'83 summer season may be the best yet

Based on full houses this past weekend and reservations received to this point, a number of Aransas County motel owners are looking forward to another good summer.

"Summer's filling up real fast," was the comment from one motel owner. Another reported, "June is filled up. We're anticipating a summer that is bigger and better than last year and that was our best. We've been here nine years," he added.

A spot check with eight area motels, in Rockport, Fulton and the Lamar community, resulted in reports of 100 percent occupancy for all during this past Memorial Holiday weekend.

"All of Rockport was filled," one motel owner reported. "Nothing was available."

A Fulton motel owner reported, "We had a very good weekend — we're still stacked up. It's the best May I've ever had. I have more advance reservations than ever before — I'm booked full for the 4th of July."

She and another motel owner noted that their guests are staying longer this year than last.

Other area businesses did equally well this past weekend. Restaurants drew good crowds — as did the annual Boy Scout Barbecue at the Lions Club Pit on Saturday.

Area beaches were jammed with sun-sand-and-surf seekers, area piers and the Ski Basin drew large numbers of fishermen, condominiums were full. Concerts at the Rockport Beach Band Shell entertained crowds Saturday and Sunday.

"We've done fine this weekend," another motel owner reported, summing up what appears to be the consensus in the area.

"It seems like the summer's going to be real good."

Chamber of Commerce banquet is set

Rockport Area Chamber of Commerce officers for the coming year will be officially installed during the Chamber's annual membership banquet set for Saturday, June 4, at the Cattleman's Bay House Restaurant, Sandollar Motel.

The evening's events will begin with hospitality hour at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Guest speaker is Bryan Hale, noted humorist known as the "Laredo Cajun." Hale is manager of Central Power & Light Co. of Bay City.

Cost of the banquet is $12.50 and those who attend are asked to bring their tickets to qualify them for the door prizes that will be awarded during the evening.

Grant sought for improvements to Memorial Park

By PAT BLAIR

Rockport officials have filed application for grant funds for some $166,350 in improvements to the city's park facilities including a jogging trail, ball fields, additional lighting and landscaping and sanitary sewer connection to Memorial Park's restroom facilities.

Application for the funds was authorized by the city council during its meeting last week when city officials approved a list of recommendations submitted by the city's board of parks and recreation for improvements to the existing park on FM 2165.

City Manager Herman Johnson met Friday with Texas Parks & Wildlife Department officials in Austin to discuss the grant application. The city is seeking grant money through the Land and Water Conservation Fund, a federal program administered through the TP&WD. The program is a matching-funds grant, with the city required to put up half the cost of the project.

Officials have emphasized, however, that the city's share of the project costs need not be in money but can be contributed through in-kind service such as labor and materials. The city can also use contributions and revenue sharing money to cover its share of costs.

Projects proposed to be developed under the grant program include construction of a west boundary fence around Memorial Park and construction of 1,200 feet of sewer outfall to the city's sanitary sewer treatment plant. The restroom facilities at the park are currently on septic system.

The city proposes to improve the road system through the park with an asphalt drive and additional parking facilities, at an estimated cost of $12,000.

Additional recreational facilities to be provided under the grant program include a walking-jogging trail and exercise fitness park, at an estimated cost of $22,850; four rest area park benches, $1,000 total; and an additional small soccer field for use by the Aransas County Soccer Association's Pee Wee Division teams. Cost of the soccer field is estimated at $3,000.

Also proposed is construction of a multi-game play slab, $8,000 estimated cost; a new, large baseball field, $6,000; and lighting for the existing adults' soccer field, $6,000.

Soccer Association members requested minimal lighting for the large field to enable adult team members to practice in the evenings.

Two new buildings are proposed in the grant application: an additional restroom building estimated to cost $20,000 and a picnic pavilion, estimated at $32,000.

Landscaping is proposed for the park at an estimated cost of $1,000 and signage for $500.

Other costs included in the grant application are master site and detailed site planning, a combined cost of $2,600; development of construction plans and specifications, $13,700; and an additional $15,000 for contingencies.

The possibility of grant funds for improvements to Rockport's city park was presented to the city's parks and recreation board earlier this year by Ken Pagans, a member of the marine advisory service of Texas A&M University. Pagans, in meetings with the board members in April, said some $3.25 million was available through the Land & Water Conservation Fund program and said he would assist city officials in applying for a grant.

Park board members in a meeting on May 18 voted to recommend a program of improvements to the city council that included the recreational facilities approved by the council at its meeting last week. Park Board Chairman George McCague made the presentation to the council.

Rockport Mayor Burt Mills asked about the possibility of other organizations and "maybe the county" participating in helping the city pay its share of funding costs. "It's a city park," Mills said, "but it's used by others outside the city."

Johnson told city officials that if the grant were approved, it would probably be 1984 before the city would receive the funds. He also assured the council that city staff could do some of the work.

Johnson subsequently met with county officials in the commissioners' May 25 session and secured county agreement to participate in the project on an in-kind basis.

During the city council meeting on May 24,

Sam Neely featured in dance

Sam Neely and his band will be featured in a dance Saturday, June 4, to raise money to help pay for moving the Paws & Taws Building to its new site near Fulton Harbor.

The dance will be at the Paws & Taws Building and will be from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Sunday, June 5. Tickets are $10 per person and beer and setups will be sold. Those attending are advised it is BYOB.

The dance will be followed Sunday, June 5, by a Mexican food breakfast and lunch. A donation of $5 will cover the cost of both breakfast from 7:30-9:30 a.m. and lunch from 11:30 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Hillis Dominguez is general chairman for the Mexican breakfast-lunch and Hank Koplow will serve as master of ceremonies and provide piano music during a portion of the affair.

Tony Dominguez will cater the breakfast and lunch which will feature a variety of foods.

ACMSI Women's Committee gives to Paws & Taws

The Women's Committee of Aransas County Medical Services Inc. has donated $1,000 to the fund to help pay for moving the Paws & Taws Building to its new site near Fulton Harbor.

The donation was presented to Paws & Taws Inc. (PTI), the committee formed to raise funds to pay the building's moving costs, by Mick Ladner, president of the board of directors of ACMSI, at last week's PTI meeting.

Ladner is also president of PTI.

The Paws & Taws Building must be moved from its present site on Fulton Beach Road to make way for a proposed retail-residential high rise development.

The owner of the building, which is used by area organizations for various fund raising and community affairs, donated it to PTI provided a new location could be found.

PTI obtained a lease from the Aransas County Navigation District on land near Fulton Harbor and is now working to raise the approximately $30,000 that will be needed to cover the costs of moving the structure.

In last week's meeting, PTI board members learned that the building will be moved earlier than was originally anticipated. Moving was scheduled to begin the first week of July, but the board was informed last week the movers will be ready to begin work the week of June 20.

PTI board members last week were also presented with the donation of a painting from Fred Wright to add to the seven prints donated by the Rockport Association of Ducks Unlimited in a silent auction that will raise money for the relocation fund.

Other fund-raising activities being planned include the dance this Saturday, June 4, and the Mexican breakfast-dinner on June 5. Tickets are still being sold for those events which will be at the Paws & Taws Building.

The Women's Committee, who made the latest contribution to the moving fund, was originated in 1975 by a small group of women seeking medical facilities for Aransas County. Primary purpose of the organization is to raise funds to support Aransas County's Emergency Medical Service, an organization composed of four paid paramedics and additional volunteer emergency medical technicians who provide emergency assistance to county residents.

