High-speed chase ends here

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A police chase at speeds over 100 mph ended early today in Midland, six hours after a trio of 16-year-old residents of a Pyote youth home escaped and allegedly went on a crime spree.

Pyote, population approximately 375, is located 80 miles west of Midland.

Police said the boys — one of whom is still at large — robbed a Wickett convenience store and abducted the 43-year-old clerk, stole her car, and sexually assaulted her in the car before they wrecked the vehicle.

Two of the suspects were arrested and are being held in Midland's Culver Youth Home, police Cpl. Jim White said.

"We are looking for the other one," the spokesman said. "I put it out on three radio stations, and hopefully someone will see him. And our officers will be given a description at briefings."

The missing youth, who investigators said was the driver of the stolen car, was described as 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighing about 145 pounds. He has a two-inch scar under one eye, and the tattoo "B" on his left hand.

When he was last seen about 2:30 a.m. today near the intersection of O Street and Wall Avenue, he was wearing a white or tan shirt and acid-washed jeans.

Johnny Williams, superintendent of West Texas Children's Home in Pyote, said the three residents smashed the metal security screen of a single-story dormitory at 8:30 p.m. Monday and escaped on foot. At the time, 24 residents were in the dormitory, Williams said.

"Ours is an open campus. We have as tight security as we can," the superintendent said. "As soon as they took off, we notified the local law enforcement agencies."

Williams did not immediately know what specific crimes landed the three in the Pyote facility.

"Anything is possible, I can tell you," Williams said of the youths. "I am dealing with some real rough kids. They have been tried elsewhere in other communities but have ended up here."

The youths probably walked or ran to the Allsup's Convenience Store on Bryan Street in Wickett, about nine miles east of the youth home located along Interstate 20, Williams said.

After they reached the store, police gave this account of their activities:

They grabbed beer, cigarettes, and money, then forced the clerk into her car, a 1971 four-door Ford sedan. It was not immediately known if they used any weapons.

At 2:17 a.m., an Odessa police officer noticed the sedan was traveling erratically in the 2300 block of East Highway 80.

"He thought it was a drunk driver, so he started following it," White said. "Then the car sped up and reached speeds of 100 mph and over."

Protesters take blush off Rose Parade

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Harmony was the theme, but the Tournament of Roses Parade entered its second century confronting the issues of the day as AIDS activists staged a sit-down protest at the start of the event.

The majestic procession of 60 flower-studded floats, 22 bands and 275 equestrians had just started Monday when 14 protesters ran in front of a float and unfurled a banner reading: "Emergency. Stop the parade. 70,000 Dead of AIDS." The group sat in the roadway, halting the 101st edition of the annual parade for 20 seconds.

Crowds booed the brief demonstration and network television cameras broadcasting the parade for an estimated audience of 350 million quickly cut away.

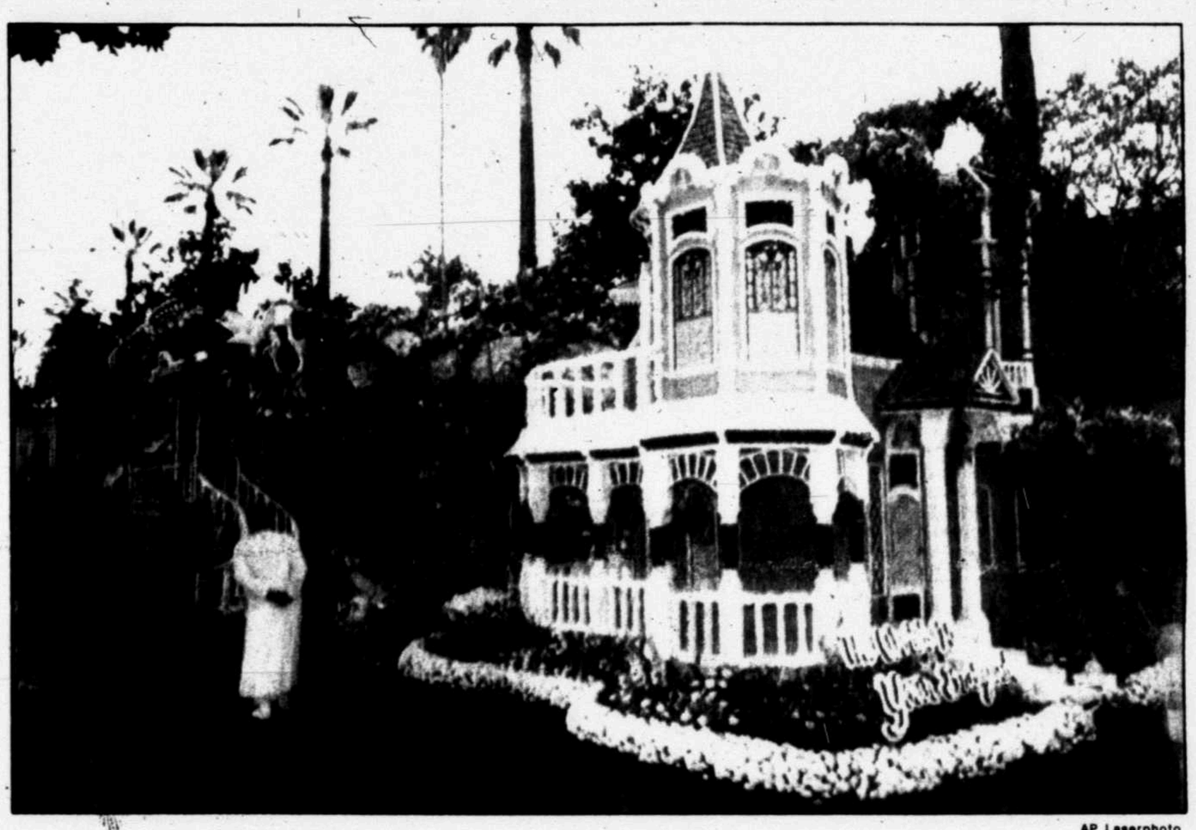

The protesters said they were members of Stop AIDS Now, or Else and wanted to show their dismay with government policies toward the deadly disease, said group spokesman Bruce Mirken.

"It's a way of reminding people that for 70,000 people the parade is over," Mirken said.

An estimated 1 million people lined curbs and sidewalks to watch the parade on a sunny, balmy day.

The flowery head of Elvis Presley on Mississippi's float and a jungle barbershop quartet of hippo, giraffe, ostrich and tiger were crowd pleasers.

The boos that met the AIDS protesters echoed again embattled Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, the parade's grand marshal, appeared later.

Sisters greet 1990 with four babies

AUSTIN (AP) — When Ron Thompson sat down for lunch on New Year's Eve, he was the grandfather of five. At breakfast Monday, he was a grandfather of nine.

Three of Thompson's daughters — Mary Tolson, Joan Thompson and Carol Thompson — gave birth to four boys at Seton Medical Center late Sunday and early Monday.

One of the new arrivals — Jeremy Andrew Thompson Armendariz — was the first baby born in Austin in the 1990s, said hospital spokeswoman M.A. Bengston.

After about five hours at the hospital Sunday, Ms. Tolson, 28, gave birth at 2:40 p.m. to Shane Taylor Tolson, who weighed 7 pounds 9 ounces.

When Ms. Tolson went into labor, she asked her 19-year-old sister Joan, who was in the ninth month of her pregnancy, to drive her to the hospital.

At Ms. Tolson's delivery, Dr. Chris Seeker said Joan told him, "You will probably be seeing me, too."

Seven hours later, that prophecy proved true as Joan was hustled to Seton by sister Carol.

Joan gave birth to Jeremy Andrew was born at 12:01 a.m. He weighed 6 pounds 10 ounces.

Carol, 24, then went into labor and gave birth to twin boys just before 3 a.m.

The mothers and four boys spent New Year's day at Seton in good condition.

Seeker, who delivered all four boys, said, "It's been a busy day."

For being the first baby of 1990, Jeremy and his parents received an array of gifts

Panamanian leaders feel U.S. should try Noriega

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — As the first elements of the U.S. invasion force withdrew, Panama's new president said the Vatican should hand Manuel Antonio Noriega over to the United States because his government is not yet capable of trying the ousted general.

A church official said it was up to Noriega to decide when to leave the Vatican embassy, where he sought refuge Christmas Eve.

Two artillery batteries from Fort Ord, Calif. — a total of 141 soldiers — were pulled out Monday, said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. One planeload of troops arrived at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio late Monday.

The rest of the 14,000 troops sent in for the Dec. 20 invasion that toppled Noriega will probably leave "on a piecemeal basis," Fitzwater said. He did not specify when that might occur.

"The president is glad to see some of the troops coming home and hopes the rest can leave as soon as possible," Fitzwater said. The 12,000 troops permanently assigned to Panama would remain.

Twenty-three U.S. servicemen were killed in the operation and 322 wounded. Among Panamaniansl 297 soldiers and some 300 civilians were killed, according to the U.S. military.

Meanwhile, 20 American diplomats expelled by Nicaragua in retaliation for a U.S. troop search of the residence of that country's ambassador to Panama left Managua on Monday night.

U.S. troop withdrawals will continues; Related stories and photo — 2A, 3A

Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government on Friday gave the diplomats 72 hours to leave the country and ordered the U.S. Embassy support staff cut from 320 employees to 100.

The United States apologized for the incident, saying the troops were unaware the home was a diplomatic residence when they entered it — over the protests of Ambassador Antenor Ferrey — to search for weapons. President Bush said it was a "screw-up" but questioned what the numerous weapons found by troops were doing in the home.

In the latest round over Noriega's fate, President Guillermo Endara said the stalemate could end if the Vatican and the papal nuncio "say once and for all that Noriega doesn't deserve to be sheltered in the house of God, that he is a common criminal of the worst kind and should abandon the sacred place."

Noriega is charged with drug trafficking in the United States, but Endara's attorney general said Sunday that Panama's new government was preparing murder charges against Noriega.

The move appeared to lay the groundwork for the mission to release Noriega him to the Panamanian government.

But Endara said Monday that Panama does not have a prison secure enough to hold Noriega. He acknowledged that once outside the embassy, the general would be captured by U.S. troops surrounding the mission.

"Only after the American authorities are done ... can we have the opportunity to extradite him to Panama and make him pay in Panama for the crimes and offenses he has committed here in Panama," Endara said after a New Year's Day Mass. "But for the moment, we can't do it."

Endara, elected last May in balloting nullified by Noriega, is still in the early stages of establishing a government.

Archbishop Marcos McGrath said Noriega would have a fair trial and greater personal security if he went to the United States, but said, "He will have to leave by his own decision.

Dallas-New York DC-10 flight makes emergency landing

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — An American Airlines DC-10 plane with 247 passengers aboard made an emergency landing at Baltimore-Washington International Airport early today after the pilot reported smoke in the cockpit, an airline spokeswoman said.

Flight 240 was bound from the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport to LaGuardia Airport in New York City, said Susan R. Kelly, American Airlines spokeswoman.

Passengers reported seeing smoke near the ceiling of the cabin.

The passengers and 10 crew members were evacuated onto the runway using the airplane's emergency slides, and about 10 passengers reported minor injuries from the unexpected exit, Kelly said.

Passengers said two chutes, on both sides of the middle of the plane, opened correctly, but each caught on the wings and did not fall to the ground.

Oil spill threatens Moroccan coast

French official disputes claim supertanker repaired

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — A salvage firm today said it repaired an Iranian supertanker that spewed millions of gallons of crude oil into the Atlantic Ocean off the Moroccan coast, but a French official disputed the claim.

Three tugs towed the supertanker farther out to sea today, and cleanup crews prepared for a 100-square-mile oil slick to hit the coast.

The roughly 19 million gallons of crude that escaped the stricken vessel threatened oyster beds, fishing stocks, a pink flamingo breeding ground and resort beaches on Monday. Officials said 100,000 jobs depend on fishing and tourism in the affected area.

The spill was nearly double the 11 million gallons of crude oil dumped into Alaska's Prince William Sound by the Exxon Valdez last year, but a British shipping official said much of the oil has been broken up by high waves and dissolved.

The dispersed oil is falling to the ocean bed, unlike the oil in Prince William Sound, said Joe Nichols, technical manager of the International Tanker Owners Pollution Federation in Britain.

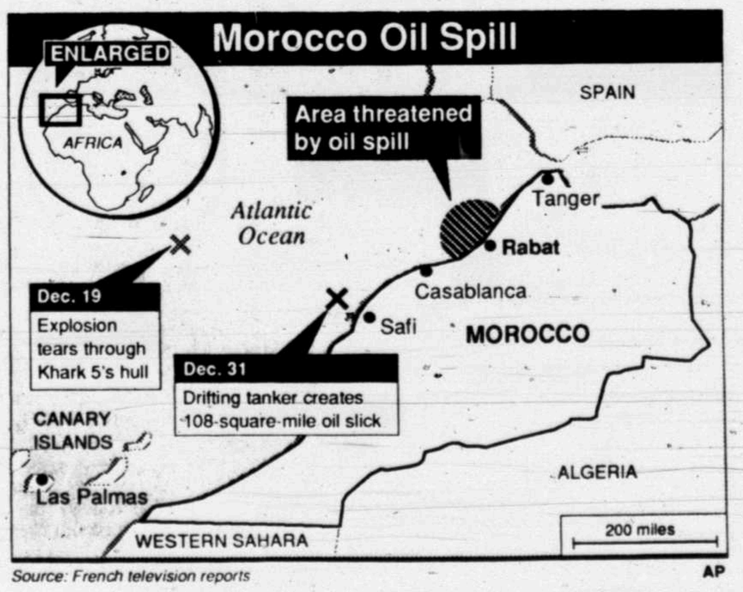

The Dutch salvage company Smit Tak said workers plugged a 60- by 90-foot hole in Khark 5's port side.

"We have done some repairs to the ship and we managed to stop the leak," spokesman Daan Kaakebeen said from the company's headquarters in Rotterdam, the Netherlands. He said three tugs were towing the 1,837-ton ship out to sea.

Iran's environmental protection agency also said the spill had been contained and an agency spokesman said "the imperialist media" had exaggerated its seriousness.

However, France's environment minister, helping to coordinate cleanup operations for its former colony, said the Khark 5 was still leaking and a second tanker eventually would try to take aboard some of the remaining oil.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Fair skies forecast for area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies are in the forecast for early evening, becoming partly cloudy later tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the middle 30s and winds will be from the south at 10-20 mph.

Wednesday is expected to continue to be partly cloudy with the high from 60 to 65 degrees and westerly winds gusting from 10-20 mph.

Monday's high of 54 was 19 degrees cooler than the record high of 73 set for that date in 1965. The overnight low of 34 was 34 degrees warmer than the record temperature of zero set for this date in 1979.

STATE

The New Year was rung in with mild winter weather across Texas Monday, as a high and low pressure systems combined to keep conditions mostly dry.

Light rain fell over parts of the Rio Grande Plains from near Del Rio to Cotulla to Laredo. Other patches of light rain dampened portions of deep South Texas and extended offshore along the lower Coastal Plains into the Gulf of Mexico.

Skies were mostly clear over the Trans Pecos and High Plains, while partly cloudy to cloudy skies covered the rest of the state.

Winds were blowing from the south and southwest over all but the lower valley and Southeast Texas where northeast winds prevailed.

NATION

A storm system in the Pacific Northwest today threatened to spread heavy snow across parts of Nevada, Utah and Arizona, while milder temperatures were forecast for the nation's midsection.

As the West Coast cold front pushes through the Midwest tonight and Wednesday, snow was expected across the Dakotas into Minnesota and Wisconsin. Some scattered light snow could occur in Nebraska and Iowa on Wednesday.

Strong, gusty winds continued to usher cold air into the Northeast, with gale warnings in effect along the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire.

Skies will be clear to partly cloudy across the central U.S. today. Highs were expected in the mid 30s and 40s, about 10 to 20 degrees above normal.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Troop withdrawals will continue

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration says it plans to bring U.S. combat troops home from Panama in small groups "on a continuing basis," following the New Year's Day withdrawal of two artillery units.

"The president is glad to see some of the troops coming home and hopes the rest can leave as soon as possible," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Fitzwater announced the return of 141 Army troops based in Ford Ord, Calif., on Monday as the president flew home after a six-day vacation, most of it in Texas.

Bush and first lady Barbara Bush today were traveling to Boston to attend the funeral of Bush's brother-in-law, Alexander Ellis III, who died last Friday.

Although the soldiers brought home on Monday represented a minute fraction of the 26,000 U.S. troops now in Panama, "you have to start with one," Fitzwater told reporters aboard Air Force One.

"We want them all to come out as soon as possible, except for the 12,000 there permanently," Fitzwater said.

The first 56 soldiers arrived at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio on Monday for a layover before returning to Fort Ord. Pentagon spokesman Maj. David Super said the troops were from the 7th Infantry Division.

"Their military mission is finished. It's just a continued tailoring of the military force in Panama as the need for combat troops is diminished," Super said. "The growing mission down there now is for nation-building and civil affairs."

Fitzwater said other units would return home over "the next few days."

"We'll see groups like this coming out on a continuing basis," he said, adding that the troops would be withdrawn unit by unit "because of varying duty assignments, varying mop-up needs that remain in Panama."

The beginning of the troop withdrawal came 12 days after the predawn U.S. invasion that toppled the government of dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega. On Sunday, Bush visited two military hospitals in San Antonio, Texas, and met with U.S. servicemen wounded in the action.

Noriega has been holed up in the Vatican embassy in Panama City since Christmas Eve. Fitzwater said Monday there was "no change" in the status of the stalemate between the United States and the Roman Catholic Church over his fate.

Over the weekend, Bush said he wanted to bring troops home as soon as possible, but that he did not intend to act precipitously.

Twenty-three U.S. servicemen and three civilians were killed in the invasion and more than 300 were wounded. About 14,000 U.S. troops were sent by Bush to augment the 12,000 already there.

Bush and his wife were attending private funeral services for Ellis, husband of Bush's sister, Nancy Walker Bush Ellis, at St. Joseph's Church in Lincoln, Mass., a Boston suburb.

Ellis, 67, a prominent businessman, died Friday of a stroke. He had been hospitalized for several weeks and had undergone major intestinal surgery.

"He's been very ill," Mrs. Bush told reporters on Monday.

She commented on the death while announcing that their son, Marvin, and daughter-in-law Margaret, of Alexandria, Va., had adopted a two-month old boy, Charles Walker Bush. The couple also has an adopted daughter, Marshall, 3.

The Bushes now have a dozen grandchildren, five boys and seven girls.

"There's something exciting, we heard about the baby the day our brother-in-law died. There's something nice about that, isn't there? Sort of magical," Mrs. Bush said. "I cried from happiness and sadness all day."

Of Ellis, Mrs. Bush said: "He was a wonderful man, so wonderful that we wanted him not to live because he would have been a vegetable."

When a reporter congratulated the president on his 12th grandchild, he said: "Thank you. Funny how life goes on ... Nancy's husband and this."

The Bushes spent about four hours bass fishing on a private lake near Montgomery, Ala., on Monday with Alabama sportsman Ray Scott before returning to Washington.

The fishing party, which also included National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, caught a total of about 50 fish in the stocked lake.

Bush also told reporters during the Alabama stop that his New Year's resolution was "Peace, a world at peace." Mrs. Bush said hers was: "No more desserts."

Sovereignty issue becomes touchy for Panamanians

By ANA PUGA
Hearst News Service

PANAMA CITY, Panama — President Guillermo Endara holds his new post thanks to an American invasion he never wanted.

The portly 52-year-old lawyer, affectionately nicknamed "Sweet Roll" by Panamanians, was suddenly thrust into power by Washington after the Dec. 20 invasion that deposed dictator Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Noriega had annulled May 7 presidential elections, which most observers agree that Endara won handily, in order to maintain his grip over a figurehead civilian president.

Now that Endara is in office, his advisers admit they desperately need U.S. help in reconstructing the government, retraining the defeated military and rebuilding the country's shattered economy.

Yet, in accepting such help, Endara runs the risk of becoming a U.S. puppet in the eyes of many of his people. Panamanians have traditionally preferred that their leader keep a certain distance from Washington.

Last week, at his first press conference since taking office, the president repeated that he had never requested and hadn't welcomed the U.S. invasion. He added:

"We will maintain our independence from the gringos, as we refer to them so affectionately. We will not let ourselves be dominated."

Panama's most revered leader, the benevolent dictator Gen. Omar Torrijos, is admired because he negotiated the treaty guaranteeing the return of the U.S.-built Panama Canal to Panama in the year 2000.

The issue of national sovereignty has sensitive roots in Panama. The country won its independence from Colombia in 1904 because of U.S. plans to build the canal.

Former President Nicholas Barletta, who was fired by Noriega in 1984, envisions Panama enjoying a relationship of "self-respecting friendship" with Washington.

"I am confident the United States will avoid the temptation to make Panama a protectorate again," Barletta said. "The invasion was the best of all the bad options, the least bad evil."

Today, American and Panamanian interests dovetail, said Barletta. Like President Bush, Panama's new president has also declared his intention to get Panama out of the drug trafficking and money laundering business.

"We've been sidetracked in recent years. The best thing for Panama now is for a reduced military to follow a constitutional model," Barletta said. "For us to recover our market economy and continue to grow as a clean country, an honest country, a la Singapore."

U.S. officials in Panama said they are well aware of the need to keep their distance, at least in public.

"We do not want to make this the 51st state. We want to fix it right to make damn sure we never have to do this again," said a senior U.S. official.

"We think we can make it work like it did in Japan. The military there was a pain and we fixed it," he said. "I think we can be as happy running the canal here as we could be if it were in Canada."

U.S. officials meet daily with Endara and his two vice presidents, offering advice on how to restructure the government, the justice system and the military.

The president has announced plans to appoint a new cabinet, Supreme Court, attorney general and Electoral Tribunal. The May 7 election results must be re-evaluated to decide who won the country's 67 legislative seats, Endara said.

U.S. troops now patrol with Panamanians. U.S. military leaders plan to retrain the military leaders in each of the country's nine provinces, to ensure their loyalty to the new civilian government.

Endara has said he would like the American occupation to end within a month. But U.S. officials said they need more time to retrain the Panamanian military.

"One month is a good target, but it's not meetable. I would hope we could be out of here in 1990," said the senior U.S. official.

Meanwhile, some Panamanians are already tiring of having to respect American troops as the supreme authority in their own country.

Others object to the military's increased pressure on the Vatican embassy, where Noriega remained holed up late last week.

They accused the United States of showing disrespect for the Vatican and for international law, which bans military interference with foreign embassies. Late last week, U.S. troops also continued to surround the Nicaraguan, Cuban and Libyan embassies in Panama City. American troops rounded up Panamanians suspected of supporting Noriega and enforced an 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew.

PANAMA

"He will have to weigh his choices and come up with that which is the least disagreeable," McGrath said in an interview. Vatican officials have said they were urging Noriega to leave of his own accord.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro confirmed that Vatican envoy Monsignor Giacinto Berloco arrived at the embassy to "give a hand" to the negotiations. Navarro declined to give any details and said the Vatican would have no commen on the affair today.

Navarro was asked to say whether a much-reported Endara letter, allegedly asking Vatican to turn over Noriega, had arrived. Navarro refused to answer the question.

In other developments, the U.S. Southern Command said it arrested Rodolfo "Papito" Chiari, Noriega's interior and justice minister, on Saturdayn The military communique gave no detailsn

U.S. troops, the only real security force in the country since the invasion, have been arresting anyone the Panamanian governmentMwants detained.

Fifty members of Noriega's "Machos del Monte" battalion, which came to his defense during an Oct. 3 coup attempt, surrendered Sunday near Rio Hato, 80 miles southwest of Panama City, the Southern Command said.

The process of transferring the Panama Canal to the Panamanian government advanced a step further Monday when Fernando Manfredo, a 62-year-old economist, became acting administrator of the waterway. He is the first Panamanian to hold the post since the canal began operation 75 years ago.

The 1977 canal treaties cede control of the canal to Panama on Dec. 31, 1999. The agreements set a Jan. 1, 1990, date for a Panamanian to be named canal administrator.

LANDING

Nine people were treated at North Arundel Hospital in Glen Burnie for sprains, muscle aches and bruises, said Kevin Murnane, hospital spokesman. The passengers were injured "from bumping into each other as they were going down the slide," Kelly said.

Many of the injuries were caused by passengers who pushed and shoved each other at emergency exit doors where the chutes failed to work, they said.

John Nouaisser, 34, of Paris, said he smelled smoke about 11:45 p.m., and a flight attendant told him it was food burning in the galley.

SPILL

The huge oil slick moved to within 12 miles of the coast on Monday, and high winds could push some of the oil ashore by Thursday, said the Frecnh official, Brice Lalond.

An explosion, its cause unknown, tore through the tanker's hull Dec. 19 when it was about 400 miles north of the Canary Islands. A fire forced the crew to abandon ship and the vessel began drifting toward northwest Africa.

The ship, originally loaded with 72 million gallons of oil bound for refineries in Europe, came within 50 miles of Safi, south of Rabat, before salvors towed it 120 miles off the coast, the official Moroccan news agency Maghreb Arab Press said.

It said Moroccan technicians were struggling to repair a gash in the hull that continued streaming light crude oil.

Experts placed a barrier at the leading edge of the slick to prevent it from reaching a 106-mile stretch of coastline. Spanish oil-spill technicians on the scene and experts from Marseille, France, say high winds and 8-foot waves have slowed efforts to control the spill.

