King's intervention ends Thai violence

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Demonstrators and troops left the streets today and the government freed thousands of prisoners under a compromise brokered by the widely respected Thai king that halted four days of bloody protests.

But, pro-democracy activists voiced fears that Prime Minister Suchinda Kraprayoon, an unelected former army chief who led a military coup last year, would not soon relinquish power despite the agreement.

In a televised meeting, Suchinda and opposition leader Chamlong Srimuang knelt before King Bhumibol Adulyadej and were told to reach a compromise through a constitutional amendment that would allow only elected lawmakers to hold the prime minister's post.

The government today revoked a 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew it had imposed, withdrew troops from the streets and released about 3,000 people arrested during the protests against the military's continued domination of politics.

The stock market, after plunging Tuesday when the unrest was at its height, soared today on investor euphoria after the announced compromise, traders said. In a peaceful rally, about 100 people walked solemnly around Democracy Monument this morning, prayed for the recent dead and placed flowers on it.

The monument, along Bangkok's broad Rajdamnern Avenue, was the focal point of the demonstrations in which at least 40 people were killed and more than 600 injured. Many suspect the death toll is much higher.

Intervention by the revered 64-year-old king effectively stopped public demonstrations. But many were not satisfied.

"Dreams Die: Suchinda to Remain PM," headlined the daily newspaper Phoojatkarn, echoing sentiments of many interviewed following the compromise.

"We're not satisfied with the outcome, the compromise. We want Suchinda and his wife to leave Thailand," said Somsak Teerapong, a 42-year-old businessman who took part in the demonstrations.

Political groups gathered this morning to plot strategies for a meeting Monday at which parliament will consider the constitutional amendment behind which the king threw his support.

Pro-democracy groups have demanded Suchinda's ouster on grounds he is an appointed "outsider."

What shape the amendment will take, how long passage will take and how long Suchinda will retain his post remains unclear.

But while the demonstrators did not immediately achieve their objective of Suchinda's ouster, the king's call for a democratic amendment makes it virtually impossible for parliament to obstruct its passage.

Before dispersing early today, some protesters at a mass Ramkhamhaeng University rally said they would go back to the streets if Suchinda was not duly removed.

"If he doesn't step down, it will do more damage to Thailand's image and honor and the economy, and the country cannot accept that," said Nikom Tengyai, president of the Paper and Printing Federation of Thailand.

With the fiery protests stilled, Bangkok's populace turned to other forms of protest of the military's brutality, which included shooting with battlefield weaponry into crowds of unarmed people.

"Not for sale!" shouted a food vendor to a group of soldiers near the Interior Ministry. They walked away.

Utility crew workers search for a natural gas pipeline so that they can turn off the gas that caused an explosion that leveled the two-story building behind them Wednesday afternoon in Rochester, Mich. Authorities report one death and at least 14 injuries in the explosion.

Blast destroys building, one dead and 17 injured

ROCHESTER, Mich. (AP) — An apparent natural-gas explosion destroyed a two-story building in downtown during the evening rush hour, shattering windows as far as two blocks away. One person was killed and 17 others were injured.

"You could just feel it like right inside your gut," said Dave Heinen, a service station attendant. "Glass was falling everywhere."

The cause of Wednesday's explosion remained under investigation early today, police and utility officials said.

"We're not going to be able to confirm a cause until we can unearth enough of that building to reach the basement," said Tom Rugh, a Consumers Power Co. spokesman in Detroit.

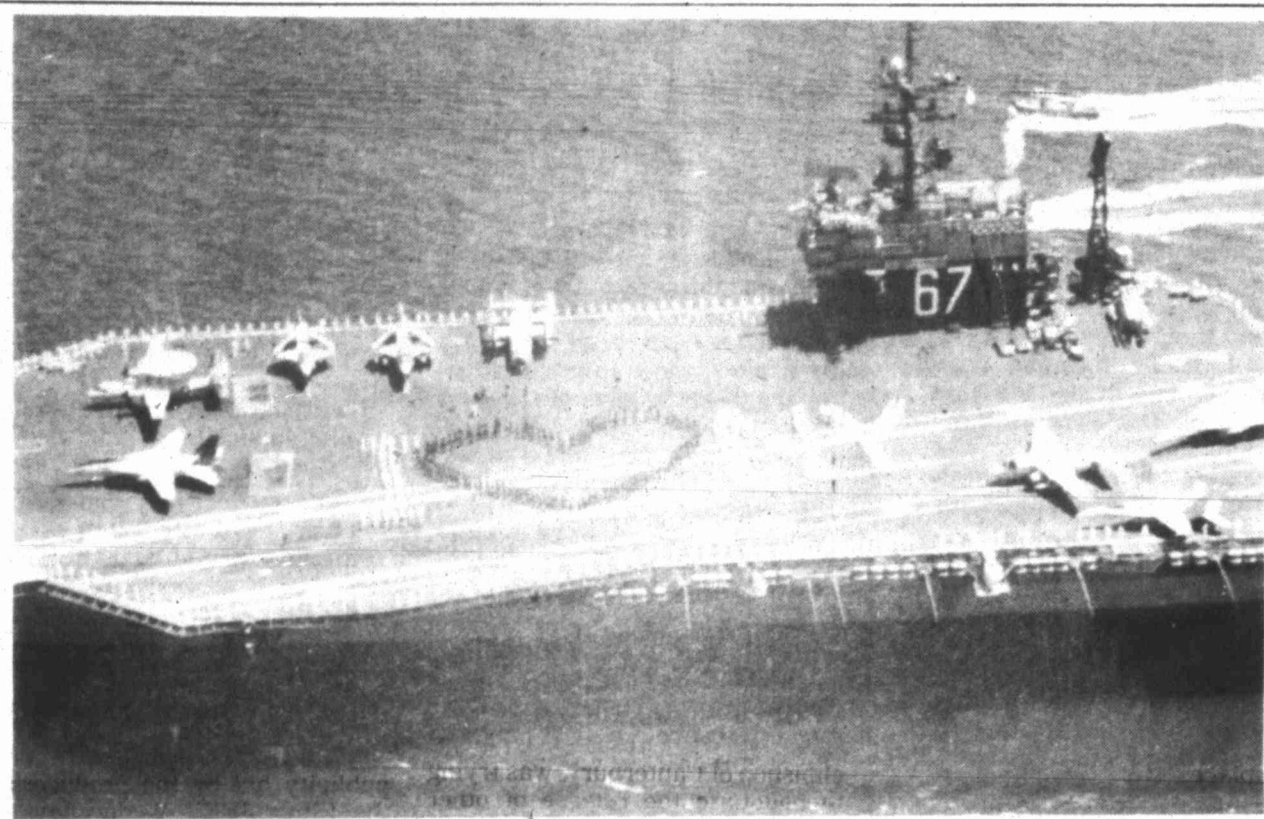

But about 20 minutes before the blast, contractors working on a downtown lighting project told the power company that they thought they had struck an abandoned gas line, Rugh said. Nearby businesses were told to evacuate and the blast occurred while a repair crew was en route, he said.

After the blast, crews ripped up the street outside the building to shut off the gas line. Authorities removed a section of line leading into the building for analysis.

Killed was Jim Nelson, 60, a consulting engineer for the lighting project, authorities said. Most of those injured were struck by flying glass from passing cars and businesses, police said.

Police dogs were used to search the rubble of the building, which had contained three ground-floor businesses and four second-story apartments. No other bodies were found.

Senate Republicans jump on voter registration bandwagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans, particularly those up for re-election, are beginning to join Democrats in believing that if it were easier to vote, the public might feel less disenfranchised with them.

With billionaire Ross Perot's independent bid for the presidency surging, even the White House is backing off earlier administration condemnations of a Democratic bill to register voters when they apply for driver's licenses.

Six Republicans bolted from their party's leaders Wednesday to help pass, 61-38, a Democratic bill requiring states to register voters not only when they apply for driver's licenses, but also when they seek welfare, disability or unemployment benefits.

Senate GOP leaders, who had filibustered the bill for three years, predicted President Bush would veto it, citing Justice Department assertions that the measure could spawn wide-scale voter fraud. But the White House itself issued no such threat.

Disabled veterans groups supporting the bill quoted Bush's counsel, C. Boyden Gray, as saying at a meeting Tuesday that the president and his top aides have not yet focused on it.

The bill's sponsors said 65 million people, or nearly one of every three eligible voters, are not registered. About 90 percent of them would come under one or another the bill's provisions.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said "Voters ... view the complexity of the system as a reason to stay out. In the wake of the recent riots in Los Angeles, we should all respect how important it is to make people believe that they have a stake in their society ... and not feel that the path of change requires violence."

The House, which passed similar legislation in 1990 only to see it die in the Senate, is expected to act on the measure in the next three weeks.

The six Republican votes for the bill were twice the number a year ago when Democrats failed again to break the filibuster. All three new converts — Sens. Bob Kasten of Wisconsin, Arlen Specter of Pen-sylvania and Bob Packwood of Oregon — face tough re-election fights this fall.

Another GOP supporter, Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon, said after the vote that other members of his party had indicated to him they were teetering on the issue. He dismissed as a "red herring" arguments by many Republicans that Democrats would use the bill to rig elections with illegal immigrants and other unqualified voters and that bigger turnouts can only hurt GOP candidates.

Padding needed for playgrounds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Around the playground, kids climb up and kids fall down, no matter how well-designed the equipment is. But the experts say kids don't necessarily have to get hurt when they go boom.

What parents, schools, day care centers and parks need to do — and most don't — is to make sure falls are adequately padded.

Concrete, hard-packed dirt, asphalt or grass are bad play surfaces. Good surfaces should be loose-fitting and at least nine to 12 inches deep.

"If it's very difficult to walk on, it's probably adequate," said John Preston of the Consumer Product Safety Commission. "If it's easy to walk on, it's probably inadequate."

Last year, nearly a quarter-million children under age 15 were treated in hospital emergency rooms because of injuries related to playground equipment, the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons said.

The overwhelming majority of playground injuries, some of them fatal, result from falls, statistics show. Other serious and fatal injuries result when swings hit children or kids get their heads or limbs caught in small openings on equipment.

Often new equipment is installed with padded surfaces, but old pieces on concrete play areas are left standing, Preston said.

He said even recommended surfacing — wood mulch or chips, pea gravel or sand — must be constantly maintained. After a day of foot-dragging on swings, children can wear away much of the cushioning, he said.

Some recreation officials are opting for rubber padding, which is expensive but retains its shape day after day without much maintenance.

"Probably as recently as four years ago people were real confused about what is a resilient surfacing," said Dale Miller, president of Playworld Systems Inc., a playground equipment manufacturer in New Berlin, Pa.

But he said the playground industry now has developed standards for its equipment and surfaces that are available to anyone installing equipment.

Play equipment should have a fall zone extending eight feet in all directions from the perimeter of the equipment.

Anyone interested in more information about playground safety can get a free copy of the commission's handbook by sending a postcard to Playground Equipment Handbook, U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C. 20207.

The American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons has a free brochure called "Play It Safe, A Guide to Playground Safety," available by calling 1-800-824-BONES.

Assess return on investment

The American dream is hindered by too many obstacles: unsafe cities, slow economic growth, an out-of-date education system and dependency-creating government programs. So said President Bush upon striking an agreement with congressional leaders to provide post-riot help for the nation's cities.

Mr. Bush announced a six-point "action plan" that attempts to lift those obstacles. It includes tax breaks for new businesses that locate in impoverished inner cities, an anti-crime initiative, incentives for home ownership, welfare changes, education reforms and jobs for inner-city youths.

The object, Mr. Bush said, is "to restore hope and to bring some cohesion to these communities and offer these young people some opportunities."

Each of the six planks of the president's urban agenda has merit.

