

The Hico News Review

VOLUME 1

HICO, TEXAS, FRIDAY, MARCH 15, 1935.

Here In HICO

HAVING reminded us of everything else under the sun, this column now has been likened to a sore toe, or a cold in the head.

It has occurred to us that it is missed merely from the fact that it is not included at times. But its absence does not mean necessarily that the paper suffers from the lack of it. On the contrary, the comment we hear may be signs of relief, such as one experience after the clearing up of a cold, or the healing of a toe that has been obnoxiously painful.

Seriously now, we don't really believe that it makes so very much difference one way or another what we say herein, or how we say it. But according to repeated requests from certain quarters, we have decided to start out today, Friday, March 15th, while our system is clear of the many details involved in the course of gathering the news and advertising contents of a weekly newspaper, and concoct some sort of message for our most respected and faithful followers.

Remember, we don't promise definitely to include this column in each week's paper, for after all you know the subscription price is only a dollar a year.

RUNNING true to type, Joseph Cowan down San Saba way is another newspaper editor who apparently observes irregular hours. He must have had a busy day recently, or else received some sort of inspiration to fortify himself for the construction of a very critical paragraph which is of the type that we weaker guys write and then throw away before it gets into print. But this really appeared in the last issue of the San Saba Star.

"On coming to town one morning this week, an old codger who has not done a day's work since the Texas Relief Commission started in the homey business, greeted the editor about 3:05 o'clock with 'You're kinda late, ain't cha?' Some people who do not work, who do not have a plan about their work or have any ambition to improve their condition, cannot realize that some people work more in an eight-hour day than they do in a year. This loafer had probably come down at 3 o'clock waiting for another hand-out and thought his day was over and it probably was. Some people do not work by the clock but accomplish what they go after whether it be night or day. Some people live more in 24 hours than others do in a lifetime."

THEN up at Garland Bill Bradfield makes a center rush where angels fear to pass, and caustically criticizes a remark made by the wife of one of his irregular advertisers.

"Do the people read the advertisements? We say they do, and have proven it numerous times. The wife of a local merchant was heard to say recently that she did not believe that it paid to advertise, yet her husband is one of those merchants who has been advertising his business spasmodically lately, and is constantly telling others that business is rotten, and that the mail order houses are getting what business there is. We believe that he is agreeing with us, that it pays to advertise, when he makes that statement. He has not been doing very much advertising, while the mail order houses have kept the mails full of their literature, and continuously run large amounts of newspaper advertising. The trouble with him, and there are many others like him, is that they expect the man who bought something from them last year or five years ago to come back without an invitation. They are not taking into consideration human nature. People go where they are invited, and buy from those who extend to them an invitation to visit their stores and see their wares. Whether it be mail or local merchant that gets the business depends on which is willing to let the people know that they want the business, by advertising."

School Inspector Makes Report On Recent Hico Trip

The following is the detailed report of the visit of Miss Opal Gilman, Deputy State Superintendent, who visited Hico High School recently:

That the grade libraries be improved as soon as possible. It is requested that special stress be given to the state's "Reading Course" when purchases are made.

That if the scholastic enumeration will permit, additional grade teachers be employed next year. Some of the rooms are badly crowded now.

That special emphasis be given to the importance of having errors corrected in all written work in all departments.

That every effort possible be made to maintain the high standards now in evidence. It is often impossible to avoid retrenchment in the matter of adding equipment and instructional materials, but the quality of work can always be made superior.

That commendation be expressed for the following material improvements and additions:

Interior of some rooms refurnished. Additional equipment and library books purchased. Splendid improvements made on the grounds—estimated value $7500. The administration is to be commended for securing such a great amount of labor for school projects.

That again commendation be given for the following noteworthy features:

Good discipline. Cooperative faculty. Interested citizenship. Well organized system. Well-kept buildings and grounds.

MUNNERYL BROS. MOVE GARAGE MACHINE SHOP TO THEIR NEW LOCATION

G. H. and Tom Munneryl, who have conducted a garage, welding and machine shop in Hico for some time, have moved their equipment to the D. L. Cox building, next door to Tabor Produce, formerly occupied by Cole & Simon's Gulf office.

They have remodeled the building, and fixed it up specially for their use, and now have very nice quarters for their line of business.

They have a display advertisement in this issue of the News Review, calling attention to their move, and to the installation of a new electric arc welding machine, the only one of its kind in the county. All automobile owners and those in need of machine shop or welding work are requested to pay them a call.

attained along any line these days without ceaseless intelligent publicity and advertising. The people have become educated to such a course, whether or not, or enlightenment along most any line. A fight for trade supremacy among the leading towns of this county is rapidly approaching. As stated in this space last week, for the past two years Burnett has acquired a great deal of new trade territory, and a steady growth of the town has resulted because of such. That campaigns are under way by our neighbors, and we do not blame them to regain some of their lost trade prestige, is as obvious as the rising of the sun on a clear morning. It is easier to hold a fort than to take it, and we have been held in any kind of battle if its defenders failed to keep up the right kind of fight for its retention."

LIKE we go getting this darned thing too long on one and it seems like there is either a feast or a famine of things to discuss.

But we can't close without reproducing the following short paragraph from an anonymous exchange:

"Mesquite has secured a CCC camp which will be located near that town. This goes to show what can be accomplished when a town has a bunch of leaders who get up and go after such projects. A town cannot remain silent and get things done. It must be on the alert."

Notes From County Relief Commission Concerning Work

The Hamilton County Relief Commission moved their office this week from the old city hall building to the old Olin Pierce Furniture store building, which permits them to vacate the building known as the old post office, corner building and operate the entire program under one roof.

Heretofore several vacant buildings were used for storage of food, tin cans, and materials. Hereafter the sewing plant in Hamilton will be operated in the old relief office and the routing department, surplus commodity and all office duties will be conducted in the larger quarters in the Olin Pierce Furniture store building. This move was made by the Board so that the program could be carried on more efficiently with the approval and assistance of the Texas Relief Commission.

The front of the new relief office is partitioned off in such a manner that in the future clients may talk in privacy to the case worker or administrator, receiving their work cards and surplus commodities at the same time.

At a called meeting of the Hamilton County Relief Commission, it was decided that a stated meeting would be held each Saturday night in the County Judge's office at the court house at 8 o'clock until further notice. This was deemed necessary because the program was undergoing important changes which involves work projects and policies applying to the local affairs.

Although these meetings are business meetings, the relief client or the public is invited when they have business to come before the board one of these stated intervals and the relief commission is particularly interested this time in the development of constructive projects which will endure after the Relief Commission is a history. The Hamilton County Relief Board consists of the following: D. F. McCarty, Chairman, Hico; A. T. Jones, Secretary, Hamilton; Grady Laws, Carlton; P. M. Rice, Hamilton; and George Hurley, Pottsboro.

Upon advice from Adam R. Johnson, State Director of the Texas Relief Commission, the Hamilton County Relief Commission has been compiling records of employables for the last three weeks in anticipation of a new works program when and if it is released, this depending upon what the Congress in Washington does with the Social Security Bill now before them.

Through a system of occupational classification each worker will be classified according to the work he is able to perform and his rate of pay per hour will be accordingly. The Hamilton County Relief Commission will endeavor to secure those projects which will employ the class of labor represented by the worker.

Although the classification and a part of the office routing is known at the present to the relief commission, very little of the details of the new program are known and the system of classification now being worked out in Hamilton County is so designed that this county will be prepared when the work program is launched whether it will be for a "Security Wage" or "prevailing wage."

