Dole bemoans administration 'mess'; raps Shultz

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leader Bob Dole says Secretary of State George Shultz should be more supportive of President Reagan, even if that means Shultz shares the blame for secret U.S. arms sales to Iran.

Although Dole said that only Reagan ultimately can end the political turmoil enveloping his administration, he also said Republicans are finding it difficult to speak up while Shultz fails to do so. "It creates a lot of problems for a lot of us who trust the president and want the president out of this mess ... it was a mistake," the Kansas Republican said of the arms sales during an appearance Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation."

"But I must say it's rather difficult for us to move center stage if the players around the president are bickering among themselves and all looking for cover," he added.

Dole and other members of Congress continued to raise questions about the wisdom of the arms sales to a country officially categorized by the State Department as a terrorist state, while Reagan, returning from a weekend at his Camp David, Md., retreat, waved off news reporters, refusing to comment.

Shultz has emerged as a key target of administration critics, along with White House chief of staff Donald Regan and Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the president's national security adviser.

Without naming any official who should be removed from the administration, Dole suggested that Reagan act quickly to "remove some of the problem."

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., also appearing on the CBS program, agreed.

"... If the president really wants this to get behind him and not be further crippled ...," Bumpers said, "he would do a little mea culpa press conference and say, 'Let's get this behind us.'"

As reports circulated that some presidential advisers were pushing for the ouster of Shultz, Regan and Poindexter, Dole praised Shultz's past performance.

"But I think right now they ought to circle the wagons," he added. "Either that, or let a couple of the wagons go over the cliff." He stopped short of suggesting that Shultz resign or be fired.

Shultz has stated his opposition to the arms shipment operation and has said he was told little about it.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., slated to become chairman of the Armed Services Committee in January, said he thought it would be ironic if Shultz were to leave.

"I think the most unfortunate thing from the secretary's point of view is that he was out trying to persuade our allies not to ship arms to Iran at the same time we were shipping arms to Iran, and apparently he knew a part of that," Nunn said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

"On the other hand, it would be a supreme paradox if the man who opposed an action which has turned out to be, at least, a disaster by anybody's definition, was eliminated ...," he added.

Meanwhile, White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said he had no information on the reported push by some advisers for a high-level shakeup in Reagan's staff.

Dole said Regan told him he knew nothing about such an effort, which was reported Sunday in The Washington Post and Los Angeles Times.

"It's all a little bizarre, frankly," said Dole. The Post cited Reagan's close friend, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., as being sympathetic to a shakeup. But Laxalt's spokesman, Tom Loranger, said the senator "was not involved in any effort to change personnel."

First lady Nancy Reagan's spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin, said she had no information on reports that Mrs. Reagan had encouraged the effort, but that the first lady "was naturally concerned when her husband was being criticized."

Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten said he knew nothing of a report in The Post saying Attorney General Edwin Meese was among several people sounding out former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis about becoming White House chief of staff.

Meanwhile, former CIA Director Stansfield Turner, writing in Sunday's editions of the Post, said Reagan's decision to defer notifying Congress of his dealings with Iran had precedent in the Carter administration.

President Carter postponed notifying Congress of three secret CIA missions in Iran because disclosure of the information could have cost people's lives, Turner wrote.

City Commission to consider study evaluation request

Pampa city commissioners Tuesday will consider a request for evaluation of a management study of the Police Department and the city's personnel policy manual and appeal procedures.

The City Commission will meet in regular session at 6 p.m. in the City Commission Room on the third floor of City Hall.

The request, made by Pampa resident Ken Elliott, concerns the management study prepared for the city by Stephens Management Consultants Inc. of Canyon.

The study, reportedly conducted at a cost of $6,000, made several recommendations concerning the department's command structure, including one that led to the recent demotion of Roy Denman from captain to lieutenant.

The consultant firm in its report criticized placing a captain over one of the department's three divisions while the other two were being directed by lower-ranking lieutenants.

Denman, who has supervised the department's all-civilian service division, had his captain's rank lowered to lieutenant by City Manager Bob Hart in accord with the firm's report.

In subsequent actions after Denman complained about his demotion to The Pampa News, Hart suspended Denman without pay for two days for going outside proper personnel channels with his complaints. Denman's base salary also has been lowered by more than $100 per month, according to city personnel file records.

Hart also has indicated the city may implement other recommendations from the management study and has warned he would remove any "stumbling blocks" in the way of implementing further changes.

In a meeting with department heads on Nov. 12 Hart also said city employees who go public with their job grievances without going through proper channels risk a heavy penalty, including disciplinary action, suspension or even firing.

Hart, in an interview with the newspaper, said his ban on publicly airing grievances is "nothing new." He also said he has stressed adherence to city policies, particularly with regard to internal personnel matters.

In related matters, the commission will meet in executive session to discuss personnel matters regarding reassignment of Police Department personnel, according to the agenda.

Also scheduled for the executive session is consideration of contemplated litigation of a civil nature to which the city may be a party.

In other business, the commission will consider:

- approving on second and final reading an ordinance amending the Southern Standard Mechanical Code regarding fee charges;

- adopting a resolution recognizing the Steering Committee of the Community Awareness and Emergency Response (CAER) Committee as the emergency management council for Pampa and Gray County;

- approving on first reading an ordinance limiting the parking of vehicles on 23rd Avenue between Wells and Nelson streets; and
- approving two accounts payable.

Last of famed Route 66 signs are auctioned

AUSTIN (AP) — It was the end of the road for Route 66.

The last 116 signs that marked the famous highway, which now snakes across Texas maps as the decidedly un-romantic Interstate 40, were sold to a private bidder for $70 apiece Saturday.

The bids started out higher at the state-surplus auction of memorabilia from the highway made popular by a television series and a song, but James Tullos of Athens waited until the price dropped to $70 before raising his paddle.

He said he wanted the signs as "just an investment." And before auction officials could even finish counting up the number of signs he bought, he had sold three for $80 each to disappointed would-be bidders who didn't get their bids in soon enough.

Among bidders who didn't wait for the price on the 2-foot-square signs to drop to $70 was Cherry Tullos, James' wife. She bought one for $72 and also successfully bid for a large shield-shaped sign for $160.

"I was hoping for maybe four (signs)," Mrs. Tullos said after her husband's surprise purchase, which cost him $7,910 for the 113 signs he kept. "I would have been tickled to death. I'm not so happy now."

Brisk day in the park

The sun was out but the wind was brisk Friday afternoon. Still, that didn't keep 6-month-old Felipe Soria, right, and his sister Alex Soria, 6, from enjoying a swing in Central Park. They did bundle up a bit, though, to hold off some of the wind.

Nearly 200 involved in Aquino overthrow plot

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino's spokesman said today that nearly 200 people plotted to topple her government and that the coup plans were one of several factors in her decision to restructure the Cabinet.

The spokesman, Teodoro Benigno, said a new Cabinet will be announced in a day or two, and that two to four members, including Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile as earlier announced, were out. She had asked all members to resign on Sunday.

Enrile's replacement is retired Gen. Rafeal Ilet, 66, a West Point graduate. He said today an "informal investigation" should be launched into the plot. Benigno indicated there would be no severe punishment for the coup planners.

Meanwhile, it was reported that negotiators for the Communist Party and its New People's Army guerrillas have demanded that the government suspend acceptance of U.S. military aid during a proposed ceasefire. Chief government negotiator Teofisto Guingona said the demand, made by Romeo Capulong as a condition for agreeing to Mrs. Aquino's request for a Christmas truce, was unacceptable.

Benigno said about 180 plotters, described as diehard loyalists to ex-President Ferdinand E. Marcos and military rebels backing Enrile, met Saturday at the home of Antonio Carag, a prominent Marcos supporter.

Fort Worth site of new money printing plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department has selected Fort Worth as the site of a currency printing plant, Sen. Phil Gramm announced today.

The 288,000-square-foot plant will create more than 2,000 jobs directly and indirectly, said Gramm, R-Texas.

"This plant represents not only a vital service to the nation, but an asset that will grow in value to the North Texas region," Gramm said in a prepared statement.

The plant will be located on a 100-acre site on State Highway 156, just south of U.S. 81-287 in northwest Fort Worth, Gramm said.

"The Treasury Department's goal is to create a plant to produce about 25 percent of America's currency and to produce it at a site which will allow for easy transportation of the Federal Reserve banks in Dallas, San Francisco and Kansas City," Gramm said.

The plant will employ 200 people and will generate another 2,000 jobs among suppliers in the area, Gramm said. The facility also will act as a backup for the currency printing plant in Washington, he said.

Fort Worth will provide the Bureau of Engraving and Printing with a total of $14.5 million in land, city services to the site and electric utilities, Gramm said. Included in the bid was $7.5 million in private funding and $1 million in state funding, he said.

Temple: Fate of Texas' higher learning is in legislators' hands

AUSTIN (AP) — The fate of Texas' higher-learning institutions will be in legislators' hands when they convene in January, chairman Larry Temple of the Select Committee on Higher Education says.

"The jury is out on our commitment to higher education," Temple said Saturday in a panel discussion on "New Texas" at the University of Texas College of Communications.

The second annual Allan Shivers Conference was part of the College of Journalism's Sesquicentennial project devoted to the future of Texas in the information age.

Temple noted that the recent special legislative session made deep budget cuts, mostly in higher education, and approved only a small tax increase.

"When the Legislature meets in the spring, it seems to me, that it may determine for a couple of decades what we do in the economy of this state as it relates to higher education," Temple said.

Another panelist, economist Ray Perryman of Baylor University, said his 20-year economic prediction for Texas showed a 2.9 percent growth rate for the state, slightly higher than the national prediction of 2.7 percent.

"It is the response of the people of Texas that causes me to be optimistic," Perryman said. "The state always does a little bit better than expected. The people have a can-do spirit."

But Robert Reinhold, a New York Times reporter based in Houston, said he was skeptical of optimistic forecasts for Texas.

"The oil bust revealed very deep weaknesses in Texas' economy," Reinhold said. "Texas is still very dependent on certain industries and has no particular advantages to compete for new industries. The can-do spirit can help but you have to know what you are doing."

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, keynote speaker, said Texas is in a transition era where it must choose mediocrity or excellence.

"We are in the transition of an old economy that depended on natural resources to a new economy that depends on advanced technologies. From an economy that had little foreign competition to one that lies in a world of heavy foreign competition," Cisneros said.

"From a Texas in which job creation seemed to be a federal responsibility to an era in which the states are on their own and job creation is now on the state level," Cisneros said.

Pope John Paul II arrives in Australia

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Pope John Paul II began his Australian tour today, kissing babies, calling for universal peace and bringing cheers when he ended his arrival speech with the words of the national anthem, "Advance Australia fair."

Prime Minister Bob Hawke, other government officials and a crowd of several hundred people — mainly women and children who waited several hours in the hot Canberra sun — greeted the pontiff at the heavily-guarded Fairbairn air base.

The pope arrived from Christchurch, New Zealand, aboard an Air New Zealand Boeing 767. His two-week Asian-Pacific tour has included stops in Bangladesh, Singapore, and Fiji. He is scheduled to visit the Seychelles before returning to Rome on Dec. 1.

In Australia, he was greeted by a 21-gun salute and a navy guard of honor. He bowed to the national flag as he reviewed the guard.

Hawke escorted the pope to a dais, tucking his arm under the 66-year-old pontiff's elbow to help him mount the stairs. In a welcoming speech Hawke noted it was the Polish-born pope's second visit to Australia. The first was in 1973 as a cardinal.

Hawke said the pope's "great expedition" to Australia, a 7,000-mile trip that will take him to every major city on the continent in six and a half days, would daunt a man of less energy and commitment.

"You will meet openness, friendship and enthusiasm from all Australians," Hawke told the pope.

Help needed in locating burglars

By BOB HART
 Pampa City Manager

During the past several weeks, numerous houses in Pampa have been victims of burglaries. Most of the incidents are taking place in the late morning or early afternoon hours.

