State GOP head offers resignation

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Calling the party "shattered," State Republican Chairman Chet Upham offered to resign his post here Friday night, but set conditions that included selecting George Strake of Houston as his successor.

In an informal meeting of SREC in The Midland Hilton, members of the executive committee and the public brought the in-house war to a showdown. One side argued for keeping Upham and cited support of the county chairmen in their district while the other side critically questioned Upham's motives for choosing his successor.

SREC's formal meeting begins at 9 a.m. today in Midland Center. The agenda includes adopting resolutions, considering the budget and appointing the executive campaign committee. This is the first time the SREC has met in Midland, according to Bob Monaghan, District 25 committeeman.

The splintering of the Republican Party became obvious in the December quarterly meeting and the battle has escalated since then, according to remarks made by Republicans.

In opening the session, Upham said he wanted the group to "get things off your chest tonight and come back tomorrow and vote."

Bishop Sam Hulsey's facial expressions and gesturing hands add emphasis to his words Friday as he addresses the first meeting of the Texas Hospice Organization in Midland, telling those in attendance how to deal with terminal patients in a caring and meaningful manner.

Bishop: Hospice is wonderful word

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Let's remember we are, at times, voices crying in the wilderness in a culture that denies death," said Bishop Sam Hulsey, referring to members attending the first Texas Hospice Organization meeting held in Midland this past week.

"Hospice is a wonderful word, we never want to forget," said Hulsey, who began Midland of Hospice Inc. four years ago this month.

"It means a place that gives space. In hospice, we give space to dying people. It is space-making and space-giving. I value that word."

Sixty other persons, who also value the word, gathered at the Midland Hilton this past week to put the idea of a statewide organization into reality. Since Monday, delegates have been attending workshops, accepting bylaws and voting for THO directors.

Hulsey, who is bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas and formerly rector of Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity in Midland, addressed the group Friday afternoon.

He spoke about the dying and what hospice members can do to help those persons. He addressed the needs of the dying — the need of relief from the distressing symptoms of their disease, security of a caring environment and assurance the dying and their families won't be abandoned.

The THO, as other hospices nationwide, are programs of care — care that is tailored to meet each patient's special needs.

These needs are blended "with the hospice team," Hulsey said. "Here we are bringing together eight or nine members, a team."

The team includes the hospice volunteers, physicians, nurses, social workers, pharmacists and clergy, who are an interdisciplinary team, helping the dying live their life.

"In hospice we're talking about transition," he said. "moving from life to death."

Explaining that the bereavement process is difficult, Hulsey said, "Let's remember we're a culture that says we need to get well quickly. We live in a culture that says take a pill, get over it and never face up to depression."

"This (hospice) group is alone in this culture," he added. "Some of us are going to experience loneliness."

"Everybody in hospice is working through his/her feelings about death. We need to be sensitive toward each other. There needs to be mutual support. We need to let people get away from hospice for awhile — carry out relationships with non-hospice people."

Hulsey said when the hospice member is working with a patient's family, it is important to be in the wings during the bereavement.

"The toughest thing is the bereavement program. People don't want to be reminded."

"But someplace along the way, it's going to have to be dealt with," he said.

Speaking to the group on the spiritual side of hospice, Hulsey said, "Real religion is whatever a person is bound to, converting the patient is not the goal of hospice."

U.N. council not taking much action

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council, whose mandate is the preservation of world peace, has been generating a good deal of sound and fury but little action in recent months.

U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, this month's council president, is concerned about a growing tendency to view the council chamber merely as a "Turkish bath" — a place to let off steam.

The 15 nation council held one closed debate and four open debates on international disputes in the last two months without adopting a single resolution. All that emerged were two consensus statements, the weakest form of council action — requiring no formal vote.

After three weeks of wrangling, delegates agreed Wednesday on a mildly worded statement urging Chad and Libya to settle peacefully their territorial dispute over the Aouzou Strip.

Two days earlier, the council shied away from an open meeting and released a statement asking the secretary-general to look into reported cases of "mass poisoning" of Palestinian schoolgirls on the Israeli-occupied West Bank. Israel assailed that statement as "completely unwarranted," maintaining that tests had turned up no traces of poison.

Last week, the council ended five days of debate without taking action on Nicaragua's claims of a U.S.-backed invasion by insurgents based in Honduras. Equally inconclusive were debates held in February on an Arab complaint against Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territories and on a Libyan complaint against U.S. naval maneuvering off the coast of North Africa.

"When you come up against a brick wall, all you can do is try to minimize the damage," said a council delegate whose country professes non-alignment. The diplomat, speaking privately, referred to the veto power wielded by the five permanent council members — the United States, Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union — who rarely can agree on effective action.

With the council's performance now under intense scrutiny, the delegate said, members seem less inclined to adopt meaningless or unenforceable resolutions or to push tougher resolutions to a vote when they were certain to be killed by a veto.

The United States undoubtedly would have been prepared to veto resolutions based on Nicaragua's and Libya's complaints, while the Soviets probably would have killed any resolution backing Chad's complaint against Libya.

A negative big power vote only counts as a veto if a resolution gets nine votes required for adoption. Nine votes often are hard to muster in disputes involving two Third World countries.

The non-permanent council members holding two-year seats are Guyana, Jordan, Malta, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Poland, Togo, Zaire and Zimbabwe.

The irresolute debates have coincided with council consultations on ways to overhaul the U.N. peace-keeping machinery. The impetus came from a highly critical report issued last September by Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who complained that the council "all too often finds itself unable to take decisive action to resolve international conflicts and its resolutions are increasingly defied or ignored by those that feel themselves strong enough to do so."

Although the council took no action on its recent complaint of U.S. intervention, Nicaragua's Sandinista government marshalled enough Third World and Soviet Bloc supporters to turn the council into a miniature version of the General Assembly. The 157-nation Assembly is a Third World sounding board in which the United States often finds itself in virtual isolation.

Among the 57 delegations that participated in the debate were those as remote from Central America as Mongolia, Libya, Iran and the Indian Ocean state of Mauritius — all non-members of the council who were permitted to speak under the rules of procedure.

The proceeding, she later observed on the op-ed page of the New York Times, more closely resembled "a mugging" than an honest effort to bring peace to Central America.

Astronauts perform house-cleaning chores

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With a mild rebuke to the folks who packed their supplies, the Challenger astronauts tidied up the space shuttle for Saturday's trip home. On the ground, there was an early report card on the ship's first flight. "This machine acts like it was supposed to act."

After bantering on Friday with Vice President George Bush, a visitor to Mission Control, the astronauts acted out the last part of a celestial game of hide and seek with a phantom satellite. For the fifth time of the flight they were given instructions for altering their orbit to reach a certain point and for the fifth time they made it.

The shuttle will need that capability to rendezvous on the 13th flight with a failed sun-study satellite which the astronauts are to repair.

Astronauts Paul J. Weitz and pilot Karol Bobko will guide Challenger to a landing at 12:53 a.m. CST Saturday at Edwards Air Force Base in California. The astronauts were told the weather will be just fine, with mild winds and clear skies.

Before the astronauts went to sleep Friday, spacecraft communicator Guy Gardner said, "We'd like to thank you for an outstanding mission."

"We'd like to thank you, too, for an outstanding mission," responded Weitz. "Looking forward to seeing you."

The astronauts were later awakened when an alarm sounded to indicate that one of five computers onboard Challenger had shut down.

Mission Control said it would study the problem, but the astronauts should go back to sleep and not worry about it. Only one computer is needed to fly the spacecraft.

The ship will be guided automatically most of the way and Weitz will take over at 5,000 feet — or at a higher altitude if he chooses. The ship will be slowed from its orbital speed of 17,400 mph by firing its engines over the Indian Ocean about an hour before landing.

Asked to compare Challenger with Columbia, the first ship in the fleet, flight director Gary Coen said,

"I think Challenger is much cleaner." He attributed that to the experience gained with the first shuttle.

"The most important thing to us is that this machine acts like it was supposed to act," Coen said.

Most of the day in space was taken up with housekeeping.

"It's hard to keep the place neat," Weitz said. "It's kind of like taking a vacation in a cabin somewhere for four or five days. About the fifth day when you're ready to move you realize how much stuff has been out all over."

He grouched that the shuttle equipment lockers were packed too full on the ground, which made repacking them in weightlessness even more difficult.

"You should really not pack stuff they have to cram in. (That) barely fits in a locker," he said. "They're a real bear to get back in. That's the biggest problem we've had. We've got them reasonably back in the places they came from."

Bush sat in temporarily as "captain" in Mission Control, telling the orbiting astronauts not to panic; the real spacecraft communicator — a term lingering from the Mercury spacecraft days — was sitting next to him.

"Where are all those flags that astronauts and cosmonauts etc. present to us?" Bush asked. "There must be a jillion flags in that thing somewhere."

Weitz, in the spirit of the exchange, replied, "I don't think so, sir. I don't think they really fly those flags." But then he opened an equipment locker he said contained the flags.

"All 500,000 of them?" asked Bush. "Take our word for it," said Weitz. "They're there."

The five-day mission chalked up a major success in Thursday's 3-hour, 47-minute space walk by mission specialists Story Musgrave and Don Peterson. It was marred only by problems with the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, which failed to climb to its proper orbit.

Moscow expels British attache, correspondent

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union expelled a British military attache and the correspondent of the London Financial Times Friday in apparent retaliation for the expulsion last week of three Soviets from Britain.

So far the Kremlin has taken no retaliatory action against the French, who accused 47 Soviet diplomats and officials of espionage and expelled them Tuesday — the biggest such move since Britain kicked out 105 Soviets in 1971.

The British Embassy said Assistant Air Attache David Williams and Financial Times correspondent Anthony Robinson were accused of "unacceptable activities" and ordered to leave the Soviet Union within one week.

British Ambassador Sir Iain Sutherland protested "the unjustified action," describing the expulsions as "clearly in retaliation" for the ousting of three Soviets from Britain last week.

The Foreign Office in London said, "We are considering seriously the new situation it has created."

The three Soviets expelled from Britain last week were the assistant air attache in London, Col. Gennadi A. Primakov, Second Secretary Vladimir V. Ivanov and Igor V. Titov, a journalist with the Soviet magazine New Times.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 7 p.m. EST
Saturday, April 9
High Temperatures

The National Weather Service forecasts rain for parts of California, Oregon, Washington and from northern Florida to New Jersey, to the Great Lakes and west to Iowa.

Summer returns to Permian Basin

The cold snap which visited the Midland area in the latter part of the week seems to be taking leave this weekend.

Coming with the clearing-up process will be decreasing cloudiness and warmer — in the low 60 degrees — temperatures today. The low tonight will be near 40 degrees.

Moving on up, the temperature Sunday will near 70 degrees, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Friday's peak temperature was 47 degrees, which was nowhere near the record high of 95 degrees for the date in 1953. The overnight low was 32 degrees, while the record low for an April 9 was 20 degrees in 1973.

All three denied they were involved in espionage.

But Western intelligence experts say the wave of expulsions of Soviets from Western Europe results from evidence indicating the Kremlin has masterminded a campaign to steal technology it finds difficult and expensive to import.

Western military secrets are also said to be a coveted target of Moscow's intelligence-gathering operation.

One West European intelligence source who asked not to be identified said recently that between one-third and one-half of Soviet diplomats, journalists and other officials accredited in West European countries are thought to be engaged in some intelligence work.

Williams, 33, who holds the rank of squadron leader, said he planned to leave Moscow next Thursday with his wife Susan. He arrived in the Soviet Union last May.

Robinson, 40, has been in Moscow since April 1982. He was in London on vacation but returned late Friday to the Soviet capital, where he was met at the airport by a British diplomat.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry gave the British Embassy no details of the charges against Robinson, and the journalist said he had not been able to talk to Soviet officials about the action.

"I will be trying to find out what it is they object to specifically in me... or whether it is simply tit for tat," Robinson said.

He added that he hoped the Soviets would rescind their decision to expel him and allow him to continue reporting on the Soviet Union. Robinson said he had always tried to do this "as fairly and as objectively as possible."

"The Soviet Union is a fascinating country," he said. "It has to be reported about... I'd very much like to come back."

Correction

"In last Sunday's 'Speaking Out' column, it was incorrectly stated that the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, through its fund-raising activities, has donated over $460,000 to the hospital since 1950. According to the column's author, auxiliary president Verneta Baxter, the figure should have been $460,000.

Indiana couple accused of rape

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An Indiana couple accused in a warrant of raping their 7-year-old adopted daughter were charged in a second Tennessee warrant with aggravated rape Friday.

The new charges against Robert and Carolyn Yeary of Indianapolis, were filed by Knoxville police. The additional charges were placed as two officers of the Monroe County Sheriff's Department arrived to transfer the couple to Madisonville to face the original charges.

Also charged with aggravated rape in the Knoxville warrant were an unidentified male not yet in custody and a Texas woman who pleaded guilty last week to abandoning her four children at a Memphis fast food restaurant.

"Other warrants may be issued in Monroe County and the state of Indiana against others involved upon completion of this investigation," Sgt. Jim Bompreszi of the Memphis Police Department Juvenile Squad said Friday afternoon.

The detective refused to say if the Knoxville aggravated rape charges involved children or to give details of the investigations.

Bompreszi said all the charges stem from an investigation begun March 24 after four children, ages 2 to 6, were abandoned at a McDonald's restaurant in South Memphis.

The children's mother, Elizabeth Diane Hamlin, 28, of Huntsville, Texas, was arrested March 28 along with the Yearys at a Salvation Army shelter at Chattanooga. A clerk called police after he recognized Mrs. Hamlin from news accounts about her abandoned children.

Mrs. Hamlin was traveling with the Yearys and their daughter, Mrs. Hamlin's estranged husband was in jail in Knoxville on an embezzlement charge when the children were abandoned. He is free on bond and has said he wants custody of his children.

The Yearly child and the Hamlin children are under the care of the Shelby County Juvenile Court and are in foster homes in Memphis.

Mrs. Hamlin and the Yearys were brought to Memphis from Chattanooga to face charges of child abuse and neglect.

Mrs. Hamlin pleaded guilty last week to abandoning her children and was sentenced to 11 months and 29 days in jail.

Charges against the Yearys were dropped but Juvenile Court officials kept their daughter pending an investigation.

On Monday, Judge Kenneth Turner refused to release the girl after he was shown 97 sexually explicit photographs of the Yearys, an unidentified woman and what appeared to be a man dressed as a woman. Police said the photos were found in Mrs. Yeary's purse when she was arrested in Chattanooga.

Memphis police arrested the Yearys again Wednesday after Monroe County authorities issued warrants charging the couple with raping their daughter while working at Tellico River Ministries Camp, a facility for underprivileged children.

The 72-acre camp made the news in 1978 when its founder and administrator, the Rev. James Dotson, was charged with having homosexual relations with teenage boys at the camp.

In March, 1980, a Criminal Court jury in Madisonville acquitted Dotson, 59, a Baptist minister.

In the Knoxville warrants, Yeary, a 42-year-old mail-order minister, is charged with two counts of aggravated rape and his wife is charged with a single count.

Madisonville, the Monroe County seat, is in East Tennessee, about 400 miles east of Memphis and 45 miles southwest of Knoxville.

Television cameramen and reporters formed a tight circle around the Yearys as the couple, escorted by three lawmen, walked through the detention waiting room toward a waiting squad car for the trip to Madisonville.

GOP chairman offers to resign

His resignation included the following points:

— The chairman and vice chairman (Dorothy Doehne) will submit their resignations.

— A pledge will be made by a number of people to elect George Strake as chairman (Strake, a Houston oilman, unsuccessfully attempted to unseat Bill Hobby for his lieutenant governor's chair last November).

Those two actions should bring the party together.

— "We're going to go fight Democrats," he said, receiving the first of several rounds of applause from various groups in the room.

Look at the budget, set up campaign committees and "go forward as a united party."

"I'm ready to step down and take whatever place I can in this organization," Upham said.

One Republican explained that a Dallas-Fort Worth faction has broken off from the committee and is behind the move to get rid of Upham. Contending that group has no leader, the man tied the split back to the Ronald Reagan-George Bush fight for the presidency two years ago before Bush was put on the ticket as vice president.

This group he continued, is an ultra-conservative group that feels Bush is too moderate.

Upham noted that it was the strength and unity of the Republican Party in 1980 which led to the election of Reagan-Bush. In 1984, Reagan is up again as U.S. Sen. John Tower, who squeaked through for a third term in 1978 against Democrat Bob Krueger.

Unemployment is not where we would like it to be and Democrats would like to see a slump, Upham said in outlining the Democrats' strategy for 1984.

For Reagan to be re-elected, the Republican Party of Texas needs to identify all the voters, set up phone banks, go door-to-door and "set up outreach programs as we've never done before."

He mentioned the Hispanic leaders are hoping to get 1 million of their people registered to vote by the next presidential race and only 15 percent of those are expected to vote Republican. Those voters should be targeted in an outreach program, according to Upham.

"We have to decide if we're going to be organized or if we're going to be separate on this all the way through. I would not expect the president's advisers to depend on a shattered state organization."

Ms. Doehne told the group she had not seen the proposal for relinquishing her chair until 6 p.m. Friday. But since she wants Reagan to be re-elected, she would step down to get the party organized.

A letter signed by several SREC members was mentioned and tied in with Midlander Ernest Angelo Jr., who is also a member of the National Republican Executive Committee.

Angelo said he had refused to look at the signatures because he didn't want to be accused later of holding any grudges against those people. "It just doesn't matter whose name is on it," he said.

Monaghan, a Midland oilman, looked back to the days when Ray

Barnhart was chairman and resigned and compared it to the current fight. "I was a supporter of Ray Barnhart. He ended up broke and in desperate shape financially. None of you supported him. You let him down. You deserted him."

As District 25's representative, Monaghan said he contacted 31 of the county chairman in his area and they voted support for Upham and for the party to quit bickering.

They're sick of it, we're acting like children.

He referred to the Reagan Bush split and then charged that with the dissension no one is getting any work done for the Republican Party including those in the office in Austin.

"You've got to stop this foolishness," he urged.

Before the meeting began, a Republican pointed out that in 1980 the party's organized efforts were responsible for getting Reagan elected. It might not be the same story in 1984. "The troops will either have to pull together or flounder," he said.

Bishop raves about hospice program

"We don't go in there to lay on our religion," he added. "We may share, but we again have to give space to the patient. The goal of hospice is to support the patient, enabling communication for the patient."

In concluding, Hulsey noted that for the hospice patient death is the last learning process and that "maybe we can learn something from the patient's experience of loneliness, isolation and fear. Sometimes a family can't bear to be there during the patient's last days — hospice members need to be there to share the journey."

Heart attack victim kills woman

BRYAN (AP) — An elderly woman was struck and killed on a sidewalk by a car driven by another woman who apparently suffered a heart attack and died, authorities said.

Police said they did not know if Shirley M. Smith, 54, the wife of Texas A&M Assistant Vice Chancellor for Administration Bob Smith, suffered a heart attack before or after her car hit Estelle S. Menzies, 71.

Mrs. Menzies was taking the garbage out of her home and was standing on a sidewalk when she was hit by the car that then hit a parked car and came to rest against a tree.

Bush defends asylum decision

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush on Friday defended the decision to grant political asylum to Chinese tennis star Hu Na, saying the United States cannot "knuckle under because someone objects."

The vice president said relations between the United States and China are "fundamentally important" and would survive the strain caused by the decision. The decision prompted China to cancel all 1983 sports and cultural exchanges with the United States.

The vice president said it would have been difficult to refuse Miss Hu's request.

