Commissioners deny sheriff's $7,400 pay raise with no vote

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

By their silence, the Midland County Commissioners' Court squashed a citizens' recommendation on Friday to raise Sheriff Gary Painter's salary to $62,000.

"Sometimes that's the way the bricks fall," Painter said.

The five-member governing court, in hushed silence, failed to even propose an initial motion to get a second in order to call for a vote on the Salary Grievance Committee's recommendation to boost Painter's salary.

"The recommendation of the committee dies," County Attorney Russell Malm advised the commissioners.

An earlier motion by Commissioner Jimmy Smith to increase Painter's salary to a compromised $57,000 failed to garner a second.

For the second year in a row, the Commissioners' Court rejected the Salary Griev-

■ Some of the suspected plotters are in custody, some are subject of FBI-led manhunt.

WASHINGTON — U.S and European authorities are zeroing in on a small group of men in England, Germany and the United Arab Emirates believed to have plotted the Sept. 11 attack and provided assistance to the hijackers, government officials said Friday.

Some of the Middle Eastern men are in custody, including an Algerian pilot who British prosecutors identified Friday as the primary instructor for some of the hijackers. The FBI found his name on a document in a car left by the hijackers at Dulles Airport outside Washington, one U.S. official said.

Other suspected plotters remain at large and are the subject of an FBI-led manhunt, the officials told The Associated Press. Several belong to various groups loosely associated with Osama bin Laden's Al-Qaida network.

Among the groups are various cells of the Algerian-based Armed Islamic Group that joined forces with bin Laden, the officials said, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

Officials: Special forces operating in Afghanistan

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States is in "hot pursuit" of terrorists behind the Sept. 11 attacks, President Bush declared Friday as officials said Pentagon special forces had been operating inside Afghanistan. Democratic calls for expanded jobless benefits gained ground amid fresh signs of a sputtering economy.

White House officials said Bush had decided to support an economic stimulus package with possible tax cuts for people and businesses. These officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the president also had decided to back an extension of unemployment benefits for laid-off workers, though far less than the 52 additional weeks congres-

Area Red Cross sends $79,185 to victims

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The American Red Cross of the Southwest announced Friday it is sending $79,185 to help with relief efforts after Sept. 11's terrorist attacks in New York City, Washington D.C. and Pennsylvania.

Greg Stephen, executive director for the ARC of the Southwest office, added money will continue to be wired "from now until the money stops coming in."

"I want to assure the community this $79,000 will be wired to New York, and we will be having auditors come in after that," Stephen said. "The money is going where the donors want it to go."

Stephen noted the Red Cross has raised $241 million nationwide for the relief efforts.

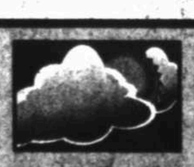

"People say 'What are you going to do with this money?' We don't know," Stephen said. "Red Cross was not prepared for an event like this. We were not prepared for this amount of money to come in."

Stephen knows the money will help. Jobs were lost and providers perished. This money is expected to help families deal with the disaster whether it is used for grief counseling or just when someone can benefit from a helping hand.

And according to Stephen, relief will continue

Candidate for land commissioner carries burden of pending lawsuit

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Kenn George will face lawsuit criticism in his bid for land commissioner.

Tom Craddick is throwing his support behind Kenn George./2A

Former Midlander Kenn George will carry the weight of three pending lawsuits into his campaign for land commissioner, including a seven-year-old lawsuit scheduled to go to trial May 6, less than two months after Republicans elect their candidate for November's general election.

George, a state representative from Dallas, says the $43 million lawsuit going to trial in state court is "frivolous" and "will not have any impact or bearing on the land commissioners' race."

George, a Midland High School graduate, is in the midst of a Republican primary battle with Jerry Patterson, a former state senator from Pasadena. Both men are looking to succeed current Land Commissioner

Craddick endorses former Midlander

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland is throwing his support behind former Midlander Kenn George in his bid to become Texas' next land commissioner.

Craddick also has called the May 6 trial, in which George is accused of improperly pocketing $23 million, a "non event."

This is one of three pending lawsuits, which lists George — a state representative from Dallas — as a defendant.

"It is a private deal," Craddick said. "It is a business thing that has been going on for some time, and I do not believe it affects this race."

George is in a primary with Jerry Patterson, a former Republican state senator from Pasadena. Patterson ran for and lost a bid to become land commissioner in 1998.

The seven-year-old lawsuit stems from a condition of a merger in 1994 when George and 12 other executives of Epic Healthcare Group were terminated from the company, only to be paid more than $60 million for the release of their severance and stock appreciation rights.

George, the former chairman and CEO of the group, received approximately $23 million.

"I think the voters out there are interested in what people are for and what they are against," Craddick said. "I don't think that is a factor."

Craddick is not alone. Ted Royer, communications director for the Republican Party of Texas, says "these are the types of issues which get sorted out in a party primary."

Royer went on to say the Republican Party is not in a position of endorsing one candidate over another.

"Republican primary voters are certainly capable of deciding who the best candidate is without having the state party to tell them who to vote for."

Craddick has worked with George in the House since George's victory over then-incumbent Carolyn Galloway in 1998 and said he will support George as the person who should replace Land Commissioner David Dewhurst.

"I am for Kenn George," Craddick said. "I think he has done an excellent job as a state representative — he has been very effective — and I hope he gets elected as land commissioner. I am helping him."

Dewhurst spokesman Rob Johnson said Dewhurst is "not getting involved in the land commissioner race."

GOP: George calls lawsuit 'frivolous'

(From 1A)

David Dewhurst, a Republican. Dewhurst is running for lieutenant governor.

Patterson said the lawsuits will do nothing to help the GOP down the line.

"Kenn has said he can afford what it takes to win the election. Republicans should ask can we afford to have him on our ticket if he were to be the nominee?" Patterson said. "Even if the assertions are false, that is a huge hickey on his campaign to beat the Democrats, and frankly, it is a hickey on the entire Republican ticket."

The seven-year-old lawsuit stems from a merger in 1994 when the board of Epic Healthcare Group agreed to merge with another hospital holding company called Health Trust Inc.

One condition of the merger was for George and 12 other executives of Epic Healthcare Group, who were terminated from the company, to be paid more than $60 million for the release of their severance and stock appreciation rights.

George, the former chairman and CEO of the group, received approximately $23 million.

In 1994, Epic employee Vicki Anderson (the plaintiff) sued to block the merger. As an employee, Ms. Anderson was part owner of the company via the employee stock pension fund. She asserted the $60 million paid to the Epic Healthcare executives was excessive and payment (which included $23 million to George) was incentive to sell EPIC to Healthtrust for less than its worth.

Ms. Anderson later agreed to drop her attempt to block the merger. Instead Ms. Anderson is suing George and Epic executives for $43 million, according to her attorney, Jim Hartnett Jr. of Dallas.

"Anyone who looks at the allegations will know it is significant," Hartnett said.

The outcome of the lawsuit and its place in one of the state's high-profile political races are still to be determined. Right now, they appear to be a source for back-and-forth bickering and name-calling between plaintiff and defendant and George and Patterson.

"Frivolous" was the term George used a number of times in a phone interview this week to describe any legal action he faces.

According to Hartnett, the seven-year delay is due to attempts by defendants' lawyers to keep Hartnett from getting access to files from his client's former council and from getting a copy of public record.

"The defendants are doing everything they can to keep it from going to trial," Hartnett added.

According to George, "We have had trial dates after trial dates. That is just something lawyers generate fees off of."

Hartnett's brother — Will Hartnett — is a Republican colleague of George in the state House. He also works in their Dallas law office.

"There is a message in there," Jim Hartnett Jr. said.

George says the message is, "In American business, this is one of the problems. Anyone involved in a large complex business stands to be sued frivolously by plaintiffs' attorneys.

The problem is one George would like to eliminate.

"I am one of the leading spokespersons for Texans for lawsuit reform," George said.

George has a problem letting the lawsuit get in the way of campaigning for one of the state's higher-ranking elected positions.

"If my opponent had any qualifications for the job, he would be running on his qualifications," George said. "I don't dwell on his shortcomings, because I am the best qualified candidate in the race."

State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland supports George, arguing the trial date and other pending lawsuits are business-related and really private matters facing George.

Patterson disagrees, arguing that sort of objection is "Clinton-esque."

"It is indicative of a way of doing business. Can we trust Kenn with a permanent school fund if he can't be trusted with an employee pension fund?" Patterson said. "If those who do believe it is outside the realm of the responsibility to the land commissioner, they would also subscribe to Bill Clinton's shenanigans as being outside the responsibility of being commander and chief."

George claims he will be the most qualified to take on state Sen. David Bernsen of Beaumont in next November's general election.

"The real issue is who can beat a well-financed trial lawyer in November," George said.

In 1998, George defeated then-incumbent Carolyn Galloway to become the representative of District 108.

Patterson was elected to the state senate in 1992 and re-elected in 1994. In 1998, Patterson lost to Dewhurst in a first bid for land commissioner.

Cleanup at World Trade Center site could take year

By Sara Kugler
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said Friday it could take a year to finish the cleanup at the World Trade Center, citing the difficulty in removing tons of debris from the massive grave.

"The amount of time they need to remove and clear the site will range anywhere from nine months to one year," Giuliani said.

It will take that long, he said, because of the complexity in removing structures "that have been driven into the ground" once surface debris is carted away.

The official number of people missing in the still-smoldering rubble has dropped to 5,960 from nearly 6,400. Giuliani said the number was lowered after a review of victim lists compiled primarily from missing persons reports and information from foreign consulates following the Sept. 11 terrorist attack.

As debris is cleared from the 16-acre site, human remains continue to be removed for identification. So far, 305 deaths have been confirmed.

"If you stare at the debris and think of all the people buried there it will get to you," said Peter Russo, 55, a carpenter from Old Bridge, N.J., who was building sheds for work crews. "I have to look at it as a job, that the cleanup and rebuilding needs to be done."

Tons of steel and concrete cover the blocks where the 110-story towers once stood. Despite the delicate search for victims, crews have begun assembling giant cranes capable of lifting hundreds of tons.

"Every day we come down here, another 50 feet off the pile is gone," said Brian Bowman, 26, a Verizon worker restoring phone service near the site. "Every day we come down here, there's a new crane."

Separately, Police Commissioner Bernard Kerik said a grand jury investigation has begun into looting at the site. He said organized crime investigators are involved.

On Thursday, a color guard ceremony on the 10th-floor roof of a nearby building to honor veterans who died in the collapse.

Broken glass littered the rooftop where the color guard of active Marines in uniform and former or reserve Marines from the Police Department, all in hard hats, flew the flags of the United States and its Marine Corps, Navy, Air Force, Army and Coast Guard.

As the ceremony ended, the color guard and some workers below snapped salutes. On the building, a banner read: "We Will Never Forget."

"We don't know how many veterans were killed in this terrorist act," Marine Maj. David Andersen said. "We may never know. But we do know there were many among the rescuers and the other victims and this is to honor them all."

Away from the site, city transportation officials said 98 percent of drivers complied Friday with a carpooling rule barring single-occupant passenger vehicles from coming into Manhattan on several East River bridges and tunnels.

The ban, which began Thursday, for the first time included the busy Lincoln Tunnel linking Manhattan to New Jersey. Authorities said volume was down and the hour-long backups that stretched two miles to the New Jersey Turnpike were not unusual.

The traffic jam in Weehawken looked familiar to police Sgt. Mitchell Chasmar.

"Inbound is stopped, and westbound is crawling. I advise walking," Chasmar said. "It doesn't look any worse to me than a normal rush-hour."

The Holland Tunnel, another major commuter pathway to New Jersey, was to reopen for outbound traffic Friday afternoon.

Giuliani said the ban would be evaluated after Friday and there was a possibility they might be extended next week. It will not be in force this weekend.

Today, the Empire State Building's observation deck is to reopen. Except for a brief trial period Sept. 15, the 86th floor observatory had been closed to the public since the terrorist attacks.

Hospital fined for death of boy in MRI machine

VALHALLA, N.Y. (AP) — The hospital where a 6-year-old boy was killed by an oxygen tank pulled by the powerful magnet of an MRI machine was fined for code violations, the state Health Department said Friday.

The department fined Westchester Medical Center $22,000 for 11 violations related to the boy's death.

The Health Department noted there was no clearly identified zone around the MRI room from which metal objects were banned.

Edward Stolzenberg, president and chief executive officer of the medical center, said improvements have already been made, including the purchase of oxygen tanks, fire extinguishers and other equipment that are not attracted by magnets, and an increased safety zone around the machines.

Last year, the committee in a 6-0 vote recommended a $5,000 raise for the sheriff. It was denied.

This year, the committee's 8-0 vote was for a $10,000 raise above his Fiscal Year 2001 $52,000 salary or $7,400 above the sheriff's FY2002 salary of $54,600 set by the court on Sept. 17 in adopting the county's $26 million budget.

Composition of the nine-member committee, which is made up of the previous year's grand jurors selected by lot, changes each year.

By Texas law, the committee's recommendation is binding on the court only if all nine members are present and vote unanimously. A quorum of any other vote would be a non-binding recommendation.

"We had eight people there from the community that all agreed with it," Smith said of raising Painter's salary to $62,000. "If he (Painter) had a ninth one (vote), he would have gotten the raise — no questions asked."

Painter, who manages an $8 million budget and a 170-member work force, said, "I'm worth a helluva lot more."

Before the commissioners' almost hour-long discussion in considering the committee's unanimous vote, Painter asked Judge Bill Morrow and Commissioners Mike Bradford, Josie Ramirez, Randy Prude and Smith to count the 8-0 vote as if the ninth committeeman were there for the unanimous vote.

The committee's ninth member, Alan Ham, was not present for the vote earlier Friday because his supervisors at United Parcel Service "told him he couldn't come" to the session and had to work instead, Painter said.

"It's not the guy's fault that he couldn't be here," Painter noted. "It's not my fault. I just think he would have voted in favor of it (the pay raise)."

Picked by lot to serve on the 2001 Salary Grievance Committee with Ham were Ray Lindsey, Isabel Gonzales, Dolly Calhoun, Barry Babcock, Gary Mulloy, Nancy Kirk, Viola Singh and Sue Saunders.

"I am appealing to your good judgment (and) your sense of fair play," Painter told the court, "because I know you are fair. And I know you are Christians ..."

Instead of the committee's $62,000 figure, Smith said he had proposed the $57,000 salary, which was the median salary of sheriffs in counties comparable in size to Midland County.

"I think we (in Midland County) ought to be at the top (in salaries)," Smith said.

In the court's dialogue with Painter, Prude told the sheriff, "You're probably worth what you are asking for."

Not long before Smith's failed motion to reach a compromise between the committee's $62,000 salary recommendation for the sheriff and the court-set $54,600 salary, Morrow told the commissioners they could "follow the recommendation of the Salary Grievance Committee" or not and change it.

"We can find the money without increasing the budget," said Morrow, who refrains from initiating motions and who rarely votes except to break ties or to pass a motion.

As the county's chief fiscal officer, the county judge prepares the budget the commissioners may amend or modify before taking a vote for approval. FY2002 begins Monday.

In response to a proposal that a citizens committee suggest salaries for elected officials to effect a balance and purge discrepancies in salaries, Morrow said, "The Texas statutes say it's our (Commissioners' Court's) job. We don't have any choice. It's our responsibility. I think we would be derelict in duty if we turned everything over to the citizens . . . ."

A Reporter-Telegram survey of sheriffs' FY2002 salaries in four West Texas counties and towns comparable to Midland County and Midland reflect a $54,600 salary for the Ector County sheriff in Odessa, $63,668 for the Taylor County sheriff in Abilene, $59,136 for the Wichita County sheriff in Wichita Falls, and $49,271 for the Tom Green County sheriff in San Angelo.

The Lubbock County Sheriff is budgeted for a $75,000 salary in FY2002, but Lubbock County is more than twice the population of Midland County's 116,009 people, according to the 2000 Census.

"The job is worth $62,000, yes," Smith said of Painter's work.

Of being thwarted in his quest for another pay raise, Painter said, "Well, I was a little disappointed.

"There were eight citizens that were a cross-section of Midland County that voted unanimously to approve the request for the pay increase. There was one guy that couldn't make it because his job would not let him."

In 1997, Painter's salary was increased by $6,880 to $52,000 upon the recommendation of the Midland County Salary Review Committee.

"It wasn't my fault," Painter said of lack of a full-house vote on Friday. "I was denied the opportunity to have another individual appointed on that committee to have a full nine.

"That's the way it goes," Painter said. "The commissioners chose not to accept it. They chose not to recognize the vote of the citizens. So, that's all right." But he acknowledged, "I'm worth it" — a higher salary.

The commissioners' silence in not bringing forth another first motion to vote on the Salary Grievance Committee's recommendation was "certainly their prerogative," Painter said.

"I don't agree with all the statements that led to the decision to not make a decision. But that's their prerogative," Painter said. "They're elected officials, and they have the right to make a motion or not make a motion. And they chose to not make a motion."

TERROR: Administration receives intelligence from Libya, official says

(From 1A)

sional Democrats want.

The military and economic developments unfolded as New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said it could take as long as a year to clean up the site of the World Trade Center.

Seventeen days after the deadliest terrorist attacks ever on American soil, Transportation Secretary Norman Y. Mineta said Reagan National Airport would "definitely reopen." The airport, just across the Potomac River in Arlington, Va., sits in the shadow of the Pentagon; the White House and Capitol are seconds away by air, and authorities have kept it shut because of security concerns.

Bush, in remarks to reporters, said, "Make no mistake about it, we're in hot pursuit of terrorists." He did little to flesh out his remark, but added he understood it was "very hard to fight a guerrilla war with conventional forces." At another point, he added, "There may or may not be a conventional component" to the war on terrorism.

The Pentagon has begun a redeployment of ships, planes and personnel around the globe to prepare for a military strike, but officials have said little to suggest any type of attack is imminent.

One official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the work of U.S. and British forces inside Afghanistan was a prelude to potential military action. The troops have been sent in the past few days, the official said, as the United States charts a course to find prime suspect Osama bin Laden and the network of terrorist camps he is believed to run.

White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said Bush wants to work with Democrats on the issue of help for laid-off workers. "He's going to discuss a variety of ideas that many people, including many leading Democrats, have offered about how to help workers who have lost their jobs," the spokesman said.

Senior White House officials said Bush was open to extending unemployment benefits by 13 weeks. He also wants to boost job training programs but is cool to Democratic demands for extra health insurance benefits targeted at airline workers, aides said. Bush might be open to helping all laid-off workers pay health insurance premiums, but aides said it was too soon to tell if there was a need.

There were fresh signs of the nation's attempt to cope with the attacks, and new warnings that vigilance is required.

The State Department issued a "worldwide caution" to traveling Americans, stemming, according to one official, from new threats from foreign groups.

In this country, former President Bill Clinton and the man he defeated in 1996, former Sen. Bob Dole, were teaming up to help raise $100 million in scholarships for the children and spouses of victims of the attacks. They will be co-chairmen of the Families of Freedom Scholarship Fund, created by the Indianapolis-based Lumina Foundation for Education.

