Lightning strikes tank battery

A tank battery was hit by lightning Wednesday at 1:15 p.m. one half mile south of the termination of Rock House Road on the Homer Thorp lease, south of Big Spring.

Andy Anderson of Damson Petro Services and Paul Speight, Midland Petroleum Construction Co. employee witnessed the incident and radioed the sheriff's office.

A billow of black smoke rolled for miles from the intense heat of two 250 barrel tanks of oil and a water tank, as members of the Sand Spring Fire Department helplessly watched.

Bill Grandon, volunteer fireman and pastor of the First Baptist Church at Sand Springs and Fire Chief J.B. Hall, bemoaned the fact that the volunteer fire departments are not equipped with the foam and equipment it takes to control oil fires. Brandon also mentioned that Big Spring citizens hesitated to yield right of way to the fire department on the way to the fire.

Randall Boyce, pumper for Lester Clark, turned off the four oil wells pumping into the tanks. Guthrie Oil and Gas Co. operates the 320 acre lease.

Bill Whitten, deputy sheriff, and Bud Summers, reserve deputy, were at the scene.

Fortunately, the wind blew the intense heat away from the heater and the fire died down before it spread.

County farmers happy

Rains pose problems in low-lying areas

Bountiful rains, which started in the Big Spring area Wednesday and continued through much of this morning, proved a Godsend to farming sections but posed problems for people living in the low-lying sections of the northwest part of the city.

Water coarsed through several homes along Wyoming Street and forced traffic to be rerouted along several main arteries north of the Missouri Pacific viaducts. No injuries were reported.

At 10:45 a.m., today, the U.S. Experiment Farm here reported the rainfall had totaled 4.35 inches and the moisture was still peppering down.

Although lighter to the south, the rains apparently covered a wide area. Six miles north of Lamesa in Dawson County rainfall had totaled five inches at mid-morning.

Colorado River Municipal Water District officials were jubilant if cautious in their optimism. All creeks leading into the district's two main reservoirs, Lake Thomas and Lake Spence, were on the rise.

Moss Creek Lake, located six miles southeast of Big Spring, had 2.3 inches of rain fall between 8 a.m., Wednesday and 8 a.m., today and more came down this morning.

Clay Reid, a farmer who resides in the Coahoma area, measured his fall for the two days at four inches and said "it's the best rain I've seen in a long, long time. We'll make a cotton crop on this."

Reid said there had been some washing in the fields but he added he didn't think the damage was significant.

Ackerly sources said four inches had fallen in that vicinity, in addition to the rain which fell Wednesday. The heaviest concentration appeared to be northeast of the farming community.

Rainfall has been steady in Colorado City the past three days. Around 3.5 inches fell Wednesday, bringing the total to almost six inches in some areas. Much of the runoff there will flow into Lake Spence on the Colorado River.

Snyder reportedly has benefitted from four inches of moisture since Wednesday morning.

Garden City received an inch and Flower Grove half an inch Wednesday. The rain resumed again in those areas about 4 a.m., today.

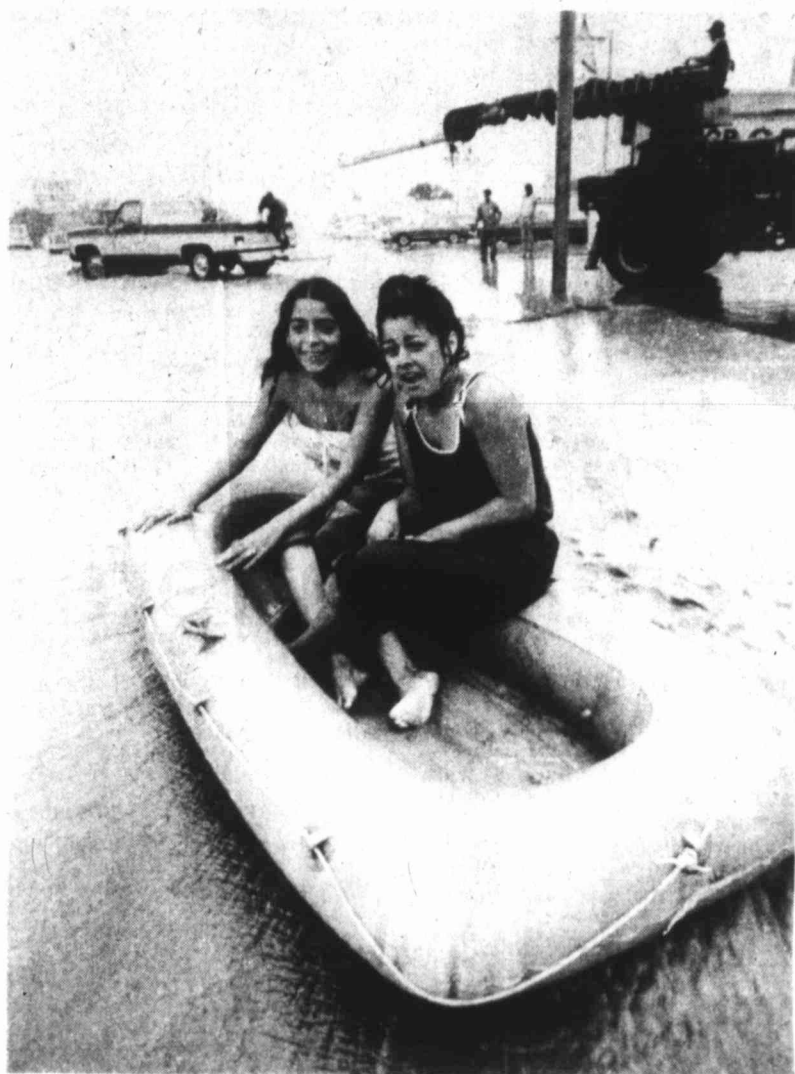

In Borden County, the rainfall averaged anywhere from 3.5 to 5 inches, according to CRMWD sources. Happily, the rain there, too, was general.

Since 7 a.m., today, four inches had been caught in the gauges of the CRMWD pump station on the Snyder highway just outside of Big Spring.

CRMWD sources also said the Colorado River was flowing three feet deep in some places, with individuals the river would rise still more.

At Lake Thomas Dam, the fall was measured at 2.5 inches early today. At the Big Spring-Odessa intake on the lake, the downpour was measured at 3.1 inches while Lake Spence near Robert Lee the fall was measured at 3.2 inches early today.

Spence had gained .3 of a foot of water Wednesday, with far greater gains anticipated.

In Big Spring, the rainfall was moderate but steady, continuing through the morning.

Numerous reports of cars being swept into ditches here in low-lying areas were received by the Herald. Most wisely had been abandoned by their drivers.

A funnel cloud was reportedly sighted Wednesday afternoon five miles west of Ackerly, according to the Howard County Sheriff's Department.

A witness reported that the funnel cloud did not touch ground, but ascended back into the clouds.

Another funnel cloud was reportedly spotted south of Lenora, in Martin County. According to Grover Springer, who questioned the man who reported the sighting, the funnel occurred south of the Lenora schoolhouse.

"It was only there for three or four minutes and then it dissipated," Springer said.

Springer, who lives on Andrews Highway, 25 miles west of Big Spring, said that Lenora had received about 2.5-inches of rain since Tuesday. A downpour began at about 3 or 4 a.m. today, he said, and he estimated that an inch of rain had fallen since then.

It was not raining this morning in Forsan Nova Scudday said at 9 a.m. She said that Forsan received its downpour Wednesday and it was only misty today. About an inch of rain fell on Forsan during the night, however.

Rain had just begun falling in Lomax when Cecil Long, who lives about 15 miles southwest of Big Spring, was contacted at 9 a.m. He said that the rainfall in Lomax Wednesday and during the night amounted to about 0.6-inches.

Two inches of rain fell ten miles northwest of Big Spring Wednesday according to C.J. Russell. Russell estimated that another 1.5 to 2 inches more had fallen during the night.

"It's still coming down," he said. According to Sharon Cregar, about 6-inches of rain fell in Elbow Wednesday.

Stanton soaked up about 0.3-inches of rain Wednesday, according to the Mitchell County Sheriff's Department, and another estimated 1.5-inches had fallen by 9:30 a.m. today.

Overdose of rain chases snakes

Swirling waters snag cars

Herald to report flood waters rising around her home. In an adventurous spirit, Danny "Flash" Valdes, Herald photographer, decided to brave the forces of Ma Nature and get a picture of the home for today's front page.

Gliding down the overpass, we saw a situation that hinted of danger to me and some great shots to Valdes. Not less than a dozen cars, with drivers and passengers inside, were at a standstill in about two feet of water in the middle of Lamesa Highway, between N.W. 5th and 6th Streets. Onward, plunged Valdes.

With swirling waters slapping at the doors and beneath the car, and water rising to three inches around our feet, a wet distributor cap brought the vehicle to a halt.

With the help of fast rushing water, Valdes was able to steer the vehicle to the side of the road. As he bailed water from the inside, U.S. Postman Tom Conway, pulled aside. Despite the hazardous conditions, he was delivering the mail.

Though the underside of the mail truck is about two feet off of the ground, Conway had wet feet.

"I was on my route up around Cherry and Wyoming Streets," he said. "It's a real mess up there. Water came in one side (of the truck), over my feet, and went right out the other side."

Conway said he had delivered mail all along his regular route "so far". He was worried about the Banks Addition, another reported mess on the north side.

Despite the deluge of water, cars, pickups and Mack trucks hauling loads continued to brave the "river". One Mack truck gently pushed a stalled car on its way.

The highway department was closing off the north side by the time Valdes and I were headed back to higher ground. Police units were being dispatched to one accident site after another over the police radio.

A unit was dispatched to Goliah where, according to the dispatcher, "It's nothing but a river from the 800 (See Herald, page 2A, col. 1)

Action/reaction: Fireworks fines

Q. How many citations were given out by our police department for setting off fireworks the past July 4? What's the use of having a city ordinance of this sort if we can't enforce it?

A. Four persons paid fines for violating the law regarding the exploding of fireworks within the city limits, according to police records. People who get impatient because law enforcement officials do not take consistent action against such offenses should take into consideration the fact that (1) the alleged offenders have to be caught in the act, or (2) have to be seen committing the act by someone willing to testify against them. People should also realize they have a right to sign a complaint in such cases just as do the peace officers.

RARE SIGHT — Big Spring, which has been experienced, if not a drought, then a long dry spell, had rarely seen the likes of water which flowed through the low-lying sections of the city this morning when heavy rains hit the area. The wall of water here, appearing at Fifth Street and North Gregg, halted traffic along US 87.

STALLED CARS — Dry arroyos became raging rivers in Big Spring for a time this morning when heavy rains descended on the area. Several cars drowned out in trying to negotiate US 87 in the north part of the city, forcing some motorists to flee to higher ground.

block north." There was also a report of rising waters of Wood Street.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Harper was watching her fence float away down Wyoming Street.

"The water took my fence down and the fence at 807 Wyoming, too," she said, when I called to apologize for not making it to her home. "I was just pulling the debris out my yard. My yard is full of snakes!"

"Are they alive?" I asked.

"Yes!"

"What kind are they?" I quizzed.

"I don't know. I don't want to know."

The snakes had been washed up on

Mrs. Harper's yard by the waters which had claimed her fence — a trade she wasn't too pleased with.

Down the street, Dorothy Green, 705 Wyoming, was watching water swirl around the top of her front steps.

"It's coming right up the steps," she said, adding that she had been somewhat fearful that the water would come into her home.

The G.W. Webb Farm on Lamesa Highway received some damage to cotton crops when the muddy waters rose above the plants. The foreman, Albert Long, had called the Webbs to tell them that some of the crop was under water and several inches of water had seeped into the fieldhand house.

"He (Long) has been out there several times surveying the damage," Mrs. Webb said. Long could not be reached for further information.

The overdose of rain this morning was not greeted entirely with despair. Some kids, according to the police radio, found shooting frogs with B.B. guns a fair sport in one part of town and a pair of very wet young women, Annette Castro and Rosalinda Lopez, took advantage of the situation by hopping aboard an inflated raft and drifting through the north side.

Recruiting violations investigated

DALLAS (AP) — An investigation into alleged recruiting of unqualified persons has resulted in the removal of the Army's commanding officer in charge of North Central Texas recruiting, the Dallas Times Herald reported Tuesday.

Lt. Col. Harlen Fenn and 11 subordinates were removed from their jobs as part of a national probe involving allegations that recruiters helped enlistees cheat on entrance tests and doctored education and arrest records, the newspaper said.

