Reagan, Bush campaign in Texas

Fund-raiser exceeds goal

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — The Texas Republican Party coffers are swelling by an additional $2 million today after some 2,000 people paid $1,000 apiece to dine with President Reagan and Vice President George Bush.

"We exceeded the goal of $2 million," said Jack M. Rains, chairman of 3-D International, a Houston architectural firm, and chairman of Tuesday night's Texas Victory Gala at Houston's Albert Thomas Convention Center. "Many will say that the fat cats are at it again. But let's put it in perspective. We succeeded because many people made a sacrifice and commitment to the President."

Reagan himself referred to the $1,000 admission. "There was a certain sacrifice at the box office for you to be here," he told the crowd.

Some 200 demonstrators gathered outside the convention hall in the hour before the President arrived and were about equally divided between pro- and anti-Reagan forces.

"Our individual voices won't be heard but our presence will be felt," said Mary Branson, 27, of Spring, an anti-Reagan demonstrator and president of the Northwest Houston chapter of the National Organization for Women.

She was shouting "Four more months!" while the President's backers cheered "Four more years!"

Dawn Natividad, 19, of Houston, said she would be cheering in favor of Reagan "even if he can't hear us."

For their $1,000, those attending the affair ate a three-course meal that included filet mignon and chocolate pecan pie.

Meanwhile, just seven blocks away, about 2,000 Democrats paid $5 a head to attend a hot dog dinner staged to counter the Reagan appearance.

The Republican entourage included a 39-person head table, with Reagan seated between former GOP Gov. William Clements and Rains. The room was decked with blue ceiling-to-floor curtains and the head table was flanked with white replicas of cactus plants adorned with blinking white lights.

Reagan was preceded into the hall by a parade of flag bearers. Olympic Gold Medal gymnast Mary Lou Retton, who trains in Houston, led the Pledge of Allegiance and country-western singer Lee Greenwood sang "God Bless the U.S.A.," a song former Texas Gov. John Connally introduced as "becoming the theme song of the Reagan campaign."

Reagan, in a 20-minute speech that reviewed the accomplishments of his term, thanked Texans for "lending" him Houstonians George Bush and James Baker, the White House chief of staff.

"George is, in every sense of the word, an invaluable part of our administration," Reagan said.

And Baker, "my right-hand man," the President said, "keeps things running smoothly at the White House."

Reagan had just about completed his speech when a woman seated directly below him stood up, interrupted him and tried to give him an envelope.

Felicia Ughanze, who said she was a university student from Nigeria and lived in Houston with her three children, said it was her 10-year dream to give her letter to Reagan.

Mondale, Reagan preparing to face each other this weekend

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Walter F. Mondale says President Reagan's taking responsibility for the latest American deaths in Beirut isn't good enough and won't wash, while Reagan is defending his administration against what he calls "baseless charges" and both men begin in earnest preparations for their first debate.

The president and his challenger were clearing their campaign calenders to devote time to this Sunday's debate in Louisville, Ky., the first of two face-to-face sessions.

Reagan was also trying to voice support for his Labor Secretary, Raymond Donovan, indicted Monday by a New York grand jury. Reagan said Donovan was "innocent until proven guilty" and the victim of a "lynch atmosphere" that has plagued his administration.

"It's now a matter of law, and so I won't comment further," Reagan said.

Vice President George Bush was preparing to release long-awaited details of his income tax returns today. Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was dealing with her finances too, filing Tuesday an updated congressional financial disclosure statement showing hundreds of thousands of dollars not previously reported.

Campaigning Tuesday, Mondale and his running mate hit strongly at Reagan on the question of blame for the latest fatal bombing in Lebanon.

"He seems to be saying, 'I take responsibility, but nothing went wrong,'" Mondale said of Reagan. "I don't believe that will wash."

Students hear GOP's 'song'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

LUBBOCK — Riding a horse painted in spots of conservative Republican philosophy, Vice President George Bush sang cowboy tunes of freedom and peace during a rally here Tuesday on the Texas Tech University campus.

About 2,000 people — mostly students waving miniature American flags — stood under the warm sun on an Indian summer day to hear Bush point out differences between the "doom and gloom" being sung by Democrats and the "hope and freedom" offered by Republicans.

During a news conference afterward, the vice president said he knew little about the Raymond Donovan indictment, supported elimination of the Windfall Profit Tax and pointed out a difficulty in dealing with the Soviet Union in arms talks.

The stage for Bush was set up by the opening tune of "Fritz Busters" sung to the music of "Ghost Busters" and by Chuck Connors, who played a cowboy in the television series "The Rifleman."

"If you took all the political issues of the campaign and put them in a mixer, it would come out freedom and peace," said Connors. "That's the thrust of the Reagan-Bush ticket."

Bush, who in the 1950s lived in Midland and established his foundation in the oil business, said to the cheering students, "I think I know West Texas. I worked in Snyder and Andrews and Muleshoe in the oil fields. I know the people of this state and they'll never vote for a weak leader, tax-raiser like Fritz Mondale. They'll never vote for Fritz and the Temple of Gloom."

The Democrats' motto, said Bush, "is always heard a discouraging word."

Bush cited differences between the Democrats and Republicans that included:

— "Our opponents whine, criticize and tear down. Ours is a West Texas approach: leadership with optimism in the people."

— The Democrats campaign for more federal spending in education. Between 1960 and 1980, federal spending on education went up 2,000 percent and the test scores dropped. Republicans are "seeking excellence with local control. Now, test scores are going up."

— Democrats want to raise taxes; Republicans want to lower them.

— Democrats "see America divided up into special interest groups. We see America together."

— Democrats "think of achieving peace through weakness, cutting the military program to the bone," he said to responding boos from the audience. "They want to give away the B-1 bomber."

"Those tired, negative, old idea liberals like (House Speaker) Tip O'Neill and Walter Mondale have had their chance. All they see is gloom and disaster and scare. No vision for the future," Bush said to the students.

Midland County grand jury hearing obscenity case

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

An investigation by the sheriff's office into rentals of allegedly obscene video cassette tapes resulted in a hearing this morning before the grand jury, although a similar investigation had been conducted by the Midland Police Department, which determined charges would be difficult to prosecute.

Sheriff's Office deputies and the Midland County Attorney's Office Sept. 13, confiscated 220 tapes including "Debbie Does Dallas," "Deep Throat" and "The Devil and Mrs. Jones," from two Midland video rental stores.

No arrests were made during the search and seizure.

Following viewing of the films, the grand jury is expected to rule this afternoon whether the owners/operators of Movie Mania, 4324 Andrews Highway, and Music Haul at San Miguel Square were guilty of the Class A misdemeanor obscenity charges.

An investigation leading to the seizure was carried out, according to Sheriff Dallas Smith, with no knowledge of a similar investigation conducted four months earlier by Midland Police investigators, who determined obscenity charges would be difficult to prosecute and a not-guilty verdict could be detrimental to the community.

An internal report to Police Chief Wayne Gideon said discussions with an assistant Attorney General of Texas and research into past court cases indicated obscenity charges should not be pursued, but the stores should continue to be monitored.

Midland County Attorney J. Scott Henderson and First Assistant County Attorney Mark H. Dettman were expected to present the cases to the grand jury.

Armed with search warrants signed by Midland County Court-at-Law Judge Willie DuBose, sheriff's investigators along with Henderson and Dettman, were present during the confiscation.

Sheriff Dallas Smith denied the search and seizure was a political move. He said this week that under a state statute he is bound to arrest those who are involved in illegal activities and present those cases to the grand jury.

An earlier investigation made by Midland police, however, determined taking the cases to court might be more harmful to the community than merely monitoring the activities of the store.

According to a report issued to Police Chief Wayne Gideon, police investigators assigned by Capt. Billy Ray conferred with Assistant Attorney General of Texas Gary Bledsoe May 21, on the legality of distributing video cassettes of an obscene nature and the difficulty in prosecuting them.

Citing Section 43.22 A of the Texas Penal Code, the report said prosecutors must prove that the owner-operator of a business distributing such videos has personal knowledge of their content.

Bride wore a diamond ring — through her nose

Camilla Blaffer Royall and Herbert Mallard hold hands as a Hindu priest chants prayers during their unusual wedding ceremony.

By TINA CHOU
Associated Press Writer

JAIPUR, India — The bride was dressed like a maharani in a pink and gold gown, and she wore a diamond ring in her nose. She is a Texas oil heiress.

The bridegroom rode in on an elephant, wore a red and gold turban and carried a sword. He is a financial consultant from Massacusetts.

So it went Monday night when Camilla Blaffer Royall of Houston, Texas, and Herbert Mallard of Boston were married in a Hindu ceremony in a maharani's palace garden in the desert state of Rajasthan.

The 42-year-old bride waited in the garden for the ceremony to begin. Her bridegroom, also 42, rode in on an elephant at the head of a procession of two more elephants, four camels, eight horses and 16 costumed warriors.

A police band played Indian and Western marches.

The wedding couple's gold-embroidered clothes were tied together in a nuptial knot symbolizing their union. Barefoot, they walked seven times around a fire of cow dung. Hindu priests chanted mantras, and after a three-hour ceremony, they were pronounced man and wife.

"It's the most beautiful wedding I've ever seen. It's fabulous," said the bride, who first visited Rajasthan two years ago.

"But the ceremony was arduous and difficult," she said. "We didn't know we would be jumping up and down and that a cow dung fire would be burning in our nostrils."

Mrs. Mallard said she was "only expecting a small wedding — a couple of elephants, flowers and songs." But friends from Jaipur turned it into a extravaganza.

"I loved it. It went very well, better than well," said Mallard, a financial consultant for several oil companies in Kuwait. Hindu priests daubed a spot of red paint on his forehead — an auspicious sign — before he formally was introduced to his bride.

"But they took my shoes away and my feet are cold," said Mallard, who couldn't stop laughing and hunted for his shoes for two hours.

He didn't realize that according to marriage custom in India, the bridegroom's shoes are hidden until pays the "marriage price" to the bride's relatives.

It was the second marriage for both. They plan small church weddings in Houston and Boston after they return from a honeymoon in the Himalayan state of Kashmir.

After the ceremony, about 200 guests, including 50 American and European friends, celebrated at a feast. Contrary to Hindu tradition, there was roast beef for the Western palates.

The National Weather Service forecasts showers Thursday for portions of the Southwest and clear skies for most of the nation.

Chance for thunderstorms continues through Thursday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders may need their umbrellas through Thursday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport predicts thunderstorms and rain, some heavy.

Conditions tonight are expected to be cloudy with a 70 percent chance of thunderstorms. Lows in the mid-60s will be accompanied by southerly winds at 10 to 15 mph.

The chance for thunderstorms will decrease 10 percent Thursday while the temperature is expected to increase to the mid-70s. Winds will be from the south at less than 20 mph.

The record high for Tuesday set in 1951 was 20 degrees above the recorded 77. The overnight low of 59 was 17 degrees above the record set in 1961.

STATE

A low pressure system and remnants of Hurricane Polo buffeted parts of West Texas today, forcing weather officials to post flash flood warnings in the mountains through Thursday.

Meanwhile, clear skies persisted along the coast and throughout much of East and North Texas, while a wave of moist Gulf air increased the cloud cover over the remainder of the state.

Low clouds blanketed deep South Texas while high level clouds were visible elsewhere.

Widely scattered light showers dampened parts of the southwest early today, but otherwise, no rain was detected.

However, more precipitation was possible in West Texas, mainly west of the mountains, and weather service forecasters warned of flash flooding in low-lying areas, highway water crossings and streams.

TAPES

Bledsoe, stating he had spoken with and cited cases to Midland police investigators, told The Reporter-Telegram Tuesday that until the courts had ruled it unconstitutional, a person standing behind the counter could be cited for possessing the allegedly obscene tapes with the intent to distribute.

"While we don't have a written opinion from the Attorney General of Texas, we did talk to that office," Gideon confirmed. "We had a telephone inquiry, I would assume you would say, and they did not speak very optimistically with us about that particular type of case."

According to Gideon, because the tapes were not advertised or openly displayed but were instead kept in a locked case in the back of a room and obtained only by approaching the manager of the store, the Attorney General's office indicated the cases would be difficult to prosecute.

"As I recall, his best advise to us was to run the risk of trying such a case and losing would, in essence, by way of the media, send a message to all the smut dealers that Midland was a ready market (and) that the people were not convicted and so forth," Gideon said.

The police chief said the department's decision to not prosecute also was based on past appellate court rulings which provided no direction or guidelines for future cases, expenses of such trials and weak legislation regarding obscenity charges.

City Manager Jim Brown, who also had a copy of the final report, was aware of the decision and had instigated the police investigation in the first place, he said.

"I would leave no one with the impression that we in any way condone or endorse such activites because we don't, and we're going to continue to fight it," Gideon said. "And we're going down swinging one way or another."

Gideon stated he had no knowledge of the sheriff's department's investigation until seeing the tapes confiscated on the news that night.

"We monitor nightclubs. We monitor all sorts of public activity for any lewdness of any type," Gideon said. He added that other video cassette rental outlets other than the two brought today before the grand jury were included in his department's investigation. "And I'm very pleased to say that there is an absence of such activity on any type of large scale in this city as compared to other areas throughout the state of Texas.

"I in no way condone any such type of activity," he said. "We're dedicated, and, to see that nothing occurs, we're going to use all the means we can. We don't take that stuff lightly. We really sincerely try to aggressively pursue it and are going to continue to do so."

According to Sheriff Dallas Smith, the police department had "tolerated" the allegedly obscene video rentals, but his department had discussed the cases with the County Attorney's office.

"The Attorney General's office does not prosecute cases," Smith said. "The grand jury of Midland County decides whether the law should be enforced. It is a violation of the law and for us to ignore it would be improper."

Following investigations in which deputies with the sheriff's office went in and rented the tapes (by joining a rental club for $90 in one store), the investigators viewed the tapes and discussed the possibility of prosecution with the County Attorney's office. A search warrant was requested, signed and served, Smith said.

"There's a statute here that says the sheriff makes reports to the grand jury of illegal activity in the county. It's of illegal activity," Smith said. "When I report it to the grand jury, then I've done my job."

When asked if he thought a not-guilty verdict in the cases would be an open invitation to distributors of allegedly obscene tapes, Smith said: "Well, Gideon and I differ on his approach."

According to Smith, when he took office he asked Gideon about an organized prostitution operation at the Belair Court on Wall Avenue.

"I approached him on why we were allowing that to operate and his explanation was if we know where they're at we can control them," Smith said. "I didn't agree with that. I felt like an organized effort and tolerating it is not what the statute said that we can do.

"I chose to close the operation," Smith said. "I haven't seen where that's caused any ill effects. What it has done (is) it makes it difficult for organized prostitution to operate, so I see this as about the same type of thing. I'm not going to have a tolerant attitude."

Gideon declined to comment on the allegations.

The charges brought against the Midland operators had nothing to do with Section 43.22, which deals with displaying material, a Class C misdemeanor, Smith said. His investigation was focused on Section 43.23, which says a person commits an offense if he knowingly promotes or possesses with intent to promote any obscene material or device. A guilty verdict in a Class A misdemeanor is punishable by a fine up to $2,000, a jail sentence of up to a year or both.

Promotion by definition of law means to manufacture, issue, sell, give, provide, lend, mail, deliver, transfer, transmit, publish, distribute, circulate, present, exhibit or advertise or to offer or agree to do so, Smith said.

In order to prosecute such cases, a definition of obscenity also must be made. According to Dettman, the federal appellate court already has ruled that at least two of the seized tapes fit that definition.

Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega on Tuesday addresses the U.N. General Assembly.

Administration denies charges attack on Nicaragua planned

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A claim by Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega that the United States plans a "military offensive" against his country on Oct. 15 is drawing sharply worded denials from the Reagan administration.

One U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, expressed surprise at Ortega's comments, noting that Nicaragua's leftist government has warned frequently of imminent invasions that never took place.

There have been at least five previous claims this year alone, although Ortega's was the first to mention a specific date.

Less than an hour after Ortega made the comment Tuesday in a speech to the United Nations General Assembly, State Department deputy spokesman Alan Romberg dismissed the prediction as "obviously absurd."

In Brownsville, Texas, where President Reagan was campaigning, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III said Ortega's claim was "absolutely not true." Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch called it "absolute nonsense."

Privately, a U.S. official said Ortega's statement may have been linked to the start earlier this week of joint U.S.-Honduran military exercises that are scheduled to continue until Oct. 21. Honduras is Nicaragua's northern neighbor.

This official also suggested that the Nicaraguan warning could have been intended to pressure other Central American countries into giving final approval to a proposed regional peace treaty that has been drawn up by the Contadora mediation group, comprised of Venezuela, Mexico, Panama and Colombia.

The mediators have set Oct. 15 for the Central Americans to offer comments on the draft, the same day Ortega has said the invasion will take place.

The treaty has become a source of contention between Managua and Washington, with Nicaragua insisting that the treaty be accepted as is and the United States saying the proposal requires a number of revisions.

The United States is not a party to the Contadora negotiations but has made its views known to the participating countries since the process began 20 months ago.

The U.S. view is the the draft favors Nicaragua. Officials note that the proposal calls for an immediate end to the activities of Nicaraguan rebels based in Honduras and Costa Rica. But left to future negotiations, among other issues, is the size of Nicaragua's army, which the United States now considers excessive.

Asked about the U.S. demand for revisions at a news conference Tuesday, Ortega said, "When someone says the peace plan requires amendment that means that party doesn't want a peace plan."

In his speech, Ortega suggested the alleged invasion plan is designed to prevent the scheduled Nov. 4 national elections in Nicaragua from taking place.

REAGAN

After nearly two full weeks of demands that someone take the blame for the bombing that killed two Americans at the U.S. Embassy annex, Reagan raised the subject with reporters after arriving in Brownsville, Texas.

"I am responsible, as I said that I was on the previous tragedy," Reagan said. "I was responsible and no one else for our policy and our people being there."

But the president said "there was no evidence of any carelessness or anyone not performing their duty" in the Sept. 20 truck bombing, the third such attack on a U.S. installation in that country during Reagan's term.

"I'm not going to deliver somebody's head up on a platter, which seems to be the request of so many when things like this happen," Reagan said.

In Nashville, Tenn., Ms. Ferraro called Reagan's remarks a meaningless gesture and said it was just as he did after the Oct. 23, 1983, bombing in Beirut that left 241 Marines dead. An April 18, 1983, embassy bombing there killed 16 other 16 Americans.

"He accepted responsibility in 1983 and it meant nothing," she said.

"We have now waited 13 days and we have the president accepting responsibility and saying no heads will roll. What does that mean?," she said.

In Little Rock, Ark., Mondale said, "I think he now has to really take responsibility and tell us what happened, what went wrong and what he's doing to prevent a recurrence."

The charges against Donovan, now on an unpaid leave of absence, prompted renewed questioning and charges by the Democrats about Reagan's appointees, an issue Mondale raised earlier this year as the "sleaze factor."

Asked about the issue, Reagan said, "If there is one, it's on the other side, with their baseless charges and accusations that have all been proven false."

Said Mondale, "I believe there is a tacky element in this administration."

Reagan was flying back to Washington today from Houston, where he and Bush headlined a $1,000 a plate gala that raised more than $2 million for the Texas Republican Party.

In Texas he offered an optimistic view of the campaign, befitting an incumbent far ahead in the polls.

"Things are going so well our opponents in this election don't seem to know what to talk about," Reagan said. He added that Mondale's proposal for a tax increase has been "about as popular with the American people as a skunk at a lawn party."

Aides said he would study briefing materials, discuss debate strategy with his advisers and practice his technique by facing budget director David Stockman in mock debate in the White House family theater.

Mondale, hoping for a strong performance to help narrow the president's lead in the polls, has enlisted Columbia University President Michael Sovern to "play" Reagan should he decide to stage a practice confrontation before the real thing, according to aides.

With only one more public appearance this week, aides said Mondale had already begun watching video tapes of earlier Reagan debates and would be poring over briefing books prepared by his staff.

Bush, meanwhile, attacked the Democrats as offering a "totally negative" campaign message.

"Mondale and Ferraro see a silver lining and then they try to find a cloud to go around it," Bush said. "Their motto: Always is heard a discouraging word."

He was flying to Little Rock, Ark., where aides planned to release details of his taxes, which until last week Bush insisted could not be made public because of the terms of the blind trust into which his assets had been placed.

BUSH

But Republicans are looking at the country through different glasses, according to Bush. President Reagan sees America "only beginning to come into her full glory. We see a bright and prosperous and peaceful future. Give us this West Texas spirit that makes this country great."

During the news conference Bush criticized Mondale for trying "to exploit sensitive discussions between the president and Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko involving relations between our countries."

During Reagan's term, the Soviet Union has had three leaders, all of them ill — "one still is and two are dead," Bush said. "You don't just rush over there and meet with a new leader. The Soviet system is complicated. They have to solidify their leadership after a new person comes in" and that requires time, he noted.

If the two countries can meet for arms talks, Bush would propose banning all chemical weapons and reducing the number of strategic weapons.

The indictment of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan on charges of falsifying records shouldn't affect the presidential campaign, said Bush, noting that Donovan had been investigated and cleared of wrongdoing by a special prosecutor.

He was unsure if Donovan had been asked by the White House to take a leave of absence. "Being on the road, I can't say that I'd know if there had been pressure from the White House for him to take leave."

Bush denied that President Reagan wants to retain the Windfall Profit Tax and said that money could be used for finding more energy. The overall policy on energy will be a major issue in the election, he said.

Many missing in ferry accident

By HARTMUT HESS
Associated Press Writer

HAMBURG, West Germany — A ferry taking more than 40 passengers on a birthday cruise in rainy Hamburg harbor collided with a tug boat and sank. One woman was killed, 24 people were hurt and 22 were missing and feared dead, police said today.

Among those still missing late this morning were 10 children and 12 adults, including the ferry's captain, police said. The boats collided at 7:25 p.m. Tuesday.

"We believe that they are dead, since it has been so long since the accident happened," said police spokesman Peter Zeyn.

Authorities said it could be the worst accident in Hamburg harbor since World War II. A collision of two ferries in 1972 killed 17 people. However, Zeyn said police would not raise the official death toll until later in the day.

Police said frogmen were fitting steel cables around the ferry Martina and would raise it to the surface today. Divers found the wreck at about 1 a.m. today, 5½ hours after it collided with a tug boat towing a barge. High tide hindered their efforts to raise it.

Reagan assumes responsibility for bombing of Beirut embassy

HOUSTON (AP) — President Reagan, taking responsibility for the bombing in Beirut and put on the defensive by charges against his labor secretary, returns to the White House today to begin preparing for his first debate with his Democratic challenger.

Reagan went through all the motions Tuesday, appearing at one campaign event after another in a campaign sweep across Texas, never mentioning the indictment of Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, except to reporters at a brief question-and-answer session arranged to put the matter to rest.

During that same encounter, Reagan sought to assume responsibility for any security lapse in the most recent bombing of American facilities in Lebanon, saying no one else would be called to account for the attack in which to Americans died.

"I was responsible and no one else for our policy and our people being there," Reagan said. "I'm not going to deliver somebody's head up on a platter, which seems to be the request of so many when things like this happen."

Reagan said an internal State Department investigation, which is still underway in Beirut, produced "no evidence of any carelessness or anyone not performing their duty" when an explosive laden truck swept past a security gate still under construction and blew up under fire at the embassy wall on Sept. 20.

Reagan's Democratic opponents, who had been insisting that the president name those responsible for the security failure, said he still owes the American people an explanation of what happened and how.

"I think," said Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale, "he now has to really take responsibility and tell us what happened, what went wrong and what's he's going to do to prevent a recurrence."

But the message Reagan had for supporters was all upbeat and confident.

"Things are going so well our opponents in this election don't seem to know what to talk about," Reagan told a $1,000 a ticket Republican fundraiser in Houston that organizers said exceeded their goal of bringing $2 million into the state party's campaign chest.

He said Mondale's proposal for increasing income taxes has been "about as popular with the American people as a skunk at a lawn party."

Former Texas Gov. Bill Clements presents President Reagan with a bronze statue of Col. William Travis, one of the fighters at the Alamo. Reagan was in Houston addressing a GOP fundraiser.

But advising his supporters not to listen to public opinion polls showing him way ahead and to "just pretend we're one vote behind," Reagan was heading home to get ready for his Sunday night confrontation with Mondale.

Aides said he would study briefing materials, discuss debate strategy with his advisers and practice his technique by facing budget director David Stockman in mock debate in the White House family theater.

During a planeside press conference in Brownsville, Reagan said he wanted to "remind all of you that (Donovan) is innocent unless proven guilty."

Reagan: Valley would not be 'left out of the 'American Renaissance'

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — President Reagan reminded supporters of his administration's $100 million commitment to the Rio Grande Valley, but failed to tell them that Cameron County qualified for federal aid after recent torrentials rains caused $28 million damage.

Reagan spoke to a predominately Mexican-American crowd at a campaign rally in Brownsville Tuesday, then went on to Corpus Christi and Houston.

In Houston, the president joined his wife, Nancy, and Vice President Bush for a $1,000-a-plate fundraising dinner that Republicans hoped would generate $2 million for campaign coffers.

Reagan promised an estimated 3,000 South Texans at the Brownsville rally at Texas Southmost College that, despite recent economic setbacks, the area would not be "left out of the American Renaissance."

He asked that they be patient and reminded them of the federal assistance that had come through jobs programs and disaster relief after a freeze last winter devastated Valley agriculture and left thousands of farm workers unemployed.

But Reagan did not tell the rally that earlier in the day he had signed papers declaring Cameron County, including Brownsville, a federal disaster area from heavy flooding that followed three days of torrential rains last month.

News of the declaration came from officials at the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Washington.

"Cameron County is now eligible for both individual and public assistance which means tht federal aid is available to individuals and families who suffered uninsured losses due to the flood," said Meg Ravnholt, spokeswoman for FEMA in Washington.

Ms. Ravnholt said she did not know what time Tuesday morning the president had signed the declaration.

FEMA offices will be set up to accept applications for aid later this week, she said.

In Brownsville, Los Fresnos and low-lying neighborhoods near the coast, more than 300 families were forced by rising water to leave their homes. Between Sept. 16 and 18, up to 20 inches of rain fell on sections of eastern Cameron County.

Officials estimate that $28 million worth of damage was caused by the storms and floods.

The disaster declaration will make available funds from the Small Business Administration, the Farmers Home Administration and other federal programs, Ms. Ravnholt said.

There was no dollar ceiling attached to the declaration.

"It provides as much as they need, whatever it takes to get people back on their feet," she said.

Matching funds will also be provided for the county to make necessary repairs to roads, parks, bridges and other public facilities.

George Gavito, Cameron County Civil Defense Director, said damage estimates included $5 million to rural roads, $700,000 to county parks and $50,000 for cleaning up debris.

University fire drill goes awry

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Officials at Stephen F. Austin State University say they are investigating a surprise fire drill at a dormitory after six students were injured from smoke bombs set off in the building's stairwells.

The drill, which used the smoke bombs and a city fire truck for realism, went awry Tuesday when some residents of the 14-story dormitory apparently panicked. About 100 students were evacuated from the building, officials said.

University officials "had set the drill up, set the smoke bombs off and sounded the fire alarm, and they had some congestion in the hallways," said SFA spokesman Ken Kannamer.

Elevators in the Garner apartment complex were stopped after two smoke bombs were set off inside both stairwells of the building at 6:50 p.m., students said. Residents, who thought fire had broken out, were hampered in escaping from the structure.

Five students were taken by ambulance to Nacogdoches Memorial Hospital, where they were treated in the emergency room for smoke inhalation and were scheduled to be released, said G.W. Jones, assistant hospital administrator.

A sixth resident was treated at the scene for smoke inhalation, said Kennamer.

"The stairwells got clogged, because that's where the smoke was, and some students got a little too much before they left," he said.

Kennamer said that he believed elevators inside the dorm were operable, and that residents were not endangered by the exercise.

Houston gunmen strike family twice

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston gunmen killed three members of Joey LaBelle's family in two separate incidents, and the Massachusetts man came here this week to see one of the murderers sent to prison.

He came with his brother-in-law, watched a judge sentence the murderer and then quickly headed back home because, LaBelle says, Houston seems a dangerous place.

"I had to see him," said LaBelle of the man convicted of killing his second brother. "I just wanted to look at this guy."

Rickey Stewart, 28, was sentenced in a state district court here Monday to 45 years in prison for the robbery-slaying of LaBelle's 28-year-old brother, David.

David LaBelle was killed May 20, 1983 while talking long distance on a telephone to his brother-in-law, Arthur McGowan, in Massachusetts.

McGowan, who also came to see Stewart sentenced, said David LaBelle's last words were to ask about the time.

After that, McGowan told the Houston Chronicle, "I didn't hear anything and then I heard what sounded like a car door slamming."

The next day, a Houston funeral home called McGowan's wife to say David LaBelle was dead.

It was an experience the family had felt once before.

In August, 1981, LaBelle's mother, Bertha Hudson, 55, and a brother, Mike LaBelle, were hit by gunfire during a gun fight in the bar owned by the family.

Mrs. Hudson died immediately, along with a bar patron. Mike LaBelle died a few days later in a hospital.

Authorities have made no arrests in the triple killings, but are looking for two gunmen.

After those shootings, Joey LaBelle said he urged his brother, David, to leave Houston. But David stayed.

"He always told me on the phone" that he wanted to stay in Houston "just in case anything breaks" in the murder investigation, Joey LaBelle said.

Nothing ever has and now David, too, is dead.

McGowan and Joey LaBelle said they were both shocked by the Houston violence that has affected their lives.

"I'm a cop," said McGowan, an officer in Northbridge, Mass. "I wouldn't be a cop here (Houston). They couldn't pay me enough to come down here. Everybody carries guns."

Joey LaBelle said he took some comfort from the 45-year sentence given Stewart.

"It made me feel that at least there's a little justice in the world," said LaBelle. "I'm not happy about the verdict, but it's better than nothing."

"You can't dwell on this," he added. "If you do, it affects your life. You just have to go on."

He and McGowan then packed their bags and headed back to Massachusetts and away from Houston, their family's city of tragedy.

New tax law confuses Texans

AUSTIN (AP) — The state comptroller's office has fielded more than 16,000 calls from Texans confused by the new sales tax law that went into effect this week.

The agency's 51 field offices took 5,839 calls Tuesday after receiving 5,500 on Monday and 4,800 last Friday, according to John Moore, director of tax information.

He said most of the callers had "taxability questions" concerning what is taxed and what's not. In addition to raising the state sales tax to 4.125 percent, lawmakers increased the list of taxable items.

Much of the confusion is about what services are taxed. Under the new law, which went into effect Tuesday, services such as parking, repairs, laundry and dry cleaning are taxed.

Some callers "have complained the print is a little small" on the new sales tax charts.

NATION in brief

Frigate taken to shipyard

BOSTON (AP) — A warship blockaded by civilian workers when the Navy canceled a repair contract was moved after a three-day standoff, and will sit idle while the Navy negotiates a contract with another yard, authorities said.

The 438-foot frigate USS Connole was taken Tuesday from Boston Shipyard Corp. to the nearby Charlestown Navy Shipyard, said Navy spokesman Lt. Russell Greer.

The shipyard removed cranes blocking the Connole under a court order.

The Navy was dissatisfied with the quality of the company's work and canceled the $8.5 million contract, spokesman Cmdr. Dan Davidson said.

Power failure probed

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It could take several days to find the cause of a separation in electrical transmission lines that cut off power for up to an hour in parts of nine western states, officials said.

Power was interrupted Tuesday morning to more than 890,000 customers in parts of Idaho, Oregon, Washington, California, Nevada, Montana, Arizona, Wyoming and Utah, authorities said.

The Bonneville Power Administration's high-voltage system "separated from both Idaho and California," said Ed Mosey, a spokesman for the federal agency that supplies hydroelectric power to local utilities.

"We don't know what caused it," he said.

Founder pleads guilty

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With guilty pleas to 18 counts of mail fraud, obstruction of justice and conspiracy, the founder of the City of Industry resolved two indictments concerning contracts for a $65 million redevelopment project.