The administration's proposed Weed and Seed program, for instance, is modeled after successful pilot projects in Trenton, N.J., and Kansas City, Mo. It aims to "weed" inner-city neighborhoods of drug dealers and violent criminals and "seed" these poor communities with job-placement and other social services.

The president's so-called HOPE program would provide grants to help public housing residents purchase and manage their dwellings. Initially, 36,000 low-income families would be eligible for home ownership. Another 65,000 would qualify later.

Mr. Bush proposes to designate 50 urban enterprise zones throughout the country over the next five years. Businesses that start up in such zones and provide jobs for inner-city workers would not pay federal taxes on profits made from their investment.

The president also would offer poor parents a choice of educating their children in either public, private or parochial schools. Unfortunately, school choice for the poor is the least likely of Mr. Bush's empowerment proposals to be approved by Congress.

The administration's welfare reform plank would encourage thrift among poor families by increasing the asset limit to $10,000 for recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children. As it is now, a poor family can lose its benefits if it saves more than $1,000, and even that paltry sum is not indexed for inflation.

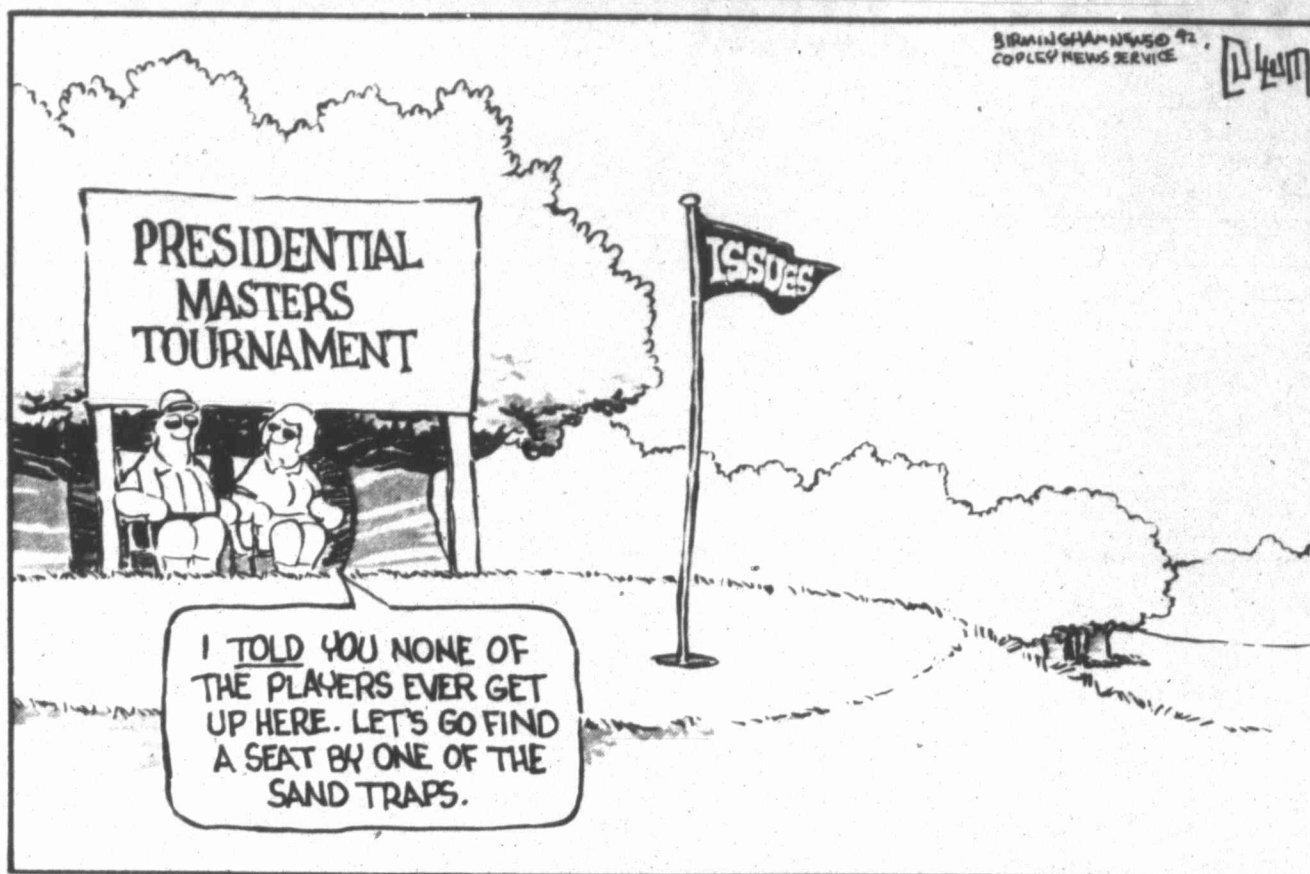

Finally, Mr. Bush aims to bring all of the federal job-training programs under one tent to improve the coordination, and thus the efficiency, of government efforts to train and employ inner-city youths.

Altogether, this adds up to a radical departure from present approaches to inner-city poverty, the President declared. If adopted, his action plan will cost taxpayers at least $2 billion.

Before the president and Congress move full speed ahead with a multibillion-dollar plan for inner cities, they should ask themselves whether it will provide more than a negligible improvement in urban poverty rates. If they can say with confidence that inner-city problems will subside appreciably, they should move forward. If they cannot, they should go back to the drawing board in search of bolder approaches to ameliorate the fundamental causes of urban decay.

Mom, Dad get to keep the dog

It's graduation time and the following scene is now being played out all over America:

"Mom and Dad, you people have been so good to me during my formative years and I have never done anything for you. I want to make it up to you."

"That's very sweet of you, son. What do you have in mind?"

"Now that I've graduated and must behave like an adult, I'd like to give you my dog Sandy."

"For keeps?"

"Yes, Mom, forever. He's yours unless I change my mind."

"But you've only had him for four months. Don't you want to keep him a little longer?"

"I do, but I have to think of the dog. He'd be much happier with you. Around me he'd be with someone who blows in from Wisconsin one day and out to Katmandu the next. In your house he'd have a safe harbor."

"But, son, we already have a dog. We aren't looking for a new friend."

"Ordinarily you have a right to feel that way, but Sandy is different. He's young and frisky, and in a few months he will be housebroken and you can let him have the run of the place. Sandy can't do much damage as long as you show him who's boss."

"Son, I'm sure that you have thought this through, but has it ever occurred to you that if we were in the market for another dog we know where to get one?"

"That's what the guys at school said you would say. But, Dad, I'm not only giving you my dog, I'm also giving you his dish. You will have no expense whatsoever. Sandy would be really upset if I gave him to strangers. In this house he will sniff my scent and know that he is living where his master once did. Please don't look a gift dog in the mouth."

"Why did you get Sandy if you had no intention of keeping him?"

"Because I love animals and I had every intention of keeping him until he ate the drapes in my girl's apartment."

"She must have been upset."

"She said something very childish such as either Sandy goes, or I go. But that's not why I am giving you the dog. I'm presenting him to you because I believe that Sandy will help you and Mom — he'll give you a reason to talk to each other."

"We get along fine now."

"Dogs can work miracles for people when it comes to communicating. I learned that in Psych 204."

"Would you be offended if we didn't keep the dog?"

"Why should I be offended? Maybe some drug dealer will find him and make him his pet."

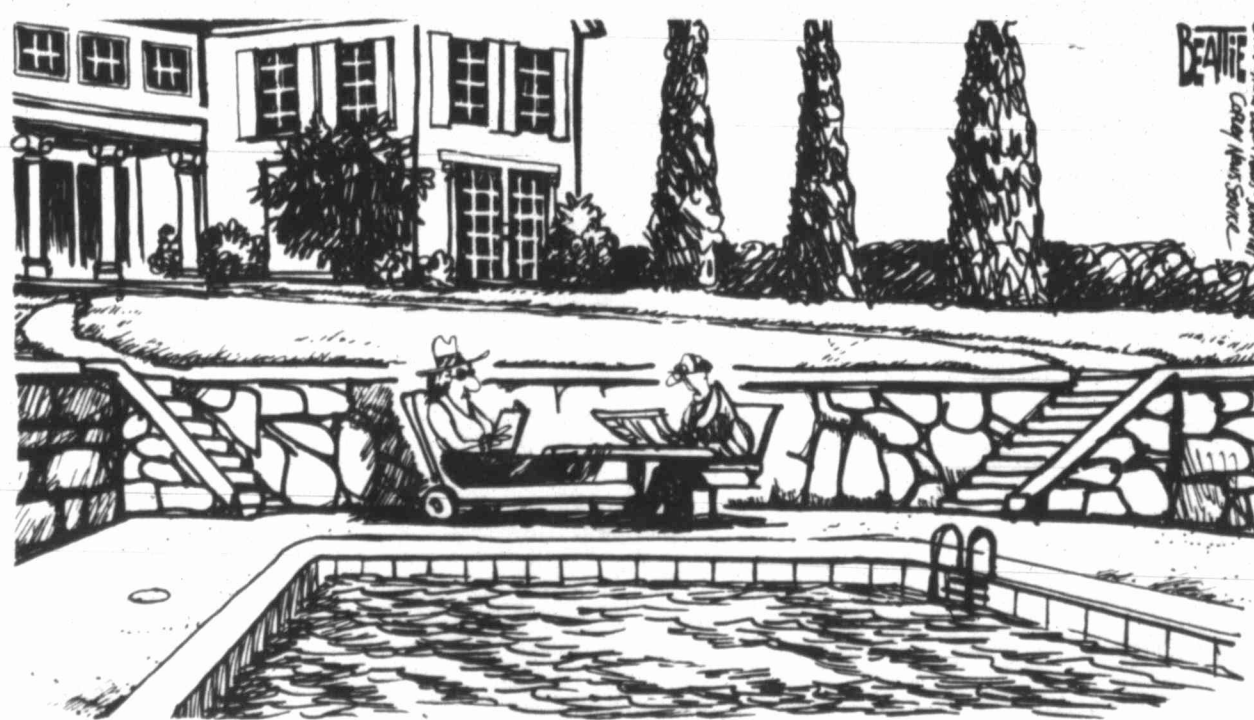

"If we don't take him, are you just going to kick him out in the street?"

"It isn't my decision, it's yours. If you don't want him, I'll have to do something so that he doesn't hate you."

"All right, we'll keep the dog, but you take him back as soon as you break up with your girl."

"Glory be. I'm blessed with the best mother and father in the whole wide world. If you hadn't raised me to be a mature, responsible person, I would never have had the guts to adopt the puppy in the first place."

Groups help victims of crime cope with the aftermath

By BRIAN SERAILE
Thomson News Service

WASHINGTON — Working as a police reporter in Richmond a few years ago, I spent a lot of time talking to a woman named Pat Booker who had started a group called Mothers of the Murdered.

I met her after her teen-age son was shot to death one morning when he and his girlfriend were awakened in their bedroom by intruders.

After her son's death, Booker used to clip murder stories from the newspaper and call or wander over to homes to give the victims' families comfort and support. She did this after she finished her full-time duties as a security guard at an area museum.

Guest column

If Booker lived in Washington, Mothers of the Murdered would be a full-time job and she'd probably need several assistants.

Booker began her group partly to help solve the murders but mostly because no one seemed to understand that she was a victim as well.

As the surge in violent crime continues nationwide, there will undoubtedly be a greater need for such groups, groups with names such as Parents of Murdered Children, Victims for Victims and Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

I thought about Booker recently when I was invited to an open house at the National Victim Center in nearby Arlington, Va.

It turns out the National Victim Center was founded by Alexander von Auersperg and his sister, Ala Auersperg Isham, in honor of their comatose mother, Sunny von Bulow.

Claus von Bulow, whose story was featured in the movie "Reversal of Fortune," was ultimately acquitted of charges he tried to kill his wife with an injection of insulin.

The von Bulow children "felt that they didn't really know their rights at the time," said Jessica Gross, a spokeswoman for the center, which may be the only good thing to come out of the von Bulow saga.