The Times Herald quoted unnamed sources who said a recent examination of Dallas recruiting records turned up at least 200 instances of possible record falsifications since January 1977.

The sources said the questionable recruitments all involved tampering with educational records. Other charges included allegations that one recruiter helped an enlistee cheat on his entrance examination and that superiors failed to discipline recruiters suspected of engaging in illegal recruiting practices.

Jordan orders evaluations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided to accept the resignation of HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano and to replace him with Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Harris, several sources reported today.

The outspoken, liberal secretary of Health, Education and Welfare became the first casualty of Carter's Cabinet shakeup. Califano abruptly canceled a congressional appearance and called a news conference later today at which sources said he was expected to announce his departure.

Other sources said that Mrs. Harris had accepted another post in the government and that it would be HEW.

There was no formal confirmation from the White House.

Meanwhile, Hamilton Jordan, taking over as White House chief of staff, ordered an evaluation of top officials throughout the government while President Carter's Cabinet members waited today to learn whether their resignations would be accepted.

The only formal announcement Wednesday from the White House revealed Jordan's promotion.

It was unclear whether Carter would announce today or Friday which resignations he would accept.

among the 30 outstanding ones submitted earlier by his Cabinet and top White House staff.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said today the President "is well on the track of concluding those decisions, certainly within the next few days."

Asked on the CBS-TV "Morning News" how widespread the shakeup would be, Powell replied: "There is no goal or target for shifting people around." He added that officials in top policy-making posts "ought to go through a process of evaluation. Certainly that's something that happens in any successful institution in the private sector."

Continuing uncertainty about the shakeup has helped depress the dollar on international money markets. But Powell said this should not "bar a president from taking action that he needs to take in order to set his administration in the proper shape to deal with the priorities that he feels are important to the country."

Mrs. Harris was the center of speculation Wednesday. Sources who declined to be named said she met with Carter and Jordan at the White House, first at 10 a.m. and again at 4 p.m.

She refused to discuss the substance of the talks with even her closest associates. Nevertheless, they were convinced that she would not be fired and, indeed, had been offered another post, probably a more desirable one.

Speculation also focused on the futures of Joseph A. Califano Jr., the secretary of health, education and welfare; Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal; Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger; and Transportation Secretary Brock Adams.

Califano was believed to be high on Carter's hit list, according to knowledgeable HEW sources. The HEW secretary, who has close ties to traditional liberal Democrats, has feuded with Jordan from the administration's start.

At HEW, sources who declined to be identified said Califano did not know whether he would be fired, but he expected the worst. Aides to Adams and Blumenthal also expressed fear their bosses' resignations would be accepted.

From the White House to Cabinet departments to public interest groups, a rumor made the rounds that Mrs. Harris was offered Califano's job, but it was reliably learned there was no factual basis for the gossip.

And a top Schlesinger aide, who asked not to be identified, told Associated Press Radio "it is inevitable that President Carter is going to accept Secretary Schlesinger's resignation."

Schlesinger told reporters he had no idea about his fate.

It was learned that when the smoke clears from the White House staff and Cabinet shakeup, Carter hopes to become a "teaching president," freed from settling administration bickering to concentrate on long-range national problems.

That goal was reflected in Jordan's promotion to chief of staff, which for the first time in Carter's 30 months in office elevated one staff member above others at the top. Carter's resistance to such a move reflected concern over abuses of power laid to former President Richard M. Nixon's chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman.

Press secretary Jody Powell said Carter told White House staff members that "they should no longer consider Mr. Jordan their

Cyclists need all help they can get

The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, which speaks for the insurance industry, has asked the federal government to require that henceforth a motorcycle's running lights come on automatically when a cycle is started and remain burning until the engine is cut off.

The object, of course, is to lessen the death toll among bike riders and to assure greater visibility for motorcyclists.

THIS CONCERN is more than casual, it should be noted. From 1976 to 1977, motorcycle deaths rose 24 percent, and the increase is continuing.

Admittedly, this is due in part to the fact that 29 states have repealed mandatory helmet laws. There is another reason: There are now far more people traveling about on two-wheelers than ever before due to the gasoline shortage.

Having one's headlights on might not make all that much difference — but, then again, there's really not that much difference between a close call and a fatality.

Safety experts and law enforcement officials have been pleading with motorcyclists for years to drive with their lights on. If they won't take the hint, perhaps the government should make it mandatory.

MOTORCYCLISTS DON'T always get the respect they deserve on the nation's roads and some autoists go out of their way to show their disgust for the people on the two-wheelers — tailgating them on occasions and trying to force them off the road at other times with noise pollution (the constant soundings of their horns).

Most cyclists are courteous and practice good riding habits. The driving public might as well get used to their presence, because there is going to be a lot more of them as the gasoline situation gets tighter.

Brain surgery

Art Buchwald

KUNMING, China — There are many ways to see China. If you are a tourist you get to go to museums, palaces and theaters. If you travel with the Secretary of HEW, Joe Califano, you get to see a lot of brain operations. The Chinese are very proud of performing brain operations with acupuncture. That and Peking Duck are their main specialties, and each hospital wanted to prove they could do it better than the one we had just visited.

IN KUNMING, the doctors permitted Califano to talk to a man while he was being worked on. It's hard to believe but the patient was wide awake and in control of all his faculties as he conversed with the secretary.

As I watched, I couldn't help thinking what the man would say when he got back to his commune that evening for dinner, with his head in bandages.

"Well, Wu Ling, what did you do in Kunming today?"

"I had a brain operation."

"What a great honor. How were you selected?"

"I was walking past the hospital on the way to the Chinese Herb Pharmacy, and two doctors came out and said, 'If you have nothing better to do would you like to stop in for a brain operation? It won't take long and it will help Chinese-American friendship.'"

"I explained that I had several errands to make and suggested they find someone else, but they told me this wasn't an ordinary brain operation. It was to be performed for a visiting delegation of important Americans, headed by their Minister of Health. They told me it was also going to be covered by ABC and NBC television as well as correspondents from the New York Times, the Washington Post, and the Wall Street Journal."

"WELL, THAT changed the picture as far as I was concerned and I said, 'Count me in.' They took me inside gave me a glass of hot tea and before I knew it I was lying on the operating table. Peering at me through glass windows in the ceiling were at least two dozen Americans, including their Minister of Health."

"You're making all this up, Wu Ling."

"May Chairman Mao strike me dead if I'm lying. The doctors started sticking needles into me, and before you knew it I could feel nothing. Then one of them started to cut off the top of my head."

"It didn't hurt?"

"Of course not. My head felt a little cool for a few moments, but I wasn't uncomfortable. But I haven't told you the best part. While they were sawing away, the doctors invited the Minister into the operating room to talk to me."

"I thought we weren't supposed to talk to foreigners after the March 1 edict."

"They told me it was perfectly all right. Patients having brain operations are not covered by the new law."

"What did the Minister ask you?"

"He asked me how I was feeling, and I told him 'fine.'"

"Then he asked me if I would like to visit the United States. I told him I'd like to very much because I knew the Americans were true friends of the People's Republic, and it was important for our Four Modernizations' Plan to have trade and technical assistance from the United States to further normalization between the two great nations. The doctors liked that."

"Did the Minister say anything else?"

"Yes. He told me a brain operation such as I was having would cost at least $3,000 in the United States, which is over 4,000 yuan, but he hoped to cut it down to $2,900 in his new health bill."

Cramps usually follow pre-menstrual tension

Paul E. Ruble, M.D.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am 26 and have menstrual cramps. Is this normal? Is there something I can take that will prevent or at least ease the cramps? I had a check up and everything was O.K. — L.T.

Women who have pre-menstrual tension usually have menstruation cramps too. The precise cause is unclear, but many gynecologists feel it is hormone-related. It does mean that you are producing eggs because women who have the problem are ovulating.

Medicines can relieve the problem if it becomes disabling, which it may. Pain-relieving drugs combined with antispasmodics (atropine-type) are tried first. If that doesn't help, stopping the ovulation always does. Many doctors recommend the birth control pill for this purpose. If a woman wants to conceive, then other drugs (progestin) can be used during certain times of the cycle. Even male hormones have been used successfully at about mid-cycle (objectionable to some women who may have problems with unwanted hair growth from the hormone).

Discuss your problem with your physician. He can advise which treatment is best or you. Keeping physically active can reduce the severity of the cramping. Women in athletics, I'm told, seldom have such problems.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have read that children may be cured of bedwetting by being treated for allergies. Since your column is so widely-read, a word from you might be a Godsend for parents whose children might be wetters. — D.G.F.

There are many causes for bedwetting, from too small bladder capacity to psychological disturbance. Chronic bladder infection can be a cause, and in that sense an allergy factor is certainly one to consider after the more serious physical and emotional causes have been investigated. I have mentioned this in the past, but am glad to repeat for the benefit of new readers. It is discussed in more depth in the booklet, "Bedwetting: Ways to Stop It." For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have had a cough for a long time and sometimes a little choking and coughing up of phlegm when I get out in the cold. My doctor told me it is a bronchial cough. What does that really mean? — Z.M.

Bronchitis is inflammation of the bronchial tubes, the airways to the lungs. An allergy or reaction to pollutants (as cigarette smoke) can affect the tubes and cause a cough.

Sometimes irritants can cause permanent scarring of the tubes, producing a chronic cough and, incidentally, making the tubes more prone to infection. The phlegm is a result of increased mucus production in the glands that line the bronchial tree. If it is heavy and yellowish suspect infection.

Mailbag

Dear Editor:

After attending the City Council meeting of June 16, I am convinced that some things need to be cleared up. Linda Baker and myself became concerned about the safety of our school children, especially about the heavy truck traffic in our school zones.

We went before the Traffic Commission and the City Council and they agreed that truck traffic in these zones needed to be regulated. The streets involved were the streets with the largest number of schools, Golliad, Birdwell Lane and 11th Place.

We did not ask that all trucks be banned from these areas, all we asked was that trucks that were neither delivering or picking up goods in the areas be routed around the city. Our primary concern was and still is the welfare of our school children.

Somewhere along the line Second Street was added to the list of restricted areas, why I don't know. I can only assume someone at City Hall added it to our original request. The first time this request was brought before the City Council it passed unanimously. Mrs. Baker and myself spoke with Councilman Bill Henkle after that meeting and he agreed 100 percent with what we were doing. When it was suggested at Tuesday's meeting that we contact Odessa and Midland and obtain copies of their truck ordinances Mr. Henkle was overheard (by a member of the press and a member of the audience) remarking to his fellow council members that "Tina and Mrs. Bradbury could drive to Midland and Odessa and pick up the copies."

I can only assume that this was a poor try at humor on Mr. Henkle's part. I would like to believe that he is more concerned with our school children than with a conflict of personalities. I would encourage all parents and other interested persons to attend the city council meeting July 24 at 9:00 a.m. at City Hall. Time is running out.

School will start next month and we still, after six months, do not have a workable solution to this very important problem.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I don't understand why the sin of Adam and Eve also influenced the rest of the human race. Is that what the Bible teaches? — M.E.H.

DEAR M.E.H.: The Bible tells us that God created Adam and Eve so they would love Him and glorify Him. But they deliberately chose to rebel against their Creator and go their own way. The Bible teaches that this not only had consequences for them but for every person who has lived since that time.

This is what the Psalmist meant when he said, "Surely I have been a sinner from birth, sinful from the time my mother conceived me" (Psalms 51:5, New International Version). Because of the sin of Adam and Eve, death — which is one of the fruits of sin — has become the common experience of all humanity. Because of the sin of Adam and Eve we all are born with a tendency to sin.

Sin is like a fatal disease which is passed on inescapably from one generation to another. (Incidentally, some theologians feel this is one reason Jesus was born of a virgin, so He would escape the taint of sin.) The Bible says, "In Adam all die" (1 Corinthians 15:22). Or again, the Bible tells us, "Sin entered the world through one man, and death through sin, and in this way death came to all men" (Romans 5:12).

But you may feel this is somehow unfair. Why should God punish me for the sin of Adam? The answer is to see that Adam was a representative of the whole human race. That is, Adam did exactly what you or I would have done if we had been there. Think of a human example. When you elect someone to the House of Representatives, you expect that they will represent you. In other words, they (you hope) will vote exactly the way you would have voted if you were in Washington. Adam was the representative of Man. He "voted" the same way we would have voted if we had been there.

All of this is important to understand. But it is more important to realize that God has acted to reverse the effects of Adam's sin. Christ died on the Cross so you and I could be saved and reconciled to God. By faith in Him this can happen, and the problem of sin conquered.

