomas' mind:

"Why did I pick this time to have one of my worst games?"

But this time wasn't any different from the last two times for Thomas, whose once-promising Super Bowl career has been marked over the past three years by dropped opportunities.

Thomas said the second of his two fumbles was the turning point in the Buffalo Bills' fourth straight Super Bowl defeat, 30-13 to the Dallas Cowboys Sunday.

"To me, that was the biggest play of the game," he said. "I can sit up and take the blame because I did change the momentum of the game."

The second fumble was the most costly for the Bills, coming on Buffalo's first series of the second half.

With the Bills up 13-6, Thomas took a handoff and ran into the middle of the Dallas line. Just after he got there, Dallas' Leon Lett came down on Thomas' arm, popping the ball loose.

"Kent Hull was telling me in the shower that he had a good block on him (Lett), but he got one hand free and knocked the ball out," Thomas said. "I thought I had a good handle on it."

The ball stayed on the ground for several seconds before the Cowboys' James Washington picked it up at the Buffalo 46. He weaved his way through traffic, finally cutting into the end zone for the score that tied the game at 13-13.

"The fumble that was returned for a touchdown was the turning point," Bills special teams star Steve Tasker said. "Even though it only evened the game up, it was a big momentum grabber for them."

Thomas' first fumble came on the first play of Buffalo's second offensive series and led to a field goal.

A shuffle pass from Jim Kelly was a little behind Thomas, but he caught the ball and headed into the middle of the Dallas line. He dashed for seven yards before he was hit by Cowboys' safety Washington and dropped the ball.

Darren Woodson fell on it for the Cowboys, giving Dallas the ball at midfield. Eddie Murray turned that mistake into a 24-yard field goal that put Dallas up 6-3.

"The ball was a little behind me, but I had enough time to gather it," he said. The bigger problem was the active Dallas defense that was aggressively trying to knock the ball loose.

"They were going for the ball on every play," Thomas said.

Thomas left the game after his second fumble, but both he and coach Marv Levy said he wasn't benched. Both said Thomas had cramps in his calves that wouldn't allow him to play.

Johnson happy with Jones

ATLANTA (AP) — After steering the Dallas Cowboys to their second consecutive Super Bowl championship, Jimmy Johnson downplayed the talk that he and team owner Jerry Jones were at odds with each other.

"I think everybody has gotten a kick out of Jimmy and Jerry and thinking that we're at each other's throat," Johnson said Sunday night as he stood alongside Jones to accept the Vince Lombardi Trophy from commissioner Paul Tagliabue.

"When you win these kind of things the only thing you're going to do to each other's throat is hug it," Johnson said.

There was speculation during the regular season that Johnson might choose to leave his former Arkansas teammate and join the expansion Jacksonville Jaguars, who begin play in 1995.

Asked if he would be back in Dallas next season, Johnson said, "I haven't decided on anything other than that. So, yeah, I would imagine so."

The intense Cowboys coach also was in no mood to discuss the possibility of Dallas winning the championship again next year.

"I'm going to get on my boat down at Key Biscayne and I'm gonna scuba dive and relax for about eight or nine days," he said. "I'm sure that what our team will do is work for another one."

Johnson was ready to rest after going through a season that began with two consecutive losses.

"Everybody in this room knows this has been an extremely, extremely difficult year," he said to his team in the lockerroom.

"To overcome all the injuries the guys have overcome and all the things that have happened with this football team, for us to come back and win it again, my hat's off to everyone of these players and coaches, because you all did a fantastic job," he said. "You were not going to come up short of winning a Super Bowl."

Buffalo starts fast, but finishes big game slowly

By Thomas George
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — It looked good for Buffalo. It looked shaky for Dallas.

These Buffalo Bills entered Super Bowl XXVIII and performed with so much precision and style and grace that they seemed well on their way to averting a record fourth straight loss in the National Football League title game. No team in any sport had ever lost four straight championship games.

It was early, though.

It was halftime and Buffalo led by 13-6.

But then, what hurt the Buffalo Bills most in the last Super Bowl killed their chances on Sunday before a Georgia Dome record crowd of 72,817. Buffalo — Thurman Thomas in particular — kept dropping the ball.

It was a fumble by Thomas only 55 seconds into the second half that opened the floodgates for Dallas and led to 24 straight Dallas points.

Dallas safety James Washington picked up the fumble and ran into the end zone for a 46-yard return, and the Dallas Cowboys kept on running right toward their second straight Super Bowl title.

Dallas 30, Buffalo 13.

Dallas was the quicker, faster and more efficient team entering the game, and with the help of turnovers, the Cowboys were twice as good.