Since its founding, the center has grown into a national resource center with a database of thousands of grassroots victim organizations.

"Victims work for victims," Gross said. "That's how a lot of these organizations are created. We're like the mother hen or the umbrella. We're the guidance to people creating their own groups locally or nationally."

Board members include celebrities such as talk show host Joan Rivers and opera singer Beverly Sills.

The National Victim Center recently released a report concluding most forcible rapes occur during childhood and adolescence, and that the media influence whether women report rape.

"Crime usually has two victims," said Jean O'Neill, a spokeswoman for the National Crime Prevention Council. "The person and the community. Every time the sense of trust or the rules are broken, the community starts to fray a little bit. Pretty soon the fraying becomes unravelling and you have a whole bunch of people who are hostage to locks and bars and deadbolts and chains."

The need for crime has created a need for such organizations, O'Neill said, "not so much for the people wanting to know what's the best lock on their door but for people who say, 'I want to know what can be done. Something has to be done. We will do something.'"

A spring stroll in the garden

Random thoughts while waiting for the rain to fall:

Everybody sing: I come to the garden alooouooooo.

That's right, friends and neighbors! Just in time for Memorial Day (what that has to do with anything is up for grabs), it's time once again for a stroll in Uncle Stevie's Garden of Grammatical Delights.

Hot diggity.

Yesiree, I'm excited about this edition of the GGD, because someone actually took the time to call me and say how much she enjoyed the thing.

Talk about your proverbial bad apple... but I digress. For the uninitiated — or the blissfully unaware — the GGD is where we take a look at Uncle Webster's dictionary, find some strange-looking words, then try to define their meaning.

Abandon hope, all ye who enter here.

Well, time's a-wastin' and space is tight, so what say we get on with this thing?

The first word for our consternation — er, I mean, consideration — is howdah.

I swear I didn't make this one up.

Howdah, of course, sounds like a Brooklyn derivative of "how the," as in "Howdah heck did 'e do dat?" or "Howdah blue blazes you expect me to do dat?"

Well, dat ain't da right way to use da word, if you know whadda heck I mean.

Howdah, according to the dictionary, means a seat or covered pavilion on the back of an elephant or camel. After you place yourself in a howdah, however, you might start wondering howdah heck to get down.

Gee, are we having fun, yet?

The next word on the list is scumble.

It's words like this that make me think the English language isn't all it's cracked up to be.

Scumble, at first pronunciation, sounds like a fight involving some really despicable people, like, "Hitler and Mussolini got into a real scumble over the red-head."

Nah, that doesn't sound right. Could you imagine Jethro Tull singing, "Scumble in the Jungle?" It just doesn't have the right ring to it.

Anyway, the dictionary defines scumble as "to make less brilliant by covering with a thin coat of opaque or semiopaque color."

There are people who will swear, after reading this definition, that I've been scumbled for several years. All I can say to such obviously gauche people is a reserved "Pffftttt!"

The last word for today (did I hear a few hurrahs?) is windgall. Hmmm, this sounds like a wind with an attitude: "Imagine the windgall of that norther, Martha!"

No? Oh, well.

Windgall, for even the most mildly curious, means a soft tumor or synovial swelling on a horse's leg in the region of the fetlock joint — which is probably more than you ever cared to know about windgall.

Well, so much for today. Stay tuned, however, for future strolls.

You have been warned.

California Angels survive bus crash

DEPTFORD TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — California Angels' manager Buck Rodgers was the most seriously injured of the 12 passengers hurt aboard a team bus that overturned on the New Jersey Turnpike this morning.

Rodgers broke a right rib, right knee and right elbow, said Underwood-Memorial Hospital spokeswoman Debbie Given in Woodbury.

He was to be transferred to Thomas Jefferson University Hospital in Philadelphia.

Hall of Famer Rod Carew, a hitting instructor with the team, was among those injured and complained of knee and neck pain. His condition was being evaluated at the hospital in Woodbury.

"It looks like they were very lucky guys," said Sara Crispin, nursing supervisor. Everyone but Rodgers and perhaps Carew was expected to be released from the hospital today. Most sustained minor cuts and bruises.

The names of those injured, as provided by Tim Mead, Angels' assistant vice president, media relations, are:

Rodgers, 53; Ned Bergert, trainer; Al Conin, broadcaster; Frank Sims, travel secretary; Bobby Rose, second baseman, 25; Junior Felix, 24; Alvin Davis, 31; Gary DiSarcina, 25; Rick Turner, bullpen coach; John Wathan, 42; Ken Mocha, 41; and Carew, 45.

The driver of the chartered bus, Carl Venetz, 38, of Stanhope, told state police that he swerved to avoid debris in the road and lost control of the bus. Trooper Dennis White said Venetz, who complained of shoulder pain, faces charges of careless driving, the trooper said.

The bus was one of two buses transporting the Angels from New York to Baltimore.

The bus jumped the guard rail, traveled about 350 feet and then flipped over on its side, said White.

It stopped rolling just short of a 15-foot embankment, White said. Trees lining the roadway probably helped prevent the bus from rolling completely over, he said.

"It was scary. It was extremely scary," said Leonard Garcia, the Angels' equipment manager. "Thank God for the trees."

"It took a second to get our faculties. Once we did, it was just a matter of breaking the windows."

The Angels played in New York Wednesday night, losing to the Yankees 3-2 in 12 innings.

"This adds insult to injury," Garcia said.

The team has an off day today and is scheduled to play the Baltimore Orioles on Friday.

The bus was resting on its right side and the windows were about 15 feet off the ground, Garcia said.

Team members in the second bus following the lead bus rushed immediately to help the players out of the windows and the trainers got to work administering first aid, he said.

"Our team will be OK. I'm sure we'll have some aches and pains," Garcia said.

Those who did not go to the hospital continued their trip in the second bus. When they arrived in Baltimore, the players who were on the first bus but not injured refused to comment.

Angels' radio broadcaster Bob Jamison, who was on the second bus, said he did not see the accident, but the first bus appeared badly damaged.

Rudy T. new Rockets coach

HOUSTON (AP) — Rudy Tomjanovich has his own ideas about what it takes to be a head coach in the NBA.

He got a taste of it for 30 games last season as interim coach of the Houston Rockets. That was enough to convince him he wanted the job fulltime, and on Wednesday the Rockets agreed, giving him a three-year contract worth a reported $475,000.

"I don't think if you wear a nice suit or comb your hair back, you get wins," Tomjanovich said. "You do it on the basketball court, and there's a lot of blood, sweat and tears."

Last season, the Rockets got off to a 11-4 start after Tomjanovich replaced the fired Don Chaney Feb. 18.

"That's when I got the fever," Tomjanovich said.

But the Rockets then posted a 5-10 record in Tomjanovich's next 15 games, which included games when center Hakeem Olajuwon was serving a controversial suspension.

"What I needed to know was how I would react to the disappointments, and I believe we had some big disappointments at the end of the year, going right down to the last game," Tomjanovich said. "After that, I felt I could handle the negative part of it, too. That was a selling point to me that I could do the job."

Prior to the experience, Tom-

janovich wasn't certain he wanted to be a head coach after serving nine years as an assistant and scout with the Rockets.

"I think I've got a good idea now for what the job entails," he said. "I believe wholeheartedly that I can do well in this job."

Olajuwon has asked to be traded following his public feud with Rockets general manager Steve Patterson. Olajuwon claimed he could not play with a hamstring injury and the Rockets accused the center of faking an injury as a ploy to get a new contract.

Tomjanovich says he hopes Olajuwon will be wearing a Rockets uniform next season.

"Hakeem is under contract for the next three years," Olajuwon said. "He's a great player and our relationship has been very good. I'm looking forward to him beginning the season the way he ended it."

Patterson says the Rockets expect to get fair value if they do trade Olajuwon. Tomjanovich hopes it never happens.

The new coach said the Rockets would be looking for any way possible to improve the team. The Rockets will select 11th in the June NBA draft.

"We're looking at the No. 1 pick down through 15," he said. "We're at 11, but we have tapes from (Lou-Tomjanovich also expects improved timeliness from his team, a project he started as interim coach.

"We did slip up at times and I had to address it," Tomjanovich said. "But starting from scratch where you put in all of your rules, I don't anticipate it being a problem whatsoever."

And if there is a problem?

"I talked to (owner) Charlie (Thomas), and if we ever did get into a situation where we have to deal with someone in drastic or harsh measures, he's 100 percent behind me," Tomjanovich said.

"My approach to coaching is very similar to the way I played basketball. The way I got success as a player was through hard work. That's the way I'll coach. I don't think wins just happen."

Big Spring Steers sophomore first baseman Brandon Rodgers leaps for a high throw in recent baseball action. Today the Steers play Frenship in area playoff action at 6 at Lubbock's O'Banion Field.

Penn State strikes deal with Blockbuster Bowl

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — This season, fans will not experience the drama of waiting through a football season to see which bowl picks Penn State.

Unless they fail to win six games, the Nittany Lions will play Jan. 1 in the Blockbuster Bowl at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., against an opponent to be named later.

"I'm not surprised that it has happened," said Dave Cawood of the NCAA's special events office, which until last year required college football teams to wait until the third weekend in November to make a commitment.

A six-victory season in Happy

Valley is virtually guaranteed.

Penn State's first five games are against Cincinnati, Temple, Eastern Michigan, Maryland and Rutgers. The sixth is against Miami.

Thursday Notes

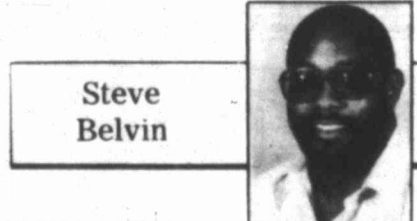

Roberson will play in All-Star tilt

Big Spring Steers senior Nick Roberson is among 70 of the state's best high school football players who will participate in the 1992 McDonald's Texas All-Star Football Game scheduled this summer in Dallas.

Roberson, an All-State safety who will play football for Abilene Christian University, will play on the North squad.

The game is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 4 at 7 p.m. at Texas Stadium in Irving. The North and South squads will arrive for practice on Thursday, July 30.

Other West Texans selected to play in the game are David Daniel of Rotan, Dee Marshall of Hamlin, Riley Malone of Iraan, K.C. Jones of Midland Lee and Kirk Kennedy of Rankin. Shea Morenz of San Angelo Central and Tony Daniels of Odessa Permian.

Issel named Nuggets coach

DENVER (AP) — Dan Issel's Denver Nuggets will employ a motion offense, focus on the defensive talents of center Dikembe Mutombo and, most of all, play hard every night.

Issel also will have the help of a braintrust on the bench.

Issel, making the not-unprecedented jump from the broadcast booth into the coaching box, was introduced Wednesday as the Nuggets' head coach. At 43, Issel has no previous coaching experience, so his transition will be eased by the presence of Gene Littles and Mike Evans on the Nuggets' bench.

Littles, former head coach and vice president of the Charlotte Hornets, was hired as Issel's No. 1 assistant.

Rothstein named Pistons coach

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons today named Ron Rothstein as head coach, succeeding Chuck Daly who resigned after nine winning seasons and two NBA championships.

Rothstein, a former Detroit assistant, was head coach of the Miami Heat from 1988-91 and worked as a Pistons broadcaster last season.

"When Ronnie became available, there was no question that this was another basketball man we would like to have on our staff," general manager Jack McCloskey said during a news conference at The Palace of Auburn Hills.

Rothstein, who had a 57-189 record in three seasons as the Heat's first coach, becomes the Pistons 18th head coach.

As a Pistons assistant coach from 1986-88, Rothstein was credited with installing the tough defensive style that later earned the Pistons the "Bad Boys" nickname and two successive NBA titles.

"The real point is, this is a man that will give this team every possible chance to win," McCloskey said.

