Oil Scheme In Houston

NEW YORK (AP)-An oil-pricing scheme that has cost American consumers millions of dollars will result in federal prosecutors asking a Houston grand jury to indict several oil companies and individuals, ABC News reports.

The network only mentioned one targeted oil company in its report - Uni Oil Co. of Houston. Officials of that company were unavailable for comment.

ABC reported that unidentified sources in the U.S. attorney's office in Houston allege that the companies certified "old oil" as "new oil" beginning in 1974 and made nearly $1 million a day for the next four years.

Responds To Threats

NEW YORK (AP)-American Airlines chief Albert V. Casey says he will move even more jobs, personnel and business from New York City if threats of boycotts against the carrier continue because of American's plan to relocate its headquarters in Texas.

"We spend $400 million in New York," Casey claimed in an interview published in today's editions of the Daily News. "There are other jobs we can move out. We have a lot of flexibility."

U.S. To Get Refugees

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP)-Malaysia says the United States has promised to take in all the Vietnamese refugees aboard the freighter Hai Hong who cannot find refuge in other foreign countries.

Reporters were told of the purported U.S. promise today by Osman Cassim, secretary-general of Malaysia's Home Affairs Ministry.

Malaysia and the United States appear to be at odds over whether Washington will take in refugees from the Hai Hong, anchored off Port Klang 20 miles west of here, or an equivalent number from the 40,000 Vietnamese already crammed into refugee camps on islands off the Malaysian coast.

Grid Action, Yule Buying In Spotlight

Football and Christmas shopping form a typical Texas mixture at this season of the year, and Snyder finds itself in the middle of the action this weekend.

The Snyder Tigers and the Burkburnett Bulldogs get the local football playoff action going this evening in Tiger Stadium with kickoff set for 8 p.m., while the Colorado City Wolves meet Slaton in a Class AA bi-district game here Saturday night, with the kickoff set for 7:30 p.m. Another local team, Hermleigh, travels to Sterling City tonight to meet Christoval in a six-man grid playoff at 7 p.m.

Meanwhile, with Thanksgiving observance over, Santa Claus was scheduled to pay a visit to Snyder this afternoon. He was to arrive by plane at Winston Field at 1 p.m. From there, he planned to ride a fire truck into town and visit with youngsters on the west side parking lot of the courthouse square during the afternoon.

Santa Claus will be returning for visits between now and Christmas, with a definite schedule already mapped out for Thursdays when local stores will remain open after regular hours for the convenience of Christmas shoppers.

The Christmas lights in the downtown business area will be turned on tonight for the first time this season.

The appearance of Santa Claus and turning on the colorful lights have been coordinated with a special "Two-Day Sale" being conducted by a large segment of the Snyder retail community.

Roloff To Buy College Campus

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) —Evangelist Lester Roloff announced plans Thursday night to purchase the campus of Ambassador College in Big Sandy for $10.6 million.

Roloff said he will move the headquarters of Roloff Evangelistic Enterprises from near Corpus Christi to the Upshur County town of 1,200 in East Texas.

Also, Roloff said, girls from the Rebekah and Help-Hers homes near Corpus Christi will move.

The City of Refuge in Culloden, Ga., and the Anchor Home for Boys in Zapapta will be sold, Roloff said. The boys will be taken to Corpus Christi to live in the Rebekah home.

Roloff announced the moves to a packed, cheering house Thursday night at his People's Church in Corpus Christi. Ambassador College was operated by the Worldwide Church of God, the former organization of Garner Ted Armstrong.

The church shut down the Big Sandy campus in 1977. The campus will be purchased from Herbert W. Armstrong through a friend of Roloff s in Virginia, Roloff said.

He said divine intervention will allow him to raise the money by Jan. 4.

Searchers Find More Bodies At Jonestown

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP)—Searchers have found at least 775 bodies at the scene of the Jonestown mass suicide-murder, almost twice as many as previously counted, the U.S. Embassy reported today. It said many of the newly discovered bodies were those of children huddled beneath their parents' corpses.

For days investigators had been unable to determine the whereabouts of hundreds of camp residents who apparently were missing. It was believed many may have fled the death ritual, hiding in the jungle. The grisly new discoveries gave the answer.

Embassy spokeswoman Patricia Moser said that as of 1 p.m. local time—11 a.m. EST—485 bodies had been removed from Jonestown.

She said 20 more had been placed in body bags and a still-continuing hand count had located an additional 270.

She emphasized that the count was still continuing and more bodies were being found.

She said the bodies were being found under previously counted corpses.

"We understand the bodies have been found piled and there were a lot of children. Many children were found under the bodies of their parents and were not counted orginally," she said.

The official toll reported here previously was 408 or 409 dead at Jonestown.

A U.S. Embassy official had said 803 passports were found at the colony, leaving 394 or 395 persons still to be accounted for.

Officials and survivors had variously estimated that from 100 to 800 members of the Jonestown commune were not yet accounted for.

An eyewitness to the Jonetown mass suicide said today some reluctant sect members were forced to swallow poison as the Rev. Jim Jones exhorted hundreds of his followers to "die with dignity."

On Kiddie Advertising

FTC Urged To Drop Ban Idea

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Association of Broadcasters urged government regulators today to abandon proposed restrictions on television advertising directed at children.

In a statement prepared for filing with the Federal Trade Commission, the broadcasters' organization argued that the restrictions under consideration "are founded upon conjecture and supposition, are arbitrary and ambiguous and are not amenable to substantiation or implementation."

The FTC voted last week to continue consideration of the proposed advertising ban. Hearings are to begin in January in San Francisco.

Among the proposals under considertion is one that would prohibit all commercials aimed at children under 8 years of age. The FTC staff has concluded those children are too young to understand that the purpose of advertising is to sell the product being shown.

An estimated $500 million to $600 million worth of television advertising is aimed at children annually.

Much of the FTC staff's expressed concern is with commercials for highly-sugared breakfast foods and many nutritionists and dentists back the suggested restrictions.

Keeping tab on our neighbors:

Jerry Tidwell of the Lamb County Leader-News (Littlefield) passes along some incidents encountered by Art Linkletter, the TV personality. Noting that little girls "have a marked disposition to be nurses and mothers." Linkletter was interviewing some pre-school girls about health problems.

"What would you do for me if my heart stopped." Linkletter asked a junior nurse.

"I'd just wiggle you around."

One little girl got the hiccups on the show and Linkletter asked if she knew what caused her trouble.

"Yup, I've got hiccups," she disgnosed. "They're three little bugs who stay in your stomach and when you eat too much they jump up and down they're so mad."

Finally, after asking questions about what she would do for a variety of illnesses, Linkletter came up with this question. "What would you do if I stopped breathing."

"I'd bury you."

Kim Pease of The Rotan Advance and Roby Star-Record, sees more problems ahead if the ERA promoters continue their efforts to implant neuter titles in our vocabulary, such as chairperson, committee-person, etc.

It could really become a stumper if they take it to a logical conclusion in labeling the person who delivers letters from the post office. First off, they might suggest changing mailman to "mailperson." But Pease doubts that the ERA bunch would accept that because "mail" is pronounced the same as "Male." What you have left, then, could be "personperson," the ultimate in nonsense.—WACIL McNAIR

Goodfellows Seeking Toys

Snyder Goodfellows are stepping up the efforts to help the needy and unfortunate at Christmas time.

Collection of toys for children already is underway, and anyone who wishes to contribute serviceable toys, repairable wheel goods and dolls should take them to the Texas Electric Service Co. office on the west side of the Snyder Square.