In making the donation to the Paws & Taws fund, Ladner emphasized the Women's Committee was contributing money raised at a recent rummage sale and not from contributions made by individuals to the organization or from the

Tough DWI legislation moves toward final passage

By Gib Lewis, Speaker
Texas House of Representatives

AUSTIN — Some of the most significant legislation of this session was acted upon by both houses last week and is rapidly headed for final passage into law.

For openers, the House gave final approval to one of the toughest measures against the drunk driver of any state in the nation.

Senate Bill 1, by Sen. Bill Sarpaluis of Hereford, and cosponsored in the House by Rep. Terral Smith of Austin and myself, passed the House by a vote of 142 to 3.

The bill was significantly amended in the House committee to make it even tougher on drunk drivers than the measure approved by the Senate earlier.

Because it was amended in the House, the Senate had to agree to those changes.

This was done and the bill is now headed to Governor Mark White's desk for signing into law.

The Senate also approved last week a House bill and constitutional amendment proposal allowing courts to garnishee wages for the payment of child support on parents who fail, or refuse, to make those payments.

The proposal, by Rep. Rene Oliveira of Brownsville, will go to the voters statewide in November for approval.

The House has also passed one of the most important "Sunset" bills of this legislative session.

The bill, by Sen. Kent Caperton of Bryan, and sponsored in the House by Rep. Elton Bomer of Montalba, continues the Public Utility Commission of Texas as an agency of the state.

Both the House and Senate made significant changes in the structure and operating rules of the commission all designed to benefit the consumers by giving them greater input into its electric and telephone rate making procedures.

The House, like the Senate, refused to amend the bill to allow for the election of the three commission members who are not appointed by the governor.

There has been some discussion of the possibility Gov. Mark White will veto the bill because it doesn't provide for an elected commission.

However, I feel the measure is such a good consumer oriented bill that the Governor will reconsider and sign it into law.

The Senate also finally passed and sent to the Governor a measure by Rep. Pete Laney

Naval recruiters to visit

Starting this October, Naval Reserve recruiters will be visiting local high schools, vocational and technical schools and colleges looking for volunteers to serve as citizen-sailors.

A new program has been designed to bring an additional 8,000 non-prior servicemen and women, into the Naval Reserve each year for at least the next five years.

Called the Sea-Air Marine program, it is geared toward high school, votech and college students who wish to serve in the Navy but not on extended active duty.

Recruits selected for the program will have the opportunity to specialize in any of dozens of Navy occupations.

Most Naval Reservists are veteran Navymen who have served the normal four-year term of active duty and then affiliated with the Reserve.

In past years, about 2,000 non-prior service men and women have been recruited for the Selected Reserve by regular Navy recruiters. The SAM program will open an additional 8,000 part-time Navy jobs.

Most volunteers for the SAM program are expected to be students.

A high school junior, at least 17-years-old, for example, would be offered an extended training program.

He could join the Naval Reserve during the school year and between his junior and senior years he would attend Boot Camp. Upon returning from Boot Camp, he would start his senior year and begin attending monthly weekend drills.

After high school graduation, if qualified, he could attend a Navy "A" school or additional apprentice training for his preferred professional or occupational education.

Then he would resume regular Naval Reserve drills in or near his hometown along with a two-week period of active duty each year.

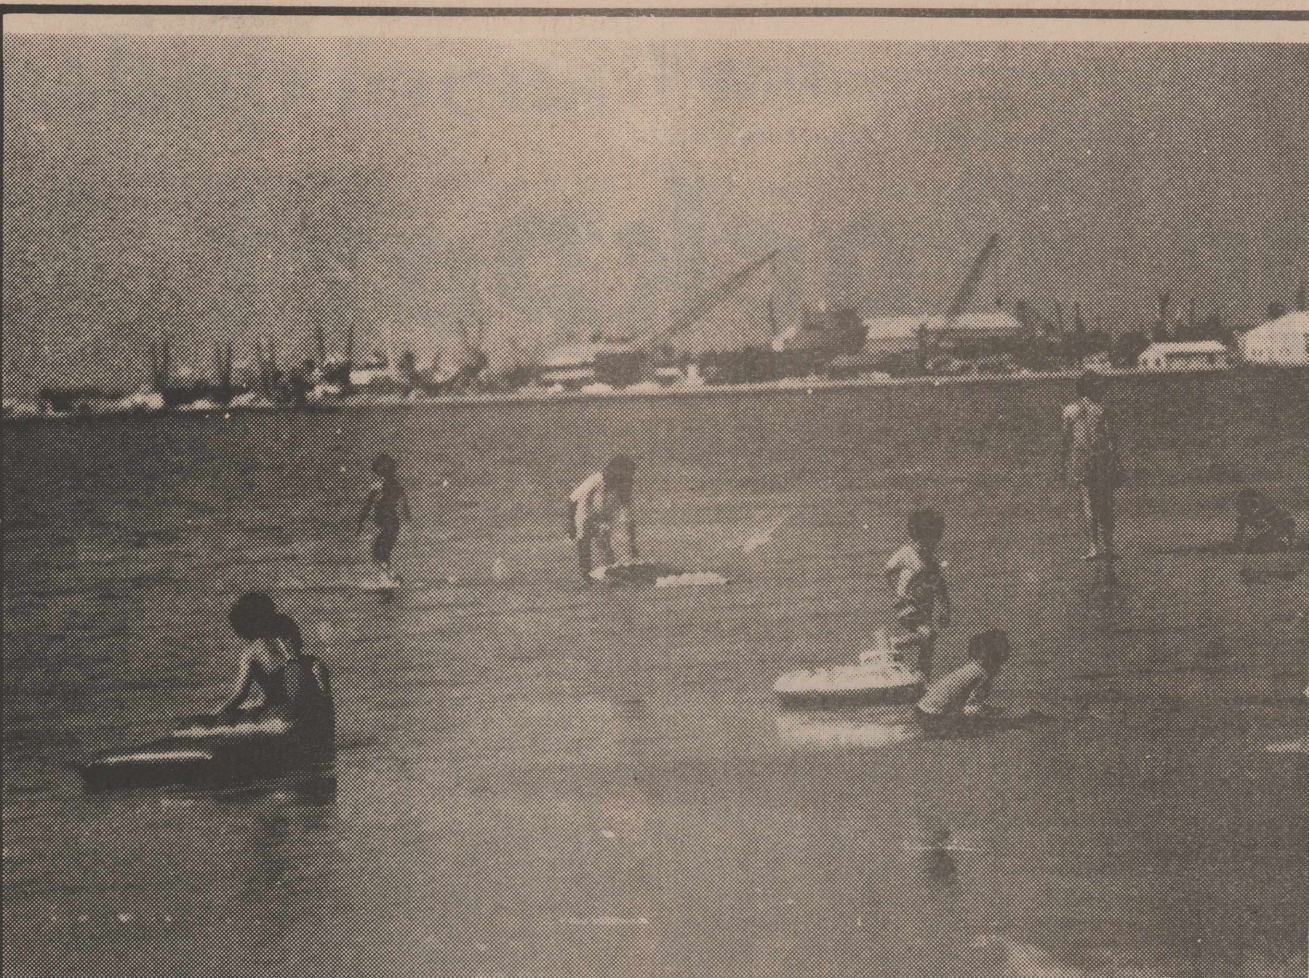

Similar offers would be made to college and votech students.

Enlistment bonuses of up to $2,000 are offered to qualified SAM Reservists after completion of required training. Educational assistance of up to $1,000 a year for four years is offered to high school graduates who complete their training.