Junk mail

Around the rim

Eileen McGuire

Graduating from high school or college, moving from one town to another, getting engaged or married or doing some other notable activity which may result in a leak of names, are all occasions for receiving junk mail. The biggest occasion of all is having a baby.

Previous experience taught me that I could expect a fuller than average mail box for a few weeks after my third was born. But it's now been four months and the amount has only decreased.

So far, I've received enough to wall paper half of my home. By the time the year is out, I expect to receive the other half.

THE INCREASE in junk mail for new moms, which has at least quadrupled from 1973 to 1979, is, I think, a pretty good indication of consistently improving technology and communication.

I picture the doctor announcing "It's a girl!" and a scheming businessman who I didn't notice sitting in the corner of the delivery room scurrying out to call the central office of all junk mail.

The office is a building staffed with computers. The only employees are a switchboard operator, keypunch operator and a computer technician.

The operator passes the news of the birth to the keypunch operator who promptly prepares a card including names of mother and baby, baby's sex, and above all, address of mother, to be fed into a hurry machine.

Ten minutes after the baby's birth, the mother's address is registered on thousands of mailing lists throughout the country.

No sooner is the new baby settled into her new crib at home when the mailbox begins bulging with envelopes marked "Urgent." Dear Postmaster: Important News for Ms. McGuire, "Free, Free, Free" and "Open Me First!"

FORTUNATELY, a trash can is conveniently located near my mailbox so it's a simple matter of sorting the "good" (bills) from the "bad" (prospective bills) and depositing the "urgent" stuff into its proper place.

But it took awhile to learn the identifying signs of the junk and some from the more clever companies still make it past my door where it ends up being deposited in another proper place to join those that didn't make it in the most proper place of all — the city dump.

Not all the junk mail is junk. A few coupons from baby food and product manufacturers and from local businessmen who want to introduce me to their lines of children's shoes have been useful and welcomed. These offers come in uncluttered envelopes and the offers are plainly stated without artificial over-enthusiastic phrases.

The stuff I haven't appreciated are all the "low-cost" life insurance offers that I don't need, mail-order toys for a child who can't do much more yet than clumsily hit-or-miss reach for anything, and the gobs and gobs of subscription offers to everything from "Popular Mechanics" to "Mad" (with three kids, that one might be appropriate).

One carefully designed offer was a plain postcard with a message to call a certain number and ask for a specific name. The message read "I've been trying to call you for the past several days with no success. Please call collect."

Thinking that it might be related to my job, I called a woman named Jane or Sally or something or other said, "Congratulations on your new baby! Was it a boy or a girl?" When I replied, she showed the usual interest in the weight (is my baby a side of beef?) and then asked what I had named her.

"What a beautiful name," she said. "You know, I'm expecting and have been looking for a name for mine. I think I might use that." Her voice did not contain any of the excitement that mine did when I finally stumbled upon a long-sought-for special name.

She then got down to business and told me about her fantastic money saving multi-magazine subscriptions offer. I have always tried to at least let the salesman finish the pitch, but having learned the value of a minute, I interrupted her.

"I don't have time to read the subscriptions I already have," I told her.

"Some of these magazines show you how to make more time," she replied. She named a few.

"I don't like any of those," I said.

"You can renew some of the magazines you now have that are running out and save money on them."

"I don't like any of them either," I said, thanking her (I don't know why) and hanging up.

If I read all of the magazines, books and other material I now have around the house on how to care for a baby, I'd never have time to care for the baby.

The most outrageous piece of junk mail I received was a straggler. It came last week and was from what I considered (note the past tense) the most reputable parents magazine in America.

The pitch was a "marvelous Sweepstakes" and a refundable subscription that I could cancel at any time. The pressure point (and guilt trip) was a line toward the bottom of a letter from the magazine's president.

"I'm hoping you'll be curious and responsible enough as a parent to at least see why and how... intends to win you as a valued reader."

Responsible enough as a parent? If I'm a responsible parent I will spend money that I don't have for a magazine that I have no time to read about a subject that I have already accumulated far too many conflicting sources of information on?

Any thoughts that I ever entertained about subscribing to that magazine went into their proper place along with the offer.

Blind faith

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Panicked by the gasoline shortage and its impact on enraged voters in next year's elections, Jimmy Carter and Congress have suddenly if belatedly decided that the answer to America's oil needs lies in rapid development of synthetic fuels.

Unfortunately, the politicians seem determined to fly in the face of history and entrust the major synthetic fuels program to the very people whose greed and shortsightedness have brought us to our present sorry pass. The politicians are ready to put up billions of the taxpayers' money to pay the oil companies to develop synthetic fuels.

IF THE IMPACT on millions of Americans were not so serious, this blind faith in the oil companies would be laughable. President Carter has called the energy crisis the "moral equivalent of war." Yet he chooses to overlook the fact that once before, during a real shooting war, the nation's leaders placed their trust in the oil industry and were completely let down. Then, as now, the oilmen put profits above patriotism.

The crisis of 1941-42 involved rubber, an essential ingredient of the war we had just become embroiled in. Even before Pearl Harbor, the Japanese had conquered the rubber-producing countries of Southeast Asia, cutting off our supplies completely.

A modern army marches on tires and other essential products requiring rubber. Unlike oil, no domestic supply of rubber was available; synthetic rubber was our only answer.

My predecessor, Drew Pearson, conducted a detailed investigation of the World War II synthetic rubber program. He disclosed to the American public that the government's initial reliance on Standard Oil of New Jersey had jeopardized the war effort and had ended in disastrous failure.

The Rubber Reserve Corporation, formed by the government to develop synthetic rubber production, loaned $650 million for construction of synthetic rubber plants to a group of companies controlled by Standard. The latter claimed to have a secret process that would guarantee production. In fact, however, the real secrets were held by Standard's international cartel associate, Nazi Germany's I.G. Farben corporation.

STANDARD had failed to pry the technology loose from Farben in peacetime, and naturally met with no more success once we were at war with Germany. "We believe that the Standard cartel arrangements with Germany... are the principal cause of the present (rubber) shortage," Asst. Atty. Gen. Thurmond Arnold told Congress in April, 1942.

In other words, Standard's promise to deliver synthetic rubber was just $650 million worth of hot air. The oil giant's failure, as Pearson glumly reported, means that "there just ain't going to be more rubber for civilian use until after 1944."

Fortunately for the free world, an alternative existed: synthetic rubber made from grain-based alcohol. Then as now, alcohol had been from farm products had been ignored by the government, thanks partly to intense lobbying by the oil industry.

The Rubber Reserve Corp. quickly threw its weight behind alcohol production, and in two years the United States was producing close to 600 million gallons of alcohol, nearly four times the 1942 output. This plus a valiant conservation effort by American motorists — observing an incredible 35-mile-an-hour speed limit to save tires — gave the U.S. military the rubber it needed.

Once again we face a critical shortage that can be cured by development of synthetic substitutes for a commodity endangered by foreign control. Once again, farm-produced alcohol is being played down in favor of non-renewable fossil fuels — despite a recent Department of Energy report that estimates most of our liquid automotive fuel needs could be met by an expanded alcohol program by the year 2000.

DELEGATES TO CONFERENCE HEAR TEXAS REP. JIM WRIGHT
Mr., Mrs. J. M. Sterling, Howard County, among those present

Sterlings return from Land Use Conference

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Sterling of the Vincent Community, have recently returned from Washington, D.C., where they attended the first annual National Land Use Conference.

Upwards to 300 people representing 48 states were in attendance. Presiding was Ben A. Wallis Jr., conference chairman for the National Association of Property Owners.

Other organizations who helped sponsor the conference were American Farm Bureau, American Petroleum Institute, Citizens for the Management of Alaska Lands, National Association of Home Builders, National Forest Products Association and National Park Inholders Association.

Representatives of each organization expressed their concern with the increased takeover of privately held lands by the federal government.

At the present time the federal government owns one-third of all the land in the United States. This land produces no tax revenue and only a small per cent of the land is available for mineral production. Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska told the group that 95 per cent of his state is owned by the federal government.

Forums were held on the following issues: Economics, constitutionally, energy, and denial of resources. Congressmen who addressed the group included Sens. Ted Stevens (R-Alaska), John Melcher (D-Mont.), Roger Jepsen (R-Iowa), Representatives Tony Choecho (D-Calif.), Charles Pashayan, Jr. (D-Calif.), William Wampler (R-Va.), Jerry Huckaby (D-La.), Steve Symms (R-Idaho) and Jim Wright (D-Texas).

Wright, who gave the speech at the conference banquet, is the majority leader of the house of representatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling were joined at the banquet by Charles Stenholm, representative of the 17th District of Texas. Also seated at their table were Mr. and Mrs. Danny Stuart of Sterling City, John Brooks, Representing Exxon Oil of Houston, and Ed Squelewicz of Washington, D.C.

A suit was filed in Washington D.C. July 16 against Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland to challenge the constitutionality of the 1978 Boudry Waters Wilderness Act. Ely Winton Boudry Waters Conservation Alliance and the Lac La Poudre Indian band of Minnesota and Ontario, on behalf of the people of Minnesota and the United States, are represented by Attorney Wallis.

While in the nation's capital, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling visited with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and also with the representative of the 15th District of Texas, Kiki De La Garza.

U.S. dollars for Soviet oil?

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Soviet Union is eager to trade some of its huge supply of crude oil for U.S. dollars and equipment, according to sources quoted in a copyright story in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram today.

Both American and Russian sources told the newspaper such an exchange would mean less uncertainty in the U.S. regarding oil availability and would permit Russia to develop segments of its economy more quickly with U.S. help.

A side benefit of the exchange would be increased trust and reliance between the two nations and a relaxation of tensions raised by the Salt II debate, a source told the Star-Telegram.

"I was told the U.S. could have as much oil as it wanted from the Russians," said an American oilman who works in Washington.

One U.S. oilman said he was surprised by the frankness with which a Soviet acquaintance told him recently that his country was more than willing to sell oil to the U.S. "in exchange for hard cash."

A Soviet official recently told a representative of the American Petroleum Institute to encourage American refiners to contact the Soviet Embassy to discuss the possibility of oil sales.

But the Soviet Union has never imported more than 30,000 barrels daily into the U.S., according to figures kept by the Central Intelligence Agency. That high point was reached in 1973 and probably won't be attained again if the sticky industrial trade situation between the two countries doesn't improve, the source said.

According to the CIA, the Soviets have plenty of oil to trade.

In 1978 they pumped 11.2 million barrels daily while using only 8.4 million barrels. That compares with 8.7 million barrels daily being pumped in the U.S.—along side a U.S. consumption rate of 18.8 million barrels.

In 1977, the latest year for which figures are available, the Soviets exported 3.1 million barrels of oil daily. Their biggest customers were members of Eastern Europe's Communist bloc. Western Europe was the second biggest market for Russian oil and Cuba was third.

One U.S. oilman said he was surprised by the frankness with which a Soviet acquaintance told him recently that his country was more than willing to sell oil to the U.S. "in exchange for hard cash."

Sources in the Russian diplomatic community here said there are two main reasons for publicizing their desire. First, the Soviets are becoming increasingly upset with the refusal of the U.S. government to sanction trade between Russia and U.S. firms—even when the U.S. firms want to deal.

Secondly, oil and natural gas exploration and development is booming in eastern Russia, the Russians say.

The Soviets are in the middle of planning where this new oil go—either west toward Moscow or east to the Soviet coast, where it could be shipped by tanker to anywhere in the world, a source said.

"The more you're waiting—and I don't know for what—the more business the Russians will do for themselves and the more Russian oil and gas will be caught by Western Europe and Japan," a Russian official said. "Right now you're wasting important time."

Some Soviet oil—the origin of which is lost when it is sold to middlemen—has been coming into the U.S. for some time, he added.

"First we consider our needs," the Russian said when asked if his country had oil to sell. "Then we consider our trading partners." He said this means Eastern European countries and Cuba.

"It's up to our government to decide the priority," he said, adding that his government—the world's largest source of oil—has plenty to sell. No numbers were mentioned, however.

"Our oil development can be done on the basis of equality," the Soviet government official said.

"But a lot of people in your country feel they must restore superiority," he added, bringing the military balance between the two superpowers into the conversation for the first time.

"We don't want to take the superiority over the U.S.," he said. "If your Senate rejects the (Salt II) treaty, my public will say for what purpose should we sell oil to the U.S.?"

