Shiite Moslem fighters holding Israeli flier

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — A missing Israeli flier whose F-4 Phantom fighter-bomber was shot down during a raid on Palestinian guerrilla bases was reported alive today and in the hands of Shiite Moslem fighters.

"The captive has a fractured arm. Otherwise he is well," said a spokesman for Justice Minister Nabih Berri's mainstream Shiite Amal militia, who refused to be identified further.

It was not immediately possible to verify the claim. In Beirut, Amal headquarters said it was not holding an Israeli.

The spokesman in Sidon declined to disclose where the Israeli airman was being held, although reports circulated in Sidon that he had been moved to Beirut overnight. A second airman aboard the Phantom F-4E was rescued by the Israelis 90 minutes after the plane was shot down Thursday during a raid in which Beirut radio reported four people killed and 10 wounded.

Amal displayed gear it said belonged to the captured flier, including a radio set, electronic beeper, parachute and maps along with the seat and one wing of the downed warplane.

Amal is the largest Shiite guerrilla group in Lebanon, but is not aligned with the extremist Shiite groups who hold American hostages in Lebanon. Berri, who is Lebanon's justice minister in a coalition government, was instrumental in securing the release of hostages held by the hijackers of a TWA passenger jet in 1985.

Palestinian guerrillas as well as Amal and leftist Lebanese militias were on "maximum alert" along south Lebanon's coast today in anticipation of a possible Israeli landing.

Guerrillas unleashed barrages of anti-aircraft fire as Israeli jets on reconnaissance runs thundered overhead, and Beirut radio stations spoke of a massive Israeli troop buildup along the border with Lebanon.

But officials of the U.N. peacekeeping force in South Lebanon said there was no unusual border activity.

Israeli jets raided guerrilla bases near this ancient port city Thursday, apparently in retaliation for a grenade attack a day earlier in Jerusalem that killed one Israeli and wounded 69.

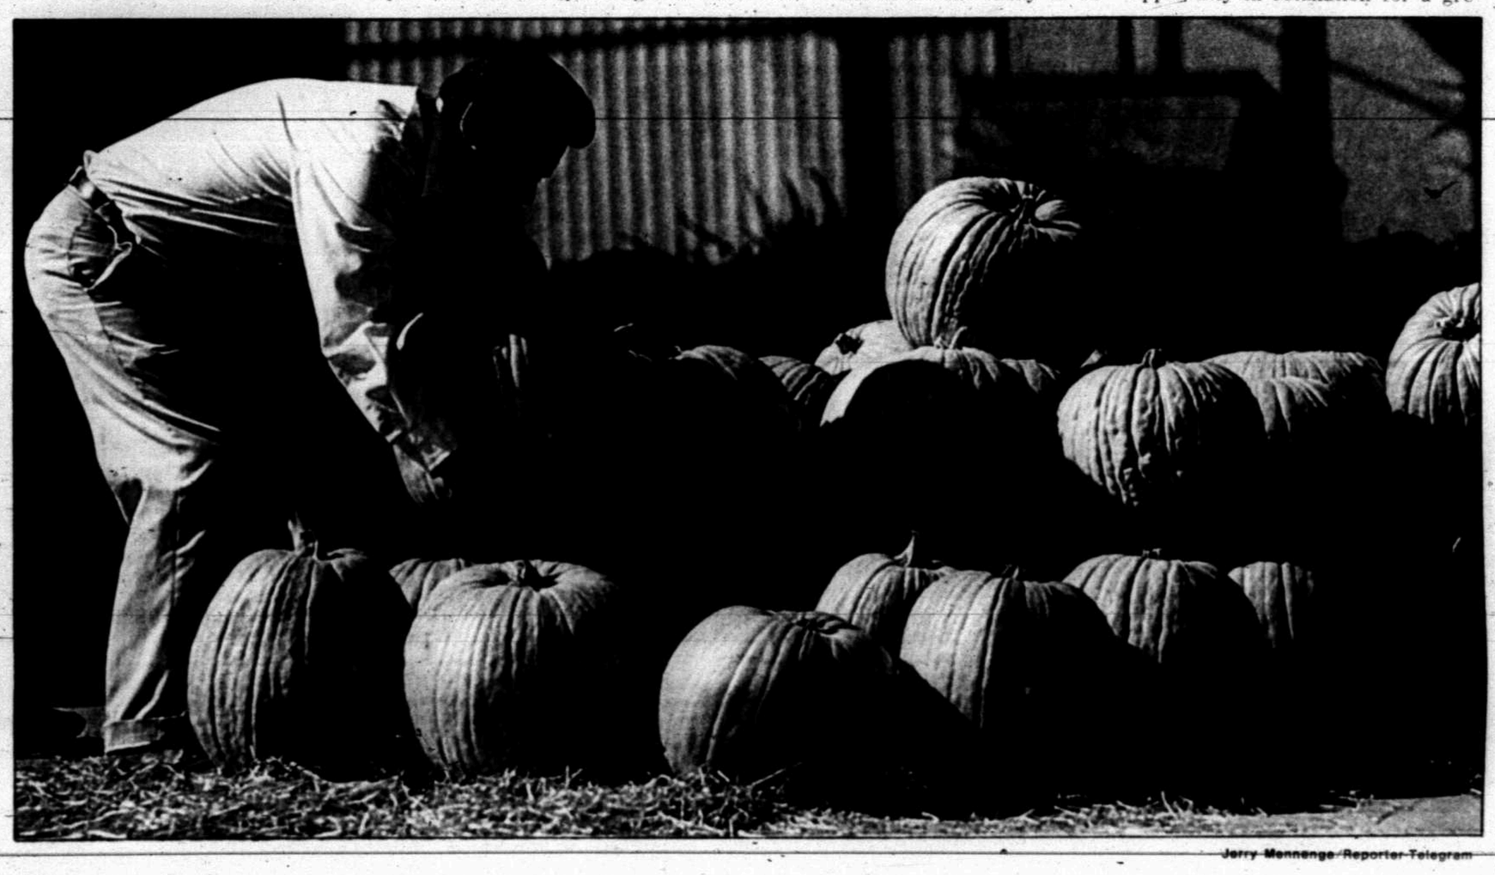

A shoulder-fired missile downed the Phantom and its two crewmen bailed out, landing in an olive grove four miles southeast of Sidon and 25 miles south of Beirut.

Israel's military command in Tel Aviv said helicopter-borne Israeli troops landed in the rugged terrain southeast of Sidon and rescued one of the two crewmen of the downed jet.

The Israeli command listed the other flier as missing, and vowed to retrieve him.

Initial reports from Lebanon had said the second airman was dead, but the Amal spokesman today said the flier was captured on Sidon's southeastern outskirts by Rafik Ibrahim, a 19-year-old Amal militiaman, minutes after the Phantom was shot down.

Forming regional cartel proposed

DENHAM SPRINGS, La. (AP) — Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas should join together to impose a 10 percent reduction in oil production in an effort to stabilize oil prices, Louisiana Secretary of State Jim Brown says.

"Since the production of the the states of Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma is greater than the production of OPEC combined, except for Saudi Arabia, we could have a major effect on the stabilization of would oil prices," he said.

Brown told the Denham Springs Kiwanis Club Thursday that he will urge Gov. Edwin Edwards to implement 10 percent reduction in Louisiana oil production in an effort to bring some relief to the state's economy.

Brown said he is urging Edwards to call a meeting of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, of which Edwards is chairman, to ask the governors of Texas and Oklahoma to join Louisiana by implementing similar measures.

Brown said the governor can reduce oil production by exercising the power granted to him through the Office of Conservation and the state Mineral Board.

■ Agreement eluding OPEC ministers as talks continue — 2A

"The price of oil is not determined by OPEC or by the major oil companies," said Brown. "Since 1983, crude oil has been traded on the futures market of the New York Mercantile Exchange known as MERC. Currently more oil is traded on the MERC than all the free world production," he said.

Brown said if the three states band together they could impose a production cut of 10 percent and the effects on the global market, even if only psychological, could be immense.

"An increase of $1 per barrel in the price of crude oil will mean 100 rigs go back to work," said Brown. "Because of Louisiana's importance, 20 of those 100 rigs will be in Louisiana," he said, adding that would mean 3,600 Louisianians would go back to work.

Tour of Midland schools on Chinese visitors' agenda

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Midland's Chinese Sister City delegation continues it activities in the Permian Basin today with a tour of Midland schools by those Chinese visitors involved in city planning, while the petroleum group returns to Odessa to spend the day visiting seven oil industry-related facilities.

The delegation, which has now grown to 13 with the addition of Consul General Ni Yaoli, his wife, Zheng Mei Feng, and several members from the Houston office of the China National Offshore Oil Company, spent Thursday in Odessa, touring the Oil Show in the morning and early afternoon, then splitting up to tour the El Paso Products complex and municipal facilities.

Odessa City Manager John Harrison, assistant City Manager Curtis Snow and utilities director Bob Derrington took Jiang Chengquan, head of the Dongying municipality office, and Zhang Zhengzhi, LiJin County magistrate, to the city's garbage shredding facility on West 42nd Street for a demonstration of how the system works.

Derrington had arranged for several garbage trucks to dump their loads for the Dongying delegates so they could follow the process through a full cycle.

He explained, through George Chen, an engineer who was born in Shanghai and works for Kodiak Oilfield Equipment Co., that the location of the shredding facility allows only 20 trucks to handle trash pickup for the entire city. The shredding of garbage, Derrington said, saves the city money because it helps extend the life of the city's sanitary landfill.

Following the tour of the shredding facility, the two Dongying delegates were briefed by Judy Miller, city planning director, on Odessa's master plan, land use and zoning procedures.

While Jiang and Zhang explored municipal procedures and services relevant to development of Dongying, a city just barely three years old, the remainder of the group toured El Paso Products.

Dick Dunbar, chairman of the Dongying/Midland Sister City Association, said Consul General Ni and his wife, both chemical engineers, explored as much of the chemical proscesses as time allowed.

At the oil show, a number of exhibits caught the attention of the Dongying visitors. One in particular was a relatively new pump jack design by engineer Jerry Watson, which is built in Odessa.

Members of the delegation involved in oil production were most interested in how the new design compared with the more familiar style of pump jack. Watson explained that the new design required 22 to 25 percent less electric power to pump the same volume of oil and standard pump jack models.

Aside from the group's interest in municipal facilities, according to Dunbar, the Dongying representatives have been very interested in gas-gathering systems, pipeline facilities and geophysical information produced from Landsat, the satellite that provides highly detailed photographs of the earth's surface.

Dongying Mayor Tang Shenghai, at 48-years-old, the youngest mayor in China, has indicated an interest in seismographic, logging and other highly sophisticated equipment.

In a brief interview with reporters Thursday following lunch in the Chuckwagon Gang's lounge adjacent to the Ector County Coliseum, Tang was was asked how his responsibilities differ from those of a mayor in cities such as Midland and Odessa.

He explained his responsibilities include overseeing virtually every facet of life for the 1.43 million people who live in the Dongying area, which is located in the heart of Shengli oil field, the second largest in China. He also oversees development of the oil field. His responsibilities also include overseeing all law enforcement activities for the area.

County bats around solutions to pest problem

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

All they want is a place to get out of the cold, but county officials say they do not want the courthouse to become a bat shelter.

The flying mammals have returned to plague the courthouse despite an extermination last year and county extension agent Earnest Kiker said after a special commissioner's meeting Thursday that he will attempt to solve the county bat's problem by next week.

The commissioners also accepted a bid Thursday for insuring the sheriff's helicopter.

"We don't know for sure what it's going to take. We're looking to see where holes are and try to patch it up," Kiker said of the bat problem.

Kiker said he did not know how many bats are inhabiting the space between the fourth and fifth floors or what kind of bats have taken up residence in the courthouse.

The courthouse isn't the only building the bats are choosing to live in, with several downtown buildings also being infested with the winged mammals, Sheriff Gary Painter said.

Southwestern Bell public relations manager Darlene Gifford said many downtown buildings have had problems with bats trying to get in.

But it's been several years since a bat has gotten into the company's building at 410 West Missouri, she said.

"Every season we have bats trying to get into vents. In the past we did have one get in due to an opening. Now we know to watch that and check vent openings," Ms. Gifford said.

Other than getting into the courthouse and scaring people, the bats are more of a nuisance than a major problem, Kiker said.

"It's not an uncommon deal for bats to get into buildings. They're just hunting a place to get in out of the weather," he said.

However, about a year ago, an inmate was bitten by a bat he had tied and hung from the ceiling to fight with another bat, said County Attorney Mark Dettman.

An exterminator was brought in last year to kill the bats that set up house on county property.

But others have returned to the space between the original (1930) courthouse roof on the fourth floor and the bottom of the fifth floor jail added in the '70s.

Soviets approve woman's trip to Israel to donate bone marrow

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities today gave final approval for a Soviet woman and her husband to leave for Israel so she can donate bone marrow to her leukemia-stricken brother, the husband said.

Viktor Fleurov told The Associated Press by telephone that he had just left the Soviet visa agency, OVIR, where he was given a card certifying he has permission to leave the country.

He said it would take about two weeks to complete all the documents that must be turned in to OVIR before passports and tickets are issued to him and his wife, Inessa.

"I'm exhausted and I just don't know what to say," Fleurov said. "They promised me last Friday that I would be able to leave and now they've fulfilled that promise."

He said he did not know exactly when they would leave.

Mrs. Fleurov's brother, Mikhail Shirman, who lives in Israel, is suffering from leukemia. Doctors say his life may be prolonged if Mrs. Fleurov donates bone marrow for a transplant.

Getting treasure 'dream come true'

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Sherry Culpepper said she never dreamed she would someday own part of the 350-year-old treasure she has been showing tourists who come to the gift shop at Mel Fisher's Treasure Salvors Inc.

"This is incredible, a dream come true," she said. "After all this time working for peanuts, I just can't believe I'm taking some of this home."

Ms. Culpeper was one of 600 investors and employees who got a share Thursday of the $100 million booty from a 17th-century Spanish galleon for which Fisher had searched 16 years.

"They are going to get a return beyond their wildest dream," said Bleth McHaley, vice president of Treasure Salvors. She estimated the average return at 20-to-1.

The ancient treasure was totaled and distributed via a new-fangled method — computer.

The computer on Thursday completed 2½ days of calculations and displayed the message, "Division Complete, Congratulations Treasure Salvors," said Ms. McHaley.

As soon as the computer stopped printing and flashed its message, she said, "about 25 or 30 champagne corks popped...people moved out of the computer room, and they just went bananas."

Many of the investors began splitting up the bounty in a warehouse at the company's Key West headquarters.

"Oh my God, I'm rich," Ms. Culpepper screamed, then began hugging friends, co-workers and reporters. Her share included three silver bars weighing a total of almost 250 pounds, a 6-carat emerald and a rare coin.

Despite long meeting, agreement eluding OPEC ministers

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC oil ministers, meeting behind a cloak of secrecy, today resumed their search for at least a tentative agreement on production controls that could push petroleum prices back up.

The cartel leaders made no public comments as they arrived for a 12th straight day of talks at a Geneva hotel.

The outcome of what has become one of the longest meetings in the 26-year history of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries remained in doubt, even after Thursday's intense deliberations.

The oil ministers have been trying to construct a formula, based on a statistical profile of each member country, that would be used to calculate oil production quotas for the 13 members.

The aim is to restrict the cartel's production in order to dry up the world oil glut and boost oil prices.

A makeshift OPEC accord on production restraint that took effect Sept. 1 is due to expire at the end of this month. There has been no final decision on whether to extend it or replace it.

Rilwanu Lukman, the OPEC president and the oil minister of Nigeria, said after Thursday's meeting that the ministers had agreed on "tentative definitions" of seven or eight elements of the formula.

Lukman declined to describe this as a breakthrough, but indicated that good progress was made.

"We're not in a hurry to talk about breakthroughs," he said.

"What we are trying to arrive at is a general principle, ... if you like, the structure or form that the formula will take," Lukman told a news conference.

Lukman seemed to be saying that OPEC would be satisfied, at least for the time being, if it could reach an understanding on the foundation for building a permanent and credible system of output controls.

If OPEC could agree first on the production-sharing formula, then it would try to agree on the exact levels of production that each country would be assigned.

In the past, OPEC's efforts to assign production quotas have fallen apart because of the inability or unwillingness of many of its members to abide by the limits.

Fawzi Shakshuki, the oil minister of Libya, said after Thursday's talks that he saw signs of progress.

"We are narrowing the differences" between the members, he said.

OPEC sources said the eight factors that could be used in calculating production quotas are national oil reserves, production capacity, historical shares of OPEC's output, production costs, dependency on oil exports, domestic oil consumption, population and foreign debt obligations.

It remained to be seen whether the oil ministers could agree how these factors could be used in combination to determine the production quotas.

Ibrahim told reporters at his native village of Zeghdraya that the Israeli captive spoke a little Arabic, but with an Egyptian accent.

"I jumped out of the bush and ordered him to stick his hands up when he landed by parachute in the olive grove yesterday. He raised only one arm," Ibrahim said.

"I became afraid he might have something in his other hand. So I shouted at him and gestured by my M-16 (assault rifle) to him to raise that other hand. He could not." Ibrahim added.

"I approached cautiously and found out his right arm was broken," Ibrahim said. "I then marched him at gunpoint for about 1,200 yards from the valley to Zeghdraya. My superiors then took him somewhere else."

Zeghdraya is a tiny hamlet midway between the Shiite towns of Anqoun and Tambourit, five miles southeast of Sidon.

In Tel Aviv, chief army spokesman Brig. Gen. Ephraim Lapid said Thursday that all efforts were being made to find the missing flier.

Lapid, speaking on Israel army radio, would not specify how he was being tracked.

"All I can say is that the Israel Defense Forces will not rest until we have recovered the missing man," he said.

The military command said the plane was shot down during a bombing run on positions of the mainstream Fatah faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization, 2½ miles south of Sidon. It was the first Israeli plane shot down over Lebanon since November 1983.

Israeli pilots released red balloons to deflect scores of missiles that streaked toward them during the raids.

CHINA

Saturday will mark the final day of the group's tour, with scheduled morning tours of facilities involved in the production and gathering of natural gas.

Following a luncheon at La Bodega, hosted by Kodiak President Ken Mayes, the group will take a field trip to a drilling rig site by Buddy Hensley.

Mayes, who has been doing business in China for several years, imports Chinese-built pump jacks, which he says are "as fine a piece of equipment as any manufactured in the United States," said they can be sold for about 25 percent less than a comparable U.S.-built pump jack and that the Chinese warranty them for a full two-year period.

Mayes says his company has imported 600 Chinese-built pump jack units and that 250 to 300 of them are currently working in the Permian Basin.

The Dongying delegation's visit officially ends Sunday. There will be a farewell banquet at the Plaza Club in the ClayDesta Bank building Saturday evening. Members are scheduled to leave Midland Regional Airport just before noon Sunday.

Dongying's mayor leads delegation

The seven-member Dongying Friendship Delegation that arrived in Midland Tuesday is led by Dongying Mayor Tang Shenghai, 48, who was elected in 1984. He graduated from the Civil Engineering Department of Tsing Hua University in Beijing in 1965 and has been involved in development of the Shengli oil field almost from the time oil production first began. He is the youngest mayor in China.

Jiang Chengquan, 46, in addition to being president of the Dongying/Midland Friendship City Association, has been head of the Dongying municipality office. He graduated from the Mechanical Department of Tianjin University in 1964. He, too, has been heavily involved in the Shengli oil field, having served as head of the headquarters office from 1965 to 1983. Prior to that, he spent a year as secretary of the headquarters office of the Daqing oil field.

Ju Qingchu, 54, is director of the Dongying Economic Council. Prior to his present position he was deputy director of production for the Shengli oil field office. For 25 years, he served as deputy director of the Jinan Diesel Engine Plant.

Zhang Zhengzhi, 38, is magistrate of LiJin County. He is a 1968 graduate from the Soil Chemistry Department of Shandong Agriculture Institute. Previously, he had served as a vice magistrate of KenLi County and deputy director of the KenLi County Economic Council. He spent sever years as a technician of the Ammonia Plant of KenLi County.

Wei Zhongwu, 49, is deputy director of the Dongying Foreign Affairs Office. He graduated from Tsinghua University in 1963 with a degree in cehmical engineering. Wei, who speaks English, worked at the Brookhaven National Laboratory from 1981 to 1984. Prior to that, he served as a chemical engineer in Sheng Li.

Ge Rong, 53, chief geologist for the ShengLi oil field graduated from the Geological Department of Chongqing University in 1954. He has worked in the northwest and north China in the area of oil exploration. He was one of the earliest geologists working in the ShengLi oil field and made certain contributions to the discovery and development of the second largest oil field in China.

Chen Fusheng, 43, is chief engineer, deputy manager of ChuenLiang headquarters of ShengLi oil field. He graduated from Bejing Petroleum Institute in 1965 and has been engaged in research work concerning oil production technology in the Shengli oil field for a number of years.

LEAVE

Soviet authorities granted her a visa to leave the country for Israel on Aug. 20, but had not granted permission to her husband because his father would not sign a financial waiver. All Soviets must obtain such waivers from their parents before they can emigrate.

Mrs. Fleurov refused to leave without her husband.

Fleurov said today that he never got the paper signed and that the authorities gave him permission to leave anyway.

The decision marked the latest in a series of Soviet moves on human rights cases.

During the summit in Reykjavik last weekend between Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan, the Soviets released poet Irina Ratushinskaya from a jail in the Ukraine. Just before the summit they granted exit permission to several long-term "refuseniks" — Soviets who previously were not allowed to leave.

Dissident Yuri Orlov was freed earlier this month under a deal under which American reporter Nicholas Daniloff, charged in Moscow with spying, and Soviet diplomat Gennadiy Zakharov, charged in New York with spying, were allowed to return to their home countries. Zakharov pleaded no-contest to the charges.

Fleurov said he thought the decision in his case was probably connected to Shirman's appearance at the Reykjavik summit. Shirman was one of several former Soviet Jews who came to Reykjavik to press their families' cases.

"We don't know how they get into the building. We're going to have to sit and watch at night and see when they leave," said Sheriff Gary Painter.

In other action, the commissioners accepted a $2,600 bid to insure the sheriff's helicopter with up to $1 million in coverage.

Johnny Johnson of Midland was the only company to offer a bid to insure the blue-and-white Hughes 300c chopper worth about $80,000.

Commissioners told Painter in September to find a cheaper rate than a $6,500 liability insurance premium or he would have to ground the chopper donated last year by the Pasadena (Texas) Police Department.

Johnny Johnson offered the county $1 million coverage with passenger liability for $8,310, but commissioners chose the lower bid without passenger liability.

Because only sheriff personnel will ride in the chopper, the officers will already be insured by the county's insurance, Painter told commissioners.

"If they're injured in the line of work, then they're covered by workman's compensation," he said.

TREASURE

"I bought a dream and I always knew it was there. It's a dream come true," exclaimed Leah Miguel, a curator with Treasure Salvors, who received a gold bar and two emeralds.

The division of gold, silver, emeralds and artifacts to investors was another milestone for Fisher, who overcame legal and financial troubles and personal tragedy during his hunt for the treasure of the Nuestra Senora de Atocha. His divers found the wreck in 1985.

A spokeswoman said Fisher, who got 4 percent, or about $4 million, of the haul, was out of town.

Not all of the investors were happy. Some have been waiting more than 20 years for their investment to pay off.

Bernice Feild, of Del Mar, Calif., was skeptical because she remembers other divisions of booty that yielded her very little.

"We've gotten practically nothing," she said in a phone interview from her home Thursday. "I got my stock in 1964, and we've gotten almost nothing over that time."

The Atocha left Havana on Sept. 5, 1622, as part of a fleet of 27 ships bound for Spain with treasure from the New World.

Less than a day out of port, a hurricane hit ships in the Florida Straits, sinking the Atocha and seven other vessels.

Fisher fought a long legal battle with the state of Florida over who had the rights to salvaged booty. He's also fought other salvors and solicited investors for cash for the research.

In 1975, his son and daughter-in-law died while looking for the Atocha.

Lorraine Repp of Clearwater, a stockholder who invested a decade ago, has followed the latest developments on the Atocha in the newspapers. She was pleased by the computer division of the booty, but wants something more definite.

"That's a little help after 10 years," she said. "But...I'd rather have the cash in my hand."

So far, Fisher's divers have recovered 177 gold bars, 900 silver bars, thousands of coins and artifacts and continue bringing up treasure from the ocean bottom.