James Marty Stafford entered the pleas Tuesday as his trial was about to begin on charges he received kickbacks for rigging contract bids on the Industry Hills project.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Feess said the pleas resolved indictments returned in April and August. An FBI investigation continues into corruption in the city, an incorporated community outside Los Angeles.

Sentencing was set for Nov. 29. Stafford remains free on bail.

Collision closes turnpike

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — A fatal collision between a truck and two cars that set off a chain reaction involving three other cars forced the closing of the southbound lanes of the Connecticut Turnpike during rush hour, police said.

Four people died and five others were injured, authorities said.

The flatbed truck hurtled over a guard rail and hit two oncoming cars Tuesday morning about four miles from the Stratford toll plaza, authorities said. Three other cars were involved, state police Lt. Kenneth Kirchner said.

The truck driver was in critical condition today at Bridgeport Hospital. Three people were hospitalized in serious condition; another was treated and released, said hospital spokeswoman Anne Ziff.

Court to open in case

HASTINGS, Minn. (AP) — Witnesses in the trial of a deputy sheriff and his wife accused of child sex abuse will be prohibited from discussing testimony with one another, but the courtroom will be open during children's testimony, a judge has ruled.

Witnesses expected to testify will also be sequestered, District Judge John Fitzgerald ruled Tuesday.

Donald Buchan, a Scott County deputy sheriff, and his wife, Cindy, are among 25 people accused of involvement in child sex abuse rings in the county. Jury selection resumes Thursday.

The first couple to go on trial were found innocent of all charges.

Man chokes on drug

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, Calif. (AP) — A man who refused to cough up a plastic bag of marijuana about the size of a small cigar choked to death during a struggle with deputies, the Los Angeles County coroner's office said.

John Hicks, 22, died late Saturday, and tests completed Tuesday determined the cause and the substance, coroner's spokesman Bill Gold said.

Hicks went limp soon after a Ventura County deputy held Hicks' neck between the thumb and forefinger and used the other fingers to keep Hicks from swallowing the object, authorities said. Attempts were made to revive him, authorities said.

Firm clashes prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary John Lehman is hailing a $438 million contract awarded to McDonnell Douglas Corp. for 300 training planes plus related equipment as a Pentagon landmark because the price was slashed to just over half the original 1981 estimate.

The contract for T045TS planes, based on the British-designed Hawk, abandons the so-called cost-plus system under that has generated enormous cost overruns in recent years and sets, instead, a fixed price for the aircraft and related simulators and computers, Lehman said Tuesday. The original estimate was $810 million.

Lehman called the award "a very major landmark in contracting procurement strategy" because "there can be no cost overruns on this contract."

Reagan-Bush team keeping its distance from indicted official

By MAUREEN SANTINI

Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan leaves Bronx Criminal Court in New York Tuesday after pleading innocent to 137 counts in an indictment charging him and other defendants with padding business record to steal $8 million on a subway project.

AP Laserphoto

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unusual cloud of silence has descended upon the normally talkative Reagan-Bush staff. Led by the president himself, campaign officials are working to keep their distance from the troubles of Labor Secretary Ray Donovan.

In separate telephone interviews Tuesday, one campaign official after another refused to discuss the likely political impact of the Donovan indictment.

"The whole campaign is just going to clam up," said John Buckley, a spokesman for Reagan-Bush '84. "The feeling is there is nothing to be gained by our talking right now."

One the campaign trail, Reagan went briefly onto the offensive, striking out against a so-called "lynch atmosphere" that hectors his appointees.

But at the same time, Reagan said the case was now "a matter of law," insisting, "I'm not going to comment further on this except to say that to my knowledge he (Donovan) is innocent until proven guilty."

By granting Labor Secretary Donovan an unpaid leave and making his brief statement Tuesday, the president hopes to insulate himself from any political fallout that results from Donovan's indictment by a Bronx, N.Y. grand jury.

IN THE PAST, Reagan has used that strategy to extraordinarily good effect, leading Democrats to refer to his "Teflon presidency," because Americans don't seem to hold him accountable for the bad news that erupts in his administration.

But it remained to be seen whether the situation — apparently the first indictment of a sitting Cabinet officer in history — would affect Reagan's political fortunes.

The indictment already has revived Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale's allegation that the Reagan administration has a "sleaze factor" and a "tawdry record of unethical conduct."

Mondale said he presumes the innocence of Donovan but added that Reagan should fire him if the charges appear to be based on reasonable evidence.

An Analysis

Mondale, who has long called for Donovan's ouster, described him as "the weakest secretary of labor in modern history."

"The charges are very serious," he said. "I think the president should right now make a serious independent determination ... whether there is a reasonable basis for these charges and not just react politically in defense of a Cabinet officer.

At the White House, a senior official said he had "no idea" what the political consequences for Reagan would be of the indictment.

THE OFFICIAL, speaking on the condition that he remain anonymous, said Reagan would "stand by" Donovan, but added it was still not clear to the White House what the indictment contained. "We will wait and see what transpires," he said.

Reagan, campaigning in Brownsville, Texas, just five weeks before the Nov. 6 election, refused to say outright that he believed the indictment was politically motivated. But the president tried to take an offensive position.

"I don't think there are many precedents for all the attacks and assaults that have been made on so many people of our administration with allegations and charges that were without any foundation in fact and were later revealed as having no foundation in fact and the people were cleared — kind of a lynch atmosphere in that," he said.

However, many presidents have had to confront the problems of controversies involving their aides. Former President Jimmy Carter, for instance, told his embattled budget director, Bert Lance: "I'm proud of you." Lance ultimately resigned and later was acquitted on charges of illegal banking practices in Georgia.

Asked about Democratic charges of a "sleaze factor," Reagan retorted: "If there is one, it's on the other side, with their baseless charges and accusations that have all been proven false."

AT THE SAME TIME, Reagan acted to put the Donovan matter behind him, insisting the case was not "a matter of law and I'm not going to comment further on this except to say that to my knowledge he is innocent until proven guilty."

Ferraro says accountant's 'sloppy errors' responsible for incomplete disclosure

Ferraro

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, still maintaining that her husband's business dealings are exempt from financial reporting requirements, says "sloppy errors" by an accountant were responsible for her incomplete congressional disclosure statements.

But a conservative legal group says she broke the law.

"These are wholesale violations of the Ethics in Government Act," Paul Kamenar, executive director of the Washington Legal Foundation, said Tuesday after Ms. Ferraro's amended congressional disclosure forms were made public.

"You simply can't lay these at the doorstep of an accountant," said Kamenar, whose complaints touched off an investigation by the House ethics committee of the financial statements the Democratic vice presidential nominee filed since coming to Congress in 1979.

He said the amended statements, which contained hundreds of thousands of dollars in income and in assets not previously reported to Congress, "confirmed our allegations. ... She's revealing additional information that indicates to us her misreporting was worse than we thought."

Although the amended statements included information about husband John Zaccaro's employment and some of his real estate earnings, Ms. Ferraro continued to claim the exemption. Under the law, an exemption is valid only when a member of Congress has no detailed knowledge about a spouse's finances and does not benefit from them.

MS. FERRARO has acknowledged that Zaccaro's earnings help finance their household. And even her original forms listed her as an officer of P. Zaccaro Co. Inc., a real estate firm they jointly own.

The House ethics committee is reviewing the claim that Zaccaro's business dealings are exempt from the disclosure requirement.

The revised statements not only contained about two dozen items reported to Congress for the first time but also revalued upward a number of holdings Ms. Ferraro listed on the forms she filed for 1978-1983.

Overall, the newly listed items carried a value of $357,500 to $646,500. The revised entries, many of them bank accounts, added $95,400 to $287,500 to what she previously listed.

The ethics act allows members of Congress to list the values of their assets, income and liabilities in broad dollar ranges.

Much, if not all, of the new information contained on the amended statements was made public in August when Ms. Ferraro and her husband made a detailed reporting of their finances, including releasing their income tax returns.

Campaigning in Nashville, the New York Democrat told reporters on Tuesday that the amended forms contained "no changes, just corrections."

SHE CHARACTERIZED the mistakes as "sloppy errors," such as misidentifying the value of an asset.

"We had our new accountants go over the forms since 1979 and make corrections," she said, insisting that the ethics panel probe, begun Sept. 12, did not prompt the amended statements.

On previous occasions, Ms. Ferraro has blamed longtime family accountant Jack Selger for the errors on the congressional forms.

"On Aug. 20, when I held that press conference, I said there were errors in my forms which I was going to fix," she said. "I have corrected them and filed the amended forms."

When the committee investigation began, a source knowledgeable about the probe said it appeared members of the ethics panel were prepared to drop the matter if Ms. Ferraro amended her original statements.

The panel's chairman, Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, had no immediate comment on Ms. Ferraro's amended statements, according to Adrienne Gray, a spokeswoman for Stokes.

THE AMENDED FORMS also contain listings of expense-paid trips taken by Ms. Ferraro but not reported on the original statements.

These include four trips last year financed by Democratic and women's groups and attendance at the International Ladies Garment Workers Union convention in Hollywood, Fla.

Courtroom trauma

At a symposium concerning child molestation held in Washington, D.C. Tuesday, badly-needed emphasis was placed on the importance of altering the current judicial process to better suit the needs of the young victims.

Youngsters who are unfortunate enough to be subjected to sexual attacks are thrust headlong into the adult world of criminal justice which only adds to their confusion and trauma. That result is only intensified when the abuser is a member of their family.

The symposium was valuable from a number of standpoints, not the least of which was to focus attention on this problem that all too frequently is talked about only in hushed tones. The problem of child molestation is not going to merely disappear overnight. Failing to acknowledge the problem only prolongs the suffering of the children; it needs to be met with forthright action.

One of those who spoke at the symposium was U.S. Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., who recently testified she had been the victim of abuse as a child. She addressed the secrecy issue of child abuse, saying, "Only the abuser benefits from keeping this issue taboo."

The senator also touched on another point that is crucial in resolving child abuse cases when she noted, "If anyone has any doubt about the truthfulness of a child's statement, all you have to do is listen to a child's description of what occurred. That's all it takes to convince anyone that this is no fantasy, no rehearsed speech, nothing the child could have imagined from watching even the most graphic television show."

Tragically, when young victims of sexual abuse are thrown into the judicial system, they often are subjected to unfair, traumatic procedures. They may be questioned time and again on points they find difficult to talk about by officials who are only seeking truth. They may have to repeat details of the incident so many times that their words take on an automatic quality, void of emotion. Attorneys for the attacker understandably will attempt to discredit their testimony in court. While those are standard practices from the standpoint of ascertaining whether a crime has actually been committed, in reality it's obvious they are designed for adults, not children.

All the officials involved in cases of child abuse are well-meaning; it's just the procedures that should be questioned. In fact, Lois Haight Herrington, an assistant attorney general, urged that new approaches must be found to protect the children in such cases.

She said the young victims are put in an adult system which uses adult behavior as a yardstick to measure their conduct and participation. "Their credibility is continually attacked, as if they would lie or fantasize about being sexually assaulted." It's obvious that if we are to make strides in overcoming the problem of child molestation, society's focus must be redirected to the ones we're trying to protect in the first place — the children.

Swiss practicality

The Swiss have long had a reputation for being hard-headed, pragmatic business people. They have made their tiny country the financial exchange for most of the world and managed to stay out of two major wars in this century while maintaining one of the best trained and equipped armies on the European continent. Individually, Swiss wage earners save more money than their counterparts anywhere.

Not given to emotional caprices, the Swiss therefore appeared to be telling the world something when they voted down, for the second time, a proposal which would have eliminated the country's atomic energy power plants by the year 2000. In a national referendum they rejected the ban by an even heavier majority than when it was submitted to a vote five years ago.

Switzerland has had its experiences with "anti-nuke" demonstrators, but common sense still dominates their democratically resolved decisions. They are fully aware that fossil fuels will soon be in short supply and they are concerned over their problems of air pollution and deforestation.

The Swiss have sent the world a signal that it might well ponder.

Another View:

Overdue concessions

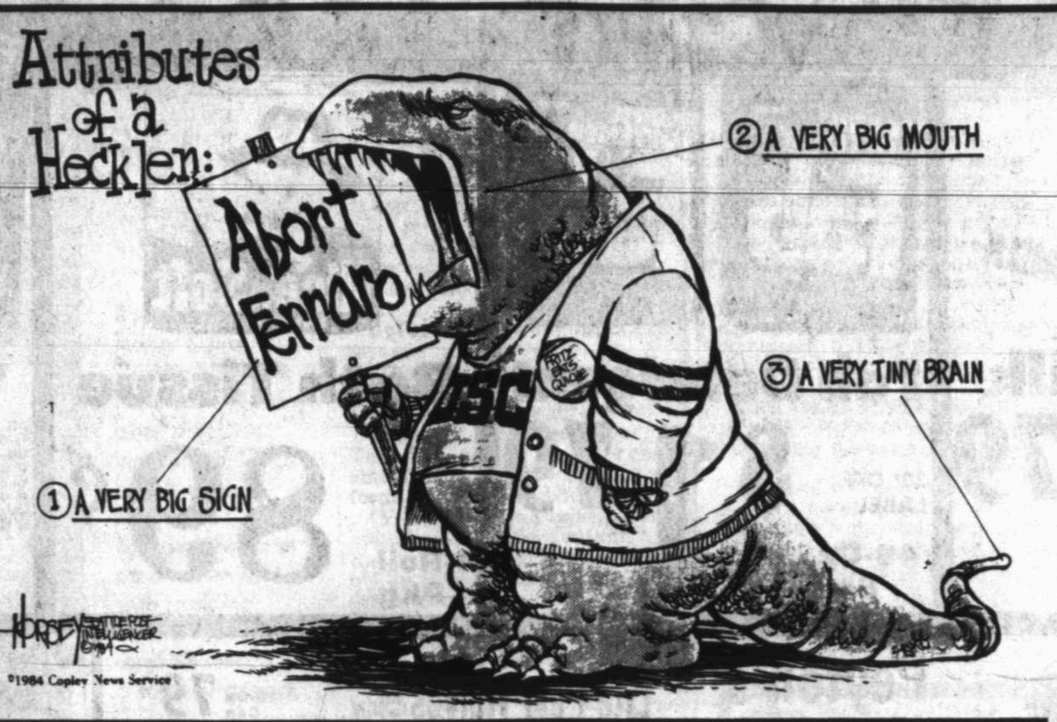

The only regrettable thing about the major victory that environmentalists won over the federal government the other day is that it had to be won at all. In that confrontation, EPA, the Environmental Protection Agency, agreed in an out-of-court settlement to re-evaluate the health hazards of a dozen pesticides that former EPA Administrator Anne Burford kept on the market despite staff conclusions that they were dangerous enough to be banned. More important, EPA also agreed that it will not again hold closed-door "decision conferences" with the chemical companies it is supposed to regulate; that it will draft regulations to open more of the regulatory process to public scrutiny, and that "no person or party will be given special or preferential access" to that process.

All of this has to be cheered, as do the efforts of AFL-CIO, the Natural Resources Defense Council, and its attorney, Albert Meyerhoff, who brought the suit. It's only unfortunate that it takes such effort to make this administration acknowledge its obligations to enforce the law and protect the public health and that, aside from the dismissal of a few administrators, EPA was able to function so long on the edge of criminal neglect.

In the three years that Burford ran EPA, she not only colluded with industry to reverse staff recommendations and previous policy decisions on a set of hazardous materials, she also presided over an agency whose senior officials were deliberately altering documents and records to suit the settlements reached in those cozy private meetings. In effect, the agency conspired to cheat the public.

The new agreement tacitly recognizes that, and it commits the agency to do what it should have been doing all along. Unfortunately, it can do nothing to punish those who were so dangerously and contemptuously negligent for so long.

ART BUCHWALD

Heckling could be Godsend!

Heckling has become a major campaign issue. Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro have both been victims of heckling by Reagan supporters in the crowds.

The big question is does heckling help or hurt a political ticket?

Art Buchwald

Lawrence Deepthroat, who runs the Political School of Heckling at the University of Southern California, believes that hecklers enhance a politician's campaign.

He told me, "As much as Mondale fumes against hecklers, they've done more than anything to liven up his rallies."

"In what respect?"

"Well, everyone knows when the candidate is out on the campaign trail — the only reason he is giving a speech is to get on the evening news. A surefire way of doing this is to have a bunch of hecklers try to prevent the candidate from speaking. It not only makes great TV pictures, but it also gives him or her an opportunity to respond to the hecklers. It's the best way to win the sympathy vote."

"Are you trying to tell me that Mondale is putting on an act when he accuses the Republicans of sending out kids to heckle him?"

"No, it is quite possible that he really objects to them. But his staff is rather pleased with the heckling. First, because Mondale gets mad when he's being heckled and shows some emotion. Secondly, they can accuse the Republicans of resorting to dirty tricks, hoping to bring back memories of Nixon supporters' tactics in 1972. It is my personal belief that heckling has fired up the Democrats, and the Mondale-Ferraro ticket has gained more by being heckled than they have lost."

"The Republicans must know this," I said. "Why are they sending out hecklers if it can only help the opposition?"

"I don't think they are. In fact, the smart GOP pols would just as soon stop the heckling as they know it's counterproductive. But they're not in control of the far-out pro-Reagan factions. In Mondale's case the college kids are doing the heckling. Ferraro's hecklers come mostly from the Right to Life groups."

"Why are the college kids so intent on heckling?"

"For two reasons. One, it's a lot of fun, and since they're not informed on the issues, heckling is the only thing they know how to do. Secondly, they also hope to get on the evening news or in the papers the next day."

"Why don't they heckle President Reagan as well?"

"For one thing, Reagan's campaign staffers are much more selective as to the type of audiences the president addresses. They keep tight control of the tickets to make sure the audience is made up of only Reagan supporters. The police and Secret Service see to it that Reagan hecklers are kept at least one block away from where he's speaking."

"Wouldn't hecklers help Reagan as much as they're helping Mondale?"

"At the moment the Reagan camp doesn't need them because the polls are so much in the president's favor. I haven't seen their game plan, but they might be waiting for the last few weeks of the campaign before they allow Reagan to be heckled."

"And the president doesn't mind being heckled?"

"He loves it. He has a list of great one-liners against hecklers that can guarantee him a standing ovation."

"Then it is your opinion that heckling a presidential candidate is not such a bad thing, and Mondale shouldn't make a big deal of it."

"He has to make a big deal of it. Otherwise the heckling might die down and he'll have to go back to discussing his economic reforms. What TV news executive in his right mind would put that on the air?"

Contractors using loophole

WASHINGTON — The public is rightfully outraged by revelations that the Pentagon routinely pays exorbitant prices for spare parts, hand tools and coffee-makers.

Despite the shocking extravagance laid bare by such stories, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and his subordinate spendthrifts insist that these horror stories are the exceptions, not the rule. The system, they say, is basically sound.

But is it?

Jack Anderson

As part of our continuing series on waste in government, my associate Donald Goldberg has studied an internal analysis of certain Navy contracts by investigators for the House Appropriations Committee. The analysis was not intended to be made public, but I think its conclusions deserve to be shouted from the rooftops.

In a nutshell, the committee investigators found that two major shipbuilders are making profits of more than 20 percent — in one case, nearly 30 percent — on nuclear submarines and aircraft carriers ordered by the Navy. The true extent of their profits is covered up by a bookkeeping procedure. Here's the story:

Back in the mid-1970s, the now-defunct Cost Accounting Standards Board created a loophole known as Cost Accounting Standard No. 414. Simply stated, it allows defense contractors to pass on to the government any finance costs incurred in the construction of new facilities needed for a particular contract.

At a time of sky-high interest rates, Loophole No. 414 was intended to encourage contractors to build modern defense plants. The government would help pay the finance charges.

Critics point out that 414, while flawed from the start, has become simply a gift to the contractors now that interest rates have come down and the government makes "progress payments" as often as twice a month. Yet this "cost of money" is not classified as profit, as even Navy contract officers think it should be.

The House committee investigators looked at just five contracts awarded to General Dynamics' Electric Boat Division in Groton, Conn., and Tenneco's Newport News, Va., shipyard. By putting the cost-of-money giveaway in the profit column, they arrived at the shipbuilders' "real" profits on the contracts. Here they are:

— For one Los Angeles-class nuclear-sub with a target price of nearly $240 million, Electric Boat will make a profit of more than $42 million, or 21.7 percent.

— For a similar sub with an estimated cost of $292 million, Electric Boat will make a profit of $43 million, or 17.3 percent.

— A Los Angeles-class sub built by Newport News has a target price of $236 million, on which the company stands to make a profit of $48 million, or 25.6 percent.

— A Trident-735 submarine being built by Electric Boat will cost an estimated $532.6 million. The profit will be nearly $96 million, or 22 percent.

— Aircraft carriers to be built by Newport News will cost an estimated $3.3 billion. The profit on the contract will total $753 million, or 29.7 percent.

Unfortunately, there's little chance that Loophole No. 414 will be plugged anytime soon. Acting right in character, the Pentagon brass have put the accounting henhouse in the foxy hands of the defense procurement office — the contractors' best friend at the five-sided fund factory on the Potomac.

As if that weren't enough to ensure continued waste and extravagance by the armed services, the Pentagon last year asked for and received authority to "adopt, reject or grant exemptions to" regulations intended to keep defense contractors from gouging the taxpayers.

So if a contractor wants to charge $400 for a ballpeen hammer, or make 30 percent profit on a weapon, all he has to do is ask a pal at the Pentagon.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI: Hoping to retain or add to the number of Jewish voters Ronald Reagan wooed away from the Democrats four years ago, the Republican National Committee held a reception for Jewish presidential appointees in federal agencies.

The committee printed 5,000 posters with Reagan's name in Hebrew for souvenirs. But the catering arrangements were evidently left to an ethnically insensitive person: As several Orthodox and Conservative guests were quick to notice, the lavish buffet table held no kosher food to nosh on.

— If Republicans at the grassroots level were surprised by the president's decision to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, it may have been because of a fund-raising appeal mailed out shortly before by the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

Labeled "urgent" and taking the form of a Western Union telegram, the appeal went out to a million party faithful with an "Old Reagan" message. It warned:

"The president and the Republican Senate majority could be vulnerable to November defeat as a result of underhanded political manipulations from the archenemy of freedom, the Soviet Union."

Does this mean the Reagan meeting with Gromyko was a sneaky Kremlin plot?

— White House aides had no trouble getting tickets to the Michael Jackson Victory Tour concerts in Washington. The former head of congressional liaison, Max Friedersdorf, is now vice president for public affairs at Pepsico Inc., the tour's sponsor, and he papered the White House with Annie Oakleys.

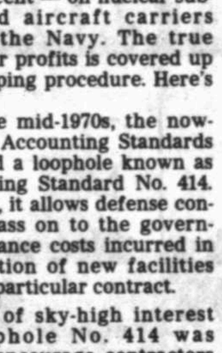

Among the freebie recipients were Edwin Meese, Richard Darman, Craig Fuller, Tony Dolan, Ken Duberstein (another ex-liaison chief) and Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who went to both shows and two Pepsico receptions.

EDWIN FEULNER

Enterprise zones a ray of hope

Both the weather forecast on the car radio and the area of downtown Washington I was passing through could be described the same way — gloomy. "Intermittent cloudiness and showers prevailing, possibly giving way to late afternoon patches of sun."

Edwin Feulner

While there's nothing we can do to improve the weather, that's not the case with our cities.

Economist Stuart Butler five years ago gave us a formula for breathing new life into depressed urban areas — enterprise zones. Within these specially designated areas, the idea is to have government reduce taxes, eliminate unnecessary regulations and red tape, and provide other incentives to encourage entrepreneurs to start new businesses and create jobs. As President Reagan said in his first State of the Union address, "We must FREE enterprise ... so we can save America."

While Congress is still dragging its feet on enterprise zone legislation, enterprise zone experiements in Cleveland, Baltimore, and one hundred and eighty other areas in sixteen states are proving hugely successful. Benefitting most have been unemployed and low-income workers. Tens of thousands of new jobs have been saved or created and an estimated $450 million to more than $1 billion worth of construction has occurred in the enterprise zones. The fog is lifting, but all is still not well in our urban areas.

Butler has a new experimental idea — like enterprise zones borrowed from Britain and intended to aid the residents of urban slums. Sell public housing, he suggest. Not to slumlords, but to associations of occupying tenants. Keep in mind that public housing was intended to reduce social problems in cities by providing decent and affordable living space to the poor. Instead, public housing has helped increase social problems in cities by becoming breeding grounds for crime and other urban problems. The "low-rent" district is now know as the "hard area" — dangerous, dirty, and decayed. Those who can avoid it — do. But the poor often have no choice. The "Right to Buy" program is intended to provide a means of reversing that tragedy.

Under the "Right to Buy" program, local Public Housing Authorities (PHA) would sell buildings at about 30 percent of their market value to qualified tenants. Purchase requests would be handled directly by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). HUD also would handle financing, offering loans which traditional lending institutions would never consider. For example, in some cases, payment might be in the form of man-hours of labor — so-called "sweat equity." Since the PHAs "own" the building already, no cash would need to change hands. Mortgages would replace rent payments.

America has never stopped being the land of opportunity. Here is an opportunity for low-income Americans to fulfill the dream of home ownership. The "Right to Buy" housing discounts give families though incapable of owning a home a chance to do so. One of the problems low-income Americans now face is that the tax laws intended to promote home ownership are of no help to them. What good is an income tax deduction for home mortgage interest to someone who pays little or no income tax?

To insure that the sales are made to the truly needly, proof of prior residence in government housing is required. A further incentive is built-in — the longer prospective buyers have lived in government housing, the greater the before-sale discount. Butler explains, "A discount based on length of tenancy is a powerful stimulus and a means of favoring the most stable tenants." Overall, the program would "plant the seeds of improvement in the nation's most desolate neighborhoods."

Home ownership, Butler feels, breeds pride and responsibility. British experience has shown that tenant buyers take care of their homes. Improved appearance encourages neighbors to follow suit. The "Right to Buy" program draws on the strengths of residents to tackle the problems of their own community. Neighbors help neighbors.

But what's in it for the tax-paying public? The goal here is to deter legislators from merely throwing more tax dollars at inner-city problems. Recent history proves that this approach just hasn't worked. The problems haven't gone away.

Urban enterprise zones and "privatized" public housing can provide that patch of sun in urban areas — at no cost to the taxpayer. I'm willing to risk leaving my umbrella at home.

Edwin Feulner is president of The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based public policy research institute.

Six South African blacks die in racial unrest

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Crowds of blacks beat a suspected government informer to death in one segregated township and stoned a van in another, causing it to veer into the crowd and reportedly kill five people.

In Pretoria, South African President P.W. Botha announced today that Mozambique agreed to a cease-fire with guerrillas who have fought to topple the Marxist government for the past eight years. South Africa had served as an intermediary during three months of negotiations.

The Botha government also said it would permit an impounded arms shipment to go through to tiny Lesotho, which is surrounded by South Africa.

WORLD

The Sowetan newspaper, the nation's largest paper for blacks, said today five blacks were killed Tuesday when a van being stoned by youths went out of control and plunged into a crowd of 300. The newspaper said seven people in the crowd were seriously hurt.

Police Lt. Derick van der Walt at police headquarters in Pretoria said police could confirm three people were killed and six were badly injured in that incident in Kwathema, about 20 miles east of Johannesburg.

There was no immediate explanation for the discrepancy between the police report and the newspaper report.

In Soweto, southwest of Johannesburg, a crowd beat a black man to death at his home, van der Walt said. No details were available, but the victim was believed to be an informer or to be collaborating with the government, which denies the vote to the black majority.

Blacks stoned buses and police cars in a number of other segregated black townships Tuesday, and police broke up the crowds with tear gas and birdshot. The unrest followed two weeks of relative calm that set in after a series of riots left at least 60 blacks dead.

In Durban an explosion shattered several windows at the Natal Technikon, a technical school for high school graduates, van der Walt said. The blast, which occured just before midnight, caused no injuries.

South Korean president 'slanders' North Korea

TOKYO (AP) — An official North Korean newspaper charged today that it was a "treacherous act" for South Korea to accept flood relief goods from the North while at the same time speaking "ill of us."

The article referred to an Armed Forces Day speech Monday in which South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan accused the North of expanding its military forces near the border and said the South "should preserve a superior military power to overwhelm any threat from the Communist North."

The North Korean Workers' Party newspaper Rodong Sinmun, commenting on the speech, said: "At a time when public opinion at home and abroad is highly speaking of the delivery of our relief goods for the flood victims to South Korea...Chun Doo-hwan, the dictator, maliciously slandered us, harping on the trite theme of anti-Communism. This is a treacherous act."

Chun, in his address, said "...we cannot entirely free ourselves from concern and misgivings" about North Korea's intentions.

Labor Party urges nuclear weapons ban

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Moderate members of the opposition Labor Party waged an uphill battle today against a proposal calling for Britain to unilaterally dismantle its own nuclear arsenal and expel all U.S. nuclear weapons.

Documents scheduled for a vote at today's session of the annual party conference say that if a Labor government were elected, Britain would cease to be a nuclear power, U.S. nuclear weapons systems would be ousted and U.S. military bases would be closed.

Such action by Britain could shatter the NATO alliance, former Prime Minister James Callaghan told conference delegates Tuesday.

"We are not Holland, we are not Belgium, we are not Denmark. We are one of the main pillars of the alliance," said Callaghan.

However, Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock and a majority of labor union leaders and party activists support the blunt commitment to dismantle Britain's nuclear arsenal.

Against Kinnock's wishes, radicals were pressing for adoption of an even tougher declaration that would call for the removal of all 25,000 U.S. troops stationed in Britain.

Kinnock was depending upon leaders of Britain's biggest labor union, the transport workers, to help defeat the proposal, which was supported by 10 of the 29 members of the party's national executive committee.

Callaghan, who headed the last Labor government from 1976 to 1979 before current Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives took power, warned of dire consequences for NATO if the proposed moves were carried out.

"It is important that the alliance which has been maintained in Europe for 40 years ... should not be ruptured by one of the most significant members taking unilateral action without regard to the consequences," Callaghan said.

Labor suffered its worst defeat in 50 years in June 1983, when it ran on a platform of scrapping Britain's Polaris nuclear missiles, cancelling Mrs. Thatcher's order to update them with the U.S. Trident system, and banning U.S. nuclear weapons.

However, Kinnock has said a new platform stressing that Britain will stay in NATO, and avoiding a specific commitment sought by radicals to cut spending on conventional weapons can win votes for Labor.

Among the U.S. nuclear weapons in Britain are the first 16 cruise missiles, which arrived in Britain last November at the Greenham Common Air Force Base, 50 miles west of London.

They are among 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles to be deployed in five Western European countries by 1988. NATO says the weapons are being deployed in response to the build-up of Soviet mid-range missiles aimed at Western Europe.

Besides the cruise missiles, three U.S. Poseidon submarines armed with nuclear missiles are based at Holy Loch, Scotland, and 170 F-111 aircraft armed with nuclear weapons operate from two U.S. bases in central and eastern England. Orion P-3 fighters armed with anti-submarine nuclear devices are based in Scotland and England.

Polls show most Britons favor retaining the country's Polaris submarines but are divided over the U.S. nuclear weapons.

In a Gallup poll conducted before the Labor Party conference, 52 percent of those questioned were against closing the U.S. nuclear bases, 37 percent supported the idea and 11 percent had no opinion.

Britain, France and the United States are the only nuclear powers in the 16-nation NATO alliance.

Earlier Tuesday, Kinnock said Mrs. Thatcher's handling of the nearly seven-month-old coal strike had plunged Britain into turmoil. He urged Mrs. Thatcher, whose government wants to close 20 money-losing mines, to agree to miners' demands to keep the mines open.

Kinnock, the son of a Welsh miner, said: "The turmoil is the product of Thatcherism, the combination of ignorance and arrogance, of pride and prejudice, that now rules and overrules this country."

Bomb hurled at crowd

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sikh extremists hurled a homemade bomb at a crowd coming out of movie theater after a show and then escaped, the United News of India reported today.