"The United States has a long history of granting political asylum. There are laws on the books and we can't knuckle under because someone objects," he said.

Investigators rule fire was arson

DALLAS (AP) — Fire investigators say an arsonist set the four-alarm blaze at the Regent Hotel last month that forced 107 guests from their rooms and caused an estimated $900,000 in damage.

Four people were treated for smoke inhalation, but there were no serious injuries in the March 18 fire at the 13-story hotel.

Jerry E. Foster, captain of the arson and fire investigating division, said someone purposely started the fire that began in a lobby loveseat.

"The only possible accidental cause of the fire was a cigarette or something electrical and it just wasn't either of those," said Foster.

In his opinion, a cigarette couldn't have caused that much smoke, Foster said. If the fire had to be set.

Couple sues police in son's death

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Fort Worth couple contends in an $8 million suit that police used excessive force in arresting their teenage son, who died while in custody.

Cruz Leal Jr. died Dec. 12, 1981, about an hour after officers said they saw him attack a woman in a parked car and arrested him.

The youth's parents, Cruz R. and Socorro Leal, allege in their suit that officer W.L. Norman used a strangle hold to arrest their son and then, with officer F.A. Gates, threw the semi-conscious teen-ager into a van and left him unattended on the ride to police headquarters.

The officers said Leal's heart had stopped by the time they arrived at the station and efforts to revive the teen-ager failed.

An autopsy by the Tarrant County medical examiner's office found no evidence of brutality and suggested the youth died from a heart attack that may have been brought on by the stress of trying to run away from police.

White: Too soon to be thinking about tax bill

AUSTIN (AP) —

Gov. Mark

White thinks the

Texas Legislature

may be able to get through this session without a new tax bill.

"Hopefully we can," he told a

Friday news conference, "possi-

White said he thought it was too

soon to jump

at a tax bill now,

"at least on the

necessities of life. I think it is important we do not jump to that conclusion until we have exhausted all alternatives."

White repeated several times that he was not taking Comptroller Bob Bullock's revenue estimates for 1984-85 at face value.

"Bullock will tell you that all he does is make a guess," White said. "I don't think you can really guess with accuracy what revenues will be. Historically, there has been a 10 percent miss on the conservative side."

White pointed out that Bullock says "as far as the sales tax the recovery is going to come in 1985 and not in 1984. No one can predict when it will come."

"If he's right those numbers are right, if he is wrong then the numbers are wrong," White said.

White responded to a Friday statement from Bullock that if White and lawmakers think the comptroller's estimates are too conservative the legislators can override the constitutional pay-as-you-go constitutional provision by four-fifths vote.

"Some legislators are bellyaching over the fact our state economy is caught in the national recession and I've had to tell them that. Now, they want to shoot the messenger," said Bullock.

The comptroller said "if White and some members want to gamble with our state finances, all they've got to do is throw the dice and override the estimate."

"We are not going to have any deficit spending in Texas," White told the news conference. "To the extent we have a problem here is a problem of reduced surpluses. We're going to recognize that and at the same time recognize the need for services."

Former sheriff pleads innocent to charges

HOUSTON (AP) — A former San Jacinto County sheriff accused of using water torture to get confessions and of operating a "marijuana trap" on a busy highway changed his plea to innocent Friday when a federal judge rejected a plea bargain.

James C. "Humpty" Parker, who had been sheriff since 1969, resigned last month and pleaded guilty in a plea bargain to an extortion charge and two federal civil rights violations. His attorneys withdrew the pleas after U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald refused to approve the agreement.

"I have reviewed the presentencing investigation report several times, and I find it most inappropriate. This court is not bound by the plea bargain and I reject it," the judge said.

U.S. Attorney Dan Hedges said prosecutors now will have to decide whether to try to work out another agreement to let Parker enter a plea on a single count or whether to take the case to trial.

"We've lost vital assistance in the investigation," Hedges said. "The sheriff has cooperated and there would be severe limits on what we can use if we chose to go to trial."

Parker's attorney, Tom Taylor, said his client would be willing to listen to any offers the government might provide.

"Mr. Parker voluntarily went to the government. Now we'll see what the government has to offer," he said.

The civil rights violations carry a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison on each count and the extortion charge has a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

Under terms of the rejected plea bargain, prosecutors agreed to recommend three-year prison terms for each of the civil rights violations, five years probation for the extortion count and a $15,000 fine. The three-year terms were to have run concurrently under the agreement.

Criminal charges alleged Parker used water torture on some prisoners to force confessions and operated a speed trap directed toward motorists who fit a certain profile.

One Texas prison inmate, Gerald Casey, 28, claimed he has spent three years in prison for a crime he didn't commit because sheriff's deputies handcuffed him to a table and poured water on a towel covering his nose and mouth until he signed a confession admitting to a burglary.

Deputies were ordered to stop "hippies," blacks and people whose cars bore bumper stickers advertising a rock radio station in Houston, the charges said. Officers also were told to stop drivers traveling along U.S. Highway 59 with Louisiana license plates issued around Shreveport.

The New tax Laws are complex and if you aren't familiar with all of the changes you could be overpaying your taxes unknowingly. Some of the tax revisions make you lose other deductions which would have benefited you more. The instruction (you received from IRS) booklet doesn't answer all the questions that could affect your income tax return.

The New Income Tax revisions affect every taxpayer regardless of income. Your H&R Block Tax preparer can show you how the new Tax Laws can save you money or cost you money if you don't know how to apply the revisions to your benefit.

I.R.S. doesn't check every tax return to see if the taxpayer took all the available deductions and credits to the taxpayer's benefit. Thus many taxpayers overpay their taxes.

Cornered robber commites suicide

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — A masked gunman robbed a Bank of America branch and committed suicide when cornered by police officers, authorities said.

The gunman, identified through his driver's license as Daniel Cleland McKelvy, 29, of El Paso first was thought to have been killed by police after the robbery Thursday morning.

All the shots fired by police missed, and powder burns on McKelvy's temple indicate the fatal shot was fired at close range, police said.

McKelvy's weapon, a .357-caliber Magnum revolver, was found lying by his side; it had been fired once, police said. About $1,650 in cash and a red ski mask were found nearby, police said.

$1.4 million in bogus bills confiscated

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Six men have been indicted by a federal grand jury and $1.4 million in bogus bills have been confiscated in what prosecutors call one of the state's biggest counterfeiting busts.

The indictment returned Thursday followed the March 30 arrests of Alan D. LeMon and Douglas J. Edmunds. LeMon was picked up at his print shop here, and Edwards was arrested in Miami as he allegedly was trying to buy cocaine from undercover agents. Edwards was carrying the counterfeit money at the time, the indictment said.

LeMon was arrested in 1975 with $11 million on counterfeit bills, was convicted and served five years of a 15-year sentence.

Others indicted Thursday were D. Steven King, Keith Tarver and Robert A. Riesenber, of Salt Lake City, and Robert J. Revill of Sandy.

Subway to cost more than expected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city's proposed Metro Rail subway will cost at least $3.1 billion — $1 billion more than previous estimates, Southern California Rapid Transit District officials say.

District officials said Thursday that federal and other requirements will significantly increase the cost of the 18-mile subway by the time it goes into operation around 1990.

The district staff originally believed the system, which was to extend from the San Fernando Valley to downtown Los Angeles, "would be half-built by now," district Board President Mike Lewis said.

Bill will give more students aid

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis has signed a bill appropriating $34 million for state scholarship aid, nearly double the current amount.

The measure, signed Thursday, is expected to provide assistance to 10,000 additional students, for a total of more than 35,000.

Senate Ways and Means Chairman Chester G. Atkins said the amount still was not enough because 65,000 eligible applicants still will be turned away.

The maximum grant is expected to be raised from the current $900 to about $1,500.

Murdered federal witness
'terrified,' brother testifies

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal witness slain with three CBS technicians at a Manhattan garage had been "terrified" for her safety in the months before her death, her brother testified Friday at the murder trial of Donald Nash.

"The perception was that she was in danger, very much in danger," Barney Barbera said of his sister, Margaret Barbera, who was shot to death at the garage last April 12 along with the three technicians who apparently came to her aid as she was being abducted.

Barbera, at times wiping away tears and taking deep breaths, said his 38-year-old sister was fearful and on several occasions stayed with him at his Pennsylvania home after her friend Jenny Soo Chin disappeared Jan. 5, 1982. Prosecutors say Mrs. Chin was abducted and shot, although her body has never been found.

Both women worked for the Candor Diamond Co., which was charged last year with defrauding an Irving Trust Co. subsidiary of $5.6 million.

Prosecutors charge that the garage shootings stemmed from a conspiracy in which Nash, 47, of Keansburg, N.J., was hired by Candor owner Irwin Margolies to silence witnesses.

In addition to the four murder counts, Nash is charged with conspiring to kill Miss Barbera and Mrs. Chin, 46, a bookkeeper for the firm.

Reagan arranges job interview

Laid-off man 'thrilled' about chance

Unemployed steelworker Ron Bricker talks with President Reagan from his Houston, Pa., home after the president arranged a job interview for Bricker. The woman in the background is unidentifiable.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A laid-off steelworker who gave his resume to President Reagan followed up Friday on a job opportunity arranged by the White House and came away optimistic that he'll get work.

"I'm just thrilled. I want to try to get with this company if I can," Ron Bricker said after a 90-minute interview with Radio Shack, a consumer electronics and computer manufacturer and retailer.

"I never expected this, never in my wildest dreams," said Bricker. "But I just hope the president remembers that there are 20 million people still out of work. They all want jobs. They want to go back to work."

Bricker showed up 30 minutes early Friday for his interview.

"I was more nervous going into this interview than when I handed President Reagan my resume," he said.

Steve Nohowel, a regional manager for Radio Shack, said Bricker must meet Tuesday with Wilson Hopewell, a regional repair coordinator from Columbus, Ohio, before a final job offer is made.

"All systems are go. We haven't exactly made a job offer, but we're 95 percent sure he'll be working for us," said Nohowel.

Bricker, 39, is seeking a job as a computer repairman. Starting salary would be $6.50 an hour, well below what he earned as a steelworker before he was laid off a year ago.

"It's a big cut in pay. But I feel like I'm just getting out of school. I'm starting my life all over," said Bricker, who is enrolled in a government-funded retraining program at Control Data Institute, where he handed Reagan his resume Wednesday.

Reagan called Bricker on Thursday night at his home in Houston, (Pa.) Washington County, to tell him of the interview. Reagan ordered the overnight job hunt after returning to Washington from Pittsburgh, where a demonstration was held by out-of-work residents.

Former Rep. James Coyne, a special assistant to Reagan on private sector initiatives, arranged the interview through Robert Keto, vice president of operations at Radio Shack's headquarters in Fort Worth.

Before the interview, Nowell said the president's intervention did not guarantee that Bricker would be hired.

"Just because the president of the United States is involved, it doesn't mean we throw out procedures for interviewing. We have to do things like background checks," Nohowel said.

"He has to be happy with us, and we have to be happy with him," he added.

The company seemed pleased with Bricker's background.

"He had the initiative to take a course in computers. He had the initiative to go up to President Reagan and hand him his resume. It reflects well on him," Nohowel said.

Bricker's wife and 16-year-old son sat with him during his four-minute conversation with the president, who said finding jobs was his top priority.

"Believe me, I don't know of anything that bothers me more than to have a person who wants to work with no job," Bricker quoted Reagan as saying.

22-year-old skeletons found

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Five skeletons of newborn or near-born infants who had been dead "at least 22 years" were found in a trunk in a house in New Hampshire, officials said Friday.

Dr. Henry Ryan, the Maine state medical examiner, said it is "unlikely" that tests he began Friday and will continue into next week will determine the cause of death, the sex or race of the infants or if they had been born alive.

New Hampshire Assistant Attorney General Greg Swope said abortion is not out of the question.

Ryan, an experienced criminal pathologist, took over the tests after Dr. Paul Young, Strafford County, N.H., medical referee determined that the remains were human bones.

Swope confirmed Friday afternoon that the bones were found in a trunk in a Somersworth house Wednesday.

"It had been entrusted to the people living in the house by a third party," he said. After a time, the people anticipated disposing of the trunk and opened it, he said.

Democrats may need revision of party rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — It looks like the Democrats are going to need another revision of party rules after the 1984 presidential campaign.

Party leaders thought last spring they had come up with a balanced rewrite — the fourth revision since 1970 — that accomplished the goals of shortening the nominating process and encouraging elected and party officials to play a greater role in selecting presidential candidates.

It may not have been accidental that the new rules, written with the active participation of aides to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, tilt toward front-runners.

Ironically, the rules have magnified the importance of money at a time when most candidates are decrying its influence and calling for curbs on political action committees.

Those two consequences are serious.

A third is more ludicrous: in attempting to shorten the season, the Democrats succeeded in lengthening it.

It seemed like a wonderful idea to shorten the season and that was done by creating a 13-week period in which states could hold caucuses or primaries and forcing Iowa and New Hampshire to move within 15 days of that "window."

A background memorandum written by the Hunt Commission staff warned that the plan had potential dangers. It noted that some observers "believe that any attempt to compress the process, or strictly enforce a window, will encourage 'front loading' which will substantially impair the ability of relatively unrecognized candidates to emerge."

Having an equally strong impact on lesser known candidates was the decision to move the Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primary closer to the window.

Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas told how that worked in his announcement this week that he was abandoning his plan for a long-shot run at the nomination.

"We have had a situation develop in the Democratic nominating process that weighs heavily against the less well-known candidates," said Bumpers. "In 1976 and 1980 we had three to four weeks between the New Hampshire primary and the next one. Previously unknown candidates such as Jimmy Carter, who did well in Iowa and New Hampshire, gained national recognition in plenty of time to raise money before the next primaries."

The first day states other than Iowa or New Hampshire can hold caucuses or primaries under the new Democratic rules is March 13, 1984, and at least 10 will do so on that Tuesday. Several more will begin selecting convention delegates on the following Saturday.

Bumpers pointed out that lacking the opportunity to capitalize on New Hampshire and Iowa, darkhorse candidates had to raise enough money to compete for delegates on March 13 and 17, long before they would know how well they would do in the two early contests.

The reason for moving Iowa and New Hampshire closer to the window was to diminish their impact on the process, a goal of party leaders who felt the two states were unrepresentative of the Democratic electorate.

But the unintended impact was to increase the need to raise huge sums of money early in the process and that may be the biggest reason why the 1984 presidential campaign has started so early.

Racism evident as Washington campaigns for mayor

CHICAGO (AP) — On a steamy July afternoon in 1919, a black teenager floated beyond the imaginary line separating blacks and whites at a Lake Michigan beach. He drowned. Rumors had it he'd been pelted with stones. Riots began.

For four days blacks and whites battled in the streets. Thirty-eight people died and more than 500 were injured.

More than 50 years later, that division still is apparent in the nation's second largest city, as Rep. Harold Washington campaigns to become Chicago's first black mayor.

The American melting pot has been slow to boil in Chicago, where many ethnic neighborhoods are still starkly divided. Expressways, railroad tracks and street corners often separate blacks from whites. Some are called "racial frontier" streets, others "DMZ" areas.

Most blacks — who comprise 40 percent of the population — live among other blacks. Their children go to school with other black children.

There's no Southern state where kids grow up as isolated as they do in Chicago, says Gary Orfield, a University of Chicago political science professor. "A typical (Chicago) black child is close to growing up in apartheid."

But in isolation, the black community has flourished in Chicago. It is a center of black culture and politics, base for the empire of Ebony magazine publisher John H. Johnson and the Rev. Jesse Jackson's Operation

PUSH.

Many say it was the 1950s and 1960s — the era of Mayor Richard J. Daley — when racial divisions were solidified by a massive public housing construction program.

Proposals to scatter the low-income housing were killed by City Hall. Rose says the Chicago Housing Authority "steered blacks into black areas." Today, 85 percent of the 143,000 public housing residents are black.

Meanwhile, critics say a separate and unequal policy also evolved in the public schools, where overcrowding in the 1960s led to black students being placed on double shifts and later in mobile classrooms.

Some political observers say Chicago's political machine — including black politicians — thwarted racial progress.

In recent years, Chicago's racial problems have moved from the streets to the courts. Suits filed by the U.S. Justice Department and civil rights groups accuse the city of racial discrimination in public schools, housing, parks, political districting and police hiring.

Only this week, the city and the American Civil Liberties Union reached a court-sponsored agreement to stop police officers from making harassment arrests of blacks and Hispanics.

Though the government has moved to make changes, some say many whites still are fearful — particularly with Washington's candi-

Police help capture crooks with laser

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — From Florida to Texas and as far away as London, police are nabbing crooks with the help of a laser beam so sensitive it can detect fingerprints on the inside of a glove.

The FBI, which once identified a bank robbery suspect from a pair of rubber gloves left in the getaway car, has also used a laser fingerprint detector to discern a 40-year-old print, said James E. Ridgely Jr., an FBI fingerprint specialist.

The latter print was on a postcard used as evidence in a Detroit trial of a Nazi sympathizer.

The system is so sensitive that Scotland Yard used one operated by the Metropolitan Police Lab in London to read a registration number from a policeman's hand after it had been washed.

Laser, an acronym for "light amplification through stimulated emission of radiation," has been in use for more than two decades. But it wasn't until 1976 that researchers at the Xerox Research Centre of Canada where Menzel then worked applied it to fingerprint detection.

When the intense beam of light strikes a fingerprint, it detects small concentrations of fluorescent materials such as vitamins, enzymes and amino acids secreted through the skin, said Dr. Laurence E. Cramer of Spectra-Physics. The San Jose-based company is the nation's largest manufacturer of lasers used in law enforcement.

The FBI has two fingerprint detection systems operating in Washington, D.C., and a third at the FBI training academy in Quantico, Va.

Systems are in use also at the Illinois Department of Investigation, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement in Tallahassee. In Texas, they are in sheriff's departments in Dallas and Harris counties.

world in brief

Author writes letter nine months before he, wife commit suicide

LONDON (AP) — Nine months before he and his wife committed suicide, writer Arthur Koestler wrote a "last letter" explaining his decision to end his life and expressing "timid hopes" of a life after death.

His reasons for suicide, he wrote last June, were "simple and compelling: Parkinson's disease and the slow-killing variety of leukemia."

The 77-year-old author of "Darkness at Noon" and his 55-year-old wife, Cynthia, were found dead in their London apartment on March 3. A coroner's inquest ruled that they took their lives with an overdose of barbiturates.

Koestler's letter, addressed "to whom it may concern," was written last June and was read Thursday night at a memorial meeting at the Royal Academy of Arts.

Koestler, whose novel about Stalin's purges helped turned leftist Western intellectuals against communism, was an active member of the Voluntary Euthanasia Society, which advises people how to commit suicide, and in recent years had been interested in the paranormal.

Three Palestinian bodies found

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The bodies of three Palestinians have been found in the southern coastal city of Sidon, police said Friday.

The report came two months after Israeli occupation forces ordered more security for Palestinian areas in the city to stop a terror campaign in which 12 Palestinians were killed.

Israel, whose forces have been in Lebanon since last summer's drive against the PLO, blamed the earlier killings on the right-wing Christian militiamen of the Phalange party. Phalangist officials denied the charge.

The three bodies were found Thursday and Friday, according to police, who did not say when the victims were killed. Two of the bodies were riddled with bullets, and the third had been struck with an axe, police said.

Palestinians and U.N. relief workers have said at least 50 Palestinian families received notes threatening that they would be killed if they did not leave Sidon.

Turkish officials reveal executions

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkish martial law authorities said Friday that 23 people convicted of political killings have been executed in the last two years.