The administration continued its worldwide diplomatic campaign to build an anti-terrorism coalition — and one official disclosed the administration had received intelligence about bin Laden's al-Qaida network from Libya, long a fixture on the government's list of terrorist-sponsoring states.

There was no evident progress on the administration's immediate goal of persuading Afghanistan to turn over bin Laden.

A delegation of Pakistani religious and government leaders traveled to Kandahar, home base of Afghanistan's ruling Taliban. But participants on both sides said after daylong talks the nation's ruler, Mullah Mohammed Omar, refused even to discuss bin Laden.

Mufti Mohammed Jamil, leader of a religious Pakistani political party and a participant in the talks, said, "I don't think that Mullah Omar is afraid of war."

In New York, the laborious and emotionally draining work continued at the World Trade Center site. "The amount of time they need to remove and clear the site will range anywhere from nine months to one year," Giuliani said before attending the latest in a seemingly endless string of memorial services for victims.

PROBE: Officials arrest, detain 480

(From 1A)

"One should not focus on one individual, but focus one's attention on a series of networks across the world," FBI director Robert Mueller said Friday.

One of those sought is a man in the United Arab Emirates who was mailed a package from Mohamed Atta, the suspected leader of the hijacking teams, one official said. The package contained money and documents and was mailed by Atta a few days before he hijacked a plane in Boston and flew it into the World Trade Center.

The information about the origins of the hijacking plot emerged as the Justice Department announced more than 480 people have been arrested or detained in the probe.

Investigators also released a four-page handwritten document left behind by the hijackers that included instructions on how to carry out their attack and Islamic religious references.

"Try not to have others watch you while you're uttering your prayers. Don't be confused, and don't be nervous," the document advised. "Look cheerful and satisfied, because you're doing a job which is loved by God."

Attorney General John Ashcroft said the missive was a "shocking and disturbing view into the mindsets" of the attackers and "a stark reminder of how these hijackers grossly perverted the Islamic faith to justify their terroristic acts."

The document was found in Atta's suitcase, which didn't make it onto the Boston flight. Other copies were found in a vehicle belonging to another hijacker and at the Pennsylvania site where one of the jetliners crashed.

Evidence is growing the plot was hatched, funded and assisted by several bin Laden sympathizers who gave instruction and support from Europe and the Middle East, officials told AP.

British authorities said Friday they had detained one such man. Lotfi Raissi, 27, an Algerian pilot, was "a lead instructor" of some of the hijackers who crashed an airliner into the Pentagon, prosecutors in London said.

Raissi made several trips to the United States this summer, and flew with one of the suspected hijackers on June 23 from Las Vegas to Arizona.

Records show Raissi lived in Arizona in the late 1990s. Former employees at the Sawyer Aviation flight school in Phoenix remember Raissi using a flight simulator as recently as 1999 to instruct others, including at least one other person identified as a terrorist by the FBI.

Richard Egan, Raissi's defense lawyer, said his client "adamantly denies any involvement in the recent appalling tragedies."

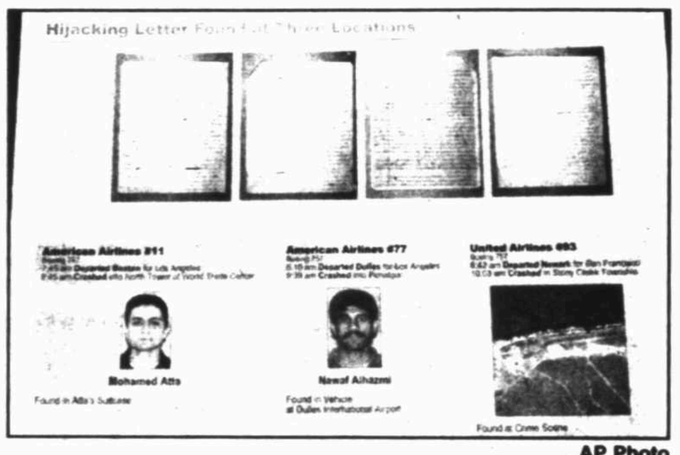

Much of the evidence about collaborators has emerged as the agencies have meticulously reconstructed the hijackers' travels in the United States and Europe during their final months, and traced tens of thousands of dollars in financial transfers, officials said.

"Part of our investigation, quite obviously, is trying to determine the past histories of each of the hijackers, trace their time in the United States, but also attempt to identify where they were prior to their coming to the United States and track their movements through any number of countries overseas," Mueller said.

A law enforcement source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said as the plot becomes more clear from the evidence U.S. authorities are learning the terrorists changed tactics from prior attacks.

The evidence indicates high-level plotters and planners avoided traveling to the United States where they might raise suspicions and instead funded and instructed the eventual hijackers from Europe and the Middle East, the official said.

Contacts the hijackers made in their final months in Germany, the United Arab Emirates, Czechoslovakia and France have been one key in identifying potential backers, the officials said.

Copies of the four-page handwritten letter left behind by the hijackers of the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon and their relation to three of the alleged hijackers are seen in this poster displayed by the Justice Department during a news conference in Washington Friday.

Midland man faces his second charge of indecency with child

From Staff Reports

A 45-year-old Midland man has been arrested again on a criminal charge of indecency with a child.

Ismael Gonzalez Suchil's second arrest this month stems from a July incident with a 10-year-old girl. This incident was discovered through investigation of an earlier offense. The second arrest occurred Thursday.

Suchil previously was arrested on Sept. 13 on a charge of aggravated sexual assault and sexual assault of a child, both involving the same child. Midland Police Department Public Information Officer Tina Jauz said the charges were different because the victim was 13 years old at the time of one offense and 14 years old for the other, and the charge of sexual assault of a child is only applicable for victims under 13 years of age.

Both victims were known to Suchil, and all of the incidents allegedly took place at his south Midland residence.

for an extended period of time.

"The money is needed," Stephens said. "We still send mental health workers to Oklahoma City on the anniversary of the bombing to work with the families, and that (the bombing) was six years ago. We will be in New York for years to come."

Stephen said in addition to sending money, the Red Cross of the Southwest is sending personnel. Red Cross volunteer Judy Eron has left for New York to help with mental health and family services.

Traditionally, the Red Cross does not raise money until November.

"Usually, we are raising money for the United Way," Stephen said. "They have stepped up to the plate and allowed us to do fund-raising."

Federal investigators probe records of college students

By Don Thompson
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Investigators are reviewing the records of students at colleges and universities from California to Rhode Island as they probe the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Several of California's state college campuses have received requests to turn over certain records. Most were for specific students.

However, the FBI asked for a list of all foreign students attending Fresno State University, said Colleen Bentley-Adler, spokeswoman for the 23-campus California State University system.

At least four Utah colleges have turned over records of some aviation and foreign students. College administrators there said the FBI requested data on specific students, including names, addresses, birth dates and confirmation of attendance.

"I've spoken with three or four agents in the past week and a half," said Loren Evans, registrar at Salt Lake Community College. Evans said agents were interested in the immigration status of about 20 students.

University of Rhode Island spokeswoman Linda Acciardo said the school had received a general subpoena from a federal grand jury in Boston that did not name specific students.

Schools are generally barred from releasing students' records without their written permission. But many in this instance are turning over the information without protest, based on a U.S. Education Department interpretation of the 1974 privacy law.

Department spokeswoman Lindsey Kozberg said the agency is advising schools they can release the information under a "health or safety emergency" exemption. The exemption has been used occasionally for law-enforcement requests involving state-specific cases or at lone campuses, but rarely on this large a scale involving campuses across the country, she said.

Kozberg said the department has received calls from about 30 schools seeking guidance on how to handle requests for student records.

She and education officials declined to provide details or names of students whose records are being studied. A spokeswoman at FBI headquarters in Washington refused to comment.

At least four California students are being held as material witnesses because they are believed to have ties to three hijackers who lived in San Diego prior to helping fly a jetliner into the Pentagon.

For some families, grief compounded by multiple losses

By Deepti Hajela
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a day, Brendan Egan went from middle child to only child. Toolsiedai Seepersaud outlived her son and daughter.

And Brian Langone will forever remember his 10th birthday as the day before his police officer father and firefighter uncle lost their lives in the attacks on the World Trade Center.

Thousands of families are mourning loved ones killed in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. But for some, the fabric of their lives has been torn in multiple places: At least 20 families lost more than one person.

David Egan's two daughters, Lisa, 31, and Samantha, 24, worked in the same office of the bond firm Cantor Fitzgerald, on the 103rd floor of the north tower.

"When you bury your children ..." Egan said, his voice faltering, "I cannot describe it."

Now, his son, Brendan, a 26-year-old Marine, could be involved in whatever military action the United States takes.

"There are times when I want to run down the street screaming," said Egan, who describes himself as a born-again Christian. "To have them both taken away at the same time seems cruel — but I absolutely do not curse God. I understand he has a plan."

Seepersaud lost her daughter, Khamladai Singh, 25, and son, Roshan Singh, 21. Khamladai was the assistant banquet manager at the restaurant Windows on the World, atop one of the twin towers; Roshan was an equipment technician who got his job with his sister's help.

Both children lived in Queens with Seepersaud and her husband, their stepfather. They went to work together and often came home together, sometimes waiting for Seepersaud, an accountant who worked two blocks from the trade center.

"They would look after each other. They just loved each other," Seepersaud said.

On Sept. 11, the siblings arrived at work early, around 7 a.m. Seepersaud got to work about 8:45 a.m., too late for the daily call her children made around 8:30 a.m. to make sure she arrived safely.

Just as she arrived, an airliner slammed into the north tower, where her children were working. She ran to the site, arriving as the second plane hit the south tower. Seepersaud waited as long as she could, hoping to see her children come out.

In the days since, there has been some small solace in thinking her children, so close to each other throughout their lives, were probably together at their deaths.

"I think they were together," Seepersaud said. "I know he would have found her."

Sheila Langone lost her sons — Tommy, a 39-year-old police officer, and Peter, a 41-year-old firefighter.

"They both loved their jobs. There was never a day either of them said, 'I don't want to go to work,'" she said. "My heart is broken now. They both had their own families. How does our family cope? I don't know. A day at a time."

Red Cross drive continues in spite of Fed urging 'slowdown'

By Sacha Pfeiffer
N.Y. Times News Service

As they sort through the emotional aftermath of Sept. 11, nearly a million Americans have expressed their support and sympathy for the victims of terrorism in New York and Washington in the same way: by giving blood.

They have given so much the nation's blood inventory has ballooned sevenfold since the attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon.

Still, the American Red Cross, which earlier this year launched a campaign to increase donations by 40 percent, has continued to stockpile blood even after the federal government urged a slowdown to ensure steady supplies in the months ahead.

The Red Cross, which collects nearly half the blood donated in the country and sells it for between $175 and $215 a unit, has continued to run public service ads seeking donors. The appeals have continued despite blood's 42-day shelf life without being frozen, and despite the grim reality little blood has been needed to address the terrorist attacks because there were so few survivors.

The Red Cross's decision to go its own way has met criticism by some doctors, hospitals and blood providers — already upset with the Washington-based national charity for raising blood prices in July by as much as 40 percent.

On Sept. 14, three days after the attacks, officials at the US Department of Health and Human Services gathered blood industry officials in hopes of issuing a "joint statement" notifying the public the nation's blood inventory was sufficient, thanks to the outpouring of donors, and encouraging other prospective donors to schedule appointments in the weeks and months ahead to avoid overwhelming blood banks.

But the Red Cross would not go along, preferring to use the civic spirit spurred by the attacks as a chance to stockpile blood and, as a Red Cross official said, enhancing the country's ability to respond to any future crisis.

As a result, no joint statement was issued.

Harvey Klein, president of the American Association of Blood Banks and chief of transfusion medicine for the National Institutes of Health, said the Red Cross's continuing collection of blood is "certainly for a laudable cause." But, Klein said, the advice donors should be getting is, "We need you, we just don't need you now."

AP Photo
Training specialist James Caperton, left, prepares Mike Hufto of Mobile, Ala. for a blood donation as others wait at the American Red Cross offices in Mobile following attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon earlier this month.

Added Klein: "It's not a good thing to have multiple voices telling the public to do multiple things. The responsible thing is to give a single message."

Federal officials sought to downplay the disagreement, saying as long as blood goes to patients in need, the donations are worthwhile.

"This wasn't good guys versus bad guys, this was the good guys versus good guys," said Stephen D. Nightingale, executive secretary of the US Department of Health and Human Services advisory committee on blood safety and availability. "The bottom line is we got enough blood. And if there's enough blood out there, we're grateful."

Some Red Cross chapters, overwhelmed by the number of donors, have asked them to schedule future appointments.

The Red Cross announced this week it has raised more than $200 million for disaster relief efforts stemming from the attacks, and it will give grants of up to $30,000 to the families of attack victims. Officials said generally, 15 percent of all charitable contributions go to administrative and overhead costs.

The Red Cross and a similar but lesser-known group, America's Blood Centers, a national network of independent, nonprofit blood centers, together collect more than 90 percent of the nation's blood.

America's Blood Centers has agreed to the government request and asked people to defer donations. But officials of both groups worry the emotions spurred so many recent blood donations will wane in coming months, causing the nation's blood inventory to dip back to pre-Sept. 11 levels of about one day's supply. Current levels have increased to about a week's supply.

But prior to the attacks, the nation's blood inventory had reached better-than-usual levels due to aggressive recruitment of donors in anticipation of more stringent eligibility requirements.

For both organizations, recruiting a new generation of donors energized by the Sept. 11 attacks is critical to their future success.

"Here's this tremendous opportunity where people have come out and said, 'We want to be blood donors,' so it's critical we take those new blood donors. . . and get them into a long-term cycle of donating," said Jacquelyn Fredrick, senior vice president of biomedical services for the American Red Cross.

"This is going to strengthen the blood system in this country in immeasurable ways in the future."

In the meantime, donation centers must strike a delicate compromise: How can they efficiently manage the torrent of donors now streaming into blood banks without turning people away, a move that risks alienating potential future donors?

The Red Cross also says, given the horror of Sept. 11, there is no way to know when a mass casualty requiring large supplies of blood could occur. As a result, they argue, it's in the country's interest to build as large an inventory of blood as possible, and to freeze blood that might become outdated.

Indeed, the Red Cross intends to build a reserve of frozen blood for future emergencies.

"We agree that donors need to donate in the weeks and months ahead," said Fredrick, of the Red Cross. "But we also believe that given the uncertainty of the times. . . the best thing to do is have a good blood supply right now."

But there is also a potential downside to collecting too much blood at one time: Given the short shelf life of donated blood, if too many donors give at once, they won't be eligible to give again for another eight weeks, depleting the eligible donor pool in the interim.

Said Jim MacPherson, chief executive officer of America's Blood Centers: "The best place to store blood is in the donor."

"I think the American public is smart enough to get the message and to understand that this is stuff that has a limited shelf life," said Christopher Stowell, director of the blood transfusion service at Massachusetts General Hospital, who said of the Red Cross decision: "I sort of don't understand it.

"You don't want to collect all the blood you need all year on one day, because you're not going to be able to handle it all," he said. "The analogy would be that you don't want a grocery store to order a year's worth of lettuce in October and then sell that same lettuce year-round."

Of course, lettuce doesn't freeze well. But freezing blood extends its lifespan to about 10 years.

Freezing blood is a cost-, labor- and resource-intensive procedure many medical professionals view as inconvenient and inefficient. Moreoever, it takes two hours to thaw frozen blood, making it impractical for emergency transfusions. And frozen blood must be used within two hours of being thawed.

Fresh or frozen, blood is big business. The Red Cross and America's Blood Centers sell donated blood to hospitals for amounts ranging from $90 to $270 a unit, with the price based on factors like geography, individual contracts between hospitals and blood centers and processing costs.

Only by donating directly to hospital blood banks do donors enable hospitals to avoid incurring a fee for blood, although even most hospitals with in-house blood banks must supplement their supply with blood purchased from blood centers. And even hospitals occasionally sell blood to other hospitals.

The Red Cross and other blood banks insist they don't sell blood; they say they charge a processing fee.

Nevertheless, money changes hands, making blood a commodity. And the amounts raised selling blood are staggering: In its last fiscal year alone, the Red Cross made $1.4 billion in blood and tissue sales. But it says it spent $1.5 billion collecting, processing and distributing those products — leaving the agency no choice but to implement steep price hikes earlier this year.

On its 2000 federal income tax return, the Red Cross reported it has $3.11 billion in assets and $914.8 million in liabilities.

Many blood industry officials and medical personnel hastened to note as long as blood collected in the wake of this month's attacks doesn't go to waste, it will be blood well collected.

"If there's any kind of a glimmering of a lining in this black cloud," said Klein, of the American Association of Blood Banks, "it's that there will be blood available for people who need it who weren't victims of this tragedy."

Unrest after verdict in officer's trial proved to be relatively mild

CINCINNATI (AP) — After a night of relative calm, the mayor ended a two-night citywide curfew Friday morning and urged residents to "Go out and go to dinner. ... Go have fun."

Mayor Charlie Luken imposed the curfew Wednesday to help keep peace after a judge cleared a white police officer who fatally shot an unarmed black man.

There were at least eight reports of gunfire and several car and trash bin fires were set Thursday and Friday, but no injuries were reported. Police charged 35 adults and three juveniles with violating the 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew.

"We believe the situation is controlled and citizens are respecting the law," Luken said.

Luken, aware the curfew was hurting downtown businesses, apologized for any inconvenience and urged residents to enjoy the weekend.

"Go out and go to dinner, watch a movie, go to a play," he said in an interview on WLW radio. "Go have fun."

The unrest happened in Over-the-Rhine, the same neighborhood that saw three days of riots when policeman Stephen Roach shot Timothy Thomas on April 7. The 19-year-old Thomas, who had tried to flee, was wanted on 14 misdemeanor warrants, including driving without a license and previously fleeing police.

A judge Wednesday acquitted Roach, 27, of misdemeanor charges of negligent homicide and obstructing official business.

Police spokesman Lt. Kurt Byrd said the disturbances Wednesday and Thursday were minor compared with those in April and may not even have been related to the verdict.

Roach, a city officer since 1997, had faced up to nine months in jail if convicted of both charges. He still faces departmental administrative proceedings under which he could face penalties including dismissal, police said.

With economy at virtual standstill, attacks may have triggered recession

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy came to a virtual standstill in the second quarter, the government said Friday, another ominous sign that the Sept. 11 terror attacks probably pushed the country into recession.

With those attacks causing billions of dollars in lost business, forcing thousands of layoffs and dragging down consumer confidence, many economists believe a full-blown downturn is unavoidable.

"We're having a crisis of confidence," said Mark Zandi, chief economist for Economy.com. "A bunker mentality has descended. ... Consumers are pulling back. Businesses are retrenching."

The economy was teetering even before the attacks, suffering through a slowdown that abruptly started in the second half of last year.

Gross domestic product, the output of goods and services produced in the United States, grew at an anemic annual rate of just 0.3 percent in the April-June quarter, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

It was the weakest performance in more than eight years.

