Iran arms deal sickens Shultz

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz testified today that other Reagan administration officials kept him in the dark about key events in the Iran-Contra affair, and said he was "sick to my stomach" when he learned some of the details.

In riveting testimony at nationally televised congressional hearings, Shultz said he first learned that the United States had sold weapons directly to Iran when he read about it in news reports published many months after the transaction took place. He said he wasn't told that President Reagan authorized any sales until about a year after the formal papers were signed.

Shultz said that it wasn't until he relayed some disturbing information involving Middle East terrorists to Reagan at a private White House meeting last December that "I finally felt that the president deeply understands that something is radically wrong here."

Shultz spoke in a somber voice that belied the astonishing nature of his testimony, but he occasionally allowed a wry sense of humor to show through.

"I hardly know Col. (Oliver L.) North, although like everyone else in America I feel like I know him well by now," Shultz said of the former National Security Council aide who was the star witness at the hearings for a week.

Under questioning from Senate lawyer Mark Belnick, Shultz denied repeatedly that his ignorance about the Iran arms deal stemmed from a desire not to know the facts — as former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified earlier.

He said he once told Poindexter he wanted to "be informed of the things I needed to know" to carry out his responsibilities as secretary of state.

He said he told Poindexter that he didn't want to know all the operational details, but "that doesn't mean I just bowed out insofar as major things in our foreign policy is concerned. To assume that I shouldn't be informed of things like that is ridiculous."

Poindexter testified earlier that he never withheld information from Cabinet officers that they didn't want kept from them.

Shultz also quarreled with North's testimony. Shultz said today that he was unaware of North's secret efforts to funnel arms to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a congressional ban on direct or indirect U.S. military aid to the insurgents.

Belnick read North's testimony that Shultz "knew in sufficiently elegant terms of what I had done," and asked the secretary of state if North's statement was true.

"No," Shultz replied.

Shultz said he was disgusted when he learned many months after the fact that key Iran-Contra middlemen had discussed

Clements defends tax hike

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Although it took the largest tax increase in Texas history to balance the state budget, Gov. Bill Clements says he feels victorious in his bid to hold the line on government growth.

"We stopped the growth of state government. Now that's no small goal, and it's no small accomplishment," Clements said Wednesday, repeatedly admonishing news reporters to get his message straight.

"I think our Texas taxpayers will be happy to hear that if you will just, please, repeat it."

Clements last year campaigned on a "no-new-taxes" theme and this year pledged repeatedly to veto any tax increase larger than $2.9 billion.

But Tuesday night, he signed into law increases in the sales, motor fuel and other taxes that totaled nearly twice that — $5.7 billion.

"I reluctantly signed the tax bill last night," Clements said. "The deed was done, so to speak."

The Republican governor said he had run out of options. Democrats control the Legislature, and the end of the state's fiscal year, Aug. 31, is approaching. Democratic Gov. Mark White left him a deficit and a sour economy, he said.

During a 10-minute news conference, Clements faced questions about his campaign promises against any taxes and his earlier veto threat.

After all that, he was asked, what went through his mind when signing the $5.7 billion package?

"That I was sleepy and I wanted to get to bed."

Hit by flying tire

Eleanor D. Winkler, 66, 1305 E. Frederic, is prepared for a trip to Coronado Hospital Wednesday night after a tire flew off a moving trailer and struck Winkler while she walked near her home. The trailer was hauling a backhoe and was being pulled by a truck driven by Billy Watson, 203 E. Tyng. Winkler was admitted to the hospital's outpatient unit with leg injuries.

City seeks shelter from the storm

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

The tornado that struck Pampa July 14 with accompanying high winds and heavy rain sent many residents scurrying from homes and roads to seek shelter.

But the event revealed a weakness in the availability of public shelters to offer protection to residents caught on the roadways or living in trailer homes.

Pampa-Gray County Emergency Management Coordinator Steve Vaughn said the city is now seeking buildings that can be used as public shelters during severe thunderstorm and tornado watches.

"We're looking for buildings that can be open in case of bad weather during storm watches," Vaughn said.

The city is asking people and businesses having basement facilities that can be used as storm shelters to offer their structures as a place for residents to take cover during severe storms.

The need for such facilities surfaced after last week's tornado.

One place that took in many of the shelterless residents was City Hall. Approximately 100 people rushed into the building's police and emergency operations center in the sub-basement, creating problems for emergency personnel who were trying to gather and disseminate information on the storm to the public.

Vaughn noted that City Hall is not designed to be a shelter area. For one thing, the bottom floor of City Hall is only partly underground, with a lot of windows that could scatter broken glass against people sheltered in its offices and hallways.

In addition, police and other emergency personnel trying to keep track of the storm and assess damages were hindered by having to take care of the people who rushed into the building and crowded the rooms and hallways. The situation was worsened by the flooding of the hallway from the heavy rain

Grinder set for freedom Friday

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — Claude Gene Grinder — the man who was convicted, then cleared of a 1986 mobile home fire in Canadian — will be a free man Friday, a prison official said.

Grinder, 25, was pardoned Tuesday by Gov. Bill Clements at the request of 31st District Attorney Guy Hardin. The prosecutor made the request after hearing that Grinder had wrongly confessed to setting the arson blaze.

Hardin began his inquiry after hearing that then-Canadian Police Chief John Bradshaw told a law enforcement class that he knew Grinder was innocent of the crime.

Grinder remained in custody at the Ramsey II unit in Rosharon, near Houston, this morning.

Charles Brown, assistant director of public information for the Texas Department of Corrections, said this morning that the TDC has received Clements' pardon from the Texas Department of Pardons and Paroles, clearing the way for Grinder's release Friday.

Brown said Grinder, an Arkansas native and former Canadian resident, will be transferred to the state penitentiary at Huntsville to be processed out of the system.

Grinder will be reinstated to mandatory supervision until November 1988 because of time owed on parole for an unrelated five-year sentence in a 1981 Hemphill County forgery conviction.

Grinder has said he confessed to the fire in November because he figured he'd get "good time" with the TDC and because he didn't think his alibi — that he was visiting his mother in Arkan-

Emergency group switches on generator project

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

Pampa area residents will have a better chance of keeping informed during severe weather when a local radio station acquires generator power for its station and tower.

The acquisition of the two 15-kilowatt emergency generators has been a project of groups concerned with emergency and disaster needs in the city.

The announcement of the generator project nearing its completion was made during the quarterly meeting of the Community Awareness and Emergency Response (CAER) Steering Committee meeting Tuesday.

Charles Williams, chairman of the Documentation and Publication Subcommittee, reported that plans have progressed enough so that the generators should be installed at Radio Station KGRO-KOMX and its broadcasting tower sometime in September.

Williams noted that the project has been under consideration for more than two years since the idea originated in the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Fire Prevention and Safety Committee. The chamber has just over $12,000 toward the purchase and installation of the generators available in a fund obtained from public contributions.

Since its organization, CAER has taken over the project as a community service in line with the organization's emergency preparedness aims.

Williams said total cost of the project would be just under $20,000. An application is under review with the M. K. Brown Foundation for a $4,500 grant. But even if the grant is not approved, the radio station and Hoescht Celanese Chemical Co.'s Pampa Facility will split the $4,500 cost, Williams reported.

IRI International has agreed to donate labors and materials to take care of the remaining expenses needed to complete the project.

The installation of the two generators will allow the local radio station to continue broadcasting information to the public in case of a power failure during severe weather or other disaster situations.

In other matters at the CAER meeting, Chairman Steve Vaughn reported that the local CAER organization has received Level I and Level II awards from the American Chemical Manufacturing Association for its community service and implementation of emergency plans.

Vaughn said other CAER organizations may have received the association's awards earlier, but few other CAER units have probably submitted as complete a program and list of accomplishments in their applications for the awards.

"We have accomplished a great deal" in Gray

County, Vaughn stated.

Vaughn also discussed policy changes that will be instituted in emergency planning operations and duties under the state's Title III legislation that will become effective Jan. 1.

Title III will affect any person, firm or business handling hazardous chemicals, Vaughn noted. "Even dry cleaning businesses will be impacted," he said, in having to inform the public of any use of dangerous chemicals in its operations.

Vaughn said the CAER group will be offering its assistance to those affected by new Title III policies. He stressed that the assistance is not any enforcement effort but instead will be a service "to make Pampa a better place to live" in safety.

CAER may be forming a Title III subcommittee to help with informing the public of changes in

Mr. King died Wednesday at Coronado Nursing Center.

He was born Aug. 31, 1902 in Indian Territory (Oklahoma). He moved to Pampa in 1945 from Borger. He married Ella Lou Pendergraft in 1939 at Canadian. A retired auto mechanic and carpenter, he was a member of the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife, Ella Lou, Pampa; a stepson, R.B. Pendergraft, Fritch; a stepdaughter, Thelma Vitek, Jonestown, Texas; a brother, Boots King of California; four step-grandchildren, eight step-great-grandchildren and two step-great-great-grandchildren.

RICHARD IRWIN BENNETT

EMPORIA, Kan. - Services for Richard Irwin Bennett, 62, of Emporia, Kan., a former Pampa resident, were held at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at First United Methodist Church in Emporia. Officiating were Rev. Lee Wiersma and Rev. Norm Simmons.

Burial was in Memorial Lawn Cemetery under the direction of Carlson Funeral Home with flag presentation by members of the American Legion Ball-McColm Post #5.

Mr. Bennett died Friday, July 17, at Newman Memorial County Hospital.

He was born June 24, 1925 at Schenectady, N.Y. He moved to Emporia in 1981 from Guymon, Okla. He had been an employee of Cities Services Gas Co. and had lived in Pampa. He married Dorothy Darlene McCurry on June 26, 1949 at Emporia. He attended high school in New York and Kansas State Teachers College at Emporia.