Robert Luigi, an oil-spill expert for the Marseille Port Authority, said Moroccan authorities were coping well with the spill and the risk to coastal areas was slight.

Luigi, who returned to France on Sunday after aiding local authorities for a week, said much of the oil had evaporated or disintegrated into small particles due to the warm seas.

The slick threatened an area from Mehdiya north of Rabat, the capital, to Mohammedia in the south, the French TV station La Cinq reported.

The slick could affect oyster beds at Oualidyia and a migratory bird reserve at Moulay Bousselham, also a key breeding ground of pink flamingoes, authorities said. It could blacken beaches around Agadir, one of the most popular resorts in Morocco.

Potential damage to fishing stocks, tourism and other coastal industries could cost 100,000 jobs, according to the Interior Ministry. The government has formed an emergency council to deal with the crisis.

In an interview on the French radio station Europe 1, marine scientist Jacques Cousteau complained of slow reaction to the spill and criticized safety precautions in the oil transport industry.

CHASE

Midland police Officer Greg Thompson joined the pursuit as the Ford sped past the intersection of Midkiff Road and Wall Avenue. The chase continued for more than a dozen blocks, until the driver lost control at the intersection of Wall and O Street, just east of the intersection of Wall and Andrews Highway.

After the car came to rest against a utility pole, the driver of the car jumped out and escaped. The two other 16-year-olds were arrested, and the clerk was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital where she was treated for cuts and bruises.

According to spokesman White, the clerk reported the store had been robbed and her car stolen. She told investigators she was sexually assaulted while in the car, he said.

A clerk at the Allsup's store in Wickett said today she could not talk about the incident.

The youths will be turned over to Ward County Sheriff Ben Keele and Texas Ranger Joe Coleman of Pecos, White said.

"We aren't going to file any charges here because they have plenty of charges in Ward County. Aggravated robbery, aggravated kidnapping, aggravated sexual assault — and auto theft," he said.

Williams, who oversees nearly 200 youths at the Pyote facility, said planning of an electronic security fence came a little late. Once the new, 15-foot fence is up, other security changes are doubtful.

"We are putting a security fence around the institution, electronically-controlled," he said. "I doubt I am going to do anything else. I guarantee if that fence had been up they would not have gotten out."

Like most Texas Youth Commission facilities, the Pyote dormitories are overcrowded.

"I have 195 right now, and am budgeted for only 168," he said. "I have had as many as 200. All of the TYC facilities are way overpopulated."

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said the youths likely will appear today or Wednesday before County Court at Law Judge Willie DuBose.

"It will be a hearing on whether or not to detain them for up to 10 days," Dettman said. "It will be a closed hearing. Then they will be transported to whatever county needs them, is going to prosecute them."

Superintendent Williams said the two youths will be returned to Pyote to await prosecution.

"We will hold them in our security building," he said.

"What has happended is real unfortunate. It is a tough job having to deal with these kids."

Bloody New Year's in Houston claims 6

HOUSTON (AP) — Six Houston residents were killed on the first day of the new year, following a year with 512 recorded murders, officials said.

On the first day of 1990, a 21-year-old security guard was slain while on duty, three people were killed in an apparent double murder-suicide, a man was shot to death during a battle with his common law wife and another man was found, reportedly strangled to death in his closet.

Terry Lee Whitaker was on duty at a southwest Houston apartment complex when he was apparently shot to death sometime between 1 a.m. and 1:43 a.m. Whitaker was shot in the head, chest and arms and his body dumped in some shrubbery. He had been a security guard for three weeks.

Homicide Sgt. Tom Murray said Whitaker may have gone to check on gunfire coming from the apartment complex across the street.

"It's not unusual to hear gunshots on New Year's Eve," Murray said. "But his natural conscientiousness may have led him to get involved."

Investigators believe Whitaker confronted or surprised three males in the complex.

Police said Linda Martha Obermoeller, 48, and her fiance, Emmett Aloph Pietz, 64, were shot and killed by her ex-husband, Mark Crain Obermoeller, 48, before he turned the gun on himself about 5:15 p.m.

Police reported the Obermoellers had recently divorced and Mrs. Obermoeller planned to marry Pietz. Obermoeller, who had previously been accosted by security guards at Mrs. Obermoeller's apartment complex, apparently arrived at the apartment and found his ex-wife with Pietz, police said.

Mrs. Obermoeller was shot in the throat and back, while Pietz was shot once on his right side. Obermoeller then shot himself twice with the .44 caliber revolver, according to Sgts. F.W. Carroll and J.G. Burmester. All three were pronounced dead at the scene.

The body of Mark Well Poppe, 37, was found with his hands bound at 7:30 p.m. Monday in his closet. Police said Wells' girlfriend, who was vacationing in Tennessee, last talked with him about 10 a.m. Thursday.

When Poppe failed to show up for a pre-arranged trip, police said his girlfriend returned home to check on his whereabouts.

Sgts. N.A. Savoia and A.J. Toepoel did not have a motive for the slaying, but said his apartment did not appear to have been ransacked. An autopsy is pending at the medical examiner's office. Officers said Poppe appeared to have been dead for several days.

At 8 p.m., police said an argument escalated into gunfire when a woman allegedly shot her common-law husband after he had been hitting and choking her.

Police said Michael Lewis, 44, was shot in the chest and stomach with a .38-caliber revolver. His wife, Laura H. Liggins, 37, was arrested but later released pending the outcome of a grand jury investigation.

Sgts. R.D. Anderson and R.L. Ferguson said the couple had been arguing when Lewis apparently began striking Ms. Liggins and knocked her to the floor of the closet. Police said Ms. Liggins picked up a revolver that had been kept in the closet.

Police said when Lewis began choking Ms. Liggins, she pulled the trigger four times, shooting him in the torso. Lewis was dead at the scene.

Men sleepwalk more frequently than women do

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Men who sleepwalk do so more often than women and are more likely to injure others during it, a Texas A&M University researcher found.

But the common belief that more adult men are sleepwalkers may be wrong, said Jim Dupree, who conducted the research for his Ph.D. in counseling.

"One overriding conclusion from the results of the study is that global statements made about adult sleepwalkers may be premature," said Dupree, who is now a university staff psychologist in Arcata, Calif.

"Young adult sleepwalkers do not differ appreciably from their peers in abnormal personality," Dupree said, a result that suggests mental disorders are not a cause of sleepwalking.

Nearly 100 sleepwalkers from three universities completed a two-part questionnaire designed for the study and half of the group took the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory. Dupree also conducted informal interviews with nearly 50 sleepwalkers. Two separate control groups were used.

Most said they believe tiredness or stress contributes to sleepwalking, Dupree said, a finding consistent with previous studies.

The sleepwalkers, as a group, were not concerned about their habit and reported few injuries to themselves or others, Dupree said. "Family members and friends appear to have more concerns about the behavior than the sleepwalkers," he added.

However, frequent sleepwalkers reported more concern about their habit and more willingness to seek treatment, Dupree said. They also reported a greater incidence of hurting themselves while sleepwalking.

Sleepwalkers don't appear to have more problems than normal in managing aggression or being self-assertive, he said.

Woman killed when car slips into reverse

SOUTHLAKE (AP) — A woman died after being pinned by a car that apparently slipped out of gear while she was walking behind it, police said.

The woman, Pamela J. Rickett, 40, died Sunday night at Harris Methodist Hospital in nearby Fort Worth about seven hours after the accident.

Rickett had gotten in the car and started it as she prepared to go to a grocery store, but then left it to get a sweater. As she was walking behind it, the car slipped into reverse and rolled backwards, Southlake police Capt. Malcolm Jackson said.

"The car was still in reverse and running when she was found pinned under the car," Jackson said. "Someone in the house heard the accident and ran outside, that's who found her first."

Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said the accident would not be included in the agency's count of holiday weekend traffic fatalities because it occurred on private property.

First uninjured troops back from Panama

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The first U.S. troops to pull out of Panama pronounced the invasion a success today, said they were mostly well received by the Panamanian people and expressed relief at making it back alive.

"Now they have a democratic government — it's what they want. They love Americans," said Army Sgt. John Grauer, 29, of Fresno, Calif. "They love what we did."

Fifty-six soldiers in camouflage and face paint left Kelly Air Force Base here early today, arriving at their home base of Fort Ord in Monterey, Calif. The troops from the 7th Infantry Division arrived at Kelly Monday from Panama, the first organized unit withdrawn since the attack Dec. 20.

Kelly spokeswoman Phoebe Brown said another plane with 46 soldiers aboard arrived here early today and was to leave for Fort Ord this evening.

As the soldiers left for their home base, 2nd Lt. John Jaskwhich, 23, of Greenville, S.C., said the troops in his field artillery unit were in Panama two weeks but that most of the fighting had calmed down before they saw action.

Jaskwhich, the senior man in the squad, said his prevailing thought was: "Just get me out alive."

"I'm just glad to be back to celebrate a little Christmas," he said.

Army Spec. Melissa Jackson, who works in supplies and caught a ride back to the United States with the artillery unit, expressed a similar feeling.

"It's scary," said the 22-year-old, who was in Panama three months. "Any time anything like that happens and you're in the midst of it, you get scared. If anyone tells you that they weren't scared down there, they're lying."

A total of 141 soldiers from Fort Ord were pulled out Monday, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"Their military mission is finished. It's just a continued tailoring of the military force in Panama as the need for combat troops is diminished," said Pentagon spokesman Maj. David Super. "The growing mission down there now is for nation-building and civil affairs."

President Bush expressed hope that the remaining U.S. soldiers in Panama could leave "as soon as possible," Fitzwater said. He offered no timetable.

About 12,000 troops are permanently assigned to Panama. An additional 14,000 were sent in as part of the invasion to topple Gen. Manuel Noriega.

Dallas area paper damaged by fire

DALLAS (AP) — An electrical wiring problem may have sparked a three-alarm fire that heavily damaged the offices of the Oak Cliff Tribune, a Dallas weekly, firefighters said.

The fire, which occurred early Sunday, caused at least $60,000 damage to the building and its contents.

"It's sickening. It really is," said publisher Joe Whitney, who bought the 10,000-circulation paper in May.

The newspaper is down but not out. Whitney said he plans to have the paper on the street by its usual delivery date Thursday.

"Right now, I don't know how in the world we're going to do it, but the Tribune has been around since 1904 and we're going to do it," he said. "We called everybody to see if we can regroup."

Written articles, writers' notes, files, telephone numbers, photographs and artwork were lost and circulation records were damaged.

Government striving to count the homeless for 1990 census

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the federal government took its last census in 1980, it never counted Brian Upshur, who was then 21 years old, homeless and staying in a rescue mission.

"I knew about the census," said Upshur, now head of food service at the Los Angeles Mission. "But the census was always something you didn't want to be involved in. The attitude was the government was trying to keep tabs on you."

In the 1990 head count, the Census Bureau will try to do a better job finding, gaining the trust of and counting homeless people — one of the biggest groups missed by the last census, along with blacks and recent immigrants.

The government plans to take steps like sending officials to parks and alleys where homeless people sleep and hiring the homeless themselves as census takers.

Los Angeles and other cities sued the government to implement many of the new procedures because of what all agree was an undercount in 1980. The Census Bureau's own estimates are that the government missed 4.6 percent of Los Angeles residents in the last census.

An accurate count is important because census data determines, among other things, federal funding for city and private programs and the number of elected representatives in Congress and the state Legislature.

But despite a massive effort by the Census Bureau and the city, the homeless — among the people who could most benefit by the government dollars and political representation that comes from the census — will do their best to avoid being counted.

Just finding many people will be a chore in Los Angeles' seedy and dangerous Skid Row area and lesser-known neighborhoods frequented by the homeless. Gaining their trust long enough to fill out a census form or answer questions will be a battle.

"Ultimately, the best we can hope to get is a guesstimate," said Cedric Hinson, a counselor at the Los Angeles Mission. "I don't think we can presume that these things are going to be accurate."

The city plans to open its emergency shelters, usually open only in bad weather, on March 18 so the homeless will be available for counting.

City officials also are working with homeless shelters, church groups and community activists to develop ways to get the word out about the census and to draw up a list of the likely spots census takers will find homeless people.

The Census Bureau will use the city's list of places to find homeless people as a road map when census takers hit the streets of Los Angeles March 20 and 21.

On the first night of homeless counting, the Census Bureau will send people — some of them homeless — to organized shelters such as rescue missions and churches.

The second night will be a bigger challenge.

Three of Los Angeles' homeless hang out on the city streets Sunday. They are, from left, Aubrey Holmes, Tony Smith and George Jones. For the 1990 census, the U.S. Census Bureau will try to do a better job of finding, gaining the trust and counting homeless people, one of the biggest groups missed in the last census.

Homeless vets fight to regain their dignity

NEW YORK (AP) — The Vietnam War ended 18 years ago but the wounds of isolation borne by now-homeless ex-soldiers reopened easily as they watched a new movie about one of their own.

"Our wounds are still hurting us," said Ben Colon, 36, after watching "Born on the Fourth of July."

"I believe that we gave the best years of our life. Veterans should never be homeless," said Colon, who was shot in Vietnam and now must walk with a cane.

Colon and Earl Beddoe, 41, have been on a liquid diet since Dec. 17 as a protest for better conditions at the nation's first homeless shelter for veterans, a facility run by the Salvation Army in Queens.

They hugged each other after emerging late Sunday from the film about a wounded veteran's struggle to cope.

"It's touching. You remember how you felt towards Vietnam and the way you came back and the memories of the way you were before and how you can never be again," Colon said.

Nearby was 43-year-old Howard Fogelman, who proudly wore his U.S. Ranger button on a cap as he spoke matter-of-factly about being shot seven times during two tours of duty in Vietnam.

The vets praised the movie, saying they identified with its portrayal of the isolation felt by veterans returning from the war.

But unlike real-life vet Ron Kovic (played by Tom Cruise), who leads anti-war demonstrators and finally feels at home by 1975, Colon and Beddoe and their colleagues are still waging their own war for dignity in America.

They feel they are losing.

At the Queens shelter the veterans have curfews and other rules they say are better suited for children than former U.S. servicemen, some of whom have emotional wounds even though bullet wounds have mostly healed.

Fogelman has a large dent in his face where a bullet entered, and no teeth as a result of the shooting. His last set of false teeth wore out two years ago and he says bureaucratic red tape has blocked him from replacing them.

Without teeth, he has remained jobless and homeless. "It has a lot to do with your confidence," he said. "You don't want to talk."

Drugs prescribed during his recovery from the facial wound led to a drug habit at home, he said. He's now in a methadone program.

And he suffers from post-traumatic stress, which for him means "you could just be sitting and you see images coming on the bus or the train."

Gorbachev's trip to Lithuania may provide clues to limits of force's use

By BRYAN BRUMLEY

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's upcoming visit to restive Lithuania should provide new clues on the limits to use of military force by large powers — an issue lingering from the U.S. invasion of Panama and the revolution in Romania.

The question is how much a superpower — in this case the Soviet Union — will allow its perceived security interests to be jeopardized in the interests of allowing a small nation to determine its own fate.

Or more specifically, whether Gorbachev will escalate from words to arms to persuade Lithuania, a Soviet republic, to remain in the Soviet Union.

Using military force in Lithuania, or its sister Baltic republics of Latvia and Estonia, would jeopardize Soviet relations with Washington, and President Bush told Gorbachev so at the Malta summit on Dec. 2-3, U.S. officials say.

Administration officials are not saying what steps they might take if Gorbachev intervened in the Baltic republics. But at Malta, Bush promised to open talks on a trade treaty as a step toward conferring commercial favors on Moscow, scheduled a summit meeting in late July with Gorbachev, and has said work could be completed soon on treaties to cut nuclear, conventional and chemical arms.

All that could be in trouble if things go badly for Gorbachev in Lithuania. No date has been announced for the Soviet leader's Lithuanian trip, which is expected early this year.

At the State Department, one official said, "Our people will be looking very carefully at the Gorbachev mission to Lithuania to see how successful he is ... and what the prospects are for that republic."

Questions concerning the use of military force, however, were clouded by the U.S. invasion of Panama.

Gorbachev encouraged peaceful reforms among his Eastern European allies, Poland, East Germany, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, and he refrained from intervening when the tides of change became bloody in Romania.

As the fighting heightened in Romani the United States invaded Panama with the stated purpose of replacing strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega with a democratic government.

"The difference is that the Soviet Union supports democracy by staying out of countries and thus permitting democracy to proceed," Secretary of State James A. Baker III told reporters on Dec. 20.

"In this one and very unique instance, the United States did it by going in to assist a democratically elected government against a dictator," Baker said.

The United States has never recognized the Soviet annexation of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia during World War II, and Bush told Gorbachev at Malta the United States would object to armed Soviet interference with peaceful democratic and independence movements in the Baltics.

In Malta, Gorbachev told Bush "he did not intend to use military force to resolve the situation in the Baltics," said an administration source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Gorbachev also repeated his renunciation of the doctrine that past Kremlin leaders had invoked to justify the use of force to crush reform movements in Eastern Europe.

New mayors take oaths of office

Associated Press

New mayors took office in New York and Cleveland, with David Dinkins, the first black chief executive of the nation's biggest city, downplaying racial and ethnic tensions stirred by his election and even the inaugural ceremony.

Dinkins described his city as "a gorgeous mosaic ... of race and religious faith, of national origin and sexual orientation — of individuals whose families arrived yesterday and a generation ago, coming through Ellis Island, or Kennedy Airport, or on buses bound for the Port Authority (bus terminal)."

But the inaugural ceremony Monday demonstrated the divisions in the city the Democrat inherits. Jews objected to the presence of Archbishop Desmond Tutu of South Africa, and AIDS activists to the benediction by Cardinal John J. O'Connor, whom they accuse of hampering the fight against the disease.

Also sworn in Monday were Michael White of Cleveland, Henry Spallone of Yonkers, N.Y., and John C. Daniels of New Haven, Conn.

Two mayors were scheduled to be sworn in today: Maynard H. Jackson in Atlanta and Sophie Masloff, the first woman elected mayor in Pittsburgh.

Dinkins succeeded Edward I. Koch, the outspoken three-term mayor he defeated in the Democratic primary in September. Dinkins went on to beat Republican Rudolph Giuliani, a former U.S. attorney, by a narrow margin.

Dinkins, 62, just completed a term as Manhattan borough president.

In Cleveland, former state Sen. Michael White pledged to fight crime, racism, homelessness, poor education and other city problems after taking the oath Monday to become Cleveland's 54th mayor.

Cleveland Mayor Michael R. White takes the oath of office as his wife, Tamara, keeps a close watch Monday. Judge Anthony J. Celebrezze Sr., right, administers the oath.

"We see where ours has become a city where children go hungry, where sickness goes untreated and where whole families are left homeless. ... We watch our children grow through a school system that produces adults who in too many instances cannot read. ... And we see a city still haunted by the malignancy of racism," White said.

Excommunicated man arrested for torching church

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Police and firefighters stood by helplessly as a historic church burned while an excommunicated parishioner in face paint danced on the porch, authorities say.

The man, who had telephoned police an hour earlier Monday saying he was barricaded inside the 87-year-old wood building with hand grenades and other weapons, had said he would surrender if he were allowed to dance.

"It was something to the effect of a native American Indian dance," a police officer said. "He was jumping up and down."

The 25-year-old man, who was not immediately identified, was arrested and was to be charged with burglary and arson today, police said. Police found no weapons inside.

Police officers gathered a block from the church, while tourists, oblivious to the standoff, strolled past monuments and markers on the south side of the church, where parishioners believe that Christ will make his Second Coming.

Firefighters moved in and battled the blaze for about 25 minutes, but flames had engulfed its second floor.

"The church was totaled," said Alvin Harris, pastor of the Church of Christ.

Rally held despite bombings

ATLANTA (AP) — An Emancipation Day celebration held on the heels of a series of racially motivated bombings went off without a hitch, but protesters outside the NAACP headquarters in Baltimore denounced the civil-rights group.

"There's a group of black Americans who are under the illusion that we have arrived, that we have achieved, and that there is no longer a need for our civil rights organizations," the Rev. R.L. White said Monday at the NAACP-sponsored event in an Atlanta church. "Sometimes it takes a rude awakening. Some demented mind will plant a bomb somewhere just to let us know the fight isn't over yet."

In Baltimore, a handful of people, some carrying placards denouncing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, picketed the organization's national headquarters and shouted anti-NAACP slogans New Year's Day.

A sign carried by one of the pickets said "Bomb Benny," an apparent reference to NAACP director Benjamin L. Hooks. The offices were closed New Year's Day.

Meanwhile, the FBI said it has determined the kind of explosive used in shrapnel bombs that killed a federal judge and a civil-rights lawyer.

Barge spills gas into river

MONONGAHELA, Pa. (AP) — About 10,000 gallons of gasoline spilled into the ice-clogged Monongahela River after a barge hit a bridge, but state and federal officials said water supplies were safe.

"The situation's under control and the water supplies are safe," said Betsy Mallison, a spokeswomen for the state Department of Environmental Resources.

The barge was one of at least 50 to break loose from moorings along a 40-mile stretch of the river from Brownsville north to Pittsburgh.