The news agency said at least two people were wounded in the explosion Tuesday night in the town of Morinda, 155 miles north of New Delhi in India's troubled Punjab state.

Militant Sikhs in Punjab have been agitating, often violently, for greater political and religous autonomy.

Iraq minister fired

LONDON (AP) — Iraq's minister of state for foreign affairs has been fired for failing to keep regular office hours and for dereliction of duty, Baghdad radio reports.

The radio, in a dispatch monitored Tuesday in London, said a presidential decree was issued dismissing Hamid Alwan from his post. The broadcast provided no further details.

Sub returns to base

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet ballistic missile submarine seen drifting and spewing thick smoke off Japan last month has returned to its Vladivostock base, Jane's Defense Weekly reports.

The magazine said Tuesday that the 3,000-ton submarine, which carries three SSN-5 nuclear-tipped missiles, made its way back under its own steam "after 52 hours of fire-fighting and damage control efforts."

It said analysis of photographs of the stricken Golf II-class sub taken by Japanese Maritime Defense patrol planes indicated the fire was started by an electrical overload caused when the craft was snarled in a Japanese shrimp boat's nets Sept. 18.

The submarine was aided by four Soviet Navy ships. One towed it for several hours before the sub apparently restored power, Jane's added.

The weekly is issued by Jane's Publishing Co., which produces yearbooks on military equipment that are considered authoritative by the West's defense establishment.

Cargo jet hijacked

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The pilot of a Colombian cargo jet commandeered to Cuba reported that the hijacker was a Cuban man who said he had cancer and wanted to die in his native country.

The plane was hijacked Tuesday from Cartagena on Colombia's north coast and returned to Colombia later in the day.

The news agency Colprensa quoted the pilot, Manuel Cervera, as saying the hijacker apparently hid in the cargo area with two women and two children as the DC-8 was being loaded.

The plane had just taken off for a one-hour flight to Bogota when the hijacker entered the cabin with a pistol in hand and ordered the plane to Havana, Cervera said.

There were only two crewmembers, the pilot and copilot, and the hijacker and his companions were the only other people aboard, the pilot said.

Pope speaks on space

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, In his first major speech on space, said development of space should not be for "the exclusive benefit of one nation or social group."

He called Tuesday for "just" agreements and international pacts to regulate the exploration of space "that will enable the whole human family to enjoy and use it."

"I do not hesitate to answer that space belongs to the whole of humanity, that it is something for the benefit of all," the pope told a Vatican audience of space scientists from 13 nations, including the United States and the Soviet Union.

The scientists are attending a conference, organized by the Pontifical Academy of Sciences, on the impact of space exploration.

Carter stops in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter says the Panama Canal treaties, which he helped negotiate, will help stabilize the situation in Central America.

Carter spoke to reporters during a stopover Tuesday night en route from Miami to South America. He arrived one day after the anniversary of the 1977 Panama Canal treaties he signed with the late Panama leader Gen. Omar Torrijos.

Carter said his work on the treaties was "one of the most gratifying experiences" of his career.

"I think it was a great step forward in friendship between our two nations and also has been helpful in stabilizing the political and military situation in Central America," he said.

The former Georgia governor, who will be visiting Bolivia, Brazil, Argentina and Peru, said one purpose of his trip was "to congratulate the nations like Panama which have moved toward democracy."

Experts find bodies

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Archaeologists have discovered mutilated remains of 30 Romans who may have been eaten by conquering Germanic tribes in the third century B.C.

The discovery in Harling, near the Bavarian town of Regensburg, was made during excavations for an automobile factory earlier this year, said Peter Schroeter, curator of the Bavarian state anthropological collection in Munich.

Archaeologists discovered remains when they unearthed a Roman country estate and came upon two fountains in the courtyard where the dismembered bodies were thrown and covered by stones, Schroeter said.

The 30 occupants of the villa, probably a farmer's family and servants, were beheaded and their bodies cut into small pieces, possibly to be eaten in a cannibalistic riutual, Schroeter said.

Cubs end long wait with 13-0 mauling

By PHIL COLLIER
Copley News Service

CHICAGO —They put an amateur umpire with a high strike zone behind home plate at Wrigley Field Tuesday with the wind blowing toward the outfield.

For the pitchers, it was like being thrown into a shark tank.

Chicago Cubs right-handers Rick Sutcliffe and Warren Brusstar swam to safety, combining to scatter six hits. San Diego Padres right-handers Eric Show and Greg Harris were eaten alive.

Gary Mathews drove in four runs and delivered two of Chicago's record five homers as the Cubs opened a best-of-five playoff for the National League championship with the most lopsided shutout in the history of major league post-season play 13-0.

"That's the first time I've walked five batters in a game in two months," said Sutcliffe, who dazzled the Padres and a sellout crowd of 36,282 by going seven innings for his 15th consecutive victory and his 17th in 18 decisions since coming here from Cleveland in mid-June.

Home plate umpire Dick Cavanaugh, one of four Illinois amateurs chosen to replace striking major league arbiters, refused to give Cub or Padre pitchers the low strike on a day when the wind was blowing 20 mph and keeping the ball down was a necessity.

The Cubs, making their first post-season appearance since 1945, made a mockery of the Padres' first visit after singles hitter Bob Dernier drove Show's second pitch of the day, a high fastball, beyond the left field bleachers for only his fourth homer of the year.

"I didn't have my fastball," said Show, who had beaten the Cubs six times in seven lifetime decisions. Matthews rocked him with a first-inning drive into the left field bleachers and Show fell behind 5-0 in the third after Sutcliffe led off by clearing the right field bleachers with a prodigious drive that represented his first homer of the year.

Matthews, the most valuable player in Philadelphia's NL playoff victory last season, hit his second homer with two on in the fifth inning, when the Eastern Division champions scored six of their eight runs allowed by Harris.

The left fielder the Cubs refer to as "Sarge" became the first player ever to hit homers in four consecutive league championship series games.

Ron Cey's sixth-inning drive into a vacant section of center field seats made this the first time in major league championship series history that a team has homered five times in one game.

"But it only counts as one game," said Padre manager Dick Williams, who believes the odds will favor his Western Division champions if they can leave here with the 1-1 Wrigley Field split. Mark Thurmond (14-8) will attempt to salvage the situation when he opposes Cub southpaw Steve Trout (13-7) this afternoon (Wednesday).

The Padres regard Sutcliffe as the dominant pitcher in this competition and could encounter him again as early as Saturday in San Diego, if there is such a thing as game four.

Tuesday, the 28-year-old, six-foot-seven giant struck out eight in seven innings. The first of the two hits he allowed was Steve Garvey's fourth-inning bunt single and the other was Garry Templeton's bloop single in the fifth.

However, Sutcliffe struggled to adjust to Cavanaugh's strike zone.

"He (Cavanaugh) should have lowered it eight to 10 inches," said catcher Jody Davis.

The Cubs were leading 5-0 with two out in the fourth and Garvey was aboard with his sneak single when walks to Terry Kennedy and Kevin McReynolds created a bases-loaded, storybook opportunity for rookie Carmelo Martinez.

The 24-year-old Puerto Rican the Cubs traded away last winter lined a 2-and-0 pitch to right field for an apparent two-run single, but Keith Moreland made a diving, shoestring catch.

"Moreland's catch basically ended the ballgame," Sutcliffe said. "It took the momentum out of their dugout and shifted it to ours. At least two runs would have scored and that would have brought Templeton to the plate. He hit me hard all day."

Six of the 21 outs recorded behind Sutcliffe were on liners. Templeton and Nettles hit drives that were caught on the warning track.

"I didn't have good stuff or location, I just tried to change speeds," Sutcliffe said. "I didn't get some (low) pitches I usually get for strikes and I had problems again pitching with a lead.

"I turned into a different pitcher. I lost my concentration."

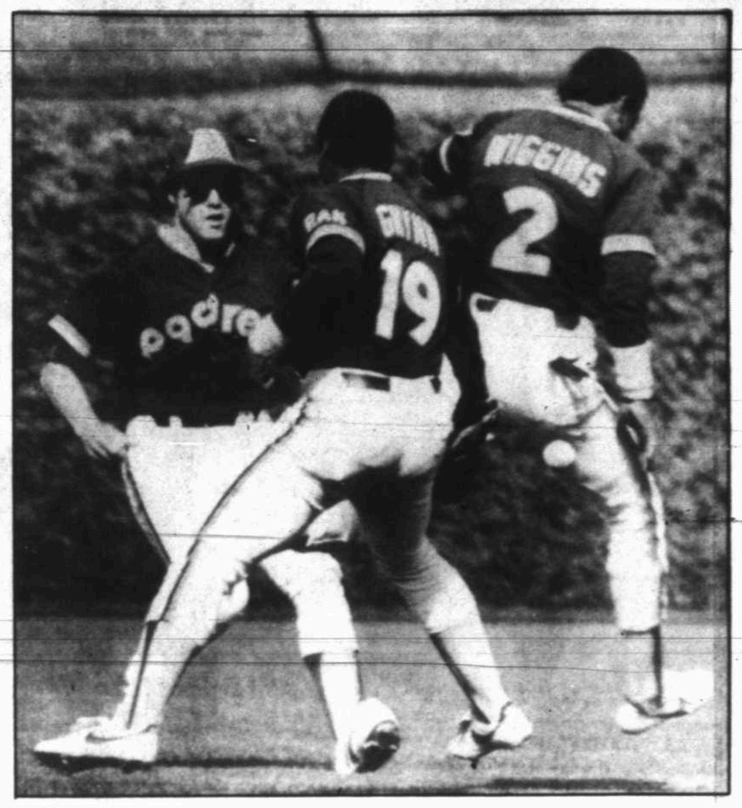

Fifty of the Missourian's 106 pitches were judged to be out of the strike zone, such a high percentage that it's almost a miracle he fared as well as he did.

Frey said he was thinking about next weekend when he elected to let Brusstar pitch the last two innings, when the Padres wasted singles by Garvey, Nettles, Martinez and Templeton.

The Cubs would like to pitch Sutcliffe in the opening game of the World Series next Tuesday. He could do so with six days' rest, one less than he had for his first post-season experience Tuesday, if the Cubs complete a three-game sweep of the Padres Thursday night in San Diego.

"They're a different team when Sutcliffe isn't pitching," Thurmond said after Tuesday's embarrassment.

Permian gains top schoolboy position

From Staff and Wire Reports

District 4-5A defending champion Odessa Permian, off to an impressive 4-0 start toward the Class 5A playoffs, joined Bay City in 4A, Daingerfield in 3A, Pilot Point in 2A and Paradise in A as the top-ranked teams in The Associated Press Schoolboy Fooball Poll.

Midland Lee jumped from ninth to sixth following a 49-20 victory over previously No. 6-rated San Angelo Central. San Angelo dropped out of the top 10 and was replaced at No. 10 by Irving MacArthur, 4-0.

Lee beat Permian twice last year, the only setbacks in a 12-2 Panther season. The teams are set for a rematch in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium Oct. 12.

Motown men chew up Royals

By PHIL ROGERS
Dallas Times Herald

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Judging by this one-night composite replay of the victories that came before it, the Detroit Tigers don't know the difference between baseball in the spring and baseball in the fall.

All of the long season's pieces, and every bit of the 104-victory dominance, was on display in Tuesday night's Game 1 of the American League Championship Series.

Jack Morris pitched the Tigers to a victory, just like he did on Opening Day. Alan Trammell drove in three runs with a home run, triple and single, having his way with Kansas City pitching at Royals Stadium, just like he did in early May (and August). Of course, Willie Hernandez came in to finish off the Tigers' 105th victory.

Same old Motor City Madmen.

Detroit's 8-1 victory over Kansas City raised its record to 7-0 at Royals Stadium this year. Unfortunately for the Royals, they have to be the home team again Wednesday night in Game 2 of the best-of-five series.

"In a five-game series, you always like to jump out to the lead," Tiger catcher Lance Parrish said. "It gives us an emotional lift. I think it answers the questions in everyone's mind about us not having played a competitive game in four months, or whatever everybody is saying. It proves a lot to our ballclub."

Morris never gave the crowd of 41,973 a chance to get excited, retiring 21 of the 27 hitters he faced before leaving after seven innings with the beginning of a small blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand.

Kirk Gibson got Morris out of the only trouble spot the Royals forced him into, making a running catch on a bases-loaded liner by George Brett with two outs in the third inning. "That's not exactly the kind of position you want to be in," Morris said.

Brett lined a forkball into right field. Gibson, who is not exactly a defensive specialist, ran in to catch the ball at his knees, preserving the Tigers' 2-0 lead.

"We had the right guy hitting in the right situation," Kansas City manager Dick Howser said. "He hit a good pitch, an off-speed pitch, and he hit it good. Gibson made a good catch."

"If I don't catch it, it short-hops me," Gibson said. "I can't get my body in front of the ball. Basically, I'm in trouble."

"Gibson made a great play," Tiger manager Sparky Anderson said. "A year ago, George would have been running for a while."

Hernandez pitched the final two innings, setting down six consecutive hitters as the Royals went down with a whimper.

'Cats suffer from intangibles

Midland Lee's 49-20 bombing of the highly regarded San Angelo Bobcats may become a classic case study for the intangibles of football.

No one really knows for sure just how much "We're going to kill you" quotes from the enemy camp can play a part in an actual football game. But San Angelo is wishing a few words were left for after the game.

The Bobcats did all their talking before meeting Lee. Maybe, they left their game in the lockerroom. I'm sure that some of the Bobcats are feeling a little silly this week.

A STORY ran in the San Angelo Standard Times Friday morning that quoted several of the Bobcat players. If you read it, you probably wondered if Lee should even suit up for the contest.

Each Lee player was greeted Friday with a copy of the story taped to his locker. There probably wasn't a team in the state that wanted a shot at San Angelo more than the Lee Rebels after reading that story.

Of course, games are won on the field of battle and talk has to be left behind. Still, you wonder just how much effect that article had on Lee.

The San Angelo players said some pretty brutal things about Lee. Here is a sample of some of the quotes.

San Angelo captian Brian Ross — "All we have to do is come off the bat and drub them for the first three, four or five minutes and I think it'll be all over. I don't think they have been challenged. If we put one of the two running backs or quarterback out of the game, it'd be over. I'm not saying that's what I want to do or anything. Our main object is to really stick 'em."

Cornerback Bret Mullins — "They haven't been hit. We just got to stick it to their quarterback and they'll be done, especially old Walter Jones because he hates it when he doesn't get the ball."

Linebacker Mark Hill — "We start getting their backs upset and they're not going to want to carry the ball."

THE LEE players seemed to be more amused by the article than upset. Fullback Randy Ellis was disappointed that his name wasn't even mentioned. They talked about all those other Lee backs. Ellis came out of the game with 157 yards rushing and two touchdowns. But instead of trying to get back at San Angelo, he notes that he did what he did because of the blocking of his linemen. Lee wasn't going to get caught in reverse nastiness. Ellis did say that San Angelo now knew that Lee had a fullback, but that was as strong a statement as he would issue.

Bobcat coach Jimmie Keeling was embarrassed by the article and was angry with Joe Schuld, who wrote the article.

"He (Schuld) didn't do us any favors with that story," said Keeling prior to the Lee-San Angelo game. "I knew he was walking around the lockerroom and the kids were talking like kids will do. I think it was cheap to use that kind of stuff from high school kids. I know one thing — he will not be in our lockerroom anymore."

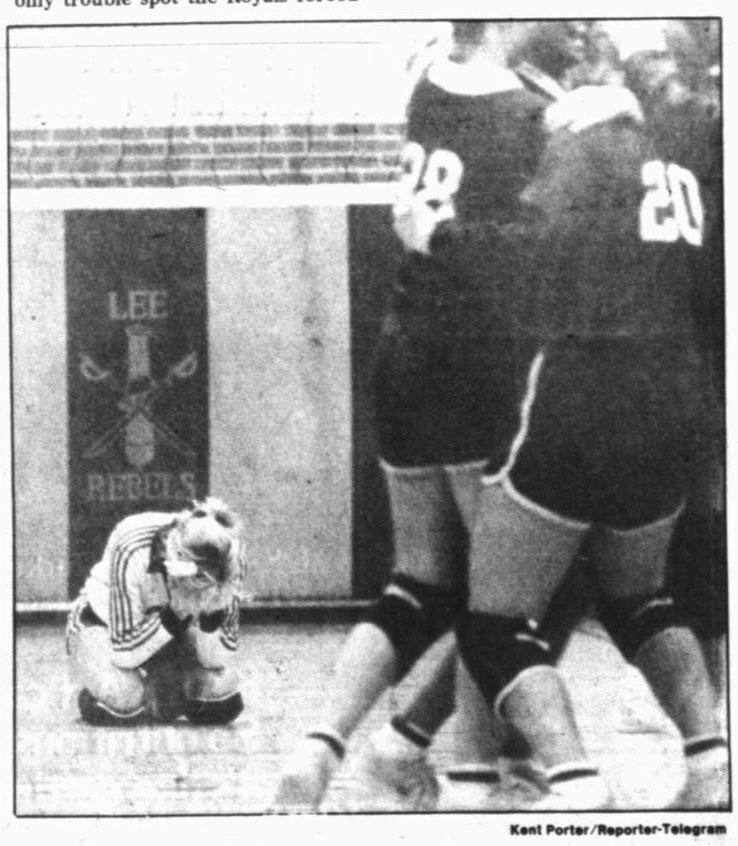

As far as I know, no one has accused Schuld of misquoting any of the Bobcats. As a journalist, I know it would be hard to ignore such juicy quotes. But I can't believe that the San Angelo kids were talking like that in the first place. In covering 4-5A for over a decade, I've never heard Midland High or Lee athletes say things like that about an opponent. Did they really believe that Lee had never been in a big game? In this league, you better respect Big Spring or you will be in for a long night. That's been proven too.

AND YOU wonder if Lee now has the temptation to resort to such tactics since they are flying high and looking awesome. If the feeling is there, I urge the Lee players to think twice before starting in on Cooper and Permian, Lee's next two opponents.

Permian, of course, wants Lee's hide after two losses to the Rebels last year. Cooper just happens to be a team that traditionally gives Lee trouble. Since 1978, Lee has beaten Cooper only twice and it was Cooper who defeated Lee last year, almost making the Rebels miss a trip to the playoffs and an ultimate berth in the state finals.

This is all a very unscientific gaze at what outside matters influence football games. Maybe there is no effect at all, but you would have a hard time convincing San Angelo of that theory this week.

Dog Gone It

Midland High's Laura Martin (22) reacts to the Bulldogs' District 4-5A loss Tuesday night to Midland Lee while the Rebels huddle up and celebrate.

Rebels rally to roll over Bulldogs

District 4-5A chases unbeaten Bobcats

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

It's too early to call the District 4-5A volleyball season a race for second place, but a lot of coaches are keeping their realistic thoughts in that direction.

At the season's first half conclusion, the San Angelo Bobcats are in command of the race at 7-0 (27-0 for the year), leaving Midland Lee and Abilene Cooper two games off the pace.

Those two teams are the survivors of a four-team second place tie 4-5A had going into Tuesday night's play as they were matched in records at 4-2 with Midland High and Big Spring.

The Rebels made their move upward with a 13-15, 15-6, 15-9 victory over the Bulldogs while Cooper took care of Abilene High in two games. With their losses, Big Spring and MHS are tied for fourth at 3-2.

Elsewhere in the 4-5A chase, Odessa Permian notched its first victory of the year, beating Odessa High 15-13, 15-11. The two are tied with Abilene High for last at 1-6.

LEE COACH Janice Baulch hasn't given up all hope of a chance at the 4-5A title, but admits it looks extremely doubtful.

"One team (Lee or Cooper are the only two that fit the limits of her calculations) would have to go unbeaten in the second half and San Angelo would have to lose two ball games," said Baulch. "And, that would only force a tie for first and a one-game playoff."

Rebel Megan Pace would like to see a Lee victory over San Angelo, but admits it would take a grand effort on her team's part to accomplish it.

"If we move good, we can play as well as anybody in the district. As long as we move and get to the ball," said Pace. "If we play every game like we did tonight (Tuesday), we can beat everyone except San Angelo. We'd have to play the best game of our lives to beat San Angelo and even then it would probably go three games."

The Rebels and Bobcats meet Thursday night in San Angelo to start off the second half of the season, a match in which Baulch said, "I wish we were playing them here instead of San Angelo."

SOMETHING THE Rebels have had going for them since their disappointing 0-2 district start has been team spirit and hustle. They didn't let the losses get them down and now have a five-game winning streak in their favor.

The Rebels also didn't give up after the Bulldogs won the first game Tuesday by a 15-13 count. They also weren't in much of a contest after the loss.

Volleyball

In the second game of the match, Midland High held two leads, 1-0 and 2-1. However, before the Bulldogs knew what hit them, they were trailing by a 14-2 count and in too deep a hole to begin to climb out of it. They managed to cut the lead to 14-6 and hold off three game-point serves before Pace punched a dink over the net for the winning point.

The third and deciding game of the match was nearly identical to the second. The only difference was Midland High's 4-0 lead before being outscored 14-2 to trail 14-6. When Midland High pulled to within in five at 14-9, the Rebels stopped the punch and scored the winner when Bulldog Denise Lanz failed to come up with Pace's spike, her second game-winning hit of the night.

"I was on tonight and I haven't had an on night in quite awhile," said Pace. "We were realying the ball real good and that set us up. We also got a lot of blocked shots and that's something we don't usually get."

"They hit well, blocked and had good relays and that's the key to the whole thing," said Baulch. "The only thing we're still missing, something we were good at in the beginning of the year and has since gone bonkers, is serves. Our misses are from carlessness on our part. In practice, they hardly ever miss but it's different when they're in a game."

FOR THE Bulldogs, the loss wasn't the end of their season, but it was disappointing.

"We're all disappointed," said Coach Sonja Pittman. "I felt like we were due for a loss and I was afraid tonight might be it. Nothing against Lee, they played real well."

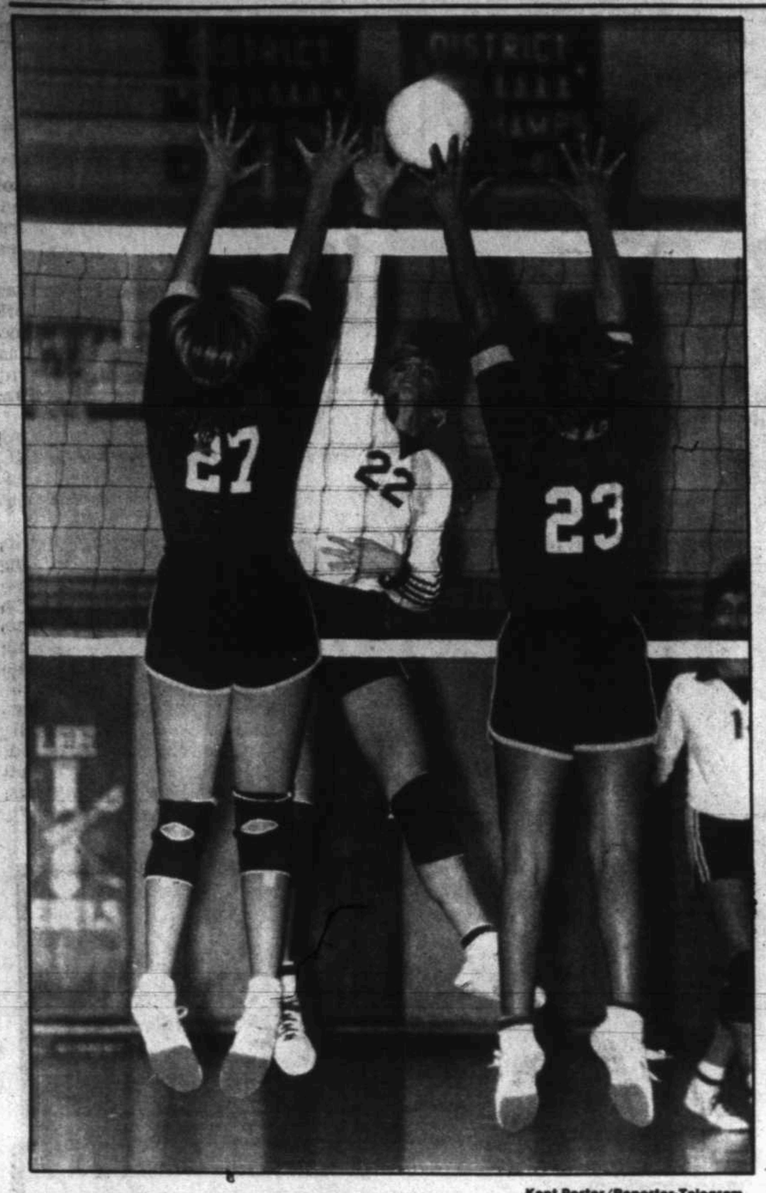

The main area of concern for Pittman after the game was in her team's passing.

"I feel like our whole ability to win depends on the ability to pass the ball," said Pittman. "Our passing was really bad and without good passes, you can't set up your offense. Lee was also playing real good defense against us, but I expected that."

When the match suddenly seemed to get out of hand for Midland, Bulldog Laura Martin felt like there was a loss of intensity.

"We let up a lot in the second game and we didn't start going again until the very last point," said Martin. "I think we could have played better. We'll just have to work harder if we want to go any farther than district this season."

The trail to a come-back starts Thursday for MHS when the Bulldogs host Big Spring at 7 p.m.

Ueberroth gets hefty bonus from LAOOC

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter V. Ueberroth, who helped guide the Summer Games to a $150-million surplus as president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, was awarded a $475,000 merit bonus, an LAOOC official said.

Ueberroth's bonus and $350,-000 awarded to LAOOC Executive Vice President Harry L. Usher were two of 6,500 bonuses given to Olympic employees, the LAOOC compensation committee announced Tuesday.

Bonuses ranged from $500 to $35,000, the latter for group vice presidents. The average was $1,100.

Ueberroth, who is now commissioner of major league baseball, presided over the 1984 Games without a salary this year in a show of support for Olympic volunteers.

Last month, Ueberroth and Usher announced the LAOOC had accumulated a $150-million surplus that will be given to the U.S. Olympic Committee and to a foundation to support youth sports in Southern California.

O'Meara makes run on Texas Open crown

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — With the PGA Tour winding down, major maneuvering in two important seasonal races could be accomplished this week in the $300,000 Texas Open.

The two leading contenders in the Player of the Year race — the nonrelated Watsons, Tom and Denis — are among the missing, so the attention shifts to the struggles for the leading money-winning spot and the Vardon Trophy, which goes to the man with the low-stroke average on the Tour.

With a prize of $54,000 awaiting the winner, rampaging Mark O'Meara has an chance of overtaking Tom Watson on the money-winning list. Watson has $476,260 for the season, and his playing schedule in the four (including this one) official events remaining is uncertain.

O'Meara, who has won once and collected five second-place finishes, including last weekend in the LaJet Classic, is second on the list with $437,173.

"I've put myself in position, at the moment anyway, to make a run at it. I'd be foolish not to try to take advantage of it," O'Meara said.

He has a non-Tour commitment next week but will play in the Walt Disney World "and if I still have a chance to win the money title, I'll definitely play in Pensacola (the final event on the schedule)."

Both Tom Kite and Cal Peete have a chance to vault over leading Craig Stadler in the Vardon Trophy standings. Stdler is not competing in the tournament that begins Thursday on the Oak Hills Country Club course. He leads with a 70.73 stroke average.

Peete is second at 70.77 and Kite third at 70.81. The short, 6,525-yard, par 70 course often yields some of the lowest scores on the Tour and provides Peete and Kite with opportunities to make up some ground.

Umpires strike playoff openers

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The 1984 major league baseball playoffs opened Tuesday with regular umpires on strike and substitute umpires facing no controversies as Detroit and Chicago scored one-sided victories.

Richie Phillips, head of the umpires' union, and Bobby Brown, the American League president and a management negotiator, both were at Tuesday night's American League Championship Series opener in Kansas City — won by the Tigers 8-1 — and were to meet following the game.

The Cubs belted San Diego 13-0 in the afternoon.

There was only one close play in the AL contest, a sixth inning grounder by Frank White to shortstop Alan Trammell, whose throw seemed to pull first baseman Darrell Evans. White was called out by umpire John Bible.

Asked about that play, Royals Manager Dick Howser said "Jose Martinez (KC's first-base coach) thought he stayed on the bag and that he was out."

Bill Deegan, a big-league umpire for 10 seasons, worked home plate and drew praise from Howser and Tigers winner Jack Morris.

"I thought Deegan did a good job — he was a good umpire for 10 years," Howser said.

"I thought he did an outstanding job," added Morris. "Every umpire is human and will mistakes and I think he made some."

Deegan said he has been umpiring little league and softball the last few years.

"The big issue is money," Brown said of the dispute with the regular umps. "Right now, there isn't a bright ray of hope, but I'm sure that by the end of the game we'll get together and talk about it."

Brown, interviewed by ABC-TV before the game, said he felt the substitute umpires had done "pretty well" in the National League series opener earlier.

Brown acknowledged, in reply to a question, that an umpire was out of position on at least one play, adding, "but, he made the right call."

In reply to another question about the umpires' work, Brown said, "I didn't see anything that happened badly except that San Diego played poorly."

The AL president said: "It was a pretty well umpired game."

Phillips, in a separate interview said, "We'll hold out through the World Series if we have to."

Deegan, now a tile salesman in San Antonio, Texas, volunteered to work Tuesday night's game in Kansas City.

"I volunteered for it last night when I saw it (the umpires strike) in the paper," said Deegan, who also worked the 1970 game when the National League playoffs were struck. "I don't believe in unions."

The National League recruited four collegiate officials to work Tuesday's opening game between the San Diego Padres and Chicago.

Dick Cavanaugh, a 51-year-old retired pilot, worked behind the plate. Cavanaugh recruited Dave Slickenmeyer, a steak and seafood salesman, and Joe Pomponi and Joe Maher, both physical education teachers, to replace the strikers. All four have worked together in the Big Ten Conference and had also worked during the seven-week strike in 1979.

"We were real tense at first," Pomponi said. Then, the Cubs turned the game into a 13-0 rout and there were no close or controversial calls. "The score made it easy. As the score got wider, the game got easier."

There was one tense moment, however, in the bottom of the third inning, when Ryne Sandberg raced from first to third on a single by Leon Durham and slid in just as the throw from the outfield arrived at the base. Maher, the third base umpire, was well off the play, up the left field line, prompting former Baltimore Orioles' Manager Earl Weaver, a television color announcer, to comment: "They got their hands caught in the cookie jar already."

While the NL game went on, the negotiations did not.

"We're ready to negotiate as soon as Richie Phillips gets in touch with us," NL President Chub Feeney said.

Earlier in the day, Phillips said from his office in Philadelphia: "There's nothing going on right now. There have been no negotiations."

Blake Cullen, the NL supervisor of umpires, said that if the strike continued when the series moves Thursday to San Diego, local umpires there likely would be chosen.

The usual six-man contingent was reduced to four in the NL playoff with the elimination of the foul-line umpires. Cullen's explanation was that the replacements "are used to working that way (in four-man crews)."

Retired major league umps Al Barlick and Ed Vargo, on the NL staff as supervisors, were in the dugouts "for any immediate rules interpretations."

Feeney said the primary issue in the strike was the umpires wanting not only increased money for those working postseason games but "a larger pool of money for guys who don't show up for work," meaning those not selected to handle the playoffs and World Series.

And Peter Ueberroth, in his second day as commissioner of baseball, was at Wrigley Field. He stood beside Feeney before the game and also characterized the main issue as being "the umpires who don't work."

Getting Smoked

San Diego outfielder Tony Gwynn disposes of a smoke bomb tossed by an over-exuberant and under-intelligent fan in the Padres' 13-0 loss at Chicago Tuesday.

CUBS

If the Padres rebound to win the next two games, Sutcliffe undoubtedly would pitch on Saturday. The Dodger castoff is 3-0 against the Padres for the year, winning by 2-1 and 4-1 margins before Tuesday's landslide.