Reaction in U.S. government circles to the Russians' apparent desire to sell oil was greeted with a healthy dose of skepticism. "It flies in the face of everything the CIA's latest intelligence reports showing the Soviet Union is in the middle of a mild energy crisis characterized with "brownouts" in the industrialized parts of their country," one official said.

According to the CIA, the Russian oil supply is expected to peak this year and begin a long and slow decline, Department of Energy officials say.

The CIA has reported that by 1985 the Russians may even have to import oil. A DOE official said the Russians could be looking for the new U.S. technology that has made drilling for oil on Alaska's North Slope feasible.

National Electrical Code seminar set Friday at Odessa

The second in a two-part training session on the 1978 National Electrical Code will be sponsored by the City of Odessa Friday from 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Inn of the Golden West.

The seminar is open to the public and will be of special interest to any person in the area wishing to learn more about the changes in the 1978 National Electrical Code. Participants are urged to bring their own code books since this will be a work session.

Conducting the seminar will be D.J. Clements of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association.

The City sponsored a similar session Feb. 14 with Mr. Clements and attended by 75 area electricians and municipal inspectors.

Clements will have an informative audio-visual presentation aimed at keeping tradesmen and inspectors up-to-date on code requirements.

An evening meal is scheduled for a fee of $10. There is no fee for attending the seminar, however, those wishing to stay for the meal, should contact the Planning and Inspection Department for pre-registration payment and information.

Step in right direction

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Tokyo Round of Multilateral Trade Negotiations (MTN), which concluded in Geneva on April 12, 1979, was the seventh round of trade negotiations held under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). GATT is a multilateral trade agreement of reciprocal rights and obligations which has been signed by eighty-three countries since its drafting in 1947.

The U.S. Trade Act of 1974 provided the negotiating authority for U.S. participation in the MTN. The Trade Act strictly prohibits Congress from amending the trade agreement after it has been submitted by the President.

Though the trade agreements cover many aspects of the trading sector, agriculture was a major topic of the MTN, having been somewhat ignored in past trade negotiations. The MTN agreements will result in new export opportunities for American agriculture through the reduction of foreign barriers to trade and improvement in the rules governing trade in agricultural products.

Agriculture is our nation's biggest industry, and its growth over the last ten years has been based largely on exports.

As a result of these negotiations, foreign countries will reduce barriers which affected almost $4 billion in 1976 trade, representing about one-fourth of U.S. farm exports subject to foreign barriers. Potentially even more important for the long term is negotiation of international codes of conduct

Congressman
Charles W. Stenholm
Congressional Comment

in trade.

This should help create a positive climate for further growth in U.S. farm exports, which topped $30 billion in 1979.

Texas exported $1.8 billion of farm products in 1977, nearly four times the 1972 level, placing the state fourth in the nation as an exporter of agricultural products. Of Texas' farm sales, $1 in every $4 came from exports.

Export sales have a substantial effect on the price the farmer receives for his product. Recent increase in the price of grains, due to exports, is an excellent example of this.

Of major concern regarding these trade agreements are the agreements affecting the dairy sector. In 1978, about half of all cheese imports were under quota. Once the new agreement goes into effect, about 85 percent of all cheese imports will fall under quota. Under the new quota system, imports in 1980 and beyond are estimated at about 111,000 metric tons of quota cheese and about 14,000 metric tons of nonquota cheese.

Domestic producers will receive added protection against subsidized cheese imports under the new agreement. Exporting countries have agreed to refrain from using export subsidies in a manner that would cause their cheese to undercut U.S. wholesale cheese prices. Procedures will be established to enforce this requirement under domestic law. The Administration has maintained that these agreements will not adversely affect the dairy support program at 80 percent parity and we are in the process of extending the 80 percent minimum.

The U.S. obtained some significant concessions in other areas of agriculture. Livestock and livestock production concessions are expected to increase U.S. agricultural exports by over $250 million and affecting $918 million in 1976 exports.

The U.S. received offers on grains and grain products covering over $592 million in 1976 trade. We also received offers on oilseeds and oilseed products affecting about $1.1 billion in 1976 exports.

The MTN agreements cover a broad spectrum of matters dealing with international trade. In a period when protectionism seriously threatens the international trading system, the MTN agreements, though not perfect, are certainly a step in the right direction and a step in which we can sustain our commitment to moving forward within an open free competitive trade environment.

Farmers claim Clements surrounded by 'oil mafia'

By JACKIE CALMES

AUSTIN — Bill Clements, until recently the multi-millionaire head of the world's largest oil and gas well drilling company, brings a unique perspective on energy matters to the governor's office.

His detractors, however, say that perspective is but a pro-industry bias, reinforced by those the former oilman has chosen to advise him.

But a look at Clements' coterie of energy advisors reveals not fellow oilmen but career bureaucrats and academicians. Only new recruit Ed Vetter, whom Clements tapped to be his chief energy advisor, has industry connections.

Still, in criticizing the governor's veto of funds for an experimental gasoline plant, a farmers group charged that Clements is surrounded by an "oil mafia" and is insensitive to average consumers. "Not every Texan owns an oil well, you know," one farmer grouched.

And Sen. Bob Vale of San Antonio, a proponent of alternative energy sources, says Clements' oil and gas producers' emphasis on increased production is "just so damn neanderthal."

They say, "Just let us charge what we want and we'll find something," Vale scoffed.

When a reporter recently asked Clements whether his oil wealth dictates his energy policy, he retorted, "I won't even answer that, I think it's a dumb question."

Soon after taking office, Clements drafted the Council on Energy Resources at the University of Texas in Austin to formulate "the Texas position on energy."

Walt W. Rostow and William L. Fisher head the 18-member faculty group. Rostow, who was President Johnson's national security advisor during the Vietnam War, teaches economics and history at UT. Fisher is director of UT's Bureau of Economic Geology.

The Fisher-Rostow group developed position papers Clements delivered at national governors conferences in Washington, D.C. last winter and in Louisville, Ky., last week.

Both papers stress all-out production of domestic oil and gas to loosen OPEC's stranglehold on the U.S., deregulation of prices with excess profits to be plowed back into production projects, and an energy development bank to assist the private sector in commercial development of synthetic fuels and other alternative energy sources.

Until this year, three separate state agencies were responsible for day-to-day implementation of energy programs. On Sept. 1, legislation takes effect combining the three — the Texas Energy Advisory Council, the defunct Natural Resources Council and the Governor's Office of Energy Resources.

Clements and Lt. Gov. Hobby will co-chair the new Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council, or TENRAC, to be made up of numerous state officials. Vetter, currently a dollar-a-year advisor, will be executive director of the merged staffs and as such can claim a $39,000 salary.

Vetter, 58, has retired when his friend the governor beckoned. His association with Clements goes back not only to Dallas, where Vetter was executive vice president of Texas Instruments Inc., but to Washington, D.C., where Vetter served as under secretary of defense.

In the 1950s, after graduation from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Vetter worked for Standard Oil of California. He went on to TI, where he stayed for 23 years and headed its nuclear and oil exploration subsidiaries. Immediately below Vetter on TENRAC's organizational chart are several younger bureaucrats. Already at work in the agencies to be merged, they will retain their current responsibilities and staff. They include:

—David Marks, current director of the Governor's Office of Energy Resources. With a staff of 35, Marks manages federal energy programs in the state. During the present crisis, "it's like trying to paint a train as it goes through the station at 60 miles an hour," Marks told a Senate committee. Although he claims "responsibility to implement the very strong and well-funded federal conservation programs," Marks — like the governor — says "conservation is not an answer" for the country's energy problems. Marks won't compare his former boss, rancher-Gov. Dolph Briscoe, with his present boss, oilman Clements. "It's not fair to put me on the spot," he said. "Both men understand the energy business very well.

Any governor of Texas has to," —Nick Murphy, head of GOER's fuel allocation office. Murphy, with Vetter and Marks, manages the federal set-aside policy whereby 5 percent of Texas' gas supplies are reserved and reallocated to needy areas, as is being done in Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas.

Fugitive beauty queen back in police custody

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fugitive beauty queen Joyce McKinney, who once said she would have skied nude down Mount Everest for a man she was accused of kidnapping, is again in custody more than a year after she jumped bail in England, the FBI says. Miss McKinney of Minneapolis, N.C., and fellow fugitive Keith Joseph May of Los Angeles were arrested Wednesday near Asheville on charges of making false statements to obtain passports, an FBI spokesman said. Bond was set at $10,000 each. Both Miss McKinney, 29, and May, 26, jumped bail in London and fled to Canada under false identities in April 1978, less than a month prior to a scheduled court appearance there on kidnapping charges. Miss McKinney, a former Miss Wyoming-USA, and May were charged in England in 1977 with abducting Kirk Anderson, then 21, of Provo, Utah, and imprisoning him in a remote country cottage.

Prosecutors charged Miss McKinney and May chained the Mormon missionary to a bed and forced him to make love to her. After her release on bail in 1977, Miss McKinney denied the charges against her, saying, "Anything I did was with his (Anderson's) consent. Kirk is so afraid his church is going to excommunicate him, he just made all that up." During pretrial testimony in England, Miss McKinney testified she once loved Anderson so much she "would have skied down Mount Everest in the nude with a carnation up my nose" if he had asked her to. Miss McKinney made headlines in Britain when Scotland Yard was unable to locate her when she and May failed to report to police under conditions of their bail agreements. Two months after her disappearance, Miss McKinney was interviewed in California by the British Broadcasting Corporation. She said after reading a sex therapy manual she bought furlined handcuffs to manacle Anderson, because she didn't want to hurt him. She said she tied him to the bed with ropes to enhance lovemaking.

The London Daily Mirror, a tabloid, produced a book entitled, "Joyce McKinney and the Manacled Mormon." Residents of the small Avery County community where she grew up say they find it difficult to imagine Miss McKinney involved in a sex crime. Minneapolis, N.C., residents say they remember her as a "fine, fine girl."

Her father is principal of Newland Elementary School near the town. Her mother is a former English teacher at Newland Elementary School. "They've always been a close family," a family friend said. "Joy is their whole lives. They've done everything they possibly could for her."

Danny Reagan wins SID award

Reagan won his award for his 1978-79 men's basketball program, and he competed with other SID's in District VI (all colleges and major universities in Arkansas, New Mexico and Texas).

Liberace childhood idol

Susan Joslin's talent is music to your ears

By ROBBIE CROW

It was a combination of God-given talent and hours of diligent work and dedication that made Susan Joslin the accomplished pianist she is today.

"When I was two and three years old, Liberace was my idol. I can remember making my mom and dad watch him with me every time he came on television," recalls Mrs. Joslin. "Even today he's still my favorite."

Reared in San Angelo, Mrs. Joslin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H.V. Barber. She graduated from Central High School and attended Angelo State University. She began taking piano lessons at the early age of 5.

"I took lessons from Mrs. Henry Dusek. She was mean but she was a good teacher."

Although Liberace, her parents and Mrs. Dusek all played a part in the musical career of Susan, "Missionary Ruth McMillan is the one who really inspired me. When I heard her play at church one day," recalled Mrs. Joslin, "I was astounded. She played that piano apart. I knew right then and there that was the way I wanted to play."

As a participant in the Miss Teenage San Angelo Pageant, the accomplished pianist played her way to a first place talent title with a medley of classical, ragtime, secular and religious pieces.

"After receiving my title," continued Mrs. Joslin, "several musical opportunities arose, one of which was to be the piano player in an act similar to that of Six Flag's Crazy Horse Saloon at a new Shakey's which was opening up in town. I really didn't want to play in that type of atmosphere, but I needed the money. I'll always remember one deacon in our church who gave me a job just so I wouldn't use my talent in that type of surrounding."

Today, Mrs. Joslin's musical accomplishments extend far above and beyond that of a Shakey's Pizza Parlor pianist.

She toured as an accompanist in the states of Texas and Oklahoma with a religious group known as the "Singing Disciples."

Another highlight of her musical world was serving as piano accompanist for the Criswell Crusade.

"My sisters, Therone and Bunny, had been asked to sing in the crusade which at the time was holding auditions for an accompanist. I auditioned and was chosen," explained Susan.

Also looking for an accompanist was renowned religious singer Ethel Waters who sang at the crusade. Auditions were again held with Mrs. Waters selecting the person she wanted to accompany her.

"She was impressed with the way I anticipated her singing," told me I was an excellent accompanist; and chose me," stated Susan.

For as long as she can remember, Mrs. Joslin wanted to attend Oklahoma Baptist University, well-known for its musical program.

