WWII vets walk away from crash

FORT WORTH (AP) — Their single-engine airplane crashed in a ditch on landing approach Saturday, but it was no big deal for the World War II Army Air Corps veterans on board.

"This happens all the time," said Coleman Sanders, a 66-year-old former fighter pilot from Cape Coral, Fla., obviously unimpressed that he climbed from the crumpled plane with not a scratch. "We've been doing this all of our lives. We're trained for this."

Sanders and pilot Albert Hagan of Katy, Texas, went on to a Fort Worth hotel for a party with their war buddies — all of whom were in town for a national reunion of the 303rd Bombardment Group, nicknamed "Hell's Angels."

"We're going to present them with the purple heart tonight," veteran fighter pilot Bill Kidd quipped.

Sanders said he called his wife to let her know what happened. "I told her the good news and the bad news," he said.

"The good news is that on May 13th, I was in the States."

Lewis optimistic of budget session

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis wants to have a spending and tax plan ready when legislators return June 22 to break the deadlock that saw the regular session end without a budget for the first time since 1961.

"We're hoping we're going to have a proposal to lay out on the 22nd that, hopefully, is going to be an agreed-to proposal," Lewis said. "I know I'll have one that, whether it's agreed on or not, I feel very confident in. Hopefully, it will be acceptable to all parties concerned."

Following a two-day special session to pass several civil justice reform bills, lawmakers finally left Austin Wednesday for a 19-day break instead of the prescribed 19 months between regular sessions.

But Lewis says budget work will continue in the interim. That will include meetings with Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, even though those two weren't getting along that well when the regular session ended.

"It might be surprising to many people, but I've been visiting with the governor, the lieutenant governor. We're starting to find some middle ground on these things," Lewis said.

Clements has insisted he will veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion, although the House and Senate approved considerably larger budgets for 1988-89.

During interviews last week, Clements said he stands ready to make another no-new-taxes tour of the state to rally public support if needed to hold the line on taxes. He visited 17 cities during a three-week period in April and May.

Meetings involving the governor's aides, the staffs of legislative leaders and other officials are aimed at finding a set of budget numbers all will agree to work from.

Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary, said the governor is willing to go to $27 billion on major funds, up about $1.1 billion from his February proposal.

Lewis said he thinks lawmakers eventually will approve a budget calling for slightly more than $2.9 billion in new taxes.

Two bills and two proposed constitutional amendments already have been filed for the special session to create a lottery.

City agenda has triple topics set

Flooding, beekeeping and ambulance service are on the City Council agenda for Tuesday's 6:30 p.m. meeting at the Big Spring Airpark meeting room.

Council also will conduct a work session at 3 p.m. Monday at the Airpark, followed by a meeting to discuss and take action on ambulance service.

Council is expected to approve a resolution authorizing Mayor Cotton Mize to execute a contract with Rural/Metro ambulance company at the Monday meeting, and to approve it on second and final reading Tuesday.

The company was recommended by the city/county ambulance advisory committee and after a hearing last week, by an appointed negotiating committee of two Councilmen and two County Commissioners.

Commissioners are expected to act on the recommendation at a meeting Monday morning.

A public hearing on the subject appears on Tuesday's agenda, with discussion on "public convenience and necessity" of the ambulance situation.

The Natural Dam Lake and Beals Creek flooding situation is to be discussed, with the Council taking action deemed appropriate. Such action is not detailed in Council agenda.

Regarding beekeeping, two possible ordinances are on the agenda, from banning bees outright to limiting them, and the item is expected to be discussed at Monday's work session.

Beekeeping in city limits came to Council attention last month when citizens complained of neighbors' swarming, stinging bees.

Council members first proposed banning beekeeping, but after citizen discussion against the action, indicated limiting bees might be more appropriate.

Council also is to consider specifications and authorization to advertise for bids for a street project, two alcoholic beverage permits and a carnival permit.

Colorful bird describes local visit

I was flying from my nest near Comanche Trail Lake that fateful May Friday, when a tasty-looking plant in the Big Spring Athletics window at Highland Mall caught my eye and I thought I'd get a bite to eat.

I flew towards what I thought was a hole in the wall, and Wham! — I hit an invisible barrier.

I must have been stunned, for I just lay on the sidewalk at the feet of a human female I later learned was named Gwen Nichols. She nearly stepped on me.

My head hurt. My eye bled a little onto my beak.

Gwen, realizing I was injured, lifted me in her hand, remarking on my striking coloring. She had never before seen a bird of my kind: Blue head, bright red chest, green and yellow wings. Occasionally, humans mistake me for a fake bird that's been highlighted with colorful paints.

Actually, I'm a male Painted Bunting, small enough to hold in your hand and bright enough to be noticed a block away.

Females of my kind don't share the painted look, instead being pale yellow-green. We generally live seven to 12 years.

Because we remain hidden most of the time, humans don't usually see us. We like to summer in West Texas and go south during the fall — we remain primarily in the Southern United States and descend from a lineage known as Passerina ciris.

Gwen, thinking I was someone's escaped pet — not realizing it is illegal for us to be contained — placed me in a cage she bought at a local store. I was too hurt to fight her. She planned to place an advertisement in the newspaper: Bird found.

The woman wanted her friends to see me, and that's how I got to visit Aladdin Beauty College where she is a student.

She put water in the cage and a substance I later learned was supposed to be food.

It didn't seem like food. It didn't move, like insects, and it didn't grow on a plant, like Gwen Nichols, a student at Aladdin Beauty College, admires a rare bird, called Painted Bunting, outside the school's building, 1007 11th St. She found the bird injured on the sidewalk. Soon after the picture was taken, authorities collected the visitor to take him to a bird shelter in Midland. Officials say it is a rarity for humans to see the bird.

Johnson grass seed, the things I usually eat.

I know where to find the best Johnson grass seed around, near the Brandin' Iron on Highway 87, where some of my friends used to nest.

But after my crash landing, my appetite was pretty minimal anyway.

After a while I began feeling well enough to realize the spot I was in — caged, in a strange place, with dangerous creatures milling around.

Gwen seemed to know a little about birds. When I became upset, she put a towel over the cage and transformed my situation into calm darkness.

When an Aladdin customer saw me, she realized how rarely humans see my kind and phoned her daughter-in-law, bird rehabilitator Bebe McCasland.

Bebe paid a quick visit and she instantly knew what had to be done: As a wild bird, I needed to be placed in the proper environment.

She and the game warden stressed the federal and state laws that protect wild birds. Some humans might think the threat of fines for capturing us is harsh.

You have to understand, however, that the laws exist to protect birds like me. Bebe knew that if caged too long and exposed to too much stress, I could die.

She put me in a soothing dark box just before we left to visit the Midland bird sanctuary, the best place for me under the circumstances.

Although frightened at first, I took courage from the other birds there, who seemed to be all right. Bebe said I'd be kept at the sanctuary a week or two, until the humans determined I was well and can be returned to the wild.

Editor's note: This report was filed by Herald staff writer Spencer Sandow, with the help of authorities and a small bird that brightened May 29 for Gwen Nichols. It is now in good condition.

Official recalls 35 years of school days

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

What do 35 years as a school administrator mean?

For Don Crockett, they have meant good times, bad times, and one sure thing: Nearly everything has changed.

"When I started with the district

(in 1952) we had 180 students bused now we have 2,600," says the longtime Big Spring Independent School District employee.

That's only one of many changes the assistant superintendent for business has seen in his career. It will end this Friday, upon his retirement.

Crockett began his association with the district in 1952, when he was appointed to the special services department. He was responsible for handling all paperwork and regulations pertaining to students whose parents were stationed at the now-defunct Webb Air Force Base.

Five years later, he was named assistant business manager, and became business manager in 1966 when Pat Murphy retired.

Crockett remembers the years leading to 1977 as a time of growth for the district.

The current high school building was completed the year he began and several new school buildings were added during subsequent years.

East, North and South Ward elementary schools were built in the late 1960s, and additions were

Death camp refugee has come a long way

ANDOVER, Mass. — As a boy, Sathaya Tor was on his own in the chaos of Cambodia, fending off bandits and soldiers.

He was a witness to genocide, forced to dig mass graves in a child labor camp. He lived on frogs and crickets. He endured jungles and the treachery of a friend to escape to the United States.

On Sunday he graduates from Phillips Academy, the prep school better known as Andover, only three days after a reunion with his parents. He has been accepted at Stanford University, where he plans to study international relations.

At age 19, Tor is a cultural acrobat, leaping from the gentility of one of America's best private SATHAYA TOR schools, to the transplanted Cambodian community of Southern California where his parents will settle with his sister, and back to the memories of horror he left behind in 1980.

"It's hard sometimes," Tor said in an interview. "People in these schools are really nice to me. But sometimes I find I just don't fit. I just feel isolated, not physically but emotionally."

He plans to attend Texas A&M and study mechanical engineering.

Connie, the daughter of Juana Swinney, 1504 Bluebird, graduated this year with a grade point average of 3.0. She was a member of the student council, as well as being president of V.I.C.A. (Vocational Industrial Cooperative Association).

State University as a law major.

The three recipients were honored at a banquet and dance sponsored by the Mexican American Student Council Saturday night.

Weather

State

Scattered showers and thunderstorms ranged across parts of South Texas Saturday afternoon.

Runoff from heavy rains last week had the Guadalupe and San Antonio rivers out of their banks, but the National Weather Service said precipitation like that which caused flooding throughout the region was not in the forecast.

Strong thunderstorms dotted the coast near Corpus Christi and near Del Rio embedded in showers stretching from Brownsville to the Big Bend region.

The storms kept skies mostly cloudy along the coast as far as Galveston, along the Rio Grande and into West Texas. The rest of the state enjoyed clear skies as a large area of high pressure stretching from the northeastern United States dominated Texas weather.

Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 80s with some 70s in the west and the Panhandle. The 3 p.m. extremes were 88 degrees at Beaumont and 72 at Marfa.

Partly cloudy to fair skies and warm conditions were forecast across the state through Monday, with a chance of widely scattered afternoon and evening showers in South and West Texas.

Highs were to be generally in the 90s with some 90s in deep South Texas and near the coast; overnight lows were to be in the 60s and 70s.

Hot water heater probable cause of mobile home fire

Local firefighters were called to the scene of a fire at 1303 Elm St. Saturday afternoon, fire officials said.

The sole occupant of the home was evacuated without injury. Lieutenant Larry Ringener said.

The fire in the mobile home appeared to have begun in the hot water heater, Lt. Ringener said.

Firefighters were called to the scene at 12:49 p.m., arrived at 12:53 p.m., and returned to the station at 1:41 p.m.

No further information was available at press time.

Texas prisons release 200 inmates on parole

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The Texas prison system, closed to new admissions after exceeding a state-mandated limit, released more than 200 inmates on parole Saturday to help ease crowding, a prison spokesman said.

Despite the release of the inmates, the system would remain closed to new arrivals Monday, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said.

For the 12th time this year, the prison system closed its doors to new inmates at 5 p.m. Friday after the inmate population exceeded a state-mandated 95 percent of capacity.

The inmate population at midnight Thursday totaled 38,505 inmates, or 95.18 percent — 74 over the legal capacity, Brown said.

The department normally does not admit or release inmates over the weekend, but 224 inmates were released Saturday, officials said.

but it's hard for them to know what it's like to see people killed or blown up by mines. I had an AK-47 (rifle) when I was 11 years old," he said.

His prep school friends are eager to hear his stories.

A slim young man with an open smile and large brown eyes that appeal for humor in an often grim world, Tor was the 10th of 13 children. His father, Chhieng Tor, now 70, worked as a post office secretary. His mother, Sourn On, 67, was a seamstress.