San Diego hitters planned to hit Sutcliffe to the opposite field and to capitalize on his weakness in fielding bunts. That might have helped in a bigger ballpark or if the wind had been blowing in, as it had done for several days previously.

As it turned out, the Cubs' superiority in power and their collection of high fastball hitters were better equipped for the windy conditions and Cavanaugh's tilted strike zone.

Sutcliffe has struck out 17 batters in 24 and a third innings against the Padres this season, allowing 15 hits, seven walks and two runs. One resulted from his own fielding error, the other came on a Martinez home run.

Major league batting champion Tony Gwynn of the Padres has one single in 10 at bats against Sutcliffe this year and says he is deceived by the Cy Young Award candidate's "funky deliver." Sutcliffe is a "wrapper," a pitcher who cocks his wrist in his delivery.

"The Dodgers tried to get me to change that," he said Tuesday. "I tried a few times and forgot about it."

That and the fact that Sutcliffe almost destroyed Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda's office when he was informed he was being dropped from the roster for the 1981 playoff against Montreal resulted in a trade that sent the 1978 NL "rookie of the year" to Cleveland.

Sutcliffe responded with 14-8 and 17-11 records his first two seasons with the Indians. He harbors so much resentment against the Dodgers that his 1981 World Series ring has remained in the Kansas City safe deposit box since he first placed it there.

He blames that resentment on the late June game at Los Angeles that blemished an otherwise perfect record with the Cubs and credits Cleveland pitching coach Mel Queen Jr. with teaching him the slider, a pitch the Dodgers wouldn't let him throw and one that has been responsible for many of his 163 strikeouts in 157 innings with the Cubs.

Ironically, the Padres turned down a chance to acquire Sutcliffe, outfielder Lee Lacy, infielder Rafael Landestoy and two lesser players during the winter of 1977-78 when the Dodgers were interested in trading for power hitter Dave Winfield.

TIGERS

Trammell alone was more than Royal starter Bud Black (five innings, four runs, seven hits) or relievers Mark Huismann and Mike Jones could handle.

Trammell reached base all five times and scored twice. The 3-for-3 night (two walks) raised his 1984 average vs. Kansas City to .581 at Royals Stadium and .453 overall. He has driven in 11 runs in the seven games here.

"I wouldn't consider that dominance," Trammell said. "The last couple of seasons, I've hit well against the Royals. But I've also hit well on AstroTurf. I consider myself a good line-drive hitter. If you hit the ball hard on AstroTurf, it finds holes. I've just found a lot of holes against these guys."

The Tigers didn't begin their extra-season play with quite the bang the Cubs had earlier Tuesday — home runs by Bob Dernier and Gary Matthews — but they nevertheless took the same 2-0 lead after one inning.

Lou Whitaker led off by poking a Black curve into right field. Trammell, the No. 2 hitter, followed with a long fly ball to left field. Darryl Motley chased it to the warning track before giving up and watching it ricochet off the base of the wall past him. Whitaker scored. Trammell stood up coming into third base.

Parrish scored him one out later, lifting a fly that Pat Sheridan caught in medium-deep right field.

"Blackie got two strikes on each of the first two hitters, but couldn't finish 'em off," Howser said. "That's pretty good hitting right there."

Detroit raised its lead to 4-0 on solo home runs by Larry Herndon in the fourth and Trammell in the fifth.

Morris retired nine straight after getting Brett out in the third, working perfect fourth, fifth and sixth innings. Sheridan's two-base error on a fly ball by Whitaker helped Detroit raise its lead to 5-0 in the seventh. Sheridan missed Whitaker's fly in right-center, putting him on second base with one out. Trammell followed with his third hit, a liner past a diving Frank White, to score Whitaker.

Jorge Orta scored Kansas City's lone run in the seventh, leading off with a triple and scoring on Motley's grounder to Trammell.

Detroit scored three more runs with a three-hit eighth inning — Darrell Evans' double and Marty Castillo's single drove them in — and Parrish's solo home run in the ninth.

"Hopefully," Parrish said, "we'll leave here up two games."

History says they will.

Substitute umpires don't belong

By HAL BOCK

CHICAGO (AP) — Imagine Larry Holmes climbing into the ring next month to defend his world heavyweight championship against Bonecrusher Smith ... Bonecrusher Smith? ... and discovering that the referee is some stranger drafted from the local Police Athletic League.

Or, consider having the champions of the American and National Football Conferences trot on the field for the Super Bowl in January and finding the striped shirts being filled by eight anonymous guys imported from the Pop Warner League.

No way, you say. There's too much at stake. It couldn't happen in our modern, sophisticated world of sports.

Maybe not in boxing or football, it couldn't, but baseball sometimes isn't all that sophisticated.

So, the grand old game moved into its League Championship Series with nothing more crucial than World Series berths at stake and shrugged off a strike by its regular umpires, turning the operation over to amateurs who usually work college games and, in the American League series, an umpire who retired four years ago.

In its benevolence, baseball paid the replacements $2,000 per man, per game, half what it had offered the strikers. Does that mean they were expected to be half as good?

"Don't call them amateurs," advised Blake Cullen, supervisor of National League umpires. "They're professional umpires who work amateur games. The Big Ten's not chopped liver, you know."

Neither, though, are the playoffs or World Series.

The NL used just four umps in the playoff opener instead of the six ordinarily assigned for postseason games, and the number used in the AL playoff. That left Joe Maher, a teacher who was working third base in the San Diego-Chicago opener, jogging back to the base and maybe 20 feet out of position to make one close call on sliding Ryne Sandberg.

"I might have strayed a little too far out (to make sure the ball dropped safely), but I saw the play clearly," he said. "He was safe. That's the way it looked on TV, didn't it?"

Yeah, but that's not usually the criteria regular umps use.

Dave Slickenmeyer, the steak and seafood salesman who worked first base, had the toughest call, a tumbling, shoestring catch with the bases loaded by Chicago's Keith Moreland in right field.

"It was a can of corn as far as I was concerned," Slickenmeyer said, nonchalantly slipping into baseball's lexicon for a simple fly ball.

The NL got lucky with Chicago's 13-0 laugher Tuesday taking the burden off the umps. There's not much argument about five home runs.

Bobby Brown, the AL president and a management negotiator, said he saw nothing amiss in the NL game, except that "San Diego played poorly."

He conceded that Mahar was out of position on that play at third, but, reasoned Brown, "he made the right call."

In Brown's view, "It was a pretty well umpired game."

This labor strife is nothing new. The umpires struck for 100 days in 1979 and baseball simply shrugged and went about its business, drafting amateurs and willing minor leaguers to fill in, and assuming a c'est la vie position. The NL replacements worked then, too.

"I know quite a few of the strikers," said Dick Cavanaugh, the retired pilot who worked home plate. "Are we best friends? I wouldn't say that, not after 1979."

In a way, it's kind of quaint to use sandlot umps in the charming, old fashioned setting of Wrigley Field, where the games are played in the daytime on a grass field. It's like a return to baseball's roots. A nice touch.

All of this trouble has developed in Peter Ueberroth's first two days as commissioner. And how has your week been so far?

The umpires union negotiates its contract with the two league presidents, making this, in the great tradition of Ford Frick, "a league matter." But with a crisis at hand in the sport's showcase events, it could force early intervention by the new commissioner.

At any rate, the umps have provided a not-so cheery hello for Ueberroth. Welcome aboard, Pete. Dealing with the International Olympic Committee must have seemed like a Sunday picnic compared to this.

Cub fever grips playoff-starved Chicagoans

CHICAGO (AP) — Stockbrokers, politicians, schoolchildren, makeshift bleacher bums and even a goat sporting a Cubs cap were among the thousands of baseball fans stricken by Cubs fever Tuesday as the National League playoffs with the San Diego Padres began at Wrigley Field.

"It's faaaaannnnntastic," said Gov. James R. Thompson of the Cubs' chances to play in the World Series. "We're gonna' do it! We're gonna' do it!"

"You should see the Cub fever. I can't even walk through our television department," said Dick Donat, vice president and general merchandise manager at a Marshall Field's department store in downtown Chicago.

Donat said through a spokesman that 75 television sets in the store were turned on Tuesday afternoon — and all but two were tuned to the Cubs game. "There are people sitting on top of TVs watching other TVs," he said.

"We're announcing the score every half hour over the loudspeaker. ... I can hear customers cheering."

Earlier at Wrigley Field, the day's first ovation went to Billy Goat, the mascot of a popular downtown tavern of the same name, when he was escorted onto the field before the game.

Cubs legend has it that the tavern's founder cast a hex on the Cubs in 1945 because his goat was kept out of a World Series game at Wrigley Field. But the current tavern owner, Sam Sianis, later lifted the hex, and Billy got a reserved box seat at Tuesday's game.

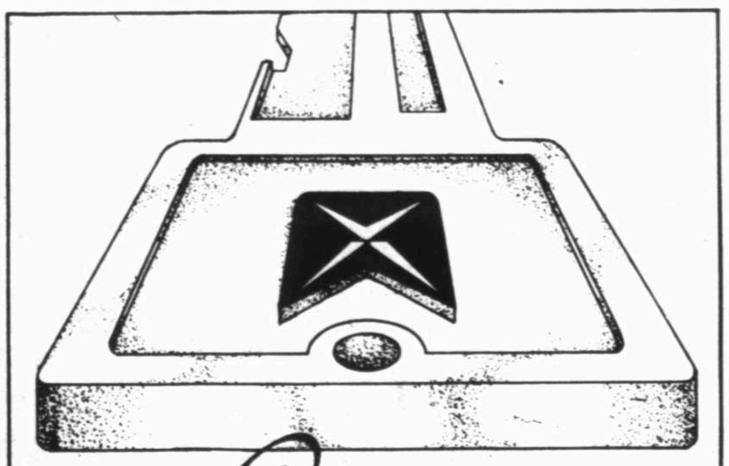

A mile south of Wrigley Field, at The Ultimate Sports Bar & Grill, about 400 Cubs fans glued to one of the bar's eight televisions had gone through about 375 cases of beer before the game even ended.

"We're swamped. There's no room to move. People can't get in through the front door," an employee said.

General manager Tony Nitti said he had set up bleachers to seat 150 fans and would bring in another set Wednesday.

Lake Fork's crappie abundant

West Texas Outdoors

By TODD WOODARD
Outdoors Writer

Four-year-old Lake Fork Reservoir is one of the newer water projects of the Sabine River Authority.

While the trident-shaped lake was originally impounded to provide water for the thirsty city of Dallas 87 miles to the west, it was also built to provide recreation.

One of its best recreations is crappie fishing. Even though the lake hasn't filled up (it's more than 18 feet low), the water has submerged enough oak and pine trees to provide excellent cover for the delectable crappie. To catch a mess of crappie, you only have to get them to bite.

At Lake Fork, that isn't too difficult.

John D. Boyd of Quitman and his son, Barry, of Greenville, have a taste for black crappie that pushes them onto the 15-mile-long lake at the smallest urging. They normally fish several spots that John D. picked while the lake was filling up, and those spots consistently produce fish.

I urged John D. to show me a few of his better spots, which was more than enough push for him to take half a morning away from work.

"We used to fish all the time over at Lake Quitman," the elder Boyd said. "Lake Fork is just as close as Lake Quitman (about seven miles west of Quitman) but it's bigger and the fishing's better."

The fishing for the Boyds is better around the southwest edge of the lake, anywhere from Dale Creek Bay, which lies two miles northwest of the dam, to Mustang Bay, which lies three miles northwest of Dale Creek Bay. Both of the bays lay southeast of the main channel, Lake Fork Bay.

John D. prefers fishing with a cane pole and minnows above anything else.

"I like to rig my pole with a lot of line," he said. "I usually use about 12 feet of 8-pound line to dabble around the trunks of trees. I ease the minnow down into the water, jigging it up and down slow as I drop it.

"Once I figure out where the fish are, I tie a rubber band around my line where the water came up to. When I put it in the next time, the bobber can't go further than the rubber band, so I don't have to guess how deep they are.

"Them crappie put a good fight on a cane pole. You see that bobber dip and the end of the pole wiggle, and you know you've got a good one. You pull them out easy, because their mouth is so tender. Jerk too hard and you're liable to pull the hook right out of his mouth."

Todd Woodard/Reporter-Telegram

Black crappie, common in East Texas, are distinguished by seven or eight spines in their dorsal, or top, fins and a randomly spotted body. White crappie have six or seven spines and vertical black bars.

Since John D. knew that description isn't nearly the teacher experience is, he boated us to one of his favorite stumps and rigged three poles. While Barry was fumbling with a minnow, John D. leaned over the front of his boat and offered his minnow to what he hoped was a nest of black crappie.

Time and again I've heard stories of dropping a hook in the water and fish immediately lunging for it. John D. lent weight to those stories, because in fewer than 30 seconds, he had a 2-pound black crappie in the boat.

"We might do O.K. today," he said, landing another crappie. "The sun just came up and we've already got enough to feed Donna (Barry's wife)."

Black crappie are not as widespread as their cousin, the white crappie. Blacks are concentrated in the acidic and slightly alkaline waters of East Texas. Rather than the vertical black bars of the white crappie, black crappie are spotted black. A more exact way to tell the two species apart are the number spines in the dorsal, or top, fin. Whites have five or six spines and blacks seven or eight spines.

Both species like the same kind of cover and the same water depth. From mid-February to mid-June, they'll usually suspend in less than 15 feet of water. When the water warms up, they'll seek cooler, deeper waters.

In the fall, they're generally above 10 feet and almost always around heavy cover. They tend toward submerged trees, boat docks, piers -- anything they can hide around.

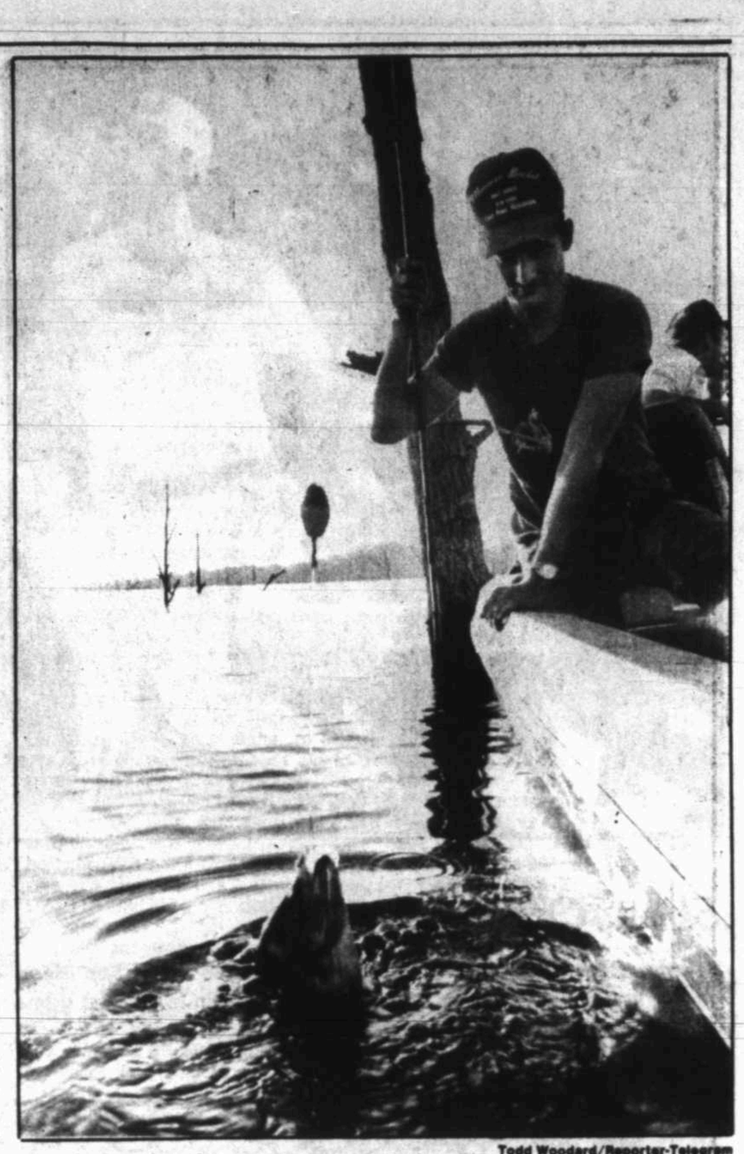

Since crappie are gregarious fish, where one fish is, more are probably nearby. John D. illustrated their schooling behavior beautifully. At that first hole, he had five fish in the boat before Barry and I could get organized.

Before it was all over at 10 a.m., we had a 16 crappie, none of which weighed less than 1½ pounds. If you define a mess of crappie as enough to feed four people, at 16 fish, we had slightly better than a mess. John D. and his wife, Sue, Barry, Donna and I fell four fish short of eating that stringer for supper.

Oh, how we tried, though. With more than six fillets under his belt, John D. reached past the cole slaw, hush puppies and french fries for one more slab of deep-fried, pale crappie meat.

Groaning as he lifted it to his lips, he said he understood how some people become addicted to drugs.

"Ever since I ate my first crappie, I've been hooked," he said. "It seems like I can never get enough."

Todd Woodard/Reporter-Telegram

Barry Boyd, of Greenville, used a bobber, minnow and cane pole to catch crappie at Lake Fork, 87 miles east of Dallas.

Smart thumbs secret of baitcasting rod

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — If you can throw a ball, you can cast your bait with a fishing rod, Shag Shahid said as his practice plug knocked over a paper cup 25 yards away.

"You've got to put your brains in your thumb," when you are using a baitcasting rod, or in your index finger if you're using a spinning rod, he said.

With that thumb or index finger you can shorten your cast, slow your lure to ease it into the water, bend it to the right or curve it to your left.

"You've got to apply enough pressure to that spool so it won't overrun. And you can apply the brakes to that spool so the bait will come to a soft stop. A hard stop is no good," said Shahid, an instructor with the American Fishing Institutes and Lew Childre tackle.

Apply thumb pressure gently down on the rotating spool of a baitcasting reel. Jam it down hard for an "emergency stop" to keep the lure out of the bushes. On an open face spinning reel, grip your rod so your index finger can extend down to the side of the spool, touching the line as it spins off the spool.

"You feather that line with the pressure of that finger," Shahid said.

Officials crack down on Northwest poaching

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Federal and state officials say they are cracking down on poaching for profit, which has become a big problem in the Northwest.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Earl Hicks of Spokane said increased public awareness, a better system of informants and tougher penalties should deter poaching.

"You run the risk that there could be a confidential informant standing right next to you," he said.

But he and others concede only a small number of those illegally taking game and fish are hauled into court.

Mike Shockman, enforcement specialist for the Washington Department of Game, said about 16,750 deer and 6,800 elk were killed illegally during the year ended June 30.

He also estimated less than 10 percent of the poachers are prosecuted despite tighter laws and increased efforts to detect them.

Frank NeSmith, chief of enforcement for the Idaho Fish and Game Department, said he couldn't even estimate the number of animals falling victim to poachers.

"We do have a situation, as most states do, that worries us," he said. "It's a lot higher than we'd like to see it."

Officials agree the Northwest states and western Canadian provinces — Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Alaska, British Columbia and Alberta — have become prime areas for commercial poachers.

"The wildlife resource as far as trophy animals is in the Northwest," said Dean Tresch, special agent for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

And Shockman said the region is a focal point for "frankly, a worldwide trade" in poached wildlife.

Bear paws and gall bladders, as well as elk antlers, are sold as aphrodisiacs to a large Oriental market.

Spokane has become a hub for many poachers, Hicks said, because of its access to major hunting areas and its transportation system. He cited a recent case in which 115 "expeditions" to Banff and Jasper National Parks in Canada had been planned and some wildlife was transported through Spokane for U.S. points before the operation was discovered.

Do-it-all back Greg Moore Huffman's tough man

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

Huffman's Greg Moore is the team's regular punter but he has only four boots in four games this season for a 43.1 average.

The reason for so few punts is that Moore spends the rest of his time gaining yards and scoring touchdowns for the undefeated Falcons.

Moore ripped off 319 yards rushing on 17 carries — the top effort in the state this year — in three quarters of work last week. Moore scored on runs of 34, 19, 62 and 22 yards, kicked all of his team's extra points and contributed nine tackles as a linebacker.

The all-around performance earned Moore mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll for his part in the Falcons' 35-13 victory over East Chambers.

"If the ball game is close, he has a knack of winning it for you," Huffman Coach Benny Mitchell said. "I remember a game against Coldspring when they held him to 136 yards rushing.

"It was 7-0 our favor in the fourth quarter but they were driving. He intercepted a pass and returned in 30 yards and stuck it in on the next play. Whether it's a big defensive play or punting you out of a hole, he'll do it."

Moore goes into a big showdown against Port Arthur Austin this week with 891 yards for the season and 13 touchdowns. He had 1,702 yards for last season and 13 touchdowns for the entire year.

Moore, a 6-1, 205 senior, has 4,267 yards for his career.

Also joining last week's 300 club was Brazosport's Tony Darthard, who rushed 301 yards on 27 carries and had three touchdown runs against El Campo, but it only resulted in a 27-19 loss.

Darthard hit for touchdown runs of 75, 32 and 69 yards but he was outscored by El Campo's Heath Sherman, who scored four times to lead his team to victory. In the runner's duel, Sherman finished with 235 rushing yards and had scoring runs of 25, 1,1 and 3 yards.

In other outstanding individual performances:

— San Angelo Central's C.L. Bowman returned a kickoff 103 yards for a touchdown in a 49-20 loss to No. 6 ranked Midland Lee. It was Bowman's third TD kickoff return in four games. The others were for 84 and 78 yards.

— McKinney quarterback Greg Ziegler completed 10 of 18 passes for 191 yards and touchdown passes of 12, 58 and 35 yards in a 21-14 victory over Paris.

— Axtell running back Keith Dancer had a five-touchdown performance in a 54-8 victory over Wortham. Dancer had touchdown runs of 19, 17, 10 and 42 yards and returned an interception 30 yards for another score.

— Mart running back Tony Baker rushed 29 times for 235 yards and touchdowns of 19 and 37 yards in a 19-0 victory over Leon.

— Thorndale quarterback Rob Mitchell contributed six touchdowns to a 52-13 victory over Bartlett. He completed five of 12 passes for 94 yards and touchdowns of 22 and 13 yards and rushed 111 yards on 15 carries and touchdowns of 23, 8 and 73 yards and returned an interception eight yards for another score.

— Caldwell quarterback Bobby Goforth ran for touchdowns of 1, 55, 2 and 1 yard and completed a 9 yard pass for a touchdown in a 32-18 victory over Rogers.

— Brownsboro quarterback Bryan Bragg completed 17 of 24 passes for 224 yards and scored the winning touchdown on a one yard plunge with 28 seconds to play in a 25-24 victory over Van. Trailing 24-12 in the fourth quarter, Bragg hit six straight passes including a 22-yard touchdown pass to set up his game-winner.

— Laredo Nixon's Joe Rubio is stuck on a good set of statistics. He caught six passes for 119 yards for the second consecutive week as Nixon defeated San Antonio McCallum 21-13.

— Halfback-linebacker Saul Garcia helped San Diego end an 18-game losing streak with a 28-7 victory over Dilley. Garcia rushed 106 yards on 15 carries and had touchdowns of 31 and 10 yards and added 15 tackles.

— Yoakum kicker Ronnie Lauer had a busy night with field goals of 47,46 and 28 yards and seven extra points in a 62-6 victory over Goliad.

— Charlotte's Paul Benavides played only three quarters in a 49-6 victory over Falls City but it was enough to gain 225 yards on 19 carries including touchdown runs of 5, 2, 15 and 23 yards.

— A.J. Johnson normally helps Schertz Clemens win games on offense but he was inserted as a safety for one play and he make a gamesaving tackle on a two-point conversion attempt that preserved Clemens' 21-20 victory over San Antonio Hayes.

High School Honor Roll

Dolphin WR whiz Duper wasn't always so super

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

Joe Delaney and Victor Oatis, two football-playing sprinters of the NCAA champion 400-meter relay team at Northwestern Louisiana State were sitting around the locker room a few years ago kidding a third member of the team.

"They told me I was scared of playing football, that I was afraid of contact," Mark Duper says today. "It started off like a game, then it got serious. I thought I might be able to make a career of it, so I pursued it."

That's quite a career Duper found.

With only two years of college football experience and one professional season spent mostly on injured reserve, Duper burst forth in 1983 to become the first receiver in the illustrious history of the Miami Dophins to have over 1,000 yards in receptions. This year, he could double that figure — he already leads the AFC with 30 receptions for 649 yards and six touchdowns and an average of 21.6 yards per catch.

"I don't think there's a team in the league that can shut Duper down completely," says Indianapolis safety Tate Randle, one of those who has tried. "If he's not the best receiver in the league, he's certainly one of the top two or three. He's got great acceleration and probably one of the best pair of hands."

That's not necessarily the rule when track men try the NFL.

Other than Bob Hayes, an Olympic gold medalist who became an All-Pro with the Cowboys and Ollie Matson, who spent 14 years as a standout NFL running back, Olympians have had their troubles. Most were usually in the mold of Jim Hines, the 1968 gold medalist in the 100 meters who was a "Look Ma, no hands," receiver in a brief tryout with the Dolphins.

But the modern crew is more successful. In addition to Duper, they include:

—Johnny "Lam" Jones, in his fifth year with the New York Jets after winning a gold medal on the U.S. 400-meter relay team in 1976. An in-and-outer his first three seasons, he had his best year in 1983 with 43 catches, but separated a shoulder in preseason and is on injured reserve.

—Ron Brown, fourth in the Olympic 400-meter dash last summer and a 400-meter relay gold medalist. A rookie receiver with the Los Angeles Rams, he's caught four passes for 97 yards and two touchdowns — one on a twisting, leaping catch of a 52-yard bomb.

—Willie Gault, a world-class hurdler who passed up a shot at the Olympics to join the Chicago Bears last year. He has 12 catches for 188 yards and two touchdowns after 40 catches for a team-leading 836 yards as a rookie.

— Renaldo Nehemiah, world-record holder in the 110-meter high hurdles, who signed two years ago with the San Francisco 49ers despite no college football experience and has caught 29 passes since then as a backup.

The 49ers also have two non-sprinter trackmen — backup nose tackle Michael Carter, the Olympic silver medalist in the shot put, and Jeff Stover, a weight thrower without college football experience, who was a starting defensive end until a knee injury ended his season.

But none compare to Duper, who has run a 4.28 40-yard dash and a world-class 10.2 in the 100 meters.

He credits his football career to Delaney, who became a 1,000-yard running back for the Kansas City Chiefs before drowning in an off-season accident a year ago.

"I saw Joe play football, then come back and run track and be just as good," Duper says. "He convinced me I could do it, too."

Duper was also a 30-point-a game scorer for his high school basketball team, a 6-foot-9 center who could dunk with both hands. A center? "Aww, it was just Class B, small school," he says. "I was the shortest guy on the team, but I could jump better than the others."

This summer, Duper watched men he'd competed against — Carl Lewis among others — win Olympic medals and acknowledged he had a few pangs of envy.

"Sure I think I could have made the Olympic team," he says.

TCU's Wacker no wallflower

AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jim Wacker has the perfect last name for his personality. The Texas Christian football coach comes off, well, a little wacky.

He'll chatter your earpans numb about Horned Frog football in his own special, hyper style, where his lips move faster than the sound coming out of his mouth.

Wacker, the son of a preacher man, will pin you down with so many "incredibles" and "fantastics" and "amazings" that you wish never to hear those words again in your lifetime.

But don't be fooled by this zany professor of football. He's been a messiah to three downtrodden football programs and is about to make it a fourth.

His name isn't "Wack the Hack" — it's "Wack the Wizard."

This "Mr. Positively Enthusiastic" Jim Wacker, as the TCU press guide calls him, brought two national NAIA titles to Texas Lutheran, two conference crowns to North Dakota State, and two NCAA Division II national championships to Southwest Texas State.

Sometimes hidden by his cheerleading "ain't-the-world wonderful" style is the fact he was one of the nation's innovators of the Veer offense.

This football Will Rogers can coach.

Even with a 1-8-2 start at TCU last year, Wacker is 107-41-3 in 13 seasons as a head coach.

Which brings us to why crazy Jim came to a program that has had a quarter-century of football follies.

"I just want to see if I can win at TCU," says Wacker. "That's the reason I'm there. I don't want to go someplace where everything is super. The fans at TCU are just longing for something good to happen and I think it will if I don't screw it up before my contract runs out in the next three years.

"If you like underdogs, we're a natural," he says. "We're made in underdog heaven. However, if you stay an underdog you get fired."

Ol' Wack, the one-man flack, took special delight that he had TCU fans "coming out of cracks and around corners wearing purple" after the Horned Frogs won their first two games in 12 years. There were 501 fans at Tuesday's Horned Frog Club luncheon.

"The Frogs are jumping higher now," Wacker says. "The Frogs have had a lot of adversity in the last 25 years. Now, we're having to shake 'em out of the trees to get 'em down."

Wacker has no illusions about his young team, which is sophomore dominated on defense.

"We may be pretty good," he says. "Our offense was in shock after two games when it led the nation in offense. Those stats were ridiculous."

Down deep in his optimistic bones, he'd be happy with a winning season, the first for TCU since 1971.

"Oh, this might be our year. Look at the Chicago Cubs and the Detroit Tigers," he'll say for the consumption of his players, who feed off his enthusiasm into over-their-heads performances.

But he knows he doesn't yet have the depth to win consistently in the Southwest Conference.

"I have to admit that I've been about as surprised as the next guy," Wacker says. Then he adds: "It definitely is a great feeling. I'm so cotton pickin' happy for these kids. It's all fantastic, unbelievable."

We'll hold back a word I've never heard Wacker say for the golden New Year's Day the Horned Frogs play in the Cotton Bowl.

"Stupendous!"

It's all yours, Jim.

Parity finds new home in college football

Texas back Terry Orr was named SWC player of the week for his 108 yards rushing against Penn State. TCU's Byron Linwood won defensive plaudits for his 20 tackles against SMU.

AP Sports Writer

Who are these folks and what are they doing in the Top Twenty?

Along with the Texases, Ohio States and Oklahomas, this week's Associated Press Top Twenty contains the likes of Oklahoma State (No. 9, its highest ranking since 1945), Georgia Tech (No. 12, its best since 1966) and — would you believe — Vanderbilt (No. 19). Oklahoma State and Georgia Tech have made it from time to time over the years, but Vanderbilt's last appearance in any of the weekly ratings was in 1958.

"This isn't the Vanderbilt of the past — it's the Vanderbilt of the present and the future," linebacker Steve McCoy said after last weekend's 30-21 whipping of Alabama, giving the Commodores a 4-0 record for the first time since 1950.

And knocking on the door are such strangers to the rankings as Syracuse, which stunned No. 1 Nebraska 17-9; South Carolina, 3-0 after downing No. 12 Georgia 17-10, and Kentucky, 3-0 for only the third time since 1950. And if Syracuse is knocking on the door, can Rutgers, which defeated the Orangemen 19-0 one week earlier, be far behind?

Up to a point, parity has arrived in college football.

"The top teams in the country are still the top teams in the country regardless of some shocking starts this year," says Rutgers Coach Dick Anderson. "But some other teams in Division I-A have made great strides. More schools are looking for ways to improve their programs. There seems to be a constant battle to keep up with the Joneses — improving facilities and support services, recruiting methods and what you do with mailings and brochures. You still have those strong teams, but everyone else is getting stronger."

Nowhere are things more in a state of upheaval than the Southeastern Conference, where the only teams still unbeaten and untied are longtime doormats Kentucky and Vanderbilt.

"I said the 30-95 (scholarship limitation) rule would bring a lot of parity," says Kentucky's Jerry Claiborne. "You've still got teams which year in and year out will always be there in the Top Ten and Top Twenty. But you also have the opportunity that someone can beat those teams, although you're not going to beat them regularly week after week. I don't think parity has completely arrived. Check the Top Twenty teams every year and 16 of them will probably be there every year."

Vanderbilt's George MacIntyre, whose main claim to fame in the past was his strong facial resemblance to former President Jimmy Carter, says the Commodores "will fight like the devil" to keep their ranking, adding that his players "know where they came from and don't want to go back.