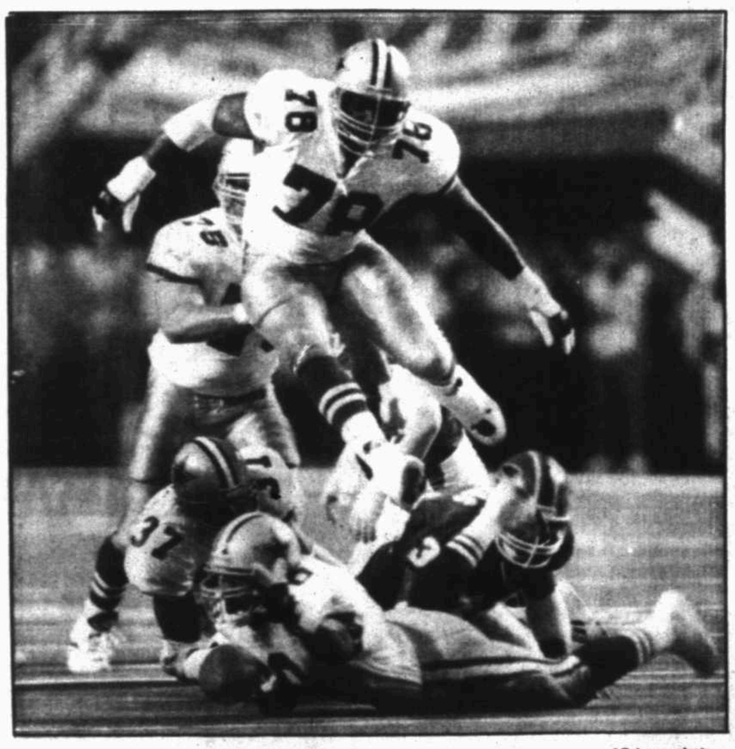

Buffalo committed nine in its 52-17 loss to Dallas in last year's Super Bowl. This time Buffalo made three turnovers — two Thomas fumbles and a Jim Kelly interception — that led to 17 Dallas points.

Following Washington's score, the Cowboys added touchdowns on a 15-yard run and a 1-yard run by Smith, who was named the most valuable player. He gained 132 yards on 30 carries.

The Dallas romp continues.

The Buffalo headaches and misery do, too.

The game went up and down with twists and turns until Dallas took control in a 14-0 third quarter for the Cowboys. Dallas dominated in the quarter, its offense brilliant and its defense superb.

Dallas Cowboy Leon Lett (78) jumps over players to pursue a fumble by the Bills' Thurman Thomas in the first quarter of the Super Bowl Sunday in Atlanta.

Dallas led by 3-0 in the first quarter. Buffalo tied it and then Dallas led again by 6-3. In the second quarter, Buffalo gained its first lead, by 10-6, and walked away at halftime with a 7-point edge.

Then came Washington's score on the fumble recovery.

And then, once Dallas had caught Buffalo, the Cowboys gave the ball to Smith, the man who takes care of it best.

Smith was incredible on the third-quarter drive that gave Dallas a 20-13 lead. Dallas gained 64 yards on the drive.

Smith ran for 61 of those yards. He finished it with a dazzling, tough 15-yard run inside the right tackle where he bounced off tacklers and ran with zest to the end zone with 8:42 left in the quarter.

Coupled with the 108 yards Smith gained in last year's Super Bowl, Smith joined Larry Csonka as the only backs to rush for 100 yards in consecutive Super Bowls.

Csonka, the former bruising fullback of the Miami Dolphins, did it in Super Bowls VII and VIII.

After the week-long hype and hoopla and the pregame festivities, Super Bowl XXVIII finally began — and with quite a bang.

On the game's first play, it looked as if the Bills' worst nightmares were about to be fulfilled. By the end of the half, however, the Bills had produced, by far, their best early showing in their four Super Bowls.

The game's first play was a kickoff return by Dallas' rookie whiz, Kevin Williams, who darted down the left sideline behind precise blocking and jolted Buffalo with a 50-yard run to the Bills' 48. That led to a Dallas field goal and the third-quickest score to start the game in Super Bowl history.

The last play of the first half was Steve Christie's 28-yard field goal.

In between, there were plenty of big hits and momentum-swinging plays as Buffalo took a 13-6 halftime lead.

SCORE: Dallas, 30, Buffalo 13.

STATS: Troy Aikman, Cowboys, was 19 for 27 for 207 yards; Jim Kelly, Bills, was 31 for 50 for 260 yards.

STAR: Emmitt Smith, Cowboys, was named MVP, gaining 132 yards on 30 carries with two touchdowns.

SURPRISE STAR: James Washington, Cowboys, returned a fumble 46 yards for a TD; intercepted a pass and had 11 tackles.

STRUGGLING: Thurman Thomas, Bills, lost two fumbles that the Cowboys turned into 10 points. He had 16 carries for 37 yards.

