FAA grant chance 'optimistic' after meeting yesterday

After a meeting Wednesday between Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) officials and some 11 local business and governmental leaders, members of the group say they are "extremely optimistic" about securing funds for Winston Field improvements.

The meeting in Fort Worth was with FAA officials who will be among those making the final decisions regarding federal grant monies. Local airport officials, to include Manager Darrel Mize and airport board members, arranged for the meeting.

Community leaders attending the session say they believe they made a favorable impression and expressed confidence that the county will receive at least part of the $1.7 million proposal.

"I feel very good about it. It was a good team effort among the entire community — the city, county, airport board and the Pilots' Association," said Chamber of Commerce President Jack Denman.

County Judge Preston Wilson noted the size of Snyder's delegation impressed federal officials. "I think they only expected two or three (representatives). They had to look around to find a place to accommodate us."

FAA officials met Wednesday afternoon to discuss all applications and are expected to finalize appropriations by the end of the month.

If the county's application is approved, the federal govern-

Auto insurance rates may go up

AUSTIN (AP) — A 9.8 percent statewide increase in auto insurance rates in 1987 could be justified by decreases given the past two years, says State Board of Insurance Chairman Lyndon Olson.

The three-member board took the rate case under consideration late Wednesday after the hearing ended at 10 p.m. Board spokesman Jon Ford said a decision might not be made until January.

The board staff has proposed a 9.8 percent increase. The industry wants a 19.7 percent hike.

Attorney General Jim Mattox has contended that no increase is needed.

Olson said the board would study Wednesday's testimony and make a decision later.

The effective date of any increase would be April 1, 1987.

Olson, who reacted several times during the daylong hearing to criticism from Mattox, stressed that the board had approved decreases in premiums the past two years — 3.8 percent for 1985 and 5.1 percent for the current year.

Mattox told a news conference Tuesday that the board should not grant any increase because companies could still make a profit if premiums were cut 9 percent for next year.

Olson also warned that the auto insurance may be "the next crisis" in the Texas insurance industry.

Iran-Contra affair...

Panel to call Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of President Reagan's Cabinet will be called to testify and fill in gaps left by the failure of two administration officials to tell the Senate Intelligence Committee what they know about the Iran-Contra connection, the panel chairman says.

Vice President George Bush, admitting that "Clearly, mistakes were made" in the deal that sent U.S. arms to Iran and money to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, said the administration was determined to bring the truth of the scandal to light and to "let the chips fall where they may."

Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, who resigned last week as Reagan's national security adviser after Attorney General Edwin Meese III said Poindexter had some knowledge of the funds diversion, invoked the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination on Wednesday.

Poindexter, during a closed-door, one-hour appearance on the fourth day of the congressional investigation, declined to answer questions unless granted legal immunity.

Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, Poindexter's fired former aide who according to Meese was the only government official with extensive knowledge of Iran-Contra link, invoked the Fifth Amendment two days earlier. But senators running the investigation said the failure of the two key figures to testify would not slow the probe or limit its findings.

"North didn't do anything by himself," said Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the intelligence panel. "Everything he did in this entire caper had to have a response. If we can get everybody at the other end of all those phone calls and plane trips, we can find out what went on."

Asked whether that meant the committee would call Cabinet members, Durenberger said it did. "Somewhere during this we are going to decide when to move it to Cabinet level," he told a reporter.

He said the panel had made no decision on whether to grant immunity to any witness, and other panel members said the idea was not being seriously considered.

'Yuletide Follies' rehearsing for three-day Christmas show

Snyder High School drama and choir students are now in rehearsal for "Yuletide Follies," a Christmas offering scheduled for Dec. 16, 18 and 19.

The show, which will feature some 60 cast members, will follow past productions of the "Follies"--a mix of works written by other authors and original skits and musical numbers created by local students.

Director for the overall production will be Jerry Worsham. Bill Lyon will direct the show's musical numbers, which will include members of The Swingers singing group and a three-piece backup band.

Worsham said the first half will include the locally written material--a project which will see additions and deletions up until show time.

The localized material will reflect situations which face Snyder and Scurry County now, Worsham noted. "Despite some of our situations, we're looking at it in an upbeat way," he said.

After intermission, "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever" will be presented.

It is based on a humorous article which first appeared in McCalls magazine. The article proved so popular, Worsham noted, it prompted the magazine to later reprint it and its author to ultimately rewrite it in play form.

Cast members will include Charlie McCormick, Brandon Neely, Kirsten Miller, Monique Miller, Brad Vincent, Carl Menges, Doug Smith, Melissa Hodges, Susie Thrasher, Cory McDaniel and Joy McSpadden.

Following the short play, the production will feature "A Texas Tribute," a dance number which will include the return of SHS graduate Mike Everett, who now performs with the Lone Star Ballet company of Amarillo.

The grand finale will be a Texas Sesquicentennial salute entitled "We Wish You a Texas Christmas."

First business, home 'new' permits issued

During November, Snyder gained the first permits issued for 1986-87 for both a new residence and a new commercial building.

The month's total was just over $137,000, bringing the year-to-date figure to almost $236,000.

In comparison to last year, building totals are substantially down for the first two months of the new fiscal year. Totals at this time in 1985 were some $1.1 million.

The seven permits granted in November brought the year's total to 17. Last November, the figure reached 36.

T.O. Upshaw of 3301 Irving received a permit for the new residence, while Stan Pavlik was issued the permit for a new beauty shop to be built at 1008 24th St.

A permit for a mobile home move-in was issued also to Robert Uriegas, 1112 21st St.

City officials also issued permits for two carports, a storage building, an addition to a residence and a mobile home move-in.

With the second month of the new fiscal year passed, the year-to-date totals for specific categories show new construction permits issued for one single family residence, six mobile home move-ins, one commercial building, five carports and assessories and one sign.

Alterations and additions include two permits issued for dwellings and one for a commercial building.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The best underdeveloped property with the most potential is still located between the ears."

The University of Texas finally did it. They fired a coach with a 75 percent winning percentage.

In addition, they fired a man with five years left on a $91,600 per year contract. We suspect that somewhere in Austin (or Hawaii) there is a smiling Freddy Akers.

We only thought Aggies made those kinds of deals.

We read recently about a Texas man who had secretly maintained a dual lifestyle with a wife and family in two separate Texas cities.

The man had recently filed bankruptcy, citing debts in excess of $2 million. With two wives, we wonder how he got by so cheap.

Did you hear about the woman who suffered some sort of seizure. The woman had slumped to the floor totally unconscious. Luckily, the woman's husband was at home and he alertly called the ambulance service.

When the ambulance arrived, attendants went to work, and one had to get pertinent medical information from the husband.

"How old is your wife?" the paramedic asked briskly.

"Uh--55," said the husband.

"And from the until-now-silent figure on the floor came a barely audible correction: "Fifty-three."

It was bound to happen. They're now charging for water in a trendy bar in Beverly Hills. Served are 51 varieties from 20 countries. You may order the water in a six oz. bottle or in an elegant black glass.

Most of the water goes for a $1 a bottle or glass, but some costs up to $2 per serving. "It's pretty healthy stuff," bragged the bar's owner.

Shucks, all along we knew water was good for you.

New oil bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen today warned that the United States faces a threat of future dependence on foreign oil production and said he plans to introduce legislation that would require the president to prevent this.

Citing a study by the Library of Congress that he requested, Bentsen said the nation can expect to lose 232 million barrels of oil production a year by 1990 and 532 million barrels a year by the turn of the century.

Egypt coup

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The country's top prosecutor today charged four military officers and 29 other men with forming an extremist Moslem organization in an attempt to overthrow the government.

The indictment issued by Prosecutor-General Mohammed el-Guindi committed the 33 defendants to a state security court for trial. No trial date was set.

The indictment cited penal code articles under which, if convicted, the defendants could be sentenced to hard labor for up to 25 years.

Iran arms deal said not just Watergate without the name

WASHINGTON (AP) — Old Washington hands who were around for the decline and fall of Richard Nixon have a sense of deja vu as they witness the storm that has enveloped the Reagan White House since Election Day.

But this scandal in search of a name is at once broader and less overwhelming than Watergate was. Dubbed "Iran$cam" by one New York tabloid and "Contragate" by another, this presidential crisis may yet earn a name all its own.

To the extent that it has exposed a secret foreign policy contrary to the president's publicly stated principles regarding terrorism and the embargo of weapons shipments to Iran, the controversy may damage U.S. relations with its allies and the moderate Arab states more than did Watergate.

Many friends of the United States abroad never understood the fuss made over what Nixon spokesman Ron Ziegler called "a third-rate burglary." The long march to prove the president and his aides conspired and lied to cover up high-level approval of the break-in at Democratic headquarters mystified people who dismissed the crime as just another political dirty trick.

This time, senior officials in a number of countries have been subjected to public and private U.S. pressure to use their influence to block arms sales to Iran and resist the demands of terrorists. But White House admissions of the Iran arms dealings challenge the credibility of American foreign policy.

At the same time, the inevitable revelation of U.S. secrets is bound to upset Israel and other countries that conduct covert operations in league with the United States and now stand to be embarrassed as their special relationships and clandestine activities are spotlighted in the rush to define the dimensions of Reagan administration operations.

Unlike Watergate, which was kept largely under wraps for nine months despite the determined digging of two young Washington Post reporters and some others, Reagan's problems have mushroomed in a month into a full-scale, multi-act presidential drama.

Springing from a single article in an obscure Lebanese magazine that revealed former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane's secret mission to Iran, the case is expanding daily in ever-broadening concentric circles.

While it is still much too early to draw conclusions about the role of Reagan and his aides in the matters under investigation, it is apparent the problems the president already has acknowledged grew from the same penchant for secrecy and frustration with established restraints that led the Nixon White House to set up a covert squad to search for news leaks.

Members of that squad, known as "the plumbers," committed felonies in the belief they were doing the president's will — with or without his consent.

It is apparent that Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the first fired in this new firestorm, thought he, too, was doing what his commander-in-chief wanted, whether or not he had anyone's express approval.