It is understood that two million eight hundred thousand dollars has been allocated for the first fifteen days of March; of this amount one million and one half was given to the Texas Relief Commission for the present plan which is to last the entire month of March and will permit Hamilton County to pay approximately 50 per cent of the budget, so existing in this county. The other one million three hundred thousand dollars has been withheld for the purpose of financing a new works program when it is released.

The budgets in Hamilton County, although they are inadequate and must be supplemented through other sources are fairly in line with other counties in the state and according to the Austin office the case load, although too high, also corresponds to other counties with a similar population.

In the month of March and prior to the releasing of the new work program it has been deemed advisable by the Hamilton County Relief Board to supplement the short budget in March with products put up in the canning plants in the county, and the Administrator started last Saturday to issuing those canned goods to families on the rolls.

Nine thousand pounds of seed Irish potatoes have been dealt out this week to those who signed up to plant a garden. A home garden supervisor later in the year will make frequent reports on the progress of those gardens, and the facts will be entered into the clients case record to his credit or discredit as the case may be. The Hamilton Garden Club will observe these growing gardens also and will award prizes and marks of merit to those who want to make the most from their home gardens. It is expected that the remaining part of the Hamilton County Garden Club will arrive next week and the efforts are urged to call for the seed which they want.

W. C. Homeyer Speaks on Poultry

Discussions on culling feeding, and managing of poultry composed the principal part of the program by Mr. W. C. Homeyer, of the Universal Milling Co., Monday night at the City Auditorium.

Despite the inclement weather, the meeting was attended by some twenty or twenty-five men, including County Agent C. E. Nelson, Jack Leeth and Mr. Smith of Hamilton.

It might be interesting to know that Mr. Homeyer is quite "at home" in this part of the state, as he was for many years a resident of Stephenville, and has made numerous trips to Hico and Hamilton in the interest of poultry management. Mr. Homeyer is always welcome in Hico and his advice is appreciated.

Emergency Seed Loans For Spring Planting Announced

AUSTIN, March 14.—Special funds have been made available to the Texas Relief Commission by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for the purpose of making emergency seed loans for spring planting of commercial and forage crops. It was announced today by Adam R. Johnson, State Relief Director.

"These funds have been made available to meet the emergency created by temporary lack of funds in the Farm Credit Administration which heretofore has made such loans," Mr. Johnson said. "Loans will be made in all cases of emergency, regardless of whether the applicant is on relief rolls or not. Applications will be taken by all county relief offices."

All applications will be passed upon by the local county committees which heretofore have functioned under the Farm Credit Administration. It was pointed out, however, that no loans would be made to farmers who are able to obtain credit through usual commercial channels, and that in cases where existing crop or chattel liens existed, waivers and non-disturbance agreements from such lien holders will be required before any loans will be approved. For non-relief clients, loans are not to exceed $500 for approval.

Mr. Johnson said the Relief Commission will discontinue making these loans immediately upon resumption of activities by the Farm Credit Administration.

Clairette Community Organizes For Its Big Free Fall Fair

The Free Fall Fair for the Clairette Community was organized last week for the purpose of trying to sponsor another of its annual events for this fall. The meeting was called by the president of the organization, James M. Logan, the vocational agriculture teacher of the school. The discussion of the meeting was to try to make the fair bigger and better than it was last fall. There were several speakers on different subjects giving suggestions as to how to handle the fair to make it more entertaining and educational.

The strongest point that I wish to put before the people right at the present is to grow special crops and livestock for the fair this fall. If you have an outstanding plant producing an extra large product, try to give it the advantage and see how large you can make it grow. The purpose of the fair is to try to encourage agriculture in this section of the country and make some records in the occupation. We have just fertile soil and livestock here, anywhere, and the thing we want to do is to try to get the people to growing more high stapled products.

We had the best of cooperation in the fair from all of the towns and communities last fall, and if they will cooperate with us this year in the same respect, we will do our best to make it worth while for all. I have never seen as good cooperation as we had last year, and I wish to say that we certainly appreciate everything they did for the organization.

We want every community to try to bring a booth to the fair next fall. We wish to have every one that can bring poultry, livestock, forage crops, and any other farm articles of interest to the people. A whole lot of things that the resignation of the old officers of the organization, the following ones were elected:

James M. Logan was re-elected to serve as president of the fair; Grady Littleton re-elected as secretary; George Salmon, vice president; Grady Wolfe, Treasurer.

The committees were appointed as follows:

Canning, Mrs. Hazel Self, re-elected to serve as chairman; textiles, Mrs. Leslie Dowdy, re-elected to serve as chairman; poultry, Hazel Self, re-elected to serve as chairman; livestock Grady Wolfe, re-elected to serve as chairman; forage crops, Homer Lee, re-elected to serve as chairman; curio booth, Rev. Stauford, re-elected to serve as chairman; entertainment, Mozelle Lee, and Leslie Dowdy were elected to fill that; horse races and horse show, Henry Mayfield, chairman.

Those were all the committees that were elected at that meeting, but of course there will be new ones created as the need arises. Each officer has pledged to put forth every effort to try to make this one of the outstanding fairs ever held in the county. Let's all cooperate and help add something to the fair that will make it outstanding.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR G. W. MCANALLY HERE MONDAY A. M.

Funeral services were conducted at the Baptist Church in Hico Monday morning at 11 o'clock for George W. McAnally, whose body was brought to Hico from Vernon for burial here. Rev. S. B. Culpepper of Stephenville was in charge of the services, and interment was made in Hico Cemetery.

Mr. McAnally was born on July 31, 1846 in Angelina County. He was married to Elizabeth Curton in 1866. Ten children were born to them, nine of whom lived to be grown and married. His wife died May 21, 1926 after they had celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary. They moved to Hico fifty-eight years ago and spent all of that time here except the last five years where he has lived with his daughter, Mrs. Pate, in Vernon.

Mr. McAnally has enjoyed good health and been active until the last three months of his life.

Mr. McAnally has been a member of the Baptist Church 67 years. He has lived a simple, quiet, christian life devoted to his church and family. He is the last of the Confederate Veterans in this part of the country.

Mr. McAnally became ill last Monday night, developed pneumonia and passed away at 6:30 p. m. Saturday, March 9, 1935 in Vernon, age 88 years, 9 months and 28 days.

He is survived by two sons, Joe and Travis McAnally, and four daughters, Mrs. Lora Pate of Vernon, Mrs. Jesse Pratt of Lorraine, Mrs. Minnie Bass and Mrs. John Day of Waco; twenty-seven grand children and fifteen great grand children, and a host of friends in Vernon and in Hamilton County who mourn his passing.

Road Meeting At Chalk Mountain Sunday Afternoon

Several parties in Hico Thursday received letters from W. W. Gibbard, Chairman of the Highway Committee of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, informing them of a meeting to be held at Chalk Mountain next Sunday afternoon. The purpose of the meeting is to talk over the proposition of building a road from Chalk Mountain to Hico, to connect with Highway 66 here.

Mr. Gibbard's letter, which is self-explanatory, follows:

Dear Sir:

At the request of a number of interested citizens, we are calling a conference to be held at Chalk Mountain on the line of Somervell and Erath Counties, at 2:30 P. M. Sunday, March 17, 1935. Chalk Mountain is situated on U. S. Highway 67 (State Highway 68) 12.5 miles west of Glen Rose.