The Goodfellows will begin accepting cash donations at both local banks on Dec. 4, with Retired Senior volunteers to man the booths in the bank lobbies.

The Noon Kiwanis Club is taking the lead in coordinating the Goodfellows program again this year, with Billy Prince, Art Feinsod and Billy Wayne Thompson heading the activities.

Egyptian Paper Says It Published Treaty Draft

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)-With Israeli-Egyptian peace talks stalled, and Israel insisting Egypt must make the next move, the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram today published what it said was the text of a U.S. draft peace treaty.

There was no immediate State Department comment on the draft, but some american officials were reported baffled at Egypt's motives in releasing the text at this time. It was believed the government was behind publication of the draft in the semi-official daily.

Israel and Egypt have agreed in general terms to the U.S. draft, but their negotiations in Washington have deadlocked over Egypt's insistence that the treaty be linked to a solution of the Palestinian problem and include a timetable for Palestinian self-rule on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip.

Israel has rejected any such linkage and fears a timetable will allow Egypt to back out of the peace treaty if negotiators cannot work out a Palestinian settlement within a given time.

The treaty published in Al Ahram, believed to be a copy of the draft accepted Tuesday by the Israeli cabinet, made no direct mention of linkage between the two pacts. The newspaper quoted the preamble of the purported text saying the treaty is to be an "important step toward a comprehensive Mideast settlement and resolving all aspects of the Arab-Isareli conflict."

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, declaring there is nothing left to negotiate, said Thursday, "I don't see any point or any need to return to Washington to conduct or renew negotiations...The agreement can be signed or not signed, approved or not approved. It's up to President Sadat now."

Israel, waiting for the outcome of Sadat's meetings with his top negotiators, nopes Carter will persuade Egypt to accept the draft.

Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil said a committee was studying Egypt's options and would report to Sadat this weekend.

Sadat told reporters in Cairo Thursday he would "exchange reassessments" of the negotiations next week with Carter.

One National Democratic Party member said Sadat told party leaders there were "clauses in the draft treaty which can get us out of this impasse." The informant did not elaborate.

Khalil told reporters in Cairo Thursday that Israel was "obstructing the road to peace," but he invited the Jerusalem government to resume negotiations and said, "Agreement is still possible."

Egypt has been pressing for a four-phase timetable setting up Palestinian authority within nine months as part of a treaty package.

odds are dwindling

Attorney General John Hill, who thought he had the governorship safely in his hip pocket prior to the recent general election, issued a public statement a few days ago declaring that Texas has not become a two-party state. He was commenting, of course, on widely expressed views among political experts that Republican victories involving the state's two top jobs, United States Senator and Governor, indicate that winners in Democratic primaries will no longer be routinely favored in the general election.

Whether that means in the future Republican nominees have a reasonable chance of winning is a matter of opinion. John Tower's four elections to the United States Senate would have been regarded as unthinkable when he was first elected. And this year bettors would have given heavy odds that Bill Clements didn't have a Chinaman's chance of winning the Governor's office.

But, of course, John Hill's declaration that Texas isn't a two-party state has most of the fact on its side. What the outcome of the recent general election does mean, however, is that influx of new comers from other sections of the country, mostly from the North and East where party labels traditionally mean a great deal less than they did among Sun Belt natives, has created an entirely new political climate.

In any case, if Texas is not about to qualify as an authentic two-party state it clearly belongs in the doubtful category. And there isn't much Democrats can do to change that situation. Why this is the case involves several factors. First is the fact that party labels have come to have less and less meaning with each Presidential election.

Generally speaking Democrats have done a more effective job than Republicans in lining up liberals and members of group-conscious minorities. It is largely an alliance of convenience. The aim is to win elections and then work out compromises aimed at keeping everybody happy. The procedure has been effective for the past four decades, so far as winning elections is concerned.

What it has done for the general welfare is pretty evident in the size in the public debt and the confused state of affairs on the national level. There are signs the alliance is in danger of breaking up.

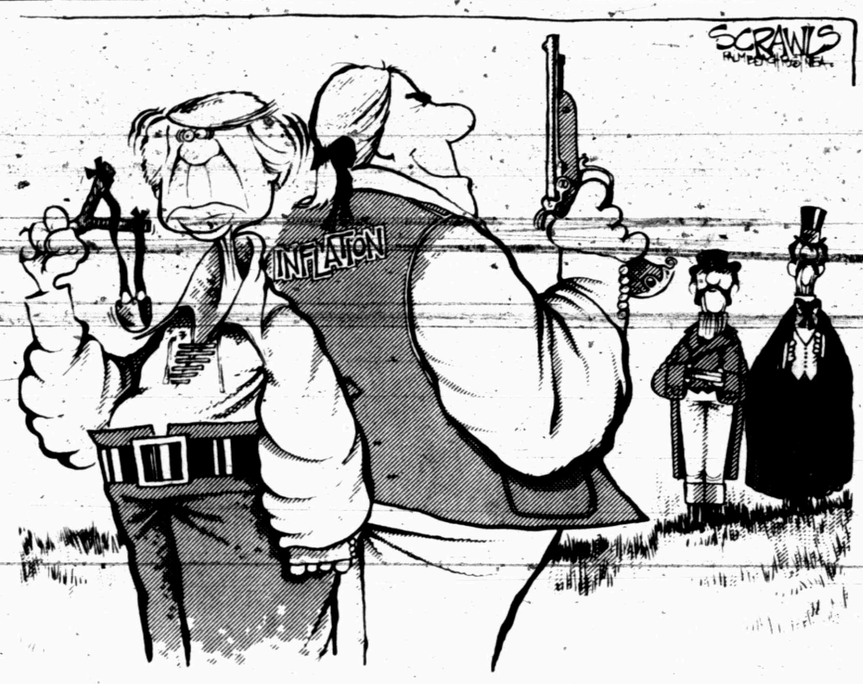

Texas is not now a two-party state. It may be a long time before it becomes one. But the number of Texans who can boast they never scratched a Democratic ticket becomes smaller each election year.

castro's dirty hands

Fidel Castro has made a great show of granting freedom to hundreds of political prisoners in Cuba, and his barbs aimed at the United States certainly have not gone unnoticed by the outside world.

However, it should be crystal clear to the world at large that Cuba's dictator can't show any clean hands. In fact, the decree freeing political prisoners itself is clear evidence of oppression.

Political prisoners in the numbers which Castro confirms should be enough to convince anyone that civil rights have been ignored in Cuba for nearly two decades. It shouldn't build up any public image points for this example of a so-called "peoples' republic." But you can bet that some of their comrades will try, and some of the gullible nations will fall for it.

at wits end

Thanksgiving is one of the two major holidays that are too sentimental to be delegated to a Monday.

That's why we observe it the fourth Thursday of November during a beer commericial of the Dallas-Washington football game.

Frankly, I wouldn't feel like it was Thanksgiving if I didn't set a place for Roger Staubach. Between Thanksgiving and next Monday evening, my husband will have watched nine pro and college games which amount to 24 consecutive hours of football.

It doesn't bother me that I get up a 4 a.m. and stuff the turkey in the kitchen instead of the one sleeping next to me.

It doesn't bother me that we have a houseful of people who try to communicate with a man who has no pulse.

It doesn't even bother me that he doesn't lift a finger to move a chair, put a leaf in the table, a log on the fire, or mix a drink.

What really bothers me is how I must have split-second timing in bringing the dinner to completion and getting it to the table during a commercial or time out, or I have to bench the meal until halftime.