The latest reading on GDP followed a 1.3 percent growth rate in the first quarter and illustrated the continued dramatic weakening of the economy this year.

The new second quarter figure was slightly higher than a 0.2 percent estimate of second-quarter growth made a month ago, an improvement the government said came from a slightly better-than-anticipated trade performance.

Many analysts are predicting it will be the last quarter of economic growth this year.

The Blue Chip Economic Indicators consensus expects the GDP to shrink by 0.5 percent in the July-September quarter and decline by 0.7 percent in the final three months of the year before returning to growth early next year. A recession is commonly defined as two consecutive quarters of declining GDP.

"The president remains concerned about the status of the economy," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said. President Bush, he said, is focused on reaching an agreement with Congress on a plan to stimulate economic growth, something many expect to be revealed next week.

Billions of extra dollars for reconstruction and to help the airlines, which were hammered by the suicide hijackings, have already been authorized.

Federal Reserve policy-makers, who cut short-term interest rates last week, are expected to cut them again — which would be the ninth reduction this year — when they meet next Tuesday. Analysts are divided on whether they will cut by a half-point or a quarter-point.

Unlike many of his counterparts, Ken Mayland, president of ClearView Economics, believes the Fed's aggressive credit easing and economic stimulus provided by Congress will prevent the economy from tipping into recession.

"But it's going to be real close," Mayland conceded.

Many economists are looking toward a rebound in the first half of next year, but that will depend on the severity of the economic fallout from the attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon, how the war against terrorism unfolds and how investors and consumers respond.

Consumers account for two-thirds of economic activity and have kept the economy afloat over the past year. The small amount of growth in the second quarter came from a 2.5 percent rise in consumer spending.

Zandi predicted consumer spending in the third quarter will rise by just 0.9 percent, then fall by 1 percent in the final quarter of the year as rising layoffs and anxiety over the economy darken their mood.

Business spending on new plants and equipment, which decreased at a rate of 14.6 percent in the second quarter, is likely to remain depressed in the months ahead, economists said.

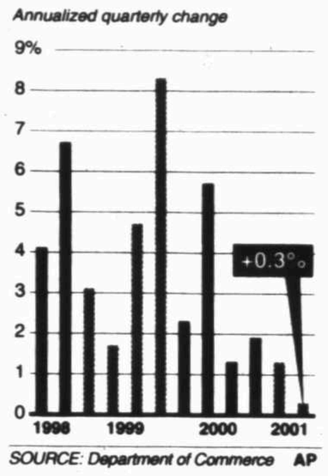

Capital spending won't turn around until corporate profits improve, analysts said. Friday's GDP report showed after-tax profits of U.S. companies fell in the second quarter at a rate of 1.7 percent, following declines of 7.8 percent in the first quarter and 3.5 percent in the fourth quarter of 2000. It was the longest stretch of profit declines since the country was buffeted by the Asian currency crisis in 1997-98.

A bright spot in the economy: low inflation, which is good for consumers and gives the Fed leeway to cut interest rates as needed. A price gauge tied to the GDP rose at an annual rate of just 1.3 percent in the second quarter, the smallest increase since early 1999. This GDP price measure was up 3.2 percent in the first quarter.

Defense spending to favor spying, communication as much as bombs

By Gary Gentile
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In the nation's "new kind of war" on terrorism, defense spending is likely to focus as much on information and surveillance as bombs and bullets.

Unlike previous conflicts, which relied heavily tanks, fighter jets and ships, a prolonged campaign against terrorists will place increased emphasis on an electronic battlefield that will require sensors and software, analysts said.

Companies such as Northrop Grumman Co., which is developing a long-range unmanned surveillance vehicle and has invested heavily in electronic warfare systems, should benefit. Other contractors building the next generation of satellite-guided missiles and sensitive snooping devices also will play a role.

"This is a new war that will require new weapons," said John Kutler, chairman and chief executive officer of Quarterdeck Investment Partners, a Los Angeles investment bank that focuses on aerospace and defense. "The Pentagon has been paying lip service over the past 10 years to its need to find a new mission in the post-Cold War environment. Unfortunately, it didn't find the mission. The mission found it."

It's too early to predict which companies and which weapons systems will be funded until the administration outlines the scope of its military response to the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11. Bush, two days after the attacks, said "a new kind of war" had been declared on the United States and added, "My resolve is steady and strong about winning this war."

Analysts said the new kind of warfare will rely more than ever on collecting and interpreting data, then communicating that information quickly and securely to troops in the field. That need is even greater if the United States attacks countries with few stationary military targets such as missile silos or bases.

Companies including General Atomics Aeronautical Systems Inc., which makes the Predator unmanned spy plane, and Raytheon, which makes radar systems and cruise missiles, should benefit.

Bullets and bombs will still be needed to fight a sustained war, especially if ground troops are used to invade countries that harbor terrorists, analysts said. Money to upgrade existing weapons systems already was part of the Defense Department's budget plans before the terrorist attacks.

"During the Kosovo air war, we almost ran out of stuff to drop," said John Williams, a spokesman for the National Defense Industrial Association, a trade group. "Munitions are probably the first thing, depending on how massively we want to do this and what the eventual targets are."

Congress will soon receive a Pentagon review of military spending, which should reveal the defense department's priorities for the next four years.

The Senate is considering a request for $343 billion for Defense and Energy department needs. The spending bill already has passed the House after legislators there diverted some money President Bush wanted for his missile-defense program to counterterrorism efforts.

And an announcement on the next generation fighter plane, the joint strike fighter, should be made within the next month. Boeing and Lockheed Martin are competing for the contract.

Other weapons programs, including a next-generation unmanned spy plane from Grumman, the Global Hawk, and computer warfare systems that can protect domestic computer networks and attack enemy systems, also are likely to receive funding.

The Defense Department doubled spending for the Global Hawk program in its 2002 budget. The remote-controlled plane, with a wingspan comparable to a Boeing 737, will carry more surveillance equipment and systems designed to track moving targets than similar aircraft now in use.

Grumman also is developing an unmanned combat craft called Pegasus, which will carry missiles and other weapons. Boeing is working on a similar system. Both are in the early testing stages.

In March, the U.S. Air Force bought seven more Predators and signed an option for another seven, bringing the total number in service to 79. General Atomics is working on a jet-powered Predator that will carry more equipment and fly at higher altitudes, above the range of enemy fire.

The Defense Department's research arm also is working on a system to allow surveillance planes or satellites to track moving targets, something existing bombs and missiles cannot do with precision. The system uses airborne radar that tracks a target and provides the information immediately to missiles in flight.

In addition to large, well-known contractors, a number of smaller firms, called special access defense companies, are conducting classified research on cyber warfare, analysts said.

Companies involved in this area will discuss only their efforts to defend commercial and military computer systems against what Grumman chief executive officer Kent Kresa called an electronic Pearl Harbor in a speech last year.

But analysts said the Defense Department is likely developing cyber warfare weapons of its own, designed to confound enemy weapons and scramble enemy communications.

"There are people working to prevent terrorist hackers," said Jacques Gansler, a University of Maryland professor and undersecretary of defense in the Clinton Administration. "On the other end of the spectrum, there are people working on highly classified offensive and defensive information warfare systems. On the offensive side, they can give false information or prevent (enemy) systems from working."

Computer Sciences Corp. of El Segundo declined to say whether it was working on such projects. But the company does provide software to protect military and civilian computer systems from intrusion, a service expected to play a pivotal role as the newly established Cabinet-level office of Homeland Security gets organized.

"Cyber defense will be a part of the homeland defense," said Thomas Burke, director of information assurance for CSC.

Intefadeh anniversary poses fresh challenge to Israeli-Palestinian truce

By Jamie Tarabay
Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Thousands of Palestinians on Friday marked the anniversary of their uprising against Israel with marches, rock-throwing and three minutes of silence. Three Palestinians, including a 10-year-old boy, were killed by Israeli troops in confrontations in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Forty-five Palestinians were wounded, two of them critically, doctors said. Six Israelis, including three civilians, were also hurt.

In another incident, a Palestinian man was killed in the West Bank town of Hebron when a bomb he was putting together exploded prematurely, Palestinian security officials said.

Despite the bloodshed, both sides said they remained committed to a fledgling truce arranged at the urging of the United States. Senior security commanders from the two sides met to work out the next steps, such as an easing of Israel's blockades of Palestinian towns.

Washington has been pressing for calm in the Middle East as it tries to bring Arab and Muslim states into an international anti-terrorism coalition.

Rallies were also held in Arab nations, where the public has been outraged by images of Palestinian deaths. In the Iraqi capital, a crowd of about 20,000 waved Palestinian and Iraqi flags.

In several rallies and mosque sermons, speakers urged.Palestinians to keep fighting Israel. However, Palestinian officials said they were determined to make the truce stick.

"It's a matter of life and death for our people, and for the Israelis," Palestinian Planning Minister Nabil Shaath said of the cease-fire.

Yarden Vatikay, a spokesman for the Israeli Defense Ministry, said the Palestinians had not lived up to their promises, but Israel was not walking away from the truce.

The truce was affirmed Wednesday in a meeting between Arafat and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres. Israel has said it would ease its security blockade of Palestinian towns in the coming days, while the Palestinians said they were considering Israel's request to arrest suspected militants.

Despite the truce, there has been sporadic fighting, with seven Palestinians killed by Israeli fire since Wednesday. The U.S. State Department has criticized Israel for what it said was a "provocative" military strike in the Rafah refugee camp Thursday, scene of most of the violence this week.

Israeli-Palestinian fighting erupted Sept. 28, 2000, after Ariel Sharon, now Israel's prime minister, visited a contested holy site in Jerusalem's Old City, known to Jews as the Temple Mount and to Muslims as the Haram as-Sharif, or Noble Sanctuary. Since then, 649 people have been killed on the Palestinian side and 177 on the Israeli side.

Across the region, Arabs rallied Friday to mark the start of the uprising.

In Syria, about 1,000 people marched through the capital in silence out of respect for the dead, while in south Lebanon, more than 1,000 people marched through the Palestinian refugee camp of Ein el-Hilweh to protest Israeli policy. In Baghdad, demonstrators chanted slogans calling for President Saddam Hussein to "liberate Jerusalem" and "blow up Tel Aviv," the commercial capital of Israel.

In Egypt, however, security forces turned out to deter demonstrations, and mosque preachers — who mention the intefadeh nearly every week — made only brief references to the anniversary.

In the West Bank and Gaza Strip, sirens wailed in several towns, including Jenin and Qalqiliya, as residents observed three minutes of silence in public squares to mark the anniversary.

Thousands joined a march in Gaza's Nusseirat refugee camp, streaming into the street after prayers at two local mosques. Marchers carried banners reading: "The uprising will continue until we uproot the Zionist occupation from our land."

A member of Arafat's Fatah movement, addressing the crowd through a loudspeaker mounted on a truck, said the fighting would continue "with all means," despite Arafat's orders to stop attacks on Israelis.

In the West Bank town of Ramallah, traffic stopped as Palestinians observed three minutes of silence. In the city's central Manara Square, masked men burned a cardboard model of a Jewish settlement.

After the rally, a procession made its way to an Israeli checkpoint, where dozens of youngsters threw stones at soldiers. Three stone-throwers were wounded by live Israeli fire and 24 were hurt by rubber-coated steel pellets, doctors said.

However, Palestinian police kept gunmen away from the area, traditionally a scene of firefights during Friday marches.

In the West Bank town of Hebron, Palestinian gunmen opened fire on Israeli troops, drawing return fire that killed a 25-year-old man and wounded 12 other Palestinians. In two nearby villages, two boys, ages 10 and 17, were killed by Israeli troops dispersing stone throwers with live ammunition, Palestinian doctors said.

'We have given a lot for this land. To end the uprising without results is not fair. We should continue until we get what we want.'
— Walid Ifha
Ramallah school teacher

The army said troops briefly entered one of the villages — Al Khader — to chase Palestinians who had thrown an explosive device at an Israeli outpost. The army said a gun battle ensued, and troops eventually left the village.

In Rafah, a Palestinian was critically wounded in what Palestinians said was an unprovoked shooting from an Israel tank parked at the outskirts of the refugee camp. The army said it had no reports of shooting in Rafah.

Many Palestinians said they were skeptical about truce prospects.

Some said they had sacrificed too much during the past year to end the uprising now. Others said there was little point in returning to negotiations because they felt Israel's hardline prime minister, Ariel Sharon, had little to offer them.

"We have given a lot for this land," said Walid Ifha, a 35-year-old Ramallah school teacher. "To end the uprising without results is not fair. We should continue until we get what we want."

Israeli security forces in Jerusalem's Old City barred Palestinians under the age of 40 from attending prayers at the Haram as-Sharif.

In his Friday sermon, the top Muslim cleric in Jerusalem, Mufti Ikrema Sabri, called the uprising a "holy war" and said it would continue until Israel no longer controlled the holy city, which he said was under "military siege."

Hamas leader: U.S. should look for roots of hatred rather than flaunt its military might

By Donna Abu-Nasr
Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — Instead of spreading its military might around the world to exact revenge for the Sept. 11 attacks, the United States should ask itself a simple question: "Why this tremendous animosity toward America?"

So says Moussa Abu Marzouk, a prominent leader of the militant Islamic Hamas group — which the U.S. State Department has classified a terrorist organization — who served two years in a New York jail after his name appeared on a list of people suspected of terrorist activity.

Hamas and its smaller sister, Islamic Jihad, were not on the list of terrorist groups whose assets the United States is freezing in the wake of the attacks.

But the U.S. Treasury Department has frozen two bank accounts of an Internet company based in Dallas because it received an investment in 1993 from Nadia Elashi Marzouk, the Hamas leader's wife. Abu Marzouk was placed on a Treasury Department list of terrorists in 1995, allowing the government to seize his U.S. assets. And, a congressional report on terrorism released a day before the Sept. 11 attacks lists the terror activities of both Hamas and Islamic Jihad as "very high."

Both groups have sent suicide bombers to blow up Israeli markets, restaurants, discos and train stations during the one-year Palestinian intefadeh. Washington has condemned the attacks, in which more than 50 Israelis and several foreigners, including an American, have been killed.

Abu Marzouk said no parallels should be drawn between the conflict in the Middle East and the suicide attacks in New York, Washington and Pennsylvania that killed thousands of people. The latter, he said, were a direct outcome of resentment toward America; the former, he called the struggle of a people against occupation.

'It's the arrogance of power when the United States determines whether you should be with it or with terrorism.'
— Moussa Abu Marzouk
prominent leader of the Islamic Hamas group

"A distinction should be made," Abu Marzouk said in an interview Sunday with The Associated Press at Hamas' office in the Yarmouk Palestinian refugee camp.

Like other Palestinian and Arab groups, Hamas has directed its anger not only against Israel, but also against the United States, seen in the Arab world as biased in Israel's favor. But its anti-U.S. outrage has been limited to rhetoric not attacks, a policy, Abu Marzouk said Hamas is not deviating from.

"Hamas is not concerned with a confrontation with any other party, even one that aids Israel," Abu Marzouk said, adding his group condemns the U.S. attacks.

"The targeting of civilians irrespective of their nationalities is unacceptable, and it's a practice that should be abolished from this world," he said.

Asked how he could reconcile those words with Hamas' suicide attacks that killed and injured Israeli civilians, Abu Marzouk said his group's actions were justified because they came in response to Israeli bombings that killed Palestinian noncombatants.

"They were reciprocal acts and a natural reaction to what's being done to the Palestinians," he said.

In that case, how would Hamas respond to President Bush's call to join the anti-terror campaign or else be considered a terrorist?

"We are with neither side," Abu Marzouk said. "It's the arrogance of power when the United States determines whether you should be with it or with terrorism."

"We are against terrorism," he added. "We are the victims of American-backed terrorism."

Abu Marzouk, who lived intermittently in the United States until his deportation in 1997, has refused to talk about the U.S. Treasury Department's action. At least four of his six children are American citizens.

His wife won a green card in an immigration lottery in Louisiana in 1990 and through it obtained one for her husband. It's not clear whether he has given back his green card.

Abu Marzouk was detained in July 1995 at John F. Kennedy International Airport. His name was on an Immigration and Nationalization Service watch list of people suspected of involvement in terrorist activity.

Israel sought to extradite him to try him for organizing suicide attacks, a charge he has denied. When Israel withdrew its extradition request, a deal was worked out for Abu Marzouk to be expelled to Jordan for violating immigration laws.

Abu Marzouk said this should be a period of introspection for Americans and not a time for deploying troops and high-tech weapons.

"America should think about the hatred that people feel for it," he said.

Why is America resented? Abu Marzouk points to it's support for Israel. "When people watch the killings of Palestinians with American weapons, American support and American cover, what can you expect?"

He also decries U.S. sanctions against Iraq and Libya. "This is a weapon that punished the masses not the governments," Abu Marzouk said.

Soviets defied by Afghan terrain, tunnels

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Maj. Gen. Alexander Popov was prepared for the high mountains, bitter winter cold and blistering summer heat. But when the Soviet army crossed into Afghanistan in 1979, he didn't know the caves would be so deep, the tunnels so long or the Afghans so clever at hiding in the daunting terrain that defied so many invaders in the past.

Popov and other former Soviet officers say top flight intelligence will be key to whatever operation the United States and its allies might undertake against Afghanistan, where Osama bin Laden, the chief suspect in the terror attacks in New York and Washington, is believed to be hiding.

"Strictly from my experience, I want to say that for the preparation of such an operation, above all, full-scale intelligence in all forms and methods is needed," Lt. Gen. Boris Gromov, who led the Soviet retreat from Afghanistan, said in written answers to questions from The Associated Press.

Defense Minister Sergei Ivanov said this week Russia already is providing the United States with intelligence about Afghanistan as part of the Kremlin's efforts to cooperate with the war against terrorism and the search for bin Laden.

Russian military officials have declined publicly to be specific about just what intelligence their country will provide to the United States. But interviews this week with veterans of the Soviet Union's failed 10-year war in Afghanistan indicate they could have a lot to share.

"The U.S. secret services must use our experience and knowledge in preparations for the strikes against Afghanistan," Maj. Valery Misil, who was a deputy commander of a special KGB task unit in Afghanistan, said.

AP Photo

Maj. Gen. Alexander Popov gestures while speaking in Moscow, Thursday. Popov and other former Soviet officers say top flight intelligence will be key to whatever operation the United States and its allies might undertake against Afghanistan, where Osama bin Laden, the chief suspect in the terror attacks in New York and Washington, is believed to be hiding.

Misil served in Paktika province south of the Afghan capital Kabul near the border with Pakistan.

"I can draw the maps of this province, and I can recollect how the terrain looks with all the caves, passes and brooks. One of the Taliban bases is located there," Misil, who is now a reserve officer, said. "We are ready to share our experience with the U.S. and work with them as military experts."

Popov, a paratrooper who commanded a tactical unit and a reconnaissance group during his two tours in Afghanistan, says a careful study of Afghanistan's geography is essential.