He served in the U.S. Coast Guard during World War II. He was a member of the First United Methodist Church at Emporia, where he was a Key Shepherd, and of the American Legion Ball-McColm Post #5.

Survivors include his wife, Darlene, of the home; a son, Richard D. Bennett, Lakin, Kan.; a daughter, Merideth Crespo, Miami, Fla.; two brothers, A.L. Bennett, West Lake, Ohio, and K.S. Bennett, San Jose, Calif.; two sisters, Ruth Turner, Rexford, N.Y., and Virginia Mannix, Amsterville, N.Y.; and four grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be made to the Newman Memorial County Hospital Cardiac Rehabilitation Program and sent in care of Carlson Funeral Home at Emporia.

Minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported the following traffic accidents for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

WEDNESDAY, July 22

A 1975 Oldsmobile, driven by Barbara Taylor, 2905 Rosewood, and a 1986 Isuzu, driven by Earl Hoffer, Route 1, collided in the 1100 block of West 23rd. Taylor was transported by private vehicle to Coronado Hospital, where she was treated and released for nonincapacitating injuries. Taylor was cited for failure to yield the right of way at a stop sign.

Pedestrian Eleanor D. Winkler, 1305 E. Frederic, was struck by a tire from a trailer pulled by a 1977 Ford truck, driven by Billy Watson, 203 E. Tyng, in the 1300 block of East Frederic. Winkler was transported by Rural Metro Ambulance to Coronado Hospital, where she was admitted to the outpatient unit for observation. Watson was cited for no insurance and expired motor vehicle inspection sticker.

sas — was strong enough.

News of her son's pending release caught Frieda Grinder of Springdale, Ark., by surprise Wednesday.

"I'm pleased," Mrs. Grinder said Wednesday. "I know he was expecting to get one last week. Gene was disturbed because it seems he wasn't getting any action."

The mother confirmed that Grinder was visiting her on the week of Sept. 13, 1986, when the mobile home on Red Deer Street in Canadian burned to the ground.

"I guess you can say he was a normal boy," the woman said about Grinder. "He had a few bad breaks, but that was about it. He was shot in the head when he was 15 — the bullet went right through his skull — so he's blind in one eye."

"We've just been taking one day at a time," she said.

Canadian Chief Bradshaw was suspended in April for the remarks made to a law enforcement class in Amarillo in March. The 46-year-old chief was fired

May 13 because of "failure to meet job probation requirements," Canadian City Manager Dean Looper said Wednesday.

"He had attendance problems, Looper said. "The suspension just magnified the other problems. At the end of the suspension, I had to hold his paycheck until he could come to see me."

Bradshaw, who now reportedly works as a security consultant for a Utah smelting firm, could not be found to comment.

Hardin said he is now investigating who did set the fire that destroyed the Canadian trailer.

safety and emergency programs under the new state law.

Another aspect of the Title III program is that the Department of Public Safety is designated as the main response agency in handling hazardous chemical spills on highways and railroads, Vaughn noted. The DPS will be the center agency in such situations but will be able to call in other assistance.

Locally, that would involve governmental services, emergency agencies and related business concerns forming the Gray County CAER organization, Vaughn said. But the DPS would have the responsibility of coordinating the response to hazardous materials spills on highways and railroads.

Vaughn noted another aspect of Title III is that cities and counties are required to designate an emergency management council. He said that the city has already named CAER as the official agency and that he expects the county also to appoint CAER as its official council.

A resolution designating CAER as the agency to gather emergency and disaster information and data and to coordinate the development of related plans will be presented soon to the Gray County Commissioners Court for action, Vaughn said.

Gulf convoy passes midpoint

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. warships today escorted two reflagged Kuwaiti tankers past Bahrain, the midway point of their voyage to Kuwait through the perilous Persian Gulf.

Gulf shipping sources said that the tankers and three warships steamed past the island state, roughly 250 miles south of Kuwait's al-Ahmadi oil terminal, at mid-morning. They are expected to complete their 500-mile trip Friday.

The convoy, which originally included three U.S. warships, traveled without incident Wednesday past Iranian missile batteries in the Strait of Hormuz, considered the most potentially dangerous leg of the trip. It linked up with a fourth Navy warship, the cruiser Reeves, late Wednesday, maintaining top alert until 10 p.m. local time.

The convoy was to sail later today past Iran's Farsiyyah Island.

efforts to release terrorists being held in a Kuwaiti prison as part of a complicated deal that would send arms to Iran and win the freedom of American hostages in Lebanon.

Shultz said it "made me sick to my stomach that anybody would talk about that as something we would consider doing."

The list of details that Shultz said he didn't know about was a long one.

He disclaimed knowledge that Reagan had formally approved the sale of arms to Iran until many months later. He said he didn't know of the direct sale of U.S. arms to Iran until nearly a year after the fact.

Discussing his learning about the arms-for-hostages plan involving a proposed Kuwaiti release of terrorists, Shultz said he called the White House and tried to get an appointment with the president to tell him, but was rebuffed.

He said he then called Reagan directly the next day, a Sunday, and told him he needed to see him "right now."

"The president was astonished" when Shultz delivered the news, the secretary of state recalled. "I have never seen him so mad."

Bullock: Texas budget balances at long last

AUSTIN (AP) — About 12 hours after Gov. Bill Clements signed a tax bill that exceeded the figure he had vowed to veto, Comptroller Bob Bullock said it was large enough to balance the $38.3 billion 1988-89 state budget.

The $5.7 billion tax package got Clements' signature late Tuesday, shortly after lawmakers approved it, and it got Bullock's crucial certification Wednesday.

In his 1986 campaign, Clements promised Texans no new taxes despite an increasing state deficit caused by declining oil prices. The tax measures he wound up signing added up to the nation's largest-ever state tax increase, according to an economist for the National Conference of State Legislatures.

"In a nutshell, you can say in absolute dollars, if you don't take inflation into account and if you don't take the size of the state into account, it is the biggest," said Steve Gold of Denver.

Clements said he was reluctant to sign the bills.

"I certainly am not happy about them. They are higher than I would have liked. They're higher than other people, other leaders in the Legislature, would have liked. But I also want to quickly add that we did what we had to do."

The budget battle ended Tuesday night after a hotly partisan battle in the Texas House. It took a complicated series of procedural maneuvers to get the plan approved.

"I am persuaded that the citizens of our state will be more than happy to pay an increased three-quarters of a cent on the sales tax. And I'm persuaded that the professionals will pay an increased $110 for their fees with a smile on their face. I don't think we overburdened any particular section of the economy," said Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio and tax-bill sponsor.

The comptroller's staff Wednesday prepared charts showing that even with the tax increase, Texans face a tax burden that is far below the national average.

The increase means Texans' annual tax load will be $53.76 per $1,000 in personal income. That is an increase of $3.36 per year. The national average is $74.11 per year.

Calculated on a per-person basis,

Texans will pay $730 a year in state taxes, up from $667 in 1986 and below the national average of $973.

Clements said it adds up to relatively little.

"I think the people of Texas will understand that we had to balance the budget and that we have stopped the growth of government. That's my message this morning," said the Republican governor who had vowed to veto any tax increase above the $2.9 billion that would have been raised by keeping the sales tax at 5 1/2 percent and the fuels tax at 15 cents per gallon.

As of Oct. 1, Texans will pay a 6 percent state sales tax. The present 5 1/2 percent had been scheduled to roll back to 4 1/2 percent on Sept. 1. Many Texans also pay 2 percent in city and mass transit sales taxes. Under the tax bill, the increased sales tax also will be collected on 17 services that had been exempt, such as garbage collection, janitorial services and exterminating.

The state's franchise tax, which had been $5.25 per $1,000 of capital in Texas, was increased to $6.70. The tax bill raised the cigarette tax from 20.5 cents per pack to 26 cents.

Many professionals, such as physicians, lawyers and accountants, will pay a $110 annual occupational tax.

The effective dates for the increases vary.

In a separate bill, also signed Tuesday night by Clements, lawmakers voted to keep the motor fuels tax at 15 cents per gallon.

Gramm wants protection for Panhandle groundwater

AMARILLO (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm says the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency should issue new rules protecting groundwater in an area of the Panhandle under consideration for a high-level nuclear waste dump.

Republican Gramm told EPA Administrator Lee Thomas in a letter this week the agency must fully protect those who depend on the Ogallala Aquifer if the government builds a high-level waste dump in Deaf Smith County.

The 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston Friday took exception with proposed EPA rules permitting radioactivity in drinking water near waste sites at levels higher than allowed under the Safe Drinking Water Act.

The court ordered EPA to rewrite the rules or explain the "apparent inconsistency and irrationality" in permitting higher levels of radioactivity in drinking water near a nuclear repository.

"Serious new regulations from EPA should at least serve to protect the water that Panhandle residents, including farmers and ranchers, rely on," Gramm said in his letter. "And they may preclude the construction of a nuclear waste repository in Texas altogether."

"I urge you (Thomas) to issue new regulations that will fully protect vital water supplies in the High Plains Aquifer, which consists of both the Ogallala and Santa Rosa aquifers. This critical water source must be fully protected by the agency's new regulations."

If it stands, the ruling could be a key factor in whether to place a high-level nuclear repository in Texas, since it is the only one of three proposed sites that contains substantial amounts of groundwater, officials said.

The other two sites under consideration are in Hanford, Wash., and Yucca Mountain, Nev.

The court's rejection of the EPA rules could place the entire selection process for a high-level dump in jeopardy, said Dan W. Reicher, who argued the case on behalf of the Natural Resources Defense Council.