The purpose of this meeting will be to discuss the proposition of a road making application to the State Highway Commission for the designation and improvement, including paving, of a new highway from a connection with U. S. Highway 67 at Chalk Mountain to a connection with U. S. Highway 281 (State Highway 66) at or near Hico, about 14 miles.

This connection is greatly needed as at the present time people living on State Highway 66 at Hico and south to Hamilton, Lampasas, etc., have no convenient direct highway connection with Glen Rose, Cleburne, Dallas and points north and east, and vice versa.

Please join us at this meeting and aid us in making plans to secure the building of this important improvement. Bring some of your friends who will also be interested in the project. It is highly desirable that the matter be attended to promptly.

Very truly yours,

W. W. GIBBARD, Chairman Highway Committee, Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

The letters were sent to representatives of a number of towns in this section of the State, all of whom are interested in securing the road which would serve a long-felt need.

It is expected that a large delegation from Hico will be on hand to talk things over with the delegates from other towns. There had been no organized delegation selected from Hico at noon Thursday, but plans were being made to have a representation on hand.

The road is of vital importance to this city, and everyone interested in its construction is urged to go to Chalk Mountain for the meeting Sunday afternoon, whether solicited to do so or not.

FAIRY STEWARDS' MEETING

The Stewards of the Fair Methodist Church met in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Goyne Tuesday evening, March 12th. Several other guests were present and much appreciated. C. C. Parks, the chairman of the board of stewards, conducted a very fine devotional service. The Reverend Mr. Farmer was the principal speaker. The stewards then held their official meeting. Among other business matters decided upon, they agreed to do some much needed repairing on the parsonage and on the grounds. A buffet supper was enjoyed by the company. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Parks, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brunson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Whitson, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Allison, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parks, the pastor, Mr. Farmer, and little Alton Eugene Parks.

Appointment of a committee to inspect the Texas Presbyterian College at Milford was authorized by the House Tuesday when it adopted a concurrent resolution by H. R. Stovall and O. C. Venable, Ellis County Representatives. The proposal contemplates the possibility of the purchase of the college tract and four brick veneer buildings to be used as a home for dependent and neglected children and converted in connection with the home for such children at Waco.

Keeping Up With TEXAS

Under authority of a city ordinance which has never been repealed, Temple can make the president of the United States a willing or an unwilling guest for five minutes. Thirty-one years ago the city fathers solemnly legislated that the special train of the president should be routed through Temple, should come to a full stop for five minutes, within its limits. Other trains stop regularly. E. J. Slubki, real estate man, recited the circumstances prompting the ordinance. "In 1904 President Theodore Roosevelt was to pass through Temple on one of his many 'swing' around the country. The Chamber of Commerce wired him to stop and make speech. His secretary replied that as the president's itinerary had been made it would not be possible to accept. Undaunted, Temple placed his signature upon the unusual law and when the presidential special pulled into the Katy station the city county were there to enforce the people's mandate. The president apparently thought the idea 'bully' for he gave a 10-minute talk, complimenting Temple for its perseverance and nerve."

Registrations of new passenger cars in Texas rose sharply during February over both January and February of 1934. The University of Texas bureau of business research said reports from 16 representative counties indicated an increase of 17.2 per cent over January and 63.7 per cent over the preceding February. Registrations of the first 60 days of the year were 94 per cent greater than in a corresponding period in 1934.

The body of Alvin Dietrich, 70, retired business man who lived alone, was found by friends Tuesday in an underground cleft almost in the heart of Gladden. Dietrich was last seen alive Wednesday and when he was still missing a search was instituted. The cleft was only a few feet from his home. The body was in 12 feet of water and was recovered by grapping hooks. One hand clutched a billfold containing 11 one-dollar bills. The other held a cap.

Highway projects amounting to an estimated $75,000,000 have been prepared for Texas in readiness for the construction program of undetermined size, promised under the federal government's pending $4,800,000,000 public works and relief bill. Though not even half the projects are likely to be included in this year's or any one year's actual construction, a long list of available prospects for building paving or improving highways and closing gaps in existing highways, has been prepared and will quickly be chosen when such projects conform to whatever federal regulations may accompany the new highway grants.

Two dollars per capita for each of the state's 1,560,630 school children is being paid, State Superintendent L. A. Woods announced. The payment brings the total to $9 per child for the 1934-35 apportionment. Woods said. Total of $16.50 per child will be paid. An additional $2 has been paid on 1933-34 allotments since September 1. Woods said, thus making a total of $11 per school child paid during the current school year. At a corresponding date last year Texas schools had received only $6 per capita apportionment.

Pretty, cheerful Mrs. S. E. Caldwell, who is fond of dancing, does not know that her feet have been amputated. She lives at Lubbock. Five days have passed since an accidentally-fired rifle bullet so mangled both legs, below the knees, that amputation was necessary. The 20-year-old wife of a rural mail carrier knows her nurse said that "something is dreadfully wrong" with her feet, but her family has requested that she not be told of the amputations. Until she sees her legs, she cannot know definitely the feet have been removed, her doctor said.

Wiley Woodrow Aycock, 19, Lubbock High school football player, who was a member of the mythical district team last fall, was drowned in Buffalo Springs lake in Yellowhouse canyon, 12 miles southeast of Lubbock Tuesday afternoon. About an hour after a boat in which Aycock and two other youths, Jack Green and Harry Haiselt, were playing upset, Aycock's body was recovered. The boat was 10 or 12 feet deep. Aycock's efforts of Green and Haiselt to save him. It was reported he could not swim.

Thanks to the Editor.

We Sophs want to thank the Editor of The Mirror for letting us edit the paper this week. We don't think that our edition will be quite as good as the Freshies, but, nevertheless, we have tried and we haven't had as much time as the Freshman had.

The New Officers.

Since the ninth grade has been so very unfortunate in losing their president of the class, Miss Eileen Alexander, who has moved to Lampasas, Texas, they have elected Miss Norene Houser, former vice-president, to preside over all business matters which arise in their class room. We are sure Norene will render her best of services to her fellow classmates as she has always been with most of them.

Mr. Ben Chenault was elected vice-president of the class and we wish him success. Every one likes this little Irishman (especially the teachers) because he is so friendly and very smart. He is one of the smartest students of the class and we expect great things from him in the future. We're sure he won't disappoint us.

First the sophomores trudge to their first class period. Biology. They pull through forty-five minutes of lessons and then listen to a lecture by Mr. Tiner on where and what kind of bugs to get for their collection. Then follows a study period in which they study next days lessons.

The third period brings them to Miss Sara Lee Hudson's entertaining English II. class. This is enjoyed and they soon hear the bell for fourth period. This is a study hall so much the happiest.

Then lunch. The most welcomed period of them all.

The fifth period brings us to Mrs. Segrest's Algebra II. class

CONSTIPATION Can be Helped!

(Use what Doctors do)

Why do the bowels usually move regularly and thoroughly, long after a physician has given you treatment for constipation?

Because the doctor gives a liquid laxative that can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Ask your doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains castor oil and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Your druggist has it; ask for—

Sophomore V. A. Members.

The V. A. class performed an initiation ceremony for the Green hands Friday night and are of our Sophomore class. W. H. Brown was officially initiated into the group of Greenhands. Several of our boys had been initiated before. The Senior Vice President, Claude Christopher, is a member of our class.

The Junior officers, Jack Hollis and W. H. Brown are also members of our class.

Mr. Lockhart announced last week that he surely was going to initiate the girls, Luella, Norene, and Nadine, as soon as he possibly could.