The executed prisoners, whom the authorities described as extremists, were among 114 people who have received death sentences over the two year period.

Military courts have sentenced 29,940 people to terms ranging from five years to life in prison since the declaration of martial law in December 1978, according to an official statement from martial law headquarters.

Blacks acquitted of terrorism

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A magistrate acquitted four blacks of terrorism after rejecting the testimony of state witnesses who said they had been assaulted and forced to lie, the Johannesburg Star reported Friday.

Magistrate J.J.J. Luther acquitted the defendants Thursday and said that if charges against those responsible for the false evidence were not investigated he would recommend that the white-minority government's attorney-general begin a prosecution, the newspaper reported.

The defendants, all from Johannesburg's black suburb of Soweto, were charged with furthering the aims of banned black nationalist organizations and recruiting blacks for guerrilla training outside the country.

In summing up its case in the nine-month trial, the defense noted that five witnesses said they had been assaulted and nine said they had been told by police what to say in court. A black, self-confessed police agent, Jim Kelly, said he had been told to fabricate evidence.

American Jews buying West Bank land being probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration said Friday that it will step up pressure on Israel to freeze its settlement activity on the occupied West Bank if Jordan's King Hussein enters Middle East peace talks.

John Hughes, the State Department spokesman, also voiced concern over efforts by the Israeli government to sell West Bank property to American Jews and said the department is investigating whether the action is legal.

President Reagan has called for a freeze on Israeli settlements, saying they are not helpful to the search for peace between Israel and its neighbors. Israel has occupied the West Bank and Gaza Strip, home to about 1.2 million Palestinians, since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

In a statement to reporters, Hughes linked new efforts to achieve a freeze to a hope that Jordan's King Hussein will represent Palestinian interests in peace talks. Officials here believe Hussein is on the verge of making an announcement, and Hughes' statement seemed intended to encourage him.

"If Jordan publicly announces its willingness to enter such negotiations, we are determined to do our best to assure that the results of those negotiations are not prejudiced from the outset by activities of any party which reduce the prospects of a negotiated peace," Hughes said in answer to a question on West Bank land sales.

"Expansion of settlements" would be the kind of activity the administration would try to stop, he said.

But Hughes said the administration's pledge to do its best to remove impediments to peace, such as settlements activity on the West Bank, shouldn't be interpreted as a threat to cut off aid or take any other action against Israel.

Short of an aid cutoff, which most officials oppose, the best hope is to pressure Israel to freeze the settlements if Hussein joins the talks, said a senior State Department official.

Hughes said the effort by the Israeli government to sell lands on the West Bank to American Jews was "a continuing expression of settlements activity" and would "not be helpful" to the cause of peace.

He said the administration is investigating whether sale of the lands to Americans is legal and whether Americans could lawfully buy them. The offer reportedly is restricted to American Jews, which could also raise a question of whether it violates laws against discrimination on the basis of race and religion, Hughes said.

The proposed sale was disclosed Friday by newspaper columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak, who said the plan was unveiled by Israeli officials to about 300 prominent American Jews in New York City on March 13. The guests were given brochures and maps explaining how to purchase lands priced at $3,800 for a quarter of an acre, they said.

Reagan called for a freeze in West Bank settlements as part of his Sept. 1 Mideast peace initiative, in which he also proposed talks aimed at an Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and Gaza to be followed by Palestinian self-rule in association with Jordan.

But Hussein has wavered in joining the talks without approval of Yasser Arafat of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, which has the Arab world's mandate as the sole representative of the Palestinians.

Hussein and Arafat have held discussions aimed at getting Arafat's approval, but so far without result.

"We are waiting for some kind of announcement from King Hussein and Arafat," Hughes said.

U.S. officials hope Hussein will act without Arafat, if necessary, although they acknowledge that a unilateral move would pose a risk to the Jordanian kin. Backing from Saudi Arabia could be a key factor in such a move, they say.

Arms deliveries to Thailand increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States spelled out Friday a schedule of accelerated arms deliveries to Thailand, including ground-to-air missiles, howitzers and ammunition, because of spillover fighting across the Thai border by Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

The State Department said the United States also is giving $15 million in emergency medical and humanitarian assistance immediately to the International Committee of the Red Cross for victims of the fighting.

Some of the weapons are being made available directly from U.S. military stocks to underscore U.S. support for Thailand, said State Department spokesman John Hughes.

Hughes said three shipments of previously purchased, American-made military equipment will be flown to Thailand in the next 10 days by U.S. military aircraft.

He provided this schedule for the deliveries:

—The first shipment of Redeye ground-to-air missiles will arrive at Don Muang Royal Thai Air Force Base today.

—On Monday, two U.S. C-5 transports will deliver 155-mm, extended-range howitzers and ammunition from U.S. stocks.

—On April 19, the merchant ship Benjamin Harrison is arriving in Thailand with a cargo of additional extended-range howitzers.

Hughes said that in addition to the $15 million grant for humanitarian aid, John Gunther Dean, the U.S. ambassador to Thailand, recently provided $3 million to help Thai villagers affected by the fighting and by an influx of refugees from the border areas.

Hughes said the weapons were purchased by Thailand under the U.S. foreign military sales program.

Thailand buys about $150 million to $200 million in military equipment a year, he said.

Last year, he said, the United States made available about $80 million in credits and grants to help Thailand finance the purchases. The figure so far this year is $66 million, Hughes said, and the Reagan administration is asking Congress to approve an additional $25 million.

Hughes stressed that the accelerated weapons shipments include supplies already bought by Thailand.

"I wouldn't want to rule out consideration of other measures if that request was made," Hughes said. "I don't want to draw the line and say the U.S. would never do anything else."

Vietnamese troops have been fighting since the end of March in an effort to knock out insurgent Cambodian bases along the border. The Thai government says some of the fighting has spilled across its borders.

The United States last ran an emergency weapons airlift into Thailand in 1980 after Vietnamese troops entered Thai territory.

Walesa refuses invitation

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa is turning down an invitation to be Harvard University's commencement speaker because the Polish labor leader fears Warsaw authorities would block his return to Poland, his spokeswoman said today.

The Harvard Alumni Association had said Thursday in Cambridge, Mass., that Walesa, former head of the outlawed Solidarity union, accepted an invitation to give the graduation day address on June 9.

But a spokeswoman who was reached by telephone at Walesa's apartment in the Baltic port of Gdansk said: "He will be unable to travel there for well-known reasons. He is simply not sure that he would be able to cross the Polish border in both directions."

She also said that Harvard had conferred an honorary doctorate on Walesa, but a Harvard spokeswoman said that was not true.

Walesa has been invited to both Sweden and the United States since he was released in November after 11 months of internment during martial law, but has decided against leaving the country because of uncertainty over his ability to return.

Prince Charles swims with Australian friend

PERTH, Australia (AP) — "Hello, Lesley," said Britain's Prince Charles.

"Hello, Charles," Lesley Meadmore replied. The heir to the British throne was taking an early morning-dip Friday at North Cottesloe Beach when Mrs. Meadmore, in her bikini, swam past startled royal bodyguards to greet him.

Mrs. Meadmore, 29, said she first met the Prince of Wales at the same beach three years ago along with her husband, Richard.

"We were having drinks at the North Cottesloe Surf Club then and I remember yelling to the prince from the balcony to come up and join us," she said after a 20-minute swim with Charles. "He did and stayed with the governor's wife for about two hours."

Mrs. Meadmore said she and Charles spoke of many subjects during their swim, including his infant son, Prince William.

BOSTON (AP) — Some of the people who packed the Shubert Theater for a revival of Noel Coward's play "Private Lives" weren't too fond of the performance, but said they would do it again — just "to see them together."

They were speaking of Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. The twice-married and twice-divorced couple were reunited Thursday night for a pre-Broadway run of the 1930 comedy.

It wasn't that great, but the purpose was to see them together, said Angie Gonzales of Boston after the Boston preview. It was a big event.

Miss Taylor and Burton portray Amanda Pryne and her former husband, Elvot Chase, who meet on adjoining balconies of a hotel in the south of France, where both are honeymooning with their new spouses.

Burton, 58, and Miss Taylor, 51, haven't appeared together on stage since 1966 when they performed in Christopher Marlowe's Elizabethan play "Doctor Faustus" at Oxford.

"Private Lives" opens May 8 at New York's Lunt-Fontanne Theater.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Oscar is not only one of the most coveted awards in film, it's also a first-rate piece of craftsmanship, according to Tom Mount, whose company makes the golden statuette.

We may have changed a few items we put into it, but there's not that much to improve on," said Mount, regional manager of Dodge Western, which owns Dodge Trophies and Awards Co.

Oscar's gold is only skin deep. Within is a blend of copper, tin and antimony — known as britannia — which is heated to 800 degrees before it is molded.

And although there likely will be lifelong satisfaction for recipients of the award at Monday night's presentation by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences, the trophy itself may not be forever — especially if it's kept at a beach house.

Twenty-four karat gold should not tarnish, Mount said, but you'd be amazed what the salt air can do with time.

Over the years, he said, many recipients have turned in their original trophies either for repair or replacement.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Spain's King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia attended Mass with Pope John Paul II in his private chapel Friday, then joined him for breakfast. Vatican officials said.

The royal couple, accompanied by their three children, Elena, Cristina and Felipe, came to express gratitude to the pontiff for his 10-day pilgrimage to Spain last fall. He was the first pope to visit Spain.

After leaving the papal apartments, the royal couple toured the Sistine Chapel and St. Peter's Basilica.

Beach Boys want to forget Watt dispute

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — Members of the Beach Boys pop band said Friday that Interior Secretary James Watt's short-lived ban on rock music at Fourth of July celebration in Washington "is just one of those silly things that got way out of hand."

"Our concerts are very wholesome, from the little children to the middle-aged people like us," singer Bruce Johnston told a packed news conference here.

Lead singer Mike Love added, "We just want to go on singing about good vibrations and having fun, fun, fun. We sing about patriotic themes, like 'Surfin' U.S.A.'"

Watt's announcement Tuesday that rock groups would be banned from the Capitol Mall because they attract "the wrong element" — drinkers, muggers and drug abusers — touched off a storm of protest from fans of the group that sings about surf, sun and girls from California.

The interior secretary did not specifically mention the Beach Boys, who performed at the celebration in 1980 and 1981.

President Reagan called Watt to the White House on Thursday and afterward the interior secretary withdrew his ban.

In a telephone interview before the news conference, Johnston told The Associated Press, "This is just one of those silly things that got way out of hand. It's not that big of a deal."

Later, he told reporters, "The best thing would be to put this whole issue to bed so we can talk about serious things."

Watt plans to keep Las Vegas singer Wayne Newton and the U.S. Army Blues Band on the July Fourth bill, and the Beach Boys said they weren't sure what they'll be doing on Independence Day.

Love said the group has received several invitations to perform on the Fourth of July, including one from Andrew Stein, borough president of Manhattan in New York City, but no plans had been made.

Displaying a letter of appreciation to first lady Nancy Reagan, Love praised the Reagans for speaking out for the Beach Boys.

"Mrs. Reagan is one of the million people who have shown their support for us," said Love, whose group was scheduled to perform Friday night at the Brendan Byrne Arena in nearby East Rutherford.

"Last night, before we went on stage in New Brunswick (Canada), she (Mrs. Reagan) called us to apologize for all of this happening," Love said. "She said she and her husband were big fans of ours."

"I thought that was very sweet," Love said. "I wrote her that we're big fans of her and her husband, and that 'You're both modern-day American heroes.'"

Singer-songwriter Carl Wilson said he was annoyed by Watt's refusal to apologize to the band. Asked about an apology, Watt said Thursday, "I don't know that I owe them an apology, but I apologize to anybody that thinks they need one."

"He did not apologize," said Wilson. "What he said was said in an off-handed, snide fashion. The key words are 'wrong element.' Our audiences are wonderful, and the musical tastes of a nation should not be dictated so arbitrarily by one man."

Guitarist Al Jardine said he would welcome an opportunity to discuss with Watt environmental issues, especially about oil and forests in California, but the Beach Boys declined to comment at the news conference on Watt's performance as interior secretary. Environmental groups have declared him Public Enemy No. 1.

Lewis says he was brought back from the 'other side'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis, who suffered a heart attack last December, says his heart stopped beating and he was "on the other side" briefly before a nurse jolted him back to life.

"I was gone and they brought me back," the 57-year-old actor told The Press of Atlantic City in an interview published Friday.

Lewis, who appeared recently at the Playboy Hotel & Casino in his first professional appearance since the attack and surgery, said that while doctors were diagnosing him at Desert Springs Hospital in Las Vegas, Nev., the beeping heart monitor attached to his chest went silent.

He said an unidentified nurse at the hospital saved his life by punching him in the chest to jolt his heart back to life.

"This lovely woman was just coming on duty when she saw my monitor and realized what was happening," Lewis said. "She ran into my room, pushed her way through a maze of people and gave me a shot in the chest."

"I was on the other side, and, believe me, there's no yellow brick road waiting for you. It was more like the end of a television transmission fading out to a tiny spot. And then — nothing," said Lewis.

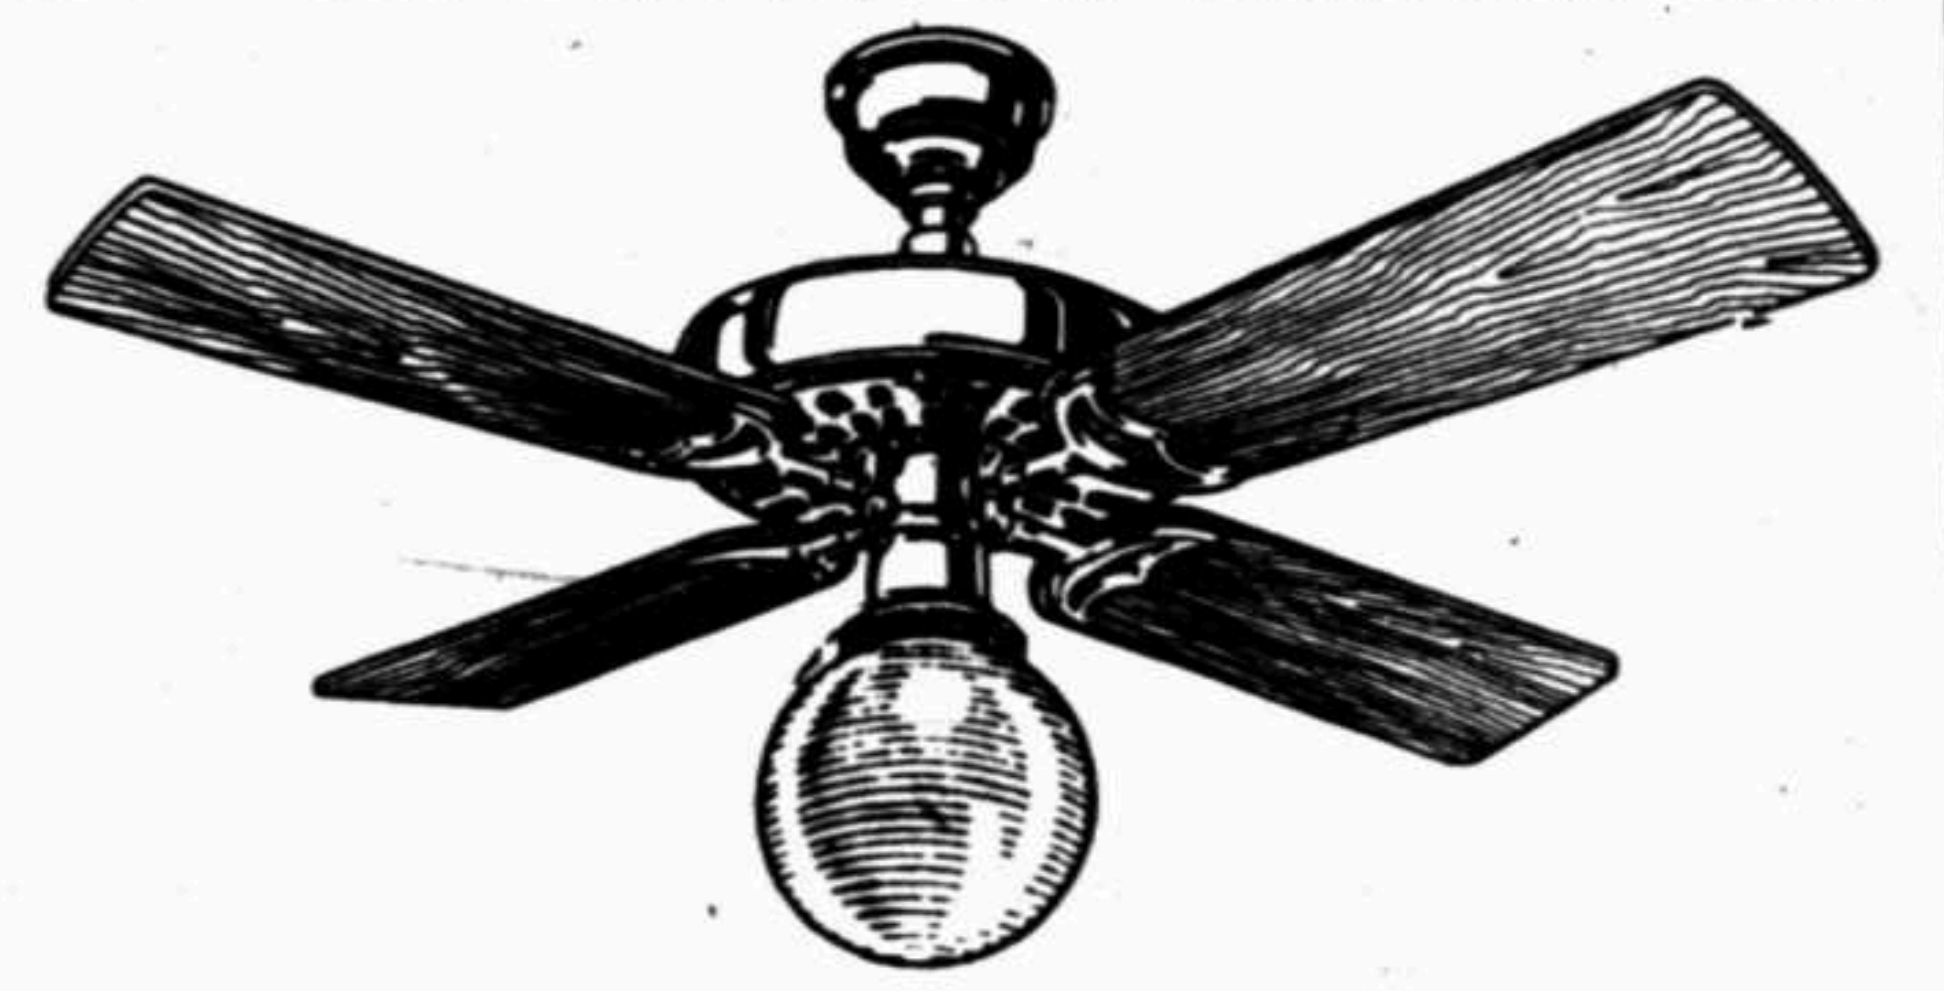

The attack began about 12 hours before Lewis was hospitalized, he said. He was rushed to the hospital, but initial tests showed nothing irregular.