The Navy may pay all tuition costs for votech students who qualify.

In turn, the Naval Reserve wants a six-year obligation to drill with the Reservist's assigned unit.

Cents-off coupons explained

"Cents-off coupons for use in food markets are a form of advertising and not necessarily a bargain for consumers," says Mary Clayton, a family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Using coupons may not be the best answer to high food prices for many families, since coupons are primarily issued for storable brand-name items rather than less processed, perishable products. If consumers want to reduce food costs, they should compare the cost of brand-name products with cents-off coupons, to generic or house brands which may still be less expensive. Consumers should also try to prepare more dishes from "scratch." This "will generally result in lower costs than processed, prepared food items even with coupon reductions."

Younger Texas drivers face risk

Texans between ages 15 and 34 are two and a half times more likely to die in an auto accident than are all other Texans, according to statisticians for the Texas Department of Health.

And the auto death rates for these young Texans are expected to increase while the rates for the same age group nationwide are projected to decrease.

To better understand this major health problem, statisticians Linda Lloyd and Pat Venus analyzed motor vehicle accident deaths among 15- to 34-year-old Texans from 1970 through 1980. Their findings appear in the May issue of Texas Medicine, the journal of the Texas Medical Association.

In 1980, motor vehicle accidents were the fourth leading cause of death for all Texans, the report says. But for the 15-to-34 age group, these accidents were the leading cause of death. "In that year, more than half of all Texans who died in motor vehicle accidents were between the ages of 15 and 34; however, less than one third of the population was in this young age group," the statisticians write.

The group with the highest risk of dying in an auto was males between ages 20 and 24. Among females, the 15-19 age group led.

The report notes that three factors contribute substantially to motor vehicle fatalities: speeding, alcohol and non-use of seatbelts. Speeding and driving while intoxicated each caused 24 percent of all fatal accidents statewide.

As for seatbelts, only 11 percent of drivers nationwide use them and this figure is declining. Detailed information on seatbelt use in Texas is not available, but one study suggests that the percentage of Houston and Dallas residents using seatbelts is smaller than the national figure.

Figures from the Texas Department of Public Safety show that 98 percent of all people killed and 95 percent of all people injured in motor vehicle crashes in 1980 were not wearing seatbelts.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates that 50 percent fewer deaths from motor vehicle crashes would occur annually if every driver and passenger wore a seatbelt. Applying this estimate to Texas suggests that 2,150 lives would have been saved in 1980 had all Texans worn their seatbelts.

New Good Cents home cuts heating, cooling and water heating energy use up to 50%!*

For years Central Power and Light Company has worked with builders, architects and designers to help you save money through the Energy Efficiency Award program. The homes built to EEA specifications were a good value, enabling their owners to make impressive savings in utility costs.

But with the technological advances developed in recent years, CPL now is introducing an even better, more energy efficient house. The new Good Cents home makes it possible for homeowners to reduce use of electricity up to one-half for the "big three" that consume the largest share of the total energy budget in a typical residence: heating, air conditioning and water heating.

The owner of a Good Cents home lowers operating costs through adequate insulation and highly efficient systems for cooling, heating and water heating.

White Grubs

Between now and the next 3 weeks is the best time to treat for the white grub. The adult, known as the June beetle, is about 1 1/2" long and varies in color from light brown or gray to reddish. At night if you hear a bug fly into your window more than likely it's a June beetle.

Very soon the female June beetle will nest in the grass and lay 30-40 eggs, which will be the white grub. During this stage is when we have our best chance to control, them before they grow larger.

Lawn grass heavily damaged by grubs will have only a few roots and can be rolled up like carpet. Grubs usually are not evenly distributed in the lawn — they tend to be clumped in spots, usually in sunny spots.

Before treating a lawn, water heavily to fill all the air pockets in the soil, forcing the grubs to the surface for air. Then apply Diazinon in the liquid or granular form and water in. Poisoning after a heavy rain is an ideal application, but remember to water in afterward.

Another chemical recommended for grubs by Texas A&M is Dursban, although we're concerned about the product breaking down in the bag after a period of time.

Ofitinal is a new chemical to fight grubs, but is not registered to sell to the general public. We're conducting several tests in Rockport on this product and will have some results at the end of the year.

Blue Blazers put under 21-14 by Blue Dolphins

The Blue Blazers, first half champions in their division, were put under by the Blue Dolphins 21-14 in Monday night softball action. Six walks off pitcher Misty Randall, coupled with some sloppy Blue Blazer fielding, let the Dolphins put eight runs on the board in the first inning. They stayed ahead all the way after that.

At the end of the first, the Blazers had four to the Dolphins' eight runs. Second inning score was 12. 21-11 was the third inning total and the Blazers earned three more in the bottom of the fourth.

Blue Dolphin J.J. Barta was the first batter of the evening and her short hit wasn't enough to get her to first. Pitcher Randall threw to Annabelle Garcia on first to take Barta out.

Rhonda White walked, Melinda Matthews singled and so did Lisa Loflin. The bases were loaded when JoAnne Garcia came up. Her single brought White in. Lee Larrimore's single brought Matthews home but shortstop Brandi Brundrett threw the ball to third to take out Loflin. Sissy Fox singled to bring in Garcia and Larrimore. Brenda Garcia, Tanya Sassky and Donna Mennen all walked and were walked in before Matthews took the third out, hitting to the pitcher.

Blue Blazer Michelle Randall, up first in the bottom of the first, walked and was taken out at second when Laura Randall's hit to the shortstop was thrown to the base. Misty Randall's triple into left field brought Laura home. Misty came home before Deborah Otto hit to the shortstop. The hit was thrown to Larrimore on first and she took Otto out.

Joey Daly and Brandi Brundrett were walked and Julie Daly singled down the third base line. Theresa Pena's double brought Joey and Brundrett home. Pena, Daly and Beth Barker had the bases loaded but Garcia hit to pitcher Brenda Garcia and the ball was thrown to first for the third out, ending the inning.

In the second, JoAnne Garcia scored for the Dolphins, as did Larrimore, Brenda Garcia and Sassky. Left hander Brenda hit a big triple way out into left field. Randall put an end to the Dolphins' bat when she caught White's high pop fly for the third out.

In the third, every Blue Dolphin except Brenda Garcia and Sissy Fox scored at least once. Fox and Garcia hit two pop flies in a row, both caught by Randall for outs. Melinda Matthews, batting first, had a home run and repeated her performance before Loflin hit to the shortstop and for the third Blue Dolphin out Randall was taken off the mound and Annabelle Garcia took over pitching duties.

Blazers Jennifer Bush, Laura Randall, Misty Randall and Barker all scored in the third. The Blue Dolphins held the Dolphins scoreless in the fourth but three more runs from Bush, Misty Randall and Michelle Randall were the best catch-up effort the team could pull off, bringing the score to 21-14.

Seafood pamphlet available

Planning on running a food concession at the county fair or local festival? A pamphlet aimed at helping groups prepare quantities of seafood for a public event, prepared by Annette Reddell Hegen, seafood consumer education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, covers basic concerns.

Some of the topics covered include facility, menu, equipment, quality control, health and safety standards, work schedules and personnel. It includes a buying guide listing quantities of seafood and other common menu items to serve 100, 500 and 1,000 persons; recipes for 100 portions of Texas red sauce and quick tartar sauce; and a planning guide.

Write for up to 15 free copies of publication TAMU-SG-83-502, Sea Grant Publications, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843.