'I'd worked in the mountains, but those high mountains and cliffs were really impressive. We had to get over our psychological unpreparedness.'
— Maj. Gen. Alexander Popov

"I'd worked in the mountains, but those high mountains and cliffs were really impressive. We had to get over our psychological unpreparedness," said Popov, now a senior officer in Russia's peacekeeping forces."The mountains are difficult to reach. The level of physical preparation has to be very high."

The United States has sophisticated satellite mapping capability, electronic surveillance and a host of other technological intelligence means. But that's not all it will take to provide a comprehensive picture of the whereabouts of the ruling Taliban militia's forces — and bin Laden.

Maj. Gen. Makhmud Gareyev was a senior military adviser to Afghan President Najibullah during the Soviet occupation. After the Soviet pullout in 1989, Gareyev stayed behind to support Najibullah, who was overthrown by Islamic insurgents in 1992 and hanged by the Taliban four years later.

Afghanistan, Gareyev says, is crisscrossed by caves, tunnels and trenches, some of which go back more than 100 years to the time when the Afghan tribes fought the British.

"Some of them have been dug and developed since" the Soviet departure, said Gareyev, now president of the Academy of Military Sciences in Moscow. "There are thousands of them. You don't have to agonize over it to get information on them. You have to pay."

The Russians warn the Americans will have to know the languages, recruit agents, and win over the Afghan people.

"The most difficult thing will be to set up an intelligence system, a network," Gareyev said.

Even after a network is established, further dangers lie ahead.

Veteran organizations in Russia and other former Soviet republics are testament to the treachery of waging war in Afghanistan. Almost every vet knows somebody who lost a leg, or an arm.

"One of the most dangerous things is the mines," said Popov. "They are specialists in mines, surprises." Doorknobs, TV sets, even cigarette packages can be mined.

With all those traps laid so carefully for so long, bin Laden could hide for a very long time, the Russians believe.

"If you can't identify where he is," Popov said, "you won't be able to get him."

Pakistan opposed to any unfriendly government in neighboring Afghanistan

By Steven Gutkin
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Growing international support for the northern-based alliance fighting Afghanistan's Taliban rulers is displeasing neighboring Pakistan, a longtime enemy of the alliance whose support for any U.S. assault on the Taliban is considered crucial.

Pakistan's stance could pose a dilemma for Washington, which risks alienating Pakistan if it uses the Afghan opposition in any anti-Taliban campaign.

Even so, U.S. and Pakistani officials reached broad agreement this week on mutual cooperation to root out alleged terrorist networks in Afghanistan, where the Taliban harbor Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the Sept. 11 terror attacks in the United States.

Pakistan, hoping to avoid being branded a pariah, has all but severed ties with the Taliban in recent days, although the Afghans still maintain an embassy here.

But Pakistan's promise of air space, intelligence sharing and logistical support for an assault on the Taliban does not include acquiescence to any plan placing the northern alliance in power.

Growing support for the alliance from India, Iran and Russia — each of which have Afghanistan policies at odds with Pakistan's — is also setting off alarm bells here. The United States has said the opposition could be useful in an attack on Afghanistan because of its intimate knowledge of the country's rugged terrain and the displacement of Taliban forces.

After the Sept. 11 attacks, senior officials from Russia, Iran, India, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan met in Dushanbe, Tajikistan to find ways to strengthen the northern alliance.

Pakistani Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar this week called such attempts by outside powers "a recipe for great suffering of the people of Afghanistan."

Retired Gen. Mirza Aslam Beg, the former chief of staff of Pakistan's army, took the admonition a step further.

"Trying to install an anti-Pakistan government in Kabul with support of the northern alliance will be a big mistake. I can only say 'don't do it.' Pakistan's military will not accept it. The Pakistani people will not accept it," he said.

Pakistan was the Taliban's major patron until the terror attacks in the United States. By supporting the hard-line Islamic militia, it won a measure of stability on its western border, where many inhabitants share the same ethnic Pashtun heritage as the Taliban.

Pakistan also hoped the Taliban would provide "strategic depth" in the event of an armed conflict with rival nuclear power India — and open up Afghanistan as a trade route to Central Asia.

But Pakistan's patronage of the Taliban has strained relations with Washington in recent years and turned Pakistan into a hated enemy of the disparate group of warlords and ethnic minorities that make up the northern alliance.

Pakistanis have long believed a friendly government in Afghanistan is crucial to their national security. One option for a post-Taliban government acceptable to Pakistan could be a broad-based coalition that includes representatives from many different factions, not just the northern alliance.

The opposition suffered a major setback when its military chief, Ahmad Shah Massood, died Sept. 15 from wounds suffered in a suicide attack against him.

Many thought the opposition, notorious for its bloody infighting, could never survive without Massood, whose charisma helped keep the alliance together. But the opposition appears to have won a new lease on life following the terror attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

In a flurry of fighting since, the opposition has stepped up its offensives and claimed several victories in the Afghan provinces of Balk, Parwan and Samangan.

The Taliban, however, said they fought back those advances. The two sides' conflicting claims could not be reconciled.

Pakistani analysts say it's unlikely the Afghan people would tolerate the northern alliance's ascension to power because it consists largely of ethnic minorities at odds with Afghanistan's Pashtun majority — and because of the havoc its leaders wrecked on Afghanistan when they were in power five years ago.

"They would be butchered at the first opportunity," Gen. Beg said.

Nurtured by Pakistan, the Taliban took power in 1996 and today control more than 90 percent of Afghanistan. The militia has about 40,000 troops who fight the forces of the ousted government of President Burhanuddin Rabbani.

The opposition's strength is estimated at between 15,000 and 20,000 fighters.

Hurricane Juliette pounds Mexico's Baja peninsula

CABO SAN LUCAS, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Juliette barged into the tourist resorts at the tip of the Baja California peninsula and hung around like an unwelcome guest on Friday, smashing docks, ripping off roofs and tossing uprooted trees into flooded streets.

About 800 people had been evacuated from flimsy housing in the city of 25,000, but there were no new reports of major injuries. Juliette had killed two people earlier in the week, farther south in Mexico.

Luxury beachfront hotels withstood the storm, but some windows were shattered and pools filled with storm-blown sand.

Sheets of rain blasted through the open-air lobby of the seaside Solmar resort on Friday. Shivering tourists in soaked T-shirts and shorts wandered about with water running down their faces, inquiring about when the nearby airport would reopen or when telephone service would resume.

Paul and Carolyn Anderson, both 32, of Hillsboro, Ore., arrived Tuesday at the Solmar to fish for marlin and celebrate their 10th wedding anniversary.

They had only a half-day of sunshine, never got to fish and watched Juliette's winds rip the aluminum roof off of a carport.

"It peeled back in strips like a banana," Paul Anderson said. "It's not a holiday, it's an adventure."

"The wind was so strong we could barely walk," said Tom Brock, 52, of Boulder, Colo. He and his wife, Carol, had come to celebrate their second anniversary, but said they were itching to get home after Juliette dumped three inches of water in their room.

Things were grimmer for less-well-protected local residents.

Jose Luis Aleman Alvarado, 23, his wife, and their 9-month old daughter awoke Thursday to find that the winds had torn the roof off their wood and tarpaper home. They took refuge that night at a friend's house.

"We lost nearly everything. Everything got drenched," Aleman said.

The U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami said Juliette had winds of up to 145 mph earlier in the week, but had diminished to 85 mph when it arrived here Thursday.

By Friday, the storm was just barely a hurricane, with sustained winds of 75 mph. It was still strong enough, however, to smash floating docks — one of them over 80 yards long — and snap power and phone lines, leaving cables flailing over streets flooded waist-deep.

The Hurricane Center said Juliette was virtually stalled Friday, with its eye about 80 miles west of Cabo San Lucas — just close enough to keep hurricane-force winds raking the town.

It was expected to weaken into a tropical storm while edging up the Baja California coastline. Though it was unlikely to reach the U.S. border, forecasters said it could spread rains into the southwestern United States.

The storm has been blamed for the deaths of two people, one a surfer from Denver. William Creson, 45, drowned in 10-foot waves as the storm approached on Wednesday. A fisherman died in high seas Monday near Acapulco.

Hurricane warnings were extended to cover the southern half of the Baja peninsula, and parts of mainland Mexico across the Gulf of California.

The hurricane center said six to eight inches of rain were likely in the hurricane's path, posing the threat of flash floods and mud slides.

Franklin stuns Rebels with 21-7 win

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

EL PASO — The Midland Lee Rebels can now officially turn their dreams of state rankings and state championships to thoughts of survival in the upcoming District 4-5A football race.

El Paso Franklin, who had lost to the Rebels four times in the last two years, stunned Lee, 21-7, at Bowie Stadium Friday night in a game that will surely knock the No. 7 Rebels out of the top 10 in The Associated Press rankings.

Lee is now left with a 2-2 reading while the Cougars of Franklin climb to 3-0.

And this one seemed to turn on a Lee fumble in the second period of play as Franklin came from behind to take the surprising win.

The game started full of promise for the Rebels. Lee held a 7-0 lead after the first quarter while Franklin didn't have a first down to its credit. Lee was totally dominant. At one time, Lee kept the ball 15 plays without scoring. Lee also got a 13-yard TD run from tailback Freddie Jones on a key block by Shawn Murphy for a 7-0 lead.

Then it was as if these two teams changed uniforms. And it all started on a Lee mistake.

After converting a gutsy fourth down play at its own 39-yard line, Lee's Jones fumbled a pitchout by quarterback Aaron Timmerman and the change of momentum had begun.

Two plays later, new Franklin tailback Josh Quinn ripped off 24 yards behind a clearing block by wide receiver Robert Boggs to tie the game at 7-7.

The shock wave just kept coming at the No. 7 ranked Rebels. Franklin came right back and scored again in the second period for a 14-7 lead when Cougar quarterback Travis Magden hit senior wide receiver Chris Marrow for an 11-yard TD pass right into the middle of the Lee defense.

The Rebels had put new air into the Cougar charges. Even trailing, however, Lee held the edge in statistics with 127 total yards to 99 for Franklin. But the Cougars had made the big plays, owned the lead and certainly the momentum going into the second half.

Lee continued to dominate the statistics in the second half, leading in both rushing and passing for the game, but the Rebels couldn't attack the end zone.

Mustangs take down Bulldogs

Mustangs spoil MHS' Homecoming with 24-20 victory

By Lee Passmore

It appeared as if the Midland High football team was only a couple of plays away from a happy Homecoming Friday night at Memorial Stadium, but a gatecrasher spoiled the good times for the Bulldogs.

Lubbock Coronado 24
Midland High 20

Midland High had overcome a 16-point deficit to take the lead over Lubbock Coronado with a little over five minutes left and had the Mustangs facing a third-and-20 on their ensuing possession. But a face which was all too familiar to the Bulldogs helped send the home folks away unhappy.

Coronado's Brandon Clark, who already had caught two touchdown passes on the night, took a short flip over the middle from Bryan Keefner, popped outside and got a block as he raced up the left sideline for a 64-yard touchdown with 4 minutes, 13 seconds left. The stunned Bulldogs couldn't recover as Coronado defeated MHS 24-20.

The loss spoiled a valiant second half comeback effort by the Bulldogs (2-2), who overcame a 16-0 deficit late in the third quarter to go up 20-16. Clark, who had six catches for 111 yards and three scores, was definitely the villain in the script.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
Midland High running back T.J. Barber tries to escape the grasp of Lubbock Coronado's Vincent Brigge during third quarter action Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

"We knew coming into the ball game that (Clark) was their go-to guy who they looked to for the big play," said MHS coach David Browning. "He's a great athlete. (The winning touchdown) was that little tunnel screen that everybody runs these days."

That winning score was a rather logical conclusion to a wild second half. The Mustangs (4-1) looked on the verge of blowing out the Bulldogs, who surrendered 260 yards in the air to Coronado and for most of three quarters generated little offensively.

However, Midland High took advantage of some big special teams plays to grab good field position and twice go in for touchdowns, then capped a 72-yard drive when T.J. Barber scored his second touchdown of the night from a yard out to give the Bulldogs a 20-16 lead with 5:17 remaining.

That negated a first half in which Midland High netted only 57 yards of offense and no points in falling behind 13-0. Had the Bulldogs gotten started sooner, it could have been a different story.

"We don't need to be waiting until the second half on either side of the ball," said Browning. "We need to get

Mustangs defeat Buffaloes behind Joseph's running

STANTON — The Midland Christian Mustangs were once young ponies learning to play against teams like the Stanton Buffaloes. On Friday night, the Mustangs became the teachers.

The Mustangs (6-0), behind the strong running of Tony Joseph and a stubborn defense, ran past the Buffaloes, 48-0, at Buffalo Stadium.

Joseph, who ran for 240 yards on nine carries, wasted very little time getting cranked on all cylinders. On the first play of the game, Joseph ran for 40 yards to set the ball at the Stanton 40-yard line.

On the next play, it was Joseph again who scampered for another 40 yards, this time for the touchdown. Joseph left very little doubt that he was the go-to man to begin the game.

"I was expecting a big game because my line has been doing a great job," said Joseph, who finished with three touchdowns on the night and sat out the second half. "When I see big holes like that, it's nothing new to me."

Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon said it was every bit his team's intention to get Joseph off to a fast start to complement the passing of Jamie Beeghley, who was 13-for-17 with 129 yards and two touchdowns.

"We want to be balanced," McClendon said. "Right now we're about 60-40 (run-pass). Our problem is that we want to work on our passing game. I was very proud of the way Jamie threw, and for the most part, the way the receivers caught. You just can't pass once get ahead but it was one of those deals where Tony was outstanding tonight."

McClendon also credited a big part of the win to the offensive line, which won the battle in the trenches.

"Our offensive line, I would put them up against anybody, anywhere, anytime," McClendon said. "They are that good. They're a bunch of athletes up there. Big, good athletes. They don't get near enough credit."

When he saw that first touchdown from Joseph, Stanton coach Mark Cotton knew his team would be in for a long night. Cotton, how-

Gardner scores five times in 35-21 Andrews victory

By D. Lance Lunsford

BIG SPRING — This year's rivalry between Andrews and Big Spring High Schools was settled thanks primarily to the 238 yards of rushing from Andrews' fullback Matt Gardner.

Gardner's five touchdowns led the Mustangs to a 35-21 win over the Steers Friday night. The win in the District 4-4A opener for both schools lifts Andrews' record to 2-2, while Big Spring falls to 0-4.

The tone for the game was set early in the first quarter with Andrews scoring 14 points on Gardner runs. Those scores went unanswered until late in the first quarter after an eight yard pass from Big Spring's Tye Butler met Larry Thompson in the end zone with 49 seconds left.

Big Spring wasted little time in adding another seven points to the scoreboard in the second quarter with another pass to Thompson.

Tied at 14, Andrews' Gardner pounded his way into Big Spring's defense eventually scoring on a four-yard run.

With just minutes left in the game and Big Spring down by only seven points, a Steers punt gave the underdogs a bit of hope when the ball struck a Mustang receiver on the helmet, leaving Big Spring to

Rushing, defense take down Trinity

By Evan A. Pierce
MRT Correspondent

A punishing running attack and a solid defense proved to be too much for the Trinity Chargers when the Garden City Bearkats defeated them, 18-6.

"We're not good enough defensively to consistently stop people," Midland Trinity head coach John Wilkins said. "We have to be more physically defensively and work on our passing game."

Garden City (4-0) continued to stay perfect on the season, but it was Curtis Eggemeyer who stole the show. Eggemeyer racked up 208 yards on 29 carries and scored all three times before the night ended. Drew Plagens added solid backup with 42 yards on just 4 carries.

Trinity's Clint Adcox provided most of his team's yards Friday night by rushing for 120 yards on 20 carries.

"Our line played great," Adcox said. "There were holes everywhere. I give all my credit to them."

Wildcats look for revenge

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. — Kansas State has no motivation other than victory Saturday when it plays Oklahoma.

The meeting between the third-ranked Sooners and No. 11 Kansas State will be the third in a year. The Wildcats lost the other two, first on their home field in October and then in Kansas City, Mo., in the Big 12 title game in December.

Now the Wildcats visit Norman, where Oklahoma has won 15 in a row.

"It's a privilege," said Josh Scobey, who grew up not far from Norman in Del City and now is Kansas State's tailback. "I think that a lot of people want to look at it as a revenge factor, but we're looking at it as an opportunity to play another great team."

Safety Jon McGraw said the Wildcats would like to redeem themselves after what happened last season. But he also steered away from the R word.

"I don't see revenge as a factor," he said. "I think we understand that this game is important to our season, as they do, and understand that if we want to get where we want to go, this is obviously the biggest game up to this point."

The Wildcats (2-0) opened their season with a victory at Southern Cal and followed that last week by rolling over New Mexico State 64-0.

Oklahoma (3-0) has beaten North Carolina and North

Wales will host 2010 Ryder Cup

By ROBERT MILLWARD
AP Sports Writer

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Wales will hold the Ryder Cup for the first time in 2010, with Scotland the host in 2014.

The European Ryder Cup Board also announced Friday the four Ryder Cups in Europe from 2018 to 2030 will be held outside Britain and rotated around the continent.

Celtic Manor in Wales was awarded the 2010 event over bids from Slaley Hall, England, and Scottish courses Loch Lomond, Carnoustie, Gleneagles and Turnberry. Gleneagles was given the 2014 Ryder Cup.

Celtic Manor had been the 2010 favorite ever since Ken Schofield, executive director of the European tour, endorsed the Welsh bid in May.

Celtic Manor already stages the Welsh Open. The par-72 Wentwood Hills course is expected to be used for the Ryder Cup.

"We've been left behind in golfing circles, and hopefully this will create a little more interest and bring us back in line," said Welsh Ryder Cup player Phillip Price, who lives 15 minutes from Celtic Manor. "Coming to Wales will be such a boost for everyone."

The Ryder Cup board had been due to make the announcement this week at The Belfry in England, where the 34th Ryder Cup had been scheduled to start Friday.

But the event was postponed for a year following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on New York and Washington. Organizers rescheduled the event for Sept. 27-29, 2002.

The postponement also led to a change in future Ryder Cup schedules. To keep the two-year gap, the matches will be played permanently in even-numbered years.

The Ryder Cup has been held every other year since 1927, with the exception of a 10-year break during World War II.

Oakland Hills Country Club outside Detroit will stage the 2004 Ryder Cup, and the K-Club, just outside Dublin, Ireland, will be the venue in 2006. The Ryder Cup will be played at Valhalla in Kentucky in 2008 and at Medinah, outside Chicago, in 2012.

The European board said it decided to rotate the Ryder Cup around the continent after 2014 to "further stimulate the game throughout Europe."

Courses in Spain, Germany, Sweden, France, Italy and other countries will be considered for the Ryder Cup in 2018, 2022, 2026 and 2030.

The only time the Ryder Cup hasn't been played in Britain or the United States was in 1997 when it was held at Valderrama in Spain.

South Korean leads AFLAC Champions

Associated Press

MOBILE, Ala. — South Korea's Mi Hyun Kim held onto the top spot in the AFLAC Championship on Friday, shooting a 1-under-par 71 to take a one-stroke lead over compatriot Se Ri Pak.