THE BETTER HALF

"My bowling team voted me Most Valuable Player — because I missed the tournament."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, April 10, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Joseph Pulitzer, founder of publishing's most prestigious award, was born on this date, as were Russian leader Vladimir Ilyich Lenin, merchant Bernard Gimbel and FDR Labor Secretary Frances Perkins. Also sharing your birthday: Atlanta Braves slugger Bob Watson, M*A*S*H colonel Harry Morgan, Omar Sharif and journalist-author David Halberstam. Be more subtle and less critical in the months ahead and you will make rapid progress. School work becomes easier for students. Writers hit their stride and make more money. Refuse to let romantic partner take you for granted. A chance encounter could lead to something special. Do not dismiss your feelings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Refuse to let neighbors interrupt a strictly family affair. You have done more than your share of a home project. Let others take it the rest of the way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You want to be cooperative but should not let others push you around. Some quiet meditation helps you find the answer to a puzzling question. Share your knowledge with youngster or mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those who follow their consciences enjoy outstanding good luck. Although some people find abrupt change upsetting, you think it invigorating! Get promises in writing if money or real estate is involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Thoughts of romance make concentration difficult. Even the most disciplined student finds it difficult to wade through a dry textbook. Trips to see your children or parents are favored.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Money pressures lessen. Get together with trusted friends. Cooking is often fun for those who do not have to do it all the time. Let the whole family pitch in.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not lose your enthusiasm for a project just because others are critical. Forge stronger ties with community leaders. Children are a source of pride. Let them know how you feel.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An action-packed day lies ahead. There are lots of things going on that interest you. Friendships become more important than in the past. Pay greater attention to a family member.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It is time to review your finances. Avoid all speculative ventures. Romantic partner deserves more of your time and attention. Do not splurge on expensive entertainment whenever you feel bored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Concentrate on family and domestic matters today. Build a young person's confidence. You get special pleasure from participating in a child's school program. Work out a budget you can live with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stop volunteering to do things other people should handle. Instead, let your hair down and relax with your loved ones. Invest in those who have proved their loyalty over a long period.

Program aimed at teens

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Why in the World," brainchild of former "CBS Evening News" anchorman Walter Cronkite, is about to complete its second season as the first — and still the only — public affairs show for teen-age viewers.

"I think we've come a long way from the first year, which was highly experimental," says Barbara Barnes, executive producer of the twice-weekly public TV program. "We were literally trying to implement an idea, and there was no precedent for us to work with."

THE ORIGINAL design, which has been maintained, was to address a current news story on each half-hour program, using a guest authority to explain and analyze the issue at hand. High school students in the studio would participate in a discussion of the subject.

John Macker, the series' producer, says "Why in the World" took shape during the current season, which continues through May, though the last new show will be broadcast April 19, in an evolution any manner.

We began to attract major names as guest experts," he says, "which is partly a result of the integrity and sense of excellence we established in the first year."

AMONG THOSE lined up to appear in the current season were semantist and former U.S. Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, writer Isaac Asimov, former astronaut and current Sen. John Glenn, attorney Melvin Belli and heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey.

And the format of the show, Macker says, "was changed somewhat to limit the focus of each program of a single issue within the broader news story. We decided to take a detail of the story and explain that in depth, and in that way promote a greater understanding of the overall subject."

FOR INSTANCE, a recent program on conflict in the Middle East, an enormously complex subject, dealt specifically with the history of Israel.

"One thing we learned last year," Ms. Barnes says, "is that we didn't focus as clearly and as concisely as we should on the subject of each show."

If we can write a paragraph for what we want to do with a show," Macker says, "we do it. If we can't, we go back and start over."

IN ADDITION, the high school-age studio audience was given more of a role in the show. The student panelists, chosen from nearby high schools — 30 shows for the current season were produced in Los Angeles, 20 in New York — helped frame questions for the guest experts.

The hosts, Joe Benti in Los Angeles, Jeff Greenfield in New York, help the students make sure their questions are clear and succinct," Ms. Barnes says. "We do not tell them what to ask."

OTHER PROGRAMS — there were 60 in all — were broadcast from Disney World's Epcot Center in Orlando, Fla., Washington, and Columbia, S.C.

General Motors Corp., which provided $1 million for the premiere season, provided another $900,000 for the 1982-83 TV year, and Ms. Barnes, who formerly worked for Newsweek, the Harvard University Press, Collier's Encyclopedia and Dun's Review, says plans are being made for a third season.

The show is fed by satellite to Public Broadcasting Service stations on Tuesdays and Thursdays, mid-afternoon, though actual scheduling varies. Ms. Barnes says one goal is to increase production to five programs a week.

Inflatable King Kong acts like contentious Hefty bag

NEW YORK (AP) — An inflatable King Kong behaved more like a contentious Hefty bag than a mighty ape when an admitted publicity seeker tried to put the giant monkey on the top of the Empire State Building.

Undaunted, Robert Keith Vicino planned to try his stunt again Friday in celebration of the 50th anniversary of the movie "King Kong."

"Unfortunately, the building wasn't made for King Kong," Vicino said Thursday after his first attempt put the ape in place failed.

The main problem was in the rigging, said Dan Wolfson, spokesman for Robert Keith & Co., the San Diego company that built the 3,000-pound, 84-foot balloon. When workers succeeded in inflating a portion of the balloon early Thursday, they found the ape was contorted and turned the wrong way.

"He had his nose flat against the building, instead of looking around the corner," sighed Wolfson.

Then a 6-inch tear developed in a shoulder — not a problem, because the balloon can stay inflated with a 4-foot hole thanks to blowers that keep it full. But correcting all these problems at 1,400 feet was difficult.

"It's a giant monster, it's very hard to move around," said Vicino.

While the balloon was deflated and untangled, a party to mark the anniversary of the 1933 film "King Kong" went on, with speeches and mayoral proclamations. Actress Maureen Stapleton read a letter from actress Fay Wray. Maureen Stapleton read a letter from actress Fay Wray, who played the object of Kong's affection in the original movie.

King Kong's head is visible near the base of the mooring mast of the Empire State Building in New York City Thursday after the inflatable eight-story-tall fabric balloon of the giant ape became stuck during the effort to lift it to the top of the mast.

'King Kong' 50 years old

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Merian C. Cooper spent months writing his story about a giant gorilla but he didn't have the right ending until one day he left his New York office and saw an airplane flying close to the city's tallest building.

Suddenly he envisioned the ending: airplanes attacking the huge ape as it clings to the top of a New York skyscraper. His primitive creature would be destroyed by modern civilization.

It was, of course, "King Kong," and 50 years later this pioneer motion picture still stirs the imagination and tugs at the emotions. The ending atop the Empire State Building is a film classic.

Since its release the movie has brought in more than $5 million in film rentals. Betty Levine of RKO Pictures said she has booked 25 theater play dates for the next month. And it still plays regularly on television.

"It appeals to the little boy and little girl inside all of us," said Forrest C. Ackerman, a science fiction film historian and collector. "We're fascinated by this modern fairy tale of beauty and the beast. It had all the ingredients: adventure, imagination, romance and mystery."

THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY of "King Kong" began to be celebrated at the Empire State Building in New York Thursday. An 84-foot balloon of King Kong is now attached to the mooring mast atop the building until April 15. Memorabilia from the movie, including an original script, composer Max Steiner's handwritten score and a 21-inch armature of King Kong, is on display in the building's Fifth Avenue lobby.

The movie had its premiere in New York on March 2, 1933 and was shown simultaneously at Radio City Music Hall and the Roxy, two of the city's most opulent movie palaces.

The West Coast premiere at Grauman's Chinese Theater, on March 26, 1933, will be recreated May 26. An original nitrate print of the picture from producer David O. Selznick's private collection will be shown.

Guests will arrive in vintage cars and attend a champagne reception afterward at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, said television producer Richard Correll, in charge of the gala. Fay Wray, the only surviving star from the movie, will be the hostess.

"I attended the premiere when I was only 17 years old," said Ackerman. "The unusual thing I remember was that when Kong was running amok in New York they used a process called Magnascope to make the picture become bigger on the screen. It had a real startling effect when he climbed the Empire State Building with Fay Wray."

The anniversary showing at the Chinese Theater will also use the Magnascope process.

ITALIAN PRODUCER Dino De Laurentiis remade "King Kong" in 1976, but critics and audiences agreed it lacked the charm and enchantment of the original.

Selznick, who was running RKO Studios in the early 1930s, gave Cooper a budget of $500,000 to make "King Kong." Cooper wanted to call the film just "Kong" but RKO complained audiences would think it was Chinese. It was Selznick who suggested the title "King Kong."

The huge wall where the natives gather on Skull Island was left over from "The King of Kings." Cooper used it again for "She" in 1935. Selznick finally destroyed it in 1939 as part of the burning of Atlanta for "Gone With the Wind."

"King Kong" starred Robert Armstrong as an adventurous movie maker Cooper modeled after himself. Fay Wray was the beauty who (almost) tamed the beast. Bruce Cabot was the man who saves her when Kong goes on a rampage.

Cooper directed the movie with Ernest B. Schoedsack, who had shared many adventures with him in exotic corners of the world. Schoedsack's wife, Ruth Rose, wrote the script.

Alimony sends man to prison

CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) — In Paul W. Lataille's sixth-grade classroom, students who make trouble get a choice — finish on time a writing exercise assigned as punishment or stand against a wall during recess until it's done.

Lataille faces a similar choice. Since March 1, he has chosen to stay in prison rather than pay his wife a $12,425 divorce settlement. He claims the judgment discriminates against him because he is a man.

"I teach my kids to think for themselves and to know when you're right and when you know you're right to stick to your guns," said Lataille, 51, a teacher for 12 years at Lonsdale Elementary School in Lincoln. "I've never backed off of that."

To clear a contempt citation and leave the Adult Correctional Institutions Intake Services Center, he must pay his wife $8,500 from savings accounts, $3,500 in legal fees and $425 in back alimony of $75 a week.

"Too many men are willing to sit home and watch TV and don't realize they are losing their rights," said Lataille in a recent prison interview.

After 27 years together and five children grown to adulthood, Lataille and his wife, Solange, were granted a divorce.

Mexico's drought stricken ranches cause economic, political conflict

SAUCILLO, Mexico (AP) — The dusty trail into Manuel Balderrama's 15,000-acre ranch in northern Mexico winds through shriveled mesquite, past the bleached bones of cattle and around a dried-up lagoon that has not held water since 1980.

That's part of his problem; he says the other part is the Mexican government.

Chihuahua, Mexico's largest state and its biggest exporter of cattle, is suffering through what ranchers call its worst drought in 30 years.

Ranchers here are accustomed to battling the freezing temperatures brought by "northers" in winter and the blistering heat of summer.

But Balderrama and other cattlemen say their biggest fight is not against the state's harsh climate. Their biggest foe, they say, is government red tape and politicians in Mexico City, 850 miles to the southeast.

They claim they are caught between government restrictions on exports of calves and rising costs that make it impossible to feed all of them until they are big enough for the domestic market.

The government says the export restrictions, first imposed in 1973, are necessary to prevent beef shortages and keep meat prices from soaring out of sight.

About 10,000 calves starved to death in the past two months from lack of pasture and 150,000 more could die in coming weeks unless the government relaxes the export restrictions, Alfonso Valdez, president of the Chihuahua Cattle Association, said in an interview.

Known for the quality of its beef, the state exported nearly 300,000 calves in 1972 before the Mexican Agriculture Department began restricting exports. By late 1982, the government had reduced the state's annual quota of exports to 104,000 calves.

In Mexico City, a spokesman for the Agriculture Department said officials are "studying the possibility of increasing the quota."

Chihuahua has 2 million head of cattle and produces far more calves than its grasslands can support, the state's cattlemen say. Until 1973, all male calves were sent to Texas and New Mexico for sale to ranchers who fattened them for the U.S. market.

Chihuahua's ranchers held back female calves for fattening for the domestic market and for breeding stock.

Now cattlemen who can afford it are buying alfalfa, corn and sorghum to fatten their cattle in corrals. Many others without the cash to spend say they are watching their livestock die.

Ranchers say the state's beef production is bound to drop and consumer prices could increase significantly.

The 1917 Mexican constitution says a rancher cannot own more land than he needs to raise 500 head, he said. The amount varies from state to state, depending on the climate and soil. In Chihuahua, because of its rugged mountains, deserts and semiarid plains, ranchers need an average of one square mile to raise 12 head.

"If we improve our ranches so that they can support more than 50 head of cattle, we will be in violation of the law," said Balderrama.

Baltazar Quezada, manager of the Regional Cattle Union of Chihuahua, which groups the state's 14 cattlemen's associations, said of the law: "It limits production. It limits a man's aspirations to have more."

The restrictions on land ownership came about because of giant hacendados that existed before the beginning of the Mexican Revolution in 1910. Estates of 100,000 acres — 160 square miles — were common.

In Chihuahua, Don Luis Terrazas, the state's governor, was Mexico's biggest land baron.

Hysteria increases around the world

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post New Service

The mysterious illness that sickened hundreds of Palestinian schoolgirls on Israel-occupied West Bank last weekend demonstrates once again the difficulty in distinguishing poisoning or organic illness from mass hysteria.

Although Palestinians and Israelis initially exchanged charges and countercharges of intentional poisoning, evidence is mounting that it was a case of mass hysteria, in which many members of a group suffer similar symptoms of an illness that stems from psychological, not physical, causes.

Outbreaks of mass hysteria have been recorded in many countries and cultures, including one at a football game in East Los Angeles last fall. Recorded cases in the United States have varied from a phantom outbreak of gonorrhea among girls in an unidentified grade school in the East to a temporary paralyzing condition among women in Mattoon, Ill., which at the time was blamed on a phantom prowler who supposedly sprayed the women with anesthetic.

Mass hysteria may be more common than we suspect. Undiagnosed incidents may be blamed on food or environmental poisoning or on a mysterious virus. Others may be closed with the notation, cause undetermined.

DESIGN AN 'AWARD WINNER' FOR MIDLAND AND WIN $500.00!

COULD YOU FILL THIS SPACE? IF YOU WERE TO CHOOSE A EMBLEM OR EMBLEMS WHICH MOST REPRESENT OUR CITY, WHAT WOULD YOU CHOOSE? WE WANT YOU TO DESIGN AN ANSWER!

An Emblem is a representation of an idea or ideas that convey the personality and character of a particular subject. And we at the Reporter-Telegram have decided this is the perfect time to acquire a Newspaper Emblem that would represent the city of Midland as a whole, in addition to the Reporter Telegram. And we want you, our community, to help us design it. What do you think would best represent Midland? The Emblem should convey both the image of the City as a whole as well as the entire Permian Basin Area. So get out your drawing pens, Midland, and get going!

Categories, Prizes and Rules are listed below:

PRIZE INFORMATION: Three Categories: First through Sixth Grade, Seventh through Twelfth Grade and Adult. There will be 30 Semi-finalists, 10 from each category. Each will receive a Certificate for reaching this level. Three finalists will be chosen, one from each category. Each will receive $100.00. The Grand Prize Winner will receive $500.00.

RULES OF THE CONTEST:

1. Entries should be submitted on 8 1/2 x 11, heavy grade white paper. Only two colors of medium should be used (example: black and red). All mediums are acceptable.
2. Entries should be mailed to the care of: Promotions Committee, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Tx. 79702.
3. Entries should be received by May 16, 1983.
4. The winning emblem will become the permanent property of Midland Reporter-Telegram and all rights and use of the emblem will be reserved by The Reporter-Telegram.
5. No art work will be returned to entrants following completion of the contest.
6. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to refine the winning emblem.
7. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram and their family members are not permitted to enter this contest.

Elections may generate conflict

AUSTIN (AP) — Tax rollback elections, according to a school trustee who watched one divide his community, are not pretty.

Nick Bogner says the Magnolia school district tax fight was a neighbor vs. neighbor tussle that trickled down to child vs. child on school buses.

"You learn who your friends are. It caused some people to say some things in the emotional stage of it that they really might regret saying. It's going to take a long time to heal that," said Bogner, who fought a losing battle against a rollback push in his Montgomery County district.

The lesson of Magnolia could be visited on 549 other school districts if Gov. Mark White wins legislative approval for his teacher pay raise plan, according to the Texas Education Agency.

Teacher pay raises are popular this year. Various groups have offered proposals. But Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice and a former teacher pushing for significant raises, says rollbacks loom as a "dark cloud" over all the packages.

Rollbacks are a product of the 1979 revision of state property tax laws. Anytime a taxing entity raises taxes by more than 8 percent, the local populace — through a petition drive — can call a rollback election.

The TEA computers, when fed White's proposal, said 549 of the state's 1,092 school districts would have to top the 8 percent mark to meet the local funds needed. Local increases would be needed because the state does not pay for all teachers in all districts.

About 47,300 school employees, out of a state total of 235,800, are paid for out of local funds, according to the TEA.

On April 2, when Magnolia voters rejected their school board's 28 percent increase, 19 other communities were deciding on rollbacks. Nine elections resulted in rollbacks. Some rollback attempts failed, but forced trustees to offer compromises.

Charles Mathews, director of the Texas Association of School Administrators, says as many as 850 districts could face rollbacks if the teacher pay hike is not balanced with increases in other areas of education.

"We feel like teachers' salaries should have a dramatic increase, but not at the expense of upsetting the balance of support services and salaries," said Mathews.

But Waco teacher Barbara O'Neal, president of the Texas State Teachers Association, said administrators are trying to protect their share of the education fund.

The TSTA and White programs are similar. TSTA's calls for $1.6 billion for pay raises, guaranteeing pay hikes of 24 percent for some teachers. White wants starting pay increased from the current $11,000 to $14,500 in September.

Jobs were on the line in Victoria and El Campo on April 2, where rollback efforts failed.

In Victoria, voters defeated a rollback that would have cut taxes by $1.8 million. A record number of voters — 9,043 — cast ballots on the measure, which was voted down by 835 votes.

The Victoria rollback campaign included a newspaper ad that asked, "Should we give VISA another blank check?" The ad showed a check from the account of "A Hard Pressed Taxpayer, 1983 Out of Work Lane."

The check was payable to the Victoria ISD in the amount of "Anything they ask for and no/100 dollars."

In El Campo, the polls stayed open two hours beyond closing time because of long lines. The record turnout defeated a rollback that an administrator warned could have disrupted the schools.

Acting Superintendent Bill Dowden said without the hike, the district would have been forced to cut 54 teachers, junior high school music and sports programs and $1.1 million out of the budget.

The rollback failed after El Campo trustees promised to limit budget increases, rescinded $151,000 in previously promised raises and eliminated 11 teachers.

Gov. White is aware of the rollback problem because trustees and administrators have been telling him about it.

"We're working to try to minimize the impact it would have on various districts," White said. "Hopefully, by adjusting the formula we can reduce the number of districts that appear to be unfavorably impacted by that increase in salary."

White said there's a "possibility" of widespread rollback elections, but, "I also believe there's a strong dedication in this state to improving our quality of education. I think people are realizing that this is a function of what kind of salaries they pay teachers."

Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, has filed a bill that would allow school districts to raise taxes to meet state-forced increases without facing rollback.

Joe Kelly Butler, State Board of Education president, cautioned legislators that an education package relying on local tax increases would spark rollbacks.

"Ultimately, the very teachers whom we want to give raises to probably will never get them. And my concern is not for the 49 rollback elections already in progress. Instead, my concern is over the hundreds that will never be called because local administrators won't dare take the chance of a rollback," he told the Senate.

According to Butler, the governor's plan puts $457 million into salary hikes, but adds only $321 million in state money — leaving it up to the districts to find the rest.

In Magnolia, a country district with no big industry, rollback means cutback, according to Bogner.