Two white males are believed to be involved. One is described as being around 6 feet, medium to husky build, with a receding hairline. A good description of the second suspect has not yet been obtained.

An older model red passenger car and an older model pickup truck have been observed in the area of some of the burglaries.

If you observe someone suspicious or someone fitting the description of the first suspect, please contact the Police Department immediately.

A word of caution: if you should return home and find that your house has been broken into, do not enter the house but go directly to a neighbor's home and call the police.

If you are already inside your house before you realize that your house has been broken into, do not touch anything and notify the Police Department immediately. The police emergency number is 669-7407.

There are many things you can do to reduce your chances of becoming a victim of a crime.

The first recommendation is to look at your house like a burglar would and ask yourself how easy it is for a burglar to gain entry to your home. Can your trees and shrubs conceal someone? Is your lighting adequate?

The Crime Prevention Officer at the Police Department will be happy to provide a free inspection of your residence and make recommendations on how to better secure your house or business.

One of the most popular and useful programs available at this time is the Neighborhood Watch program. This is simply getting back to the old basics of neighbors getting to know each other and looking out for each other.

Another popular program is Operation Identification. This is a program in which the driver's license number of the owner is engraved on the individual's property, thus providing an easily traceable identification number.

Upon completion of the engraving, the Police Department provides door stickers that let a potential burglar know that the individual's property is engraved. You are also encouraged to photograph property that cannot be engraved and to inventory all of your property. It is a good idea to place the photographs and inventory list in a safety deposit box.

The Police Department has engravers available for a free loan. Also available are light timers that will control lamps, radios and televisions at a predetermined time to give a home an occupied appearance.

The timers may be borrowed free of charge to use while you are on vacation. Remember to always lock your door, even while at home or next door visiting.

For more information on crime prevention programs, please contact Bruce Denham at the Police Department, 669-7407.

Off Beat By Cathy Spaulding

She's off again!!

Hello. I'm not here again. I'm back in Oklahoma City on the second half of my two-week annual vacation.

As you may remember, I took the first week of my vacation in July and I suffered through all that lost cat and broken air conditioner business. I cut that vacation short because I had to get back to Pampa in time for the ACT I banquet, thus missing a James Taylor concert at the OKC Zoo amphitheater.

Actually, I don't know if I'm looking forward to this vacation or not. No doubt, I need one. You try to work within five feet of someone who's trying to quit smoking. But, I just discovered, this is going to be a working vacation. Mom is finally flying that coop she calls home and moving into a new house Thanksgiving weekend and guess who's going to help her pack.

Add that to Mom's reluctance to cook a turkey (or make her famous carcass soup with the turkey bone and other leftovers) for Thanksgiving and I'll end up with a very untraditional holiday.

Then again, of late, vacations and I have had a shaky relationship at best. It all started last year when I rear-ended an oil truck on North Hobart Street, nearly totalling my car's front end and radiator. My Horizon spent the rest of November getting $2,500 of work done at the body shop and I found myself without wheels for Thanksgiving. Tom, Mary Ann and Carol Morgan solved that problem when they gave me a ride to and from OKC.

Things seemed okay when Harry (my jalopy) got out of the shop. I spent Christmas Eve at a fun party and got home just in time for the midnight candlelight service at church, where I picked up a spare potted poinsettia plant for Mom.

After a couple of hours rest, I left for Oklahoma City early Christmas morning so I could be inspired by the sunrise. As I drove closer to home, I daydreamed about helping some stranded motorist on the interstate.

Then, at the exit for a tourist motel 20 miles west of El Reno, my car chugged to a halt. I don't remember the details of what was wrong with the car. I just remember the trouble I went through getting the car to the nearby gas station so they could fix it. But to no avail; the mechanics had no idea what was wrong.

So at 10 a.m. on Christmas morning, I had to call Mom to come pick me up at this place 50 miles from her house.

A sympathetic passerby fondled the spark plugs and got the motor to run a little better. I gave him the poinsettia. But it was obvious I needed a fully qualified mechanic. Mom followed me as I chugged along at 15 mph to the Chrysler dealership in El Reno, where we left it overnight with a note explaining what it was doing there and could the mechanic there please fix whatever was wrong.

True to my nature, I allowed myself to be devastated by the whole experience. I did not enjoy Christmas. I did not want to enjoy Christmas. I wanted my damn car back and I did not want to go broke to get it.

Mom and I spent the next day waiting on the El Reno mechanic's diagnosis and praying it would all be fixed by noon and cost less than $250. The mechanic eventually called and said I would need a new something, which would cost $800. Or he could get a used something, which would only cost $650, but it would take a week to install it. So I relinquished my car and my self-esteem and Mom looked for an inexpensive car I could rent (and pay for) for a week.

I returned to OKC on New Year's Day and discovered that I had gotten so caught up in fretting about my finances that I overlooked the fact that my car and the repair work were still under warranty.

There was more good news that came out of the ordeal, but I won't make it public because I don't want Agency Rent-a-Car or VISA to know about it.

So, here I go again. Off on another vacation. I made sure my car is in top condition. And I'm leaving Pepper at home.

Dr. Duane Kraemer, right, and Sandy Hurlbut visit with Delilah, a lioness kept at Dr. Kraemer's country home near College Station.

A&M corrals lioness to carry rare embryos

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Even the untrained eye, it's pretty obvious that Delilah is not your average back-yard pussy cat.

First of all, she eats 4 to 8 pounds of horse meat a day.

And then there is the matter of her toys. No dainty ball of catnip for Delilah. No sir. Instead, she likes to bat around a big, fat, black bowling ball to keep herself amused during her lonely hours.

But more than that, what sets this cat apart from the pack is Delilah's role in the struggle to save some of her more exotic sisters from extinction.

The 300-pound, 8-year-old African lioness that Texas A&M University Professor Duane Kraemer keeps at his country home near the university is the focus of research that eventually may determine if more abundant types of exotic felines could serve as surrogate mothers for embryos taken from endangered species.

Currently, the research is aimed at developing a non-surgical method for removing embryos from cats. Taking an embryo from a cat without putting her through surgery is less threatening to the mother, a paramount consideration in dealing with animals that are disappearing from this planet, such as the Asian lion.

"We can't afford the stress of surgery when there are only a few individuals to a species," says Sandy Hurlbut, a graduate student at the A&M College of Veterinary Medicine. Hurlbut, who has worked extensively with Delilah, is developing techniques that may be useful in the non-surgical removal of embryos from felines.

Delilah serves as a good subject for the research because African lions are plentiful. "Most of the zoos are using contraceptives on the African lions," says Kraemer, an international leader in the study of embryo transfers. "They are very reproductive in captivity, and we feel she is a rather logical choice to act as a recipient."

Delilah came into the A&M fold as a cub a few years ago when she was admitted to the small animal clinic at the Veterinary College as a patient. Around that time, research was beginning on embryo transfers in domestic cats and there were plans to extend that work to endangered species. Because of that, the veterinary physiology research program decided to take Delilah when she outgrew the small animal clinic facilities.

It was no small decision. "When you accept an animal like this, you accept the responsibility for life," says Kraemer, who agreed to move Delilah to a cage the size of a living room near his home seven miles from campus.

Not only does Delilah have a healthy appetite — she eats about $1,500 worth of food in a year — her personality is liable to take on a peculiar bent at any moment.

For example, she likes to roar, a sound that is something akin to the howling of a bull. "And we have neighbors within hearing distance," says Kraemer.

Kraemer and his wife, Shirley, have grown used to the nightly interruptions, which can occur as often as every hour and a half when Delilah is in heat. "We always wake up and go back to sleep," says Kraemer, "It's just like having a baby."

If Kraemer and his colleagues can develop techniques for transferring embryos from the endangered cats to less threatened species, the surrogate mother could carry the cub to birth. During the three to four months the surrogate mother is carrying the cub, the endangered female could produce several additional embryos, which also could be transferred to a receptive female.

"Embryo transfer techniques are not going to replace the populations (of endangered animals) so that we have free-roaming populations again," Hurlbut says. "But it will preserve the genetic lines of the species in captivity or semicaptivity."

Kraemer has obtained three embryos from Delilah. Those embryos were frozen, thawed and then returned simultaneously to her womb to encourage pregnancy. Although the lioness failed to become pregnant, Kraemer said the A&M scientists were not surprised. "The embryos did not appear to be of high quality. No one has seen African lion embryos ... but these looked less developed than what we expected to at the time," he says.

Hurlbut plans to try to remove embryos from Delilah without surgery in the next stage of research.

Vandals ransack, burn high school

GARLAND (AP) — Vandals went on an early morning rampage through a high school, smashing trophy cases, ripping out water fountains and sparking a fire that did about $1.5 million in damage, officials said.

The Sunday morning blaze destroyed Garland High School's administrative offices, and school officials think the vandals may have used reams of paper from those offices to start the fire, fire Capt. Tommy J. Weston said.

It was the fourth reported case of vandalism in the Garland school district in three weeks, but school administrators said it was not clear whether the incidents were related.

Investigators tentatively ruled arson as the cause of the blaze, but Weston said he needed more time to probe the fire's source. No flammable liquids, paint cans or other incendiary devices were found at the scene, he said.

School superintendent Jill Shugart said school would resume today as scheduled. Assistant superintendent Marvin Roden estimated the damage at $1.5 million and noted that the roof had collapsed over some offices.

"Our biggest problem is that our administrative complex is destroyed," Ms. Shugart said. "We need to make some adjustments and regenerate some records."

The fire was reported at 1:01 a.m. by a motorist who saw smoke blowing across the street from the school in this suburban city east of Dallas. No injuries were reported.

In two hallways, free-standing drinking fountains were ripped from the wall, breaking water lines that flooded the area. In one teachers' lounge, typewriters were thrown to the floor and a refrigerator opened and toppled.

Weston said an undetermined number of vandals — apparently youths — got into the building through a second-story window.

"They turned a bike rack up on its end and used it like a ladder to get upstairs, where they broke in through a girls' bathroom window," he said. "It looks like when they got into the main offices, they started ransacking them and then starting burning it."

Damage at the three other schools hit by vandalism was minimal compared to that at Garland High, school board president M.D. Williams IV said.

Newspaper: Judge's accusers have at least 29 convictions

FORT WORTH (AP) — Nine women who have at least 29 convictions for drug-related charges, prostitution and theft will testify against a judge accused of coercing female defendants to have sex with him, officials say.

Six of the witnesses have been convicted of drug violations, one of felony theft and two of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

In addition, four of the witness have been convicted on more than one prostitution charge.

Of the nine, all but two have appeared as defendants in State District Judge Tom Cave's courtroom. The government's principal witness against Cave is expected to be a former prostitute to whom Cave once was engaged.

Cave, Fort Worth attorney Ronald Aultman and bail bondsman Joe Dorsey Adams were indicted Nov. 14 on charges of offering the women leniency in exchange for sex.

The men are scheduled to enter their pleas in federal court on Wednesday. Cave and Aultman have denied the charges, while Adams has refused any comment.

Cave, 56, is accused of soliciting at least nine women to have sex with him between 1982 and 1986. He is accused of having sex with five women and making sexual advances toward four others who refused him.

Cave's attorneys have said that because of the witnesses' criminal records, the judge's accusers are not worthy of belief under oath.

"Our trial strategy is to let the jury get to know both Judge Cave and his accusers," said defense attorney Tim Evans.

U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins acknowledged that the criminal records of the witnesses "makes them less likely to come forward and makes them less believable if they do."

The woman expected to be the government's chief witness was convicted of prostitution twice in 1981. Cave said last summer he intended to marry the woman, but the engagement was later called off.

A federal grand jury charged that Cave had sex with her about 90 minutes before she was to appear in his courtroom on March 5, 1984. In that appearance, Cave refused to revoke her probation even though the state said she had violated terms of her probation, according to court records.

The woman was serving a five-year probation for possession of cocaine.