A 1982 statute requires the government to develop the nation's high-level radioactive waste repository to dispose permanently of spent fuel piling up at the nation's commercial nuclear reactors.

EPA and Justice Department officials are considering whether to seek a rehearing by the full appellate court on the issue.

Bank error leads to $1.3 million suit

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two Fort Worth area businesses are being sued by a Bedford bank because the bank made a $290,000 error.

Allied Bank of Bedford, which made the error, is suing Spacecraft Machine Co. and Bell Helicopter Textron for a total of $1.3 million, court records indicate.

The bank claims in the suit filed Wednesday that Spacecraft improperly spent $290,000 credited to its account in error, and that Bell contributed to the bank's loss by failing to detect and report the mistake earlier.

The suit alleges that in June 1986, Spacecraft, a Fort Worth machine shop, deposited a check from Bell into the Spacecraft account at Allied Bank.

But instead of crediting the account with $322,227.64, the amount of the check, the bank credited the Spacecraft account with $322,227.64. The same amount was withdrawn from Bell's account at another bank.

Allied officials claim in the suit that before the error was discovered, Spacraft officials improperly spent the money on tools and equipment.

The bank claims in the suit, Spacecraft officials "knew or should have known" that the six-figure deposit was a mistake since the Spacecraft account previously contained less than $4,000.

Bell discovered the mistake about four months later and Allied returned the $290,000, the suit says. When bank officials turned to the Spacecraft account, they found the money was gone.

In fact, the account was overdrawn by $1,200, the suit alleges.

The suit asks for $290,000 in actual damages and $1 million in exemplary, or punitive damages.

David Casey, an Allied lawyer, says negotiations with Spacecraft officials about a possible out-of-court settlement broke down last month.

The only explanation offered by Spacecraft official Ed Shuman was that he "never looked at the account, that it was his bookkeeper who did," Casey said.

Shuman would not comment on the case, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

Of tornadoes, rudeness & ghouls

So? Where were you at 6:38 p.m. on Tuesday, July 14?

That's been a fair topic of conversation for more than a week now, with nearly everyone having tales of where they were, what they saw and how they reacted.

Me? I was in City Hall, covering a City Commission meeting. It took an observant fellow newsman — Dave Alexander — to notice the warning sirens were going off and to bring them to our attention. Otherwise, we might just have continued on with the meeting.

Instead, we all scurried down to the City Hall basement, where shortly we were joined by a hundred or so others: police, other emergency personnel, people hurrying in from off the streets and at least three teams of young baseball players.

All in all, most handled it fairly well, chatting with each other, trying to learn what was going on, some even pitching in and helping the police keep back the water that was flooding the hallway. There were a few tears, some uncertainty and anxiety on faces — but, on the whole, most were cooperative and, to an extent, anyway, tried to keep out of the way of the emergency personnel running around gathering and disseminating information on the storm.

There were two incidents that marred the event a little, though. One was that too many people used the telephones in the offices that were opened up to us to try to call family and friends. Nothing in essence wrong with that, except that it tied up telephone lines that the police were trying to use to receive information and to call others out to help in the emergency situation.

Another was probably a smaller event, but it really placed a pall over the cooperative spirit that was present. At least, it did for me.

In one of the rooms where many of us had crowded in, one woman became upset because another woman started to smoke a cigarette. And I can't blame the smoker, since she was only trying to calm her nerves amid a somewhat hectic and scary situation.

But the first woman, in one of the rudest acts I've been witness to lately, demanded in a loud voice that the other, mild-mannered woman put out her cigarette, implying that the smoker was endangering everyone else's lives in that small room.

Somehow, with a tornado already having hit the city and the possibility of others descending from the sky to wreak havoc, I couldn't see why the slight possibility of others of us catching cancer at some unforeseen future date took precedence over the fact that we were in the midst of a dire situation in which anything to help someone remain calm seemed OK to me.

Sure, there's obviously some virulently anti-smokers around, and there's the possibility — as the complainer indicated — that someone might have been allergic to cigarette smoke. But inexcusable rudeness is not the way to handle the situation. There's always polite and tactful ways in which to ask a smoker to put out a cigarette or go somewhere else.

At that time, however, I couldn't help but think the complainer should have been the one to leave. Her brash remarks were embarrassing to the rest of us, and I soon noticed several people edging out of the room to find some "cleaner" air elsewhere. I was one of them.

The only thing that night I noticed that was even more rude and insensitive were the ghouls crowding the streets and roads after the storm to go catch a glimpse of the damaged trailer park and the homes in the residential area hit by the tornado.

I'm sure there were a few family members and friends trying to see if others were safe. And there were probably even a few trying to see if their trailers or homes were still standing.

By far, however, most were just out to get a look. And I can understand the curiosity. But immediately after the storm is not the time to go sightseeing. That can always wait until the next day.

Instead, all that the vultures did that Tuesday night was to show some unreal gall and to create traffic jams for emergency vehicles trying to get to the scenes. I saw one car almost run over a policeman who was trying to direct traffic. Others were actually angry and upset because they were diverted from the scenes and not allowed to exercise their ghoulish feelings.

And it can't be ignorance that caused so many to rush out to the damaged areas, though I'm not certain there weren't some ignorant ones out on the roads. For years emergency and law enforcement personnel have asked that people stay away and let them do the jobs they are trained to do without having to take time to keep curious sightseers away.

But apparently education doesn't stick. You see the same crowds rushing behind ambulances and fire trucks, or gathering around violent encounters, or collecting around an accident scene.

In such situations, there are people that should be heading to the scene. But chances are it ain't you that should be the one.

Rains nurture shrub fatal to range cattle

ODESSA (AP) — Heavy rains this spring helped a toxic shrub grow in abundance on land where Doug Hardcastle runs his cattle.

Hardcastle, who leases a ranch near Odessa, says he lost 52 steers in one week to rayless goldenrod.

It took only days for the cattle to die a slow, trembling death after eating the poisonous plant, he said.

Odessa veterinarian Debra Grathouse said there is no treatment for infection from rayless goldenrod.

The toxin's symptoms include trembling and stiffening of limbs and lack of coordination.

Woman finds stolen car at movie drive-in SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A San Antonio woman said she had given up on getting her stolen car back when it pulled in next to her at a drive-in movie.

Martha Rojas said she bought the 10-year-old yellow and black Pontiac Firebird for $350 Sunday and it was stolen from a downtown hotel on Monday.

Mrs. Rojas and her family went to a drive-in movie the next night. "I hadn't been to the drive-in in six or seven months," she said. "I figured if the police hadn't found it by Tuesday, forget it."

"I was surprised when the car pulled in during intermission," Mrs. Rojas said. "They had painted the fenders red, but it was my car."

Afraid that she might frighten away the car's occupants if she tried to confront them, Rojas said she sought the assistance of security guards at the drive-in.

"One guy took off running when the security guards arrived," Rojas said. "The rest of the people stayed inside the car."

Charged with unauthorized use of a vehicle was Alfredo Fonseca.

How to Prevent Accidents When Digging Near Underground Gas Lines

Natural gas is delivered through a system of underground piping. Some of these pipes might be located beneath the ground where your excavation work is to be done. Personal injuries and property damage can occur if the pipes are struck or disturbed by digging, drilling or blasting.

Before excavating, drilling or blasting, you or your contractor should check to see if any underground gas lines are located in or near the proposed work site.

Call "TESS" Before You Dig

Just call "TESS" toll-free at 1-800-DIG-TESS (1-800-344-8377) to reach the Texas Excavation Safety System. Indicate the location in which you will be working. If the gas company or any other participating "TESS" members have underground facilities at your proposed excavation site, trained field personnel will be dispatched to mark or stake them at no cost to you. The "TESS" phone line is in operation during normal business hours. Please call 48 hours in advance of any excavation operations.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Control of foreign policy is the issue

"Our adversaries laugh at us, and our friends recoil in horror" — such is the effect, Lt. Col. Oliver North testified, that the current spectacle in Congress is having on American foreign policy. The show consists of a truly amazing display of congressional irresponsibility.

At heart is a simple constitutional issue. To what extent does congressional control of the budget extend to actions by members of the executive branch? Democratic liberals in Congress say that, because Congress approves all federal salaries, no White House employee can sneeze without approval from Capital Hill.

In contrast, the White House insists that its staff is free to conduct any legitimate duty, so long as government funds aren't wrongly spent. In particular the Constitution grants the executive sole power to conduct foreign policy. If this is not the case, the White House has become the servant of, not the co-equal branch to, Congress.

Oliver North's actions are a perfect case in point. As a Marine officer, Congress pays his salary. But he worked for the White House. One of his duties was to raise private funds — not the public money lawfully controlled by Congress — for the democratic resistance trying to restore freedom to Nicaragua.

Who was North's true boss, the executive branch or Congress? If Congress, then the constitutional separation of powers has collapsed.

But that hasn't happened yet. As seems inevitable with anything important nowadays, the Supreme Court likely will settle the issue, almost certainly keeping the separation of powers as stated in the Constitution.

If the congressional inquisitors want another opinion, they should listen to the American people they claim to represent. Americans by the hundreds of thousands have rendered their own verdict: Ollie North was right.

Having watched the testimony on television, these common Americans have heard the words of North and his former boss, John Poindexter, and been convinced. They now realize what's truly at stake in Central America.

That point was emphasized in another way this month when 200,000 Nicaraguan refugees who have been living here illegally were granted political asylum in the United States. The refugees resemble other refugees who fled here — from Nazi Germany in the 1930s and 40s, from the Soviet-bloc throughout this century, and from Communist Cambodia and Vietnam the past decade.