Last year, I initiated my Five Days of Football meals which I urge you to clip and save.

THANKSGIVING THURSDAY: "Action Turkey." The turkey is tossed directly from the oven to the table, steaming and dripping dressing, where it is eaten in mid-air by the sports enthusiast who, between bites, mumbles something about Joe Theisman being rushed.

THANKSGIVING FRIDAY: "Instant Replay Turkey." The turkey is a repeat of Action Turkey, only this time the turkey is void of white meat and is dried out because someone poked a hole in the foil while it was refrigerated.

THANKSGIVING SATURDAY: "Slow-Motion Turkey." Due to three games back-to-back, the action from the kitchen to the sports enthusiast is slowed down considerably. This time, the turkey is chopped up and disguised with celery and mayonnaise in an effort to fake a handoff.

THANKSGIVING SUNDAY: "Stop Action Turkey." There is nothing more dramatic than a man with a fork loaded with leftover turkey, noodles, and cream of mushroom soup stopped in mid-air who is unable to complete the distance to his mouth.

THANKSGIVING MONDAY: "Turkey Roundup." Turkey soup and turkey croquettes round out the Turkey Festival, proving once again that football and history aren't the only things that can repeat themselves.

my turn

The Guyana killings and mass suicides will be a week old Saturday. I'm surprised there aren't a dozen paperbacks purporting to have all the juicy details on the shelves by now. Bantam Books does have one scheduled for Dec. 3 and you can bet there is a small army of writers out there that are at this very minute wearing out their typewriters in the race to be among the first to publish.

The winners will be well rewarded if media coverage is any indication. Not since the assassination of President Kennedy or the release of the POWs from North Vietnam has the press given so much time and space to a single story. When you consider how few people are actually affected by the bizarre incident all the attention hardly seems justified.

But the Guyana thing is so fascinating and gets stranger as it unfolds. Every fact uncovered only reveals more questions. How could such a diverse group of people be inspired to follow anyone to one of the darkest jungles in South America? These weren't a bunch of Hare Krishna type kids, but were old and young, black and white and to use a cliche, came from every walk of life.

What will happen to the millions of dollars amassed by the People's Temple? Much of it came from the sale of homes and property donated by its members. A good case could be advanced that they were not in their right mind at the time of the transactions.

One thing that bothers me is the official handling of the case.

An Associated Press story says relatively little effort has been made by the Guyana government to find up to 400 survivors that fled Jonestown into the jungle and that no effort has been made by the U.S. to find the missing people.

The story goes on to say "No food grows in the semi-darkness of the jungle floor. Mosquitoes carrying malaria and viruses are always present. An insect called the Kaboura fly bites. flesh and causes painful sores.

"Poison briars exude active juices that touch off allergies and infect scratches in 24 hours. Many varieties of poisonous snakes crawl across the jungle floor.

"Vampire bats about the size of a mouse and with long incisor teeth attack cattle and humans in the jungles, injecting an anticoagulant into the bites with their tongues that can keep a wound bleeding for hours.

"Flesh-eating piranha fish infest all the deeper streams. Jaguars are known to roam the forests.

"In addition, there is a 120 inch annual rainfall in the area, meaning daily heavy showers will keep the Americans wet most of the time."

It's kind of frightening to know that as we enjoy our holidays hundreds are roaming around scared and lost in the jungle.

Maybe the officials think the problem will take care of itself if put off long enough. It seems to be working in Southeast Asia. Several boatloads of Vietnamese refugees have been floating around the coast of Malaysia for days but neither that country nor any other will permit them to dock. One boat load hit a sand bar Thursday and sank, drowning many. Wednesday, a boatload sank with as many as 95 perishing. Unconfirmed reports say there have been many more wrecks and hundreds of casualties.

So, who says that a problem won't eventually go away by simply ignoring it?

WASHINGTON (NEA)—A simmering rebellion by grassroots activists could blow the lid off the Democrats' midterm conference in Memphis next month unless party leaders agree to relax the procedural constraint they have put on the conclave.

As presently constituted, both the rules and the agenda for the Dec. 8-10 mini-convention virtually preclude any effective challenge of President Carter's programs and policies by the 1,261 voting delegates.

Indeed, the procedures and schedule are so tightly drawn that there will be only a few hours set aside for a full conference debate on issues and resolution, with little chance that any proposal not cleared in advance by party leaders can win approval on the floor.

The Democratic National Committee leadership, under the direction of President Carter's handpicked chairman John White, quietly rigged the Memphis format earlier this year while party reformers were busy fighting a separate battle over 1980 delegate selection procedures.

By the time the liberals work up, most of them were so deeply involved in various 1978 campaigns that they had neither time nor energy to worry about Memphis. But since the elections, the reform activists have started to focus of the mid-term conference, and they don't like what they see.

The Democratic Conference, a loose-knit umbrella organization of various unions and liberal groups, is seeking enough petition signatures from Memphis delegates to force a showdown with the DNC over the conference rules and agenda.

A separate but similar coalition, the Democratic Agenda, is likewise collecting signatures in an effort to assure a floor debate over resolutions that would reiterate the Democratic Party's committment to a number of programs and policies that were in the 1976 party platform but have been ignored or modified by Carter and Congress.

As the rules now stand, the only way to obtain floor consideration of a resolution that has not been previously approved by the DNC executive committee is to submit - before the start of the Memphis conference - petitions signed by one-fourth of the delegates.

It would be relatively easy to gain that many signatures once all the delegates have assembled in Memphis; it is much harder to collect them in advance by mail. But even if the dissident coalitions succeed in obtaining the necessary signatures, their proposals will be the last order of business at the conference on Sunday afternoon, when most delegates will be rushing to catch planes home.

Since no resolution can be passed without a majority vote of all delgates, not merely those present when the balloting beings, Carter loyalists can easily prevent any embarrassment to the president simply by leaving the hall.

Democratic Conference leaders have tried to persuade White and other DNC officals to loosen the rules and schedule voluntarily, but White thus far has declined, insisting that party members who want a chance to debate issues will have ample opportunity to do so.

"I want this to be a substantive, party-building conference, not a forum for every frustrated loser from the last election," White said in an interview. "I don't favor seeing this thing turned into a wrangle of speeches, an exercise in rhetoric."

Given the ideological disaray within the Democratic Party, especially among liberals, the prospects are actually remote that Memphis delegates would agree on any kind of resolution that repudiates or even embarrasses Carter.

But 10 years of party reform have left their mark on the Democrats, and accustomed most of them to openness and relative freedom in their official gatherings.

A good many delegates with no great interest in challenging Carter or his policies may take umbrage at White's effort to forestall such challenges by procedural restraints and rebel against the chairman on those grounds alone.

not just a home

NEW YORK (AP)-A house is to live in but, an economic analyst points out, it also serves as a savings account and a line of credit as well.

In numerous instances, he notes, families are making use of inflated equities by refinancing their homes to obtain money for other goods and services, thus vastly extending their borrowing power.

And simultaneously, perhaps, frustrating efforts of the Federal Reserve to cool the economy.

As a consequence of mortgage refinancing, rising interest rates have lost some of their effectiveness in cooling inflation, says Arnold Moskowitz of Dean Witter Reynolds, the securities firm.

The practice of tapping home equity had been rather rare until the 1970s, partly because of fears lingering from the Great Depression of the 1930s. But homeowners have become more daring, as have lenders.

Thus, say Moskowitz, housing joins credit cards as a new saving-spending medium against which one can conveniently borrow, in the process causing an enormous expansion of the domestic credit base.