Treasure Salvors Inc. is sending treasure lists to investors not present Thursday and expects to have the treasure distributed from its Key West vault by the end of February.

Goldfarb worried about family he left

NEW YORK (AP) — An ailing Jewish scientist was resting comfortably today in a hospital after a sudden flight to freedom that he called a miracle, but he is worried about the fate of the rest of the family in the Soviet Union, his son said.

David Goldfarb's release "was purely an expression of good will on the part of Mr. (Mikhail) Gorbachev," American industrialist Armand Hammer, who arranged the release, said today on the "CBS Morning News." It "probably means the summit was not a failure because there was some good will left," Hammer added.

Goldfarb, a 67-year-old geneticist, arrived here with his wife, Cecilia, on Thursday evening, more than seven years after he first requested permission to leave the Soviet Union for Israel.

His release was granted despite his refusal to leave without his wife, or to make a deal with the KGB to frame American journalist Nicholas Daniloff, his son said.

The couple flew from Moscow aboard Hammer's private jet after the industrialist arranged permission for their departure through a former Soviet ambassador to the United States. Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp. whose relations with the Soviets go back 65 years, intervened after Goldfarb's son addressed an open letter to him in the Wall Street Journal.

Hammer, speaking on the CBS program, called the release "a good omen for the future" and expressed hope for the future emigration of other refuseniks, Jews seeking to leave the Soviet Union.

"Yesterday a miracle happened," Goldfarb said after he was taken off the jet on an stretcher.

"But, as they say, there is no complete happiness without misfortune and no luck without problems," he said in Russian with his son, Alexander, translating. "The problem is that I left behind in Moscow my daughter and her family."

His son said today on the news program that Goldfarb's "primary concern is the rest of the family."

Toxic red tide moving south along Texas coast to South Padre Island

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — Since arriving on the Texas coast in January Mark Hamner has survived spring break and a busy summer as acting general manager of the Hilton Inn on South Padre Island.

But he's not sure how he'll handle the toxic red tide that kept hotel visitors away from the beach Thursday because of its searing effects on the eyes, lungs and nasal passages.

"Now, we've got something I don't know how to deal with," Hamner said, his eyes reddened by the tide as he surveyed a desolate beach.

The red tide washed into South Padre late Wednesday; by Thursday afternoon dead catfish littered the beaches of the coastal resort.

The red tide began near Galveston in late August and slowly has moved south. Thousands of fish have been killed by the heavy concentration of marine micro-organisms.

Officials in Corpus Christi, 120 miles to the north, have been forced to close beaches to swimmers.

The Texas Health Department has suspended oyster harvests for 300 miles of coast from San Louis Pass to the mouth of the Rio Grande because the organism that causes the red tide builds up in shellfish, said Hector Herrera, regional engineer for the health agency in Harlingen.

Police have no leads in death of bar owner linked to Feazell

WACO (AP) — Police said they had no leads in the shooting death of a lounge owner alleged to have paid McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell a $1,000 bribe.

And Feazell, who claimed his indictment by a federal grand jury was inspired by his involvement in the Henry Lee Lucas case, said there appeared to be no connection on the surface between his case and the death.

Richard Bowers, 66, who in September was named in the federal indictment charging Feazell with taking bribes, was found by his wife, Nora, early Thursday morning, "as if he had just gotten out of his car," said Justice of the Peace John Cabaniss, who put the time of death at about 4:15 a.m.

Waco police spokesman Larry Murphy said Bowers, the owner of the Clifton Street Lounge, was shot at least once in the left side of his chest.

"It could have been more than once," Murphy said. "All we can say is that it doesn't appear to be a shotgun.

Murphy said Waco police had no motive in the shooting death and no evidence of a connection with the Feazell case.

"I don't know anything about the shooting. It's going to take some investigating," Feazell said. "There does not appear on the surface to be any connection, but in light of the recent burglary of my office and some other events, nothing would surprise me."

In the federal indictment against Feazell, Bowers was alleged to have paid Feazell a $1,000 bribe in 1984 in connection with Bowers' arrest for possession of hydromorphone, synthetic heroin.

Bowers told the Waco Tribune-Herald in September he paid attorneys Don Hall and Dick Kettler $12,000 in legal fees and was placed on probation for the charge. He denied bribing Feazell and said he had never met him.

FBI agents questioned him three times since September 1985, Bowers said in the interview.

Feazell was indicted by a federal grand jury on Sept. 16 on two counts of racketeering and 10 counts of mail fraud. In 1985, when a McLennan County grand jury failed to indict Henry Lee Lucas in two local slayings, Feazell predicted he would be an indictment target because his work on the Lucas case embarrassed the Texas Rangers.

Lucas at one time confessed to hundreds of murders nationwide but later recanted, saying he had been trying to make law enforcement officers look foolish by making bogus confessions.

Meanwhile, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jan Patterson Thursday filed a motion asking U.S. District Judge James R. Nowlin to deny Feazell's request to have tapes seized Sept. 17 from his office and home placed in a depository.

Reagan letter touts Clements' effectiveness

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Bill Clements campaign Thursday released a letter of support from the White House. Clements' opponent, however, questioned the effectiveness of the former governor's relationship with President Reagan.

"Your campaign is very important to me and the people of Texas," Reagan wrote Clements, the Republican candidate for governor, in a letter dated Tuesday.

"The outcome will determine whether we stay on the right track toward strengthening our economy and restoring our national pride and self-confidence, or return to the failed policies of the past which brought us high inflation and runaway government spending at home and weakness and ridicule abroad."

Throughout the campaign, Clements has maintained that Democratic Gov. Mark White's constant criticism of the president has hurt the state.

Thursday Clements touted his close working relationship as governor with Reagan as well as with the Democratic Carter administration. He accused White of placing "partisan politics above the well-being of Texas."

Reagan campaigned for Clements in Dallas on July 23. Vice President George Bush stumped for Clements in San Antonio last month.

Throughout an East Texas campaign tour Wednesday, White maintained that Clements' ties to Reagan did not help the state. As attorney general, White said, he won a federal lawsuit overturning the windfall profits tax on oil companies, but Clements couldn't prevent Reagan's Justice Department from appealing — and eventually overturning — that decision.

Hunts refuse to give up challenge of federal judge

DALLAS (AP) — The billionaire Hunt brothers will not give up their challenge to remove a federal judge from their $1.5 billion foreclosure trial, despite an appellate court ruling allowing the judge to try the case.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused Thursday to disqualify U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders, who the Hunts maintain has a conflict of interest in the case.

Hunt spokesman Keith Burton said the brothers will take the recusal motion to the Supreme Court if necessary to keep Sanders off the bench.

The Hunts have filed the lawsuit against 23 Louisiana banks that have threatened to foreclose on Hunt property unless the debts are paid. The Hunt suit alleges the banks want the brother's offshore oil operations.

In a four-page ruling, the 5th Circuit brushed aside arguments by the Hunts that Sanders should step aside because he has had business dealings with a former lawyer for one of the banks involved in the case and because he had an investment in one of the banks.

The lawyer in question has withdrawn from the case, making that argument moot, said the 5th Circuit.

Burton said the court missed the point. The Hunt's allege that Sanders should be disqualified because he did not reveal his business interests or his friendship with the bank attorney.

"The main issue still remains," Burton said. "Why did we have to disclose the conflict between Sanders and the attorney? Under federal rules Sanders is required to indicate a conflict of interest."

But the court said, "We are unwilling to adopt a rule requiring recusal (disqualification) in every case in which a judge owns stock of a company in the same industry as one of the parties to the case..."

The Hunts, said the court, "by showing only an indirect and speculative interest is not a financial interest within the meaning of the recusal statute...nor does it create a situation in which a judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned."

Burton maintains that the circuit court is making a relative judgment not based on the law.

"This is a ludicrous argument," Burton said. "It's akin to saying that stealing $100 is worse than stealing $1. Breaking the rules is breaking the rules."

In addition, Sanders should not be allowed to rule on the case because he has financial investments with a company involved with the bank, Burton said. The banks admit that if not allowed to foreclose they may have to close, he said.

"Sanders would be required to make a decision that could place his own finances in jeopardy," Burton said.

Meanwhile Burton said the Hunts have uncovered further evidence of Sanders' involvement with the banks and they plan to present it to a judicial ethics committee.

Reagan off to North Dakota in battle to keep Senate Republican

By DAVID ESPO

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, stepping up the pace of his campaign activities with the Iceland summit behind him, is flying to North Dakota's troubled farm country in a bid to boost the shaky re-election fortunes of Sen. Mark Andrews.

The president's brief visit today to the wheat-rich state in the Upper Midwest was his second campaign foray in three days as he battles to keep the Senate in Republican hands. With 2½ weeks remaining until Election Day, Reagan has set aside several additional days for campaigning in states where Senate races are believed close.

White House aides said Reagan was likely to continue his strong defense of the "Star Wars" missile defense system. The president's refusal to agree to certain curbs on the program produced an impasse at his Iceland summit last weekend with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Campaigning in Maryland for GOP senatorial candidate Linda Chavez on Wednesday, the president said it would be a "terrible tragedy for this country...if those on Capitol Hill opposed to SDI are allowed to hand over to the Soviet Union, free of charge, what we refused to hand over across the negotiating table."

But in addition, Reagan's aides said he would discuss his agricultural policies — a subject that has taken on a critical role in Andrews' tighter-than-expected re-election bid.

Republicans hold a 53-47 edge in the Senate, but must defend 22 of the 34 seats at stake this year. Democrats are making a determined bid to regain the majority they lost in 1980 when Andrews and more than a dozen GOP senators were swept into office in a Reagan landslide.

Andrews began the year heavily favored for re-election. But Democratic challenger Kent Conrad, aided by discontent over the farm economy, slowly chipped away until a University of North Dakota public opinion survey a month ago concluded the race was a dead heat.

Later surveys give Conrad a narrow lead, but Andrews has mounted something of a counterattack in recent weeks — including today's visit by a president who remains popular even if his farm policies are not.

The president's schedule called for him to spend slightly less than two hours in the Grand Forks area, but it was a schedule drafted with Andrews' political needs in mind.

That meant a fund-raising meeting with major donors, a 10-minute private session with farm leaders and a large public rally designed to whip up enthusiasm for the senator's re-election.

A presidential visit is a tried-and-true means of raising money for a senatorial candidate, while the meeting with farm leaders seems designed to deal with an issue that has plagued Andrews' campaign as it has that of GOP lawmakers in other agricultural states.

AIDS antibody found in 1,500 military personnel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military has tested 1 million men and women on active duty for exposure to the disease AIDS and encountered the same 0.15 percent "positive rate" seen earlier in the testing of recruits, Pentagon sources say.

As a result, roughly 1,500 men and women have been identified as having an antibody associated with the deadly disease. Of those, just over half have begun showing "symptoms indicative of progressive clinical disease," grounds for a medical discharge, the sources say.

In a related development, Congress — in approving the Pentagon's fiscal 1987 budget authorization — inserted language forbidding the use of information obtained from medical interviews "to support any adverse personnel action," including discharges.

That directive would overturn part of the Pentagon's confidentiality policy. Currently, if a serviceman acknowledges drug use or homosexual activity in the course of AIDS screening, that information is not supposed to be used as the sole grounds for punitive actions such as court-martials. But it can be used as grounds for a discharge.

At the same time, Pentagon officials say they have begun debating whether the department has been too lenient toward active-duty personnel who test positively for exposure but who show no signs of the actual disease.

Such individuals are now allowed to remain on active duty, although they face continuing medical screening and restrictions on duty assignments and overseas deployments. Some military leaders argue the policy should be changed and any individual testing positively be given an honorable discharge, the sources say.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is a fatal disease that destroys the body's immune system. It has been confined largely to homosexuals, intravenous drug users and individuals receiving tainted blood transfusions, although there is some evidence the disease is spreading to the general population.

The blood screen employed by the Pentagon can only indicate whether an individual has been exposed to a virus associated with the disease, not whether he will contract it.

The results of AIDS testing among active-duty personnel were provided Thursday by officials on the condition they not be identified. The Pentagon regularly releases results of tests on new recruits.

The sources asserted the failure to release such information stems from computer problems and not a deliberate effort to keep it secret.

Although the test results have not been consolidated, one source added, the Pentagon has seen sufficient results from each service to better appreciate the problem it faces.

The source said the Pentagon predicts internally that by the time all 2.1 million members of the armed forces are tested, between 3,000 and 3,100 will show signs of exposure to the disease.

That translates to an incidence rate of 1.5 cases per 1,000 individuals tested — the same rate being experienced with new recruits.

Based on what researchers know today, it is possible that some men and women who show signs of exposure will never contract the disease, the officials said. But such individuals could still transmit the disease through sexual contacts.

Even if the new predictions are accurate and only 1,300 to 1,500 individuals are affected, that is a large enough number to raise readiness concerns, one official said.

"Theoretically, everybody on the force is supposed to be deployable, and these people aren't," the source added. "On the other hand, absent signs of the disease, this is still an individual with valuable training. It's a real thorny issue."

The decision on confidentiality, meantime, was described by a staff member of the House Armed Services Committee as having been prompted by concerns over the accuracy of medical information being gathered by military researchers.

The aide, who requested anonymity, said there was no evidence the Pentagon was using its AIDS program to mount a "witch-hunt" for homosexuals or drug abusers.

"The key to reliable data is the degree of candor obtained in interviews," the committee aide said. "In order to foster truthful, open discussion with the doctor, something in the nature of immunity should be accorded the interviewee."

Nobel winner proof that Harvard not exclusive

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Three decades ago, George Mason University opened its doors as a two-year school with 17 students. Today is has 17,000 students on a sprawling, fast-growing campus, and it boasts something that only a few American universities can claim: A Nobel Prize winner on the faculty.

James Buchanan

It proves there is no need to be a Berkeley or Harvard to garner one of the world's most prestigious honors.

"We're very excited," Allan Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, said following Thursday's announcement that the 1986 Nobel Prize in economics had been awarded to George Mason's James McGill Buchanan.

The association's 372 campuses enroll 2.5 million students and turn out a third of all U.S. college graduates, but Ostar said, "We've never had a faculty member get a Nobel Prize."

Buchanan's award was the ultimate coup for the aggressive branch of the University of Virginia that already has earned a reputation as a hotbed of academic entrepreneurship.

When George Mason President George W. Johnson introduced Buchanan to reporters Thursday, he said, "All of our institutional aspirations are really represented by the man honored here this morning."

Buchanan, 67, is a father of the so-called "public choice" or populist free market school of economics that holds politicians respond to self-interest, not the public good. He said he moved to George Mason from Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1983 because "this seemed to me where the action was."

Two-thirds of George Mason's students are undergraduates, many of them commuters from the Washington, D.C., area. It is almost unheard of for a Nobel Prize to go to a faculty member of a university where the primary mission is training undergraduates.

But Buhanan is one of the highest paid professors at any U.S. campus, earning $114,130 a year.

Buchanan is a product of two state colleges, Middle Tennessee State College and the University of Tennessee. He is a self-proclaimed "member of the great unwashed" and critic of "the Eastern academic elite" who still feels he was discriminated against when he went to the University of Chicago after World War II to get his Ph.D.

He criticized academics who never question that government is benevolent. "Even though they might be in Harvard, they still think of themselves...as if they were down there in Washington."

Berkeley has 12 Nobel Laureates on its faculty, and Harvard boasts similar numbers. They also have huge research budgets.

"I wouldn't say this is a trend. I hardly think that. But what it says is that we do have some outstanding faculty members," said Ostar, who added that many state four-year colleges are stepping up their research.

'Lake Wobegon Days' eyed for movie make

COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — Garrison Keillor and award-winning director Sydney Pollack are talking about making a movie based on Keillor's best-selling book "Lake Wobegon Days," a spokeswoman for Minnesota Public Radio said Thursday.

Keillor, the star of NPR's "Prairie Home Companion" has not been available for comment on the report, but Alison Circle, public information coordinator at NPR, said Pollack and Keillor have been talking about making a movie.

"It should come as no surprise to anyone that when there is a best-selling book there is always talk about a movie," Circle said.

"There does exist that possibility. But at this time it's nothing more. It's just one possibility and only one. At this point there are no negotiations. Nothing to confirm. There has been talk with (Pollack) involved."

Pollack is an Academy Award-winning director who recently directed "Out of Africa" starring Robert Redford and Meryl Streep. Pollack's secretary, who would identify herself only as Donna, said Thursday that Pollack recently left for Europe and would be gone for two weeks.

Scott Johnson, public information director at St. John's University in Collegeville, confirmed that Keillor and Pollack had visited the campus last week to scout possible filming locations.

Central Minnesota has long held a place in Keillor's heart. Much of the material he uses for his monologues on his Saturday evening radio show as well as for the book is said to come from Freeport, the Stearns County community located between Melrose and Albany in Interstate 94.

Keillor lived on a farm about five miles south of Freeport in the early 1970s when he broadcast an early-morning classical music show from KSJR-FM radio station in Collegeville.

NATION IN BRIEF

National Guardsmen face screening after turning 40

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aging soldiers in the National Guard and Army Reserve face screening after their 40th birthdays to determine if they are physically fit enough to handle their military duties.

A directive by Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV concludes that health screening must begin immediately, even though there may be some bad publicity about the results.

The contents of the Oct. 9 directive approving a recommendation by Assistant Defense Secretary James H. Webb were disclosed Thursday.

More than one of every six members of the Army Reserve and National Guard are now over the age of 40, according to Webb.

"It's a scary problem in the Guard because they're combat troops," said Webb. "You're looking at fielding a combat force where ever sixth guy in these rifle companies is over the age of 40.

"People are going to get over there in a tough, operational environment and stroke out, at least, a good number of them are."

Art exhibit comes down

WASHINGTON (AP) — An art exhibit in a Senate office building came down a day ahead of schedule because several senators were said to have complained that its protest of U.S. policy in Nicaragua was too political.

"It's a sorry statement about free speech," said the artist, Georgina Forbes of Thetford, Vt.

The exhibit, which originally was to be taken down today, depicted the kitchen of a rural Nicaraguan family victimized by the U.S.-backed Contra guerrillas who are seeking to overthrow the Sandinista government in that country.

Ms. Forbes, who said she is a distant cousin of Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., at first refused to comply with a request by Senate authorities that she dismantle her tableau, but backed down late Thursday at Kerry's suggestion.

John Rixey, a lawyer for the Rules Committee, said the exhibit violated several Senate rules governing use of the rotunda, including a ban on exhibits of a political or commercial nature. He said Ms. Forbes' tableau also contained a large bowl with a sign soliciting contributions, which also is prohibited.

Protest still on, hunger off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four military veterans declared that their protest against U.S. aid to Nicaraguan rebels would continue although their hunger strike on the steps of the Capitol was ending.

At a news conference, the men said they were ending the fast at midnight tonight because of support for their cause shown by thousands of people through letters, calls and other statements.

One of the four, Charles Liteky, who turned in his Medal of Honor to protest U.S. policies in Central America, said he would go on a "maintenance fast," while ending the water-only diet that he began 46 days ago.

"The fast is not over. It is changed," Liteky said.

Liteky, 55, of San Francisco, and George Mizo, 40, of Boston, began their fast Sept. 1, and were joined Sept. 15 by Brian Willson, 45, of Chelsea, Vt., and Duncan Murphy of Fayetteville, Ark. Murphy, 66, is a World War II veteran; the others served in Vietnam.

They reported losing between 23 and 46 pounds each.

EPA restricts fungicide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency said it will impose restrictions on a fungicide used on apples because farmworkers need protection, although the chemical poses no risk to those who eat the fruit.

Dinocap, which is used to control mites and mildew on apples, appears to cause birth defects in laboratory animals.

An almost pure form of the chemical may not cause those defects, but current formulations are only about 80 percent pure, the agency said.

Illuminating visit

It isn't every week that a city in this country can claim oneness with a similar community on the other side of the world. But this week Midland has enjoyed that distinction.

Midland's pride has been at its Texas best as the city has been playing host to a delegation of visitors from Dongying, the city in China that shares "sister city" status with Midland. It has been, from all appearances, an outstanding experience for local officials and, we hope, an illuminating experience for the Chinese dignitaries visiting the Permian Basin.

The Chinese delegation consists of Tang Shenghai, mayor of Dongying; Jiang Chengquan, president of the Dongying-Midland Friendship City Association; Zhang Zhenzhi, Lijing County magistrate; Ju Qingchu, economic council director; Wei Zhongwu, foreign affairs office director; Ge Rong, geologist; and Chen Fusheng, oil production engineer. We join other Midlanders and Permian Basin residents in welcoming the visitors to our area.

Of course no visit to the Permian Basin would be complete without heavy emphasis on the oil industry and the visitors are being given a first-hand look at the local industry with a visit to the Permian Basin Oil Show in Odessa, a visit to the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, tours of local industries and a visit to a drilling rig. The delegation also is to tour other points of interest throughout Midland.

The visit to Midland comes on the heels of a visit to China last June by a group of Midlanders headed by Mayor Carroll Thomas and Joan Baskin, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce at the time. The Midland delegation returned to Texas with valuable information and expressed hopes that Midland and Dongying can establish closer ties via a friendship that could prove mutually beneficial in the areas of art, culture and industry. This week's visit by the Chinese was the next logical step toward that end.

We hope the Chinese delegation departs from Midland with a wealth of knowledge and information about this city, area and people. That, of course, is the start of any lasting relationship — mutual understanding.

No big surprise

The only truly surprising aspect in the selection of Elie Wiesel as recipient of this year's Nobel Peace Prize is that he was not chosen earlier. The New Yorker has long carried out a one-man campaign for peace, atonement and human dignity.

Wiesel's life seems a testament to the principles of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish industrialist who endowed the awards. Wiesel was born in Sighet in the northern Romanian district of Transylvania in 1928 and, while still a boy, was deported to Auschwitz and then to Buchenwald. His mother and sister died at Auschwitz, his father at Buchenwald.

At the age of 16, Wiesel was liberated from Buchenwald and moved to Paris. There he recounted in writing the inhumanities he endured while in the Nazi death camps. Later Wiesel became a naturalized American.

Wiesel has been an outstanding "messenger" to mankind, as the Norwegian Nobel Committee noted, for peace, atonement and human dignity. In that regard it was appropriate that he be singled out by the Nobel committee for this most prestigious award.

Of course, the Nobel Peace Prize, while not the sole award presented by the Nobel committee, probably is the most distinguished for work in the betterment of mankind. Other awards this year also went to Americans — Harvard University's Dudley R. Herschbach and Taiwan-born Yuan T. Lee of the University of California. Herschbach and Lee were presented their awards for work in the field of chemistry, particularly involving the dynamics of chemical elementary processes.

To Wiesel, Herschbach and Lee, congratulations for jobs well done — jobs that will make a difference in the quality of life for all people.

Another View: Play game better

The decision of Amadou-Mahtar M'Bow not to seek a third term next year as director of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization means a major policy goal of the Reagan administration concerning changes in the U.N. family of agencies may be closer at hand.

That should come as no great surprise. M'Bow, from Senegal, was on the administration's hit list. When the United States left UNESCO two years ago, preparing the way for Britain to do likewise, the agency was on thin ice. Its money was short, largely because of Washington's and London's decisions to stop paying their respective quotas to support the agency. Thus, M'Bow was presiding over an organization that was losing viability.

By most accounts, M'Bow reigned over one of the most patronage-ridden, inefficient U.N. agencies in existence. Some conservatives providing intellectual ammunition and lieutenants for the administration's broad attack on the United Nations objected primarily to the way the UNESCO director handled money and jobs at the agency's Paris headquarters.

Others were incensed that a man from a Third World nation would permit ideological assaults on the United States and the principles this country alleges to hold dear, such as freedom of the press. UNESCO has been the heart of the movement to license journalists. Conservatives object to that restriction on the press in principle, but fail to be as enthusiastic about a free press when it covers the Reagan administration.

M'Bow's departure gives UNESCO members a chance for a new start. Rather than continuing to play the coy outsider — trying to call the shots from afar — the United States should rejoin UNESCO, accept the U.N. political game and play it better than its rivals.

CIA used Maryland bank to ship arms

WASHINGTON — For more than 10 years the CIA has used a Maryland bank for secret arms shipments to "clients" around the world.

Jack Anderson

Purchase records obtained by our associates Corky Johnson and Donald Goldberg detail arms transactions totaling $21 million through the First National Bank of Maryland in Baltimore. Two shipments worth a total of $5 million involved the purchase and delivery of about 100,000 rifles in a complex transaction apparently winked at by the bank management.