SYNOPSIS: On the old side-wheeler "George E. Starr," on its way to the Yukon gold fields in the first rush of '97, Speed Malone, experienced gold-camp follower and gambler, and young Ed Maitland, on his first trip, trying to recoup his lost family fortune, struck up a strange friendship. Maitland left Speed playing Solo with two other men and wandered forward, to be sharply recalled by the report of a pistol and the news that his partner had been shot and had gone overboard. Ed jumped in after him, without second thought. But the cold waters got him, and in the end it was Speed who did the rescuing, holding Ed's head above water until they were taken aboard a little boat by a French fisherman from Seattle. The big ship went on without them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Frenchy raised his eyes, folded his arms, unfolded them, and burst into a geyser of language which, if the activity of his arms signified anything, was far from pious.

When the torrent subsided, Speed grinned. He drew from his pocket five double-eagles, and dropped them on the table. "There is a hundred dollars belongin' to me and my partner. Now what does I up and do but gamble this yer hundred?"—he stacked the five gold pieces in a neat column—"that you're takin' us north to the camp of Skagway, Alaska."

But the fisherman began another outburst in his native tongue. With no sign of impatience, the gambler pulled out a short-barreled, triggerless .45 Colt, broke it open, clicked it back and set it on the table.

"I don't savvy your lingo."

land us near a man with a boat who ain't weak in the head and knees both. We'll take some other fisherman to the Yukon. To the golden river—" And he hummed a song which that phrase recalled to him.

"Gold?" echoed Frenchy. "Sticky with it." The gambler detached a damp cigarette paper, and became engrossed in the delicate task of rolling a smoke.

"You goin' there?"

"Goin' there!" Speed had a look of having been asked an outlandish question. "Does the stiff live, Frenchy, fannin' an ounce of sense to the ton, who'd work out a life term for a stake he could dig up in a week? Not even you, if you knowed the layout. Take this range of yours—a tough one to ride. I should reckon, with the storms and fog, broken lines, raw fingers and busted bones. And when you cash in, what's the figger? Frenchy's pickled carcass bobbin' up and down the dirty water of some cove, and the Susette a smashed tubful of mud and seaweed on a stack of rocks."

Speed, who had been watching Frenchy with a speculative eye, gave all the money before him a sudden brusque shove to the center of the table. "It's yours!" he said.

With an impulsive grab, the fisherman clawed it toward him. The gambler lit his cigarette and spoke to Maitland through a lazy vapor of smoke.

"Takin' the verdict, Judge. Is it legal?" Maitland had been considering the proposition as it took shape. The chart in the cabin was sketchy, but he had sailed broken coasts before with less to go by. He liked the feel of the boat.

the tiller into Frenchy's unwilling hands and go below.

He ate a mulligan Speed had compiled from the "tallies" of the previous meal, and tumbled into the bunk for a sleep. Awakened hours later by a thud of running seas, he had just caught a drowsy glimpse of his dormitory paying solitaire with Frenchy's cards under the swinging cabin lamp, when a sudden lurch sent chair and player sprawling.

"Pitchin' cayuses!" the gambler mumbled ruefully. "Am I goin' to ride this critter before we hit Skagway?"

Mention of Skagway reminded Maitland of a question he had wondered about. "Why do you choose that camp instead of Dyea?" he asked.

The other rearranged his cards with some care. "They's no call for a covered play between you and me, Bud. It don't suit my hand to meet the George E. Starr or her passengers till they have time to forget where they seen me last. There's no wires to beat in the North, and gettin' passed up for drowned is a good alibi."

That Speed had had a serious tangle with the Law before boarding the ship Maitland already suspected. He now saw that the security of the strange alibi lay in his own hands. Little as the fact appealed to him, he appreciated the other's confidence that he would not betray it. "I was wondering," he said, "whether the White Pass from Skagway is a better trail."

"It's a horse trail. Where there's horses the pay is better. My special reason for choosin' it—" the Westerner's face hardened a little—"is that a man I'm lookin' for is liable to choose that route. What's your plan in makin' for Dyea?"

"I thought I might get a long-shore job of some kind till I earned an outfit."

"You can do better. If you tied in with a horse outfit on the White Pass, they might pay for help and throw in the grub."

"But tools," Maitland objected.

The gambler's mouth twisted humorously, as he studied a card. "If you mean picks and shovels, Bud, the history of prospectin' learns us they's mighty little satisfaction in a shovel, and none at all in a pick. You can pick them up anywhere off the landscape."

From the chart in the cabin Maitland discovered that they were north of the fifty-fifth latitude and actually in Alaska, though the map did not mark the lower boundary of that long strip of Coastal islands called the "Panhandle."

Through one of these channels Maitland turned a course west of Zarembo Island into a long sea gorge, which proved to be easily navigable, but slow for sailing. When fish had followed fish, as an unvaried menu for days, the idea of fish became by degrees more sinister than hunger, even to Frenchy.

The cliff shadows had melted in to the glamour and mist of a wider channel when they heard the faint whine of a steamer's siren, passing southward by another course. It sounded queerly, in that solitude, a far echo of the world with which they had lost contact.

Speed wound in his line. "How'd you come to choose this route, Bud?" he asked.

"It isn't a course the steamers would take," Maitland answered after a pause. "I thought, if the George E. Starr were to pass us in the narrows, going back, someone might get the idea you weren't drowned."

The reflection of a wave to which they were rising illumined the others face but left his eyes obscured. "That's a long way to go for a stranger," he said.

Maitland shook his head. The word "stranger" hardly applies to a man with whom one has been drowned and brought alive again. "I was thinking as we came up the gulf," he said, rather hesitantly, "of how we started this trip together. It's a fresh start for both of us, in a way. Why couldn't we see it through as partners?"

The gambler twisted the line in his hands. "It says a whole lot to me, Bud. I've always wanted to square you for that lost outfit, and I could steer you some in the gold camps. But as for partners—you don't know who I am."

"Forget about the outfit. And the other trouble too. It's a new deal, isn't it?"

"Meanin'?"

"If you'll agree to respect the Law while we're partners, your word's good with me."

The flaw in his proposition appeared to Maitland during the silence that followed. While Speed might have left his record behind him, he had come north with a purpose he wasn't likely to forget. The Westerner's reply, however, took an unexpected form.

"Suppose I copped against a forced lay by sayin' I'd pull out and leave you clear if I had to tangle with the Law. Would that go?"

He looked up with a misty question in his eyes, and two brown hands locked on the barge.

From the outer waters of the Lynn Canal, a great marine corridor contracted toward their destination. Vast walls of rock loomed on either side to heights of a thousand feet or more, sheer out of the sea, casting a half-mile shadow into the gulf. On ledges of these canyon faces, spruce and jackpines perched like window shrubs. Above them, in the upper air, snow-crowned peaks glistened with a molten splendor, and in the deep, brooding shadows at their base, gigantic boulders lay sprawling in the seaweed that waved and streamed with the ground swell.

When the Susette traversed the shadow of these ramparts, late one afternoon in August, sunlight was falling in shafts into the field, pearly like the mists that hung like webs between the canyon heads, and dazzling the smoky fall of mountain streams which cascaded into the gloom and rose again as rainbow spray.

At a bend in the narrowing sea gorge a sudden echo among the shore rocks set the travelers' ears tingling, and shortly afterwards they emerged on a dazzling vista of bright water in which a cargo steamer lay at anchor, some two hundred yards from shore.