Home equity is not the only reason for credit ease. The urge to borrow has also been stimulated by savings accounts that function as checking accounts. But housing equity is huge; it may be as high as $1 trillion.

More and more, says Moskowitz, mortgage debt is assuming the traits of short-term installment debt, which includes credit cards. He explains:

"Installment debt differs from long-term mortgage debt in that it is viewed as a short-term obligation to be paid down at least in part during recessions, wheres mortgage debt is relatively permanent."

But, he says, the lines separating them are becoming indistinct, especially with the advent of open-end mortgaging, which almost automatically permits a homeowner to borrow on accumulated equity.

Says Moskowtiz: "Consumer spending may not be robust in 1979 but it should expand moderately, with mortgage debt continuing to substitute for consumer installment debt."

He also observes that the consumer is probably in a stronger buying position than might be realized from looking at the savings, which in 1977 had fallen to 5.1 percent from 7.5 percent in 1967.

Because of the rapid buildup in home equity - increases in market value have exceeded inflation - the "new adjusted savings rate" proposed by Moskowtiz would be 8 percent.

So long as those enormous increases in home equity can be drawn on, they too are savings, he maintains.

When you use Stayman in preference to JTB with a good hand, the action implies that you either have four cards in the other major or a very strong three-card holding. In other words, it tells partner that he should be wary of notrump when weak in a minor suit but can play notrump when strong in both minors.

North's jump to three hearts after South rebid two diamonds was a forcing bid to offer South a choice between a bid of four hearts or three notrump and South elected to bid three notrump.

Actually, it makes little difference except to a match point player. With the king of spades in the pocket and the king of clubs off side, South makes either five hearts or five notrump since he must lose one club and the ace of hearts.

Suppose South held a maximum of 18-point notrump with the black kings instead of the black queens. Then six hearts would make without a finesse provided South managed to ruff one spade in his own hand. Could they get there after North's jump to three hearts?

They just might. South would try for a slam by a bid of four clubs. Not Gerber, but merely acceptance of hearts and slam invitation.

Ask the Experts

A California reader asks if it is ever correct to pass as dealer with 14 high-card points.

We don't think so, but if you should pick up Q J x x, K J x, K J x, Q J x you might break the rule, as those are little spot cards.

Tigers - Bulldogs Go At It At 8 p.m....

Tonight's Battle Predicted Fierce

By BILL McCLELLAN

Tonight's battle pitting Snyder and Burkburnett promises to be a real cat-and-dog fight, but it won't be just because those are the respective mascots of the two teams. A varying style of offense is one of the most noticable differences between the two squads, who have as a common goal a bi-district championship.

Burkburnett, representing District 4-AAA, will attempt to move the ball in ram-bam fashion, characteristic of the Wing-T. Snyder, champion of loop 3-AAA, looks to feature a potential break-away option veer offensively, which has rolled for an average of 338.75 yards per outing in district play; including 102.95 through the air.

Off-tackle sweep and reverses are major distance-gathering vehicles for the Bulldogs, with an occasional pass thrown into keep the opposition honest. The 'Dogs have averaged 279.6 yards per district game rushing, with an average of 40 via the airlanes.

For Snyder fans, Coach Mike Jenkins compares Burkburnett casually to Pecos.

"The personnel is not the same, but as far as offensive and defensive philosophy, you could compare the two teams," the third-year Snyder coach offers. "To stop them, you have to stop them running right at you, and you have to control the ball offensively yourself."

Stopping the Bulldogs means nailing 173-pound senior fullback Eddie Dennison, who has rushed for 847 yards and seven touchdowns this season. Quarterback Mike Bavousett, a 165-pound senior, has rushed for 145 yards in six district games and completed 13 of 35 passes for 240 yards and two touchdowns. Another key to the Burk offense is 165-pound wingback Carl Hayes, a threat on the reverse, who sometimes shares the spot with Hart Jeanis.

Defensive keys for the Bulldogs are noseguard Don Williams and linebackers Rodney Horn and Jay LaBrie. Tackle Ben Guffey, a 252-pound senior, is another good one.

Burkburnett has given up an average of 11.9 points per outing this season - 10.3 in district play - and has scored to the effort of 16.1 (18.6 in conference competition).

Meanwhile, the Tigers have averaged 19.0 for the season offensively, and given up 10.5. Those figures compute to 30 for and seven against, in district play.

Gunning the Tiger offense is 160-pound quarterback Clay Johnson, who has to his credits 10 touchdowns and a two-point conversion. The senior playmaker has also thrown for seven TDs.

Burk will also see trouble out of quick tailback Richard Crayton, who has crossed the goal seven times on touchdowns and twice on conversions.

Defensively, almost every starter has excelled from time to time for the Tigers. In fact, the so-called unglory units - the blockers and tacklers - may well have been the primary standouts for both teams this year.

For the hosting Snyder team, it will be the first bi-district appearance since 1974 when Brownwood delt the Tigers a 42-0 loss. The Cats haven't won a playoff tilt since 1931 when they ripped Comanche in regional play, 13-0.

For the Bulldogs, the holdout has been since 1972. That year Burkburnett advanced to the quarterfinals before falling to Lewisville.

Tickets for the 8 p.m. contest at Tiger Stadium are $4 for adults and $2.50 for students at the gate. The victor will advance to quarterfinals rounds, meeting either Lubbock Estacado or Fort Stockton.

Cowboys Get Fired Up; Blast Past Washington

DALLAS (AP)—Like a good jockey, couching the whip to the vital moment on the backstretch, Dallas Coach Tom Landry has applied the quirt to his defending World Champion Cowboys.

They flew past Washington like a thoroughbred Thanksgiving Day in a 37-10 rout that gave the Cowboys a game lead over the Redskins in the National Conference Eastern Division with three games to play.

"We were ready to play—this is the best we've played," said Landry whose teams characteristically flatten out in the middle of the season then breathe fire when it counts.

Washington quarterback Joe Theismann concluded "All you can say is the Cowboys kicked the hell out of us. I know they kicked the hell out of me."

Dallas is 9-4 to Washington's 8-5. The Cowboys, should the teams again fall into a tie, have an insurmountable tiebreaker edge over the Redskins.

Dallas jumped on Washington with 13 first quarter points - the most for the Cowboys in the opening 15 minutes this year - then pounded the scrambling Redskins in revenge for an earlier 9-5 loss to Washington.

"It was a big plus to move the ball early and get some points on the board," said Cowboy wide receiver Drew Pearson.

Defense To Be Key For Wolves Saturday

Defense, defense and more defense is what the Colorado City Wolves will be howling about as they come to Tiger Stadium 7:30 Saturday night to face Slaton in a bi-district clash - defense of the goal line, defense of the 6-AA championship and defense of pride, which Slaton gobbled up on its own home turf way back at the start of the season.

Slaton, the District 5-AA representative by virtue of a coin toss, can boast of being the only team to defeat the quick-improving Wolves this season. The Tigers, 7-3, made Colorado City their opening meal of the year, 20-13.

Since that time, and speaking of more defense, Coach Mike Farda's Wolves have compiled a win streak of nine games, including seven straight shutouts.

"Of course we're thrilled about the way things have gone this season," says Farda, whose Wolves were picked in most preseason polls behind Coahoma. "We really hadn't expected to be this strong defensively."

But the Wolves have been no sluff offensively either, although winning two games this season by scant scores of 3-0, off of leading rusher Gary Hulme's toe. Hulme, a 6-0, 200-pound fullback, has also added 1,000 yards rushing to the Wolf record books.