The rifle shipments originated in Brazil and India, according to the documents, but the final destinations listed are suspect. Several ports were crossed out on the original shipping papers and new destinations written in.

The arms deals were initiated by a CIA front called Associated Traders, and handled by Sherwood International Export Corp., a large arms broker licensed with the State Department. Sherwood has offices in Los Angeles, Miami, London and Washington, D.C.

The bills of lading indicate that Associated bought 60,000 rifles from the Indian Defense Ministry for $3.6 million in September 1983. The original destination was given as Portugal, but a corrected listing showed the destination as "Any U(nited) K(ingdom) Port." Sources told us the rifles undoubtedly were delivered to Mujahedin guerrillas fighting Soviet occupation forces in Afghanistan.

A year earlier, Associated bought $1.8 million worth of rifles from Brazil. There was an additional $1 million purchase of "merchandise" from Brazil that listed Baltimore as the final destination. Shipping Brazilian guns to Maryland makes little sense; observers in Nicaragua say the CIA-backed contras there have been known to use Brazilian weapons in their fight against the Sandinista regime.

The Brazilian and Indian arms transactions were handled through Sherwood, which, records show, was the purchase and transfer agent for Associated on several major arms deals. In the past, Sherwood president Michael Kokin has denied that his company worked with the CIA. He did not return our calls for comment on this story.

Associated also used Shimon Ltd., a Cayman Islands firm, for weapons shipments. One of these was a $9.4 million shipment of "technical goods" — industry jargon for military hardware — sent to Lagos, Nigeria. Lagos would be a convenient way station for weapons going to the CIA-backed Angolan rebel leader, Jonas Savimbi.

Little is known about the Shimon firm because of strict Cayman Islands secrecy laws. But it does share the same registration agent on the islands as a Sherwood subsidiary, Cromwell Ltd.

John Keating, a Bethesda, Md., attorney and director of Associated Traders, said he could not comment on any CIA connection with the company. He said he has "very secretive clients."

First National Bank officials also declined to comment. But as we have disclosed, a former bank officer, Robert Maxwell, resigned when he was unable to get written authorization from his superiors to handle the CIA front's transactions.

In a series of memos, Maxwell said he was worried about the CIA connection, but agreed to continue processing Associated's questionable money transfers if he was given written authority.

"As I have previously indicated to you," Maxwell wrote his boss on one occasion, "I have no intention of interfering with any government activities, however, at this point I have fears for my personal well-being as well as concern for the bank."

Maxwell was told the CIA refused the written authority he requested. This led him to fear that he would be the sacrificial lamb if federal banking regulators cracked down on possibly illegal transactions that had his name on them.

WHISTLE BLOWER WINS: For years, Joel Freedman tried to get the Veterans Administration to order the use of soft nasal feeding tubes for its hospital patients who can't ingest food in a normal manner. The larger, harder ones sometimes used by VA hospitals can and do cause pain, bleeding and damage to the nostrils, esophagus and stomach, he pointed out repeatedly. For his whistle blowing efforts, Freedman was fired. A federal judge has ordered him reinstated, though his battle for the patients remains to be won.

Reagan's 'mettle' in Iceland must stay firm

WASHINGTON — The mettle of Ronald Reagan, surprising even those who have closely watched his six years in the White House, proved itself again late Sunday when he read his final Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) offer to Mikhail Gorbachev and complained to his inner circle upstairs at Hofdi House: "But this doesn't say testing."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The legalistic language of that last U.S. offer actually did guarantee SDI "testing" within ABM Treaty limits during the 10-year no-deployment period offered by the president. But that wasn't enough for Reagan: "I want the words in there — research, development and testing — so everyone can read them." In they went, only to be rejected by Gorbachev.

The 75-year-old president displayed his mettle in that exchange on the eve of the Kremlin's intense worldwide propaganda blaming the U.S. for killing peace. Indeed, he showed himself more skilled to handle the coming battle of words than the advisers who sent him headlong toward the most brazenly-baited trap a Soviet leader has ever set for an American president.

As we have reported, Reagan himself jumped at the chance to accept Gorbachev's invitation for a supposed "pre-summit." But that does not exonerate the advisers, who ignored warnings raised by such students of superpower politics as Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski that Reagan would be sandbagged at Reykjavik.

Neither the national security adviser, Vice Adm. John Poindexter, nor Secretary of State George Shultz conveyed the danger to their chief. This oversight was compounded by Shultz's lugubrious Sunday night briefing when irritated White House aides felt the correct mood should have been upbeat (as in the president's farewell remarks), not mourning.

The danger Reagan should have been warned about became clear with the surprise unfurling of a grand Soviet arms control design never before seen by the president and never adequately studied by any American official. It was brilliantly contrived in Moscow for maximum political appeal: to Western European allies, whose people fear Pershing missiles on their soil; to world leaders, who worry about superpower political fallout; to American moderates and liberals, who believe arms control is the path to peace.

Gorbachev launched this campaign Sunday night with a crowning insult to Reagan. Disregarding the Soviet Union's own space-based defense tests, he said "it would have taken a madman" to accept Reagan's demand for testing outside the laboratory during the 10-year no-deployment grace period, adding: "But madmen are normally in hospitals." Implicitly, only a "madman" would make such an offer.

The blindness of the president's chief advisers in not anticipating Soviet sabotage at Reykjavik to kill off SDI was not their only shortcoming. They took no precautions to protect Reagan's six-year strategy not to let the U.S.-Soviet relationship turn on arms control.

Reagan is convinced the real basis of better relations can only be found by solving "regional issues" — that is, communist expansionism in Afghanistan, Nicaragua and elsewhere — and in Soviet human rights. But the world did not hear the word Afghanistan during the long weekend. Presumably, the president's men allowed the Soviets to keep it out of sight and thus out of mind.

Poindexter, Shultz, et al permitted iron Soviet resolve to convert what was promised to be a multitopic "planning" session into an SDI negotiating summit — precisely what Reagan wanted to avoid. The Soviet team performed this magic without the U.S. even knowing for certain whether Gorbachev's arms-reduction offers were genuine or whether real verification was possible.

There is reason for doubt. On Saturday night, Soviet and U.S. aides wrangled for fully 30 minutes over disposition of a mere 150 warheads — a pittance considering the thousands embraced in the totality of Soviet offers to cut heavy missiles by 50 percent and its European-based intermediate force by 100 percent.

Having received credit for making a sweeping but unverified offer, Gorbachev now turns to the world to blame Reagan for failure at Reykjavik. To Democratic candidates running for office on Nov. 4, the political opportunity may look inviting.

But Reagan holds a potent pre-election weapon: His critics run the risk of being accused of taking Gorbachev's side against the American president (a prospect discussed in Monday morning's senior staff meeting at the White House). A more difficult propaganda battleground may be Western Europe, where Reagan's hard-line convictions make him suspect.

The ultimate test is Capitol Hill. If the president cannot convince Congress to keep "research, development and testing" going, preferably joined by some early deployment, then Gorbachev gets by forfeit what Reagan denied him in Reykjavik.

CHARLEY REESE

Do-nothing Congress still shirking duties

About the only good thing you can say of Congress is that this session, so far as we know, they did not feed liquor to and seduce any of the pages, male or female. With that exception, their record is deplorable.

Charley Reese

The Congress did not put the nation's fiscal affairs in order.

The Congress did not pass legislation to bring the borders back under U.S. control.

The Congress did not adequately provide for the common defense.

The Congress did not even pass the appropriations bills.

If you read the U.S. Constitution, which few people, including federal judges, ever do, you will see that Congress has relatively few duties to perform.

Absent from its duties are, among other things, managing the Defense Department, conducting the nation's foreign policy, acting as United Way for every two-bit country on the globe, governing the internal affairs of foreign countries such as South Africa and the Philippines, worrying about the salt content of our food, campaigning for re-election at taxpayers' expense and voting subsidies to every segment of American society with an effective Washington lobby. Congress, of course, defines "effective" in this context and you can guess, from their own personal financial statements, how they define it.

If this rabble is the best 100 senators and 435 representatives a nation of 240 million people can produce then the Republic is indeed in the final stages of decline.

There are, of course, some good men and women in the Senate and House, perhaps a third of them. The rest ought to be candidates for tar and feathers rather than re-election.

We shouldn't require, as a condition for approval, that congressmen agree with us on every or even any political issue, but we do have a right to demand that they obey the Constitution and attend to their duties. That's what we pay them for.

How can we continue to tolerate people who take so many holidays and pursue so many irrelevant matters that year after year they never have time to pass even the appropriations bills in proper form?

How can we continue to tolerate people who year after year fail to respond to a crisis? The foreign population of the United States, both legal and illegal, is rising — using the most ultra-conservative estimate — at a rate of one million a year. The negative impact on employment and health and the drain on public resources mount. The flood of illegal aliens brings with it a share of terrorists and drug dealers. Yet, Congress refuses to pass new immigration legislation.

The American people are naked as jaybirds to atomic attack by both gravity bombs and missiles. There are no stockpiles of food and medicines. No postwar plans. No fallout shelters. No effort to educate the American people about the true nature of the hazards they would face. Yet Congress does nothing.

The American manufacturing base continues to erode as global corporations move to cheap labor countries and those who do not are killed off by imports. Yet Congress does not act.

Only when it is grandstanding for domestic votes by posturing against South Africa or voting itself salaries and perks does it act expeditiously. A man or woman in the Congress receives more income than 80 percent of the households in America — in salary alone. Even so they work fewer days on public business than most part-time workers.

The worst of the lot who were in Congress in the 1800s would blush with embarrassment at all the goodies and royal trappings Congress has voted for itself in the latter part of the 20th century.

You can yawn if you wish but just remember it's your standard of living that is being lowered, it's your life that is being put at risk, and it's your freedom and your country that is being flushed down the toilet of history.

Rebels in Honduras under new debate

By JUAN MALTES

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The capture of an American flying supplies to Contra guerrillas in Nicaragua has revived debate about the presence of the U.S.-supported rebels in Honduras. Many say it is time for them to go.

Just as in neighboring El Salvador, where the Contras' use of Ilopango Military Base is an open secret, the presence of the Nicaraguan rebels is something the government would rather not discuss.

American Eugene Hasenfus said at a news conference organized by the leftist Sandinista government last week in Managua, Nicaragua's capital, that he participated in 10 supply runs to the Contras.

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., was captured in southern Nicaragua Oct. 5 after the plane he was aboard was shot down.

He said that of the 10 runs, four originated from the Aguacate air base in Honduras and six were from Ilopango. Aguacate is near Catacamas, about 70 miles east of Tegucigalpa.

Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo immediately denied that his government lets national territory be used for clandestine flights. Maj. Jorge Alberto Arguello, the armed forces' spokesman, did the same.

The leader of the National Assembly, Carlos Montoya, of the Liberal Party now in power, said the time has come for the Contras to leave Honduras.

In addition to the clandestine flights believed to be concentrated at Aguacate, the Contras have maintained bases in southern Honduras near the Nicaraguan border since the start of their 4½-year war.

Honduran military sources say about 18,000 Contra rebels operate from their bases on Honduran territory.

"We do not agree with the policy or ideology of the Sandinista government, but as soon as they (the Contras) leave Honduras, the better for us," Montoya said one day after the plane carrying Hasenfus and three other people was shot down.

At least two of the three others were Americans. All died in the crash.

Manuel Zelaya, a congressman from rural Olancho province where the air base is located, called for the government to expel all Contras from Honduras.

"There are 35,000 Honduran citizens living in fear because of the Contras stationed in Catacamas and El Aguacate," Zelaya said in a speech this week.

"Nicaragua's problems must be solved by Nicaragua, but in Nicaraguan territory and not in Honduras," he said. "They must leave our country now. ...With the Contras' presence in Honduras, our society is now divided."

President Reagan and other U.S. officials have denied that the American government was involved in the Contra supply flights, which would have been in violation of congressional restrictions. They say there was only private American involvement.

But since the start of the Contra insurgency, U.S. economic aid to Honduras has risen from $32.7 million in 1982 to an expected $158.8 million for the 1987 fiscal year. Military aid planned for 1987 amounts to $88.8 million, compared to $8.9 million in 1981.

Although officials denied that Aguacate airport is used by the Contras for their clandestine fights, an editorial in the newspaper Tiempo said "Honduras is no longer a sovereign country."

"There is no doubt that our national sovereignty has been violated and, as for the clandestine flights, there is the arrogant mood of the Contras who own a zone of 250 miles of our country in the province of El Paraiso," the editorial said. El Paraiso is the area where the bases are concentrated, with visits in most cases blocked by the Honduran military.

Enrique Bermudez, military chief of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, the largest Contra group with offices in Honduras, said those aboard the C-123 were working as volunteers for the rebels.

Bermudez said that if the Sandinistas receive military and economic support from the Soviet Union, Cuba and other communist countries; "we have the right to receive the support and help of those people, institutions and government that fight for freedom."

The Democratic Force, known as the FDN, is waiting for $100 million in military and economic aid approved, but still pending, in the U.S. Congress.

"For the peace of the Honduran people, we will leave Honduras," Bermudez said. "All our forces and combatants will move into Nicaragua between March and April 1987. In April our forces will double. ...That is a promise."

'People's Tribunal' will try captured American

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A "People's Tribunal" that a human rights group says has a 99.8 percent conviction rate will try an American captured when a rebel supply flight was shot down. Former U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell reportedly agreed to defend him.

The U.S. State Department said a fair trial was impossible, and that it would be a propaganda exercise.

Eugene Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., was captured Oct. 6 after a C-123 transport he was aboard was shot down over southern Nicaragua. The plane was on a supply mission to Contra rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government.

A statement issued Thursday by the Nicaraguan Justice Ministry said Hasenfus would be tried by a "People's Anti-Somocista Tribunal" instead of a regular court. The government gave no reason for the decision.

The statement said Hasenfus will appear before the tribunal Monday to hear charges of violating the law of maintenance of order and public security, part of a national emergency package of regulations the government imposed four years ago in response to the insurgency.

The statement said the charges would be "within the context of the aggression that the government of the United States of America imposes on the Nicaraguan people."

If convicted, Hasenfus faces up to 30 years in prison.

At a press conference last week in Managua, Hasenfus said he had taken part in 10 rebel supply flights from bases in El Salvador and Honduras and said they had been coordinated by two CIA agents.

In 1984, Congress imposed restrictions on U.S. government aid to the Contras, and CIA involvement would be illegal. President Reagan and other U.S. authorities have denied any governmental role in the supply runs, claiming Hasenfus made his allegations under duress.

State Department press officer Pete Martinez said Tuesday the Sandinista government is using the case for "maximum internal and external propaganda advantage" and that a fair trial under those conditions was impossible.

Since his capture, Hasenfus has been allowed one 10-minute visit by U.S. Consul Donald Tyson at the offices of State Security, Nicaragua's secret police, where he is being held.

Attorney Ernest Pleger said by telephone from Marinette that the Atlanta firm of King and Spalding, of which Bell is a partner, had been engaged as co-counsel with Hasenfus' Nicaraguan lawyer.

Pleger, retained earlier by Hasenfus' wife, Sally, said Bell and Bell's partner, J.B. Haynes, will be co-counsels, but declined to say who would pay the law firm.

Telephone calls to King and Spalding's offices and to Bell's home in Atlanta went unanswered Thursday evening.

Bell was U.S. attorney general in 1977-79.

The Justice Ministry statement said Hasenfus will have "full guarantees" of due process, including his being presumed innocent until declared guilty in an open trial and the right to a lawyer.

The People's Tribunals were established in 1983 to prosecute people accused of counter-revolutionary activities.

In a recent report on the tribunals, the New York-based International League of Human Rights said that by the time an accused hears the charges against him, he has signed a confession and, unlike regular courts, the tribunals often base their convictions solely on confessions.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mitterrand, Thatcher want more superpower dialogue

LONDON (AP) — French President Francois Mitterrand and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met Thursday and called on the superpowers to continue their dialogue following last week's summit in Iceland.

The Reykjavik summit meeting broke down after the United States and Soviet Union had tentatively reached agreement on several major issues, including arms control.

At a hastily arranged meeting, devoted mostly to the Iceland summit, the two European leaders "stressed the importance of maintaining nuclear deterrence as the basis for the West's defense," a British official said.

Mitterrand and Mrs. Thatcher said they wanted to see arms control negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union "continue on that basis," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Mrs. Thatcher and Mitterrand said they hoped progress made on a 50-percent reduction in long-range nuclear forces and elimination of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe would be "translated into agreements on the basis of balance and proper verification," the official said.

Tentative accords on these and other issues were reached by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, but the summit collapsed over the U.S. "Star Wars" project for a space-based nuclear defense, bitterly opposed by Moscow.

Protesters bring chaos

WACKERSDORF, West Germany (AP) — Anti-nuclear protesters Thursday blocked roads and caused a five-hour power outage by severing power lines near the construction site of West Germany's first nuclear waste reprocessing plant, police said.

Anti-nuclear groups from all over West Germany have distributed leaflets proclaiming Thursday and Friday "blockade days" against construction of the plant at Wackersdorf, in Bavaria.

Police said the protesters caused damage estimated at about $50,000 to electric power lines. The protesters sawed through and toppled at least five power pylons, causing a five-hour power outage in the area surrounding Wackersdorf, police said.

The demonstrators used cars and burning tires to block roads, authorities said.

About 150 people took part in the protests, police said. They said about 90 protesters were detained for identity checks but reported no clashes.

Navy plane, 11 missing

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A Navy plane with 11 people on board disappeared about 50 miles north of Santiago while on a routine flight, the Navy reported Thursday.

The plane disappeared Wednesday afternoon, and 24 hours later a search by air, land and sea had found nothing, the Navy said in a statement.

All 11 people on the plane were Navy personnel, the statement said. It did not say what kind of plane was missing, but news reports identified it as a Brazilian-made Bandeirantes.

Aquino meets for first time today with Communist rebels

ILOILO CITY, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino met today for the first time with Communist rebels as part of her government's effort to end the 17-year-old insurgency, military and church officials said.

Rev. Alberto Piamonte, Roman Catholic archbishop of this central Philippine city, explained Mrs. Aquino's tardiness for a Mass and rally at the University of San Agustin by saying it was "due to the fact that she met with the NPA."

The letters stand for the New People's Army, the rebel force estimated to number between 16,000 and 22,000 combatants.

The announcement, made during the homily of a Mass that Piamonte officiated at after Mrs. Aquino arrived, was applauded by the congregation of several thousand people.

The prelate did not elaborate on the meeting, except to say it was arranged by local church authorities. There was no immediate comment from Mrs. Aquino.

Armed Forces chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, who is accompanying Mrs. Aquino on her two-day tour of the central Philippine Visayas region, confirmed that the meeting had taken place but did not identify the two local rebel commanders who led the insurgent delegation.

Ramos said he did not attend the meeting, which other sources said took place at Assumption College, another Catholic school in Iloilo City, 290 miles southeast of Manila.

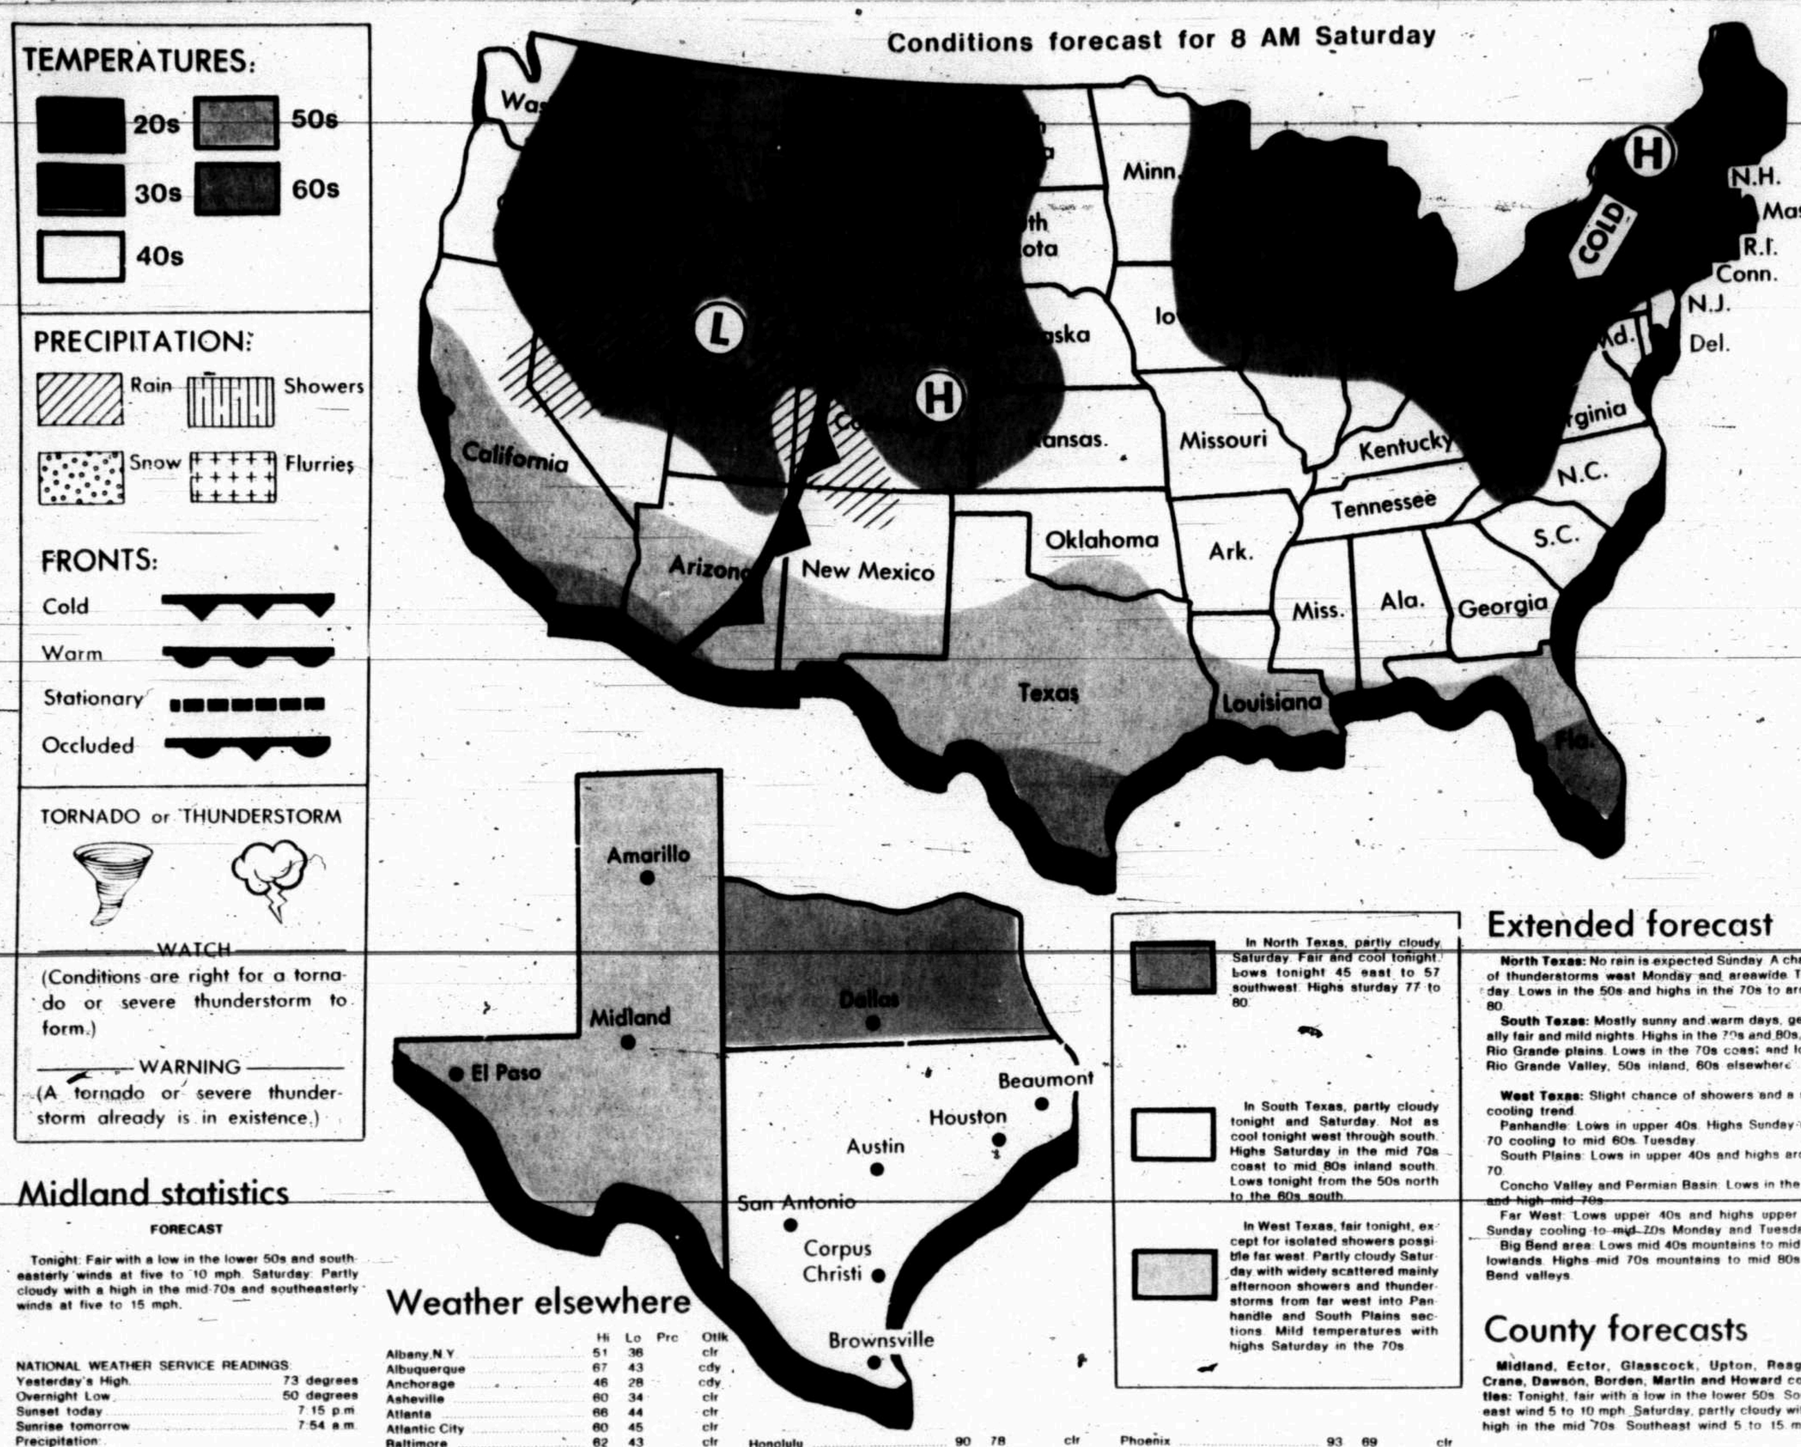

Ramos said Mrs. Aquino was accompanied at the meeting by her aide, Teodoro Locsin Jr., who stayed behind with the rebels after Mrs. Aquino left for the Mass at the university two miles away.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Pleasant days due

From Staff and Wire Reports

A pleasant beginning to a fall weekend is in store for Midland-area residents, according to the forecast given by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Saturday's high is expected to be in the middle 70s with partly cloudy skies.