STILL STRUGGLING: The Bills lost their fourth straight Super Bowl, a feat unmatched in professional team sports.

STREAKS: The Cowboys are one of only five teams to win two straight Super Bowls. The others were Green Bay (1967-68), Miami (1973-74), Pittsburgh (1975-76) and San Francisco (1989-90).

SPEAKING: "Somebody said in the locker room after the game that we'll go for five in '95, but sure it's frustrating when you lose four in a row. At least we could have won one." — Thurman Thomas, Bills.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, JANUARY 31, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Investment profits depend on your selection of a good financial manager. Concentrate on staying even-tempered in the face of temporary delays or disappointments. Career opportunities abound in late spring. Consider working for yourself instead of a large corporation. Love and marriage top your list of priorities throughout the summer. You want to be settled in with a new love by Christmas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Think about how the commitments you make now will affect your financial future. Keeping your word to someone could be difficult if circumstances change. Set some money aside for a rainy day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Resist the temptation to dig into your savings to make a risky investment. Stick to the safe-and-sure now, even in romance. Do not let a tug-of-war weaken your resolve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid making special deals —they could jeopardize your financial security or reputation. Lay the foundation for advancement by taking career-oriented classes. You need to banish a secret fear. Consult a professional.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your ability to express your thoughts concisely makes you an important player at work. Someone who asks for advice is willing to pay for it. Keep an open mind if discussing politics.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Clever ideas can strike without warning. Jot them down before they evaporate. Be prudent in both romance and financial matters. Consult an expert about investments. Tactfully take charge in a family crisis.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not forget to fulfill a promise to your partner. A social gaffe may embarrass you for the moment, but it could also open new doors. A VIP offers to help your career.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Higher-ups value your originality and good taste. By showcasing your talents to your best advantage, you will put yourself in line for a promotion or raise. Keep your personal and professional lives separate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Honesty pays big dividends. Speak out forcefully on an issue important to your family or community. Others will applaud your sincerity and passion even if they do not agree with your conclusions.

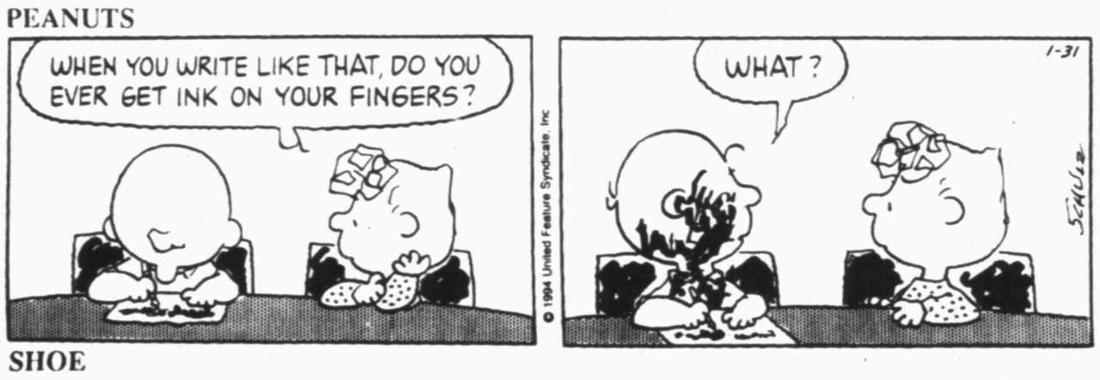

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New job leads come through networking. A hunch can save you big money! Communication with your one-and-only improves. A relative can provide valuable inside information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Words prove lucky for you now, from novels to memos. Reconcile with a sibling. Short business trips will help you land new clients. Let your partner make the next move in romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Getting better organized should be a top priority. Business agreements prove easy to finalize. Romance could be another story. Diplomacy helps you mend some broken fences. A small gift will help, too.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not let modesty keep you from getting credit for your ideas. Speak up! Double-check facts and figures to prevent costly mistakes. Friends prove their loyalty when the chips are down.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ762 ♡K8 ◇K754 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—This hand has become very good—indeed, had the holding included the jack of spades instead of a low card, we would probably ask for aces right away. Now we want to tell partner about how much we like our hand and the choices are three spades or a high reverse of three diamonds. Our choice is the former, since it highlights the quality of our spade suit.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1043 ♡AQ6 ◇85432 ♣K
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Beware of singleton honors—their value is usually overrated. Change the king of clubs to the king in any other suit and a move toward slam would be warranted. Here, we think that a raise to four spades, a signoff, adequately describes your hand.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K9753 ♡AK ◇A4 ♣J932
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Only two bids come into consideration: two no trump and three clubs. The cognoscenti would opt for a club raise for a simple reason. With your wealth of controls, slam is possible on many minimum hands where partner has good clubs.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8 ♡Void ◇AKJ652 ♣AQ10932
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	2 NT	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	?