Some recently started programs will be eliminated, as will 36 employees, including 16 teachers, he said. Classes will be larger and programs aimed at letting "children learn at their own level will be put back for a year."

"I think it's pretty easy for people to say they've had enough taxes and this an opportunity for them to do something directly about it," said Bogner.

"On the average home, you're talking about saving $10 a month in taxes."

Unbeaten Rebs show heels to Tall City field

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Staff Photo by Paul Gilbert

The cold, windy conditions for the Tall City Relays at Memorial Stadium Friday didn't seem to bother Midland Lee's Luther Johnson, who won the long jump with a season best leap of 22-feet, 6 1/2 inches.

Permian girls win 4-5A title

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Despite being disqualified from the final event of the night — the 1600-meter relay — Odessa Permian captured the Girls District 4-5A track title with 115 points Friday here at Ratliff Stadium.

Midland High, and others, started protesting at the conclusion of the race because the girl running anchor for Permian threw her baton at the end, a violation of the meet rules. The officials agreed with the protest and as a result the Bulldogs qualified their lone relay of the meet for Regionals.

"I think we did a good job considering we were running injured and everything else," said Midland High coach Brenda Mitchell. "This gives us two weeks to get healthy and to get our time (4:19.10) down. Charlotte Hines is suffering from shin splints. She runs three relays and by the time she gets to the mile (1600) she's in a lot of pain. Sheila Christian is sick and couldn't run."

Penny Griffin, Charlotte Hines, Connie Sutherland and Tina Knight ran the 1600 relay for the Bulldogs which finished nearly eight seconds behind Abilene High, 4:11.6, and because of the DQ, Griffin led her team in events for the Regional meet.

Field events were Griffin's strongest in the meet, claiming top honors in both the long and triple jump (18-0 1/4 and 36-0 1/2 respectively).

"On Penny's jumping, she's been bothered by a bad back all season and really hasn't been able to compete in the triple jump," said Mitchell. "She has jumped 18-3 in the long jump so I knew she was capable of that distance but her triple jump was a surprise."

"I was surprised about my triple jump too," said the MHS senior. "Very surprised. I want to do better in the long jump though. I really want to get 19 this season."

THERE WERE other pleasant surprises for the MHS coach and her team, but the biggest was provided by sophomore Tina Knight who went 35-9 to place second in the triple jump.

"Tina exceeded her best of the year," said Mitchell. "Her previous best was 34-2."

"I'm proud of it," said Knight. "I was hitting right. Everything was perfect. My legs felt perfect, everything. I was loose and ready. I was surprised. I was fifth in the district before tonight."

On the track itself, the Lady Bulldogs had only one individual qualification — junior long-distance runner Claire Hardy — and though she didn't beat her best times of the season, she managed to erase the district record in the 3,200-meter run by nearly 20 seconds with a time of 11:57.4. The previous mark was 12:16.23.

Along with her 3,200 time, Hardy won the 1,600-meter run with a time of 5:40.0. In both events she beat Permian's Paula Baccus for top honors, coming from behind in the final two laps to win the 1,600.

"That's just the way she runs," said Hardy about her opponent. "I had to catch her and I had to work hard at it a lot because that's her race. It's the first time I've run the mile against her, the other times have been in the 3,200."

"I think it's a good time considering the conditions," said Mitchell about Hardy's running in the Permian Basin cold night air. "I was not surprised. I expected her to do well."

"I probably run better in the cold than in the heat," said Hardy. "Once I get going I'm not thinking about the weather."

And what would it take for Hardy to win at Regionals? "I don't know," she said. "I think we'll be racing against El Paso girls and a girl won here at 11:26 earlier this year and there's no telling what she's doing now. It'll be tough."

THOUGH THE Lady Rebels managed to beat the Bulldogs in the team standings, finishing third with 79 points to Midland High's 71 (San Angelo second at 91), only one athlete from Lee advances to Lubbock — high jumper Felicia Farias.

Farias cleared 5-foot-2, four inches higher than her nearest competition, to win the event, and had her sights on the district record (5-4). She had the bar raised from her winning 5-0 jump to 5-2, cleared it but failed to make 5-3.

"I wanted to do better, I really did," she said. "I wanted to jump at least 5-3 but I couldn't get it. That was about it. I probably should have gone up one inch instead of two after 5-0."

"The weather just wasn't conducive for the performance she is capable of," said Lee head coach Linda Caraway. "Five foot won it and she was going for the record and made 5-2. She cleared 5-5 in practice this week."

Giants edge Phillies, 3-2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jeff Leonard had three hits and scored the go-ahead run with the help of an error and a passed ball, lifting San Francisco to a 3-2 victory over the winless Philadelphia Phillies Friday night for the Giants' first victory of the season.

You could put the Midland Lee track team in an ice box, knee deep in dirt and they would still win. The Rebels proved the point Friday when they won the Tall City Relays in unchallenged style in the cold and on the dirt at ancient Memorial Stadium.

The victory was Lee's sixth in a row and kept the Rebs unbeaten on the season with only two weeks remaining before the all-important District 4-5A meet in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

Lee won seven of 15 events while scoring an awesome 155 points. Odessa Permian, running without superstar sprinter Randy Ensich, finished second with 144 while distance-minded San Angelo had 102.

As far as individuals go, it was the best of times and worst of times for the teams involved.

Lee's Damon Polk remains unbeaten in the high hurdles after a mediocre 14.35 and won for the fourth time in six outings in the intermediate hurdles with a little help from one of his own teammates.

Luther Johnson was storming to victory in the intermediates when he hit the last hurdle and fell, allowing Polk to win with a 39.56. Just to show how fast Johnson was moving, he still finished second, almost rolling across the finish.

"I'm still unbeaten in the highs, but I have to admit that I had a little help in the 300 hurdles," Polk said. Johnson said, "I would have won the race if I hadn't messed up at the end. I had him (Polk)."

The battle of sophomores again raised its head in the 100 meters, but this time Midland High's Allen Foret extracted a note of revenge against Lee's Walter Jones. Jones had beaten Foret in the only other meeting this year, but Foret evened the score Friday.

"I think I got him out of the blocks, but he (Jones) was coming strong at the wire," said Foret, who gave the Bulldogs their only victory.

Foret's winning time of 11.03 was not impressive, but one coach said, "That's not bad when you are running against a head wind on a pile of dirt."

Some season bests also came despite the cold conditions. Lee's Isaac Garnett won the shot put with a 58-2 1/2, 1-1 1/2 better than his career best, and Luther Johnson won the long jump with a season best 22-6 1/2. Lee's Mike Barton won the high jump with a 6-6, equaling his season best.

Lee also got a victory from Carl Piccolo in the 3200 meter run with a 10:20.70, but that was far from his best effort. Lee also won the sprint relay with a 42.51.

The worst of times fell on Midland High's Chuck St. Germain in the 800 meters. St. Germain entered the meet unbeaten in the 800 this year, but finished only sixth with a disappointing 2:04.1. Permian's Bruce Bennett won the race with a 2:00.39.

"Chuck didn't run a good race to start with, but he has been sick and he just hasn't recovered," said MHS coach Johnny Williams. "We still have to give him some work. I just hope this doesn't destroy his confidence."

The big surprise for MHS came in the same race, however. Ross Petree finished third with his best time of 2:01.63 and looked for a time like he might win the race before Bennett and San Angelo's Thomas Emmons passed him in the last 100 yards.

Permian coach Waymond Griggs tried some people in new races. "We have to find a way to close the gap against Lee for the district meet," was the way he put it. Ensich being out was the main reason, however. Still, Dennis Alexander showed his strength in the 200 for the first time this year with a 21.57, beating Lee's Carlton Johnson and Jones easily.

Rebels travel for Odessa

The Midland Lee Rebels are looking to regain their winning ways today when they take on Odessa High's Bronchos in Odessa to start the second half of District 4-5A baseball.

The Rebels, leading the league with a 6-1 record — one game ahead of No. 2 San Angelo at 5-2, are coming off their only loss of the first half, a 14-2 defeat against Midland High on Tuesday and are facing a team that has discovered how to win.

Odessa High, only a 5-8 overall, is 4-3 in 4-5A mark and tied for third place with Big Spring.

Midland High snapped a five-game losing streak against the Rebels are looking to start a winning one today against Odessa Permian at Memorial Stadium Field. The Bulldogs and Panthers are tied with Abilene Cooper for last place in the 4-5A at 2-5.

Elsewhere, Big Spring is in Abilene High and Abilene Cooper is in San Angelo. All 4-5A games are scheduled for a 2 p.m.

WHAT BROUGHT Lee to its 6-1 first half record, until the loss to Midland High, was a combination of strong hitting and clutch pitching.

The Rebels have a team batting average of .301 (once as high as .324) and are led by Barry Blackwell at .650, Rob Walker at .417 and Ted Leps and Steve Woodlee at .389 each.

On the mound, the Rebels have posted a team earned run average of 3.04 and have used the strikeout as one of their strongest weapons. The ability to get the strikeout has helped the Lee pitching corps get its way of trouble caused by too many walks, 45.

In the first meeting between Lee and OHS, the Rebels pulled out a sloppy 12-7 victory after trailing 6-3 going into the bottom of the fifth inning. The game featured a total of 15 hits, 17 walks, seven errors, six hit batters and two wild pitches.

THINGS WEREN'T much cleaner when Midland High and Permian met that same day, only most of the mistakes were made by the Panthers, led by eight errors out of nine in the game. It ended up as an 8-3 Bulldog victory.

M-Cubs, El Paso delayed again

EL PASO — There's so much snow out here that the Diablos called off Saturday's Texas League game with the Midland Cubs at the same time they postponed Friday's scheduled season's opener.

The teams will try to squeeze in a pair of games Sunday, starting at 2 p.m., that is, if the 17 inch snowfall can be cleared by then.

Manager Tom Harmon kept his Cubs in Mesa, Ariz., this week when word of the bad weather reached the team. The Cubs had planned to fly into the Border City for a Thursday workout and then the game Friday.

El Paso's defending Texas League West Division champion Diablos have been home for a week, playing the Juarez, Mexican League, Indians a couple of games, but for the last five days they have been weatherbound.

Beaumont, which moved from Amarillo after last season, will be in Midland as the Cubs open their home season Wednesday night. San Antonio will follow the Exporters into the Tall City for another five-game series.

Outside of the switch to Beaumont by the San Diego Padres' farm hands, the league remains unchanged. In the East division, Tulsa, Jackson, Little Rock and Shreveport again will battle. Tulsa, the Texas Rangers farm club, won the TL pennant last year by defeating El Paso in a best-of-five series.

Joining Midland, El Paso, and Beaumont in the West is San Antonio, the Dodgers' farm club. El Paso is the farm club of the Milwaukee Brewers.

The first half of the season ends June 18. The second half ends Aug. 31. The best-of-three divisional play-offs are to begin Sept. 2.

Atlanta measures Padres

From wire reports
CINCINNATI — Rookie Gary Redus went 4-for-4, homered and drove in five runs night, powering Mario Soto and the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-3 victory over the winless Chicago Cubs.

Redus' second home run, a three-run blow in the second, gave the Reds a 4-2 lead. He added a two-run single in the third.

Soto blanked the Cubs over the final six innings for his second victory, striking out 10 and surrendering seven hits, three by former Midland Cub Mel Hall.

Expos 8, Dodgers 3
LOS ANGELES — Andre Dawson went 5-for-5 and drove in two runs and Tim Lincecum picked up three hits and scored three as the Los Angeles Dodgers whipped the Montreal Expos 8-3.

Dawson tripled, doubled and had three singles — tying a team record for hits in a game — and giving him eight hits in 13 at-bats this season. It was L.A.'s first loss.

Mustangs sets mark in javelin
AUSTIN (AP) — Roald Bradstock, a Southern Methodist sophomore from Birmingham, England, hurled the javelin a school record 279-feet, 3-inches Friday to register the biggest surprise in the 56th annual Texas Relays and Arkansas and Texas Christian provided near-record relay performances.

Bradstock's toss—third best in Southwest Conference history—beat the best of Texas' Einar Vilhjalmsson of Sweden, the favorite, by nine inches.

Two weeks ago Vilhjalmsson had thrown the javelin 279.3 in winning a triangular meet at UCLA.

"It was only my second competition of the year," said Bradstock. "It came on my fifth throw which is always my best. I saw Einar had a throw of 272.5 prior to my attempt. His throw was just what I needed. It really got me psyched up."

The women's javelin also stole the spotlight from the relay teams.

Denise Thiemard of the University of Nebraska established a Relays and Memorial Stadium record with a toss of 190-8. The old standard was 184-8 by Dana Olson of Houston.

Arkansas' Stanley Redwine ran a brilliant anchor of 1:46.4 for the Razorbacks as they won the first section of the collegiate sprint medley relay in 3:15.70. Arkansas just missed the Texas Relays' record of 3:15.2 owned by Kansas since 1967 when Jim Ryan was running for the Jayhawks. Rice was second and SMU was third.

Baylor took the second section of the spring medley relay in a slow 3:19.99.

Braves 4, Padres 2

ATLANTA — Bruce Benedict drilled a tie-breaking double in the eighth inning to boost Atlanta to a 4-2 victory over the San Diego Padres Friday in the Braves' home opener.

Benedict's drive off the glove of a left fielder Gene Richards scored Chris Chambliss, who had walked to open the inning and had taken third on Glenn Hubbard's single. One out later, Hubbard came home on Brett Butler's grounder.

The Padres tied it at 2 in the sixth without a hit as Atlanta starter Rick Camp hit a wild streak. Camp walked Richards and Juan Bonilla before striking out Steve Garvey. Reliever Pete Falcone came on and Terry Kennedy reached on Bob Horner's error at third, loading the bases. Sixto Lezcano then delivered a sacrifice fly to right off reliever off Rick Mahler.

The Braves had gone ahead in the fifth on consecutive run-scoring singles by Butler and Rafael Ramirez off San Diego starter Eric Show. Benedict had reached on a one-out single and moved to second when Camp was hit by a pitch.

Four former Georgia governors were in attendance for the home opener, including former President Jimmy Carter, who threw out the first ball. The crowd of 32,737 was much smaller than anticipated because of heavy rains earlier in the day.

Rainy weather delays Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The rainout of Friday's play and a gloomy forecast for Saturday caused the general chairman of the 47th Masters golf tournament to raise the possibility that the event might not produce a champion this year.

"I kind of have a gut feeling we should not have a Masters champion at less than 72 holes," general chairman Hord Hardin said Friday.

But Hardin emphasized that "our options are open." Should further play be rained out, he said, the tournament would be extended through Monday, possibly Tuesday.

"We're going to do everything possible to play 72 holes. If we have to go to Monday, we will; Tuesday possibly," he said, then added, smiling.

"If you ask me if we get a week of rain, will we go to next Saturday, I'll say we don't have to make that decision at this time."

Heavy rains flooded low-lying portions of the Augusta National Golf Club course and forced the postponement of Friday's scheduled second round in the first of the year's Big Four golf championships.

"Any number of greens were unplayable and when you get this much rain, the bunkers get out of shape," Hardin said. The day's play was called off well before the scheduled first tee time. Few players even came to the course.

Presently, depending on the weather, a single round is scheduled for Saturday with a double round of 36 holes set for Sunday.

After the completion of two rounds, the international field of 82 will be cut to the low 44 scorers and all within 10 shots of the leader for the final 36 holes.

Saturday's forecast calls for an 80 percent chance of rain, with a 60 percent chance of thunderstorms. The course has been saturated by three days of intermittent rains.

In the event of further rainouts, Hardin was asked, would the Masters be reduced to a 36- or 54-hole event?

"I don't think we want to do that," he said. "But it's conceivable. We'll leave the options open."

"But," he continued, "would we declare the leader after 36 or 54 holes a winner? We might say, in the most disastrous situation, that there is no champion for 1983."

"Our options are open," he repeated.

None of the recognized major championships — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA — ever has been reduced to less than 72 holes of play because of bad weather. Before the turn of the century, both the U.S. and British Opens were scheduled at 36 holes.

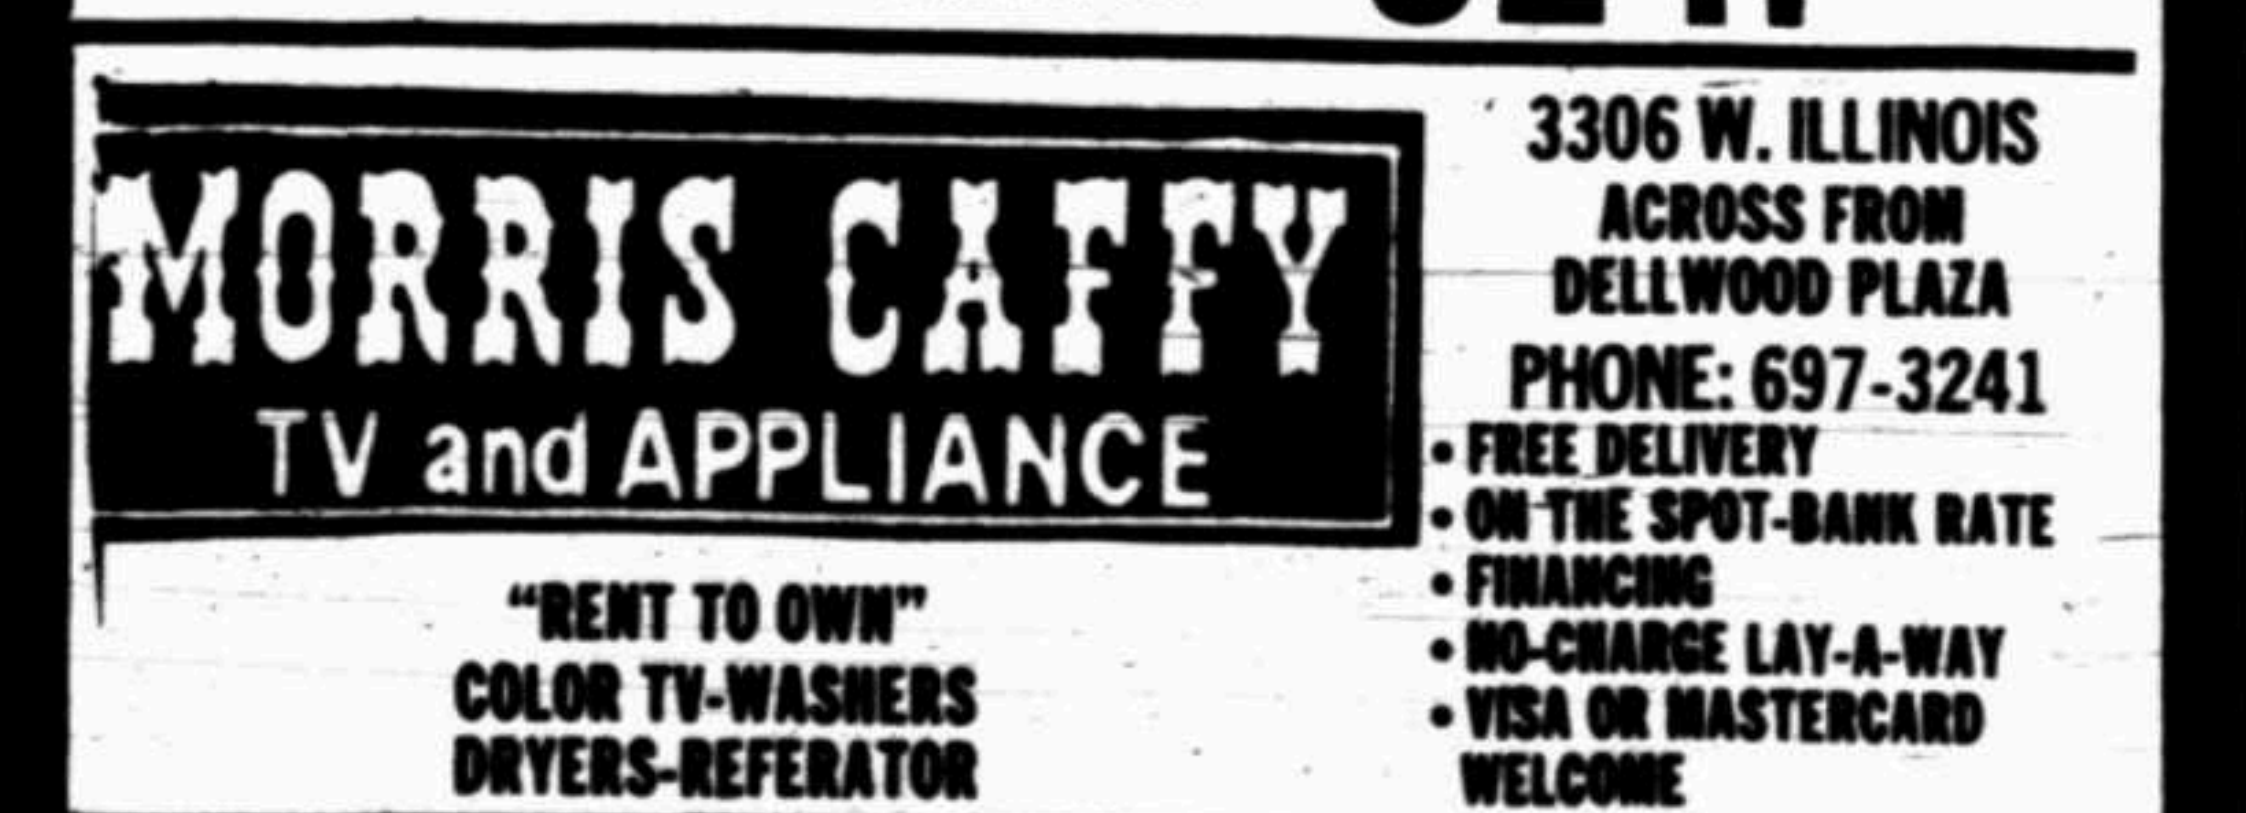

Ray Floyd, the 1976 Masters winner and the 1982 PGA champion, Jack Renner and Gil Morgan, winner of the first two PGA Tour titles this season, shared the Masters' 18-hole lead at 67, five under par.