Fair skies will prevail tonight. A low in the lower 50s and southeasterly winds at five to 10 mph are forecast. Winds will continue out of the southeast on Saturday at five to 15 mph.

Thursday's high of 73 was 19 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1964. Today's low, recorded at 5 a.m., was 14 degrees above the record low of 36 set for this date in 1976.

Early morning cool temperatures gave way to fair and mild weather across most of the Lone Star State today.

Predawn temperature dropped into the 40s in the far West, Big Bend and extreme East Texas. North, West and South Texas had readings in the 50s and 60s.

At 4 a.m. Friday the low was 41 at Marfa while the Corpus Christi Naval Station had the morning's highest reading at 65.

Winds across North Central Texas, the Panhandle and South Plains were southwesterly in the 5 mph to 10 mph range. Elsewhere, winds were light and variable.

In the forecast, tempertures should dip to 45 in east North Texas and to 57 in the southwest. Highs Saturday should range from 77 to 80.

In South Texas, temperatures won't be as cool tonight in the west and through the south. Highs Saturday should be in the mid 70s along the coast and the mid 80s at the inland south. Lows tonight should be in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

Fair weather prevailed across the nation today, with rain limited to sections of the Midwest, Pacific Coast and Florida.

A high pressure over Texas and Colorado was responsible for the mild conditions.

Rain was scattered across the lower Great Lakes region, the coast of southeast Florida and the central Pacific coast.

Temperatures early this morning mainly were in the 40s to 50s, although the 30s prevailed across the northern Rockies, the upper Great Lakes region and northern New England.

Sox, Mets will have trouble topping playoffs

By BEN WALKER

NEW YORK (AP) — The Boston Red Sox are hitting well, and must keep doing it without their designated hitter. The New York Mets are pitching well, but probably will not use their ace three times.

The Mets, the team that believes it should win the World Series, and the Red Sox, the team that thinks it will, meet in Game 1 Saturday night at Shea Stadium.

"I was rooting for the Red Sox," right-hander Ron Darling, who grew up in Milbury, Mass., and is expected to start the opener for New York, said. "This will be a homecoming for me."

It will also be a homecoming for several other players. Bob Ojeda, the Mets' most effective starter this year, and Calvin Schiraldi, Boston's top reliever, were traded for each other in the off-season.

Don Baylor, the Red Sox designated hitter, will also be returning to New York. Yankees principal owner George Steinbrenner traded him away prior to the season, saying he was no longer an effective hitter. But Baylor, who hit 31 home runs with 94 RBI in the regular season and batted .346 in the playoff victory over California, may only see limited action against the Mets.

BEGINNING THIS year, the designated hitter rule will be used only in the home park of the American League champion. That means Baylor, who does not play the field, would only start Games 3, 4 and 5 unless he took a position. That could happen, however, because Boston first baseman Bill Buckner suffered a sprained right Achilles tendon in the seventh game of the AL playoffs.

"This is no time to be hurt," said Buckner, who batted just .214 in the playoffs. "I just want to try to be ready. Noone wants to sit out a World Series."

Lefthander Bruce Hurst will start the first game. Nothing has been announced, but it appears Game 2 will feature the showdown between Boston's Roger Clemens and Dwight Gooden of the Mets.

Clemens, the most dominant pitcher in baseball in 1986, won Game 7 against California. Gooden, the game's best pitcher in 1985, last started on Tuesday, getting a no-decision against Houston. But Mets Manager Dave Johnson has steadfastly refused to use Gooden on three-days rest, thus passing up a chance to use him three times in the series.

Gooden and Clemens were the starters in this year's All-Star Game, with Clemens pitching three perfect innings while Gooden gave up a two-run homer to Detroit's Lou Whitaker and took a 3-1 loss.

MCNAMARA IS hoping the Red Sox will keep hitting the way they did earlier in the week while overcoming a 3-1 deficit in the playoffs, fueling its belief that destiny is on Boston's side. Jim Rice, Wade Boggs and Dwight Evans all shook loose from their postseason doldrums and responded with key hits as the Red Sox wound up batting .272 in the series.

The Mets, meanwhile, reached the World Series with pitching. They had a team earned run average of 2.29 in their six-game victory over Houston, an emotional rollercoaster that saw New York win Game 5 in 12 innings and then clinch the pennant in a 16-inning seesaw.

Johnson is hoping his team does not duplicate its feeble batting performance. The Mets hit just .189 in the series, including a woeful 2-for-57 effort in the first three innings of the games.

"We showed the world that we can dog it out better than anybody," Johnson said. "Even when we're hitting under .200."

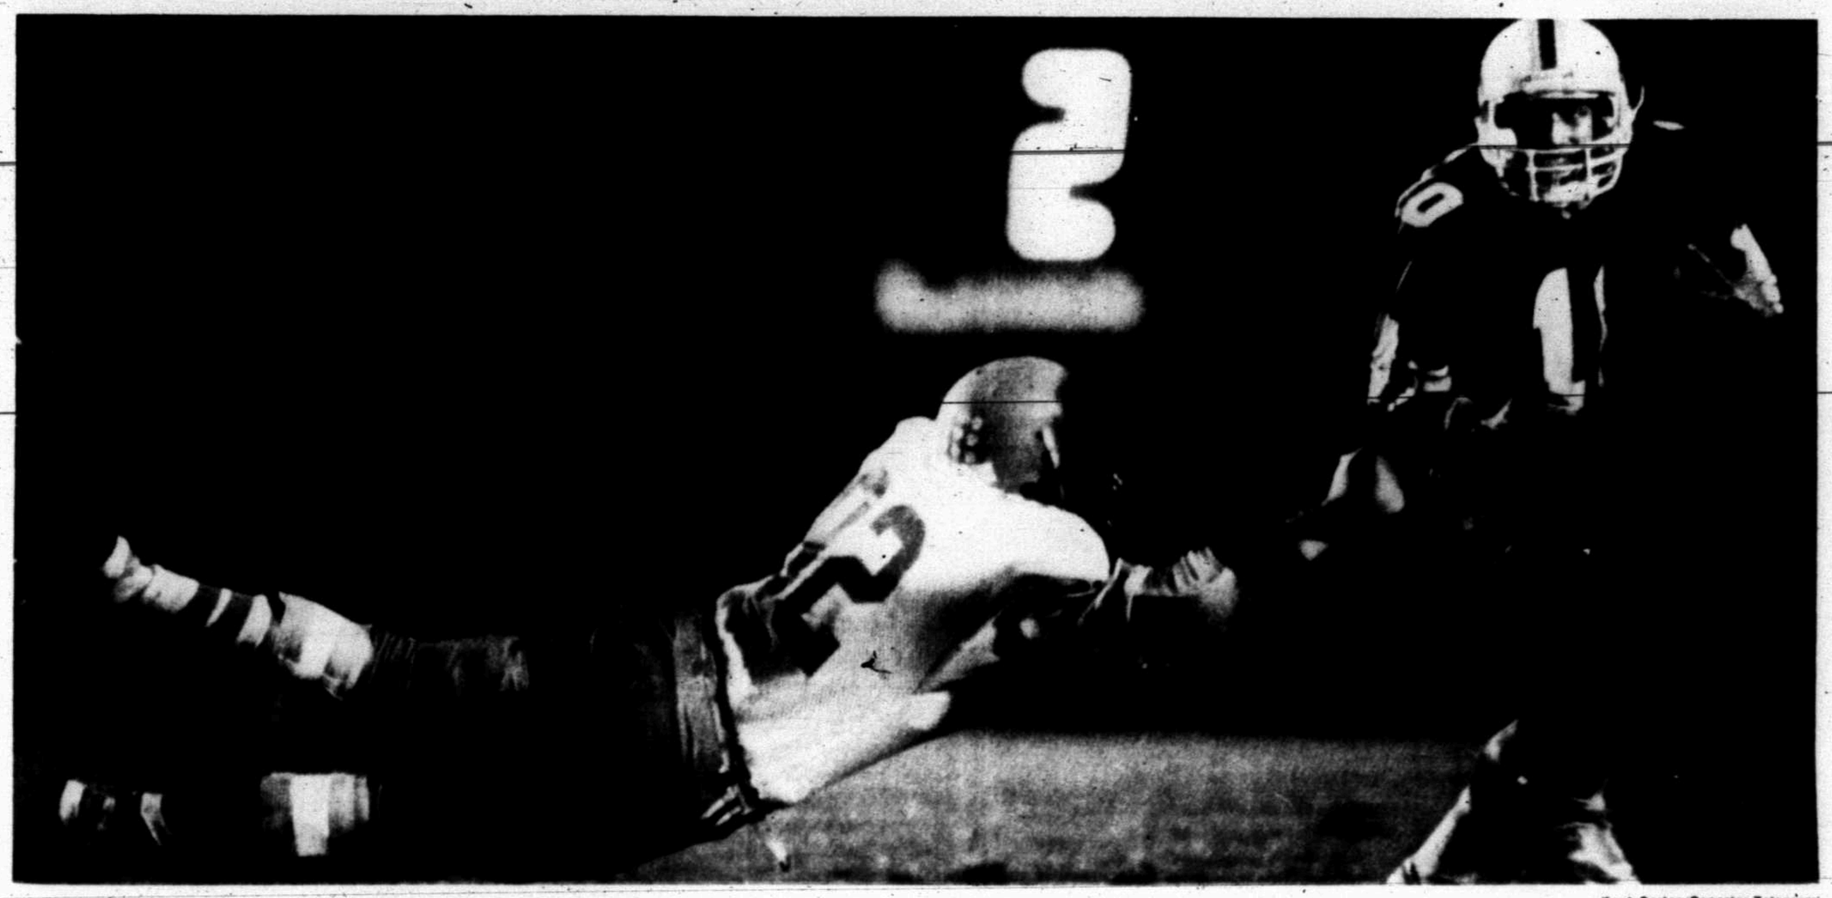

THE METS' four victories in the playoffs went with the 108 games they won in the regular season, the most in baseball. From the start of spring training, they have said they intended to win the World Series this year.

"New York came back," Boston second baseman Marty Barrett, named the most valuable player in the AL playoffs, said after watching the Mets win the National League playoffs.

"The Red Sox are a little like us, always coming back. You've got to hand it to them, coming back from a deficit like they did," Darling said.

Each team firmly believes it will win the World Series. But Mets outfielder Mookie Wilson expressed a feeling that, at least for now, seemed to sum up what both clubs felt after battling through the playoffs.

"I don't think anything that happens in the World Series can match that," he said.

Aggies out for revenge, SWC crown

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas A&M can get some revenge on the Baylor Bears and go a long way toward defending its Southwest Conference football title Saturday at College Station's Kyle Field.

But as the Aggies found out last year, it won't be easy.

Baylor came from behind to hand the Aggies their only SWC defeat last season. The Bear's defense allowed only three field goals in a 20-15 victory in Waco.

Baylor is the last team to beat A&M at Kyle Field. The Aggies have built an 11-game winning streak since Oct. 19, 1984.

Eleventh-ranked A&M, 4-1 overall and 2-0 in SWC play, was rated a six-point favorite over the 20th-rated Bears, 4-2 and 2-1, in the 2:30 p.m. regionally televised (ABC) clash.

In other SWC games, Arkansas is an eight-point favorite over Texas in a 6:30 p.m. (ESPN regional televison) matchup in Austin and Texas Tech is a six-point favorite over Rice in a noon (Raycom TV) meeting at Rice Stadium.

ALSO, SOUTHERN Methodist has a 15-point nod over Houston in a 2 p.m. game in Texas Stadium and Texas Christian is a touchdown choice over North Texas State in a 2 p.m. game in Amon Carter Stadium.

The Bears were upset 27-21 by SMU last week.

"We still control our own destiny as far as the conference championship is concerned," Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said. "A&M lost to us last year and went on to win it. We lost to A&M in 1974 and went on to win it.

Bears' quarterback Cody Carlson says that "we certainly don't plan on losing anymore. We have all the confidence in the world that we can go down to College Station and beat A&M."

Baylor linebacker Ray Berry said the Bears won't have any trouble bouncing back from their loss to SMU.

"The Texas A&M game is always very important to Baylor fans, and I think we've beaten them something like six out of the last eight times we've played them," he said.

ARKANSAS WILL be trying to rebound from a 17-7 loss to Texas Tech. The Razorbacks are 8-27 against Texas in Austin and haven't beaten the Longhorns there since 1966.

"The Texas game is always important because of the tradition of the rivalry, but it is especially important to us this year because of what we want this team to become," said Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield.

"We will find out a lot about ourselves this week," he added. "We were shocked to lose to Texas Tech. I don't know who will win or what the score will be, but we will play like fighting Razorbacks."

Buffaloes put it on line against Red Devils

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It's test time for the Stanton Buffaloes.

After their best pre-district start in six years, the Buffs will try to raise their 6-2A mark to 2-0 tonight when they face the Rankin Red Devils in a key early season contest.

"No matter what (Rankin coach Dwayne Turner) has got down there, they are always competitive. They're a very tough team," Stanton coach Dale Ruth says.

The Devils have proven that so far this season, compiling a 4-2 record in their first venture into Class 2A. Rankin lost its opening district game last week 19-0 against Reagan County, but the Red Devils are still on the lookout for a playoff berth.

"I feel like with two losses, you're chances are pretty slim," Turner admits. "But I don't think anyone is going to go through the district undefeated either."

Rankin is in the familiar position of being the underdog, but that never seems to intimidate them.

With that in mind, Turner is bound to have the Devils pumped up to-notch their first district win tonight. But this is the best Stanton team Turner has seen in quite a few years.

"Dale has really got 'em going good this year," Turner said. "They've got some good running backs and they'll be bigger and stronger than us on the line. They just come and get you."

BOTH SIDES are geared offensively to a strong ground game, with a trio of strong runners in either backfield.

But in quarterback Skip Hopkins, the Buffs have also got a passing threat to go with a strong running game.

"There are two plays they run that we've just got to stop — the off-tackle and the wide run. That's their offense," Turner said. "But they've also got a pair of exceptional split ends in Sal Reyna and Carlos Ortiz. They run good patterns and catch everything thrown to them — you've got to respect that."

Ruth has also been impressed with the progress of his junior signal-caller.

"He's had a lot to learn in a short time and he's really coming along," Ruth said. "And I noticed on the game films that his passing form is improving tremendously. He's just a junior and he's getting better and better."

Both sides boast of having three runners top the 100-yard mark in a game this year to mark backfield versatility of both clubs. Stanton has been relying on the big runs of Greg Barnhill, a 160-pound speedster.

BARNHILL CARRIED for the bulk of the Buffs' yardage in the district opener with Eldorado last week with 23 carries for 152 yards. But when senior James Vidal went down with an ankle injury, sophomore Eddie Jordan stepped right in with 121 yards on 12 carries.

"We try to run, that's our first priority," admits Ruth. "We get the running game going first."

Fullback Derek Sorley has also been a big contributor, going over 100 yards earlier in the season. "He keeps everyone honest up the middle," Ruth says.

For the Devils, George Abalos is the breakaway threat, reaching 100 yards on two occasions. Abalos gained more than 200 yards in one game earlier this season, while Chris Beeman and part-time quarterback Doug Braden have also reached the 100-yard plateau.

Betting your 4-5A bippy

District 4-5A is known across the state as one of the toughest loops from top-to bottom anywhere, but the Little Southwest Conference is getting to be mighty predictable as of late.

Only three games deep into the district schedule, the "Big 3" (Odessa Permian, Midland Lee and San Angelo) are the only unbeaten teams left. Where have we heard that before?

You have to go back to 1979 when Abilene Cooper won the district title to find another team than the three already mentioned that has been to the playoffs.

THE GOOD part, however, is that those three teams will meet each other during the last three weeks of the season, starting next weekend when Lee hosts Permian. You can bet your last bippy that the winner of that game will be in the playoffs.

All three teams have something going for them down the stretch. Lee is open this week with a two-week preparation period for the Panthers. Permian, however, has an open date between Lee and San Angelo. The Bobcats face both Lee and Permian on consecutive weekends to end the season and can sit back and watch the other two kill each other off in what will be for one of those teams a demoralizing loss.

Lee will have Permian at home and San Angelo on the road. Lee has a history of playing well in San Angelo. The Bobcats must travel to Permian and have not played well in Ratliff. I'd take the odds on another Lee-Permian playoff year. However, hold your betting bippy on that one for a while.

But I have a bad history of getting ahead of the game. There are some interesting matchups tonight while the lights are out at Memorial Stadium. However, none of today's games appear on paper to have anything to do with the league race that is down the road.

Here's looking at tonight's games with a 32-4 record while picking District 4-5A teams.

Abilene High 28, Midland High 21: Look for the Bulldogs to do better offensively, but the Eagles still feel like they are in the 4-5A race with only two losses. The Bulldogs have too much emotionally to overcome after Lee, Permian and San Angelo in deathly 122-6 order.

Odessa Permian 26, Abilene Cooper 7: The Cougars play good enough defense to make this more interesting than it seems on the surface. The Cougs will hang strong for a half because, they too, still feel like a part of the 4-5A race.

San Angelo 45, Odessa High 0: The Bobcats are home again for the sixth time this year. The Bobkitties won their only road trip to Midland High by 42-0 and the Bronchos are rebuilding from the bottom.

Midland Lee 76, Midland Open 0: It would be worse but Midland athletic director Gil Bartosh won't turn on the lights at Memorial Stadium. Says Bartosh, "It costs us $100 every time we fire those babies up and the crowd won't come to this one anyway."

Those babies will be fired up next week. And you can bet your sold out bippy on that one, too.

Round One to Conner

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Dennis Conner and Stars & Stripes ended New Zealand's nine-race winning streak today in the first round of the America's Cup challenger series.

Racing in the first heavy weather of the series, with winds of about 25 knots, Conner fell behind early, but took command on the first windward leg and wound up winning by 49 seconds, handing New Zealand its first loss in the opening round-robin series.

Dickson appeared to have the upper hand during the first four tacks as he lengthened his lead to a full boat-length. But Conner was the recipient of a favorable wind shift, and crossed ahead of New Zealand to gain the lead permanently.

The victory moved Stars & Stripes and America II, which defeated Azzurra today, into a three-way tie for the lead with New Zealand. All are at 9-1 with two races remaining.

With first-round victories worth only one point each, Stars & Stripes' victory means little to the final outcome point-wise. But psychologically, it figures to be a setback for New Zealand and its 24-year-old skipper, Chris Dickson and an edge for Conner, who has been criticized in some circles for not bringing his syndicate here sooner.

Second-round victors are awarded five points, and in the all-important third round, each race counts 12 points.

A MORE important, but less dramatic battle takes place tonight in the battle over New Zealand's fiberglass boat.

Yacht Club Costa Smeralda, which is in charge of the America's Cup elimination series, has called a meeting of the 13 challengers to see if they wish to change the conditions in regard to the fiberglass requirements.

If the challengers committee agrees, it will mean that New Zealand will have to have its hull remeasured.

Conner and his syndicate have demanded that core tests of the fiberglass New Zealand boat be made. They had threatened to protest today's race, but decided against it after two meetings Thursday with Commodore Gianfranco Alberini and representatives of the Italian yacht club.

Alberini promised to call a meeting of all challengers as soon as possible to discuss Stars & Stripes' demands.

The San Diego syndicate is seeking core samplings of all yachts, both keels and hulls, to check whether the keels contain illegal heavier-than-lead substances and whether hull cores show an even weight distribution from bow to stern.

New Zealand reacted bitterly to the Italian yacht club's decision to call the meeting. In a statement, the syndicate claimed that the proposed amendment is "an attempt to change the rules after the event has started. Moreover, it is aimed at only one of the boats in this regatta — ours."

DICKSON WON the start over Conner by one second, but after five tacks on the first windward leg, Stars & Stripes led by half a boat-length. At the mark Conner led by 67 seconds.

Oddsmakers call Mets 'landslide favorites'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "Everything is Mets, Mets, Mets."

That's how Mel Exber, owner of the Las Vegas Club, described the betting action on the World Series, which begins Saturday with New York hosting the Boston Red Sox.

"It's like an election, it's a landslide."

The National League champions have been made a prohibitive 12-5 favorite, the most lopsided opening odds since 1950, when the Yankees swept the Phillies, who were 3-1 underdogs.

"The Mets are obviously the superior team, there's almost no comparison," Exbur said. "The starting pitchers for the Red Sox can't compare to the Mets' starters, and the Red Sox haven't seen pitching like this in the American League."

Legal sports book operators here say the odds could go higher as the betting public lines up to place money on the Mets.

"The Mets look like they have destiny on their side," said Sonny Reizner, manager of the Castaways sports book. "Everything that happens, happens in their favor."

"Probably the worst part is that (Boston ace Roger) Clemens can't start the World Series opener," Reizner said. "Their pitching staff is in some disarray and there's a few injuries on the Red Sox."

Clements pitched the pennant-clinching win on Wednesday night and is scheduled to pitch in Sunday's second game of the Series.

A bettor would have to bet $24 on the Mets winning the World Series to win $10. Bettors who favor Boston can put up $10 to win $20 if the Red Sox take the series.

Russ Culver, who sets odds at Bally's sports book, said the Mets shouldn't be such huge favorites. If it were not for the public's fascination with the team — a fascination that causes them to bet heavily on the Mets — Culver said the team would be only about an 8-5 favorite.

"They're a counterfeit, or bogus, favorite simply because we have so much money on the Mets," Culver said. "We've got so much on the Mets that we have to make it (the spread) artificially high."

By making it a 12-5 spread, Culver said enough money will be bet on the Red Sox so that sports books can come close to balancing the action on both sides. Books make their money by pocketing the difference between paying $24 for a $10 bet and paying $20 for the same bet if the other team wins, assuming the money is divided equally.