Kim, seeking her fourth LPGA Tour victory in three years, had an 8-under 136 total on Magnolia Grove's Crossings Course. Pak, returning from a five-week break, shot a 67.

Kim three-putted the par-3 17th to drop into a tie with Pak, but rebounded with a birdie on No. 18 after hitting an 8-iron approach 2 feet from the pin.

"After No. 17 I was really mad, so on 18 I had to hit a hard drive and then I hit a good second shot," Kim said.

The elite 40-player field is made up of tournament winners from 1999-01 and active Hall of Famers.

Annika Sorenstam, the tour leader with six victories and $1,666,306, is skipping the event, giving Pak a chance to tighten the races for Player of the Year honors, the money title and Vare Trophy for scoring average.

"I try to be the best," said Pak, celebrating her 24th victory. "If not this year, then next year. I'm still young."

Pak has four victories and is second on the money list with $1,329,509. She missed a scheduled start two weeks ago when the event in Oregon was canceled, and withdrew from the South Carolina stop last week to be with her sister in New York.

Kim has 12 top-10 finishes this year and is seventh on the money list with $718,838 in 27 events. The 24-year-old player won twice as a rookie in 1999 and added the Safeway title last year.

Grace Park, also from South Korea, birdied three of the final four holes for her second straight 69, leaving her two strokes behind at 6 under.

Emilee Klein was three behind after a 69. Dottie Pepper, the 1994 winner who lost a playoff last year to Karrie Webb, shot a 73 to join Meg Mallon (69) at 140. Webb was 1 under after a 70.

Divots: The 40 players have combined for 374 tour victories. Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez, the leader with 48 victories, shot a 74 for a 9-over 153 total.

Defending champ Leonard leads Texas Open

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Justin Leonard won't give up his grip on the Texas Open.

The defending champion shot a 7-under-par 64 Friday to take a three-stroke lead over first-round leader Marco Dawson and Carl Paulson after the second round.

Leonard, a Dallas native who played at the University of Texas, had 10 birdies on a cloudless but breezy day to finish with a 13-under 129 total on the LaCantera Golf Club course.

Paulson shot a 66 and Dawson had a 68. Sweden's Jesper Parnevik (66), Jay Williamson (68) and Tripp Isenhour (65) were another stroke back at 9 under.

Williamson (105th), Paulson (130th) and Isenhour (158th) are among those players fighting to finish in the top 125 on the money list, the cutoff for retaining a tour exemption for 2002.

But Leonard, 39th in winnings at $1.1 million, has only so much sympathy for their situation.

"I'm just doing my job and they're doing their job," he said. "If we butt heads at the end of that, that's great."

Leonard is winless since last year's tournament, with a best this season of a fourth-place tie in Houston Open in April. His goal is to play his way into the Tour Championship with a win.

"I've helped myself over the last two days," he said. "Hopefully, I can continue that over the weekend."

From below the cutoff looking up, the pressure of being in the hunt this week sits atop the pressure of trying to dodge a return trip to qualifying school.

"In my position, you know one good week can put you over the top," said Isenhour, a tour rookie who tied for seventh in the Greater Hartford Open in July. "It's hard not to think about that. You've got to block it out and go play golf."

Dawson, the first-round leader at 7 under, also needs to make some money in the waning weeks to keep his exemption.

He started with consecutive birdies on the back nine and was at 10 under when he double-bogeyed the par-3 3rd hole.

His tee shot on the 202-yard hole flew over the green and across a cart path. His chip under trees was too firm and the ball ran well past the cup.

"The pin was all the way back and felt I couldn't hit it over the green" with a 3-iron, Dawson said. "Just before I hit I just got a bad feeling and felt the wind change a bit. It just kind of threw me off and I made a bad swing."

He got back to 10 under with birdies on two of his last three holes.

Carruth appeal delayed by lack of trial transcripts

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Former NFL player Rae Carruth has waited eight months in prison to appeal his convictions because transcripts from the three-month murder trial aren't finished.

Court reporters are supposed to complete transcripts of capital murder trials in four months. The record of what happened during the trial is necessary before any appeal can go forward.

"It's an outrage," defense attorney David Rudolf said. "We can't do a thing until we have those transcripts."

The state's Administrative Office of the Courts says such delays are not uncommon.

"It's not unusual in capital cases to take up to a year — sometimes longer," said Jane Eaton, who oversees the state's court reporters. "There are capital defendants waiting in prison much longer than Mr. Carruth."

State Supreme Court Chief Justice Beverly Lake Jr. said eight months is too long to wait for transcripts and urged the state to hire more court reporters.

"If waiting a year for transcripts is normal, then that's deplorable," Lake said.

Carruth, a 27-year-old former receiver for the Carolina Panthers, is at Nash Correctional Institution, a high-security prison near Rocky Mount. He works as a janitor making 40 cents a day.

Carruth was convicted Jan. 22 of conspiring to kill his pregnant girlfriend, shooting into her occupied vehicle and using a gun to try to kill her unborn baby. He was sentenced to at least 18 years in prison.

Cherica Adams, 24, was eight months pregnant with Carruth's baby when she was gunned down in a Nov. 16, 1999, drive-by shooting in Charlotte. Doctors saved her baby in an emergency Caesarean.

Trinidad, Hopkins set to finally do battle in ring

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Felix Trinidad and Bernard Hopkins will fight Saturday night in Madison Square Garden to become the first undisputed middleweight champion since Marvelous Marvin Hagler in 1986.

The unbeaten Trinidad will defend the WBA 160-pound championship and try to win the WBC-IBF titles held by Hopkins in the 12-round match postponed from Sept. 15 because of the terrorist attacks.

A crowd of about 18,000 is expected to watch what Hopkins said will be "a hell of a fight while it lasts."

The 28-year-old Trinidad, a former welterweight and super welterweight champion from Puerto Rico, is looking to cement his claim as the best pound-for-pound fighter in the world and set up a match against light heavyweight champion Roy Jones Jr.

The 36-year-old Hopkins, of Philadelphia, will be seeking the attention he feels he has been denied despite having been a middleweight champion since 1994.

While he said he is fighting for respect, Hopkins raised hackles in prefight hype by twice disrespecting Puerto Ricans by throwing down the their flag at news conferences.

"I don't feel any anger," Trinidad said. "I'm going to do my job. He's a good fighter, but he's been lucky up to now."

Hopkins at 6-foot-1, with a 76-inch reach, will be the biggest opponent Trinidad as faced. He is a natural middleweight, while the 5-11 Trinidad, with a 72-inch reach, will be fighting in the 160-pound division for the only the second time.

Trinidad weighed in at 158 1/2 pounds, while Hopkins was at 157.

Trinidad has 33 knockouts in 40 fights, but Hopkins believes he can withstand the Puerto Rican's power. William Joppy also thought he could take Trinidad's punches. He couldn't and lost the WBA middleweight title when he was stopped in the fifth round May 12 in the Garden.

Hopkins, 39-2-1 with 28 knockouts, also wonders if the Puerto Rican can withstand his power.

Trinidad has been knocked down seven times within the first four rounds of fights.

Hopkins' strategy, however, appears to be to turn the match into a brawl and wear Trinidad down.

"People try to hit him on the chin. He's got a body and arms. Everybody wants to hit him in one place," said Hopkins, who defended the IBF title and won the WBC championship by outpointing Keith Holmes on April 14 in The Theater and the Garden.

"I think I will knock him out," said Trinidad, favored to win the pay-per-view bout on TVKO.

The last undisputed middleweight title fight in the Garden was Oct. 19, 1984, when Hagler knocked out Mustafa Hamsho. Hagler's last undisputed title defense was an 11th-round knockout of John Mugabi on March 10, 1986 in Las Vegas. Only the WBC title was at stake when Hagler was outpointed by Sugar Ray Leonard on April 6, 1987.

The pay-per-view telecast will begin at 9 p.m. EDT. It also will open with a 10-round bantamweight bout between Danny Romero, a former champion from Albuquerque, N.M., and Ratanachai Vorapin of Thailand. It also will include an IBF light flyweight title defense by Ricardo Lopez of Mexico again Zolani Petelo of South Africa.

Two bouts that will not be televised are a WBA super middleweight title defense by Byron Mitchell of Ozark, Ala., against Manuel Siaco of Puerto Rico, and an IBF welterweight title elimination bout between Rafael Pineda of Colombia and Michele Piccirillo of Italy.

'KATS: Kansas State defense relies on blitzes to disrupt quarterbacks

(From 1B)

Texas at home, and Air Force on the road. The Sooners have not played since the North Texas game Sept. 8 — a layoff that resulted from postponement of their game Sept. 15 with Tulsa and a regularly scheduled open date.

The time off allowed injured Oklahoma players to get healthy and gave the players and coaches more time to focus on Kansas State. Coach Bob Stoops expects those things to outweigh any negatives that could result from such a long break.

"Having been off a couple weeks, it also has our players chomping at the bit and really excited to be back on the field and in a game," he said. "We're really looking forward to the challenge this Saturday."

That challenge figures to be significant. Kansas State, with Scobey and quarterback Ell Roberson, will bring a bruising running game. The defense relies on blitzes to disrupt opposing quarterbacks.

"Our whole team has got to be tough," Oklahoma quarterback Nate Hybl said. "They're a very physical football team and we want to be just as physical or more physical."

Stoops said last year's team developed the necessary physical and mental toughness as it went through what proved to be a national championship season. Beginning with their victory over Texas in early October and concluding with the victory over Florida State in the Orange Bowl, the Sooners showed they could handle anything that happened in big games.

"We try and establish that through the year, not just on game day — in the spring, how we practice in double sessions, our offseason workouts," he said. "Hopefully we'll continue to play that way in those big games."

The Wildcats are a different team now than a year ago. With Jonathan Beasley at quarterback and Quincy Morgan at receiver, Kansas State wasn't reluctant to throw the ball. Both are gone now, and Roberson is a run-first, throw-later quarterback who has teamed with Scobey to give the Wildcats the top-ranked running game in the country.

Oklahoma's offense has been solid at times, but has lacked consistency. The Sooners have converted only 25 percent of their third-down tries and have already committed seven turnovers.

Despite scoring 37 points against North Texas, Oklahoma failed to score five times after getting the ball inside the 35-yard line. Sometimes penalties were to blame. Other times it was poor execution.

"It just means not making the essential mistakes, just like we've always talked about — not turning the ball over, then once you get in the red zone, being able to capitalize," Hybl said.

Schumacher returns to Indy with championship in hand

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Michael Schumacher is a four-time Formula One champion and one of the most fearless racers in the world.

But even Schumacher has worries.

With the points title already clinched and America reeling from the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, Schumacher wasn't sure if traveling from his home in Switzerland to Indianapolis for the United States Grand Prix was the right thing to do.

Schumacher's family changed his mind.

"It was really pretty simple," the German said. "Being together with my family, being together with my kids, they really wanted to see me go on. They wanted to play and to go to school and after you get over it, you have to get back to life."

Which is why Schumacher has come to the historic Indianapolis Motor Speedway this weekend.

He has eight victories and four second-place finishes in 15 races this season, and a victory Sunday would match Schumacher's season-high of nine victories.

It also would give him a special spot in the Indianapolis record books — as the only driver to win on an Indianapolis road course.

"If you go back to the Indy 500 and the meaning of it and being the first Formula One race here, it does mean something special to put your name first into the book," Schumacher said. "I'm a race-car driver and you want to win."

Schumacher has done that more than anyone else on the circuit, having won a record 52 races.

He's been as dominant as ever this season, clinching his fourth points title Sept. 2 — with three races remaining.

But after the terrorist attacks, Schumacher considered calling it a season.

His Ferrari team gave him the option of pulling out of the final two races of the season — at Indianapolis and at Suzuka, Japan — but Schumacher's family and competitive nature wouldn't allow it.

"I thought what Ferrari did was fair," he said. "I never really had a doubt that if things improved, I wouldn't be here. But if things would have been more difficult, then we probably wouldn't have come."

Last year, Schumacher made it look easy. He took an early lead and cruised to victory by more than 12 seconds despite running into the grass and doing a 360-degree spin just five laps from the finish.

This year, however, might be a different kind of race.

Cool temperatures Friday for the first practice sessions turned the speedway into a fast track.

Qualifying is Saturday, and, as usual, Schumacher is one of the favorites.

He turned fast laps consistently Friday, finishing with the second-fastest time of the day at 1:13.552. Only McLaren's Mika Hakkinen, of Finland, was faster. He turned a 1:13.387. Schumacher's Ferrari teammate, Rubens Barrichello, was third in 1:13.584.

Two other former winners at Indianapolis, Juan Montoya and Jacques Villeneuve, weren't as quick. Montoya, a Colombian who won the 2000 Indianapolis 500, was 10th in 1:13.983, while Villeneuve, the 1995 Indy 500 winner and a Canadian, was 18th in 1:14.999.

Schumacher wasn't the only driver who found the track to his liking, either.

"I think the track is better this year than last year because we came here with a harder tire," said Eddie Irvine of Northern Ireland, who was fifth fastest at 1:13.806. "We had no problems with the car today for the first time in a long time."

But Schumacher's had few problems this season or in his career, and now that he's at ease with being back in America, he just wants to make sure that life continues — with a victory.

"I know I'm not going to be around forever," he said. "We'll just see how long it lasts."

Leffler takes first Winston Cup pole

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Kan. — Rookie Jason Leffler, who didn't even make the race field a week earlier, pulled off a shocker Friday, winning the pole for the inaugural Protection One 400 at Kansas Speedway.

Leffler, driving a Dodge Intrepid for Chip Ganassi Racing, set the pace early in the qualifying session on a cool, sunny afternoon, turning a lap of 176.499 mph on the 1.5-mile tri-oval.

He then sat back and waited with a smile as one veteran after another came up short.

Jeff Gordon, the Winston Cup points leader, came closest with a lap of 176.304. The time difference between the two front-row qualifiers for Sunday's race was 0.034 seconds.

"Actually, I wasn't really nervous," said Leffler, who had not qualified better than 11th in his first 22 starts. "After that lap, I knew we were going to start somewhere up front. It's a good feeling.

"Once it was over, I guess I did feel a little relief that I finally have a pole," added Leffler, a former U.S. Auto Club midget and Silver Crown champion and winner of three poles last season in NASCAR's Busch Series. "Now I can say I've won poles in every series I've raced in."

Gordon, who came agonizingly close to his seventh pole of the season, blamed himself for the near miss.

"I have no one to blame but myself," the three-time series champion said. "I knew the first lap was going to be the one and I made a mistake. I just got in there a little hot and lost momentum.

"But I'm happy to have second. We really wanted a top five today," added Gordon, who leads Ricky Rudd by 210 points after losing 130 to the runner-up over the last two races.

"I'm happy for Jason. He's another open wheel guy who grew up around Indiana. He's did kind of come out of nowhere, but he's a good, young, aggressive driver and he hit the marks just right out there."

Leffler, who turned 26 on Sept. 16, also was relieved to come back so far after his poor qualifying effort in Dover, Del.

"I was really confident going into Dover," he said. "I told some of my friends we were going to qualify well there, maybe even win the pole. I guess I was a week off. I didn't know what to expect coming in here."

The car was fast from the opening practice on the new, slick Kansas track.

"We came and tested at this track and then took some stuff from my teammate, Sterling Marlin, and applied it to my car," Lefler said. "I think that really helped. We unloaded with a good car and made it better."

Dodge's took four of the top five spots in the 43-car field, with only Gordon's Chevy breaking into the pack of Intrepids.

Bill Elliott was third at 176.252, followed by Stacy Compton at 176.148, Casey Atwood at 175.987 and the Pontiacs of Johnny Benson at 175.856 and Tony Stewart at 175.593.

Rounding out the top 10 were the Fords of Rudd at 175.570 and Ricky Craven at 175.484 and the Pontiac of defending series champion Bobby Labonte at 175.313.

The next fastest Chevrolet was driven by rookie Kevin Harvick, 15th place at 174.972, while Dale Earnhardt Jr., the winner at Dover and another Chevy driver, was 22nd at 174.475.

Rookies Ryan Newman and Kurt Busch each crashed Friday. Newman got into a backup car and qualified 17th, while Busch hit the wall during qualifying and was added to the field as one of seven provisional starters.

Lady Mustangs remember Yell

When the Midland Christian volleyball team hosts Fort Worth Christian for a TAPPS District 1-4A match today, the team will pay tribute to Raymond Yell, a long-time supporter and volunteer for the MCHS program who passed away recently.

The freshmen and junior varsity matches begin at 11 a.m. in the MCHS gym. The tribute will be held between the first and second games of the JV match.

The varsity match will begin at about noon. The Lady Mustangs, 2-0 in district play and 17-8 overall, will be going for a sweep of the first half of district play. This will be their last home match, unless, like last year, MCHS gets to host a TAPPS playoff match.

Starting Oct. 6, the Lady Mustangs face a grueling week of travel to close district play: at Denton Liberty on Oct. 6; at Lubbock Trinity Christian on Oct. 9; and at Fort Worth Christian on Oct. 13.

Johnson's NBA future in doubt with Knicks

Associated Press

NEW YORK — As he discussed Larry Johnson's status, Knicks president Scott Layden spoke only of the past.

The Knicks would like Johnson to make a graceful exit and have offered him a buyout for the remaining three years of his contract.

Johnson, a two-time All-Star who has spent five seasons in New York, has a chronic back condition that has hampered him for several years and kept him out of last season's playoffs. A co-captain, he averaged a career-low 9.9 points in 2000-01.

"Let me say this about Larry, he's such an important part of our team with his leadership, and I think we saw last year in the playoffs how important he was through his absence," Layden said Friday. "He's been an unbelievable competitor for us. He's laid it out and won many games for us."

Despite his accomplishments and his popularity among his teammates, Johnson would seem to be the odd man out in New York. The power forward spot includes Kurt Thomas, Clarence Weatherspoon and Othella Harrington, and the small forward slot is manned by Latrell Sprewell and Shandon Anderson.

That doesn't leave a lot of room for Johnson, whose best times with the Knicks came when he led them to the NBA Finals in 1999. As noted in the Knicks playoff media guide, he "made the right arm "Big L" signal a symbol of Knicks' postseason success."

Johnson is due to make $28.8 million over the next three seasons, with the Knicks holding an option to pay him $6.9 million in 2004-05.

Johnson would forfeit the money if he retired, so that is not a viable option. If he stayed on the injured list for the next three seasons, he would collect all the money — a situation the Knicks clearly would not be comfortable with.

Johnson's agent, George Bass, has told reporters that Johnson has been working out and will be ready for the start of training camp Oct. 1. Bass did not return phone messages Friday.

Greenwood 17, Crane 0

CRANE — The Greeenwood Rangers came out on top Friday, blanking the previously unbeaten Golden Cranes, 17-0. It was only the Rangers' third win in eight tries on the road against Crane.

Brothers Brandon and Jeremy Audas led a balanced offense, each scoring a touchdown, and gaining 47 and 58 yards respectively. Daniel Fowler added a 30-yard field goal in the fourth quarter to his two extra-point kicks.

The Greenwood defense allowed Crane to gain 252 yards of total offense but limited the Cranes to only eight first downs.