"A lot of tears came to a lot of eyes last Saturday and a lot of awful memories were wiped away," he said. "Now, we are very excited about being ranked. You have to remember that many of our young men were looked at cross-eyed when they announced they were signing with Vanderbilt instead of some of the state schools. Now they feel great about themselves."

Where it all stops nobody knows, but Vandy and Georgia Tech have higher dreams than just being ranked.

"It's great to see your team goals, set prior to the season, in sight," said McCoy. "You can't be No. 1 without first getting into the Top Twenty."

While some schools are getting high on their improved football programs, fans of the perennial powers had better get used to the fact that 11-0, 10-1 seasons just won't be coming down the pike every year.

"Not many teams are 4-0 today," says Barry Switzer, whose Oklahoma team is. "Nebraska lost. Clemson lost. Alabama has not won a game (the Crimson Tide actually is 1-3). So we ought to be happy at 4-0."

Frank Maloney was head coach at Syracuse University from 1974-80 and the Orangemen moved into the Carrier Dome in his final season after crumbling Archbold Stadium, that old eyesore, was demolished. Maloney cried for years that Syracuse needed a new stadium to compete with the other Eastern powers.

So where does Maloney conduct his business these days? At Chicago's Wrigley Field, of all places, one of the oldest ballparks in the major leagues. For the past three years Maloney has been director of ticket sales for the Chicago Cubs.

"I'm from the South Side (White Sox territory) but I've been a Cub fan all my life, the only one in my family," Maloney said Tuesday shortly before the Cubs opened the National League playoffs with a football-like 13-0 victory oer San Diego. "It's been a bizarre year, I'll tell you. It's been like Christmas every day. It's really been a great, great year. In addition to playing well, it was a great attendance year; we drew over 2 million for the first time."

Maloney deals mostly with season ticket-holders and large corporations; someone else handles tickets for the general public.

"My phone never stops ringing from this corporate executive or that corporate executive."

And every Monday morning at this time of year, Maloney and Jim Finks, the Cubs' president and chief executive officer and a long-time football man, "sit and talk football."

One of the things they talked about this week was Syracuse's upset of Nebraska.

"That was a shocker, wasn't it?" Maloney said.

Ditka: A coach, not wordsmith

By MICHAEL JANOFSKY
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The post-game news conference of a National Football League coach can be anything from high drama to low comedy. After victories, many of them smile, credit the opposition and pass around verbal bouquets like Christmas gifts. After losses, they tend to snort and stew and suggest that they can't explain why such-and-such happened until they look at the films.

Only the recognized great coaches sound about the same, win or lose. Don Shula of Miami, Tom Landry of Dallas and Chuck Noll of Pittsburgh more than likely will treat the result of any game the same.

Then there is Mike Ditka of the Chicago Bears, who once smashed his hand, breaking it, against a filing cabinet to make a point. When his team lost to the Cowboys Sunday, 23-14, he didn't smash anything. But you wouldn't have had difficulty figuring out who had won the game. This is how it began as he stood before an unusually large group of reporters in a yellow tent underneath the stands at Soldier Field:

"Late in the first half, you gained nearly 50 yards in three plays. You called a timeout and gave Dallas time to regroup, then didn't get the field goal. Was that the turning point?"

"No. Next question."

"Did you want that timeout called?"

"Yes. Next question."

"Did you want the ball thrown out of bounds on third down?" (The ball was thrown to Willie Gault, who caught it and did not get out of bounds, enabling the clock to run down and preventing the Bears from attempting a field goal.)

"Yes. Next question."

"Why did you run two running plays right before that?"

"Because we thought we wanted to."

"Why did Walter Payton run only four times in the third quarter?" (He had run 20 times in the first half, gaining 130 yards.)

"No kidding? I don't know. You saw the football game. You may as well say and write what you want."

Later, Ditka was asked what he felt the turning point of the game had been.

"What turning point?" he said. "The first time we touch the ball, we fumble, and they kick a field goal. We take it down and score. They take it down and score. We take it down and score. They take it down and score. You tell me where the turning point is. Maybe it was last Tuesday. Maybe it was last year, when they scheduled the game. Who knows?"

THE GIANTS' rushing performance Sunday — 8 yards on 13 carries against the Rams — was the worst of the season in the league by 9 yards. The previous low mark belonged to the New England Patriots, who ran 11 times for 17 yards against the Washington Redskins a week before.

WHILE THE Miami Dolphins appear to be flying along, they lost one of their most important players Sunday, even before he played a down against the Cardinals in St. Louis.

While warming up, the defensive end Kim Bokamper fractured the fibula near his left ankle when a teammate fell on him during drills before the game. Neither Don Shula, the Dolphins' coach, nor Bokamper knew Monday who fell on it, but Bokamper, the Dolphins' best pass rusher, is expected to be out from six to eight weeks.

Miami and the San Francisco 49ers are the only undefeated teams at 5-0. From the looks of their schedules over the next five weeks, they could easily be 10-0.

The Dolphins play the Pittsburgh Steelers (3-2), Houston (0- 5), New England (3-2), Buffalo (0-5) and the Jets (3-2). The 49ers play the Giants (3-2), Pittsburgh, Houston, the Rams (3-2) and Cincinnati (0-5).

Atlanta hires Haas as manager

ATLANTA (AP) — Eddie Haas, who languished as a minor league manager, instructor and coach for 20 years, will get his chance at the big time in 1985 as manager of the Atlanta Braves.

Club owner Ted Turner made the announcement Tuesday at a news conference at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. Haas, 49, replaced Joe Torre, who was fired Monday. Haas was signed to a one-year contract. Terms were not announced.

Haas, who served as the organization's manager at Richmond of the International League for nearly four seasons before being called up in July as a coach with the Braves, began his minor league managing career with the Braves in 1965 at West Palm Beach of the Florida State League.

Haas said he's "seen a lot of little towns," but he said he's had fun all along the way from "Yakima (Wash.) to Kingsport (Tenn.)."

"This is an honor to be a major league manager," Haas told reporters. "But it's a special honor to manage one of the top organizations in baseball."

Torre, 44, won the National League West title in 1982 during his first season with Atlanta and wound up as the most successful manager in Braves' history since the club moved to Atlanta from Milwaukee in 1966. He had been signed to a two-year extension at a reported $425,000 only last July.

Turner said Haas was the unanimous choice of himself and the Braves' front office.

"Eddie was basically it. We discussed other people, but it was unanimous. If we were going to make a change, Eddie was the guy everybody wanted," he said of the Paducah, Ky. resident who played briefly from 1957-60 in the majors with the Chicago Cubs and Milwaukee Braves.

Turner said Phil Niekro was mentioned briefly as a candidate. The knuckleball pitcher was released by the Braves last season, went to the New York Yankees and was 16-8 this season.

But, Turner said, the Yankees will likely sign Niekro for next season.

Turner did not give any specific reason for firing Torre, saying only that "I, and the front office thought it was time to make a change."

Asked why he had soured on Torre, Turner responded:

"I wouldn't say soured is the right word. I like Joe tremendously. He's a terrific guy and a great manager. We discussed another job in the organization but Joe expressed a desire to manage on the field next year," he said.

Haas said the only holdover from the coach staff Torre brought to Atlanta will be third base coach Dal Maxville. Johnny Sain and Leo Mazzone, who served as minor league pitching coaches in the Braves organization this year, will be Atlanta's pitching coaches.

He said two other coaches would be added later. He did not indicate who they would be.

Haas said he was informed that the job was his Monday afternoon.

"I think it's a big plus in knowing the players' past," he said of his familiarity with men on the roster, including 19 who finished the 1984 season in Atlanta.

"I don't foresee any wholesale moves. There's a lot of talent here. If we have a healthy season and get some improvement from individuals, we have a chance to be an outstanding ball club," said Haas.

He said he had no feelings one way or another after waiting so long to get his chance, including being bypassed three years ago when Turner overruled the front office to hire Torre instead of Haas.

"I don't think of the past," said Haas. "I just look to the future."

Olympic film due in February at cost of millions

By LAWRIE MIFFLIN
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The numbers reflect the enormity of Bud Greenspan's undertaking: He has 830,000 feet of film to edit. To watch it straight through would take more than seven days and nights. It has taken eight people eight weeks just to log it, which means to screen it and make a list of what material is on each segment of each reel.

But Greenspan is nothing if not ambitious. This film — the official film of the 1984 Summer Olympics — will be finished in early February, having been produced, directed, written and nurtured in every way by Greenspan, even to the point of his assuming the $3 million production cost, with a partner, when 20th Century-Fox backed out last spring. It will be distributed first in foreign countries, as a two-hour theatrical film, then Greenspan will expand it into a television mini-series for sale abroad and in this country. But in this country, it can't be shown until after next Aug. 12, because ABC-TV has the exclusive rights to any Olympic footage shown in the United States until one year after the closing ceremonies.

Yet there is little sense in considering ABC's production as competition to Greenspan's. That would be like wondering if weight lifters could perform the subtle maneuvers of gymnasts on the balance beam. ABC produced 180 hours of film of the Los Angeles Olympics, most of it live; about 3,300 people were required for the domestic production, and the production costs were estimated at more than $100 million. Greenspan is not producing something live; he had 160 people working for him, including only 18 cameramen, and his budget is about $3 million. He isn't interested in razzle-dazzle documentation; he is interested in the emotional subtleties of human endeavor.

"I can't ask an audience to sit and watch a repeat of what ABC did," he said. "Everyone who watched the Olympics on television and then sees this film will say to himself, 'Geez, where was I when that happened?' We're making a document that will last forever."

That doesn't sound immodest to anyone familiar with Greenspan's track record. This film is the latest link in the long association of Greenspan and his late wife, Cappy Petrash, with the Olympics, an association that includes his 22-part series, "The Olympiad," and numerous other documentaries distinguished for their elegant, intelligent approach to athletes' stories.

"We're storytellers — we don't just recount events, we find the intriguing scenarios," Greenspan said. "For example, I want to tell the story of the men's gymnastics team through the eyes of Peter Vidmar and his coach from UCLA, Mako Sakomoto, a Japanese man who stayed on in this country an extra three years just to help Peter make it to the Olympics. When Peter won the individual silver medal, for Mako it was something just as special as for Peter."

To translate such a story to film, Greenspan not only kept a camera's eye on Sakomoto during the Olympics, but also filmed him carrying his gym bag through an empty Pauley Pavilion, the arena where Sakomoto did his college coaching and where the American gymnasts won their Olympic medals.

Also in contrast to ABC Sports, Greenspan feels no compulsion to focus primarily on the home team.

"I'm not going to show Americans and Americans and Americans."

Landry may sit Springs

DALLAS (AP) — Fast-improving reserve Timmy Newsome could be the Dallas Cowboys' starting fullback over veteran Ron Springs Sunday against the St. Louis Cardinals, Coach Tom Landry said on Tuesday.

Newsome has been impressive in Dallas' 4-1 start with his running and receiving.

"Right now both are equal to each other," Landry said at his weekly press luncheon. "Ron has played well but he has been hurting. I haven't decided yet but Newsome could start."

"Newsome gives us good pass receiving and is our strongest runner," Landry said. "He's a powerful back and he can block. He does a good job."

On another topic, Landry said injured wide receiver Tony Hill, who has missed a month with a separated shoulder, could be back for next week's National Conference Eastern Division showdown with Washington.

"If Tony works well this week he could come back," Landry said. "However, you never know what a shoulder is going to do after it has been hit."

Landry said being the division leader right now doesn't mean much.

"It doesn't mean a heck of a lot because Washington is still the team to beat," Landry said.

He said there was no comparison between the 1984 Cowboys and last year's version which started 5-0.

"Last year we were just looking for the next Washington game," Landry said. "We were not playing very well but pulling out games with skill. This year we are not as skilled. We are having to scratch and fight for what we get."

Landry is still displeased with the Cowboys' running game. It's been eight games dating back to last season since Tony Dorsett has gained 100 yards.

"Our blocking is not what i would like," Landry said. "I'm not concerned yet. I've seen signs we are going to break out of it.

"We are having a year where one person breaks down every game. It's somebody different all the time. We'll just have to keep going until we put it all together," he said.

Asked about the poor day middle linebacker Bob Breunig had trying to tackle Chicago's Walter Payton in Dallas' 23-14 victory, Landry said Breunig was bothered by injuries.

"Bob played on courage because his bad back was still stiff," Landry said. "He was not moving as well as normal. He's very valuable to our defense because he coordinates things so well."

Rookie Eugene (The Hittin' Machine) Lockhart had played well in the two games Breunig missed.

Evert Lloyd outlasts Leand

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (AP) - Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd had a tough time Tuesday in disposing of unseeded Andrea Leand 6-4, 6-4, in an opening round match in the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Los Angeles tennis tournament.

Evert Lloyd, who lost in the finals of this tournament last year to Martina Navratilova, opened the match with a service break and took a 3-0 lead in the first set, but Leand rallied to tie it at 3-3 when Evert Lloyd doule-faulted three straight times in the sixth game.

But the veteran Evert Lloyd held on to sweep the sets, winning the second set on the strength of a service break in the ninth game with the score at 4-4.

POLL

Permian, runnerup by a narrow margin last week, replaced pre-season favorite Longview, although the Lobos also remained undefeated with a 27-3 victory over Tyler Lee.

Longview, 4-0, had been the season-long No. 1 selection but dropped to second place this week by a 205-198 point total. Permian nabbed 13 of the 22 first-place votes, while Longview had only six.

Permian and Longview have had two common opponents in their four games this season: Fort Worth Eastern Hills and Abilene High. Permian beat Eastern Hills 55-7 and Longview won 38-14. Longview blanked Abilene 21-0.

Permian defeated Abilene 40-14 last week.

Houston Yates and Houston Madison remained in the third and fourth spots on the Class 5A list and Plano held onto its No. 5 ranking.

There were no upsets among the 4A ranks as Bay City remained a solid first place pick with 20 first place votes to one each for second place Gregory-Portland and No. 3 Huntsville.

New Braunfels and Beeville remained fourth and fifth.

Tenth-ranked Brownwood took an open date last week and found itself nudged out of the top 10 to be replaced by Monahans, 4-0 in the No. 10 position.

Monahans blanked perennial playoff contender Lubbock Estacado 24-0 last week.

Daingerfield defeated Clarksville 45-0 and remained the top vote-getter in 3A with 21 of the 22 first-place votes cast. Runner-up Navasota got the other first place vote but trailed Daingerfield 219-183 in points.

Littlefield edged ahead of Sweeny into the No. 3 position and Sweeny fell to No. 4. Port Isabel remained in the fifth spot.

Pilot Point held a strong lead in 2A with 19 first-place votes and a 215-172 point lead over No. 2 East Bernard.

Hamlin, eighth last week, switched places with Farmersville and Mart and Alto retained the Nos. 9 and 10 spots.

Wrigleyville packed for NLCS

CHICAGO (AP) — "Ticket to Heaven," read the T-shirts outside Wrigleyville — home of Wrigley Field, the Chicago Cubs and thousands of fans who turned out Tuesday for the first game of the National League playoffs against the San Diego Padres.

But with scalpers reportedly asking $250 a ticket for box seats, many Cub fans were content just to gather around the field and soak up the carnival-like atmosphere. There were streets lined with souvenir stands, bleachers stacked atop apartment buildings and car wash bays converted into parking lots.

The game didn't start until 1:25 p.m. CDT, but by 10:30 a.m. thousands of fans were jamming the streets.

At a McDonald's restaurant across the street from Wrigley Field, owner Ernie Cochanis said he expects his business to be up 50 percent during the playoffs.

Kemp once a different NY Giant

By RAY CORIO
NY Times News Service

QUESTION: Did Rep. Jack Kemp ever play for the Giants? How good a quarterback was he as a pro?

Although he was with the Giants in 1958, when Charlie Conerly and Don Heinrich were the regular quarterbacks, Kemp was only a member of the taxi squad and never played in a game for New York. His best season as a professional came in 1960, after he signed as a free agent with the Los Angeles Chargers in the first year of the American Football League. He led the league with 211 completions in 406 attempts for 3,018 yards and 20 touchdowns. Kemp led the Chargers to the title game again in 1961, then was sold to Buffalo after the 1962 season and, with less impressive passing statistics, helped the Bills win AFL championships in 1964 and 1965. Five years later, he was elected to the House of Representatives as a Republican from upstate New York.

QUESTION: In the closing seconds of a pro football game, Team A trails by a touchdown and faces a fourth down on the Team B 10-yard line. On the next play, the quarterback drops back, then scrambles, looking for an open receiver in the end zone. Just before he throws the ball, he inadvertently crosses the line of scrimmage, and an official drops a penalty flag. Meanwhile, in the end zone, the intended receiver is knocked down before he can attempt to catch the pass, and an official there drops a penalty flag. If time runs out, is the play run over because the two penalties offset each other, or is the ball spotted on the 1 because of the pass interference penalty in the end zone?

Normally, a game cannot end on a double foul on the last play of the game. But in this case, the game will be over because there is no double foul; the officials will not recognize a pass interference penalty on an illegal pass.

QUESTION: During his years pitching in the National League, which teams did Robin Roberts defeat most often and did any teams beat him more often than he beat them?

In a 19-year career (1948-66) that saw him win 286 games and lose 245, Roberts spent 16 years in the National League, his first 14 with Philadelphia and his last two with Houston and Chicago. Roberts, a right-hander, had a 244-209 National League mark that included winning records against Pittsburgh (40-25), St. Louis (39-28), Chicago (36-24), Cincinnati (35-24), the Braves (34-30), the Mets (1-0) and the Phillies (1-0). Only against the Dodgers (29-45) and the Giants (29-33) did Roberts lose more games than he won, but one of those victories over the Dodgers, in Brooklyn on the last day of the 1950 season, gave the Phillies the pennant.

QUESTION: On appeal plays in baseball involving runners who miss bases, does someone get credit for the putout? How about assists?

The putout will go to the player who tags the base and assists will go to the other fielders involved in getting the ball there, since the out is considered a continuation of the play.

QUESTION: How does a baseball player become eligible for a Gold Glove?

The Gold Gloves are given each year to the players voted the best at their positions by the managers and coaches in his league, and it does not always reflect the player who handled the most chances with the fewest errors at the position.

In order to qualify for the fielding title at a position, infielders and outfielders must play there at least two-thirds of the scheduled games (108 of 162), catchers must appear in half the games (81) and pitchers must pitch at least 162 innings. If more than one pitcher qualifies without making an error, the title goes to the one who handled the most chances.

Reds go in the red

BASEBALL — The Cincinnati Reds reported the club lost approximately $4.5 million during the 1984 season marking the fourth straight season the club has lost money.

The Reds, who declined to release any other figures, said Sunday's final game drew 21,213 fans to Riverfront Stadium, pushing the season total for home games to 1,275,887, an average of 16,358 for 78 home dates. The total was an increase of 85,468 fans over the 1983 home attendance of 1,190,419...

FOOTBALL — Disagreement over control of a USFL team resulting from a proposed merger between the Oakland Invaders and the Oklahoma Outlaws has resulted in a collapse of merger talks, owners of both teams said.

Outlaws General Manager Bill Tatham Jr., who along with his father owns a franchise without a home, said he will seek another team with which to merge.

Tatham said the Outlaws would neither fold nor return to Tulsa, Okla., where the Outlaws played their first season earlier this year...

TENNIS — Hans Schwaier of West Germany upset Czechoslovakia's Tomas Smid, the No. 4 seed, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 in the first round of the $225,000 Count of Godo tennis tournament in Barcelona, Spain.

No more taxis for Olajuwon

HOUSTON (AP) — Akeem Olajuwon's first visit to Houston was in the backseat of a taxi.

Arriving from his native Nigeria for a visit to the University of Houston, Olajuwon was instructed by Cougar Coach Guy Lewis to take a cab from the airport to the UH campus.

Lewis wasn't giving any star treatment for an alleged 7-footer he'd never seen.

Olajuwon, of course, was for real as he led the Cougars into the NCAA Final Four tournament three consecutive years and finished his college career among the top rebounders and shot blockers after to play the game.

But that's all a part of Akeem "The Dream's" legend now that Olajuwon has moved across town from the Houston campus to The Summit, were he now works for the National Basketball Association Houston Rockets.

And his new Mercedes now keeps Olajuwon out of taxis.

The next phase of Olajuwon's dream begins Thursday night when the Rockets open their preseason schedule in San Antonio against the Spurs.

The Rockets were so pleased to get their "Twin Towers" lineup they staged a game-condition scrimmage Tuesday night in the Summit to display Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson.

The two played on the same team with Olajuwon scoring 24 points and Sampson hitting 23.

Olajuwon couldn't be happier that he had to move no farther than across town to begin his pro career.

A coin flip made Houston lucky winners of the first pick for the second straight season and the Rockets didn't hesitate to grab Olajuwon to join 1983 No. 1 pick Ralph Sampson.

Olajuwon said his biggest adjustment would be the daily grind of games.

Groundbreaking held for medical center

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Attracting doctors to West Texas is the goal behind the construction of the Texas Tech University Regional Academic Health Center in Odessa, said Dr. J.T. Hartman, dean of the university's school of medicine.

Hartman, speaking Tuesday at a press conference before the official groundbreaking for the facility, noted that this area has one of the lowest ratios of doctors per capita in the U.S.

"This is an area that is desperately underserved by medical professionals," said Dr. Lauro E. Cavazos, Texas Tech president.

The development of the residency program already operating in Odessa is expected to attract medical school graduates in need of a place to serve their residency. According to statistics quoted by Hartman, most residents completing their terms commonly settle within 70 miles of where the training occurred.

The $2.5 million Phase I structure should be ready by late next year. In addition to the family medicine residency program that welcomed its first class in July, Cavazos said the facility would eventually provide for a full range of medical, nursing and allied health programs.

Funding for the first phase has been provided, but construction of future phases planned to make the center a full-fledged medical school hinges on decisions in upcoming legislative sessions.

Requests to the legislature are for $2 million in 1986 and another $2.6 million in 1987.

State Rep. Jay Gibson, a member of the House Appropriations Committee, said the legislature was looking at a "tight state budget," including $1 million in cuts to programs.

"While it's a tight budget, these things that are considered essential to a community will be considered favorably," said Gibson.

State Sen. John Montford promoted the passage of Proposition II, an amendment to the Texas Constitution, which he said was important to future funding of projects like the Odessa center.

Noting the importance of medical developments in Texas, State Rep. Tom Craddick also suggested legislators would "look favorably" on projects like the center.

The entire project, made up multiple phases, is not expected to be complete before 1990. "A lot remains to be seen before a definitive timetable is set up," said Cavazos.

"I think we would be looking at it in regard to needs," added Dr. Nathan Galloway, a member of the Texas Tech Board of Regents.

Phase I plans call for a two-way communication link with other schools and facilities in the state, classroom and office space, and a medical library. Future phases would expand the library, the communications system, a multi-story office tower, out-patient clinics and a research facility.

Five medical school graduates began their residency in July in the family medicine program. Plans are to add residency programs in obstetrics, gynecology and pediatrics as the center expands over the next several years.

Also proposed is a four-year college course preparing graduates for nursing careers (Two-year programs are already available at Midland and Odessa College). Private funding is being sought for this program, with an estimated cost of $300,000 for its first two years.

Doggett: Gramm ignores waste dump problem

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

West Texas is being treated as a wasteland in the federal government's search for a nuclear waste dump site, the Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate charged this morning.

During a news conference at Midland County Democratic headquarters, Lloyd Doggett painted Republican candidate Phil Gramm as turning his back on West Texas and the nuclear waste dump problem.

Doggett, in his first visit to Midland in the senatorial campaign, also noted that he is running behind Gramm in the latest poll and said he supports repealing the Windfall Profit Tax.

The Texas state senator from Austin said Gramm "has done everything in his power to help the giant, Eastern nuclear utilities put their garbage here in Texas."

Texas has two sites included on the list of nine areas the Department of Energy is considering as nuclear waste dumps. Those are near Tulia — which Doggett was planning to visit today — and Hereford. Both are situated in the middle of farmland and near an aquifer that provides water for a large segment of West Texas, he said.

Instead, the Republican cast a vote to exclude Mississippi from the list, charged the Democrat.

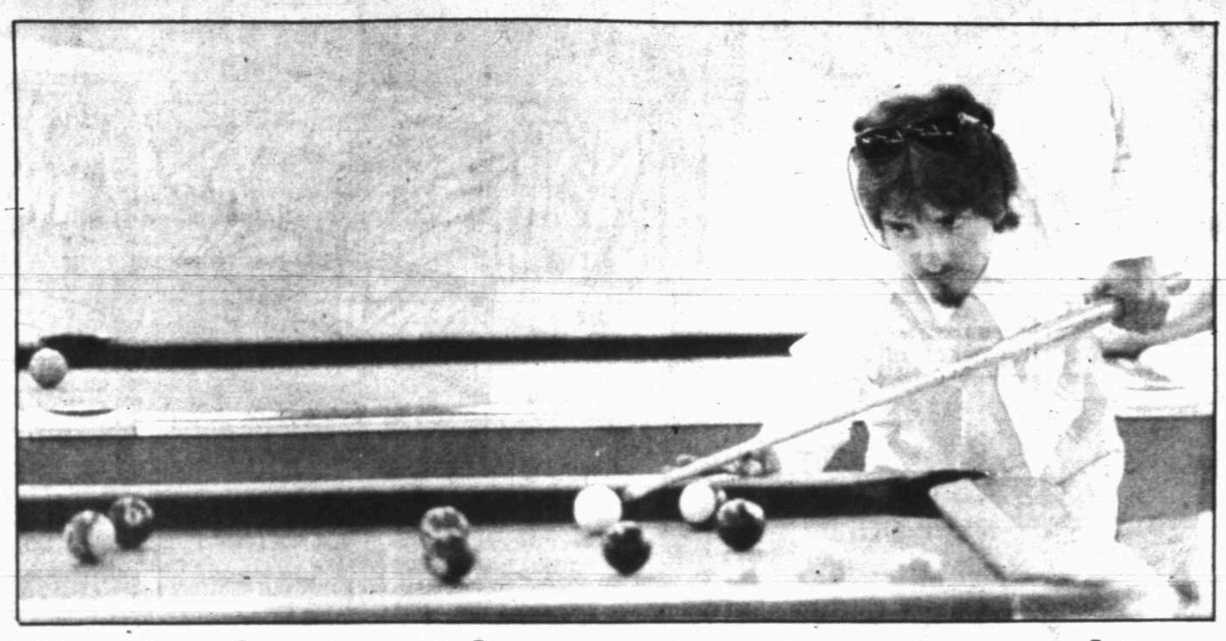

Gramm's campaign is a question of consistency and trust, said Doggett. "Gramm is unwilling to come to West Texas and face reporters as to why he opposed states rights to veto a nuclear dump site."

According to Doggett, Gramm has been campaigning on the basis that he opposed the dump sites in Texas, and that Energy Secretary Donald Hodel told a Houston audience Texas was removed from the list due to Gramm's efforts. Doggett argued that his staff hasn't located evidence of Gramm's opposition and the Hodel comment had a political motive.

The last poll in the U.S. senate race was released a week ago by Texas Insight and showed Doggett trailing Gramm by six points. The Democratic presidential ticket fell behind the Republican by about 27 points, Doggett said.

"We'll continue to trail until just before election day," Doggett said of his campaign. "And then we'll take over."

He agrees with Gramm's stand to deregulate natural gas and to repeal the Windfall Profit Tax. But in this case it's a matter of "who can be the best leader," said Doggett. "Having a senator who's a fighter makes a difference."

Local youth centers popular again

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

In the past, youth activity centers were considered to be a dying breed.

But two Midland youth centers are experiencing a rebirth in popularity, and those involved insist it will be permanent.

The Midland High Youth Center, 1001 W. Illinois and Lee High Youth Center, 3500 Neely, were closed in May 1983 due to lack of financial support and use by the students.

But according to Amy Simper, director, the centers have reopened under a new set of guidelines and long term goals.

"When the school district opened both campuses two years ago, they (the youth centers) subsequently lost a great number of students because they couldn't compete with McDonalds.

Last May, however, a group of mothers showed interest in reopening the centers for special events and recruited volunteers to paint and refurbish the buildings to accommodate students during the lunch hour, after school and for special weekend events," she said.

Now, MYC and LYC are attracting hundreds of students daily providing them with a wide-range of activities including ping pong tournaments, a peer tutoring program, trivia clubs, break dancing contests and weekend dances.

Also, a snack bar, ping pong tables, pool tables, video games, television sets, magazines, and stereo systems are available for student use during the lunch hour.

"The centers provide an alternative to going off campus or eating lunch in the school cafeteria. We encourage students to bring their own lunch and we also have designated areas for organizations to hold their club meetings.

"They (the centers) are especially convenient for students who don't have transportation, she said.

According to Mrs. Simper, the average daily attendance at MYC and LYC varies between 150-200 students. Attendance for weekend dances ranges from 250 to more than 700 students.

"Attendance is much above our expectations. The students are very enthusiastic particularily in regard to the dances.

"At first, it was confusing to the students considering what they were used to in the past. Now they're getting used to the facilities and we're seeing a very good blend in attendance," she added.

Bush prepares to reveal income tax returns

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Vice President George Bush, preparing to reveal three years of personal income tax returns, today expressed sympathy with Geraldine Ferraro about controversy over her finances and said, "I hope everybody's insatiable curiosity is resolved" with his own disclosure.

Bush, a millionaire twice over, planned to release details of his taxes late in the day.

At a news conference before a campaign appearance, he was asked if there would be any surprises revealed in his taxes. "I hope not. I hope not. I hope not," he said.

"I hope everybody's insatiable curiosity is resolved," the vice president added.

Asked if he thought such curiosity was improper, he replied, "I think it's understandable...particularly in a campaign year. Appropriate? I suppose so."

Asked if his experience made him sympathetic with Ms. Ferraro, the Democratic vice-presidential candidate who endured more than a week of controversy over release of her tax information, Bush replied, "Yes, yes, I think it does. I can understand that."

Bush had long maintained he could not release his income tax returns because the disclosure would violate secrecy provisions of a blind trust into which he placed his finances to take them out of his control and protect against any appearance of conflict of interest.

After questioning by reporters on taxes, Bush sought permission from the Office of Government Ethics to change the terms of the trust so that he could reveal his taxes.

Under the old arrangement, Bush's taxes were prepared and signed by the manager of the blind trust, and the vice president said he did not see the returns and was not even allowed to ask about them.

Former Midland jail inmate sues Smith

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Stewart Mann, a former Midland County Jail inmate who now is serving two sentences for robbery and theft at the Texas Department of Corrections, is suing Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith and former Jail Capt. Bennie Cureton for several alleged civil rights violations.

Mann is charging Smith and Cureton, now Smith's chief deputy, from operating a "totally ineffective" grievance procedure to his being denied coffee, cigarettes, hot showers and use of the law library in violation of his rights.

Mark H. Dettman, first assistant Midland County attorney, doesn't agree with Mann's viewpoints.

"I think," Dettman said Tuesday, "Stewart Mann's complaints concerning his conditions of incarceration in the Midland County Jail align more closely with the pursuit of trivia than with the redress of constitutional deprivations."

Commitee requests more time to come up with house plan

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

In the continuing match between the Museum of the Southwest board of trustees and the Save the Lancaster House Committee the ball has rested in the committee's court since Friday. At that time, the museum board gave the committee a week to come up with a plan to move the Lancaster House and 90 working days to carry it out.

The committee replied Tuesday with a request for six weeks rather than a week to assemble necessary information to present a plan to the board.

"We just don't have enough time to find out if we can find a piece of land," said Harris Kerr, committee spokesman. "We don't have enough information on whether the house can be moved, and we don't have enough information on whether we have the funds to move the house because the museum's step would invalidate every pledge we've solicited."

When contacted about the request, Terry Wilkinson, president of the museum board of trustees, said the board is planning to meet informally today to make a decision on the time extension request.

"They've already had over 90 days," Mrs. Wilkinson said. "We gave them a one-week exclusive and now we will give them the same length of time as we give other interested parties." She did not know what the deadline would be.