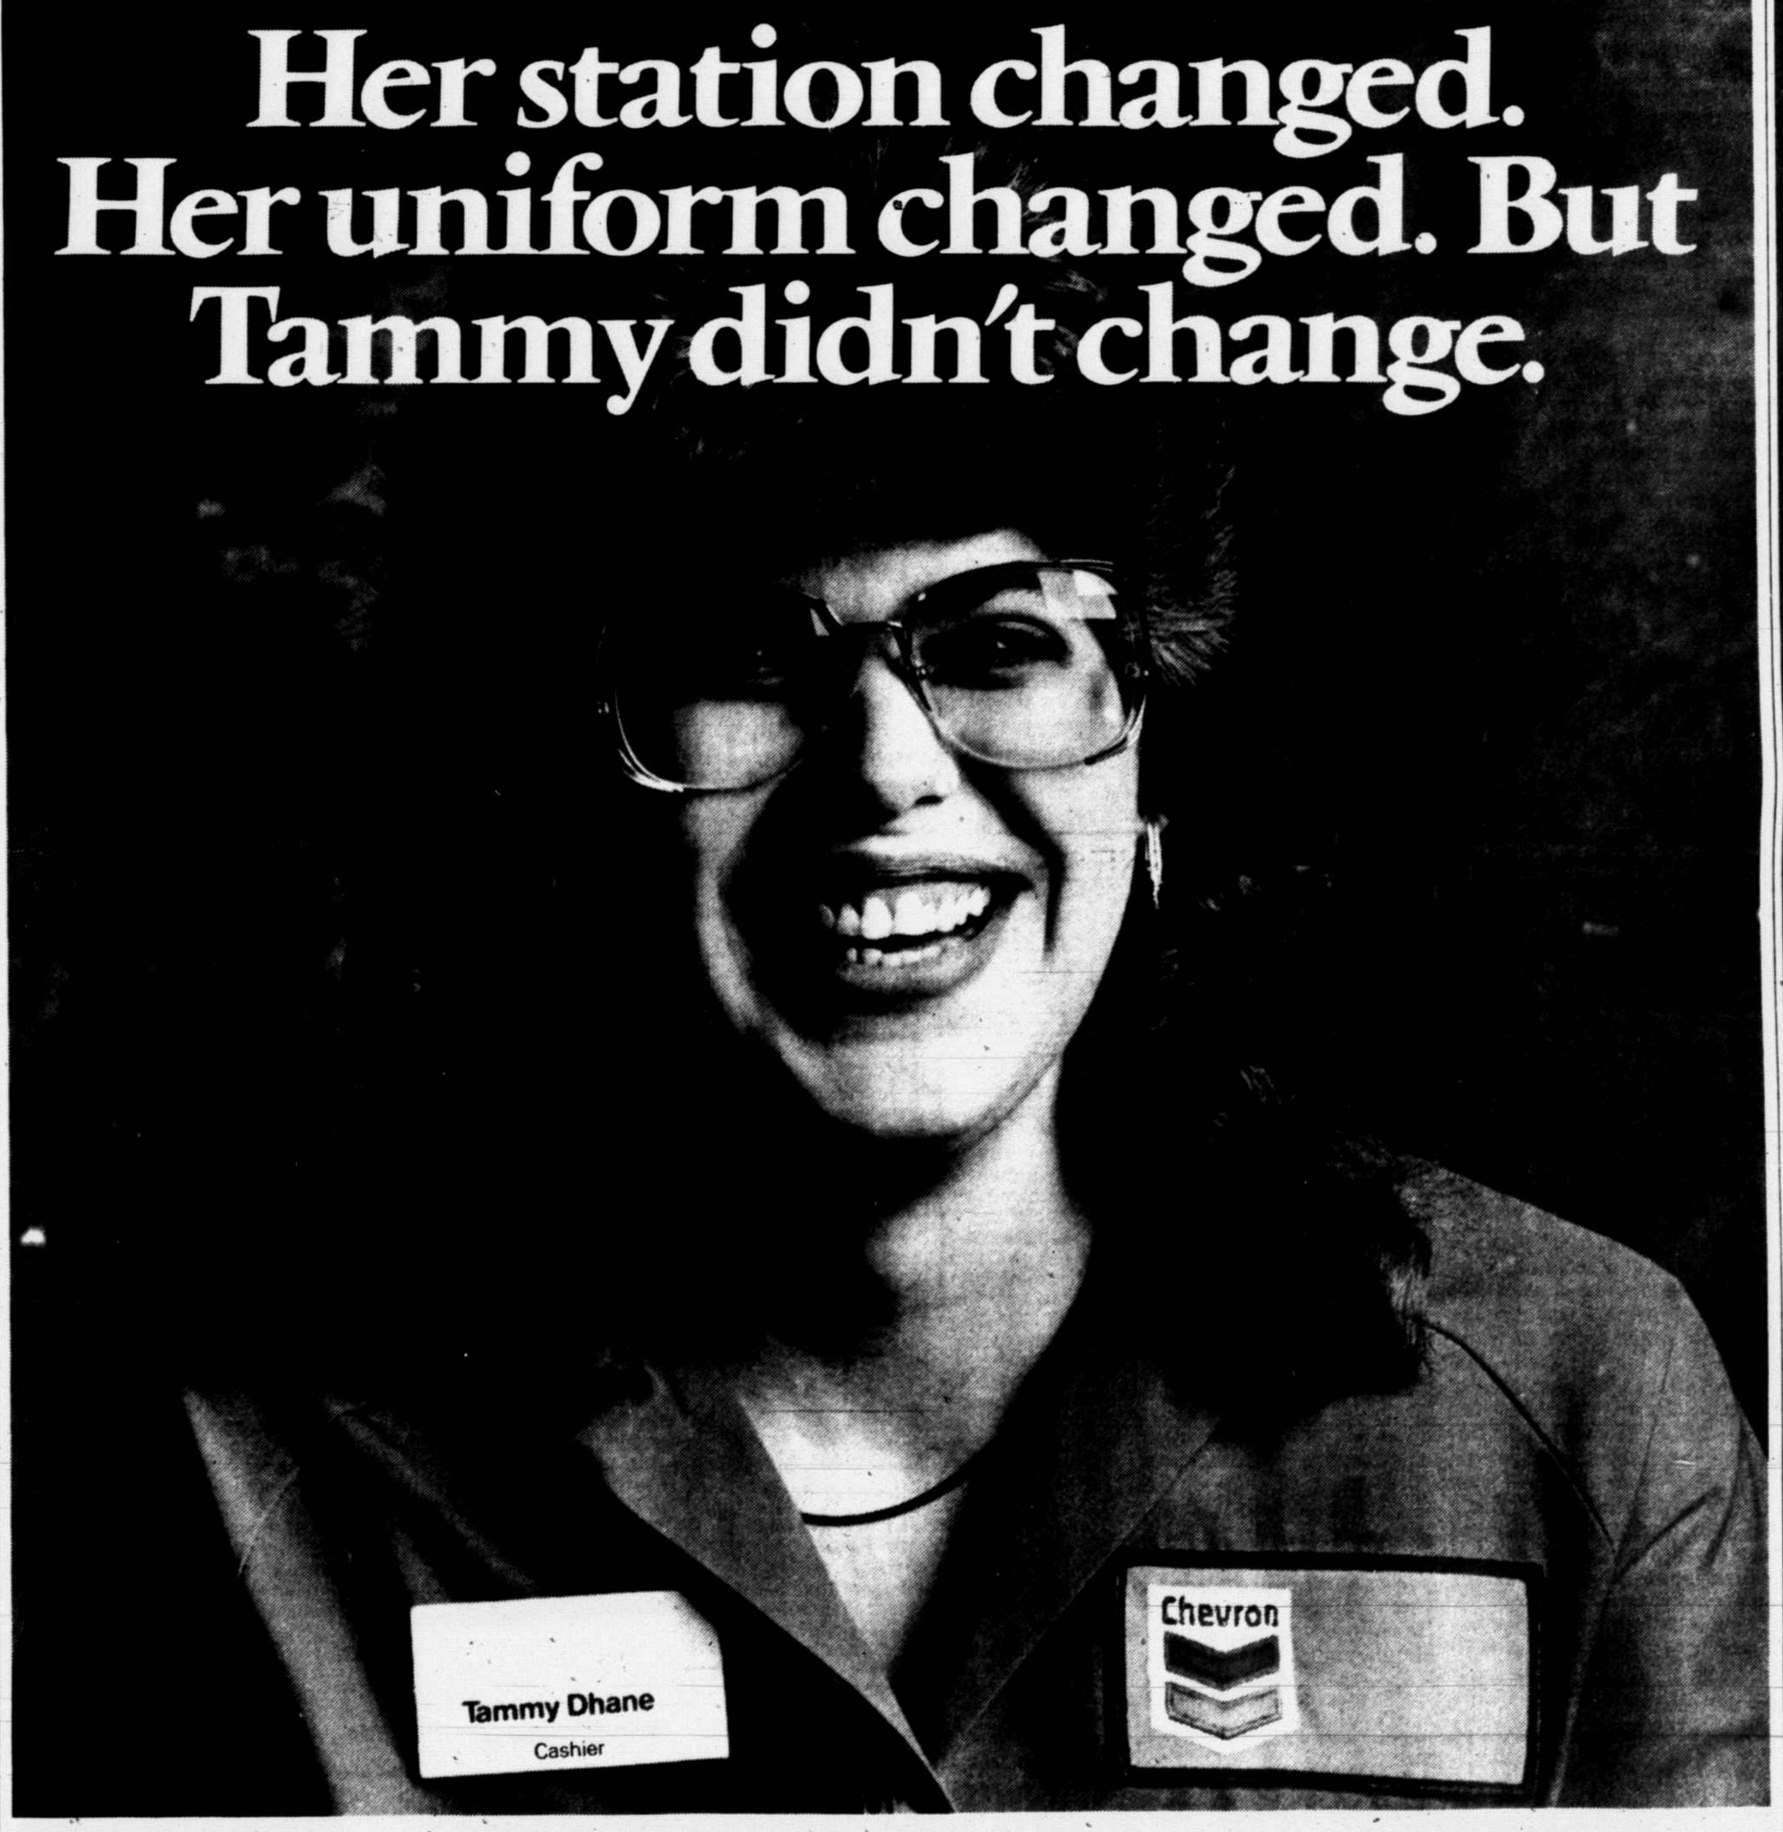

The leaking barge, owned by Gutman Oil Co. in Charleroi, broke loose about 8:30 a.m. Monday, hit the Monongahela Bridge and ruptured about 15 miles south of Pittsburgh.

50 arrested after party

ATLANTA (AP) — At least 15 people were hurt and about 50 arrested after a New Year's Eve party at a downtown hotel turned violent and drunken revelers threw potted plants, fire extinguishers and bottles from balconies.

"At midnight it was literally raining bottles. I got hit in the back of the head with a bottle," said police Sgt. J.R. Collins.

Her station changed. Her uniform changed. But Tammy didn't change.

Even though her Gulf station is now Chevron, Tammy is still right where she always was. Ready to help you like she always has.

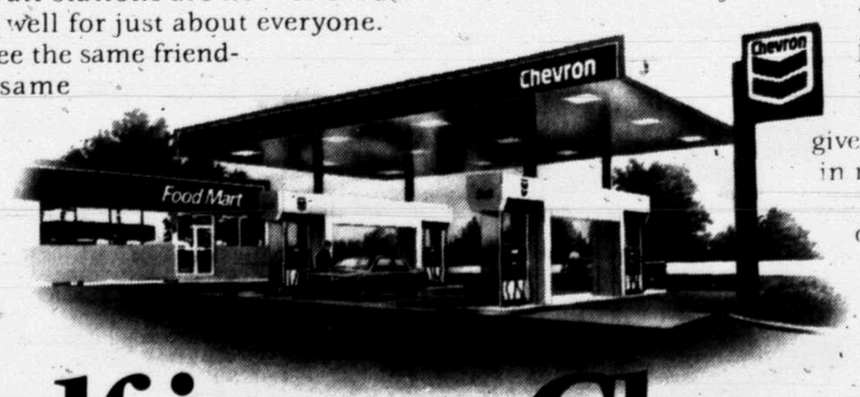

In fact, almost all Gulf stations are now Chevron. Which should work out well for just about everyone.

Gulf customers will see the same friendly folks and enjoy the same high quality products and service as before. Like car washes, Food Marts, and high octane gasolines with Techroline, the additive unsurpassed at keeping entire intake systems clean.

Chevron customers now have even more locations to take advantage of all the things they already like.

And those of you with Gulf credit cards, don't worry. You can continue to use them just as you always have. In time, you'll receive a new Chevron National Travel Card which gives you credit card convenience in more states coast to coast.

So even though Gulf has changed to Chevron, the best things haven't changed at all. Like Tammy.

Gulf is now Chevron.

Romanians must 'earn' democracy

Since the start of the bloody Romanian revolt on Dec. 15th, the yoke of Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu has been cast off and the flame of democracy has been lighted.

Romanian life has improved, some say, since Ceausescu and his wife were executed and numerous generals and high-ranking officers from the security force were imprisoned.

During Ceausescu's reign, which began in 1967 when he became head of state in Romania, food shortages have been a burden the Romanian people have had to bear. But even more, it was the terror and the repression that caused the people to rise up in defiance and topple the East bloc's last Stalinist ruler.

Already the revolution has been giving some Romanians reasons for joy — store shelves laden with meat, fruit, vegetables, cheese, even coffee and butter.

Ceausescu's harsh rule had stripped the Romanians of the necessities of life, but that appeared to be changing rapidly. Mihaela Musetescu, a housewife, was quoted as saying, "In every shop, there is more. There's everything you need to live."

And so, another chapter has been written in Eastern Europe's quest for democratic government, but not the final chapter. While the Romanians have stripped from the national flag the center emblem with the red star representing Communist rule, and are professing the desire "for the building of a really democratic society in Romania and for securing and defending fundamental human and civil rights" the greatest tests are yet to come.

No doubt there are those who will counsel a hands-off policy by the United States in Eastern Europe, but the transformation taking place there now virtually begs for guidance and moral support from President Bush and other leaders of the Free World. They should provide exactly that.

Romania has made a clean break with the Communist world. But even democracy demands certain restraints in order to work well. A society has to "earn" its democracy through restraint and tolerance of differing views. Now Romania alone must show that its people truly support the democratic principles they profess to seek.

Child safety first

Revelations from a consumer group about millions of unsafe child restraint seats still in use raise serious questions about whether the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) is doing its job.

The disturbing data on faulty child seats for automobiles released by the Center for Auto Safety (CAS) should have come from the NHTSA. Instead, it was left to the non-profit consumer group to inform parents that millions of child seats that failed government safety standards still are being used or sold. CAS blames this, in part, on an alleged failure by safety administration to issue recalls or to enforce such orders.

The center warns that many children ride at risk because recalled seats are not replaced or repaired or because owners are simply not made aware of warning labels. Other tots are in danger, CAS alleges, because federal investigations are dropped without recalls and compliance test failures are ignored. Altogether, the center estimates, more than half of the 27 million child car seats sold during the last eight years are "in use despite being recalled or failing compliance tests."

The safety administration responds: "It is categorically false to suggest...that half the seats on the road are dangerous." To be sure, many of the seat defects are dangerous only in specific situations. Nevertheless, a NHTSA administrator recently acknowledged that only 7 percent of seats subject to recalls actually are brought into compliance.

Among the problems cited in recalls were belt fasteners that don't hold, belts that are too loose, buckles that pop open, seat shells that crack, seats that incline too far to hold the child, and belt-choking hazards.

The center, noting that 622 youngsters were killed while strapped into child safety seats during the last decade, has asked the federal Transportation Department to examine all such deaths to determine factors such as how many children die as the result of unsafe seats. CAS also wants the government to reopen several compliance cases against manufacturers and to increase recall enforcement, observing that of 5.6 million seats subject to recall only 300,000 were actually replaced or repaired and that many defective seats still are being sold by stores.

This is a reasonable expectation from the agency responsible for enforcement of auto equipment safety requirements. The Transportation Department should comply with this request.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 2, the second day of 1990. There are 363 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 2, 1900, Secretary of State John Hay announced the "Open Door Policy" to facilitate trade with China.

On this date:

In 1788, Georgia became the fourth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1921, religious services were broadcast for the first time as KDKA in Pittsburgh aired the regular Sunday service of the city's Calvary Episcopal Church.

In 1929, the United States and Canada reached an agreement on joint action to preserve Niagara Falls.

In 1935, Bruno Hauptmann went on trial in Flemington, N.J., on charges of kidnapping and murdering the infant son of aviator Charles A. Lindbergh. (Hauptmann was found guilty, and executed.)

In 1939, Time magazine named German chancellor Adolf Hitler its "Man of the Year."

In 1942, the Philippine capital of Manila was captured by the Japanese in the early days of the Pacific war.

In 1960, Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In 1965, the New York Jets signed University of Alabama quarterback Joe Namath for a reported $400,000.

In 1974, President Nixon signed legislation requiring states to limit highway speeds to 55 mph.

In 1983, the Broadway musical "Annie" closed after 2,377 performances.

In 1984, W. Wilson Goode, the son of a sharecropper, was sworn in as Philadelphia's first black mayor.

In 1988, President Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney signed an agreement to lift trade restrictions between their countries.

Ten years ago: In response to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, President Jimmy Carter held a day-long series of meetings and recalled the U.S. ambassador to Moscow for consultations.

Five years ago: Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone visited President Reagan in Los Angeles, where they discussed ways of opening up Japanese markets to United States goods.

One year ago: PTL founders Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker returned to the television pulpit for the first time in two years.

Is Lauro Cavazos on the way out?

WASHINGTON — President Bush has a promise to keep. He promised to be the "education president," but to do it, he may have to fire his education secretary.

Jack Anderson

Washington insiders speculate that Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos could be one of the first casualties of the Bush administration. His feeble first year in the federal principal's office has harmed Bush's credibility with educators.

Bush's campaign promises included a pledge to wipe out illiteracy, expand education programs and increase spending. But so far he has received low marks. Save for an education summit/media event last summer, Bush has shown little initiative to reform the American school system.

Many inside the system blame Cavazos, in part for his lack of leadership. Sources who know him say he is earnest, even passionate about his work, but he is simply unable to run a federal department because he doesn't have the political skills to play the Washington game.

He should have been forewarned. Cavazos got the job based on politics. In late 1988, President Reagan recruited Cavazos, the former president of Texas Tech University, to replace the combative and colorful William Bennett. It was a scheme to bolster Bush's presidential campaign, especially in Texas, and to win support among Hispanic voters. Cavazos was the first Hispanic ever named to the Cabinet.

Educators were at first excited about Cavazos. He was open and calm, a refreshing change from the acerbic Bennett. Now they miss Bennett's confrontational style. They say that at least he kept education issues in the headlines.

Critics of Cavazos say his quiet style became a glaring flaw during the debate over the 1990 education budget. Democrats in Congress complained that the budget was not big enough, but Cavazos didn't make a fuss.

"He should have been in there fighting, insisting that if Bush is an education president, he should make sure the budget stays even with inflation," one congressional aide told our associate Scott Sleek.

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., thinks Cavazos will resign because he is being hemmed in by the White House. Cavazos' struggle for respect in the White House was obvious early on. Last spring, Bush tried to appoint a special education adviser and Cavazos hit the ceiling, according to sources who worked for Cavazos. Bush backed off and now has a panel advising him on school issues.

Well-informed sources say White House operatives are scouting for a more charismatic education secretary. Rumored to be on the list are outgoing New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander. Both are active in education reform efforts, but both modestly demur when asked if they are interested in the top job.

Cavazos and Bush deny any plans for change. A spokesman for Cavazos told us that the secretary prefers to work quietly, behind the scenes, and that he simply hasn't received as much ink as Bennett.

The comparison with Bennett has dogged Cavazos. During a governors' summit on education, Cavazos played a modest role. But Bennett, who derided the whole thing as "the standard Democratic and Republican pap," made more news than Cavazos.

When Cavazos does speak up, it is often to parrot the safe buzz words of the Bush administration, specifically, the notion of "choice" in schooling. Bush thinks parents should be able to choose which public schools their children attend. That's a safe issue because it creates the appearance of reform without costing the federal government a dime.

But it will take more than buzz words to make an education president. It may take fresh blood bringing fresh ideas.

COSTLY COUNT: The 1990 Census will be a landmark attempt to count Americans, with a landmark price tag. The Census Bureau is insisting that $2.6 billion will be enough.

But the General Accounting Office has warned the White House that $3 billion is more like it. That's $1 billion more than it cost to develop the atomic bomb.

The Census Bureau will run up the costs with customized computers and 480,000 temporary employees.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The United States is falling all over itself to help the new and improved Poland, and as usual, U.S. help means U.S. money.

The United States is like an overworked parent who spoils the children with gifts instead of quality time. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter says Poland needs something more than money. It needs Western expertise.

We agree. Long after the money is gone (and we anticipate that won't take very long) advice and instruction will still be around.

This year, resolve to stand up, act like a citizen

If you're in the market for a few New Year's Resolutions, I have a few suggestions.

1. This year, vote against every incumbent office holder who has served two or more terms. Do it at the local, state and federal level and without regard for whether they are liberal, conservative, Democrat or Republican.

Charley Reese

There are several reasons why this is a good resolution for all Americans to make. One, the present crop have mismanaged our affairs. No doubt about that. Secondly, we have developed a pernicious breed of professional politicians who do nothing all their lives but occupy public office. This was not the intent of our forefathers and it is not politically healthy.

The professional politician first of all, since re-election is ever his top priority, establishes ties to the special interests and to the place where he sits in office, rather than to the people back home he allegedly represents. You can see this because virtually all of them, when finally ousted, elect to live where they served, not back in their home districts. He is inevitably a demagogue.

Third, a resounding turnover of incumbents will send a message to all politicians and to the political establishment that the American people are fed up with being treated like sheep — taxed and otherwise ignored between elections and manipulated by professional soap salesmen during the elections.

Fourth, there is no danger that the replacements could mismanage our affairs any worse than the present bunch of incumbents. That is impossible.

Fifth, experience in public office is no virtue. What is learned is not how to benefit the public but how to stay in office by bamboozling the public. Two terms is more than enough for any citizen to serve in public office. We are not a nation of dunces with only a handful qualified to hold public office. Anybody with common sense can do it and do it well.

2. Read the Declaration of Independence and resolve to act like what you are — a free and equal citizen of a republic who neither looks up to nor down upon any other citizen, whose rights are a gift of God, whose loyalty is to the Constitution and not to party or politicians.

Like the poet Longfellow's village smithy, the American citizen looks everyone square in the eye. No one, by virtue of birth, office or bank account, is better than anyone else and no American should ever act in a craven or fearful or supplicating manner before a public office or bureaucrat. We do not approach our elected officials, hat in hand, like some peasant before the plantation owner. We come as equals, one citizen to another, and those who take from the public purse for their paychecks are our servants, not our masters. Beyond common courtesy, due any citizen, we owe them nothing. They owe us the same common courtesy.

By the Eternal God, as old Andy Jackson would put it, if the American Revolution means anything, it means that no American citizen shall live in fear of his own government.

3. Resolve to become an active citizen. Exercise your rights. Those who would hijack our government to use it for their own purposes count on public apathy. They count on people not informing themselves. They count on people not speaking up. They count on people being too timid to confront them.

This government, from the village council to the White House, belongs to the American people and exists for no purpose other than to serve them. And we, being heirs of a revolution, have a right to run it and if it abuses us, overthrow it.

Let us reverse the unhealthy present situation. Let us make it dangerous to be a criminal, difficult to be an incumbent, and a matter of enormous pride to be a citizen. Let us insist that no insult, injury or affront — domestic or foreign — go unanswered. We are 240 million and we can try and fire public officials indefinitely until we get the ones we want.

'80s 'GWTW' could have been cracked classic

As movie lovers celebrate the 50th anniversary of the debut of "Gone with the Wind," I was wondering what a modern version of the classic might be like.

"GWTW," of course, was set in Atlanta during the Civil War. But what if Margaret Mitchell had written the novel that became the movie in the '80s instead of the '30s?

Lewis Grizzard

Perhaps she could have made the setting Atlanta during the war on drugs.

Rhett Butler is a crack dealer. Scarlett O'Hara is a hooker.

Rhett is sitting at a sleazo bar drinking tequila shooters. Scarlett is sitting at the other end of the bar in a pink leather miniskirt, painting her nails and drinking cheap wine.

Rhett asks the bartender, "Who's the chick?"

"Hooker named O'Hara," answers the bartender, Belle Watling, a large woman with tattoos.

Rhett walks over to Scarlett.

"Out of my face," says Scarlett, between chomps on her gum. "I'm taking the rest of the night off."

Rhett sits down anyway. Drinks four more tequila shooters and throws up on Scarlett's leather miniskirt, just before passing out.

Scarlett goes through his pockets and finds a wad of Ben Franklins, invests them wisely and opens a residential real estate firm.

Rhett comes to on the floor of the bar, sells some more crack, then goes into porno films and starts making millions.

One day, he decides he needs a new house. He looks in the telephone book, finds the number of a real estate firm and makes an appointment.

It's been many years, and he has no idea he's about to be shown a house by the ex-hooker, O'Hara. She doesn't know her new client is the guy she rolled in a sleazo bar.

"Haven't I seen this guy before," Scarlett asks herself upon meeting Rhett in her office.

"Why am I suddenly sleepy and feel like throwing up?" Rhett asks himself.

Scarlett shows Rhett a house that includes 7bds, mdn kitn, fplace, wlk-in clsts, and pool.

"It's a steal at $2.2 mil," says Scarlett, smelling a hefty fee.

"Sold," says Rhett.

A few weeks later Rhett shows up at the closing in a large truck filled with hundred dollar bills to pay for the house.

Just then Scarlett recognizes him.

"You're the guy who threw up on my leather miniskirt in the sleazo bar," she exclaims.

"And you're the hooker ... "

"Yes, yes," Scarlett continues. "I'm sorry I took your money but it got me off the streets and into that Mercedes parked outside. How can I ever repay you?"

Rhett says, "Marry me and star in my porno films."

Scarlett agrees, but when she turns 40 she's washed up, so Rhett kicks her out of the house.

"But wherever will I go?" asks Scarlett.

"Frankly, my dear," replies Rhett, "I don't give a (something appropriate for the '80s)," slams the door in her face and goes back to taping the torrid love scene involving 11 participants that is taking place in one of the 7 bds of his house — and the story ends there.

I'm still not sure who would play Scarlett in the modern version of the "Gone with the Wind" movie, but I do know who I'd like to see play Belle Watling, the tattooed bartender, and Rhett.

Roseanne Barr and Rob Lowe.

Marty Gilmore plays nightly at My Place piano bar in Rodeway Inn

Marty Gilmore, an accomplished Midland musician, entertains with all types of popular music at the My Place piano bar in the Rodeway Inn, 3601 West Wall.

Get in the mood for music with Marty Gilmore at Midland's only piano bar, My Place Lounge. My Place is located in the lobby of the Rodeway Inn at 3601 West Wall. Marty's talents can be heard each evening from 8 p.m. until midnight.

No matter what kind of music you like, you can count on Marty to know it and perform it brilliantly. She is well-versed in easy listening, country and western, Latin, jazz, rock, classical, blues, ragtime, stride and boogie and rhythm tunes. Just about anything the audience requests — today's favorites as well as yesterday's memories — are all in Marty's repertoire.

To name a few from each category, easy listening specialties are As Time Goes By, New York, New York, Days of Wine and Roses and After the Lovin'.

Country and western music fans will enjoy Amarillo By Morning, Don't it Make My Brown Eyes Blue, Tennessee Waltz, Crazy and All of Me.

Followers of ragtime music will want to hear Marty perform The Entertainer, Sunflower Slow Rag, Something Doing and Combination March.

Classical music enthusiasts will want to request such tunes as Chopin's Nocturne, Brahms' Intermezzo, Beethoven's Sonata in G Minor, Chopin's Raindrop Prelude and Bach's Two Part Invention.

Stride, blues and boogie and rhythm music fans will want to hear Marty's renditions of Route 66, Old Time Rock and Roll, Ain't Misbehavin', Honeysuckle Rose, New Orleans Blues, Uptown Blues and Bourbon Street Saturday Night.

Marty Gilmore has been playing the piano since she was two-years-old. She received private classical training from age six through her high school graduation. In recognition of her outstanding level of performance in the International Music Guild and music competitions, she received a college scholarship and attended West Texas State University for further studies in classical and jazz performance.

Since then, Marty has played in restaurants and clubs as a professional artist from Ruidoso to New Orleans. She has been active in the West Texas area since 1980, performing publicly and privately for clubs, parties, fashion shows, weddings and receptions. In addition, Marty contributes freely for festivals, senior citizens and other non-profit charitable organizations.

This talented performer also has two bands of her own, books talent for the MusicMakers Agency, is an audio engineer, church pianist and organist and an officer in the Midland chapter of the Musicians Club.

She also teaches theory and sight reading on guitar and piano, accompanies band and orchestra students and writes for studio, radio and TV jingles.

You probably have heard Marty before as she has worked for the Plaza Club, Greentree Country Club, Ranchland Hills Country Club, the Hilton, and the Holiday Inn Country Villa, to name just a few.