The Pistons were NBA champions in 1989 and 1990 and Eastern Conference finalists for five straight seasons. The team lost to the New York Knicks in the first round of the playoffs this year.

"I can't be more happy or proud to be up here today as head coach of the Detroit Pistons," Rothstein said.

Rothstein had worked as an assistant coach for the New York Knicks and Atlanta Hawks before joining Daly's staff. He is a University of Rhode Island graduate with a master's degree from Hunter College.

He said he hopes to maintain a level of excellence that will allow the Pistons to remain a championship-caliber team.

Rothstein said he would emphasize physical condition for the current players and work at developing young players.

Daly resigned earlier this month and McCloskey is under consideration for the Minnesota Timberwolves' vacant GM position.

Before introducing Rothstein, McCloskey said he has spoken with the Timberwolves' management with permission of the Pistons and would do so again this weekend.

In other management decisions, Rothstein said the Pistons would hire ousted Houston coach Don Chaney, a former NBA coach of the year and an assistant at Detroit from 1980-83, as an assistant and would retain assistant coach Brendan Malone.

Rangers win fourth straight game

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jose Guzman, with fine relief from Jeff Russell in the ninth inning, led Texas to a 1-0 win and a three-game sweep in Cleveland.

Ruben Sierra singled home the only run in the sixth inning as the Rangers won their fourth straight. The Indians have lost five in a row and 10 of 11, and have been shut out seven times in 41 games.

Guzman (3-3) allowed five singles in 8 1-3 innings. Charles Nagy (4-3) lost despite allowing seven hits in his fourth complete game. He is the only Indians pitcher with a complete game this year.

American League

Athletics 4, Orioles 2

Oakland finished off a three-game sweep in Baltimore behind Bob Welch and Dennis Eckersley. The Orioles have lost a season-high four in a row.

Yankees 3, Angels 2

Charlie Hayes doubled home Jesse Barfield from first base with one out in the 12th inning as New York completed a three-game sweep at Yankee Stadium. New York is 7-1 on its season-long, 12-game homestand.

Expos rally to avoid Reds sweep

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Montreal Expos delivered several late messages — to their fans and, perhaps, to themselves.

Trailing 5-2 headed into the ninth and with Reds ace reliever Norm Charlton on the mound, the Expos appeared headed for a three-game sweep at the hands of Cincinnati. A lot of spectators must have felt that way, too, as they headed for the exits.

Then Montreal erupted for four runs, including Marquis Grissom's bloop single off Rob Dibble, to win it 6-5.

Padres 12, Mets 6

At San Diego, Tony Fernandez matched his career best with four RBIs, including a three-run homer, as the Padres erupted for a season high in runs.

Gary Sheffield, extending his hitting streak to 13 games, went 4 for 5 with a homer and scored three runs. Fred McGriff went 3 for 5, including a two-run double.

Braves 6, Cardinals 3

At Atlanta, Steve Avery, who hadn't won in nearly a month, allowed four hits in 8 1-3 innings and Brian Hunter hit a two-run homer and drove in three runs.

Avery, 18-8 a year ago, needed last-inning relief from Marvin Freeman, who got the final two outs, but also gave up one hit and one run. Avery walked five and struck out three as the Braves won for only the fourth time in 12 games.

Phillies 2, Astros 1

At Philadelphia, Terry

National League

Mulholland pitched 8 1-3 innings for his fourth straight victory. Like Avery, he needed relief, and Mitch Williams made it even more exciting than did Freeman for Atlanta.

Mulholland (4-3) gave up nine hits, struck out six and walked one. Williams came on with runners at first and second and walked Craig Biggio, loading the bases. He got Steve Finley to pop out to shortstop and Jeff Bagwell to fly out to right field to end it.

"That's why we pay Mitch ($3.1 million a year) what we're paying him," said Mulholland. "To tell you the truth, I was reaching back after the seventh inning for everything I had. And in the ninth I was losing it."

Giants 3, Pirates 1

At San Francisco, the Giants handed the Pirates their fifth straight loss behind Bud Black, who allowed four hits in 7 2-3 innings. Jeff Brantley got three outs for his fourth save.

Zane Smith fell to 0-7 against the Giants in his last 10 appearances. With the score 1-1, Will Clark and Cory Snyder hit one-out singles in the sixth before Matt Williams had a soft single over third that scored Clark. Chris James was walked intentionally and pinch-hitter Mike Felder hit a popout to shallow center field that Andy Van Slyke

Royals 7, White Sox 2
Hipolito Pichardo pitched five shutout innings to win his first major league start and Mike Bod-dicker finished for his first major league save as Kansas City won at Comiskey Park.

Gregg Jefferies hit his first major league grand slam, connecting in the fifth inning against Alex Fernandez (2-5). Jefferies had not homered since last Aug. 25 while with the New York Mets, a span of 277 at-bats.

Blue Jays 8, Twins 7
The Toronto Blue Jays were determined not to get swept again by Minnesota at the SkyDome, and they were ready to fight with the Twins and the umpires to make sure it didn't happen.

The Blue Jays, after clearing the benches in the fourth inning because of beanballs and filing a protest in the fifth because of suspicious bats, eventually wound up with an 8-7 win Wednesday night when Pat Borders singled home the deciding run in the 10th inning.

Tigers 4, Brewers 3
Mickey Tettleton's three-run homer with one out in the ninth inning rallied Detroit over Milwaukee at Tiger Stadium.

Chris Bosio, 3-0 with a 1.89 ERA against the Tigers last season, limited them to one run on three hits for eight innings.

caught. But he hesitated before throwing to the plate, and Snyder scored.

Dodgers 5, Cubs 3

At Los Angeles, Mike Sharperson pulled the Dodgers into a tie with a two-run double. Then he knocked the ball loose from catcher Joe Girardi later in the inning for the go-ahead run.

Down 3-1 in the fifth, Los Angeles rallied as Sharperson hit a deep drive to left-center field, driving in Eric Karros and Brett Butler. Kal Daniels hit a sharp grounder deep into the hole, where shortstop Jose Vizcaino made a diving stop and threw home. Girardi fielded the ball on one hop, but Sharperson barreled over him and the ball dropped.

Sharperson, on a May hitting binge, was 2 for 4 and now is 9 for 23 this month.

Chicago's Danny Jackson (0-6), a free agent signed in the winter of 1990, now hasn't won in 18 starts since last June.

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Jose Luis Noriega of San Diego came back from a layoff of nearly two months to win his first-round match in the NCAA men's tennis singles tournament.

Noriega, the second seed, defeated Duke's David Hall 7-5, 6-3 on Wednesday. Noriega had not played since late March because of a rotator cuff injury.

Other top seeds advancing Wednesday were top seed David DiLucia of Notre Dame; No. 3 Alex O'Brien of Stanford; No. 4 Brian MacPhie of University of South Carolina; No. 6 Wade McGuire of Georgia; No. 7 Roland Thornqvist of North Carolina; and No. 8 Yaser Zaatini of East Tennessee State.

DiLucia beat Dean Cohen of Miami 6-4, 6-2; O'Brien stopped Fredrick Eliasson of Virginia Commonwealth 6-0, 6-2; MacPhie outlasted Kentucky's Mahyar Goodarz 6-3, 3-6, 6-3; McGuire beat Texas Christian's Luis Ruethe 6-2, 6-2; Thornqvist stopped Laszlo Markovits of California-Santa Barbara 6-2, 7-5; and Zaatini edged UCLA's Robert Janacek 6-4, 6-4.

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — Better

schedule extra batting practice right before you face Tupelo High's baseball team.

The Tupelo pitchers have thrown a national-record eight no hitters this season, with junior Kirk Presley leading the way with three.

On Tuesday night, Presley no-hit Grenada HS 3-0 in the state 5-A playoffs.

The National Federation of State High School Association still must approve Tupelo's record.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants safety Lamar McGriggs is attending minicamp despite a 10-day stay in a Hackensack hospital last month.

"I thought I had a sore throat and it escalated," McGriggs said. "I was taking cough drops and the next thing I knew the whole side of my face and neck was swollen."

Doctors discovered two things. McGriggs had tonsillitis and an abscess had developed behind it.

McGriggs said a tracheotomy was performed to drain the abscess and he then spent more than the next week recovering. The tonsils won't be removed until after the season because he doesn't want to risk missing training camp.

"I still have to prove myself," said McGriggs.

telling the truth. Coleman was convicted in 1982 of killing Wanda McCoy, his wife's sister, who was found raped, stabbed twice and nearly beheaded in her home in the southwestern Virginia town of Grundy.

He was linked to the crime by semen and pubic hair samples found on the victim and by spots of blood matching her type on his pants. Prosecution witnesses included a jailhouse informant who said Coleman told him he raped the woman.

During appeals, a DNA test — conducted on semen by an expert hired by the defense — showed that Coleman was among 0.2 percent of the population who could have committed the crime. His lawyers said the expert misinterpreted the results.

The genetic evidence proved damaging anyway: In rejecting an appeal last week, U.S. District Judge Glen M. Williams cited the findings.

Coleman's attorneys also argued that he didn't have time to commit the crime; that tests showed semen from two men was found inside Mrs. McCoy; that another man bragged about murdering her; and that there was no coal dust found at the scene, although Coleman's clothes were dirty from work.

The defense was barred from presenting new evidence because it missed by one day a deadline for filing an appeal.

Jim McCloskey, an investigator from Princeton, N.J., who specializes in helping people he believes are wrongly convicted and who worked on Coleman's behalf, said the lie-detector test was a desperate attempt to save Coleman's life.

Clarification

A Tuesday story in the Herald regarding a loan guarantee for J&D Garage from Moore Development for Big Spring, Inc. indicated the business approached the board for a guarantee because it "is struggling with financial obstacles."

Business owner Jimmy Leffler said he approached the board to obtain a financing guarantee to open a new auto parts business, which would be operated in addition to his vehicle service center. Leffler said his garage business is doing well and that the guarantee request had nothing to do with the existing business.

ministrators and teachers — they have taken a lot of hits," Wilson said.

But at the same time, Wilson said the key to true innovation in education is to foster "crazies," a word Wilson used to describe teachers who are always thinking of new and better ways to better educate students, he said.

Wilson explained a four-part strategy for the revolution necessary to bring about an American 2000 community.

• Design world-class standards of education for Big Spring schools.

• Submit designs for a new generation of "break-the-mold" schools. America 2000 hopes to see 535 such schools in operation by 1996.

• Move from a population at-risk to a population of students. Wilson wants the community to work together to ensure that all adults are literate and have the skills necessary to compete in a global economy.

• Create a community conducive to learning. "Get the community involved — set aside politics," he said.

The program also has four immediate objectives to assist in producing an America 2000 system: Adopt the six national education goals; create a coordinating team to explore ways to reach the goals; create a report card to measure progress — to spot successes and identify areas where improvement is required; and be open to new ideas.

Open-mindedness is crucial to the support of a "New American School." Administrative flexibility is crucial for any major innovation in America's flagging educational system, Wilson said.

He said President Bush has asked Congress to make available a one-time funding of $1 million for a New American School in each congressional district. It is unclear, however, if this start-up grant will be passed by Congress, he said.

Wilson also cited the need to involve not only government and school boards, but the private sector and civic groups as well.

Concert salutes Texas, America

Big Spring Independent School District will present "A Salute to Texas and America" in its annual Spring Concert May 25. The concert begins at 6:30 at the High School Auditorium. There is no admission charge.

Band directors Joel Weisberg and Pat Daniel encourage and invite everyone to take part in this special event. The following bands will be featured Monday night: The Goliad Beginning Band, the Goliad Advanced Band, the Runnels Band, The High School Symphonic Band, and The High School Honors Band. In coordination with the concert will be a brief Band Boosters Meeting.

At this meeting Mr. Steve Hankins will be introduced to the community. He has been selected as the new Head Band Director. Hankins, along with his wife and two children have been residing in New Braunfels, where he has been very successful as the middle school director.