DISTRICT 4-5A

Permian 49, Monterey 31

ODESSA — Odessa Permian played four quarters this time, but as usual it was a strong fourth quarter which decided things as the Panthers improved to 4-1 by winning a shootout over Lubbock Monterey, 49-31.

Permian never trailed as it scored at least once in each of the four quarters, as did Monterey. The Panthers took a 21-7 lead but Monterey scored a pair of touchdowns in the final two minutes of the first half to tie it at 21-21.

But as has been the case all season, Mojo came to life in the second half. Zack McGill returned a fumble 68 yards for a touchdown which gave Permian the lead for good. It was the first of two fumbles the Panthers would return for scores in the second half.

Monterey would cut it to 35-31 early in the fourth quarter on a 33-yard field goal by Nathan Styles, but Permian put the game away when Ruben Sanchez returned a fumble 53 yards for a score, and David Durell scored on a seven-yard run.

Jayson Dorman led Permian with 137 yards rushing and a pair of first half touchdowns, while Durell completed only two passes, they were for 43 and 42 yards to Gary Snyder for touchdowns.

Abilene 28, Central 13

ABILENE — Abilene High quarterback Marcus Johnson threw a touchdown pass in the first quarter, then ran for three more scores in the second quarter to lead the Eagles over San Angelo Central Friday night.

After Central scored first on a 51-yard pass from Walter Bryant to Steven Harben, Abilene High answered with its own long scoring pass, a 50-yarder from Johnson to Kendrick Starks. J.B. Gibbs' kick gave AHS a 7-6 lead, then Johnson's runs in the second quarter gave AHS a 28-6 halftime lead.

AHS rolled up 285 rushing yards, including 166 by Johnson. He also passed for 99 yards.

AMARILLO — The Abilene Cooper Cougars stayed undefeated with a beating of Amarillo Tascosa Friday night. Tascosa, on the other hand, is winless at 0-5.

Cooper's Brandon Diles rushed for 224 yards and two touchdowns on 23 carries. Quarterback David Butler gave the Cougars an amazingly balanced offense by hitting on 14-of-25 passes for 221 yards and a touchdown.

Cooper (5-0) survived 13 penalties for 124 yards.

Odessa 21, Coronado 17

EL PASO — Perhaps taking a page from crosstown rival Odessa Permian, Odessa High had a huge fourth quarter, and scored in the final minute to rally past El Paso Coronado Friday night.

The Bronchos (2-3) trailed 10-0 heading into the fourth quarter when they scored all their points. Kale Kirkpatrick hit Matt Dominey with a 27-yard scoring pass, then OHS went up 14-10 when Darren Shipman returned a blocked punt 19 yards for a touchdown with 2 minutes, 24 seconds left in the game.

Almost immediately after that, though, Coronado answered as Tiger Lyon hooked up with Luther Binford for their second long scoring pass of the game, giving Coronado a 17-14 lead. But with 1:04 left, Justin Casas ran for a 41-yard touchdown which would give Odessa High the win. It was the only carry of the game for Casas.

LEE: Jones rushes for 141 yards

(From 1B)

In fact, Lee missed on two golden opportunities, one in each half. Tim Norman underthrew a wide open receiver in the first half on a reverse wingback pass and quarterback Cole Sampson just overthrew an open Eric Winston inside the 10. Those were missed opportunities the Rebels couldn't make up.

After several promising Lee drives deep into Cougar territory in the second half, Franklin was the team that salted away the game in the fourth period when Quinn went 44 yards for a touchdown with 5:46 left in the game. This was a done upset deal.

Quinn led Franklin with 149 yards rushing and two touchdowns, but it was his game breaking plays that made the difference. It was the senior's best outing of the season as he also caught a pass for 28 yards.

Lee tailback Freddie Jones had 141 yards rushing in his best outing of the season, but he might have been just shoestrings short of a huge game and a Lee win. He was so close to breaking on at least six plays, only to be tripped up just as he was about to get into the clear.

Lee's Jacoby Hartley had two interceptions to save Lee some more grief, but Franklin's Chris Marrow, one of the best safeties in West Texas, intercepted three Lee passes.

Lee now faces a tough task of regrouping. Lee hosts El Paso Coronado, a winner over Odessa High on Friday, next week in Homecoming. But the expected fun Homecoming clash now carries some desperate tones with it.

The Rebels once looked like a lock to make the playoffs and make a run at a fourth consecutive state title. But now making the state playoffs doesn't even seem a sure thing.

MUSTANGS: Defense has held opponents scoreless through nine straight quarters ever, credited his team for never giving up despite being outgunned.

"I thought our kids played hard, but we were totally outmanned tonight," said Cotton, whose team fell to 1-4 on the season. "We're playing at a (Class) 2A level and they (Mustangs) are playing with 2A numbers but at a Class 4A or 5A level. They just have more of a base from where to draw from. I'm not griping, don't get me wrong. I think McClendon's a good coach.

"You can write this down, without a doubt Midland Christian is the best football team I've seem this year, bar none."

Joseph help sparked a 34-0 Midland Christian halftime lead. In addition to his 40-yard TD run to begin the game, he added scoring runs of 30 and 70 yards.

Also in the first half, Beeghley connected with David Guerrero on a 39-yard scoring toss and Blake Morphew scored from a yard out.

"I was very proud of the effort these kids gave," McClendon said. "They were very business-like. They're a very mature bunch of kids. They don't take anybody lightly and they've got a lot of respect for Stanton. They just came out ready to go."

In the second half, Beeghley hit Jordan Frosch for a 17-yard TD pass, and Bryan Joseph added a 44-yard TD run to cap the scoring.

The Mustang defense continued to shine as it held Stanton to just 121 yards of total offense and has now held opponents scoreless through nine straight quarters.

As these teams left the field, they departed going in very separate directions: Midland Christian continues to roll, while Stanton continues to struggle. For Cotton, the bye week comes at a good time before opening District 3-2A play at Plains on Oct. 12.

"I think the bye week is good for us," Cotton said. "We need to heal up and put in some new wrinkles in for district. I've always believed in being vanilla in my play calling for non-district games. Like I told the kids, I still believe we can make the playoffs. The toughest part of our schedule is over. I challenge anybody who's played a tougher schedule that what we did."

NOTES: Stanton now leads the overall series, 4-2, going back to 1996, Midland Christian's first year playing 11-man football... Joseph now has 1,071 yards rushing for the season through six games...

ANDREWS: Offense powered by Gardner recover. The opportunity seemed to be the Steers' last hope, but it was quickly shot down by the referee's call to let Andrews keep the ball.

(From 1B)

With little headway, Andrews slowly chipped away at the Steers' defense adding 14 points before the game's end with only one score from the Steers' offense.

Andrews Mustangs Coach Mike Lebby said this game was an important game for both teams.

"It's a huge game for us every year," Lebby said. "Big Spring is good. Offensively, they are really, really good. This was a big win for us. In this district, we have to go week by week."

Lebby said fullback Matt Gardner has proven himself as a valuable asset to the team.

"He's been our middle linebacker. He ain't bad for a sophomore," Lebby said.

Big Spring coach Dwight Butler said his team just could not pull though against the tough offense Andrews put against them.

"We just couldn't handle their power," Butler said. "We just couldn't find anything we could do. They just have awful big players."

Butler said Gardner's power was unforeseen.

"We hadn't ever seen him," Butler said. "The key to him is up front. The power of their team is up front. They're well-coached and just powerful."

MHS: Defense never let Lubbock Coronado establish running attack started coming off the gun."

(From 1B)

MHS performed admirably on defense most of the first half and never let Coronado establish a running game. But Clark caught a pair of scoring passes from alternating quarterbacks Keefner (who threw for 215 yards) and Brandt Stravlo to take a 13-0 lead into the locker room.

Michael Peres kicked a 26-yard field goal midway through the third quarter to stretch Coronado's lead to 16-0, and that finally seemed to wake up the Bulldogs.

"Offensively we tried to find our identity and it looks like out forte is going to be running," said Browning.

The Bulldogs couldn't take advantage when Casey Zachry recovered a fumble at Coronado's 35, but when the Mustangs had to punt back to the Bulldogs, sophomore Phillip Mancha returned it 28 yards to Coronado's 45. Barber scored from four yards out to finally get MHS on the board at 16-6.

It was the second big night of the season for Barber, who is establishing himself as a workhorse and finished with 140 yards on 29 carries.

"He kept his feet about him and didn't just go down when he was pushed backward," said Browning of Barber, who was still suffering from turf toe. "He grew up a lot tonight."

MHS took advantage of the next Coronado miscue, when Craig Rodriguez coughed up the football on the ensuing kickoff. Quarterback Ryan Rowland came up big the next possession for the Bulldogs, completing a fourth down pass to Zack Sledge, then going in from two yards out to cut the lead to 16-13.

"You try to tell the kids all week that Midland is a good football team and that the game isn't over until the final whistle," said Coronado coach Butch Henderson. "We turned the ball over down there a couple of times and they really did a good job of grabbing and taking the momentum."

But that all became moot when Keefner hit Clark for what turned out to be the gamebreaker.

"We can't miss tackles like that, especially on a third and 20," said Browning.

The Bulldogs had plenty of time to come back when they took over the kickoff at their own 23. They picked up a first down, but on a fourth and seven from their own 40 with 1:54 left, the Bulldogs saw their last chance end when Rowland threw a deep pass incomplete for Sledge into double coverage.

On the next possession, Keefner scrambled eight yards for a first down to put the game away for Coronado.

BEARKATS: Trinity offense has one yard passing, 24 yards on ground

(From 1B)

The rest of the Chargers' offense was far less productive. The passing game only yielded a single yard and the rest of the running backs only mustered 24 rushing yards.

Neither team could produce any extra points. Garden City failed an a kick attempt and a extra point pass, then had a second kick attempt blocked. Trinity also came up short on its single chance by coming up short on the kick.

Perhaps Trinity's most crippling problem Friday was a season long struggle against considerably more equipped teams. Only 16 players suited up Friday and four of them were seniors.

"We only have 16 kids," Wilkins said. "We are limited to what we can do."

After breaking to an even 3-3 on the season, Wilkins remained undaunted and now has his eyes set on district play.

"We have a bye-week before district starts," he said. "It's every coach's deal to win district."

One-of-a-kind Ripken forever changed baseball

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Fans nationwide showed their love all season with standing ovations, handmade signs and heartfelt gifts, from cowboy boots to paintings. Players went out of their way to offer thanks and even grab autographs.

Although he played his entire career with the Baltimore Orioles, Cal Ripken Jr. was never really considered the enemy.

In July, a sellout crowd in Atlanta gave the sport's Iron Man a rousing tribute after he hit a homer, even though it beat the home team.

Ripken's peers, meanwhile, have sought him out in the Baltimore clubhouse and during batting practice. When Ripken is in the field, third base becomes a meeting place, where other players often shake his hand and thank him for leaving major league baseball a better game.

Ever since Ripken announced in June that this would be his final season, fans also have shown the 41-year-old third baseman how much they appreciate his contribution to baseball over the past two decades.

Most of all, they all want Ripken to know how much he affected their lives during The Streak — his staggering run of playing in 2,632 consecutive games, all of them starts.

"He has had a tremendous impact on me as a player. What he did — to go out there every single day for 16 straight years — was amazing and inspirational," said New York Yankees outfielder Bernie Williams, who shared that thought with Ripken last weekend. "Every time I have a little pain or something, I think, 'Man, if this guy can do it every day, I should go out there and do it as well.' He was just an example for all of us."

And a trendsetter. Ripken broke the mold for shortstops, proving that a big man could indeed have the range and skill to play a position previously occupied by slap-hitting runts.

Ripken, of course, was no runt. He had 431 home runs going into the weekend. Appropriately, the 19-time All-Star also hit a homer in his final All-Star Game in Seattle in July and was the MVP for the second time.

"He's a 6-foot-4 guy playing shortstop. Before he came along, that was unheard of," Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter said. "It's almost like Magic Johnson playing point guard in the NBA. You're not supposed to be that tall playing that position. Cal redefined the shortstop position."

Jeter, Alex Rodriguez and Nomar Garciaparra might not have been given the chance to play shortstop if not for Ripken, who was moved to third base in 1997.

"I think the streak obviously will be a defining achievement for Cal," Seattle Mariners manager Lou Piniella said. "But he's also changed the way the shortstop position is viewed by teams. Now it's the big man who can hit the ball for pop. It's an offensive position now, where before it was viewed as more of a catch it and throw it type of position."

Ripken could catch and throw with the best of them. He shares or holds 11 major league or AL fielding records, including fewest errors in a season by a shortstop (three, in 1990).

"I didn't have models in front of me that could teach me how to make plays, for my size," Ripken recalled. "In a lot of cases, I had to learn myself, using what I knew to try to figure out how to make a play at shortstop."

As usual, he made it happen. Ripken's work ethic and determination enabled him to maximize his skills, at the plate and in the field.

"I never thought of myself as one who had the most natural talent. I always had to work at it, polish it up," he said.

He was the consummate professional, a fierce competitor who never let his emotions get the better of him, even during those times when he was slumping and his critics were clamoring for him to end the streak. He got his lone World Series title in his only trip there in 1983.

"He never slammed his helmet. He never, never blamed other people for his downfalls," said Ron Washington, a teammate of Ripken's in 1987. "He was a professional. He was a man every day. He showed up every day at the ballpark, and the only thing he wanted to do was try to do something to help his team win."

Ripken rescued baseball from itself in 1995. After a work stoppage ruined the 1994 season, he showed his savvy and class the following year, signing thousands of autographs as he inched toward breaking Lou Gehrig's amazing record of playing in 2,130 consecutive games.

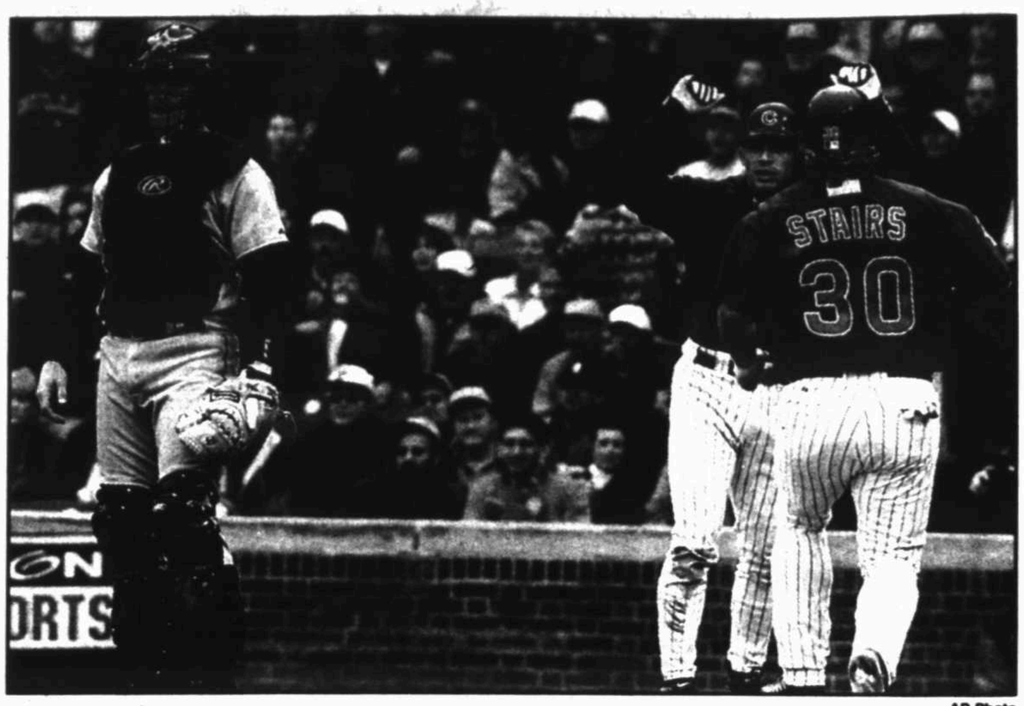

Coming into this season, Ripken wanted to delay his decision on retirement in part because he didn't want to deal with the hoopla of a farewell tour. He eventually relented, giving baseball a chance to express its thanks and allowing Ripken the opportunity to reciprocate in kind.

He's still signing autographs every day as he draws closer to his final game, next Saturday night in Baltimore.

"In a lot of ways, with some of the things he does with the people, as gracious as he is with autographs, he's kind of the player all of us want to be," Yankees third baseman Scott Brosius said. "He's been a great ambassador to the game."

On and off the field.

"He's had just a Hall of Fame career. The professionalism he's shown, the productivity he's had, plus the Iron Man record and all his other success, it all adds up to a great and long and graceful career," Piniella said. "You wish he could play forever, but that's the one thing you can't do in this business. It's baseball's loss, no question."

Houston Astros catcher Brad Ausmus left, watches as the Chicago Cubs' Joe Girardi, center, greets Matt Stairs at the plate Friday during the third inning as Stairs scores on a single hit by Bill Mueller at Wrigley Field in Chicago.

Lieber gets career-high 19th win to defeat Houston, 6-2

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Jon Lieber had just won his career-high 19th game, and already Joe Girardi was asking for more.

"I told him I expect 20," the Chicago Cubs catcher said.

Lieber (19-6) is one shy of that magical mark after scattering five hits over seven innings Friday to lead the Cubs to a 6-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

"Absolutely nothing," Lieber said when asked what winning 20 would mean. "Unless we got into the postseason. This has been a hard last couple of weeks because we worked so hard to get where we are. It's a battle right now."

At least the Cubs are still in it. Sammy Sosa tied the club record for extra-base hits as Chicago held off elimination in the division for at least one more day.

Matt Stairs drove in two runs, and Girardi, Ricky Gutierrez and Bill Mueller added RBIs for the Cubs, who are eight games behind Houston in the NL Central.

"We know we're not going to be in first place. We know we're not going to win the division," Sosa said. "But we have a chance. We have two more games against Houston and then Cincinnati and Pittsburgh. It's still a good possibility."

The Astros started the day with a four-game lead over the St. Louis Cardinals. The Cubs, who would have been eliminated from the NL Central race with a loss Friday, began the day five games behind St. Louis, which leads the wild card standings.

There was more bad news for Houston as Roy Oswalt (14-3) left following the third inning after aggravating a strained groin. Oswalt, who had been 6-0 since losing to the Cubs on July 23, allowed four runs and nine hits.

"I don't know about his next start," Astros manager Larry Dierker said. "If we make the playoffs, he might have to make his next start there."

Lieber has struggled in his last couple of outings, but he was back to being the Cubs ace Friday. He struck out seven, walked one and allowed only two extra-base hits.

"I just can't explain it, definitely I felt I had better command," Lieber said.

Back-to-back doubles by Lance Berkman and Richard Hidalgo to start the second led to Houston's only run. After walking Orlando Merced, Lieber got three quick outs.

The Astros never got anyone else past first base while Lieber was in the game. Pinch-hitter Chris Truby hit a solo homer in the ninth off Jeff Fassero.