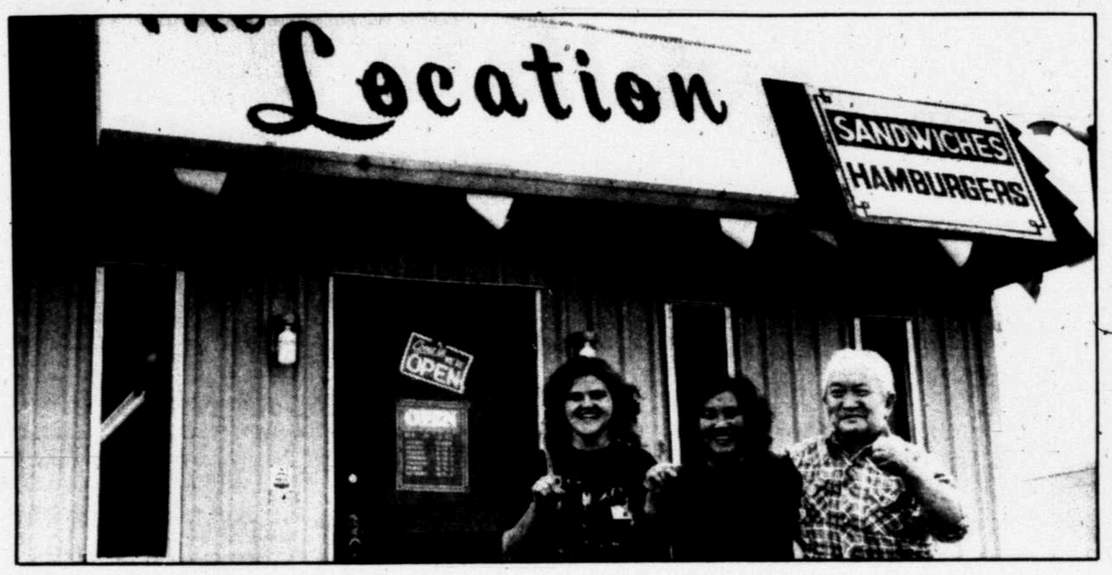

Walk into My Place and you'll find a friendly, relaxed, neighborhood establishment owned and operated by long-time Midlander James Stahlbaum. He brings more than 40 years of hotel experience to My Place, most recently as manager of The Pub in the old Sheraton hotel.

In fact, he has recreated the flavor and atmosphere of The Pub, and the concept has been a huge success. My Place has been a consistently popular Midland lounge for seven years.

In addition to a full service bar, food is available from the Rodeway Inn restaurant menu.

So stop by My Place to hear Marty each evening or to relax and enjoy a moment with friends. My Place Lounge opens at 8 a.m. and is located in the lobby of the Rodeway Inn, 3601 West Wall.

Iran fighting 'baby boom'

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's government is intensifying a birth control program — despite opposition from radicals — because the country's fast-growing population is imposing strains on a struggling economy.

"If the Islamic Republic's government does not implement proper and swift plans for controlling population growth in Iran, future generations will definitely face severe social and economic problems," Tehran's Kayhan International newspaper warned recently.

"Can we be proud of a nation of hungry Moslems who have to beg the infidels of the world for charity?" declared Mohammed Yazdi, a member of the 12-member Council of Guardians, a legislative watchdog body.

Iran has one of the highest birth rates in the world, between 3.5 and 4 percent a year.

Before the 1979 Islamic revolution, Iran had about 35 million people. Last month, the government's chief statistician, Majid Shamshidi, said the population had reached 55 million.

Experts estimate that by the year 2010, Iran will have 140 million people. They warn that unless something is done soon to curb the birth rate and rapidly expand the economy, the country faces a major social explosion.

Havel says Communist rule ruined economy, environment

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Vaclav Havel fiercely attacked the toppled Communist regime in his first speech as president, saying it ravaged the economy and environment. The former political prisoner also announced a sweeping amnesty.

Havel

Havel reaffirmed his commitment to free elections and a free market in the New Year's speech to the nation. He urged the Dalai Lama and Pope John Paul II to visit and called for full diplomatic ties with the Vatican and Israel.

The once-banned playwright, elected by Parliament on Friday, flew to East Berlin today on his first trip abroad in two decades. He met with Communist Premier Hans Modrow and President Manfred Gerlach, who like Havel is a non-Communist who rose to power on a wave of reform sweeping Eastern Europe.

Afterward, Havel gave hesitant endorsement to German reunification, saying a peaceful democracy "can be as large as it wants." He was to travel to Munich, West Germany, later in the day to see Chancellor Helmut Kohl and President Richard von Weizsaecker.

On Monday, the vivid language of his speech contrasted with the bland style of his discredited predecessors.

"Out of gifted and sovereign people, the (Communist) regime made us little screws in a monstrously big, rattling and stinking machine. We have become morally sick," Havel said in the broadcast address. "Our country does not flourish. ... we have the worst environment in Europe."

Is Communist Party 'dead' in Romania?

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — An official in the new government declared Sunday that the Communist Party is dead and will not be allowed to take control as the country moves toward democracy in the new year.

Also Sunday Romania's interim president, Ion Iliescu, abolished the death penalty, saying that the late Nicolae Ceausescu and his wife were "the last persons that deserved this fate." The couple was executed a week ago.

Iliescu, in a New Year's address, also reaffirmed the nation's commitment to political pluralism and reintroduced the concept of private ownership.

In other developments, the Agerpres news agency reported that the former head of the dreaded Securitate secret police had been detained, and army units continued to search for Securitate holdouts loyal to Ceausescu.

But there were no reports of major clashes as Romanians celebrated their first free New Year's Eve in decades.

One newspaper carried a warning from police asking holiday merrymakers not to use fireworks and noisemakers in the capital, where the streets were filled with nervous soldiers armed with automatic weapons.

Hungarian television reported that an assailant it did not identify stabbed Ceausescu's son, Nicu, immediately after he was shown on Romanian television Dec. 22.

The assailant was arrested while the younger Ceausescu underwent an operation for his stomach wound "which was successful," Hungarian TV said.

Nicu Ceausescu was the Communist Party chief in the Transylvania town of Sibiu until the revolution that ousted his father. He was one of dozens of Ceausescu family members who were given positions of power.

Deputy Foreign Minister Corneliu Bogdan, one of the members of the government that took over after Ceausescu's overthrow Dec. 22, told reporters Sunday there is no danger of Communists gaining the upper hand again.

"The Communist Party is dead," Bogdan said, adding that party members are a minority in the current government, which will run the country until elections planned in April.

Bogdan did not say how many Communists were in the temporary leadership. But he said their expertise was needed.

"I was deceived," Bogdan said of his own membership in the party. "I will pay for it," he added without elaboration.

He said said Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze would visit Jan. 5 or 6, and said "all possibilities are alive" for cooperation with the Soviet Union.

Iliescu, in comments carried by all state media, told the nation's 23 million people that despite stubborn resistance by pro-Ceausescu forces, "the revolution has triumphed and will remain unvanquishable."

Local Romanians' kin unhurt in revolution

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Midland resident Florian Stavrica's 2½-week wait to find out whether his relatives died in Romania's bloody revolution ended late Monday.

Stavrica, who moved to Midland from Romania six years ago, contacted his 44-year-old brother and 77-year-old father by telephone about 8 p.m. Neither had been hurt in the uprising which overran the Communist government.

"His first words were that the Antichrist was dead," Stavrica, 42, said of his brother. "Both of them are hoping to visit me very soon."

Stavrica, an electronic equipment repairman in the Region 18 Education Service Center, had tried unsuccessfully since the revolution ignited to telephone his relatives. However, lines have been jammed, he said.

Stavrica's wife, Lucia, said the relatives were reluctant to reveal the extent of their participation in the revolt.

"They're still afraid to talk freely," said Mrs. Stavrica, 37. "The brother didn't give very clear information. The people just want to see everything settle down, and after that they'll talk."

Although removed from the fighting, the Stavrica family has not been content to simply watch the events on television.

The family, including three children, traveled to Dallas on Dec. 22 to join about 50 other Romanians in a show of support for the ousting of former Romanian leader Nicolae Ceausescu.

Braving bitterly cold temperatures, the protesters waved American flags in front of the Earle Cabell Federal Building.

The Stravicas said they have mixed feelings about the revolution, but said it was the only way to achieve freedom in that country.

"The Romanian people have the will to switch to a democracy," said Stavrica, a Bucharest native.

Stavrica said he and his family wanted to leave Romania in 1981 so they could live as Christians without fear.

Needing an American sponsor, Stavrica contacted the Rev. Daniel Vestal of the First Baptist Church of Midland.

Years earlier, the Stavricas had joined the Baptist church in Bucharest after they had met Vestal, who is now living in Atlanta, and other missionaries from the Midland church.

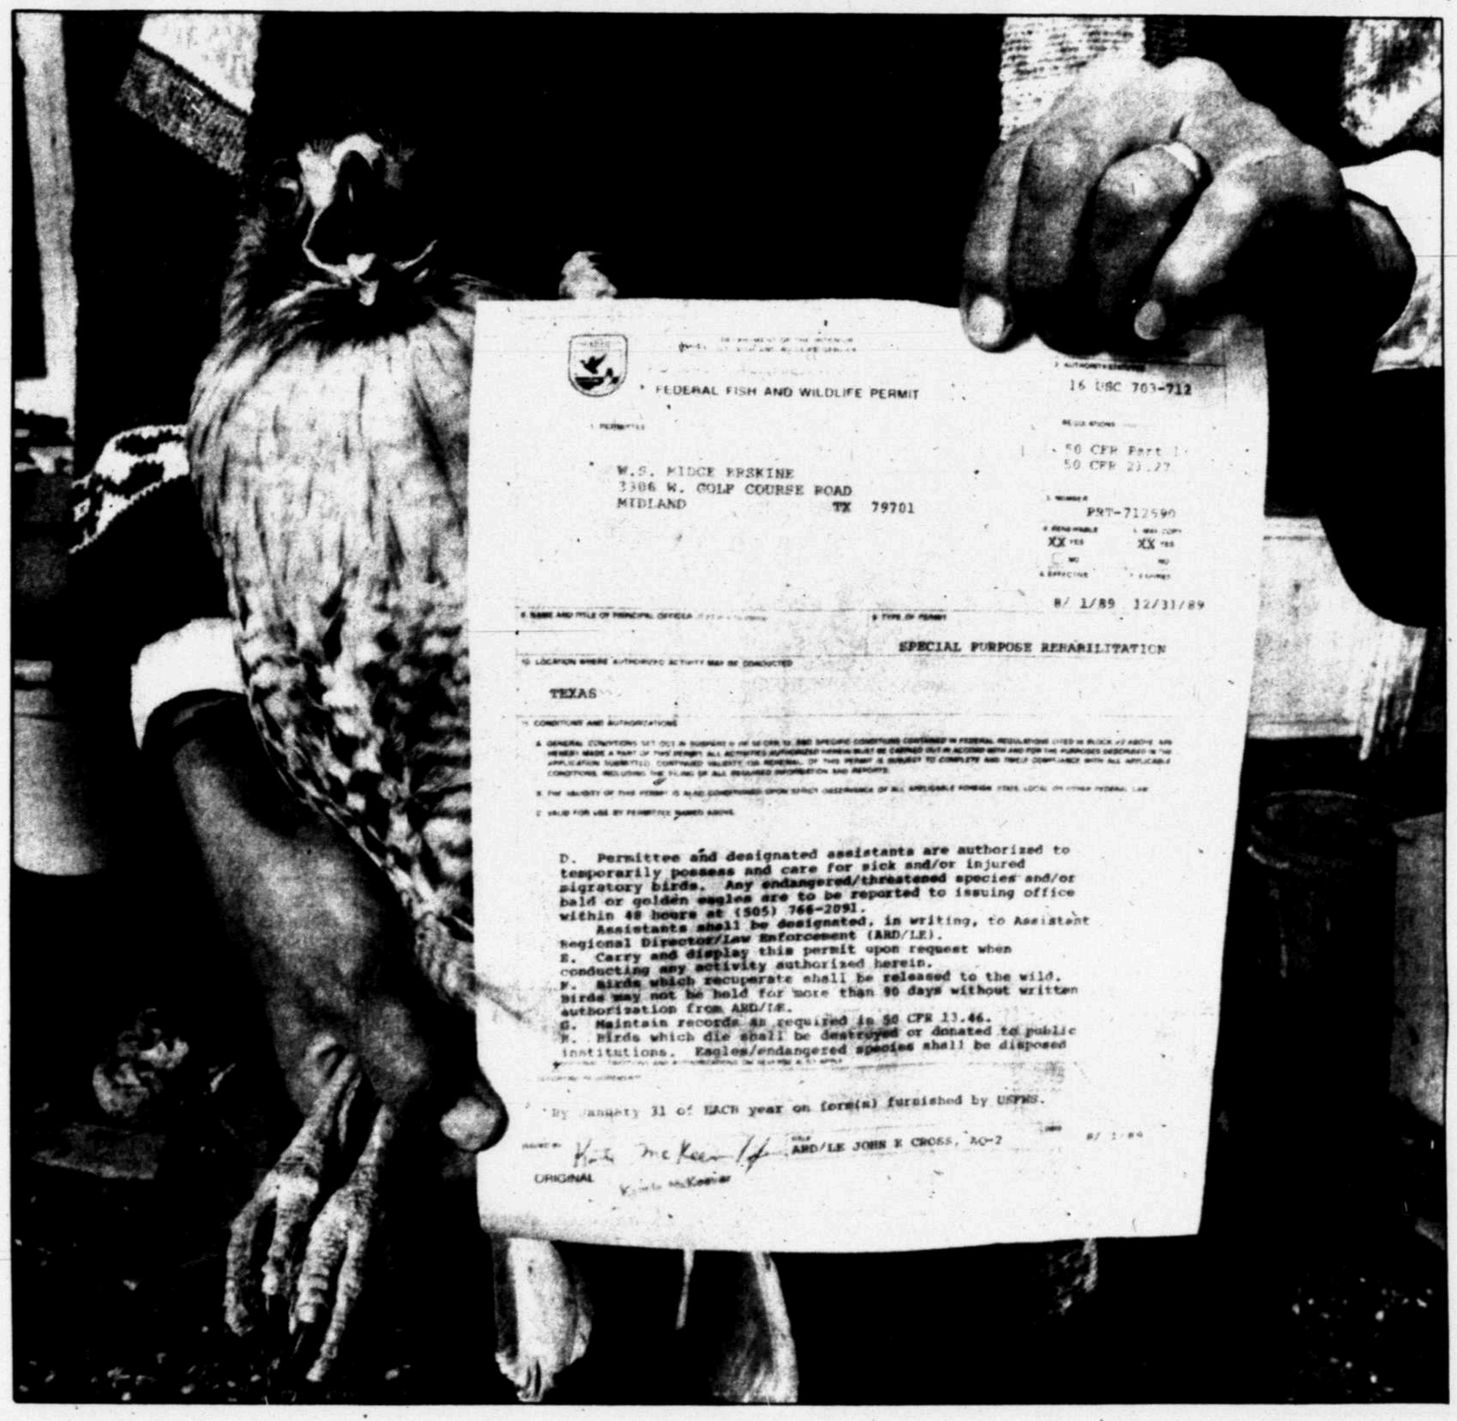

After two years of going through a complicated application process, the Stavricas moved to Midland in June 1983.

Stavrica said he sometimes wishes he was wielding a rifle back in his home country.

"Many people here say I was lucky I wasn't over there," he said. "I said I should be over there to fight the Communists."

Midland bird rehabilitator in flap over fee

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland bird rehabilitator Midge Erskine holds an injured hawk while she displays a U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service permit that allows her legally to take care of migratory birds voluntarily and at her own expense. The permit fee is $25 per year.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

It may be "only" $25.

Even so, if it were but a penny or a million bucks, Midge Erskine would still view as "asinine" the federal government's requirement that she and other migratory-bird rehabilitators each pay a $25 annual fee to care for sick, injured, and disabled birds at their own expense.

Mrs. Erskine views her voluntary role as a federally licensed bird caretaker as not only a "service" to the birds, including threatened and endangered species, but to the national-bird resource and, particularly, as a service to the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service (FWS) that requires the fee.

"It costs money," she said in defiance, "and we get no help from the state or federal (governments)."

The fee is a "personal insult," she said. Those who dedicate their efforts to rehabilitate birds, including eagles, hawks, owls, turkey vultures and mockingbirds and other songbirds, and return the survivors to the wild now are charged the same fee that is charged others, including taxidermists, who "make money off of wildlife," she said.

"That seems to me not only cold-hearted but asinine," Mrs. Erskine said of the fee.

The fee is levied against falconers, raptor propagators and salvagers, who collect carcasses of migratory birds for educational purposes.

Midland taxidermist Karl Brosig said he doesn't "mind paying" the fee. "It's not any big deal — 25 bucks isn't a drop in the bucket."

He is required to have the FWS migratory-bird permit to mount migratory birds such as ducks, geese and cranes but doesn't need the permit to mount pheasants and non-migratory birds.

"Any bird of prey, we can't do," Brosig said. "The only birds we can do are game birds — ducks, geese, pheasants."

Bird rehabilitators donate their time and money to bird causes.

"YOU CAN'T compute costs," including the labor and skill Mrs. Erskine and her husband, geologist-inventor Woody Erskine, put into the birds, Mrs. Erskine said. "You can add up what you spend out of pocket" for bird food and other expenses, including traveling costs to rescue birds. "I handled over 400 birds last year."

The rebel in Mrs. Erskine decided not to pay the fee, which would mean loss of her license and confiscation of the migratory birds in her care.

Instead, Wade Ingrham's Ingrham Underhammer Rifle Company is paying the fee for her.

"I was trying to get it (the fee) from an oil company," Mrs. Erskine said, "but I wasn't successful."

She had wanted a petroleum company to pay the fee to show major support for bird rehabilitators and to reflect the conscious concern many oil companies now have for the environment.

Ingrham volunteered to pay the fee for Mrs. Erskine.

"She does so much for wildlife," said Ingrham, who shares Mrs. Erskine's concern for birds and the environment. "And if there's some way I could help her, great."

The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service recognizes services performed by Mrs. Erskine and other bird rehabilitators, including the 300 in Texas.

But the service is more for the birds and out of a "labor of love" than for the government, according to FWS Special Agent-spokesman Michael Sutton of Arlington, Va. The fee is to help defray costs of the FWS for monitoring permit programs.

THE FEE IS "somewhat controversial nowadays," Sutton said, because "rehabilitators, in particular, feel that they are giving a service, and they are. No doubt about it.

"They are doing a service to the migratory-bird resource of North America," Sutton said. "However, it's not a service that the government intends to subsidize. And the rehabilitation of migratory birds is a permitted activity just like falconry or any other. People do it because they enjoy it ... for their own pleasure. It's a labor of love for many rehabbers.

"This is not a service that the government is asking them to perform," Sutton said.

Some people, including many wildlife biologists, Sutton said, "question whether rehabilitation of common species does any good at all for the populations in the wild." That includes the more common raptors, he said.

"Many people question whether it would be more humane to save those birds' lives or to euthanize them," he said. "The government is not asking these people to rehabilitate birds."

But in the case of endangered species, such as bald eagles, peregrine falcons and other rare birds, the FWS works with rehabilitators as "government volunteers" to ensure the birds' survivals. In those cases, fees are waived, Sutton said.

"But for the common species which make up the bulk of birds that are rehabilitated, the primary reason for the rehabilitation is the enjoyment of the permitees and the preservation of the migratory-bird resource."

The federal Migratory Bird Treaty Act makes it unlawful for anyone to possess any migratory bird without a permit, Sutton said.

"SO, FOR whatever reason, if someone wants to handle (migratory) birds, they have to have a federal permit and usually a state permit," he said.

The fee, Sutton said, is to help defray cost of administering the program and keeping track of records and reports. Rehabilitators are to submit annual reports which detail birds in their care and their dispositions.

"It's just like a driver's license," Sutton explained. "You pay money for a driver's license whether you drive for profit or for pleasure. Fees are pretty much universal nowadays."

Mrs. Erskine disagrees with Sutton's stance that most bird rehabilitators work with birds primarily for their own pleasure and not as a service to the FWS.

"That's not true. It is a service to the government," Mrs. Erskine said.

"Who are they going to get to take care of them? When they have an endangered species, they depend on us to take care of them. That's a service to the government. You don't do it for your own pleasure."

Sutton's attitude is "archaic," Mrs. Erskine said.

Many severely sick or injured birds that cannot be returned to the wild are euthanized, Mrs. Erskine said.

But without bird rehabilitators, certain species would be extinct.

"They wouldn't have peregrine falcons, whooping cranes or condors today if people like us weren't around," Mrs. Erskine said.

Today, she said, because of the "drastic decline" in bird populations, "every bird is important. We have many, many birds that should already be on the endangered list. We have just a drastic reduction in numbers," including birds of prey.

"We don't have any common raptors today," Mrs. Erskines. "They are still being shot and poisoned. Each bird is vitally important."

IN HER BACK yard, where the food supply is ample, there has been a marked drop in wintering species, Mrs. Erskine said.

"If you destroy the (bird) habitats in Central and South America, you are destroying the bird population that is going to migrate back" to North America, Mrs. Erskine. "That's the breeding populations that are being destroyed."

Midland veterinarian Dr. Steve Betton, who does volunteer work on ailing birds, said that some bird rehabilitators take on the work as "their personal endeavor" and derive satisfaction in caring for birds.

"But, there are also just a whole lot of people like Midge (Erskine) and some of the others who are not in this for the glory and the glamor," Betton said.

"They are doing it for the true concern for the environment and a belief that these creatures are worth saving."

Betton said that if more and more people "don't take care to conserve our environment and our species, we are going to find ourselves without (many species) one day."

Bird rehabilitators, such as the Erskines, could not be rightly accused of being on a "joy trip" with the birds. "Midge works too hard," Betton said. "Midge and Woody drive all over the country picking up endangered species."

"It seems to me, if they (FWS) have a program that is set up, Midge is part of it," Betton said.

But Mrs. Erskine said she gets "zero" benefits from any FWS program for her efforts in rehabilitating migratory birds.

Another bird rehabilitator, Helen Bigelow, 58, of Anthony, N.M., said that the $25 fee is "not fair. It's an injustice" stemming from Washington, D.C., and not from the FWS agents in the field, she said.

"It's in Washington where the problem is. It's not these (field) people."

But if her fee is not paid, she will lose the privilege of taking in migratory birds, including raptors.

"If we don't, they'll come in and confiscate everything," Mrs. Bigelow said. "I've got one hawk that I've had for 13 years. I can't have that happen to my birds, either. I just can't allow that."

Amarillo animal-rights activist Judy Bonner, along with her dog Misty, was one of about 15 activists that marched in front of the Amarillo federal building Monday to protest the funding of animal research done by Dr. John Orem, chief investigator in sleep research at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center in Lubbock.

Animal rights activists hold New Year's Day protests

AMARILLO (AP) — About 15 local animal-rights activists carrying pets marched in protest to a Texas Tech researcher's use of lab animals.

Karen Green, executive director for the Amarillo Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and local organizer of the march, said Monday's march was part of a statewide protest.

She said protesters in about 10 Texas cities marched in front of federal buildings for about an hour Monday to protest the federal funding of animal research by Dr. John Orem, chief investigator in sleep research at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center in Lubbock.

Protesters in Amarillo gathered in front of the federal courts building downtown.

"We were protesting today because this is the first day of 1990," Ms. Green said. Protesters are calling for the end to federal funding of research that People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals claims is cruel to animals.

PETA, a Washington-based animal rights group, organized Monday's marches.

Ms. Green said Orem has received almost $1 million in federal grants during the last seven years.

Rankin kin 'shook up' by deaths of 6 in car mishap

MARFA (AP) — Six relatives killed in Texas' second-worst traffic accident of 1989 were returning from visit to a doctor in Mexico, relatives said.

The family members and a pickup driver died in a head-on collision in a remote area 27 miles south of Marfa Sunday.

"We're pretty shook up," said Able Armendariz, brother of Richard L. Armendariz of Rankin, who, with five other relatives, was killed in the crash.

Marcos Gomez Ramos, 22, of Kermit, was the only occupant of the pickup that struck the car driven by Armendariz, said Department of Public Safety troopers.

Other victims in the car were Armendariz's wife Noe Armendariz Molinar, 27, and daughter Vanessa Armendariz, 8, both of Rankin. Also killed was Maria Molinar Armendariz, 55, the mother of Noe Armendariz Molinar, and her grandchildren, Lizett Armendariz, 4, and Luis Armendariz Jr., 10, all of Odessa.

Hugh N. Frenzel

Funeral services for Hugh N. Frenzel of Midland have been set for 1 p.m. Thursday at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Allen Whitman officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Frenzel

He died Monday morning at a local hospital.

Frenzel was born April 21, 1918, to Harry and Iva Frenzel in Madison, Wis. He graduated with honors from La Grange High School in Illinois. He attended Lyons Township Junior College and then transferred to the University of Wisconsin, where he received his bachelor of science degree in geology in 1940. In 1941 he received his master's degree in geology.

He married Doroty Chambers on July 30, 1945, in Minature, Neb. They met in Las Vegas, Nev. during his military years.

He was drafted into the U.S. Army in the summer of 1941 and was among the first to be attached to the newly formed Army Air Corps. He spent the major portion of his service as a gunnery instructor at the Las Vegas Army Air Field in Nevada. He was awarded the Legion of Merit for developing a realistic course of instruction for aerial gunners.