If you're looking for a delicious change of pace in your outdoor cooking this season, try smoke-cooking seafood. This is an excellent method of preparing drum, shark, mackerel, jack or other plentiful fish or shellfish.

Preparing smoked seafood is not a difficult process involving a lot of special equipment, according to Annette Reddell Hegen, seafood consumer education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. You will need a charcoal, gas or electric grill with a cover or hood, charcoal briquets if using a charcoal grill, one pound of hickory or other hardwood chips (available at most grocery stores), salt, water, vegetable oil, fish, two large bowls and a basting brush. An oven thermometer is helpful, but not a necessity.

With these things in hand, you're ready to start. If the fish is frozen, thaw it first under cold running water. Mix one gallon of cold water with one cup of salt and stir until dissolved. Marinate fish in this brine — 30 minutes for pan-dressed fish or one-half inch fillets, 45 minutes for one-inch thick fillets or steaks. Soak chips in two quarts of water.

Now you're ready to start the fire. If using charcoal, use fewer briquets than for an average broiling fire, and when the coals are red, spread them sparsely over the bottom of the grill. If using a gas or electric grill, set the temperature on low.

Next, cover ceramic or charcoal with one-third of the wet chips which will produce smoke and reduce the temperature. Low heat is a must.

When the fish have soaked the prescribed amount of time, drain and pat dry. Grease the grill well, adjust it four to six inches above the heat and place the fish on the grill, skin side down. Baste the fish and keep the oil handy for occasional basting during cooking. Be sure the fish does not dry out! Add soaked chips as needed.

Cooking times vary with the temperature inside the grill, type of grill, weather, amount of moisture in the chips and the distance of the fish from the source of heat.

At 150-175 degrees F., it will take about an hour for half-inch fillets to cook, but if the temperature increases to 250 degrees F., the cooking time reduces to about 20 minutes. When done, the fish will turn a golden brown on the surface and will flake easily.

It is more economical to smoke more fish than you will use for one meal, says Hegen. Freeze the excess by cooling thoroughly in the refrigerator, wrapping tightly in a moisture and vapor-proof paper and storing at zero degrees F. To re-heat, wrap the thawed fish tightly in foil and place in an oven at 300 degrees F. for 15 to 20 minutes.

America's schools can be improved

"There's no doubt that America's schools can be improved, but it's time to recognize that improvement must come through a society-wide approach," said Scott Thomson, executive director, National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP), regarding the report of the National Commission on Excellence in Education. "Schools can't do it alone."

The commission called for tougher course work, longer hours in school and greater expectations for students in its report which was released late in April. Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell appointed the 18-person commission two years ago to study the American education system.

The report, which was released at a White House briefing, called for attention to the "Five New Basics." These are four years of English, three years of mathematics, three years of science, three years of social studies and one-half year of computer science.

"Schools can improve, and that is a fact that principals, other administrators and teachers must realize," contended Thomson. "But we can't wave a magic wand to create improvement. Society must understand that education is an investment in America and that everyone has a role to play."

Thomson cited the numerous comparisons between American schools and those in Japan in the report.

"If people believe that the Japanese get greater productivity from their educational system than we do, the simple fact is that they contribute greater support to their schools," Thomson said.

Kindergarteners graduate May 25

Kindergarten classes at Rockport Elementary School held graduation exercises at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 25.

Students received diplomas from Karen Richter, assistant principal, which was followed by a hug from Principal Norman Spears. One hundred must understand that education is an investment in America and that everyone has a role to play."

ABC teachers, director honored at luncheon

The board of directors of ABC Learning Center honored the director and faculty of the school with an appreciation luncheon on Wednesday, May 25.

The luncheon was held in the home of Nancy Norvell and was attended by past as well as present board members.

In the 1978-79 Japanese fiscal year about 7.1 percent of the national income was spent on elementary and secondary education, according to figures from the Ministry of Education, Science and Culture. In 1981-82, about four percent of the United States' gross national product was spent on schools when all governmental expenditures were tabulated.

"We realize that schools should demand more of students, but at the same time parents must support those increased demands," he said. "If schools impose strict requirements for promotion to the next highest grade and parents believe that that is important, they should not complain if their youngster is not promoted as long as the decision is made in an objective manner."

"Business has every right to demand that graduates from our schools are proficient in common skills, but they must also look for ways they can support schools. That assistance can come by encouraging executives to serve on school boards, loaning personnel to teach part-time in the schools, providing summer employment for teachers, instituting on-the-job training programs for students and supporting measures to provide adequate funding for schools."

"It's not enough for people to say, 'We want better education!' It's time to ask, 'How can we help?'"

Life is about 10 percent how you make it and 90 percent how you take it.

4-H to award scholarship

COLLEGE STATION — Scholarships totalling $332,500 will be awarded by the Texas 4-H Youth Development Foundation to 68 outstanding 4-H members June 7-8 at Texas A&M University.

"The monetary value of these scholarships represents one of the largest 4-H scholarship programs in the nation," points out H.T. "Tom" Davison, the foundation's executive director and also a 4-H and youth specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "The scholarships range in value from $500 to $6,000."

Davison says the foundation arranges for donors for the scholarships and presents them in the donors' names. 1983 donors include the following: Raymond Dickson Foundation, Hallettsville; Texas 4-H Foundation's Memorial Fund, College Station; Texas 4-H Foundation's Annual Fund, College Station; Texas Farm Bureau, Waco; Texas 4-H Foundation's C.J. Davidson Endowment, College Station; Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Plainview; Texas Grain and Feed Association, Fort Worth; Fort Worth Exposition and Fat Stock Show, Fort Worth; Word and Patricia Sherrill, Midland; Texas 4-H Foundation's Floyd D. Lynch Endowment, College Station.

Three new scholarships include the Pioneer Hi-Bred International and the Texas 4-H Foundation's Memorial and Annual Fund Scholarships.

"All scholarship recipients are 4-H members graduating from high school," Davison adds. "Each applicant completes a scholarship application which is screened by a committee of Extension personnel. Finalists are interviewed before the recipients are named."

FENCE POST REPAIR

"Good fences make good neighbors" is an old saying. But fences have a way of sagging and leaning if left to the assaults of weather without proper care. A common cause of fence deterioration is the rotting or breaking of the post at or near ground level. Also, if the posts are not set deeply enough in the ground they will be subject to frost heaving in winter.

To repair a square fence post that has rotted or broken near ground level, the first step is to dig out the soil around and underneath the post to allow room to work and for cement later on. Next, saw the post off just above the rotted or broken portion (Fig. A). You will now need two metal straps about 30 inches long. If the straps have no holes to accept bolts, you will have to drill holes with a metal drilling bit. The straps are bolted to the post so that 12 inches of the straps appear above ground and the remainder below ground (Fig. B). This creates a firm anchoring support for the post in the cement. Pour cement in the hole around the post tamping thoroughly to remove any air pockets (Fig. C). Allow at least three days for the cement to dry. Make sure the post is braced in a true vertical position which can be checked by the use of a plumb line.

Report writing workshop focus Fund

A workshop on writing business reports and letters will be held at Corpus Christi State University from 1:30-4:30 p.m. Friday, June 10.

The workshop, designed for individuals in managerial and administrative positions, will present various techniques for beginning and ending letters and reports and will assist the workshop participants in learning to apply these methods.

Discussion topics for the workshop entitled "Business Reports and Business Letters: How to Begin and End Them Effectively" will include the direct approach, the indirect approach, techniques for beginning reports and letters, techniques for ending reports and letters and general principles of report writing and letter writing. CCSU faculty members Dr. James T. Watt and Joyce Barnes will conduct the workshop.