Arnold Palmer, 53, who won the first of his four Masters crowns 25 years ago, topped a group at 68. He was tied with amateur Jim Hallet, J.C. Snead and former Masters champions Seve Ballesteros of Spain and Charles Coody.

Defending champion Craig Stadler had a first-round 69. Tom Watson, the 1982 U.S. and British Open champion, had a 70. Lee Trevino shot 71 in the first round, and Jack Nicklaus, the only five-time Masters winner, struggled to a 73.

Lamp gets win for White Sox

AL Boxes

DETROIT — Former Midland Cub pitcher Dennis Lamp and Jerry Koosman combined on a seven-hitter as the Chicago White Sox spoiled the Detroit Tigers' home opener 6-3 before 51,350 fans.

Chicago broke up a 3-3 tie when Carlton Fisk opened the seventh with a single and scored on singles by Rudy Law and Tony Bernazard. Harold Baines singled Law home and Detroit Milt Wilcox, 0-1, hit Greg Luzinski with a pitch to load the bases. Aurelio Lopez relieved force home Benaraz with a walk to Greg Walker.

The White Sox trailed 3-0 in the fifth when Fisk hit a triple off Chet Lemon's glove in deep center and scored on Vance Law's sacrifice fly. Rudy Law hit a leadoff double in the White Sox sixth and went to second when Kirk Gibson dropped Bernazard's fly in right and Baines tripped two runs home.

The Tigers scored in the third inning. Tom Brookens led off with a triple and scored on Gibson's two-out infield single. Howard Johnson, who had walked and moved to second on Gibson's hit, scored on a single by Lance Parrish. Larry Herndon then singled Gibson home to make it 3-0.

Lamp, 10, worked six innings, allowing just four hits while walking four and striking out one. Koosman came on to start the seventh inning and gave up only three hits in saving Chicago's first victory of the year.

Red Sox 8, Rangers 5
ARLINGTON — Just when the Boston Red Sox appeared to have things well in hand, the Texas Rangers scored three times with two out in the eighth inning to tie the game Friday night.

But the Red Sox came back with four hits and three runs of their own in the ninth for an 8-5 victory, which included a three-hit, five-RBI performance by Wade Boggs and 4-for-5 by Dave Stapleton.

"Coming back like that after they come back at you and get momentum is something," Stapleton said.

Glenn Hoffman, whose two-run single snapped the tie, said, "It's a big win for us, especially after they came back and tied it. It's a good way to start a road trip."

Boggs said it was a game where everything went right for him.

"Not a bad night," said Boggs, whose hits included a pair of two-run doubles, one of them off the third base bag. "That hit was sweet. It rolled right down the line. I was hoping it wouldn't go foul. When the ball stayed fair, I said, 'Oh, God, when things are going right, they're going right.'"

Carl Yastrzemski and Stapleton opened the Boston ninth with singles against reliever Mike Mason. Odell Jones came on for Texas but walked Rich Gedman and Hoffman delivered his tie-breaking single. Gedman scored on Boggs' third hit of the game.

Boggs rapped two-run doubles in the second and sixth inning to help Boston to a 5-2 lead, but the Texas rally against Mark Clear in the eighth spoiled starter Mike Brown's bid for a victory in his first major league start.

Dave Hostetter started the Rangers' eighth inning rally with a single, moved up on a groundout and scored on Pete O'Brien's single. Jim Sundberg doubled to make it 5-4 and barge, Fla. won seven of the tying run on George Wright's third eight matches to move into second place.

Tom Milton of St. Peter's won seven of the tying run on George Wright's third eight matches to move into second place.

Beth Daniel explodes out of a trap in J&B Scotch Pro-Am at Las Vegas.

Chest pains sideline 2-time winner Caponi

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Donna Caponi, two-time winner of the J&B Scotch Pro-Am LPGA Golf Tournament, was disqualified from the competition Friday after she was rushed to a hospital complaining of chest pains, a spokesman said.

Electrocardiogram tests at Sunrise Hospital found no heart problems, and doctors said the 38-year-old Caponi probably suffered a pulled chest muscle, said Stan Wood, spokesman for the $200,000 tournament.

She "wanted to resume play, but by then, she had missed her 8:39 a.m. tee-off time and was disqualified by tournament officials," Wood added.

Caponi then boarded a noon flight for her home in Boston, he said. She ended Thursday's first round of the 72-hole tournament with a 74, seven shots behind the leaders, Beth Daniel, of Seabrook Island, S.C., and Kathy Postlewait of Sylacauga, Ala.

Caponi won this event in 1980 and 1981.

FBI questions Colts' Schlichter

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Baltimore Colts quarterback Art Schlichter, described by a federal source as a victim of gamblers, is cooperating with the FBI in a sports gambling probe, his lawyer said Friday.

Schlichter, 22, a former Ohio State University star, is not himself a target of the probe, the federal source said.

Jack Chester, the lawyer, said charges stemming from the investigation, in which four Baltimore men have been indicted, do not involve football games in which Schlichter or his team played.

According to published reports, Schlichter ran up $389,000 in gambling losses.

"Schlichter, in cooperation with the FBI, is a material witness in the prosecution of four Maryland men indicted yesterday on gambling charges by a federal grand jury," Chester said.

"None of the charges involve any football game in which Schlichter, or any team of which he was a member, participated," he said.

According to published reports, Schlichter helped the FBI investigate the four men after he failed to pay his losses and the men threatened to tell the Colts about his gambling.

ATTEMPTS to reach Schlichter in person at his family's home were unsuccessful, and telephone calls to his home were unanswered. The Columbus Dispatch said Friday that he was under police protection in Columbus.

The federal source in Washington, D.C., who agreed to answer questions on the condition that he not be identified by name, said Schlichter has been cooperating with federal agents.

He's been victimized by certain individuals in the gambling world. He's incurred some debts to these people and he's been helping to resolve the matter," the source said.

The National Football League in

New York said it, too, was helping the FBI in the probe.

"We have been cooperating with federal authorities in their investigation of the gambling that involves Baltimore backup quarterback Art Schlichter," the NFL said in a statement. "An NFL representative recently met with Mr. Schlichter, and the league will continue its investigation. We will have no further comment at this time due to the pending status of the federal case and our own investigation."

ROGER GOODELL, an NFL spokesman, refused to say if the league planned to take any action against Schlichter. "We're just investigating the situation at this point," he said in a telephone interview.

Under league rules, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle could fine, suspend or terminate his career if Schlichter knowingly associated with gamblers or was involved with gambling activity. Paul Horning of the Green Bay Packers and Alex Karras of the Detroit Lions were suspended indefinitely before the 1963 season for betting on league games. Both sat out the entire season.

The same year, five other Detroit players were fined $2,000 each for betting $50 each on Green Bay to beat the New York Giants in the 1962 title game.

The grand jury returned a six-count gambling indictment against the four Baltimore men Thursday, charging them with trying to blackmail an unidentified "private citizen of good standing in the community" who owed them $159,000 in gambling debts.

INDICTED on charges of traveling in interstate commerce to promote a gambling activity were Harold E. Brooks Jr., 26, Joseph A. Serio 24, and Charles Thomas Swift, 41, all of Baltimore, and Samuel Richard Alasca, of Catonsville, Md., a Baltimore suburb.

Schlichter was not named in the indictment.

Fred Lynn content to stay unknown

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service
You may remember that when he was last seen a year ago, Frederick Michael Lynn of the El Monte Lynns was systematically dismantling baseball's playoff series and the Milwaukee pitching staff.

They couldn't get him out. Five runs batted in, one home run, four runs scored, three walks and a .611 batting average — an incandescent burst of baseball that only the great ones periodically explode.

Freddy Lynn of the Angels occasionally makes a mistake like that and exposes himself to painful public scrutiny, the last thing he wants to do. Ever.

Fred is almost baseball's secret superstar. He has a personality better suited to international spying than to a name-in-the-paper occupation. He should have a double-O number and a mail drop. If he could, he would probably play without his name on the back. Maybe without a number. He would like the kind of write-up a local critic might give an out-of-town opening of a play. "The center fielder remembered all his lines. He contributed five hits to the victory and was adequate in the field and seemed to this reviewer to rise above his material."

JUST FOR the record, since he's not your average magazine-cover type, Fred Lynn has brown eyes, a nice smile, the smoothest swing you ever saw and his eyesight is five degrees better than normal. But he's shy and he doesn't see anything particularly difficult about hitting or catching a speeding baseball.

None of this sells tickets in and of itself, and the game is nowhere near as easy as Lynn makes it out to be. Baseball needs ink and while Fred does his best when the legions of microphones and tape recorders descend on him after a game, he always manages to look faintly embarrassed.

The reporters do their best for him. For instance, he was voted the MVP in the league playoff last season, even though his team got beat. For Fred it was like being the best singer in a flop musical.

Any other ballplayer in the game would be sulking. Tiant or some 250 hitting infielder.

In Anaheim, he found Reggie Jackson on the media guide covers and the general manager gave out interviews about how Reggie, with his media expertise, could keep the publicity heat off the others.

IT'S NOT that Lynn shrinks from seeing his name in print. "Listen," he tells you, "I know there's a one-to-one relationship between the amount of ink you get and the amount of money you make. I want records kept."

It's just that he believes that something over 90 percent of the game is concentration. "It's the difference between hitting .298 and .339. Some guys can shrug off distractions, others cannot. When I go out there in the batter's circle and, all of a sudden, I can hear a conversation in the ninth row between a guy and his girlfriend, I know I'm not into the game. When I go out there in the middle of 50,000 people and all of a sudden it's like I'm alone, I know I'm all right."

In the — for him — disastrous season of 1981, Lynn says, the strike took him completely out of the game mood. "I kept thinking 'Well, they won't play this or, worse, drunk and still go 4 for 4?' That's not so surprising," he says. "If anything, it's even easier to shut everything out when you already feel rotten! I've been there. Why, some of the best days I had at bat were when I felt lousy, had the flu, a temperature, a cough, or all three. That's an aid to concentration."

IS HE saying hitting is cerebral? "To an extent," he holds. "You have to have the basic stroke, the coordination, strength. Then, you have to get your mind in gear."

One sure way to avoid media distractions would be to bat .219 again, as Lynn did in 1981. But he's not that devoted to privacy. If he was that hung up on anonymity, he wouldn't have become a baseball player in the first place. It was a lesson the mayor of New York impressed on Charles Lindbergh when the flyer complained about a ticker tape parade and the worldwide adulation his solo flight to Paris had excited and wondered how to avoid it. "Too late, Lindy," Jimmie Walker told him.

LYNN DOESN'T want to crash at Mineola. Or bat .219 again. In baseball, once the great Frank Robinson watched in dismay as young Pete Rose hit a home run and went stroking around the bases in 7-point something seconds. He said, "Kid, why don't you leave those home runs to those of us who know how to act them out?"

In a locker room some night, some bawling outfielder is going to notice Fred Lynn squirming under a barrage of media attention and he'll sell over. Lynn, why don't you lend those statistics of yours, those .611, 44 for 18 series, to those of us who could take them up to the Sunset Strip or the banquet circuit or the Johnny Carson show and act them out?

Agent joins Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — An FBI agent will join the Dallas Cowboys as a full-time security director whose duties include investigating drug use by players, The Dallas Times Herald reported Friday.

Cowboy President Tex Schramm declined to identify the man who will become the first full-time security director for a National Football League team.

But sources told the newspaper a Dallas-based FBI agent who has been with the agency since 1969 will resign April 15 to take the $55,000-a-year job with the Cowboys.

"Drugs will be one of his main responsibilities," Schramm said Thursday. "I don't want to get into a big discussion about it right now, but I will confirm it. The idea was partially mine. He's going to office right here with us and once he gets started, there will be no secret about it." Schramm, who said he was responsible for hiring the security director, declined to discuss the specific duties of the job.

The Cowboy president has been an advocate of drug-testing on a league-wide basis and stricter enforcement of controlled substances. Last summer he said he would seek NFL legislation to require players to undergo urinalysis spot checks at least twice a year.

In the last year, Dallas players Harvey Martin and Tony Dorsett have been questioned by federal drug agents and the names of Martin and Ed "Too Tall" Jones were mentioned in recent federal court testimony involving convicted cocaine dealers.

'Undocumented commuters' integral part of El Paso

By DAN BALZ

CUIDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — Just after 8 a.m., Socorro Laguna is on her way to work. Fashionably dressed and made up, gold earrings sparkling in the early morning light, she makes her way along the river bank, waiting for a man to ferry her across.

Four days a week she makes the trek from her home in Juarez down to the Rio Grande and across to El Paso, where she says she has worked for the same American family for the last 15 years, earning $21 a day.

She would be like millions of others who commute to work in America, except for one thing: apparently lacking immigration papers, she crosses the river illegally, ferried on someone's back to stay dry.

Laguna's route to work is not unusual. She is only one in a procession of undocumented commuters who make this daily journey from Juarez to El Paso — and back across the bridges, because it is legal to cross into Mexico. It is a bizarre spectacle that begins each day around dawn, west of one of the downtown bridges linking the cities.

Alan E. Eliason, chief of the Border Patrol here, estimates that his agents apprehend about half the undocumented workers who cross the border heading for other U.S. cities. But as for these "illegal alien commuters," he said only that "some of them know our operations better than our younger officers do."

THE SCENE ON the river illustrates the curious culture of the border, the porosity of the barriers between the countries and the consensual nature of the relationship between these intertwined cities.

The Rio Grande rolls through downtown El Paso in a concrete chute fenced in by the "Tortilla Curtain." But a few hundred yards west of the series of bridges that span the river, the fence ends. Along here, Rio Grande is a misnomer: it is but 30 yards across in places, and often runs shallow.

An adult can wade easily across in knee-deep water. No one knows how many people make the trek daily, but in a three-hour period several hundred are likely to cross.

Across the river, a number of Mexicans walk west along the river bank to a point where a few men are waiting. The men are "burros," and for 50 pesos or so — roughly 30 cents — they ferry commuters across on their backs. From her bicycle on the Juarez side, a woman runs a small concession stand for commuters. On the American side, a man in a red baseball cap sells burritos from a big white bucket to the daily travelers.

ONCE THE commuters get to the American side, they must navigate safely into downtown El Paso. The Border Patrol appears rather tolerant on the river banks, but officers regularly patrol the entry points to the city.

Most of the commuters follow a path through a fence that separates the railroad tracks from a housing project. Like most of the fences along the border, it has gaping holes.

From there, the commuters make their way along the narrow streets, taking cover around corners of buildings until all seems clear for a dash into the downtown area. Then they go to work — as maids, gardeners, construction workers, busboys. By now, undocumented workers have become an integral part of the El Paso economy, and, while the Border Patrol attempts to prevent undocumented workers from escaping into the U.S. interior, there appears to be considerably less concern about apprehending the commuters.

More women than men cross at this hour; some are carried across by men who appear to be their husbands. One woman says through an interpreter that she is going to look for work in El Paso, that she has heard of a woman there who works in a restaurant and helps people find work. She says it is her first time across.

LATER, ON the American side, two young men approach me near the Tortilla Curtain. One of them is a 25-year-old from the interior of Mexico who says he is heading for Dallas, Denver or some other city to find work. He is the kind of undocumented worker the Border Patrol is most interested in catching, and he is nervous.

He speaks some English, and we talk for a few minutes until we hear a warning shout. Two hundred yards to the east, a Border Patrol van appears. A group of Mexicans near us gathers to watch. We are all in view of the van.

A short time passes and the van disappears in the opposite direction, then reappears. A second van suddenly comes into view, speeding directly toward the nine undocumented workers who have retreated to a gap in the fence.

But at the last minute the van turns and stops beside me. A young Border Patrol agent gets out and asks me who I am and if I am authorized to be there. I identify myself and tell him no.

"This is government property," he says politely, "and technically you are trespassing." But there is no problem, and we stand and talk about the phenomenon of the commuters. We are looking directly at the nine undocumented workers at the fence. "A lot of the commuters who come across are good people," he says.

Racial quota system divides city's police

The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

NEW ORLEANS — Yvonne Bechet is a black policewoman who finally got her sergeant's stripes in December, due in part to a racial quota system that is expected to reshape the command structure of the New Orleans police department dramatically.

Larry Lombas is a white officer, still waiting to make sergeant. He says he believes the quota — one black promoted for every white until the supervisory ranks are 50 percent black — has cut his chances for advancement in half.

"They say somebody has to suffer," Lombas said. "Well, why do I have to suffer? I never hurt anyone. I just did my job. I always worked closely with blacks. But now they're taking something from me that I worked for."

"Nothing has been taken from them that was rightfully theirs," said Bechet. "Half their opportunity belonged to me."

Bechet and Lombas are on opposite sides of one of the country's most important civil rights cases, one lawyers say could radically alter the nation's approach to remedying employment discrimination.

IN JANUARY the Reagan administration intervened in the case, joining in the challenge to the quota system, and transforming the case into a crucial confrontation in the legal war between the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department and the nation's civil rights lawyers, represented in New Orleans by the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund Inc.