A whole crowd of players highlight the defensive crew, but perhaps none is better than junior Britt Chaney of whom Farda comments, "He's got to be one of the best we've ever had. He knows how to read those gaps well and get his man." Onlookers should also watch for Hulme at his defensive linebacker spot, too.

If there is a chink in the Wolf armor, it is probably to be found in the passing department. Quarterback Gene Carter is a capable pilot, however, and finds as his seldom but primary target Jay Feaster.

Not being able to move the ball quickly against a tough offense was a primary problem when Slaton and the Wolves met the first time around. Sparked by a tandem of yardage-gainers, Ricky Davis, Michael Whaley and Darryl Heinrich, the Tigers won the game in the last two minutes, and held off a desperation Wolf offense for the remainder of the game.

This time around however, the Tigers will have to scratch a little harder to get on the scoreboard if Farda and company have anything to say about it. After all, seven straight shutouts is nothing to pass off lightly... and the Wolves don't.

"Oh, you know it," gleams Farda. "These kids are looking forward to keeping that string going. I guess they (Slaton) will be trying just as hard to put a stop to them."

That's what the playoffs are all about.

Panther Opponent No Sluff Either

MIDLAND--There might be more of a battle going on here than some folks have been led to believe as Lubbock Estacado and undefeated Fort Stockton meet in bi-district play here tonight.

The third-ranked and highly acclaimed Panthers have been picked to win the clash by as much as 15 points in some circles, and are a favorite in almost everybody's. The District 2-AAA champion has ripped its opponents almost at will, but what stands out as its most obvious strong point is that Fort Stockton has only allowed 14 points in 10 games - and all of that coming in the last game of the season against Andrews.

The Panthers are led by blue-chipper Rick McIvor, who has thrown for 737 yards and 10 touchdowns, finding Paul Pogue and Wayne Jefferson as primary targets.

It's all a lot to get excited about, but what few people realize is that the Matadors of District 1-AAA have similar, if not as impressive stats.

Estacado, making its first playoff bid since 1975, lost its first game of the season by a bunch of points to Plainview. But since that time, the Mats have won nine straight, including six as shutouts, and have only given up a total of 28 points.

Offensively, Estacado can point to its credit speed-burner Kelvin White, who has rushed for 1,058 yards and 59 points. Quarterback Ken Henderson has thrown for 585 yards, finding Dewey Turner and Winston Gipson as primary targets.

And with the kind of enthusiasm and speed that the Matadors contiually come equipped with - the constant long-range scoring threat - Fort Stockton had better not call this game over....until it is.

Game time is 7:30. The victor will meet either Snyder or Burkburnett in the quarterfinals.

Lions Buck Off Favored Broncos

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP)-English settlers celebrated the first Thanksgiving 357 years ago. Thursday at the Pontiac Silverdome it was Doug English doing most of the celebrating.

He led the Plymouth Rockhard Detroit defensive line that sacked Denver quarterback Craig Morton six times as the Lions defeated the Broncos, 17-14, in their nationally televised National Football League game.

English, a fifth-year tackle from Texas, where he was an All-American, tackled Morton four times behind the line of scrimmage. He and his linemates - rookie Al "Bubba" Baker, John Woodcock and Dave Pureifory - harrassed Morton continually to key the upset over the defending American Conference champion.

The loss dropped Denver to 8-5 and out of a first-place tie with Oakland in the AFC west. The Broncos' next game is at Oakland.

Detroit, at least until Sunday, climbed out of a tie with Chicago for the cellar of the central division of the national Conference. The Lions, who have won four their last six, lifted their record to 5-8.

"Doug English got a game ball," said Detroit Coach Monte Clark. "He was captain today, indicating what I think of him."

Cougars Are Ready; But So Is Hermleigh

STERLING CITY--Christoval coach Jerry Miller contends his Cougars are going to be "better prepared this time around," but nobody has told the Hermleigh Cardinal about it.

The two six-man schools clash her tonight at 7 o'clock with the winner advancing in the state schoolboy playoffs, and the loser content to try again next year.

Christoval, 9-0-1, has as its only bruise a 48-48 tie with Marthon. Last year, the Cougars lost to that team in bi-district action and that's why Miller says he'll better prepare his Cougars this year.

But the Cougars will find the going touch against Coach Clarence Spieker's Cardinals, who ripped through the season with a 10-0 mark. Christoval has averaged a whopping 50.6 points offense a game - while Hermleigh has noted 46.6 - but the Cougars have also allowed 25. Spieker's Cardinals, priding themselves on defense, have given up only 15.8, a paltry sum in six-man play.

Heading up the Cardinal defense are 175-pound linebacker James Williamson, who also poses as offensive right end; down linemen Larry Bridges and Michael Hembree (or 180-pound Ramon Fuentes), safety Clayton Riley and outside linebackers Stanley Warren, 175, and Wesley Kruger, 175. Kruger also doubles as offensive end.

Warren leads a strong offense, having picked up 1,388 yards from his right halfback slot. Left halfback John Williamson, 145. has 873 to his credit. Quarterback Chip Roemisch has thrown for over 1,000 yards, and serves as an accurate extra-points kicker. Filling out the offensive lineup is Smiley Fuentes.

Coach Spieker contends Christoval's strongest point is in its running game, and says "our linemen will have to be able to penatrate to their backfield. We can't wait there for them, they're too big. We'll have to try to shoot the gaps and cause a little confusion in the backfield, break up their running routes."

Christoval is paced by a pair of good-sized runners in 185-pound junior Joe Jackquez and 175-pound Danny Duke, also a linebacker. Corky Solomon, 145-pound senior, is he quarterback.

Other starters for the Cougars include Frank Arrango, a 170-pound offensive end, Carey Timerlin, a 6-0 185-pound offensive end and defensive lineman, Carlos Herrera, offensive center and linebacker; Byron Sawyer, a 175-pound senior lineman; Marcus Herrera, safety; and Todd Arthur, a 160-pound junior linebacker.

Tickets for tonight's game pitting the District 1 Cougars against the District 2 champions, are $3 for adults and $1 for students.

WTC Tripped By Classic Foe

KANSAS --Western Texas College was tagged for its first loss of the season here last night, falling in a squeaker to third-ranked Northeastern Oklahoma 82-78.

The Westerners, now 6-1 on the season, will continue Independence Classic action tonight, playing Oak Ridge of Arkansas at 7 o'clock.

The loss was especially tough on the Westerners, according to Coach Nolan Richardson, who commented that the team had opportunities to win the game, but could never muster enough drive.

"I feel we played awfully bad, but still had an opportunity to win. The trip down here took 17 hours and we didn't get in until 3 in the morning. We played at 7 with no workouts. We just had no reaction, no intensity. We just went through the motions."

Mechanical problems lengthened the trip - the bus went almost the entire distance at 35-40 miles per hour - and took its toll on the team. Plans to stage a brief workout at 5:30 in Tulsa were thwarted when the team arrived in that city at 10 o'clock.

"I don't think that was the complete excuse...but it definately hurt us a lot," commented the coach.

Bill Pattereson sacked in 19 points for the crew, followed by Freddie Davis 15 and Paul Pressey 12. C. Hillard drilled 30 points for Northeastern.

Duo Hosts ACHS Teams

A double-varsity game will highlight local basketball action here Monday against Abilene Christian. The three-match series, held in Scurry County Coliseum, will be kicked off with a girls junior varsity game at 5 p.m. and will follow with a varsity girls and a varsity boys game.

Cats Playing In Midland

MIDLAND--Snyder varsity boys basketball squad was to begin tourney action at 10 a.m. today in the Tall City Tournament here.