Following his discharge in 1945, he joined Standard Oil of Texas in Carlsbad, N.M. In 1948 he was transferred to the Midland office where he was assigned to assist John Emery Adams, a pioneer Permian Basin geologist who was later to become president of American Association of Petroleum Geologists. In 1950, he was promoted to the position of district geologist, the youngest one in the company's history.

During his tenure with the company he — along with other colleagues — published several articles that were widely acclaimed for their insight on the complex depositional systems in the Permian Basin.

In 1952, he joined Ryan, Hayes & Burke where he remained until its disbandment two years later. He became associated with Ralph Lowe, a wildcatter, for the next 20 years, serving as chief geologist during the last 12 years.

While with Lowe, Frenzel's work resulted in the find of an oil and gas field in the Gladiola Field in Lea County, N.M., and the Indian Basin in Eddy County, N.M. From 1974 to 1981 he was chief geologist and vice president of Flag Redfern Oil Co. and from 1981 to 1983 he served as vice president of Bison Exploration. He became an independent consulting geologist in 1983.

He was a past president, honorary life member and Dedicated Service recipient of the West Texas Geological Society. He was a charter member, past president and honorary member of the Permian Basin section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists and was a Fellow in the Geological Society of America.

Frenzel had been active in AAPG since 1946. He helped change the Southwestern Association of Geological Societies to the Southwestern Section of AAPG and was its president in 1971-72.

He was awarded the first John Emery Adams Memorial Award in 1985 for distinguished service to the Southwestern Section and to the profession of petroleum geology.

He served as chairman of the AAPG's House of Delegates in 1974-75. He was a candidate for vice president of AAPG in 1980 and was awarded an honorary life membership in 1982.

In 1984, he convinced the West Texas Geological Society to form and study the feasibility of developing a nonprofit geological library. The Midland Energy Library became a reality that year and Frenzel had served as its president since the inception.

In 1989 he received the Sidney Powers Memorial Award, given in recognition of distinguished and outstanding contributions to and achievements in petroleum geology.

He was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, Arthur C. Frenzel of Hot Springs, Ark., H. Robert Frenzel of Arlington and Thomas N. Frenzel of Dallas; one daughter, Ann F. Clinton of Houston; and four grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the West Texas Geology Foundation, P.O. Box 1595, Midland, Texas, 79702.

Leda H. Beatty

Graveside services for Leda H. Beatty, 80, of Midland, are scheduled for 11 a.m. Wednesday at Fairmont Cemetery in San Angelo. Local arrangements are with Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Sunday at a local hospital.

She was born Nov. 4, 1909, in Unionville, Mo., to Floyd and Neva Hennon. She married Milton Turner Beatty on Nov. 24, 1932, in Dallas. They owned a bread business in San Angelo in the 1930s and later built a restaurant. He died in 1988; she had been in a Midland nursing home since Aug. 1989.

Survivors include two nieces, Vaudine Eldridge of Cloudcroft, N.M., and Billie Nietert of Midland; and two sisters-in-law, Wilma Beatty of San Angelo and Gladys Pevoto of Dallas.

Mattie C. Fullen

BIG SPRING — Graveside services for Mattie C. Fullen, 85, of Big Spring, were held Monday at Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring with the Rev. Bob Brown officiating. Arrangements were with Nalley, Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

She died Friday in a Big Spring hospital.

She was born in Navarro on Sept. 29, 1904, and moved to Big Spring in 1932. She was a housewife and a member of the Airport Baptist Church. Her husband, Richard Allen Fulton, died in 1978.

Survivors include two daughters, Louise Smith of Big Spring and Maxine Johnson of Kingsland; two sons, Terry Fullen of Midland and Jerry Fullen of Kermit; a sister, Bernice Evans of Littlerock, Calif.; nine grandchildrn; and 10 great-grandchildren.

Nell Krehbiel

Funeral services for Nell Krehbiel of Midland are scheduled for 11 a.m. Wednesday at St. Luke's Methodist Church with Pastor Jarrell Sharp officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Saturday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers will be Hugh Christianson, Wendell Edgell, Bill Kouns, Melvin McEuen, Gary Lane, Bob Angeuine, Harrell Green and Lewis Starritt.

Bill Bryant

Funeral services for Bill Bryant of Midland are scheduled for 3 p.m. Wednesday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Phillip Babcock of Parklea Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery.

He died Friday in a Big Spring hospital.

Norman Boyd

Graveside services for Norman Boyd of Morgan City, La., are scheduled for 4 p.m. Thursday at Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa.

Local arrangements are with Ellis Funeral Home.

Mildred Irene Brose

Funeral arrangements for Mildred Irene Brose of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral home.

She died Sunday at her home.

Farmers' daughters rebuild heritage with their own hands

By ELIZABETH KAUFMAN

"We found a house which has a remarkable resemblance to our (original) home. We plan to reconstruct our home and barnyard area. We want it to look as much as our very own 1930 house as possible. It has a little bathroom. We'll have to tear it out."
— Dana Woodward, farmer's daughter

SHALLOWATER, Texas (AP) — Dana and Elleine Woodward are not architects. Nor are they historians. They are farmers' daughters who want to revive their experiences of growing up through their dream of a farming heritage center.

And they plan to do it in their back yard.

Their blueprints are 60-plus years of memories gleaned on a 160-acre farm they have lived and worked on since 1930. The retired schoolteachers don't stand firm on what their center will include, but they are full of highflying ideas, some of which already have been grounded — including a museum, a harness room and a bunkhouse decorated in '30s memorabilia.

In their bluejeans and work boots, the white-haired, blue-eyed sisters have taken a physically active role from the beginning. With the help of their "hired man," Randel Gartin, the ladies put up the museum's white aluminum siding.

And they re-roofed the harness room themselves, a small building which used to be attached to a barn destroyed in a 1939 tornado.

Although their idea is anchored in their family's appliances and keepsakes, the Woodwards have no intention of making their chunk of history a private one. They intend to round up a Shallowater posse to tackle the task.

Dana's idea is to get Shallowater farmers, in their free time, to get them lumber from decaying, abandoned area buildings.

"These farmsteads have been designated as eyesores in the area. They are old, rundown buildings. It shows a lack of progress and is detrimental to the upcoming of the community," Dana said.

Also, "We're trying to get former students who are kind of carpenters and have a day of fun, fellowship and work," Elleine added.

Dana, 65, and Elleine, 67, are two of only a handful who have stayed on their own farms, though they rent out a good portion of the 160 acres. The center portion of the house they live in is their original homestead, and it is full of remnants of their past.

Pieces they relinquished to the harness room and bunkhouse include a laundry stove "to put your tub on to heat your water," and their old bedroom heater.

A bag on the bunkhouse wall is Dana's diaper bag.

"It was leather," she says of the dusty, graying bag. "I guess it still is. They called 'em hipping bags. I don't know why. It used to be a doctor's bag."

The family's old library table is here, and under the quilt-covered bed is what the sisters, in between chuckles, call "the pottie."

"Well, we didn't want to chase down to the outhouse when it was real cold outside," Elleine explained.

The kerosene stove, a piece of white furniture, was bought at the county fair for their mother by their brother in 1934 after he got a job at the gin and made some money. It used propane and butane.

"It was just like bein' in the city," Dana said.

Kerosene lamps and a yellow rocking chair add a pioneer flavor to the room, whose hardwood floor — huge slabs of wood nailed together — is covered by multicolored oval rugs.

"We found a house which has a remarkable resemblance to our (original) home. We plan to reconstruct our home and barnyard area. We want it to look as much as our very own 1930 house as possible. It has a little bathroom. We'll have to tear it out," Dana said.

Although so much is still up in the air — like ideas for a one-room barbershop, a quilting display, a blacksmith shop and restaurant, and a barnyard complete with animals — the sisters' goal is to complete the museum by the end of next summer. The date, Dana said, was selected to coincide with Lubbock County's 100th anniversary.

Toughman fight pushed back by Mattox's suit

AUSTIN (AP) — Fights between inexperienced boxers for the Austin Toughman title have been pushed back from January to at least June because of a lawsuit filed by the Texas attorney general's office.

A hearing in the case is scheduled for June 25 in state court. Attorney General Jim Mattox's office persuaded a judge last month to temporarily ban the contests, claiming the fights are illegal and dangerous.

The Austin Toughman contests were planned for Jan. 25 and 27. Toughman contests scheduled in Lubbock, Fort Worth, El Paso, Corpus Christi, Odessa, Waco, San Antonio and Amarillo have been canceled.

The attorney general's suit, filed Dec. 6 in Austin, claims that Adore Ltd. Inc., the Michigan company promoting the contests, violated the Texas Boxing Act and rules and regulations of the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation.

Officials with Adore, based in Bay City, Mich., said Mattox's office is being unfair because the company had been given approval for the fights by an employee of the licensing agency.

The attorney general's office said the state employee illegally authorized Adore's regulations in September — during a time of transition in the department.

FAMILY

The family was returning to Odessa and Rankin from a visit to a doctor in Ojinaga, Mexico, across from Presidio, Texas, about 34 miles from the accident site.

Richard Armendariz, 29, was the 13th of 14 children and a maintenance worker for the city of Rankin. He and his brother Able did handy work for the community of 1,300 55 miles southeast of Midland.

"He was very well known here," said his sister Aida from her home in Rankin. "He was the baby of the boys."

"He drove the backhoe, laid lines, sewer, water," Able said. "Me and him worked together for 10 years."

The accident, DPS trooper Mike Campbell said Monday, occurred after Ramos' pickup swerved into the path of the Armendariz car in a curve.

"He came around a curve there and started to lose control on the curve and slipped into the lane," said Campbell, who investigated the accident. "The other vehicle was attempting to slow down and go to the side of the road to avoid him, but the pickup was going so fast."

Investigators were checking for alcohol use, but test results will not be known for at least two weeks.

Campbell said a hydraulic device had to be used to recover the bodies from the Armendariz car.

"It's the worst (accident) I've worked down here and I've been here 22 years," he said. "There was quite a mess."

The state's worst accident in 1989 occurred in September when a truck struck a school bus near Alton. The bus careened into an abandoned water pit and 21 students drowned or died later of injuries.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Step into the '90s on the right foot — become a community volunteer. Here are a few of the opportunities currently available at the Volunteer Center of Midland.

■ Want to learn everything about Midland? Put your organizational skills to good use by compiling facts and data for an information and referral service. Track down the sources of everything anyone could want to know about the Tall City and help refer individuals to these services through a telephone hotline. Training will be provided.

■ Back the community's efforts to enforce child support. Volunteers are needed to perform limited legal research, data entry or other clerical duties for four hours a week during daytime hours. Training is provided. Here's an opportunity to build or sharpen secretarial/computer skills while addressing a vital need.

■ School is back in session and help is needed. Share a few hours a week listening to youngsters read, help with homework or encourage those who are at risk of dropping out to stay in school. A once-a-week commitment in the afternoon is requested. Locations are varied.

■ Help ease the often difficult transition from job training to full-time employment by becoming a volunteer advisor. Utilize your counseling and mentor skills as you support an individual's efforts to become a productive member of our community. Hours are flexible and training is provided.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

Would-be candidates face 6 p.m. deadline

AUSTIN (AP) — The slate of several political races remained up in the air as potential state officerholders hustled to beat a 6 p.m. deadline today for the filing of candidacy papers.

Democrat Lloyd Doggett and Republican Roy Barrera Jr. contemplated races for attorney general in the March 13 primaries. Dallas businessman James Huffines, Gov. Bill Clements' appointments secretary, discussed with advisers a run for land commissioner.

Monday, State Treasurer Ann Richards filed for the Democratic nomination for governor.

"I woke up this morning and had some blackeyed peas for luck, then came downtown to file," Ms. Richards said. "There's a certain significance to beginning the new year this way."

Potter County Court-at-Law Judge Morris Overstreet said Monday he is seeking the Democratic nomination for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 2. Overstreet, 39, said he hopes to be the first black elected to the court.

"When Martin Luther King said, 'I have a dream,' he meant one day, maybe 1990, we can elect people of color and conscience to statewide office in Texas," Overstreet said, noting that a black never has been elected to statewide office in Texas.

Texas Supreme Court contender Charles Ben Howell, a Dallas appeals court judge, filed with the GOP for the seat held by retiring Justice C.L. Ray. Howell has been known to switch places on the ballot at the last minute, The Dallas Morning News reported.

The filing decisions receiving the most attention were those of Doggett, currently a Texas Supreme Court justice, and Barrera, a San Antonio lawyer who almost upset Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox in 1986.

Many Democratic leaders want their party to nominate San Antonio state Rep. Dan Morales to the post to assure the Democrats will have a Hispanic at the top of the ticket.

Democrats said they especially would like to have a Hispanic nominee for attorney general should Republicans nominate Barrera.

People close to Barrera told The News he was still seriously considering entering the race late Monday.

Meanwhile, Ms. Richards faces a spirited battle with Mattox and former Gov. Mark White for the Democratic nomination.

RIGHTS

"We feel those are tax dollars misspent," she said. "He's been doing the same research for seven years for something he admits may not be applicable to humans."

Ms. Green said PETA is not opposed to all animal research, but that the group believes Orem's research is unnecessary and inhumane to animals.

Orem's research, which uses cats, is aimed at understanding the control of respiration during sleep. The research may explain why breathing sometimes fails when a person sleeps and could conceivably lead to a the discovery of the cause of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

In July, members of the Animal Liberation Front, an underground animal rights group, broke into Orem's lab, took five cats used in sleep experiments and caused $70,000 damage.

Skiwear tints slopes with color

By CRAIG K. COLLINS
Copley News Service

From the French Alps to the Italian Dolomites, the ski slopes in Europe are ablaze with color.

Skiers there have launched a dazzling new trend in a sport where bold fashion always has been fashionable and looking good is sometimes more important than skiing well.

As a result, it's now tres chic to schuss down the piste looking as though you've just collided with a Jackson Pollack painting.

"The biggest thing that's happening in Europe is color," says Melodie Miller, a Seattle-based skiwear designer who closely tracks ski fashion in Europe. "The slopes have become a sea of color. It's spectacular."

Indeed. Ski suits radiate with fluorescent green. They glow with racy pink. They're splattered with full palettes of color. And some even harken back to psychedelia, featuring printed lyrics to songs by Bob Dylan and the Beatles.

"About 80 percent of the ski outfits are suits," says Miller. "And everyone dresses to the tee — the men, the women, the kids. Their boots match their poles, their gloves match their sunglasses and their skis match their suits."

According to Tim Reed, an account executive with Powder and Surfer magazines in San Juan Capistrano, Calif., there's a huge contrast between European and American ski fashion, even though some skiers here are beginning to show a flair for fashion:

"You see some of the wild fashions in the United States, but the American market is still more conservative. They sell a lot more navy blue, red and silver in North America. The younger skiers, though, are going for fluorescent colors. That's one of the trends we're seeing this year."

Oddly enough, the bright colors that dot the slopes in Europe can be traced directly to Southern California and the advent of snowboarding, a tremendously popular and relatively new form of skiing that resembles surfing on the snow.

"Snowboarders have influenced everything," says Reed. "They've picked up all the funky styles and colors from the surfing and skateboarding crowd. They've taken a concept like California surf wear and have emblazoned it on a ski suit."

So how is a fashion-conscious American skier to avoid showing up in St. Moritz looking conspicuously gauche in a pair of drab, navy-blue stretch pants?

According to Miller, most European skiwear is available through import in the United States and can only be found in top skiwear specialty shops. The leading lines in Europe include Elho, Bogner, Anoralp, Elesse, K2 and O'Neill.

A typical ski suit from one of these manufacturers will range from $200 to $500, with some running as high as $800.

These are prices that beg the question, "Is it worth it?"

William Kiefer, a trendy Swiss skier who dyes his hair platinum and purple to match his ski outfit, seems to think so.

"I must look good when I ski," he says on a chair lift in Saas-Fee, Switzerland. "I have fun, and I ski better. And you can't believe how many women I've met since I started wearing this."

Fashion takes new directions for New Year

By CARRIE DONOVAN

N.Y. Times News Service

The way things are shaping up for 1990, fashion is going in many directions, which is helpful for those who like variety in their choice of fashions.

Everything from Western to ethnic to modern has been mined for inspiration. It would be easy to lose your way. But with a little guidence and savvy, there will be nothing to worry about.

These suggestions may help you stay on your own course while you contemplate new routes.

Certain shifts affect all fashions. No matter what image you fancy — sporty, sophisticated, dressed up or dressed down — they apply.

Shoulder pads are smaller; sometimes there are none at all.

The finished look should still be trim, even taut, but never clinging to every curve.

Hemlines are shorter. The norm ends a bit above the knee. Dangerously mid-thigh is still OK — for the young.

Pants are more in vogue than they have been the past few seasons, and shorts will be acceptable for more than active sports.

Accessories are ever more important. Newly super-scaled earrings, bracelets, a scarf or big rings can make a dramatic difference.

Although clothes in general are getting more subdued, it would be wrong to dismiss fantasy entirely.

A touch of it — in a mad accessory or even an occasional whole get-up — lifts spirits, yours and everyone else's.

DEAR ABBY

Churches don't exist on spirit alone

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a young Lutheran minister who has just moved to a new community. I am told that a few years ago you had a wonderful answer for a reader who wrote to you complaining that every time he turned around, the church hit him up for money. You told him in no uncertain terms what the church did with all its money.

If you can locate that letter, please run it again. — WISCONSIN PREACHER

DEAR PREACHER: I located it. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: We are not overly religious people, but we do like to go to church once in a while. It seems to me that every time we turn around in church, we are hit for money. I thought religion was free. I realize that churches have to have some money, but I think it is getting to be a racket. Just what do churches do with all their money? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Even priests, ministers and rabbis must eat. Since they work full time at their tasks, the churches must support them. Staff, professional choir members and musicians must also be paid. Buildings must be maintained, heated, lighted and beautified. (And, of course, first they must be built!) Custodial staff must eat and feed their families. Most churches engage in philanthropic work (aid to the needy, missions and education); hence, they have their financial obligations.

DEAR ABBY: After reading your article on what not to give Aunt Bessie and Grandpa for Christmas, I just had to write.

Are you talking about the infirm or the old folks?

My mother is 76, and she wouldn't be caught dead in a warm-up suit.

And you say "no pets." Why not? Haven't you heard that older people with pets do better and live longer — because they have something to live for?

And how do you know what magazines someone else will enjoy? Some people don't care for Reader's Digest; others swear by it!

You suggested "homemade goodies." Have you ever tasted some people's cookies? (For health reasons, people are told to cut down on sugar, salt and butter; consequently their cookies taste like cardboard!)

Also, not everybody wants to send gift certificates or cash because then you will know how much they spent.

You suggested a box of assorted cards for them to give on special occasions, or postcards. Abby, who uses postcards for personal correspondence? If they are that hard-up, give them a change purse full of quarters so they can go to Atlantic City.

If you are going to send a care package, give them light bulbs, paper towels, toilet paper, shampoo and toothpaste.

If they are really poor, give cash so they can pay the rent, or the gas and electric bills. Thank you very much. — MARGO W., HENDERSON, NEV.

AT WIT'S END

There is a price to pay for smelling good

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Ever since a salesman came to my door one day, sprayed a foot deodorant on my sandals and the soles melted off, I haven't trusted freebies. You pay a price for them.

But I must admit I have succumbed to every perfumed strip sealed in a magazine or included in the bills that come to our house. There's not a day goes by that I am not suffering paper cuts over 50 percent of my face, neck and arms for slinging a magazine around me with the frenzy of a shotputter in the Olympic trials.

Perfume manufacturers have finally found a way to "sell the sizzle" of their product. But wait! Now the magazines are getting complaints that these strips are offensive to those allergic to perfume and are causing headaches and other reactions.

It's not easy selling illusion, fantasy and mystery. You could float Elizabeth Taylor in the Gulf of Mexico and stock it with "Passion," but what does it smell like?

I've watched Ingrid Bergman's daughter running around in a toga with a migraine mumbling "Obsession" to a cast of weird people, and I must admit I haven't a clue whether they're selling perfume or a mental health facility.

As for "Eternity," the only thing the word brings to mind is Dorothy Parker's great definition, "Eternity is a ham and two people."

I don't know that we can control the unwanted odors that permeate our daily lives. If we could, I'd probably take out the European macho who sat next to me for eight hours en route to Moscow, sans deodorant. It's an imperfect world — a world of sagging diapers, stinking subways, dogs in heat, and garbage barges that drift around the world searching for a port where everyone has clogged sinuses.

The whole world is going crazy trying to make this planet smell like everything is coming up roses. Kids' tennis shoes now have a special industrial strength deodorant all their own. You can scent your clothes as you wash and dry them. The 1990s will also see the emergence of deodorized underwear. (I do not know what that means.) There are coverups for cat litter. Every bathroom in the world smells like a pine forest.

Someday, when we can see the air, we may get back to smelling it, but for the moment, we're going to have to do the best we can. So sometimes I get stuck with an odor that is as subtle as a flea collar. Every once in a while I rub a perfumed strip over my body, and for an hour or so I am standing on a balcony overlooking a lake of swans and a deep voice beside me is whispering huskily, "How did you get a paper cut on your ear?"

Resort clothes: Brisk sales amid sunny dreams

By WOODY HOCHSWENDER
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Shipboard romance and trans-Atlantic crossings may be things of the past, but cruise or resort collections have become a consistent bright spot in tough retailing times.

Lightweight clothing in the stores at holiday time is as much a fixture as the Barbie Ferrari.

"Early selling has been excellent," said Joan Kaner, a senior vice president and fashion director for Neiman-Marcus.

"Many women feel that the most directional looks for summer come out in the resort season."

You may be thinking fur, wool and cashmere, but fashionable women are already dreaming of filmy blouses, linen skirts and short shorts.

Holiday-cruise collections have been in stores since early November, and several retailers said they have sold briskly.

Merchants tend to say that, of course, but these in-between, lightweight fashions have a kind of loopy sales logic in winter.

Resort wear, an American innovation now adopted by Paris and Milan, gives designers a testing ground for future styles and satisfies Sun Belt retailers who cannot dispose of woolens in winter.

It also provides fresh, snappy merchandise to women who don't travel but want something colorful and light to wear under heavy coats.

At Neiman-Marcus, short, slim skirts, narrow-legged pants, novelty jackets and shorts are leading the way, Ms. Kaner said.

Saks Fifth Avenue has been doing well with color-blocked dresses. Both Saks and Bergdorf Goodman have had strong sales of velours by Isaac Mizrahi. Bloomingdale's top sellers are shorts.

"All types, from hot pants to bermudas," said Kalman Ruttenstein, the store's fashion director.

"The really cold weather has sent people south, spurring sales of resort clothing."

He mentioned Calvin Klein's soft colorations — terra cotta, sand and other off-color neutrals — as important.

Macy's has been successful with jump suits by Donna Karan and Mary Ann Restivo, and simple dresses by Calvin Klein and Anne Klein, said Bruce Binder, the store's fashion director in the Northeast.

"One-piece dressing is important going forward into spring," he said.

Bowl day muddles mythical championship voting

Canes topple Crimson Tide

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Amid the turmoil and the taunting, Miami took care of business, doing what it could to secure its third national championship in seven years.

The Huricanes, ranked No.2 going into the game, beat Alabama 33-25 in the Sugar Bowl Monday night, and Notre Dame knocked off top-ranked Colorado 21-6 in the Orange Bowl.

The week began with the announcement that Miami starting offensive guard Rod Holder had been sent home for an unspecified violation of team rules.

Through the week, Miami players were taunted and jeered by Alabamas fans every time they stepped out of their hotel rooms to see the sights of New Orleans.

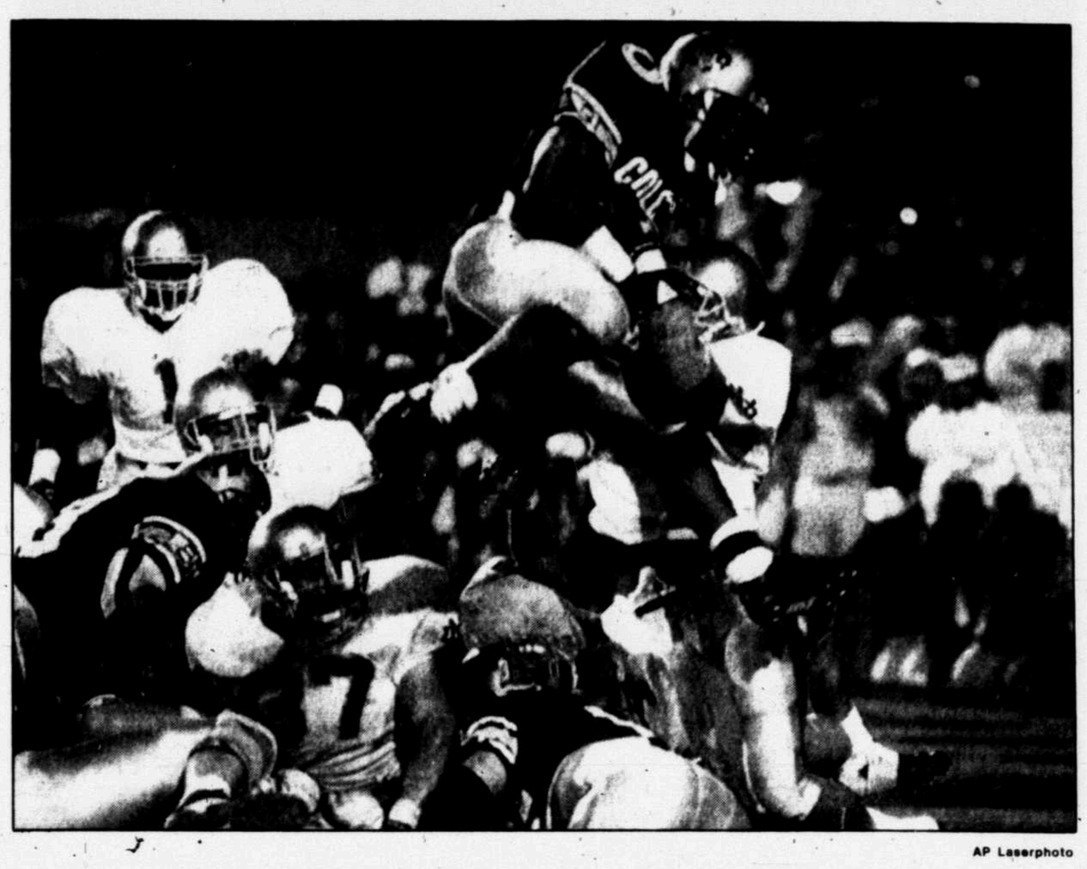

Miami's lone loss of the season came at the hands of Florida State, and Alabama fans seized every opportunity to remind Hurricane players of the loss, even though Alabama was also 10-1 after losing to Auburn.