Bookmakers were hoping for the Mets to make it to the World Series because of the interest the team generates among bettors. Action so far has been heavy.

"With the Mets in the Series and the playoff games having been so exciting, it's really going to carry over into the betting," Reizner said. "We should have one of our best Series ever."

AIDS victim Jerry Smith to be buried on Monday

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — Former Washington Redskins All-Pro Jerry Smith, a one-time NFL record holder who became the first well-known professional athlete to die after contracting AIDS, will be buried next Monday, his family announced.

Unable to hold back tears, family members said at an emotional press conference Thursday that they hoped the former star receiver's death would bring "something positive" to the fight against the deadly disease.

"That way, what happened to Jerry and thousands of other men, women and children like him won't have been for nothing," said Bonnie Gilchrist, the ex-player's sister.

As Mrs. Gilchrist read a statement the player wrote last month, Smith's mother, Laverne, left the room in tears.

"Most days have been hard, difficult, bad, but there is never anything so bad that something good doesn't come from it," Smith's message said. "My own experience with AIDS has shown me that life is important — every life. I am trying hard to fight AIDS the best way I know how, by letting people know how terrible it is."

Mrs. Gilchrist said a wake will be held Monday and that a Mass of Christian burial will take place Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the Baptist Catholic Church in Silver Spring, followed by interment at the Gate of Heaven cemetery.

Smith died of an infection known as cytomegalovirus, a complication of AIDS, according to Heckman. The doctor said he did not know how Smith got the disease, which afflicts mostly homosexuals and intravenous drug users.

When his disease was publicized in August, Smith refused to discuss his lifestyle, saying only that the illness "just happened."

Between 600,000 and 1.2 million Americans have been exposed, to AIDS antibodies since the virus was discovered in 1981. AIDS is caused by a virus, known as HTLV-3, a killing agent that destroys the body's ability to fight infection.

Smith was 6-foot-3 and weighed 210 pounds during his career. He weighed 140 pounds when he died. He lost weight steadily and hadn't eaten since June, said his mother.

Former teammates recalled Smith, who once held the record among tight ends for pass receptions, as a courageous and hard-working player.

"One message he always left with young people was that regardless of the situation, no matter how hard, never give up. Never tell somone you can't do something," said former safety Brig Owens, Smith's roommate for 11 years on the team.

"He was a fighter, a person who never gave up," said Owens.

Potvin breaks another mark

Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Denis Potvin set a record for career assists by an NHL defenseman and the New York Islanders scored three times in the first 6:04 of the third period Thursday night for a 7-4 victory over the Washington Capitals.

Potvin helped set up Bryan Trottier's power-play goal at 8:39 of the first period, giving him 684 career assists, one more than the record of Brad Park. The 32-year-old Potvin, who already holds the NHL marks for goals and points by an NHL defenseman, took a pass from Rich Kromm and shot from the right point. Washington goalie Pete Peeters made the save, but Trottier lunged and knocked the rebound across the goal line.

Jets 4, Whalers 4

HARTFORD, Conn. — Stewart Gavin tapped in a blast from Dean Evason that fell behind goalie Steve Penney with 7:36 remaining as Hartford tied Winnipeg.

Right wing Ray Neufeld, who was traded from the Whalers to the Jets last November for defenseman Dave Babych, had put Winnipeg ahead midway through the final period.

Flyers 6, Canucks 2

PHILADELPHIA — Tim Kerr and Brian Propp each scored a pair of goals as Philadelphia defeated Vancouver.

Kerr, the right wing who scored 58 goals last season, beat goalie Richard Brodeur at 2:57 of the first period and Propp, a 40-goal man in 1985-86, connected at 7:52.

Bruins 5, North Stars 3

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Mike Milbury's first goal of the season midway through the second period capped a three-goal spurt to rally Boston to a victory over Minnesota.

Nordiques 4, Flames 2

CALGARY, Alberta — Quebec goalie Mario Gosselin kicked out 34 shots in leading the Nordiques to a victory over Calgary. An Olympic Saddledome crowd of 16,798 watched Gosselin, in his first appearance of the regular season, make several spectacular saves.

Injured Seaver to miss series with old mates

BOSTON (AP) — A knee injury will keep Tom Seaver, the Boston Red Sox' veteran right-hander, from pitching against his old team, the New York Mets, in the World Series.

"Tom Seaver will not be available," Boston Manager John McNamara said Thursday in disclosing he will go with the same 24-player roster in the Series starting Saturday night that he used in the American League playoffs against California.

"He can barely walk, let alone pitch," pitching coach Bill Fischer said.

Seaver, a 300-game winner who began his career with the Mets in 1967, had hoped his knee injury would improve enough to allow him to appear in the World Series.

He said just prior to the Red Sox' seven-game playoff series with California that his knee had not improved enough to pitch, but "my hope is that it might be ready by the time the World Series comes around."

Seaver suffered what was diagnosed by doctors as a sprained ligament on the outside of his right knee in a game in Toronto on Sept. 19. The right-hander tried to throw off the mound a week later, but found his knee too weak.

Seaver, who will be 42 next month, was acquired from the Chicago White Sox on June 30. He had a 2-6 record in Chicago and then was 5-7 with a 3.80 earned run average in 16 starts with Boston.

With Seaver disabled, McNamara did not have to make a decision on scratching another pitcher from his roster. Seaver's place on the 10-man staff was taken by reliever Steve Crawford, who was on the disabled list when the post-season rosters were frozen on Aug. 31.

Crawford was the winning pitcher in Game 5 of the playoffs, a 7-6, 11-inning victory over California.

No-pass, no-play rate falls

DALLAS (AP) — The percentage of high school varsity athletes in Dallas sidelined by the no-pass, no-play rule dropped from last year's rate and officials say the rule seems to be working.

Of 675 varsity football players, 7.2 percent failed at least one class during this year's first six-week grading period, compared to 16 percent last year, officials said Thursday.

Overall, 17.7 percent of students competing in junior varsity and freshman football, volleyball and cross-country teams and bands failed at least one class.

Last year the failure rate was 26.9 percent for students who competed in the same four activities.

Under the no pass, no play rule, students who fail a class during a six-week grading period cannot participate in extracurricular activities during the following six-week period.

George Reid, assistant superintendent for Dallas Independed School District secondary schools, predicted that failure rates for the athletes would be lower than the rest of the student body whose results will be released next week.

Reid said the results are an example of the accomplishments administrators can achieve.

"We're pleased with the results. It shows that with an all-out effort much progress can be made," he said.

Reid said he was confident the school no pass, no play measure and not grading irregularities was the reason for the improved scores.

"I am convinced that cheating on this does not exist," he said. "These grades are issued by the teachers, not the coaches. Those teachers are working as hard as anyone to help these kids pass."

"Coaches and students especially on the varsity, are taking the rule seriously and making a special effort to improve themselves," he said.

Each of the DISD's 20 varsity high school football teams lost at least one player to no-pass, no-play last year. This year five teams lost no players.

"I think the coaches started checking up on their players real early this year, staying on top of it so things didnt get out of hand," said Seagoville Principapal Royce Larsen.

"Plus I think the kids realized that this is the way it's going to be, and you have to pass or you'll be gone."

Sugar goes corporate

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Corporate sponsorship of the Sugar Bowl does not mean that a Maryland insurance company will be running the annual New Year's Day event, the company's chairman says.

"The tradition of the Sugar Bowl will continue as it has," said Jack Moseley, chairman of U.S. Fidelity and Guaranty Co. "We do not intend to interfere with it in any way, shape, form or fashion."

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Quarterback Steve Fuller will make his first start of the season Sunday for Chicago Bears against Minnesota in place of injured Jim McMahon.

Coach Mike Ditka said McMahon again was unable to practice because of pain in his injured right shoulder.

NEW YORK — The USFL, vowing "we're not going to go away," asked a federal court to split the NFL into two totally separate conferences and knock the established league off one of the three major networks.

The motion, an outgrowth of the USFL's $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the NFL, was made to U.S. District Judge Peter Leisure, who presided at the 10-week trial. The USFL was awarded only $1 in damages — trebled under antitrust law to $3 — and the NFL was found liable on just one of nine counts in the suit.

It was that one antitrust finding — that the NFL was a monopoly — on which the USFL based Thursday's motion.

It asked that the AFC and NFC be split into two distinct entities, each to negotiate its own television contract with a network, run its own finances and each to conduct a separate draft. A third network would be left free for the USFL, which is dormant this year following the $3 damage award.

PROVO, Utah — A brain cyst has ended the BYU football career of center Brian Rodoni. Doctors told Rodoni, a 6-foot-4, 273 pound junior, that he cannot resume playing football.

Rodoni last appeared in the Cougars' second game of this season, against New Mexico, but had to leave early in the game due to severe headaches.

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Buffalo Bills leading rusher Greg Bell will miss up to four games because of an injury in the pelvic area, Coach Hank Bullough said.

Bullough said the halfback, who has scored five touchdowns and is the team's leading rusher with 323 yards in 77 carries, suffered a severe muscle pull in Sunday's 27-14 loss at Miami.

SALT LAKE CITY — Preliminary findings of an autopsy on a freshman Utah football player rule out narcotics as the cause for his Oct. 11 collapse and death, authorities say.

"I talked with the state medical examiner's office and they said the preliminary findings were that there were no recreational drugs in Shawn Akina's blood," University Police Chief Wayne Shepherd said.

Baseball

HOUSTON — Houston Astros pitcher Nolan Ryan was resting a sprained left ankle he suffered in Game 5 of the NL playoff series.

Spokesman said more tests on Ryan's ankle are scheduled next week. Ryan jammed his foot as he was forced out at second base in the fifth inning of Tuesday's game against the New York Mets. He pitched for four more innings after his ankle was injured, and he struck out 12 batters throughout the game.

SAN FRANCISCO — Don Zimmer, who was third-base coach for the New York Yankees for most of this season, has been hired as the San Francisco Giants' third-base coach for next year.

"I got the guy I wanted," manager Roger Craig said. "He's the best third-base coach in the league, and I'm tickled to death to have him in the organization."

Last year, Zimmer began the season as the third-base coach with the Chicago Cubs, but was fired with manager Jim Frey as part of general manager Dallas Green's housecleaning.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

We are not overly fond of partners who go out of their way to lead some other suit when we have indicated a lead by bidding a suit. But we find it very difficult to fault them when they have found the only lead to give us a chance to defeat the contract!

After his partner's one spade overcall, North's leap to four spades was more out of fear that the opponents had a minor-suit game than that his side could make ten tricks. He was wrong on both counts.

For reasons best known to himself, West chose to ignore his partner's suit and lead the queen of clubs. Declarer won in hand and led a trump to the queen and ace. Back came another club, won in the closed hand. Now declarer drew the last trump and then tried the king of hearts. East took his ace and found the only way to reach his partner's hand—he underled his A-K-Q of diamonds. West took his two minor-suit tricks to defeat the contract one trick.

While we congratulate the defenders on an excellent performance, declarer did not make the most of his assets. East surely had all the aces because West, who was marked with the queen-jack of clubs from the lead, probably would have taken some action if he had an ace into the bargain. If clubs were 4-3, the contract was probably going down no matter what declarer did. Therefore, he had to hope that clubs were 5-2.

The only suit in which West might gain the lead was diamonds. Therefore, declarer should have returned a diamond at trick two to cut communications between the defenders. The "scissors coup" would have done the trick.

Note that it is futile to lead the king of hearts at trick two. Since dummy has no fast entry, declarer won't be able to get a discard on that suit as long as the defenders hold up the ace for one round.

Chuck Berry rocks 'n' rolls into his seventh decade at jam-packed party

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It's been 44 years since he was "Sweet Little Sixteen" but Chuck Berry celebrated his 60th birthday with a rock 'n' roll party of duckwalks, guitar licks and kudos from a generation of rock stars his music inspired.

The two sold-out concerts before a cheering hometown crowd Thursday night in the ornate Fox Theater were filmed for a movie about Berry's life to be called "Hail, Hail, Rock 'n' Roll," a line from his 1957 hit "School Day."

Berry was joined on stage by Rolling Stones lead guitarist Keith Richards, Linda Ronstadt, Eric Clapton, Etta James, and Julian Lennon.

An announcer read congratulatory telegrams from Mick Jagger, President Reagan and astronomer Carl Sagan. Sagan's telegram noted that Berry's recording of "Johnny B. Goode" was among items sent into outer space on the Voyager spacecraft.

Berry kicked off the back-to-back concerts attended by about 6,000 each with his first hit, "Maybellene," duckwalking across the stage during the guitar solo.

Berry was backed by Chuck Leavell on organ, Joey Tomspanato on bass, Steve Jordan on drums and Johnnie Johnson on piano.

It was Johnson who gave Berry his first job as a guitar player in an East St. Louis, Ill., nightclub in 1953.

The filming interrupted the concerts while cameras were repositioned and reloaded, but the veteran performer clowned and joked with the audience during the breaks.

Ms. Ronstadt joined him for "Back in the USA." Berry teamed up with Lennon for "Johnny B. Goode."

Berry and Richards traded guitar licks on "Roll Over Beethoven," and James brought the crowd to its feet with her vocal on "Rock and Roll Music."

All joined Berry on stage for the finale, an extended version of "Reelin' and Rockin'."

Berry, whose birthday is Saturday, looked tall and trim in a beige suit with brown trim over a mustard-colored shirt and a turquoise bolo tie.

"Thank you for coming out to our little party," he said before opening the shows. "I thought there was no better place to have this affair."

Richards has said he has idolized Berry since first seeing him in London more than two decades ago. At a ceremony in New York this year to induct Berry into the new rock Hall of Fame, Richards said Berry was the original.

"I've lifted every lick he ever played," Richards said. "Berry's the gentleman that started it all, as far as I'm concerned."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Cruise, the "Top Gun" star whose movie career began just five years ago in "Taps," got his star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame as throngs of teen-age girls screamed.

A crowd estimated at 1,500 attended Thursday's unveiling of Cruise's star, the 1,835th on Hollywood Boulevard, said Kathryn Shepard of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the walk.

The 24-year-old has starred in seven movies including the newly released Touchstone film "The Color of Money," in which he teams with Paul Newman.

"Top Gun," in which Cruise plays a Navy pilot at an elite air combat school, has earned more than $154 million since it was released 22 weeks ago.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television actors Gil Gerard and Connie Sellecca have filed for divorce.

Gerard, who appears in ABC's "Sidekicks," and Miss Sellecca, who appears in the network's "Hotel," filed petitions in Los Angeles Superior Court. The couple married Oct. 28, 1979, and separated in August 1985.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Debra Echard Kihn, wife of rock singer Greg Kihn, has filed for divorce after a one-year marriage.

Kihn has produced several rock music albums and is probably best known for the 1985 hit "Jeopardy." The rock video version of the song depicts Kihn experiencing a nightmare wedding.

Ms. Kihn's attorney, Peter M. Walzer, declined to discuss the case Thursday. The documents were filed Wednesday in Los Angeles County Superior Court.

The couple was married June 5, 1985, and separated Sept. 23, 1986. The couple began living together in 1982 and Ms. Kihn asks the court to declare all of their belongings acquired since then as communal property.

COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — Garrison Keillor and Oscar-winning director Sydney Pollack are talking about making a movie based on Keillor's best-selling book "Lake Wobegon Days," says a spokeswoman for Minnesota Public Radio.

Keillor, the star of MPR's "Prairie Home Companion," has not been available for comment, but Alison Circle of MPR said: "It should come as no surprise to anyone that when there is a best-selling book there is always talk about a movie."

Pollack is an Academy Award-winning director who recently directed "Out of Africa." His office said he was on an European trip Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Cosby Show," television's top-rated program, is about family, love and laughter — and about a whole bale of money as the bidding starts for rights to the reruns.

"We are looking for the highest price we can achieve for the product," Joseph D. Zaleski, president for Domestic Syndication, Viacom Enterprises, told a news conference Thursday as he announced the start of bidding.

"The Cosby Show" will be auctioned in one market at a time, beginning Oct. 26 in New York, the nation's biggest market. The first syndicated episodes will air in September 1988.

Zaleski did not say what Viacom expects to earn from Cosby, but outside observers have estimated the show is worth $2.5 million to $3 million per episode in syndication.

Initial bids will be based on the production of 130 episodes, or five seasons, with automatic extensions to eight seasons if the show stays in production that long.

Gold tumbles

LONDON (AP) — The dollar put in a mixed performance against most major currencies in early European trading today, while gold prices tumbled by more than $5 an ounce.

Bullion dealers said gold, quoted at $420 a troy ounce midmorning, was floundering in search of new buying interest after closing as high as $432.50 bid Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $421.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Thursday's $425.75. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $420.

In Zurich, the bid price was $418.50, down from $425.25 late Thursday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $6.90 to close at a bid $417.88.

Dollar mixed

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar eased to a closing 154.15 yen from Thursday's 154.22. Later, in London, it was quoted at 154.20 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

—1.9728 West German marks, down from 1.9730

—1.6165 Swiss francs, down from 1.6175

—6.4630 French francs, down from 6.4675

—2.2328 Dutch guilders, up from 2.2315

—1,367.00 Italian lire, up from 1,366.75

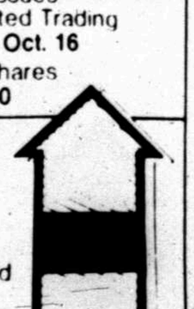

The latest fall followed by a major speech Thursday night by Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson. He sought to head off a further rise in interest rates by saying the Conservative government was sticking to its anti-inflationary financial strategy, while predicting faster economic growth next year.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.50 a troy ounce, down from Thursday's $5.58.

Oil imports at five year high

NEW YORK (AP) — Imports of crude oil and refined products surged to 7 million barrels a day last month, 42.7 percent more than the September 1985 level, a trade group said Thursday.

Levels of imported oil and refined products have been at five-year highs since August, largely because of increased demand, cheaper prices and conversion from other energy sources to oil, the Washington-basled American Petroleum Institute said. At the same time, domestic production has declined.

Domestic production of crude dropped 4 percent last month to 8.59 million 42-gallon barrels daily, the institute said.

The report noted that about 90,000 barrels a day, or one-fourth of that decline, was caused by a temporary interruption of Alaskan pipeline operations.

But it said the remainder of the domestic production shortfall still reflected "a pattern of declines that has persisted since early this year, when lower oil prices began to discourage the drilling of new wells and the maintenance of existing production."

It also noted that the nation's thirst for oil-related products is growing.

"During the first quarter, total deliveries rose 1.2 percent and during the second quarter the rate of increase was 2.4 percent. In the third, the rate rose 3.9 percent," it said.

Last month, the nation imported an average 6.99 million barrels of crude and refined products a day, up from 6.85 million barrels a day in August and 4.9 million barrels daily in September 1985, the API said.

Refined products include gasoline, kerosine jet fuel and heating oil.

So far this year, total imports have been 25.2 percent higher than a year ago.

Oil prices had dropped from about $32 a barrel last November to levels between $7 and $12 a barrel in early August because of a production excess by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Prices have since rebounded to the $14-$16 level because of OPEC efforts to curtail output.

The API report said September's imports increased despite OPEC's two-month cutback because of shipments that were already enroute when the accord went into effect.

"The high level of imports (also) contributed to a more-than-seasonal inventory build of over 37 million barrels, three times the average of the prior three years and the largest September increase since the mid-70s," it said.

"Distillate stocks rose to 150 million barrels, the highest level for that month since 1983," it added.

Distillate products include home heating oil and diesel fuel.

The report said deliveries of distillate supplies declined somewhat, possibly because of high stockpiling earlier.

Stage set for campaign to aid ailing oil industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Led by Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, oil state senators set the stage Wednesday for a major campaign next year to help the domestic oil industry that now is crippled by the sharp drop in prices.

Gramm unveiled a four-point legislative program to aid the oil industry. The plan also includes specific provisions for natural gas.

Under an agreement with Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, Gramm offered the legislation as an amendment to another bill but withdrew it after an hour of debate.

Oil state senators aeknowledged it was impossible to act on the bill in the final days of this session.

Gramm, a Texas Republican, said when Congress returns in January, "I hope it will be one of the first orders of business."

Although there have been many proposals to aid the oil industry, Gramm said his bill represents the first effort to bring together "the concerns of the industry and the concerns of the White House."

The bill would repeal the windfall profits tax and require that 50 percent of the oil purchased for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve come from U.S. production.

Gramm's bill also would mandate a study to determine the economic and security dangers of imports and another study to determine whether the ban on exports of oil drilling equipment and technology to Iron Curtain countries is effective or merely creates a market for other countries.

Sam's Wholesale Club opens Midland store in December

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Sam Walton likes a challenge. He considers every challenge to be an opportunity. And a challenge is just what he will be taking on when he opens his Sam's Wholesale Club in economically depressed Midland in early December.

One of 46 Sam's in operation, the Midland facility will open December 3 at the intersection of Loop 250 and Highway 191, marking the beginning of a new concept in wholesale merchandising in the Midland area.

At a press conference Thursday, Dale Stump was introduced as the general manager for the new wholesale club, scheduled to employ about 125 in the new 106,000 sq. foot store.

The Sam's concept is to provide low-cost name-brand merchandise in any quantity for resale or personal use by small businesses.

Sam's is not open to the general public, but offers two kinds of memberships. Business memberships are available to those holding current tax or business licenses from the city or state in which they are located, government agencies and other subdivisions. These members pay $25 annually for one primary membership that will enable them to purchase merchandise at the listed wholesale price. Four additional memberships can be purchased for an annual fee of $10 each.

Ron Jeap/Reporter-Telegram

The 106,000 sq. foot Sam's Whole Sale Club, located at Loop 250 and Highway 191, will be opening its doors in early December. The store will employ 125.

The second type of membership is for individual members, comprising full-time or retired employees of federal, state and city governments, financial institutions and insurance companies, airlines and railroads, hospitals, school systems and colleges and utility companies. These members pay no annual fee, but do pay a 5 percent surcharge over the listed wholesale price for all merchandise.

Corporate marketing director for Sam's Wholesale Club, Bob Cheyne, says, "We are excited about Midland and West Texas. We have 46 clubs, 24 of which are in Texas. That represents the commitment we have to the folks in the state."

Cheyne explains the key to Sam's being able to sell at wholesale prices. "First, our large-volume buying power allows us to buy direct from the manufacturer. Second, our barebones approach to merchandising enables us to reduce prices. When a truck pulls up with merchandise stacked on pallets, we run a fork lift out to the truck, pick up the pallet, bring it in and set it down on the showroom floor. That eliminates about ten steps that normally go into displaying merchandise.

"Third, we limit the number of items we carry, concentrating on volume. Instead of five or six brands, we will zero in on a couple of the faster-selling name brands. Fourth, our inventory control procedures allow us to eliminate the cost of marking each item. Finally, we have a strictly cash and carry policy that does away with the costs of billing."

Sam's will stock approximately 3,500 items in its warehouses, all carrying name brands. They vary from single, large-sized items to multi-packed quantities. Major departments in the warehouse are: groceries and frozen foods; tires, batteries and auto supplies; large and small appliances; electronics; designer clothing and soft goods; offices supplies and furniture; hardware, paint and professional supplies; candy and snack items; jewelry, cameras and watches; and, seasonal items.

Brand names include: IBM, Toshiba, Hormel, Nabisco, Sony, Cannon, General Electric, Kraft, Samsonite, Sharp, Jordache, Pierre Cardin, Fram and Oleg Cassini.

The warehouse is a division of Wal-Mart and is designed specifically to serve small businesses. Wal-Mart founder Sam Walton opened his first Sam's Wholesale Club at Oklahoma City in 1983. It is now flourishing at an unprecedented rate, with sales projected at near $1.7 billion by the end of 1986.

General manager Dale Stump says the 125 jobs to be filled by local workers will include clerical staff, cashiers, fork lift drivers and loading and receiving clerks.

New housing startsdrop 7.6 percent in September

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Construction of new homes slowed to an annual rate of 1,680,000 in September, plunging 7.6 percent from the revised August rate of 1,818,000, the Commerce Department said Friday.

Based on more complete data, housing starts in July were revised down to 1,782,000, 3.8 percent below the June figure. The pace then increased by 2 percent in August before dropping off sharply last month.

Housing activity in September was the slowest since November 1985, when it was 1,654,000. The perentage decline was the steepest since May of this year, when starts fell by 8.2 percent.

The estimated actual number of homes begun in September was 155,400, down from 166,200 in August. The number is adjusted for seasonal differences and extended for 12 months to arrive at the annual rate.