The new refugees fled because the Communist Sandinista junta has expelled almost all of Nicaragua's Jewish population, severely persecuted Catholic and Protestant citizens, ended political and property rights, failed to hold democratic elections, and invaded its peaceful neighbors.

"Plain and simple," Oliver North testified, "the Congress is to blame because of the fickle, vacillating, unpredictable, on-again, off-again policy toward the Nicaraguan democratic resistance."

Reagan didn't bother to ask

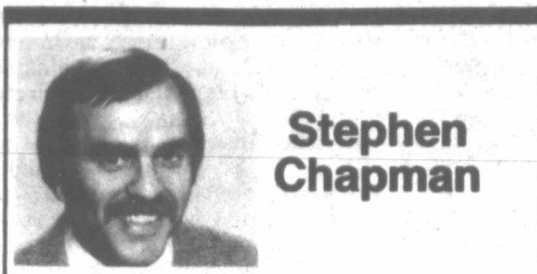

The congressional Watergate express, which had been running on a full head of steam, last week suddenly ran out of track. The declaration of former national security adviser John Poindexter that he alone authorized the diversion of funds from the Iran arms deal to the Nicaraguan rebels, without ever informing President Reagan, leaves the investigators stranded, unable to advance and unwilling to retreat.

The investigation isn't over. Conceivably, other witnesses or evidence may emerge to refute Poindexter. But the congressional committee was visibly deflated by his testimony, which removes the chief rationale for its deliberations.

The president allowed that he was "gratified" by what his former aide said, but the White House staff shouldn't be popping the corks on any champagne bottles. It would have been disturbing to find that Reagan had approved the diversion and repeatedly lied about it. It is only slightly less disturbing to find that his national security adviser approved the measure and concealed his action from the president.

But then Poindexter worked for a phenomenally uncurious boss. Asked if Reagan ever wondered how the contras were managing to stay alive despite the loss of American aid, he replied, with supreme understatement, "The president is not a great man for detail." Later, he said he didn't remember ever telling Reagan that the National Security Council staff was helping the rebels. "He knew that the contras were being supported," Poindexter said. "We didn't get into the details of who was doing what."

Reagan has a limited use for details, like the detail of why he sold arms to Iran. Poindexter said that in December 1985 the president signed a presidential finding describing the sale as a trade for American hostages in Lebanon. When the investigation began, Poindexter thought-ly destroyed the finding. Reagan has insisted for months that the arms weren't originally meant to be a ransom. Now he says that though he doesn't dispute Poindexter's account, he can't remember signing the document. Another detail. Other presidents have paid more attention to appointments to the Postal Rate Commission than this one paid to sending weapons to a sworn enemy.

It's a mystery how a president could function in such a lackadaisical manner. But it's not real mystery how this national security adviser got the idea that he could bypass the chain of command and act on his own to help the contras. A pervasive contempt for democracy made the usurpation possible.

This administration is fond of noting the difficulty of protecting covert operations when Congress is informed. The complaint is well-founded, as Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., proved last week by leaving a confidential administration briefing and announcing the dates that U.S. ships would begin escorting Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian Gulf — the precise facts the administration wanted kept secret.

In this affair, though, secrecy was stressed for reasons having nothing to do with security. Poindexter destroyed the arms sale finding not to preserve lives but to protect Reagan's political fortunes. He refused to inform the president of the diversion purely because he wanted him to be able to escape the blame for defying Congress's expressed will.

This is now how a democratic government is intended to operate. Presidents are elected to take political risks. The reason they are entrusted with the power to make crucial decisions is that they are accountable to the voters. Elected officials are free to oppose the majority's wishes, but only if they are willing to answer for doing so. In that way, the ultimate sovereignty of the people is guaranteed.

When an unelected bureaucrat gives himself powers that belong to the president, he frustrates the essential purpose of representative democracy. What Poindexter accomplished was a clandestine coup d'etat, unknown to the president or the people.

But Poindexter himself is not the only villain. His actions were encouraged by a president whose respect for the law, with regard to the arms sale or extralegal aid to the contras, was minimal. The nature of democracy is that disputes are settled peacefully, by voting instead of bloodshed. The social contract it entails obliges the losers in any dispute to accept their loss responsibly, in exchange for the freedom to keep working to reverse it.

The administration, in the case of the Boland Amendment, wasn't willing to accept defeat. Nor was it willing to challenge the law in court. Instead, it chose to circumvent the law's literal requirements, while lying to Congress about what it was doing.

That isn't grounds for the only recourse available against a lame duck president, namely impeachment. But, regardless of Reagan's actual knowledge of what his subordinates were doing, it is enough to soil his record of achievement and to endanger the cause he was supporting in Central America. A discredited administration is the fitting legacy of a president whose ultimate defense is his claim to ignorance.

No news can be good news

I recently spent an entire week without any news. It was great.

I was out in the Greek isles somewhere sailing around and doing very little else and not once did I come into contact with even the slightest bit of news.

I had no idea what was going on in South Korea, with Iran, or with the latest analysis of how much longer the world population can make it without all of us dying of AIDS.

I became quite relaxed as a result of this. My food also tasted and digested better and the nervous habit I have of wiggling my left foot even went away.

I thought to myself, "I wish everybody could have such an experience."

It's the news that makes most of us worry and get ulcers and do stupid things like running five or six miles in extreme heat.

And you can't escape the news. So you don't read a paper for four or five days, and you avoid evening news broadcasts on television.

Somebody will still walk up to you and say, "Hey, did you read in the paper where the earth is getting hotter and will burn to a crisp sometime between next Monday and the year 3030?"

If you don't have the news to disturb and concern you, your outlook on life, I discovered, improves dramatically.

Lewis Grizzard

You can watch the beauty of a sunrise over the Aegean and say to yourself, "Nobody is stupid enough to blow all this up with a bomb."

You really can believe things like that when you're not getting any news.

You can watch three generations — father, his son, and his son — build a boat by hand on some remote island where fishing has fed the inhabitants for hundreds of years and come away convinced maybe there are some things and some people that a computer will never replace.

You can eat fresh tomatoes and cucumbers in a taverna with its own garden and forget there is such a thing as fast food or that if you eat too much bacon you can get cancer.

You can take a nap in the middle of the day and not give a damn what latest craziness had been attributed to Oliver North.

You can plunge into the clear sea in some deserted cove and never once consider who's going to get the Democratic nomination for president in 1988. (I personally think it's going to wind up being Sam Nunn, but who cares? An octopus could be about to grab your leg.)

You can visit a 700-year-old monastery and wrap yourself in the quiet sacredness of the place, and never once wonder how many people died that day in some nuthouse holy war.

You can breathe the salt air and feel the spray on your face as your boat chops onward under sail and it matters not that there is a new rock song out titled, "I Want Your Sex."

You can even look at a nude bather lying on the rocky Aegean shore sunning his buttocks and never once think of Ed Meese.

Then, after all that, you can take leave of that setting and buy the International Herald Tribune in the Athens airport, and the first thing you read is that Oral Roberts is now claiming he has raised the dead.

Film, I suppose, at 11.

Critics throw racist remarks at Inouye

By Chuck Stone

HARTFORD, Conn. — Americans are going through a great soul-searching, a re-examination of values — some of it painful, some of it exuberant, but all of it leading to an eventual rendezvous with truth.

Yet, the almost daily revelations in the Senate Iran-contra committee hearings have postponed the blessed assurance of knowing whether Lt. Col. Oliver North or President Reagan is telling "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

But national certainty centers on the morality of one patriotic Marine soldier.

Soldiering was very much on my mind as I watched the Senate hearings in this city where I grew up an irrepressibly proud New Englander. (I had come back for my youngest sister's second wedding. At 59, with two grown sons, Irene was still a radiant bride.)

I began reminiscing about one of the neighborhood gang's favorite games — playing soldier.

I would dust off my father's World War I uniform, then put on his leggings and his stiff-collared Army coat, which drooped below my knees. I usually led the "troops" because my father's coat had sergeant stripes. We only argued over who would wear the Purple Heart medal.

My father's Purple Heart was identical to the ones awarded Ollie North and Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, the Iran-Contra Committee chairman.

But North's Purple Heart gave him an advantage over my father and Sen. Inouye.

Nobody has disparaged North's ethnic heritage.

Nobody has insulted North's skin color.

Even those members of Congress who sharply rebuked North refrained from challenging either the sincerity of his religious convictions or the sanctity of his patriotism.

But North's supporters seem to delight in impugning his critics.

"The worst offense of this kind which can be committed by a polemic," lamented John Stuart Mill, "is to stigmatize those who hold the contrary opinion as bad and immoral men."

Some Americans stooped to this tactic by subjecting committee chairman Inouye to a pattern of scurrilous, racist behavior. They sent letters and made phone calls questioning whether, being of Japanese descent, he should sit in judgment of a "real" American like North.

It took a New Englander, Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., to denounce the attacks on Inouye's Americanism. His teeth clenched, Rudman informed North's supporters and other race-baiters that Inouye was a decorated American hero who had been recommended for the Congressional Medal of Honor and who had left his right arm on a foreign battlefield.

Another New Englander, Sen. George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, praised North, then eloquently taught Americans about God's non-partisanship and democracy's imperative to tolerate dissent.

Eventually, these hearings will unearth the truth and establish a sterner accountability to the American people.

Unfortunately, in the meantime, a resurrected McCarthyism has given a new lease on life to those reactionary dingbats who equate criticism of American foreign policy with support for the Soviet Union's totalitarian ideology.

It is a divisive tragedy this nation should shun as we celebrate the 200th anniversary of the Constitution.

Dior preview

Who fashions our body images?

By JOAN LEBOW

The scales are always sensitive in the weight debate, and the fashion industry is often the heavy. Critics say designers use starved-looking waifs to set standards of beauty that make "normal" women feel dangerously inadequate.