The Florida State War Chant echoed through the streets of the French Quarter almost as frequently as "Roll Tide."

"It got me frustrated, because I don't know the Auburn War Chant,' said Miami offensive tackle Mike Sullivan.

"People kept coming up behind us with the FSU War Chant and Roll Tide.

Colorado running back Eric Bieniemy surges for the end zone as the Notre Dame defense stiffens in a goal-line stand during the second quarter of Monday's Orange Bowl in Miami, Fla.

Notre Dame buffalos Colorado in taking 21-6 Orange Bowl win

MIAMI (AP) — Lou Holtz was right, even if his timing was wrong. Frustration set in on top-ranked Colorado, though earlier than Holtz foresaw, and Notre Dame followed the fleet feet of Raghib Ismail to a 21-6 victory in the Orange Bowl Monday night.

Thus, the fourth-ranked Fighting Irish, who finished 12-1 against the toughest schedule in the country, staked their claim to a second consecutive national championship — something that hasn't happened since Alabama in 1978-79.

Notre Dame finished 12-1 against the toughest schedule in the country, but the lone loss was to Miami, 27-10 on Nov. 25, and the second-ranked, once-beaten Hurricanes made their own case for No. 1 with a 33-25 victory over Alabama in the Sugar Bowl.

The final Associated Press poll will be released late Tuesday.

"I've got to vote for us," Holtz said after getting a Gatorade shower from his players. "We're No. 1. All year long, we played with pressure. We played nine bowl teams. I don't know what more you can do than to beat the No. 1 team by 15 points."

Holtz predicted last week that Colorado's offense would be frustrated and would "leave the game plan completely and start grab-bagging" by the middle of the third quarter.

Instead, the frustration came in the first half, when Colorado blew three scoring opportunities with a fumble, a missed 23-yard field goal and a failed fake field goal after having first-and-goal at the 1.

"We're going to go back and second-guess a lot of what we did inside the 10-yard line because we didn't get it done," Colorado coach Bill McCartney said. "I don't expect anybody to keep us out of the end zone the way they did, but they did it."

Ismail, a speedy sophomore known as the Rocket, rushed for a career-high 108 yards and a 35-yard touchdown and Anthony Johnson added scoring runs of 2 and 7 yards as Notre Dame won at the Orange Bowl for the first time after six losses to Miami and handed Colorado its first loss of the season after 11 wins. "Coach Holtz told us all year that the Notre Dame spirit is what would pull us through all the adversity," said Ismail, who shrugged off a separated shoulder to be named the game's most valuable player.

The turning point came in the second quarter after Colorado had driven to the Notre Dame 1.

Three times, the Buffaloes tried to run it, only to be stopped by the Notre Dame defense, twice for no gain and once for a two-yard loss. Finally, they tried a fake field goal, only to be stopped at the 2.

Lee, MHS cagers face off tonight

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

It's show time in District 4-5A!

While both Midland High and Midland Lee lost most of their boys basketball lettermen to graduation going into the 1989-90 season, one thing remains clear — both teams have a shot at playoff berths unless other teams beat them enough to knock them out of the running.

The Bulldogs and Rebels renew their crosstown rivalry with an 8 p.m. game tonight at Chaparral Center. Girls squads from the two schools tip off at 6:15 p.m.

The MHS boys knocked off Lee in the Midland College High School Invitational earlier this season, but Bulldog head coach Jack Stephenson said that 63-59 decision can be thrown out the window.

"We've beaten them when they've had a better team, and they've beaten us when we've had a better team," Stephenson said. "You never know how these games will end up.

"Whoever gets done what they need to get done will win the game," Stephenson said.

The Bulldogs, 11-8, are coming off a fourth-place finish in the recent Kerrville Lions Tournament, while Lee, 9-8, finished in sixth place at last week's Clovis, N.M. tournament after an overtime loss to Lovington, N.M. in the consolation championship game.

Despite mixed succcess in a tough non-district schedule, both Stephenson and Lee mentor Paul Stueckler are satisfied with the progress made by their respective teams.

"I'm pleased with what we're doing," Stephenson said.

"I'm very well pleased," Stueckler said.

Stueckler calls his Rebels "overachievers.

"We're not as quick, as tall or as explosive as the other teams, but we do the best we can."

There will be two keys to Lee success tonight, Stueckler added.

"We have to handle their full-court pressure, and we have to do a good job inside."

Prep Basketball

Neither team boasts a 20-point per game scorer, though Lee forwards Greg Crowe and David Meade have provided consistent double-figure scoring, as have the MHS trio of forward Michael Wright, 5-11 center Rodrick Hickey, and guard Scott Melzer.

Girls

Neither local girls team is expected to contend for the 4-5A crown, but Midland High did earn the girls consolation championship at Kerrville to boost its record to 7-10.

Both teams are looking for their first district win tonight.

Coach Jane Young's Lady Bulldogs are paced by seniors Robin Landreth and Effie Freeman, while sophomores Ashley Chase and Sally Gibson have provided consistent outside shooting and rebounding, respectively.

Young is pleased with her team's progress despite the sub-.500 overall mark.

"I think we've done some real good things," she said. "We've been in the game most games, and I think we've made progress."

Of course, this is yet another time when sisters coach against one another. Young's sister Shirley Stephenson is the Lee girls coach, while Jack Stephenson is their brother.

Shirley Stephenson's Lady Rebels have struggled to a 4-13 overall mark. But even though the Lee girls lost all three games at Kerrville, their veteran coach likes the way her young team has responded to a tough early schedule.

"I feel like we're coming along OK," she said. "Even though we lost all three games at Kerrville, I still saw a lot of improvement."

Senior Mary Ann Isom has been carrying the scoring load for the Lady Rebels, with some assistance from frontcourt mate Sheena Parker.

Fiesta Bowl

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Florida State relied on Peter Tom Willis' aerial heroics Monday to prove a point — that the fifth-ranked Seminoles are as good as any college football team.

But from Coach Bobby Bowden on down, the team was realistic about the chances of any team with two losses being voted No. 1.

"I don't think we're going to be voted No. 1, but I think we're definitely the best team in the country," Willis said after passing for a Fiesta Bowl-record 422 yards and five touchdowns in a 41-17 route of sixth-ranked Nebraska.

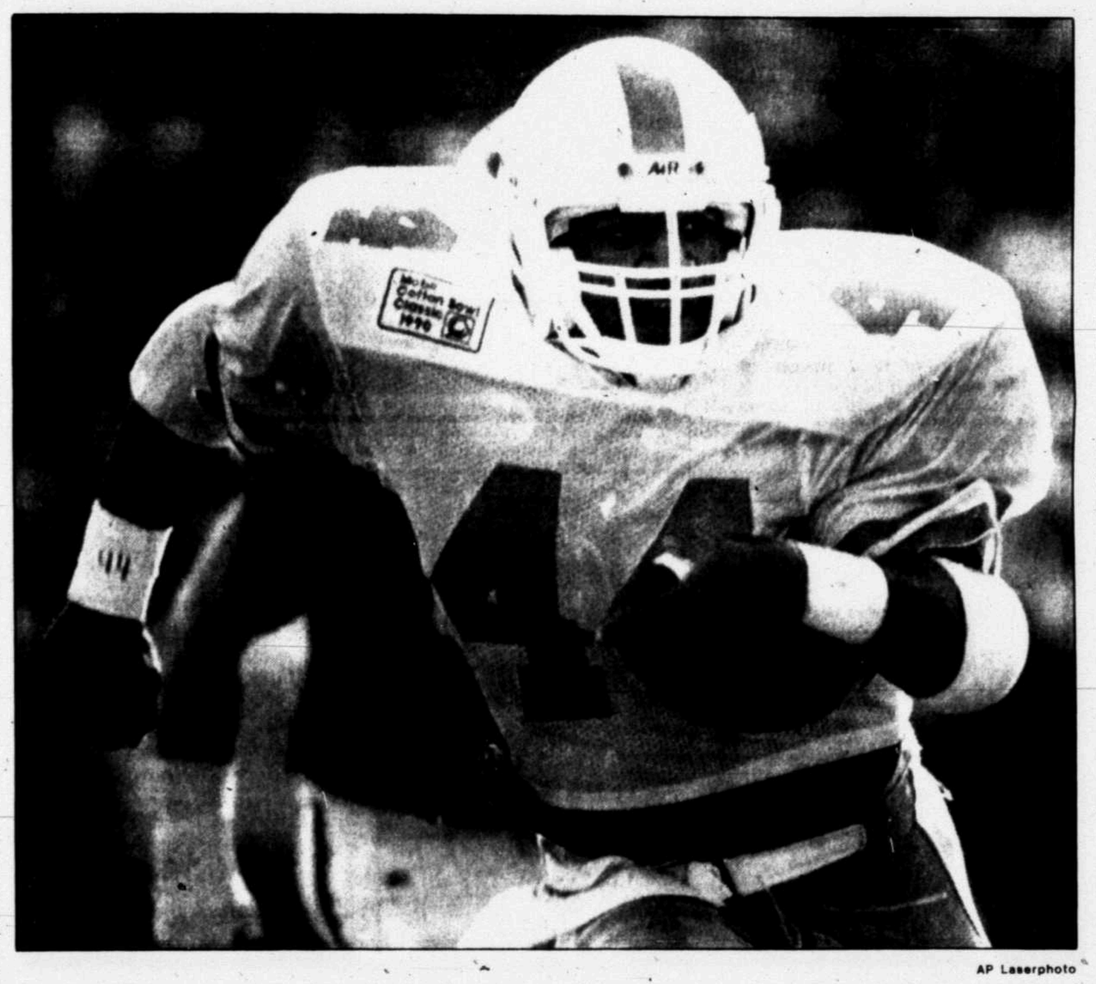

En route to the lopsided victory over the winningest college team of the 1980s, Florida State intercepted two passes, blocked a punt, recovered three of five Nebraska fumbles and survived 13 penalties for 135 yards.

Bowden said his defense laid the foundation for the win.

"When we were stumbling around in the first quarter (down 7-0 and trailing 128-90 in total offense), our defense was just great," he said. "If you'd let them (the Cornhuskers) get going then, they would have got you beat in the first quarter."

Cornerback LeRoy Butler, whose 30-yard return of an interception failed to produce points because of a series of penalties, said the game plan called for pressure on Gerry Gdowski whenever the Cornhusker quarterback ran the option.

"Coach told us the key was going to be containment of the 'pitch' man," Butler said. "I don't think he pitched more than twice, and one was a fumble. We wanted them to throw the ball.

Freshman Tennessee tailback Chuck Webb cruises through the Arkansas defense while amassing 250 yards in the Volunteers' 31-27 Cotton Bowl win.

Hogs get tangled by Vols' Webb

Cotton Bowl

DALLAS (AP) — Tennessee tailback Chuck Webb dominated the Cotton Bowl like no back has since Dicky Maegle in 1954.

Webb ran for 250 yards on 26 carries and scored two touchdowns as the No. 8 Vols defeated the 10th-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks 31-27 Monday afternoon.

"Arkansas took us lightly. We just wanted it more," Webb said.

Webb's rushing performance was the best in a Cotton Bowl since Rice's Maegle ran for 265 yards on 11 carries against Alabama 36 years ago in a game branded by Tommy Lewis' celebrated off-the-bench tackle. Maegle was awarded a 95-yard touchdown.

Nobody overshadowed Webb's performance, which included a spectacular 78-yard run, third longest in Cotton Bowl history.

"Yards and stats, they mean a little," said Webb. "But winning means everything.

"We showed the nation that we are one of the best teams. Maybe we will get a shot at the national title. We do have 11 victories."

Webb said he thought the Vols could beat any team in the country.

"We're 11-1. I would like to have a playoff to show who's the best," he said.

Tennessee coach Johnny Majors said the Vols deserved to be considered for the national title. "But I'll tell you who's the best — Chuck Webb, that's who."

Majors said Webb, a 5-foot-10, 197-pound redshirt freshman, was as good as Tony Dorsett, who Majors coached at Pittsburgh.

"I never had anybody any better than this young man," Majors said. "In a few years, he will be the benchmark for great runners. His future is unlimited."

It was Tennessee's 600th victory. Only nine schools have won more.

The Razorbacks (10-2) had lost only four fumbles all year, but they committed two costly fumbles and suffered a critical interception that more than offset a Cotton Bowl-record 31 first downs.

Second of a two-part series.

The 21st century dawns, and Americans discard the Sony Walkman as too bulky. Nintendo is finally passe, and the newest TV craze is the 112-inch laser projection holograph.

Baseball commissioner Pete Rose, meanwhile, has just put his signature on an agreement with the Japanese leagues for the first true World Series, to be televised to 100 million homes worldwide on pay-per-view.

The average NBA salary is $5 million, and 53-year-old pitcher Nolan Ryan is in the final year of a five-year, $20 million contract with the New York Yankees.

It is Jan. 1, 2000: A Sports Odyssey.

"It's almost frightening to think about the future," sports attorney Bob Woolf said. "And it must be awfully frustrating for the average sports fan."

The decade of the 1990s will have seen most major American sports go international, or at least move in that direction. Pay-per-view television will have brought more events to more people at a higher cost than ever before. And fans will see their first $10 million-a-year player.

"If these salaries continue to escalate, there ain't going to be baseball in the year 2000," said Charlie Finley, former Oakland A's owner and pioneer of another decade.

Players in all sports will be bigger, faster and more agile.

"By the end of the century, there'll be an 8-foot center, or maybe even an 8-foot point guard, in the NBA," Woolf said. "I just hope I'm representing him."

Some athletes will have improved through space-age training techniques, innovations in nutrition, and

Bo's finale not rosey

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Michigan Wolverines wanted to give Bo Schembechler a Rose Bowl victory as a retirement gift.

The Southern California Trojans wanted to end a couple of years of frustration in the New Year's Day game.

It appeared until the closing minutes that neither might get their wish and the 76th Rose Bowl would end in a tie. But the 12th-ranked Trojans scored with 1:10 remaining to take a 17-10 victory over the third-ranked Wolverines.

"We wanted to send Bo out with a win, and it was to be a win for the whole Michigan team," tight end Derrick Walker said. "We came back in the second half and I thought we were going to win it in the fourth quarter."

But Ricky Ervins capped a 75-yard Trojan drive with a 14-yard touchdown run to pull out the victory and snap Southern Cal's two-game losing streak in the Rose Bowl.

"Winning this game is the best feeling I've had since I've been at SC," senior defensive tackle Tim Ryan said. "I've played hard in every game, but after a Rose Bowl victory it's all too sweet."

The Trojans had a particularly frustrating day in the Rose Bowl in 1989, when they led Michagan 14-3 at halftime and wound up losing 22-14.

"For a change, on Jan. 2 the SC people can smile and be happy," Trojan coach Larry Smith said. "It feels good to get a bowl victory. It's been a long time coming."

Auburn humbles Buckeyes 31-14

HOF Bowl

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Stacy Danley's biggest run of the day didn't produce any yards. Instead, the defiant trot to the sideline inspired Auburn's rout of Ohio State in the Hall of Fame Bowl.

The ninth-ranked Tigers shut down the Big Ten's top offense in the second half and Reggie Slack threw for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth Monday to pace a 31-14 victory before a crowd of 52,535 in Tampa Stadium.

Danley gained 85 yards on 20 carries, but it was his ability to get up from a vicious hit and run off the field that got his team going after No. 21 Ohio State took a 14-3 lead.

"We knew they were a good team. They were killing us early in the game," said Auburn linebacker Quentin Riggins. "When Stacy got hit we knew they were trying to intimidate us, and we're not going to stand for that."

Zack Dumas leveled Danley on an incomplete pass and the Ohio State safety exchanged high-fives with teammates while the Auburn running back remained on the ground for several minutes. Tigers coach Pat Dye left the bench to check on the player's condition and encouraged him to leave the field on his own power if he could.

"I told him that if there's any way you can walk off — or better yet, run off — 'you should do it,'" Dye said. "I told him, 'Don't you dare let those Ohio State people think they're tougher than you are.'"

Slack threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Greg Taylor to cut Auburn's deficit to 14-10 just before halftime. He put the Tigers ahead 17-14 with a 4-yard toss to the wide receiver five minutes into the second half.

"The hit (on Danley) made us come together," said Slack. "I think everybody realized that if we didn't start to play then it was going to be a long day for all of us."

The Auburn quarterback completed his last 12 passes, including 9-of-9 in the second half, after throwing interceptions on successive possessions with his team trailing by 11 points.

The senior scored on a 5-yard fourth-quarter run that capped an eight-minute drive and gave Auburn a 24-14 lead. Two minutes later, he threw a 2-yard TD pass to Herbert Casey to finish the rout.

Ohio State, which built its early lead on a 1-yard run by Carlos Snow and Brian Stableim's 9-yard touchdown reception, finished with an 8-4 record. The Buckeyes gained 217 yards total offense in the first half, but were held to 81 after halftime.

"We were in the ball game until that long series put them up by 10. They just ran the ball down our throats," said Ohio State linebacker Derek Isaman. "We controlled the game in the first half. We came out flat in the second half."

Auburn (10-2) outgained Ohio State 177-81 in the second half and the final statistics reflected the balanced attack — 171 passing, 141 passing on Slack's 16 completions in 22 attempts — that helped the Tigers end the season with a six-game winning streak.

Ohio State coach John Cooper said Auburn compares favorably with Illinois, Michigan and Southern California, the other teams that beat the Buckeyes this season. His offense, No. 1 in the Big Ten, was held to 298 yards — 120 yards below its average.

Illini down Cavaliers 31-21

Citrus Bowl

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Illinois quarterback Jeff George saved his best for last, but he still wasn't all that impressed.

"It really wasn't anything I did. The guys just got open," George said after throwing for three touchdowns and a season-high 321 yards Monday to lead No. 11 Illinois to a 31-21 victory over 15th-ranked Virginia in the Citrus Bowl.

George put Illinois on the scoreboard first on a 15-yard touchdown pass to Steven Williams less than two minutes into the game.

Later in the first half, George, a redshirt junior who is noted for his strong arm, also showed some finesse.

On a fourth-and-goal inside the Virginia 1-yard line, George faked an inside handoff to fullback Howard Griffith, and Griffith drew the Virginia defenders to him as he dove over the top.

Meantime, George had the ball tucked against his hip as he shuffled back into the pocket. He stood, alone, as the pile at the goal line unraveled and the ball was nowhere to be found.

George then looked into the left corner of the end zone, where the only person was Illinois tight end Dan Donovan. George lofted a soft pass to Donovan to put the Fighting Illini ahead to stay at 14-7 with 8:55 left before halftime.

"I almost faked me out," George said. "If I didn't have the ball, I would have thought he (Griffith) had it."

Ahead 17-7 at halftime, the Fighting Illini took the second-half kickoff and marched 84 yards in 10 plays, with Griffith's 3-yard run making it 24-7 less than four minutes into the third quarter.

George completed all four passes on the drive for 71 yards.

The closest Virginia got the rest of the game was the final margin, and that didn't come until quarterback Shawn Moore's 4-yard touchdown pass to Herman Moore with five minutes left in the game.

"I really thought it was over when it was 7-0," George said. "If you know the defense we've got, all we need is a field goal."

Illinois could have made the final margin larger if not for a pair of second-half fumbles by freshman running back Steve Feagin. The fumbles, at Virginia's 20 and 13, both were recovered by the Cavaliers.

The Fighting Illini (10-2) broke a four-game losing streak in postseason play. The last time Illinois had won a bowl game was a 17-7 victory over Washington in the 1964 Rose Bowl.

Illinois, which averaged 147.9 rushing yards during the regular season, had 176 Monday to complement George's passing.

"We needed that kind of game from Jeff," Illinois coach John Mackovic said.

ROSE BOWL

Smith, in his third year at Southern Cal, had lost his two previous bowl games.

The victory by the Trojans (9-2-1) spoiled the final game of Smith's old friend, Schembechler. Smith's first college coaching job was as an assistant to Schembechler at Miami of Ohio.

Smith said he of course wasn't sorry the Trojans won the game, but that he was sorry that Schembechler is retiring.

"We're losing one of the real war horses," said Smith, who also served under Schembechler at Michigan.

The Trojan players realized the Wolverines would be inspired to win Schembechler's final game as coach.

"It was a motivational thing for them, so we knew they'd be ready to play," said Ervins, who gained 126 yards on 30 carries and was voted the game's most valuable player.

"It would have been great for them if they could have won it for him, but fortunately for us, it didn't happen that way."

"We worked real hard. We wanted it for Bo and the seniors," Wolverines linebacker Alex Marshall said. "It hurt so bad to see the thing end this way."

Schembechler, no shrinking violet on the sidelines during his 27 years as a head coach, flashed some old fire during the fourth quarter.

When a holding call against Michigan wiped out a run for a 24-yard gain off a fake punt, Schembechler threw his cap and clipboard to the ground, stomped and yelled at the officials.

They tacked another 15 yards — unsportsmanlike conduct — onto the 10-yard assessent for holding.

"That," said Michigan defensive back Tripp Welborne, "was vintage Bo."

"That (holding) call was ridiculous, an absolutely ridiculous call," Schembechler fumed. "One thing I won't miss in retirement is bad officiating."

old-fashioned hard work. Others will have done it through undetectable anabolic steroids, growth hormones, the new artificial blood doping drugs called EPO's, and genetic engineering.

"Parents already are asking for growth hormones for their kids because they want them to be basketball players," said Dr. Bob Goldman, chairman of the Amateur Athletic Union's sports medicine committee. "If they've got the money, parents also will go for the next step — genetic engineering.

"It's a frightening thought, but it will happen."

To attract fans at higher ticket prices, stadiums and arenas will become total entertainment complexes, like Toronto's SkyDome. Besides a retractable dome, this state-of-the-art arena features restaurants, a rock 'n' roll cafe, hotel, TV studios, movie theater and bowling alley.

"I don't think we're talking about a Ferris wheel or anything like that," Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said, "but other things we can do to make people want to come to the ballpark."

Rules also will change.

"In both college and pro basketball, players will outgrow the court," said Dick Vitale, an ESPN announcer and former NBA and college coach. "The courts may have to be a little wider, a little longer, and the foul lanes will have to be widened to avoid the physical pounding."

Finley, who now is proposing a fluorescent-striped football for easier visibility, helped usher in night World Series games in 1971 and the designated hitter in the American League in 1973. He predicts baseball will have to make more changes that benefit the hitter.

"You go to a basketball game and what do you see? Five players against five players," Finley said. "Hockey? Six against six. Football? Eleven against 11. Baseball? Nine against 1."

By the year 2000, Finley predicts a batter will need only three balls to walk. He also predicts there will be a designated runner, who can be used three times per game.

"Pitchers throw so hard and are so big now that they can throw the ball right past a hitter, then reach out and tickle his nose," Finley said. "We need to even things up."

Don Fehr, executive director of the baseball players' union, disagrees.

"Part of what the game is, is its timelessness, and people ought not to monkey with it without awfully good reason," he said. "I know of no one out there campaigning for changing the length of the base lines or number of strikes or anything like that."

He said it's possible the designated hitter rule will be standardized between the two leagues, but "short of that I think fundamental rules changes are unlikely."

In addition to banning alcohol sales at all ballparks, the NFL will probably throw the instant replay out its own window and into the NHL's.

"I don't doubt that in the future we'll be using instant replays," NHL director of officiating Bryan Lewis said.

Expansion is on the agenda for all sports, and it's almost certain to go international.

"We're talking about global participation," said Woolf, who represents players such as Larry Bird and Joe Montana. "Basketball will be first. Next, hockey. Look at all the Europeans coming over here. Then football. In Japan alone, there are 188 teams playing American football."

Baseball already has two teams in Canada. The next step would be South and Central America or Asia.

"Yes, I predict that Japan will participate in the World Series, perhaps by 2000," Finley said.

Pipe dreams?

"I don't know about that," Fehr said. "I know we've talked about it, certainly."

Why go international? That's easy. More television. More exposure. More money.

Next year, for example, baseball begins a four-year, $1.1 billion contract with CBS-TV, but it will need more to pay the $4 million-$5 million per year salaries of the future.