Watt, an associate professor of business administration, received his bachelor's degree from the University of Cincinnati and his master's and doctoral degrees from Ohio State University. Watt, who has 20 years of teaching experience and eight years in business, has served as a consultant and is co-author of "Communication in Business," a textbook published by Prentice-Hall Inc.

Barnes, an assistant professor of business administration, received her bachelor's and master's degrees from East Texas State University.

The workshop will be held in Corpus Christi Hall, Room 109.

The fee for attending the workshop is $35 and the deadline for registering is June 1.

organization's regular fund-raising functions.

The Women's Committee holds two of its biggest money-raising functions each year at the Paws & Taws Building: the Valentine Dance in February and the Christmas Bazaar in November. At last year's Christmas Bazaar, the organization raised more than $10,000 in its two-day sale.

The contribution from the Women's Committee brings to more than $9,100 the funds that have been donated to PTI.

White proclaims Safe Boating Week

Governor Mark White has proclaimed June 5-11 "Texas Safe Boating Week" and the U.S. Coast Guard has named it "National Safe Boating Week." The special statewide designation was issued by Governor White in a ceremony at the Texas State Capitol.

Groups participating in the proclamation included the Boating Trades Association of Texas, Marina Association of Texas, Texas Parks & Wildlife, Texas Safety Association, U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and U.S. Power Squadrons. The six organizations teamed up to form a coalition for Texas boating safety and to remind Texans that "safe boating is

"Our main Safe Boating Week objective is to remind boaters to follow a few simple guidelines that not only make boating safer but make it more fun," said C.R. (Rob) Youker, San Benito, president of the Boating Trades Association of Texas. "A weekend on the water is more fun if the boat is in full working condition, on-board safety devices are in good shape and the driver follows proper boating procedures. That all adds up to peace of mind."

Boating operation and safety information is available from the organizations joining in the coalition. Many materials are free.

The Boating Trades Association of Texas is a statewide organization with a membership of boat dealers, manufacturers and distributors. An ongoing BTAT goal is to enhance the pleasures of recreational boating by reminding boaters to enjoy Texas waterways safely.

Legislation

of Hale Center which will allow nonviolent offenders to serve from six months to one year in community restitution centers where they would be required to work and pay restitution to the victims of their crimes.

This bill is a major part of a package of prison reform legislation aimed at ending prison overcrowding in Texas while, at the same time, addressing the need to guarantee crime victims that they will be compensated for their losses.

Signed into law by Gov. White last week was legislation by Sen. Lindon Williams of Houston and Rep. Frank Tejeda of San Antonio that will go into effect if Texas voters in November approve a constitutional amendment authorizing the sale of $500 million in state bonds to finance a new housing assistance program for veterans.

Under the amendment and the bill, the Veterans Land Board would make $20,000 loans at favorable interest rates to veterans for the down payment on the purchase of a home.

Finally, by the closest margin so far in this session, the House voted 75 to 73 to table, and thereby effectively kill, the issue of pari-mutuel wagering on horse races.

Feelings ran high on this measure, both among the members and their constituents.

However, I would like to say that the House members on both sides of this measure conducted themselves in a forthright, open and honorable manner.

Since the measure had already cleared the Senate, this marks the closest the issue of legalizing pari-mutuel wagering on horse races has ever come to being approved.

Employers join in promotion of health

More employers are joining the battle against today's major killers — heart disease, cancer and accidents.

These and other chronic and degenerative diseases account for over 75 percent of deaths in Texas, says Dr.

Mary Ann Shirer, a health education specialist. They are not caused by a single bacteria or virus but are associated with risk factors such as smoking and poor nutrition, which increase the probability of their occurrence.

The "vaccine" needed to combat risk factors is health promotion, says Shirer, who is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Promoting health in the workplace has become more common as employers discover the direct and indirect costs of employee illness.

Recent studies supported by the American Cancer Society, for example, estimate the annual cost of cancer to business and industry at 14,000 person-years of productive work time; $1.7 billion in medical costs; $1 billion in life insurance costs; and $10 billion in lost future earnings.

In addition, there are the unmeasurable costs of pain, suffering and destruction of family life.

Since smoking is related to more than 20 percent of all cancers, it contributes heavily to the health costs of employers, says Shirer.

The American Cancer Society estimates that the average pack-a-day smoker costs a company $625 to $759 per year in expenses related to increased absenteeism rates, greater health care needs and higher accident rates than non-smokers.

According to Shirer, high health costs have encouraged employers to establish health promotion programs to reduce the risk of cancer and other disease among workers.

Promotion programs include health newsletters, exercise classes, smoking reduction plans, cancer screening, hypertension program and nutrition information.

"The greatest problem in promoting healthy lifestyles through the workplace is getting people to change their daily habits," states Shirer. Education alone is seldom sufficient to change behavior.

"So programs are now concentrating on ways to motivate people to want to change and on ways to insure that those changes last," she adds.

Wasted wood is wasted energy

Tons of wood are buried each day in municipal landfills at enormous expense to taxpayers, municipalities and private businesses.

This waste material — limbs, sawdust, chips, scrap lumber and wooden pallets — can be converted into useable products and energy, according to Ann Holland, an urban forester with the Texas Forest Service in San Antonio.

"These are not just theoretical concepts requiring large capital investments. Many are small scale and low cost, some produce needed energy, and most are profitable," she said.

One example of converting a liability into an asset is wood chips. A Harris County tree service company sells wood chips to Houston Power and Light Company. Chips are mixed with coal and burned to generate electricity. Previously, the chips were hauled to the municipal landfill at considerable cost to the tree company, the City of Houston and its taxpayers. The tree company now makes a small profit on the waste wood and Houston's energy bill is reduced.

In the City of Atlanta, three maintenance crews now haul large limbs and tree trunks to a central site that is open to the public for cutting firewood.

"Savings from the reduced amount of material at the landfill and the shorter hauling distance have been estimated at $14,000 to $18,000 per year. And that does not include the free firewood to heat thousands of Atlanta's homes," Holland said.

She estimates that tons of chips and sawdust are dumped into local landfills every day. With just a little effort and not much expense, all this material could be used as mulch, surfaces for hiking and jogging trails and other wood products instead of being buried and occupying valuable landfill space.

A&M field day events offer variety

CORPUS CHRISTI — Check this for versatile programming at an agricultural field day:

One where you can ponder treatment thresholds for bollworms in cotton — or learn about microwaving shrimp.

Where you can view soybean variety research — or take in a shortcourse on hanging baskets.

Or where you can not only learn the latest about brush management research but get a complete diagnosis and probable cure for those ailing ornamentals.

In other words, the biennial Field Day at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center Thursday, June 2, isn't only for farmers. There's something for just about everyone.

A series of indoor programs to accommodate this group will run concurrently with the field tours and continue throughout the day.

Demonstrations of new methods for growing tomatoes and container gardening will lead off at 9:30 a.m. featuring Dr. Sam Cotner, extension horticulturist from College Station. At 10:15 a.m. will come the Texas shrimp microwaving with county extension agents Kaye Woodward, Sinton, and Georgia Rogers, Beeville.

Basic accounting and budgeting systems for farm families with Carol Sue Hipp, CPA for Cross, Kieschnick & Co., Corpus Christi, will wind up the morning's activities indoors.

Following lunch will be the hanging baskets and budding and grafting demonstrations with Everett Janne, extension landscape horticulturist from College Station.