Unlike Lieber, Oswalt struggled from the start. He missed his previous start because of the strained groin, and it was clear he was still hurting. He allowed four hits in the first inning alone as Chicago took a 2-0 lead.

Michael Tucker, Sosa and Fred McGriff all singled, and Stairs then hit an RBI fielder's choice that scored Tucker. Gutierrez followed with an RBI double.

The Cubs added two more in the third. With one out, Sosa doubled. It was his career-high 97th extra-base hit of the season, tying the club record set by Hack Wilson in 1930.

One out later, Stairs lined a single just over Jeff Bagwell and down the right-field line for an RBI. Gutierrez singled, and Stairs scored on Mueller's RBI single to right.

The Cubs got a scare then. Orlando Merced's throw to third skipped off Vinny Castilla's glove as Gutierrez came in on a popup slide. Castilla was already moving for the ball when Gutierrez jumped up, the two got tangled up and Gutierrez's neck was twisted in the collision.

Gutierrez left with a strained neck, but Baylor expects him to play Saturday.

McGwire rooting for Bonds to break home run record

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Mark McGwire hopes Barry Bonds breaks the home-run record he set three years ago.

"All I'm going to say is he's got an excellent chance," McGwire said Friday night before the St. Louis Cardinals played Pittsburgh. "I'm rooting for him. If he gets it, it'll be a phenomenal feat."

McGwire was hesitant to talk about the record chase, for fearing anything he said would be construed as sour grapes.

He and manager Tony La Russa said McGwire, who began Friday with 27 homers and a .185 average in an injury-plagued year, got some unfavorable publicity during the team's just-completed seven-game trip. McGwire hit his 28th homer Friday off Todd Ritchie.

"I read some negative stuff and I read the stuff Mark says," La Russa said. "It's really a shame. I think he's said the right thing all along."

McGwire broke Roger Maris' 37-year-old record of 61 homers with his 70-homer season in 1998. Bonds began Friday with 67 homers and nine games remaining.

"He's doing it routinely," McGwire said. "His pace is unbelievable. I've told guys in here, I'm calling 72, 73."

The most impressive aspect of Bonds' record chase, to McGwire's thinking, was that he had only 455 at-bats.

"It's unbelievable," McGwire said. "He's totally blown away what I did, even if the year ended today."

After the 1998 season, McGwire thought his record would last. He changed his thinking after he hit 65 more homers in 1999 and after Sammy Sosa topped 60 homers in both '98 and '99.

"When I came back the next year and hit 65, that was pretty much a reevaluation, saying 70's going to be broken," McGwire said. "I'm very realistic about things. I've said since day one that records are made to be broken."

Jagr tops NHL wage-earners for season

Associated Press

TORONTO — Jaromir Jagr, in the absence of Peter Forsberg, will be the highest-paid player when the NHL opens its new season Wednesday night.

Among the 790 players who will be on rosters for the openers, about 325 will be earning $1 million or more for 2001-2002, according to the players union.

Jagr is scheduled to earn $10,033,333 from the Washington Capitals this season, based on the contract he had with the Pittsburgh Penguins before they traded him during the summer.

The league's scoring champion might soon get a new long-term deal from Caps owner Ted Leonsis for more money than any NHL player has ever earned.

Forsberg's salary for 2001-2002 is a league-high $11 million, but he's not going to collect a dime while sitting at home in Sweden after taking a leave of absence from the Colorado Avalanche to ponder his lifestyle after surgery in May to remove his spleen.

The only other eight-figure salaries will be paid to Anaheim's Paul Kariya and Florida's Pavel Bure. Both will get $10 million.

Colorado captain Joe Sakic is next at $9,832,727.

The deal Eric Lindros worked out with the New York Rangers, four years for $38 million, works out to $9.5 million a year if he stays healthy.

St. Louis captain Chris Pronger will get $9.5 million, and Colorado defenseman Rob Blake is close behind at $9.3 million.

John LeClair of Philadelphia and Doug Weight of St. Louis get $9 million apiece. Philadelphia's Jeremy Roenick and Colorado's Patrick Roy are at $8.5 million.

Keith Tkachuk of the Blues pockets $8.3 million, and Teemu Selanne of the Sharks, Mike Modano of the Stars and new Detroit goalie Dominik Hasek each get $8 million.

The Los Angeles Lakers' Shaquille O'Neal jokes around as he poses for photos for an upcoming Lakers' cook book Friday during media day at the HealthSouth Training Center in El Segundo, Calif. O'Neal said Friday he's not sure he'll be ready to play when the Lakers begin the season Oct. 30.

Shaq uncertain he'll be ready by start of NBA regular season

Associated Press

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — A tiny problem, relatively speaking, is causing mammoth Los Angeles Lakers center Shaquille O'Neal a lot of pain these days.

O'Neal, who had surgery Aug. 29 to alleviate the ache in his small left toe, said Friday he's not sure he'll be ready to play when the two-time defending NBA champion Lakers begin the season Oct. 30 against Portland.

"I just got cleared to do bikes last week, I haven't been doing anything since the surgery," O'Neal said Friday before the Lakers flew to Hawaii for the beginning of training camp. "I get another checkup in 30 days.

O'Neal said he wasn't in basketball shape, although that wouldn't take long. He expressed doubt he'd be playing during the preseason.

"Hopefully, I will be (ready for opening night)," he said. "If not, Kobe (Bryant) and the guys will hold down the fort until I am.

"We're not going to win anything the first month."

O'Neal said he weighed 339 pounds. A day earlier, coach Phil Jackson said the NBA's dominant big man had promised he'd report to camp under 300, but that was before O'Neal knew about the surgery, which has kept him from normal exercise.

Doctors cut away bone from the inside of O'Neal's small toe, which he said caused him pain for years.

Jackson said Thursday he hoped O'Neal would be ready to start the season, adding: "We'd like him to be ready to really start rolling sometime at the end of November."

The coach seemed a bit surprised Friday by O'Neal's uncertainty.

"He's going to have to make those calls, it's his feet," Jackson said. "Realistically, he's got about six to seven weeks (following surgery) before he can really actually start running."

That would be in the middle of October.

"But he could play without that little toe if these were the playoffs," Jackson said.

Starting guard Derek Fisher and backup forward Mark Madsen, who both had surgery July 3, probably won't be able to play until December, although Fisher hopes to return earlier.

"We're definitely way short," said Fisher, who missed the first 62 games last season after an operation for a stress fracture in his right foot and had the same problem crop up again. "When you're trying to win a championship, whether it's the first one or the third one, the key is to stay healthy.

"We won't win a championship in November. At the same time, things can have a longer effect than you'd like. There's always time, but it's nerve-racking."

The Lakers will have at least two new starters for their opener — at power forward, where newcomer Samaki Walker will likely replace the departed Horace Grant, and in the backcourt, where Lindsey Hunter, another newcomer, is the probable replacement for Fisher.

"I just see us improving, coming out of the gate strong," Bryant said. "It's pretty easy to stay motivated."

Local Volleyball Today

Abilene High at Midland High

When: 2 p.m. (approximately — sophomores' match starts at noon, and junior varsity and varsity follow)

Where: Midland High gym.

Records: Midland High is 4-1 in District 4-5A and 21-6 overall; Abilene High is 5-0 and 18-2.

4-5A Significance: These seem to be the top two teams in the district. This battle for first place closes out the first half of district play. MHS could tie for the district lead with a win, or it could fall to two games behind AHS.

Notes: The difference in these teams' district records is the slip-up MHS had at Abilene Cooper, losing 15-12, 15-5 on Sept. 18. Unless Cooper can manage a similar trick against AHS on Tuesday, MHS will likely need to sweep the rest of its matches to claim an outright district title... By the way, AHS pounded Cooper in the first meeting, 15-5, 15-4... In its last match, MHS took care of Odessa High, 15-9, 15-8, on Tuesday. Odessa High remains winless in district matches. AHS won a match Tuesday at San Angelo Central by the highly unusual score of 15-2, 15-17, 15-2.

Next: MHS will play at Midland Lee Tuesday. The match will begin at about 7:15 p.m.

Midland Lee at Abilene Cooper

When: 2 p.m. (approximately)

Where: Abilene.

Records: Lee is 2-3 in District 4-5A and 16-10 overall; Cooper is 3-2 and 8-18.

4-5A Significance: While AHS and MHS are fighting for the top two spots in the district, there is a wide open race for the third playoff spot. The only difference between Cooper (3-2) and Lee, Odessa Permian and San Angelo Central (all 2-3) is Cooper's upset win over MHS. Permian hosts Central today, so one of those teams will finish the first half of district play at 3-3 and the other will be at 2-4. If Lee wins today, it would be in a three-way tie for third going into the second half. If Lee loses, it will be 2-4, tied for fifth place and facing an uphill climb in the second half.

Notes: Lee is coming off a strong mental performance in a three-game match against Permian on Tuesday. The Lady Rebels blew a lead in the first game but came back to win the match. Lee's playoff hopes rest on whether Lee can sustain that kind of mental strength... Like Lee, Cooper is also up and down. Four days after upsetting MHS, Cooper lost at Permian. That match was close, though; Mojo won, 17-15, 15-13... Cooper played a non-district match Tuesday against always-tough Amarillo Tascosa, which won, 15-5, 15-8...

Next: Lee will host Midland High Tuesday. The match will begin at about 7:15 p.m.

Six-time Pro Bowl lineman retires

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

FOXBORO, Mass. — Bruce Armstrong was Drew Bledsoe's security blanket for eight years, the left tackle who protected the New England quarterback.

There was nothing Armstrong could do last Sunday about the hard hit that caused bleeding in Bledsoe's chest cavity. For the first time in 15 years, Armstrong is not in a uniform in September.

After playing in a team-record 212 games, six Pro Bowls and one Super Bowl, Armstrong announced his retirement Friday even though he wanted to play another season.

"I always said I wanted to play here, finish my career in one place, and I made no bones about wanting to play another year, but it didn't work out that way," he said. Armstrong did not attend any training camp this summer.

The Patriots are rebuilding with young linemen after going 5-11. So on Sunday, they'll retire his No. 78 during a ceremony before the Indianapolis game and put him in the team's Hall of Fame, waiving the five-year waiting period.

"I do not harbor any bad sentiments toward the franchise," Armstrong said. "When you play for one franchise your whole career, I'll always be a Patriot."

But it was hard for him to watch the hit that injured Bledsoe, who said last season "I still trust him with my life and livelihood on every play."

Bledsoe is expected to miss at least three games after trying to gain extra yards and being knocked out of bounds by Mo Lewis in the New York Jets 10-3 win last Sunday.

"I'd have been the first one to tell him, next time get himself out of bounds," Armstrong said.

Armstrong, 36, rarely bailed out on his teammates or plays. He overcame a devastating knee injury in 1992 and played in four Pro Bowls after that. But as his knee deteriorated in his final seasons, his play declined.

He said he has no regrets about his career, which began as the 23rd player drafted in 1987, out of Louisville. One of the few things he said he'd miss is the camaraderie among teammates.

Perhaps the high point, as well as the low point, of his career came in the 1997 Super Bowl.

Bill Parcells, who led the Patriots there, was the best coach Armstrong played for and "knows almost as much about the game as he thinks he does," Armstrong said with a smile.

But the Patriots lost that Super Bowl to Green Bay 35-21 and Armstrong sobbed in the locker room.

"It was the absolute bottom," he said. "We got so close. The remainder of my career was spent trying to get back there."

He went to two more playoffs after that, but the Patriots won just once, 17-3 over Miami in 1997, before losing in the second round in Pittsburgh.

Throughout the 14 seasons he never lost sight of his primary job, protecting the quarterback. For eight years, that was Bledsoe.

"When you do find somebody that you believe in, somebody that you think can help you win football games, somebody that you know cares about winning as much as you do and it's your job to facilitate him doing his job, yeah, you take it personally," Armstrong said.

Now, it's someone else's job.

But Patriots owner Robert Kraft still recalls Jan. 22, 1994, the day after he bought the team. Parcells called him that night and said they had to give Armstrong a $10 million contract. Kraft agreed to the four-year deal.

"There's no doubt in my mind that this has to be one of the best values we did," Kraft said. "He's one of the classiest players ever to put on a Patriots uniform."

Playing in more games than any other Patriot "meant everything to me," Armstrong said, but on Sunday that uniform will be retired

"It's been good," Armstrong said, "and now it's over."

Islanders pick Osgood in waiver draft

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Goalie Chris Osgood was picked by the New York Islanders from the Detroit Red Wings on Friday, one of nine players selected in the NHL's waiver draft.

Osgood, who helped the Red Wings to consecutive Stanley Cups in 1996-97 and 1997-98, was the first player chosen in the draft. Detroit left him unprotected after trading for star goalie Dominik Hasek in the offseason.

Also moving in the draft were center Sebastien Bordeleau, who went from St. Louis to Minnesota; left wing Kirk Muller, picked by Columbus from Dallas; left wing P.J. Stock, picked by Boston from the New York Rangers; right wing Glen Metropolit, from Washington to Tampa Bay; center Josh Holden, chosen by Carolina from Vancouver and goalie Martin Brochu, picked by Vancouver from Minnesota.

Muller immediately went back to Dallas with the Stars giving Columbus the rights to defenseman Evgeny Petrochinin in exchange for the 35-year-old forward.

The draft also included what amounted to a swap of defensemen with Calgary taking Jamie Allison from Chicago and the Blackhawks claiming Phil Housley from the Flames.

The biggest name to change teams was Osgood, who will make $7.75 million over the next two years and was too expensive to be a backup in Detroit.

Instead, he moves to the Islanders, who have upgraded their roster with the addition of forwards Michael Peca and Alexei Yashin. They signed Peca to a five-year, $20 million contract and agreed to a 10-year deal worth a reported $90 million with Yashin.

"I'm really excited to come to New York," Osgood said. "We have a chance to score a lot of goals this year. The Islanders are a young team, an up-and-coming team with a lot of good players.

"I spent a long time in Detroit and I enjoyed my time, but last week I knew it was time to move on. I had a great time there but with this camp I was waiting and hoping for something to happen so I can have fun playing hockey."

Osgood joins a crowded goaltender situation in New York where the Islanders signed free agent Garth Snow in the offseason and have highly touted Rick DiPietro.

Osgood said Islanders general manager Mike Milbury called him shortly after the draft.

"He said, 'You'll be playing a lot of games and you're our guy,'" Osgood said.

The 28-year-old goalie has 221 career wins and 30 shutouts, second on the Red Wings' career list to Hall of Famer Terry Sawchuk. Osgood was 25-19-4 with a 2.69 goals-against average and one shutout last season.

Detroit general manager Ken Holland was the club's head scout when it drafted Osgood in the third round of the 1991 draft.

"I think the toughest part for me was in June when we were working on acquiring Dominik Hasek," Holland said. "Once we acquired Hasek, this was inevitable.

"Both because of his salary, $4 million is a lot to pay to a backup, especially when the starter is making $8 million — and he's 28-years-old, he's not ready to be a backup. He's been a No. 1 guy for five or six years. I'm disappointed that I wasn't able to get a trade done, we weren't able to get any assets back for him."

Osgood and the Islanders will play in Detroit on Nov. 2.

In Vancouver, the Canucks were looking for a backup to goalie Dan Cloutier after releasing Bob Essensa last summer, and were happy to get Brochu.

"We think that Martin is exactly what we're looking for in terms of age grouping and in terms of salary," said GM Brian Burke. "We think he's a quality goaltender.

Holden, 23, spent most of last season at Kansas City in the IHL. Hurricanes GM Jim Rutherford is happy to have him.

"Josh is a young player with a strong upside," Rutherford said. "He will give us more depth at the center position."

In Tampa, Fla., Lightning GM Rick Dudley said Metropolit "is a player I've known for some time, and I've always liked his grit and his offensive capabilities."

He had seven goals and 18 assists in 45 games with Washington over the last two years.

In Boston, GM Mike O'Connell said the Bruins picked up Stock on the recommendation of coach Robbie Ftorek.

"Although he's not an overly large player, he plays much bigger than his size," O'Connell said. "He's an aggressive player who provides toughness when it's needed and we felt we wanted to add that element to our team."

Group's coordinator thanks middle-of-the-road Baptists

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

David Currie, coordinator of Texas Baptists Committed, stopped in Midland Monday as he made his way through the state to thank middle-of-the-road Baptists for their faithfulness, and to urge them to keep to their common-sense course.

Texas Baptists Committed define themselves as the Baptists who have kept to the "historic purpose and principles originated by the Southern Baptist Convention in 1845," according to their official statement of beliefs. Their major guiding principles include personal relationship with Jesus Christ expressed in the priesthood of the believer, authority of Scripture, autonomy of the local church, separation of church and state, and limited authority of the church's statewide governing body, known as the Convention.

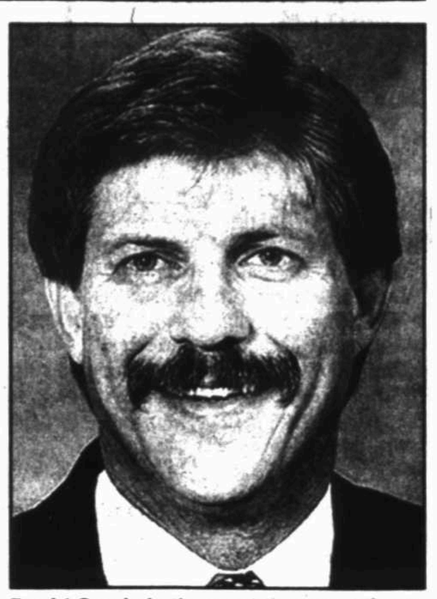

The chasm within the huge Southern Baptist Convention began as little more than a fissure in 1979 when the convention was taken over by conservatives who have for the past two decades demanded allegiance to the doctrine of "inerrancy" of Scripture as defined by the convention. This tightening of the screws on the traditionally independent-thinking Baptists who had espoused no authority other than the Bible, yet cherished the freedom of individual interpretation of that Scripture, turned out to be more than a number of moderate Texas Baptists could bear.

Last year, in response to SBC's call for church leaders and professors in SBC-supported universities to sign a statement of agreement with the doctrine of inerrancy and other fundamentalist tenets and a prohibition of female clergy, the Baptist Convention of Texas cut $5 million from its support of seminaries controlled by the SBC. Previously, the SBC had hit the secular news media front pages with a plank in its platform declaring a wife should "submit herself graciously to the servant leadership of her husband."

The SBC called the withdrawal of support from the BCT an attempt to start a new denomination.

The Rev. Charles Wade, executive director of the BCT, said Texas Baptists Committed have no such agenda, but rather seek to preserve the right of Bap-

Calvary's closing opened door for new school

One of the newest schools in Midland this year is Midland Faith Christian Academy, with 25 students in pre-kindergarten through sixth grade.

The school uses the Sunday school rooms of St. Paul United Methodist Church for classrooms. Principal Don Mullins, who serves the school pro bono, said the furnishings and equipment are kept to a minimum, so as to make them portable.

"On Wednesdays, we put the rooms back in shape for St. Paul's Wednesday activities, and on Fridays, we get them ready for Sunday. There are a few things we can leave on the walls, but we have to take our little tables and chairs out and bring in their larger table and chairs."