Upon his departure from New Braunfels, Hankins middle school band had over 300 students enrolled. "We are very excited about Mr. Hankins' arrival to Big Spring. His positive attitude and fresh new ideas are going to help put pride back into our band program. We are sure that you will want to take this opportunity to meet him Monday night," said Weisberg.

In keeping with the theme of the concert, each band will program a selection reflective of Texas and/or America.

The evening will be topped off with the playing of "The Stars and Stripes Forever" by the high school's Honor Band. This treasured American March will feature Piccolo soloists Kristen Marshall, Melissa Shelton, and Orlando Vera.

'WHO' program teaches kids to help themselves

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

Anderson Kindergarten students learned about strangers, touches, hurts and secrets during a special presentation of the WHO (We Help Ourselves) program Monday.

"If a nice-looking lady comes up to Miss Kitty in her car and tells Miss Kitty that her mother sent her to pick her up, should Miss Kitty get in that lady's car?" Ronda Doe, physical education teacher, asked the 6-year olds.

"Noooo," said a chorus of kindergarten students.

School nurse Glenda Low and Doe used puppets and a video tape, along with group discussion, to encourage children to protect themselves by "saying no, getting away and telling someone" if approached by another in an inappropriate manner.

The children were taught the three rules of the WHO program, say no, get away, and tell someone. And the children discussed where to go to get away.

"Go into a Seven-11 and tell the clerk that a stranger is bothering you. Don't just stand there, looking up at the store clerk. You've got to learn to tell people what's wrong. Or go to a neighbor, or run home if you're close to home," Doe said.

Hurts were discussed with the students, including the difference between serious hurts, such as bruises and broken arms, and hurt feelings.

"If these hurts leave bruises, scratches, burns or broken bones, do you know what it's called? It's called abuse. That's a hurt that doesn't go away today, and it might not go away for a long time," Low said.

Touches were explained to the children as being three separate kinds: good, bad and confusing. A hug was an example of a good touch. A bad touch might be a punch in the arm or prolonged tickling.

Larry the Lion taught the children about hurts. The video featuring the puppets used a panel discussion with Billy Brown Bear who spoke about good and bad touches and Kimberly Koala who taught about secrets.

Heidi the Owl was the commentator for the panel of puppets on the video.

"What is the difference in a secret and a surprise? A secret is something someone asks you to never tell, and a surprise is something you have to wait to tell," Doe said.

Doe said the koala bear should not keep hurts secret, and that telling someone that another hurt you will not get the student in trouble.

"If it hurts you and makes you feel bad, don't keep it a secret. It's not good to keep a secret if it hurt you. That's not a good secret," Doe said.

Touches were explained to the children as being three separate kinds: good, bad and confusing. A hug was an example of a good touch. A bad touch might be a punch in the arm or prolonged tickling. And a confusing touch occurs when a child is touched in the private parts of his or her body, Low said.

"Do you know what the private parts of your body are? The private parts are where your bathing suit covers, and no one can touch the private parts of your body but you."

"If someone touches you and it feels icky or funny, tell them no, get away and tell someone," Low said.

The program will continue in grades K-third next year, said Curriculum Director Helen Gladden. And the confidentiality of parents and students will be upheld at all times.

All Big Spring Independent School District nurses, elementary counselors and p.e. teachers received the training to present the WHO program during special sessions presented by Rape Crisis/Victim Services in April.

Volunteers with Rape Crisis will continue to the present WHO program to children in area day cares, Boy Scouts, the YMCA, the Howard County library and local churches, said Loretta Burns, WHO coordinator.

Ronda Doe explains to the children of the Anderson Kindergarten Center about how to react in some touchy situations. With the help of some puppets and a video, the WHO program helps kids learn to help themselves if and when an abusive situation arises.

Xeriscaping: to kill and replant

ASHLAND, Ore. (AP) — Principal Patty Wixon and teacher Tim Brandy smiled over the 10- and 11-year-olds doing their best to kill the lush green lawn in front of Walker Elementary School.

"My parents are really excited," said Willy Van Ausdal, 11. "My dad said, 'Wow, let's do it in our backyard.'"

What's going on here? In a word, xeriscaping.

The term coined by Denver's water department 10 years ago combines the Greek word for dry — xeris — and landscaping.

At Walker Elementary, the schoolyard is being xeriscaped with drought-resistant plants.

"It's catching on everywhere as people discover that even a wet state can have a dry period, and as people realize that by cutting water use, water systems can frequently cut down the amount of money they have to spend," said Cris Call, a conservation specialist for Denver Water.

"Xeriscape does not mean rocks and cactus," she added. "I've seen houses where they've taken out the lawn and replaced it with rock. We call that xeriscape. It's just ugly and not energy-efficient. True xeriscape can be beautiful."

Southern Oregon is going into its eighth year of drought, and by August, there could be no spare water in this city of 16,000. Lawns and landscaping account for about half the water used in the summer.

Without conservation, the city will outgrow the reservoir on Ashland Creek in four years, said Mayor Cathy Golden.

But xeriscaping, along with water-saving shower heads and toilets, will give the city another 15 years, providing as much water as a $20 million dam would, she said.

"Since Ashland is so low on water, we are teaching Ashland to use drought-resistant plants so we can use our water for things we really need, like drinking," Mikey Ensor, 10, said as the work got under way last month.

Joyce Ward, an architect whose daughter, Deven Ward-Thommes, is in Brandy's mixed fourth- and fifth-grade class, guided the pupils as they designed the $1,300 project. The city kicked in $500, and businesses and residents donated the rest.

The children spread old cardboard boxes over the lawn and covered them with layers of sawdust and bark. The cardboard will decompose and work into the soil. "It kills the grass but leaves all the microorganisms that are good for the soil," said Jennifer Hunter, 11.

Then the kids planted species that don't need much water, many of which are native to the surrounding Siskiyou Mountains. Shrubs include manzanita, dark star ceanothus and common snowberry, and trees are madrone and black locust. Ground cover is prostrate manzanita.

"I hope people will be patient and understanding, instead of driving by and saying, 'My God, what have they done?'" said Robbin Smith, who works in the city conservation department and helped the class. "It takes a little bit of time for it to mature and look visually acceptable."

The initial stage includes a small plaza about 20 yards by 30 yards in front of the library. Over the years, kids will work their way across the front of the school and add a gazebo.

Dick Wanderscheid, city conservation director, said he hopes the results persuade others in town to try xeriscaping.

"We're going to start a new fad," said Ea Jacobson, 11.

Children from Walker Elementary school in Ashland, Ore., prepare the grounds in front of the school for re-sowing grass and plants that require minimal water in this recent photo. It's called xeriscaping. From the Greek word xeris, or dry, and landscaping.

Goliad earns honors

The Goliad Middle School Beginning and Advanced bands earned the coveted sweepstakes award at the Snyder Band Festival held May 9 at Snyder High School.

The festival offers beginning and intermediate level bands and band students the opportunity to perform in concert, sight-reading, and solo and ensemble events.

The Goliad Beginning Band earned first division ratings in the concert event performing "Stonegate Overture" by John O'Reilly and "Kookaburra Variations" arranged by Paul Jennings, which featured cornet soloists Matthew Fleharty and Wesley Mouton. The Beginning band also earned a first division rating in the sight-reading event to complete the sweepstakes, which is awarded to bands earning the first division rating in both concert and sight-reading events.

The Goliad Advanced Band earned first division ratings in the concert event performing "Mickey Mouse Club March" arranged by Andy Clark, and "The Two Minute Symphony" by Bob Margolis. The concert judges praised the advanced band for "its energetic style and interpretation" of both selections. The Advanced band also earned a first division in the sight-reading event, and was praised by the sight-reading judge for "careful attention to details" and "for good fundamental skills" which he observed.

In addition to the excellent group performances by the bands, a large number of individual students earned first division ratings in solo and ensemble events, many of them multiple medalists, earning medals on both solo and ensemble events. Several students also earned solo medals performing on more than one instrument.

Students in the beginning band earning medals in the solo event were:

Tremaine Anderson, Maria Hinojos, Krissi McWhorter, Brandon Polyniak, Farrah Scholer, Angela Sturm, Jennifer Wilks, Kristen Wilson, and Janell Yanez, flutes; Becky Bolton, Yvette Gonzales, Delana Gungelman, Kelly Hollar, Maranda Hopper, Christina Martinez, April Newsom, Robert Parnell, Justin Robertson, Amanda Ryals, Christina Vera, Stefanie Waggoner, and Tatum Weeks, clarinets; Jessica Cobos, Chelan Cook, Somer Leubner, and Matt Quisenberry alto saxophones; Matthew Fleharty and Wesley Mouton and Ramnath Subbaraman; cornets: Brian Nguyen and Monica Zubiate, trombones; Lupita Barzaba, baritone; and Michelle Steward, Kayne Stroup, and Ramnath Subbaraman, percussion.

Students in the advanced band earning medals in solo and ensemble events were: Teresa Labbe, Tiffany Nowlin, and Josna Adusumulli, flutes; Josna Adusumulli, oboe; Amador Gonzales, Melinda Gonzales, Mindi Kesterson, and Cori Willbanks, clarinets; Sonya Arguello, Kellie Chandler, Amador Gonzales, and Tiffany Morrow, bass clarinets; Brian Cook, Dale Cunningham, Lindsay Fletcher, Lacey Lewis, alto saxophones; Matt Glass, tenor saxophone; Amy Billings and Matt Thornton, cornets; Melissa Mouton, French horn; Gabriel Rubio, trombone; Jason Ball, tuba; and Brandi Guterrez, Jeff Moss, and Kim Robertson, percussion.

The next performance of these award-winning bands, under their direction of Pat Daniel, and assisted by Joel Wiesberg and Tamera Sneed, will be May 25, in the annual Spring Band Concert which will also feature the Rannels band and the high school symphonic and honors band.

The 'Graybeards' will highlight Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A.J. Foyt, Mario Andretti and the other graybeards of auto racing are an oddity. In earlier generations, they never would have lasted as long as they have, let alone remained competitive all these years.

"You wouldn't be here. You retired or you were dead," recalls Louie Meyer, the first three-time winner of the Indianapolis 500 and one of only a handful of drivers who survived — and thrived — through Indy's most deadly decades.

Foyt will be starting his 35th consecutive race Sunday and, at age 57, is the oldest known driver in Indy history. Andretti, 52, will be making his 27th start; Al Unser, 53 next week, is starting his 26th race; Gordon Johncock, 55, his 24th; Gary Bettenhausen, 50, his 20th race; and Tom Sneva, the baby of the crowd at 43, will be in his 18th race.

All of them were expected to be on the track today for the final practice session before Sunday's race. The two-hour "Carburetion Day" practice is the only time the cars are allowed on the track between the end of qualifications and the start of the race.

Thirty drivers who began their careers after Foyt's first race in 1958 made 10 or more starts. Only nine drivers, including Meyer, who started their careers in the 1920s, lasted that long.

No driver who started his career before 1930 appeared in more than 16 races. Thirteen who began their careers in the 1950s or '60s have driven in 17 or more races.

Why the longevity? "The safety standards are terrific," said Meyer. "So many innovations have come out. Now they're going 230 mph ... I don't believe it."

The '30s were the deadliest decade. Twenty drivers, mechanics and spectators were killed from 1930-39 — almost a third of the 65 deaths in the entire 83-year history of the track.

"In '33 alone, we lost five," said Meyer, 87, the oldest known former driver. But the threat of death, or even of injury, has never and will never deter race drivers, he said.

"I don't think any of the drivers have a sense of danger. If we did, I don't think we'd climb in the cars. It's hard to make comparisons (between the two racing eras)," he said. "We didn't have all this modern equipment. We were driving old wagon-axle race cars. Our biggest problem going 150 down the straightaway was staying on the track. Bouncing around in a race car for five hours, you begin to wonder, 'Man, is it over yet?' As you get older, it finally gets to be one of those jobs a lot of times you'd like to walk away from, but you know you never would for all the money in the world."