Another government witness pleaded guilty to three counts of prostitution June 9 and was sentenced to four days in jail. In February and March, she was arrested twice on prostitution allegations in 10 days, court records show.

Prosecutors tried seven times to revoke her probation for credit card fraud before Cave agreed to send her to prison, the newspaper said.

Donations sought to help fund holiday activities, decorations

With the Christmas season just around the corner, the Pampa Chamber of Commerce again is making its annual preparations for street decorations and other related holiday activities.

And that includes the annual solicitation of funds to pay for the expenses in connection with decorations and other materials.

Chamber president Norman Knox said the chamber again is taking the lead in soliciting the funds to replace some decorations, make repairs on the Nativity Scene and take care of other holiday related expenses.

"The Christmas activities and decorations are provided for the enjoyment of our citizens and visiting 'out-of-town' shoppers who help our economy," Knox said. "However, the most important of all is the fact that our citizens are showing they have 'Pride in Pampa.'"

In years past the chamber has sent letters to the membership requesting a specific amount as a fair share to help cover the expenses, Knox noted.

"This year, we are asking not only chamber members but all citizens to make whatever size donation they wish," he said.

Knox said there are a lot of expenses involved in putting on the holiday activities and decorations that perhaps most citizens don't realize.

In addition to the usual holiday season expenses — the Christmas parade, candy for Santa Claus to distribute, replacement of more than 1,000 light bulbs and decorations repairs — the chamber faces other expenses in the near future.

"We must continue making repairs on the Nativity Scene if we are to continue using it," Knox explained. "It will take several years to get it back into top shape, as it has been well over 20 years since any major repairs and painting have been done.

In addition, in 1979, the last time the chamber purchased street decorations, some $12,000 was invested, he said. He noted that each street decoration costs from $200 to $400 depending on size, design, quality and other factors.

"Since that time, Pampa has grown, and we have had to spread the decorations further apart," Knox explained. "Within a few years, because the wiring is becoming dangerous, we must begin replacing the lighted decorations that were purchased in the late 1960s."

Knox said such matters are causing the chamber to face expenditures that will run into thousands of dollars.

The chamber board has adopted a "pay-as-you-go" policy, so improvements and additions can be made only as the money is received, he stated.

"In 1985 we received enough money to apply $1,000 to decorations," Knox said. "This is being saved until enough money is available to purchase enough decorations to do some good and to get a quantity discount."

Knox said he hoped chamber members, businesses and residents will consider these expenses in determining the amount of their donations.

"Your enthusiastic support in helping assure a beautiful city during our holiday season will be appreciated," Knox said.

Checks should be made out payable to Pampa Chamber of Commerce Christmas Activity Fund. Donations can be mailed to P.O. Box 1942, Pampa, TX 79066-1942.

Knox said the donations are tax deductible as a business expense.

BECAUSE HE CARES...

Song lyrics often encourage us to keep a melody in our hearts. That's good advice. Happiness comes from within and the person who has a song in his heart sings from an overflow of joy.

James wrote, "Is anyone happy? Let him sing songs of praise." Our Lord gives us so much each day, and the grateful heart sings in complete confidence the words of Jesus, "In this world you will have trouble. But take heart! I have overcome the world."

WE CARE.

One of the greatest improvements in furniture over the years has been in the sofa bed—and the improvement has been both in the way they work and the way they look. There's more variety today, too, with good looking sofas that open into beds of all sizes.

One fault with many rooms are blank walls. If blankness is done with a purpose, that may be all right—but often people just neglect to consider decorating their walls, and their overall decorating effect suffers as a result.

Have you considered a small desk for your bedroom? It might be a good idea for both beauty and convenience.

Perhaps two of the biggest decorating words of the 1980s are "total look". To have a beautifully decorated home you must consider the total look in each room. If you need some help or ideas to achieve a totally beautiful look in any or all of your rooms, stop in and talk it over. There's no obligation.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Tear up trade pacts hyping protectionism

Treasury Secretary James Baker may well be correct in his belief that the recent national elections—in which Democrats took control of the Senate and bolstered their grip on the House—presage increasingly effective support in this country for protectionism.

Some congressional Democratic leaders have already suggested that protectionist legislation is high on their agenda come January. Unfortunately, while Baker may have diagnosed the political climate correctly, his policy suggestions amount to substituting bad medicine for worse medicine. As it happens, some good medicine is available, if Dr. Baker would but use it.

Baker's "solution" to increased protectionist sentiment is to urge Japan, Germany and other trading partners to "stimulate" their economies and to push their people to buy more goods from the United States. The kind of stimulating action Baker has in mind is not reducing taxes but printing more money, thus increasing inflationary pressures.

The policy wouldn't reduce the trade deficit (not really all that important anyway), which is driven by other forces, notably American prosperity.

If what the administration wants is more action demonstrating a willingness to open markets to free trade from other governments, its best bet is to lead by example rather than by veiled threats. Secretary Baker could urge President Reagan to take some steps that are entirely within his power to take unilaterally.

Many of the "voluntary" trade restraints imposed by this country's government—as on steel, autos and semiconductor chips—are the result of executive-branch actions rather than legislation. To set an example to other countries—and, incidentally, to serve notice on Congress that he will fight protectionism tooth, nail and veto—President Reagan should tell Special Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter to tear up any agreements with other countries limiting their exports that are not mandated by Congress.

Allies must pay fair share

The only people who might be more depressed than President Reagan about the Republicans' loss of control of the U.S. Senate are our NATO allies. The new chairman of the Armed Services Committee will be Sam Nunn of Georgia, who in 1984 proposed pulling 30,000 American troops out of Europe unless our allies assume a bigger share of NATO's costs. Here is a chance to make some overdue changes in our military alliances.

If the Democrats are really looking for new ideas, their first order of business should be to take steps to force the nations of Western Europe to take a greater responsibility for their own defense. While they're at it, it's time we got a bigger contribution from Japan as well. All this would enable the Democrats to cut the deficit without raising taxes, paring domestic programs or weakening American security.

The U.S. has been complaining for years about our allies' stinginess. The current allotment of responsibility goes back to the early years of the postwar era, when Western Europe and Japan lay in economic ruins. Given our wealth and their poverty, it made sense then. But though economic conditions have changed, the allocation of responsibility for defense has not.

We spend about 6.5 percent of our gross domestic product on defense. The other NATO countries spend an average of about 3.5 percent. Japan spends just 1 percent of its income on the military.

What they don't pay, we have to. Roughly half the Pentagon budget goes for the defense of Europe, and much of the rest serves to shield

Japan. The annual total for NATO alone is in the neighborhood of $150 billion, only a little less than the entire budget deficit.

Granted, we gain something from keeping all these countries free and independent—American security would suffer if France, West Germany, Japan or any other Western democracy fell under Soviet control. But the Europeans and Japanese gain even more. So why not split the bill according to our relative stakes?

Some critics think the answer is to quit NATO altogether. But it wouldn't serve any good purpose to let Moscow think it can prey on Western Europe without fear of an American response. And while the U.S. nuclear umbrella may not be a plausible deterrent to a conventional invasion of Western Europe, it certainly gives the Soviets a good reason not to use nuclear weapons.

Defenders of the status quo predict dire consequences if we insist that Europe either face up to its responsibilities or do without all those U.S. forces. Demoralization, paralysis and surrender would be the likely result. To hear the Reagan administration talk, withdrawing one American GI would promptly bring down the Iron Curtain somewhere west of the Azores.

Nonsense. Our allies may not always toe the Reagan administration's line, but neither do they have any urge to turn themselves over to the tender mercies of the Kremlin. Nor is there any pressing reason they should. Western Europe has more than double the combined economic capacity of the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact satellites, and only slightly fewer people. Even on their own, these countries have the means to protect themselves.

But they won't be on their own. The U.S., under any conceivable scenario, will remain the chief power in NATO, ready to come to Europe's aid should the need arise. Likewise with the Japanese. There's no reason we shouldn't be willing to safeguard their security, but there's no reason they shouldn't do more to help us pay for it.

The more honest opponents of this overhaul admit that our allies do far too little, but wring their hands over the risks of giving them an ultimatum. Unfortunately, you can't play poker without any cards. Western Europe and Japan ignore our grouching because they know we see no choice but to let them get away with it.

They surely would behave differently if we made it clear we mean business. Nunn's approach is one way. Its chief defect is that, regardless of what happens, the U.S. won't save money. If the allies agree to spend more, we are obliged to keep our troop numbers where they are now. If they refuse, we will pull out some troops only to redeploy them elsewhere. A better plan is to simply schedule the withdrawal and decommissioning of a sizable share of our forces, effectively compelling the other NATO countries to make up the difference.

All it requires is a little nerve and determination on the part of Congress. Maybe the Democrats have been energized enough by their recent victory, and by their need to recapture the White House in 1988, to stop acquiescing in this sorry arrangement.

Can't forget the Holocaust

This year's Nobel Peace Prize went to Elie Wiesel. This gentle Jewish survivor of the Holocaust has written 50 books on that subject—lest we forget.

He is most grateful for the recognition—not because of the prize but because it would increase his forum for keeping humankind reminded how unkind it can be.

"I have devoted my life," says Wiesel, "to a certain cause, the cause of memory, the cause of remembrance. Now I feel that I will have a better opportunity to say the same words for a larger audience."

Elie Wiesel and others are not going to let us forget the Holocaust.

They know that the world wearies of such painful reminders. Better, some say, to put Hitler and the death camps and the ghastly slaughter behind us.

But to forget the lessons of history could doom others to a repetition of that history. It is for them—painful as it may be for us—that Auschwitz and Buchenwald and Dachau must not be forgotten.

As Wiesel says, his is a "campaign against apathy; we must invoke the past to prevent future crimes against humanity."

It is not the same thing—but for the same reason—that some Americans want to be sure we do not forget Vietnam.

This is the first time in our nation's 200 years that young Americans have been "free."

And a major reason that our nation has not been engaged militarily in these recent decades is because we got burned so badly in Korea and Vietnam.

Again, there is no way to compare the agony of a Holocaust that exterminated six million Jews and a Vietnam police action that cost 58,000 lives.

Yet, we must make a conscious and continuing effort "never to forget either."

We must never forget that we sent our best young men with less than our best weapons to fight a pulled-punches war in Korea where the objective was a stalemate.

We must never forget that we sent some of the same generation to the other side of the world—to Vietnam—presumably to stop the advance of Communism. Though those same young men would be thrown into jail if they tried to do anything about the advance of Communism 90 miles from Florida.

These wars that we were afraid to win and ashamed to lose must be remembered. Only the dread of another Holocaust has a chance to prevent it.

Television shows are bad for the brain

By Chuck Stone

The '86 elections and subsequent political developments are depressing proof that TV has turned this democracy into a "videocracy."

It's bad enough that a national obsession with electronic images has caused test scores to decline and reading comprehension to wither, and relegated American students to the back of the cognitive bus among industrial nations.

A major factor in the recent challenge to Democratic Sen. Robert M. Byrd's claim to be majority leader had been his dismal TV performances.

I'm no fan of the West Virginia ex-Ku Klux Klansman. (If Kurt Waldheim's Nazi past is not forgiven, why should Byrd's former KKK involvement be shrugged off?)

But no one should ever have considered denying Byrd a position to which he is entitled because of his TV image. Patch him up with cosmetics, and give him speech lessons.

The November elections almost became a non-event after two of the major networks—ABC and NBC—announced they would not provide "wall-to-wall" coverage.

"The Election Night That Wasn't," read a tongue-in-cheek Washington Post headline, reminding us that if all three TV networks don't announce simultaneously that an event is happening, "It ain't happening."

CBS hung in there with "wall-to-wall" coverage and came in dead last in the ratings. CBS learned the hard way that "Greater than the tread of mighty armies is an idea whose time has come."

No idea has arrived with more irreversibility than the networks' concession that "Moonlighting" and "Matlock" must not be replaced by returns from Massachusetts and Maine.