Committee members worked "almost non-stop" over the weekend including Kerr's flying to Austin to talk with a restoration architect. Committee members have met with different house movers to find out the cost of moving the house.

"The house could conceivably be moved for $38,500, the amount of the bid the museum got, but that doesn't address all of the associated costs," Kerr said. "A local Midland mover estimated it would cost $60,000 to remove and replace the stone veneer on the house, that it would cost approximately $40,000 to dig a new basement because the house has to have a basement or you have to put in complete new duct work throughout the house. The air conditioning and heating duct work is in the basement.

"Our architects tell us that we ought to reserve a big sum of money, they don't even know how much yet, in the tens of thousands of dollars, to take care of interior damage if the house is moved. This house has plaster walls and, if you move a house with plaster walls, the walls all just go to pieces. So we have to do the interior completely over again, if it's even possible to move it."

Committee members are dedicated to preserving the Lancaster House, Kerr said. The house was once the home of Naomi Lancaster, a longtime cultural leader in Midland. However, the committee may discover it cannot raise the resources necessary to move the home.

"It does seem kind of ridiculous to even consider moving the house 40 feet, 50 feet, 100 feet to the west which is what we're considering doing — moving it to Haley Park — when it may cost $200,000 to move it that distance and it would have only cost $100,000 to restore it to the point where the Midland County Historical Museum could have used it."

Proposals being considered by the committee include several possible requests of City Council, such as, moving the Lancaster House to Haley Park or the City Council allowing the museum to expand to Haley Park and leaving the Lancaster House where it is.

"The museum already owns considerable expansion space," Kerr said. That space includes the parking lot directly west of the museum.

"I think they could get permission from the Haley Museum and from the residential owners on Indiana Street to close K Street, that would give them more land," Kerr said. "And the fact of the matter is they don't need the land where the Lancaster House sits for any purpose right now. They just want it vacant."

The committee has requested time on the city council agenda. "One week isn't enough time to find out if the City Council will give us some land or let us buy land. Those kind of things take multible readings."

In addition, committee members have to return to all those who have given pledges to find out where they stand. "All of their pledges were conditioned on the house being maintained where it is," Kerr said.

As far as committee members are concerned, Kerr said, "The proposal the museum has come back at us with is basically no different than what they started this summer out with. They're going to have somebody take the house off the land at no cost to the museum. They're just giving us the chance to do it rather than their general contractor. That's certainly not much change in their position."

Midland teen-ager dies from injuries suffered in two-car accident

From Staff Reports

A 17-year-old Midland woman died early this morning from injuries suffered in a two-vehicle accident at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday in the 400 block of South Midland Drive.

Lisa Lynette Drennon of 4622 Pasadena, was hospitalized with possible head injuries and a fractured leg. She was pronounced dead at MMH at about 3:30 a.m. today.

The driver of the other vehicle, Robert Lee Wilson, 25, of Odessa, was treated for facial and nose contusions and released from MMH, a hospital spokesperson said.

According to Lt. Jim Colburn of the Midland Police Department, the report was not completed by 9 a.m. today but it looked like the accident "was almost a head-on."

Midland police have idenitified the body of a 33-year-old man found Tuesday morning lying in the street at the intersection of Atlanta and California. His name is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The man, who had apparently died sometime Monday night, was found at about 9 a.m. Tuesday. Dr. Martha Madsen, Midland pathologist, ruled the death accidental. The man apparently died by aspirating and choking to death, Colburn said.

Identification found on the body identified him as a resident of Michigan but he apparently had family in Midland, Colburn said. Police investigators were able to track the man's steps from a house to the street.

A house fire at 3303 Maxwell Tuesday afternoon caused heavy damage to a kitchen and smoke damage to the house, according to fire reports.

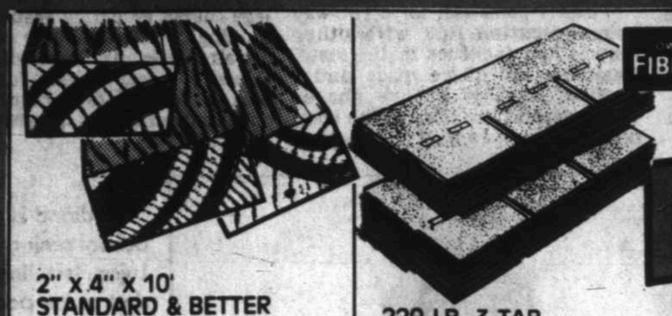

Eleven firefighters responded shortly before 4 p.m. to the blaze at the home of Bill Swindle. The fire, extinguished with 150 gallons of water, apparently was caused by kitchen stove burners which were left on.

Rosemary Fino of 107 E. Francis, told police a cable television converter and remote control valued at a total of $250 were taken from her home sometime Tuesday afternoon.

Camera and photography equipment valued at $437 were reported stolen from the trunk of a vehicle owned by Jose Azuaje of 1606 E. Garden Lane. The theft apparently occurred while a friend had parked the car in front of a residence in the 600 block of North Terrell Sunday.

Support group for women with endometriosis to meet

From Staff Reports

Once called the career woman's disease because of its predominance in women who put off having children until later, endometriosis is now thought to be one of the most common health problems among women under the age of 50.

Some studies estimate 10-15 percent of all women in their childbearing years suffer from the disease.

A support group for women with endometriosis will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at Midland Christian Church on the corner of Andrews Highway and Cuthbert. Local residents with endometriosis will help lead the discussion, which will provide an opportunity for women with the disease to share their concerns.

A member of the medical community will present an overview of endometriosis.

The most common symptoms of endometriosis, a disease in which tissue that lines the uterus is found outside the uterus, are pain before or during the menstrual period, pain during or after intercourse and irregular menstrual bleeding.

Although it has been identified in women since the late 1800's, endometriosis is thought by doctors to be on the increase during the past 20 years as more women have put off having children until a later age.

Because interrupting the menstrual cycle is thought to retard the progress of the disease, the old treatment for endometriosis was pregnancy. But for some victims — some studies incidicate as many as 45 percent — the disease causes infertility.

But as more women have been identified with the disease, so have the studies into treatment. About 40 to 50 percent of the victims require surgery while some patients may receive hormonal treatments.

For more information about the free information-sharing session, contact Mary Hurt at 686-0676.

Town seems unopposed to tax hike

ANTHONY (AP) — Residents of this tiny West Texas town may be handed a 66 percent increase in their property taxes next week, but not too many people seem to mind.

And Anthony Mayor Adrian Baca says that's because "this is the first time, in the 11 years that I've been involved with Anthony, that anyone has asked for a tax increase."

The planned tax increase was announced Tuesday night at an emergency public hearing.

Baca said the increase in taxes, which would raise residents' property taxes from 21 cents per $100 valuation to 35 cents, "is needed. We need to provide better services for this community and pay for them."

Only a handful of Anthony residents attended Tuesday's public hearing and those at the meeting did not voice any opposition to the proposed tax increase.

Baca and three council members predicted the tax boost would be approved next Tuesday when the town council votes on the proposal.

Baca said the new rate still would mean Anthony residents would be paying less in property taxes than their neighbors in nearby El Paso, where people pay 53 cents per $100 valuation.

"On a $45,000 home in El Paso, they pay $238 in taxes," Baca said. "Right now, people in Anthony would only pay $94.50 for the same home. With the new rate, we will pay $157.50 in taxes for a $45,000 home."

INMATE

Mann's case is to be tried before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton next week in federal court in Midland.

Mann, a general contractor who said he was making $3,000 a month, is to represent himself in the trial before the judge. Dettman is to represent Smith and Cureton.

Mann, who has been fairly active in penning complaints and enlarging on his grievances from the penitentiary, initially had admonished "the court" and defendants Smith and Cureton for their "indifference" in not providing him with copies of responses to his grievances.

"I AM NOT offering derogatory comments to the court," Mann wrote. "I respect the U.S. District Court in every regard. However, I do feel a measureable degree of indifference, if not hostility, toward me by the court. I have great difficulty accepting this...I feel that 'due process' and 'unrestricted access to the courts' are perhaps terms somewhat loosely construed."

But Dettman noted that in compliance with federal rules, Midland County furnished Mann with copies of responses and other documents on the case filed in federal court.

Mann wrote that it serves "absolutely no purpose" for him to write the court and file complaints unless he gets responses and guidance from the court.

Mann filed his complaints, and Dettman responded to them:

Denied use of law library. Mann complained he was denied access to the law library.

"He was represented by counsel," Dettman said of Mann's court-appointed attorney.

Nevertheless, Mann, whose alias is Jack Simpson, complained that he was having "numerous legal difficulties."

No Saturday mail. Mann said he was not getting mail on Saturdays.

"There's no constitutional right to six-day mail delivery as opposed to five-day mail delivery," Dettman said.

Taking cold showers. Mann suggested that other inmates were getting warm and hot showers but that he was taking cold showers.

"There's hot water for everybody in the jail," said Dettman, "unless the hot-water heater breaks down."

No workouts. Mann said he was denied "any opportunity or facility for physical exercise" and that other inmates were allowed to exercise and lift weights on a daily basis.

"He had the opportunity to exercise," said Dettman, who cited simple calisthenics. Dettman noted that trusties are allowed use of weight-lifting equipment in the jail's "bull pen" and that other inmates can exercise at will in their cells and in the day rooms.

—Denied medical attention. Mann complained that on one occasion, in December 1983, the county physician did not examine his back; Mann said he had complained of a back pain to a jailer. Mann argued that it was the responsibility of Smith and Cureton to "provide (him) prompt and competent medical care...equal to and as timely as that afforded other inmates."

"He was given medical attention," noted Dettman.

No coffee, no smokes. Mann indicated he was dissatisifed with the sheriff's policy of not allowing him and other inmates to smoke tobacco or drink coffee or to partake of "special foods."

Dettman noted that the sheriff has taken coffee off the menu because it is a "stimulant and lacks nutritional value." The sheriff does not allow smoking in jail due to the "potential fire hazard." No one, including inmates, jailers, deputies, lawyers and guests, is allowed to smoke in the jail.

However, trusties — working inmates — may smoke or drink coffee if they're outside the jail on a work detail.

Food portions. Mann further complained that food at the Midland County Jail is "below standard" in "quantity rather than quality."

"We have never had anybody suffer from malnutrition during their incarceration in the jail...to my knowledge," Dettman said. "I wouldn't doubt the portions are a little smaller than those in the outside world." But he suggested that the inmates' activity usually is minimal. "The quality of food up there is excellent."

'Strip cell' is for punishment. Mann contended that the jail's padded single cell is "operated under the premise of being for psychiatric and physically uncontrollable inmates" when, in fact, it is operated "as a punishment cell."

"We have a padded cell," said Dettman, "but we don't use it for punishment." The padded cell is for the mentally disturbed inmate who in cases may be stripped of his clothing for his own protection, he said.

No fire-escape route. Mann complained that jail has no fire-evacuation route. Dettman said that is not the case. He said an inspector for the Texas Commission on Jail Standards routinely inspects the jail's escape routes in case of fire.

Understaffed jail. Mann contends the jail is short on staffing. In fact, said Dettman, the jail maintains a better ratio of jailers to inmates than that (1 to 48) required by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

On mail, counting and computers. Mann complained that some inmates — trusties — take inmate head counts, hand out the mail and have access to computers. Dettman said those are not the cases. The computer is in the courthouse basement, while the jail is on the fifth floor of the courthouse. He said trusties may assist in taking roll and in handing out mail.

Inventor tried over new fuel

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan's science advisor said he discounted the claims of a British inventor after tests on an alleged revolutionary new fuel revealed nothing but impure water.

George Keyworth, whose office is responsible for development of national science policy, testified in the federal trial of Ronald A. Lasteed, the British inventor who claimed to have developed a secret formula for water-based fuel that could shake the world economy.

Lasteed, who is represented by flamboyant attorney F. Lee Bailey, is charged with conspiracy to defraud Dallas oilman Al G. Hill, nephew of Dallas oil billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt, and other potential investors, of $10 million through his fuel venture.

During questioning by U.S. Attorney James A. Rolfe, Keyworth said that federal officials did not prematurely dismiss Lasteed's claims and that he asked for a demonstration of the fuel's potential, even though Lasteed did not satisfactorily explain the fuel's development.

Odessa student arrested for sexual assault

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 17-year-old Permian High School senior was free this morning on $5,000 bond after his arrest for the Sunday night aggravated sexual assault of a Medical Center Hospital patient.

Reginal Timothy McNeil, 17, Odessa, turned himself into police at 9:15 a.m. Tuesday. According to police reports, he admitted to raping the 21-year-old woman in her hospital bed and was a part-time employee of the hospital.

McNeil was linked to the alleged attack after detectives compared hospital employee records with a description of the suspect, who the victim said was wearing a hospital ID card.

The woman picked McNeil's employee photo from a line-up, prompting officers to seek a warrant for his arrest. He was released from jail Tuesday afternoon after the bond was posted.

A man entered the victim's third-floor room about 9:30 p.m. Sunday and sexually assaulted the woman after telling her he had a knife, according to reports.

The suspect's father, Rev. R.T. McNeil, is a member of the hospital's board of managers and president of the Committee for Redress, Unity, Concern and Integrity at All Levels — the southside group opposing the Ector County Independent School District in their desegregation suit. He was recently named chairman of the tri-ethnic committee, which was called for in the federal court order to oversee the district's desegregation efforts.

Great Menus For Today's Lifestyles

Whether it's a picnic in the park, luncheon on the terrace, or a backyard barbecue, Americans young and old are in love with eating out-of-doors on the balmy days of summer and early fall. Here are featured distinctive menus for those sunny days or indoor dining year-round.

Barbecued Alaska Salmon†
Potatoes Roasted In Coals†
Mixed Green Salad
Fresh Fruit

A special treat for the barbecue is salmon from Alaska. And there's good news that this premium fish is now in good supply. Whole, dressed salmon, averaging 3 to 5 pounds, will offer a good value for consumers and they will be more widely available fresh or frozen nationwide.

Grilled to perfection over glowing coals, Alaska salmon is a grand selection for your next outdoor festivity. For a larger group, grill a whole fish or have it filleted. You can fillet the fish yourself following the basic directions shown here. For small groups, you may wish to purchase salmon steaks or individual fillets.

Suggested here is a recipe for a buttery basting sauce that is an ideal complement to the moist and tender flesh. Just remember not to let salmon overcook. It is ready to enjoy when the flesh flakes when tested with a fork; a general rule is to cook it 10 minutes per inch of thickness measured at the thickest part.

You can prepare the hot foods on the barbecue when you serve Potatoes Roasted In Coals. Wrapped in foil and roasted, all-purpose Russet potatoes from Washington State are served with a zesty salsa topping, a tasty addition to this alfresco feast. Washington State Russet potatoes cook up moist and fluffy due to their high solids content and are the ideal year-round baking potato.

Barbecued Alaska Salmon

2 whole (about 1-1/2 lb. each) Alaska salmon fillets
Salt and pepper
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
1/4 cup lemon juice
4 teaspoons grated onion
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1/2 teaspoon bottled hot pepper sauce
Oil

Rinse salmon fillets and pat dry. Sprinkle each fillet with salt and pepper. Combine remaining ingredients except oil; brush fillets with butter mixture. Place each fillet, skin-side down, on a sheet of well-oiled heavy-duty aluminum foil*; place on grill over hot coals. Cover barbecue or make a tent of foil to cover each fillet. Barbecue 10 minutes per inch of thickness measured at its thickest part or until salmon flakes easily when tested with a fork. Baste frequently with butter mixture. Makes about 12 servings. Recipe can be halved.

Potatoes Roasted In Coals

6 (about 10 oz. each) Washington Russet potatoes
Oil
Salsa

Scrub potatoes; rub with oil. Pierce several times with fork. Individually wrap potatoes in oiled heavy-duty aluminum foil*; seal securely. Place directly on hot coals; cook about 1 hour or until tender, turning every 15 minutes. Remove potatoes from foil. Cut or pierce tops of potatoes lengthwise; squeeze ends and push toward center to open. Spoon about 1/3 cup Salsa into each potato. Makes 6 servings. Recipe can be doubled.

Salsa: Combine 1-1/2 cups chopped tomato, 1/2 cup each chopped onion, chopped cucumber and diced green chilies, 1 tablespoon each chopped green onion and olive oil, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 3/4 teaspoon garlic salt, 1/4 teaspoon crushed oregano and dash pepper. Makes 2-1/4 cups.

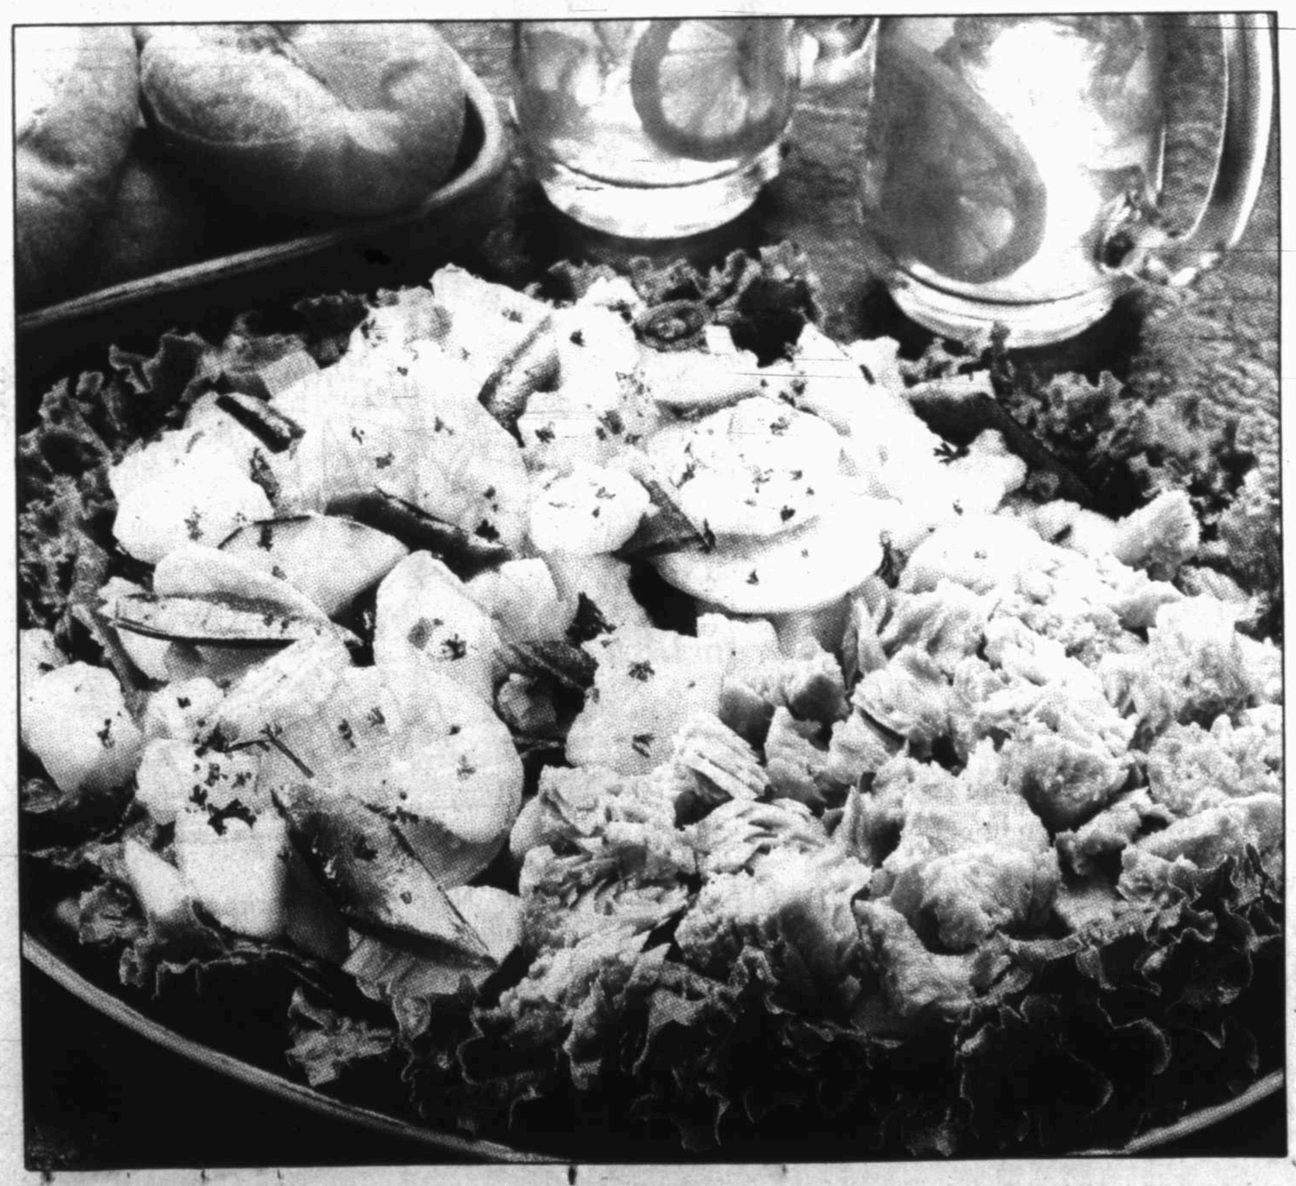

Tip: Top Salsa-filled potatoes with dairy sour cream or plain yogurt.

*Double layer of regular aluminum foil can be substituted.

1. Place dressed fish with belly toward you. With a very sharp knife, cut through flesh from end of cavity back through to base of tail.
2. Insert knife blade flat against backbone and cut along backbone through back of fish from head end to tail on top side of fish, severing ribs and top piece from backbone.
3. Lay top piece aside. Remove backbone from remaining side by inserting knife under backbone and repeating lengthwise cut, leaving as much flesh on fillet as possible.
4. With a smaller knife, trim away rib and fin bones from both pieces. Pull out pin bones, if desired.

Salad Supper

This menu is equally at home served to honor the sunset on your own patio or throughout the year indoors as a prime example of today's lighter approach to foods. In Salmon Vegetable Potato Salad, chunks of rich, moist canned salmon accompany a fresh vegetable-laden potato salad marinated in tangy Caraway Dressing. Select the best vegetables from your garden or supermarket. Washington State Russet potatoes offer pleasing contrast in texture and their ability to absorb the dressing intensifies this harmonious blending of flavors.

Salmon Vegetable Potato Salad†
French Rolls and Butter
Ice Cream with Seasonal Fruit Chocolate Brownie Fingers
Iced Tea

Alaska canned salmon is an unbeatable choice for a wide variety of tasteful recipes that can be prepared in minimal time. Wonderful right from the can, Alaska canned salmon combines with other ingredients in appetizers, soups, sandwiches and entrees. It's always ready to serve and may be found in a variety of can sizes to meet every need...3-3/4 ounce, 7-1/2 ounce, 7-3/4 ounce and 15-1/2 ounce cans.

Salmon Vegetable Potato Salad

1 pound warm, cooked Washington Russet potatoes
Caraway Dressing
1 cup each cut sugar snap peas, thinly sliced yellow squash and sliced, quartered cucumber
1/4 cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons each minced green onion and parsley
Salt and pepper
1 can (15-1/2 oz.) salmon, chilled
Lettuce

Peel potatoes; slice 1/4-inch thick. Marinate in 1/2 cup Caraway Dressing; cool at room temperature. Add sugar snaps, squash, cucumber, celery, green onion and parsley. Salt and pepper to taste. Chill if desired. Drain salmon; break into chunks. Arrange on lettuce-lined platter with potato mixture. Drizzle remaining Caraway Dressing on salmon. Makes 4 or 5 servings.

Caraway Dressing: Combine 1/2 cup olive oil or oil, 1/3 cup white wine vinegar, 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1/4 teaspoon each sugar, salt and chopped or crushed caraway seeds and dash pepper; mix well. Makes about 1 cup.

Variation: One cup Chinese pea pods, blanched peas, sliced zucchini, sliced carrots, broccoli flowerets, cherry tomatoes, olives, sliced green beans or green or red pepper strips can be substituted for sugar snap peas, yellow squash and/or cucumber.

To Boil Potatoes: Scrub potatoes. Add potatoes to 1-inch boiling, salted water; return to boil. Simmer, covered, 20 to 30 minutes or until tender. Drain thoroughly.

To Bake Potatoes: Scrub potatoes; rub lightly with oil. Pierce several times with fork. Bake at 400° F. 50 to 60 minutes or until tender.

THE BUTCHER

Benito among world's best butchers

By MERLE ELLIS

To say that Benito is a butcher is an understatement. Benito Plasschaert is a truly great butcher. He has won more awards than any other butcher in the world — over 270 — in national and international competition, including the Golden Oscar, the highest honor in meat competition.

Benito, his lovely wife Nadya and daughter Sonny, run a little market in Ghent, Belgium, where they sell wine, cheese, Nadya's casserole dishes, salads and Benito's specialty, prepared meats.

Benito makes more than 300 different meat products "with natural material, fine spices and love." His pates have won top honors not only in Belgium, but in France, Holland and Denmark.

I had the pleasure of (to use his words) "making acquaintance with Benito" a few weeks ago a the American Association of Meat Processors convention in New Orleans. Benito was there to judge the American Meat Platter Competition and to demonstrate meat platter design and presentation.

I was there to learn from Benito, whose customer list includes the Kings of Belgium, Holland, and the folks at Buckingham Palace. I did, indeed, learn!

It's not likely that you or I will be entertaining royalty in the near future, but some of the little tricks I learned from Benito can help make your next gathering seem like a royal affair.

You don't need expensive silver trays to make beautiful presentations of cold meats. Benito uses mirrors. Mirrors add dimension to a meat platter display — a gleaming depth that you wouldn't get even on a silver platter.

He recommends buying meats from a service delicatessen where you can have them sliced to your specifications. Most of the pre-packaged supermarket meats are too thick to fold nicely for platter presentation. There also is much more varity of color and texture in the meat available in most deli departments.

Allow a quarter pound of meat per person when you're planning a meat platter and buy with an eye toward contrast and/or shading of color and texture. A row of deep red dried beef or blood sausage may be all it takes to turn a platter of ham, bologna and cheese from blah to beautiful.

Most meat looks better on the platter if it is folded or rolled rather than flat. Benito demonstrated a variety of ways meat slices may be folded to add to the design of a platter. Simply folding them gently in half gives more dimension. Or, they may be folded in thirds or quarters.

Some slices might be rolled into cylinders or cones for added variety and visual interest. With a little practice, you'll be able to turn a few thin slices of salami into something that looks like a rose.

Garnish is important in the presentation of any food, but when it comes to meat platter competition, it is critical. Nothing is allowed that is not edible. At home, of course, you can use plastic flowers and frilly toothpicks if you want but, with a little practice, you can do wonderful things with real foods.

For example: Carefully peel a tomato, keeping the peeling in one continuous spiral. Then roll the tomato peel into a curl and fan it out slightly to make it look like a flower.

Benito also made something similar — and equally edible — out of butter.

Take a one-pound block of butter and chill it until it is firm. Then round off the edges to shape the block into a cylinder. Cut thin slices from the cylinder and use them for petals to create spreadable, edible flowers of butter. What better garnish for a platter of meat designed to be used for sandwich-making at an informal party.

All of this sounds a bit complicated, but it isn't really.

The winner of the 1984 American Meat Platter Competition was a young lady by the name of Martha Johnson, from Nevada City, Calif. Three years ago, she didn't know what a display platter of meat looked like.

Then she saw one of Benito's demonstrations, did a bit of interim entertaining (rehearsed) and walked away with top honors in the National competition in 1983. She did the same in 1984!

If you're ever in the Gold Country of California, stop at Nevada City and see Martha at P.J.'s Meats. She'll happily share some of her award-winning secrets.

And, should you ever get to Belgium, make it a point to "make acquaintance" with Benito — the most award-winning butcher in the world.

Pie made for 'mochaholics'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Mochaholic is a new word. I have just coined it. Why? Because I think it is as appropriate as the word chocaholic.

Mochaholics are people who constantly seek recipes that include both coffee and chocolate. They can't resist the combination.

Give them a Mocha Ice Cream Soda (coffee syrup with chocolate ice cream, milk and club soda) or a Mocha Sundae (coffee ice cream with chocolate sauce) and they're in heaven. Or serve them a chocolate souffle or mousse topped with coffee-flavored whipped cream and they will call you a superb cook.

To satisfy this group of mochaholics here is a recipe for Mocha Pecan Pie.

MOCHA PECAN PIE

2 tablespoons instant coffee powder
¼ cup boiling water
Two 1-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate
2 tablespoons butter
4 large eggs
½ cup sugar
1 cup dark corn syrup
1½ cups coarsely chopped pecans
Unbaked 9-inch pastry shell

In a 1-quart saucepan dissolve coffee powder in boiling water. Add chocolate and butter; over low heat stir constantly until chocolate and butter are melted and mixture is smooth. Cool slightly.

In a large bowl beat eggs slightly with a wire whisk. Beat in sugar and corn syrup until blended. Gradually stir in chocolate mixture until well mixed. Stir in pecans. Pour into pastry shell.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a knife inserted halfway between the outside and center comes out clean — 40 to 45 minutes. Cool on a wire rack. Serve with a garnish of whipped cream; if you like, pass extra whipped cream.

Swordfish steaks baked in oven

SWORDFISH STEAKS

Choose 2 swordfish steaks, each weighing about 1 pound and 1 inch thick. Place steaks in a single layer in a shallow baking dish (about 12 by 8 by 2 inches). Sprinkle with salt and paprika to taste. Dot with 4 tablespoons butter. Bake uncovered in a preheated 400-degree oven until fish flakes easily with a fork and is opaque through — about 20 minutes. Makes 4 servings. —(AP)

Home-baked bread nutritious

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

People who care about good nutrition are more likely to bake their own bread. There's no need to check the label for ingredients, and you know it's fresh.

Besides, for those who have the time, bread-making is a very satisfying activity — digging your hands in and kneading the dough, savoring the aroma of yeast and then of the baking loaves. It's warm and homey and old-fashioned-feeling. And fun.

Whole grain bread is an important source of carbohydrates, protein, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and iron. If you're watching your weight, there's no need to give up your daily bread. A typical slice contains only about 70 calories. But a pat of butter or margarine will add about 50 more, as will just a tablespoon of jam. Eat your bread — it's good for you — but eat it plain.

Following are some baking tips to get you going, and two recipes for wonderful, aromatic, healthfully homemade bread.

— Dough should rise in a warm (80 to 85 F) place, without drafts. A car with the windows rolled up is not a good place to leave your dog, but it's great, on a warm day, for getting your dough to rise!

— Always preheat the oven to the temperature called for in the recipe. Adjust rack to center of oven. If baking two loaves, leave 2 inches between the pans to let heat circulate around them.

— As soon as bread is done, remove from the pan to prevent sogginess. Let cool on a wire rack.

— Bread baked in a shiny metal pan will take longer to cook than that baked in a dull metal pan. If you're using glass pans, reduce temperature by 25 degrees.

— When refrigerated, bread undergoes a chemical change causing it to go stale sooner. Instead, it should be stored at room temperature.

WHOLESOME WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

2½ cups unsifted whole wheat flour
2½ cups unsifted unbleached white flour
¼ cup each wheat germ and non-fat dry milk
1 pkg. active dry yeast
1¾ cups water
¼ cup brown sugar, packed
¼ tsp. salt
¼ cup vegetable oil
Melted butter and sesame seeds, if desired

In bowl, combine flours, wheat germ, dry milk and yeast. Pour water into smll saucepan; stir in sugar and salt to dissolve. Add oil and heat to 120 to 130 F. Pour into large bowl and add flour mixture, a little at a time, stirring with wooden spoon. Add enough flour to form soft dough, then turn out onto floured board. Knead, adding more flour as necessary to prevent sticking, about 10 minutes. Dough should be smoother and elastic. Place in large oiled bowl, then turn over so that top side is oiled. Cover with damp cloth and let rise in warm place until doubled, about 1 hour. To test, poke index finger ½ inch into center fo dough. If indentation remains, dough has doubled. With fist, punch down center of dough. Divide into two equal portions; cover and let stand 10 minutes. Shape into loaves and place in two oiled loaf pans. Cover lightly with damp cloth and let rise in warm place about 45 minutes. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with sesame seeds, if desired. Place in preheated 375 F oven and bake 30 to 35 minutes.