What do you take?
A.—We are neither willing to defend nor sell out. With this much distribution the hand deserves to be played in our combined best minor. A bid of four no trump now would still be takeout for the minors and that's our choice.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ96 ♡98 ◇AKQJ9 ♣K4
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	2 ♣	2 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You are certainly worth at least one move toward game. West's overcall might have shut out partner's one-spade response and, if partner does have four spades, that strain might produce game when there are only 10 tricks available at both spades and diamonds. Bid two spades.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠1098652 ♡J ◇QJ10 ♣AQ9
Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you respond?
A.—You are in slam territory and you will need all the room there is to investigate. Bid three spades. That is a game-forcing response, leaving open the question of where and at what level to play the contract. Don't jump to four spades. That is a weak bid denying slam interest.

TV's Larry King accepts award that Michael Jackson declined

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Larry King took a bow after Michael Jackson bowed out.

King picked up the 23rd Scopus Award on Saturday night. Jackson declined the award while dealing with the molestation accusation that recently led to him settling a teenager's lawsuit for an undisclosed sum.

American Friends of Hebrew University, which presented the award on behalf of Israel's oldest university, recognized King for his humanitarian work and his use of mass media.

"He has used radio and television to shine light on complicated political and social issues," said Harvey Silbert, deputy chairman of Hebrew University's international board.

King is host of "Larry King Live" on Cable News Network, and his radio show, "The Larry King Show," is broadcast on more than 365 stations.

The group announced last July that Jackson would receive the award, citing his Heal the World Foundation and other charities.

At the time the pop star declined, he was said to be in Europe getting treatment for a prescription drug addiction and unsure he could attend the ceremony.

Past recipients of the award include Elizabeth Taylor, Gerald Ford, Barbra Streisand, Steven Spielberg, Johnny Carson, Quincy Jones, Aaron Spelling and Frank Sinatra.

ATLANTA — Sorry Broadway Joe. There were so many celebrities in town for the Super Bowl, stargazers got choosy.

Joe Namath, hero of Super Bowl III, was ignored by some fickle autograph hounds on Atlanta's Peachtree Street when boxing champ Muhammad Ali passed by.

Namath

"This man's a legend," said Anthony Willis of Atlanta, pointing to Ali. "Namath does TV commercials in New York. He's a nobody."

Ali

Gov. Zell Miller ambled by nearly unnoticed.

"Hey governor," an eagle-eye bellman at the Hyatt Regency yelled Friday as Miller tried to find a way inside past a row of limousines.

The list of celebrities in Atlanta included Frank Sinatra, James Brown, Rush Limbaugh, Clint Black, Hammer, Bo Jackson, Martin Mull, Stevie Wonder, Mary Lou Retton, Tanya Tucker, and Natalie Cole, who was invited to sing the national anthem before the game.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The court battle is on to decide who was to blame for the 1991 plane crash that killed most of country singer Reba McEntire's band.

Lawyers for the parents of McEntire's late band leader say it was pilot error. The airplane company blames an air traffic controller.

Testimony in a $20 million wrongful death lawsuit brought by the parents of bandleader Kirk Cappello began Friday in federal court.

Seven members of McEntire's band and her tour manager were killed in March 1991 when the plane slammed into a mountain near San Diego after a concert.

McEntire was not aboard.

Russ Heldman, lawyer for Cappello's parents, said in opening statements the pilot, who died in the crash, wasn't watching where he was going.

Martin Rose, lawyer for Duncan Aircraft Sales of Venice, Fla., said the pilot was flying low while waiting for clearance from a controller who turned his back on the radar screen for 1½ minutes to type a report.

LAS VEGAS — The first lady can expect first-class treatment when she makes her next stop at the Las Vegas Strip.

"Please come back and visit us again real soon," singer Paul Anka told Hillary Rodham Clinton Friday night at the Bally's casino. "We'll give you free drinks, a big discount on the room and $5 worth of nickels for the slot machine."

Mrs. Clinton was in town to promote President Clinton's health care plan.

* * *

PHOENIX — A sore throat sidelined Delores Hope, forcing Bob Hope to cancel a show featuring the couple.

The Saturday night show at the Celebrity Theatre was called off because Mrs. Hope, a singer, had laryngitis.

"Ever since Delores' success with her album ("Now and Then"), I've made sure we are a team," Hope said in a statement. "Seriously, I want the people of Phoenix to hear her wonderful voice."

The show was rescheduled for March 26.

LOS ANGELES — Edward James Olmos and Lorraine Bracco exchanged wedding vows in a private ceremony at a New York hotel.

Olmos is best known for playing the grim police lieutenant on "Miami Vice" and a hard-working high school teacher in "Stand and Deliver," a role that earned him an Academy Award nomination.