Texas convict executed for slaying of woman in 1977

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Convicted killer Michael Wayne Evans, asking for forgiveness, was executed early today in the Texas death chamber for killing a Dallas woman nine years ago.

"I want to say I'm sorry for the things I've done and I hope I'm forgiven," Evans said in his final statement as tears welled in his eyes. "I don't hold nothing against no one. Everyone has treated me well and I know it's not easy for them. That's all. I'm sorry."

The lethal dose was administered at 12:11 a.m. Evans cleared his throat a few times, but died peacefully. He was pronounced dead 10 minutes after being injected.

Evans, 30, an auto mechanic from Dallas, was setenced to die for the June 1977 killing of Elvira Guerrero, a pianist at the Second Mexican Baptist Church in Oak Cliff.

The execution, the ninth in Texas this year and the 19th since the state resumed the death penalty in 1982, came after federal courts and the governor's office refused Wednesday to grant him a stay. Evans had two previous stays and two trials.

He was convicted of killing Ms. Guerrero, 35, who was abducted with her fiance after leaving the church where she worked. She was robbed of $40 in church offerings, shot twice and then slashed across the eyes and throat with a carpet knife. Her fiance, Mario Garza, a Mexican national, also was robbed of $12, then shot several times with a .22-caliber pistol Evans said he had stolen earlier. Their bodies were found in a hayfield four days after they were reported missing.

"He was one of the sorriest human beings ever," said Kevin Byrne, a Dallas attorney who prosecuted Evans.

Evans, in a confession to Dallas police, said Ms. Guerrero asked God to forgive her attacker as she was being killed.

"I cut the lady from the bottom of her chin to her hairline above her forehead," Evans said. "I was trying to get her to quit talking."

Evans had refused repeated requests for interviews.

"He didn't seem like he was too worried," said Calvin Williams, a death row inmate who watched Evans being moved out of his cell Wednesday. "He had kind of a warm smile."

Evans' appeals were rejected Wednesday by a federal district judge in Dallas, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and then the U.S. Supreme Court.

Lt. Gov. William Hobby, acting governor because Gov. Mark White is out of the state, also rejected a plea for a 30-day reprieve.

Attorneys contended Evans was insane. They also attempted to show Evans, who is black, was unfairly given the death penalty because of his race.

"I think he was sane," Attorney General Jim Mattox, who witnessed the execution, said. "I don't think there's any doubt about that. Hearing his final statement, I have no doubt his sanity would meet the test of Texas law. He clearly understood his punishment."

Evans' accomplice in the Guerrero slaying, Earl Stanley Smith, now 32, received a life sentence.

Evans, whose arrest record includes drug possession and robbery, asked for no final meal and requested no personal witnesses to his execution. He was calm throughout the day although he had no visitors. His mother, a sister and brother-in-law saw him for the last time on Tuesday, Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said.

Top-notch team at work

By James Jacoby

Here's an interesting team hand. Paul Chemla of France was declarer at four hearts and made short work of the 5-0 trump split. He won dummy's spade king, cashed dummy's heart ace, cashed his A-Q of spades and led a diamond to dummy's 10. East won with his king and returned a diamond. Chemla won the queen, played a club to dummy's king, cashed the diamond ace and played another diamond. East ruffed and declarer overruffed. Now the jack of clubs was won by West with the ace. Another club was led, ruffed low in dummy and overruffed by East. East now had to play back into the dummy's K-J of hearts, and that was the contract.

Turn now to the other table. The bidding was different and South became declarer at three no-trump after West had bid clubs. The opening lead was now the 10 of clubs. When declarer naturally ducked, East defender Michel Lebel played low. Who can blame declarer for taking his jack? But we can see that making three no-trump is now impossible.

Different contracts, different plays. But at both tables you can see the superb abilities of the French players at both offense and defense.

Spokane's Odd Squad team cares for society's misfits

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Spokane Police Department's Odd Squad is a two-man team of officers who are more like social workers than cops. The anchor of the team is a compassionate former barroom drummer they call "Mr. Glad," a cop who believes an arrest is a last resort.

By Karen McGrath
Associated Press Writer

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Officially, it's called the Office of Special Police Problems. Unofficially, they call it the Odd Squad.

Mainly, it's Patrolman Robert Grandinetti, a 20-year veteran of the Spokane Police Department with a face like Fred Flintstone and a personality that's earned him the nickname of "Mr. Glad."

Grandinetti's easygoing nature made him the perfect candidate for the Odd Squad, where he and a partner take care of all of the police calls no one else knows how to handle.

They deal with problems like the woman who had 67 dead cats stored in her freezer, another with 4-foot piles of debris in her home, street kids who defecate in vacant buildings where they sleep, the elderly who are easily exploited out of their life savings, sorry hobos who subsist on occasional meals and cheap wine.

"We have situations where we either deal with them, or we'll be dealing with their remains," Grandinetti says. "I do what any reasonable person would do. I can't walk away from it. I've got to do something."

The work started in 1974, with a grant from the state Department of Ecology intended to help clean up Spokane for its World Exposition.

Grandinetti became a police officer in September 1966, after deciding he needed to give his family more financial security than was provided by his job playing drums in bars at Stateline, Idaho.

Grandinetti's training includes years on the force and the empathy he gained by watching his father, Carmen, die a painfully slow death years before. Today, Grandinetti believes doctors would say his father suffered from Alzheimer's disease.

"I have real compassion because I understand," Grandinetti says. "I know it's real easy to make fun of people who are suffering, but I always think, 'Hey, you could end up like any of them.'"

Grandinetti views arrest as a last resort. He says he's discovered that humor and friendliness are valuable tools when dealing with the public.

Working the department's graveyard patrol shift 15 years ago, Grandinetti and his partner received a call about a woman having problems at her home.

"We get there and she says she keeps hearing voices coming out of her sink. So I scratch my head a while and then walk over to the sink and bend over and yell, 'Shaddup!' down the drain hole.

"The woman tells me the voices are gone, but my partner looks at me as if I'm crazy."

His current partner is Patrolman D.V. Willmschen, one of 13 officers who applied to join the Odd Squad last year when the operation fell hopelessly behind in its calls.

Even with Willmschen's assistance, the squad, which enforces the city's public nuisance ordinance, is 200 to 300 calls behind, Grandinetti says. He and Willmschen now act on only the most important calls — those in which lives may be in danger.

The Odd Squad's tiny office, which also serves as a police storage room, has an answering machine. The two officers are rarely there.

Like the rest of city government, the Odd Squad is threatened by 1987 budget cuts. Still, it's a bright spot for a department hit hard recently by scandals ranging from a former female officer's charges of sex discrimination — a suit eventually settled out of court — to a recently fired corporal who kept evidence photos of nude, battered women in his locker.

Social workers in other agencies say eliminating the Odd Squad would leave many people out in the cold.

"Bob averts a lot of problems that could get bigger," says Bob Hanson, an official with the state Department of Social and Health Services. "He's unique in that he's got patience and compassion for people in addition to, or even greater than, his law enforcement presence."

Job training will be whose responsibility?

NEW YORK (AP) — Private industry may be better equipped than the public sector to promote job training, but it is not yet ready to replace federal and state job training programs, according to a recent survey.

The survey of business executives was made by Coopers & Lybrand, an accounting firm.

Of the executives who responded to the survey, 88 percent felt business is better able than the public sector to promote job development and training. However, the executives were split on how involved they should be.

Fifty-six percent said business did not have an obligation to make up the shortfall for job development and training left by cuts in federal and state aid. But, 41 percent felt business did have an obligation to make up for this shortfall.

Soviets are still reluctant to make grain purchases

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is still no sign that Moscow is ready to abide by a long-term agreement to buy U.S. grain, particularly wheat, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng says.

Under the agreement's terms, the Soviet Union is supposed to buy a minimum amount of U.S. wheat and corn each year beginning on Oct. 1. Lyng met Wednesday with Moscow's foreign trade minister, Boris Ivanovich Aristov.

"I told him how very severely disappointed we in the United States are that the Soviets have failed to live up to the long-term grain agreement for the past two years, particularly as it applies to wheat, and urged them to comply with the agreement for the current year," Lyng said.

But "no commitment was made by the minister, and that was about the sum total of it," he added.

The meeting in Lyng's office lasted about 30 minutes and was described by the secretary as primarily a courtesy visit by Aristov.

Lyng, at a news conference later, said he mentioned to Aristov that it was about time for a regular twice-yearly meeting or consultation between U.S. and Soviet officials, as specified in the five-year agreement, now in its third year.

"He said, yes, he knew about that," Lyng said.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service said no date for a U.S.-Soviet grain meeting has been set. The last was held in Moscow in June, and according to custom the next would be in Washington.

Under the current agreement — the first one went into effect more than 10 years ago — the Soviet Union is committed to buy at least 9 million metric tons of wheat and corn annually. At least 4 million tons of that must be wheat and 4 million tons corn.

The agreement lets the Soviet Union buy as much as 12 million tons of grain annually, but if more than that is wanted the United States must be consulted. Because of the huge U.S. stockpile, clearance has been readily provided to buy more. For example, the Soviets were told without asking that they could buy up to 22 million pounds during the 1985-86 year that ended Sept. 30.

But the Soviets bought less than 6.7 million tons last year, and nearly all of that was corn. The wheat purchases totaled only 152,500 tons, compared with the minimum of 4 million tons required by the agreement.

In 1984-85, purchases rose to a record of more than 18.6 million tons, including about 15.8 million tons of corn but only 2.9 million tons of wheat, which was 1.1 million tons short of the minimum.

Last summer, the Soviet Union spurned a U.S. offer of subsidized sales of wheat to meet obligations under the agreement. The subsidy offer expired Sept. 30 with no Soviet purchases.

The Soviet Union has scaled back imports of grain as a result of a bumper harvest this year. That has been a major factor in a decline in the world grain trade, which has meant stiffer competition from other countries and more headaches for American farmers.