When the communist Khmer Rouge ousted the U.S.-backed government of Lon Nol in 1975, the 8-year-old Tor was taken from his family and forced into a labor camp about 30 miles from his hometown of Battambang.

"All year long you worked planting rice, digging canals — but sometimes they turn into mass graves where they execute people. One way to become a good communist boy is to become ruthless and do what they tell you. We rose when the cock crowed, at 4:30 a.m., and sometimes worked 'til after dark. The worst part for me was starving. I was constantly looking for things to eat."

The camp commanders were not his only foes. For the sake of a bowl of rice, a friend turned in Tor for stealing an ear of corn.

This ended four years later when the Vietnamese invaded Cambodia and chased Khmer Rouge leader Pol Pot and his troops into the jungles. Tor, by then 12, made his way back to Battambang but found his family was gone. He was told his parents had died.

Escaping the austere rule of the Vietnamese, Tor made his way to Thailand, where he found shelter with a farm couple and tended their rice paddies and buffalo.

In Thailand he visited a refugee camp and discovered one of his sisters there. She was in the process of obtaining visas to America with her husband and baby boy and was permitted to take Tor with her as well.

His desire to learn was keen. Before coming to this country, Tor couldn't afford English classes but learned anyway by standing outside the classroom door.

In California he attended his first formal school and earned money by selling newspapers. With his savings he went to Honolulu, where he lived with a family friend and studied English at a private school. This led to a scholarship to another private school there.

His parents arrived in California on May 26.

"I've changed a lot, the way I think, the way I see the world," said Tor shortly after a tearful reunion with his parents at Logan International Airport in Boston. "But I'm really glad they're safe and they can enjoy life after what they've been through."

DPS officers shoot suspect in drug bust

DALLAS — Two Department of Public Safety undercover officers shot a suspected drug dealer to death in a grocery store parking lot after he fired at them while trying to escape, authorities said.

In an operation described by DPS Capt. Wesley Crites as a "drug bust gone sour," the two officers fired four times, killing a man identified as Edward Dominiques, 44, of Dallas.

A second man, Lasaro De La Paz, 38, was charged with aggravated delivery of a controlled substance and was being held in Lew Sterrett Justice Center Saturday in lieu of $25,000 bond, officials said.

DPS officials and Dallas police are investigating the shooting at Hodges grocery, DPS spokesman Ray Ward said Saturday. The grocery usually is crowded on Fridays, and several bystanders criticized officers for firing at a public place.

Two brothers, company plead guilty

BEAUMONT — Two brothers of the Fredeman shipping family and their tugboat fueling company have pleaded guilty to federal charges involving theft of fuel and marine equipment.

Henry F. Fredeman II, 46, pleaded guilty Friday to two counts of theft of marine equipment, while his brother William Fredeman Jr., 49, pleaded guilty to charges of not telling about a federal felony of which he had knowledge.

Henry Fredeman could receive up to 10 years in prison and $10,000 in fines, and William Fredeman faces a maximum six years in prison and $1,000 in fines.

U.S. District Judge Sam Hall has scheduled sentencing for Aug. 3.

The brothers' Channel Fueling Services Inc. pleaded guilty to one count of theft of fuel and could be fined up to $5,000. Both brothers live in Groves and the company is based in Port Arthur.

Last year, the two brothers, their father, brother-in-law, several employees and three family-owned businesses were named in a 176-page federal indictment. Prosecutors claim the family stole up to $40 million of fuel over a 20-year period.

Man gets second life term

HOUSTON (AP) — A man accused of killing his former girlfriend's parents at her request was sentenced to a second life term in the case as part of a plea bargain agreement.

David Duval West, 31, pleaded guilty Friday to murder in the death of James Campbell. The life sentence he received will run concurrently with the first he got in the shooting death of Campbell's wife, Virginia.

The Campbells were found shot to death in their Houston home on June 19, 1982.

West faced a capital murder charge and a possible death sentence had he not agreed to the plea bargain.

As part of the bargain, West testified against Cynthia Campbell Ray during both her trials — the second of which resulted with a life sentence for her participation in her parents' slayings. The first ended in a hung jury.

West testified during both trials he loved Ms. Ray and went along with her plans to kill her parents because he believed both were abusive. Prosecutors presented evidence that Ms. Ray's claims of abuse were lies and that she wanted her parents dead so she could collect her inheritance.

West said he and Ms. Ray donned flak jackets and men's boots the night of the slayings and entered the Campbells' house through a window Ms. Ray had left unlocked. He said he fired three shots into the sleeping couple when Ms. Ray turned on the lights.

Ms. Ray and West were not arrested until after a female private investigator hired by the Campbells' other daughters coaxed a confession from West concerning the slayings.

Plane moved to Fort Worth

SHATTUCK, Okla. (AP) — Wreckage of a plane flown by Louisiana gubernatorial candidate Noel "Butch" Baum has been taken to Fort Worth for further analysis, according to federal aviation officials.

Baum, 49, was killed Wednesday when the single engine plane crashed into an Ellis County hillside in western Oklahoma. Authorities say the plane was about 500 miles beyond its destination of Alexandria, La.

The wreckage was found by a farmer in a rural area 12 miles southeast of Shattuck.

Investigators with the National Transportation Safety Board said Friday that Baum's pressurized Cessna 210 was on automatic pilot when it crashed although the system was in the "off" position at the crash site.

Armand Edwards, senior safety investigator with the NTSB's Fort Worth district office, said the plane flown by Baum had an automatic pilot system that switches off when it loses electrical power, which occurred when the plane ran out of fuel.

Edwards said the plane will undergo closer examination at the NTSB laboratory in Fort Worth.

He said the results of toxicology tests performed by the Oklahoma medical examiner's office are not yet available.

Parolee to die for slayings

HOUSTON — A jury deliberated only about 35 minutes before deciding on the death penalty for a man convicted of killing a woman and her 2-year-old boy.

Michael Wayne Norris, 29, was sentenced to death by injection Friday for the slayings of Georgia Lee Rollins, 38, and her son Keith on Nov. 12, 1986. Norris sat quietly as State District Judge Johnny Kolenda pronounced the sentence.

Norris had been out of prison about six months after serving 2 1/2 years of a seven-year term for murder when the two were shot to death in their Houston apartment.

Prosecutor Ira Jones said Norris met Ms. Rollins at a church and began dating her shortly after he was paroled. Jones said that a month before the slayings, Norris had threatened to kill Ms. Rollins and himself if she returned to her husband.

Opinion

Time will tell on ambulance

The search for a new ambulance service for this community has been almost comical, bordering on potential tragedy, yet quite fruitful.

It has been punctuated by a mixture of bungling ineptitude, healthy discussions on the issues, a concern for the taxpayers' purses, and a considerable amount of integrity by nearly all the elected and appointed officials involved.

The outcome appears to be a reasonable service arrived at through reasonable compromises. But only time will verify the truth of that assessment.

Ineptitude was evident when local officials prematurely elected to seek bids for the service, and then mishandled those bids.

Bids were sought prematurely because our public officials failed to first determine what level of service this community wants and needs.

A number of residents have indicated dissatisfaction with a service that would provide only one ambulance ready to roll at all times and another on call. And we think this community deserves better.

But it's difficult to tell what level of service is needed because Lee Ambulance Service never was forced to give proper reports and statistics on the number and types of calls, peak periods and response times.

In addition, those statistics apparently have not been compiled by the city police department, which has provided most of the dispatching for the ambulance service.

The bidding was mishandled when one or two bidders received advice and interpretations that others did not. And when the inequities of the bidder were called to the attention of city officials, some weaseling occurred.

First we were told that bidding really was not necessary, because ambulance service comes under professional services, which do not require bidding.

We were told that the bids actually were only proposals subject to negotiation.

Later, it was learned that ambulance services are not included in the professional services category. Instead, it was explained that ambulance service comes under the public safety classification, which also does not require bids.

That's an example of ineptitude — not knowing or checking what's proper.

We maintain that after it was decided to seek bids and distribute bidding specifications, those specifications should have been followed and that all bidders should have been treated equally, with equal notice of negotiation opportunities.

It appears obvious that such was not the case. We think that this bungling was inadvertent and not deliberate.

And in the end, the contract that is being awarded may be the best service available for the money.

The company getting the contract — Rural/Metro of Scottsdale, Ariz. — has agreed to provide a second ambulance 10 hours daily, 5½ days per week.

That second ambulance basically is designated for transfer service. But its hours will be adjusted to peak needs, the company said.

A third ambulance and crew is to be available on call. And now a fourth is scheduled to be provided to the city fire department after firefighters become recertified as emergency medical technicians.

That may not be the ideal service, but it's better than originally indicated.

Rural/Metro is to receive a three-year contract with a 90-day termination notice available to both parties. And the Ambulance Operations Advisory Committee will be reviewing the company's service at the end of six months.

In addition, the company has agreed to a subsidy-loss penalty for failure to provide appropriate statistics in monthly reports.

The only other issue is whether the city and county should get into ambulance transfer service franchising. We think not.

We think the best service will draw most of the transfer business, and that the free enterprise marketplace should be allowed to determine who gets the bulk of the transfer business.

Local officials have been arguing in favor of a private ambulance service for those very reasons — including expectations of a better, more efficient service. So why shouldn't the same reasons apply to the transfer service?

As we indicated earlier, we believe that those who have been involved in the ambulance service decisions have been trying to act in the best interest of local citizens and taxpayers. We believe that includes the Lee Ambulance workers and city firefighters.

We also believe time will confirm the importance of the issues that were raised and the discussions they provoked.

THIS IS A WAR ZONE. ONE HAS TO EXPECT A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF CONFUSION.

Credibility and sensitivity create a love-hate struggle

By DARRELL BERKHEIMER

News people sometimes can be very demanding, even obnoxious. I admit that. In fact, I even plead guilty to having been that way on occasion.

More often, however, news people simply are perceived as being pushy or demanding when people don't want to answer "prying" questions.

The issues involved here are credibility and sensitivity, and the two do battle in the minds of newspaper managers.

The situation reminds me of an old black and white Robert Mitchum movie filmed perhaps 35 or 40 years ago. It was titled "The Night of the Hunter," and in it Mitchum played a demented preacher who was killing women as a result of his past love-hate relationships.

He even had the letters L-O-V-E written or burned on the backs of his fingers of one hand, and H-A-T-E on the fingers of the other. To illustrate his point, he cupped his hands together and demonstrated how love and hate battled each other.

That's how credibility and sensitivity battle one another in the news room.

Let's examine the credibility concept first.

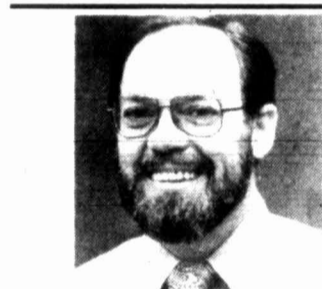

No one wants a Casper Milktoast-type of newspaper that subscribes to the pressures of local officials and businesses.

We know that readers not only want to read what happened, but why and how it happened. As a result, everyone wants an aggressive dig-and-get-it newspaper.

At least they do until those prying questions are aimed at them. That's when the sensitivity issue enters the picture.

Everyone also wants sensitivity to their "special circumstances." And some people become indignant when news representatives press for hard answers to issues and events.

Unfortunately, we can't have it both ways. It's called a double standard, and few people respect any person or organization that operates that way.

Berky's babblings

We hope that we are sensitive to special circumstances, and that we can report tragedies and mistakes with compassion and discretion. Nevertheless, when thousands of our readers have the right to know the how and why, it's our job to aggressively seek that information.

I came to the Big Spring Herald a year ago, and during that time I believe the newspaper has taken some undeserved criticism simply because the credibility-sensitivity issue has not been explained well.