Meyer, who lived in California, first came to Indianapolis in 1926 as a mechanic and first drove a race car at the Ascot track in Los Angeles later that year. He recalled spinning his car and going backwards down the track as all the other cars passed him. His brother told him, "You'll never make a race driver. Get out."

The next year, he was back at Indianapolis as a mechanic in Wilbur Shaw's pit. During the race, Shaw pulled in, exhausted and climbed out of the car. There was no one else to drive, Meyer recalled, so the car owner told him to get in.

In 1928, Meyer had a ride lined up with car owner August Duesenberg. The only problem was there was no car. He walked into a room and saw parts scattered all over the floor.

Hockey Today

SCOREBOARD

Pittsburgh at Boston (7:35 p.m. EDT). The Bruins return home for Game 3 of the Wales Conference finals after dropping the first two games in Pittsburgh.

STATS

In last season's Wales Conference finals, Boston won the first two games of the series at home over Pittsburgh, but lost the next four, including three on the road. ... Chicago right wing Rob Brown, playing in only his fourth playoff game, scored his first playoff goal and added an assist in Chicago's 4-3 overtime win over Edmonton in Game 3 Wednesday night. ... Jeremy Roenick's 62 goals during the regular season and playoffs broke Bobby Hull's old Chicago record of 58 set in 1962.

STREAKS

Chicago tied the NHL record for consecutive wins in one playoff season set by Boston in 1970 with their 10th in a row. The overall mark of 12 is by Edmonton from 1984-85. Blackhawks goalie Ed Belfour tied Boston's Gerry Cheevers with his 10th straight playoff win. ... Pittsburgh has won six straight playoff games against Boston. Overall, the Penguins have won five in a row and 9 of 11. ... Edmonton defenseman Kevin Lowe played in his 169th playoff game, the most by an Oiler.

SHOTS ON GOAL

The Blackhawks scored 12 straight goals in the second and third periods of the series until Oilers' defenseman Brian Glynn tied the game at 7:13 of the third period Wednesday. ... Edmonton's 13 shots on goal in the first period Wednesday were one short of their total in Game 2. ... Chicago outshot Edmonton 5-0 in the overtime period.

SLAP SHOTS

Edmonton blew a 2-0 lead for the second straight game in falling to Chicago 4-3 in overtime Wednesday night, to trail 3-0 in the Campbell Conference finals. They have never come back from a 3-0 series deficit. ... Five Chicago players, Brian Noonan, Jeremy Roenick, Rob Brown, Chris Chelios and Michel Goulet had two points apiece in the Blackhawks win.

SWINGS

The Bruins have dropped their last two playoff games after winning five straight.

SLUMPS

Chicago won for just the second time in nine playoff games at Northlands Coliseum.

STARS

Wednesday
+ Jeremy Roenick, Blackhawks, scored his ninth playoff goal at 2:35 of overtime, to move Chicago within one game of their first appearance in the Stanley Cup finals in 19 years, beating Edmonton 4-3.

SELECTED

Don Vaughan was named hockey coach at Colgate University on Wednesday. Vaughan, 31, succeeds Terry Slater, who died in December after a stroke.

Vaughan spent the last two seasons as an assistant with St. Lawrence University, where he scored 41 goals and 90 points in 96 games.

After graduating from St. Lawrence in 1984, Vaughan spent one season as a player-coach in the Netherlands and was the league's leading scorer.

SCOUTING

Lennie Loach had a hat trick and Bobby Dollas added two goals to lead Adirondack (Red Wings) to a 7-4 win over St. John's (Maple Leafs) and a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 American Hockey League Calder Cup finals.

SPEAKING

"We were one shot away from getting back in the series. I think that's the most frustrating part. But they're on a roll, they're a team that's playing very well, and they showed a lot of composure coming back from a 2-0 deficit." — Oilers center Craig MacTavish on the Blackhawks.

SEASONS

May 21
1979 — The Montreal Canadiens completed their fourth straight Stanley Cup triumph with a 4-1 victory over the New York Rangers in Game 5 of the finals. Jacques Lemaire's goal put the Canadiens ahead to stay. The Canadiens won four straight games after losing the opener at the Forum.

1981 — The New York Islanders completed a five-game blitz of the Minnesota North Stars in the finals with a 5-1 victory at the Nassau Coliseum. Butch Goring of the Islanders won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the playoff MVP.

1985 — The Philadelphia Flyers shut down Wayne Gretzky and the Edmonton Oilers in a 4-1 victory in Game 1 of the finals, the latest non-strike final-round opening game in NHL history. Edmonton won the next four games to retain the Stanley Cup.

It's Cool to Learn

How to Settle Differences

Every day people have disagreements. It's hard to go through life without them.

We all grow up learning how to handle conflict by seeing how others handle it.

Some of us learn from parents, teachers, friends, or even TV.

In many schools, kids are taking lessons in conflict resolution.

By learning these skills now, they can become better citizens who know how to settle things. They have learned a better way.

Conflict is not all bad. Conflict often brings about changes. Often these changes are for the best.

A conflict is a disagreement between one or more people.

Resolution is a settlement between them.

Sam broke Bill's new computer game. They were best friends until this happened. Now they aren't speaking.

How do you handle conflicts? Put a check if you:

Do nothing because you realize that the problem is temporary and you will just let it go away.

Decide to just give in and accept the changes someone wants.

Run away and try to avoid the person or the situation.

Pretend that the problem is not there and does not bother you when it really does.

Go to a parent, teacher or principal and ask them to settle it.

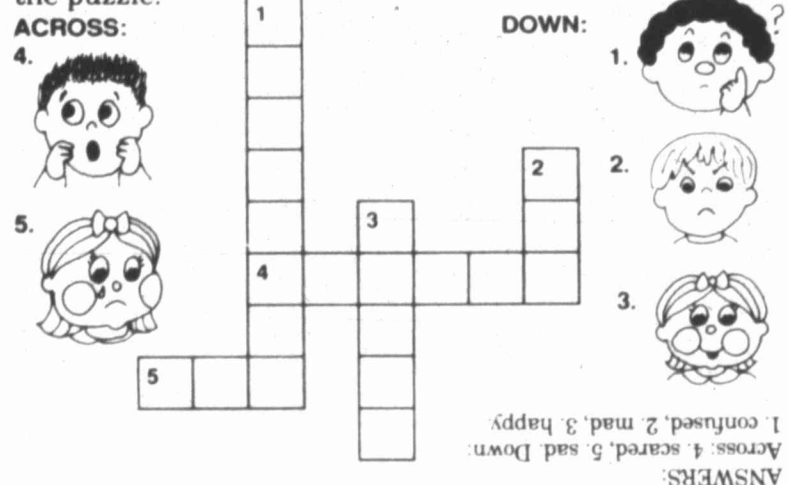

Fight and argue. Unfortunately, some kids are growing up thinking this is the best way to settle things.

Consultants: National Institute for Dispute Resolution; Stephen V. Nordfjord, coordinator, Writing and Speaking Program, and Robin Amann, guidance counselor, Montgomery County, Md., Public Schools; Joseph O'Brien, professor of social studies, University of Kansas; Federal Mediation Conciliation Service.

PETER PENGUIN'S PUZZLE LE-DO

Fit the names that describe the looks on these faces into the puzzle.

Feelings TRY 'N FIND

Words about feelings are hidden in the block below. See if you can find: HAPPY, SAD, JOLLY, MAD, CONFUSED, DEPRESSED, GLEEFUL, SHY, WARM, LOVED, COMFORTABLE, DOWN, FOOLISH, BASHFUL, CARING, DELIGHTED, FRIENDLY, KIND, SCARED.

Mini Spy . . .

Mini Spy and Basset are negotiating about playing on the swing by taking turns. See if you can find:

- canoe
- sock
- candy cane
- letter D
- toothbrush
- horse's head
- word MINI
- peanut
- caterpillar
- butterfly
- one dice
- pencil

• letter A • football • letter I • cheese wedge • number 3

Conflict resolution tries to teach you to:

• stop and think about the consequences before you do something.

If you have a problem with someone, you should:

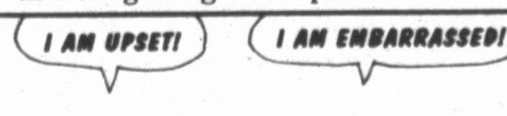

• try to figure out if you are part of the problem.

• realize that you don't always have to win an argument. You can learn to settle things so both people get something of what they want. We call this win-win.

Get ready

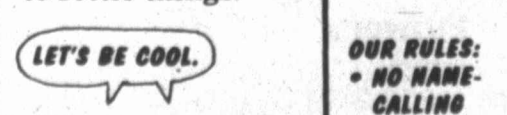

Even before you try to settle things, • think about what really happened. We sometimes have silly thoughts that keep us from getting a true picture.

• think about your feelings. Feelings are most important because how you feel will guide how you react or handle things.

Get set

• Pick a good time to talk. • Agree that you both want to try to settle things.

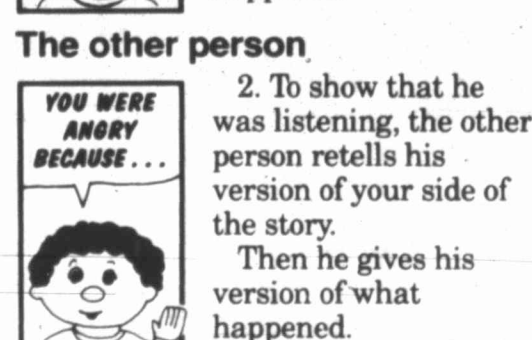

OUR RULES: • NO NAME-CALLING • GOOD EYE CONTACT • NO BUTTING IN • LISTEN POLITELY

Steps to settling differences

First person

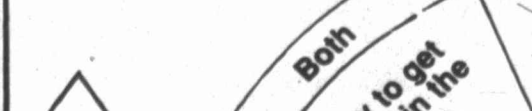

1. Talk about yourself and your feelings. Don't attack the other person. It makes him angry and he'll try to defend himself. Give your version of what happened.

2. To show that he was listening, the other person retells his version of your side of the story. Then he gives his version of what happened.

3. To show that you have been listening, you repeat the other person's point of view.

Both . . .

4. You both search for solutions.

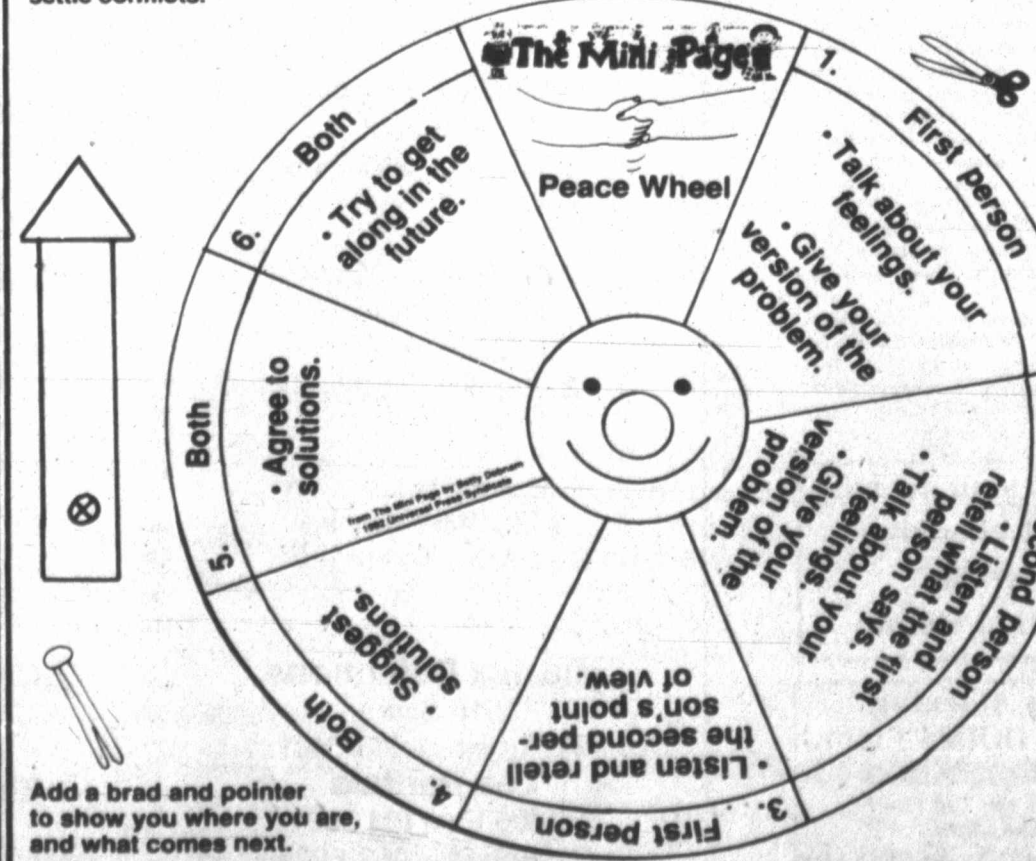

For a solution to work, it must be: • something you both can do. • something that is not harmful to yourself or others. • something that settles the problem so it will not happen again.