Lyng noted that one of the goals of last year's Food Security Act was to restore some of the loss in U.S. farm exports, which declined from a record value of $43.8 billion in 1980-81 to a forecast of $26 billion in 1986-87. One of the tools provided in the new law is lower government price supports, intended to make U.S. commodities more attractive to foreign buyers.

Iran arms deal probe is proceeding

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are problems ahead when the president says he wants the truth to come out, when the attorney general says only two men know the full truth, and when those two say they're not talking.

President Reagan can say, as he did Wednesday, that "all Americans are entitled to have their questions answered" in the puzzling affair that saw profits from the sale of weapons to Iran flow to Nicaraguan rebels. And he can issue orders to that effect.

But even with a command that "there must be a full and complete airing of the facts," the president of the United States cannot waive another individual's constitutional right against incriminating himself.

Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the president's recently-resigned national security adviser, invoked his Fifth Amendment rights Wednesday in an appearance before the Senate Intelligence Committee just as Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a principal figure in the diversion of funds to the Contras, had done two days before.

Last week, in disclosing the Iran-Contra linkage, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said North was the only person in the U.S. government who knew exactly what happened and that Poindexter "did know that something of this nature was occurring but he did not look into it further."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the committee, said the two men's testimony "could have made our lives easier, but it doesn't make it impossible. I was surprised only because it was said at the White House they would testify, but the White House cannot order anyone to give up their constitutional rights."

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the committee's chairman, said the panel would get the facts with or without Poindexter and North's testimony.

"Nobody has the whole story about this subject," he said. "Their refusal to testify will put a hole in the story, but we can work around it and fill it in and find out what happened."

Poindexter's lawyer, Richard Beckler, told reporters his client "serves the president and wishes to cooperate with every committee that wishes to investigate."

But he said in view of the expected appointment of an independent counsel and requests for testimony at other places he didn't specify, "I would be doing a disservice unless I asked my client to invoke his rights."

One way the Reagan White House could demonstrate its cooperation with the investigation is by not attempting to throw a cloak of executive privilege over presidential aides.

When Richard Nixon was confronted in 1973 during the developing Watergate scandal with demands that his closest aides testify before the Senate Watergate Committee, he sought to claim executive privilege.

The White House has not yet said what it will do, but if sources are correct that all requested documents have been supplied to the committee, it would not seem that executive privilege will be invoked.

"The executive privilege is not North's right or Poindexter's or (Robert) McFarlane's right, that's the president's right," said Earl Silbert, who as principal assistant U.S. attorney in 1973 prosecuted the Watergate burglars. "President Reagan can say he is not going to invoke that."

McFarlane, who preceded Poindexter as national security adviser, testified before the committee Monday.

The Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, he said, can be overcome only if the committee grants immunity, a step that has been discussed.

"By granting immunity," said Silbert, now in private law practice, "you are saying 'you won't be hurt by what you say.'"

Prosecutors, however, have a means of protecting their cases if it appears immunity will be granted to get a reluctant witness to talk.

In a telephone interview, Henry J. Ruth, the third of four special Watergate prosecutors, said the method was used when Watergate figure John Dean was planning to testify on May 1, 1973, under immunity.

Heavy flow of supplies reported to Contra base

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former CIA air transport company flew more than 400 tons of cargo to a base used by an American-manned operation that resupplied Nicaraguan rebels, documents show, despite Reagan administration claims that supplies were only "trickling in" to the fighters.

According to Transportation Department documents, Southern Air Transport of Miami delivered 406 tons of supplies to El Salvador's Ilopango military airport in 15 flights during the first half of 1986. The flights originated in Portugal, New Orleans, Miami and Washington, D.C.

Southern Air, sold by the CIA in 1973, has played a central role in U.S. arms sales to Iran and shipments to Nicaraguan Contra rebels, according to U.S. officials investigating the diversion of $10 million to $30 million from the Iranian sales to the Contras.

Southern Air officials declined to discuss their operations. Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, an aide on President Reagan's National Security Council, was fired last week after Attorney General Edwin Meese III said North oversaw the diversion of funds, in the face of a congressional ban on U.S. military aid to the Contras.

The air operation came to light Oct. 5 when an arms-laden, American-manned C-123K cargo plane was shot down over southern Nicaragua, killing two Americans and leaving a third, Eugene Hasenfus, a prisoner of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that the same planes and crews that were used to carry non-lethal aid to the Contras were used at other times to supply the Contras with weapons.

The newspaper, which said two sources told it of the shipments, said the planes took the non-lethal supplies from the United States to Honduras and El Salvador, where the planes were unloaded and filled with weapons from Europe that were usually delivered to Contra camps.

The flights early this year came while a congressional ban on military help for the rebels was in effect.

Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Elliot Abrams told the Times the procedure was legal.

"If we contract an airplane and crew it does not make us responsible for other work they may do while in Central America," the newspaper quoted Abrams as saying.

This week, other administration officials have sought to minimize the flow of weapons to the Contras this year.

'Brain death' is more accurate

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — In the old days a person was not considered dead until his heart no longer beat and no breath was discernible on a mirror. Now we hear about brain-dead people. Isn't this just a handy definition for doctors to use so they can get organs for transplants?

DEAR READER — No. It is a more accurate indication of death.

A person doesn't die all at once. Some tissues are more resistant than others to lack of oxygen and nutrients. For example, patients' hearts can stop beating without death taking place. A heart can be salvaged, put in cold storage and transplanted. A person can suffer cardiac arrest — and be "dead" — but can be resuscitated. If respiration stops, forms of artificial respiration can be used, almost indefinitely, to keep the body's organs alive. In short, medical technology enables certain patients to live even if their hearts and lungs are not functioning.

However, brain tissue is extremely sensitive to lack of oxygen. The brain cannot survive and function if it is deprived of oxygen for more than about three minutes. In addition, no current medical techniques can correct or replace a damaged brain.

Therefore, the traditional view of death as heart stoppage or cessation of breathing is too narrow a definition. At present, "brain death" is a more useful and practical concept. Brain death is diagnosed by a strict set of criteria that include the analysis of the brain's electrical activity by a brain-wave test (EEG). A person is not considered dead until brain damage is evident and irreversible.

Aside from giving doctors a conclusive endpoint to life, the concept of brain death permits scientists to extract other organs — that are not "dead" — and reuse them in the form of transplants, as you point out.

In the future, as medical technology improves, the concept of brain death will have to be revised. For instance, doctors may someday be able "artificially" to resuscitate the brain, as well as the heart, lungs and kidneys. Then a new definition of death will have to be worked out. At present, "brain death" is the most appropriate method by which to establish whether a person has passed beyond the point where traditional death can be reversed.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Several years ago, I bought a dress from a secondhand store and got scabies from it. Last year the same thing happened to my foster daughter. The problem was solved when we discarded the clothing. No one else in the house got scabies. What should we do in the future to avoid this problem?

DEAR READER — Don't buy any more clothes from that secondhand store. And report the store to your local board of health. The itch mites of scabies could have been spread from the clothes' former owner to you.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE discusses symptoms, management and new studies of this tragic and irreversible disease. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Southwest Conference roundup...

TCU escapes long-range bombing

by The Associated Press

What started as a basketball game quickly became a long-range artillery barrage.

And Jim Killingsworth didn't like it a bit because his Texas Christian University Horned Frogs were the targets.

Texas Christian survived a North Texas State three-point bombardment Wednesday night and went on to defeat the Eagles 92-85 in a nonconference basketball game.

The Eagles hit 13 of 23 shots from three-point range. Guard Glenroy Ferguson sank eight of 13 three-pointers for a career-high 35 points.

But Texas Christian dominated the boards and threw up a zone defense in the second half to halt the barrage.

In other games involving Southwest Conference teams, Arkansas beat Mississippi 70-56, Baylor defeated Tarleton State 85-56 and Texas rolled past Central Missouri 88-60.

The Horned Frogs, 2-2, used their muscle under the boards, out-rebounding the Eagles 60-28. North Texas, 1-1, missed six of its first seven three-pointers in the second half.

"We've got the game back to where it started with a peach basket on the wall down at the YMCA," said Texas Christian coach Jim Killingsworth, referring to the three-pointers. "All you need to do is jack it up and click your heels together. It's like a Chinese fire drill. Something has to be done."

Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson said he knew his Razorbacks were a time bomb ready to explode, and William Mills proved to be the fuse.

Mills came off the bench to score 18 points and grab 12 rebounds to spur Arkansas over Mississippi.

Mills scored 14 of his points in the second half as the Razorbacks improved to 3-0. The Rebels of the Southeastern Conference fell to 1-1.

"We are like a time bomb," said Richardson, who is in his second year at Arkansas. "We can explode and we did it again tonight."

In the last two Arkansas games, the Razorbacks have outscored their opponents 92-56 in the second half to post come-from-behind victories.

Darryl Middleton scored 21 points and Brandon Taylor added 15 to lead Baylor over Tarleton State.

The Bears, 2-1, had a balanced scoring effort. Michael Hobbs scored 12 points and Frank Williams added 11, both coming off the bench.

Middleton scored 14 of his points in the first half as Baylor ran up a 46-28 lead.

Zachary Zastoupil led the Texans with 17 points and eight rebounds. Tarleton's season record is now 4-6.