Both single- and multi-family home-building suffered in September. Free-standing homes were completed at an annual rate of 1,116,000, down from 1,199,000 the previous month to the lowest level since December 1985.

Housing units in buildings intended for five or more families were started at a rate of 502,000, down from 531,000 in August to the lowest level since February 1985, the gloomy report said.

For the first nine months of this year, starts totaled an estimated 1,425,800, up about 8 percent from 1,324,100 over the same period last year.

If housing activity continues at the same pace through the end of the year, they would total some 1,900,000 for 1986 as a whole. Starts totaled 1,741,800 in 1985.

The relatively swift pace of housing activity in 1986 is due largely to a drop in mortgage interest rates to the 10 percent range. If starts do not fall off sharply over the next three months, 1986 will be the strongest year for the housing industry since 1978.

Building permits were issued at an annual rate of 1,613,000 during the month, 3.6 percent below the revised August rate of 1,673,000. That represents the slowest pace of permit issuance since October 1984.

Home building activity fell off broadly across the United States. In the Northeast, starts fell from a six-month high of 333,000 in August to 282,000 last month.

In the South, starts fell to a four-year low of 696,000, down from 706,000 the previous month. Starts in the West were estimated to be 433,000 at an annual rate, down from 477,000 in August to the slowest pace in nearly two years.

In the Midwest, starts fell from 302,000 to 269,000 in September, the government agency said.

Bank holding companies have sharp quarterly losses

DALLAS (AP) — Two major Texas bank holding companies reported quarterly losses in the tens of millions, reflecting what experts said is an expanding effect of the state's depressed energy industry.

Allied Bancshares Inc. reported income losses for the quarter ending Sept. 30 of $46.4 million. Texas American Bancshares showed losses for the same period of $84.1 million.

Houston-based Allied in the same quarter last year had a net income of $30.3 million, while Texas American of Fort Worth had third quarter net income last year of $7.6 million.

Both companies had heavy loan losses charged against the quarterly income. Many of the troubled loans were on the energy or real estate investments, but other sector loans also were represented.

Allied reported non-performing loans of $407.8 million, a hefty increase from the $346.2 million in non-performers reported for the second quarter. Bank officials said the non-performing loans represented 5.89 percent of the institution's total loan profile. Banking experts said this ratio is considered high.

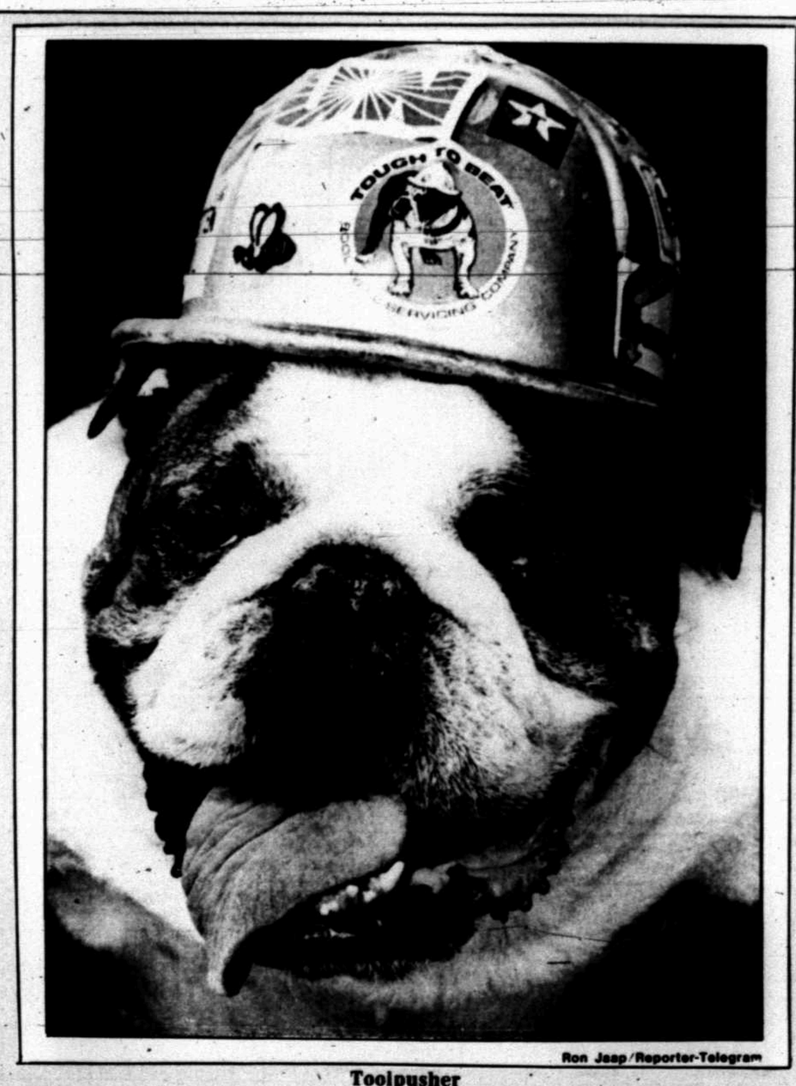

For Texas American, there were $32.5 million in bad loans. The non-performing assets were put at $315.1 million. The company said that 39 percent of these loans were energy related, and 43 percent were general commercial credits.

Both banks increased their provisions for loan losses. Allied added $110 million to the loan loss provision, and Texas American added $91.1 million.

Sandra J. Flannigan, an analyst with PaineWebber Inc. of Houston, said the loan problems appear to be spreading from energy and real estate into the general business portfolios of the banks. This indicates, she said, that the effect of the depressed energy prices is now rippling into other economic sectors.

Georgia L. Head, a banking analyst with Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. of Dallas, said troubling times may continue for Texas banks into next year.

"I would say that because non-performing loans are going up, we are going to see these large provisions and charge-offs for the rest of the year and into next year," she said.

Oil Show 'gone to the dogs'

Deanna J. Neal &
Allen E. Howland
Business/Oil Writers

With nearly 600 exhibits at this year's oil show, making a positive impact in the minds of visitors is getting tough. Bulldog tough.

Manning a show booth takes tenacity and the costs of staffing the display can be significant.

Imagine the good fortune of a company who has available the services of an employee so loyal that he's willing to ride to the show in the back of a truck, will catch an afternoon nap anywhere its convenient and works for room and board, with an occasional soup bone tossed in on the side as a bonus.

"Toolpusher", an eight-year-old English bulldog sporting a hard hat, is just such a model employee for Houston-based Pool Well Servicing.

'Push, as he is affectionately called by his fellow workers, has been the official mascot of the company since he was three months old.

'Push was hired on by Pool chairman of the board Cy Helin, who decided that a rough and tough bulldog was the best possible choice to embody a new employee-generated company slogan, "Tough to beat."

In the past eight years, Toolpusher has graced everything from Pool Co. stickers and logos, to starring in national print advertising campaigns.

Says Tony Dry, sales representative at Pool and owner of the dog, "Push is the steadiest employee we have. He has been a very successful marketing tool for us, because people often recognize the dog first and then our name."

Toolpusher's success as a corporate spokesdog is testimony to the importance of finding a distinctive image that will attract visitors' attention.

Everything from mannequins sporting breathing apparatus and displays that recreate a downhole environment to software simulation packages for the latest in oil field computerization — can be seen at this year's show.

Although the company is now based in Houston, it has West Texas roots. It was established in 1948 in San Angelo by Frank Pool. Pool started his business with two rigs and now it has grown to be the world's largest well servicing/drilling service company, with rigs working offshore, internationally and domestically.

Toolpusher, a resident of Abilene along with his owner Dry, is already making plans for his retirement. His first adventure in fatherhood resulted in a litter of one daughter, Little Miss Pushover. Plans are in the works for a second try, hopefully resulting in a son to carry on his father's fine work.

Brazil finds oil in Amazon jungle

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — President Jose Sarney announced what could be the first commercial petroleum discovery in the Brazilian Amazon jungle.

He said a well 81 miles from Manaus, near the Jurua river in the central Amazon, produced 950 barrels of high-grade oil per day for three days under test conditions.

"We have the impression that we have at last hit a well of some importance in the Amazon, and it looks like very good news for Brazil," Sarney said.

In Rio de Janeiro, the state-run Petrobras oil company, which drilled the well, said it was in a medium-risk area and probably would not be worth exploiting commercially unless other test wells indicated a large field.

"There is a reasonable chance that it will be commercial, but we will only know after further testing," spokesman Palmeira Guimaraes said.

He said the strike was made on firm ground, after drilling 8,096 feet.

Brazil has significant petroleum reserves off the Rio coast and has found smaller offshore fields around the Amazon mouth area.

But in eight years of Amazon jungle drilling Brazil has so far struck only gas in commercial quantities.

Guimaraes said if the new field proved worth exploiting, the oil would be taken out by barge. He said this could be done without damage to the environment.

Brazil currently produces about 610,000 barrels of oil a day and imports the rest of its 1.165 million barrel daily requirements.

Harken places private offering at Harvard

DALLAS (SWN) — Harken Oil & Gas, Inc. announced it has reached an agreement in principle to sell 1,351,351 newly issued shares of Harken restricted common stock at $1.48 per share for a total $2 million in cash to Aeneas Venture Corp., an investment affiliate of Harvard University, in a private placement.

In addition, Harken announced that Aeneas has agreed in principle to allocate $20 million to be invested with Harken in appropriate, separately negotiated acquisitions of oil and gas reserves and energy related companies.

Independents will appeal white oil ruling

AMARILLO, Texas (UPI) — A group of independent oilmen will appeal a $6.2 million judgment against them for taking "white oil" from a natural gas field owned by Natural Gas Pipeline Co., a lawyer for the oilmen said earlier this week.

A jury of three men and three women decided in the first of more than 40 suits against the independent oilmen who produced white oil that the liquid was taken illegally from two Carson County fields in the Panhandle. White oil is produced by refrigerating natural gas at the wellhead.

Lawyer Mike Swan said that he would appeal the verdict and added that the damage award is not final because it must be reviewed by U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson.

Triton Energy reports first quarter results

DALLAS (SWN) — Triton Energy Corp. reported results for the fiscal 1987 first quarter ended August 31.

Revenues for the first quarter were $15.5 million compared to $19.7 million for the fiscal 1986 first quarter. Loss per share was $.50 compared to earnings per share of $.23 for the fiscal 1986 first quarter.

Oil and gas sales volumes increased substantially during the quarter, resulting primarily from the continued development of the company's oil fields in France and the acquisition of producing properties in Cote d' Ivoire during October, 1985. However, because of falling oil prices, the company experienced a net loss of $3.1 million during the current quarter as compared to prior period net earnings of $2.3 million.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Closed-in funds have fixed number of shares

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Three times over the past few months, my broker has called and tried to sell me shares of new "closed-end funds." I declined and am glad I did, because all three are now trading below their initial offering prices.

However, the main reason I didn't buy was that I didn't understand closed-end funds, and still don't. When I ask my broker for information, he doesn't seem to know much about them either. Are they the same as mutual funds?

A. Not quite. They are similar, in that the people who run them use the money raised through the sale of shares to invest in many different securities and then manage the investment portfolios by selling some of those securities and buying others from time to time.

Doyle

A closed-end fund — technically a closed-end investment company — has a fixed number of shares. That's what makes it different than a mutual fund, which is an open-end investment company.

Every mutual fund stands ready to redeem its shares on any business day. The redemption feature makes mutual funds open end, as defined by the Investment Company Act of 1940. Most mutual funds also continuously sell new shares to the public. But some don't.

When you redeem mutual fund shares you get the redemption value. For the vast majority of funds, the redemption price is the asset value per share — the actual dollar and cents value behind each share on the day you redeem. The exceptions are those mutual funds levying redemption fees.

You can't "redeem" shares of a closed-end fund. When you want to unload a closed-ender's shares, you sell in the open market — just as you sell most stocks. Some are listed on stock exchanges. Others are traded in the over-the-counter market.

Because there is no redemption procedure, the market price of closed-end fund's shares might be equal to, above or below asset value per share. A recent tabulation of closed-enders shows that 16 were trading at premiums above net asset value, while 22 were trading at discounts below net asset value.

Q. It is obvious to me that it is wise to buy shares of a closed-end fund trading at a discount below asset value, therefore a bargain price. Right?

A. There's validity in your thought, but no assurance you'll come out a winner.

Let's say XYZ Closed-End Fund has a per share asset value of $10 and a market price of $9. If you buy 100 shares, you pay $900, plus broker's commission, and you have $1,000 of assets working for you — to earn dividends and, hopefully, increase in value.

Keep in mind, however, that you can't be sure the asset value will rise. Nor do you know what the discount will be in the future. The closed-end fund's market price might rise to or above its asset value. Or, the discount might become even larger.

In short, there's no certain way of spotting an absolute bargain in the stock market.

Q. My financial planner says that certain closed-end funds are "the only sensible way" to invest in foreign stock markets. Do you agree?

A. Some closed-end funds invest in stocks around the world. Others concentrate on individual countries or regions, such as Australia, New Zealand, Germany, Italy, Japan, Korea, Mexico and Scandinavia. Many of them have done exceptionally well in recent years.

Buying shares of such funds is much easier and less complicated than buying individual foreign stocks and/or American depositary receipts for those stocks. Also, you get diversification.

However, that's not the only way to go. A number of mutual funds also invest primarily or entirely in foreign stocks and have good investment performance records. Also, some of those "international" or "global" mutual funds are "no-load," meaning you pay no commission when you buy their shares.

Community tired of its name

SHIRLEY, N.Y. (AP) — Residents of this Long Island hamlet like where they live, but some don't like the name. They say they want one with a little more pizzazz — one that's in step with their community's new prosperity.

So instead of Shirley, they want to name the community after — Floyd.

To the Committee to Rename Shirley, "Floyd Harbor" has just the right ring — never mind that the community has no harbor.

"For years, people have been down on Shirley and a change of name will help," said Tony Disimioe, a bar owner who is circulating petitions.

Schools Superintendent Nicholas Poulis said residents brought up the issue of changing the community's name at a recent Chamber of Commerce meeting in response to rising population and property values.

Battered women's shelter gives family second chance

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of three articles on agencies receiving financial assistance from the United Way. The names used are fictitious.

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

It may start out as just a light-handed slap.

But then heavy clothing must be worn to camouflage the bruises. Cars become places to sleep just to get out of the house.

Fear and guilt dominate and become an irrational way of life. Such is the existence of a battered women.

Hannah was about 26 when her husband started being violent with her. After five years of a blissful marriage, her husband Drew had begun drinking heavily.

At night he'd walk in the door in a stupor — bringing home an angry fist looking for a cheek or jaw.

"He had never been violent unless he was drunk. It just got to the point where I was terrified to be around him," Hannah said.

Life had been good for Hannah, a housewife, their three sons and Drew, a successful self-employed painter in Abilene.

"We had everything you could want. We'd just built a new home and had bought a new Cadillac," Hannah said.

"But I'll tell you this, I wasn't afraid to lose it all if it meant getting out of the situation I was in," she added.

Drew was an alcoholic but never had a problem with other drugs, Hannah said.

While in Abilene, Hannah said, she never knew about any sort of a center for battered women.

"The only way I found out about it (the Abilene battered women's center) was that one day we were driving by and my husband remarked that he was going to be painting it in the next day or two."

However, Hannah never went to the Abilene center because she didn't think anyone would believe her.

She said the straw that broke the camel's back — the catalyst making her leave Drew and go to the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children — happened about a year ago.

"He'd come in drunk and had a knife and was threatening me.

"My 9-year-old was awakened by all the screaming and fighting and rushed out to us (in the living room) holding his stomach and saying he was sick.

"Even though my husband was drunk, it really snapped him. He said he'd 'take care' of me later, but that we needed to get our son to the hospital," Hannah said.

In the emergency room, thoughts about what she should do were running through her head, she said.

In the midst of all that, Drew passed out cold in the emergency room.

"Then our son came out from an examining room and said he wasn't really sick at all. He said he pretended because he was just afraid.

"Right then, I thought, 'God, just let me get through this night and I'll leave him.' We picked up and left the hospital then," Hannah said.

She was too scared to go to a shelter because she still thought no one would believe her. So she went to her parents' home in Abilene, Hannah said.

While she was staying at her parents, her husband sneaked over one night and took their car back from her.

Stranded, she was given a car and some money by her parents, Hannah said.

"I just got the kids in the car and said, 'God show me where to go.'"

"I don't know why, but I came to Midland. I called the center here and ended up staying six weeks," Hannah said.

The volunteers at the Midland shelter stayed up with her and the children whenever they needed it, she said.

What helped her most was the counseling the center offers.

"It was wonderful...absolutely wonderful," Hannah said.

"They were always there for you. They made sure we had everything we needed — medicine, doctor's help, clothing, diapers, baby food — anything."

After six weeks, a center director asked Hannah if she'd like to become a real employee of the center and even offered her a free apartment (the address of which is kept as confidential as possible).

She took the job.

Hannah said the center in Midland taught her that once a man realizes he can hit, he'll keep on doing it.

"I thought it was my fault he beat me. I would think to myself, 'Maybe I shouldn't have told him this or that and he wouldn't have gotten upset.'"

She said she also had a problem with kidding herself into thinking if she forgave him just one more time, he wouldn't hit her again.

Her husband soon moved to Midland after admitting to himself he had a drinking problem and getting medical and psychological treatment for it.

He is running his own business again, he hasn't had a drink for six months and they and their three sons are living happily in Midland, Hannah said.

She's still working at the center and they are both in counseling to deal with their lives, past and present.

"The center gave us a new start. We would have been out on the street if it weren't for the people there.

"The center saves a lot of lives."

Kay Bivens, with Tom Brown Inc., addresses Thursday's gathering of United Way volunteers at Centennial Plaza. It was announced that $1,003,373 has been raised so far.

United Way questions answered

EDITOR'S NOTE: Many questions are often asked about the United Way, which is entering the third week of its annual local campaign. Following are some of the most common inquiries, according to United Way officials.

Q. Who pays for meals for campaign volunteers?

A. Report lunches and the awards lunch during the campaign are sponsored by generous Midland firms, in addition to their campaign gifts to the United Way. All other United Way luncheons or dinners during the campaign or throughout the year, are paid for by volunteers themselves on a Dutch-treat basis.

Q. I feel that I'm being pressured into giving to the United Way. Is this a part of the fund-raising technique?

A. No. The United Way doesn't encourage or approve of solicitor pressure as a fund-raising technique. If you feel you are being pressured, please call the United Way Executive Director. Confidentiality is assured and you can help the United Way eliminate the pressure techniques for yourself and others.

Q. Why do agencies charge fees if they receive a United Way allocation?

A. The United Way raises funds to help its agencies, but the amount doesn't cover anywhere near 100 percent of the agencies' needs. In order to bring in additional income to support their programs, many agencies charge program service or membership fees. Those who can afford to pay the full cost of the service are asked to do so and those who cannot are charged according to financial capability, or receive the services free.

Q. Who decides how much is allocated to each agency?

A. Volunteers — people like yourself — decide how much is allocated. The allocation of United Way dollars is a continuing review process involving volunteer participation to assure contributors that every dollar is spent wisely. Volunteer committees, representing all segments of our area, work together to review agency programs and budgets.

Campaign has raised almost half of funds garnered last year

From Staff Reports

United Way has almost reached half of what was raised last year, said campaign chairman Tom Wageman during Thursday's report luncheon.

So far the campaign has raised $1,003,373 two weeks into its 1986 fall fund-raising campaign.

Last year's total fall campaign netted $2,120,360.

"We have reached a milestone in our campaign. The good people of Midland have contributed $1,003,373. This is almost one-half of what we made last year," Wageman said.

More than 200 people showed up to the second campaign luncheon at the Midland Centennial Plaza.

Division totals raised include:

- Special gifts, $367,305
- Major firms, $341,549
- Independent oil, $29,246
- Pacesetter, $13,277
- Residential, $9,460
- Small business, $16,796
- Wildcat, $9,753
- Major oil, $83,014
- Government and services, $45,474
- Intermediate oil, $11,968
- Professional, $50,683
- Trailblazers, $24,847

Midlander convicted of guard's murder

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Midland man who took the stand Thursday in his own defense, denying prosecutors' allegations that he had shot a security guard twice in the head following a scuffle among several spectators after a horse race was found guilty of murder Thursday night.

The jury returned with the guilty verdict after having deliberated for about three hours, a district attorney's spokeswoman said. The punishment stage should start sometime this morning, she added.

Ruben Bujanda, 35, told the seven-woman, five-man jury in 238th District Court that he did not shoot 26-year-old James Belis June 16, 1985.

Through an interpreter Bujanda said he tried to settle a dispute between Belis, who was working security at a horse race track in southeast Midland County when he was killed, and Bujanda's brother, Jamie.

"I tried to get away," Bujanda testified. "When I tried to get away, that was when he (Belis) shot me in the back."

Bujanda told the jury Belis had shot him five times, four times in the back and once in the neck. He showed the jury his wounds.

Jim Jordan, Bujanda's defense counsel, asked the defendant point blank if he had shot Belis.

"No, never," he said. "What would I shoot him with?"

Prosecutor David Rosado insisted to Bujanda that he had shot Belis after jumping him, but Bujanda denied ever firing a gun.

'Lack of communication' leads to equipment seizure

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The owner of two movie video rental stores says a "lack of communication" has caused the Midland police department to seize merchandise reported stolen from his Midland store and returned to his Odessa store.

"We've got a lack of communication. We didn't file an insurance claim. I am not a thief. The police haven't contacted us. They haven't said anything to us," said Kip Crowther, owner of Midland's and Odessa's Movie Mania stores.

No charges have been filed and Midland police say they are still investigating how $32,000 worth of equipment reported stolen Oct. 1 from Midland's Movie Mania, 4324 Andrews Highway, was found Wednesday at the family-owned store in Odessa.

Crowther said the movie tapes and video recorders that Midland police seized Wednesday at the Odessa store on 949 North Grandview were returned by the burglar who feared prosecution.

On Monday, Crowther said his mother, Ouita Crowhter, received a call from the thief's mother, who feared her son's prosecution and asked if Crowther would drop charges if they returned the items.

"We said we would be more than happy to drop the charges," Crowther said.

The items were returned to the Odessa store Tuesday with three video cameras broken, he said.

"By a quirk of honesty we have gotten a lot of the stuff back," said Crowther in a letter sent to the Midland Police Department Tuesday asking them to drop the case.

However, Det. Dusty Lane said police searched the Odessa store Wednesday after receiving an anonymous Crime Stoppers tip.

The Midland store at 4324 Andrews Highway was closed after the Oct. 1 break-in which wiped out most of his inventory, Crowther said.

'Pick Yourself Up Midland' benefit concert scheduled

From Staff Reports

Jazz, country-western, Mexican and rock 'n' roll musicians will converge on the stage Oct. 24 at Midland Center for a "Pick Yourself Up Midland" concert to benefit Project Self-Sufficiency.

The benefit, sponsored by the Permian Church of Religious Science, will be "an up event for everyone," the Rev. Nina Douglas said.

"I see Project Self-Sufficiency as a way for single parents to move from dependence to independence and make a contribution to life," she said. "It is a more excellent way to revive your spirit helping others who are helping themselves."

Project Self-Sufficiency is a non-profit program designed to "break the poverty cycle that many low income, single parents find themselves in," said Vernon Martin, a member of the program's board of directors.

Local principal honored by national organization

From Staff Reports

Parker Elementary School Principal Joe M. Cummins has been selected as Texas' honoree in the third annual National Distinguished Principals program.

He will receive the honor from U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett at a black-tie dinner tonight in Washington, D.C.

Cummins, 46, has served as principal at Parker for three years. Previously, the Texas Tech University graduate was a principal of Emerson, Houston, West and Long Elementary Schools, and was a teacher at Houston and Henderson Elementary Schools.

The National Distinguished Principals program is jointly sponsored by the U.S. Department of Education and the National Association of Elementary School Principals, in corporate partnership with Pizza Hut Inc.

The program's purpose is to recognize elementary and middle school principals "who represent our nation's commitment to top-quality education during the important early years of schooling," said Samuel G. Sava, executive director of NAESP.

"Mr. Cummins' achievements and ideals are representative of the accomplishments of the many fine elementary and middle school principals in Texas," said Sava.

"His dedication to high academic standards clearly identified Joe as Texas' representative to the National Distinguished Principals program."

"One conclusion stands out from mountains of educational research — good schools have good principals," said Secretary Bennett.