ABC and NBC simply authenticated what TV really is and always has been—home-based theater wrapped up in a minstrel show inside a situation comedy systematically interrupted by animated Barbie dolls reading news stories.

Don't misunderstand me. I'm no print-media purist.

I've hosted two TV shows and appear occasionally as a guest on TV news shows. Like death and taxes, TV is a permanent certainty in our lives.

That historical certitude may be the main reason why the San Francisco Examiner is standing like King Canute before the ocean, commanding the tides not to advance.

Confronted with a catatonic circulation, the paper's publisher, William Randolph Hearst III, decided to fight the videocratic invasion.

Hearst struck a blow for liberty (and literacy) by saturating San Francisco with newspaper ads, billboards and TV commercials, all ridiculing TV as an apostle of ignorance.

And it is indeed. Studies document that the more TV kids watch, the lower their test scores are. The statistical correlation between TV-watching and low grades is almost perfect.

"Television is not too bad for your brain," declared one ad.

Another depicted two immaculately coiffed blond, blue-eyed Barbie dolls, with the caption, "These people have everything it takes to be an award-winning TV news team."

My favorite is the billboard that laments: "A TV writer is an oxymoron."

But Hearst won't win his battle. He picked the worst of all possible cities for his stand against the invasion of the videocrats.

If any one American city is fastidiously dedicated to total immersion of the senses in 24-hour hedonism, it is this charismatic Gomorrah by the Bay, where reading is slowly disappearing as one of the last treasures of our civilization.

But at least we can thank William Randolph Hearst III for alerting us to the tragic shift from learning by reading to enjoying by watching and reminding us that TV "cannot raise your intelligents."

U.S. officials gratified by foiling of rebellion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government praised the foiling of an apparent coup attempt in the Philippines, and the chairman of a House foreign affairs panel said President Corason Aquino emerged in "a much stronger position."

"We are pleased that this reported coup attempt failed," State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said Sunday in reiterating the Reagan administration's "strong and unequivocal support" for Mrs. Aquino.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., said exposure of the plot and the showing of military might to stabilize Mrs. Aquino's government "clearly pulled the rug out from under" Juan Ponce Enrile, the defense minister.

Enrile was fired Sunday, along with the rest of Mrs. Aquino's cabinet. The dismissals came after weeks of rumors that Enrile's men were plotting a coup against Mrs. Aquino.

Armed Forces chief, Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, deployed troops Saturday night, stopping forces backed by ex-President Ferdinand E. Marcos and some "elements of the military" from what he said were plans to set up a government to rival Mrs. Aquino's.

"It leaves President Aquino in a much stronger position today than she was yesterday," Solarz, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs, said in a telephone interview. "By taking this bold and decisive action, she's demonstrated quite clearly that she's the one who's in charge of the government."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., the outgoing chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the resignations of the Philippine cabinet members give Mrs. Aquino a chance to start fresh to build a stronger government.

"It's absolutely critical for the Philippines and for us in the United States that she succeed in moving ... on to the ratification of a constitution, the election of the parliament and the people at the local levels," Lugar said.

Mrs. Aquino has scheduled a plebiscite to ratify a new constitution and a legislative election early in the year, with local elections to follow.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who will head the Senate Armed Forces Committee in the 100th Congress convening in January, said Enrile's public criticism of Mrs. Aquino had discouraged potential investors.

"There's not going to be the kind of investment they need in the economy so long as she has people undercutting her," he said during an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Nunn said the Philippine military now "has to be reorganized, the military has to gain the confidence of the people."

Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., appearing on the same program, said he believes Mrs. Aquino will receive support both in the United States and the Philippines for her decisive action.

"One of the beautiful things about President Aquino is that she can combine love and compassion in appropriate measure with toughness," Durenberger said.

Report: World spends $1.7 million a minute on weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nations of the world are spending $1.7 million a minute on weapons, a historic high, while one adult in three cannot read and write and one in five lives in poverty, according to an annual study.

Military expenditures in 1986, the United Nations' International Year of Peace, are nearly $900 billion, about 6 percent of the world's gross national product, according to the private report compiled by Ruth Leger Sivard.

Last year, military spending was estimated at $810 billion, and since 1960, at $14 trillion.

The United States ranks first in military expenditures. It also tops the list in arms exports, military technology, military bases world-wide, nuclear reactors and nuclear warheads and bombs. It ranks seventh in life expectancy and 10th in spending on public education per person.

The Soviet Union is second in weapons spending. But it ranks 44th in life expectancy and 48th in infant mortality. It is spending about $4 million a day just on the war in Afghanistan, where more than 100,000 Soviet troops have fought anti-communist rebels since 1979.

Together, the two superpowers, with less than 11 percent of the world's population, account for 60 percent of the military expenditures, 23 percent of the world's armed forces, more than 80 percent of the weapons research and 97 percent of all nuclear warheads and bombs.

Mrs. Sivard is a former chief of the economics division of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The report, which covers spending in both 1985 and so far this year, was sponsored by the Arms Control Association, The Rockefeller Foundation and other private groups.

The study estimated that the United States spent roughly $268 billion in 1985 on weapons, and the Soviets about $237 billion. The Soviet budget, which is generally disregarded by Western analysts as vastly understated, lists military spending at $22 billion to $25 billion.

"Not only are they (the United States and Soviet Union) the undisputed leaders in military strength but, with an enormous investment of resources, they have steadily pushed the frontiers of technology to new levels of destructiveness, escalating the dangers of conflict throughout the world," Mrs. Sivard said.

In a section called "Reversing the Tide," Mrs. Sivard records a single major arms control agreement in 1986. It provides for notification of military maneuvers in Europe, as a way of lessening the chances of surprise attack.

The summit meeting held by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Iceland Oct. 11-12 produced goals for "opening the window to vistas of possible sharp cutbacks in nuclear overkill over the decade to come," the report said.

But disagreements since Reykjavik, which included mass expulsions of American and Soviet diplomats, led to the conclusion that "visions of a new era in superpower relations seemed to fade as quickly as they had come."

"Weapons of mass destruction, on hair-trigger alert, now hold all of humanity hostage," the report said. "Enough nuclear weapons are scattered over the globe to kill everyone on Earth at least 12 times."

Of the 140 other countries listed in the report, the biggest spenders on weapons were Saudi Arabia, $28 billion; the United Kingdom, $27 billion; France, $24 billion; West Germany, $23 billion; and China, $22 billion. The figures for those five countries were for 1983, the report noted, saying they were the most recent detailed compilations.

1,000 stranded by washouts and flooding in Washington

GLACIER, Wash. (AP) — As many as 1,000 skiers were stranded today and this hamlet was cut off as rain and melting snow swelled more than a dozen rivers in western Washington, forced evacuations and cut the state's main east-west link.

It continued raining today in the area where as much as 4.15 inches fell in a 24-hour period ending Sunday afternoon. Compounding the problem was snow that melted rapidly in very mild temperatures.

About 50 volunteers in Bellingham, 33 miles down Mount Baker, prepared food, blankets and other supplies for helicopter or tractor shipment to the cut-off area that had enough food to last until this afternoon, said Kathy Bennett, manager of the Whatcom County Red Cross chapter.

About 1,000 people who went skiing Sunday on the 10,778-foot dormant volcano in northwestern Washington were told they might remain stranded until Wednesday after a section of the Mount Baker Highway washed away at the Boulder-Creek bridge west of here.

The grocery section of Graham's Store and Restaurant in Glacier was "cleaned right out to the walls, except for soap and other stuff you can't eat," owner Gary Graham said late Sunday. "The restaurant is still humming along ... (but) we're down to 10 bottles of beer."

Farther south along the Cascade Mountains, Interstate 90, the state's main east-west through-fare, was closed through Snoqualmie Pass, about 55 miles east of Seattle, because water covered the westbound lanes and a major slide blocked eastbound lanes, said Rick Daniels of the state Department of Transportation.

A few miles to the west of Snoqualmie Pass, 18 people were rescued Sunday from a popular hunting and hiking area after a Forest Service road washed out. Eight families were evacuated from homes along the White River east of Tacoma when the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers began releasing 7,500 cubic feet per second of water from Mud Mountain Dam to keep the reservoir from overflowing.

A 38-year-old firefighter in Salton in Snohomish County was killed Sunday when he was hit by a train as he helped evacuate a nursing home threatened by flooding, said Fire Chief Roger Knowlton.

Flood warnings were issued for the Nooksack, Snoqualmie, Elwha, Skagit, Skookumchuck, Stillaguamish, Skykomish, Snohomish, Cedar, White, Chehalis, Satsop and Cowlitz rivers west of the crest of the Cascades.

"We've never seen quite so much water out of the middle fork of the Snoqualmie this time of year, due to these past four or five days of precipitation," said Ron DeHart, spokesman for the Mount Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest. "It's really taking its toll."

Government offering new silver dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Mint, which has been swamped by gold fever for the past month, expects its new American Eagle silver dollars to be just as popular with the public as the its high-flying gold coins.

The new silver dollars, the first silver bullion coins ever produced in this country, were being put on sale for the first time today.

Mint officials and coin traders alike predicted a sell-out of the initial offering of 1.4 million silver dollars.

Just like the American Eagle gold coins, the silver dollars will be sold for the price of their bullion content. But with silver selling for a little over $5 an ounce compared with more than $380 an ounce for gold, the silver dollars will be in the range of more people's pocketbooks.

The mint is counting on this fact, plus a spill-over in enthusiasm for the gold coins, to boost silver sales.

"We expect to mint 5 million silver dollars by the end of the year. That is a lot of production, but we think they all will go," said Donna Pope, director of the U.S. Mint.

"Dealers figure if the American public loved the gold Eagle so much, then they are going to love the silver Eagle because it is at a price that almost everybody can afford," she said.

Like the gold coins, the silver dollars are not being sold directly to the public but instead are being sold to a network of 26 authorized dealers who then resell the coins to coin shops, banks and other retail outlets.

The dealers were to place their orders and receive their allocations today.

More high schools consider drug tests

AUSTIN (AP) — Voluntary drug-testing programs in the Belton, Longview, Pflugerville and Temple school districts turned up no drug use among student athletes during the football season, officials say.

The programs have been so successful that other districts are mulling over similar ones to use with their student athletes next year, officials said.

"The programs we've got seem to be working pretty well," said Eddie Joseph of the Texas High School Coaches Association. "A lot of school districts have gotten interested in the idea in the last few months. I think it is going to really catch on across the state."

Joseph estimated that as many as 100 school districts are seriously studying voluntary drug-testing programs for students in extracurricular activities.

The Hawkins school district opted for a mandatory drug-testing program for its students in extracurricular activities, and officials there say it seems to be working, too.

Joseph also said he expects the coaches association to endorse the concept of voluntary testing within the next few months.

"We're not saying there are a lot of dope-heads in athletics, but it would be naive to say we don't have any student using drugs," Joseph told The Dallas Morning News. "This is just facing reality."

School officials in the four districts testing for drugs report that 90 to 100 percent of their athletes are voluntarily participating in the random exams.

At the schools using voluntary drug tests, names of athletes agreeing to participate are placed in a pool. Every three or four weeks, a handful of names is randomly selected for urine tests, which are conducted by private laboratories.

Students testing positive for drugs would be suspended from their extracurricular activities and ordered to undergo drug counseling. Subsequent offenses would result in a student's removal from those activities for the school year.

John Blocker, athletic director of the Pflugerville school district where tests began this fall, said 240 out of 250 students in football, basketball and volleyball agreed to participate.

Ten of the students have been randomly tested and all results were negative. Another 25 to 30 students will be tested through the remainder of the school year.

Temple has tested a dozen football players this fall and none were found to be using drugs. All 230 players agreed to be tested.

In Belton and Longview, which are in their second and third years of testing, respectively, no instances of drug use were found this fall.

Two 15-year-olds held in rape-slaying

HOUSTON (AP) — Two 15-year-old boys who escaped last month from a state juvenile detention facility are being held for the rape and shooting death of a Houston woman after one of them helped officers recover the body, authorities said.