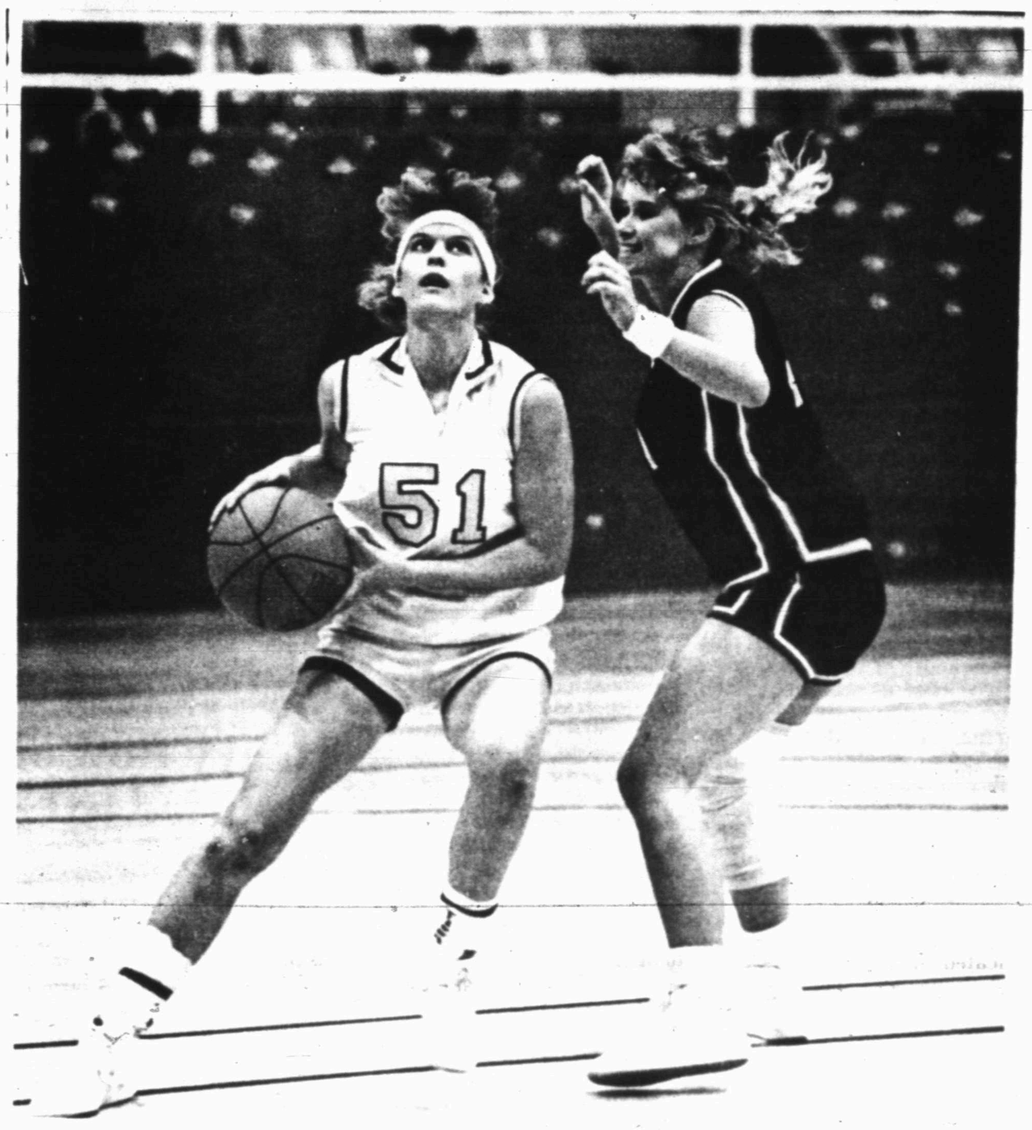

Patrick Fairs scored 28 points and Raynard Davis scored 21 as Texas handed NCAA Division II Central Missouri State its first loss of the season.

Texas led from start to finish, opening up a 40-26 halftime lead before outscoring the Mules 7-2 at the beginning of the second half.

Skip Ellison led Central Missouri with 18 points, followed by Glenn Harrison with 10.

Texas improved its record to 2-2. Central Missouri dropped to 4-1.

"It will end up being a good learning game," said Texas coach Bob Weltlich. "We made enough mistakes to last a lifetime. It was beginning to look like Barnum & Bailey out there. I don't like to see us play like that no matter what the score."

PLENTY OF ACTION -- Snyder basketball teams are all over the area tonight and will play over a dozen games before the weekend is through. Among those playing tonight are WTC's Westerners, Snyder boy's varsity, JV, sophomores, freshmen, eighth and seventh graders, and the girl's JV. Dusters ranked 5th in nation according to initial juco poll

Western Texas College's Dusters are ranked fifth in the nation, according to the first National Junior College Athletic Association women's basketball poll, released this week.

The poll, which includes only 15 teams and comes out about a week late as far as actual records, has Connors State College of Warner, Okla., as its No. 1 team.

Northeast Mississippi is second, followed by Trinity Valley of Athens, Tex., Cowley County of Kansas, and Western Texas.

Western Texas boasts a 12-1 record, though the poll indicates the Dusters' record as 7-1.

Coach Kelly Chadwick had hoped the Dusters would be ranked, but was concerned the one loss might hamper the squad's chances. Chadwick was reportedly enroute to Hobbs, N.M. today, to see a WJCAC game between New Mexico Junior College and South Plains, and was unavailable for comment on the ranking.

WTC is the only Western Junior College Athletic Conference team ranked in the women's poll, though Trinity is included at No. 3 and Tyler JC of Texas is No. 8.

San Jacinto is listed as No. 1 in the men's top 20, also released this week. The only other team from Texas is Midland College, ranked No. 8 along with Pensacola, Fla.

In addition to being ranked fifth, Western is also 11th in team offense with an 82.3 scoring average. Sophomore Brenda Welch is the nation's sixth leading scorer, averaging 24.4 points an outing.

Cougs fire 4 to trim budget; Elvin Hayes dismissed, too

HOUSTON (AP) - Firing four University of Houston athletic department officials should save the financially-strapped division more than $150,000, the interim athletic director says.

Elvin Hayes, a former basketball star who was a special assistant to the athletic director, was one of the four dismissed, the university announced Wednesday.

Also fired were Jay Goldberg, sports information director; ticket manager Mark Koson and Vince Granito, assistant ticket manager, interim Athletic Director Michael Johnson said.

"We have been facing the budget deficit issue for some time and it was felt that staff reductions had to be made in the best interest of the department," Johnson said.

The personnel cuts would save the department more than $150,000 in salaries and fringe benefits, he said.

"When a business has obvious financial problems, steps have to be taken to try to solve them," he said.

Rick Rivers, sports spokesman, said Wednesday night that no other layoffs were planned.

Hayes, a two-time all-American and former all-pro in the National Basketball Association, was hired about 18 months ago by former athletic director Tom Ford as a special assistant.

"Elvin is a terrific guy, but he was doing basically public relations, and we couldn't afford it," Johnson said of Hayes' $35,000-40,000 salary.

Goldberg, sports information director for nearly eight years, was told of his dismissal Tuesday several hours after a news conference to announce the hiring of new head football Coach Jack Pardee.

Johnson said Mike Mullis, assistant athletic director for business, would oversee the ticket office.

Tar Heels roll past Stetson; No. 5 Iowa wins easily, too

by The Associated Press

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith liked the way Kenny Smith and Ranzino Smith played. The coach also liked the way his freshmen played. In fact, he liked just about everything he saw.

"We played our best basketball of the season to date," Dean Smith said after the No. 1 Tar Heels trimmed Stetson 100-64 Wednesday night.

"I understand we're more talented than Stetson, but I also thought we played very well."

Senior guard Kenny Smith, a preseason All-America selection, scored 17 points and Ranzino Smith added 15 for the Tar Heels, 3-1, who were playing their first game since losing at UCLA on Monday night.

J.R. Reid, a 6-foot-9 freshman, scored 10 points and grabbed seven rebounds, and fellow freshman Scott Williams, at 6-11, had seven points and eight rebounds.

BROWNFIELD -- Snyder junior varsity girls suffered their first defeat of the season here Tuesday, falling 60-40 to Brownfield.

Shelly Tomlin led the young Tigers with 16 points and 11 rebounds. Evette Housden scored 8 points and Michelle Candanoza added 7. The three girls also combined for 12 steals.

"Brownfield was very good and very big," said Coach Vicki Nelms. "I thought Evette Housden and Shelly Tomlin played real well for us."

Snyder's downfall was a 15-of-50 shooting effort from the field.

"It was a close game until midway through the third when Brownfield scored about 10 unanswered points," said the coach, whose team is now 3-1.

McWilliams and Texas...

No announcement expected today concerning position

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas Tech football Coach David McWilliams says there will be no announcement today concerning a possible move to the Univeristy of Texas, "because there is nothing to announce."

News reports today said McWilliams apparently is considering an offer from UT, although he said nothing had been decided.

"The job has not been offered. We've talked. We have nothing to announce, I'm going to make a decision and try to do what's best for my family," McWilliams said.

"I've always been a loyal person. That's what makes this decision tougher," he added.

McWilliams guided the Red Raiders to a 7-4 season and an Independence Bowl berth in this, his first year at Texas Tech. Before going to Lubbock, however, he spent two decades at Texas as a Longhorn player and assistant coach.

"I enjoy Tech, but there is no question I have ties with the University of Texas. It's something I'm certainly considering," he told the American-Statesman.

McWilliams, in Pasadena Wednesday to speak at a high school football banquet, confirmed he met for three hours Wednesday with Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds in Dallas.

McWilliams said he would return to Lubbock to talk with his family, Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones and the Red Raider team.

"First, I want to go home and see my family - we make all decisions together, and that's the way it's going to be with this one," he said. "We'll make the decision, then I'll talk to Mr. Jones, and then make an announcement. Probably, it will be no later than Sunday - that's when we (Tech) start practicing for the Independence Bowl."

The Austin American-Statesman reported that sources indicated Arizona State Coach John Cooper also was interviewed for the job. Cooper was out of town Wednesday and could not be reached for comment by the Associated Press.

ASU Athletic Dirctor Charles Harris said Cooper "understands where Arizona State is and certainly our desire to keep him here, and that's about all I can say."

In Austin, Dodds said no deal had been reached for a new head coach.

"I'm still anticipating the end of the week," he said. "It would be hard for us to do anything Thursday, and I've said all along it would probably be the end of the week before we are able to announce anything."

UT sports information director Bill Little said Dodds indicated he might schedule more interviews today, although the American-Statesman said "those might only be courtesy visits."