Miss Bracco was nominated for an Oscar for "GoodFellas." ———

Glasson cards Phoenix win

Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Bill Glasson, producing the best round of the lay, shot a 7-under-par 64 Sunday and came fro... two strokes behind to win the Phoenix Open by three strokes.

He finished with a 16-under total of 268 in capturing the sixth title of his career.

Glasson won $216,000 with his first 1994 finish in the money. He missed the cut at the Hawaiian Open, then skipped last week's Northern Telecom Open. His winnings for the event exceeded his season earnings for all but four of his 10 years on the PGA Tour.

Bob Estes, who kept the pressure on until he bogeyed the pivotal 15th hole after Glasson birdied it, got back on track with a birdie on the final hole and finished second at 271.

Mike Springer, Jeff Maggert and Blaine McAllister tied for third at 272, while Rick Fehr, who started the day tied with Andrew Magee and Dan Forsman, shot a 71 and dropped back to 273 with a bogey on the last hole. Tom Lehman also finished at 273.

Curtis Strange matched Glasson for the lowest round of the day at 64 and had a four-day total of 274, along with Phil Mickelson, Fred Funk, Steve Pate and Scott Hoch.

■ Golf Roundup

Magee, who won last week, Fehr and Forsman finished 54 holes at 11-under and made up the final threesome. Burns, Andrade and Estes played just ahead of them, starting 10-under and one shot ahead of Glasson.

But the two-time Kemper Open champion made up the difference and took over the lead with birdies on the first three holes.

Senior Skins

MAUNA LANI, Hawaii — Raymond Floyd, who didn't earn a cent the first day of the Senior Skins, made up for it Sunday, winning $240,000 and the tournament title.

Two-time defending champion Arnold Palmer finished second with $115,000 in earnings, including $70,000 on the final day.

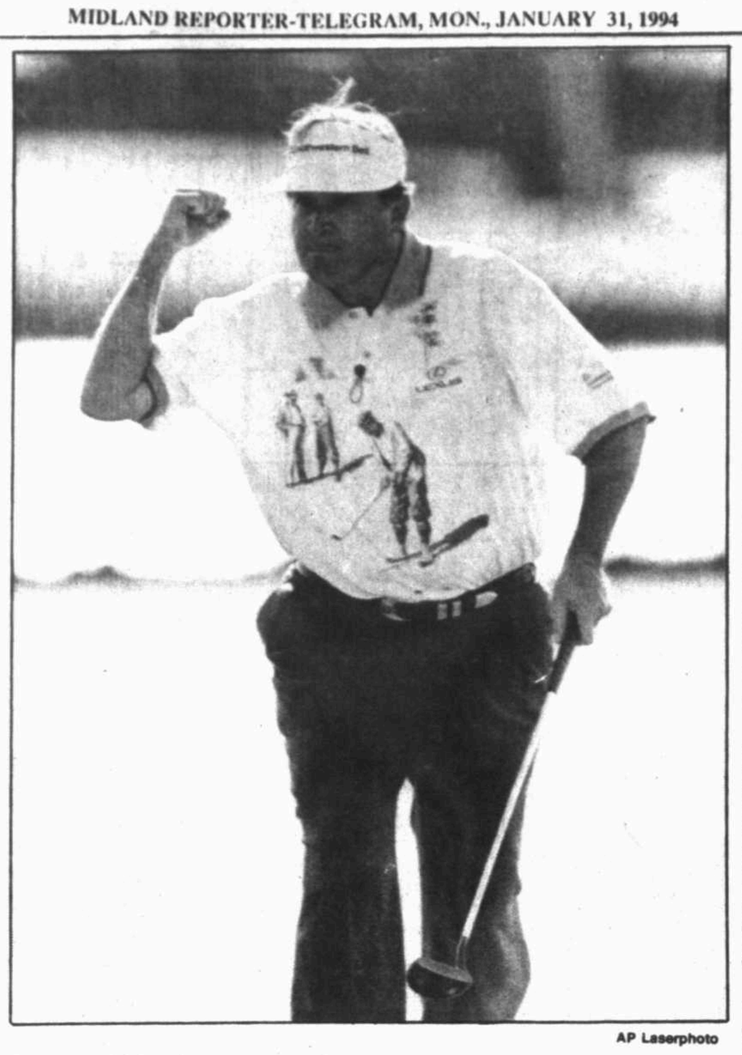

Lee Trevino, the first-day leader with $80,000, failed to win a hole on the second. Jack Nicklaus, after winning $15,000 on the first hole of the tournament, was shut out the rest of the way in the match of golf Hall of Famers.

Floyd, at 51 the youngest of the foursome, earned the final $70,000 of the event when he birdied the fourth sudden-death hole after the 17th and 18th holes of regulation were tied. Only he and Nicklaus remained in the competition at the fourth extra hole, and Nicklaus barely missed a long birdie try, leaving Floyd a tap-in to win.