The NBA's average salary will be $1 million in 1990 and, based on current growth, would be $2.2 million by the mid-1990s.

By the year 2000, Woolf predicts there will be a $10 million per-year-player, and contracts will become more complicated, even moving players from the field into the corporate board room as part of a lifetime deal.

"Money changes things fast," Finley said. "You know the oldest profession in the world? It's prostitution. And do you know the best way in the world to sell your product? Exposure.

"If the prostitutes don't go out and buy the paint to make them what they ain't, they go out of business. Now, baseball is going all out for television.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 3, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Family relationships will become more rewarding as outside pressures subside. The business outlook is brightest in March. Keep your feet on the ground. A love affair could influence every decision you make. Career success will come easier in October; push yourself more than usual. Dramatic ups and downs will be felt in the fall. Exciting social events are in store. An unexpected windfall or inheritance will make your Christmas quite jolly.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Victoria Principal, pianist Victor Borge, ballerina Anna Pavlova, hockey great Bobby Hull.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Health programs started now have a good chance of success. An ill-tempered friend could be causing trouble. Stash a windfall in the bank. Romantic partner does the unexpected. Show your gratitude.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put mind over matter if you want to succeed. Marriage brings greater changes than you realize. Your connections in high places come through for you. Repay favors in meaningful ways.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Success will depend on your attitude. Work is sheer joy to some people, but a drag to others. Variety makes romance a thing of beauty. Loved one inspires you to scale new heights.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Logic is the key to winning a challenge. Emotional outbursts will undermine your efforts. Restrain your generous impulses or you could bend your budget out of shape. Personal charm helps promote romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your positive attitude wins you friends and influences those who control things on the job. Hasty decisions will only work against you. Postpone a social engagement that promises to be tiring.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are an expert at predicting trends. Doing your homework helps you stay ahead of the pack. Keep up the good work begun yesterday. Community activities act as a tonic for recent retirees.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Investigate new job opportunities. It is not so difficult to communicate your thoughts. Lost objects are recovered. Seeing a romantic film puts you in a loving mood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have the cure for what ails a loved one. Pay more attention to your own needs. True commitment to your work leads to financial gains. A scheme is not as wild as it seems.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An unconventional route is the quickest way to the top. Potential business deals need more study. Buy time any way you can. Do not commit yourself until you know a cause is legitimate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Relationships that have been sluggish until now begin to perk up. Togetherness promotes romance so long as it is not overdone. The time is right to consult higher-ups about productivity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Something you accidentally overhear inspires you. Act on the information you have — it will be enough. Do not be intimidated by threats. Right is on your side; justice will be served.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Paperwork is easier to handle than high-tech tasks. Let a child show you the practical side of an idea. Some people see things clearer than others. Call someone you love and make up.

Opening lead: Five of ♣

With this first column of the New Year, we would like to wish all our readers health and happiness. However, that is not what West had on his mind when defending this hand from the recent Fall North American Championships.

If you think that West's hand is rather feeble for a vulnerable preempt, we assure you that you are not alone. However, many tournament bridge aficionados believe it is more blessed to interfere with the opponents' auction than to worry about constructive bidding of their own; hence West's action. When North cue-bid in response to South's takeout double, South elected to jump in his weaker suit since North rated to have four cards in each major for his cue-bid. The final contract of six spades was excellent.

Left to his own devices, declarer would certainly have romped home, since the only way to play the club suit is to cash the ace and king, with gratifying results. Declarer's only loser would have been a trump.

When Michael Cappelletti of Washington, D.C., held the West cards, he opted for the devilish lead of the five of clubs. Declarer captured East's jack with the king and not unnaturally presumed West had led a singleton club. After cashing the ace of trumps and taking a losing finesse, declarer won the heart return and drew the last trump ending in dummy. He then ran the ten of clubs—down one.

Gabor upset by parade jeers

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Zsa Zsa Gabor, who had predicted an outpouring of love and enthusiasm for her appearance in the Tournament of Roses Parade, appeared startled when she was greeted with Bronx cheers.

"Go to jail, you floozy," some spectators on Monday screamed when she rode by on her Tennessee walking horse, Silver Fox.

The 72-year-old Hungarian-born actress was convicted last year and sentenced to three days in jail, fined and ordered to perform community service for slapping a Beverly Hills policeman who stopped her Rolls-Royce. She is appealing the conviction.

Gabor

She expected a different reaction from parade-goers.

"They'll love me, you'll be surprised," Miss Gabor said Sunday. "I got 10,000 cards from people who said I was right."

Miss Gabor did concede that the publicity about the trial caused her to have "third and fourth thoughts" about riding in the parade.

"I was afraid someone might boo (and scare) my horse. He's untouchable. If anyone boos, I'd boo back," Miss Gabor said.

But no one saw her boo back. Her face was flushed and she seemed taken aback by the spectators' reactions.

NEW YORK (AP) — World Wrestling Federation champ Hulk Hogan, 307 pounds, squares off against comedian Richard Belzer, 150 pounds dripping wet, in a $5 million lawsuit scheduled to go to trial today.

Hogan

The opponents meet in Manhattan state Supreme Court, the state's trial-level court, in a rematch of their March 27, 1985, fracas on a cable television show with Belzer as host. Jury selection was to start today.

Belzer was rendered unconscious in that get-together and took nine stitches in his head. He then sued the Hulkster, tag-team partner Mr. T, World Wrestling Federation impresario Vince McMahon, and McMahon's Titan Sports, Inc.

"We see the suit as a publicity ploy, pure and simple," said WWF attorney Ted Dinsmoor. "He asked the Hulkster to demonstrate a wrestling move, and he was accidentally injured."

The comedian is expected to testify. Norman Roy Grutman, Belzer's attorney, has challenged Hogan and Mr. T to do the same, although Dinsmoor said it is unlikely either will appear.

"I am flinging down the gauntlet. If they don't show up in the ring of the courtroom, they are cowards," Grutman said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Barbara Bush voiced delight over the addition of a grandchild to the presidential family.

"Great news," she said Monday, revealing that her son Marvin and his wife, Margaret, had just adopted a 2-month-old boy, Charles Walker Bush. The couple also has an adopted daughter, Marshall, 3.

The Bushes now have a dozen grandchildren, five boys and seven girls.

"There's something exciting, we heard about the baby the day our brother-in-law died. There's something nice about that, isn't there? Sort of magical," Mrs. Bush told reporters en route to Alabama from Houston. "I cried from happiness and sadness all day."

Alexander Ellis II, husband of Bush's sister Nancy Ellis, died Friday of a stroke at age 67. The Bushes will attend his funeral in a Boston suburb on Tuesday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stand-up comedian George Lopez, who plays up his ethnic roots in his act, is dismayed by the lack of comedy roles for Hispanics.

The 28-year-old comic, who plays a ski patrolman in the upcoming movie, "Ski Patrol," said in a recent interview that Hispanics "are being totally left out" of television sitcoms.

"When you look ethnic it's that much harder," he said. "Everyone is thin and Caucasian and I don't look like that. ... I'd like to play a professional, an attorney, a guy who just works for a living, a 'thirty-something'-type character."

He steers clear of ethnic stereotypes in movie and television roles.

"In sitcoms, there's no one Hispanic, and I don't think that's right. When the first sitcom comes down that doesn't have 12 people in the family and there's not a rooster in the living room, then I'm sure writers will go back to the typewriters and say, 'Oh, that's how you're supposed to do it!'"

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cornelieu Bogdan, a Romanian diplomat who served under that country's deposed communist regime and its new government, died Monday in Bucharest of an aneurysm at age 68.

Bogdan joined the Communist Party around the time of World War II.

He served as Romanian ambassador to the United States from 1969 through 1977. He returned to Bucharest and was out of government for a time but later was named to a post in the foreign ministry that gave him authority over Western Hemisphere relations.

There was friction between Bogdan and the government of dictator Nicolae Ceausescu and he again left the ministry and was placed under what amounted to house arrest.

He was allowed to travel to Washington in 1988 on a Woodrow Wilson fellowship and he remained in the United States until a month ago.

TORONTO (AP) — Solomon Birnbaum, a Jewish scholar credited with establishing the authenticity and age of the Dead Sea Scrolls, died Thursday at age 98.

Birnbaum, a native Austrian who was an expert in ancient Jewish languages, wrote two books on Hebrew and Yiddish and dozens of articles and research papers in an academic career that spanned most of this century.

The scrolls, discovered in caves near the Dead Sea beginning in 1947, include the oldest known manuscripts of the Bible. Birnbaum analyzed the grammar and script to date them from the third century B.C. to A.D. 68, the same period later established by carbon-dating techniques.

Birnbaum continued his research, and moved to Canada in 1970.

LONDON (AP) — William Scott, a British artist acclaimed for his still-life paintings and drawings of simple foods and kitchen utensils, died Thursday of Alzheimer's disease at age 76.

Scott represented his country successfully at art festivals throughout the 1950s and 1960s. In 1961, he won the international critics' prize at the Sao Paulo Biennale.

In 1966, he was named a Commander of the British Empire.

New worries over oil imports seen

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — After a long period of complacency during which American reliance on foreign oil fell sharply and the price dived to under $10 a barrel, the United States is now headed for permanent levels of dependence on imports that are higher than those that led to havoc in the 1970s, many specialists say.

The United States relies on foreign suppliers for 43 percent of its petroleum needs, and some experts say that may go to 60 percent by the turn of the century. But there is a difference this time.

The pinch has been gradual, largely because of lessons learned on both sides of the oil equation. That difference makes the risk of a return to gasoline lines seem more remote than in the mid-1970s, when imports last moved above 40 percent.

Still, with the aid of exceptionally cold late autumn and early winter weather in much of the nation, the price of crude oil has climbed to about $22 a barrel. And in trading Friday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, heating oil jumped to its highest level in almost six years.

The combination of higher prices and the fact that daily domestic oil production fell in 1989 by a record 500,000 barrels has many analysts warning that the American dependence on foreign oil will pose an increasingly worrisome threat in many ways in the 1990s.

"One of the most serious issues facing the United States is how to cope with the growing imports of crude oil and refined products that arise from increased consumption combined with declining domestic production," a diverse panel of international business, labor, government and other specialists concluded in a report published this month by the Atlantic Council, a Washington-based center that specializes in economic and other international issues.

"This aggravates balance-of-payments problems, adds to the budget deficit, is likely to lead to higher world oil prices and affects national security."

Addressing some of the concerns in a speech in London in October, Hisham M. Nazer, oil minister for Saudi Arabia, made it clear that maintaining a steady flow of oil to the West was in the best interests of producers and consumers alike, saying it was "a purely commercial equation."

He added: "We will add political variables to it only to our mutual peril. Let me simplify it even further. You need the oil. We have the oil."

Although some in the industry believe that American production can at least be stabilized and that the decline can probably be reversed with single-minded efforts, most analysts expect that environmental and other constraints will cause production to continue to fall.

Labor Secretary Eliabeth Dole joins hands with bargainers during a press conference Monday when a tentative contract was reached between United Mine Workers and Pittston Co.

Pittston, miners reach accord

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — With what a mediator called a "win-win" accord, Pittston Co. and leaders of its coal miners said Monday that they had resolved their brutal, nine-month strike in the hills of Appalachia.

"Truly this is a victory for collective bargaining," said W.J. Usery Jr., the federal mediator appointed in October to seek an end to the strike. "Through long hours and hard work we came to what I really believe is a win-win situation."

The terms were not disclosed, so that the union could first explain them to the 1,700 striking workers and about 4,000 sick and laid off Pittston workers, all of whom will vote vote whether to ratify the agreement.

Richard L. Trumka, president of the United Mine Workers of America, said at a joint news conference in Washington: "I'd like to say Happy New Year to everybody. For us this is Thanksgiving Day: We've done something we didn't think was possible."

Paul W. Douglas, chairman of Pittston, spoke of the "mutual achievement of mutual objectives," but he expressed some reservations.

To succeed, he said, the agreement will "require an enormous amount of human and other forms of cooperation that you cannot just write down on a piece of paper."

There seemed to be hints that the union and Pittston may have worked out a way for workers to share in the company's profits from any improvement in its business, an increasingly common arrangement between unions and companies.

"We both have incentives built into this contract for us to work together," said Trumka.

Douglas spoke of a "partnership for progress," and Usery cited a commitment to "a new way of doing business together."

Some obstacles could influence or delay ratification, which is to be voted on in about 10 days, a miners' union official said.

Before the members vote, he said, the agreement must be approved by representives of miners and coal companies on the boards of the workers' health and benefit plans, which were an important issue in the strike.

Also, the courts and the National Labor Relations Board, who were not parties to the agreement, have to resolve legal cases that both Pittston and the miners initiated during the strike, and consider reducing the $63.5 million in fines that a Virginia court has levied against the union for various law violations.

In appointing a special mediator, the Bush administration showed some greater willingness to intervene in labor-management disputes than the hands-off Reagan administration.

Soviets seek safe path in new economy

N.Y. Times News Service

In the rapidly changing world of perestroika, Leonid Abalkin is not the only economist of influence.

But he is apparently highly valued for his political flexibility and grace under pressure.

And this year the chain-smoking 59-year old academician emerged as the expert the Soviet prime minister, Nikolai Ryzhkov, has charged with finding a safe path through the treacherous waters of economic change.

Abalkin, the economists Abel Aganbegyan and Oleg Bogomolov and the sociologist Tatiana Zaslavskaya, were chosen in the mid-1980s to serve as a sort of economic kitchen cabinet for President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

In the first heady years of reform, Aganbegyan got most of the limelight, giving interviews to the western press and publishing books in English.

But while the hefty Georgian was roving Europe and America as the unofficial ambassador for perestroika, Abalkin was being installed as director of the Soviet Academy of Science's Institute of the Economy — a bastion of establishment power.

And last summer Abalkin was appointed a deputy prime minister.

Some western economists who heard Abalkin lecture on economic change in 1986 were not overly impressed.

He showed little understanding, they said, of how free market economies worked, and little appreciation for the difficulties in making the transition from central planning.

But he reportedly managed to build easy working relationships with both party bigwigs and more reform-minded elements of the Soviet bureaucracy.

And in recent months Abalkin has been soaking up economic wisdom from Western economists ranging from the chairman of the Federal Reserve, Alan Greenspan, to Ed Hewett, a Brookings Institution Fellow.

In November he presented a frank analysis of the Soviet Union's economic predicament to a conference of senior Soviet economists.

MARKETS

Posted price reaches $21

From Staff Reports

Oil prices continue moving higher, passing the psychologically important $22 barrier in the first trading of the new year.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, February contracts for West Texas Intermediate were at $22.11 in midmorning trading, a gain of 29 cents from Friday's close. Friday the market rose 32 cents to close at $21.82.

Also this morning, Marathon, Permian and Sun Refining raised their posted price for WTI to $21, up 50 cents from Friday's posting.

Investor concern over possible tight supplies of oil and gasoline fueled some of Friday's buying. In addition, the effects of the recent cold snap helped the increase, even though the weather was believed to be tapering off.

Dollar falls, gold steady

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against most foreign currencies in early European trading today, the first trading day of the new year. Gold prices were little changed in London.

Currency dealers said the market was quiet and looking ahead to the release of U.S. December employment statistics on Friday and November trade figures in the middle of the month.

- 1.5455 Swiss francs
- 5.7598 French francs
- 1.9017 Dutch guilders
- 1,262.50 Italian lire
- 1.1576 Canadian dollars

The dollar fell more than 1 cent against the British pound. It cost $1.6234 to buy one pound this morning, compared with $1.6115 late Friday. European markets were closed Monday for New Year.

Markets were closed in Japan because of the continuing New YearMholiday. In London, the dollar was quoted at 144.09 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $403.50 a troy ounce, up from $401.00 bid late Friday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $401.63.

Bullion dealers said trading was thin and directionlessl with few market players ready to take new positions.

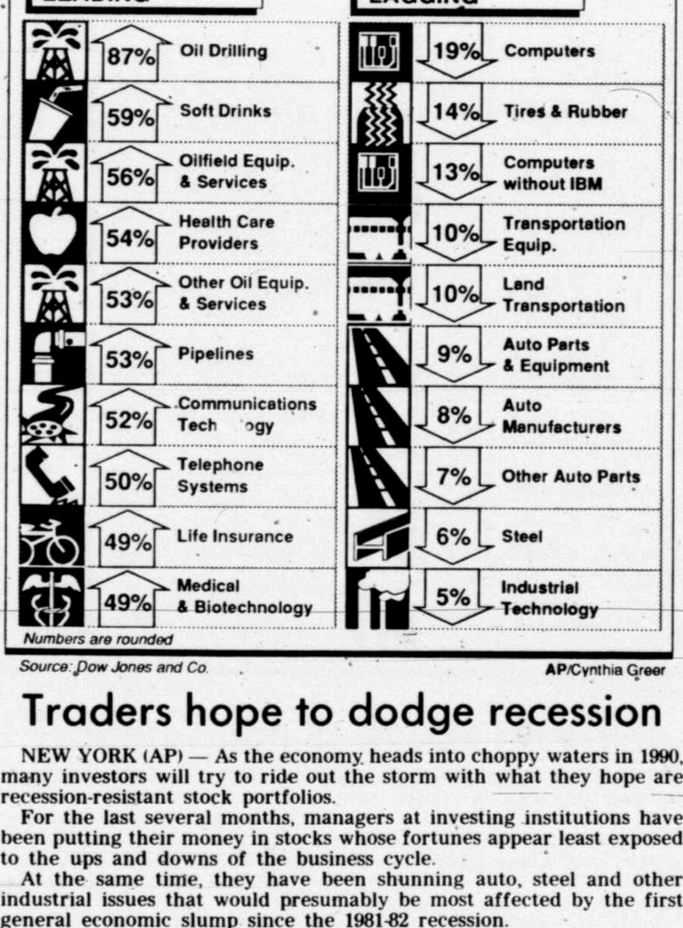

One dealer predicted the precious metal would drift back down to the $400 level, but he said good buying interest at that level would prevent gold from going any lower.

Markets were closed in Zurich for a public holiday. Earlier in Hong Kong, gold edged up 28 cents to close at a bid $402.25.

Silver rose in London to a bid price of $5.22 a troy ounce from Friday's $5.18.

Traders hope to dodge recession

NEW YORK (AP) — As the economy heads into choppy waters in 1990, many investors will try to ride out the storm with what they hope are recession-resistant stock portfolios.

For the last several months, managers at investing institutions have been putting their money in stocks whose fortunes appear least exposed to the ups and downs of the business cycle.

At the same time, they have been shunning auto, steel and other industrial issues that would presumably be most affected by the first general economic slump since the 1981-82 recession.

"The economy's slowing down, no question about it," says Peter Lynch, who runs the Fidelity Magellan Fund, the nation's largest stock mutual fund with $12.4 billion in assets. "When that happens cyclical stocks just don't do very well."

The risk of an economy-wide slump "is higher than at any time since the 1982 recession," says Martin Sass, president of M.D. Sass Investors Services Inc., an independent money-management firm with $3.8 billion in accounts.

Still, Sass assigns only a 25 percent probability to that outcome, and says he believes lower interest rates and inflation can help bring new life in 1990 to Wall Street's bull market.

"Certainly it's not the early innings of the ball game," he observes. "But I think there's still some more room here."

It's no simple trick to devise a stock-picking strategy for gains in a rising market while minimizing exposure to losses should prices decline.

The traditional way to do that is to concentrate on "defensive" stocks like high-yielding utilities and those of companies with steady, year-in, year-out earnings growth.

So it comes as no surprise that "consumer noncyclical" and utility stocks ranked first and second in 1989 among the eight sectors of the stock market tracked by Dow Jones & Co.

From the end of 1988 through Dec. 26, the consumer noncyclical index rose 37.86 percent, while the overall Dow Jones equity market index posted a 24.27 percent gain. The utility index climbed 34.34 percent.

That struck a marked contrast with increases of just 15.65 percent for the industrial sector, and 5.1 percent for technology stocks.

Lynch says those divergent trends have lifted the big-name consumer stocks to expensive levels. Cyclical stocks may look cheaper, he says, but they could go lower still if the business outlook keeps darkening.

"I'm still buying stocks every day, but I've been letting cash build up" to about 11 percent of the Magellan Fund's assets, he says. "I'm not finding many outstanding, attractive bargains."

Sass, for his part, thinks the time has come to buy cyclical issues in such industries as paper, aluminum, steel and chemicals.

"The cyclical stocks have gotten killed," he asserts. "Many of them are trading at levels that already discount a recession, in my view.

"These companies have gotten more lean, more efficient. But the stocks are very much out of favor, and hardly anyone is recommending them."

Sass pins his hopes that a recession can be avoided partly on what he sees as a renewed easing of inflationary pressures as the economy slows. "The inflation rate could be a positive surprise" in 1990, he says.

TRADES

Affordable housing declining

WASHINGTON (AP) — An index measuring the ability of the typical American family to buy a home improved slightly in November due to steady declines in mortgage interest rates and a slight increase in family incomes.

The National Association of Realtors said its index rose to 105.8 in November, meaning that a family with a median income of $33,482 had 105.8 percent of the income needed to buy a median-priced existing home costing $93,000.

The median means that half of the families earn more and half less, or that half of the homes sell for more and half for less.

The index was the highest since last February, when it registered 106.7. It was 105.5 in October.

The Realtors said the median price for existing homes increased $400 in November, but this was offset by a decline in mortgage rates from 10.16 percent in October to 10.12 percent in November and by an increase in family incomes from $33,365 to $33,482.

The association uses a composite rate reflecting both fixed-rate and adjustable-rate mortgages.

The changes increased the monthly principal and interest payment on a median home by $1 to $660 in November, which represents 23.6 percent of the median family's income.

"The drop in rates generally is having the most impact in areas where housing is affordable for moderate-income buyers," NAR President Norman D. Flynn said.

Trade schools offer second chance

Teach delights of hand work

BOSTON (AP) — Professionals tired of the view from behind a desk can get a new outlook at the North Bennett Street School, where adults learn the delights of chiseling a violin to smooth perfection or piecing together a lock.

Nestled in the crooked streets of Boston's North End, the school has grown from a turn-of-the-century vocational school for all ages into a second-chance center for adults pursuing new careers.

Howard Bouve, of Freedom, N.H., once oversaw 400 people as director of security for the Bank of Boston. Now he spends his days on a tall stool, peering over a tray of pins, trying to create the combination that makes up a lock's inner workings.

At 59, Bouve is studying to be a locksmith, and a gouge running down the middle of his thumb is testimony to his hands-on occupation. At the bank, he was getting stale, Bouve said, and he jumped at the chance to leave.

"When you retire, you have to have a plan," Bouve said recently. "You can't just hit the floor at 6 every morning for 35 years and stop."

Bouve said he liked the idea of locksmithing because it's a job he can take anywhere. He and his wife plan to move to a warmer climate, he said. Tapping at his thumb wound, he mused that there may be no turning back.

"I'm glad I don't wear a shirt and tie anymore," he said.

Founded in 1885, the school now offers courses in jewelry making, furniture, locks, violins, carpentry, bookbinding and piano technology.

Students must have a high school diploma. The average age is 30, said Walter McDonald, associate director.

Courses, which are given during daily sessions of about seven hours, last one to three years, with tuition ranging from $6,650 to $21,950.

Molly Carlisle, 40, had worked as a teacher, musician, flower seller and baker by the time she came from Ohio to take up bookbinding. "It combines the beautiful and the practical in a way I really like," she said last month.

Carlisle said she appreciated the quiet, personal aspects of the work and the care and patience required to paint and paste backing, sew pages together and gently hammer delicate gold leaf into gilded titles.

"If I could bind books on a mountain, I'd be really happy," she said.

Many investors happy to see 1989 end

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — For many an investor, living through 1989 was like having a miserable time at what should have been a great party. Whether 1990 is any better may depend on whether interest rates fall fast enough to offset declining profits.

Heiko H. Thieme, a market strategist for Deutsche Bank Capital, called 1989 "the second-best year of the decade."

And by the popular market averages, he is right.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 27 percent, just behind 1985's gain of 27.7 percent.

The bond market also zipped along, with interest rates on Treasury securities falling and producing handsome returns for investors.

So why the unhappiness?

In part, it was that a lot of investors picked the wrong investments.

Small stocks stumbled late in the year.

Technology stocks went from unloved to despised.

Bank stock investors learned that Third World nations were not the only borrowers who could no longer pay, as many banks took big write-offs on real estate loans.

And bond investors early in the year were much more likely to be buying junk bonds, which were soon to tumble amid a wave of defaults, than to be picking up the Treasury securities that turned out to be real bargains.

To make things worse, most of the gains came early in 1989, when many investors were cautious. They bought later, just in time to watch prices slip.

"WE SAW a lot of cash come into the equity market just as the market reached its high," said Abby Joseph Cohen, the chief strategist at Drexel Burnham Lambert.

Many smaller stocks ended the year below where they were in the first half, although larger companies generally rose.

A dramatic exception was the largest stock in the country, International Business Machines, which ended 1989 down 23 percent for the year.

Add to that the litany of layoffs on Wall Street, and many professional investors ended 1989 in a truly foul mood.

Richard Hoey, Drexel's chief economist, reports that his November poll of investment pros found just 11.1 percent expecting a bull market in early 1990.

That percentage was the lowest Hoey has recorded since he began asking the question in 1983, falling even below the 12.4 percent recorded after the 1987 crash.