"After I graduated from high school I was all set to leave for OBU when I met John. I was madly in love with him, and frankly, he couldn't stand me," she recalled humorously. "So I decided to stay in San Angelo and to go Angelo State University and convince John that he loved me too. It took a couple of years, but I finally convinced him."

Susan and John, members of Hillcrest Baptist Church, are the parents of two children, John Mark, 4 and Becca, 3. Mrs. Joslin says both are showing a special interest in music.

"I guess it's because they've been around it all of their lives," she concluded.

Mrs. Joslin has composed three religious mini-concerts that she says as soon as her children start school she will attempt getting published.

"Dick Baker once heard me play them and encouraged me to get them published. He said there was a need today for good piano arrangements. I know he's right because I've tried to find some."

God is given all the credit for the beautiful sound that fills a room when Mrs. Joslin plays.

"To sum it up in a nutshell," she revealed, "God gets the credit for what's beautiful and I take all the credit for the mistakes. And believe me, there are a lot of them."

Piano lessons have been given by Mrs. Joslin for 15 years. This coming fall she will be accepting students.

"I like to teach, but if a student doesn't practice, I drop him because it's a waste of his time and mine."

When asked if she played any other instruments other than the piano and organ, Mrs. Joslin replied "No. I tried to take up the violin one time. It is now hanging on my mother's wall full of flowers. I have had one dream all my life, though," continued Susan, "and that's to own and play a big gold-leaf harp with a velvet bench. When John and I were first married we wrote to New York to have one built."

Then the price was $7,500 not including shipping charges. I had a harp teacher lined up and everything but we just couldn't afford it."

Outside of her world of music, Mrs. Joslin is known for her cooking.

"John and I love to entertain and we usually do so by hosting dinner parties in our home. I like unique recipes — dishes that you don't see very often."

The Joslin family recently returned from a vacation near the German community of Fredericksburg. "I really got high on the different German foods," explained Susan.

Below are several tasty recipes from a very talented musician.

MONKEY BREAD

2-3rd cup sugar
1/2 cup Crisco shortening (melted)
1 cup mashed potatoes (can be instant)

1 cup scalded milk
2 eggs
2 packages yeast
1 teaspoon salt
5 cups flour

Mix together first five ingredients. Dissolve yeast in 1/2 cup luke warm water.

Water should be no hotter than 115 degrees. Add yeast to first mixture. Add salt and flour. Mix well and let rise no more than 1 hour. Let dough rise in unheated oven with a pan of hot water on the shelf below it. After dough has risen, turn out onto floured surface and shape lightly into large loaf. Melt two sticks margarine. Tear off pieces of dough and shape into balls. Dip each ball in butter and stack in ungreased bundt pan. Bake at 350 degrees about 40 minutes.

EXOTIC PEACH SALAD

1 cup miniature marshmallows small can crushed pineapple (drained)
small can coconut
1 small carton sour cream
Combine the above ingredients. Arrange peach halves on bed of lettuce and fill each peach half with sour cream mixture. Top each with maraschino cherry.

SCHMIKERAKESE — PFUNDKUCHEN (Cottage-cheese Pound Cake)

3/4 cup butter
2 cups sugar
6 large egg yolks (beaten)
1 teaspoon lemon extract
1/2 teaspoon butter extract
2 1/2 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1 cup drained cottage cheese
1/4 cup milk
6 large egg whites (beaten stiff)

Cream butter, add sugar gradually creaming thoroughly. Add yolks, lemon and butter extract, beat well. Sift flour, baking powder and soda. Mix milk with cottage cheese. Alternately add flour and cheese to creamed mixture using low speed. Fold in egg whites. Bake in greased and floured tube pan 1 hour at 350 degrees. Pour glaze over hot cake or serve plain.

Glaze:
2-3rd cup powdered sugar
juice of 1/2 orange

ROULADEN MIT SCHINKEN (Beef Rolls with Ham)

4 thin slices each of round steak and ham (about 4x6 inches)
salt and pepper to taste
mustard
1 onion, chopped
1 large sour pickle (quartered length-wise)

1 can beef bouillon
1/2 cup water
4 peeled and seeded tomatoes
1 large green pepper, coarsely chopped heavy thread or skewers cooking oil

Pound steak. Season with salt and pepper and rub mustard into both sides. Top each piece of steak with ham slice and sprinkle with onion. Lay pickle stick across meat. Picking up narrow end, roll steak together and tie with thread or fasten with skewers. Coat rouladen with flour and brown evenly in small amount of oil. Add bouillon, tomatoes and green pepper and simmer for 45-60 minutes or until tender. Makes 4 servings.

Virginity a virtue, not a problem

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 15 and being teased about being a virgin. I have tried ignoring them. I've even told them where to go and that it was my problem.

Now, I don't know if being a virgin is wrong or right. — Mariann, London, Ontario, Canada.

Mariann: You don't have a problem, your friends do. Being 15 and a virgin is a virtue.

Regardless, what you are is your business and very personal and shouldn't be discussed with anyone.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 12 years old and my problem is that all the ugly, mean and nasty boys like me, but all the nice, cute ones don't.

I don't understand it. I am an A student and considered good-looking by my friends.

All the cute guys like my girlfriend for her body and she isn't smart or cute and her personality isn't that hot either. — Kelly, Newark, Ohio.

Kelly: Popular teens, both boys and girls, have similar traits — friendliness, honesty, a sense of caring and loyalty.

They are never "catty," envious or jealous.

Dr. Wallace: Joe and I went together for four months until he had to move to Rock Island, Ill. Before he left, we made a commitment to each other that we wouldn't date anyone else and would wait for each other to graduate.

I now realize that this was not a bright thing to do because he is a freshman and I'm a sophomore. That's a long time to wait, especially when I'm attracted to other guys.

Do you think I should keep this commitment? — Sue, Livermore, Calif.

Sue: No, but write to Joe and tell him that you really care for him and that maybe you can still get together after graduation.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

She Remembers Mama— But Not In Time

DEAR ABBY: My younger sister passed away last month and I found a yellowed clipping of your column in her Bible. Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: Will you please remind your readers to look after their parents who are too old to look after themselves? Old parents need all their children. It's not always easy to cope with aging parents, but we weren't easy to cope with when they were raising US, either. We OWE it to them. I just wish someone had reminded ME of these things when Mama was still alive. It's too late now, and I haven't had a decent night's sleep since she died three months ago.

"I knew she had a good home with my sister, so that was that. Why didn't I take her for a few weeks, or even for Sunday dinner, or for a little drive? I never had time for her, yet I had time for others and anything else I wanted to do. A change of scenery or even a meal at my home would have meant so much to her, but I was too busy. Oh, I had plenty of excuses.

"I suppose the only one in our large family who is sleeping is my sister who took Mama to live with her. I've tried to ease my conscience by telling myself that I wasn't really ashamed of Mama like my brothers were. Or that I wasn't cheap, like another sister. I DID buy her things (which she never really needed or enjoyed much.) But it's too late now. I hope Mama forgives me.

CAN'T SLEEP"

Abby, CAN'T SLEEP was my sister. I'm the one Mama went to live with.

It's too late for me to tell my sister that Mama did forgive her. Mothers always do. But I hope you will print this again for those for whom it's not yet too late.

THE OLDEST

DEAR OLDEST: Consider it done. It's always later than we think.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cent) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

GALVESTON'S GALVEZ Hotel will reopen in early 1980 as the Galvez Marriott. Closed in 1978, the hotel was purchased by Archie Bennett Jr., chairman of Mariner Interests, and Dr. Denton Cooley. The plush hotel, built in 1911, has hosted presidents, dignitaries and international celebrities.

Texas heart surgeon hopes to pump new life into closed hotel

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Dr. Denton Cooley will attempt to give new life to a symbol of Galveston's heyday as a bustling, brawling seaport by reopening a renovated version of the historic Galvez Hotel.

The renowned heart surgeon, along with Mariner Corp.'s Archie Bennett Jr., has purchased the old building and plans to sink $10 million into its rebirth.

Built in 1911, the Galvez was a temporary home to presidents and kings during its golden years.

But things turned sour, and the hotel was closed in 1978.

"We are proud to be involved with Dr. Cooley in the renovation of this magnificent and historic hotel," Bennett said Tuesday. "We plan to restore it to a new dignity."

Fronting Galveston's seawall, the Galvez sports 225 rooms in seven stories.

The renovation will be a careful one, Bennett said, designed to keep much of its classic facade intact.

Mariner-Galvez Ltd., which was formed by Bennett and Cooley, will manage the renovation that will provide a restaurant, lounge, lobby bar, covered outdoor terrace overlooking the Gulf and a ballroom that will accommodate 500 people, he said.

It also will offer such amenities as an indoor-outdoor heated swimming pool, sauna, gift shop and boardwalk arcade, he said.

The hotel, which recently was placed on the National Register of Historic Places by the Texas State Historical Society, will reopen as the Galvez Marriott early in 1980, Bennett said.

Much of the hotel's historic facade will remain the same, however, Bennett said.

Bennett and Cooley bought the hotel from Harvey McCarty of Illinois and Dr. Leon Bromberg of Galveston.

Bennett's company, the Mariner Corp., will manage the hotel under a franchise agreement with the Marriott chain.

John Kirksey & Associates, a Houston architectural firm, is preparing the renovation plans, and Eaves Construction Co. of Houston will be the general contractor, Bennett said.

Weekend gasoline supplies up 10 percent in Texas, survey shows

HOUSTON (AP) — Weekend gasoline supplies have increased significantly in Texas, especially in the big city areas, since last week.

Seventeen percent of the filling stations in Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth will be open Sunday, a survey by the American Automobile Association shows. That's a 10 percent increase over last weekend.

The AAA survey of 418 service stations statewide also showed the number of stations out of at least one grade of gasoline fell from 4 percent to 3 percent this week.

Prices for gasoline continued to increase, the AAA says, at an average rate of about 1 cent per gallon for the week.

Here is the expected availability of gasoline, according to the survey:

Burglar eats way out

CLARKSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — A burglar who used Alker Tire & Supply's acetylene torches to try to open a safe apparently left empty-handed, but not hungry.

Company president P.K. Acker said he found a note on his desk the day after the break-in saying, "The next time leave safe open."

Acker said the cement-encased safe was not opened, but a sandwich was taken from a refrigerator in Alker's office.

"The fellow sat there and ate that," Alker complained.

Beer, tobacco, farmer

GUINEA, Ohio (AP) — Charlie Potts drinks a quart of beer each morning and goes through two pouches of chewing tobacco a day.

His teeth are gone, he uses a stick to help him get around and he sometimes has short dizzy spells. But he tends his 80-acre farm.

Potts, 98, was honored recently as Ohio's oldest farmer.

He dug up a basket of potatoes Wednesday morning.

"Once in a while I feel a little tired," confessed Potts, who still lives on the Clermont County farm east of Cincinnati where he was born Sept. 2, 1880.

"But I go. Oh, I go. I get on my tractor and feel a little better."

Potts has the indomitable farmer spirit. During the day, he hates sitting in his 160-year home. When he wants to relax, rain or shine, he sits in his favorite chair and watches over his land.

"I only missed three days I didn't get out last winter," he says.

"Sam (his son) says I ain't got nothing to do. I always got something to do. I'm weeding, planting, raking. I've done more raking than anybody in Clermont County."

'Double jeopardy' frees Texas slayer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Houston prosecutors placed Willie Henry McClendon in double jeopardy by dismissing murder charges against him and then re-indicting him in the same slaying, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said today.

1.8 million cars recalled

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has recalled 1.8 million cars and light trucks from the 1978 model year to replace front outer wheel bearings that might fail and cause a vehicle to run out of control.

The car lines included in the Tuesday recall were Chevrolet Monte Carlo and Malibu, Pontiac LeMans and Grand Prix, Oldsmobile Cutlass, Buick Century and Regal, Chevrolet El Camino and GMC Caballero. Owners who have "noticeable front end noise or vibration" in their vehicles should not wait for the recall letter to visit their dealers for inspection, GM said.

The court threw out McClendon's murder without malice conviction and five-year prison sentence.

The defendant was indicted in 1971 in the slaying of "Mose Dineal," the appeals court said. However, the resulting conviction was overturned because the victim's name was "Mose Dineal Howard."

At a second trial on April 7, 1975, the district attorney discovered he lacked a witness who could testify the victim was known by the name listed in the indictment. The judge granted the prosecutor's request to dismiss the case.

A week later, McClendon was reindicted. His attorney objected that the second indictment violated McClendon's constitutional rights against double jeopardy. The judge rejected the argument.