Both . . .

5. You agree to a solution. 6. You build a future relationship that enables you to get along peacefully as classmates or neighbors.

The Mini Page Peace Wheel

Cut out wheel and pointer, and mount on a piece of cardboard. Bring it out when needed to settle conflicts.

Everyone Is Different by Jennifer Ledesma 3rd Grade College Heights

Everyone is different, yet we are all the same. We can all have two legs, two arms, and a face to show if we are happy or sad. We can be black or white, brown or red, but we all need love to be alive. We can speak many languages, even signing with our hands, yet we all understand. Everyone is different, yet we are the same.

Kids Corner

Each week the Mini Page will feature a poem or short story sent in by our readers. Our goal is not only to promote literacy but also to be fun for kids. Stories or poems should be 90 words or less. Send story to the Big Spring Herald by the date listed and look for Kids Corner in that Thursday's paper.

Cavs hope to slow Jordan

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO (AP) — Craig Ehlo won't get greedy when the time comes to play defense against Michael Jordan tonight.

Just holding him under 30 points will do.

That's something, however, that the Cleveland Cavaliers have not been able to accomplish in 11 playoff games since 1988.

Jordan's 33 points in Chicago's 103-89 victory over Cleveland in Tuesday night's opener of the Eastern Conference finals lowered his career playoff average against the Cavaliers to 41.6 points.

Tonight at Chicago Stadium, Ehlo again will have most of the defensive responsibility against Jordan.

"That would be great if we can hold him in the 20s," Ehlo said Wednesday. "I think we'd have an excellent chance to win that game. But even if you try to contain, control and limit Jordan's shots, he can still get 30 shots. The best thing about the first game is that he mainly shot jumpers instead of driving. At least that's a start."

Ehlo and the Cavaliers are less concerned with being characterized by the Chicago media as marshmallows and cream puffs.

"Sticks and stones can break our bones, but words will never hurt us," Ehlo said. "They can label us any way they want. We're in the conference finals because we played well all season long. What they say is just words.

"If my wife called me a marshmallow, I'd be upset. I was more upset about the way we played."

The Bulls were only slightly more diplomatic than the media in their description of Game 1, compared to their tough seven-game series against New York.

"We're back to playing real basketball, not hockey," Bulls forward Horace Grant said. "We had fun out there. No punches, no scratching, no clawing, no kicking, no shooting, no murder. You can bring the kids to see a game like this."

"When teams win the first game, they can say whatever they want," Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens said. "But the fact is, we had an emotional drain after playing a seventh game against Boston. We'll be motivated to come out hard in the second game because we weren't happy with the way we played, not because of what anyone said. We have to continue doing the things that helped us win 57 games in the regular season."

Wilkens admits there's "a psychological game being played between these two teams. Since we won 33 games last year and have never been this far in the playoffs before, we have to prove we can compete every time we play."

We've recovered every time we've played a bad game, and I'm sure we will again."

Jordan said Cleveland won't try to be as rugged as the Knicks.

"We'd be ready for that, but they would be stepping out of their character," Jordan said. "That's not them. They're a fast-break, half-court, ball-control type team, very similar to us."

But Jordan made no secret of being relieved to have the Knicks behind him.

"There was a lot of freedom," he said. "We didn't have to worry about going to the basket and getting creamed. The doctors didn't seem nervous that they had to treat everybody."

But Jackson realizes the Cavaliers are far more dangerous than the Knicks offensively.

"We know this team has beaten us before," Jackson said. "They're capable of coming out and shooting 60 percent in the game, not only for a half. They just don't come in and pound it at you."

Jackson said he didn't believe either team was emotionally ready to play aggressively.

"Both teams took a step back from our seventh games, took a sigh of relief that we had won," he said. "That dissipated our energy and we came back without the same intensity."

Three honored at MC museum ceremony

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Three persons who not only have lived a total of 172 years in the Permian Basin but also who have contributed to its well-being, cultural and humanitarian growth, were honored May 16 at a ceremony at the Martin County Historical Museum in conjunction with a meeting of the Permian Historical Society.

Helen Thrailkill, museum curator, said 119 guests registered for the events of the day.

For the first time, a husband and wife received the award simultaneously. Drs. Cecil and Lila Rose Robinson, Kermit physicians. The other recipient was Dorothy (Mrs. Leland) Croft, who founded and worked in several organizations in the field of music, education and mental health.

The annual spring meeting of the society, led by Mrs. Lorene

Barbee, featured presentations of papers on various historical topics such as music, sociological matters, libraries and excavations at the Stanton convent site.

The Robinsons had been practicing physicians for five years before they settled in Kermit in 1937. His specialty became orthopedics and her's pediatrics.

Dr. Cecil is a native of Golden. He is the son of a family of merchants, but he chose another course when he left home at 17 to work in Salt Lake City, Utah and Fort Worth. Once he decided on medicine, he attended Texas Christian University and Baylor Medical College, graduating in 1922.

After internship and residency in Parkland Hospital in Dallas, he married Dr. Lila Rose, a college sweetheart, in 1935. His orthopedic training came at Northwestern University and in Chicago hospitals in 1953.

Among innovations in his medical practice has been that of flying pioneer doctor to small towns in West Texas and eastern New Mexico. He even has his own airport in Kermit. He served as director of the Kermit bank from 1974-1980, and as advisory director thereafter.

Dr. Lila Rose's parents were a farmer and teacher. When she was only four, the family moved from near Abilene to Clovis, N.M., then back to West Texas, where she and her sister rode a burro five miles along a drift fence to school.

Graduating from Clovis High School, she took pre-med training at Daniel Baker college in Brownwood, entering Baylor Med. in 1929, and finished with her husband-to-be. Following a year's practice in Cisco, she did internship and residency at the New York Infirmary for Women and Children. She and Dr. Cecil have one son, Al Robinson, a retired airline pilot.

SHS seniors contemplating life after school

By KAY KOLB

Is graduation the end or the beginning?

Kristi Cole and Joe Acosta, two of SHS's seniors who will receive their diplomas Friday night are considering the question of endings and beginnings as they take in all of the activities of the final week of high school.

Cole, who has attended Stanton schools for all but about 1 and a half years, says she and her classmates are looking forward to the upcoming changes and possibilities.

"Everyone is getting really excited and making plans," she said. "It is nice to see how everyone is focusing on their futures and growing up."

Acosta feels his last days of school are a mixture of excitement and anticipation.

"I am ready for it to be over," he said. "The last two or three weeks have been going by fast." Acosta plans to attend Howard College and take automotive technology classes.

He and his wife, Elizabeth, plan to stay in Stanton while he is attending school. Acosta is employed by Martin County.

Cole is looking forward to moving to Midland. She works for a clothing store in Midland Park Mall and is planning study Radiology at Midland College.

As each of these students move closer toward their new beginnings, they reflect on the past years with a little sentimentality.

"My favorite teacher in elementary was Mrs. Woody," Cole said. "She was really sweet, it was like having a grandmother for a teacher."

Acosta's favorite grade-school teacher was Miss Brown. He said she was kind and understanding and that helped him when school seemed to be very hard.

An historic need for budget amendment

By CHARLES STENHOLM

Our federal deficit is about to set yet another record: more than $400 billion for the current year, easily surpassing the $320 billion deficit of 1991. When adjusted for inflation, this year's deficit will be equal to the total federal budget in 1965. This year will be the 23rd consecutive year and the 53rd out of the last 61 that the government spends more than it takes in.

Fifty-three years out of 61 does not mark a short-term trend. It does mean that by the end of this year the national debt will top $4 trillion dollars. That means that the federal government has charged $45,000 in debt on the account of each and every household in America. We have borrowed half a trillion of that from foreigners. The U.S. is now the largest debtor nation in history. This long-term, institutional problem requires a long-term, constitutional solution: an amendment to the Constitution that requires the President and Congress to operate under a balanced budget.

Congress will have an opportunity later this year to take the historic step of sending a balanced budget amendment to the states for ratification. The Senate is expected to vote on a version introduced by Senator Paul Simon in June. I have introduced a similar amendment, known as H.J. Res 290, which has been cosponsored by nearly two-thirds of the House members. We need 67 votes in the Senate and 290 votes in the House to pass this legislation so that it can be sent to the states for ratification.

A Balanced Budget Amendment will not solve our deficit problem by itself. That is not what it was intended to do. This amendment will, however, give us a necessary tool for fiscal responsibility — the very same tool which Thomas Jefferson recommended to us more than 200 years ago. It will give us a constitutional reason to find the guts to make the tough choices necessary to balance the budget. Too often, when faced from all sides with demands for more spending we have taken the easy way out by borrowing more money. By raising the threshold of difficulty for deficit spending, this amendment would prevent anyone in the executive branch or in Congress from ducking responsibility for the deficit. Under the amendment, spending may not exceed revenues unless Congress authorizes the excess by a three-fifths vote. Just as importantly, the President must submit a balanced budget every year.

The American people are understandably frustrated with a budget process that can't stop record deficits, year after year. Believe it or not, this frustration has been growing within Congress as well. That is why dozens of members who had opposed a balanced budget amendment in the past are now supporters. Support for a balanced budget amendment is bi-partisan, and has received support from liberals such as Paul Simon and Joe Kennedy as well as conservatives like Phil Gramm and Newt Gingrich.

History has proven that statutes and procedural requirements have failed. Congress has voted more than 500 times to waive the Budget Act since 1978. We passed a statute in 1978 when our debt was $776 billion. We tried again in 1979 when the debt was $828 billion and in 1982 when the debt was $1.1 trillion. The debt was $1.8 trillion when we passed Gramm-Rudman in 1985, and had increased to $2.3 trillion when we passed Gramm-Rudman II in 1987.

Amending the Constitution is a very serious step that should never be taken lightly. But a pro-

Blaine Hall wins free trip to Washington

By PEGGY LUXTON Communications Advisor Cap Rock Electric

Blaine Hall, a senior student of Stanton High School, has won a two-week, all-expenses-paid trip to Washington. Hall was one of two winners in the 1992 Cap Rock Electric Youth Tour competition this month at the Stanton-based electric cooperative.

The trip goes each year to one male and one female winner. The successful female competitor this year was Pam Brooks, a junior student of Klondike high school and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyndell Brooks of Lamesa.