Seventh Avenue counters that today's models are heavier than in recent years, and have never been more physically fit. They say designers favor mannequins that reflect the public's interest in athletics and nutrition. Most models may be thinner than the average aerobic-class straggler, but they are nothing like those emaciated child-women of the Twiggy era. What's more, large-size beauties are now enjoying unprecedented attention.

Should the fashion industry take the rap for young women's body-image problems? Rising rates of eating disorders among women today have some doctors convinced there's a direct link between these diseases and "fashionable" thinness.

"Undoubtedly, the desire to emulate the figures of mannequins has contributed to an epidemic of anorexia and bulimia," says New York University psychologist Dr. Donald B. Giddon. He says designers initially chose the shapeless "clothes rack" figure to highlight their designs — not the bodies wearing them. Women misinterpreted that to mean extreme thinness is stylish too.

By some estimates, about 4 percent of American women suffer from anorexia nervosa (failure to eat) and bulimia (binging followed by purging with the aid of laxatives or vomiting). These illnesses are fatal for approximately 8 percent of those who seek treatment.

Dr. Adel A. Eldahmy, a psychiatrist from Long Beach, Calif., is founder of Anorexics-

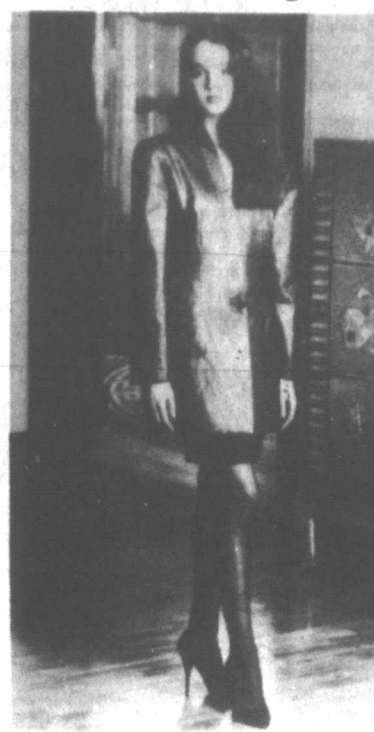

Some like it curvy: A voluptuous figure was the ideal for an earlier era.

Bulimics Anonymous, a young organization of 10 chapters, most of which are California-based. Eldahmy is now trying to organize a national association aimed at changing fashion's "thin is in" credo. The group would comprise doctors, apparel- and cosmetic-industry executives, and fashion editors.

"Magazines show us that if you're thin, you're attractive, successful and in control," Eldahmy says. "We need to see models that are more like real people."

Eldahmy met with a handful of New York City fashion executives in June to discuss the industry's impact on eating disorders and his plans for a media campaign to combat the problem. Eldahmy's views prompted enough resistance to suggest that the long road ahead might just turn into a dead end.

Thin-think has become the '80s fashion credo.

Shelley Clark, public-relations director for designer Hanae Mori, attended the meeting. "No one in the fashion industry wants to admit responsibility for promoting an unhealthy image," she explains. "It's a societal issue that comes from many places."

It's not just the fashion industry that touts a thin ideal. Women in advertisements and movies and on television are lean and glamorous — far slimmer than the "glamour girls" of the 1940s.

Architects of these powerful images say they simply reflect what our society wants to see.

Television soap operas, for example, are more likely to be set in sprawling mansions than in cramped apartments, not because we live that way, but because, gee, wouldn't it be nice if we did?

At the New York meeting, Eldahmy heard arguments based on similar grounds. "If the American public was dictating that it wanted to see plump women walking down a runway, we would give it to them," Robert Raymond, executive director of the Council of Fashion Designers of America, told the gathering.

Others complained that today the fashion industry needs to concern itself more with AIDS than anorexia.

Participants in the meeting did agree to form an advisory committee to look at the fashion industry's role in promoting eating disorders. But even those who admit a connection between the two say it is naive to expect a significant change in current beauty standards.

Modeling agencies within the fashion business often take the heat for promoting the starvation look. New prospects need to be a tall size 6 or 8, and are often told to lose weight. Most agencies, however, discourage crash diets and stress healthful eating and exercise.

Jerry Ford, president of Ford Models, says, "It's true that in the '50s and '60s models were almost anorexic. Today, yes, they have to be thin, and pretty, but above all designers want to see young women who look healthy."

Eldahmy concedes that he's seeing a trend toward less scrutiny and more radiant-looking models, and gives the industry some credit.

"The healthy look is coming back, but slowly," he states. "I just want people to speed up that momentum."

Man's favorite jokes are humiliating to wife

DEAR ABBY: My husband loves to tease me. He has two favorites he uses all the time. I know he's teasing, and he assures me that everyone else knows he's teasing, but I still feel uncomfortable when he repeats these old "standards." Furthermore, I dislike the implications in his statements.

He often says, "I'd like to die in bed getting shot by a jealous husband." And if another man pays too much attention to me, he'll ask him, "Are you trying to steal my wife, you horse thief?"

Everyone laughs, and I always smile and try to act amused, even though one of his little jokes assumes sexual activity in another woman's bed, and the other calls me a "horse."

I've asked him to please stop teasing me that way, but he keeps it up. Should I continue to smile and act like I don't care? Or can you give me a snappy retort I can use to retaliate?

HURT IN HOPATCONG, N.J.

DEAR HURT: Forget the "snappy retort," and don't smile and act amused when he tries to get a laugh at your expense.

When he's in a good mood, and you have plenty of time and his full attention, tell him that he hurts you deeply when he repeats these tasteless put-downs. And unless he retires those tired old jokes, you will know that he is deliberately abusing you.

DEAR ABBY: Today it happened again: The phone rang just as I put my key in the door. You might have been calling to buy something I had advertised in the paper, or I might have forgotten to pay a bill, or you needed my husband to unclog your drain, or perhaps you wanted to hire my son's band for a party you're having next week and you're as desperate as he is. Whatever the reason, you didn't wait for my answering machine to finish its message, and by the time I picked up the phone, you had already hung up. Perhaps it was your loss, perhaps it was mine. But remember, you called me!

Even if you don't leave a message, there may be someone on the other end. Say hello. If you do leave a message, I promise to get back to you as soon as possible. Please don't just hang up when you hear a recorded message. It's so very frustrating!

MISSING CALLS

DEAR MISSING: I appreciate your frustration, but please understand that some people are intimidated by "machines." Don't sweat it. If it was important, they'll call back.

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "I'll Never Smile Again," who opted for extensive cosmetic dental work as opposed to having all her teeth extracted for dentures, was correct but incomplete.

People should keep their natural teeth as long as possible because one's teeth act as a support for the jaw and prevent bone loss. Once the teeth are removed, the ridge of bone that once held the teeth begins to deteriorate.

This causes an ongoing cycle of ill-fitting dentures, and all too often ends in a complete inability to wear dentures at all, as there is no ridge of bone left to support them!

As an oral surgeon, I have seen this happen many times. A person who has all of his teeth extracted for the "convenience" and "savings" of dentures may well end up in my office years later for surgical implants.

Keep telling your readers to keep their natural teeth, Abby.

SMILING IN EVANSTON

DEAR SMILING: I have consistently told my readers to keep their natural teeth. Furthermore, a dentist with integrity will do everything possible to save his (or her) patients' natural teeth.

Tri-State President Dr. Joe Donaldson sends a putt toward the cup.

Broyles leads Tri-State

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Pampa County Club's golf course is starting to look more like Jake Broyles' own backyard. That's how well the Lamesa golfer is playing the 6,010-yard layout.

Broyles, the 1986 Tri-State champion, shot a one-over par 72 Wednesday to take the first-round lead in the '87 Senior Tournament.

Four players, including last year's runnerup, Jack Williams of Plainview, are chasing Broyles. Williams is tied with Vernon's Everett Gaudin, Canyon's Ken Bailey and Lubbock's J.B. White at 73.

"I love this course. The greens are so nice and smooth," Broyles said after Wednesday's round. "I did miss a two-foot birdie putt on No. 18 that would have put me in better shape."

Broyles did birdie Nos. 13 and 17 to help him slip away from Bailey, who was three strokes up on Broyles after the first nine holes. Bailey, the West Texas University golf coach, had four bogies on the back nine to give the lead to Broyles.

Williams, the '82 champion, also had his problems on the finishing nine. He stood even par at the halfway mark, but a bogey on No. 10 and a double bogey on No. 16 spoiled his chance at taking the lead.

Broyles also won the tournament in 1983 and was runnerup in 1985.

Chester Darnell of Pampa is the only Pampa golfer in the championship flight. Darnell shot a 75 yesterday to put him in a seventh-place tie with Jack Bolt of Midwest City, Okla.

The championship flight will be cut to the top 16 players counting ties after 36 holes, while the other 16 drop into the president's flight.

This year, the championship flight has been reduced from 72 holes to 54. The final 18 holes will be played Friday.

The championship flight tees off at 12:30 today. Changes were also made in the first through eight flights. Winner and losers both play the full three days while Wednesday and Thursday's match-play winners go onto stroke play Friday with the remainder of the consolation brackets.

Tonight, at 7:30 p.m., the Colonel Bogey award winner will be named at the annual Senior Banquet, which will be held at the Pampa Country Club.

Results after Wednesday's first round of play are as follows:

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT

1. Jake Broyles 72; 2. (tie) Everett Gaudin, Jack Williams, Ken Bailey and J.B. White 73; 6. Buddy Grantham 74; 7. (tie) Jack Bolt and Chester Darnell 75; 9. (tie) Milton Kasch and Harvey Eshleman 76; 11. (tie) Bob Robinson, Tommy Pletcher, Myron Dees, Bernard Tomicki, Harold DeLong.