Other names than McWilliams and Cooper have been mentioned as possibilities for the Longhorn job, including Larry Smith of Arizona, Fisher De Berry of Air Force, Mike Shanahan, an assistant with the Denver Broncos and Allen Lowry, a Dallas Cowboys assistant.

The American-Statesman also reported that Akers and his wife, Diane flew to West Lafayette, Ind., Wednesday for an interview with the selection committee of Purdue, one of Akers' closest friends said.

The vacancy was created last month when Boilermaker Coach Leon Burnett resigned.

Lombardi finalists discuss possibility of grid playoffs

HOUSTON (AP) - Playoffs to determine the top collegiate football team would not be economically sound for schools that depend on football programs for revenues, two finalists for the Lombardi Award say.

A playoff program that would result in the Rose Bowl being the Super Bowl of college football isn't a bad idea, according to Lombardi Award finalist Brian Bosworth of Oklahoma.

But finalist Jerome Brown of Miami is against such a playoff.

"We have an independent school where the bowl money comes to the school. In conferences, like the Big Eight, they have to split their money up," Brown, a 6-foot-2, 285-pound defensive tackle, said at a news conference Wednesday.

"All the money comes to the University of Miami. It means we get more students, they upgrade the campus and do more things for us," said Brown whose team faces Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl Jan. 2 to determine the No. 1 college team.

Other finalists of the Lombardi Award, recognizing the outstanding college lineman of the year, include Chris Spielman of Ohio State and Cornelius Bennett of Alabama. The winner of the award is to be announced tonight.

A playoff would "take away a lot of money out of the pockets of the schools and conferences," Bosworth, a 6-foot-2, 240-pound linebacker, said.

The outspoken Bosworth says college athletes have been prostituted, adding the football program at Oklahoma last year made over $10 million.

"Of that $10 million not any of it came back to the football program," he said. "It all is sucked into the academics and I don't see $10 million worth of academics at Oklahoma."

Players should be subsidized since they make money for the schools and they are not allowed to work during the school year, said Bosworth, donning his usual diamond stud and a "Boz" earring along with his punk-style haircut - shaved sides, a dark pin stripe circling his head and a tail in the back.

Spielman, a 6-foot-2, 230-pound inside linebacker, said players who accept money from alumni are taking a chance of not only ruining their eligibility but also tarnishing their team and school.

"We have a responsibility as players not to be involved in cheating. If somebody comes up and offers you money, it's hard to resist temptation ... I think it's the responsibility of the player to be a mature person about it and deny that money," the 6-foot-2, 230-pound inside linebacker said.

Bennett says he warns recruits about accepting alumni benefits when they first visit the Alabama campus.

"You have to think of the consequences you have to face if you get caught. It could cost you your eligibility and a possible shot of playing professional football," Bennett, a 6-foot-4, 235-pound senior, said.

Bosworth's haircuit didn't outshine the other finalists.

Brown, the 6-foot-2, 285-pound linebacker, wore an array of gold necklaces resembling "Mr. T," including what looked like a nameplate with "Jerome" on it.

Brown and Bennett both said they had "fade" haircuts which also features shaved sides.

When asked what he had, Spielman said, "I have a can of snuff in my back pocket."

SMU needs to forget football recruiting 'sins'

DALLAS (AP) - What's needed at Southern Methodist University, says Athletic Director Bob Hitch, is a chance to forget past football recruiting sins and to start over with a clear record.

Otherwise, Hitch said, SMU might forever be in trouble with the National Collegiate Athletic Association because of rules violations that occurred years ago.

"There's got to be a point in time where we draw the line and forget about all the stuff that's happened in the past and start anew," Hitch told reporters Wednesday.

Hitch appeared before the Faculty Senate to answer questions about the football program after reports last month that a football player was paid, a violation of NCAA rules. The player claimed he was paid after the school was placed on three years' probation for recruiting violations.

Another player reportedly received a rent-free apartment, also a rules violation.

Hitch said he has no doubts that the SMU Board of Governors would drop football if violations continue. Gov.-elect Bill Clements, chairman of the board of governors, said football would be abolished if SMU doesn't clean up its act.

"I think football has embarrassed this institution enough right now, and I think they've got to look at strong measures," Hitch said. "I think really, in all honesty, the board would drop football right now. And you can see why. It's an issue right now, and we've got to get things in order."

"The SMU boosters have to realize the board is serious about dropping football if we can't handle it," Hitch said.

Hitch said SMU "has been in trouble forever, even back in the 1920s. We have a reputation of being crooks and being bad guys and that type of reputation is hard to live down."

But he said that the football team next fall "is going to be clean."

Earlier, Hitch told the Faculty Senate that the school would not have a winning football team if special admissions for athletes were abolished.

The board of governors last week announced that special admissions for football players would be abandoned immediately.

McWilliams SWC coach of year; QB Murray top offensive player

DALLAS (AP) - David McWilliams, who brought Texas Tech its first winning season and bowl appearance in the 1980s, has been named The Associated Press Southwest Conference Coach of the Year in balloting by his peers.

McWilliams, who has been interviewed for the opening at the University of Texas, left the Longhorns a year ago as defensive coordinator to take the Tech job after Jerry Moore was fired.

The Red Raiders were 7-4 under McWilliams and received an Independence Bowl bid to play Mississippi. It was Tech's first winning season since 1978.

Texas A&M, the SWC champions, dominated the mythical all-star team.

Led by quarterback Kevin Murray, the SWC's Offensive Player of the Year, the Aggies landed eight players on first team offense and defense. Tight end Rod Bernstine was a unanimous choice.

Other Aggie first teamers included running back Roger Vick, offensive tackle Louis Cheek, placekicker Scott Slater, defensive lineman Sammy O'Brient, linebacker Johnny Holland, and defensive back Kip Corrington.

The Defensive Player of the Year was Baylor defensive back Thomas Everett. The Offensive Newcomer of the Year was Tech's James Gray and Texas' linebacker Duane Duncum earned Defensive Newcomer of the Year honors.

The Cotton Bowl-bound Aggies, who meet Ohio State on Jan. 1, placed six players on the second team.

Baylor had six players on the All-SWC first team and two on the second squad.

Murray became the SWC career leader in touchdown passes and owns all the Aggie career passing marks and two single season records.

Murray led A&M to the SWC title for the second consecutive season.

Everett was the SWC Defensive Player of the Year last season and retained that honor again.

Testaverde leads honors list

by The Associated Press

Quarterback Vinny Testaverde, the nation's most effective passer, and two defensive teammates from No. 1-ranked Miami of Florida - tackle Jerome Brown and free safety Bennie Blades, the nation's leading interceptor - were named today to the Associated Press All-America team for 1986.

Testaverde, who is expected to win the Heisman Trophy on Saturday, led Miami to the head of the college football rankings by completing 175 of 276 passes for 2,557 yards and a nation-leading 26 touchdowns in 10 games before missing the Hurricanes' final regular-season contest with bruises suffered when he fell off his motor scooter. His completion percentage was 63.4 and he led the country in passing efficiency.

Blades intercepted 10 passes in 11 games and returned them for 128 yards while the 285-pound Brown was the top lineman on a unit that finished sixth nationally in total defense.

"I had never before coached a game where we had to find out where a defensive lineman was before the snap," Pitt Coach Mike Gottfried said of Brown's dominance.

Oklahoma, the team Miami displaced as No. 1 after beating the Sooners 28-16 on Sept. 27, also put three players on the All-America team - inside linebacker Brian Bosworth, tight end Keith Jackson and offensive guard Mark Hutson, all juniors.

Bosworth is one of five repeaters and nine juniors on the first team. The other repeaters are offensive guard Jeff Bregel of Southern California, defensive backs Thomas Everett of Baylor and Mark Moore of Oklahoma State and punter Barry Helton of Colorado.

Besides Blades, Helton and the Oklahoma trio, the other juniors are wide receivers Tim Brown of Notre Dame and Cris Carter of Ohio State, defensive tackle Al Noga of Hawaii and inside linebacker Chris Spielman of Ohio State.

The rest of the elite squad consists of offensive tackles Harris Barton of North Carolina and Danny Villa of Arizona State, center Ben Tamburello and running back Brent Fullwood of Auburn, running back Paul Palmer of Temple, placekicker Jeff Jaeger of Washington, outside linebackers Cornelius Bennett of Alabama and Shane Conlan of Penn State; nose guard Danny Noonan of Nebraska and defensive back Rod Woodson of Purdue.

The AP All-America team will be featured on Bob Hope's Bagful of Christmas Cheer (Dec. 21, NBC-TV, 9-10 p.m., EST). It will be Hope's 48th annual Christmas special on radio or television.

The All-America team was selected by the AP's regional sports editors, along with the college football editor and the sports editor, from all-conference and all-sectional lists.

Shareholders sue to stop buyout

CHICAGO (AP) — A deal to buy out H. Ross Perot's share in General Motors Corp. for more than $700 million violates federal law because other shareholders weren't told of the plans, a lawsuit contends.

Abraham Duman, who holds fewer than 100 shares of several classes of GM stock, challenged the GM board's intention to buy back the shares from the Texas billionaire and three others.

His lawsuit was filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Detroit.

Duman, who lives in the Chicago suburb of Highland Park, said he did not know exactly how many shares he held.

Perot, who founded Electronic Data Systems Corp., has been a vocal critic of GM management since GM bought the company. The GM board Monday announced a plan to use stock and contingent notes to buy the 11.4 million shares Perot and three other top managers of EDS acquired in the sale.

The plan would pay Perot and his managers a total $750 million, more than twice the current market value of the affected Class E shares. On Friday, GM's Class E stock closed at 31 3/8. On Wednesday it closed at $28 1/4, up 1/4.

In exchange for the planned buyout, Perot resigned as chairman and chief executive officer of EDS, which he founded in 1962 and was sold to GM two years ago for $2.5 billion.

The agreement also calls for Perot to stop speaking out against GM management or pay the company damages of up to $7.5 million, published reports have said.