"There were an awful lot of birdies out there," said Floyd, who himself birdied each of the four playoff holes. "I think this was probably one of the best Skins Games ever, by anybody.

"It was really exciting for me to be shut out yesterday then come back and play the quality of golf I played today. I shot a 31 on the front nine (Saturday), birdied four in a row in regulation today, then birdied all the extra holes."

The longest hitter in the foursome and putting extremely well in an event that rewards accuracy on the greens, Floyd won $100,000 on the third hole Sunday, No. 12, then added $70,000 with his fourth birdie in a row, on No. 14.

Raymond Floyd pumps his fist as his birdie putt falls in the cup on the 12th hole during the final day of the Skins Game at the Mauna Lani Resort Sunday in Hawaii. The birdie was worth $100,000.

Chaps to host Howard Hawks

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

Midland College hopes to stay on its current two-game win streak tonight when it faces rival Howard College at the Chap Center. Gametime is 7:30 p.m.

MC is 20-2 overall and 3-2 in conference play. The Chaps were 1-2 after back-to-back losses to Odessa College as South Plains two weeks ago, but the Chaps have gathered themselves back together and own wins against New Mexico Military and a road win over New Mexico Junior College Thursday.

Howard rolls into town with a 15-8 mark, but the Hawks have losses to top-five ranked teams, including Northeastern Oklahoma, Hutchinson (Kan.) Community College and two losses to Odessa College. The Hawks are in sole possession of second place in the league with a 4-1 record after Thursday's 91-68 loss to OC in Big Spring.

"I think their schedule has been very kind to them," said Chap coach Steve Green. "Not to take anything away from them, but they picked up a win at New Mexico Military. I think he (Howard coach Tommy Collins) was disappointed in the way his team played NMMI, but it's nice to win and play bad. Hopefully, the second half of conference will be kind to us."

For the Chaps, this is an important stretch in their season. Midland plays three of its next four at home with a Feb. 7 date against second-ranked Odessa College lurking ahead.

Guard Kavossy Franklin leads the conference in scoring with 21.8 points per game. He was held to just 12 points against Odessa College as the Hawks committed 29 turnovers in the game.

"Kavossy is as good a player as there is in the conference," said Green, "and there inside game is much improved. They are much improved over the first semester."

Leading Howard's inside game will be Charles Poe. Poe averages 10 rebounds per game for the Hawks.

Midland's inside game sparked the Chaps in a 108-80 win over NMJC. Starting inside players John Brown, Steve Walston and Kirk Ford scored 58 points and Walston tied a season best with 11 rebounds. The Chaps held the T'Birds to just 22 rebounds on the night.

"I expect Midland to press and extend the floor to a fullcourt game," Collins said. "Offensively, Midland runs very well, but they have a strong inside game, too. They probably have the best talent in the league."

CHAP NOTES: Midland College leads the overall series with Howard 25-17, but Howard has won seven of the last eight meetings, including two last year... Midland coach Steve Green came to Midland from Howard and is 1-3 against his former team... Midland point guard Andre Owens, a sophomore from South Bend, Ind., played at Howard player before transferring to Midland this season.

Jason Kidd leads California to upset of No. 1-ranked UCLA

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jason Kidd took over the game, and once again a new team will take over the No. 1 ranking.

Kidd had 18 points, a career-high 14 rebounds and 12 assists Sunday, leading California to an 85-70 upset of UCLA, which ensured itself of becoming the latest top-ranked team to have a short stay in that spot.

The Bruins (14-1, 7-1 Pac-10), who were the last undefeated team in Division I, never led during the game and shot just 38 percent. They moved into the No. 1 spot last week, then barely beat Stanford, 69-65 Thursday night.

Kidd stepped up after George Zidek's free throw with 4:41 left pulled UCLA to 70-68. He fed a pass to Ryan Jamison for a layup, then proceeded to score nine of the last 11 points for the Golden Bears (12-4, 5-2). He added a steal and a defensive rebound in the waning minutes.

"I just let the game come to me," Kidd said. "I don't tell myself to take over the game. I go how the pace is going."

■ Top 25 Roundup

No. 4 North Carolina 85, Wake Forest 61

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Eric Montross scored 22 points on 10-for-13 shooting Sunday and No. 4 North Carolina pounded Wake Forest's frontline in an 85-61 victory.

It was textbook Tar Heel basketball. Virtually all of North Carolina's points came from within 10 feet of the basket as the Tar Heels continued to work without sharpshooter Donald Williams. They didn't get a perimeter shot until point guard Derrick Phelps hit a 3-pointer midway through the first half.