Rangers 'walk' to win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers manager Bobby Valentine's is thankful his strategic moves against the Toronto Blue Jays didn't work.

"I was juggling things to keep Mark Eichhorn out of the game," Valentine said after his Rangers had literally walked to a 5-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays. "I didn't know that I should have been playing to keep him in the game."

Eichhorn, a sidewheeling right-hander, relieved left-hander Gary Lavelle with two runners on and two outs in a 3-3 game.

He proceeded to walk Steve Buechele, Jerry Browne and Scott Fletcher to force home two runs to give Texas the victory.

"Believe it or not," Valentine said, "one of the things we've been working on in the second half is taking pitches, to not be over-aggressive at the plate."

"I tell the players that if they're not willing to give you a pitch to hit, let the next guy get up there and drive in the run. So far we've been real good at it."

Lavelle, 1-2, opened the eighth by walking Pete Incaviglia. After a sacrifice bunt and a popout, he walked pinch-hitter Mike Stanley and turned things over to Eichhorn.

He walked Buechele on four pitches to load the bases.

"He didn't even come close to the plate," said Incaviglia, who was on second at the time. "Those balls broke five feet. That's not like him."

Browne, the rookie who leads the Rangers in walks this season, said he decided to let Eichhorn dig himself a deeper hole by not swinging until he had two strikes.

"I was going to work him all the way," said Browne, who earned his first major league game-winning RBI. "No way I was going to swing at bad pitches."

The pitching victory went to reliever Jeff Russell, 3-1, who went 1 1-3 innings in relief of starter Bobby Witt. When Russell got in trouble in the ninth and Mitch Williams added to the problem by hitting the only batter he faced, Dale Mohorcic relieved and earned his 13th save.

The victory was the second straight for the Rangers over the Blue Jays, who had won nine of the first 10 meetings this season.

Witt struck out 10 batters in his seven-inning stint and only one of the three runs charged to him was earned.

"Witt pitched well," said Toronto manager Jimmy Williams. "He's got quite an arm. If he learns to harness his pitches, he's really going to win a lot of games."

Witt fanned two batters in each of the first three innings, during which time his teammates gave him a 2-0 lead.

"Witt had good velocity and a good slider," said Valentine. "It's a shame he couldn't stick around to win."

In the Toronto fifth, a single, a walk, another single and Incaviglia's throwing error gave Toronto to a 3-2 lead, but the Rangers tied it in the seventh with Fletcher getting the run home with a squeeze bunt.

Astros' Scott blanks Expos

MONTREAL (AP) — When Houston Astros pitcher Mike Scott talks about emerging from a slump, that has to be bad news for National League hitters.

Scott, the Cy Young Award winner who is the leading candidate to claim the top pitcher honors in 1987, scuttled the Montreal Expos on four hits in a 7-0 victory Wednesday night. The right-hander then sat before his locker following the 10-strikeout performance and declared that he may have emerged from a mini-slump.

"That's probably the best outing I've had since San Diego," Scott said, alluding to a game against the Padres on June 25. Scott lost that game and has had a no-decision, a victory and two defeats since.

"I kept hoping it would come around, and tonight I was real happy with the way things went. I had decent control with my split-fingered fastball and the velocity on my fastball was there."

The velocity was overpowering enough to fan 10 batters for the sixth time in 22 starts, five of which have resulted in complete games by Scott, who has pitched three shutouts.

"In the games I pitched after San Diego, I didn't feel I had the good fastball," Scott said. "When you don't have confidence with it, you start to pick corners."

"You tend to do a lot of things you don't normally do."

Scott, 11-6, figured to right himself against the Expos, the team he had held to one run in 16 innings prior to the start. He shut them out on two hits on May 8, and the latest shutout lowered Scott's earned-run average against Montreal in 1987 to a miniscule 0.36.

"Scott has a good fastball, a good split-fingered fastball and he doctors a few pitches once in a while when he needs it," Expos Manager Buck Rodgers said.

Spotting Scott some early runs isn't recommended, but that's what the Expos did. Billy Hatcher made it 1-0 in the first inning when he led off with a single against starter Bob Sebra, 6-10, before stealing second, taking third on a wild pitch and scoring on Gerald Young's groundout.

Ashby's ninth homer, leading off the sixth, and an RBI single by Scott two outs later, extended the lead to 4-0.

AL All-Stars ousted by Tulia

Tulia defeated the Pampa American League All-Stars 18-7 Wednesday night in the Texas West District Bambino Tournament at Optimist Park.

The loss eliminated the Pampa team.

The Pampa National League All-Stars can wrap up the district title with a win over Tulia tonight. Gametime is 7 p.m. If Tulia wins, the finals will be played Friday night to decide the district champion.

The Babe Ruth Senior State Baseball Tournament begins Saturday in Optimist Park with Pampa going against District Two champion Hereford at 7 p.m. Saturday in the opener.

Pampa drew a bye in district play since they are the host team for the state tournament.

Bret Mitchell, who has won six of seven outings this season, is tentatively scheduled to start on the mound for Pampa.

"The kids are all fired up. They're ready to play some ball," said Pampa Coach Wayne Barkley. Hereford defeated Plainview in the district finals to qualify for the state tournament.

Sunday, starting at 5:30 p.m., the District Four champion (still undecided) will meet the District Five winner, either Graham or Mineral Wells. The Pampa-Hereford winner will meet Groom or Dumas at 8 p.m. Sunday.

The double-elimination tournament finals will be Wednesday night. The Senior Tournament is for players 16 through 18 years of age.

Coaching Pampa is Gerrel Owens, Wayne Barkley and Mike Summers.

Tournament director is Gary Coleman.

Some Tri-State trivia

Some trivia items are of interest pertaining to this week's Tri-State Senior Golf Association Tournament:

o This may be the 53rd annual tourney, but there have only been 29 separate tournament winners. Red Gober and J.R. Brown won the tournament more times — four — than any other player.

o Gober won in 1944-46 and again in '48; Brown captured the top prize 1955, '57, '59 and '62.

o Five different linksters have won the event three times while seven others have grabbed two crowns.

o Several golfers in the tourney's history have come close to winning several times. San Antonio's Web Wilder was runner-up five different years; J.R. Brown placed second four years and Red Gober and J.R. Ferguson were runners-up three years.

o A great many of the area high school football coaches will depart this weekend for Ft. Worth and the Texas High School Football Coaches Association Conference.

Head football coaches and/or athletic directors from most all the schools in The Pampa News circulation area will be in attendance.

Pampa coaches leave Sunday for Angel Fire, N.M. for a retreat to try to solve 1987's problems before they occur.

Canadian coaches have chosen not to go to the yearly convention either, also opting instead to hold their own private retreat.

Wildcat coaches will bust heads concerning the upcoming

By Jimmy Patterson

athletic season at an undisclosed location in Oklahoma.

o Countdown: Fall football workouts are now just eighteen days away. Opening night for the '87 prep season is a mere 43 days from now.

o A few area coaches — namely White Deer's Windy Williams, Canadian's Robert Lee and Pampa athletic director John Kendall — have been adding to their educations by attending summer semester classes. Williams and Lee have been students at West Texas State; Kendall has been learning more at East Texas State in Commerce.

o BASEBALL TRIVIA: Before the Yankee's Don Mattingly performed the feat on Monday, who was the last first baseman to record 22 putouts in a single game? Answer follows ...

o If you didn't take notice of it, last Sunday's game between Texas and New York featured a couple of oddities: Ranger pitcher Bobby Witt came to the plate and recorded the first at bat by a Texas pitcher since Fergie Jenkins did it in 1974. Witt struck out, incidentally.

Also, Yankee catcher Rick Cerrone took the mound for New York. Cerrone pitched only one inning, but allowed no hits, no runs and struck out one. His one strikeout, coincidentally, came against Witt. What a circus that one was.

o For those of you who may not have remembered, it was last year at this time when the Texas Rangers began their skid.

The Rangers had been on top in the west for much of May and June last year, but immediately following the All-Star game they began a seven-game losing streak. For the most part, that put them out of the hunt for the AL West title for the remainder of the year.

In order to bring to an end the losing skid, the Rangers brought on supposed phenom Mike Loynd.

Loynd did beat the Cleveland Indians to get the Rangers temporarily back on track.

If you'll notice, Loynd — the Rangers' 1986 version of David Clyde — has a less than spectacular 1-5 record this year with an ERA of 5.27.

TRIVIA ANSWER: Ernie Banks recorded 22 putouts at first base for the Chicago Cubs in 1963.

Wheeler, Canadian ranked high in football magazine

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

The Canadian Wildcats and Wheeler Mustangs have high hopes of winning their respective districts in the 1987 high school football season, according to the 28th annual edition of Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine.

Where other area teams are concerned, though, if you are apt to agree with Campbell's predictions, the gridiron outlook isn't too promising for 1987.

Campbell's high school staffers have chosen the Wheeler Mustangs the preseason favorite to win the District 1-1A North Zone.

The pick is based mainly on the Mustangs' 24 returning lettermen, and the fact that Wheeler was a state semifinalist in '86.

Campbell has not only picked Wheeler to win its district, but also to finish as the top team in Region I and the fourth best team in the state in Class 1-A.

Canadian fans also have something to look forward to. Texas Football has predicted the Wildcats to win the District 2-2A race, allowing, though, that they will need help at quarterback.

The Wildcats, according to the magazine, should be the number two team in Region I, behind only Panhandle.

Fans of the Pampa Harvesters are in for another hard luck year, so says the annual.

Frankly, dead last is the prediction. Even with new and proven head coach Dennis Cavalier, Texas Football has already taken a "wait until next year" attitude concerning the Harvesters.