The landing beach shone gold in the sunlight, shelving steeply down from graveled flats, where a river canyon opened its broad delta on the gulf. Gray tents, scattered along the flats, and the snowy crest of a bald peak, which glittered high above the canyon, marked it as the outlet of the Skagway river and the base camp of the White Pass.

"Landin' horses," said Speed. The heads of the swimming animals bobbed at several points between the ship and the surf.

As they drew nearer, a gaudy pinto flashed into the air and took water in a smother of diamonds.

The broncho swam off—not toward shore, however, but in blind panic down the gulf.

"Might buy us a feed if we round up this cayuse," Speed suggested. "See if you can turn him, Bud."

Cutting across the runaway's course, Maitland skillfully matched the frightened zigzags with which it tried to evade the approaching sail, till they could see its opal-blue eye, flaming with terror. As the boat came close, a rope sang from the Westerner's hand, neatly dragging the pinto's head. To avoid dragging its nose under water, Speed played out his line. The Susette luffed but was a little heavy for such delicate handling, and a few inches late in bringing to. Rather than release the line, Speed jumped in after it.

The Frenchman's eyes blazed. Lunging sideways he reached for the knife that was stuck in the cabin wall. But before his fingers touched the haft, the gun roared and the knife clattered to the floor. In a curling haze of smoke the fisherman backed to the companion, while Speed carefully examined the bore of his revolver against the light and blew some smoke from it.

"Mebby you can translate that," he suggested. "Reckon the salt water ain't spoiled her recent none."

Though torn by the struggle and perspiring, Frenchy made a labored refusal. "Too far," he mumbled. "I lose ze foch."

"I can't pay my share," he began.

"Sink me, Bud," protested the Westerner, "if you ain't as unexpected as a parson's mule. The money was won on your stake, and half of it's yours. Also, you're the deep-sea shark. The boy pulled on his clothes and went out to look at the Susette. She proved to be a strong, deep-keeled boat with the remains of a cutter's rigging and a look of having known better things before Frenchy turned her into a smack.

Having had to overstay several watches Maitland was glad when he found the open sea at Dixon's Entrance, and was able to shove

POLITICS—SIAMSE AND OTHER

In this curious and topsy-turvy world, nothing ought to surprise anybody. But we confess to a sort of Alice-in-Wonderland sort of feeling when we read that a real king with several million subjects, an absolute monarch with as good a title to his throne and his power of life and death over his people as any king ever had, has quit his job because his ministers and his generals won't let him set up a truly democratic government! King Prajadhipok of Siam has resigned.

In a world where the tendency of the so-called "civilized" nations runs toward absolute rule by self-appointed dictators, it is refreshing to find one absolute ruler who recognizes that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, and who has tried to give the people more voice in the management of their own affairs, instead of subjecting them to more control and discipline from above.

King Prajadhipok found himself up against a situation which many a well-meaning reformer has discovered in other countries. That was a political machine which had managed to entrench itself in power under the Constitution which the king had promulgated a few years ago, and which would not take a chance of being thrown out if real political freedom were granted. Politics is the same game the world over. The greatest danger the American people face, now or at any time, is not of a dictatorship in the European sense but of political machines getting themselves so thoroughly "dug in" in local, county, state and even national affairs, that it is almost hopeless for the ordinary citizen to expect anything but higher taxes and less liberty.

TODAY and TOMORROW

AGE in business I know a New York business man who says he is all through with hiring young men and young women for jobs that call for intelligence, industry and attentiveness. He replaced his girl switchboard operator the other day with a man of fifty, and says that for the first time people who call up from the outside get courteous attention and his outgoing calls are handled promptly and efficiently.

He has a woman of forty-odd, a widow with several children, as head of his stenographic staff. She doesn't waste his time and money by using the office telephone to make dates with boy-friends, nor does she rebel against overtime work in emergencies. Moreover, she takes pains to understand what her job is all about.

About the only reason for hiring young folks is that they come cheap. It takes a long time for most of them to learn what work really means, my friend says, and to learn how to work efficiently. Many never do.

I think he is more than half right. I was struck by a phrase uttered a little while ago by the Rev. Ernest M. Stires, Episcopal Bishop of Long Island. "Our great problem," he said, "is the number of intelligent people who are morally unemployed."

He was talking about the great mass of "good" people who have grown so soft that they are unwilling to do anything that involves sacrifice or inconvenience, even though they might be of service to individuals or to the social order.

I am not quite in agreement with Dr. Stires' suggestion that the enthusiasm and self-sacrifice of great masses of people for the causes of Sovietism, Nazism and Fascism indicates a better moral tone than we have in America. I think most of the popular enthusiasm for those causes is the result of force and terrorism, and I am not at all convinced that the real enthusiasts, the leaders, are making any personal sacrifices.

I am fully in accord, however, with the idea that we have been bringing up a generation composed largely of those who put self-satisfaction first in its code and are too soft and lax to give serious attention to anything else.

Twenty-two college girls from

Missouri came to New York on a sightseeing trip a week or two ago. They were tremendously disappointed in the city as a show place. Skyscrapers didn't interest them; they expected to see something of the glamor of metropolitan life as pictured in the movies. All they saw was a lot of uninteresting rather narrow streets, with people who dressed and looked about like those back home.

As a "show" city New York doesn't begin to compare with Chicago, where every natural beauty has been enhanced by the wonderful system of parks and connecting boulevards and the water front has been made into the most valuable aesthetic asset the city has. The glamor of New York is for the initiated alone. All that a stranger can get of it is what he can pay for. He can buy theater seats or be neatly trimmed in nightclubs, but the real life of New York is not on public view.

WIND in Buffalo One of my earliest childhood memories is of my father saying to me: "When you see a man who grabs hold of his hat before he turns any street corner, you can be sure he comes from Buffalo." I have known Buffalo, more or less, for more than sixty years. I lived there for ten continuous years, from 1891 to 1901. I learned there to scoff at the notion that Chicago was entitled to be called the "Windy City." We used to be proud of our wind in Buffalo.

Now comes along the U. S. Weather Bureau and says that Buffalo last year was first among cities in the number of days on which the wind blew faster than 32 miles an hour; it had 97 such days. Chicago was 'way down toward the bottom of the list, with only six days of high winds.

But, after living for several years in Chicago, also, I want to remark that when the wind blows off Lake Michigan you know it! Also, that the hottest winds I ever encountered are those that come to Chicago from the West, across a thousand miles of sun-baked prairie.

LET'S TALK ABOUT CLOTHES

By a "Young Modern" DENTON, Feb. 26.—What about the clever and unique details of the new late winter and early spring frocks? Considerable thought given over to the material and general design is not the only necessity for modeling a charming creation.

Detail hints on costumes of young moderns for the ensuing spring season have been suggested by girls at Texas State College for Women (CIA) and they heard their list with an array of brightly colored buttons, which are so smart in the decorative. Presenting deep armhole sleeves, a soft fullness in the bodice and curved yokes, the feminized shirtwaists have made their debut. These styles, often topped with a small round collar certainly give a youthful appearance. Soft folds across the bodice of a frock from shoulder to shoulder make a new kind of cowl neckline, and the fullness is shirred into a raglan shoulder seam.

Capes that take the place of sleeves are "in the mode" now. Some are full at the back and gathered on to the neck by a pleated heading that makes for an interesting finish. Others come in the form of a split division at the back accentuated by a row of tiny covered buttons.