Duman's lawsuit, said his attorney, Richard S. Schiffrin, asks that the planned transaction be set aside.

Clifford Merriott, director of media relations for GM, said Wednesday night from his home that company officials had not seen the Duman lawsuit and would have no comment until they receive it.

Duman's lawsuit contends the GM board acted with more concern for silencing critics than for protecting stockholders.

"The board was not interested in its stockholders," Schiffrin said. "The board bought his silence. In doing and not disclosing to shareholders something that would clearly have an effect on the stock, it constitutes in effect a manipulation of the stock."

Schiffrin said the allegation is "essentially, securities violation — breach of board's fiduciary duties."

"We are saying that none of this was disclosed" beforehand, Schiffrin said. "This is an action with an enormous impact on the company. It clearly affects the interests of the stockholders. It was done without any knowledge by the shareholders."

Perot said he would put his $700 million portion of the planned buyout into an escrow account until Dec. 15 to give GM a chance to change its mind. He said he did not consider the offer "the highest and best use" of funds for the automaker.

Saudis are linked to Iran arms sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saudi Arabia, playing a key role in a shadowy arms sales network with Israel, paid for most of the American weapons shipped to Iran, according to congressional and other sources.

"They've got the money and they are very deeply into it," a well-placed congressional aide said Wednesday. The aide, speaking on condition he not be identified, estimated the Saudi financial contribution at "in the hundreds of millions of dollars."

The Saudi connection added a curious twist to a complex affair. For several years, the oil-rich kingdom had been depicted as vulnerable to any spillover from Iran's war with Iraq.

The Saudis had lined up with most of the Arab world in backing Iraq against non-Arab Iran, paying for most of Iraq's weapons.

According to the congressional source, the Saudis also provided aid to anti-communist forces in Afghanistan, Nicaragua and Angola as a way of maintaining "good relations" with the United States.

Another source who also refused to be identified estimated the Saudis contributed a minimum of $60 million to $70 million, or about 70 percent of the cost of the packages of anti-tank and anti-aircraft missiles, and other military supplies. Iran paid $10 million to $12 million.

"We did not know about the whole thing, the negotiation between Washington and Iran concerning the arms deal until it has become public," said Habib Shaheen, spokesman at the Saudi Embassy.

And the State Department said Wednesday, "We have no evidence that would suggest the Saudi government was involved in selling arms to Iran."

But other sources tell a story of strange alliances that first took form with an unpublicized understanding between the United States and Riyadh in 1981 in which the Saudis promised to help anti-communist Moslem forces in Afghanistan.

The agreement was reached while the Reagan administration was pushing a controversial Saudi purchase of modern U.S. AWACS radar planes through a skeptical Congress. It was broadened in 1984 to include Central America, where U.S.-backed Contra rebels were waging a guerrilla war against the leftist Sandinista government.

As a result, when the Reagan administration decided a year later to provide American weapons to Iran through Israel, the U.S.-Saudi connection came into play.

According to the sources, who insisted on anonymity, a Saudi businessman and arms trader, Adnan Khashoggi, lined up Israeli dealers in the fall of 1985 with Manuchur Ghorbanifar, an Iranian weapons merchant with close ties to the Khomeini government.

Acting on a U.S. request for signs of moderation in Tehran, speeches marking the anniversary of the fundamentalist revolution took on a strident anti-Soviet tone but the usual anti-American rhetoric was absent.

The National Security Council accepted this as an indication of good will, then proceeded with the first shipment of American weapons and waited expectantly for the release of Americans held captive by the Islamic Jihad, an Iranian-backed group in Lebanon. One hostage, the Rev. Benjamin Weir, was set free.

While the U.S. arms flowed from the Pentagon to the CIA and then to Israel for shipment to Iran, the Saudis made payments to banks in Switzerland.

The Pentagon was reimbursed, shipping costs were covered, the dealers reaped an undetermined profit and funds estimated by Attorney General Edwin Meese III at $10 million to $30 million were deposited in an account for the Contras. It is not clear whether they ever got the money.

Khashoggi said in a statement issued from New York, "I have no official status with the government of Saudi Arabia nor have I acted in its behalf, directly or indirectly, in any matter relating to the sale or other transfer of arms to Iran, between the governments of Saudi Arabia and Iran, nor between the government of Saudi Arabia and the opposition forces in Nicaragua."

But a congressional source called the veteran dealer the key Saudi link, giving the Saudi government the means to "deny a connection" to the Iranian purchases.

Forklift in minor wreck

A minor traffic accident was reported in Snyder Wednesday afternoon involving a local's vehicle and a forklift.

Involved in the 4:13 p.m. collision in the 2500 Block of 25th St. were a 1982 Ford driven by David Oscar Adams of 3012 Ave. V and a Hyster forklift owned by Snyder Lumber Company and driven by Walter Dale Withers of Rt. 2, Snyder.

Grease fire prompts alarm

Fire units were dispatched to the Bill Aaron residence, 110 25th St., at 4:45 p.m. Wednesday, where a pan of grease had caught fire.

Fire officials say an area of kitchen carpet was burned by a burning grease spill. Aaron also reportedly sustained minor burns to his hands.

Indictment arrest noted

Police arrested a local man Wednesday who had been indicted Monday for aggravated assault charges.

Jimmy Trevino, 24, of Rt. 2, remained in the Scurry County Jail Thursday morning in lieu of a $10,000 bond.

He was indicted in connection with reported shooting incidents in east Snyder Saturday night and Sunday morning, one involving shots fired at a residence.

No injuries resulted from those incidents.

City officers also jailed two individuals believed to be "Moonies" Wednesday evening. They were charged for soliciting without permits.

Correction...

An accident report in Wednesday's SDN incorrectly reported that a 1986 Ford driven by Ira Lee Lenard of Midland had been struck from the rear by a 1983 Ford driven by Cyrus Striklen Posey of 2206 44th St.

Instead, the Posey vehicle was struck from behind while attempting to turn off the highway onto a private roadway.

Researchers working on cancer cells resistance

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists who have discovered new evidence that some cancer cells can resist chemotherapy by spitting out the anti-cancer drugs hope to sabotage that defense or use it to their advantage.

"We're going to have to be clever," said researcher Ira Pastan of the National Cancer Institute. "But at least we know what we're facing."

Research from several laboratories, including one study published today, suggests that some drug-resistant cells use a chain-like protein in cell walls as a pump to get rid of drugs.

While the pump protein is present in other cells as well, unusually high amounts seem to confer drug resistance.

Scientists hope to find drugs that can hinder the pumping operation, allowing chemotherapy to do its work. But the pump may also be advantageous if it can be put to work in bone marrow, Pastan said in a recent interview.

Damage to the marrow is a common side effect of chemotherapy. If genes that order cells to create the pump are implanted in a cancer patient's bone marrow, which often is damaged by chemotherapy, they may create an effective pumping operation there — allowing the patient's body to tolerate higher doses of chemotherapeutic drugs, Pastan said.

For now, scientists consider the pump as one possible way that cancer cells resist drugs, a key problem in chemotherapy. Some cancers, like those of the colon and lung, resist drugs from the outset, while others acquire resistance in the course of chemotherapy.

If resistance to standard drugs could be overcome, said Dr. John Stevens of the American Cancer Society, "we could give our chemotherapeutic agents a second lease on life in a much more incisive fashion."

The research is providing good evidence that the pump mechanism is one means of resistance, Stevens said.

The most recently published study appears in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

The pump gene may have appeared in animals to help cells dispose of naturally occuring poisons, such as those now used in cancer chemotherapy, Pastan said. The gene appears highly active in normal colon cells, which might be expected to encounter poisons taken in with food, he said.

As a result, tumor cells arising in the colon have a natural defense against chemotherapeutic drugs, he said.

ment will absorb 90 percent of the project's total cost. The remaining 10 percent will come from revenue sharing funds already received and set aside by county commissioners.

Once the renovations are completed, the county will continue to maintain the facility.

The project plans include a complete renovation of the north-south runway with an 800 ft. extension. This extension would increase the runway's length to the mark required to accomodate larger aircraft such as jets.

In the original proposal, the county also requested monies for a parallel taxiway, for resurfacing of the east-west runway and the ramp area and reconstruction of the airport beacon.

County officials first applied for the FFA funds in 1983 to renovate the 30-plus year old facility.

Those attending Wednesday's session were Denman and Wilson, Pct. 2 Commissioner-elect Tommy Pate, Pct. 3 Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr., Roy McQueen, Roger Mize, Mayor Rod Waller, Roy Idom and airport board members John Lacik, Seaborn Eicke and Olin Bunch.

FAA representatives were Tom Graves, supervisor for the Standards Section, Gerald Musiek, civil engineer, and George Conley, Safety and Standards Branch manager.

Senator in charge only temporarily

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Carlos Truan says he did not comprehend the weight of a life-or-death decision until the chain of command put him in charge of a man who was executed early today.

"I've been acting governor on many different occasions. I've been called on to make decisions, but none that were considered as serious as this," Truan said Wednesday night.

The Corpus Christi Democrat, who serves as the Senate's president pro tem, was acting governor Wednesday until about an hour before the execution of Michael Wayne Evans in Huntsville. Truan was in charge because Gov. Mark White was on vacation in England and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby was returning from a vacation in Ireland.

Hobby arrived at Houston Intercontinental Airport at 11 p.m. Wednesday and announced his decision not to grant the 30-day reprieve sought by Evans.

Truan said he was prepared to make the same decision.

"Most certainly, this placed a heavy responsibility on my shoulders, a lot heavier than what I had really ever imagined," he said.

Since becoming Senate president pro tem in May 1985, Truan has served as acting governor on many occasions. He said the most difficult decision he has had to make while serving as acting governor concerned whether to send National Guard troops to West Texas during a weather emergency.

Truan, who voted for the death penalty law under which Evans was killed, said the facts of the case prompted his decision.