Police found the body of Cathy Lynn O'Daniel, 26, Saturday in an isolated area four miles south of Alvin, investigators said.

The youths were arrested Thursday in the victim's car in Greenvale, about 30 miles northeast of Dallas, said Sgt. J. J. Freeze of the Harris County Sheriff's Department said.

One of the teens told police about the slaying, and the suspected murder weapon was recovered in Alvin, he said.

Investigators planned to ask prosecutors to have the youths certified for trial as adults, Freeze said. Both remained in custody today.

The woman's body was found face down and covered with grass in an open field about a quarter mile from a dead-end dirt road, Brazoria County Justice of the Peace G.E. Webb said.

She had been sexually assaulted and shot several times with a small-caliber pistol, authorities said.

The victim, who had been missing since Monday, apparently was abducted from a service station in northeast Houston when she stopped to put water in her radiator, said Sgt. J. J. Freeze of the Harris County Sheriff's Department.

She was forced to drive the teen-agers to Brazoria County where she was killed, Freeze said.

Authorities believe one of the suspects called the victim's brother and told him that his sister had had an argument with a boyfriend and was going away for a few days, Freeze said.

The two escaped from a juvenile detention facility in Fort Bend County last month, Freeze said. Texas Youth Commission officials said they were legally prohibited from divulging information about the youths.

JOINT PROBLEM AND MUSCLE PAIN

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of balance.

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one side of the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms.

The doctor of chiropractic will test the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved. Perhaps some laboratory procedures will also be needed.

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or eliminated.

Zale finally agrees to Peoples tender offer

DALLAS (AP) — A takeover deal sweetened with $640 million in cash was finally enough to convince the world's largest jewelry retailer that a merger with Canada's second-largest jeweler isn't such a bad idea, Zale Corp. officials say.

After six years of offers and repeated flat refusals, Zale Corp.'s board of directors relented Sunday and said it favors the all-cash buyout offer from Peoples Jewellers Ltd. of Toronto.

Directors for Irving-based Zale agreed to urge their stockholders to accept a tender offer of $50 per share for all Zale stock. The offer comes from Peoples and Swarovski International Holding A.G. of Zurich, Switzerland.

"They (Zale's board) changed their mind because the price and terms had changed for the better," said Dolph Simon, Zale's senior vice president and general counsel.

He told The Dallas Morning News he could not elaborate further on whether Peoples' management had discussed its plans for Zale, the company's employees or its executive management.

The Zale board said it would recommend accepting the offer on the condition that the deal be closed before year's end so stockholders could take advantage of lower capital gains tax rates in 1986.

The Zale and Lipshy families, which together own about a third of the company's stock, have agreed to sell their shares. Donald Zale is chairman and chief executive officer of Zale Corp. and Bruce Lipshy is president.

Peoples already owns 16 percent of Zale's stock, so the company likely will be able to obtain 51 percent of Zale stock, as required for the deal to close, Zale officials said.

The tender offer by Peoples and Swarovski, a manufacturer of jewelry and crystal that is one of Zale's suppliers, was made Oct. 29 and had been further developed in recent discussions between the company and the Peoples-Swarovski group, officials said.

Zale rejected three offers of cash and notes that Peoples had made on its own since February. Zale's offer with Swarovski was the first all-cash offer made during the takeover try.

In February, Peoples proposed to pay $35 a share in cash, along with $5 of preferred stock for each Zale share. In March, Zale's board rejected a second bid from Peoples of $35 in cash per share and preferred stock with a face value of $7 per share.

In June, Zale flatly rejected Peoples' third takeover bid valued at $500 million.

Hightower leads Texas delegation to Israel

DALLAS (AP) — Israelis are growing crops where Texans can't, and a group of Texas farmers, educators and businessmen spent two weeks touring the Middle Eastern country to find out why, officials say.

Led by Texas Agricultural Commissioner Jim Hightower, the 41-member delegation was assembled by the Texas-Israel Exchange, an organization which aims to bring Israeli farming techniques to Texas farms and help Israel export its agricultural technology.

"There's a lot of interest in this in Texas," said Hightower. "What we've been doing isn't working, and Israel seems to have some of the answers."

The delegation saw demonstrations of dry-land farming techniques in the Negev Desert, where a guide explained how farmers could grow crops and fruit trees with less than 4 inches of rain a year.

"This concept is much more advanced than what we have in Texas," said Walt Horne, a Houston botanist and lawyer. "I've spent a lot of time in Presidio and Marfa, and a lot of this is directly applicable."

When he first visited Israel in 1984, Hightower said he became convinced that Israeli expertise in irrigation, crop diversification and farmer cooperatives could aid Texas farmers.

After a reciprocal visit to Texas from Israeli Deputy Agriculture Minister Avraham Katz-Oz, the exchange agreement was signed in 1985.

"I'm not sure Washington likes the idea of us running around dealing directly with nations," Hightower told The Dallas Morning News. "But it's the fact of the federal system that you can."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your public image is a trifle more fragile today than you may realize. Don't put yourself in a position where envious associates could take potshots at you. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you are a rather consistent person, but today there's a chance you might be both unduly negative and unrealistically optimistic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, try to get more out of your head than you do out of your purse. Don't spend money for something that you can acquire through shrewd trading.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You will be judged today by the company you keep. Be sure to select companions who will enhance your image instead of detracting from it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are handling a delicate matter for another today, treat it with the same respect you have for your personal affairs. Carelessness could be costly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is not a good day to take financial risks in areas about which you know little. If you are going to gamble, at least be sure you know the ground rules.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extremely careful how you handle critical negotiations today. You could win all the small points at the expense of losing the big ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You've inflated the value of an idea you've been toying with, but this doesn't mean you should discard it completely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Strive to be mindful of your budget today. Don't go on a spree, hoping you'll have funds later to cover what you spend now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be the one who calls attention to any faux pas you make today. If you do, associates will help rectify matters, rather than embarrass you about them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you do not put a proper value on your services today, persons for whom you work won't do so either. Misplaced modesty reduces your compensation.

Wilson students receive prizes

Students at Wilson Elementary School were winners of various prizes earlier this month at a special Parents-Teachers Association assembly.

The prizes were awarded for two activities: product sales of cookies and serving trays conducted as a fundraising project for the school and a perfect attendance contest.

The fundraiser was sponsored by the PTA to raise money to buy items for the school, with students out selling the materials eligible for various prizes.

Gaining the top prize, a bicycle, for having the most overall sales in the school was third grade student Shelly Dunn. Coming in second for overall sales total was fourth grader Robi Franklin, who won a VCR player.

Six students won prizes for having the most sales in their respective grades. They were Heather Petty, kindergarten; Valerie Noble, first; Clinton Smilie, second;

Scotty Henderson, third; Dwayne Oudem, fourth; and Misty Bardwell, fifth. They had their choice of a cassette player or a telephone.

Treated with a special ice cream party at Braum's was Mrs. Marjie Rogers' class for best total sales as a class.

Students also received treats for a special perfect attendance contest conducted during October, with two classes winning ice cream parties.

Coming in first with an 85 percent perfect attendance rate for the month was Sue Durham's first grade class, with each student getting a double scoop. Second with an 83 percent rate was Darlene Sokolosky's second grade class, with each student getting a single scoop.

All students who had a perfect attendance in October were eligible for a drawing, with a boy and a girl being selected for a special pizza lunch with Principal Ray Thornton. Each also won a duffel bag in which to carry their school supplies.

Boy winner was Ty Kidwell, a first grade student. The winning girl was kindergarten student Kristin Steen, who by pure chance managed to draw her own name from the slips in the box.

Third grade student Shelly Dunn checks out the bicycle she won for the most overall school sales while fourth grader Robi Franklin places her hand on the VCR player she won for placing second in overall sales.

Winning prizes for the best sales in each class are, from left, Valerie Noble, first grade; Clinton Smilie, second; Scotty Henderson, third; Dwayne Oudem, fourth; and Misty Bardwell, fifth. Dwayne chose a cassette player as his prize while the others picked up their own telephones. Not present in the morning assembly was afternoon kindergarten student Heather Petty.

Wilson Elementary School Principal Ray Thornton discusses his pizza dates with first grader Ty Kidwell, left, and kindergarten student Kristin Steen. The two students were chosen in a drawing to have a pizza lunch with the principal.

Opinion splits about boy who prefers bowling to sex

DEAR ABBY: Hallelujah! My faith in the younger generation has been restored after reading the letter from the 17-year-old young man signed "Opting for Abstinence." He said he has had sex, and thinks that bowling is more fun. How refreshing for a teenager to request more letters about barking dogs, people who are too fat, too short or were born on Christmas — anything but sex, for a change. You would do well to listen to him, Abby. SEVENTY AND SICK OF SEX

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Re the young man who said bowling was more fun than sex: Please publish the address of his bowling alley. ED REDD

DEAR ABBY: I think your column is a very interesting peek at people, their attitudes, insights, concerns and problems. I look forward to it daily because it lets me know that I am not alone. Sex is very important to a lot of people; that's why it's such a popular topic. Let's hope "Opting" will mature enough to appreciate its value. There is a real need today for psychiatrists, psychologists, priests and Dear Abby. Nobody else will listen. JUNE IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: I agree with that 17-year-old boy wholeheartedly. We are bombarded with sex in the media every time we pick up a newspaper or magazine. Daytime television is unbelievable. And some of those call-in radio talk shows are so explicit, it's embarrassing. My husband and I are in our late 60s, and we have turned off the radio many times and played Scrabble instead.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH DEAR ABBY: I have a message for that 17-year-old boy who says sex is boring and bowling is more fun. I have tried both, and sex has it all over bowling. Besides, you don't have to change your shoes. CHARLIE

DEAR ABBY: I enjoyed your column on whether gentlemen really do prefer blondes, but what's the big deal about being a blonde? Anyone who wants to be a blonde can be one in a couple of hours. I am a 66-year-old widower, having recently lost my wife of 40 years, and if you were to ask me my preference, I would say, "Give me a woman about my age with naturally gray hair." She lets me know that she does not feel the need to camouflage her real self. She's self-confident, mature, and not ashamed to admit to the world that she's old enough to have gray hair. She's an honest woman who may be interested in a relationship with an honest man. HONEST ABE

DEAR ABE: I'll bet there are a lot of mature women out there who have never dyed and are dying to meet you. ***

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

DEAR ABBY: Please don't listen to that 17-year-old kid who is "Opting for Abstinence." At 17, what does he know? I like the way you choose a variety of subjects. You deal with human problems, and sex happens to be part of being human — and a very important part, in case "Opting" isn't aware of it. Just keep on giving us whatever comes in your mail, Abby. We don't need censorship by weeding out the letters dealing with sex. OPTING FOR TRUTH IN DENVER

DEAR ABBY: "Opting for Abstinence" has a right to opt for anything he wants, but please don't change your format. I've learned a lot from your column over the years (I'm a 37-year-old married man now), and am all the better informed for it. I have yet to see anything I considered harmful for a child to read. Our daughter is 11, and she reads it every day. Your column has opened some healthy discussions in our family. Keep up the good work. H.H.J., SEATTLE

Pampa pediatric follow-up clinic to continue

Infants and children in Pampa and surrounding areas will continue to receive regular follow-up exams by Amarillo's Texas Tech Medical School pediatric faculty members without traveling to Amarillo for the services.

"These are infants who weighed less than 2,500 grams (5.5 pounds) at birth and must be watched closely for normal development during the first several years of their lives," said Dr. Mary Slater, pediatric psychologist in the Amarillo medical school's Department of Pediatrics.

This is the second year the clinic has been possible through a grant to the Amarillo medical school from the national office of March of Dimes in New York. Dr. Slater and Dr. Mubarez Naqvi, neonatologist at Tech, instituted the satellite program last year.

Dr. Naqvi said an abnormally low birthweight places a child at high risk for normal development.