The Double Jeopardy Clause prohibits "multiple punishments and multiple prosecutions" for the same act, the appeals court said.

Prosecutors should have asked for a continuance, not a dismissal, if they needed time to locate witnesses, the appeals court said.

New drug abuse prevention program will be explained

The quarterly meeting of the Regional Alcohol and Drug Abuse Advisory Council will be held at 7 p.m., July 26 in the Permian Basin

Oil production fuss outdated, Council claims

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An adviser to the Texas Energy Advisory Council says the old debate between those who favor increased domestic oil production and those urging conservation is "irrelevant and outdated."

"Political partisanship and petty provincialism must come to an end," Austin attorney Frank C. Cooksey told a news conference Wednesday. "We must cease to think in terms of the 'Texas' position and seek to embrace an 'American' position."

Gov. Bill Clements has criticized President Carter and urged adoption of the "Texas Position."

Cooksey is a member of the advisory committee to the energy advisory council, which originally adopted a policy statement on Texas' position in the energy crisis. Under Attorney General John Hill, Cooksey was in charge of energy matters in that department.

Cooksey urged Carter to consider a national policy based on federal law requiring production of American oil and gas at the maximum efficient rate.

"Those found hoarding petroleum or petroleum products, whether at the production, refining or marketing stage, should face stiff penalties for failure to produce and market their product at maximum level," Cooksey said.

He said he had a feeling, but no proof, that some individual producers in Texas have been holding back oil production to get higher prices.

Cooksey urged the energy advisory council to recommend that Clements call a special legislative session to enact a mandatory statewide conservation plan, plus creation of a state agency to promote solar energy research. He said the conservation plan should include energy-saving requirements in private buildings as well as regulation of air conditioning thermostats.

Meanwhile, Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, issued a statement criticizing Clements for fuel allocation procedures.

"Vital supplies of gasoline and diesel fuel are not coming to Texas farmers, and state government is responsible," Patman said.

Regional Planning Commission's Conference room at Midland Air Terminal.

A new chairman and vice chairman will be considered and an explanation of the new drug abuse prevention proposal that has been submitted by the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency to the Texas Department of Community Affairs-Drug Abuse Prevention Division will be given.

The public is invited to attend.

EARLY LEADER — Bill Longmuir, a virtually unknown Briton from Basildon, Essex, gestures as he chips onto the 15th green as the 108th British Open golf championship got underway Wednesday at the Royal Lytham St. Annes links. Longmuir, 26, had an 18-hole total of 65 — 6 under par — to put him as the leader after the first day.

In Little League All-Star playoffs

Western topples International

The Midland Western All-Stars used the two-hit pitching of Eric Ezell and a two-run single in the second inning by Tony Burge to take a 3-1 victory over the Big Spring International League in action in the District II Little League Tournament. The game was played in the National League Park, also known as Pittman Park.

The win enables the Western squad to advance into Friday's semifinals against the winner of tonight's game between Big Spring National and Lamesa. Both of these games will also be played in the National League Park.

The Western All-Stars struck for all of their runs in the first two innings. Ezell, a lanky left-hander, scored for Western in the initial inning with two outs. He walked, advanced to third on a wild throw following teammate Richard Marshall's ground ball, and scored on a passed ball.

Losing pitcher Tommy Gartman walked Ken Delagarza and Billy Dennis to open the second inning, then retired the next two Western hitters before Burge singled to centerfield to score both runners. It was the only hit of the game for the Western All-Stars.

Gartman, who struck out eight in the contest, was in control the remainder of the game.

Ezell allowed his only run in the fifth inning when Arthur Islas singled with Gartman on first base. The Western third baseman allowed the ball to get past him while trying to tag Gartman at third, and the IL scored to tighten the game.

But Ezell retired the final four hitters he faced to ice the game.

In the American League

Unknown Bill Longmuir takes early lead in British Open

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — Bill Longmuir: serious contender for the British Open golf title, or one-day wonder?

Longmuir, a 26-year-old Englishman, shot a record-equalling 65 in the first round Wednesday to lead a cadre of Americans into today's second round.

Despite having won only two tournaments as a pro, the virtually unknown Longmuir was convinced he could go on to glory.

"I think I can win the Open if I hang on and just play nicely," said Longmuir, who was once so broke he drove a truck to raise money to continue as a player.

But the man with the unlikely pedigree hit eight birdies in the first 12 holes over the windy Lytham course to leave second-placed Hale Irwin, the U.S. Open champion, three shots back.

Jerry Pate was another shot back in third place at 69. "I am under no pressure whatsoever," said Longmuir, slightly bemused by all the attention his record attracted. "Sixty-five is a great bonus for me, and I am going to go out to try and make another big score."

The battle-hardened American pros were amazed at Longmuir's birdie run.

"The guy who shot 65?" Irwin asked. "I take my hat off to him. Good gosh, what an amazing round of golf. Incredible."

much too handle, joked: "I don't believe the score and I don't believe there is such a person." Both shot 1-over 72.

Longmuir went into today's second round as one of only four players to break par.

Irwin, who defied the convention of the day by collecting three birdies on the back nine of the 6,822-yard, par-71 course, just edged in front of Pate, who turned 4-under but finished 2-under at 69.

"It was very difficult," the bespectacled Irwin said. "There are so many holes with narrow fairways and the wind made things even worse."

Irwin was nevertheless very satisfied with his round. "I felt like I drove the ball really well," he said. "I feel excellent that I had a good score in the first round. It always helps."

Pate also found the 25 mph winds troublesome. "The wind blew real good," he said. "It was much harder than it seemed. I have such a long, slow swing and when I get in winds I have a heck of a time."

"I can hear my club move through the air."

The attitude of the American professionals toward the conditions made Longmuir's round seem all the more remarkable.

Watson saw it that way.

"Longmuir's round was incredible, no question about it," he said. "It was really fantastic in those conditions. Almost beyond reason."

Injuries taking toll in Cowboy camp

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Wednesday's initial two-day workouts in full pads took their toll on the Dallas Cowboy veterans, in a minor sort of way.

The list of injuries was long and contained some familiar names, but none was expected to miss Thursday's practice sessions.

Injured were middle linebacker Bob Breunig (lower back), outside linebacker D.D. Lewis (achilles tendon), wide receiver Drew Pearson and rookie defensive lineman Bruce Thornton (ankle).

In addition, running back Tony Dorsett was still bothered by a slight groin pull from Tuesday, but he took part in Wednesday's practice.

Coming from behind, the Crimson Tide Cagers edged Japan 68-63 to win the game. King scored three points.

Bobby Knight: Pro or con as a coach

EDITOR'S NOTE — Bobby Knight is considered one of the country's best college basketball coaches. But his career from West Point through last week's Pan Am Games has been marked by controversy. The first part of this three-part series examines that career.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The coach, who knows it all, approaches a gangly teen-ager, who thinks he does. The coach asks the kid to run as fast as he can to the other end of the basketball court, touch the rim and come back.

The kid struts his stuff as fast as he can.

"Not bad," said the coach. "Eleven seconds. Now do it again."

This time, the coach is on the kid's heels every step of the way, screaming up and down the court.

"C'mon...Hustle...Move..." he barks, commanding the kid into a faster gear.

At the end of the second run, the kid looks befuddled. He's puffing a lot harder now. The coach puts his arm around him and stares at his stopwatch. "Now which time do you think was faster?"

The kid, not so strident any more, says sheepishly "the second."

The coach smiles. "Nine seconds," he says.

Bobby Knight, considered by many to be the best basketball coach in the country, has made his point. And if the kid can overcome the shock to his bruised ego, he will have learned a lesson.

It doesn't matter that this wasn't Indiana University, where Knight gets to teach quality players. It was a summer basketball camp for teen-agers. But the motivational technique and results are the same.

In six years as head coach at Army and eight years at Indiana, the 38-year-old Knight has never had one of his players make All-Pro in the National Basketball Association or an all-rookie NBA team. Yet, these players in college gave him 300 career victories by the time he was 35. He now shows a mark of 284-103.

Last season, his Indiana squad — weakened by injuries and suspensions for smoking marijuana and without a single All-American player — won the NIT basketball championship. When the season was over, a computer ranking service called Knight's nine-man team the second best in the country behind Michigan State.

Yet Knight isn't judged by this court achievements alone. Everywhere he goes controversy hangs over him because of his volatile nature and his strong-armed motivational techniques.

At the recent Pan American Games the spotlight again fell on Knight, coach of the U.S. basketball team. The U.S. was beating the Virgin Islands by 35 points when Knight hotly disputed a charging call. He was evicted from the game and forced to apologize to representatives of the international basketball federation.

Then he got into an altercation last week with a San Juan policeman over the use of a practice facility. Knight wound up in jail for a short time, and the coach and the cop filed assault and battery accusations against each other. Knight faces as much as six months in jail if convicted; Knight's complaint against the cop was dismissed.

Knight doesn't recruit showboat players with oversized egos or statistics. And the consensus of coaches is that, in a sport tainted by recruiting violations, Knight doesn't bend the rules.

"The only thing I'm sure of is that Indiana doesn't cheat," says Abe Lemons of Texas. "But that sonavagun thinks he can take five guys off a street corner and beat you."

Knight's players are fundamentally sound and team-oriented, otherwise they aren't Knight's players. His teams play a disciplined, passing-game offense and hard-nosed man-to-man defense. Their trademarks are hustle, intelligence and patience. Practices are fast-paced with players skinning elbows and knees diving for balls.

"Sure he yells and screams a lot, but he's doing it for a purpose. He had my attention at all times," said former Indiana player Steve Downing, a No. 1 draft choice by the Boston Celtics and now an administrative assistant to the Indiana athletic director. "Pretty much to this day I'm still scared of him. I'm always on my toes. But I respect Coach Knight more than anybody in this world. Because of him, I feel I can deal with any problem at any time."

"He treated me like a piece of meat," said Rich Valavicius, who quit Indiana and transferred to Auburn two years ago. "He's rough and tough on you mentally and physically. He's constantly on your case, cursing you out. I was intimidated, and I don't feel I deserved it one bit."

Knight played basketball at Ohio State, where the Buckeyes won Big Ten titles from 1960-62 and the national championship in 1960. One year after graduation, Knight volunteered for the draft with the understanding that his initial duty would be in the West Point basketball program under Coach Tate Locke.

When Locke left for Miami University in 1965, the 24-year-old Knight was named head coach. He quickly earned a reputation as a hot-head, ranting at referees, breaking chairs and getting into hot water with the Army brass.

Knight's Army teams, hampered by a military restriction against accepting plebes taller than 6-foot-6, won consistently. "My most enjoyable coaching experience was at Army," said Knight. "I loved being the underdog and beating schools with reputations."

He moved to tradition-rich Indiana in 1971, quickly putting his stamp on the program, transforming the "Hurryin' Hoosiers" into a typical Knight team, despite an outcry by some Indiana fans who clamored for run-and-gun basketball. He also immediately silenced the whispers that he couldn't handle blacks, or get star players to play disciplined ball.

Indiana went 32-0 and won the national title in 1976, fulfilling one of Knight's greatest dreams.

"When he was recruiting me, he told me his goal was to win the national championship," said Jim Crews, a member of the undefeated 1976 team and now a part-time assistant coach at Indiana. "But he said he was going to do it with good kids."

Humphrey resigns as Midland basketball boss

MIDLAND — Don Humphrey, who guided the Midland Bulldogs to the District 5-AAAA basketball championship, announced his resignation earlier in the week to go into private business.

Humphrey, who compiled a three-year record of 58-41 at MHS, helped the Bulldogs achieve a record of 26-9 the past year, losing in the regional tournament to state finalist Fort Worth Dunbar.

Humphrey, an Andrews native, will join the Houston-based Allstates Chemical as their Midland field representative.

Athletic Director Sam Cox was expected to accept applications for the vacancy immediately. One of the prime candidates probably would be Eddie Shirley, Humphrey's assistant the past three years.

Eagles waive arrested back

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two Philadelphia Eagles running backs arrested last month on drug charges, will not play for the team, the National League Football club announced.

Mike Hogan, the Eagles' starting fullback last season, was released on no-recall waivers, and reserve halfback James Betterson was placed on the reserve — physically unable to perform — list.

Hogan and Betterson, both 25, were among eight persons arrested last month by Camden, N.J., authorities on charges of drug law violations involving cocaine.