Although hampered by a small staff and other limited resources, I believe the Herald has done a credible job of providing a community-minded and aggressive newspaper.

Certainly there's plenty of room for improvement. We believe, however, that some improvements have been noticeable during the past year, because we've reacted particularly to demands for more local news. And we plan more improvements.

We hope the same positive attitude that so many people are calling for throughout the community is not limited to the city and chamber of commerce, whose spokesmen have led the effort for positive thinking.

Should it not apply to the newspaper, county officials and others as well?

A former publisher noted that when a community experiences harsh economic times, three targets tend to receive the brunt of critical frustration — the city, the chamber of commerce and the newspaper.

I think such has been the case in Big Spring.

To some extent, however, I believe we must fault ourselves for failing to do an adequate job of explaining our position and what we believe to be the role of the newspaper in the community.

We willingly give many inches of space weekly to representatives of the city, the chamber, the county and many other organizations who desire to have their views and positions explained. Yet we tend to overlook the same needs for the newspaper to explain why it does what it does.

We try to anticipate our readers questions about events and issues, and then provide the answers. Yet we tend to neglect reader questions about the newspaper's operations.

We expect other businesses and organizations to be responsive to our readers when we request information. We expect them to realize that it's not just "someone from the newspaper" calling, but our thousands of readers who want the information being requested.

Perhaps newspapers, nationwide, finally are realizing that we must expect the same responsiveness to our readers from ourselves.

Perhaps it's finally obvious to us that we can't expect readers to understand the need for the prying questions, and the credibility and sensitivity issues that we struggle to balance until we take the space and time to explain those issues.

You may have noticed that I occasionally am using this space to provide such explanations. Readers can help by contacting me about the issues that need to be explained.

Chamber bulletins

The Local Industry Committee of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, chaired by Dick Fields, will sponsor a tour of two industries this Thursday from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

This month's tour will include the Walls Industries Inc. factory on Snyder Highway and the Scenic Mountain Medical Center Hospital on west 11th Place.

The tour is open to the public, but please call the Chamber office, 263-7641, for reservations.

The Big Spring Region of the Antique Automobile Club of America announced this week that its 1988 Grand Ole' Tour will be in Big Spring next June.

This tour will bring car clubs from Abilene, Lubbock, San Angelo, Midland, Snyder and Lamesa for the three-day event, scheduled June 23-25, 1988.

The chamber's Convention & Visitors Bureau is working with the group in planning the '88 tour.

Last week, Liz Taylor, manager of the Convention & Visitors Bureau, attended a West Texas Travel Council meeting in El Paso.

The council's main purpose is to promote the region and build a strong tourism and travel industry for West Texas.

The main topics at the meeting were the future of the travel industry in this region and what the council will do to ensure a strong economic base for tourism here.

Other topics included the importance of using regional and national advertising to attract people to the area; an expansion of the council's efforts to participate in out-of-state travel shows to promote the region; revision and expansion of the "Visit West Texas" travel guide; and adding familiarization tours of the region to the council's efforts.

All of these efforts help the region and especially the participating cities.

The Big Spring Convention & Visitors Bureau participates in the council's promotional efforts.

Because of the number of people who plan vacations in the summer, the chamber's board of directors won't meet in June and possibly not until the third Wednesday in August — the next regularly scheduled meeting.

Also, the Convention & Visitors Bureau Committee will not meet in June.

The summer months are a busy time for Big Spring in general. Some of the other special events scheduled this summer and fall are:

June 24-27 — Big Spring Cowboy Reunion & Rodeo.

July 4 — Summerfest.

July 31-Aug. 1 — World's Championship "Texas Style" Dominoes Tournament.

Aug. 7 — Old Settler's Reunion.

Aug. 22 — Spring City Bodybuilding Championship.

Sept. 21-26 — Howard County Fair.

Texas budgeting in perspective

By JESSE TREVINO

So the session is over. Why the Legislature could not agree on a budget for the state is a matter for open debate.

But before lawmakers go back to Austin June 22 to try again, we need to look at the issue in proper perspective.

As almost everyone knows, the politics of the budget crisis revolve around two powerful personalities — Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

More importantly, what has driven them to a stalemate is their differing perceptions of the future of Texas.

The truth of the matter is that Texas is still, like a developing nation, a developing state. Many Texans — especially those living in the mirrored and glass world of the new Texas — may find accepting that view difficult.

But, given the slowdown of the state's economy, widespread economic dislocations and the growth of the state's minority population, there is more of the "developing" Texas today than there was last year.

The blood and guts of the budget issue is the future. Yet Texans began to ponder the future seriously only in the last three years when we began to wonder out loud if Texas can survive graduating high school seniors who can't read or write.

As the fight over school reform raged and oil collapsed, we were late to realize that the new economies of our age are driven by the mind, and that Texas would never again derive its strength from the land and its minerals alone.

So long had we lived expecting oil to bear our tax burden that we now are scrambling to bolster the state's fiscal condition with rushed tax packages and band-aid approaches. In this, the Legislature faces the hardest decision: Raise taxes or cut spending?

Now, misunderstanding the future can kill us, and this is where Clements and Hobby diverge.

Texas is entering an age. It will need new revenues to keep up with its burgeoning population. More, not fewer, challenges await us.

People, who don't want the Texas they've known to change, resist this idea. Yet, Texas is unquestionably, inevitably changing. But it is how that change takes form that matters. The idea is to manage it to make Texas productive and safe.

Clements revealed a rather unsettling view of one aspect of that future — Hispanic population growth — during a campaign stop last year in Amarillo.

A review of what he said can give a clue as to how his thinking on one issue can influence his stand on the budget.

Speaking in Amarillo on the subject of immigration and the new immigration law, he revealed a strange suspicion of Hispanic population growth in general.

His startling statements come back to haunt me because, almost a year later, he is dealing with the state budget. Half of that budget goes into the state's education system — a high-cost item which, as the years progress, becomes increasingly Hispanic.

Clements said "the Texas as we have known it today" will change forever if immigration were not stayed. Implicit in his fear of change, of managing the growth of the Hispanic population is that it detracts, not contributes, from Texas.

Hobby sees the same thing, accepts it, and wants to make Texas prosperous in the future — even with stark ethnic change. Oddly, Clements does not.

It may be because when Clements was leaving Southern Methodist University on the way to becoming a successful businessman, oil was king. Texas' population was 6 million and Hispanics made up as little as 8 percent of the population.

Sure, a lot of people voted for Clements because of his no new taxes stand, but many more voted for him because they had developed a Jimmy Carter-type affection for Mark White.

Klan protesters march

GREENSBORO, N.C. — About 600 anti-Ku Klux Klan protesters marched through downtown Greensboro on Saturday singing "We Shall Overcome" in a demonstration to counter a Klan march planned for Sunday.

City Manager William Carstarphen, who had drawn criticism for issuing a parade permit to the Klan, was one of those leading Saturday's two-hour march and rally. City Councilman Earl Jones, also in the march, said the Klan's decision to march in Greensboro had backfired by drawing the city together in opposition.

Speech draws criticism

HOUSTON — Some lawyers are unhappy that retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, a central figure in the Iran-Contra affair, is scheduled to speak at the State Bar of Texas Convention later this week.

Larry Fitzgerald, a State Bar spokesman, said the bar has received several telephone calls protesting Secord's planned keynote speech Friday in Corpus Christi and the $7,500 plus expenses he will receive.

Earthquakes rock park

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Two small earthquakes rocked the southern half of Yellowstone National Park early Saturday and were felt by dozens of park visitors and nearby residents, a seismologist said.

The first tremor, measuring 4.0 on the Richter scale, occurred about 6:40 a.m. with an epicenter about 15 miles south of Grants Village in the southern part of the park, said Ethan Brown, senior seismologist at the University of Utah Seismograph Stations.

The second quake, with a magnitude of 3.5, occurred just before 11 a.m. in the same area. Brown said no injuries or damages were reported.

Suggestion unheeded

WASHINGTON — The USS Stark's tactical action officer twice dismissed a petty officer's suggestions that the pilot of the Iraqi jet — which ultimately attacked the ship — be warned he was approaching an American vessel, Knight-Ridder Newspapers reported Sunday.

Rep. Larry J. Hopkins was quoted in the report as saying the petty officer in the Stark's combat information center expressed concern over the plane's intentions when it drew within 43 miles of the Stark, just about the range of the two Exocet missiles used in the attack.

Murder

Mother arrested in children's deaths

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — One death certificate cited sudden infant death syndrome. A second listed pneumonitis. Acute pulmonary edema and cardio-respiratory arrest were blamed for still more deaths.

Eight of Mary Beth Tinning's young children died over the course of 14 years. Doctors looked for genetic clues.

Then there was a ninth death, and that became a murder case.

Jury selection for a trial on a single charge of second-degree murder begins Monday in Schenectady County Court, but authorities say Tinning has confessed to killing two other children. Tinning, 44, is suspected in all but one of the deaths.

"Part of the past may come out in this trial," said Schenectady County Assistant District Attorney Alan Gebell.

For a long time, the string of deaths was regarded as a medical mystery, said Dr. Thomas Oram, chief of pathology at Ellis Hospital in Schenectady and the coordinator of medical evidence in the case.

"I think features of this case were discussed among pathologists. I was aware of the name and the problem and the scientific curiosity," he said.

Until 3½-month-old Tami Lynne Tinning died five days before Christmas 1985, there was no legal action. Acting on a tip from a medical informant, police arrested Tinning and charged her with one count of murder for allegedly suffocating Tami Lynne with a pillow.

Police have said that Tinning, 44, is a suspect in seven of the eight other deaths but no additional charges have been filed.

After her arrest, police say Tinning confessed to killing Tami Lynne and two boys because "I'm not a good mother," but said she was not responsible for the other deaths.

Jennifer Lewis Tinning, 7 days old, was the first Tinning child to die, on Jan. 3, 1972, of respiratory failure and a brain abscess. Her brother, Joseph Jr., 2 years old, died 17 days later. Barbara Ann, 4,

Mary Beth Tinning is led from Schenectady County Court by Sheriff Bernard Waldron in this photo from 1986. Nine of Tinning's children died over the course of 14 years. She is formally charged with only one death, but police say she is a suspect in seven of the eight other deaths.

Timothy, 19 days old, died Dec. 10, 1973 — the case was listed as crib death but there was no autopsy. Nathan, 5 months old, died on Sept. 2, 1975; Mary Frances, 3 months, on Feb. 22, 1979; Jonathan, 4 months old, on March 24, 1980; and Michael, 2 years old, on March 2, 1981. Michael was in the process of being adopted when he died. All the others were the natural children of Mary Beth and Joseph Tinning, a General Electric employee who is not considered a suspect in any of the deaths. The couple has no surviving children.

Hijack attempt fails

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — A passenger who threatened to blow up a small commercial seaplane at San Juan's international airport unless he was flown to Cuba surrendered early Saturday to authorities.

After more than seven hours of negotiations, the passenger, who was alone inside the plane, surrendered to FBI agents at 1:15 a.m. EDT, said Edwin Purcell, a Federal Aviation Administration controller at the airport.

The man left the airplane, dropped a briefcase he had claimed was filled with explosives, and surrendered to the agents. Purcell said.

Iran expels diplomats

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran ordered five British diplomats expelled Saturday in retaliation for the closure of an Iranian consulate in England and the deportation of five Iranian diplomats.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the Britons were given one week to leave Iran.

Among those expelled was Edward Chaplin, Britain's No. 2 diplomat in Tehran. Chaplin was abducted May 28 and held for 24 hours in Tehran, the Iranian capital, by armed members of a Komiteh revolutionary police unit.