"The child might develop into an academic underachiever or one who is slow to crawl, walk, or talk, or who might be at risk for neurodevelopmental disorders," said Dr. Naqvi.

Tech medical school at Amarillo has conducted a regular developmental program since 1983. Infants at the high rise of slow mental, physical or emotional development are examined when they are one month old, again at six months and 12 months, and then annually until they are eight years old.

"Some of these children are not seen regularly because they live a great distance from Amarillo," Dr. Slater said. "So we take the clinic to them. At least once a week we go somewhere to see babies that cannot be brought to Amarillo regularly, and sometimes we travel into the area up to three times a week."

Dr. Slater said the Golden Spread chapter of the March of Dimes helped obtain the grant. "The local office of the March of Dimes also has done a lot to raise local awareness of the program in outlying areas," she said. "With their help we have established 22 satellite clinics."

Maury Martinez, RN, satellite clinic coordinator, said clinics are conducted once each month at Pampa, Dalhart and Hereford. "The other clinics rotate throughout the area, with visits to places with the highest concentration of babies and children needing follow-up services," she said. Clinics are held in public health offices where the towns have them. Otherwise, churches provide space for the follow-up examinations.

Mothers facing what doctors call a high-risk pregnancy are sent to Northwest Texas Hospital for care by Tech physicians. Patients come from all over the Texas Panhandle and parts of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Colorado. The Amarillo has the only facilities to care for low birthweight babies within this broad area. Physicians from Texas Tech

Medical School staff the nursery. After mother and baby are released from the hospital and return home, sometimes many miles away, parents might find it impossible to bring the child to the Amarillo clinic as frequently as they should. Until the satellite clinics were instituted at the beginning of the year, only about 40 percent of families with children at risk of underdevelopment have been able to participate in the follow-up program.

Purpose of the follow-up program is to identify early any developmental delays and provide the right training and stimulation to help the child develop normally.

Approximately 90 at-risk babies are born in this area every year. Already the satellite clinics serve about 185 developmental patients. Faculty and clinic workers expect the numbers ultimately to reach 500 to 600.

Hogs take break, Aggies face Horns

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

Texas A&M and Arkansas are the only teams still eligible to represent the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day, and there's no doubt which team has the easier task this week.

All that 11th-ranked Arkansas has to do is watch while the No. 13 Aggies try to defeat arch-rival Texas Thanksgiving Day to clinch their second SWC title in as many years.

"I'm just going to sit back Thanksgiving and watch my TV with great expectations," Arkansas quarterback Greg Thomas said.

If Texas upsets the Aggies to avoid its first losing season since 1956, it will send Arkansas to the Cotton Bowl opposite Ohio State. A&M would go to the Orange Bowl against Oklahoma.

"I'm going to be there hooking those Horns all week," said Arkansas nose guard Tony Cherico, who dates Texas Coach Fred Akers' daughter. "I'm a big Longhorn fan now. Hey, I'll even suit up for them."

Regardless of Thursday's outcome, four SWC teams will be in bowl games.

Baylor, 8-3, defeated Texas 18-13 Saturday and will meet Colorado, 6-5 in the New Year's Eve Bluebonnet Bowl.

Texas Tech, 7-4, closed out its first winning season since 1978 with a 34-7 victory over Houston and will meet Mississippi in the Independence Bowl on Dec. 20 at Shreveport, La.

The Aggies defeated Texas Christian 74-10 and Arkansas blanked Southern Methodist 41-0 in other SWC games Saturday, and Rice upset Air Force 21-17 in the only non-conference matchup.

SMU, 6-5, is facing a possible "death penalty" ruling from the NCAA, which would shut down the football program for two years because of a former player's allegations of illegal payments.

Mustang emotions overflowed following Saturday's finale.

"When something happens at some other school, all I hear is that there's not enough enforcement personnel to go do anything," SMU Coach Bobby Collins said. "But when something happens at SMU, then they drop everything they're doing and they rush down here."

The Aggies, 8-2, who could have wrapped up a share of the title a week earlier against the Razorbacks, didn't allow TCU any chance of an upset, scoring on their first give possessions of each half in the offensive avalanche.

Kevin Murray completed 20 of 28 passes for 229 yards and two touchdowns and Roger Vick rushed for 104 yards and four touchdowns before the Aggie starters turned the game over to the backups late in the third period.

"I thought they would put up a fight but it was over after the first quarter," Murray said.

A&M's victory margin was the second largest victory margin, topped only by Texas' 81-16 victory over TCU in 1974 for a 65-point victory.

A&M's 705 yards of offense was the second highest in SWC history. Arkansas holds the record with 859 yards against Pittsburgh State in 1936.

Baylor's defense held Texas to 29 yards on 19 carries in the final two quarters. The Bears missed a scoring chance with 9:19 at the Texas 3.

"It probably ended closer than it might have," Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said. "We were there on the lip of the cup and we got some bad spots. But that happens in a game. We controlled it from start to finish."

Texas, which entered the game with a chance to play in the Cotton Bowl, now will miss post-season play for the first time since 1976, and they haven't had a losing season since 1956.

"Our players haven't given up yet and I don't expect them to now," said Akers. "This will just give us a head start on recruiting."

Houston Coach Bill Yeoman's next-to-last game as head coach was error-filled from the first play when Sloan Hood fumbled and the Red Raiders took advantage of six Cougar turnovers in securing their first bowl date since 1977.

"Pick out any turning point you want," Yeoman said. "There were so many gifts along the way, it was unbelievable."

Third quarter saves Houston

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers feel they escaped one of life's embarrassing moments in their matchup against the Indianapolis Colts.

The Oilers, who are the last team to have lost to the Colts, avoided a similar fate Sunday with a 21-point third quarter and three touchdown passes from quarterback Warren Moon en route to a 31-17 victory.

"You don't want to embarrass yourself at home against a team like the Colts," Moon said. "The whole team talked about it before the game. You don't want to be the first team they beat."

Houston improved its record to 3-9 and the Colts remained winless this season at 0-12.

"Very simply, we had more at stake than they did," Oilers cornerback Patrick Allen said. "If we had lost to them, it would have been total embarrassment. But we controlled the game. I felt comfortable from the start."

The Oilers didn't have a comfortable lead until the third-quarter spurt.

They led by 10-3 at the half on Moon's 4-yard touchdown pass to Allen Pinkett and Tony Zendejas' 34-yard field goal, but they had also missed two scoring chances. Houston failed to score from the Colt 1-yard line early in the second quarter, and Moon threw an interception late in the period at the Colt 17.

But the Oilers scored 21 points over a 3:42 span of the third quarter on Mike Rozier's 19-yard run and Moon touchdown passes of 35 yards to Ray Wallace and 8 yards to Drew Hill.

"Our team remembered last year and they came out ferocious," Oiler Coach Jerry Glanville said. Indianapolis beat the Oilers 34-16 in the 1985 season finale before beginning their losing string.

Dean Biasucci's 37-yard first quarter field goal accounted for all of Indianapolis' scoring until backup quarterback Blair Kiel threw touchdown passes of 16 and 37 yards to rookie wide receiver Bill Brooks over the final 36 seconds of the game.

"All I was trying to do was get some points on the board and make something happen," said Kiel, who replaced injured starter Jack Trudeau. "My job was to make sure everyone kept his poise for me to keep my poise."

Trudeau, who completed 9 of 21 passes for 51 yards, suffered a bruised shoulder in the third quarter.

"To put it simply, we got whipped but I'm not going to be critical until I've looked at the film," Colts Coach Rod Dowhower said. "We were flat on both sides of the ball. The defense was on the field a long time but it was a result of sloppy tackling."

The Oilers had a season-high 471 total yards, compared to 242 for the Colts, but they weren't able to capitalize on their advantage until the third-quarter spurt.

"This game should have been out of reach a long time before it was," Houston Coach Jerry Glanville said. "The important thing to emphasize is that this is the same team that beat the Oilers last year. It shows that we are on the way up. I don't know where they are going."

The Oilers opened a bag of trick plays that included a halfback pass by Rozier, and a pass by wide receiver Ernest Givins, who faked an end around and threw incomplete back across the field to Moon.

"Yeah, we pulled out the trick plays," Glanville said. "The Colts try so hard that we thought we could catch them out of position."

Moon was open for his first reception attempt of the season but Givins' pass was low and Moon couldn't hold onto the ball.

"I had a nice end zone dance planned and everything," Moon said. "That was my chance for the year."

A&M must win to claim Cotton

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The Texas A&M Aggies once again control their own destiny in trying to return as the host team in the Cotton Bowl for the second straight year.

They made certain of that Saturday when they defeated Texas Christian 74-10, clinching at least a share of the title and needing only a victory or tie over Texas on Thursday to earn a return trip to Dallas.

The Aggies could have earned share of the title a week earlier, but they came away with a 14-10 loss to Arkansas.

A&M returned home Saturday to hammer the Frogs on two touchdown passes from Kevin Murray and four touchdown runs by Roger Vick in a record-setting offensive display.

"We played today for that ring (SWC title)," A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said. "That's something nobody can take away from them. Next week, we'll play for the right to go to the Cotton Bowl."

The Aggies, 6-1 in SWC games, could win the SWC title outright Thursday with a victory or tie over the Texas Longhorns and earn the host berth in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day.

The Aggies amassed a school record 705 yards, the second highest total in SWC history, against TCU.

Murray hit his first six passes of the game and completed 11 of 12 in the first quarter. He moved into second place on the SWC's career passing yardage list with 6,249 yards and his 6,189 yards in total offense is third in the league.

The Aggies scored on their first five possessions of each half, completely burying TCU from the opening kickoff.

A&M led 40-0 at the half. Keith Woodside scored on two 1-yard runs, Murray hit touchdown passes of 10 yards to Shea Walker and 5 yards to Rod Bernstine, Scott Slater kicked a 46 yards field goal and TCU punter Chris Becker ran out of the end zone for a safety.

Vick scored two more touchdowns following TCU turnovers to start the second half and the rout continued.

The Frogs averted a shutout on Patrick Bradford's 3-yard run in the fourth quarter and a 42-yard field goal by Lee Newman.

"All year, we really hadn't played a game where all phases came together at once," Sherrill said. "Our players played very well in all phases of the game, offensively, defensively and in the kicking game."

TCU Coach Jim Wacker said he could find nothing good to say about his team.

"There were no bright spots," Wacker said. "Wacker said the Aggies played an outstanding game."

"No question, today they could have played with anybody in America," Wacker said.

The Frogs closed out their season with a 3-8 record and 1-7 in league games.

Murray's impression of the game?

"Boring, it was," he said. "We got control on the first drive and we didn't let up."

Sun Bowl picks Huskies

EL PASO (AP) — The Sun Bowl went out West to pick up half of its Christmas Day package, but the other half may not be ready for another week.

Sun Bowl officials were in Pullman, Wash., Saturday as No. 12 Washington overwhelmed Washington State 44-23.

As he stepped forward to officially extend an invitation to the Huskies to spend Christmas Day in El Paso, John Hancock Sun Bowl committee member Jimmy Rogers Jr., let out a little whistle.

"That's some team," Rogers said. "Washington is a Top Ten team. We'll probably have two Top Ten teams."

The invitation was accepted.

"I'm pretty happy about going to the Sun Bowl," said senior defensive tackle Reggie Rogers, one of 13 finalists for the Lombar-di Award, which goes to the nation's outstanding lineman.

Washington will be making its second trip to the Sun Bowl. It defeated Texas 14-7 in the 1979 game. At that time, Bob Stull was offensive coordinator. On Saturday night, he was head coach of Texas-El Paso in a 21-19 win over Colorado State.

The Huskies have no opponent yet, but they know the two choices — Louisiana State or Alabama.

No. 8 LSU already has clinched a tie for the Southeastern Conference championship, and its 21-19 victory over Notre Dame Saturday night may have solidified its lead in the race to the Sugar Bowl.

No. 9 Alabama, which did not play Saturday, closes its season next Saturday against Auburn.