At stake is the most effective remedy for discrimination blacks have found: comprehensive quotas, like those applied in the police departments in Birmingham and Detroit and now in New Orleans, that bring about rapid change in hiring and promotion.

Before the New Orleans plan took effect in December, blacks held only seven supervisory posts (five sergeants, two lieutenants) out of 283 in the police department of a city that is 55 percent black. Combined with another part of the settlement agreement, the creation of 44 supervisory slots exclusively for blacks, the supervisory ranks will become 50 percent black.

Blacks benefit from such quotas regardless of whether, as individuals, they were specifically denied a promotion or a job on racial grounds.

THE REAGAN administration hopes this case ends that situation. The Civil Rights Division has told the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the practice violates both civil rights law and the Constitution.

"Persons who have not been victimized by the employer's discriminatory practices," the government's brief said, have no claim to special treatment under quotas. The practice is an "inequitable infringement on the rights of innocent non-black officers."

If the administration view prevails, said Barry Goldstein, of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, "The Equal Employment Opportunities Commission may as well fold up shop and go home. That's not hyperbole. There will be no effective remedy against the worst offenders in the worst situations."

The quotas in the New Orleans police department were imposed as part of a wide-ranging consent decree the city accepted in 1981 to settle a discrimination suit brought by black officers in 1973.

However, a U.S. District Court judge invalidated the quotas as excessively harsh on non-minorities in the department. A Fifth Circuit panel voted 2 to 1 to reinstate the disputed percentages. And, on Feb. 14, at the urging of the Justice Department, the full circuit court agreed to review the panel's decision.

"THE WORST situation" was exactly what New Orleans was, in the view of blacks who initiated the discrimination complaint against the police department. Before 1950, no blacks were hired by the police department. When the suit was first filed in 1973, in a city then 45 percent black, only 6 percent of the department was black. The department of 1,400 is now 20 percent black.

Black police officers hired in the 1960s and 1970s say discrimination was part of the daily routine, from assignments they were confined to all-black neighborhoods and kept off elite plain-clothes and tactical units) to bathrooms. As late as 1970, according to court affidavits, some station houses had segregated bathrooms, the blacks sharing with prisoners.

Blacks were able to pass examinations leading to promotion, but they were ranked low on the eligibility lists in part because seniority in the department counted for 40 percent of the ranking. Often the department would allow a list to expire just before reaching the highest ranking black on it.

In 1973, for example, nine of 44 blacks competing for promotion to sergeant made the list. But only one of 80 promotions went to blacks that year. Before the imposition of the quota system, only 20 blacks in the history of the department had made it above the lowest rank.

LAWRENCE PRESTON Williams, one of the blacks who sued in 1973 and then left the department to become a lawyer, remembers his first months as a New Orleans police officer in 1968. Rather than having a permanent partner like other officers, he was assigned a different one each day.

"I was told by my lieutenant that the white officers felt everyone should bear the burden of riding with the black," he said.

Bechet said that the day she first reported for duty in a district 14 years ago the entire platoon called in sick in protest.

In addition to being unjust, the department's treatment of blacks caused the quality of police work to suffer, Williams said. "As hard as they tried, the white police couldn't get information from blacks," Williams said.

On the street, police who couldn't or wouldn't distinguish among blacks stopped blacks indiscriminately. "There were unnecessary confrontations, even with the most well-intentioned whites," Williams said.

In 1981, the Justice Department reported that it had received more brutality complaints about New Orleans than from any other city in the United States. In that same year, New Orleans police officers shot nine blacks in incidents critics charged involved excessive use of force. The city paid more than $1 million that year to settle abuse charges brought by blacks.

FINALLY, IN November 1981, police hunting the killer of a white patrolman swept through a housing project, killing four blacks in pre-dawn raids and injuring a dozen others. Three officers were convicted March 28 of this year of violating the civil rights of a black man brutally interrogated during the hunt.

The discrimination suit filed by Williams and 12 other black officers was dormant until 1980. The day it was scheduled to go to trial, the city agreed to the consent decree that required affirmative action in hiring and training of black police officers, the creation of 44 new positions above the officer level for blacks and the disputed promotion quota system.

Angry whites and some of their lawyers say Mayor Dutch Morial, the city's first black mayor, settled the case to get black votes in his bid for re-election. Morial said in an interview that the city settled because "it was in trouble" in the suit.

In addition, he said, "It is consistent with the philosophy of this administration to bring about a police department that is reflective and representative of the totality of this community." Morial said that as the proportion of blacks in the department has increased the quality of the city's policing has also improved.

NEARLY THREE-FOURTHS of the officers in the department signed petitions protesting the agreement. A group of white and Hispanic officers hired their own lawyers and were allowed to intervene in the case in protest.

"We felt our careers were over," said Lombas, who has tried for promotions three times during his 15 years on the force. "If this thing is finalized, you're going to see a mass exodus of whites from the department."

"How far can you go in infringing the legitimate legal rights of non-black employees in order to vindicate the rights of blacks in general who were not themselves victims?" asked Lombas' lawyer, Sidney M. Bach.

Israeli general challenges Reagan to form summit

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — A former Israeli general who helped command Israeli troops in their victory over Arab forces in the June 1967 war Friday called on President Reagan to convene a new three-way summit — of Israel, Jordan and the PLO — or face the prospect that his Middle East peace plan will go up in smoke.

The proposed summit, a "Camp David Two," would challenge all three — but particularly Israel and the PLO — to accept each other's existence. Gen. Matiyahu Peled told the National Press Club, because "simply by attending, they will manifest their acceptance" of the other's right to exist.

"That would be a tremendously successful start to such a peace conference," Peled added. He explained that "the way I read the little drama working in Amman (Jordan)," there is no way King Hussein will ever be given the authority by the PLO to negotiate for all four million homeless Palestinians.

"The PLO would like to negotiate in their own name, which is a reason why I believe they would accept an invitation to attend such a peace conference," he added. He called on Reagan to issue the invitations together with a "serious warning" to all three that they ignore them at their own peril.

In other words, it would be immediately clear that any one of the three who boycotted such a peace conference was not seriously interested in peace and the American public and Congress could draw the appropriate conclusions.

If Reagan took the dramatic step, it would involve a sharp reversal of U.S. policy.

The United States, since former Secretary of State Kissinger in 1976 negotiated an "understanding" along these lines with Israel, has pledged it would not deal with the PLO until the organization both accepts Israel's right to exist and renounces provisions in its charter calling for Israel's destruction.

Israel too would be unlikely to accept an invitation, although Peled explained the U.S. would have a strong case that in accepting, the PLO had at least recognized Israel's existence. The former Israeli general, who teaches at Tel Aviv University, said he is confident the PLO would accept.

Peled met last month with PLO leader Yasir Arafat and was denounced in Israel for having reached "the depths of depravity" for doing so. Asked why he had taken the unusual step, Peled said that "the Palestinian problem is not only central to the Arab-Israeli problem — it is central to peace in the Middle East."

He said that almost every Arab nation has said it would recognize Israel's right to exist in peace provided the Palestinian problem is resolved. "The Palestinian problem exists because there is a Palestinian people of four million whose fate must be resolved for there to be lasting peace in the Middle East."

Oscar fever plays fans, stars alike

EDITOR'S NOTE — Oscar, come home. That Hollywood plait echoes from the hills, as the Academy Awards once again capture the imagination of motion picture actors and artisans — and the viewing public. For the 55th annual event, AP Movie Writer Bob Thomas looks at the spectacle, from the flurry of Beverly Hills beauty appointments to what winning means to careers and studios.

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Oscar fever starts Monday at dawn, when the first spectators — curious tourists and hard-core movie fans — begin filling the bleachers in front of the Music Center.

The excitement rises as the first celebrities start arriving in late afternoon. The ceremonies begin at 6 p.m. PST, the drama playing to 3,000 fancily dressed observers in the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion and an estimated 350 million TV watchers throughout the world.

Early Tuesday morning, the last loser will toss down a brandy and leave the Board of Governors Ball at the Beverly Hilton Hotel. Then history will claim the 55th awards of the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences.

The Oscars are the oldest of the show business awards and the most prestigious. They are also big business. Not only to the winners of best picture and the acting awards, who can enjoy added millions. The Academy itself is also the winner.

The 1982 awards telecast provided $3,734,870 in revenue. The show cost $2,811,499, providing a $923,371 profit to help finance the Academy's library, educational and cultural activities.

THE OSCAR season begins in December, when the late entries are released in theaters amid much hoopla. The noise level rises as the studios campaign for nominations, then maintains a steady pace until the balloting closes six days before the awards.

The final three days brings intense activity, not only with those participating in the show.

"We're completely booked for our 35 limos," reports Dan Grabowski, head of Starlight Limousine. "We may have to sublet some cars from other companies to fill the demand."

Customers pay $25 an hour, 10-hour minimum, to ride to the festivities in style — $35 an hour for presidential stretchouts, complete with color TV and wet bar fully stocked.

"We put on an extra shift to make house calls," says Allen Edwards, who operates a beauty salon on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills.

"Instead of two makeup people on Monday, we'll have four." Among his regular customers: Cher, Raquel

Welch, Sally Field — and nominee Dustin Hoffman ("Tootsie"), who will have his hair styled before Monday night's show.

"The hotel is fully booked during the weekend before the awards," says Mal Sibley, public relations chief of the Beverly Hills Hotel. "The studios with the most nominations always reserve space for their New York executives, and we have a lot of foreign nominees. Most of the visitors check out the day after the awards."

THE COUNTY-OPERATED Music Center is shut down for a week before the awards. Then the ABC network starts moving in equipment, and Howard W. Koch and Marty Pasetta begin intensive operations. Koch is a veteran film producer ("The Odd Couple," "Airplane") who is producing the Oscarcast for the eighth time. Multiple Emmy-winner Pasetta is directing his 12th Oscar show.

Producer and director started meetings last December, assembling staff and making plans. When the nominations were announced, their work began in earnest: hiring dancers, scenic designers, costumers.

"During the last week I start 16-hour days," says Pasetta. "After Saturday I have an apartment in the Music Center so I can sleep two or three hours a night."

Koch, who has lined up all the presenters and performers, has a standby list in case of dropouts. "If anybody gets sick, I can find somebody else," he says. "It's not too hard. Most people want to appear on the Oscar show."

On Friday the 50-piece orchestra records the song numbers in a Hollywood studio. "The singers are live on the show, but the orchestra is recorded," explains Koch. "It would be impossible to maintain a balance."

THE 17 television cameras are moved into the Music Center on Friday, and Pasetta begins to work on lighting and staging. Saturday brings a run-through with the emcees — this year four of them: Liza Minnelli, Dudley Moore, Richard Pryor and Walter Matthau.

Sunday is the day of the big dress rehearsal. The production numbers and nominated songs are performed, and the presenters go through their paces. "This year we have a mixture of young and old," says Koch. "From Jeanne Crain and Cornel Wilde to Kristy McNichol and Tom Selleck."

Pasetta works from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday to perfect the staging, using stand-ins for the stars. Then the ushers take down the No Smoking signs, remove the coffee cups and spruce up the theater. Pasetta starts taping the arrivals as they are greeted by columnist Army Archerd in front of the Music Center.

'Gandhi' guess for best picture

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Here are the major Academy award nominations and how their chances look to this observer.

Best Picture — "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial," "Gandhi," "Missing," "Tootsie," "The Verdict." Despite the huge success of "E.T." this seems to be the year of "Gandhi."

Best Actor — Dustin Hoffman, "Tootsie"; Ben Kingsley, "Gandhi"; Jack Lemmon, "Missing"; Paul Newman, "The Verdict"; Peter O'Toole, "My Favorite Year." Both Hoffman and Newman are strong contenders, but Kingsley seems the winner.

Best Actress — Julie Andrews, "Victor-Victoria"; Jessica Lange, "Frances"; Sissy Spacek, "Missing"; Meryl Streep, "Sophie's Choice"; Debra

Winger, "An Officer and a Gentleman." A second Oscar for Miss Streep.

Best Supporting Actor — Charles Durning, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas"; Louis Gossett Jr., "An Officer and a Gentleman"; John Lithgow, "The World According to Garp"; James Mason, "The Verdict"; Robert Preston, "Victor-Victoria." Strong contenders all. Guess: Gossett.

Best Supporting Actress — Glenn Close, "The World According to Garp"; Teri Garr, "Tootsie"; Jessica Lange, "Tootsie"; Kim Stanley, "Frances"; Lesley Ann Warren, "Victor-Victoria." Another close race. Random choice: Miss Lange.

Best Director — Wolfgang Petersen, "Das Boot"; Steven Spielberg, "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial"; Richard Attenborough, "Gandhi"; Sydney Pollack, "Tootsie"; Sidney Lumet, "The Verdict." The favorite is Attenborough.

Henry Ford Museum trustee Sheila Ford Hamp, demonstrates a small spinning wheel which was used by Mahatma Ghandi to rally the Indian people in their struggle for independence against British colonial rule.

The device was autographed by Ghandi and presented to Henry Ford in 1942. Ford later donated it to the museum he founded in Dearborn, Mich.

One-woman corporation teaches executives how easy public speaking is

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandy Linver talks with her hands. And her arms. And her torso. She uses her mouth. And her face. And her eyes. Watching her speak, you feel as though you were watching a new Olympic sport.

In a sense, you are. "Most people are amazed to discover how physical speaking is," says Miss Linver. "The problem is, too many people clench their fists and lock their knees instead of using their bodies, opening their mouths, and breathing."

Miss Linver, a small, energetic woman with a jumble of auburn curls and a hundred-watt smile, is president of Speak-easy Inc., an Atlanta-based company that teaches people in business how to talk to other people in business. Without putting the audience to sleep.

In the 10 years since she started her company, Miss Linver has worked with mumbler and mutterers, babblers and bores. She has counseled pacers and podium-clutchers, teeth-gritters and throat-clearers.

She has helped 10,000 people overcome such handicaps, among them executives from the Coca-Cola Co., IBM, and AT&T. In the process, she has reached some conclusions about how otherwise competent people behave when placed before a crowd and asked to talk.

They forget how. They tighten their stomachs. They stop breathing. They recall the time they forgot their lines in the school play. They panic.

At Speak-easy, instructors use videotape, role playing and other techniques to teach public speaking. Of the 10,000 who have signed up, only five fled midway through the course.

For attorneys and board chairmen, public speaking has long been a part of the job. For computer experts and others in technical fields, it is fast becoming a part of the job, since increased demand for computers has sparked increased competition for clients. And whoever gives the best sales pitch is likely to walk away with the sale.

Miss Linver says that as much as 70 percent of her business now comes from people in technical fields.

"We're concerned with helping them develop a style," she says. "In the past, technical people have tended to rely on their information to carry them. Now, they're also having to persuade clients. It's new to them."

She is talking about people whose very job titles tend to prompt yawns. People who can hardly afford to be boring. People like math major Shirley Prutch, whose schoolmates affectionately dubbed her "Egghead."

"You sit down on an airplane and the person next to you says, 'What do you do?' And you tell them you're in computers. And they say 'Ohhh,' and pick up their magazine," says Mrs. Prutch, a Speak-easy graduate and a vice president of data systems for Martin Marietta Corp. in Bethesda, Md.

"My husband is in the same field," she adds with a sigh. "If you want to see two people ostracized..."

An unfair stereotype, to be sure. But Miss Linver says people in technical fields do tend to have two distinct problems when addressing an audience that contribute to their lackluster image.

"They don't know how to simplify their material to make it palatable. And many are extremely controlled people. They tend to have very tight jaws. They think if they open their mouths they'll sound like used car salesmen."

Speak-easy seminars begin with participants giving brief speeches about themselves. The moment of truth comes when the speeches are played back on videotape.

Sheep clutter up Capitol lobby

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — The frontier rivalry between sheep herders and cattle ranchers still lives in the halls of Wyoming's Capitol, revived by an exhibit of stuffed mutton on the hoof.

The state Archives, Museum and Historical Department set up the animal display outside the office of Treasurer Stan Smith, a sheepman. That bothered a cattleman, Gov. Ed Herschler, who uses the same hall to get to his office.

For years the Capitol has housed a stuffed elk and buffalo but, Herschler complained, the stuffed sheep were an insult to cattle ranchers. So he took matters into his own hands.

Soon the wary eye of a stuffed coyote glared at the sheep from across the hall. The governor jokingly threatened to plaster the glass sheep case with bumper stickers saying, "Eat More Lamb — 20,000 Coyotes Can't Be Wrong."

Perhaps to keep peace, the state's elected officials agreed to another addition to the growing museum in the Capitol hallways — the 500-pound brass bell from the retired battleship U.S. Wyoming.