17 perish in Tokyo fire

TOKYO — A fire Saturday night in a three-story home for the elderly killed 17 people and injured four, police reported.

Kiyoshi Taguchi, an officer at the police station of the city of Higashimurayama, a Tokyo suburb, said there were 75 tenants in the building when the fire broke out at about 11:30 p.m.

Most of those killed, aged between 71 and 93, were bedridden on the second floor where the fire started, Taguchi said.

Many of the tenants managed to escape unattended but others were evacuated by two employees of the building and firefighters, according to Taguchi.

Iran hints at mediation

VIENNA, Austria — Iran's deputy foreign minister indicated Saturday his country is open to regional mediation aimed at defusing Persian Gulf tensions, but said Iran would immediately retaliate against a U.S. attack.

The comments by Hossein Sheikholeslam came after two U.S. senators who visited the gulf last week said America might have to consider a pre-emptive strike against any anti-ship missiles Iran deploys along the Strait of Hormuz.

Two killed, six injured in three balloon crashes

A balloon on a charity fundraiser in Maryland, a balloon toting newlyweds in North Carolina and a balloon on a birthday pleasure ride in Pennsylvania crashed into power lines Saturday, killing two people and injuring six others.

In Gaithersburg, Md., a hot-air balloon that was part of a 50-balloon fund-raising fleet struck lines carrying 69,000 volts of electricity and crashed, killing a teenage passenger and injuring her pilot father, said Montgomery County police spokesman George Luddington.

The gondola containing the pilot and his daughter was torn from the balloon, which began to burn when it hit the lines, said Luddington. The gondola then fell about 30 feet, and propane tanks aboard apparently exploded when it hit the ground, he said.

The pilot, Robert Van Newkirk, 39, of Pittsburgh, suffered burns over 28 percent of his body and was listed in serious condition at the burn unit of the Washington Hospital Center, a hospital spokeswoman said. Killed was his 16-year-old daughter, Christine Lynn.

The balloon was one of about 50 Saturday raising money for Kids Inc., a non-profit group that benefits terminally ill children.

In a similar accident in Charlotte, N.C., a newlywed taking a hot-air balloon ride given as a wedding gift was killed when the craft went down in power lines. His wife was not hurt, but the pilot suffered electrical burns, authorities said. The balloon had been aloft about 40 minutes when it became tangled in the 13,000-volt power lines shortly after 8 a.m., the Cabarrus County sheriff's department said.

"He (the pilot) was attempting to land in an open field and he advised the investigating officer that the sun was in his eyes and he didn't really see the power lines," said sheriff's Lt. D.L. Lambert.

Killed was George Thomas McVane, 26, of Charlotte. The pilot, Steven William Page, 40, suffered electrical burns and was in stable condition at Mercy Hospital. McVane's wife, Kathy, whom he had married April 25, was uninjured.

And in Conestoga, Pa., a hot air balloon carrying five people tangled in 7,500-volt electrical wires and plummeted about 35 feet, authorities said.

The pilot and two passengers were treated for minor injuries at St. Joseph Hospital in Lancaster and released, hospital spokeswoman Kathy Schwalm said. A third passenger, Lois Haas, 58, of York, was in fair condition in the intensive care unit with a head injury and electrical burns, she said.

"I never did this before, and I don't think I'll ever do it again," said Nancy Jeffers, 37, who was taking the trip to celebrate her birthday. Mrs. Jeffers, of Mount Airy, was the only person aboard to escape injury.

The pilot, Richard Fox, of East Berlin, Pa., was trying to land in a wheat field just south of Lancaster built on Washington, Airport and College Heights schools. Crockett recalls two or three additions at the high school during that time also.

The '50s represented the beginning of the end of segregated schools in Big Spring with the closing of the Lakeview School District and the building's incorporation into the Big Spring district, Crockett said.

Prompting the construction was student population, which experienced significant growth. Attendance in 1952 showed 4,800 students — and increased to more than 7,000 25 years later.

The good times came to a halt that year, and the challenges were ushered in with two major setbacks, Crockett recalls.

The first blow came in 1977 when the Air Force announced the closing of the Air Force base. That, Crockett says now, was the low point of his tenure.

"You talk about doom and gloom; in 1977, a lot of people thought this town would dry up and blow away," he said.

The radical drop in student population as a result of the base closing was reflected in the school district with the closing of five schools in the district. Crockett said that the toughest part of closing the schools was facing the parents who lived in the areas.

"When you had to face all those people and tell them that their schools were closing ... " he said. "Let's just say it wasn't too optimistic."

The second blow to the school district occurred this decade, when the collapse of the oil-based economy dropped the enrollment figures even more, Crockett said.

He estimated a loss of at least 200 students as a direct result of the oil industry, and an undetermined number for oil-related reasons.

Students were not the only loss. With heavy dependence on tax dollars from oil revenue, the district suffered a substantial loss of income when oil prices plummeted. Crockett added that the state legislature's recent problems with formulating a budget only compound the difficulties.

Crockett estimates that the district is facing a $54 million shortfall in the tax rolls because of lost mineral rights. He said that if Rep. Larry Don Shaw's recent estimate that the district could lose $544,322 under Gov. Clement's tax proposal is correct, the local district could be facing a budget deficit of more than $1,000,000.

"I can't remember having such a void in state leadership concerning a bill for state appropriations," Crockett said. "Everybody's waiting on the legislature." He added that how great a deficit the district faces depends on "... how hard the state hits us."

CROCKETT top of next column

Don Crockett, 35-year school administrator, sits at his desk for one of the last times. His career will culminate Friday with his retirement from the Big Spring Independent School District. He says he has seen good times, bad times, and a lot of changes during his tenure.

Crockett

In spite of problems facing the district, including a drop in student enrollment from a high of more than 7,000 in 1976 to 4,419 this year, Crockett remains optimistic about the school's — and community's — future.

The reason for his optimism is the fact that the price of oil is on the rebound, and what he considers remarkable diversity for a city the size of Big Spring.

"This town is more diverse than any its size in West Texas," Crockett said. He pointed to establishments such as the state hospital, Cosden, the Federal Prison Camp, and the various businesses located at the Industrial Park as examples of the town's economic variety.

And, Crockett pointed out, the school district is also on the rebound.

"I see Big Spring schools having modest growth after the next year or so," he said. "I think we have stabilized."

He points to the district's physical plant to reinforce his confidence. Of the five buildings closed in 1977, only one, Cedar Crest, was demolished. Park Hill Elementary was sold to St. Mary's Episcopal Church for use as a private school, and the remaining buildings are again in use by the district.

"All our facilities are fairly well utilized with the exception of the high school building," Crockett said. "It was built for 2,500 students, and there are only 1,133 using it."

As Crockett prepares for his retirement, fellow school officials looked back on his contributions and impact on the district.

"People don't understand what a good job Don has done for the district," Athletic Director Ron Logback said. "He's been one of the key figures in the Big Spring School District as far as keeping operations and the financial picture in good standing."

"He'll never get the credit he deserves," Logback continued. "And they'll be hard-pressed to find another one like him."

Retiring superintendent Lynn Hise also commended Crockett's performance as business manager.

"In my opinion, the district is in as good a financial condition as it is due to Mr. Crockett's expertise," Hise said. "He has been an outstanding adviser to me."

As for his retirement, Crockett has no immediate plans, except to "sit back, relax, do some traveling, and take care of some personal business. After that, I'll decide what to do."

Letters say Texans should be ashamed

SAN ANTONIO — Texans should be ashamed of the way commercialism has enveloped one of the nation's most fabled shrines of liberty.

That's according to letters Alamo visitors have sent to the Alamo Plaza Planning Team, which is studying ways to renovate the plaza while adequately capturing the history of the Alamo compound as it was during the 1836 battle for independence from Mexico.

Team member Gary Foreman said the group, which hopes to take several proposals to City Council later this month, has received "hundreds" of letters from throughout Texas, the United States and even Europe.

By Eddie Curran

The cover of this week's Sports Illustrated shows a defiant, shouting Larry Bird next to the headline CELTIC PRIDE. Those who saw the Celtics beat the Bucks and then the Pistons should know the meaning of that headline, and may agree that the headline HOME COURT ADVANTAGE would have been just as apt.

But pride, even CELTIC PRIDE, has its limitations, and the Lakers have the home court advantage. Add two and two together and you get four, which is all the games it's going to take for the Lakers to win this most lopsided of championship series.

Personally, I wish it would hurry up and get over with. Mostly, I want it to end because it's boring, and not because it hurts so terribly to see my beloved Celtics trampled.

Boring, because it's not competitive. Now it's time to blame the Lakers, who've gone out and gotten too good.

THE ROCKET THAT FIZZLED

Remember last year, when uppity Houston embarrassed the mighty Lakers, and everyone started talking about the changing of the guard, and similar nonsense. You remember — the Twin Towers were coming into their own, while the Lakers, with the aging Kareem, couldn't get a rebound.

The Rockets, we all agreed, exposed a fundamental weakness in the Lakers. Like a baseball player who can't hit a curve, the Lakers became the team that couldn't hit the boards. The verdict was in — unless the Lakers added some mean rebounders and covered their vulnerable, soft underbelly, their time was up. Pencil in the Rockets and Celtics for the next five championship series.

So what do the Lakers do? They trade Maurice Lucas, their one acknowledged rebounder, and draft Billy Thompson and add Mychal Thompson. If anything, it would appear they lost a little. With Kareem a year older, the Lakers would be a very good team, though not a contender.

THE LAKERS HAVE IT TOO

Now we come to a scenario of a different nature, the gist of which is that — the 1987 Lakers are the best basketball team in history. The reason — LAKER PRIDE.

Magic Johnson, like Larry Bird, doesn't put up with losing. I'll bet the Lakers got together last year after losing to the Rockets, and with Magic as ringleader, decided they would not, under any circumstances, lose again.

When you add insatiable hunger to a team as fast and talented as the Lakers, and put Captain Magic behind the controls, watch out.

These Lakers play defense like they'd rather be playing offense. In other words, they want the ball. Those poor Celtics are having as tough a time on offense as on defense, especially the Celtic that Michael Cooper's covering. Cooper plays defense the way Sgt. Carter talks to Gomer Pyle — he gets in a Celtic's face and makes him feel small.

If that unfortunate Celtic makes the slightest mistake, James Worthy, Byron Scott and A.C. Green aren't the forgiving type. They turn the basketball into a hot potato bound for a vicious stuffing almost before the Celtics realize it's missing.

With their awesome team defense, and the surprising emergence of A.C. Green and his rebounding, the Lakers now have the ability to force the issue. The issue being, will the game be fast paced or slow?

The only way to beat the Lakers is to slow it down, and now there's no way to slow them down.

On the CBS telecasts, Tom Heinson always says that the key to stopping the Laker break is offensive rebounding. I think he says it as a joke.

THE CELTICS' ONLY CHANCE

The Celtics do have one chance at beating the Lakers, and at the very least it's a long shot. It hinges on a last minute rule change.

"We have decided," NBA Commissioner David Sterne almost certainly won't say, "to alter the rules of this year's finals in order to make things more interesting."

"This year, as an experiment and as an honorarium to the millions of our fans who are also pick-up basketball players, the Celtics and Lakers will play half-court. The make-it-take-it clause will be in effect, and the players will be responsible for calling their own fouls."

Think about it. McHale would do his turn around all day long. Ainge and Bird, arching shots from as far away as the drive-way, would be unstoppable. Inside, Parrish and McHale would wear down Kareem with their brutish body slamming.

And the Celtics would have a new hero. His name — Greg Kite. Without officials to cramp his style, Kite could stomp and elbow his way to the MVP award.