Other predictions:

o Groom Tigers. Picked third in 1-1A South Zone, behind Happy and Vega.

o White Deer Bucks. Chosen as the sixth place team in 1-2A.

o Lefors Pirates. Sixth in District 2 Six-man football.

o Miami Warriors. Seventh in District 2 Six-man.

o McLean Tigers. Last in 1-1A North Zone.

o Shamrock Irish. Last in District 2-2A.

In Texas college rankings, the magazine has Arkansas winning the Southwest Conference. Texas Tech, they say, should finish fifth in the SWC hunt.

The West Texas State Buffs have been picked to finish second in the Lone Star Conference this year, apparently to be dethroned by Texas A&I.

Dave Campbell's Texas Football, considered by many college and high school football fans to be the bible of the sport in the state, hit the Amarillo newsstands Tuesday and is expected in Pampa early next week.

The following week, possibly Aug. 3, Pampa readers can expect the major area football annual — Top-O-Texas Football 1987.

Wrestling card set Friday in Pampa

Professional wrestling is coming to Pampa.

International Wrestling Federation is promoting three matches plus a tag-team event at 8:30 p.m. Friday night in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The main event features Ricky Romero against Dr. Death Rick Youngblood goes against Bobby Layne and George Dodgins clashes with Ted Heath in the other matches.

Tickets prices are seven dollars for adults and three dollars for children. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Autographs of the wrestlers will also be available to the public.

"We're going to try and come to Pampa once a month," said Promoter Henry Wyckoff. "I know there's lots of wrestling fans there."

Wyckoff can be contacted at 352-9382 for additional information.

Curry hopes for ring comeback

DALLAS (AP) — Prizefighter Donald Curry will be back in the ring again soon but only after getting away for a while, predict those closest to the former undisputed welterweight champion who suffered a disappointing defeat to Mike McCallum last week.

Curry called a news conference today to disclose his plans.

David Gorman, Curry's training adviser, and Akbar Muhammad, Curry's business agent, said they couldn't be sure of Curry's plans.

But both said they'd be surprised if the 25-year-old Fort Worth boxer quits because of his one-punch knockout loss Saturday night in Las Vegas, Nev., to McCallum, the World Boxing Association junior middleweight champion.

"The conversations we've had ... he's leaning toward fighting again," Muhammad said Wednesday. "He's had a chance to talk about it and reflect. He's gotten ticked off at himself."

Gorman, in whose Fort Worth boxing facilities Curry has made his rise over the years, said he talked with Curry Wednesday.

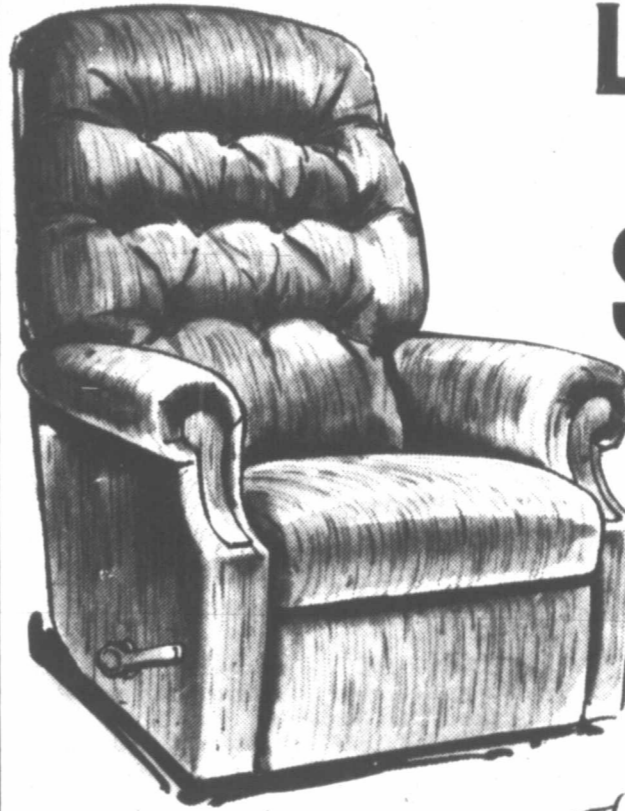

"His attitude is good," Gorman said. "From the conversation we had, I think he wants to take some time off and then come back with a rematch against McCallum — if McCallum will fight him. Don's not going to quit. Donald Curry won't walk out on a note like he did Saturday night."

Defense minister calls out military for storm clean-up

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—The defense minister called out the 600,000-man military today to help in rescue and rebuilding efforts following widespread flooding and mudslides that left at least 95 people dead.

Defense Minister Chung Ho-ying, issuing the unprecedented order, said, "All units ... except for some essential manpower needed for basic military operations and security, should assist in the rehabilitation work."

Thirty-two people were reported missing after Wednesday's fierce storm, the country's second weather disaster in a week.

Temples and schools were turned into temporary shelters for some of the 60,000 people left homeless by the tempest. The national Disaster Center in Seoul said 170 people were injured when the record downpour set off flooding and landslides in the central part of the country.

Officials said damage and casualty estimates were expected to climb since there were few details from areas cut off by flooded roads or poor communication.

The governing and opposition parties meanwhile temporarily suspended their efforts to draft a new constitution in order "to pay more attention to the flood damage."

A week ago, Typhoon Thelma swept across the southern coast with fierce winds and driving rain. Landslides and floodwaters engulfed villages and sank boats, killing 123 people and leaving 212 missing.

Wednesday's downpour was the heaviest one-day rain of the century—22.5 inches in the village of Sochun, according to the Disaster Center. A tropical storm swept over the southern provinces later Wednesday, dropping less than an inch of rain.

The tempest caused at least $22 million in damage, a center official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Television showed vast residential areas and agricultural areas submerged in muddy water. Officials said about 27,000 acres of farmland were flooded.

A Disaster Center official said streams had stopped rising today and "the worst appears to be over."

Thousands of relief workers, including army reservists, searched today through homes splintered by floods and landslides. South Korean and U.S. military helicopters alighted on flooded buildings to rescue people from the roofs. Other helicopters swooped over stranded villages to drop food and supplies.

Rainfall received in the area during the past three days amounted to half the annual average. Hardest hit were 12 counties along the Kum River, whose upper streams overflowed, sending thousands of people in downstream areas fleeing to high ground, officials said.

Prime Minister Kim Chung-yul, in his second week on the job, ordered officials to speed recovery efforts, a government announcement said. Kim Young-sam, president of the major opposition Renunification Democratic Party, called on the government to increase aid to victims.

Gorbachev endorses elimination of medium-, short-range missiles

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has advocated publicly for the first time the "global double zero" arms control option that would eliminate the superpowers' medium- and short-range nuclear missiles worldwide.

In comments reported Wednesday by the official Soviet news agency Tass, the Kremlin chief offered to scrap Soviet medium- and short-range missiles in Asia if the United States agrees not to deploy 100 mid-range warheads in Alaska.

In Washington, the White House reacted positively to the new Soviet stance, saying it improved chances for the signing of a major arms control treaty and a superpower summit in coming months.

The official Soviet position will be presented in Geneva today during a session of U.S.-Soviet arms reduction negotiations, said a Soviet spokesman in the Swiss city.

"The Soviet delegation will present the proposal for 'global zero-zero,'" said spokesman Evguene Yagozkin.

Tass said Gorbachev made the remarks in written replies to questions by the Indonesian newspaper Merdeka. The agency distributed the text of the queries and Gorbachev's answers.

Washington and Moscow last year agreed to eliminate medium-range missiles from Europe, with each side retaining 100 warheads on its own territory—the Soviet weapons in Asia east of the Ural Mountains.

High Reagan administration officials have over the past months said the United States hoped to include those warheads in the ban, but the Soviets had balked at agreeing to global elimination.

Gorbachev said the Kremlin "is prepared to remove the question of retaining those 100 warheads on medium-range missiles ... provided, of course, that the United States does the same."

He also said "shorter-range missiles will also be eliminated."

"In other words, we will proceed from the concept of a 'global double zero.'"

The United States has no counterpart to the Soviet shorter-range missiles, some of which are based in Asia and some of which are in Europe. Gorbachev had earlier offered to scrap the Soviet shorter-range missiles in Eastern Europe.

The shorter-range missiles have a range of 300 to 600 miles, while the medium-range missiles have a range of 600 to 1,500 miles. Both types are included in the Intermediate classification being discussed in Geneva.

The Geneva superpower talks have been de-locked for months and, despite Gorbachev's offer, a number of sticking points remain.

Among them, Moscow demands that the U.S. nuclear warheads for West Germany's shorter-range Pershing 1A missiles be destroyed as part of any deal. Washington and West Germany insist those weapons are outside the scope of the Geneva talks.

In Washington, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said of Gorbachev's comments: "It gives us some reason for encouragement in terms of the final treaty agreement as well as a possible summit." Fitzwater said of the announcement.

But he added, "We have seen statements of positive Soviet responses before only to later discover unacceptable conditions. We therefore look forward to seeing their official statement at the Geneva negotiations."

The official Soviet position was expected to be presented in Geneva today. Maynard W. Giltman, the U.S. negotiator on intermediate nuclear forces will represent the United States at the session.

The United States and the Soviet Union have been discussing a possible summit meeting between Gorbachev and Reagan in the United States sometime in the next few months. But the Soviets have declined to agree to one until significant results from such a meeting are guaranteed.

Transplants helped mother accept son's death

AUSTIN (AP)—A mother whose son died of head injuries suffered in a trampoline accident said donating his organs to three patients helped her deal with her loss.

"What better memorial can you have for a loved one?" Bobby Curry said Wednesday at her home in the western Travis County community of Briarcliff.