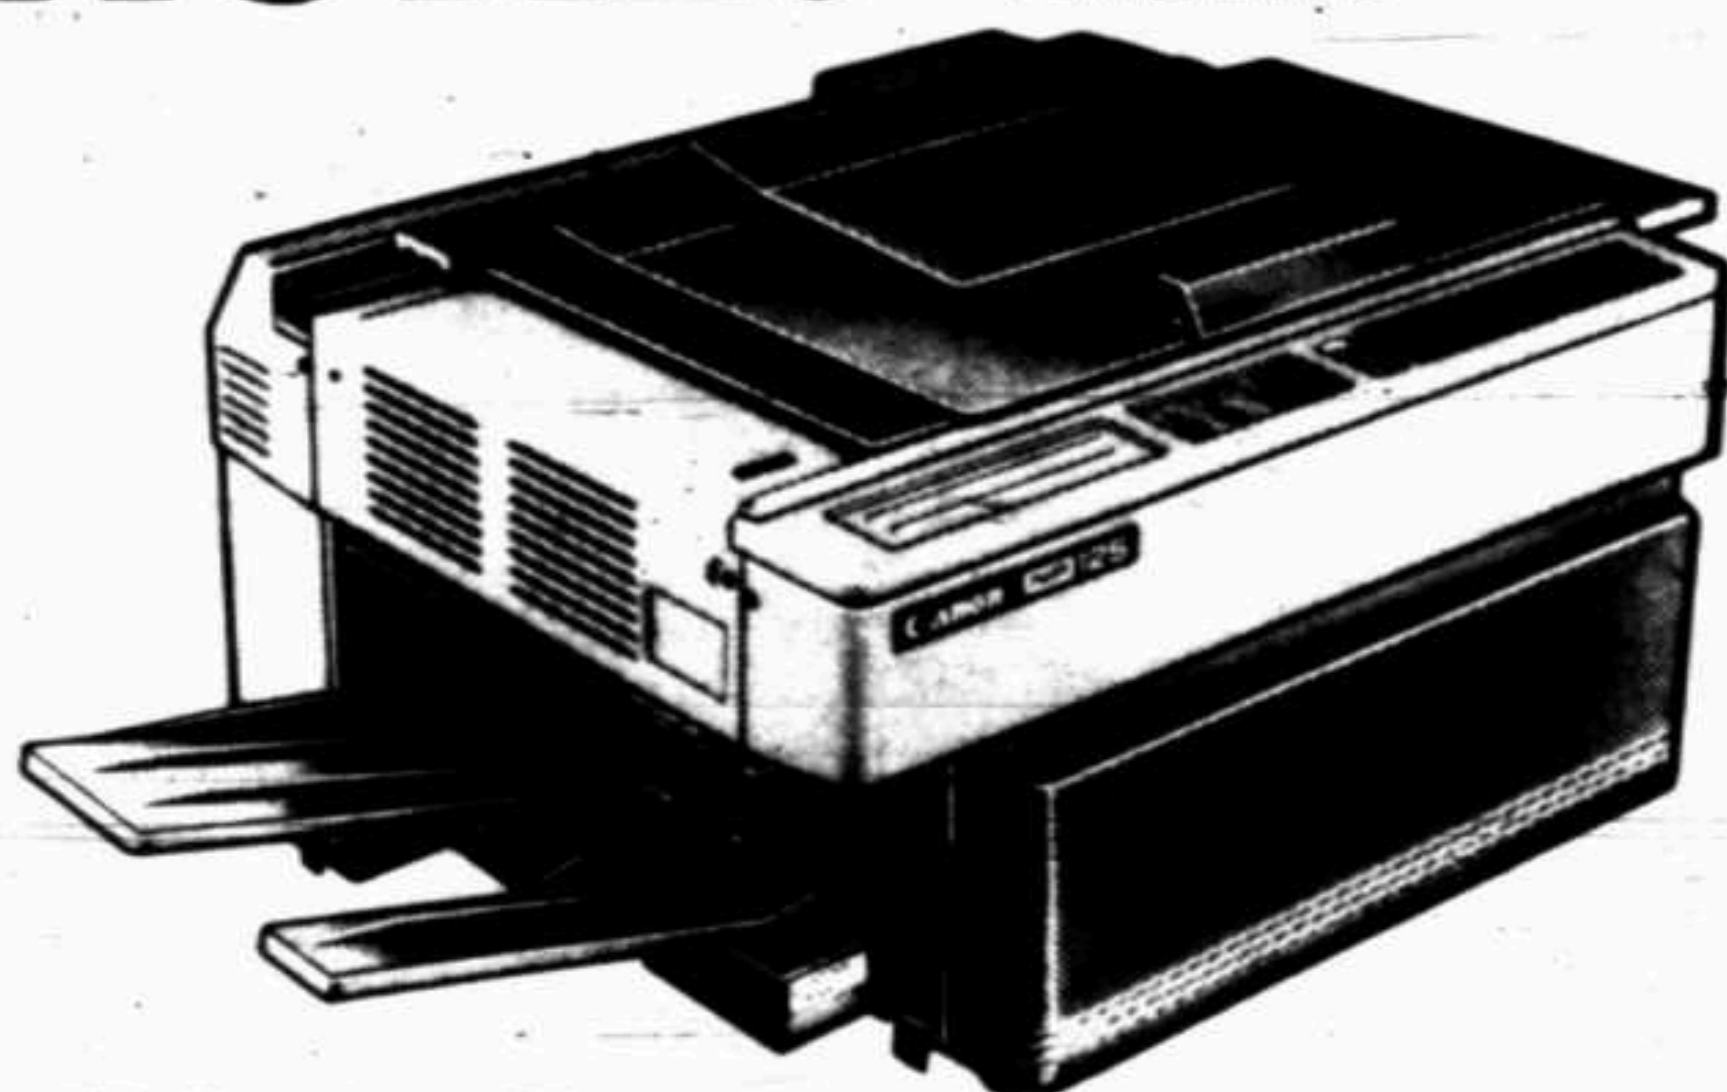

The governor agreed, although he complained, "We're getting that lobby out there pretty cluttered up, what with sheep and all."

Americans springing back from economic nightmare

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON

Washington Bureau Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

ABILENE, KAN. — America is awakening from the slumber of winter and the darkness of recession.

As you travel across this vast land, along interstate highways and back-country roads, from the shores of the Chesapeake to the newly plowed wheat fields of Kansas, the arrival signs of spring are everywhere. A winter that pummeled rain and snow upon the terrain in record volume is at an end, and so, hopefully, is the economic nightmare that propelled unemployment to heights not registered in more than 40 years.

Patches of forsythia splash the landscape with vibrant yellow from the hills of Maryland through the valleys of Virginia, the mountains of West Virginia and the gently rolling hills of Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri to the Kansas flatlands. The willows have donned their cloaks of green and the buds on the maple, the oak and the elm are about to open.

The buds of the long dormant economy also seem ready to burst into bloom. At least that is what a lot of Americans are thinking and hoping right now. Psychologically, they are prepared to accept the view that recovery has started or is about to start; that things will get better rather than worse.

A waitress in a Staunton, Va., cafe, just two blocks from the Presbyterian manse in which Woodrow Wilson was born, will tell you that "things are looking better."

In the industrial rich valleys of West Virginia, where joblessness has soared to more than 20 percent, there are at last new signs of manufacturing activity.

The gracious women who greet you at Ashland, Henry Clay's magnificent estate in Lexington, Ky., note that their visitors talk less about the economy than they did a few months ago. A similar sentiment is expressed by the national park service ranger at the southern Indiana farm where Abraham Lincoln spent the formative years of his life.

Shopping centers are bursting with consumers. The highways are filled with travelers, taking advantage of sharply reduced gasoline prices. Misery has not been eradicated, especially from the great old industrial centers of the Northeast and Midwest. There is no way to measure the long range impact of recession upon millions of Americans who have lost their jobs, their homes, their businesses and their farms.

But in the spring of 1983, there is a discernable feeling of renewal in the air. There also is abroad in the land a new sense of appreciation for the jobs, the homes, the businesses and the farms that people have been able to preserve during this time of economic trauma.

Individuals to whom a reporter talked along the roads running westward from the Atlantic to the Pacific indicate they no longer take their economic well-being for granted. They realize they must be vigilant in protecting it and know they must cherish it.

They are concerned with the joys and the sorrows that are close to home. To many, perhaps most, the presidential campaign of 1984 still is a long way down the road. They are thinking and talking about the more immediate matters of planting crops, improving working conditions, getting children educated or planning a summer vacation.

Even among those who have been deeply hurt by recession, there is little personal acrimony toward Ronald Reagan. His charm seems to surmount all barriers. On a likeability scale, he would register at least an eight with most of the people.

John Glenn and Walter Mondale are the Democrats one most often hears mentioned for 1984. But for the most part Americans going about their daily chores in the heartland of the nation are not thinking about presidential politics this early in the game.

To travel the nation is to live a rare experience.

This is a broad and beautiful land, and its rich heritage is spread like a thousand gems from coast to coast. On this particular journey, our heritage has manifested itself at the Wilson birthplace in Virginia; the elegant Clay mansion in the heart of Kentucky blue grass country; the Lincoln farm in Indiana; the restored Christopher Rand Church, which was moved from London to Fulton, Mo., to commemorate Winston Churchill's memorable 1946 "Iron Curtain" speech in the middle America town; the Truman library in Independence, Mo. and the Eisenhower library here in Abilene.

Rev. David Cavin

Kelview has guest speaker

The Rev. David Cavin, president of Baptist Bible Fellowship International, will be special speaker for Kelview Heights Baptist Church's April 17-19 revival.

Cavin, who has had three pastorate in 44 years of ministry, has been pastor of High Street Baptist Church, Springfield, Mo., for the past 19 years. High Street averages 2,000 each Sunday and is the second largest giving missionary church in the Baptist Bible Fellowship.

Cavin will speak April 17 at 9 and 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Service time April 18 and 19 is 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor of Kelview Heights, invites the public to attend. The church is located at 407 W. Alta Ave.

'Flying priest' takes to heavens to aid isolated island parishioners

EDITOR'S NOTE — Like other parish priests whose congregations are in remote, out-of-the-way places, the Rev. John Sherbno found it difficult to reach his flock. So, he learned to fly. It's been a heavenly arrangement — in fair weather.

By JACK A. SEAMONDS

LAKE ERIE, Ohio (AP) — As parish priest for the Lake Erie islands, the Rev. John Sherbno must serve a varied and far-flung flock.

So the 60-year-old priest uses a 30-year-old plane to shuttle between island churches, absolving the dead, marrying the young, and saving the souls of sinners, sailors and sunbathers.

Sherbno's parish in Ohio's western basin, ranges from the uninhabited scrub on the lake surface known as Starve Island to the summer resort town of Put-In-Bay to the vineyards of North Bass Island.

"I don't think there's another parish quite like it in the United States," says Sherbno, a former Toledo resident who's drawn a half-dozen clerical assignments in north-west Ohio. "Of course, there are some in the South Pacific and in Africa, where the priests have to fly all over. Now, those guys are REAL pilots."

Flying came late to the priest. He dabbled at it early in life but didn't start flying in earnest until he was 56, training in Piper J35s with veteran pilots who fly tourists from Port Clinton on the mainland to the islands for Island Airlines. Flight training was required by his new parish, Sherbno says.

IN THE summer, Sherbno commutes from Kelleys Island to South

Bass Island to Middle Bass Island, saying Mass on Sunday as he hops from village to village. At Put-In-Bay on South Bass, he has about 53 year-round parishioners at Mother of Sorrows Church. Full-time island residents at St. Michael's on Kelleys Island number about 50, and on Middle Bass, where he says Mass in a community building, a handful of year-round islanders attend.

During tourist season, the ranks of the faithful swell to over 100 for services.

A former priest in three Ohio parishes and a teacher in Toledo and Norwalk, Sherbno has served the islands parish five years. It has required adjustments.

In his Piper Tri-Pacer, Sherbno has had to dodge sailboat masts and seagulls on takeoff from low-lying islands. The brakes failed once while he landed on Kelleys Island. He recalls one drunk who stood defiantly on the runway at Middle Bass as he tried to land. And fickle weather makes commuting the few miles between the islands a challenge.

"My heroes are the pilots for Island Airlines who do it all the time," Sherbno says. "I was lucky to learn from them. The winds that make the islands a great place for sailors make it a difficult place for pilots."

IN WINTER, island life slows to a crawl. But Sherbno uses the time to write plays, read history and rely on charter pilots to ferry him to his churches.

The parish can't afford the $20 per trip for charter flights year-round, so his fair-weather piloting is necessary. When he's grounded, lay people give communion, and year-round residents can watch Mass for the handicapped on television.

The work has its tribulations. A wedding scheduled on Middle Bass Island was delayed because weather grounded Sherbno.

"I was at Kelleys, the bride and her fiancé were on Middle Bass, and all the guests, food and relatives were on the mainland. They couldn't get over, either," the priest recalls. The bride called for advice.

"I told 'em, if you get hung up for 90 days, exchange vows," Sherbno says.

But the weather cleared, and Sherbno flew over. Guests arrived by ferry, and one got seasick en route. Ultimately, the wedding was completed.

Shortly after the Most Rev. James R. Hoffman was named Bishop of the Toledo Diocese, he flew to Kelleys Island for a service.

"IT WAS his first visit to the islands as bishop, and all the islanders were present," Sherbno says. "But the next day I got up and the weather had built up. We had fog right down to the ground. The bishop said he had a busy schedule back in Toledo, but I told him he couldn't go anywhere. So he sacked out on the couch at the rectory all day. I think it was the first time he'd had any rest in months."

Island life isn't carefree. "We have the same problems here as they have on the mainland. Divorce, alcoholism, loneliness, alienation. The islanders are worried about organized crime, drugs and gambling moving in," Sherbno says. "The tragedies of death on the island are usually associated with going through the ice in winter, or drowning in the summer."

The Newspaper BIBLE

LOVE YOUR ENEMIES; GOD DOES!

"Treat others as you want them to treat you."
 "Do you think you deserve credit for merely loving those who love you? Even the godless do that!"
 "And if you do good only to those who do you good—is that so wonderful? Even sinners do that much!"
 "And if you lend money only to those who can repay you, what good is that? Even the most wicked will lend to their own kind for full return!"
 "Love your enemies! Do good to them! Lend to them! And don't be concerned about the fact that they won't repay. Then your reward from heaven will be very great, and you will truly be acting as sons of God: for He is kind to the unthankful and to those who are very wicked."
 "Try to show as much compassion as your Father does."
 "Never criticize or condemn—or it will all come back on you. Go easy on others; then they will do the same for you."
 "For if you give, you will get! Your gift will return to you in full and overflowing measure, pressed down, shaken together to make room for more, and running over. Whatever measure you use to give—large or small—will be used to measure what is given back to you."
 Luke 6:31-38

Survey: Catholic hospitals have 'natural family planning' programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey shows that more than a third of U.S. Catholic hospitals have "natural family planning" programs, but only about 200 couples a year use the program in 142 institutions.

The programs offer guidance on several natural methods of avoiding pregnancy in addition to rhythm. Roman Catholicism forbids contraception.

Most of the programs have begun in the last five years, and additional hospitals are interested in starting such programs, the survey findings showed.

Eve actually 'power equal to' Adam, scholar claims

From Wire Reports

LOS ANGELES — Eve the first woman should be described as a "power equal to Adam" rather than a fitting helpmate, in Genesis, according to a biblical scholar at the University of California at Davis.

If the suggestion of R. David Freedman published in the current issue of Biblical Archaeology Review wins favor with Bible translators, it would weaken a familiar religious underpinning for traditional claims that woman was divinely ordained to serve man.

James A. Sanders of Claremont, Calif., an Old Testament specialist on the Revised Standard Version Bible Committee, said he thought Freedman made "a good case" in the magazine. "It's worth considering," Sanders said.

The line in question is in Genesis 2:18 when God says, "It is not good that the man should be alone. I will make him a helper fit for him." (Revised Standard Version) The two key Hebrew words are ezer and kenegdo, translated fitting helper in the new Bible of the Jewish Publication Society, a helpmate in the Jerusalem Bible and an aid fit for him in the Anchor Bible.

BUT the customary translations do not convey the real meaning, says Freedman, who studied Assyriology and northwest Semitic languages at Columbia University. "Woman was not intended to be merely man's helper. She was to be instead his partner," he said.

The Hebrew word ezer is a combination of two roots, one meaning "to rescue" or "to save" and the other "to be strong." With time, the two roots merged into one word and so did the meaning, later always interpreted as "to help," he said.

The noun ezer occurs 21 times in the Hebrew Bible. Eight times the word means "savior" and the other times it means "strength." Freedman said. When it means "strength," it is sometimes paralleled with the concept of majesty, as in Psalm 68:34.

Ascribe strength to God. His majesty is upon Israel, and his strength is in the heavens.

THE other Hebrew word, kenegdo, has given translators problems because it appears in the Bible only once. However, Freedman pointed out, in late rabbinical commentaries the word means "equal," as in the saying, "The study of Torah is equal to all the other commandments."

In Freedman's view, there is no basis for translating kenegdo as "fit" or "appropriate." Indeed, the New King James Version, a revised work by conservative scholars, uses the word "comparable" to him.

Unitarians reschedule services for Sunday

Services at the Unitarian Universalist Church, 3301 Neely St., are scheduled for different times Sunday due to the annual spring meeting of the Southwest Unitarian Universalist Conference being hosted this weekend by the Midland church.

Church school and adult forum will begin at 9:30 a.m., worship and nursery will begin at 10:30 a.m. The church will return to its regular programming April 17.

About 150 ministers and lay people from churches and fellowships throughout the district have been attending the conference since it began Friday. The district includes all of Texas except Lubbock, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, the southern part of Missouri, Memphis, Tenn., two churches in Mexico and one in the Canal Zone.

Theme for the meeting is "Exploring our Western Horizons." Workshops on teaching, worship service, church leadership, alcohol abuse and women in religion are being offered. A banquet tonight features the Rev. Brandoch Lovely of the People's Church of Pasadena, Calif.

The Rev. Daniel Budd is minister of the Midland church. The Rev. Russell Lockwood of Tulsa is the Unitarian Universalist Association's interdistrict representative for the Southwest Conference.

Pope worried about priest shortage

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsweek says Pope John Paul II is so concerned about the shortage of priests in the U.S. church that the Vatican has ordered bishops to check what is going on in seminaries and report back to Rome.

The weekly news magazine says the number of seminary students has declined by 75 percent in the past two decades, dropping from 48,000 to about 12,000, with only about 60 percent of them likely to take their final vows.

Panel can't resolve homosexuality issue

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After a 10-month study, a doctrinal panel says it can't resolve the issues raised by the application of a denomination serving homosexuals for membership in the National Council of Churches.

The panel says that since there's no clear-cut answer in the council's constitution or statement of purpose, each member denomination will have to decide the issue on the basis of its own concept of what being a church requires.

Kelview Heights sponsors series of women's workshops

The second in a series of workshops for women designed to help them live a life rich with meaning and purpose will begin Monday at Kelview Heights Baptist Church, off North Big Spring at Scharbauer Drive.

Biblically oriented, the Enriched Living Workshop is led by Berna Birkey, a former teacher, counselor and, for seven years, dean of girls at Ben Lippen School in Asheville, N.C. She has led over 350 similar workshop series all over the United States, Canada and in foreign countries.

The workshop is open to all women. It will be held Monday through Wednesday from 7 to 10 p.m. For more information call 697-5894 or 694-1356.

Two tour with concert choir

Dierdre Madison, daughter of George Madison of Midland, and Sandi Spaulding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Spaulding of Midland, were among the 58-member Hardin-Simmons University Concert Choir on a nine-day March tour of churches and public schools in Texas.

Miss Madison, a senior at Hardin-Simmons, is a soprano. Miss Spaulding, also a senior, is an alto.

The choir, directed by Dr. Loyd Hawthorne, professor of music and choral director at Hardin-Simmons, performed in Midland, Andrews, Odessa, Fort Stockton, Amarillo, Plainview, Lubbock, Levelland, Wichita Falls, Gainesville and Arlington.

'Two Masters' to air Sunday

The film "Two Masters" will be shown at the First Church of the Nazarene, Wall Avenue and F Street, at 10:45 a.m. Sunday.

The film, which includes 15 minutes of drama and 42 minutes of lecture by financial expert Larry Burkett, deals with church and missionary giving, family budgeting, setting financial priorities and the Biblical basis for stewardship.

The film, an Evangelical Films release, centers around two families and results of their acknowledging or disregarding the Biblical basis for financial management. The public is invited.

Disarmament program set

The Midland Friends (Quaker) Meeting will sponsor a program on nuclear disarmament at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the library at Trinity School, 3500 W. Wadley Ave.

Janis Heine of the American Friends Service Committee office in Austin is featured speaker.

In addition, "The Time Has Come," a short movie on the world-wide disarmament movement, will be shown. Time will be provided for open discussion.

For more information call 697-5683 or 697-1828. The public is invited to attend.

Church sets anniversary service

Peoples Bible Missionary Church, 1201 E. Spruce St., is holding a special anniversary service at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. The service includes music presented by members of area choirs.

The church's minister, the Rev. L.L. Martin, invites the public to attend.

Unity Study Group to meet

A Unity Study Group is meeting in Midland. Readers of the Daily Word and all persons interested in participating are invited to join the meetings at 10:30 a.m. Sundays at 3601 Sinclair St. For more information call 697-4464, weekends and after 5 p.m. weekdays.

Goal of the group is to grow enough to become a Unity Center which offers to its members principals taught by the nondenominational Unity School of Christianity.

We have every right to be proud of our new 1983 Honda Civic 4-Door Sedan.

This beautifully styled automobile is roomy enough to seat five comfortably. Yet practical enough to save you money on gas.

Thanks to its 4-wheel independent suspension and rack and pinion steering, the Civic Sedan offers a remarkably smooth ride and truly responsive handling.

And you'll find its standard features equally remarkable.

Come in soon. We'll be proud to show you the Civic 4-Door Sedan.

Among the many attributes of these new, modern homes is the excellent location. They are situated in a neighborhood of fine homes that enhance their value far above their modest price. In both you will find custom features and then some that you expect and desire... such as liberal use of glass, all electric kitchens, fireplaces, lovely colors, lush carpeting and rear entry garages. We urge you to carefully inspect the floor plan and then come out and see for yourself how much more "good living" is built into these Bill Hickey Homes... and both are ready for immediate occupancy.