The Tigers, 3-0, were to have battled Midland. Winner of the game would advance to a 10 p.m. game, while the loser was to play again today at 7 p.m.

Shocked Beef More Tender

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP)-Sending high voltage shocks through the carcasses of freshly slaughtered cattle may not be an appetizing thought, but officials of Sam Kane Beef Processors, Inc., say it makes for much better steaks.

It is a new process developed by Texas A&M researchers, and scientists say it makes meat much more tender and reduces the cold storage time - thus saving energy.

The technique went into effect for first time this week at the Kane plant, where manager Jerry Kane says it makes beef 30 percent more tender.

Kane said the technique, which was developed by an A&M study that began two years ago, is so far used by only three other meat processers in the country.

Full scale production started last week when $30,000 worth of new equipment was installed. After the beef is slaughtered and skinned, the carcasses are moved by conveyer through an enclosed chamber where they rub against electric-charged bars.

Kane and Savell said grocery shoppers shouldn't expect electro-tenderized beef to look different in meat counters.

"But when their knife cuts into that meat, immediately they're going to know," Kane said.

Short Shrift For Tall Girl

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: For years I have suffered from an inferiority complex because of my height. It has ruined my whole life. I am a woman, 5 feet 9. I love to dance, but I'm taller than the average man and I feel like a fool when a man looks up at me.

I am uncomfortable unless I wear flats. I won't even walk to the coffee machine at work because I feel so conspicuous. I became so desperate I even asked my doctor if he knew of some kind of operation to shorten the bones in my legs, but he said no one has ever attempted such an operation. I told him I would be more than willing to be the first.

Abby, you can't imagine what a miserable feeling it is to walk into a room and pray to God that there is someone there taller than you are. Would you believe that I have even considered taking my life? I'm sure there are other girls who feel the same way.

Any advice you can give me will be appreciated. Don't tell me to see a psychiatrist because that is where my problem has already landed me.

TALL IN CANADA

DEAR TALL: Since you've already wisely consulted a psychiatrist, you must surely know that it's your attitude — not your altitude that needs changing.

You are much too self-centered in assuming all eyes are constanting focused on you. Not true!

Instead of those negative feelings you have about your height, stand tall, throw your shoulders back, chin up, and come on proud, confident and alive! If you have two good arms, legs, eyes, a voice and a mind, thank God in your prayers!

Get rid of those flats (they make you shuffle); wear heels. It will improve your figure. Practice walking with grace and dignity. You get no sympathy from here, dear. Now get going, and remember those prayers of gratitude.

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the woman from Joliet, Ill. about obscene phone calls. I also was bothered by a man who called periodically for this reason. It made me very nervous and upset so I contacted the police, and you wouldn't believe their suggestion.

They told me to make a date with the caller, let them know where he was meeting me, and they would be there to arrest him. I refused to endanger my life this way.

Then by chance I mentioned my problem to the minister's wife who gave me the best tip of all — one she had used. She said, "The next time he calls, say hello as usual, listen for a moment, then while he's still talking, say, 'Are you there, operator? This is the call I asked you to trace . . . he's on the phone now!' "

I did as she suggested, and the caller got rattled and hung up. And that's the last obscene phone call I ever received.

N. HALEDON, N.J.

DEAR N.J.: Thanks for the tip.

DEAR ABBY: I am a waitress and I'm writing to say that I am sick and tired of hearing this job put down.

I just heard the following commercial on TV. "If I hadn't gone to such and such a school for something or other, I'd still be just a waitress." Well, just imagine that! A fate worse than death!

Abby, I've been a waitress for 18 years, and I'm not ashamed of it. I own my own home, a car, and I'm raising two children alone. We take a vacation every summer, I've never had one penny from welfare, and I don't owe a dime.

My work is honorable and rewarding, and I resent the insinuation that waitress work is something to be ashamed of. Please print this for all the waitresses who share my feelings.

KATHY IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR KATHY: Consider it done.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Live Mannequin Draws Crowd

LUBBOCK--Michael E. Rumpf of San Antonio "just felt crazy and decided to do something a little different." He did.

The Texas Tech University student decided to see if shoppers would notice if he played the part of a mannequin at a local clothing store where he is employed.

"People began staring, then people began gathering and some started poking at me," Rumpf said. "My boss ran up to the front of the store to see what was wrong and saw me there. He loved it."

Since then Rumpf has become more interested in still modeling and has hopes of expanding into the various techniques of modeling. He continues still modeling in the local store.

"It's really neat to watch people's reactions. People would laugh at themselves if they could see what I see," Rumpf said. "It's a real challenge to keep stance while there are people poking, tickling and pinching me, along with all the gazing.

"I can usually stay in a position for about three minutes and then I change, doing robot motions," Rumpf said. "That's usually when people notice that I'm not a mannequin."

The six-foot blonde said, "I'm a ham and I love clothes so I'd like to model for other area stores and some day do still modeling for some of the larger department stores."

Rumpf said there has been only one person who broke his pose. Although he declined to reveal what was said, Rumpf said one of his fraternity brothers succeeded. Rumpf is a member of Sigma Nu, social fraternity.

He is also a big brother to Alpha Delta Pi, social sorority. He was graduated from McArthur High School, San Antonio.

The junior business major is the son of Jean A. Rumpf, 626 Northridge, San Antonio.

Princess Grace Makes Record

MONACO (AP)-Princess Grace of Monaco has cut a children's record entitled "The Bird of the North and the Bird of the Sun" which will be released in the next few days in the United States and Europe.

One side of the record is in French and the other in English.

Proceeds from sales of the record will go to a children's organization not yet chosen by the princess, a palace spokesman said.

Revival At Avenue D To Begin Sunday

A week-long revival begins this Sunday at Snyder's Ave. D. Baptist Church, reports Rev. Joe Stansell, church pastor.

The revival will be led by Rev. Jimmy Kennedy, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church in Post. Music director for the revival services will be Terry Bowman, an ex-music and youth director at the Ave. D Baptist Church. He will be coming in for the revival from Clinton, said Rev. Stansell.

The revival begins Sunday, Nov. 26, and continues through Dec. 3. Services will be at 7 0'clock nightly.

Raising And Eating Worms

CINCINNATI (AP)—Two years after two former suburban policemen entered the worm business, one has taken to eating the profits.

But Don Redman, 44, isn't worried that Don Reifsteck, 27, will put a dent in the inventory. The Worm Warehouse Inc., in Delhi Township, the community where both quit their police jobs, has several million of the critters.

Reifsteck said he's read about worm recipes—pizza and chili, for example—but wasn't interested in camouflaging the worms at first.

"Before I ate my first worm, all I did was wash it, boil it and then I popped it. It tasted kind of crunchy. Not bad. I figured if I could eat one like that, I could eat them any old way," he said.

"We've got about 3 million worms. That's a lot of onion rings." Onion rings?

"That's a nice way to eat them," said Reifsteck. "I wash them off, parboil them, saute them in butter, then dip them in a bread crumb mixture. They curl up into a little circle like an onion ring."

Rev. White Going To New Pastorate

REV. GEORGE WHITE

The Rev. George White who has been the pastor a Northside Baptist Church for 6½ years, has resigned effective this Sunday. He will be leaving to assume a pastoral role at the Harmony Missionary Baptist Church in Pasadena, near Houston.

Rev. White said no replacement has been chosen for him yet at Northside Baptist.

Bob Robinson, however, will replace Rev. White as treasurer of Citizens for a Better Community.