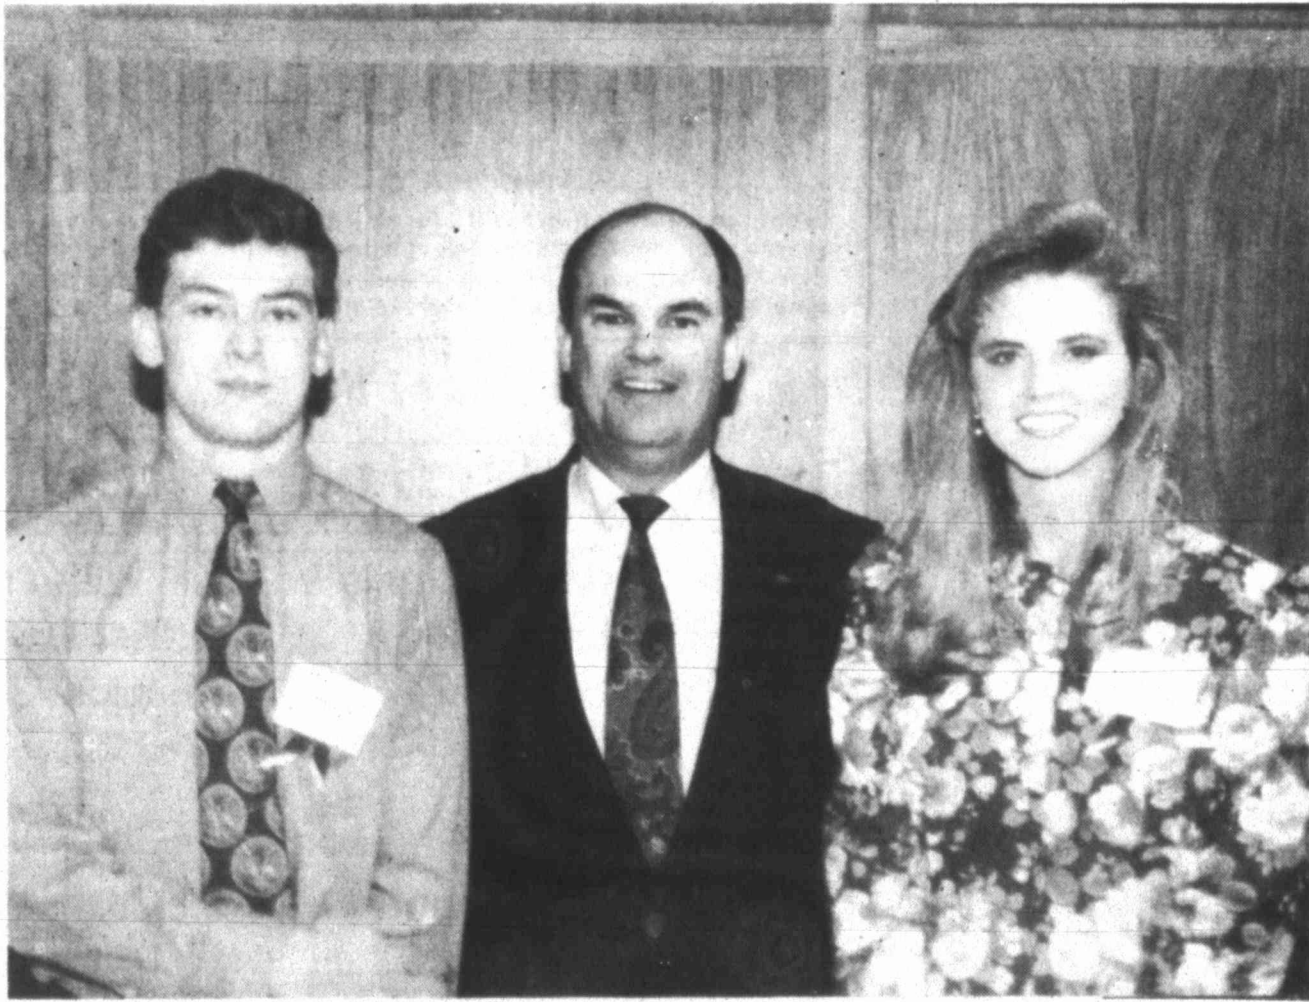

Hall, the son of Pat and Toya Hall of Stanton, is a member of the Stanton High School band and served as the band's drum major his senior year.

Hall's win came after final competition before a panel of three judges - Richard Relyea of KTPX-TV, channel 9 in Midland; Julie Rich, music Director and co-host of "The Morning Show" on KNFM Radio in Midland; and K.B. Lane, Information and Communications Specialist of South Plains Electric Cooperative in Lubbock.

Any student aged 14 to 19 who attends school in a school district in which Cap Rock serves is eligible to enter the competition. There were 62 entrants in this year's contest.

First step of Youth Tour competition is the student's writing of a one-to-two page essay on the subject, "A Cap Rock Career". The essay discusses why the writer chose on career over others at the electric company. The essays are submitted blind, with no one at Cap Rock and none of the judges knowing the identity of the contestant. The essays are graded by an out-of-town team of essay judges, the five girls receiving the highest scores and the five boys receiving the highest scores are finalists.

Finalists spend a day at Cap Rock, learning more about the company and the career position they have chosen. Parents, teachers and principals are invited to the final competition, in the Cap Rock Auditorium. The finalists read their essays to the judging panel, then answer one question from each judge. Scores received from final judges are averaged with grades received on essays to determine the two winners and an alternate winner.

The alternate winner will participate in the Youth Tour if either of the winners is unable to attend. In addition, the alternate receives a $100 savings bond from Cap Rock.

The 1992 alternate is Jennifer Jones, a junior student of Garden City High School. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Jones of Garden City.

The Youth Tour participants meet in Lewisville, Texas, with almost a hundred other students from Texas, who are sponsored by other electric cooperatives. Approximately a thousand other youth tour participants from all over the nation will be in Washington as Youth tour participants.

While in Washington, the youngsters see almost everything there is to see. They visit monuments, museums and historic buildings and sites, as well as FBI headquarters, the U.S. department of Currency and the White House. They visit in the offices of the Congressmen from their district and U.S. Presidents have addressed groups of Youth Tour participants. Cap Rock Electric has been sponsoring the Youth Tour since the 1960s. It is just one of the youth-oriented programs the company sponsors.

"We believe the young people of our service area are our most valuable asset," said David Puritt, Cap Rock's CEO. "We have a very extensive program to directly benefit those youth. This youth tour project is just one phase of that program. We give away $10,000 each year in scholarships, awards and services directed to our youth. We encourage them in every way we can to make the most of opportunities that come their way."

KOCV news

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Two British comedies have been added to the Sunday night lineup of KOCV-TV Channel 36/Cable 13, according to the station's director of programming/production Shorty Stokes.

At 9 p.m. is "Keeping Up Appearances," featuring the snobby Hyacinth Bucket (pronounced "bouquet") played by Patricia Routledge. Hyacinth is a meticulous housewife trying desperately to climb the social ladder while her very common family gets in the way.

"Waiting for God" follows "Keeping Up Appearances" at 9:30 p.m. Tom and Diana are two senior citizen rebels at the Bayview Retirement Village who make the home's frequent funerals more like carnivals.

The new comedies air before "Fresh Fields" and "Executive Stress." Most cable viewers in Midland/Odessa receive KOCV, the Permian Basin's public television station on Channel 13.

A frank discussion about AIDS will be presented on KOCV-TV Channel 36/Cable 13 at 9 a.m. Thursday, May 28, according to the station's director of programming/production Shorty Stokes.

"A Conversation with Magic" features an unscripted conversation between NBA legend Magic Johnson and a group of kids age 8 to 14, and hosted by veteran journalist Linda Ellerbee. During the half-hour news program, Johnson answers questions about AIDS, HIV and the emotional challenges the virus he has contracted poses to him and his family.

Most cable viewers in Midland/Odessa receive KOCV on Channel 13. The program, produced by Nickelodeon and Lucky Duck Productions, originally aired on Nickelodeon.

"Magic Johnson has a powerful message for young people in this country," said Henry Becton Jr. of WGB, the Boston public broadcaster bringing the special to public television. "We are delighted to be able to extend that message to the millions of young people who watch public television."

4-H news

By Kathryn Burch

Twenty Martin County 4-H'ers participated in the County 4-H Consumer Decision Making Contest this year. Participants ranged from 3rd to 8th grade.

Meals, book packs, watches and toys made up the classes. For each category, a situation statement is given and the participant is given four choices. The contestant must rank the choices one through four as to which would be the best purchase.

In the seventh and eighth grade category, first place went to Kelly Harrell. She chose a $50 Savings Bond from First National Bank. Second place went to Keri Brantley who chose a $15 charge account at the Korner. Jennifer Adkins placed third and received a $15 shopping spree at Simply Us. Bill Joe Averitt placed fourth and chose a Monarch Video Rental and a 4-H T-shirt.

Our fifth and sixth grade competition had ten placings. First place went to Jerry Don Hardin. He chose a $15 charge account at the Korner. Second place went to Justin Burch. He took a $50 Savings bond from First National Bank. Third place went to Sheila Butler. Her award was a $30 shopping spree at Bills. Misty Reynolds placed 4th. She chose a Monarch Video rental and Styling Spray from the Desert Rose Beauty Shop. Sally Averitt was in fourth place and her summer haircut will be courtesy of Mary Woodfin. Sixth place went to Dorio Martinez. He chose a Country Basket from Dairy Queen. Cassie Huckaby placed seventh. She won a Dairy Queen Blizzard and a 4-H Sports Bottle. Eighth place went to Carrie Bradshaw. She chose a Dairy Treat Cheeseburger Milkshake. Belinda Riley placed ninth. She received a Dairy Queen Blizzard and a 4-H T-shirt. Belinda was high point in fifth and sixth grade for giving reasons. Belinda Martinez placed 10th and received a Dairy Queen Country Basket.

In fourth grade competition, first place went to Will Harris. He chose a $50 savings account at Stanton National Bank. Second place went to Johnny Salgado. He chose a Monarch Video Rental and a 4-H T-shirt.

Third place went to Brady Cook. He chose a shopping spree at Perry's. Brady was high point on reasons. Fourth place went to David Butler. He chose a Monarch Video rental and a 4-H windbreaker. Fifth place went to Jeffery Burch. He chose a $25 shopping spree at Stanton Flowers and Gift Baskets.

Justin Burch and Jerry Don Hardin went on to district competition in Fort Stockton. Justin placed sixth.

Martin County 4-H would like to thank the local businesses for their gracious support of this 4-H project. Our thanks to the volunteers who helped conduct the contest: Deborah Adkins, Brenda Mims, Tricia Cook, Elva Salgado, Nancy Bradshaw, Rebecca Riley, Ryan Webb and Betty Butler.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Business Review

Good things to eat at your time and your place are available from Baker's Catering Service, one of Stanton's newest businesses.

Owned and operated by Kimberly and Lester Baker of Stanton, Baker's catering specializes in barbecue and the trimmings, cooked home-style, and has been serving the Martin County area for about a year.

The Bakers cater for large or small groups and have several menus to choose from. Kimberly said the most often requested is the barbecue with beans, potato salad and peach cobbler. When arranging this kind of order, the price includes the all of the food plus paper goods.

Baker attributes her cooking skills and recipes to her mother. "Though I don't make things taste quite as good as she does," she said. She is constantly looking through recipe books, new and old, and trying new dishes to add to her menu selection.

The Bakers have catered for groups as large as 250 people. They will prepare full meals or hospitality-type goodies such as cookies or cinnamon rolls.

"We give personalized service," Baker said.

For more information about catering the next event on your calendar, call Baker's Catering at 756-2474.

"I have been tempted to drop out," Acosta said his mother told him to get everything he could from school because he could not do anything without a diploma. With graduation coming the end of this week, he is glad she encouraged him to keep going.

Along with reflections of their past school years, the Cole and Acosta are dreaming about the future. When asked where they would like to be in ten years, both said they hoped to live somewhere where there are more trees.