"They inspire, motivate, organize and instruct. They make an important difference in the lives of the boys and girls in their charge through their own example and the standards, values and attitudes they establish for their schools. I salute these fine educators for their contributions to America's young people and to the future character and intellectual strength of our Nation."

Casa de Amigos medical program gets $25,000 grant

From Staff Reports

The Medical Services program of Casa de Amigos has received a $25,000 grant from the Meadows Foundation of Dallas. Money from the grant will be used to develop general health screening services for low-income families in Midland.

Casa began its medical screening services in September of 1985 with a $5,000 Venture Grant from the United Way of Midland. Since then, regular diabetic, podiatry and ophthalmology screenings have been offered and financial assistance has been made available to help the "working poor" of the community obtain necessary medical testing and treatment.

Follow-up monitoring and education programs have been offered for those needing training and guidance in understanding their disease.

The agency now hopes to expand its services for general health needs of the working poor in the community.

The Meadows Foundation was created in 1948 by Algur H. Meadows for the benefit of Texans.

To date, more than 850 different organizations have received support from the Meadows Foundation.

In pursuing Casa's stated purpose of "helping people help themselves," the medical services program utilizes volunteer registered nurses and volunteer medical professionals to screen low-income individuals.

Mrs. Cecilia Moreno Sokolowski, a bilingual registered nurse, was hired part-time in August of this year to coordinate and expand the medical services.

She follows up each screening by referring individuals to medical doctors when tests indicate the need for further medical attention.

In turn, the individuals are referred back to Casa de Amigos for monitoring of their condition.

Educational programs in skin care, diet and nutrition, foot care, proper insulin use and exercise are also offered.

Longview man has driving obsession

By CHARLOTTE HELDENBRAND

LONGVIEW (AP) — Bill Fleming did not mean to start. But once he did, he could not seem to stop. His obsession led him to mingle with people he did not know, and it also depleted his cash supply.

Fleming is a Jag junkie. He owns nine of the automobiles and enters two of them in shows. He has had at least one Jaguar automobile since 1965, when he bought one that did not run for $200. It came with parts and an engine. He was living in Georgia at the time, and "I just wanted a sports car," he said.

"I wanted a sports car and it just so happened that it was a Jaguar. We went to look at a Mercedes, but I wasn't impressed with it. The Jaguar was the next one we saw, so we bought it," he said.

Fleming bought a 1969 2-plus-2 XKE Jaguar for his son, Billy, when he graduated from high school. By that time, the family had moved to Texas.

"He's probably the real reason we have as many as we have, because everytime he finds one, he calls me and away we go," Fleming said.

His Jaguar collection includes a 1959 Mark IX, a 1954 120 roadster, a 1959 150S roadster, a 1965 3.4 S sedan, a 1959 Mark I sedan, a 1962 Mark II sedan, a 1978 XJ6 sedan and the two show cars, a 1959 XK150 and a 1965 Mark X limousine.

Fleming has a story or interesting fact for each of his Jaguars. The Mark X limousine was originally owned by the British Embassy in Washington, and is one of only three of the automobiles exported to the United States, according to Fleming. "When we first bought the car it was a dog. The interior was bow wow wow — doggy dog," he said.

Jaguars are made in Coventry, England, and Fleming called once to check on the original condition of the 150S. Fleming gave the representative the car's chassis number and the motor number. "He told me it was manufactured Sept.12, 1959, and delivered to Morristown, Pa., Sept.19. The paint was originally the color of cream and it had a black top and a red interior," said Fleming. The 150S roadster is a special model with three carbureators. "It'll snap your head back," he said.

The 120 roadster has been stored idle in a garage for nine years before he bought it. Why would someone buy an automobile and then store it? "People buy these cars to restore and they either become discouraged or run out of money," he said.

But Fleming says he has had neither problem. Fleming and Mark Schroeder, an employee at Fleming's gas station, do most of the restoration of the Jaguars.

"We do 99 percent of the mechanical work. I've got too old to do it. He (Schroeder) asked me one day, 'What did you do before I came along?' " said Fleming. "I told him I did it, but now there's no point. I've got someone to do it."

His family shares his enthusiasm. "My son is a Jaguar freak and my wife is a Jaguar freak," Fleming says.

"She'll say, 'What do you need with a Jaguar.' I say I don't need it but someone made me an offer I couldn't refuse. That's what happens — someone makes me an offer I can't refuse.

Fleming's wife, son and daughter-in-law attend the car shows with him. "We wear Jaguar shirts — I guess you'd call it a family affair," he said. The Mark X has been graded second in its class three times, and the XK150 has won first place once in shows sponsored by the Jaguar Club of North America Inc., graded by three judges on a 100-point grading system.

Unlike most entrants in the Jaguar shows, Fleming drives his car to the show "because they're driveable."

"I usually work on the car out here 10 days before the show. We work about a day at the show site and continue right up to the judging time. It's a lot of hard work."

Snelson seeks more geriatric treatment centers

AUSTIN (AP) — A growing population of the elderly in Texas makes it feasible to establish specialized geriatric treatment centers at Kerrville and San Angelo, says Midland businessman Pete Snelson.

"This is an excellent opportunity for us to do something about specialization in the treatment of geriatrics," Snelson told the Sunset Advisory Commission Thursday.

The Sunset Commission, which periodically reviews the operations of state agencies, was scheduled to vote on Snelson's proposals today.

In addition to considering staff recommendations for changes in the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, the commission also was to consider changes in the Texas Department of Corrections and the Department of Human Services.

Snelson's proposal would designate the Kerrville State Hospital as the Geriopsychiatric Hospital for Texas for patients more than 65 years of age who have been in a state hospital for five or more years.

He proposed that San Angelo State School be made into the Geriatric Treatment Center for the Retarded, also for those over 65.

The proposals by Snelson, a former state senator who is the Democratic nominee for Congressional District 21, would replace a staff recommendation of the Commission that called for transfer of long-term geriatric patients in state hospitals and schools to be transferred to community nursing homes.

"This has been widely misunderstood," said Kathy Hutto, program analyst of the panel's staff. "We had no intention of shifting everyone to nursing homes and walking away from them."

Snelson said his proposals would not close geriatric divisions in other state hospitals but would allow physicians to transfer patients over 65 to Kerrville and San Angelo where it was considered best for the patient.

"The geriatric population in the state schools will increase in the years ahead and by designating these schools as the primary provider of services to this age group, a greater degree of specialization will be possible," Snelson said.

Earlier the Sunset Commission agreed Thursday to hold a public hearing on proposals to release some non-violent prisoners and keep track of them with electronic monitoring advices.

"This would cost about $9 a day and would be an alternative to expensive parole and probation services," said Bill Wells, head of the commission staff.

Paper: Pantex guards 'playing around' on job

AMARILLO (AP) — The Pantex nuclear-weapons plant was one of several Department of Energy plants around the nation with security problems, including allegations of sexual misconduct, a Seattle newspaper reported.

But officials at the plant northeast of this Panhandle city deny the report which appeared in a copyright story in Thursday edition's of the Seattle Times.

The newspaper reported the problems were revealed during a closed hearing by the U.S. House Committee on Energy and Commerce in March.

The newspaper said the problems included:

— Guards at Pantex, the DOE's highest security weapons production facility, were found to have taken sex partners up to watchtowers.

— Several pounds of plutonium, used to make hydrogen bombs, were "lost" in a mock terrorist raid at the department's Savannah River, S.C., plant.

— As many as 30 workers at the DOE's Oak Ridge, Tenn., weapons production plant were found to be drug users.

Clyde Alley, Pantex assistant plant manager, said the allegations of sexual misconduct were rumor.

"That was investigated and there is no substantiation at all for that," he said.

Alley told the Amarillo Globe-News the rumor was started by a man who never worked at the plant. He refused to identify the man.

The Times said the information came from a recently declassified copy of a special oversight and investigations subcommittee's transcript.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who has been investigating the DOE's security problems for four years, had harsh words for two of the department's officials.

"At the subcommittee's first hearing in September 1982, we were assured by a former assistant secretary for defense programs and the current manager of the Savannah River operations office that the facilities could withstand a baseline terrorist attack," said Dingell. "That was a lie. It was not a question of judgment or a question of differences of judgment — they knew that their statements were not true."

Dingell pointed out that systems at the plant officials claimed were adequate had failed a mock attack exercise miserably.

"It has always been my contention that our biggest threat is not from nuclear war, but from freelance nuclear terrorists," said another subcommittee member, Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., adding that months after the March 6 hearing, the DOE still had not confirmed that security problems at the plants had been resolved.

Wyden has introduced a bill that would establish an independent, outside agency to monitor DOE safety and security at its nuclear plants. "As it is now," he said, "The same people who produce (weapons materials) are the ones who assure you it is safe."

The hearing last spring did not discuss operations at the Hanford nuclear resevation, where plutonium handling was criticized in internal audits.

Though Dingell alluded to sexual activities in the Amarillo guard towers, all other references to the incident were apparently edited out of the document. However, some of the details of drug activity at Oak Ridge came out in testimony.

Crowther said someone had pried the Midland's store back door open with a crowbar and taken almost all of the store's merchandise.

He said he did not know how many people broke into the Midland business.

"It didn't matter to me. I just wanted the stuff back," Crowther said.

A police report lists 700 VHS tapes worth about $35 each, three video cameras and an IBM computer stolen from the store.

While police continue to investigate, Crowther says the case's publicity has hurt his business.

"What bothers me is my name has been smeared for two nights on two TV channels and I've had an employee whose family made him quit after hearing about this."

Officials enter church-run home, but find no children

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said state officials entered the Community Baptist Church School near Fort Worth early today to remove any children being kept in the home, but found that there were no juveniles there.

"Officials of the Department of Human Services were accompanied by the Department of Public Safety shortly after 5 a.m." Mattox said from his home in Austin.

He said the entry was made on the basis of an order issued by a Fort Worth judge because of "threats of violence," from the Rev. W. N. Otwell, the embattled pastor of the Community Baptist Church in Forest Hill, a Fort Worth suburb.

"It was done preceding the possible order of closure of the facility this coming Wednesday," said the attorney general.

Mattox said the officials found no children under the age of 18 and only four or five of the older children there.

"Evidently they had in effect removed all the children from the facility. We don't know exactly when. They were either taken to their parents or to another location," said Mattox. "If the young people come back they will be removed by the court order."

In an interview today with a Dallas radio station, Otwell said the children were removed because officials at the home were warned of the raid.

"We heard about it around 10 p.m.," said the pastor. "We got a tip they were coming in. We feel like the Lord did it (gave the warning)."

Otwell said he was calling from Louisiana, but did not give his precise location. Sheriffs' deputies tried to arrest Otwell last week, but could not find him at the church.

Otwell said in the radio interview that the raid "just shows again that the state of Texas and Jim Mattox is totally wrong. We got the boys out and the women and children out. We got them in an undisclosed place."

Otwell said "a showdown" is still ahead for him and Mattox.

The attorney general said operators of the children's home had an opportunity to close the facility in an orderly way.

"We gave them one last chance to close the facility," he said. "We told them there would be no penalties and we would not sell the property if they would voluntarily close it or make application for a state license.

"They have refused so far and apparently want a confrontation over the property," Mattox said.

Cockroaches can live in even most sanitary environment

5th in a series

Control of cockroaches requires much care and planning.

Although sanitation is important for controlling cockroaches, taking precautions to prevent the invasion of cockroaches into a home or building works better than applying insecticides to control an established population. Cockroaches can survive in even the most sanitary environment once an infestation is established.

Because various combinations of cockroaches can occur in the same building, it is essential to identify accurately the species present. This will permit use of control measures that take advantage of behavioural patterns and life requirements of the particular species.

Non-chemical control measures include:

(a) keeping tight-fitting windows and doors,

(b) sealing all openings where electrical lines or water, steam and cooling pass through walls and floors to slow the movement of roaches into a home or building,

(c) inspecting beverage cartons, boxes, dried pet foods, potatoes, onions and firewood to avoid bringing roaches into the home,

(d) repairing plumbing leaks and sealing other moisture sources and,

(e) keeping the premises clean by removing all food crumbs, garbage, etc., to containers with tight-fitting lids.

Chemical control of cockroaches with insecticides calls for inspecting closely for their shelters and thoroughly treating these locations. Regardless of the insecticide or formulation chosen, chemicals placed in or near regular hiding places will provide much better control than those placed where roaches move only occasionally.

Present methods of insecticidal control generally provide temporary control within treated structures. To solve this problem, outdoor populations also must be controlled.

To eliminate an established infestation from a home or building, first remove all routes of reinfestation. Then thoroughly clean the home and apply an approved chemical. The type of chemical selected and the application method used will depend on the location and the nature of the infestation. No one chemical is best suited for handling all roach problems, but the various types available present a combination that is effective.

The different types of chemical control for cockroaches include:

(a) residual sprays, a formulated oil-base or water-base emulsions, or as water-base suspensions (wettable powders),

(b) dusts, which are used most often as a supplemental treatment and have a longer residual action than sprays,

(c) baits, the least important part of which is the insecticide. If roaches will not feed on the bait, the insecticide will have no effect, and

(d) aerosols, most useful for identifying the location and extent of cockroach infestations. They have no residual effect, so must be used in conjunction with residual sprays or dusts.

The Federal Environmental Pesticide Control Act of 1972 in part prohibits the application of any pesticide in a manner inconsistant with its labeling. This means that a pesticide cannot be used unless it is registered for the specific pest. Consequently, some chemicals formerly used by homeowners and pesticide applications no longer can be used.

For information about some insecticides suggested for control of cockroaches, the status of insecticide label clearness, etc., contact the County Extension Agent, the County Extension Entomologist, or a local pest control operator.

Richard Minzenmayer is Midland County Extension Agent for Entomology.

Crop production forecasts represent cards in game of commodity trading

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crop production forecasts.

To many, the very words might usher in the soft balmy haze of slumber.

Once a month, though, crop production forecasts set off a scramble among reporters in a fifth-floor room at the Agriculture Department.

On that day, these jealously guarded estimates, compiled by the department's 28-member Agricultural Statistics Board and signed by Secretary Richard E. Lyng, are unveiled to the public.

For the most part, of course, the public lacks much interest.

But to a small sliver of Americans, the forecasts represent face-up cards in the great game of commodity futures trading.

This billion-dollar industry involves the buying and selling of promises to deliver a set amount of a commodity — wheat, soybeans, whatever — at a fixed price on a particular date.

These promises — or futures contracts — fluctuate in price much as shares of stock. And production forecasts are a key ingredient in determining the upswings and downturns.

Production forecasts for wheat, corn, beans, cotton, oranges and other crops are likely to reverberate on the Chicago Board of Trade and other exchanges where commodities futures are bought and sold.

Moviegoers may recall the financial killing made by Dan Aykroyd and Eddie Murphy in "Trading Places" after they stole the production forecast for orange juice.

In real life, citrus forecasts are found in the same bureaucratic looking document that contains estimates for the whole gamut of crops ranging from alfalfa to walnuts.

The forecasts are released once a month, usually around the 10th, to reporters gathered in the Agriculture Department's South Building on Independence Avenue.

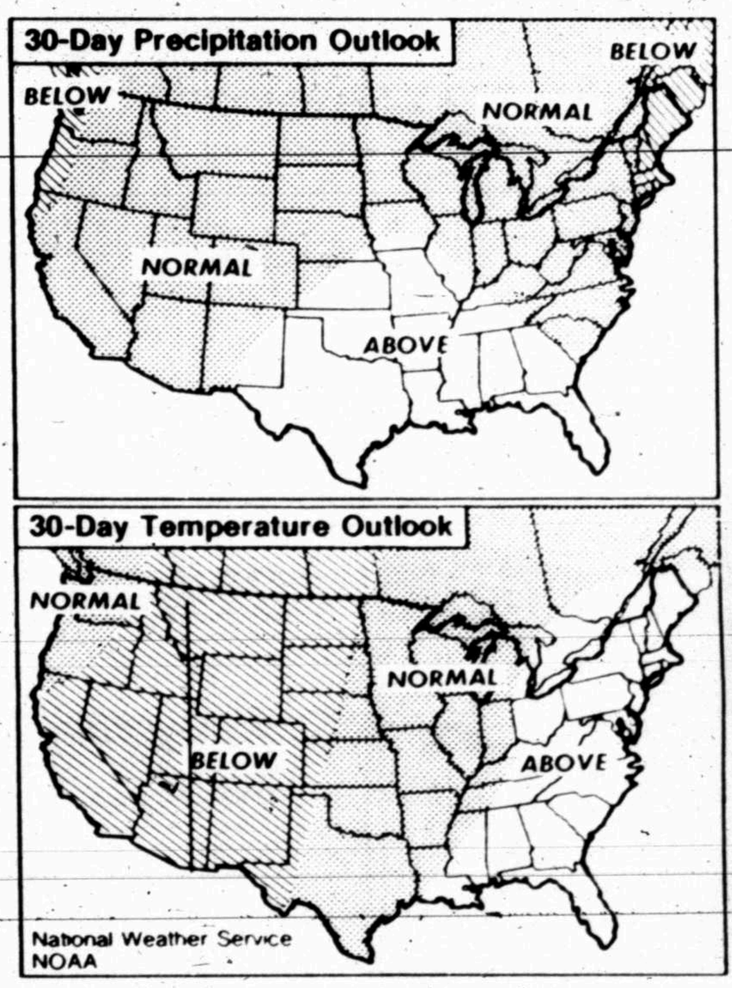

Along two walls of a fifth-floor room are rows of telephone booths, each marked with the name of a newspaper or news service. Reporters stand along a white line on the floor, each facing his designated telephone booth.

At 3 p.m., Agriculture Department officials give the nod and the reporters scramble into the booths and phone the forecasts to their offices, which then rush them onto news wires.

Some reporters, whose news wires feed directly into brokerage firms that do a big business in futures trading, telephone their offices before the crop report is released and leave the line open, the faster to deliver the numbers.

Sulfite additives are dangerous to persons who are sensitive to them

Associated Press

We hear of lettuce sprayed with sulfites, waxed apples and dyed oranges. Are these additives dangerous?

The answers are yes, no, and maybe. Yes, sulfites are dangerous to the almost 1 million Americans who are sensitive to the additive; no, waxes on apples are not dangerous; and dyes added to citrus peels pose a slight risk only if you eat the peel.

Because of new Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations, sulfites are less of a concern for sulfite-sensitive persons. Since Aug. 8, sulfites on fresh-cut fruits and vegetables in supermarkets and in restaurant salad bars are banned. To further help susceptible individuals avoid sulfites, the FDA also set stricter regulations requiring that sulfite notices appear on food labels. These regulations go into effect on Jan. 9, 1987.

Though only certain individuals, mostly asthmatics, are sensitive to sulfites, the reactions can be quite severe, including nausea, acute asthma attacks, hives, diarrhea, shock, loss of consciousness and even death within minutes of ingesting sulfites. (Since 1982, sulfites are suspected of causing 13 deaths.)

Sulfites retard discoloration in cut produce (as in restaurant and supermarket salad bars), dried fruits and vegetables, fruit drinks and shellfish; they control fermentation in wine and beer and they condition bread dough. The strongest reactions are likely to come from sulfites sprayed on fresh fruits and vegetables.

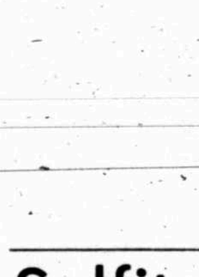

The new regulations provide sensitive persons with vital information without significantly affecting our food supply. Now, they know they can safely eat produce and should avoid certain packaged foods that bear a sulfite notice. Unfortunately, sensitive persons still won't know whether sulfites are used in non-packaged foods such as the potatoes used in restaurants and in wine and beer. Regulations to include these foods have been proposed.

Apples — and other produce such as cucumbers — obtain their sheen from carnauba wax, the Brazilian wax palm. The wax also keeps apples from losing moisture so that they retain water-soluble nutrients. No research is available, but no evidence indicates that the wax, which does not wash off, poses a health risk.

To cover up their natural green, yet ripe, color, Florida and Texas oranges picked between October and December may be dyed. (Extra chlorophyll produced during those months may tinge the skin of ripe oranges with green.) Peel the orange and you remove the dye.

Studies suggest the dye may be a mild carcinogen at very high doses, but experts say the risk is almost nil. Even if you sucked or ate the peel (as in marmalade), it would take mountains of dyed orange peel to have any effect.

Although the FDA requires that the use of dyes be disclosed, few supermarkets post notices. Of course, to be safe, avoid eating orange peels.

Late-calving, poor performing cows should be culled open soon

Farmers and ranchers who haven't already culled open, late-calving and poor performing cows should do so soon.

There's no need to put expensive winter feed into cows that are unproductive and inefficient. Culling the cow herd now will also help you more effectively plan feed supplies for the winter months.

The culling process also should "weed out" cows with bad eyes, udders or feet and legs.

Also, pregnancy testing cows this fall may be a more profitable management tool than ever before.

Since it's difficult for a cow to produce a calf large enough to pay her anual maintanance bill and leave some profit for the producer, an open cow is surely losing-money. In addition, cows calving late and during the summer months wean calves 30 to 90 pounds lighter than their herd mates which calve early.

Whoever does the pregnancy diagnosis (usually your veterinarian) will be able to estimate the calving date on each animal and make it easy to identify next year's late-calving cows. Work toward a 60-day calving season or one that's certainly no longer than 90 days.

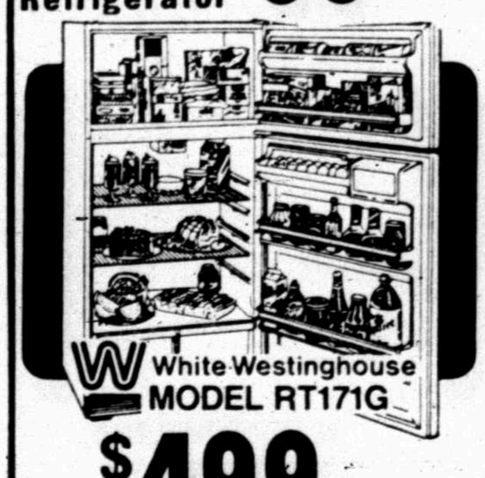

Removing barren and late-calving cows from the herd will increase both the herd's reproductive potential and pounds of calf weaned.

The Midland County Landscape & Turf Committee has planned an educational meeting on fall plantings for the home landscape. The meeting is scheduled to begin 9 a.m. Saturday at La Casa Verde Nursery, 2615 N. Midland Drive. At 10 a.m. everyone will travel to Oak Lawn Park, where Lin Boch, grounds superintendent, will show how fall planting of shrubs have been utilized in the landscape. He also will discuss fall maintenance procedures. There will be a time for questions and answers. The program will conclude by 11 a.m. Everyone is invited to attend.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Grief often part of unemployment

By JIM MAY

DEAR COPING: The job my wife held was very demanding and difficult and she was not very happy with her situation. In one sense the end of that job was a relief to me, but now it seems to have drained her of her confidence and left her depressed.

At first she was angry about the loss of her job and now she is full of self-doubt. The longer she looks for another position without any real success, the stronger the self-doubt seems to be becoming.

I don't know what I should do to cheer her up. Is it normal for people to feel like this over the loss of a job? — CONCERNED HUSBAND

DEAR CONCERNED: Yes. The loss of a job by a professional is a traumatic event even if they did not like the job. The feelings of a strong sense of loss of self-esteem are well documented in the literature.

However, women in general do tend to handle such losses better than men. In fact, some research found the stress level among women experiencing job loss was even lower than that of those women who were still unemployed.

Some researchers have speculated that this may be due to the fact that women have the alternative role of mother available to them and thus women can more readily accept being out of work. Other researchers point to the well-documented stress that professional women often experience as a result of role conflicts, thus the loss of her job tends to reduce this stress.

As your letter demonstrates, the research does not always apply to a specific case. Since your wife is continuing to experience the normal feelings of guilt, anger and loss of self-esteem typically associated with job loss, I would suggest that you help her address those feelings.

You might also consider encouraging her to enroll in an unemployment workshop in order to help her to find another job. You sound like a solid partner, be with her through this process as you would if she had lost a good friend. Help her to express and experience her grief. Good luck.

DEAR COPING: I feel guilty for feeling so good about leaving my job. I took the job because it paid so well and I thought I owed it to my family to give them some of the finer things in life. Boy was I wrong. The job felt wrong from day one. It's over and I'm glad. — FK

DEAR FK: Your letter certainly demonstrates the deep influence of doing something that you do not feel is right for you.

In terms of taking a job that we feel is not right for us, one is often left with a feeling of entrapment even if it is of our own making.