"It's been good to see all the progress made, not only from the spiritual field, but from the industrial field as well. I feel Snyder has great potential," Rev. White said. "I have loved Snyder. The people here have been very lovely and friendly."

Pointing to the progress that has been made at Northside during the past 6½ years, Rev. White said new bus purchases have been made, a children's chapel begun, an air conditioning system installed, and a part of the fellowship hall has been bricked. Also, he added, a full time music and youth director has been hired and church membership has been increased by about 150.

Rev. White's new duties at Pasadena begin Dec. 3. Accompanying him there will be his wife, Frances, and youngest son Larry.

Arbuckle Aided Hope

NEW YORK (AP)-Comedian Bob Hope says it was Fatty Arbuckle who helped him get his start in show business in a touring vaudeville show called Curly's Jolly Follies.

Hope, in an interview with Jack Linkletter on NBC's "America Alive" show to be telecast Dec. 1, recalled how he started in show business at 14 doing a take-off of Charlie Chaplin.

Hope, 75, says he has no intention of retiring. He said he finds laughter the best therapy for growing old.

He also complimented former first lady Betty Ford on her facelift and said, "When she came home from the hospital she asked Jerry, 'Do you love me?' and he said, 'Yes, but if my wife finds out she'll kill me.'"

The ocarina is an egg-shaped wind instrument invented in Italy in the 19th century.

Ordination Service Set

An ordination service has been set for 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Northside Baptist Church to ordain Don Harless, Cecil Mearse and Blake Walker into the office of deacon.

The Rev. Jerry Coffman, pastor of Westwood Baptist Church in Odessa, will bring the message. Other ministers and deacons from throughout the West Texas-New Mexico Association will be present to assist in the service, which will be followed with a time of fellowship.

Santas Receive Tough Training

BROOKLYN PARK, Minn. (AP)—Santa instructor Danile Cook says the modern St. Nick needs more than a bright red suit and a steady stream of ho-ho-hos to convince increasingly skeptical youngsters.

Cook conducts classes for Santas who will work at six Minneapolis-St. Paul shopping malls.

"Santas have to be better trained, they've got to know what they are doing these days," said Cook.

The student Santas were put through their basic training in the name of being believable.

"The "toy test" is the surest way to spot an imposter, Cook said.

"If there is a little girl telling you she wants a Baby Wet and Car, you better know that's the doll with diaper rash," he warned. "The real Santa would know, and the kids are going to expect that."

Another Cook maxim: "Never promise a kid anything, always say you will see what you can do.

"If you promise a kid a horse, his parents will not be too happy. And be real careful with those requests for a baby brother or sister."

Mark Twain's first fiction, "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," appeared in the Saturday Press in 1865.

Carter Hoping For Concessions

WASHINGTON (ap)—Carter administration officials say they hope to get several concessions in return for their decision to consider making direct contributions to a common fund to help protect Third World Countries from severe fluctuations in market prices.
Administration officials said Thursday they would consider the request from the Third World "Group of 77" conference in Geneva. But they want assurances the fund will not be used for development projects that would overlap with the work of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

A Dog-Gone Happy Ending

CHULA, Mo. (AP)-It's the kind of story that would make even Lassie proud.
Guard, a 5-year-old English sheep dog, disappeared 16 months ago, and since then, its owner had moved 225 miles across the rugged Missouri Ozarks.
Never mind. The dog somehow found its way back to Bernard Parks, 26, arriving at his master's new home, tired, dirty and 20 pounds lighter.
"We were just shocked to death," said Mildred Parks, the owner's mother. "he probably gradually made his way home. How, I do not know," she said.
The family is gradually trimming Guard's long, matted hair and nursing him back to health.

Anti-Theft Tools Gone

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP)-St. Paul police hoped to prevent thefts by loaning engravers to residents who could mark their private property with special ID numbers.
The effort, however, has hit a snag. All but one of the engravers are missing.
Well, not quite missing. Just unreturned.
Consequently, the anti-theft program has been temporarily halted, a police spokesman said.

Dreams Are Evaluated In Researcher's Book

AUSTIN--About 30 years ago, a sleep researcher at the University of Chicago discovered that our eyes move rapidly while we dream--as if we actually watch the action in our heads.
Today, scientists have proved that we do, and have gone on to describe in detail that part of our sleep called Rapid Eye Movement or REM sleep. Questions they are still asking, however, revolve around a central theme: How important is it for us to dream?
Dr. David Cohen, an associate professor of psychology at The University of Texas at Austin, is an authority on REM sleep. His book "Sleep and Dreaming: Origins, Nature and Functions" will be published by Pergamon Press (Oxford, England) next spring.
He can tell you what kinds of dreams most people have, what your body is doing while you dream, how your sleep differs while you dream and when you're not dreaming. He can even tell you what benefits you might gain from dreaming and that your dreams are significant. But, he, and all the other sleep researchers, can't say that dreaming is an essential psychological and physiological process.
At one time, sleep was vital to the species, Dr. Cohen said in an interview. It began as an evolutionary mechanism to help animals conserve energy and to keep them out of predators' ways.
Today, we are forced to sleep because of our instinct for it, he explained. Perhaps because we must sleep, dreaming developed to serve a psychological function during a time that appears to be otherwise wasted, he suggests.
It is clear that dreaming helps us process new or novel information, Dr. Cohen said. It is not clear, however, how necessary the dream function is to individuals or whether it isn't served just as well while we're awake.
Research by other scientists has shown that we do have a drive for REM sleep. After subjects have been deprived of their REM sleep completely and then are allowed to sleep through the dreaming stage, scientists have found that the dreaming stage occurs more frequently than usual and that it lasts longer than usual. That suggests that we need REM sleep, that it is serving a vital function, Dr. Cohen said.
However, his recent research questions that assumption.
During some experiments in the University sleep lab, Dr. Cohen allowed his subjects to have six minutes of REM sleep each time they entered that stage during the first six hours of sleep. After six hours, he let them complete their REM cycles.
Dr. Cohen assumed the subjects would show heightened drive for REM sleep during the final part of the night because he had permitted only a fraction of their normal amount of REM sleep. However, 80 per cent of the subjects showed no signs of REM drive; they did not remain in REM sleep longer than usual as do subjects who have been totally deprived of REM sleep. Dr. Cohen believes that those results mean that the duration of REM sleep is at best imperfectly related to how important it is to us.
"The duration of REM per se is ambiguous with respect to need," he said.
If that is true, measures of REM sleep have to be rethought, he added.
To test his theory thoroughly, Dr. Cohen currently is carrying out a set of experiments that he hopes will determine what the best measure of REM need is. Also, the experiments should tell scientists how little REM sleep individuals really need.
Dr. Cohen explained that answering those questions may lead us to some insights into personality differences that could ultimately help us understand the roots of some mental illnesses. One of the important aspects of his research is how personality and sex differences show up in individual sleep differences.

President Carter Jogs Mile In Eight Minutes

WASHINGTON - Attention, joggers' President Carter is an eight-minute-mile man.

For those unfamiliar with the jargon of jogging - and there are still a few, despite ambulatory contrary evidence along streets and byways - being able to routinely jog one mile in eight minutes is considered a very creditable performance.

The more so when the runner is 54 years old, as is Carter.

The president, who adopted this popular form of exercise quite recently, is taking it very seriously.

For example, he had federal workers measure the circumference of the oval driveway around the South Lawn of the White House.

It proved to be a quarter-mile circuit, which simplifies his self-timing. Four times around and he's jogged a mile.

Carter, who customarily jogs at least eight laps, finds it takes him about 16 minutes to complete two miles. Or eight minutes a mile.