The ever popular Plant Problem Clinic will run throughout the day as will a demonstration of Computer Use in Farming by Dr. James Novak, extension economist - management. The flower physicians will include a plant pathologist from Weslaco, Dr. Jose Amador; and a local county extension agent, Darwin Anderson from Robstown and Janne.

Area wholesale nurseries are making samples of landscaping and ornamental plants available for the familiarization of homeowners.

A couple of 4-H demonstration teams will show why they were selected for top honors in this demanding activity.

Meanwhile, out on the farm, researchers from the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station will be explaining what they've been up to since the last field day and the progress they've made. Stops at eight field research plots will be made by visitor-laden trailers, also beginning at 9:30 a.m.

The day's activities kick off at 9 a.m. with a welcome, introductions and review of the planned activities by Dr. George Slater, resident director of research.

Trailer loadup and tour of the plots begins immediately afterward. Scheduled for examination and explanation will be the following ongoing research:

Fungicide seed treatment for downy mildew control on sorghum, Dr. Gary Odvody, plant pathologist; treatment thresholds for bollworms in cotton, Dr. John Benedict, entomologist; soybean varieties in the Coastal Bend, Lucas Reyes, agronomist; integrated brush management systems research in South Texas, J.L. Mutz and Dr. C.J. Scifres, range specialists; new herbicides for economical weed control in cotton and sorghum, Dr. John Bremer, extension weed specialist; sorghum seed treatment and midge control tests, Dr. Roy Parker, extension entomologist; tillage systems and micronutrient responses on row crops, Dr. John Matocha, soils specialists; and sorghum breeding and varietal research for the Coastal Bend, Dr. Fred Miller, College Station plant breeder.

Highlights of an extensive display by equipment dealers will be a demonstration of the bullseye Warnell Spray Boom by Tiller Helicopter and a flight by an Ultralite aircraft, wind and weather permitting; the Kickey-John spray monitor system which maintains a constant flow regardless of ground speed through microprocessor control, plus "at least 10" tractors and miscellaneous implements.

Mexican sculpture to go on exhibit

KINGSVILLE — The "Pretty Lady" from Tlatilco and a "Smiling Face" from Veracruz are among more than 40 examples of Mexican sculpture and ceramic art to be exhibited at Texas A&I University's John E. Conner Museum June 5 through Aug. 7.

Many of the pieces are from the Gentry Dugat collection which was recently donated to the museum. The exhibit spans 3,000 years and highlights the many and varied Mexican cultures that flourished before the conquest of Cortez in the 16th century.

The "Pretty Lady" figurine dates to 1500 B.C., a time when daintiness was thought to be an important factor in art.

The "Smiling Face," a larger piece dated around 200 B.C., is not only a sacred object, but is also a whistle. It is said to possess happy, spontaneous laughter and represent the god of love, flowers and music.

A 19-minute film, "Sentinels of Silence," will be shown at 3 and 4 p.m. June 5 to mark the exhibit's opening. The Academy Award-winning work is narrated by Orson Welles. Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, 2:30-5 p.m. on Sunday, and by appointment only on Saturday. The events are free and open to the public.

White issues orders promoting small businesses

Governor Mark White has issued three Executive Orders promoting minority and small business in Texas.

One Executive Order established the Governor's Advisory Committee on Minority Business Enterprise.

The governor also issued executive orders to define goals and objectives for the Governor's Office of Equal Employment Opportunity and for the awarding of grants to small and minority businesses under existing state and federal law.

White said, "The enhancement of minority and small business activity will help create the 170,000 jobs Texas is projected to need by the year 2000 because of population growth.

"The Minority Business Enterprise Advisory Committee and the Governor's Office of Equal Employment Opportunity will identify opportunities for minority business to develop," White said.

"The Advisory Committee will examine state and federal laws affecting the development of minority business, identify barriers to that development and examine the work of state agencies and private organizations involved with small and minority business," White said.

"I am delighted that we are able to keep that commitment made during the campaign and also to fulfill the responsibilities of the law in assuring that we have minority business involved in the contracting process for State contracts," White said.

The Small and Minority Business Enterprise Division of the Texas Industrial Commission, created by the Legislature in 1981, has also been directed to redouble its efforts to encourage and support the development of minority-owned business by expanding a master list of such business and providing technical assistance in the securing of state contracts.

In fiscal year 1981-82, purchases of $728 million were made by state agencies. Of that amount, some 1.1 percent, or $8.1 million, went to small, minority-owned firms. Under the Small Business Assistance Act, the state set a goal of giving one-tenth of its business to small firms. Minorities own a third of small companies in Texas.

White said, "Although small business is doing better than the goal that was set, minority-owned businesses are not getting their share of that."

In announcing the executive orders White said, "Last year there were some $6 million in highway construction programs awarded to minority businesses, and as of this year, in the past two months, some $19 million in contracts have been awarded to minority businesses."

The Governor's Office of Equal Employment Opportunity will also play a major role in the development of small and minority business in Texas.

It is directed by Executive Order to provide leadership and facilitate and broaden the compliance of state agencies with affirmative action programs in addition to its already successful "Job Bank" activities.

White has appointed Edward H. Moore as executive director of the Governor's Equal Employment Opportunity Office. The office, created in 1973 by a rider to the Governor's Office appropriations, assists State agencies and State employees in the coordination of equal employment opportunity programs and Affirmative Action Plans.

Moore said, "The White administration is firmly committed to the goals of equal employment opportunity for all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, national origin, age or handicap." He said his office will play a leading role in assisting State agencies and employees in the resolution of discrimination complaints.

Governor White's Executive Orders also direct the Office of Equal Employment Opportunity to establish a Minority and Female Skills Bank for state employment, compile data related to the state minority workforce, investigate and maintain the equal employment opportunity rights of state employees and facilitate minority business participation in state contracts and federal government grants-in-aid programs.

MMC drug dosages to be modernized

CORPUS CHRISTI — No longer will patient medications at Memorial Medical Center be distributed by the hospital pharmacists in the traditional "count and pour" method.

A state-of-the-art Unit Dose Drug Distribution System, an Intravenous (IV) Additive Unit, and a Poison Control Center are included in the modernized and expanded clinical pharmacy services of MMC.

A formal ribbon-cutting ceremony and open-house reception will be held for invited guests from 2-4 p.m. Wednesday, June 1, in the new pharmacy facilities located on the hospital's lower level.

Judge Robert Barnes and Nueces County Hospital District Board Chairman Alvin C. Campos, county commissioners and other community dignitaries, area hospital administrators and pharmacists plan to attend the new pharmacy opening celebration.

The New MMC Pharmacy is the only one of its kind in South Texas to offer this level of sophistication in drug dispensing systems functioning from an innovative modular floor plan.

This new Unit Dose Distribution System provides each nursing station with a 24-hour supply of single unit medications custom packaged for each individual patient, on an around the clock basis.

Numerous published studies acknowledge Unit Dose Distribution with respect to traditional drug dispensing as categorically offering the following three benefits which collectively help assure premium and cost effective health care to the patient:

Safer health care for the patient by reducing medication errors.

More efficient and economical hospital administration by reducing drug inventories; and allowing for a more accurate capturing of patient drug charges.

Better utilization of professional staff of nurses and pharmacists who can now devote more time to direct patient care rather than administrative duties.

Fire ants persist

The persistence of the red imported fire ant has dashed all hopes of eradication and efforts are now centering on management through continuous control procedures. Controlling fire ants effectively requires an understanding of their habits, especially mound-building activities.