Here comes Worthy, all finesse and speed, driving for the slam. "You wanna bet," says Kite, and clotheslines the Laker, grabbing the ball and hurling it to D.J. at the top of the key, where half-court rules say it must go on a new possession.

D.J. snaps the ball to Bird, who drives to the lane, trying to shake the pesky Cooper. A relieved Bird spots a grinning Kite, who says, "Oh no you don't!" to a stunned Cooper as he applies a fierce charley-horse with his knee. Bird, unattended, scores easily.

Way to go Celtics!

Midland's hope falls short

NEW YORK (AP) — Bet Twice, who chased Alysheba to the threshold of the Triple Crown, took it away from him Saturday.

Alysheba, which had won the first two legs of the Triple Crown, is owned by Dorothy and Clarence Scharbauer Jr. of Midland.

Bet Twice stole the pot of gold, too, by winning the Belmont Stakes.

And just for good measure, Bet Twice snapped trainer Woody Stephens' string of Belmont victories at five.

"He was second in two fighting finishes and he deserved to win," jockey Craig Perret said, recalling Bet Twice's loss by three-quarters of a length in the Kentucky Derby and his half-length defeat in the Preakness.

By winning, Bet Twice gained a $1 million bonus offered to the colt who gained the most points in the three races, based on five for a win, three for a second and one for a third. He edged Alysheba 11 points to 10.

The race wasn't as close as that. Bet Twice's winning margin was 14 lengths as he refused to play Alydar.

Alydar, Alysheba's sire, is the only horse to finish second in all three Triple Crown races. He chased Affirmed to the 11th and last Triple Crown championship in 1978.

"That's what makes horse racing," trainer Jack Van Berg said after Alysheba finished fourth.

The closest he got during the 1 1/2-mile trip was third in the stretch run.

"I'm not going to jump off the press box," Van Berg said. "We Jockey Craig Perret points heavenward after winning the Belmont Stakes aboard Bet Twice at Belmont Park Saturday. The 8 to 1 shot won by 14 lengths.

had two tremendous Saturdays and I have to take it with a smile. He might have gotten second but he wasn't going to win it. He just missed second by two noses."

Actually he was a nose and neck out of second place. Second went to Cryptoclearance while Gulch finished third.

Van Berg said jockey Chris McCarron might have had Alysheba back too far. A collision with Gone

West approaching the quarter pole didn't help, either.

"It was probably my fault," McCarron said of the collision.

Van Berg, though, said there were no excuses for the defeat. But there were questions.

"I knew inside the quarter pole that if Alysheba is 100 percent, he might get him (Bet Twice)," Perret said. "But I don't know if he was."

Did the absence of Lasix, a diuretic used to treat pulmonary bleeding, hurt Alysheba? The substance is banned in New York.

He raced on the medication in his three previous starts.

"I don't think it made any difference," Van Berg said. "I won't even test to see if he bled. I don't need to."

Cardinals pitcher stops Longhorns

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Left-hander reliever Al Osuna pitched 8 2/3 innings of scoreless relief and Frank Carey and Toi Cook had two-run triples as No. 2-ranked Stanford beat No. 1 Texas 9-3 in a College World Series semifinal Saturday night.

Stanford, 52-17, meets No. 3 Oklahoma State, 59-12, in the NCAA championship game Sunday at 7:10 p.m. CDT. The Cowboys beat Stanford 6-2 in the winners bracket final Thursday to earn an automatic berth in the championship game. Texas then outlasted Oklahoma State 6-5 Friday night to force the Sunday title game.

Texas, 61-11, took a 3-0 lead in the top of the first off starter Lee Plemel, who gave up four hits and pitched to only five batters.

Elanis Westbrook hit his third home run of the season and Kevin Garner doubled in a run, with the third run scoring when Scott Coolbaugh knocked the ball out of Stanford catcher Doug Robbins' glove on Garner's hit.

Osuna, 9-2, came on to scatter nine hits and strike out eight to pick up the win. He was aided by four double plays.

Stanford picked up one run in its half of the first on Ed Sprague's 16th homer of the season.

Stanford went ahead to stay with four runs in the fourth. Sprague led off with a single and walks to Paul Carey and Ron Witmeyer loaded the bases. David Esquer scored Sprague on a sacrifice fly. Paul Carey scored when Robbins beat out a potential double-play grounder and Frank Carey tripled down the right-field line to score two more off Longhorn starter Curt Krippner, 14-2.

Cook tripled home two more runs in the sixth off Texas reliever John Morton.

The loss left Texas in third place for the tournament. The Longhorns finished second in 1984 and 1985 after winning the title in 1983.

Stanford's best previous finish in 10 series appearances was third in 1967.

Graf takes giant step towards the top

PARIS (AP) — Steady Steffi Graf capped "six unbelievable months" Saturday, capitalizing on a crucial mistake to beat Martina Navratilova 6-4, 4-6, 8-6 and become the youngest women's champion of the French Open tennis tournament.

Graf won't celebrate her 18th birthday for another week. But on a wind-blown Center Court at Roland Garros Stadium, she displayed an iron nerve and shots to match to gain her first Grand Slam crown and make the top-seeded American a runner-up for the third consecutive year.

Match point came on the sixth double-fault by Navratilova, normally one of the sport's best servers.

The victory was the 39th in a row for Graf, and the tournament championship her seventh straight in 1987. It also kept Navratilova, the last person to beat the West German, last November in New York, searching for her first tournament title of the year.

"So far, I've had six unbelievable months," Graf said. "Every tournament I've played, I've won. I didn't think I would do this."

The men's singles final on Sunday will pit defending champion Ivan Lendl against fourth-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden, a two-time French Open champion.

Navratilova made a major contribution to her latest loss, serving for the championship and getting the first point before twice double-faulting and allowing Graf to break for a 5-5 tie in the third set.

"Here it is again, another heart-wrenching loss," Navratilova said. "She played a very good game, but I was serving for the match."

But Graf did not have the championship handed to her.

She used her sledgehammer forehand and stinging backhand to repeatedly pass Navratilova at the net. And every time Navratilova looked ready to break through and win her 16th Grand Slam singles title, Graf held firm.

Both players said that the American remained No. 1 in women's tennis, and Graf noted that Navratilova's best surfaces — grass at Wimbledon and hardcourts at the U.S. Open — were coming up.

On the red clay in Paris, however, Graf was champ, replacing 1959 winner Christine Truman of Britain as the youngest women's titleholder. Truman was 18 years, 4 months when she won in 1959.

The victory was worth $180,000 for Graf, her biggest paycheck. Navratilova won $90,000, pushing her record career earnings past the $12 million mark.

Graf said Navratilova and Evert were far from finished.

"It's way too early" to declare the end of one long era and the beginning of another in women's tennis, she said.

She also said that her first Grand Slam triumph came in the tournament that mattered the most for her.

"This tournament means very much to me. It always has," said the German star, raised on clay courts. "To win here is special. It will remain the one I like the most."

Robert Seguso of Prairie Oaks, Fla., and Sweden's Anders Jarryd won the men's doubles title with a 6-7, 6-7, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 victory over Frenchmen Guy Forget and Yannick Noah. Jarryd was a last-minute replacement pairing in the tournament for Seguso after John McEnroe decided not to play doubles following his first-round elimination in singles.

In mixed doubles, Pam Shriver of Lutherville, Md., and Emilio Sanchez of Spain won the title with a 6-3, 7-6 victory over Lori McNeil of Houston and Sherwood Stewart of The Woodlands, Texas.

Playing a young man's game at 40

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — If his parents had been able to make him sit still, he might have turned out to be one of the world's more imposing jazz musicians.

"They started me out on piano, but I wouldn't sit and practice so they didn't feel like going through the agony of making me," he said. "I spent all my time playing baseball and basketball. I guess it worked out OK."

Some three decades later, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is still making his parents' decision not to chain him to the piano seem a wise choice.

The Los Angeles Lakers' center, at 40 still blazing new trails in the NBA, continues to be a superlative performer in his chosen profession.

In his 16th playoff series — unprecedented, of course, in league history — the six-time NBA Most Valuable Player appears close to collecting his fifth league championship ring as the Lakers are knocking on the door of another title.

His father, trombonist Al Alcindor, also can take pride in the fact that his son inherited his love of music. An avid fan of jazz, Abdul-Jabbar also has become involved in the business side of music.

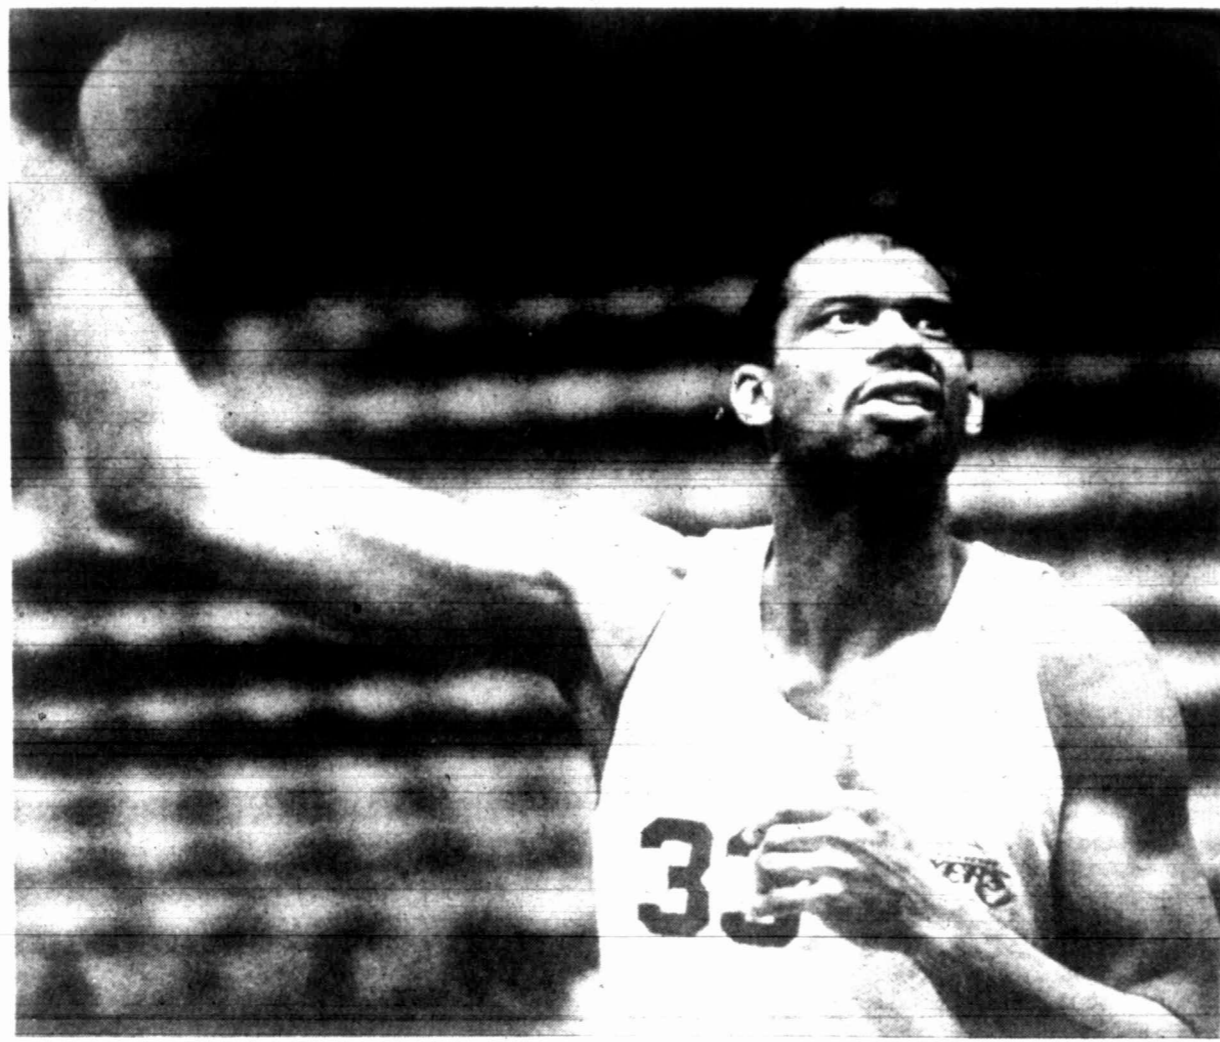

"I've been working with it for about 18 months now and we finally got some guys signed," Abdul-Jabbar said of his work with Cranberry Record, a new jazz recording label. "We've signed Dizzy Gillespie and Jon Hendricks already."