A SIGN OF YEARS PAST — Los Angeles Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda points out New York Yankees pitcher Tommy John to fans in the stands Monday during All Star workout at Seattle's Kingdome. John, a member of the Dodgers for years, was picked up by the Yankees following the 1978 season.

Parker's defense highlights 1979 All-Star extravaganza

SEATTLE (AP) — A guy so big that you'd think he would do better moving pianos makes two defensive plays that are absolutely mind-boggling. A little, dark-haired guy from New York's rag-tag Mets hits the game-tying home run in his first time at bat.

The game's best home run hitter, Mike Schmidt, goes eyeball-to-eyeball with the killer speedball pitcher, Nolan Ryan, in the very first inning and hits a massive triple. The host city's lone representative, Bruce Bochte, comes to bat in the sixth and bounces a hit over short. Bedlam in the Kingdome.

With the bases full, the 1978 Cy Young honoree, walks home the winning run and a bullpen specialist of the Chicago Cubs blows down Boston's Jim Rice and Rick Burleson for the last two outs as the National League beats the American League for the eighth straight time in baseball's 50th All-Star game.

Added to that these ingredients. There are 58,905 crammed into the tight Kingdome with gadgets and red, white and blue streamers hanging from the rafters. A guy in a chicken's uniform is doing silly routines on top of the dugouts.

Morganna, the notorious sports stripteaser, leaps out of the stands, runs to home plate and plants a kiss on George Brett's startled features. We didn't think George protested half enough. And then this lanky guy in shorts, tee shirt and baseball cap runs out on the field and plays tag with the cops.

That, in a nutshell, is the 1979 All-Star game, won by the National League 7-6. Baseball? Don't be stupid. It's theater. Maybe that's too kind a word. It's vaudeville. But it's fresh. It's fun. It's unpredictable. And the fans loved every minute of it.

So what if the National League has won the last eight in a row, 16 of the last 17, 31 to 18 with one tie overall? Do you think Chub Feeney, the NL prexy, can throw out his chest and brag about superiority? Of course not. The All-Star game proves nothing in the way of comparative league strength. No more than in the World Series in which the American League has a 45 to 30 edge, 27-19 in the period since the All-Star game's inception in 1933.

Let's face it. It's a great show, with players moved in and out of the lineup like basketball players. The All-Star game has none of the organized rhythm of regular season play or World Series, none of those tense duels in strategy that are more akin to war and chess battles.

Let's have no more of those barroom hassles about one league being better than the other. Let's just savor it for what it is — a look at our heroes in a fun-filled setting.

In this one, there were heroes and goats to go around. But the outstanding individual undoubtedly — winner of the Most Valuable Player Award — was gargantuan Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who played right field the entire game.

You've got to hand it to Lee Mazzilli of the Mets, hitting that home run in the eighth to tie the game. You can't discount gutsy Bruce Sutter of the Cubs for his "split-finger" strikeout mastery in the ninth. But Parker, 6 feet, 5 inches, and 230 pounds, a Goliath in a solid gold uniform, was a spectacle to remember forever.

In the seventh he lost Jim Rice's towering fly ball in the lights. Big Dave recovered the ball, wheeled and cut the dashing Red Soxer down at third — eliminating a threat. In the eighth with two men on base, the Pirates outfielder outdid himself on Graig Nettles' sharp hit to right. He charged the ball and shot it on a fly to catcher Gary Carter of the Expos, who snuffed out a charging Brian Downing at home.

Parker is renowned for his offensive skills — league batting champion the last two years, 1978 MVP, first in total bases and a bidder for baseball's triple crown — batting average, home runs, and RBI totals.

This night he was the complete ball player — a man to applaud in a nerve-stabbing if not a perfect game.

Chief rookies dump Oilers, 10-3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Running back Jimmy Edwards, who returned six punts for 119 yards, and quarterback Steve Fuller, who completed eight of 10 passes for 89 yards and a touchdown, made the biggest splash for the Kansas City Chiefs.

And for the Houston Oilers, running back Kenny King's 47 yards on 13 carries provided the biggest offensive spark as the Chiefs and Oilers rookies and free agents squared in a scrimmage to determine who might win a job in professional football this year.

The game was long, boring and raggedly played and ended with the Chiefs on top, 10-3.

"We just were not good enough," said Houston Coach Bum Phillips. "We didn't do anything consistently."

"They played hard," said Chiefs Coach Marv Levy. "The way we expected them to play in a game like this."

The first half ended in a scoreless tie, then in the third quarter Fuller, a first-round draft choice out of Clemson, hit Rory Hennings with a 20-yard touchdown pass. Edwards, late of the Canadian Football League, zipped 46 yards with a punt to set up Dan Beaver's 33-yard field goal.

Jan Stahle booted a 32-yarder for Houston with 1:11 left in the game.

Edwards' performance was easily the highlight for the Chiefs, who for years have been in need of a good kick returner.

"We brought him down here with the idea that he had a good shot of making it," said Levy. "And he showed good tonight."

King, a sprinter out of Oklahoma's wishbone, is expected to earn a spot on Houston's roster and Phillips admits he's excited about the idea of a backfield containing King and Earl Campbell.

"We have got some pretty good football players and he is going to have to make the team," said Phillips. "I got a good look at him early in the game. I wanted to look at him. In the last half on special teams, I thought he did a good job. All of our players have to be able to do more than one thing."

The Chiefs used two other quarterbacks besides Fuller, second-year man Pete Woods and free agent Bill Kenney. Woods completed only one of six passes, but had three dropped and threw a touchdown pass that was nullified by a penalty.

"They did okay," Levy said of his trio of quarterbacks. "We had tons of different linemen in and we blew a number of blitzes and pick-ups. It's hard to form an opinion right now because we changed personnel so much. I think Fuller showed good ability to escape. Bill did a good job. He started good and then things caved in on him with blitzes. I think all three remained poised and showed positive reactions and that's good."

Nick Nichols, one of Tomjanovich's lawyers, said he does not know how long the court proceedings will last but it will take about a week to present his client's case.

Cesar Cedeno in hospital for tests

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors at Houston's Methodist Hospital are testing Houston Astros first baseman Cesar Cedeno to find the cause of painful stomach cramps that hit him Tuesday.

Astros officials said the disorder will cause Cedeno, 28, to miss at least part of a fivegame road trip opening

Thursday at Pittsburgh and continuing in St. Louis.

Cedeno had remained at home since Sunday during the break for Tuesday night's All-Star game in Seattle.

When the pains continued Wednesday, it was decided to move Cedeno to the hospital for tests, officials said.

The Chicken is getting Billy Martin's goat

SEATTLE — Billy Martin is wearing a small patch across the bridge of his nose, covering a wound. I hasten to add that the bashed beeper was not picked up in a barroom discussion.

Billy's rather catchable proboscis was caught by a swinging net on a fishing vessel here. A camera crew for 20-20, ABC's 66.6 percent answer to 60 Minutes, has been filming footage about "the real Billy Martin" these past several days.

As far as I can tell, Billy's behavior has been exemplary since his return from Elba. It took him three weeks merely to get thrown out of a ballgame by an umpire. If Martin does blow his cork, the next major escapade could involve shooting a rare giant bird, the theadous giannoulas, in the tail feathers with a barrel of buckshot.

Ted Giannoulas is the famed San Diego chicken that migrated here this week. He really has been flying around the country, seeking sanctuary. He has been to Shea Stadium, and to Wrigley Field, and now has landed in the Kingdome, where he is scratching around all week, preparing for the All-Star Game.

For three nights, while the Yankees were winning only one of three out here, The Bird did his gig. People laughed. Billy Martin was not among them, nor was Lou Piniella. Somehow things don't seem quite so funny when you're getting whipped, especially when you are the world champions getting whipped by an expansion ballclub. This is one fact of bird life that our fine-feathered friend has yet to learn.

The other night, in the first game of the Yankee-Mariner series, Piniella was walking around the infield to his position in left at the start of the fourth inning. He had just been robbed of a hit by the shortstop, making him 2-for-0 on the evening, and the scoreboard showed Seattle leading, 3-1. If The Bird really knew his baseball, he'd have realized this was no time to be telling jokes to Lou Piniella. Lou holds the record for smashed helmets on dugout steps. He is a paradox — a lovely guy with a short fuse.

As Sweet Lou crossed the infield, The Bird sneaked up on him from the third base side. Piniella whirled and fired his glove, and missed, which was the kind of night Lou was having. The Bird retreated in horror. The people laughed at the bird. The people booed Lou Piniella.

"I told him to get the bleep off the field," Lou said later. "He shouldn't be bleeping around with the players. It's distracting. If he wants to clown around with the umpires and with the fans, fine. I take my baseball seriously."

The bird does its funniest stuff with umpires. A big laugh-getter goes like this: Holding a towel, and figuring to creep up on an umpire to towel-snap him from behind, The Bird is discovered by the intended victim as he nears. The Bird turns suddenly servile. He drops to his knees and uses the towel to shine the umpire's shoes. Upon finishing, The Bird holds out a hand and receives a hand-slap. Indicating that he wants bread, not skin, The Bird flies into a rage and kicks dirt onto the umpire's shoes.

"One of the umpires helped me develop that schtick," says The Bird. "Billy Williams said, hey, why don't you kick dirt back on my shoes? I did, and it went over big."

The Bird meets with the umpires in their room before the game, making sure they know what to expect so that no one is embarrassed. "They are great," says The Bird. "In fact the only one I had trouble with, ever, was a basketball referee. The Bird was working an NBA game. Earl Strom grew a bit testy and cursed him, says The Bird.

Inside The Bird is Ted Giannoulas, 5-foot-4 and full grown at age 25. He went to San Diego State, intending to be a sportswriter, but was sidetracked by becoming the mascot bird for radio station KGB, San Diego. They had a falling out, and the station is suing him for $250,000. "They must think I'm Frank Perdue," he says.

Ted Giannoulas has struck out on his own. The station has obtained an injunction against his using his chicken costume, so he has designed this hybrid bird outfit, which is close enough. Now, in addition to having KGB mad at him, he has the Yankees angry.

"If I were playing second base," says Billy Martin, an old second baseman, "and he pulled the stuff he pulled on Piniella he might get some buckshot in his tail!"

"If that's what this game is coming to," says Piniella, "they can find themselves another ballplayer. I don't want any part of it."

Ted Giannoulas, like Mark Fidrych before him, is a bird who does put people in the ballpark. Some Yankees realize this and are conciliatory.

"It doesn't bother me. The fans like it. Besides, compared to what has happened to me this year, they could play tennis out there and I wouldn't mind," says Reggie Jackson, disagreeing with Billy Martin for a change.

Texans criticize Carter's energy program

DALLAS (AP) — President Carter's energy program came under bitter criticism from two Texans at the opening session of the 4th annual Public Utilities Conference.

Texas Railroad Commission Chairman John Poerner said Carter's plan "is not what I call rational," contending government overregulation and "federally mandated artificially low prices" are at the root of the energy crisis.

"When we need oil ... we ought to talk to the oil men," he said.

Poerner said the administration has pushed for energy "at the lowest possible cost, no matter what the long-range result may be."

"We are now experiencing a shortage of the relatively cheap energy supply we came to love and expect," he said.

Poerner said increased domestic oil production should be the "cornerstone" of an energy plan, and called for more federal lands for drilling and increased nuclear energy production.

Poerner criticized the proposed windfall profits tax, saying the $142 billion "confiscation" is about five times as much as the gross value of the U.S. crude oil production in 1978.

Texas Power & Light President Robert K. Campbell called the national plan "a compromise mainly centered around regional interests" of the Northeast.

A requirement that utilities inspect homes and arbitrate differences of opinion "will cost Texas Power & Light alone $3 million per year," he said.

Campbell criticized proposals to set up interstate power networks, saying, "We bought the lifeboat, so how many people do we have to let on the lifeboat?"

quoted Carter as saying "he will keep the pot stirred on this program."

With a confusing overlap in responsibility among energy agencies, "the regulatory environment in Washington is very difficult for the president to deal with," he said.

Hooded witness testifies before federal jury

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A hooded witness testified before a federal grand jury Wednesday in one of the first sessions devoted to the assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood two months ago.

Federal sources told the San Antonio Express the grand jury meeting was one of the most important since the 63-year-old judge was gunned down near his car May 29. The grand jury also has been looking into the attempted slaying of a federal prosecutor.

After his appearance, the secret witness was spirited away by FBI agents through a secondary exit from the U.S. Courthouse. The panel heard from one other unidentified witness before adjourning.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck refused to identify the hooded witness—who wore a mask fashioned from a grocery sack—but the grand jury session came just two days after FBI agents put Donald Ray Elliott under protection.