Makes 2 loaves.

SWEDISH ORANGE-RYE BREAD

4 cups water
¼ cup molasses
1¼ tsps. caraway seeds
2 tbsps. vegetable oil
2 tsps. minced orange peel
1 pkg. active dry yeast
6 cups whole wheat flour
1 tsp. salt
Approximately 4 cups rye flour

Place first five ingredients in large pot, stir and bring to boil. Let boilfor 3 minutes. Allow to cool to lukewarm, then stir in yeast. When yeast is dissolved, stir in whole wheat flour, a little at a time, with wooden spoon, to form soft dough. Cover pot with damp towel and let dough rise in warm place for 1½ hours. Add salt and rye flour, a little at a time, kneading to make stiff dough. Cover pot with damp towel and let rise again for 2 hours. With fist, punch down center of dough; knead slightly. Shape into three loaves and place into lightly oiled bread pans. Let rise, covered with towel, ½ hour longer. Bake in preheated 350 F oven for 45 minutes.

Makes 3 loaves.

Relish made with anchovies

ANCHOVY RELISH

6-ounce can pitted ripe olives, drained
7-ounce jar roasted sweet red peppers, drained
2-ounce can anchovy fillets, drained
2 tablespoons olive oil
Garlic clove, finely chopped
½ cup parsley leaves, finely chopped (¼ cup)

Slice olives. Cut peppers into ¼-inch wide short strips. Cut anchovies crosswise into ½-inch pieces. In a bowl stir together olive oil and garlic; fold in olives, peppers and anchovies. Cover tightly and chill to allow flavors to blend. Serve at room temperature; sprinkle with parsley. Makes 2½ cups. —(AP)

New cookbook crop on way to stores

Hearst Feature Service

If you have children, it seems like it's always your turn to send a treat to school, to church or to youth group meetings. While chocolate chip cookies might be everyone's favorite, sometimes it's nice to have something different, and maybe something not so loaded with sugar. Luckily, "S.N.A.C.K.S.: Speedy, Nutritious and Cheap Kids' Snacks" (NAL, $6.95), by Jan Brink and Melinda Ramm, comes to the rescue.

This little book is chock full of traditional snack ideas, which use more wholesome and natural ingredients than their store-bought counterparts, as well as some brand new ideas you've probably never thought of.

Many of the recipes are perfectly packable for school lunches, while others make great after school snacks the kids can prepare themselves. There's a slew of ideas for Halloween treats made without sugar, including Warm Cheese Popcorn, Nut Butter, Chewy Nut Bars, Carob Clusters, Banana Pom Poms, Eggnog, Watermelon Whoppee, Pumpkin Munchkins, Nut Clouds and Apricot Mousse — to name a few. You'll love this book and so will your kids.

— "The Zucchini Cookbook," by Helen and Emil Dandar, has 136 recipes for gardens running over with California's most prolific veggie. The $2.95 price is right for this no-frills book, written by two senior citizens who write specialty cookbooks as a second career.

There are recipes for soups, pancakes, breads, cakes, salads, main dishes and casseroles. There's even a recipe for zucchini blossom appetizers.

For a copy send $2.95 plus 65 cents for postage and handling to Sterling Cookbooks, P.O. Box 16, Penndel, PA 19047.

— "The Cuisine of Cathay" (Chopping Board, Inc., $29.95), by Genia Lee, is such an exquisite book I'd be afraid to take it into the kitchen — it's more like a coffee-table book.

Actually, the over-sized (9-by-12-inches) book is difficult to manage — who's got room on their counter for a book of this size. I don't know whether to call it comprehensive or overdone. There's everything here you ever wanted to know about Chinese cooking and everything you didn't want to know about Chinese cooking. Once you weed through the whole thing, it does, however, have a terrific glossary and great recipes for traditional Chinese favorites — Spring Rolls, Hot and Sour Soup, Lemon Chicken, Peking Duck, Szechuan Shrimp, Moo Shu Pork and Stir Fried Noodles, as well as some lesser known dishes.

— We've got plenty of warm weather ahead of us and "Simply Delicious Cold Dishes" (Doubleday, $16.95), by Carol Truax, offers 400 recipes for cooling soups, salads, main dishes, sandwiches and desserts. Best of all, many of the recipes are for make-ahead meals which allow the cook to get out of the kitchen and in a cool spot with everyone else.

— The "Joy of Gardening Cookbook" (Garden Way Inc., $17.95), by Janet Ballantyne, is one of the most useful books published this season. From asparagus to turnips, this handy guide lists each vegetable in alphabetical order, gives harvesting tips, yield, a cooking timetable and dozens of recipes for appetizers, soups, salads, side dishes, main dishes and even desserts.

Under broccoli, for example, you'll find Broccoli Feta Cheese Log, Broccoli Tarragon Soup, Broccoli and Barley Salad, Broccoli and Fish with Lemon Sauce, Broccoli Souffle Roll and Broccoli-filled Chicken Breasts, to name a few. There's also a chapter on new vegetables that covers Jerusalem artichokes, celeriac, fennel and kohlrabi. Gardeners and fresh vegetable lovers will want a copy of this book.

— "Cuisine of California" (Marmac, $9.95) is a collection of recipes from famous California restaurants. The book includes recipes covering the whole gamut of cross-cultural dishes that make dining out in California such a pleasurable experience. There's Mrs. Knotts Buttermilk Biscuits, Abalone Soup from the Carnelian Room in San Francisco, Green Corn Tamales from Tortilla Flats in Laguna Beach, Sukiyaki from Miyako's in Pasadena, Linguini Pescadori from the Rogue in Monterey, Vickman's famous Strawberry Pie, Cafe Mousse from The Crow's Nest in Santa Cruz and Carl's Jr. Bleu Cheese Dressing — all the things you've wished you could duplicate at home. To order a copy, send $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to Triple M Company, P.O. Box 720114, Atlanta, GA 30358.

— Boating and camping require their own special kind of cookbook. "Cooking on the Go" (Sail Books, $14.95), by Janet Groene, is just that. The recipes call for ingredients that can be stored for several weeks — mostly canned or freeze-dried.

Groene is experienced in this type of cooking, having spent 10 years aboard a sailboat in the Caribbean. The recipes are easily adapted to recreational vehicles and hunting and fishing camps. There's even a chapter on make-ahead dishes, including a recipe for fruitcake that keeps for up to 25 years.

If you're interested in this type of cooking, the book is available at bookstores or by sending $16.50 to Botebooks, Box 248, DeLeon Springs, Fl 32028.

— "Japanese Cooking for Health and Fitness" (Barrons, $12.95) by Kiyoko Konishi is the most comprehensive Japanese cookbook I've seen.

The Japanese diet, lower in fat and cholesterol, is high in nutrition and low in calories. The easy-to-follow instructions and full-color photographs take the mystery out of this cuisine.

Peking suffers shortage of favorite food

PEKING (AP) — Westerners often find it tasteless and spongy, but to the Chinese it's a staple food, an Oriental cheese delicacy that is a chief source of protein — when it can be found, that is.

"Doufu" is hard to find according to the China Daily, because there is no incentive for higher output since the Communist state maintains doufu's traditional low price despite rising energy and raw material costs, the paper said.

To make the offwhite-colored foodstuff, manufacturers soak and mash soybeans in water, filter away the heavy residue that becomes pig feed, then boil the milky mixture with chemicals until it coagulates.

The result is a jelly-like substance, sold in blocks for about 10 cents a pound.

It's usually sliced into a bouillon and served as soup, or cut into cubes and fried with other vegetables. Sometimes hot spices are added in the processing. Last year, factories in Peking made 67.3 million pounds of doufu, one-third more than in 1979. But even with ration coupons, it was not always available at state groceries. Each city resident is allowed 1.5 pounds a month of the most popular kind.

DEAR ABBY

Fire prevention makes sense year-round

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: Last year in the United States, 6,137 people died in fires. The total loss in property alone came to $6.43 billion.

In Canada there were 675 fire-related deaths. The property damage was $998.89 million.

This is Fire Prevention Week, and although fires occur throughout the year, each season has its own special fire hazards. Here are some tips for all seasons:

FALL: If you enjoy camping, select a tent made of flame-resistant fabric. Pack a reliable flashlight with plenty of extra batteries to light the inside of your tent — never use matches or candles. When building a campfire, place it downwind of your tent. And NEVER try to hasten the burning by using gasoline or other flammable liquid starters.

If you use your fireplace, have your chimney professionally cleaned in the fall to make sure it's in good condition for the coming season.

WINTER: More fires occur during winter than in any other season. The reasons: home heating and the holiday season.

If you use a portable heater, be sure it is placed away from combustibles — draperies, furniture, paper, etc. Remember, the surface heat of some portable heaters may reach 500 degrees, so keep a careful watch on your children and warn them to keep away from heaters. Hospitals are treating an increasing number of patients with burns resulting from contact with the outside surface of some portable heaters.

For a Merry Christmas, choose a Christmas tree that does not have shedding needles, and keep it standing in water while it is in the house. If you choose an artificial tree, choose one that is flame-resistant.

After holiday parties, before retiring, check your ashtrays for smoldering cigarette butts, and carefully examine all upholstered chairs and sofas to make sure that no "live" cigarette butts have fallen between the cushions. Remember, most house fires occur between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m., when people are sleeping.

SPRING: Take spring cleaning seriously — clean out your attic, basement, garage and workshop. Throw out trash, especially combustibles such as rags, newspapers, magazines, boxes and scraps of wood. Never smoke while fueling gas-powered lawn mowers or chain saws. If you must store gasoline, store it in a ventilated area in a can designed especially for that purpose. And store oily rags and paint in a cool place in tightly sealed metal containers.

SUMMER: When cooking out, NEVER use flammable liquids near live coals. An explosion or flash fire could result. When you've finished cooking, soak the coals with water and make absolutely sure they're out when you leave. Smoldering coals that appear to be "dead" can reignite as much as a day later. If you use a propane gas grill, always have the lighted match in position before turning on the gas.

Some tips for all seasons:

— Never smoke in bed.

— Never leave invalids or small children alone in the house — not even for "a few minutes."

— Never use flammable liquids for dry cleaning indoors.

— Have periodic fire drills in your home to be sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire.

— Keep easy-to-use fire extinguishers in your kitchen, cottage, back bedrooms and on your boat. And if you can afford smoke detectors, install them and be sure that they are always dust-free and in working order.

— The phone number of your fire department should be taped to every telephone in your house. If it isn't, should a fire occur, don't waste time trying to find it; get out, and call from a neighbor's house. And once you are out, stay out. No treasure is worth risking your life for.

It took less than three minutes to read this column. Was it worth it? I hope so. — ABBY

Recipes for 'Arabian Night'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A recent soft cover cookbook, "Recipes for An Arabian Night" by David Scott, includes "traditional cooking from North Africa and the Middle East" and has a good deal to offer. I found information and recipes in it I had not come across — or had inadvertently passed by — in other cookbooks covering Scott's territory.

For example, recipes for the sophisticated Armenian yeast rolls, Choereg, call for "mahlab," used in ground form to flavor the dough. I have found mahlab in specialty food shops, but no one could ever tell me exactly what the spice was. Although Scott does not include a Choereg recipe, his book's glossary describes mahlab as a "Syrian spice prepared from the stone of the black cherry." Enlightenment at last.

Another short chapter in the book gives basic ingredients and methods. Then come chapters on Mezze (Hors D'Oeuvre); Soups; Breads; Pies and Savory Pastries; Salads; Fish; Meat and Poultry Dishes; Grains, Beans and Lentils; Stuffed Vegetables; Desserts and Sweet Pastries; and Drinks.

LEBANESE FISH WITH CHICK PEAS

19-ounce can chick peas
1¼ pounds fish fillets (½-inch thick)
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ cup chopped onion
1 garlic clove, crushed
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon caraway seed
¼ teaspoon ground coriander
3 tablespoons lemon juice

Drain and reserve liquid from chick peas; reserve chick peas separately.

Place fish in a single layer in an oiled shallow baking pan.

In a medium skillet heat 1 tablespoon of the oil. Add onion and garlic. Cook gently until onion is transparent. Push to side of skillet. Add and heat remaining 1 tablespoon oil. Add paprika, caraway and coriander. Stir over medium heat for about 10 seconds. Add reserved chick peas. Stir well and cook for about 1 minute. Spoon over fish.

Add lemon juice and reserved chick pea liquid to skillet. Stir over medium heat, scraping drippings from bottom of pan for about a minute. Pour over fish. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 400-degree oven until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork — 15 to 20 minutes. Pass a pepper mill.

Makes 4 servings.

Herb garden 'magical place' for cooks

Hearst Feature Service

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. — The herb garden at the Berkshire Garden Center here is a magical place to inspire even the least ambitious of cooks.

The fresh herb products sold at the center — sauces, dressings, vinegars — delight the palate. And now you can take some of this magic home and recreate it in your own kitchen, as the garden center members have published their own cookbook, "The Herb Cookbook of the Berkshire Garden Center." The cost is $4.20, and it is available by mail order from the garden center, Stockbridge, Mass. 01262, (413) 298-3926.

The cookbook was published this year as part of the 50th anniversary celebration of the garden center.

Some of the recipes are similar to the time-honored ones created and sold by the volunteer group, the Herb Associates, whose members cultivate and harvest the garden center herb garden to make and sell fresh herb foods for the center's benefit. They raise several thousand dollars each year this way.

Large handful of tarragon leaves
Several sprigs each of parsley, chives and basil

Three-quarters cup salad oil

Whirl spinach leaves in a blender, add tarragon, parsley, chives and basil. Add egg, one-quarter cup salad oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Turn motor on low; remove cover and slowly add three-quarters cup of salad oil. Refrigerate until needed.

Here's one of the cookbook's collection of no fewer than five recipes for boursin contained in its chapter on hors d'oeuvres:

HOMEMADE BOURSIN

Sixteen ounces cream cheese, softened
Eight ounces whipped butter, softened
Two cloves garlic, crushed or pressed
One-half teaspoon oregano
One-quarter teaspoon basil
One-quarter teaspoon dill weed
One-quarter teaspoon marjoram
One-quarter teaspoon thyme
One-quarter teaspoon black pepper

Mix cream cheese and butter thoroughly at high speed of an electric mixer. Add the remaining ingredients and let flavors mellow in refrigerator overnight. Serve at room temperature. May be frozen.

CHICKEN BREASTS WITH HERB MOUSSELINE SAUCE

Two large whole chicken breasts, halved, boned and skinned
One-quarter cup dry white wine
One-quarter cup water
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Two egg yolks
One-quarter cup whipping cream
Two tablespoons chopped fresh herbs, mixed (tarragon, basil, savory, chervil and/or parsley)
Fresh lemon juice to taste

Place chicken in small saucepan to fit snugly. Add wine and water and season lightly with salt and pepper. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer about 10 minutes. Set aside and keep warm.

In a non-aluminum double boiler, combine egg yolks with cream and one-quarter cup cooling liquid from chicken. Place over simmering water and stir vigorously with whisk until sauce is thick and creamy. Add herbs and lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste.

Drain chicken, transfer to heated platter, and cover with sauce. Serves four.

CUCUMBER SALMON MOUSSE WITH DILL SAUCE

One envelope unflavored gelatin
One-quarter cup cold water
One chicken bouillon cube
One-half cup boiling water

One teaspoon salt
One-quarter teaspoon pepper
Two cups cooked salmon (or canned salmon, drained and flaked)
One large cucumber, seeded, peeled, and chopped fine
One-half cup sour cream

Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling water. Add to gelatin, stirring until dissolved. Cool. Stir in mayonnaise, Worcestershire sauce, onion, lemon or lime juice, salt and pepper. Blend until smooth; chill until it sets.

When set, beat until foamy light, then fold in salmon, cucumber and sour cream. (If desired, the salmon mixture may be blended smooth in a blender.) Turn into oiled one-quarter mold and chill several hours or overnight. Serve garnished with cucumber slices or tomatoes. Pass dill sauce. Serves four.

DILL SAUCE

One egg
One-eighth teaspoon salt
Dash black pepper
Four teaspoons lemon juice
One-and-a-half teaspoons onion, grated
Two tablespoons dill, finely cut
One-and-a-half cups sour cream

Mayo Clinic: Chicken soup good for cold

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Grandma was right when she prescribed hot chicken soup for the common cold, according to the Mayo Clinic.

The Mayo Clinic Health Letter recently gave a strong endorsement to the traditional remedy, saying the soup should be homemade with spices, noodles and other ingredients.

"Many physicians continue to regard the reputed healing effects as either a hoax or, at best, an unproven remedy," but "we believe chicken soup can be an excellent treatment for uncomplicated head colds and other viral respiratory infections," said the letter.

"Although the pharmaceutical industry makes huge profits from (many different) cold remedies ... aspirin and hot beverages seem most effective in reducing symptoms. ... Among hot beverages, we know of nothing better than leisurely sipping a bowl of steaming chicken soup."

Why chicken soup rather than a cup of coffee or hot tea?

Dr. Joseph Kiely, medical editor of the letter, said the story began with a 1978 study at Mount Sinai Hospital in Miami Beach, Fla., where doctors found that chicken soup did a better job than hot water alone of clearing mucus from nasal passages.

This nasal clearing not only helps a person feel better, but gets rid of a lot of virus, he said, and that may help the body's natural defenses gain the upper hand, although there is no proof that this actually speeds recovery.

Doctors then began writing in medical journals that at least they had been helped with chicken soup. "These are mostly tongue-in-check reports, but half-serious, too," said Kiely.

"Chicken soup tastes good when you feel crummy and don't want to eat anything else," he said, adding that the nourishment alone is a big help. He said doctors talk jokingly of trying to isolate the "chicken soup factor" from the many chemicals in the soup, but a dash of tender loving care may help, he said.

The Mayo Clinic Health Letter specifically recommends "the homemade variety with chicken parts, vegetables, herbs, spices and noddles."

Snacking between meals not necessarily bad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new television season is bringing its glow into American living rooms and that means hours of trying out new shows — and their traditional accompaniment, snacks.

Nibbling between meals has developed into one of the nation's most popular pastimes, and one that has acquired a bad reputation among dieters and dieticians.

That doesn't have to be the case, however, says Dorothy Van Zandt, a food specialist at the University of Maryland.

"The idea is to have as nutritious snacks as possible, not high-caloric, no-nutrition snacks. Snacks are not bad, if you include them in planning your days' diet," she said in a telephone interview.

"Snacks are a nutritional nightmare if you rely only on vending machines. But if you opt for between-meal pick-me-ups that are rich in protein, vitamins or minerals, you are helping out your body," she said.

This is the time of year for cider, Ms. Van Zandt pointed out, which can be enjoyed hot, cold or mulled with spices.

Other nutritious snacks she suggested include:

—Blend one small or medium carrot with a cup of unsweetened pineapple juice and a couple of ice cubes for a carrot-pineapple drink.

—Serve fruit kabobs of dried fruit on skewers or toothpicks. Dip the fruit into pineapple or citrus juice to prevent darkening.

—Toast raisin bread and spread with peanut butter; or spread cream cheese on a date-nut roll.

—Freeze unsweetened applesauce in small paper cups.

Famed French restaurant opens only branch in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — A dream came true for a sumo wrestler's son when the Tour d'Argent, one of France's greatest restaurants, opened its first and only branch overseas here.

He is Yoneichi Otani,68, president of the New Otani Hotel, where the 400-year-old restaurant recently began serving Japanese gourmets attracted by its reputation as one of the few to consistently get top, three-star rating from the authoritative Guide Michelin.

Equally impressive, to many Japanese, is the fact that Emperor Hirohito has twice dined on the Tour's specialty, pressed duckling, on his first European tour as crown prince in 1921 and more recently in 1971.

Otani spent more than $4 million to reproduce the picture windows, paneling, chandeliers, paintings, carpeting and Louis Seize furniture of the Paris original.

The opening celebrated the 20th anniversary of the hotel, begun by Yoneichi's father, a veteran of the traditional sumo wrestling ring which features men grown to enormous size through enthusiastic eating and drinking, much in the way Peking ducks are force fed for the Chinese table.

Normally, when sumo wrestlers retire, they head stables of younger wrestlers. Yoneichi's father, happily for Japanese lovers of French food and wine, didn't make the grade.

"He wasn't good enough to head a wrestling stable," said Yoneichi over a companiable glass of Pommery brut royal, "so he went into the hotel business."

He died three years after the hotel opened and Yoneichi has run the show since, opening a new 42-story tower and enlarging its capacity to 2,100 rooms, which he says makes it the biggest hotel in Asia.

He got the idea of bringing the Tour d'Argent to Tokyo after dining there himself and then meeting one of its executives on a flight to Tokyo.

French restaurants are not new to Tokyo. The craze for French cuisine erupted a decade ago and since then at least 200 big and little restaurants, their chefs trained in Paris, have been established. Maxim's was the first to open a branch here.

Intricate and exhaustive negotiations took place before the Tour's president, Claude Terrail, consented.

"I was against it," he said at a press preview luncheon. "There were too many problems."

One of them was the availability of fresh fruit, vegetables, meat, fish and fowl. He sent his Grand Chef, 32-year-old Dominique Bouchet, here to check out the markets. He discovered what most Japanese already know, that few countries excel Japan in those departments. Special items, like truffles and ducklings from Nantes, will be flown in daily.

Otani wanted the restaurant so badly he didn't carry out the usual market survey to find out whether it will be profitable.

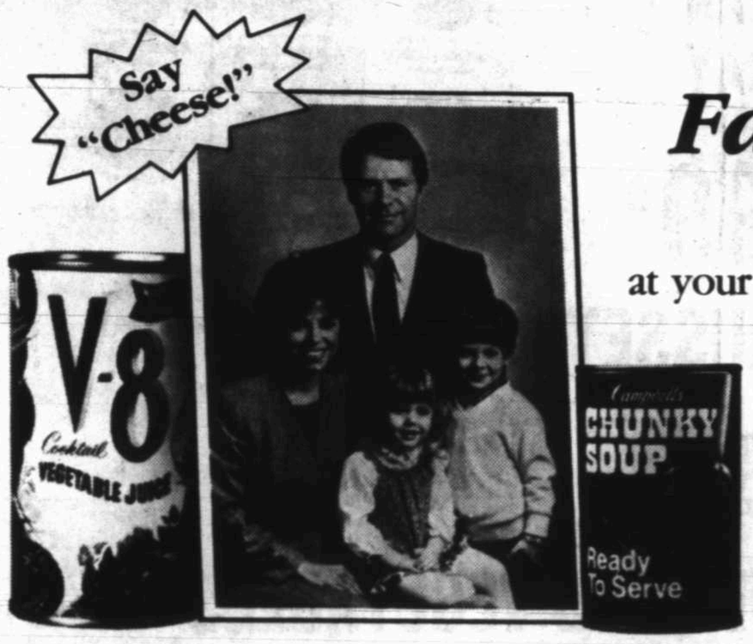

"Actually, I don't expect it to make a profit," he said. "It will more than pay for itself by adding to the hotel's prestige."

He even discounted the popularity among his Japanese clients of the pressed duck.

"It has a sauce made from the duck's blood," he said. "Most Japanese believe in Buddhism, which frowns on blood dishes."

The Emperor, who appears to have had none of these qualms, in 1921 got the 53,211th pressed duckling in the Tour's history and, like all patrons, received a souvenir commemorating this fact. By the time he got around to his second visit, 50 years later, the consumption of pressed duckling had risen remarkably. His number was 423,900.

Cookies made with chopped pecans

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

AFTERNOON REFRESHER
Pecan Cookies
Iced Tea

PECAN COOKIES
¼-pound stick butter
¼ cup sugar
1 large egg, separated
1 tbsp. grated lemon rind
1 tsp. lemon juice
1¼ cups shifted cake flour
¾ cup pecan halves, finely chopped

In a medium bowl cream butter and sugar. Beat in egg yolk, then lemon rind and lemon juice. Gradually stir in flour until blended.

Chill dough, covered, until firm enough to handle. Using a level tablespoon for each, shape cookies into balls. Beat egg white slightly and dip balls in it, then in pecans.

Place about an inch apart on a buttered cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until firm and nuts are lightly browned — about 20 minutes. Remove with a wide spatula to a wire rack to cool.

Makes about 1¼ dozen.

Whole hominy featured in breakfast dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

One of the most interesting foods to serve at brunch has been widely used for years and years in the United States, but mainly in the South and Southwest. Oddly enough, its virtues have not been discovered all over the country.

I'm talking about canned whole hominy, white and golden. If it's not in your markets, ask for it.

BACON, EGGS AND HOMINY
4 slices bacon
½ cup chopped (medium fine) onion
½ cup chopped (medium fine) green pepper
One 14½-ounce can white or golden hominy, drained
4 large eggs
Pepper to taste
½ to 1 cup shredded (medium fine) cheddar cheese

In a 10-inch skillet over low heat fry bacon, turning as necessary, until crisp. Drain bacon on paper towels, crumble and reserve.

Pour off all the drippings in the skillet except 1 tablespoonful. Add onion, green pepper and hominy; cook gently, stirring often, until onion is yellowed.

In a small bowl beat eggs enough to blend yolks and whites; add pepper. Pour over hominy mixture; sprinkle with reserved bacon. Cover and cook gently until eggs are almost set. Sprinkle with cheese; cover and let stand off heat until eggs set and cheese melts. Serves 4.

Fresh vegetables have many uses

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

As the years pass, my taste for meat has been slowly decreasing.

I still like a Sunday roast and have yet to turn down a juicy steak. But meatless days are becoming more common, which I'm told is not a bad thing after one passes middle age.

My favorite foods now include fresh vegetables that I just about tolerated in my younger days. I not only find them tasty, but a vegetable plate can be a thing of beauty, covering a wide range of hues.

Think of ruby-red tomatoes, white cauliflower and golden corn when you are hungry. Or orange carrots and the wide range of greens, such as beans, peas spinach and bell peppers.

This preoccupation with vegetables has prompted me to learn about different types and how to choose them. If you are a vegetable buff, try this meatless stew.

MEATLESS STEW
2 medium potatoes, pared and cubed
2 carrots, pared and sliced
½ pound cauliflower, cut in flowerets
2 ribs of celery, sliced
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
2 medium onions, sliced
1 red pepper, cut in strips
1 clove of garlic, minced
1 can (13¾ ounces) chicken broth
2 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chopped, fresh dill or 2 teaspoons dried dill weed

Combine all the ingredients in a 3-quart baking dish. Cover and bake in 350-degree oven for 1 hour, until the vegetables are tender. Serves 6 to 8. Good with a chilled dry white wine.

To obtain other recipes, taken mostly from Tom Hoge's writings over the past years, send $2 for a copy of "101 Recipes" to Gourmet Corner, AP Newsfeatures, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020.

Sherry: Right wine for almost any course of meal

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Choosing the right wine to go with dinner has always been a challenge. Do you serve wine with the salad? What wine goes with chocolate, or pickles? What's best with turkey? The questions are endless and I take each one separately, since there is no all-purpose wine.

On the other hand, there is one wine that can match with a wide variety of foods, and indeed a case can be made that you could serve versions of it with every course in the meal. And yet it is a wine in such disrepute in the United States that we consume infinitesimal quantities of it, and the makers of it all but ignore us, preferring to ship to England, Belgium and France.

This fine all-purpose wine is sherry, the rich, nutty, fortified wine from Spain that at one time sold well in this country.

What has made sherry an ignored product here in the last two decades is hard to say, but most experts feel Americans, seeking more delicate wine, with lower alcohol and lighter flavors, have forgotten how nice sherry can be.

Sherry is probably the definitive wine to match with soup. It is a superb aperitif to serve along with the traditional spicy appetizers of Spain — called tapas — and it can accompany meals. Yet sherry can be confusing, too, since the word sherry applies to a wide variety of wines of the same type, but with different characteristics.

To point up those differences, David Sandeman, head of the House of Sandeman in Spain, conducted a recent tasting of a series of sherries of differing ages, starting with the lightest, the fino, and carrying through to the oldest, the dessert-style oloroso. But first a brief look at how sherry is made in Jerez (pronounced herreth), Spain, and which was Anglicized by the British to sherry.

It starts with the palomino grape, harvested and fermented dry. Immediately after fermentation, something curious occurs that determines what each cask (in Spain they are called butts) will become.

As the new wine sits in the anada (a line of casks of new wine) it can develop a certain special yeast film on top of the wine in the barrel. It is called flor, literally, flowery. If flor develops in a cask, that cask will be saved for the production of fino sherry, which is lighter and more delicate than other styles.

Why certain casks develop flor yeast and others do not is still a mystery, though certain vineyards are known to have a higher percentage of flor/fino wines than others.

The casks that do not develop flor will be set aside to make amontillado wines, which are fuller bodied than finos, and certain of these will begin to develop a slightly browner color than others, and will wind up as an olorosop sherry, which is more heavily scented and usually quite sweet.

A very few of the casks will develop a richness that leads to a style known as palo cortado. This is a wine of depth yet with a delicate bouquet. Sandeman estimated that less than 1 percent of any sherry house's production is palo cortado.

After it is determined which style of wine each cask will become, the wine is poured into a criadera — literally a nursery — and over the next few years, the wine will be transferred from barrel to barrel, constantly being blended with wine from other years (thus there is no vintage sherry), and finally into a solera.

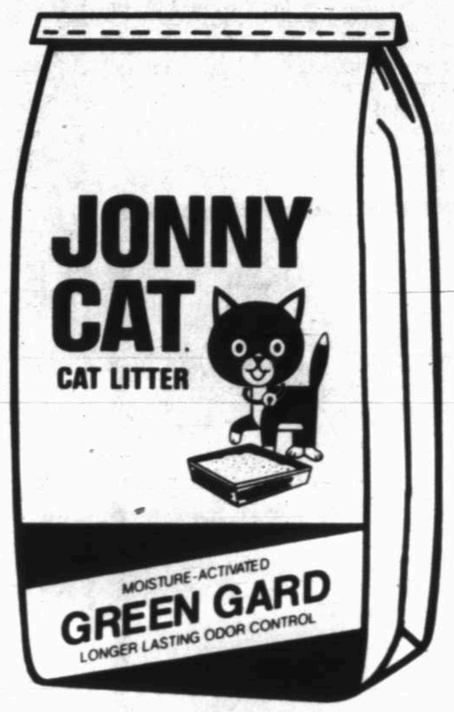

A solera, the series of casks from which the wine eventually will be bottled, is the heart of the sherry system. Never is more than a third of the wine in a solera bottled, and after bottling the cask is refilled from the criadera. Thus some of the old wine always remains in the solera. Which means, of course, that if a solera is started in 1852 (as was Sandeman's) some of the wine in the solera, admittedly just a tiny fraction, will date from 1852.

USDA has good, bad news about fats

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Americans are striking oil these days — vegetable oil.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, there has been a shift from consumption of animal to vegetable sources of fats and oils, "reflecting consumers' efforts to switch from saturated to polyunsaturated fats and oils."

Ironically, at the same time so many people are concerned about fat, per-capita consumption of oils and fats is larger than ever before.

In 1982 it was 130 pounds per person per year, an increase from 128 pounds in 1970, 119 in 1960, 117 in 1950.

Suffice it to say there are easy and quick ways to alter recipes — via cooking procedures — that change them to good-tasting, lower-fat facsimiles, and there are ingredients that can be substituted for those high in saturated fat, the villainous link in the heart disease and cholesterol story.

So why the increase, when consumers are becoming increasingly conscious about the amount of fat in their diets? Karen Bunch, food economist at the USDA's Economic Research Service, offers some clues:

— The consumption of salad vegetables has increased as well. People need something to dress those greens.

— The expansion of the U.S. soybean industry has provided an abundance of oil at less expensive prices than other oils. Consumers are buying soybean-based vegetable oils and margarine over butter and lard.

— People are eating out more than ever before, especially at fast-food restaurants. And therein lies a lot of hidden fat; restaurant use of fats and oils rose 69 percent between 1969 and 1979.