Make Sure Your Shopping List Has All the Right Stuff

DEAR READERS: Well, are the Christmases getting closer together or does it just seem that way? It's time to start preparing for the holidays again, so do yourselves a favor and do your Christmas or Hanukkah shopping early.

Here's my annual — slightly revised — column on holiday shopping:

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Olivia or Grandpa, who doesn't go out much, let me tell you what not to give them:

Forget dusting powder, after-shave and cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Sylvia doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces, bracelets or earrings.

With the price of groceries so high, older folks who live alone on a fixed income would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Older people who live in confined quarters do not need more "things" that are ornamental only. Don't send music boxes, statuettes or other bric-a-brac.

A truly thoughtful gift: postcards and some lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some felt-tip pens, too.)

A handy gift: an assortment of greeting cards for all occasions, so that they, too, can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others. (Be a sport and affix postage to some of the envelopes.)

Don't give a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. That goes for color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some little doodad you received three Christmases ago, please don't; the recipient will probably find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)

If you are aware that someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than some useless little trinket. Another thoughtful gift would be a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you are sure he or she will enjoy.

If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate, since if the recipient tries to exchange it, he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."

Never give a pet to anyone unless you're absolutely sure a pet is wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin or two of cat or dog food for the pet.

Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation. Also remember that many older people have difficulty chewing hard candies and nuts. And nutritionists caution: "Lay off sugar and salt."

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "take it back and exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and them) time and effort by giving gift certificates in the first place.

The rising cost of long-distance telephone calls restricts many older people from making them, so a practical and thoughtful gift would be a gift certificate from their telephone company.

For those who maintain their own homes and apartments, consider a gift certificate for other types of service needed — window washing and rug cleaning. And don't forget certificates for the barber shop, beauty parlor, taxi rides or a dinner out to a fine restaurant. And (don't laugh) a trip to the podiatrist!

Holiday time can be depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to have a holiday meal with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty. Love,

Evans victims died before celebration of Baptism

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Second Mexican Baptist Church in the Oak Cliff area of Dallas was the center of Elvira Guerrero's life.

She was the church pianist and treasurer. She drove children on the bus to and from church. She met her fiance, Mario Garza, through a friend at the church.

And on June 26, 1977, she and Mario were about to celebrate his baptism at church earlier that night when their plans turned to horror.

The couple were shot. She was robbed of $40 in church offerings and her face was slashed with a carpet knife as she begged God to forgive her attacker.

Four days later their bodies were found in a hayfield.

Michael Wayne Evans, convicted of Ms. Guerrero's death, was executed early today for the 1977 slaying.

"We were real worried," Ms. Guerrero's sister, Connie Rincon, recalls. "We did not know what had happened to her. Every day after work, we would go out to see if we could find her car. We went to the lake, the park. We couldn't find anything.

"Everybody said maybe she ran off with her boyfriend. But we knew that wasn't the case. She was a real good person."

Elvira Guerrero, born in Wylie, was the oldest of six sisters. The family moved to Dallas' Oak Cliff area in the mid-1960s.

Iranian arms deal...

Cities hurt by controversy

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The nation's cities will suffer from even greater federal neglect if President Reagan's Iranian arms-deal controversy becomes a long-running national crisis, Democratic Sen. Joseph Biden warned urban leaders.

"The Congress finds itself preoccupied with this crisis," Biden said Wednesday at the conclusion of the National League of Cities annual meeting.

"We don't need that. Our constituents that we represent don't need that. The issues that bring you together today will in fact be more unattended than they have been in the recent past," he said.

Biden, D-Del., and another potential 1988 presidential aspirant, former Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, turned to the president's controversy as they addressed the more than 7,000 mayors, council members and city managers.

Baker, who gained national prominence as vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, said this crisis is no Watergate because there is no evidence of a cover-up.

"I think the president recognizes there were mistakes," he said. "That's a painful thing for anyone to do, to say that I made a mistake, but that's effectively what he's said."

"I think those mistakes were made pursuant to humane considerations — I do not think they were venal mistakes of personal greed," Baker added.

Biden urged the resignation of CIA director William Casey and White House chief of staff Donald Regan. And he called for Reagan to quickly "tell us ... what happened, why it happened and all of what he knows."

The league concluded its annual Congress of Cities by elevating Denver council member Cathy Reynolds to president, following San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

The officials also voted for a package of resolutions and urban policy statements that listed more than $20 billion in federal domestic spending, plus many other requests for which no pricetag was affixed.

They ask for more than $3 billion over five years to increase the war on drugs, nearly $2 billion for food and shelter for the homeless, $8.5 billion for sewer and water treatment projects, and $7 billion to continue big urban aid programs for community development, mass transit, housing and other purposes.

Still more money was sought from Congress for AIDS research, youth unemployment, illiteracy, low-income housing and other programs.

Although not listed as a top urban priority, the league adopted a policy statement urging renewal of the $4 billion revenue sharing program of direct aid to cities, which expired this year.

Baker, one of the original sponsors of revenue sharing in the late 1960s, said he still backs the program.

"I'm not making any political announcements today, but ... if I were president of the United States, I would revive revenue sharing from the dead," Baker said.

Biden told reporters later, however, that cities are not going to get revenue sharing.

The city officials also approved a statement calling for welfare reform but opposing proposals to swap fuller federal funding of welfare programs for the elimination of many other domestic programs of direct aid to cities.

Biden told reporters later, however, that a proposal along those lines is "on the right track."

Delegates head home after fifty-third annual meeting

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Plainview farmer S.M. True says he's "suffering right along with everybody else" in agriculture.

But the five-term president of the state's largest farm organization also says actions by the Texas Farm Bureau this week leave him optimistic about the future of agriculture.

True, re-elected president of the TFB at the close of its 53rd annual convention Wednesday, called the delegates' decision to establish a political action committee a turning point for the group.

"I feel like we can use a PAC to the benefit of the Farm Bureau and the candidates who will support agriculture," True said.

"People have indicated they want us to move forward," True said.

Delegates affirmed their support for the 1985 farm bill and approved a 10-year plan of goals for the 323,799-member Texas Farm Bureau during their convention in the heart of the Texas citrus industry.

Delegates turned down a resolution calling for the governor to appoint the Texas agriculture commissioner and approved a series of resolutions that they will present to the Texas Legislature and Congress. Both convene in January.

Many of the delegates speaking for a PAC said it would give their resolutions more weight with lawmakers.

One supporter said having a PAC would make the TFB's policy manual "a fountain of legislative reform."

Paul Hopper of Howard County, in arguing for a PAC, said TFB policies would mean little without the power of a political action committee speaking for the depressed farm industry.

"Now we can be dynamic and influential," Hopper said.

Less than two dozen of the 1,150 delegates voted Wednesday against the PAC's formation.

"Let's go out with a unified front," Kay Chandler of Falls County said. "Let's get behind it 100 percent and show the rest of the people we can get together and look after our own interests and not ask someone else to do it for us."

"Why are we going to be on the field if we're not going to play the game," said Dean Schmidt of Lavaca County.

Delegates, considering a host of resolutions, voted in favor of raising the speed limit and making English the official language of Texas.

Farm Bureau members also voted for resolutions to keep Texas sales tax exemptions for farmers and in favor of a national supply managment program to control milk production.

Top Reagan officials awaiting call to testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional probe of the Iran-Contra scandal is expanding as both the House and Senate move to establish investigative units and one committee casts a net of subpoenas for a growing list of witnesses and documents.

The widening investigation is part of the increasing pressure being placed on President Reagan and some of his closest aides by members of Congress and Reagan's own administration.

The Senate Intelligence Committee on Thursday spent more than four hours under tight secrecy quizzing Robert M. Gates, the No. 2 official at the Central Intelligence Agency, on what he knows about the deal that sent planeloads of arms to Iran and diverted as much as $30 million of the proceeds to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the committee's chairman, said the committee's list of potential witnesses had been expanded and now included the National Security Council, except for the president and Vice President George Bush.

While he did not name them, that list potentially includes CIA Director William Casey, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The probe now also encompasses a long list of documents, and committee staff members were dispatched around the country Thursday to subpoena papers from a number of sources, including several businesses, Durenberger said.

"We're putting together a lot of people and a lot of pieces and a lot of documents in order to come to an answer, which I'm afraid the American public assumes the president already knows," Durenberger said. "If he does, it would obviously help everybody if he told us about it."

Weinberger said in an interview in Brussels, Belgium, that it would be "clearly the exception" if the president did not know all essential details about something as important as the arms deal and the diversion of cash to Central America.

Weinberger said the episode was the result of bad advice from Reagan aides who told the president to seek rapprochement with Iranian moderates. The comment put Weinberger at odds with the White House, where spokesman Larry Speakes reiterated Reagan's belief that the policy goal was justified.

Number 2 on docket...

$2 million lawsuit possible for trial

Attorneys for both sides in the $2 million lawsuit filed against Scurry County and the Snyder Chamber of Commerce were waiting Friday morning to see if the case would go to trial Monday morning.

The case involving the Glenn Polk family's lawsuit against the two entities is now listed as second on the docket for a jury call in 132nd District Court Monday.

The legal action stems from the accidental death of 12-year-old Jeff Polk here on Oct. 8, 1984.

For the Polk lawsuit to go to trial, a civil case listed in front of it on the docket will have to be waived, however. It is a workman's compensation suit styled Walter E. Savage vs Texas Employer's Insurance Association.

This suit would have to be either settled out of court or legally postponed before the Polk case could be scheduled.

As of Friday morning, attorneys for the defense in the Savage suit had informed the court they were ready for trial. No word had been received from attorneys representing Savage.

Local court officials said Friday that they had been contacted

Goodfellow food applications due

Friday will be the final day application forms for Goodfellow Christmas food packages will be published this year, but individuals interested in donating to the effort still have until Dec. 24.

As of Friday morning, Goodfellow planners say the prediction for increased applications is proving true.

They had guessed the number of persons seeking the donations of food would increase some 20 percent.

A spokesman noted one additional change this year. "Many of our applicants last year had some type of employment. This year, most are completely without jobs."