The president likes to run on the grass around the lawn but uses the pavement after dark lest he sprain his ankle on a hummock of grass.

Carter's personal physician, Rear Adm. William M. Lukash, apparently would be happier if the president stayed away from the grass.

"It's much safer to jog on the pavement," said Lukash.

The doctor is a jogger himself. He runs at midday around the Ellipse, just south of the White House.

Carter jogs about three times a week at the White House, his schedule preventing a daily stint. On his many weekend visits to Camp David, Md., however, he runs each day along the paths and nature trails that crisscross his mountaintop hideaway.

Stuart Eizenstat, the president's domestic policy assistant, may be the first member of Carter's senior staff to join the ranks of regular joggers.

Ms. Eizenstat has been jogging for two or three months—and she's urging her husband to do likewise. One thing is certain; Eizenstat doesn't need the exercise as part of a weight-reduction program; he's close to rail thin.

The Carters may be the closest thing America has to reigning royalty—but, oh, what a difference from more formal types of royalty.

Take the two young sons of Morocco's King Hassan, who accompanied their father to Washington on a state visit earlier this month.

When Amy Carter invited the 8-year-old prince to play with her, the King intervened with a decree that the child must stick to the announced schedule for the visit and reject the invitation.

The president himself confided privately, and with a note of wonderment in his voice, that Hassan insisted his older son, who is 15, sit in on "even the most sensitive" discussions.

Armed guards Stop Mayor

NEW YORK (AP)-Mayor Edward Koch says two men with submachine guns stopped him on his way to bed in Gracie Mansion last May when Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin was in town.

Koch, in a radio interview Thursday, said he arrived at the official mayoral residence about midnight. Begin had gone to bed earlier.

"The prime minister's bedroom was on the same floor as mine," Koch said. "I climbed the stairs, and suddenly there are these two guys with submachine guns.

"I said, 'It's only me.'"

The two Israeli security guards recognized him and lowered their weapons, he said.

"In a way it's nice that it happened," Koch said, saying he was pleased with the security surrounding Begin.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Obstructed leg artery

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a male, 54, and have been told that I have an obstruction in my femoral artery. I just had a thorough physical in the hospital. My physical condition is good. I had a check up initially because of back pain and pain in my hip and leg when walking.

My doctor said I may need an operation for the obstruction in the artery. First he said I should stop smoking for three months and he would check me again. He said no doctor would operate on me because of my heavy smoking.

I have stopped smoking. My question is, "How much risk is involved in this type of operation and was he on the level about not smoking?" I am going to retire at 55 and then will not have medical insurance. Wouldn't it be better to have this taken care of as soon as possible?

DEAR READER — First, from the economical considerations, I would hope that you would be able to have your medical problems settled while you have medical insurance.

Such procedures are usually expensive, not because of the doctor's bills so much, but because of the hospital costs, the operating room costs and all the other things which seem to run up the cost of medical bills to astronomical levels these days.

Smoking can be an important factor in obstruction of the arteries to the legs and I wholeheartedly approve of your doctor's insistence that you stop. It might also relieve some of the problems that you have as far as circulation to the leg is concerned.

I also think you should try to limit your fats and cholesterols in your diet to stop the formation of fatty-cholesterol deposits if at all possible. For that reason, I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet Preventing Atherosclerosis.

Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send you request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

The pain that you've had in your hip and leg when walking was probably from inadequate circulation to that area. If you have a localized obstruction in the artery, a by-pass operation is often helpful.

The surgeon puts in a new synthetic tubing that opens above the obstruction and empties below the obstruction. This detours the blood around the obstructed area. In this way, circulation is improved to the hip and leg area.

Obviously, for such an operation to be successful you have to have a localized obstruction. In other words, you need to detour below the obstruction. If the artery is obstructed all the way down to the foot, there is not much opportunity to put in a detour graft.

These procedures are very successful in selected cases. I might add that they are most successful in the person who follows a good medical program and institutes measures to prevent fatty-cholesterol deposits from developing.

Remember, putting in the by-pass graft doesn't stop the disease, namely the buildup of fatty-cholesterol deposits, it merely provides a way of getting around the obstruction caused by the disease.

If you want to stop the progression of the disease, and get the maximum benefit for a long period of time from such a graft, it is important to control your blood pressure if it is elevated. It is important to refrain from smoking cigarettes thereafter. It is important to stay on a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet and keep your weight down.

OSHA Giving Up 928 Senseless Regulations

WASHINGTON (AP)-The government's watchdog of workplace safety is flushing away a lot of picky rules that drove employers crazy like how to design the proper toilet seat or how to choose a tool belt.

In all, 928 regulations of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration meet a timely death today.

But don't look for any mourners.

OSHA is glad to see the rules go. They never saved any lives or warded off any injuries or illnesses, as far as agency officials could tell.

And the 5 million businesses affected by agency rules will be tickled pink. After all, they used to get fined by OSHA inspectors for failing to comply with the rules.

Some of the former rules were just plain silly, like the one that said, "Piping located inside or outside of buildings may be placed above or below ground." That covered just about every possibility.

Others went a little too far in the area of product design. For instance:

"Every water closet toilet shall have a hinged seat made of substantial material, having a non-absorbent finish. Seats installed or replaced...shall be of the open front type."

Then there were rules that pioneered protective remedies for health threats that don't exist.

"A covered receptacle shall be kept in all toilet rooms used by women" for the disposal of sanitary napkins, said one.

But Jerry Purswell, OSHA's safety standard director and chief rule scratcher, says the agency was unable to find a single case "in which a woman became ill because of exposure to a sanitary napkin."

Another batch of ex-rules set records for providing incomprehensible and unnecessary gobbledygook.

The telephone company, for example, could not provide linemen:

"Belts that have pocket tabs that extend at least 1½ inches down and 3 inches back of the inside of the circle of each D-ring for riveting on plier or tool pockets...There may be no more than 4 tool loops on any body belt."

And was it really helpful for a company that uses wood ladders to know that:

"Black streaks in Western Hemlock shall not be considered an irregularity, except that chambers associated with black streaks when present in the part, shall be limited as specified for pitch and bark pockets."

The rules accumulated over nearly four decades. But it took just short of a year for OSHA to review its books and comply with President Carter's order that regulatory agencies drop "nuisance" standards.

Fear not, though, that OSHA may un-regulate itself out of business. The defunct regulations eliminate only some 30 pages of fine-print rules. Another 280 pages remain alive, well and intact.

OSHA Administrator Eula Bingham says the agency now can "concentrate on reducing or eliminating the more serious and significant workplace safety and health standards.

Royalty From Spain Visits Monuments

LIMA, Peru (AP)-King Juan Carlos of Spain and his wife Queen Sofia spent their first full day of a visit to Peru talking with President Francisco Morales Bermudez and visiting monuments.

Spain's royal couple arrived here Wednesday from Mexico.

The talks with the Peruvian president were held privately in the national palace, which was built more than 400 years ago by the Spanish conquistador Francisco Pizarro.

After going to the palace, the king and queen visited monuments to Pizarro and Manct Capac, the first Inca ruler of the vast empire which was destroyed by Pizarro and his soldiers.

Security around the Spanish couple has been tight because of demonstrations by students protesting increased bus fares and a teachers' strike called by a union dissatisfied with the terms of a settlement reached after an 81-day strike two months ago.

On Sunday, the king will visit Arequipa, a colonial city south of Lima, and from there go to Argentina, the final stop on the three-nation visit.

French composer Georges Bizet was born in 1838.