Some of that increase represents use of animal fat (beef tallow is a popular fast-food deep-fat fryer); much of the fat being used to fry those chickens and potatoes is of vegetable origin.

The USDA views the shift from animal to vegetable fat optimistically, even though total fat consumption has increased. Bunch and Jorge Hazera write in a USDA publication that "from a nutritional standpoint, there has been a positive change in the types of fats consumed."

Bunch and Hazera offer these tips for choosing fats and oils:

— Fats and oils that are solid at room temperature contain more saturated fat than those that are liquid.

— Lower-priced margarine or shortening is likely to contain animal fats.

— Soybean, corn, safflower and sunflower oils have a higher ratio of polyunsaturated to saturated fatty acids than palm, coconut, peanut or cottonseed oils.

— Read the labels on processed foods. Many brands of cookies, crackers and baked goods contain lard, tallow or highly saturated vegetable oils.

The following menu gets its inspiration from the traditional meal of fried chicken, french fries and coleslaw. Usually considered high-fat foods, the dishes have been adapted to lower-fat counterparts.

OVEN-BAKED "FRIED" CHICKEN

3½-pound broiler-fryer, cut up
¼ cup cornmeal
¼ cup whole-wheat flour
¼ teaspoon cayenne
Freshly ground black pepper
1 egg white, slightly beaten

Remove skin from chicken. Mix together cornmeal, flour and spices. Dip each piece of chicken in egg white, then in cornmeal mixture. Place in shallow pan and bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for about 55 minutes, turning once to brown chicken evenly. Serves four.

OVEN FRENCH FRIES

3 medium potatoes
1 tablespoon plus ¼ teaspoon vegetable oil
Freshly ground pepper and salt to taste

Peel potatoes and cut into long strips about ½-inch wide. Dry on paper towels. Toss in a bowl with oil to coat each piece. Spread in a single layer on a cookie sheet and cook for about 30 minutes at 450 degrees, turning strips after 15 minutes to evenly brown. Cook until brown and season with salt and pepper just before serving. Serves four.

Book examines watermelons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Connoisseurs of American folklife may savor a new publication from the Library of Congress, "Watermelon."

This slim 64-page compendium seeks to tell everything there is to know about the succulent melons.

Historical and dietary facts are proffered along with humorous observations and poetry — and it includes several color illustrations ranging from an 1813 oil painting to contemporary merchandise featuring a watermelon motif.

Annual watermelon festivals are listed and recipes from watermelon pickle to "gingery watermelon spritzer" are included.

"Watermelon" does carry a hefty $10 price tag, plus a $1 charge for mail orders.

Interested people can purchase it at the Library or by writing to the Library of Congress, Information Office, Box A, Washington, D.C. 20540.

Texaco charges foul in $14 million lawsuit against Pennzoil co.

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney for Texaco Inc. is accusing The Pennzoil Co. of making a $10,000 campaign contribution to the judge presiding over Pennzoil's $14 billion lawsuit against Texaco in order to get the judge to favor Pennzoil in the suit.

Joe Jamail, the Pennzoil attorney, gave state District Judge Anthony J.P. Farris the money only days after the lawsuit was filed in Farris' court, Texaco attorney Richard Miller said Tuesday.

Miller has filed a motion to disqualify Farris the case. The motion also questions the ethics of the contribution and alleged the judge's failure to disclose the contribution "is a clear breach of his legal, ethical and moral responsibilitis as a judicial officer."

Both Pennzoil and Jamail deny that the money was meant to influence the judge. Both also said Pennzoil had nothing to do with the contribution. It is illegal in Texas for corporations to make campaign contributions.

Farris said he would "absolutely not" withdraw from the case, and said he reported the contribution from Jamail in June.

"Pennzoil has never made a contribution to Judge Farris," company spokesman Robert G. Harper said. "If such an allegation were made by Miller, it is not only outrageous, but a lie."

Jamail also called Miller a liar.

"Miller has to resort to that kind of tactic because he is going to lose," he added.

The Pennzoil suit involves Texaco's $10.2 billion purchase of Getty Oil Co. Pennzoil contends it reached an agreement with Getty directors to acquire the company, but that Texaco convinced Getty to sell to Texaco.

Miller's motion said Jamail personally delivered the contribution to Farris on March 7, two days after the case was filed.

As in all cases in the Harris County civil courts, the Pennzoil-Texaco matter was assigned to Farris by lot. And although the judge will handle pretrial matters, it will return to a list once it becomes ready for trial and will be assigned to the first judge who is free when that case reaches the top of the list.

Miller contended the size of the gift went beyond the resources of a single lawyer.

The money was the largest donation among 275 contributions Farris reported on a disclosure statement filed in June. The judge is running for re-election in November.

1,000 miners laid off

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — As 3,000 striking coal miners received assurance from their union president that the United Mine Workers had not abandoned them, companies moving to reduce stockpiles laid off 1,000 miners who are under contract.

Miners were laid off Tuesday from Consolidation Coal Co., Pittston Co. and W.P. Coal Co., bringing to more than 4,000 the number of UMW members laid off since last week's approval of a new national contract for 110,000 miners.

The companies blamed a lack of demand for coal because of stockpiles customers built up in anticipation of a nationwide strike that never occurred.

Appalachian Power Co.'s John Amos coal-fired generating plant in Winfield, for example, had stored enough coal to last more than 100 days when the union's old contract expired.

"You have to anticipate a strike, whether it happens or not," said Apco spokesman Tom Ayers.

"Everyone hates to think of losing their job now, and with Christmas coming up, but there's really nothing we can do," said Bill Legg, vice president of UMW Local 2333.

PBPA gas workshop scheduled

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association, in cooperation with Smart & Kuss, natural gas consultants, will hold a workshop at the Midland Petrolum Club, Thursday, from 2:30 to 4 p.m., on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) wet/dry interim rule concerning repayments.

The workshop will advise producers on how to check contracts to see if they are liable for repayments and to what extent. Some pipelines are already demanding repayments even though small producers have until May 1985 to make payment, while large producers have until November 1984. Those at the workshop will also be advised on how to handle these demands, as well as calculate the amount of refund they may owe.

The wet/dry rule relates to the removal of liquids from natural gas, and the prices charged for the gas to consumers. It is a retroactive rule that dates back to 1978 when the Natural Gas Policy Act was passed.

PBPA head, Ed Thompson, said a fair understanding of the rule was critical, because it could cost area producers billions.

The workshop is free to all PBPA members and their guests, and reservations may be made by calling 684-345 no later than 11 p.m. Thursday.

Fed probably won't increase interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Election Day not far off, private analysts doubt Federal Reserve policymakers will take any strong steps that might send interest rates soaring.

Politics aside, they argue there is nothing going on in the economy that calls for the central bankers, meeting behind closed doors on Tuesday, to alter their current monetary course.

Interest rates, they say, should stay at about the same level.

"I'm not expecting any change," said Bernard Markstein, senior financial economist at Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

David Jones, economist at the New York brokerage firm Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., added: "I would guess that in the weeks immediately ahead they will hold to an unchanged posture."

The new decisions by the Federal Open Market Committee will help guide the economy through the national elections. The next strategy session of the panel is tentatively set for Nov. 7, the day after the elections.

Minutes of Tuesday's meeting will not be released until after the November discussions. Results of the Aug. 21 meeting will be released on Friday.

Since the August session, analysts have detected signs that the Federal Reserve was supplying more money to the banking system, allowing interest rates to drift downward.

The Fed has been following a moderately tight monetary strategy by trying to supply enough money to keep the economy expanding, but not enough to set off another round of high inflation.

Tighter credit conditions tend to boost interest rates; easier conditions tend to help interest rates slide.

In recent weeks, the prime lending rate of major banks has slipped from 13 percent to 12.75 percent. Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco reduced it to 12.5 percent.

The Fed's apparent easing last month, the analysts said, was no doubt prompted by the slowdown in the economy's expansion from the vigorous pace early in the year and the continuing modest pace of inflation.

Moreover, they said, growth in the money supply has been sluggish in recent months.

Some argue, too, that the Fed does not want to draw attention to itself in the middle of a presidential campaign and become an election issue.

Fed Chairman Paul Volcker's "general inclination is to keep a low profile as we approach the election," said Jones.

"With an election approaching, the Federal Reserve is likely to be more accommodating than it might be otherwise," said economists Roger Brinner and David Wyss of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

"As a result, we expect the (policymakers) to continue the recent relaxation of monetary policy," the analysts wrote in a newsletter to clients.

New home sales fell to a seasonably adjusted annual rate of 569,000 units in August, the lowest pace in a year and 25 percent below the peak rate of 712,000 annual sales in February, according to the Commerce Department.

New home sales drop

By Associated Press

New home sales slumped by 8.1 percent in August, the second consecutive monthly decline after a 2.2 percent drop in July, the government reported.

The release of home sales figures Tuesday preceeded a decline in the stock market that sent the widely watched Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues to a three-month low.

Stocks fell broadly in sluggish trading as the Dow tumbled to 1,191.36, down 7.62 points on the day, a level not seen since the 1,166.08 of Aug. 2.

In a joint report, the Departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development said sales of new single-family homes sunk to a seasonally adjusted 569,000 units in August, down 25 percent from last December's peak.

The government said housing construction starts dropped 12.8 percent in August to their lowest level since December 1982, while sales of previously owned homes posted their fourth monthly decline.

In Washington, Federal Reserve Board policymakers met behind closed doors Tuesday. Analysts said the regulators would probably maintain their relaxed hold on the nation's credit.

The Federal Open Market Committee does not release the minutes of its meetings until after its next strategy session, tentatively scheduled for Nov. 7, the day after Election Day.

But analysts said they doubted the policymakers would take any strong steps that would send interest rates upward with the elections so close.

In another economic report, the Conference Board, an industry-financed economic research organization, said its "Help Wanted Index" declined 10 points in August from July after three months of strong increases.

The index was 128 in August, down from 138 in July; it is figured on a base of 100, established in 1967, and is compiled by monitoring want-ads in 51 major newspapers. The index is considered a barometer of employment prospects.

Also on Tuesday, a business organization that promotes foreign trade joined the fray over a foreign trade bill nearing passage on Capitol Hill.

The United States Council for International Business said the legislation contains protectionist measures that could lead to international retaliation against U.S. exports.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said Monday that President Reagan may veto the bill should it achieve final passage. It is headed for a Senate-House conference committee to resolve differences between the two houses' versions.

Council President Abraham Katz said the bill contains provisions that cater to steel, copper, footwear, wine and other industries at the expense of free trade.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—American Motors Corp. said it will join the minivan craze by introducing its French partner Renault's version of the hot-selling vehicles next fall for the 1986 model year. AMC said the front-wheel-drive Renault Espace will be available in a 2.0-liter or a turbocharged 2.1-liter model.

—Sony Corp. unveiled a portable model of its compact disc player with a suggested list price of $299.95. The disc player is an emerging audio technology considered the eventual replacement of conventional record and tape systems.

Gas demand up over last year

Natural gas demand in 1984 will increase 1.2 quadrillion Btu (quads) above demand in 1983 - the highest one-year jump in recent history, according to a recent A.G.A study.

The study, "A.G.A Six-Month Gas Demand Forecast July-December 1984," projects that total U.S gas demand in 1984 will be 18.6 quads, 6.6 percent more than in 1983.

Total gas demand in the second half of 1984 will be higher than in the same period last year, sayd the forecast, but will not grow as fast as in the first half of 1984. Likewise, the rate of gas demand growth in the second half of 1984 is projected by A.G.A. to be slower compared with the dramatic 15.6 percent increase experienced in the first quarter of the year. That increase was spurred by January weather, which was 6 percent colder than normal, and 16 percent colder than January 1983.

The study also notes that the first half of 1984 saw a robust 14 percent growth in the Industrial Production Index for manufacturing, compared with the first half of 1983. In the second half of 1984, continued economic growth will result in increased industrial gas demand.

AIPG honors college doctor

The American Institute of Professional Geologists (AIPG) has named Dr. Grover E. Murray as the "first ever" recipient of honorary membership.

The institution's bylaws have long provided that a member may be designated as "honorary" by majority vote of the executive committee. However, this year marks the first time the AIPG has bestowed the honor in recognition of an exemplary record of service and dedication to the geology profession and to the institute.

Murray is Professor of Geosciences and Preventive Medicine and Community Health, Texas Tech University and Texas Tech University School of Medicine, Lubbock. He received a B.S. in geology from the University of North Carolina and a M.S. and PhD. in geology from Louisiana State University.

He has served as a consultant, primarily in petroleum geology for United States and international companies and organizations. He conducted extensive research in stratigraphy, the geology of petroleum and the Gul Coastal Province of Eastern North America.

Murray assumed the presidency of Texas Tech University in 1966 and the presidency of the the university's school of medicine in 1971. He held both positions until 1976, when he returned to teaching and part-time consulting.

He has been vice president and president of AIPG, editor and president of both the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists and vice president and president of the American Geological Institute.

Ford, UAW race against deadline

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers union say their labor negotiators have been doing subcommittee work at a brisk pace as they try to reach a tentative contract by Oct. 12.

The union hopes Ford will call a session at the main bargaining table this week for presentation of a new job security proposal covering 115,000 UAW members at Ford.

Five subcommittees met Tuesday on topics ranging from health and safety and work rules to production standards. Ford spokesman Tony Fredo called it "a very busy day," despite a lack of activity at the main table.

Although no strike deadline has been set, chief union negotiator Stephen Yokich has told Ford not to assume that the UAW members at Ford will work past Oct. 12 without a tentative labor agreement.

Chief Ford negotiator Peter Pestillo has agreed to the timetable.

"Undoubtedly, we'll be working through the weekend," Fredo said.

The union must give Ford three days' notice of a strike deadline under terms of a contract extension. The old contract was to have expired Sept. 14.

Meanwhile, the 350,000 UAW members at General Motors Corp. are working without a contract while they vote on a tentative pact reached Sept. 21.

One of the 149 UAW locals at GM already has approved the agreement. All votes are to be reported to union headquarters in Detroit by Oct. 14.

UAW leaders said they were allotting extra time for voting at GM because of the complexity of the contract, particularly the sections regarding job security.

Among other things, those sections would provide up to $1 billion for aid to workers displaced by robots, productivity increases or the movement of work overseas. It wouldn't protect workers from layoffs due to slow car sales.

Dollar continues downward, Gold up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar continued to retreat early today in the face of threatened intervention by European central banks, registering losses for the third straight day. Gold prices rose.

Dealers in Frankfurt reported a sharp dollar drop against the German mark and said they thought the U.S. currency's rise was over for the immediate future.

The dollar has been above three marks since August 11, but dipped below that psychological barrier in early trading today in Frankfurt. In London, it was quoted at 3.0080 marks.

Traders were closely watching a meeting of U.S. Federal Reserve Board policymakers in Washington for any sign of a drop in the high U.S. interest rates which have kept the dollar buoyant.

A late selling wave on New York markets sent the dollar sharply lower in nervous trading Tuesday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 245.10 Japanese yen from Tuesday's 246.20.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

–3.0085 West German marks, down from 3.0420.

–2.4900 Swiss francs, down from 2.5060.

–9.2325 French francs, down from 9.3375.

–3.3878 Dutch guilders, down from 3.4280.

–1,868.00 Italian lire, down from 1,882.00.

–1.31175 Canadian dollars, down from 1.31395.

In London, the dollar also lost against the British pound. It cost $1.2502 to buy one pound sterling compared with $1.2405 Tuesday.

Gold dealers reported slight bullion gains.

London's five major bullion dealers set a morning recommended gold price of $347.60 per ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $346.75.

In Zurich, the bid price was $347.90, up from $346.00 late Tuesday.

Hong Kong financial markets were closed for a bank holiday.

In New York Tuesday, gold rose $2.70 to close at $347.20.

Silver was quoted in London Wednesday at a bid price of $7.60 per ounce, up from Tuesday's closing bid of $7.545.

Interest makes home loans costly

By BILL McCLOSKEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even with lower home prices and rising income, more Americans found mortgage loans out of reach in August because of rising mortgage interest rates, the National Association of Realtors says.

The housing affordability index devised by the trade group compares median family income and median home prices each month to see if a typical family can afford a typical home.

For August, the index was 82.9, meaning a family making the median $25,727 a year could not qualify for a loan big enough to purchase the median $74,300 house.

The Federal National Mortgage Association's qualification guidelines recommend that annual principal and interest payments total no more than 25 percent of a borrowers' yearly income. By the Realtors' figures, the typical family would have spent 30.2 percent of its income on monthly mortgage payments on a typical house.

A family seeking to qualify for a mortgage on a $74,300 home with a 20 percent down payment would need $31,027 in income, under the association's formula.

The index declined for the fourth straight month, even with a $200 July-to-August drop in the median price for resale homes.

Half the homes sold in August cost less than the median and half cost more. Likewise, half of all American families made more than the median and half less.

The Realtors use the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's monthly survey of major lending institutions to get the mortgage rate used in the calculations. In early August, the effective interest rate on conventional loans for resale homes was 12.76 percent, up from a July rate of 12.53 percent.

Many home buyers are able to qualify for a larger loan by agreeing to an adjustable rate mortgage, which allows the interest rate to float up and down as other interest rates vary.

These ARMs, as they are called, usually begin with rates about two percentage points below fixed-rate mortgages, because borrowers are willing to share the risk of rising interest rates with the lender.

But even the lower rate loans would not have improved the situation enough for a typical family.

An interest rate of 10.33 percent would have been necessary to bring the affordability index to 100 for a family at the national median income, the Realtors said. The affordability index hasn't been at 100 since December 1978.

The typical family could have afforded a $61,600 home, according to the trade group's formula.

Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive officer of the association, said more than a third of the homes sold in August were priced at less than $60,000.

'Benson' spends day like state official

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Actor Robert Guillaume, the wise-cracking aide who worked his way up to lieutenant governor as television's "Benson," got a look at what a day in the life of a state official is really like.

"I recognize in Robert Guillaume certain qualities of heroism, bravery, wisdom," Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy deadpanned. "It's amazing how many parallels there are between us."

Guillaume, star of the ABC-TV series, accompanied McCarthy on Tuesday on an aerial tour of toxic waste sites, to a luncheon with developers and to the dedication of a new building.

Guillaume said he wished his show could deal with the "substantive issues" that confront a real state. "We have writers who bypass the heartaches."

Lange

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jessica Lange, whose new film "Country" is a touching portrayal of a family fighting to keep from losing their farm, says small farmers could become extinct unless "drastic" action is taken.

"Country," which opened after showing at the New York Film Festival last week, chronicles a family's struggles against the government and banks when they face foreclosure.

The movie is not an indictment of the Reagan administration's farm policies, "but there are obvious political overtones in it," she said at the National Press Club on Tuesday.

"If something drastic isn't done in the next couple of years, we're going to lose this vital part of America, and I think it would be tragic," she said.

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — Neil Hamilton, 85, an actor in the silent film era but better known to contemporary audiences as Police Commissioner Gordon on television's "Batman," died Sept. 24.

Hamilton's first film was "The White Rose" in 1923. Other credits included "Isn't Life Wonderful," "America," "Beau Geste," "The Great Gatsby," "Street of Forgotten Men," "Three Weeks," "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu," and "The Dawn Patrol." His final film was "Which Way to the Front" in 1970. Hamilton appeared in more than 80 films during his career.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter V. Ueberroth presided over the 1984 Olympic Games without a salary, but he's not exactly walking away empty-handed. He'll get $475,000 bonus for his "extraordinary" efforts, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee said.

Harry L. Usher, executive vice president of the LAOOC, will receive a $350,000 merit bonus, the LAOOC board announced Tuesday.

"Without their extraordinary leadership and talent...the 1984 Games might have had a far different outcome," said Roy L. Ash, chairman of the Olympic Committee's compensation committee.

Ueberroth, who engineered a $150 million surplus for the privately funded Summer Games, is now commissioner of professional baseball.

Cuomo

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo, who some observers say has his eye on the White House, had better keep a closer eye on the Executive Mansion.

The mansion was burglarized while the governor and his family slept upstairs, authorities said.

"He was very reluctant about spending taxpayers' dollars for his own personal security," said Lawrence Kurlander, director of the governor's Office of Criminal Justice.

But the burigary early Tuesday made Cuomo more receptive, and state police stepped up security at the six-acre estate, Kurlander said.

An inventory showed a video recorder and some silver items were taken, State Police Superintendent Donald Chesworth said. The items were worth several thousand dollars, a Cuomo spokesman said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Caffeine, alcohol linked to bone loss

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would assume that a person who does not eat foods that contain calcium may have a problem with bone loss in later years. Is there anything else in the diet that can account for bone loss in these people? — Mrs. J.R., Shreveport, La.

Solomon

Dear Mrs. R.: According to Dr. Robert Lindsay, of the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, a high intake of caffeine and alcohol is a risk factor for osteoporosis (bone loss). In men, the most common form of osteoporosis is associated with a high consumption of alcohol.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that you do not like the idea of fasting or the use of very low-calorie diets that are tried by people without any medical supervision, and I can understand why. But suppose there is medical supervision. Does fasting or the very low-calorie diet bring about any weight loss? — Diane, Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Diane: The results of a study conducted by physicians from the Charleston Area Medical Center in West Virginia suggest that some obese people may be helped to lose weight through a short-term fast; however, most of the people in the study did not continue to lose weight after terminating the fast. The 18 patients who participated in the study were permitted to have as much water as they wanted but no other beverages during the fast, which lasted for six days.

Let me emphasize what you mention in your letter: All patients were under strict medical supervision.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some very close friends have a 17-year-old daughter, and her weight is constantly going up and down. She will stay on a diet for several months and lose quite a bit of weight, and then she'll start eating everything in sight and gain it all back. I know that lots of teenagers have wacky eating habits, but isn't this outside of what is considered normal? — Ruth, Atlanta

Dear Ruth: The type of behavior you describe, the alternate weight gain and weight loss, is a cause for concern, and I would hope that the young lady is under medical supervision. It is also possible that she might benefit from counseling for any emotional problems she may be experiencing.

An English study has suggested that slightly younger girls who have abnormal eating habits may also have some emotional disturbance. It may not be possible to resolve the weight problem without first resolving whatever emotional problems are causing the behavior.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 15 years old and I have a question that my mother does not know the answer to and that I don't want to ask my own doctor. Once a girl starts to menstruate, does that mean she can become pregnant? — Jill, Columbus, Ohio

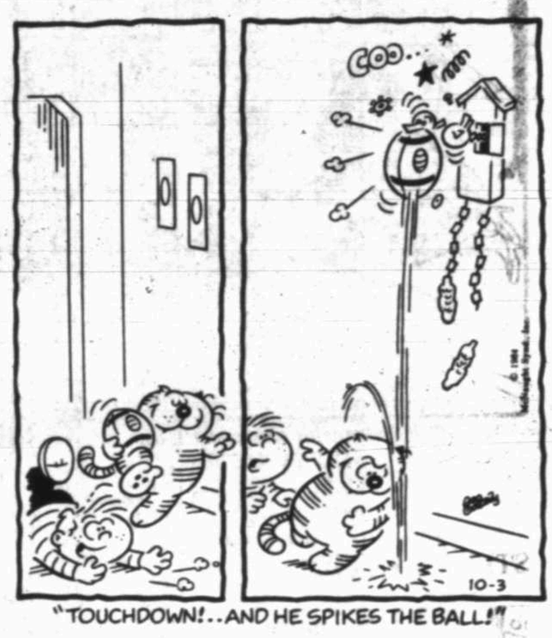

Dear Jill: The ability to bear a child generally lags behind the first few indications of menstruation and the time a girl can become pregnant.

As you might expect, however, there are individual variations. Therefore, it is possible for a girl to become a pregnant either before or after the 12-to-18 month period previously mentioned.

For Becky, Indianapolis, Indiana: Dr. Alexandra Symonds, of the New York University School of Medicine, says that the greater incidence of depression in women is due in part to sexual discrimination. She notes that the rate of depression is higher among married women than among unmarried women of similar age. Furthemore, married women who work outside the home have a lower incidence of depression than do housewives.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Man returns purloined cactus to desert home

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A 6-inch saguaro cactus that "refused" to grow after it was illegally removed from the Arizona desert 12 years ago has been returned with an apology and good wishes from the man who took it.

The cactus arrived in the mail last month along with a note signed by "Dennis" of San Jose, Calif., Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum officials said Monday.

Dennis said he took the cactus from the Arizona desert 12 years ago "when I was a budding collector at age 11."

"I later learned that was an illegal act. The seedling must be a staunch rebel. It knows my error, because it has refused to grow.

"My collection is now large and includes a trio of saguaros (legal, nursey bred), in addition to this one. So I'm sending it back to you so it can once again enjoy the Arizona sun," the note said.

"Treat it well. I'm positive this poor thing will be inspired at the sight of the giants en masse that adorn the Sonoran landscape.

"Forgive my awful mistake."

The plant "had a bad start," said George Montgomery of the musuem's plant department. "It never really did catch on, but we expect it to grow here, nevertheless."

It is illegal under state law to move saguaros and other Arizona cacti without a $2 permit issued by the state Commission on Agriculture and Horticulture and the owner of the land.

Debate will always rage as to whether bridge is an art or a science. To us it seems that as long as judgment plays an important part in the game, it will always be more of an art.

Here's an example from World Championship play. When Pietro Forquet and Benito Garozzo sat North-South for Italy, the bidding went as shown. South decided that his hand was too strong offensively for a normal preemptive bid, so he elected to open one spade. North's jump to four diamonds confirmed spades as trumps and asked about control of diamonds. East made a lead-directing double and South's redouble showed first-round control of the suit.

North still needed to know something about the quality of South's suit, so he cue-bid hearts. When South bid his spades a third time, North had heard enough. He jumped to five no trump, the Grand Slam Force, to check on trump honors. Holding two of the three top honors, South naturally bid the grand slam. West led a diamond, and declarer claimed 13 tricks.

At the other table, the American South chose to open the hand with a preemptive bid of four spades. It was an understandable action — interchange the North and West hands, and it is East-West who can make a grand slam in diamonds if declarer guesses correctly in trumps. Unfortunately, that crowded the auction. South had no way to show a diamond void in an aceless hand in response to his partner's Blackwood inquiry, and the auction came to an end in six no trump by North.

While the Italians used science to bid the grand slam, their gain of 11 International Match Points on the deal hinged chiefly on their choice of opening bid — strictly a judgment call.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, October 4, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: President Rutherford Hayes and journalist-author Damon Runyon were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor and American Film Institute President Charlton Heston, Chicago Cubs rookie Bill Hatcher, comic Jan Murray, actresses Susan Sarandon and Felicia Farr, singer Clifton Davis and football's Sam Huff. Those in sales and marketing can reach new heights in the months ahead. Business booms. Old talents prove helpful in unusual situations. Romance with someone recently divorced or widowed should not be hurried. Couples who want to start families are in luck. Follow a hunch and you gain financially. A tax matter is straightened out.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Let your past experiences guide you today. Your poise and generosity keep a personal relationship on track. The spiritual and material mingle today. Someone who admires you tells you so!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your social life accelerates. Tend to business early in the day. Someone who acts aloof is really very shy. It is up to you to make the first move. Reduce spending.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your intuition is right on target now. Eliminate time-wasting activities from your schedule so that you can concentrate on income-producing projects. A conventional approach works best in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A chat with an authority figure will turn out fine if you are direct. Your job performance wins praise, perhaps even a raise or promotion. Romantic partner may try your patience. Remain calm.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A tolerant attitude helps you deal with difficult or insensitive people. Taking a new approach to an old problem will make you more efficient. Protect your credit rating by paying bills on time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New contacts lead to beneficial changes. An older person helps out in an emergency. Show your gratitude in a tangible way. Avoid getting into petty disputes with loved ones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not be taken in by a colleague's glamorous appearance and big talk. Research uncovers the truth. A friend helps you put a long-term plan into operation. Show your gratitude.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be more adventuresome and you will make fascinating new contacts. Go where the action is. Your drive and self-discipline help you reach your goals. Keep your options open where romance is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A new interest revitalizes you. You feel much more energetic. Look for ways to reduce the tedium of performing routine tasks. Business and travel mix beautifully, especially if a young person is involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Technical changes reduce your office chores, freeing more time for creative work. Make certain a confidant is trustworthy before sharing a secret. Plan a quiet evening with a Libra.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Review your investments, keeping only those with a proven track record. Business pressures are strong. Be flexible. Go over all available facts and figures before making a plan.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A great day for all types of creative work. A friend or relative could become a source of inspiration. Be more practical where romance is concerned. Good grooming helps your cause.

Matt Martinez, 67, poses outside his restaurant El Rancho near the shores of Town Lake in Austin. He has sold the property, but vows to relocate his famous restaurant.

Restaurant has loyal clientele

AUSTIN (AP) — Matt Martinez is unsure which talent makes him prouder — his overhand right to the jaw or his uncanny ability to season Mexican food.

Half a century ago, he peddled homemade tamales from a wooden pushcart on downtown Congress Avenue to earn a living.

In his spare time, he pounded a sand-filled burlap bag in his parents' garage to perfect his boxing technique.

The sandbag made him Texas Golden Gloves champion in 1937.

But the pushcart made him rich. It evolved into El Rancho restaurant, one of the most popular Mexican food places in town, where the likes of President Lyndon Johnson and actor Lee Marvin used to gulp down helpings of chicken flautas, and celebrities as different as Wayne Newton and Darrell Royal still order their green enchiladas and tostadas compuestas.

"When I first opened this place in 1952, we made $25 to $50 a day," Martinez said. "Today, we do about $2.5 million a year. But the most important thing to me now is the people.

"I'm here every day to greet them when they walk through the door. Folks who ate here when they were kids now bring in kids of their own. That's the nicest part."

Martinez, 67, and his son, Matt Jr., 38, relaxed recently at a table in the dining room of El Rancho at 303 E. First St., watching employees prepare for the lunch-hour rush.

Both were in a mood to reminisce. A Dallas investment firm had just announced the purchase of the El Rancho property for use in a 2½-block, hotel/office complex on the north bank of Town Lake. Two 20-story office towers and a luxury hotel will replace the white stucco restaurant.

El Rancho will reopen at another site, but the elder Martinez is not in any hurry to leave his spot on the lake. As a former pushcart peddler, he looks forward to the business challenge of relocating, but the ex-prizefighter in him knows how hard it is to leave a friendly corner.

"We started out in the Mexican food business when Daddy came here from Monterrey, Mexico, years ago," said Martinez. "He was a tightrope walker with a Mexican circus, and they toured through Austin. Daddy wasn't making much money walking tightropes, so he quit and stayed here. He hired a bunch of women in East Austin who knew how to make Mexican candies and tortillas. It became a family business. I started working with him when I was 6 or 7."

Martinez cannot remember exactly when his family opened that first restaurant, but it was long enough ago that his father would drive a horse and wagon 90 miles to San Antonio to bring back Mexican spices.

"He built a bunch of wooden carts, and we kids would sell tamales up and down Congress Avenue and all around the Capitol," Martinez recalled. "We had several restaurants through the years. We'd close one place and open another."

Life for a teen-ager in East Austin could be tough, even when you were busy working.

"There were these two bullies that were beating up everybody in town," Martinez said. "So I got interested in boxing. Me and another guy set up some punching bags and a burlap sack full of sand in my garage. We didn't have any gloves, so we wrapped our hands in strips of cloth and punched those bags.

"I finally caught those bullies, one at a time, on Attayac Street and whipped them. From then on, I wasn't afraid of nobody. I'd go into bars on Sixth Street and challenge anybody to a boxing match for $5 or $10 a match. Didn't make any difference what size they were. I had a good overhand right that knocked them down. I won — most of the time."

In 1937, Martinez won the state Golden Gloves championship in the lightweight division and continued to box across the state until he joined the Army during World War II. He served as a boxing instructor at a post in Cheyenne, Wyo.

After the war, he waited tables at some of the best-known Austin restaurants — Caruso's, the Tip Top, and El Charro. "It was good experience, but I decided I needed to have my own place and make some money for myself," Martinez said.