These ants do not like extremely wet soil, but they will increase their mound sizes in wet weather to move their brood up into drier soil. This habit makes a colony more vulnerable to insecticide control measures. Treatment is generally successful if most of the colony is above ground level in the mound.

The ants also do not do well in extremely dry soil. During the hottest part of the summer they go below the soil surface and are difficult to control. Treatments are more effective during the moderately moist times in the spring and fall.

The most effective procedure is to dilute an approved insecticide in water. Use a sprinkling can or gallon size plastic jug with holes in the screw-on top to sprinkle the solution on the mound like a gentle rain. Wet the mound thoroughly.

Granular products should be sprinkled around the ant mound. It is important not to disturb the mound before or during treatment. Otherwise, part of the colony may move away from the chemical.

One to two weeks may pass before mound treatment is effective. Once the queen and the brood are killed, the worker population will not be replenished and the colony eventually will die out.

Sprinkle Amdro® as recommended around the mound. Worker ants will gather the bait and feed it to the queen. Again, several weeks may pass before an entire colony is eliminated.

For immediate kill, use products containing methyl chloroform, pyrethrum, acephate, diazinon or chlorpyrifos. Methyl chloroform MC 96, is poured in the mound while the other products are aerosols which are injected with a plastic or plexiglass rod.

Regardless of what chemical is used or when, reinfestation will likely reoccur and retreatment will be necessary. Unfortunately, one pesticide application does not mean permanent extermination.

Trade names are used for educational purposes only and are not intended to be a product endorsement nor a discrimination of similar products not mentioned.

Middle ground solution

By George H. Lawrence
President
American Gas Association

In some battles the middle ground is not worth claiming. But, for lowering consumer natural gas prices, the middle ground offers a workable and constructive solution.

A bill has been introduced in Congress that provides a middle-ground solution to gas pricing which does not embody decontrol of old gas prices, the restructuring of the natural gas industry as sought by the Reagan Administration or the proposals to freeze and recontrol new natural gas prices.

The Natural Gas Policy Act Reform Amendments of 1983 was introduced by Rep. Jim Slattery (D-Kan.) and Rep. Dan Coats (R-Ind.). It will assure gas consumers of abundant natural gas supplies at reasonable prices. The American Gas Association estimates it will save consumers $6 billion over the years 1984 and 1985.

The legislation: — Encourages gas producers and pipeline companies to renegotiate lower priced contract and authorizes a "market out" or cancellation of high priced natural gas contracts if such renegotiation does not occur.

— Limits take-or-pay obligations in gas-purchase contracts to 50 percent of gas deliverability for three years.

— Outlaws "favored nation" price escalation clauses, which are anti-competitive and can artificially drive prices up.

— Requires the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to study rate designs which would make interstate pipeline rates more responsive to changes in end-use markets.

Also, the bill encourages exploration and development of new natural gas and removes most of the federal marketing restraints on natural gas used by American industry.

Most important, the Slattery/Coats bill does not decontrol old natural gas prices which will help make it possible to lower consumer prices and does not recontrol or extend controls on new gas which would jeopardize development of new supplies. Nor does it force a massive restructuring of the gas distribution and transmission industry through mandatory contract carriage. Such a restructuring would require greater government control of the gas industry by requiring FERC to make planning, operational and service decisions for pipelines which would eventually be costly for all gas consumers.

The United States has an abundant supply of natural gas resources. This domestic energy potential can be utilized to fire the nation's economic recovery. It would be poor economic and poor national energy policy to fail to develop our nation's gas supplies or to artificially force consumer prices up.

Just as the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 (NGPA) provided the incentives to increase natural gas exploration and development to record levels, so the Reform Amendments of 1983 will ease the burden of rising prices while assuring future supply and provide the urgently needed orderly transition to a deregulated market for developing new supplies.

Congress should pass legislation to lower consumer prices while assuring future supply. The Slattery/Coats bill will achieve both of these objectives.

Doctor uses receipts to investigate diseases

HOUSTON — Scientists may be able to gain a better understanding of certain diseases by examining something most of us usually leave at the bottom of the bag: supermarket receipts.

Dr. George Kerr believes that by monitoring the foods that different groups of people buy, researchers may obtain new insight into the relationship between such things as fats and heart disease or salt and high blood pressure.

In a recent Houston study, Kerr and associates found that one-and-a-half times as much salt was sold in predominantly black neighborhoods as in predominantly white neighborhoods. Salt is suspected of being one factor in causing high blood pressure or hypertension.

The results of the study, Kerr said, could be at least a partial explanation of why high blood pressure is more prevalent in black Americans than in white Americans, he said.

Kerr quickly points out, however, that the results are not conclusive evidence either of salt's role in hypertension or of higher salt consumption by blacks.

Those things "can only be determined by further studies," he said.

But the study does demonstrate the potential value of supermarket sales records in increasing scientists' understanding the role of diet in the cause of certain diseases, said Kerr, director of the Human Nutrition Center at the University of Texas School of Public Health.

"This is an unobtrusive, inexpensive method of looking at food purchase patterns in communities," he said.

Knowledge about those purchasing patterns, he added, "can provide valuable information regarding the relative risk of populations for the development of nutrition-related health problems."

The salt study involved an analysis of what 48 Weingarten supermarkets ordered from their warehouses over a six-month period, those orders being assumed to approximate the quantities of food sold.

In future studies, with the cooperation of Randall's supermarkets, Kerr said he plans to use actual consumer sales receipts; those are readily available since Randall's now records them on computers for marketing and accounting uses.

"I think that it's a good example of the possible collaboration between industry and higher education for their mutual benefit and the benefit of the public," Kerr observed.

In the future, Kerr said, he hopes to undertake studies examining food purchase patterns of additional ethnic populations and, as more data becomes available, to compare populations in states that show different degrees of nutrition-related health problems.

Kerr noted that he sees supermarket sales as a complement to other diet and food consumption methods, such as food consumption diaries and interviews with people about their eating patterns.

He pointed out that each method has advantages and disadvantages, but that "The results of our supermarket sales studies seem to imply that there may be value in pursuing this technique." He added: "If there are differences in nutrition-related problems between geographic areas, we should be able to measure them this way."

Advanced art course offered at UH-Victoria

An advanced art course for high school students and a basic drawing class for adults will be offered in June and early July through the continuing education program of the University of Houston-Victoria.

Instructor Karen Burleson has designed the high school course for serious art students with some basic and intermediate training in composition and drawing. Enrollees should be entering grades 10, 11 or 12, or just have graduated from high school.

Students will have the opportunity to develop their ideas and improve their skills to build a portfolio for scholarships, art contests or job placements. They may try a variety of techniques and media, then concentrate on their preferred medium to develop to a more professional level.

The class will meet on four consecutive Wednesdays, June 15-July 6, from 6:30 to 9 p.m., at the Petroleum Training Institute, 3302 N. Ben Wilson.

Burleson will also teach the basic drawing for adults, on four consecutive Tuesday nights, June 14-July 5, from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

For adults who want to learn to draw, the course will provide a study of the use of pencil lines in various drawing exercises: gesture, contour, geometric shapes, still life, cartoons and creative forms. Students will record their ideas and images in their own sketch book.

The class will meet at the Petroleum Training Institute.

For registration and information, interested persons are asked to call the UHV office of continuing education, (512) 576-3151.

Bad check written on seafood purchase at area business

Some $288.35 in seafood was reportedly purchased from a seafood business in Aransas County and paid for with a worthless check, according to county deputies.

investigation by county officials.