Do you scowl after you've walked a few blocks? Are you tired? If your feet bother you, even though you don't realize it, they're taking their toll of beauty, putting lines and wrinkles in your face. The obvious thing to do about it, of course, is to wear properly fitted shoes, or if your case is serious, see your doctor or a specialist.

Forty years ago a Copenhagen woman had the idea it would be good to have a building exclusively for women with store and office space, apartments and restaurants all occupied and run exclusively by women. And now, with a woman architect drawing the plans, the land has actually been bought.

THE WOMAN'S ANGLE

By NANCY HART

If you should open a canned food, and find that the inside of the can is slightly discolored, don't worry. Investigation has shown that the foods react on the tin occasionally, but that there is no contamination of the food.

Once in a while when a can is damaged, either in packing or shipping, air does get into the can and spoilage results. But usually the can has bulged before you open it. Take it back to the grocer and he can turn it back to the wholesaler.

There's another new material in the market—artificial silk in weaves and printed patterns suitable for draperies. They're chintz patterned fabrics, and absolutely guaranteed to be fast color and washable.

A bill that may mean more to women than anything of the year was introduced at the first day of the 74th Congress when Representative Walter Pierce of Oregon proposed to permit the dissemination of birth control information through licensed medical circles.

We've all heard of the man who has "arripped" largely through the co-operation of his wife, and then found that his wife hasn't kept pace with him. If he leaves her, he may be a cad of the worst sort. Certainly people will talk. But the cleverest women know that they grow more interesting as they grow older—provided only that they keep mentally and physically in trim. Their husbands prefer them.

If your favorite food is really apple pie or ice cream or something like that, you are decidedly in the minority, according to a survey of some sixty-five million meals by a restaurant chain that showed meat the most popular and potatoes next, with believe it or not, mashed potatoes leading the list.

Beef was first on the list, pork next and much less popular were veal and lamb in the ranking of favorite meats, and apple pie is really, sure-enough the most popular dessert of all.

Queen Mary may have had no trouble managing on the King's salary when it was fixed at the normal equivalent of $550,000 a year back in 1910. But like housewives the world over, she's managing on a considerably less real income these days. Though that salary sounds large the demands upon it have necessitated the most stringent economy, and Queen Mary has set an example that will be difficult for her successors to live up to.

FROCK WITH BLOOMERS

Pattern 8421: Little girl's play frocks are always more useful and practical if they have bloomers to match and many mothers with a view to saving laundry, make two pairs of bloomers for one dress.

The little frock sketched is unusually smart in its tailored lines of box pleats in front and back and the tab arrangement nicely completes it. Of course puff sleeves are the easiest kind of sleeve to make and most becoming too.

The bloomers are entirely simple with a yoke across the front and elastic band at back and the legs.

The frock and bloomers would be charming in figured batiste, percale or linen.

with HUGH KENN

Trusting souls, these New York apartment house managers, in the lobby of one we know, chairs in the reception hall are chained and padlocked to an eye that is sunk in the reception hall are chained and padlocked to an eye that is sunk in the composition flooring.

Two pairs of sisters, middle-aged, now, have known each other from childhood. Each pair has an apartment, one very like the other, and twice a year they trade with each other, leaving furnishings and equipment intact. One apartment is in New York. The other is in Atlantic City.

The world's highest kitchen is on the sixty-fifth floor of the RCA building in Rockefeller Center. Among the chefs who prepare food there for three dining rooms, there isn't a single woman.

Connoisseurs of that sort of thing say that the smartest night club in town is the Rainbow Room at the top of the RCA building. They have a "cellar" of fine wines and liquors, in spite of the fact that it is sixty-five stories up!

"Polly is just a name, like Smith or Jones." That's what they say at the State Charities Aid Association about one of the prettiest little four year old girls you might ask to adopt. And because the doctors can't agree about her nationality, they've been unable to decide what sort of home to put her in. The policy of the association is to place children in foster homes of the same nationality as the children, and they place hundreds every year.

Want to buy something special? Try New York, where they've recently put a combination knife and fork on the market for one armed people!

Crossword puzzles go on. And they go on at an astoundingly increased rate of popularity since contests and prizes have increased the zeal of the fans. In fact they've increased the ardor to such an extent in New York, that the Public Library has banned the use of its reference books to puzzles. And librarians won't answer puzzle questioners, either.

Sunday School Lesson

by Rev. Charles E. Dunn

Peter Delivered from Prison.
Lesson for March 17th. Acts 12:1-19.

Golden Text: Acts 12:5.
The story of Peter's delivery from prison is unusually graphic and detailed. Note that the affairs of the apostolic church were in a bad way. Our lesson reveals a crisis.

Stephen, the best of the deacons, had been stoned to death. James, a member of the Master's inner circle, had been killed with the sword. And now Herod, cast Peter, the leader of the twelve into one of his filthy jails.

We can imagine how panic-stricken was the little church. It doubtless anticipated the speedy death of Peter. What an outlook! Their leaders gone, it seemed as though the little band would be completely dispersed. They did not dare to openly protest against Herod's action. The only course open was to pray. And so they offered "long and fervent prayer" for the release of Peter. (vs. 5) And God answered their petitions.

There is a mystery in what we call intercessory prayer. Many of the prayers we offer for others are not answered. On the other hand some, like those uttered on behalf of Peter, do bring to pass the desire of our hearts. Some weeks ago the pilot of an air transport was compelled to make a landing in a remote Adirondack forest. The only passenger on board, a very religious man, began to pray. And his prayer, together with the magic of the radio, brought release!

The lesson, then, teaches the power of prayer. An angel saved Peter, and he was free to go to Mary's home, where a prayer-meeting was in progress. And here came a delightful touch in this thrilling tale. Rhoda, the maiden who answered Peter's knock, was so overcome with excitement that "she opened not the gate for gladness," but ran back to tell the others! (vs. 14) How human! Her emotion got the better of her. She was sentimental, not practical, for she neglected to open the door.

THE BOOK

..... the first line of which reads, "The Holy Bible," and which contains Four Great Testaments

by BRUCE BARTON

JEREMIAH

It is a terrible handicap to the memory of a man when a descriptive phrase or adjective attaches to his name, for people feel that they are thereby relieved from learning anything more about him. Thus "the patience of Job" has effectively cloaked the real significance of that heroic figure; "as meek as Moses" has distorted one of the grandest of the really great leaders of history, and the adjective "doubting Thomas" has libeled the brave soul who cried, "Let us also go up with Him that we may die with Him." Similarly, Jeremiah has been labeled the "weeping prophet" and, though there is hardly any Old Testament character about whom we have more biographical material, this totally unworthy phrase constitutes his entire biography for a majority of people.

He did weep, and good cause he had to do it. God laid on him a tremendous burden, and once when he cried out because he was carrying every bit that he possibly could God's answer to him was, "Cheer up, Jeremiah, the worst is yet to come," or, in the fine phraseology: "If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?" Only a courageous spirit could stand a message like that, and Jeremiah was, on the whole, the bravest figure in the Old Testament. He was the kind of a man who would have enjoyed a home, but it was denied him.

The word of the Lord came also unto me, saying, "Thou shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons or daughters in this place."

He was a priest, but he had little to do with the temple. He was a man of property, yet he encountered continuous privation. A friend of kings, he was cast into prison for reproving royalty. A stern patriot, he was under suspicion of giving aid and comfort to the enemy and was compelled at one period to take shelter with the enemy against the friends whom he had vainly sought to save. A natural optimist, loving people and desiring to be loved by them, he was forced to utter truths which estranged him from companionships.