"I've known a lot of the musicians most of my life. When I was a kid, there were places in Harlem where a lot of the musicians would come and jam on the weekends. My father would have me up there in a stroller. Dizzy Gillespie, the first time he saw me, I was in a stroller."

"I remember the first time I met Art Blakey (jazz drummer) after I grew up, he said to my father, 'You mean this is the kid you had in the stroller?'" the 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar related with a laugh.

Abdul-Jabbar had said that next season would definitely be his last as a player, but Lakers owner Jerry Buss is trying to convince him to play two more years, and Abdul-Jabbar is listening to the offer.

Abdul-Jabbar's financial situation turned murky recently when he sued his former manager, Tom Collins, for $5 million, maintaining that he had lost more than $9 million due to Collins' mismanagement. Although he would not talk specifically about his finances because of the lawsuit, Abdul-Jabbar recently said that he was "keeping my head above water."

As his long NBA career winds down, Abdul-Jabbar is focusing more on a variety of outside endeavors.

Acting is one area in which he wants to devote more time. He has worked in a number of films, including "Fletch" and "Airplane," and television, including "Different Strokes."

"I feel I've really made some progress, but it's tough when you're not pursuing it fulltime. You find out real quick that it's not as easy as it looks," said Abdul-Jabbar.

"I remember doing an Olympic Gala Special and seeing Jack Lemmon do his bit. He made it look so easy, but it's really tough, having to memorize everything and then relay it without making it seem learned. Lemmon did it flawlessly. He didn't get his Academy Award just by luck."

Abdul-Jabbar also does a segment on jazz for a nationally syndicated radio show; has signed to do his second book, on his final NBA season; and he's looking into the possibility of becoming a producer.

This summer, he will make a two-week promotional tour of Italy.

After describing his myriad endeavors, Abdul-Jabbar said, "Life gets a little difficult when things come together at one time. It'll be nice when I don't have to spread myself so much over the major areas."

He is looking forward to life after basketball, but admitted that he also feels a certain apprehension.

"I'm looking forward to it for the most part," he said. "There's always the problem that you can't come back. But it's not like, 'Geez, what am I going to do now?' That would be the toughest thing to deal with."

Although Abdul-Jabbar has not completely decided yet when he will end his playing career, he said he already has experienced some sentimental moments.

"You look at it differently, appreciate things more. I had a weird feeling at the All-Star game, thought that maybe it would be the last time I'd see Julius (Erving) on the court. As it ended up, it was the last time."

"I've felt those little zingers, like this path is rapidly coming to a close here."

Kite, pitcher Perry's son battling for Kemper

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Tom Kite shot a 3-under-par 68 Saturday to take a one-stroke lead over Chris Perry after the third round of the $700,000 Kemper Open.

Kite, who started the round in second place, one shot behind Perry, was at 12-under-par 201 after 54 holes. Kite had seven birdies in his third consecutive sub-par round at the 6,864-yard Tournament Players Club at Avenel Course.

Perry, the son of former major-league pitcher Jim Perry, shot a 70 to remain in contention for his first title in three years on the PGA Tour. Perry trailed Kite by only one stroke after the eighth hole, but fell three back when Kite birdied the ninth hole and Perry followed with a bogey.

Kite improved his lead to four strokes after the 14th hole, but Perry moved into a tie with one hole to play after Kite made three straight bogeys.

"Those three holes were shocking," Kite said. "There was no reason for it. I hadn't missed anything to that point, then blew three straight holes."

Kite grabbed the lead by making a birdie on 18.

"It was nice to finish well," he said. "It was an interesting round, to say the least."

George Burns, who began the day four strokes behind Perry, shot a 68 to move within three shots of the lead at 204. Burns opened the round by missing a two-foot tap-in for par, then turned around and got a birdie on No. 2 with a 40-foot putt. In all, he had seven birdies and four bogeys.

Defending champion Greg Norman, who began the day at 5-under, also had an up-and-down round and finished at 205. Norman, vying for his third Kemper victory since 1984, had a 68 in which he had seven birdies, two bogeys and a double bogey.

Scott Hoch also finished at 205 after shooting a 72, and Dave Barr, Howard Twitty and Larry Mize were next at 206.

Keith Clearwater opened the day with a double-bogey and finished at 207 after shooting a 73.

Bruins take NCAA title

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Butch Reynolds, Ohio State's brilliant quarter-miler, sped to an impressive victory Saturday night in the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships, while UCLA clinched the men's title.

Reynolds, was timed in 44.12 — the second-best at sea level and the fifth-fastest ever — for 400 meters as he beat UCLA's Danny Everett and Arkansas' Roddie Haley.

The time also smashed the NCAA meet record of 44.30, set last year by Gabriel Tiaoch of Washington State and was just under his own best of 44.10.

Everett's second-place finish, worth 8 points, gave the Bruins a total of 55 points. With seven events remaining, no team could catch UCLA, which won its seventh NCAA title and first since 1978.

The seven titles made the Bruins the second-winningest team in the 66 years of the championships. Southern California is the leader with 26.

Reynolds was much too strong and much too fast for his opposition.

He got away quickly and was in command throughout, solidifying his victory with about 60 meters remaining, when he accelerated rapidly.

Everett, a sophomore, came on fast in the stretch, overtaking Haley for second place with about 10 meters left and finishing in a personal-best 44.47.

Haley, the 1985 NCAA champion and 1986 runner-up, who has been slowed slightly by a hamstring injury recently, wound up third in 44.82.

Meanwhile, Alabama's Lillie Leatherwood-King won the women's 400 meters for the second consecutive year, in an NCAA meet-record 50.90. The time broke

Strawberry wakes up in time to smash winning blast

NEW YORK (AP) — When Darryl Strawberry got the wake-up call from Manager Dave Johnson he was ready.

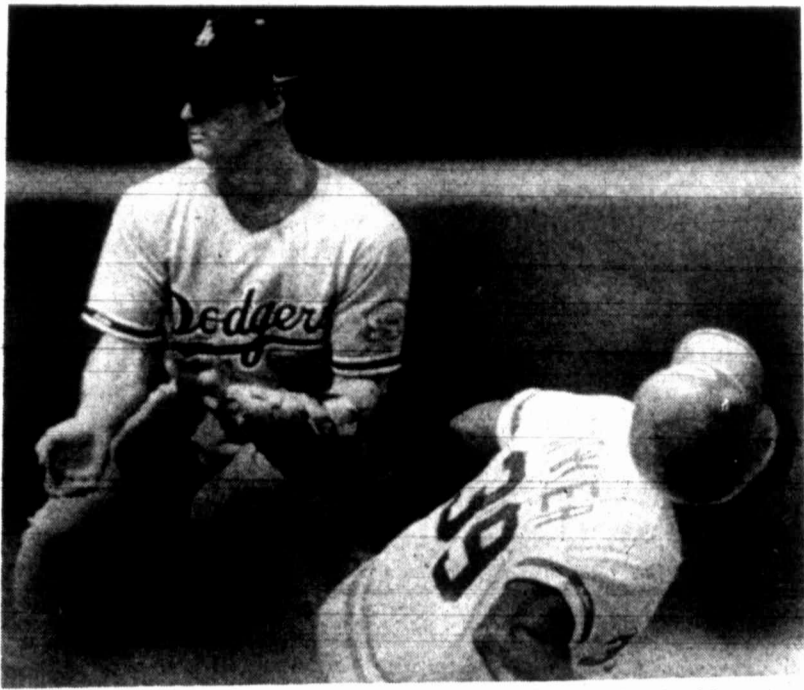

Strawberry, scratched from the starting lineup because of the flu, spent most of the game sleeping in the clubhouse, but his eyes were wide open on a 1-2 delivery from Pittsburgh's Doug Drabek.

Strawberry hit pinch two-run homer in the seventh inning to give the Mets a 4-2 victory over the Pirates Saturday.

The home run was Strawberry's 16th of the season in his initial appearance as a pinch hitter this season, a role that saw him go 0-for-8 in 1986. It was also the first pinch homer in his five-year career.

"Darryl was sick in the trainers room before the game," New York Manager Dave Johnson said. "He looked like death warmed over, so I pulled him from the lineup."

Strawberry batted for starting pitcher Sid Fernandez, 7-2. The left-hander allowed two runs and seven hits over seven innings, striking out four and walking two. Roger McDowell pitched the last two innings for his sixth save.

Reds 5, Dodgers 2
CINCINNATI (AP) — Ted Power pitched a three-hitter and Barry Larkin and Nick Esasky hit two-run doubles as the Cincinnati Reds defeated Fernando Valenzuela and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The doubles came in a five-run third inning that carried the Reds to their fourth straight victory. The Dodgers have lost 14 of their last 20 games.

Power, 5-2, struck out six and walked two.

Sloppy play hurt Valenzuela, 5-4. It was his sixth loss in his last eight decisions against the Reds and he hasn't won at Riverfront Stadium since June 13, 1983. The left-hander is 5-7 lifetime against Cincinnati.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 5
CHICAGO (AP) — Keith Moreland drove in three runs and Jamie Moyer pitched five-hit ball over seven innings as Chicago defeated St. Louis.

Moreland capped a three-run first inning with a sacrifice fly after Jerry Mumphrey had doubled in two runs. Moreland's seventh homer tied the game in the fourth and he doubled in a run in the fifth to score Ryne Sandberg, who had doubled.

Lee Smith pitched the last two innings for his 14th save.

Phillies 4, Expos 3
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Left-hander Shane Rawley won his sixth straight game and Rick Schu drove in two runs Saturday as Philadelphia defeated Montreal.

Rawley, 7-2, allowed nine hits.

The Phillies scored three runs in the bottom of the first inning against Bob Sebra, 3-6. Milt Thompson led off with a single, stole second, and moved to third on Von Hayes' single. One out later, Mike Easler walked to load the bases. Thompson scored on Lance Parrish's sacrifice fly and Schu followed with a two-run single to right field. Juan Samuel drove in the fourth run with a single.

Padres 5, Braves 3
ATLANTA (AP) — Randy Ready

drove home two runs with three singles, leading a 12-hit attack as the San Diego Padres downed the Atlanta Braves 5-3 Saturday night.

It was the second victory in a row for the Padres, matching their longest winning streak of the year.

The Padres opened the scoring in the first inning against Larry McWilliams, making his first start for Atlanta since being called up from the minors this week. Shane Mack singled and later scored on a single by Tony Gwynn, who extended his hitting streak to nine games.

The Braves took a 2-1 lead in the first on Dale Murphy's 16th homer, a shot over the center field fence that followed a double by Ken Oberkfell.

Ready singled in the third and scored the tying run on John Kruk's single to right.

The Padres took a 4-2 lead in the fourth. Luis Salazar reached second on shortstop Andres Thomas' throwing error and Tim Flannery followed with a single to right.