Dallas playoff hopes dashed

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With one glorious victory, the Washington Redskins have enhanced their playoff hopes and put the post-season plans of the Dallas Cowboys in serious jeopardy.

Led by quarterback Jay Schroeder and a defense that belied its poor ranking in the NFC, the Redskins rolled to a 34-0 halftime lead Sunday and cruised to a 41-14 triumph over the Cowboys. It was the most points Washington has scored in the history of what has become one of the NFL's fiercest rivalries.

The victory improved the Redskins' record to 10-2 and kept them in a tie atop the NFC East with the New York Giants. Dallas, 7-5, fell three games behind the leaders with four games to play.

"Beating a team of Dallas' caliber means we should be on our way to the playoffs," said Washington safety Curtis Jordan. "We're rolling now."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry also likes the Redskins' chances of returning to the playoffs after they missed participating in post-season play last year for the first time since 1982.

"They're a team on the way to the playoffs," said Landry. "Whether they win the (NFC East) depends on whether they can beat New York."

The Redskins play in St. Louis next Sunday and then host the Giants Dec. 7.

Landry said that if the Cowboys are to make the playoffs, it will likely be as a wild card entry. "I don't think we have any chance to win our division," Landry admitted. "But we're not out of the playoffs yet. We have a chance, but we have to win from now on."

Washington dominated play from the opening kickoff, when Terry Orr forced Dallas' Darryl Clack to fumble and the Redskins recovered the ball on the Cowboy 30. Three plays after the turnover George Rogers scored on a 14-yard run and the rout was on.

Schroeder passed for 230 yards and two touchdowns in the first half as Washington amassed 336 yards in offense while limiting the Cowboys to 43. The Redskins scored on six of their eight possessions before intermission, including all four in the second quarter.

"I knew going into the game that we were going to win, but they really walked into a buzz saw today," said Jordan. "They're the type of team that can come back from 14 or 17 points down, so we knew we had to keep coming at them."

The Redskins did just that. After Steve Cox missed a 50-yard field goal on Washington's second possession, the Redskins forced Dallas to punt.

Field goal lifts Giants past Broncos

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

For the second straight week, Raul Allegre kicked a decisive field goal in final seconds. Allegre, who connected four times Sunday, made a 34-yard field goal with six seconds to go as the New York Giants won their fifth consecutive game, defeating the Denver Broncos, 19-16.

Last week, Allegre hit on a 33-yarder to beat Minnesota.

"It snowballs," Allegre said. "I was in that situation a week ago and made it. It gives you more confidence."

Elsewhere Sunday, it was Chicago 12, Green Bay 10; Cleveland 37, Pittsburgh 31 in overtime; New England 22, Buffalo 19; the Los Angeles Rams 26, New Orleans 13; San Francisco 20, Atlanta 0; Cincinnati 24, Minnesota 20; Seattle 24, Philadelphia 20; St. Louis 23, Kansas City 14; and Detroit 38, Tampa Bay 17.

Tonight, the New York Jets, who have won nine straight games, visit Miami. Bears 12, Packers 10.

The defending NFL champion Bears struggled with their offense once again, even though quarterback Jim McMahon started for the first time in a month.

McMahon, who won his 23rd consecutive start, was only 12 for 33 for 95 yards and was intercepted three times. He ran six times for 64 yards and was replaced in the fourth quarter by Mike Tomczak.

Kevin Butler's 32-yard field goal with 2:37 remaining won it for Chicago, which is 10-2 and four games in front of Minnesota in the NFC Central.

Browns 37, Steelers 31, OT

Rookie Webster Slaughter, having his best day, caught a 36-yard touchdown pass from Bernie Kosar 6:37 into overtime, giving Cleveland a season sweep of Pittsburgh for the first time since 1969.

Slaughter beat defender Donnie Elder down the left sideline and took a perfect pass from Kosar, who finished 28-for-46 for 414 yards and two touchdowns.

Patriots 22, Bills 19

New England lost seven starters, including wide receiver Irving Fryar, who suffered a shoulder separation in the game and a concussion in a car accident after leaving the stadium. The Patriots, who have won six straight games, also saw tackle Steve Moore go down for the rest of the season with a fractured left ankle.

Still, the Patriots rallied to win on rookie Greg Baty's first touchdown catch, a 13-yarder from Tony Eason with 1:40 to go. Buffalo had erased a 15-0 deficit and went ahead 19-15 on Jim Kelly's 31-yard touchdown pass to Robb Riddick with 2:50 remaining.

"Tony Eason told the guys in the huddle that 'If you protect me, I guarantee that we'll score,'" New England Coach Raymond Berry said. "They protected him."

Rams 26, Saints 13

Safety Nolan Cromwell had two of Los Angeles' four interceptions and forced a fumble, while Mike Lansford kicked four field goals and Eric Dickerson rushed for 116 yards on 27 carries.

Rookie quarterback Jim Everett, making his first professional start, completed just seven of 20 passes for 56 yards, was intercepted twice, and scored the other Los Angeles touchdown on a 4-yard run.

The Saints could have tied Los Angeles for the top spot in the NFC West with a victory.

49ers 20, Falcons 0

Don Griffin scored on a 76-yard punt return. Jerry Rice caught his league-high 13th touchdown pass and Dwight Clark extended his consecutive-game receiving streak to 100, making him the seventh NFL player to do so.

The 49ers' defense sacked Atlanta quarterback Turk Schonert, making his first start in two years, seven times and totaled eight sacks for 80 yards.

But the 49ers also lost running backs Joe Cribbs with a hip injury and Derrick Harmon with a broken ankle.

Bengals 24, Vikings 20

Cincinnati remained tied with Cleveland for first place in the AFC Central at 8-4 and dropped Minnesota to 6-6. Stanley Wilson had touchdown runs of two and five yards.

Minnesota played without Tommy Kramer, the NFC's top-rated passer, out with a thumb injury.

Seahawks 24, Eagles 20

Philadelphia continued its losing ways, dropping its fourth straight and allowing nine sacks to establish an NFL season mark with 73.

Rookie Bobby Joe Edmonds, the league's leading punt returner, went 75 yards for a touchdown with 11 seconds left in the first half. That punt return came just 62 seconds after Seattle's Kerry Justin blocked a punt by John Teltschik and Eric Lane recovered the ball on the Philadelphia 12 and ran it into the end zone.

Cardinals 23, Chiefs 14

Neil Lomax, back from a two-week benching, passed for three touchdowns, two to J. T. Smith and one to Roy Green. Lomax, who was replaced by Cliff Stoudt for the last two games, hit Green for a 5-yard score, and connected on 25- and 4-yard passes to Smith in the second half.

Kansas City fell to 7-5, severely damaging its playoff hopes.

Lions 38, Buccaneers 17

Joe Ferguson threw for 230 yards and two touchdowns and rookie Chuck Long threw a 34-yard touchdown to Leonard Thompson on his first NFL pass.

The Lions defense sacked Steve Young four times, intercepted two of his passes and recovered two fumbles by the Tampa Bay quarterback.

Ferguson sees his current opportunity in place of injured Eric Hipple as a key to his future.

"After this year, my future is pretty uncertain. I just don't know what's going to happen," Ferguson, 36, said. "I do know that I want to play some more, but I'm not sure where I'll do it."

Tyson proves D'Amato right

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Boxing Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Cus D'Amato was right.

Seven years ago, D'Amato watched a 13-year-old inmate at a school for delinquent boys spar, then told the youth that if he listened and worked hard he would become heavyweight champion.

"I thought he was a crazy old white dude," said Mike Tyson, the youth who moved in with D'Amato and became his legal ward in 1981.

Saturday night at the Las Vegas Hilton, the 20-year-old Tyson became the youngest man to win a heavyweight title.

In the 28th fight of a professional career a little less than 21 months old, the unbeaten Tyson knocked out Trevor Berbick in the second round and won the World Boxing Council championship.

"If it wasn't for Cus, this would never have happened," Tyson said of D'Amato, who died Nov. 4, 1985 at the age of 77.

"He was probably up there saying I made lot of mistakes," Tyson said Saturday night.

There wasn't time for Tyson to make many mistakes.

He hurt Berbick with a four-punch combination late in the first round and knocked him down early in the second. Then, late in the second round, he caught Berbick with a left hook to the side of his head.

Berbick froze for a moment, then crashed to the canvas. He fell twice while trying to get up, then finally regained his feet at the count of nine. But his eyes were glazed and his legs were wobbly. Referee Mills Lane wrapped his arms around Berbick and stopped the fight at 2:35 of the second round.

It was Tyson's 26th knockout. His 28 fights have totaled just 77 rounds.

Tyson got off 106 punches and connected with 59. Berbick was credited with 38 punches and 13 hits.

"He's very quick," the 33-year-old Berbick said. "He has a lot of power. I think he has a very good chance to be the undisputed champion."

Tyson's next fight is scheduled for March 6 against the winner of Tim Witherspoon's World Boxing Association title defense against Tony Tubbs, which is scheduled for Dec. 12 at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Then, under the format of the HBO television series of heavyweight title fights, the winner of the Tyson-WBA champion fight would meet Michael Spinks, the International Boxing Federation champion, here in May for the undisputed title.

Spinks was at ringside Saturday night, and he was asked how he felt about fighting the aggressive Tyson. "I'll give it a try," he said. "I'm willing. I'm not afraid of anybody. I'll give it my best, like I do every fight."

While there is more than one champion, there's little doubt that the star of the division is Tyson. The previous youngest champion was Floyd Patterson, who was 21 years 11 months when he knocked out Archie Moore in the fifth round to win the undisputed title on Nov. 30, 1954.

Martina Navratilova makes a return to West Germany's Steffi Graf in $1 million Virginia Slims Championship at New York's Madison Square Garden Sunday. Navratilova successfully defended her title and ran her winning streak to 53 consecutive matches. She defeated Graf 7-6, 6-3, 6-2 to win the Virginia Slims title.

Portland mauls former mentor

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Jack Ramsay, in his first appearance in Portland since being fired by the Trail Blazers last spring, got a warm reception and a sound beating.

Ramsay, who won the NBA championship in the first of his 10 seasons at Portland in 1977, received a standing ovation before the game, then saw the Trail Blazers defeat his new team, the Indiana Pacers, 108-95 Sunday night.

"This team is defending better than my team did last year," said Ramsey, who was criticized last year because of the team's timidity on defense. "They're better at the basket. They're a little more tenacious at the basket."

Ramsay was impressed with the play of Steve Johnson, who was not with the team last season. Johnson, playing center after Sam Bowie broke his leg on Nov. 7, had 19 points, nine rebounds and four blocked shots.

"The team I had tended to step away," Ramsay said. "This team is aggressive in crashing the basket. Steve Johnson is part of that improvement."

The Trail Blazers lost their first four games of the season, but have won seven of the next nine outings to pass the .500 mark for the first time.

In other NBA games Sunday night, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated Milwaukee 127-117 and Philadelphia outscored Houston 114-104.

Lakers 127, Bucks 117

Los Angeles won its ninth straight game and deprived Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson of his 500th victory by outscoring the visiting Bucks 69-52 in the second half.

Milwaukee led 65-58 at half-time, but the Lakers took an 88-85 advantage after three periods and pulled away in the fourth quarter behind 13 points from Michael Cooper, who was 8-for-10 from the field.

Magic Johnson had 23 points and 10 assists for Los Angeles, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 21 points and Cooper 20. Ricky Pierce had 22 points and Terry Cummings 19 for the Bucks.

76ers 114, Rockets 104

Roy Hinson had 24 points and 15 rebounds and Julius Erving added 23 points as Philadelphia celebrated the return of Charles Barkley by beating visiting Houston.

Barkley, playing for the first time since a spleen injury sidelined him Nov. 4, scored 12 points in 23 minutes. His dunk capped a run of seven straight points and gave the 76ers a 95-85 lead with 8:15 left after the Rockets had cut a 16-point deficit to 88-85.