Woe is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me a man of strife and a man of contention to the whole earth! I have neither lent on usury, nor men have lent to me on usury; yet every one of them doth curse me.

Jeremiah was a countryman, born in the little town of Anathoth. When the call of God came to him to stand forth as a turbulent prophet instead of a quiet priest, it found him modest and reluctant.

ADOLESCENCE

By this word, is meant the period at which boys and girls arrive at the estate of young manhood and young womanhood.

All family doctors know this to be one of the most critical periods of human existence; here human beings of greater or less worth are started on the voyage of life for better or worse; the very existence and excellence of our race depend on parental care and discipline at this stage, through which all young people must pass.

Many valuable and helpful articles appear in the many parent-teacher publications of our land; all are well worth deep study by parents who are heads of families. The average boy, at puberty has his world before him; as a rule, it is a period of dreams—a sprinkling of ambition—and, much of searching for animal pleasures. He is certain of nothing; here he needs, above all else, the counsel

FORMER HICO MAN MARRIED IN NEW MEXICO

Following is an article taken from the Goldthwaite Eagle, telling of the marriage of a former Hico man, Mr. Moffett will be remembered in Hico when he was a civil engineer in the employ of the Texas-Louisiana Power Co.

Relatives and friends of Mr. Roy Moffett and Miss Emily Saylor received the pleasing information that they were married in Alamogordo, N. M., Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The bride was reared in this county and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Saylor. She attended Goldthwaite high school and afterwards she took a doctor's course in San Antonio and practiced her profession there for awhile, after moving to Richland Springs, where she continued to practice and maintained her office.

Mr. Moffett was reared in Clifton and is a civil engineer in the employ of the Texas-Louisiana Power Co., and was with that company here for sometime, and made many friends among the Goldthwaite people.

All of the friends of the happy young couple extend congratulations and wish for them all the happiness this life can give.

They are expected in Goldthwaite for a short visit in the next few days, but have not yet announced where they will make their home, but it is expected they will locate in Clifton, where he owns a nice home.

SPRING INSIGNIA

By Ida Mingus Clay

Reanimation heralds birth of Spring

With vitalizing sunbeams warm and bright;

And birds in gay ensemble flit and sing

Their lilting tunes that emanate delight.

Alluring hints and Nature's robe of green

Bedecked the Universe in gala.

Transforming bleakness of a winter scene

Into a realm with life and growth renewed.

Some stupid souls disuse their eyes and ears

Ignoring Springtime's spirit all about;

They grope along depressed by needless fears

And miss the vibrant wholesomeness without—

Revivifying Spring reflects the mood.

Of promised immortality to man.

LETTERS from Our Readers

WHAT IS GOING ON IN THE LEGISLATURE

I suppose that most of you people know, by reading the papers, that there is being proposed much legislation. The Legislature has been in session almost two months and up to date there have been something like one thousand bills introduced in the House and Senate. Bills have been introduced, which if enacted into laws, would affect practically every kind of business in our State.

I was of the opinion before I became a member of the Legislature that there was too much legislation, and since serving the time I have down here, I am more convinced of this fact than ever. I find that most of the legislation being proposed here is in behalf of some special interest. Of course there is some good.

I am trying to study these propositions and determine which bills are for the best interest of all of the people. With a number of bills introduced, you can see that if a man passes on each one intelligently, he must of necessity put in a great deal of time studying the same; however, I think that is what the people elected me for and I am trying to do this.

I am especially interested in legislation which would take care of our unemployed, our unfortunate, and aged persons in the best possible way. I am also in favor of lightening the tax load which has been placed upon the people, if possible.

I am in favor of reducing poll taxes to one dollar ($1.00); car taxes by one-third (1-3); and I am in favor of a lower rate of interest.

I am still fighting for an honest and economical administration of our State Government, which I believe is one of the most effective ways of aiding the tax payers.

I am not in favor of placing any additional taxes on the small business man, farmer or laborer at this time.

I find that most of these schemes proposed down here, if put on through, would do this very thing: so I have heretofore consistently opposed all such proposals.

Several Constitutional Amendments have been proposed, and I intend to vote to let the people vote on those things which I think propose to make radical changes in our government, because I believe that if changes are to be made, the people of Texas, themselves should be allowed to make them.

I would be glad to have suggestions from any person in my district on any of these subjects which are before us in the Legislature. I feel that this is your government as well as mine; therefore, you have a perfect right and it is also your duty to have a voice in the same.

Sincerely,
EARL HUDDLESTON,

Washington, March 13.—Ask anybody in Washington who is the outstanding figure here today and more than half will reply: "Huey Long."

The Senator from Louisiana fills the public and political eye almost as completely as President Roosevelt did two years ago. For Senator Long is responsible for the first important defeat the President has experienced since he took office.

That was on the President's "work relief" bill, carrying $4,880,000 to be spent as the President pleased. The issue was the proposed amendment to direct that the prevailing rate of wages must be paid on all public works under this appropriation, although the President had stated that to do that would utterly destroy the whole project. Huey Long led and directed the fight in the Senate which resulted in the adoption of the amendment by a majority of one vote.

That, for the moment at least, puts Huey Long in top position in the political eye. To be sure, he had powerful weapons to play with in his fight against the bill. The most powerful was the organized labor lobby, which is bitterly opposed to the President's plan to employ men at "subsistence wages" on public works instead of the "prevailing rate."

Another was the honest feeling of a good many Democrats that it was not wise to put the practically unlimited power which this bill carries into the hands of one man, who had not even told Congress where, when and how he proposed to spend the money.

Discuss Compromise Measure.

Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, who is supposed to be in the confidence of the President, said after the vote that the whole plan to substitute work relief for the dole is dead. That does not necessarily follow. The outlook is that the Senate will reconsider its action, but at the same time, as this is written, all sorts of compromise measures are being discussed. The important fact is that the President's word is no longer unquestioned law on Capitol Hill, and that Huey Long has proved himself a master of political strategy, perhaps as skillful as the President himself, who has heretofore been regarded by experienced political observers in Washington as the most able political manipulator seen here in a generation or more.

The necessity of "doing something" to curb Senator Long is becoming a fixed idea in Administration circles. The belief is growing that he can either head a third party next year, or dictate the Democratic party nominee—who would not be Mr. Roosevelt, if Huey had his way. He privately calls the President names, publicly opposes his policies, and is now waging a bitter war on Postmaster General Farley. At the Executive end of Pennsylvania Avenue Senator Long, who was first looked on only as a joke, then for a while only as a nuisance, is now being regarded as a menace.

The Pension Mess.

The Old Age Pension project seems certain to be divorced from the unemployment insurance plan. The bill as submitted to Congress was a mess of unrelated items, but what Southern members are pointing to as the worst feature of the Old Age scheme is that it would pauperize the Southern Negroes. It can't be drawn, under the Constitution, to apply to white folks alone.

It is said by some Southern members that if every Negro over 65 got as much as $30 a month old age pension, his children and grandchildren would quit their jobs and come to live with the old folks, and there wouldn't be any labor left for the cottonfields. That may be an exaggeration, and probably is, but it may result in killing the Old Age pension scheme in a Congress in which Southern members dominate.

Only one major bill has been enacted by this Congress after nearly two months. That is the one enlarging the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. All other major legislation seems to be dammed up behind the work relief bill, with the bitterness of organized labor against the Administration growing more apparent every day. The proposal to extend NRA for two years, made by the President, will not get consideration for another two or three months, in all likelihood.

Mid-Term Feelings.