A clock radio valued at $40 was reported taken from the trailer residence of Beverly Chadwick. The incident occurred Saturday afternoon, May 21. County deputies this week were investigating a report of aggravated assault in Aransas Bay. Dean Nguyen told deputies while he was shrimping in the bay May 20, another boat pulled alongside his vessel and a man on that boat pulled a pistol on the crew of Nguyen's boat.

SOLID BRASS-BEAUTIFUL BUCKLES THAT FEATURE DEEP SCULPTURED RELIEF AND THREE- DIMENSIONAL STYLING. A GREAT GIFT IDEA!

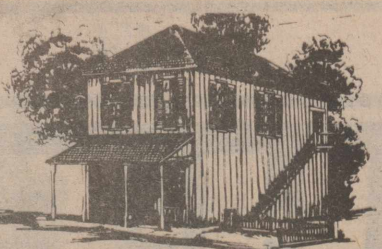

The master sculpture has been created with the same artistic skill and meticulous detailing that goes into the making of coins designated for minting. The hand cast original is duplicated in sub-masters used to form sand molds.

Molten brass, heated to 2000° Fahrenheit in small crucibles, is poured into the sand molds. Then each buckle is individually removed from the mold, smoothed and finished in 3 handwork steps, to impart the smooth, lustrous look that gives a living effect to the finished buckle.

Time consuming processes indeed, but the only way to achieve the magnificent look, feel and quality that reflects the authenticity of the two-centuries old methods used in the making of the belt buckles of that period.

Ceiling fans offer comfort and style

Ceiling fans might make you think of steamy island hideaways or "Casablanca."

But they can also help you have a more comfortable summer right in your own home. From ornate brass to pastel plastic models, ceiling fans are back in style.

You don't have to have 12-foot ceilings to use a fan either. But for safety's sake, a fan should be suspended from ceilings that are at least eight feet high, since the blades are at least one foot from the ceiling. For cathedral ceilings, an extension pole can be used to place the fan at the desired height.

Choose a ceiling fan based on the size and shape of the room. Most fans range from 36 to 52 inches in diameter. The 36-inch fan is useful in narrow spaces like kitchens, porches and sunrooms. The 52-inch fan is generally used in larger areas requiring a wider, more uniform distribution of air movement.

As you shop for a fan, notice that some have metal housing and hand-rubbed wooden blades. Other models are housed in plastic with either metal or plastic blades.

Metal blades are potentially more dangerous than wood or plastic. Any sharp-edged or thin blade can injure your hand if it accidentally touches the moving fan. So as a safety precaution, select units with blades no less than 3/16-inch thick at the tip.

If you want a fan with variable speeds, be prepared for a little noise. Some ceiling fans with speed control make a noise that sounds similar to the humm from a faulty fluorescent light.

Ceiling fan lights range from small fluorescent tubes to ornate globes. Carefully choose a place for a fan with a light. For example, a fan with a light fixture suspended from an eight-foot ceiling will probably be too low.

A fan hanging low over tables or furniture may not present much of a problem. But in traffic areas, the light could become an obstacle. Some manufacturers offer a low-profile model light for such areas.

Ceiling fans range in price from $50 to more than $1,000. Higher priced models are often primarily decorative accessories cast of solid brass or finished with highly ornate trim, stenciling and hand-crafted detail. But the majority of models are in the $100 to $400 price range.

Installing a ceiling fan requires either an electrician or a competent do-it-yourselfer. The easiest form of installation is to use existing wiring from an overhead light fixture.

Don't install a fan near curtains that might become entangled in the blades. Also, keep the fan away from areas where people change clothes. A low fan can harm a person raising his arms to dress.

Although a ceiling fan should produce years of reliable service, check the manufacturer's warranty. Most makers guarantee the motor for five years, but be sure to ask about servicing.

Some manufacturers supply a toll-free number to answer consumer's questions, others have a network of service centers, and some neglect to mention service. So before you buy, ask the dealer what type of service is available.

With the wide variety of style, features and prices available, you should be able to find a ceiling fan to suit your needs both for style and comfort.

Six Flags Over Texas spring attendance up over 8 percent

ARLINGTON — Six Flags Over Texas has begun daily operation for the 1983 season following a spring run which saw attendance climb more than 8 percent over last year's figures.

Through May 15, the last day of weekend-only operation for the spring, more than 461,000 visitors had passed through the theme park's turnstiles.

General Manager Ray Williams attributed the attendance spurt to new attractions and a new outlook on discretionary spending.

"Our new river rapids adventure, Roaring Rapids, and an all-new children's section, Pac-Man Land, have proven to be very popular," he said. "Our research indicates that the rapids ride, in particular, is bringing out some folks who haven't visited the park in years."

Williams said the general increase in attendance reflects a willingness on the part of many to turn loose discretionary dollars which had been held back during financial hard times. "For one thing," he commented, "we're seeing a significant increase in the number of people who are traveling 300 miles or more to visit Six Flags. That would indicate to us that some money-delayed vacations are finally being taken."

Six Flags will be open daily through Aug. 28, when weekend-only operation resumes for the fall season.

BY SUSAN DUFF

THE CAMBRIDGE
DIET CONTROVERSY Originally conceived for the drastically obese, the Cambridge diet has now entered the mainstream with an estimated three million people seeking to shed pounds on a program of powdered formula mixed with water and consumed three times a day. On the plus side, 10 different flavors of formula are offered, the diet does produce weight loss and the nutritional claims for the formula are impressive: 75 percent of the RDA of protein, and 100 percent of the RDA of vitamins and minerals, plus some fiber.

What makes this diet so popular is probably that it provides the immediate success so many dieters desperately want. Weight loss is fast and regular if you stick to the recommended three formula
"meals" a day. What makes it tough is that any single-food diet becomes monotonous quickly, and the prohibition of any other food whatsoever can cut into your social life.

Since a calorie-count this low puts the body into mild starvation, you do go into a state of ketosis, a physical condition which occurs during starvation or semi-starvation which has the effect of decreas-ing the appetite. This effect is relatively mild with the Cambridge diet since the formula does provide an acceptable amount of carbohydrates (44 grams), but many Cambridge dieters claim to feel energized by the program

- which is another effect of mild ketosis.

Because the program and concept are not unlike the liquid protein diet that swept the nation seven years ago, this diet does bring up some questions of health hazards which cannot be denied. The significantly higher amounts of both protein and carbohydrates in the new diet are said to make it a safer option than the last decade's formula-diet which was banned by the FDA, but the very low calorie count of the Cambridge plan is cause for concern among those investigating this program.

The safest and most effective way to implement a diet like this is to first see a doctor about your overall health and potential for using such a plan without health hazards.
And, even if you're given a clean bill of health, it is probably wisest to combine any formula-based dieting with at least one nutritionally balanced meal per day. There are no miracles when it comes to losing weight and one of the most tried-and-true facts about dieting applies absolutely to this form of low-cal eating: the faster you take weight off, the more quickly you are likely to regain it.

BOOKS
AN OVERVIEW
By HARLAN C. PIERCE

Royal Service by Stephen Barry (Macmillan: 256 pp; $14.95)

As personal valet to Prince Charles, Stephen Barry was privy to more confidential information and closer to the day-today activities of the Prince than almost anyone. The book, though candid and revealing, never shows a lack of respect for the crown.
Amusing and affectionate, Royal Service
features revelations about the ladies in the Prince's life and the first public tour of Highgrove, Charles and Diana's new home. I will spare you the details of why this book was banned in the U.K.
by Buckingham Palace.