Such figures suggest a consensus of pessimism on Wall Street. But Robert Farrell, chief market analyst at Merrill Lynch, notes that there are signs that some people are investing their money a lot more bullishly than they are talking.

A survey by Indata, a service of Gordon, Haslett & Co. of Stamford, Conn., that monitors institutional portfolios, indicates that managers of equity funds have just 6.1 percent of their assets in cash and short-term money market instruments, even less than the 6.3 percent that was on hand at the end of August 1987, when stocks peaked before beginning the fall that culminated in the October crash.

BY CONTRAST, on Aug. 9, 1982, when investors were genuinely bearish and the great 1980s bull market was about to begin, cash levels stood at 16.9 percent.

One reason for the low cash level now is that many institutional money managers think it is not their job to decide when to pull back from equities and raise cash; that is up to the client, usually a corporate sponsor of pension funds that allocates money among different managers.

Late in the year, when nervousness rose, the managers did not get out of stocks, but many did move into what they thought were safer stocks.

Utilities, paying a high dividend and with revenues that are resistant to recession, became market stars late in the year, with the Dow Jones utility average rising 8.7 percent in the fourth quarter, compared with a 2.2 percent gain for the Dow industrials.

In mutual funds, where many managers have more leeway to raise cash, cash levels in stock mutual funds were up to 11.1 percent at the end of November, the most recent figures available.

In the aggressive growth funds that buy small stocks, whose performance was generally poor in late 1989, cash levels climbed to a high 11.9 percent.

The professional pessimism comes at a time when individual investors are showing considerable willingness to buy shares.

SALES OF stock mutual funds rose throughout the year, and investors also stepped up their direct purchases of shares. One reflection of the improved business came in the shares of Charles Schwab & Co., the discount brokerage firm, which soared 106 percent in 1989.

But the price of a seat on the New York Stock Exchange ended the year at $420,000, down 33 percent from the $625,000 price at the end of 1988, and off 63 percent from the $1.15 million peak set in 1987.

While trading volume picked up a bit in 1989, institutional commission rates continued to fall, and now are down to 6 cents a share or less.

Brokers are not making much money from trading, and that is reflected in seat prices.

What bullishness there is now is based on a firm belief that interest rates are headed lower, as the Federal Reserve tries to keep a slowing economy from falling into a recession.

The indicators that show high levels of pessimism about stocks show equally high levels of optimism about bonds.

"I think we will have a major interest-rate decline that will be much more important than earnings turbulence," said John D. Connolly, chairman of the investment policy committee at Dean Witter Reynolds.

Connolly, and many others, think interest rates will fall fast enough to offset the impact of lower corporate earnings in early 1990.

VIRTUALLY EVERYONE on Wall Street expects lower profits in the first half of the year, but some optimists think earnings will then rebound late in the year as the economy picks up steam, allowing corporate profits for all of 1990 to exceed the 1989 level.

Profit estimates have been coming down for the last several months, ever since third-quarter earnings proved broadly disappointing, and some who are bearish think that will continue as weak demand for goods squeezes margins.

"The consensus forecast for corporate profits is still too high," Mrs. Cohen of Drexel said. "Stock prices are already reflecting the best that is likely to happen in 1990."

As 1988 ended, the dollar was at depressed levels, but it rallied early in the year and held on to its gains against the Japanese yen and many other currencies.

But the West German mark became the strongest currency, and the dollar fell to new lows in December against it and other European currencies tied to the mark.

For some maturities, German interest rates are now higher than similar American rates, a historic reversal.

In the long run, it is possible that the convergence of interest rates among the world's major economies — Japanese rates are also rising, although still well below those in the United States — will improve American competitiveness by allowing American companies to borrow money at rates similar to those faced by companies in other nations.

BUT IN the shorter term, Mrs. Cohen worries that a need to support the dollar could keep American interest rates from falling much further. And that, she said, would be a big disappointment for the stock market.

As the year ended, there were few economists who were forecasting a 1990 recession in the United States.

One reason may be that most economists have wrongly forecast one or more recessions since 1982, and many are wary of making the same mistake again.

But many investors seem unwilling to bet on a vibrant economy.

In the final month of 1989, the consensus investment strategy was to dump cyclical stocks — companies like auto makers that are heavily dependent on economic growth — and buy safer stocks.

Technology stocks also crumbled, capped by a decision by the Vanguard group of mutual funds to force its small stock funds, known as Explorer and Explorer II, to slash their holdings of technology stocks and to promise never again to buy so many.

There are plenty of reasons advanced for the poor performance of small stocks, ranging from the belief that foreign investors prefer names they know to the suspicion that more small companies would falter in a recession. But there is no doubt they were unpopular for most of the fourth quarter.

IN THE over-the-counter market, more stocks declined in price than rose for 11 consecutive weeks, with the string ending only in the final week of the year. The NASDAQ composite index fell 3.8 percent in the quarter.

Bank stocks were weak, with smaller banks traded over the counter especially hard hit. Many of them had little or no exposure to Third World debt problems, but all have real estate loans, and fear is growing about how many of those will default.

In place of all those "risky" stocks, investors turned to stocks that might avoid severe damage in a recession, notably utilities and makers of consumer goods like food. Energy shares also rose, aided by cold weather and a growing belief that the worldwide excess supply of oil was shrinking.

To some analysts, among them David Eisenberg of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., the market went too far.

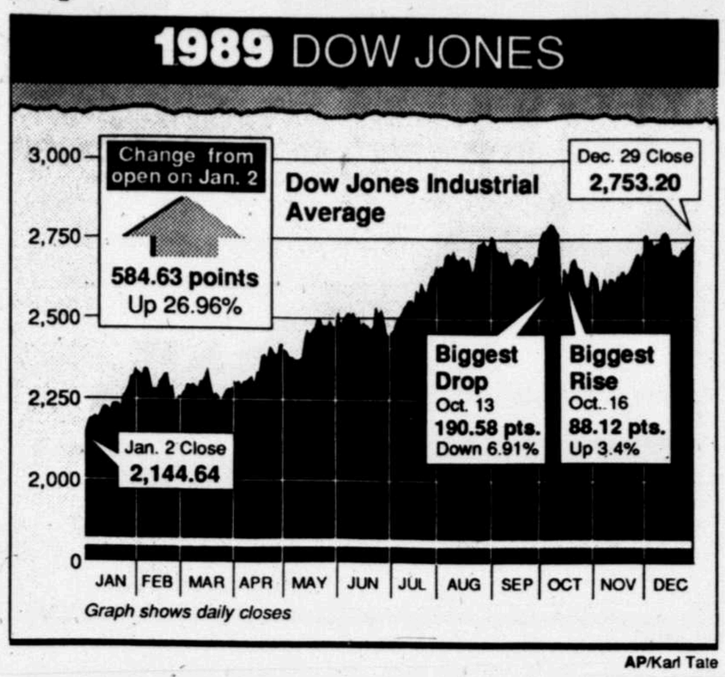

"It's getting crazy out there," he said. "Did you know that the market value of the cellular telephone stocks is now equal to that of the banks?"

His conclusion is that there is value in financial and cyclical stocks, while supposedly "safe and sound" stocks like food issues are overvalued.

Market watchers of a historical bent may take some comfort from the fact that 1989 was just the fifth year since World War II that the Dow industrials rose more than 25 percent.

In each of the previous four instances, the Dow rose by at least 15 percent the following year.

So there are historical reasons, at least, to hope the market's momentum will not soon vanish.

Passbook could lead to dormant account funds

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I discovered a bankbook for a savings account I had forgotten about. The last transaction was on June 25, 1976, five days prior to our move out of the state in which the bank is located. I requested the bank to close the account and send the money to me. I was told the account does not exist.

The letter I received from the bank states, "We thoroughly researched our records and are unable to find any record of your account." It adds, under banking regulations, savings account records are retained for seven years and "We must conclude you closed this account prior to 1982."

Do I have any recourse?

A. Yes, if there was any money left in the account. The law of escheat comes into play here. Under that law, in effect in all states, depository institutions — banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions — are required to turn over to the state accounts that remain dormant for a period of years.

Doyle

This applies to all types of accounts, as well as items in safe deposit boxes and property held in trust by banks. The length of time the account has to lie dormant varies from as little as five years to as long as 25 years in different states. The time span also varies depending on the property involved.

Contact the bank again and find out to what state government department it surrenders dormant accounts. Then, get in touch with that department and ask for the specific state rules on when dormant accounts must be turned over. The state regulators should be able to tell you when and if the bank sent in the money from your account.

There is a possibility there was no money left in the account when the time span for the law of escheat kicked in. Many banks levy fees, such as $5 or $10 annually, on dormant accounts. That type of fee might have brought your account down to zero before the bank was required to surrender it.

Q. Does money in a bank account continue to earn interest after it is turned over to a state under the law of escheat?

A. No. Once the money reaches the state authorities, it becomes absolutely dormant — accumulating no more interest.

Let's say you had exactly $100 in a bank account and made no deposits or withdrawals for the number of years specified for dormant accounts to be sent to the state. And let's say you claim that account by proving your ownership 10, 20 or 30 years later.

You'll get $100. That's all.

Q. I recently read about a new type of certificate of deposit called "Access CD." The article states that the CD yields the interest rate in effect for whatever length of time a depositor picks, but it works similar to a money market deposit account because the customer can make unlimited extra deposits and three withdrawals without paying any penalty.

The people at my local S&L have never heard of this. Is this type of CD offered by only one particular bank or S&L and not available generally?

A. "Generally" is a tough word in this context. A fair number of banks and S&Ls offer that kind of CD, although they might give them names other than Access CD. In this era of deregulated banking, depository institutions come up with all kinds of wrinkles on CDs and other accounts. You'll have to check around at banks and S&Ls to find one offering a similar type of CD.

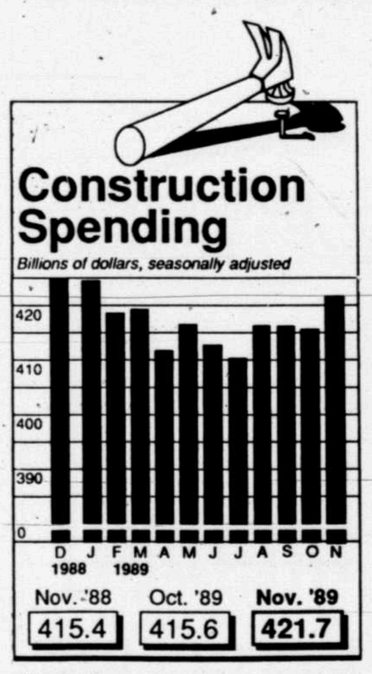

The one you describe has some of the earmarks of an "Add-on CD" to which you can add money and earn the interest rate set when the account was opened. You'll probably find that the interest is a bit lower than regular CDs to which no money can be added and from which penalty-free withdrawals are not allowed.

Construction spending jumps

Up 1.5 percent to 10-month high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending jumped 1.5 percent in November, rebounding from a 0.1 percent decrease in October and reaching a 10-month high, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said residential, non-residential and government construction spending totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $421.7 billion in November. It was the highest level of spending since last January's $423 billion rate.

Total spending in October was revised downward from the 1 percent increase reported initially.

The November surge was due to a 7 percent jump in government spending, which represents about 20 percent of construction spending, combined with a 0.6 percent gain in residential construction, which accounts for about 50 percent of the total. Non-residential spending was off 0.7 percent.

Construction spending fell to a yearly low rate of $410.3 billion last July. It has been among the sectors of the economy hardest hit by higher interest rates earlier this year, brought about by the Federal Reserve efforts to restrain inflation by tightening credit.

But as inflation moderated, the Fed began last June to let short-term rates drop and analysts have been saying the lower rates should result in increased construction.

Fixed-rate mortgages declined from a peak of 11.22 percent last March to 9.74 percent at the end of November, according to a weekly survey by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

Residential construction totaled a seasonally adjusted $194.4 billion on an annual rate in November.

Single-family construction was up 1.5 percent to $114.2 billion. Apartment construction gained 4.7 percent to $22.5 billion.

Non-residential construction fell 0.7 percent to $100.7 billion on an annual rate.

On the other hand, the volatile government sector jumped 7 percent to $91.4 billion.

The total construction figure was up 1.5 percent from the level of building a year ago.

MUST BE 18 YEARS OF AGE TO ENTER

Wage increase could hurt women

DALLAS (AP) — Up to 5.6 million women will be unable to keep or find jobs over the next two years, when the minimum hourly wage increases from $3.35 per hour to $4.25, according to a University of Massachusetts researcher.

But his findings have been disputed by labor experts and a sociologist who specializes in studies on women in the labor force.

The Dallas-based National Center for Policy Analysis — a non-profit, non-partisan research institute funded mainly by large corporations and oil companies — asked professor Robert Nakosteen to make the predictions.

Nakosteen developed the projections based on a study he coauthored on women in the 1979 labor force. The study showed a correlation between wage hikes and displaced female workers.

The minimum wage hike will go into effect in two stages, with a 45-cent increase April 1, followed by another 45-cent increase in April 1991.

The package also allows a sub-minimum training wage of $3.35 per hour for workers aged 16 to 19. In April 1991 the sub-minimum wage will increase to $3.61.

John Goodman, president of the National Center for Policy Analysis, said the minimum wage hike was "a horrible mistake."

"The dramatic effect is that there will be millions of disadvantaged women who will be closed out of the labor market."
John Goodman, National Center for Policy Analysis

"The dramatic effect is that there will be millions of disadvantaged women who will be closed out of the labor market," Goodman said.

"In my opinion, if you have your wages freely determined then everyone will be able to get a job; no one will be barred from the labor market," he said. "But once you put a floor on it (and) you say to a group of people 'You cannot lower your price,' then you put them at a disadvantage and make it impossible for them to get jobs anywhere."

Nakosteen predicts women will be displaced because employers think their productivity amounts to less than $4.25 per hour.

Disabled or physically impaired women, women who married before the age of 20 and those for whom English is a second language will be most affected, he said.

However, a University of Texas at Arlington sociologist says productivity isn't the problem.

"I would emphasize that it's not really a matter of productivity between men and women," said professor Dana Dunn. "It's not that women are worth less. It's simply a matter of being discriminated against because employers have preferences (in) hiring men."

The executive director of 9 to 5, the National Association of Working Women, said Nakosteen's forecast shows that women are being blamed for being awarded a pay raise.

"Management has been flooding the labor force with low-paid women, men and minorities for the last 15 years, specifically to avoid making capital investments," said Karen Nussbaum. "So the argument that we should keep wages low so we can keep women working means that management gets off the hook again."

Attendants quit as UAL union leaders

CHICAGO (AP) — Two top officials of the United Airlines flight attendants union stepped down Monday after five years that covered a bitter strike, corporate restructuring and ongoing buyout machinations.

"We've been under siege since 1985," said Carol Holmes, vice president of the United unit of the Association of Flight Attendants.

She and Pat Friend, president of the Chicago-based unit, announced in December they would resign Monday, six months before their terms expire.

The resignations came as the union remains deadlocked in contract talks with United and faces a possible strike.

"I'm not sure I could ever deliver a contract," Ms. Friend said. "The situation calls for new leadership and a fresh perspective. Some catalyst needs to come in and alter the situation."

Stock Market Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices advanced on Wall Street today after a survey of purchasing executives indicated the manufacturing economy remained weak in December.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 15.14 to 2,768.34 as of noon EST.

Advancing issues were ahead of decliners by a margin of about 10 to 7, with 814 stocks rising, 581 falling and 425 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the Big Board came to 68.59 million shares at midday.

Stock prices rose after the National Association of Purchasing Management said its monthly survey indicated growth in the manufacturing economy slowed for the eighth straight month in December.

Navistar led the NYSE's most active list, rising ⅛ to 4.

Among the big gainers was IBM, which rose 2¾ to 96⅞. Analysts said big stocks, including the technology issues, were benefiting by the amount of cash available following yearend portfolio liquidations. Digital Equipment was up 1½ to 83½.

Among blue-chip stocks, AT&T was up ½ at 46 and Philip Morris rose ¾ to 42⅜.

Toys R Us was up 2 to 37⅞ after the retailer reported its Christmas sales were up 22.7 percent from a year earlier.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up 0.60 at 195.64. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.82 to 378.82.

WORLD in brief

Weizman quits 'inner circle'

JERUSALEM (AP) — Defusing a political crisis that threatened the coalition government, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today canceled his decision to fire Science Minister Ezer Weizman for alleged contacts with the PLO.

In a political compromise, Weizman had agreed to quit the decision-making inner Cabinet. The announcement came after Shamir summoned Weizman today.

The agreement ended two days of intense efforts to save the coalition of the conservative Likud bloc that Shamir heads and the center-left Labor Party of which Weizman is a senior member.

The crisis was the worst to shake a Likud-Labor alliance in six years and concerned a major issue that has split the nation — how to resolve Israel's festering conflict with Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

On Sunday, Shamir gave Weizman written notice that he was fired as of today because of contacts with the PLO in which Weizman allegedly divulged secret Israeli strategy that he learned in meetings of the 12-member inner Cabinetn

Weizman told reporters after the five-minute meeting that Shamir had not confronted him with evidence of the PLO contacts.

Cuba won't see change

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Fidel Castro said Monday that nothing would divert Cuba from socialism, indicating his government would not be swayed by the reforms sweeping Eastern Europe, the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina said.

"I am sure that we have all the political and moral factors to confront any type of problem and that nothing and no one will make our nation backtrack on the road of socialism," the official news agency quoted Castro as saying.

The Cuban president spoke in a televised New Year's message, according to the dispatch, which was monitored in Mexico.

He acknowledged that Cuba is facing "difficult times" and praised what he called the "exemplary conduct" of the population in coping with economic problems.

Albania holding the line

LONDON (AP) — Albania's leader, Ramiz Alia, vowed in a New Year's message to his nation to stay its socialist course and resist the upheaval that has toppled Communist regimes throughout Eastern Europe this past year.

Albania is Europe's last hard-line Communist state.

"The events that have occurred recently in Eastern Europe have inspired certain known anti-Albanian forces to resume the campaign of slanders against our country," Alia was quoted as saying by the official Ata news agency.

"But, as our people say, they cannot succeed in doing us harm," he was quoted as saying in Monday's address. The news agency was monitored in England by the British Broadcasting Corp.

Alia appeared to be responding to a call by the pretender to the throne of Albania, Leka I, for his 3 million compatriots to rise up and overthrow the Communist government.

Leka I, son of the self-styled King Zog I who ruled Albania from 1925 to 1939, urged an end to the "tyrannical and atheist regime" in a message Sunday from South Africa, where he lives.

Car bomb kills cabbie

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A car bomb exploded today in east Belfast, killing a cabbie who was driving his daughter to school, police said. The outlawed Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility.

The 16-year-old girl was wounded in the attack, the Royal Ulster Constabulary said.

Police did not immediately release the names of the father and daughter, the first victims of 1990 of Northern Ireland's 20-year old political and sectarian violence.

They were heading to the daughter's school when the bomb exploded and the car crashed into a lamp post, said a police spokesman, speaking anonymously in keeping with British custom.

The IRA issued a statement to Belfast news media claiming responsibility and alleging the dead man was a longtime member of the Ulster Defense Association and the Ulster Freedom Fighters, outlawed Protestant paramilitary organizations.

Party chief injured

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party chief in the Azerbaijani town of Dzhali-Abad was among 80 people injured in a clash between police and demonstrators demanding his ouster, an official said.

Members of a grass-roots political group, the Azerbaijani People's Front, staged the demonstrations Friday and Saturday, said Savili A. Perets, deputy director of the southern republic's official news agency, Azerinform.

They attacked the police and regional party headquarters in Dzhali-Abad, near the Iranian border and the Caspian Sea.

Moslem rivals exchange fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Shiite Moslem militias using tanks, rocket-propelled grenades and 106mm guns today battled in southern Lebanon, and police said five people were killed and 12 wounded.

The fighting raged among the bluffs of Kfar Hatta village, southeast of Sidon, a police spokesman said.

The spokesman, who cannot be named in line with standing regulations, said the hills were essential for the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, to ensure supplies to its southern bases from the eastern Bekaa valley.

Kfar Hatta is just below the mountainous routes controlled by Israeli troops and allied South Lebanon Army militiamen from Israel's self-proclaimed buffer zone in southern Lebanon.

The new casualties raised the overall toll to 64 killed and 228 wounded since the current round of fighting erupted Dec. 13, pitting the fundamentalist Hezbollah against the pro-Syrian secular Amal militia.

Efforts by Iran and Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization to curb the fighting have failed to stop the fighting.

An Amal communique claimed its fighters repulsed a pre-dawn Hezbollah attack.

"The infiltrators who came under cover of darkness were forced to flee in chaos, leaving behind several dead on the battlefield," said the communique, which was issued in Beirut.

A Hezbollah communique blamed the escalation of hostilities on a relentless Amal bombardment of its beleaguered bases in Jbaa and Ein Bouswar south of Kfar Hatta.

Both sides also traded charges of collaborating with Israel and the South Lebanon Army, their common enemy.

Amal's top commander in southern Lebanon, Atef Aoun, has claimed Iran paid $250,000 to Israel and the South Lebanese Army to allow Hezbollah to move reinforcements from the Bekaa to the region through South Lebanese Army lines.

He claimed he had evidence of such a payment, but did not make it public.

Statements from Hezbollah have claimed that Amal was out to expel pro-Iranian fundamentalists from southern Lebanon to set the stage for concluding a deal of co-existence with Israel.

Israel has maintained control over its self-proclaimed 328-square-mile security zone since 1985, using it as a buffer against cross-border guerrilla raids.

Hezbollah is considered to be the umbrella organization for extremist groups holding 18 foreign hostages in Lebanon, including eight Americans. The longest held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was abducted March 16, 1985.

Fang may be allowed to leave

HONG KONG (AP) — A China-watching magazine reported today that fugitive dissident Fang Lizhi will be allowed to leave the U.S. Embassy in Beijing and go into exile in Australia or another country this month.

The Chinese-language Pai Shing Semi-monthly reported that the United States and China reached an "understanding" on resolving the impasse over Fang when U.S. National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft visited Beijing in December.

The magazine, a leading publication in this British colony reporting on Chinese affairs, did not reveal any source for the article. There was no immediate comment from the Chinese government.

White House officials reacted to the report with skepticism.

"He's still in the embassy. There have been no new developments," White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said.

An administration official, who declined to be identified, said, "I would steer you away" from the magazine report.

Fang, an astrophysicist who was China's most outspoken dissident in recent years, sought refuge in the embassy with his wife in June when authorities issued a warrant for their arrests as part of the crackdown on dissent.

U.S. diplomats leave Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Twenty U.S. diplomats that President Daniel Ortega ordered expelled in retaliation for the search of its ambassador's residence in Panama by American forces left Nicaragua Monday night.

The diplomats refused to speak with reporters before they and their families boarded a commercial flight to Miami.

Nicaragua's Sandinista government gave the Americans 72 hours to leave the country and ordered the U.S. Embassy support staff in Managua slashed from 320 employees to 100 on Friday after U.S. troops raided Ambassador Antenor Ferrey's home in Panama City.

U.S. officials said the troops were searching for weapons and "courteously withdrew" about four hours after they arrived when they learned it was a diplomatic residence. A U.S. army colonel in charge of the operation later apologized and returned rifles, Ferrey said.

President Bush, in Texas on vacation, also apologized for the incident but expressed wonder at the amount of arms found inside the residence.

The U.S. State Department called Nicaragua's retaliation an "irresponsible overreaction."

Ortega described it as "a very moderate response."

NOTICE AFFORDING AND OPPORTUNITY FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

MH 903 (LAMESA ROAD)

FROM: Near Wadley Avenue, North 1.2 miles
TO: Loop 250

MIDLAND COUNTY

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation is planning the reconstruction of Lamesa Road (MH 903) from near Wadley Avenue, North 1.2 miles to Loop 250.

The proposed project will provide for the construction of a four lane facility with a 14-foot turning lane within a 67-foot curb and gutter section. It is expected that the City of Midland will provide the necessary right of way in connection with this project.

Maps and other drawings showing the proposed location and design, environmental studies and any other information about the proposed project are on file and available for inspection and copying at the Resident Engineer's office at 2701 Elizabeth Ave. in Midland, Texas or the District Office at 3901 East Highway 80 in Odessa, Texas. The maps and drawings showing the proposed location and design will be placed on file with the City of Midland (Mayor's Office).

This project will be constructed on existing right of way with some new right of way required, however there will not be any houses or businesses displaced. Information about the State's Relocation Assistance Program, the benefits and services for displaces and information concerning the relocation assistance office can be obtained from the District Office located at 3901 East Highway 80, Odessa, Texas 79761, telephone number (915) 332-0501. Information about tentative schedules concerning property acquisition and construction can be obtained at the Resident Engineer's Office in Midland or the District Office in Odessa.

Any interested citizen may request that a Public Hearing be held concerning the social, economic and environmental effects of the proposed project and design for this highway project by delivering a written request to the Resident Engineer's Office in Midland or the District Office in Odessa on or before January 12, 1990. The address of the Resident Engineer's Office is 2701 Elizabeth Avenue, Midland, Texas 79701. The address of the District office is 3901 East Highway 80, Odessa, Texas 79761.

In the event such a request is received, a public hearing will be scheduled and adequate notice will be published about the date and location of the hearing.