Elliott, 28, was arrested in Salt Lake City on May 31 and reportedly told police officials there he had information about Wood's assassination two days earlier.

FBI sources said Elliott was placed under protection after his name and the possible link to the Wood killing became public.

The grand jury has been looking into the Nov. 21 attempted assassination of Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr since February. Kerr escaped with only minor glass cuts after an assailant opened fire on his car as he drove to work.

Wood and Kerr had both been involved in massive investigations into huge drug smuggling rings centered in El Paso. No arrests have been made in either case.

A federal grand jury in El Paso has been investigating narcotics trafficking and also has reportedly heard testimony on the Kerr shooting.

Wood's stiff sentences in drug cases had earned him the nickname "Maximum John." He was killed by a single .243-caliber bullet to the spine as he left his San Antonio townhouse for work.

Federal agents had operated with few leads in the Wood case until Elliott's possible link was reported Saturday in Salt Lake City's Deseret News. Federal prosecutors had earlier asked the news media to withhold the story to "preserve the integrity of the investigation."

The FBI had refused to comment on Elliott's possible involvement in the case.

Califano gets ax; first casualty in Carter's cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. has become the first casualty in President Carter's Cabinet reshuffling, administration and congressional sources said today.

Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, said: "Califano told me himself that the president accepted his resignation last night at 6 o'clock."

Similar word came from high administration officials who declined to be identified.

Califano had been scheduled to testify on overhauling the government's student loan programs before an Education and Labor subcommittee, but he sent subordinates from the agency in his place and scheduled a 12:30 p.m. EDT news conference.

At the White House meeting, Carter reportedly cited Califano's frequent skirmishes with presidential aides over policy issues and appointments as one reason for accepting Califano's resignation as chief of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

There was no official confirmation immediately from the White House or HEW.

Carter had been expected to announce by Friday which of the 34 resignations he requested from Cabinet officers and his top aides would be accepted.

Perkins called the ouster "a great mistake," saying Califano

"is the first secretary in my memory that has taken a hold of a disorganized department and brought some reorganization that really needed to be done."

"This day will go down in history as a great loss to the nation when we lose Joe Califano," Perkins added.

Although the secretary had developed a good working relationship with the members of Congress who pass on his department's huge, diverse programs, he made enemies within the administration because of his independence and willingness to challenge other policymakers.

Califano is a lawyer who was a member of a prominent and influential Washington firm before joining the administration. He reportedly earned a salary there of as much as $500,000 a year.

Califano also served during Lyndon Johnson's years as president

Man wanted for murder captured

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — A spokesman for the Casper police department said Wednesday three detectives arrested a 32-year-old man wanted in Texas for questioning in the death of a woman whose dismembered body was found in a warehouse.

The spokesman said a man identifying himself as Lynn Nicely was apprehended about noon at the Casper Hilton Inn after a tip from Texas authorities.

Police said the man is also known as Gary "Rusty" Webster and Lynn Webber.

Two Garland, Texas, police reportedly were en route to question the man, now being held in Casper.

Garland police said he is wanted in connection with the death of his wife, who was tentatively identified as 20-year-old Betty Shirley Webster. Betty Webster, a former Greenwood, S.C., High School student, was Webster's second wife. Webster was a piano player and former teacher at the high school, and has been at large for two years.

The woman's aunt, Mrs. Mary Pinson of Hodges, S.C., said her niece and Webster left Greenwood for Jacksonville, Fla., shortly after their marriage in March 1977. There, Webster played piano for an instrumental group.

Mrs. Pinson said her niece "seemed to be happy" in a letter she received in August 1977. But that fall, "everything just kind of came to an end," said Garland Detective Martin Brown.

Members of Webster's band in Jacksonville told police Webster and his wife "just didn't show up after a week's vacation," taking some of the band's equipment with them.

In May 1978, however, a man rented a mini-warehouse using the name "Lynn Webber" and a false address. Handwriting samples showed the man to be Webster, police said.

Detective Steve Brezik said police believe the woman may have been put into the 5-by-10-foot storage room shortly after it was rented.

"That's the only way we can justify why he would use a false name," he said.

The warehouse manager found the woman's nude body, her arms amputated above the elbows and her legs cut off below the knees, when he was cleaning the room because the rent had not been paid in six months.

The last monthly payment of $21 was received in December in an envelope marked Phoenix, Ariz. A previous payment was from Royal Oak, Mich., police said.

All-Indian crew battles flames

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Their day had started at 6 a.m. in a dense, choking smoke that clung to the mountains, hiding the sun and the fire-ravaged Ponderosa pines.

Now it was nearly dusk in the Coconino National Forest. The 650-acre fire had just been described as under control. And "Apache 7" — a 20-woman, all-Indian crew — was ordered to help nine other crews mop up.

The ash-covered forest floor was still smoldering. Dust and smoke were everywhere. Temperatures approached 100.

Regina Massey, mother of two, swung an ax at a suspicious stump. It burst into flames. She swung the ax again and again, until satisfied the stump was out.

Andrea Palmer, college student, a five-gallon water pack strapped to her back, handpumped streams of water to douse hot spots.

Apache 7 arrived to fight this fire one day last week after a night-time, 180-mile trip from the Fort Apache Reservation in north-central Arizona. They'd had a brief rest in their sleeping bags in a nearby meadow before being awakened to replace an all-male crew that had been there since 6 o'clock the night before.

"All-women, all-men, we simply call for so many fire-fighting crews," said District Ranger John Sims. "They're supposed to know their jobs, and a crew is assigned where it's needed with no consideration of sex."

The women of Apache 7 would have it no other way.

Mostly in their 20s — housewives, mothers, students, fugitives from routine office jobs — they have to be in perfect physical condition.

One requirement, said crew boss Mary Harvey, is to run a mile and a half each morning in 12 minutes or less.

During the summer fire season, they must be ready to drop everything on an emergency basis 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and leave for a fire site.

The lure? To hear them tell it, mostly money. Also a love of the outdoors and the land.

Their average base pay is $5.20 an hour. When a fire is out of control, hazard pay adds 25 percent. It's time and a half after eight hours. Travel time from home — but not sleeping or eating — counts as work time.

Beverly Stago is the mother of a girl, 7, and a boy, 5. She is in her second season fighting fires. "I worked in an office," she said, "but the pay is nothing like this. And I love the outdoors."

Grandmother baby-sits the youngsters while she is away.

Miss Harvey says she applied for a job as a secretary with the Bureau of Indian Affairs but switched after talking to women already on fire duty. When not fighting fires, she does forestry chores such as thinning young trees. "I like to be out in the woods," she explained.

Mrs. Massey is married to the crew boss of another Apache unit. She took up firefighting in October. Her mother-in-law cares for their two boys when she is away.

Marvene Nozie was on an otherwise all-male crew before joining Apache 7 two years ago. She says she learned a lot about fighting fires from the men but prefers an all-women unit.

Eva Hoffman was a police department records clerk. She plans to fight fires each summer as long as she can pass the physical. She is majoring in accounting at Maricopa Tech in Phoenix.

Andrea Palmer majors in home economics at Arizona State University. She and Eva proudly related how they have been able to buy 1979 cars with their firefighting earnings.

"Apache 9" is another all-women crew that leaves the reservation as a unit. The two are believed to be the only such roving units. Of 16 crews that remain on the 2,601-square-mile reservation, six are all-women.

Are the women equal to men on the job?

Sims, a 30-year Forest Service veteran who is in charge of 250,000 acres south of this fire's range, says:

"Ten years ago, you never saw women in forest fire crews. Then there were a few women in all-male crews. "The women nowadays are extremely willing and capable up to a point. That's 98 percent of the time. But when it comes to sheer physical strength, it becomes a problem. I'd hate to have Mary, for example, need to pick me up and carry me out of a fire."

He thought a moment and added: "But she'd probably tell you she's already figured that out and has plans for three girls to handle such a job together."

CBS extends domination in battle of summer reruns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS has extended its domination in the battle of the summer reruns with seven of the top 10 shows in the latest national A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

The network's first-place finish in ratings released Tuesday marked the third time in the last four weeks that CBS has either topped or tied ABC.

CBS' overall rating average for the week that ended Sunday was 15.1. ABC and NBC trailed with averages of 14.2 and 11.0, respectively.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 15.1 percent of the homes in the country with televisions were tuned to CBS. Under the Nielsen system, each point represents about 750,000 TV homes.

Old episodes of two CBS shows, "M-A-S-H" and "WKRP in Cincinnati" topped the ratings list. ABC repeats of "Three's Company" and "Taxi" took third and fourth place.

NBC's only top 20 representative was "Prime Time Sunday," making its best showing to date in the No. 20 slot. "Prime Time Sunday" and another newsmagazine show, ABC's "20-20" in the No. 16 position, were the only original offerings in the top 20.

But both were beat out by a rerun of CBS newsmagazine, "60 Minutes," in the No. 8 slot.

Last week's top 20 and their ratings:

1, "M-A-S-H," 24.9 (CBS); 2, "WKRP in Cincinnati," 24.1 (CBS); 3, "Three's Company," 24.0 (ABC); 4, "Taxi," 22.7 (ABC); 5, "Lou Grant," 22.6 (CBS); 6, "The Jeffersons," 20.9 (CBS); 7, "Laverne & Shirley," 20.1 (ABC); 8, "60 Minutes," 20.0 (CBS); 9, "Alice," 19.2 (CBS); 10, "The Dukes of Hazzard," 19.1 (CBS); 11, "Dallas," 18.9 (CBS); 12, "Eight is Enough," 17.3 (ABC); 13, "Charlie's Angels," 17.3 (ABC); 14, "One Day at a Time," 17.2

(CBS); 15, "Barney Miller," 17.2 (ABC); 16, "20-20," 17.2 (ABC); 17, "Happy Days," 17.1 (ABC); 18, "All in the Family," 16.8 (CBS); 19, "Mork and Mindy," 16.7 (ABC); 20, "Prime Time Sunday," 16.7 (NBC).

The Nielsen ratings are used by the three major networks to set advertising rates.

At the bottom of the ratings barrel last week, in the No. 64 position, was the live "SALT II Debate" televised on NBC. It got a 5.9 rating with an 11 percent share of the viewing audience.

The remaining bottom 10: 55, "Sword of Justice," 8.6 (NBC); 56, "Stockard Channing in Just Friends," 8.3 (CBS); 57, "Project UFO," 8.1 (NBC); 58, "Carnival of the Animals," (a special) 7.9 (CBS); 59, "Supertrain," 7.4 (NBC); 60, "The Paper Chase," 7.4 (CBS); 61, "Gossip," (pilot) 7.1 (NBC); 62, "Battlestar Galactica," 6.9 (ABC); 63, "Hardy Boys," 6.2 (ABC).

Recent price rise of gold may put it out of consumer's reach

NEW YORK (AP) — As the price of gold raced past $300 an ounce this week, some jewelers worried the yellow metal's lofty stature on world money markets may put it out of reach of most consumers.

Jewelers, who are the major manufacturing consumers of gold, say small buyers will likely change their habits if the $302.40-ounce record price reached in bullion markets Wednesday holds.

"People who buy gold jewelry buy it for the same reason they buy any type of jewelry — for its aesthetic value, not as an investment," said Robert S. Kennedy, president of the Speidel division of Textron and president of the Jewelers and Silversmiths of America.

"But obviously at some point, it is going to price itself out of the market. People will buy lighter-weight materials, gold of lesser carat or gold-filled jewelry," he said.

Not everyone, however, is certain whether the squeeze will also take a toll on small investors who have increasingly turned to gold as a hedge against inflation.

At Citibank, a New York bank that last April started selling $1,000 gold certificates aimed at small investors, reaction to the $302-an-ounce price was mixed.

"Some people have redeemed all or part of their certificates, thinking they will take it and run. We've also had people who are holding on to wait and see what happens. Some people are buying, saying they want to get in on the bandwagon now," said Citibank spokesman Lester Miller.

Investors are charged a premium for gold coins and certificates. The price of a South African kruggerand, the most popular gold coin sold in the United States, was $316 each in retail stores Wednesday, up from $312 the previous day. Certificates usually entail broker fees and storage fees, depending on the quantity purchased.

The International Gold Corp., which markets kruggerands, does not break out sales to the United States. But worldwide, its figures indicate that during the first half of this year coin sales dropped to 2.27 million coins from 2.70 million sold during the same period the year before. Since January 1978, the price of gold has risen about $125 an ounce.