No. 8 Massachusetts 76, Rhode Island 47

AMHERST, Mass. — Marcus Camby scored 15 points and Massachusetts held Rhode Island scoreless for more than seven minutes as the No. 8 Minutemen beat the Rams 76-47 in an Atlantic 10 game Sunday.

Massachusetts (16-3, 8-0) used a 13-0 run over the final 4:49 of the first half to take a 39-18 lead. During the spree, Camby scored 5 of his 11 first-half points, including a reverse layup that made it 36-18 with 1:08 remaining.

Massachusetts also held the Rams scoreless for the first 2:26 of the second half before Abdul Fox hit a jumper.

Lou Roe and Donta Bright had 11 points each for Massachusetts. Fox scored 19 for Rhode Island (6-9, 3-5).

No. 9 Kentucky 91, Auburn 74

AUBURN, Ala. — Tony Delk scored 25 points and keyed a second-half surge as No. 9 Kentucky beat Auburn 91-74 Sunday to keep the Tigers winless in the Southeastern Conference.

Auburn (5-11, 0-8) made it to halftime tied at 40 after leading by five in the opening minutes. But history then repeated itself for Auburn, which has seen game after game slip away in the second half.

Kentucky (16-3, 6-2) tightened the press after the break, and Auburn wilted. Travis Ford made it 46-45 with an inside basket with 16:52 remaining, the start of a 17-3 run that included 9 points from Delk, who is averaging 15 points a game.

Illinois 88, No. 11 Indiana 81

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Richard Keene, scoreless in his last game, matched a career-high with 19 points and Illinois grabbed 18 offensive rebounds Sunday to beat No. 11 Indiana 88-81 and end a six-game losing streak against the Hoosiers.

Indiana, with its fourth loss in five road games this season, fell to 12-4 and 5-2 in the Big Ten. Illinois, with a whopping 39-20 overall rebouding edge, improved to 11-5 and 4-3.

No. 17 Minnesota 92, St. John's 64

NEW YORK — Minnesota bounced back from a tough loss and a rough trip with an easy victory.

The 17th-ranked Golden Gophers (14-6) easily handled St. John's 92-64 Sunday, just 24 hours after losing to No. 7 Purdue 73-72, their first home loss of the season.

No. 20 Ala.-Birmingham 60, Dayton 52

DAYTON, Ohio — Robert Shannon scored 23 points, including five straight to thwart a Dayton comeback and help No. 20 Alabama-Birmingham hold on.

Chavez loses fight, crown for first time

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Although he didn't even see the fight, Pernell Whitaker figures he played a part in the surprise defeat of Julio Cesar Chavez.

"I must watch the tape," Whitaker said in a telephone interview Sunday, several hours after Chavez lost for the first time in a 91-fight career. At least, it was his first official loss.

Frankie Randall, a 15-1 underdog, knocked down Chavez and won the WBC super lightweight championship Saturday night at the MGM Grand.

"I was surprised, yet not really surprised," Whitaker said. "I figure that tough fight he had with me took a lot out of him. He'd never been through that before."

Chavez sustained the first blemish on his record when he fought a majority draw in a bid to win Whitaker's WBC welterweight title Sept. 10.

While one judge and most ringsiders thought Whitaker won, Chavez protested loudly that he had won.

He wouldn't concede defeat Saturday night either, and he blamed referee Richard Steele for the decision against him.

Steele penalized Chavez two points for low blows — in the seventh round and in the 11th, the round in which Chavez was knocked down for the first time in his career.

"I'm very upset with Richard Steele," Chavez said. "I protest Richard Steele's actions."

The deductions cost Chavez a split-decision victory. Without them, the card of judge Angel Luis Guzman of Puerto Rico would have favored Chavez 115-114 instead of Randall 114-113.

Judge Chuck Giampa of Las Vegas scored the fight 116-111 for Randall, while judge Abraham Charvarria of Mexico favored Chavez 114-113.

"Look at the TV (the tape)," Steele said. "That's all I got to say."

Chavez did land numerous low blows.

Chief leads Celts

■ NBA Roundup

BOSTON — On the day Kevin McHale's number was retired, longtime teammate Robert Parish had 14 points and 17 rebounds as the Boston Celtics won their seventh straight game, 106-94 over the Phoenix Suns Sunday.

The Celtics broke open the game after the halftime ceremony in which No. 32 was raised to the rafters on a banner. They turned a 55-45 intermission lead into an 80-58 advantage with 2:26 left in the third quarter.

The Suns, playing without injured players Charles Barkley, Kevin Johnson and Danny Ainge, never led. But they drew within 98-90 with 2:32 left as Cedric Ceballos had nine straight Phoenix points.

Knicks 103, Trail Blazers 93

PORTLAND, Ore. — Derek Harper scored 22 points, his most since coming to New York, as the Knicks completed a three-game sweep through the West with a victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

The Blazers, who had won seven of their previous eight games, shot just 39 percent against the rugged Knicks defense.