Even the President's friends are a bit concerned over the ineptness of some of the men upon whom he relies for political maneuvering. Too many have undertaken to speak for the President, with the result that several Senators who have been regarded as his friends consider that they have either been insulted or slighted.

Many members of both Houses are complaining that they have not been getting their share of patronage. No previous Administration ever worked as hard and as fast to get members of the opposition party out of their jobs and fill all the places with its own political supporters, but the Postmaster General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is charged with paying more attention to the recommendations of the party leaders back in the States than to the Senators and Representatives in Congress.

What is happening in Washington is what usually happens in the middle of any President's first term. Friction of all sorts develops—but usually it is smoothed out, as most of the present friction will be. Mr. Roosevelt is said by his friends, to be getting a bit "touchy" and inclined to resent well-meant suggestions. He is just beginning to find out what all Presidents learn, that nobody ever tells any President the whole truth about anything.

"Keep Up the Spirit"

A student with a genuine high school spirit is distinguished from an artificial one by his continuation of joyous yells and smiles, and by his everlasting pep. A school, that lacks students with these traits, can never stand. "A winner never quits, and a quitter never wins," therefore, when a school is unfortunate and is defeated, students of this school should never give up; it is then that the fight should be carried on to the fullest extent. Games in school are similar to the game of life; if one is a loser, he can not give up; he must go on raging the battle of life, and if he loses, he can, at least, say that he has done his best. He can say he has put forth his hardest efforts, but that his opponents were just too strong. If a school is fortunate and wins, the students of this school should continue doing their best so as to convince others that they have a spirit about them that will never fall.

Victory! Does not that one word mean more than any other word in the dictionary? For a school to be superior is a goal for which the student body should be very proud. But—can members of a high school secure the proper attitude toward victory? To be victorious does not mean that one has the granted privilege to throw his head in the air and forget everything, except the fact that he has been ruler. It does not mean that he has reached the heights and can go no further. He should strive for even better results than the ones he has just acquired; he must not stop; if he does, he is sure to fall. A school without an unending spirit is rather dull; the students become discouraged and see no necessity in "carrying on." The school song, "It's the school with the spirit," it's the school with the pep; the school with the loyalty, the school with the pep," is an old, yet true song, because school with these qualities is a school that will never fall.

What About the Debaters?

The Fairy girls' debating team, composed of two prominent Seniors, Margaret Blacklock and Louise Seago debated the Pottsville team Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the Fairy High School auditorium. The home team was unfortunate in drawing the affirmative side of the question, and was defeated by a 3 to 0 vote. The Fairy boys' team, composed of Odom Russell and Elton Freeman, was unable to make its connections, as the latter was sick in bed.

Thursday evening, the Aleman girls came over to debate Seago and Blacklock. As a misfortune would have it, the Fairy girls drew the affirmative side again, but, nevertheless, defeated the Aleman girls by a 3 to 0 vote. The Fairy boys team, composed of Odom Russell and Elton Freeman, was unable to make its connections, as the latter was sick in bed.

Friday evening both the girls and boys teams motored to Carlton. The girls were fortunate and drew the negative, but were defeated by a 2-1 vote. The boys took the affirmative, as the Carlton squad chose the negative. The Fairy boys were defeated by a 3-0 vote.

The two Fairy teams have a hard week scheduled. The members of the teams wish cooperation from their home-town people.

New Hall to Replace Old Stoddard

President L. H. Hubbard, pick in hand, begins wrecking of Stoddard Hall, first state dormitory at Texas State College for Women (CIA), which will be replaced through PWA grants by a modern four-story, fire-proof building. The lower picture shows old Stoddard in all the glory of former days, and (inset) Miss Jessie H. Hubbard, its first director, now associate dean of the college.

THOSE BABY BONDS

Have you bought your Baby Bond yet? You've probably seen the picture in the movie newsreel by this time, showing President Roosevelt digging down into his change pocket and handing Postmaster General Farley $112.50 for six of the smallest of these new, est obligations of the United States. Anybody who has as much as $18.75 that he doesn't need to use right away can do the same thing with any postmaster. The Baby Bonds are for sale at every first-class, second-class and third class post office and at every county seat post office, even if it is only a fourth-class office.

A good many of us bought Liberty Bonds, during the war, and a high percentage of us sold those Liberty Bonds soon after the Armistice. We rather looked on what we paid for them as a gift to the Government to help it win the war, or at least a good many of us did. Then some of us thought the 3 1/2 or 4 percent interest wasn't very much, and were easily persuaded to swap the bonds for some sort of stock, by high-pressure slickers who went around the country gathering them up. Also, because the Liberty Bonds were traded in on the Stock Exchanges, and at one time, in 1929, went down as low as $3, a good many folk thought they were no good and were glad to get rid of them.

These Baby Bonds are different. Nobody in these days is giving or being asked to give to the Government, but the Government must borrow somewhere, and it doesn't want to put the load on the banks too heavy, so it is offering better than bank interest for money in small amounts. The Government limits banks to 2 1/2 percent interest. A Baby Bond which can be bought for $18.75 or any multiple thereof runs for ten years, and at the end of that time the Government will pay 25 for it. That figures out somewhere around 3 percent a year.

You don't have to hold the Baby Bond for ten years, however. If you need the money you can turn it in and get your money back, plus interest to date, any time after sixty days. But you can't sell the bond to anyone else. It is issued in your own name and is not transferable. That will keep the speculators from trading in them, and prevent the price being forced down.

From where we sit, these Baby Bonds look pretty good.

"I HAVEN'T HAD
FIVE YEARS"

"To the old days I used to dread the coming of Winter. I was always getting colds—feeling about half alive—trying to work with my body aching and every nerve on edge."
"Then, a friend told me about Liberty's Cold Cream Oil Tablets and their marvelous vitamins A and B. I started to take them five years ago and I haven't had a cold since then."
"Liberty's Tablets not only help in getting rid of colds, but they also keep the throat and lungs in good condition, and prevent the colds from coming back."
"Get the genuine Liberty's Cold Cream Oil Tablets from your druggist today. Don't waste money on fake colds. Ask for Liberty's."

"WHITE PARADE" OFFERS
MANY HEART THROBS

Described as one of the most human and dramatic screen stories of the year, Jesse L. Lasky's "The White Parade," a Fox Film production, will be seen at the Palace Theatre on Sunday, Matinee and Monday night.

Loisette Young and John Boles play the leading roles in this first of all films to deal with the student nurse—her training days, her heart aches and her happiness in service. To judge from advance accounts, the picture sets a new high for faithfulness to life and for discovering heart throbs, pathos and laughter in the most realistic of material.

Student nurses—the girls nobody knows! These are the subjects of this tender and touching story, which Director Irving Cummings has brought to the screen under the supervision of Lasky. See this great picture.

A "High-Up" Hen in Chairette.

Some time ago an article came out in the paper about an old hen building her nest in an owl's nest in a tree. I believe the hen I have in mind is a little more "high-minded" than that.

Last week, Mr. Ike Salmon of the Chairette community discovered that one of his Rantom hens was making a peculiar sound in the top of a high tree. In investigating the situation, he found that the little housewife had found a hiding place in the very top of a high tree in a hollow part of the tree.

There had previously been a squirrel nest there, and she took advantage of the good warm nest and chose it for her nest. Mr. Salmon climbed the tree and found two eggs safely and snugly hidden in the hollow.

I have heard of people getting up in the world but that is one instance of a chicken getting "up in the air."