Within hours after Robert Alan Phenix died Tuesday, his heart and kidneys were transplanted into the bodies of three patients at Austin hospitals.

Phenix's corneas and parts of his bones also were removed and stored for possible transplants.

Ms. Curry said her son had never discussed the subject of organ donation in detail, but she recalled a brief conversation they had several years ago.

"One day we were watching a news show on TV about a transplant, and Alan turned toward to me and said, 'You know, mother, that is great. That is really wonderful.'"

Ms. Curry said the transplants helped her come to terms with her son's death and that she wanted to talk about the experience in the hope that it would encourage others to donate organs.

"At first I was grief-stricken, then it turned around into absolute elation. And today I don't really know how to express this so you can know my feelings," she told the Austin American-Statesman.

"It's such a beautiful emotion that I cannot tell you what to tell those people out there. You have sorrow, but you have a very warm feeling that your son did not die in vain. There was so much good that came out of that death."

Phenix, 40, was declared brain dead Tuesday at Brackenridge Hospital after he struck his head in a fall from a trampoline at his home.

The recipient of the heart was recovering Wednesday, said officials at Seton Medical Center's Central Texas Heart Institute. A 37-year-old man and a 39-year-old man were the kidney recipients.

A nationwide effort to find a suitable recipient for Phenix's liver was unsuccessful, said Shirley Williamson, transplant coordinator for the Organ Procurement Agency at Brackenridge.

Names in the news

HERNDON, Va. (AP)—Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs says he regrets not visiting Joe Theismann in the hospital when the star quarterback suffered a career-ending leg injury.

"I made a mistake," Gibbs said Wednesday in response to published excerpts from Theismann's new autobiography. "I should have found a way to get down there. I was wrong."

He said a hectic work schedule prevented him from visiting Theismann, whose career was ended after he suffered a compound fracture when he was hit by three New York Giants linebackers in a 1985 game.

In his book, "Theismann," written with David Kindred, Theismann says of his hospital stay: "There are two things I'll never forget about being there: Jack Kent Cooke (the Redskins' owner) came to see me, and Joe Gibbs didn't."

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—A Willie Nelson look-alike says more and more people are mistaking him for the country singer as planning heats up for Farm Aid III, Nelson's benefit concert for farmers.

"You want to crawl under something," said Stuart MacMillan, a 51-year-old truck driver from nearby Ceresco with long, graying hair and a weathered face.

Catastrophic health bill passed by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The most dramatic expansion of government health care protection for America's elderly since Medicare emerged from the Great Society legislation of the 1960s is headed for the Senate after resounding approval in the House.

The 302-127 margin by which the House passed the catastrophic health bill on Wednesday — well above the two-thirds majority needed to override a possible presidential veto — reflected the bipartisan support for the measure which has emerged as perhaps the most popular domestic issue of 1987.

Although President Reagan has signaled his discontent with some details of the version that sailed through the House, the foundation for the measure was laid by the president himself last February when he proposed that the nation's 31 million Medicare beneficiaries be provided protection against the dread of financially debilitating illness.

A substitute that more closely tracked the Reagan proposal failed on a 242-190, mostly party-line vote that preceded the overwhelming vote for the Democratic version.

In simplest terms, the bill that was approved tells the elderly that their hospital bills will not exceed a set amount per year — $544 in 1988 — no matter how long they have to stay.

It also says their doctor bills will not exceed a certain amount per year — $1,043 in 1989 — no matter how much they are billed unless they choose a doctor who charges more than Medicare considers reasonable. In that event, the individual would remain responsible for the higher charges.

By contrast, existing Medicare law provides full payment for only 59 days of hospitalization a year, after a one-time deductible that is $520 in 1987 dollars.

There is no limit on how much a patient may have to pay for doctor bills. After a $75 deductible, Medicare now pays only 80 percent of doctor bills no matter how high they rise.

Although the president's proposal also set caps, albeit higher ones on out-of-pocket expenses, the predominant response was that it did not go far enough on a variety of fronts.

For example, neither the president's bill nor the one pushed by Democrats would provide long-term nursing home benefits.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee that played a dominant role in crafting the bill, acknowledged that the Democratic version, "while similar in structure ... costs twice as much and helps twice as many people as the president's proposal."

The most controversial addition is a provision that would have Medicare pay 80 percent of prescription drug costs after a $500 annual deductible. Medicare now covers no at-home drugs except for organ transplant patients.

Some creditors unsatisfied with answers at PTL meeting

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A bankruptcy hearing in a movie theater answered some questions about PTL's plans for recovery, but thousands of people who gave the TV ministry $1,000 to become "lifetime" partners must await the sequel.

Some of the contributors who attended Wednesday's creditors committee meeting came away unsatisfied with the answers of PTL chief operating officer Harry Hargrave, who revised the ministry's debt down $4 million to $68 million and rejected selling off PTL land or other assets to repay that.

"He didn't tell us anything," said Barbara Zanesky, a contributor whose husband, Bob, is an attorney representing 250 big-money contributors whose donations helped build some of the evangelical empire's biggest holdings.

The six-hour meeting marked the first time creditors had a chance to question ministry officials. The normally routine court procedure was moved to a theater to handle the crowd of some 150 creditors and spectators. PTL filed June 12 for protection from some 1,400 people or businesses it owed money.

PTL's reorganization is complicated by the claims of 120,000 to 160,000 "lifetime partners" who say their $1,000 contributions make them either creditors or owners of two hotels and a water park at Heritage USA, PTL's Christian theme park in Fort Mill.

Hargrave repeated the ministry's position that the lifetime partners have no legal right to the property but said "morally we don't think it's right" to leave the contributors with nothing.

He said the contributors are the lifeline of the ministry and need to be dealt with fairly, but he could not answer specific questions on a compensation plan until it is completed in two to three weeks.

Hargrave also revealed that Richard Dortch, a former aide to PTL founder Jim Bakker, wasn't taken off the payroll until Tuesday. Rather, he was retained as a $13,500-a-month consultant.

Next goal of young aviator: Circle the globe

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 10-year-old pilot whose five-day flight made him the youngest aviator to cross the United States says his next goal is to circle the globe.

Christopher Lee Marshall and flight instructor Rowe Yates landed their single-prop Piper Warrior at Fort Lauderdale Executive Airport at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday. A strong tailwind helped the flight arrive nearly 90 minutes early from Meridian, Miss.

"The turbulence was fun — a little bumpy," the 4-foot-11, freckle-faced boy said as he clutched a teddy bear. "Next I'm gonna fly around the world."

Christopher, who hopes to be included in the Guinness Book of World Records, started his voyage Saturday in Oceano, Calif., his hometown on the coast 150 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

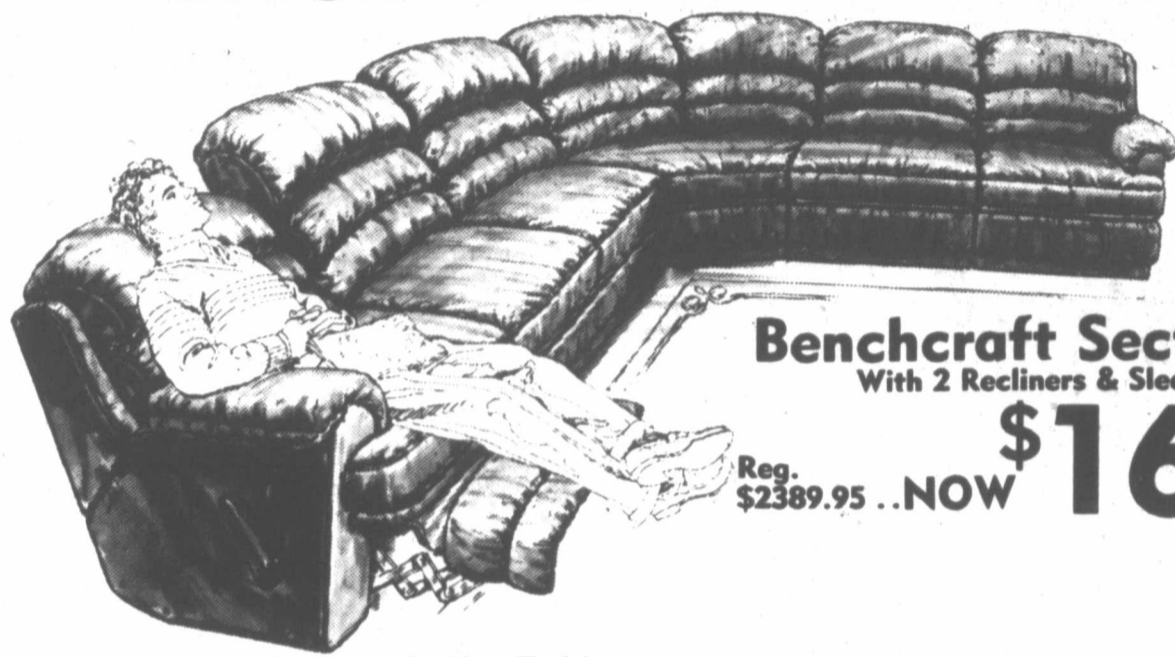

"We just sat back and drank Cokes and ate Snickers bars," Christopher said of his long flight.

Down on the FARM

WATCH UP FOR POWER LINES

Power lines can be dangerous.

Touching irrigation pipe to a power line can divert the electricity through the pipe ... and to anyone in contact with it. In this part of the country, this is the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths in electricity-related accidents. Any equipment of unusual height represents a potential danger. Lift arms on field equipment, combine auger spouts and even radio antennas can cause serious injury or death if they, and you, make contact with a power line.

Keep an eye up for power lines. Watch up, for safety's sake.