Old-timers boost A's over Tribe

Oakland 6, Cleveland 4
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — After many outstanding seasons in the major leagues, Ron Cey and Dennis Eckersley are trying to prove they still belong.

"I've only had 60 at-bats in 50 games, and that's not exactly an overwhelming opportunity to prove myself," said Cey, who hit two-run homer in the eighth inning to give Oakland a 6-4 victory over Cleveland Saturday.

Cey's homer was his third hit off Indians starter Greg Swindell, 3-6. It capped a comeback in which Oakland trailed 4-0 in the third inning.

It was Cey's third home run of the season. Cey, who has 315 career homers, was acquired by Oakland from the Chicago Cubs in January.

Oakland stayed close thanks to six perfect innings of relief from Eckersley, 4-4.

"If you watched Cey in a lot of those games when they were booing him," said Oakland Manager Tony LaRussa, "what surprised all of us on the bench was his mental toughness. He's a strong guy mentally. All of a sudden he's putting together a hell of a year, and he's still a tough out."

Angels 2, White Sox 1
ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Ruppert Jones led off the 10th inning with a home run to lift California over Chicago.

Jones hit reliever Bob James' second pitch over the right-field fence for his fourth homer for the season. James, 2-3, took over after starter Rich Dotson had pitched five-hit ball through nine innings, striking out eight.

Mike Witt, 7-4, completed the game, allowing seven hits and one walk while striking out eight.

Blue Jays 8, Oriole 5
TORONTO (AP) — Jesse Barfield hit a three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied for an 8-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

Tony Fernandez tripled to center with two outs, and after Lloyd Moseby was walked intentionally, Barfield drove a 3-1 pitch from Ken Dixon, 3-5, deep into the left-field seats to end the game which lasted 4 hours and 7 minutes. It was Barfield's 14th homer of the season.

The loss was the seventh in the last eight games for Baltimore which squandered a 16-hit attack and stranded 15 baserunners, including six in the final three innings.

Jeff Musselman, 4-1, pitched the final 1-3 innings for the victory.

Toronto, trailing 5-3 in the eighth, tied the score with two out when Garth Iorg singled and Charlie Boston Red Sox first baseman Bill Buckner catches a pop-fly as he collides with third baseman Wade Boggs in third inning action at Fenway Park Saturday.

Moore homered to left off Dixon. Moore, the veteran catcher, signed as a free agent on Friday. He doubled in his first at-bat as a Blue Jay when he pinch hit for Ernie Whitt in the seventh inning.

Tigers 5, Red Sox 3
BOSTON (AP) — Mike Heath, who entered the game as a pinch hitter in the 12th inning, singled home two runs in the 14th Saturday to give the Detroit Tigers a 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Heath singled off reliever Wes Gardner, 0-3, after Lou Whitaker reached on an error by second baseman Marty Barrett. Bill Madlock sacrificed, Kirk Gibson was walked intentionally and Alan Trammell loaded the bases with an infield single.

Eric King, 3-4, pitched 5 2-3 innings of one-hit relief and finished the 4-hour, 51-minute game.

The Tigers took a 3-2 lead in the eighth when Madlock beat out a grounder to second with one out, stole second, and scored on Matt Nokes' single.

Boston tied the score in the bottom of the inning. Jim Rice singled to center and Mike Henneman replaced starter Frank Tanana and threw a wild pitch. Dwight Evans then drove in Rice from second with a single.

Boston took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Dave Henderson's infield hit and Wade Boggs' home run, his 10th of the season but only his second at Fenway Park.

Trammell scored the Tigers first run when he singled in the second, took second on a passed ball and third on a groundout. He came home on another passed ball by catcher Rich Gedman.

Detroit tied the score in the fifth on walks to Darrell Evans and Dave Bergman, a wild pitch by starter Roger Clemens and John Grubbs' infield out.

She was there, and she didn't think Isiah was kidding

By AIENE VOISON
Los Angeles Herald Examiner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Isiah Thomas stole the ball. He stole the show. He straddled that fine line, ever so deftly, then came through with the game-winning play. He won back his old fans, gained some new ones, and left most of them applauding in the aisles.

But not this one. I didn't get the joke. And I was there.

Isiah Thomas yesterday told us he was "just joking." Saturday when he agreed with Detroit Pistons teammate Dennis Rodman, who had called Larry Bird "overrated" and said the Boston Celtics' "three-time NBA MVP would be 'just another good guy' if he were black.

"The comments that were made the other night by me, I was joking about, and I have the tape to prove it," Isiah informed a room full of reporters yesterday afternoon at the Airport Marriott. "There was definitely sarcasm and laughter at the end of the statement. I said Larry Bird was a very, very good basketball player, an exceptional talent.

"Jokingly, I said, 'I have to agree with Rodman,' smiling, laughing, uh, that if Bird were black, he would be just another good guy."

Bird was a pretty good guy yesterday, too. A real good sport, considering. Earlier in the week he had told Thomas that he would do "whatever he could" to defuse the situation, so when a press conference was suggested, Bird was right there, seated next to Thomas, saying all the right things.

"The main thing is, if the statement doesn't bother me," said Bird, "I don't think it should bother anybody else. If Isiah tells me that it was a joking matter, they should leave it at that. I swear to you it doesn't bother me."

Later, he cracked that "Isiah isn't stupid, he knows I'm a bad player."

Very, very convincing. Thomas was equally so. He was, well, the Isiah Thomas we have all come to know, respect and admire. Charming. Witty. Smooth.

He began by telling us about himself. About how he grew up in the streets of Chicago, how he has prided himself on trying to improve relations among people of all creeds and colors, and how he deplores racism.

Isiah told us other things, too. How his mother cried because of the incident. What a great guy Larry Bird is for taking the time to attend the press conference. How unfortunate it is that the reporter who asked the question didn't appreciate his sense of humor.

He was right. This reporter — the one who asked the question that elicited the controversial response — didn't appreciate his sense of humor. Didn't think he was kidding at all, in fact — and neither did several of the other reporters who were within earshot of the Pistons' guard in crowded Boston Garden.

Although Thomas insisted that a tape recording of the interview proves he spoke in jest, he failed to mention that the tape is unable to provide relevant information, such as his mood — which was bitter and caustic — at the time he made the controversial statement.

Before assailing Bird, in fact, Thomas had blasted the Celtics' Danny Ainge, the officiating, the Boston Garden. "Heat of the Battle stuff," and totally understandable, given the circumstances.

But clearly, he was in no mood for jokes.

After hearing Rodman call Bird "overrated" several times, however, this reporter — who has covered the NBA and dealt with Isiah for six years — approached the Pistons leader.

"Surely, I thought, heever-diplomatic Isiah would find a way to defuse the matter. He probably would tell us that Rodman talks too much, that he's a rookie, that he would learn, much as Bird has learned. (The Hick from French Lick was no prince his first few years in the league, either).

But Isiah said none of this. After I related Rodman's comments, and asked for a response, Thomas paused for a full 10 seconds.

Then very deliberately, and after appearing to weigh carefully what he was about to say, he uttered the controversial statement.

At the end of the comment, he laughed, a deep, throaty laugh. On the tape, which omits the question and the lengthy pause, the laughter sounds humorous; in person, it came across very differently, sort of a "that's-the-way-it-is-guys" chuckle. He was greeted with silence.

But all of us (reporters), interpreting Thomas' comments seriously, approached Celtics Kevin McHale, Dennis Johnson, Coach K.C. Jones assistant coach Chris Ford, and, finally, Bird, and asked for a reaction.

Understandably, they were upset. ... McHale blasted Rodman and Isiah, and offered an impassioned defense of Bird, and it's all down on paper.

DJ, who is black, echoed his sentiments, as did Ford, Jones and any other Celtic who was approached.

If Isiah was joking, they look foolish. We all look foolish.

How did I feel, then, as I listened to Thomas try to explain away his gaffe yesterday, and again to Brent Musburger last night, by saying he was misunderstood? That the Detroit writers didn't make "a big deal" of the matter until it made big headlines in L.A.? That the Detroit writers would have understood his humor while the West Coast writers didn't? Blame it on the media, again, right?

Well, I felt angry. I felt manipulated. I felt used. ... my first memory of Isiah Thomas was when he assisted me six years ago in the Pistons locker room, as his teammates hooted and hollered over the appearance of a woman.

"Come over here," he said, quietly. "Ignore them."

He was all class. A real gentleman. I liked him then as a person, I liked him equally as a player, and I always have respected his intellect tremendously. He will make a fine Players Association president, maybe a politician, someday.

But don't make fools of us. We were there. We heard him, we observed him. And even though we didn't take time to look up the definition of "racist," as he urged yesterday, we know the definition of a joke.

Fun at the Festival

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
City Editor

A few observations on Saturday's fourth annual Heart of the City festival:

★ The occasion confirmed what historians have noted: Just about the best time to eat a homemade burrito and drink a cold lemonade is under a brilliant West Texas sky, with the brightest sunshine in days.

★ For the weak-willed, the Humane Society's Adopt-a-Pet booth was a place to avoid. If you have a weakness along those lines, those pups and kittens were nearly irresistible.

★ The festival was perfect — as if you need a reason — in providing an opportunity to see old friends in a colorful atmosphere.

★ Saturday was educational. At least one Big Spring resident left the festival having learned how pork rinds are transformed into a snack. Charles Frost of San Angelo has been doing it for three years and his corner booth at Third and Main drew the curious and the snackers.

★ The wind was just strong enough to help ward off the healthy mosquitoes, to which our tropical storms have brought the perfect climate.

★ Pottery displayed by several Howard College students were a bright addition to the wares being sold.

★ It will be difficult to match at least one aspect during next year's event: The courthouse lawn may be the greenest any festival has featured.

★ The variety of booths seemed to outshine past Festivals, and the food booths were drawing both compliments and lines.

★ Pat Porter and Raul Marquez share birthdays — June 6 — and both spent their special day under the sun.

★ Elaine Oliver got to know West Texas mosquitoes quite well Friday night, when they were feasting on those who contributed their time to making it a memorable Festival.

★ A shoot-out on Main Street is best left for special occasions, or the city would have to hire a brigade to sweep cowboys' bodies from the asphalt.

Members of the Sulphur Draw gang slug it out to the delight of the crowd during "The Final Shoot-Out" at the Heart of the City Festival.

Tonya Phifer, 8, closes her eyes and hopes for the best as she prepares to catch a water balloon during one of the many contests. The balloon hit the ground, but did not break.

Kyland Wegner, 3, glances around the Festival site as he sinks his teeth into a homemade egg roll, one of the many foods being sold at the event.

Doyle White and Julie Lachelle White, 3, pet a horse before the start of the Sulphur Draw gang demonstration.

Festival goers watch as one of the YMCA gymnasts performs for the crowd during a gymnastics demonstration on Main Street.

Home pet care a viable alternative

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Lifestyle Editor

Vacation season is here, and you're wondering what to do with your pet. Do you worry about putting your friendly critter in a kennel or do you take it with you to enjoy — or suffer through — your travel adventures? This year your vacation may be a whole new experience.

You can leave your pet in the comfort of his home and be sure he will be given food and water and be played with, says Gail Smith of Big Spring.

Gail is providing a new service to Big Spring — a home pet care service. "The pets will receive individual attention from a fellow dedicated pet lover," Gail said. "I've always had pets and one is not enough."

Perhaps ten is enough — because that's how many pets Gail has. She houses two dogs, four cats and three birds and has her horse boarded in the country.

Although Gail was raised a city girl, she says she's a country girl at heart and was born with a natural instinct for animals.

She explained that she always wanted to be a veterinarian, but she couldn't stand the sight of blood, so she became an artist and a jeweler and has made pets her hobby.