Patrick Ewing had 24 points and 10 rebounds for New York despite sitting out part of the contest in foul trouble. He and Harper each scored eight in the final quarter.

Harding implicated

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding's ex-husband decided to divulge the champion skater's role in the attack on Nancy Kerrigan after authorities convinced him Harding had turned on him first, his brother told The Associated Press on Sunday.

Jeff Gillooly was surprised when he found Harding had not stuck with the cover story the two had made up, John Gillooly said.

John Gillooly said his brother's attorney, Ron Hoevet, tried to convince his client Harding had turned on him, but Jeff Gillooly didn't believe it until he read a 46-page deposition the skater had given the FBI.

"Whatever implications were made against him, he has to rebut," John Gillooly said. "If it involves implicating her, that's probably the crux of it."

He said Harding told his brother shortly after she talked to the FBI that she had said nothing to link him to the plot to attack Kerrigan.

Kerrigan was struck with a metal baton above the right knee after a workout Jan. 6 as she prepared for the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Detroit. Harding went on to win the championship.

Hoevet confirmed John Gillooly's account, telling The Oregonian, "Jeff would have fallen on his sword for Tonya if Tonya had told him the truth. But she didn't."

WHAT TO DO IF YOU THINK YOUR CHILD IS ON DRUGS.

The Telltale Signs

Chronic eye redness, sore throat or dry cough.

Chronic lying, especially about whereabouts.

Wholesale changes in friends.

Stealing.

Deteriorating relationships with family members.

Wild mood swings, hostility, or abusive behavior.

Chronic fatigue, withdrawal, carelessness about personal grooming.

Major changes in eating or sleeping patterns.

Loss of interest in favorite activities, hobbies, sports.

School problems - slipping grades, absenteeism.

Take a deep breath.

You're not a failure as a parent. You're not helpless. And you're not alone.

If you think you're a failure, consider this: There are many kids with neglectful parents who never use drugs. There are also children with seemingly model parents who do use drugs.

So the first thing to accept is that drugs, while indeed dangerous, are one more problem for youngsters to handle. And they'll do it better and faster if you're aware, involved, and don't stick your head in the sand.

THE AWARE PARENT IS THE GOOD PARENT.

Part of awareness and a major deterrent to experimentation is to talk to your kids about drugs.

But even with a lot of parental involvement, there are no guarantees. So it's important to know the symptoms of drug use and to take action if you see your youngster displaying them.

THE WARNING SIGNALS.

There are no symptoms that are absolutely reliable. But there are clues (see box).

Most of these symptoms tend to be gradual which is why parental awareness is so important.

But don't jump to conclusions.

Many of the warning signs for drug use are the same as those for depression or for the ups and downs of being a teenager. There's also the possibility it's a physical or emotional problem.

But whatever the problem, we're talking about a child who needs help. Right now.

START WITHIN THE FAMILY.

Nothing beats the power of love and family support. That has to start with a frank discussion.

Don't make it an attack. And don't try to talk with your child if he or she seems under the influence.

Wait for a calm moment and then explain that you're worried about certain behavior (be specific) and give your child every opportunity to explain. That means really listening, not doing all the talking.

At the same time, it's important to speak frankly about the possibility of drugs. And it's particularly important to talk about your values and why you're dead set against drugs.

If your youngster seems evasive or if his or her explanations are not convincing, you may want to consult your doctor to rule out illness and to ask for advice.

You may also want to have your child visit a mental health professional to see if there are emotional problems.

FURTHER ACTION MAY BE NECESSARY

If your child seems non-responsive or belligerent, and you suspect drugs are involved, immediate action is vital.

First, you'll need an evaluation from a health professional skilled in diagnosing adolescents with alcohol or drug problems.

You may want to get involved with an intervention program to learn techniques that will help convince a drug user to accept help.

For the user, there are self-help, outpatient, day care, residency, and 24-hour hospitalization programs.

The right program depends entirely on the circumstances and the degree of drug involvement. Here, you'll need professional help to make an informed choice.

Another point: If a program is to succeed, the family needs to be part of it. This can mean personal or family counseling. It may also involve participating in a support group where you learn about co-dependency and how not to play into the problems that might prompt further drug use.

If you don't know about drug programs in your area, call your family doctor, local hospital or county mental health society or school counselor for a referral. You can also call the national helpline – 800-662-HELP – for advice and a referral.

WHATEVER YOU DO, DON'T GIVE UP.

That child who upsets you so much is the same little boy or girl who, only yesterday, gave you such joy. They're in way over their heads, and they never needed you quite as much as they need you now.

No matter what they say.

For more information on how to talk with your kids about drugs, ask for a free copy of "A Parent's Guide to Prevention." Call 1-800-624-0100.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekened mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family members, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