Because of the projected increase in need, Goodfellows are urging increased giving.

Canned goods will be accepted at each school campus through Dec. 19, when schools will dismiss for the Christmas holiday.

Contributions of cash will be accepted also at five donor stations. These have been established at West Texas State Bank, Snyder National Bank, American State Bank, Snyder Savings and Loan and Olney Savings.

The donor stations are being manned by volunteers from the Senior Citizens Center. Donations will be accepted during regular business hours through Christmas Eve.

Churches offer gifts to county foster kids

Several local churches have joined together to make this Christmas a special one for area foster children.

As a result, some 15 foster children living here and in adjoining counties will receive a gift Friday night at a Christmas party for foster families.

Turkey and all the trimmings will be served and Santa Claus will hand out presents.

Each child will receive one gift, said Diane Pruitt, office support clerk for the local Child Welfare Office. The foster parent's natural children under the age of 18 will also receive a gift.

The project, which Pruitt said they hope to make an annual event, was the brainchild of Pruitt, Randy Davis, chairman of the Child Welfare Board, and Stoney Blackraven, foster home development worker.

They sent letters to area churches explaining the project and asking for their cooperation. Churches participating include Trinity United Methodist, First Christian, Union United Methodist, Colonial Hill Baptist, First Presbyterian, First United Methodist, Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, Ira United Methodist Church and First Baptist Church of Sweetwater.

According to Pruitt, each church bought gifts, wrapped

The feller on Deep Creek says, "According to all the tax reform advice, we have one month to do all the things we couldn't afford to do the last 10 years."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Recently the UIL considered a proposal to allow local school districts the option of allowing girls to play junior high football.

A member of the state board of education, Dr. Paul Dunn, lives in Levelland, and says he has received ample mail on the subject.

According to the Levelland News-Press, the best argument received by Dr. Dunn came from a Perryton girl. The letter is clear and concise.

"Dear Dr. Dunn:

"I believe girls football is a bad idea. It will cost more for schools and new dressing rooms will need to be built.

"The cost will be very high. Fittable pads will be bought for girls and equipment to fit girls completely will just cost more. A girl coach will be needed to take care of the girls and girl equipment.

"Some positions will be embarrasing such as because you can't have a girl quarterback with a boy center or the other way around. If a girl is first string, she will not be able to play in high school. You will have to train a boy to play that position."

Not a bad argument.

Sometimes well-meaning plans backfire. Marshall Day, in the Seminole Sentinel, related the following story.

"At a certain college, trustees thought it would be smart to hire the wives of some faculty members, as these women often were well qualified and available at reasonable salaries.

"Trustees did so, and the plan worked well for a period of time.

"Then they began to have trouble with pregnancies. Wives in an expectant state all wanted to go on teaching right up to the immediancy of delivery.

"So the board of trustees made a policy. All wives were to stand facing a wall with their toes touching the baseboard. If they stood erect and their tummies didn't touch the wall, they could continue working.

"The wives accepted the rule, but they insisted that it must apply to male faculty members as well.

"When trustees put the men to the test, they lost five professors and three department heads."

In Brief

Soviets-Salt II

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said today it will continue to abide by the SALT II treaty on nuclear weapons, but warned that the United States "is making a big mistake" by exceeding the treaty's limits.

A government statement, issued by Tass news agency, also said Washington's decision to exceed the SALT II limits would not increase U.S. security.

The United State deliberately exceeded the limits of SALT II this week by putting into service its 131st B-52 bomber armed with cruise missiles without dismantling a Poseidon submarine.

The Soviet Union today called the Reagan administration's decision a violation of the agreements in principle on arms reduction reached at the Oct. 11-12 Iceland summit.

BORGER, Texas (AP) — The Panhandle Bank & Trust Co. of Borger has become the 23rd bank in Texas and the 130th in the nation to be closed this year.

The institution, with $94 million in deposits, was ordered closed Thursday by the State Banking Commission.

It was to reopen today as a part of Amarillo National Bank, said Julie Amberson, spokeswoman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The Borger News-Herald reacted to the closing with an extra edition.

Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation. Also remember that many older people have difficulty chewing hard candies and nuts. And nutritionists caution: "Lay off sugar and salt."

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "take it back and exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and them) time and effort by giving gift certificates in the first place.

The rising cost of long-distance telephone calls restricts many older people from making them, so a practical and thoughtful gift would be a gift certificate from their telephone company.

For those who maintain their own homes and apartments, consider a gift certificate for other types of service needed — window washing and rug cleaning. And don't forget certificates for the barber shop, beauty parlor, taxi rides or a dinner out to a fine restaurant. And (don't laugh) a trip to the podiatrist!

Holiday time can be depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to have a holiday meal with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty. Love,

Evans victims died before celebration of Baptism

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Second Mexican Baptist Church in the Oak Cliff area of Dallas was the center of Elvira Guerrero's life.

She was the church pianist and treasurer. She drove children on the bus to and from church. She met her fiance, Mario Garza, through a friend at the church.

And on June 26, 1977, she and Mario were about to celebrate his baptism at church earlier that night when their plans turned to horror.

The couple were shot. She was robbed of $40 in church offerings and her face was slashed with a carpet knife as she begged God to forgive her attacker.

Four days later their bodies were found in a hayfield.

Michael Wayne Evans, convicted of Ms. Guerrero's death, was executed early today for the 1977 slaying.

"We were real worried," Ms. Guerrero's sister, Connie Rincon, recalls. "We did not know what had happened to her. Every day after work, we would go out to see if we could find her car. We went to the lake, the park. We couldn't find anything.

"Everybody said maybe she ran off with her boyfriend. But we knew that wasn't the case. She was a real good person."

Elvira Guerrero, born in Wylie, was the oldest of six sisters. The family moved to Dallas' Oak Cliff area in the mid-1960s.

Iranian arms deal...

Cities hurt by controversy

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The nation's cities will suffer from even greater federal neglect if President Reagan's Iranian arms-deal controversy becomes a long-running national crisis, Democratic Sen. Joseph Biden warned urban leaders.

"The Congress finds itself preoccupied with this crisis," Biden said Wednesday at the conclusion of the National League of Cities annual meeting.

"We don't need that. Our constituents that we represent don't need that. The issues that bring you together today will in fact be more unattended than they have been in the recent past," he said.

Biden, D-Del., and another potential 1988 presidential aspirant, former Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, turned to the president's controversy as they addressed the more than 7,000 mayors, council members and city managers.

Baker, who gained national prominence as vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, said this crisis is no Watergate because there is no evidence of a cover-up.

"I think the president recognizes there were mistakes," he said. "That's a painful thing for anyone to do, to say that I made a mistake, but that's effectively what he's said."

"I think those mistakes were made pursuant to humane considerations — I do not think they were venal mistakes of personal greed," Baker added.

Biden urged the resignation of CIA director William Casey and White House chief of staff Donald Regan. And he called for Reagan to quickly "tell us ... what happened, why it happened and all of what he knows."

The league concluded its annual Congress of Cities by elevating Denver council member Cathy Reynolds to president, following San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

The officials also voted for a package of resolutions and urban policy statements that listed more than $20 billion in federal domestic spending, plus many other requests for which no pricetag was affixed.

They ask for more than $3 billion over five years to increase the war on drugs, nearly $2 billion for food and shelter for the homeless, $8.5 billion for sewer and water treatment projects, and $7 billion to continue big urban aid programs for community development, mass transit, housing and other purposes.

Still more money was sought from Congress for AIDS research, youth unemployment, illiteracy, low-income housing and other programs.

Although not listed as a top urban priority, the league adopted a policy statement urging renewal of the $4 billion revenue sharing program of direct aid to cities, which expired this year.

Baker, one of the original sponsors of revenue sharing in the late 1960s, said he still backs the program.

"I'm not making any political announcements today, but ... if I were president of the United States, I would revive revenue sharing from the dead," Baker said.

Biden told reporters later, however, that cities are not going to get revenue sharing.

The city officials also approved a statement calling for welfare reform but opposing proposals to swap fuller federal funding of welfare programs for the elimination of many other domestic programs of direct aid to cities.

Biden told reporters later, however, that a proposal along those lines is "on the right track."

Delegates head home after fifty-third annual meeting

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Plainview farmer S.M. True says he's "suffering right along with everybody else" in agriculture.

But the five-term president of the state's largest farm organization also says actions by the Texas Farm Bureau this week leave him optimistic about the future of agriculture.

True, re-elected president of the TFB at the close of its 53rd annual convention Wednesday, called the delegates' decision to establish a political action committee a turning point for the group.

"I feel like we can use a PAC to the benefit of the Farm Bureau and the candidates who will support agriculture," True said.

"People have indicated they want us to move forward," True said.

Delegates affirmed their support for the 1985 farm bill and approved a 10-year plan of goals for the 323,799-member Texas Farm Bureau during their convention in the heart of the Texas citrus industry.

Delegates turned down a resolution calling for the governor to appoint the Texas agriculture commissioner and approved a series of resolutions that they will present to the Texas Legislature and Congress. Both convene in January.

Many of the delegates speaking for a PAC said it would give their resolutions more weight with lawmakers.

One supporter said having a PAC would make the TFB's policy manual "a fountain of legislative reform."

Paul Hopper of Howard County, in arguing for a PAC, said TFB policies would mean little without the power of a political action committee speaking for the depressed farm industry.

"Now we can be dynamic and influential," Hopper said.

Less than two dozen of the 1,150 delegates voted Wednesday against the PAC's formation.

"Let's go out with a unified front," Kay Chandler of Falls County said. "Let's get behind it 100 percent and show the rest of the people we can get together and look after our own interests and not ask someone else to do it for us."

"Why are we going to be on the field if we're not going to play the game," said Dean Schmidt of Lavaca County.

Delegates, considering a host of resolutions, voted in favor of raising the speed limit and making English the official language of Texas.

Farm Bureau members also voted for resolutions to keep Texas sales tax exemptions for farmers and in favor of a national supply managment program to control milk production.