"My parents always thought I'd grow out of this, but I keep getting worse. My animals are my kids. I always have a cat in my lap or a dog at my feet," she said with a chuckle.

Her bookcase is filled with more than 200 trophies she and her quarter horse, Loretta, won as a team.

"Loretta died, but I still have her mare, Jigger, who is just now staging her career."

Gail, 35, says she thinks fellow animal lovers will recognize the need for such a service.

"I always wanted someone for this service — instead of imposing on my friends. And some animals require experience in dealing with them."

She explained that it's costly and risky to put animals in a kennel where they could be exposed to animals who may have a disease.

"The animals feel more comfortable, safe at home. They get the same food, bowl and the same bed."

She added that special medication will be administered and she will refer to the owner's veterinarian in case of any medical questions or emergencies.

Gail says she will care for any pet — farm animals like sheep and cattle, horses, household animals, guinea pigs and even snakes "as long as they're caged," she said with a sigh.

In addition to caring for the animals, Gail said she will water plants, pick-up the mail and turn lights off and on.

Gail Smith and Dixie Mae, a 3-year-old calico cat, is just one of three that Gail has. "I always have a cat in my lap or a dog at my feet," she said.

The Jimmie Fosters

Jimmie and Carolyn Foster, Ackerly, were honored with dinner at K-C Steak and Seafood House on May 30 at 7 p.m. to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

Hosting the event were the couple's children: Todd Foster of Ackerly; Jennifer and Paul Hutchings of Brownwood; and Mark Foster and Janet Foster, both of Ackerly.

Foster was born in Lamesa and Mrs. Foster, the former Carolyn Smith, was born in Big Spring.

The couple was introduced by Foster's aunt at his home in 1957 in Flower-Grove. They married on June 4, 1962 at the Howard County Courthouse, with Judge Jess Slaughter, officiating.

Foster is self-employed at Ackerly Fina Station and was previously a farmer. The couple attends the Ackerly Church of God.

When asked to comment about their marriage they replied, "We were hoping for a grandchild by

Satellite brings television to cruises

NEW YORK (AP) — Television programs via satellite transmission are being made available to passengers on cruise ships around the world, says Multichannel News.

The publication notes that among programs available to at-sea vacationers are direct national TV network news, daily financial news, sports and a "talk" show.

Television with good reception at sea became a reality in January 1986 when the Queen Elizabeth 2 showed the Super Bowl as she cruised the Pacific off the coast of California.

Foot aches, pain due to overexertion

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER

Aching feet, like aching backs, are a common problem.

Most foot pains can be relieved by simple, at-home remedies, according to an orthopedic specialist at New York University Medical Center.

"Like the back, the foot seems to be a 'weak link,' and the vast majority of people experience foot discomfort at one time or another," said Dr. Phillip M. Evanski, associate professor of orthopedic surgery at the center. "In most cases, the problem is not disabling and will respond to appropriate home measures."

Generally, he said, foot aches and pains stem from strain due either to overexertion or badly fitting shoes. The traditional wisdom about wearing "sensible," nonconstricting footwear is valid, he affirmed, and he applauded the widespread use of running shoes for everyday wear.

"Such shoes usually are sturdy and fit the foot well," said Evanski. "They also provide a helpful cushion between the foot and cement, which is a very jarring walking surface."

When foot aches occur, he said, there are three recommended remedies: "First, rest the feet as much as possible. Second, switch to more comfortable shoes, to relieve stress and permit natural healing. Third, use one of the effective over-the-counter remedies for pain and inflammation, such as acetaminophen, aspirin, or ibuprofen."

Some foot pain may be related to arthritis — most commonly, osteoarthritis, which usually results from long-term wear and tear, and occurs chiefly in older people. About 10 percent of the population, Evanski noted, eventually has some arthritis of the foot, most often affecting the toes (particularly the big toe) or the arch.

If foot pain persists and does not respond to rest, sensible shoes, and a mild pain reliever, professional advice should be sought.

Bride-elect feted at local shower

The table featured a small wedding cake decorated with peach flowers and peach fruit punch.

A swim party is planned for the night before the wedding for the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

An Open Letter To The People of Big Spring

Big Spring, Texas 79720
(915) 267-1004

Dear Big Springers,

Remember how much fun you used to have going to the movies every week... seeing your friends... watching your favorite stars... those morning kiddie shows... that gigantic screen... that sensational sound... and, of course, absolutely the best popcorn on the face of the earth!

Well, as thousands of Big Spring movie-goers know, those days are far from over. The motion picture is alive and well in the Spring City, and it you haven't been to the movies lately, just listen to what's coming up this summer at your hometown theatres, the Ritz, downtown, and the Cinema at College Park.

You probably already know that the Ritz was thoroughly remodeled and reopened last year, but what you probably don't know is that the Ritz has the LARGEST MOVIE SCREEN BETWEEN EL PASO AND FORT WORTH... it is almost a thousand square feet! Yes, one thousand square feet of multi-colored spectacle, so much larger than life, you've simply got to see it to believe it!

And now, the Cinema at College Park has also been remodeled. Our Dolby Stereo sound system surrounds you with twelve theatre speakers and is so lifelike, I have actually seen people turn around in their seats as if to literally 'watch' as the sound follows the action on the screen by moving all around them.

Our theatres have undergone many changes to enhance the quality of your movie-going and we continue to strive to make every effort to ensure that your movie-going experience is truly an enjoyable escape into motion picture entertainment.

This summer promises to be full of fun and excitement at the movies. Starting with "Beverly Hills Cop II", and continuing with great new movies like "Dragnet '87", "Superman 4", "Harry and the Hendersens", "The Untouchables", and "Innerspace" to name a few.

In addition, the Ritz has Wednesday morning KIDDIE SHOWS every week at 10:00 and "Innerspace" with a Texas Taco or Texas Burger coupon. Also, all of our theatres are open during the summer for a 2:00 p.m. matinee with all seats only $2.50.

Indeed, there is something for everyone at the movies this year and we'd like for you to come join us and share in the fun. Please accept my personal invitation to "escape to the movies" this summer at one of our local theatres. Or just drop by to see the remodeling we've done. Either way, we'll look forward to seeing you and your friends at the Ritz in downtown Big Spring and the Cinema at College Park.

Oh, and by the way...the popcorn is still absolutely the best on the face of the earth!

Yours truly,
Gary Moore, Pres.

Woman lost Wife who's being cheated is happy with the score 85 pounds Cajun style

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
A Meredith Magazine

Six years ago Catherine weighed more than 220 pounds. A year later she'd dropped down to 135 pounds — the weight she's maintained for the past five years.

This 32-year-old woman's sustained weight-loss success is especially commendable because she had been overweight most of her life, says Better Homes and Gardens Low Calorie Recipes. A love of food, says the magazine, particularly her family's Italian and Cajun specialties — contributed to the weight problems that Catherine and her brother and sister developed as children.

Years ago Catherine's mother, Alice Deano, tried to help her children lose weight. Deano posted their weights and denied them TV if the figures were too high. The ploy never worked. "My grandmother lived across the street," says Catherine.

By the time Catherine was 25, she had ballooned. "I stopped getting on the scale at about 220 pounds," Catherine notes. "But I still gained more."

Public embarrassment finally prompted Catherine to lose weight for good. At a Mardi Gras celebration, her sister announced in front of friends that Catherine did not need another bowl of chili. "Nobody but my parents ever had given me any trouble before," Catherine says. "Two days later when Mardi Gras ended, I began dieting for the last time. I was finally ready to lose weight for myself — not for anybody else."

Cutting portion sizes was Catherine's key to trimming calories. Before she began dieting, Catherine's typical dinner was 6 ounces of meat, a cup of vegetables swimming in cream sauce and a baked potato smothered with butter and cheese.

Her new approach: "I'd start out with half the amount of food I used to eat, and I'd eat half of that. Then I'd sit back and drink a glass of water. If I wanted some more food, I'd eat some more," she says. Any leftovers she threw away to avoid temptation.

At the same time, Catherine went back to Louisiana State University as a full-time student. Walking on campus helped her burn additional calories. In 10 months Catherine lost 85 pounds.

After Catherine reached her weight-loss goal, she opened her own low-calorie restaurant, The Paradise Cafe, serving the Italian, Cajun and Creole entrees she'd eaten to lose weight.

Using significantly less fat made the biggest dent in calorie reduction. "In Cajun cooking, just about every recipe starts with a stick of butter or a cup of oil," says Catherine. She would use one-quarter of that — or less.

Instead of browning meats in fat, Catherine sprayed skillet with non-stick coating. Vinaigrette salad dressings were prepared with a minimum of salad oil.

Catherine also found a flavorful substitute for a roux, which is made by browning equal parts of flour and oil together. (A roux is one of the main calorie culprits in Creole soups, gumbos and stews.) In its place, Catherine began using browned flour, which is simply oven-browned flour — no fat.

Removing separable fat from meats was another tactic. Catherine skinned chicken, trimmed pork chops and drained fat from cooked ground beef.

She also depended on low-fat ingredients to cut calories. In recipes she substituted Neufchatel cheese for cream cheese; skim milk for whole milk and low-fat yogurt, calorie-reduced mayonnaise and calorie-reduced margarine for their higher-calorie counterparts.

In addition to trimming calories, Catherine emphasized salt reduction in her recipes. Part of her concern was personal.

"I retain a lot of water and I'm uncomfortable when I've had too much salt.

To boost the flavor without salt, Catherine seasoned food with lemon, spices and herbs. And she set her Louisiana restaurant tables with the ubiquitous bottles of hot pepper sauce for those who wanted more fire in their food.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 26 years has had the same mistress for eight years, and I'm all for it. Here are my reasons: I am able to spend a lot of time alone (which I prefer), and anything I do is fine with him, because he's able to spend more time with her. He is not aware that I know what's going on and he treats me like a queen because he has such a guilty conscience he feels compelled to make it up to me.

He's an excellent provider, and I have total freedom. I figure he will die at a much earlier age due to the constant stress he is under trying to hide his affair from me. Also, he doesn't take care of his health. (He averages about three hours sleep a night.) When he finally drops dead, I stand to collect several hundred thousand dollars in insurance money, and all of our assets will be 100 percent mine.

The other woman is doing me a great favor.

LOVE BEING CHEATED ON

DEAR L.B.C.O.: The lovely scenario you have written in your head may, in reality, have a surprise ending. For example: He could lose his money. Or instead of dropping dead, he could have a stroke or heart attack, leaving him incapacitated for many years. Or, you could drop dead or become incapacitated.

Lost time cannot be replaced, so why not tell him you know what's going on, then see a lawyer and make an honest man out of the guy? That way all three of you can be happy.

DEAR ABBY: Sometimes I wish I didn't have to take piano lessons. It's hard to find time to practice, or I just don't feel like it.

My mom keeps saying, "You'll be glad I made you practice." I don't understand why she makes me do something I don't feel is necessary.

TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: How old are you? Do you have any special talent or are you wasting your mother's money and your time? All children are "made" to do things they don't think are necessary — like go to sleep, and wake up, study, practice, bathe and brush their teeth regularly. If you're over 15, ignore this answer. If you're under, hang in there, and go along with your mother.

DEAR ABBY: I know that I have a tendency to talk too much, but I can't seem to control it. I would appreciate any hints on how to remind myself not to talk so much. I just don't seem to know when to stop.

I know I'm a pest at times. Maybe some of your readers who have had this problem and solved it can offer some suggestions.

MOTORMOUTH IN DENVER

DEAR MOTORMOUTH: Rejoice. Your problem is half solved because you admit it's a problem. Consider a few rules: Don't talk just for the sake of talking — talk only if you have something to say. Say what you have to say in a few words as possible. After you've said it, be quiet.