What does your family think about you joy/guilt? The feeling of lifting a "weight off your shoulders" may be short lived without another job or some way to deal with the financial implications of unemployment.

DEAR COPING: After I lost my job I looked for some time and could not find anything that was right for me. I decided to go into business for myself.

While I was a geologist by training, I decided to go into an unrelated business area. It has proven to be an even worse nightmare for me. I have used up most of my savings and borrowed heavily from friends and relatives to open the business.

I just don't know what to do now. The notes are coming due and I am barely making enough off the business to just feed my family and pay a few bills. What can I do? — BUSTED AGAIN

DEAR BUSTED: Unfortunately you are learning the lessons of going into a small business. The failure rate among first time businesses is over 90 percent, so you have joined another large group of the population in a tragic experience.

One of the fundamental tenets of such businesses is that you cannot afford to learn while you are trying to build, manage, conduct, market and finance the endeavor.

I would recommend that you contact the Business Department of UTPB and see if you can get some business advice from them. They have a program wherein they will utilize graduate business students to analyze a business to make recommendations for a modest fee.

The lure of starting your own business is strong but it is very difficult even in the best of times. These are not the best of times. Almost every businessman in the Permian Basin is utilizing every ounce of experience and every resource at their disposal to weather the storm. Best of luck to you.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: Encourage your husband to meet with you and your minister as a first step. It is very common to be paralyzed and do nothing, but the creditors must be dealt with. Please let me know what happens.

Climate created by corporate social responsibility studied

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — Social reponsibility by corporations is something that can be brought about only by executives within the company, a joint university study on attitudes in the workplace found.

Texas Tech University marketing professors Van R. Wood and Shelby D. Hunt, along with marketing professor Lawrence B. Chonko of Baylor University, found in a recent study that the chief executive who wants his company looked upon as socially responsible must create a climate where positive actions by employees are rewarded.

The study showed that most companies neither reward nor penalize top-level employees for social responsibility.

"Our findings show that socially responsible actions on the part of executives do not affect job satisfaction, raises or promotions," Wood said.

Most chief executives also want their corporations to be viewed by the public as socially responsible. However, to accomplish that goal it must be made advantageous for other executives within the power structure to make positive decisions.

Matisse prints exhibited in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH (AP) — The exhibition, "Matisse Prints," will be on view at the Fort Worth Art Museum through Nov. 30.

The exhibition includes 90 black-and-white prints and spans over 50 years of the artist's printmaking. A renowned painter and great colorist, Matisse was equally talented in graphic media.

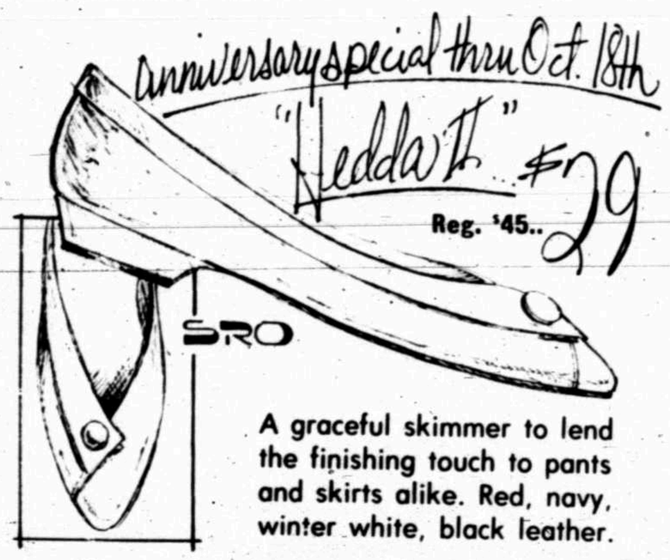

The exhibition shows his competence and originality in print media — drypoint, etching, lithography, linoleum cut, monotype and aquatint.

DEAR ABBY

Girlfriend disloyal

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've been dating this girl for two years and I am very much in love with her. She claims to love me, too, but last June she went back to her hometown to visit her family, and before she left we promised to be faithful to each other (no sex with anybody else). I was worried because her ex-boyfriend lives there and they are still in contact with each other.

Well, I kept my end of the bargain, but when she got back she told me right away that she didn't keep her end of it. She said she was sorry it happened, she couldn't help it, and she begged me to forgive her. I forgave her, but I did a dumb thing and asked her who was the better lover — him or me.

At first she said she didn't know. Then she said if she could combine the two of us, we would make the perfect lover!

Now she's planning to go home for Thanksgiving, and I'm worried that she might see her old boyfriend again. Should I tell her that if she sees him again it's over between us? I really love this girl and don't want to lose her. — TORMENTED

DEAR TORMENTED: Never ask a question if you think you might not like the answer. Apparently your girlfriend is not as devoted to you as you are to her. You don't "own" her; she's free to make her own choices, but if you want a one-man woman, keep looking. She's not it.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am a mature 20-year-old college girl and my problem is my parents. They think that just because they are paying for my education and letting me live at home rent-free, they can run my life. I'm not a child anymore, and if I want to stay out all night, or spend a weekend with my boyfriend, it's none of their business.

Last year they didn't like the hours I kept, so they told me to move out. I moved, but I couldn't make it (financially) on my own, so I asked them to let me move back home. Now that I'm back, they're hassling me again about the hours I keep.

Parents owe their children an education and a place to live. I didn't ask to be born; now they refuse to take care of me. They also said if I fall behind in my car payments again, they will let me lose my car, and I can take the bus. Abby, my parents can well afford to make my car payments. They are far from poor.

I have a part-time job and buy all my own clothes, which takes every dime I make. My boyfriend is ready to break up with me because I can't spend a night or a weekend with him. Please help me. My parents are ruining my life. — DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Where is it written that parents owe their children a college education and free room and board? A person of any age who lives at home must live according to the house rules. Furthermore, I would question the motives of a boyfriend who would break up with me if I couldn't spend a night or weekend with him.

Count your blessings, my dear. In addition to material things, your parents obviously care for you. A lot of children wish they had it so good.

DEAR ABBY: This is probably a stupid question, but here goes: What makes America great? — LARRY

DEAR LARRY: It's freedom. Because if you think it's not really great here, you are free to openly say so — and free to move where you think life might be better.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the woman whose daughter-in-law let her sterling silver heirloom tea service tarnish. The mother-in-law was uncertain as to whether she should tell her son to tell his wife to polish it.

Your advice to this woman should have been, "Tell your son to polish it himself!" After all, Abby, it's his family's heirloom. Where is it written that women are the only ones who can polish silver? I am sick of this sexist garbage. — LIBERATED IN INDIANA

DEAR LIBERATED: Begging your pardon, but no one — not mother, mother-in-law, friend or relative — has the right to go into the home of others and tell them to polish their silver.

DEAR ABBY: My son sent invitations to his college graduation and received some very lovely gifts. The graduation was held recently, and he did not graduate with his class. He was short a few credits, which he is making up, and will graduate at the end of next quarter.

Should he keep his graduation gifts or return them? — PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: He should write thank-you notes explaining that he did not graduate with his class, but will graduate at the end of next quarter, then ask the donors what to do about their gifts. I am sure he will be told to keep them. That way he will score high marks for both integrity and good manners.

ASK DR. RUTH

Husband roams

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Westheimer

Q. I found out my husband has been seeing another woman for a year.

He tells me to go along with it because he may lose interest in her.

How long should I wait before I lower the boom? I need your answer in print so this bird-brain can see what he sounds like.

A. No problem! I want you to know that in my private practice I hear such questions very often.

Should a blatant infidelity be countenanced? Unless there are compelling reasons, that you have not confided here, tell him no.

Tell him cut it out or you leave.

Are you supposed to wait around indefinitely in case he gets tired of going to bed with her? If he agrees to cut it out, if you agree to stay with him on those terms, make up your mind to forgive him.

And after that, don't bring his infidelity up every time you have a fight.

Q. Where can I get the latest information on sexually transmitted diseases?

I am sexually active with a few men who have a lot of one-night stands. I am too young to be tied down to one guy, and marriage is a long way off for me, but I'm afraid of catching something. Please answer quickly.

A. Don't rush me! OK, no matter how young you are you can catch a wide variety of sexually transmitted diseases through heterosexual promiscuity.

If you keep on with your present attitude and behavior, you will, sooner or later, need treatment for at least one of them.

There is one thing you can do. You can make sure that the man wears a condom. This is a pretty good barrier against certain infections — not all, though.

To find out more, go now to a clinic and have a thorough checkup and take home whatever pamphlets are on hand there, and ask where you can get the latest published information.

'Target heart rate zone' exercised-induced pulse rate

NEW YORK (AP) — You may have heard about it, but do you really know what a target heart rate zone is?

It's the exercise-induced pulse rate need to improve your heart's fitness. Your target zone is 60 percent to 75 percent of your maximum heart rate in beats per second, says Better Homes and Gardens.

The maximum heart rate varies by individual. The surest way to find out is to take an exercise stress test, which often costs about $150. A less accurate but less expensive and more convenient way is to subtract your age from 220, a number based on studies of large populations. Multiply your result by 0.6 and 0.75 to get the minimum and maximum heart rates you should aim for.

Uncontrolled eye spasms relieved by only one medication

BOSTON (AP) — Mary Sousa's eyes involuntarily shut every few seconds, and the effort to keep them open long enough to cross the room exhausts her.

"By evening I can do nothing but go to bed with a scarf over my head to cover my eyes. It's miserable," said Mrs. Sousa, 76, of Somerville, as she struggled to control her blinking eyes.

She is one of thousands of victims of a neurological disorder who are suffering renewed facial spasms because the experimental drug they had been taking was shelved when its maker could not get liability insurance while awaiting approval of the drug by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Many victims are going outside of the United States to find the drug, two Harvard Medical School researchers said Tuesday.

"These patients are so desperate they will go to virtually any lengths to get the problem cured," said Dr. Daniel Townsend, who held a news conference at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary with his colleague, Dr. Gary E. Borodic, and three of their 130 patients to publicize the problem.

The disorder, called blepharospasm, causes involuntary muscle spasms that can force eyes shut, contort faces and render victims speechless.

The cause is unclear, but the drug created from the botulism toxin is the only medication that can give relief to the estimated 50,000 people who suffer from the affliction in the United States, Townsend said.

However, the medication's maker, San Francisco ophthalmologist Alan B. Scott, stopped distributing the drug this past spring to 250 doctors who were using it in clinical trials.

Scott, associate director of the Smith-Kettlewell Eye Research Foundation, told the doctors he could not find liability insurance while awaiting final Food and Drug Administration approval for the treatment.

"The application is sitting on somebody's desk while a great many people are suffering intolerably," said Dr. Thomas Crowe, 73, a Northampton radiologist who retired 10 years ago because of his involuntary blinking.

Crowe is one of 2,000 patients who have written appeals to the FDA and Congress to speed approval of the drug.

The FDA has said it cannot comment on drugs under investigation, but in a form letter to patients the agency said it sympathized with them and was willing to continue working with Scott.

The drug, Oculinum, is made from botulinum A toxin, the deadly substance that can poison food. Oculinum paralyzes the nerves that contract involuntarily.

Patients say they feel the effects minutes after injections around their eyes, and the only side effects are tiny bruises where the injections are made, drooping eyelids and slight tearing.

Under Scott's supervision, the drug has been used to treat more than 2,300 victims of blepharospasm. It also has been used to treat people suffering from crossed eyes and muscle spasms in the neck, vocal cords, face, jaw, fingers and limbs.

Rita Bannister of Woburn said she lost 27 pounds after her treatment stopped last May and the muscle spasms in her throat started up again.

Commissioner wants building shortened to comply with laws

NEW YORK (AP) — The city is telling a developer to remove 12 floors from a 31-story apartment building under construction in Manhattan because it is taller than zoning laws allow.

But the developer's lawyer says all 31 stories are legal and he will go to court to keep them in place.

The city Board of Standards and Appeals on Tuesday ruled to uphold an order issued in July by Buildings Commissioner Charles Smith Jr., stopping construction on the building.

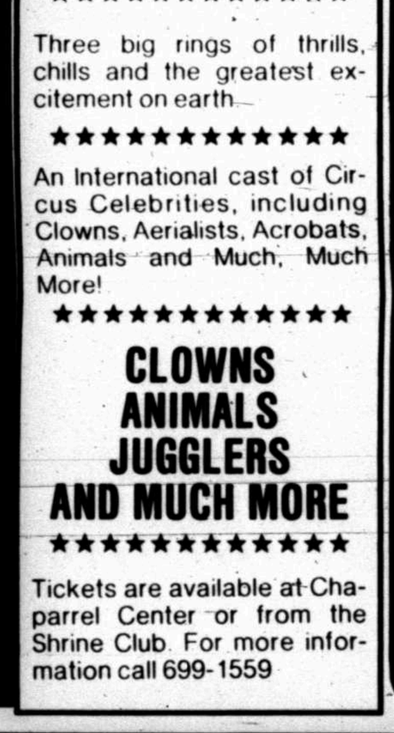

Smith said the site on the Upper East Side was within a special district that limits buildings to 19 stories. He said he plans to enforce the stop-work order and require removal of the extra floors.

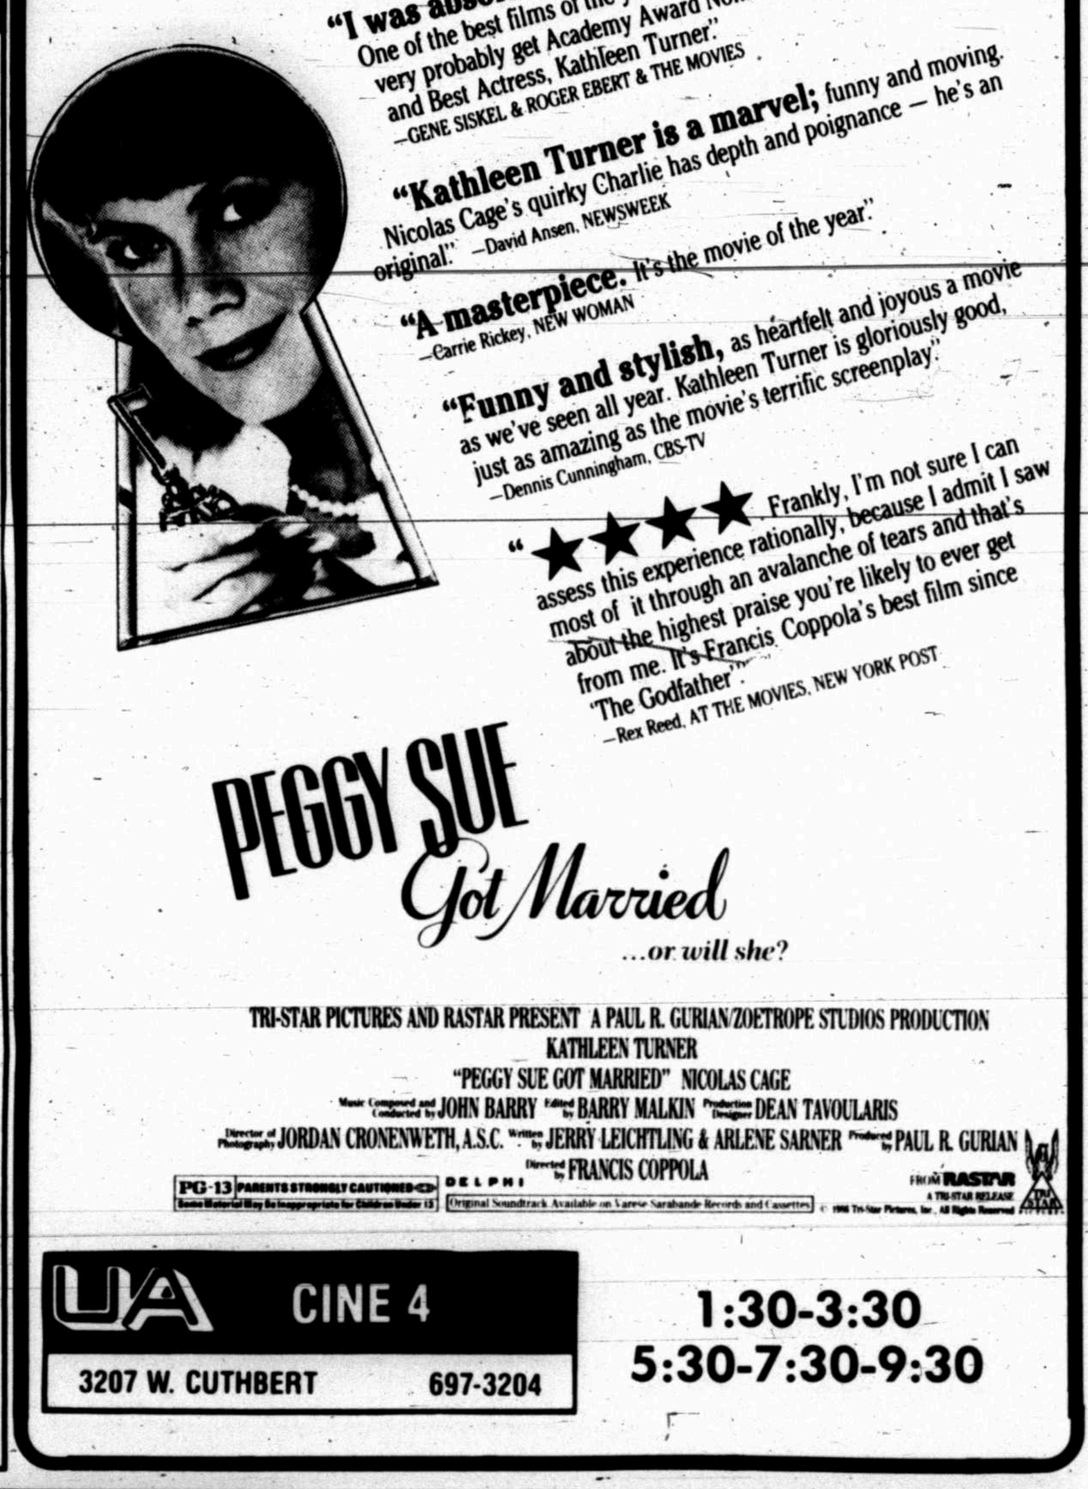

"We definitely will seek that they remove those stories," Smith said.

But Jay Segal, attorney for developer Albert Ginsberg, said zoning regulations permit the building to be 31 stories. He said he would also argue in court that if the zoning laws are ambiguous, his client deserves to have his interpretation upheld because he acted in good faith.

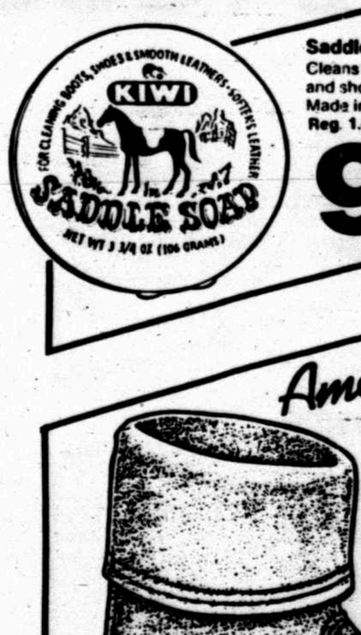

"It would be grossly unfair for anyone to say now, 'Take your building down,'" Segal said.

At retirement party, woman announces she's 81, not 65

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — When Clara Mari's co-workers surprised her this month with a retirement party commemorating 21 years with a department store, she gave them a surprise of her own: She announced she was 81, not 65.

"Only my children knew my real age," Mrs. Mari said. "It always bothered me that they didn't know at work...I'm not proud of it, but I had to lie about my age to get the job in the first place."

Mrs. Mari said she went job hunting in 1965 after her husband, a pastry chef, died of heart disease and his medical bills used up their savings. "I needed to work, to keep my home and not be a burden to my children."

"I applied for a job at one store and put my age and they said I was qualified, but was too old," she said. Later, the 61-year-old woman saw an advertised job opening at a Sample Inc. store and decided to try a new tactic.

Clara Mari

"I thought, what do I have to lose. The only thing I have to do now is lie. I had to lie because I needed the work, I wanted to keep my home. I don't look my age, anyway."

Mrs. Mari worked for 21 years as a sales clerk in the children's department, retiring Oct. 1. She revealed her secret at a recent retirement party.

"The owner of the store wished me the best retirement," she said Tuesday. "Well, I told him I had retired years ago, then I lost my husband and had to lie because no one would hire me. I said, I just celebrated my 81st birthday. They kind of looked at me."

"She was a real good worker, a very good worker and she doesn't look her age," assistant supervisor Mary Newton said Tuesday. "I guess she just decided it was time to retire."

Mrs. Mari said she was leaving the job because of her children's concern for her. "My children were worried about my working, with the cold weather and the snow coming. They didn't want me working any more — and I didn't want them worrying," she said.

Humorous mixup called 'Clampett case'

ATWATER, Calif. (AP) — A family moved into the wrong house, fixed it up and lived in it for 10 days before leaving town in disgust when the mixup was discovered, police said.

"It was an honest mistake. I call it the Clampett case, because it reminds me of something Jed and Jethro might do," said Atwater detective Bill Frost, referring to characters on the "Beverly Hillbillies" TV show.

Shawn Hoopaugh answered a newspaper advertisement listing a two-bedroom home for rent in Atwater, about 120 miles southeast of San Francisco in the San Joaquin Valley.

The house is owned by Maral Saber, an 86-year-old Russian immigrant who lives in nearby Turlock. She gave Hoopaugh directions and a description of the property, but Hoopaugh and his family mistook another vacant house across the street for Mrs. Saber's.

Frost said Hoopaugh entered the house through an unlocked back door.

After examining the wrong house, the Hoopaughs apparently decided they liked it, paid Ms. Saber $475 for the first month's rent and moved in.

During the first week, the family repaired the toilet, fertilized the lawn and made other improvements.

A real estate saleswoman who had recently sold the house called police when she discovered the family living in it.

When the Hoopaughs learned they were supposed to be living across the street, they checked out Ms. Saber's real house and said they didn't like it, according to Frost.

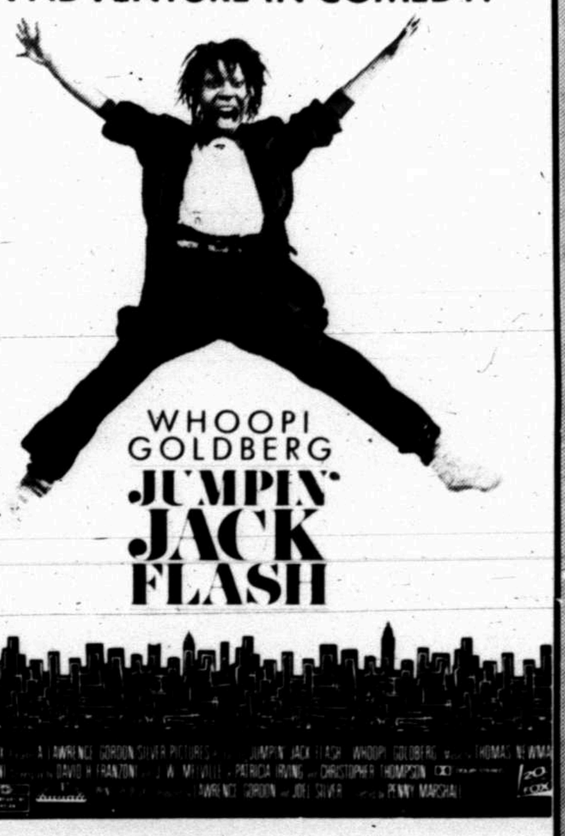

"They're kind of disgusted with the whole affair and they've since decided they'd just like to get out of town," he said, adding they left to live with an aunt in Merced.

LET'S TALK ABOUT CORPORATE PROPERTIES...
This Sunday, Many of our corporate properties will be featured on open houses, giving rise to the question, "What are corporate properties?" Simply put, they are homes bought by an employer, at an appraised value, from transferred employees.
While these transactions are costly to employers, they may save money in the long run because they enable Corporations to have transferred employees on the job, where and when needed, without the worries of homes than must be sold, and usually with the family units intact.
Some Corporations have "in house" departments to negotiate these purchases and resales, but most contact with banks or third party companies to handle these transactions. That way you may also hear these homes referred to as third party properties.
Because purchases of employe homes tie up valuable business dollars, and because each day of holding time adds to the costs of purchase, corporate homes are usually priced most competatively and are put in top condition so that they will resale as quickly as possible.
Corporate homes are among the best buys on the market; drop by and see for yourself this Sunday!