Philadelphia, with four players already on the sideline, lost Tim McCormick to a knee injury late in the game after he scored 17 points. McCormick was to be examined today.

Akeem Olajuwon scored a game-high 27 points for Houston, while Jim Petersen had 19.

Colorado bound for Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Big Eight runner-up Colorado, propelled by a crushing victory over Kansas State and some help from Georgia Tech, has been invited to square off against No. 17 Baylor in the 1986 Bluebonnet Bowl.

Baylor, now 8-3 on the season and 6-2 in the Southwest Conference, accepted the Bluebonnet invitation after it edged Texas 18-13 Saturday, and Colorado agreed to come after it slammed Kansas State 49-3.

Colorado, 6-5 overall but 6-1 in the Big Eight, was benefited by Georgia Tech's loss to Wake Forest, because the Yellow Jackets had been expected to receive the Bluebonnet Bowl bid had they won.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff reflected on three close losses that knocked his Bears out of Cotton Bowl contention.

"You have to be realistic about it," he said. "We were impressed with the Bluebonnet all year. They said all along they liked our kind of football, and liked our team. We felt very strongly about them. We're going to go down and give them the best show we can give them."

Teaff said he was surprised Georgia Tech had lost and said of the Buffaloes, "They're not as highly ranked as I would have liked. But if we win, it won't make a lot of difference."

Colorado Coach Bill McCartney said he's grateful for the Bluebonnet Bowl invitation.

"When we were 0-4, we weren't thinking bowl," McCartney said. "Now that we're 6-5, we're grateful. The Bluebonnet Bowl, in my opinion, is one of the better bowls."

WHAT CAN THE NUMBER ONE IN ACCOUNTING SOFTWARE DO THAT A NO. 2 CAN'T?

Unlike the pencil, Open Systems™ accounting and business software can improve your cash flow, financial controls and productivity, a feature that can pay for the system by itself.

What's more, Open Systems—the best selling accounting software in America—has more systems to choose from. So you can find the one that best matches your business.

You can get started immediately with Open for Business, an easy-to-use full featured system that gives you immediate financial and business operations advice in special reports. It actually points out what your next steps should be.

For more power, you can choose OSAS™, a system that even lets you modify it to produce comprehensive accounting and business operations information in whatever form your management needs it.

And if you want a truly integrated, total business solution, there's Harmony™. It lets you link word processing, spreadsheets and data bases with your accounting. And it's not just pencils that can't match that. Most, quote "integrated" software packages can't match that, either.

So don't settle for a number two solution. Insist, instead, on number one.

Open Systems offers the confidence of 10 years experience putting in more accounting and business software packages in more businesses than any other company.

And they're all guaranteed. If you're not totally satisfied, we'll replace it with a better matched system.

Will you need that guarantee? Not likely. A remarkable 89% of our customers report complete satisfaction with our product.

So you can't go wrong. And that's more than you can say for any old number two.

So get off the pencil and on to the phone. Or stop by today.

Barclays National Bank's senior general manager, Jimmy MacKenzie, left, and managing director Chris Ball announce that Barclays Bank of Britain will sell its interest in Barclays National Bank of South Africa.

Barclays Bank pulling out

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Barclays Bank, in the largest divestment yet by a foreign company, is selling its last shares in its South African subsidiary due to financial pressure and anti-apartheid protests, the bank said today.

Local bank executives told a news conference the British parent company will sell its 40.4 percent stake in Barclays National Bank of South Africa — the country's biggest commercial bank — to a consortium of South African companies for $236 million.

Barclays Bank of Britain owned 100 percent of the bank in 1973, but since gradually has sold its shares.

The governor of South Africa's Reserve Bank, Gerhard de Kock, said the sale "is not expected to exert any effect nationally or internationally on the South African banking system."

However, South African bankers expressed fears it would spark a chain-reaction of divestment by other British companies, causing a loss of foreign capital and curbing the nation's already faltering economic growth rate.

About 60 American companies have pulled out of South Africa in the past two years, most recently General Motors Corp., Kodak and IBM. However, few British companies have done so.

In London, Barclays' spokesman Geoffrey Kelly said the divestment was due mainly to the poor performance of the South African subsidiary and unfavorable prospects for the South African economy. But anti-apartheid protests also played a role, he said.

"I think certainly political factors come into it," he told The Associated Press. "The lack of progress toward ending apartheid has itself had an impact on the South African economy. It is also true that the threat to our business in the U.K. and the U.S. is one of the factors, but not the prime factor."

Under apartheid, South Africa's 24 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and government and maintain separate residential areas, schools and health services.

Chris Ball, managing director of the South African subsidiary, told the news conference Barclays' action was not intended "to punish South Africa."

"They're doing it because they're under political pressure which is converting into financial pressure," he said.

The Citizen, a pro-government Johannesburg paper, said the Barclay's sale "would almost certainly be seen as a vote of no-confidence in South Africa from a company which has had possibly the highest profile of all foreign business interests here."

Direct British investment in South Africa totals about $8.5 billion, more than any other foreign country. Direct U.S. investment totals about $1.3 billion.

Barclays has said it will take the revenue from the sale out of South Africa. However, because the government has imposed a much less favorable exchange rate for financial withdrawals, the move will not cause a significant loss of capital or foreign exchange for South Africa.

Research: Complaining about self among most boring habits

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe complains about his life when he's not rattling on about some esoteric thing, asks a lot of questions and mumbles "uh-huh" a lot when you talk.

Jack keeps calling things "far out," tells you his feelings and just tries too hard to be nice.

Who is more boring?

New studies suggest it's Joe.

The research is among the first in "interpersonal boredom," a line of study that could lead to help for "chronically and excessively boring persons," researchers wrote in the November issue of the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology.

"We're all boring sometimes and we're all interesting sometimes (but) some people are more boring than others," said Mark Leary, assistant psychology professor at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C., who wrote the report with three students.

Harry Reis, psychology professor at the University of Rochester in New York, called the work "a first step in a whole new direction that we need to know more about."

The experiments were based on a survey of undergraduate students and analyses of brief conversations between undergraduates who had just met. More work will be needed to see if the findings apply to other kinds of people and situations as well, Leary said.

In one experiment, 42 students suggested a total of 210 things other people do that bore them, which researchers distilled into 43 themes for a second survey of 297 students.

That survey found that the most boring behaviors were banality, such as talking about trivial or superficial things or showing interest in only one topic, and "negative egocentrism," which essentially meant complaining about oneself and showing disinterest in others.

The least objectionable behaviors were "boring ingratiation," which meant trying to be funny and nice to impress others, and a mixture of distracting behaviors, such as going off on conversational tangents or overusing small talk or slang.

An example of slang is, "Hey wow, man, this was far out, it was too cool," Leary said in a telephone interview. "It gets a little odd."

A second study focused on five-minute conversations between 52 pairs of strangers. Transcripts were reviewed by 12 undergraduates who rated a randomly chosen person in each conversation for "boringness." That person's conversation was separately studied for grammatical form and communicative intent, and the results compared to his "boringness index."

The study found that more boring people tended to talk less. In addition, their conversation tended to have higher proportions of questions and of simple acknowledgments that they were listening, such as "uh-huh."

Farmers show thanks for hay with turkey dinner Wednesday

By The Associated Press

Drought-stricken farmers who received hay from their Midwestern counterparts will show thanks and try to publicize that their plight is not over when they feed a turkey dinner to 400 people in Pelzer, S.C., Wednesday.

People from at least seven states are expected to attend the "Second Thanksgiving" feast at the farm of Tom Trantham, who became a national spokesman for Southeastern farmers after he described his near-bankrupt condition on network television.

Trantham said the celebration is much like the first Thanksgiving in America, so it's been dubbed "The Second Thanksgiving."

Farmers from Michigan, Kentucky, Iowa, Texas, Illinois and North Carolina are expected to join South Carolina farmers in the feast sponsored by Conoco, a DuPont subsidiary.

"It's like the Cherokee and the Blackfoot and the Crow who helped the Pilgrims," he said. "It's the same concept, only it's the Iowans, the people from Illinois, and so forth."

Trantham said the help from other states has made the difference between bankruptcy and getting by for some farmers. The farmers will be eating turkey beneath a tent on loan from a man who auctions cattle.

"It's kind of ironic," Trantham said. "The man who could have been selling my farm has lent me his tent."

There will be no head table. "We did this together," he said.

Trantham said the drought has brought good people to the surface in the same way the agitator works at his dairy.

Illinois farmers say they are organizing a 50-truck convoy to haul corn and hay, with trucks arriving at Trantham's farm starting Monday.

NASCAR race car drivers from North Carolina who drove trucks to the area this summer will repeat the trip.

Motel owners in nearby Greenville have donated the use of more than 100 rooms for visiting farmers. A local high school choir and a band that made a music video about the relief effort will entertain guests Wednesday.

Elementary school children are making decorations for the dinner and area women are baking desserts for the event.

Trantham said the dinner is a chance to emphasize that the problems from this year's drought will last into the winter. "I don't feel like we're in as bad a shape as we were in July, August or September, but the feed we lost in '86 is the feed for our cattle this winter," he said.

Haylifts have brought in 600,000 bales or 18,000 tons so far this year, according to Lanoe Branham, personnel manager for the state Agriculture Department.

But he said up to 200,000 bales of hay donated by farmers in the Northeast and Midwest still are waiting for a ride to South Carolina.

Names in the News

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — His former Sharon High School classmates remember him as "Billy Frank," friendly, good-humored and prone to pranks. The world knows him as the Rev. Billy Graham.

Graham and 17 other members of the Class of 1936 attended a 50th reunion at Charlotte Carmel Country Club on Sunday.

"I don't know whether we'll ever come back together again," he said. "If we do, we'll have to come in our wheelchairs, on crutches and so forth next time. But it's a thrill, a real thrill for me."

The former classmates and their spouses posed for pictures and swapped memories, constantly surrounded by reporters, photographers and TV lights.

"Billy Frank was a good student, but they all were," said Helen Deams, one of the school's six teachers.

It was during 10th grade that Graham experienced a religious awakening at a tent revival meeting. Afterward, he spoke often with classmates about his new-found faith.

"He wasn't a fanatic," one said, "but he let you know he was serious about it."

AMSTERDAM — Queen Beatrix and 2,100 other Dutch music lovers welcomed Vladimir Horowitz with standing ovations during the piano legend's first Netherlands appearance in half a century.

The 82-year-old Horowitz, playing Sunday in the packed Concertgebouw, whisked his way through a varied program beginning with two Scarlatti sonatas and ending with two Chopin mazurkas.

The recital was the Russian-born American's first in the Netherlands since Feb. 20, 1936, when he appeared in the same concert hall, one of the world's most acoustically perfect.

The concert, for which most tickets sold at $88 each, was the major cultural event of the Amsterdam season.

NEW YORK (AP) — Kitty Kelley says she's "grateful that there are people like Jackie Onassis, Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Sinatra I can write 'unauthorized' biographies about."

Ms. Kelley, author of the current No. 1 best-selling book, "His Way: The Unauthorized Biography of Frank Sinatra," was one of several celebrities who told the Daily News what they were thankful for this Thanksgiving season.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Former Gov. Orval Faubus says he and his new bride plan to spend Thanksgiving weekend traveling around the state.

Faubus, 76, and Jan Wittenburg, 43, were married Sunday at a downtown hotel, with about 350 people and a crowd of photographers in attendance.

When the minister said the couple could kiss, Faubus gently pushed aside the photographers, drew his bride into the audience's view and kissed her to applause.

Faubus was governor from 1955-66. He has since made three unsuccessful attempts to win the Democratic nomination for governor, most recently this year. He is best known for calling out the National Guard in 1957 in an attempt to stop desegregation of Little Rock Central High School.

Mrs. Faubus, who was divorced, has taught at Mayflower Elementary School for eight years.

Faubus and his first wife, Alta, were divorced. He later married Elizabeth Westmoreland, who was killed March 3, 1983, by an intruder.