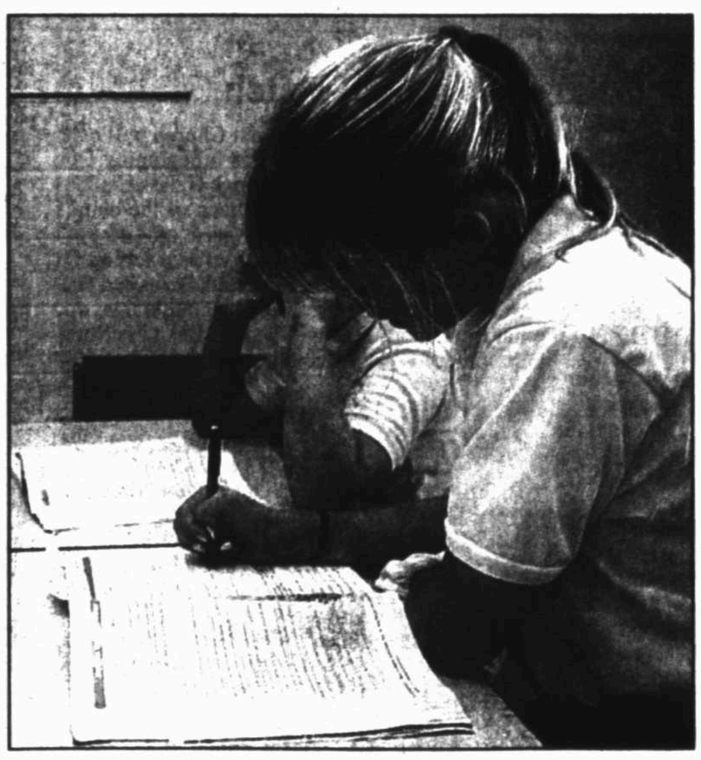

Midland Faith Christian Academy is the outgrowth of what was left when Calvary Christian Academy closed.

Joe Gregg, a member of Calvary Assembly of God Church and a former board member of the Calvary Christian Academy, said closing was a hard thing to do, but that it seemed unmistakably to be the will of God.

"We struggled with it immensely, but it was simply a matter of economics," said Gregg. "We had put down roots there, but then it was plain to us that God was telling us to uproot. But when some of the parents decided to start another school, we were glad to help them in any way that we could."

Mullins, whose wife had taught at Calvary, said although Calvary's fate had been almost certain at the end of school last May, the parents and teachers had

Christian life is learning to live between treats, understanding gift of the bread of life

Williams

A friend said this week, "You know, we're a lot like our pets. If we get a kitty treat one night, we expect a kitty treat the next night."

After I quit laughing, I remembered this summer when our cat, Tiger Zebra Woo, whined and mewed at his kitty dish, disappointed not to find his milk. I looked him straight in his sad kitty eyes and explained, "Kitty Woo, we stopped giving you milk as a treat because it was making you throw up and have diarrhea all over our house. Surely you understand."

He didn't.

But he stopped getting sick.

This weekend, we moved our worship services out of the church and into St. Francis Hall because of the construction the church is undergoing. We also introduced a new, auxiliary hymnal. One of the new songs was a song I'd known from before that I used to love. The gist of the message is that God calls us to help Him in the world, and we respond, "Here I am!"

I have now decided there are several responses we can make when God calls us, and each response has its biblical counterpart. In the first flush of excitement of a new ministry, we eagerly raise our hand, "Oh yes! Here I am! It's going to be thrilling and adventurous and I will feel holy and fulfilled! Doing the work of the Lord is so rewarding!" Isaiah is the biblical example of this kind of eagerness.

Then we eat sand in the desert, or go deaf in the silence, or run into all the grumpy people who don't appreciate what we are doing for them in the name of God. The next time God calls us, we are more likely to be like Moses. "Oh, no. I really don't want to. I'm a crummy public speaker. Please find someone else who is more qualified." We may even be able to weasel out temporarily.

But then God calls again, once more knocking at our door. By this time we've learned the price of obedience (as well as the price of disobedience). Even though we know what's going to be involved if we say yes, we must say yes because all else is dust. When God called Abraham to sacrifice his son, Abraham responded with the pained reluctance of knowing both the costs of faith and the rewards.

When my daughter was a baby, she once spied the communion bread at the altar and pointed with her pudgy little finger, shouting, "Snack! Snack!" When she grew up, she learned the bread on the altar is not just a snack, it is the bread of life. Though we want the Christian life to be filled with kitty treats and snacks, the mature Christian life is learning to live between the treats and understanding the gift of the bread of life.

We will be called by God in the days to come, both in our personal journeys and in our collective journey as a nation. We may even be called, like Abraham, to give up our sons. Yet, as Christians, we know the only response to God's call is, "Here I am."

GROUP: Mission statement emphasizes priority of Christ

(From 1C)

tists to form their own understanding of Scripture as they read it.

"We're simply trying to defend what the Baptist movement has always been about, and to be free from the oppression of Creedalism," Wade said.

Currie, speaking to Midland and Odessa Baptists during a lunchtime meeting at Furr's cafeteria in Midland, said he and Wade and other members of Texas Baptists Committed are ready to move on, and that their most important job now is to educate people who may not be aware of where their support is going.

"Most pastors didn't surrender to the ministry to fight a battle within their own denomination. They want to visit people, pray with people, preach and baptize and be ministers, but I'm so grateful to you that you realized the significance of this and have supported the Baptists Committed. Without you, we would have lost our state convention," Currie said.

This year, Texas Baptists Committed joined the Mainstream Baptist Network, a growing coalition of autonomous Baptist groups in various states across the nation dedicated to combating religious fundamentalism.

The Mainstream Baptist Network mission statement emphasizes the priority of Christ, encourages the unity of traditional Baptist missions, the promotion of biblical principles while opposing rigid adherence to narrow interpretations of those principles and the honoring of "the diversity and ministry of all persons."

Currie urged the Baptists already on board to encourage their friends and fellow Baptists to join the movement toward Mainstream as a means of moving back to their traditional roots.

"People have been told that Texas Baptists don't believe the Bible," said Currie. "There's a lot of misinformation out there."

In a speech last May in Virginia, Currie reiterated the TBC's reasons for the stand against fundamentalism.

"You know what it means to be Baptist.

"John 1:17 says, 'For the law was given through Moses, but grace and truth came through Jesus Christ.'

"This text is significant because it describes the battle we are in today, one as old as the first century.

"The battle centers on these questions: 1. Is Jesus about law? Or 2. Is Jesus about grace and truth?

"The Jesus preached by many fundamentalists resembles the character of God preached by some of the religious leaders of Jesus' day. They saw a God who was narrow, petty, legalistic, judgmental and more interested in the surface details of the law than in its spiritual intentionality.

"Some religious leaders of that day focused on being technically right, but not morally right. They opposed a compassionate interpretation of the law.

"Thus, they criticized Jesus when he healed on the Sabbath (technically the wrong day), talked to women in public (technically the wrong sex) or traveled through Samaria (technically the wrong race.).

"Many modern fundamentalists also preach a Jesus who is judgmental, angry and mean-spirited. For them, what's good is less important than what's legal."

Curry, who said Monday he was excited by the "new vision of Texas Baptists Committed," has written, "Fundamentalism is in danger of locking the Bible's truth in time and space, making the bible irrelevant for modern problems and situations.

"We must rescue it for our generation and generations to come."

continued to pray and to hope.

"Calvary officially closed Sept. 1, but in early August, a group of parents, teachers and board members got together and decided to start another school," said Mullins, who retired in 1998 from his position as instructor in computer science at Midland College.

"My wife was recovering from surgery when they called the meeting, so I went in her place, and when they asked if I'd serve as principal, I agreed.

"Calvary donated all their furniture and equipment to us, and St. Paul UMC allowed us to use their Sunday School rooms.

"I'm acting as principal on a voluntary basis, and the teachers are working for very little, and we're still working out the details, but God has blessed us."

Although Midland Faith has written its articles of incorporation, there is still the application for 501 (c3) status to be approved, and a serious need for funding.

"We're working with Cookie Wettendorf at the Management Center of the Permian Basin, and we're writing some grants, but I understand it's pretty tough out there," said Mullins.

"We had a booth at Rock the Desert, and we're planning to sell calendars to help with funding."

The school — which uses the Bible-based and accelerated A Beca curriculum Calvary had used — has two children in pre-K, three in kindergarten, six first-graders, three second-graders, seven third-graders, and two fourth-graders.

Mullins said there have been other former Calvary parents who expressed an interest in Midland Faith, but they haven't yet made a commitment.

"They may be waiting until mid-term, just to see how things are going," he said. "Meanwhile, we're working with the pastors of several churches who have agreed to come out and hold chapel services, and we're in hopes that those churches will support us. We shoot from the hip a lot of times, but we do know that God has blessed us.

"Our kids are far ahead of most other schools scholastically, and that, we know is a blessing."

Church launches 'Hallmark' style marketing drive

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — As the camera focuses on a misty waterfall, a woman offscreen reads a letter of longing.

"I miss you," she says. "I miss the sound of your voice, our late-night conversations. No one knows you like I know you."

It seems like a commercial for a greeting card until she signs off, "Love, God."

The TV commercial, named "Love Letters," is part of a $20-million national marketing effort by the United Methodist Church to attract new members and renew interest among existing ones.

The ads began airing on Sept. 4 on CBS and 15 cable networks in a campaign the 8.5-million member denomination has dubbed, "Igniting Ministry."

Steven Horswill-Johnston, executive director of the church effort, said the ads will avoid church jargon to try to appeal to people searching for meaning in their lives.

"We know that television is primarily the language of the people," Horswill-Johnston said. "We are trying to speak in this language, and we have not done it to date and it's time in this new millennium to do it."

The ads were pulled for four days after the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, replaced with a single ad encouraging prayer.

But the commercials are back, and will be reinforced by the denomination's 36,000 churches through local radio and newspaper ads, billboards, door-to-door leaflets and other means. A total of 14 commercials and 36 radio ads will be used.

The commercials target women and single men between the ages of 25 and 54 who do not attend church or claim any religious affiliation. Some spots feature a man's voice. Some are also recorded in Spanish and Korean.

"People come with a variety of different belief systems, and they want to be accepted. They need to know that we are going to accept them at the door as they are," said Horswill-Johnston, who leads the campaign headquarters in Nashville.

Once the potential members walk into church, congregations will be ready to greet them.

The Methodists are hosting regional training sessions to show members how to welcome newcomers and make them feel a part of the congregation. For example, congregants will be encouraged to greet visitors within the first three minutes of their arrival rather than wait until the end of the service when people may slip out unnoticed.

Robert Rizzo, vice president of churchmarketing.com, an online firm specializing in marketing for churches and nonprofits, said the Methodists are the first to realize "there is greater strength in promoting the Methodist organization than in just trying to promote each individual local church."

Local congregations of all denominations have advertised for years, and some denominations have embarked on low-budget regional campaigns.

However, churches have shied away from national campaigns for fear of appearing manipulative and inappropriate, Rizzo said. Bureaucracy has been another obstacle, since most churches have an organizational structure that requires several levels of approval before a final decision is made.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has distributed public service announcements for some 25 years to TV and radio stations for national use. The ads are meant to reinforce family and personal values rather than convert people to the Mormon faith, but they have prompted people to attend churches of various denominations, Rizzo said.

The United Methodist commercials will air for at least four years during the fall, when the networks debut their new TV shows, and the holiday seasons of Christmas and Easter, when more people attend church.

Prison board hears about guard overtime, says it's not a 'serious concern'

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — Overtime pay to Texas prison guards is soaring because of the continuing shortage of corrections officers but prison officials said Friday the expenses were within budget and not a serious concern.

"It's certainly not a crisis," said Texas Board of Criminal Justice Chairman Mac Stringfellow. "We're not jeopardizing security. Security is never compromised."

The prison system is about 3,000 officers short of its authorized 26,000-member force, continuing a trend that began several years ago and mirroring the shortages faced by prison systems in other states.

To accommodate for the shortage, Texas officers worked extra hours to the tune of $3.33 million in August, the fourth straight month overtime expenses for corrections officers have topped $3 million.

For the same month a year ago, overtime costs for guards was $2.86 million.

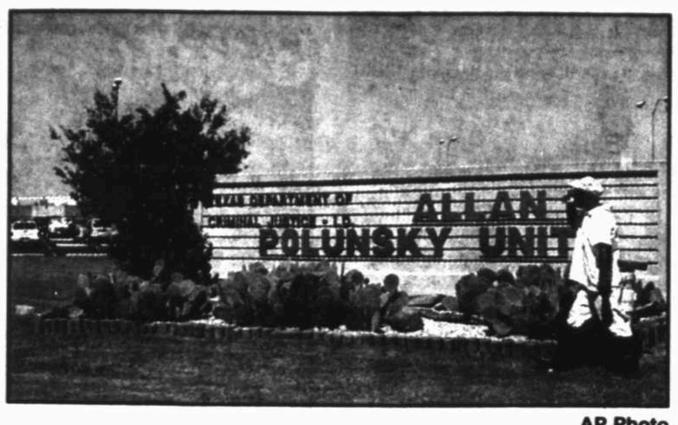

More dramatic, however, are comparisons for earlier in the year, with May's $3.49 million more than double the $1.54 million spent on officer overtime in May 2000.

Overall, overtime for fiscal year 2000 was $23 million and nearly $40 million in the recently completed fiscal year 2001, board member Al Moran said. The increases nearly paralleled the growth in the guard shortage, which went from 3 percent in 1999, 6.8 percent in 2000 and 10.75 percent in 2001.

Gary Johnson, executive director of the prison system, said some of the unspent money earmarked for regular salaries for the vacant positions is being used to cover some of the overtime expenses.

He also said he was optimistic that with 630 officers now in training, there were signs the shortage problem could be turning around.

"For the first time in quite some time, I think we actually are projecting a net gain for the month of September," he said, saying the force should grow overall by about 100 for the month.

AP Photo
A prison trustee walks past the new sign that greets visitors to Texas' newly-named Allan Polunsky Unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice in Livingston Wednesday. The unit, which houses death row inmates, will be dedicated Friday.

"Obviously, you've got to grow more than that, but it's better than not losing them."

Texas recruiters have been to six neighboring states trying to lure applicants.

Officials also said a pay raise and enhanced career ladder authorized for corrections officers just now was taking effect and could help with attrition of existing employees and attracting new people.

"That certainly would cut down on the overtime," Stringfellow said.

Johnson said a slowdown in the economy also could lead more people to consider prison work as a career choice.

The new pay package will boost wages by nearly 10 percent. A starting correctional officer will make $22,393 annually. At eight years, it will reach $31,068. The previous top was $28,380.

In board action, the panel approved a change in the prison system's policy regarding use of deadly force against inmates.

Guards no longer will be required to fire warning shots and disabling shots at fleeing prisoners. Prison system attorneys said they were worried about liability in case shots ricocheted or caused damage because they weren't fired at an inmate.

In training, officers were instructed to "hit the body mass," lawyer Carl Reynolds said. At the prisons, however, the policy was to fire a warning shot.

"We're giving people a mixed message," he said.

Johnson said the use of gunfire was rare and was meant for times when an inmate was trying to escape.

"If it's time for deadly force, do you really have time to fire a warning shot?" he said. "If deadly force is justified at the moment, that's just an extra second the guy is running away from you.

"If we come to the conclusion that deadly force is appropriate, let's just go ahead. Obviously, the person running from you knows they're not supposed to be doing that."

The board also approved the renaming of several facilities, including the Retrieve Unit in Angleton, which will become the Wayne Scott Unit, named for the recently retired executive director of the prison system.

Later Friday, the board and top prison officials gathered just outside Livingston for the formal dedication of the Allan Polunsky Unit, named for the former prison board chairman. That prison formerly was named after Charles Terrell, a former board member who expressed reservations that his name became synonymous with death row, which is at the Livingston prison.

When it was first named after Terrell, death row was at the Ellis Unit near Huntsville.

Heart transplant recipient could walk next week

By Kristen Hays
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Two days after becoming the world's third recipient of a self-contained mechanical heart, a man was resting comfortably and may take his first post-surgical steps next week, doctors said Friday.

Dr. O.H. Frazier, chief of cardiopulmonary transplantation at the Texas Heart Institute at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital in Houston, said the man had been desperately ill for a long time.

"Certainly this man would have never left the hospital alive without this effort," said Frazier, who performed the procedure on Wednesday.

The man, whose identity is being withheld, received the AbioCor device in a six-hour operation.

The heart is intended for patients with end-stage heart failure who have more than a 70 percent chance of dying within a month.

The patient's cardiologist, Dr. Reynolds Delgado, said before the surgery the man "couldn't even complete a sentence without gasping for air."

Danvers, Mass.-based Abiomed Inc., maker of the device, has a "quiet period" policy to withhold personal information until the medical team and the patient's family agree at a later time.

The same device was implanted successfully in two other men earlier at Jewish Hospital in Louisville, Ky.

University of Louisville surgeons implanted the first AbioCor heart July 2 at Jewish Hospital. The first patient, Robert Tools of Franklin, Ky., is gaining weight and venturing outside the hospital. Doctors say his kidneys, liver and lungs are functioning normally.

The second, Tom Christerson of Central City, Ky., is still in the early stages of recovery following his Sept. 13 operation, but doctors said his condition is improving.

Frazier, who spent more than 10 years helping develop the AbioCor replacement heart, visited Tools at the Louisville hospital two days after the landmark surgery.

He said after the visit the technology has worked better than its developers anticipated.

He described the Houston patient as "desperately ill for a long time" with heart failure and unable to undergo a transplant because of lung complications.

Frazier said the goal is for the mechanical heart to keep the man alive for 60 days in the hope the lung problem will improve, giving doctors time to reassess the possibility for a heart transplant.

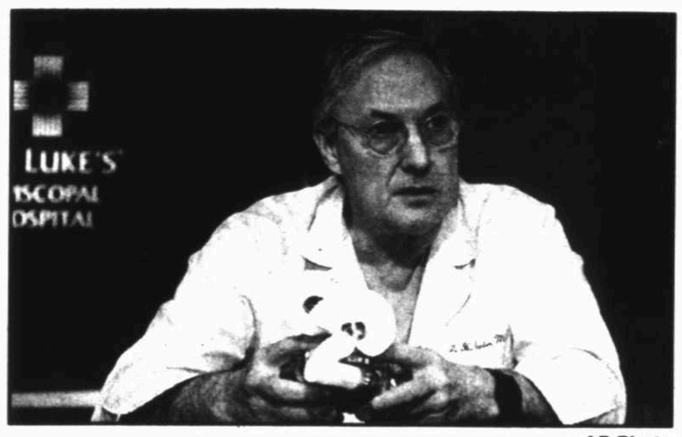

The internal pump is made of plastic and titanium and weighs less than 2 pounds. It is powered through the skin by an external battery pack.

Initially, only five people nationwide can receive the device.

Approved sites in addition to the Houston and Louisville hospitals include Brigham and Women's Hospital and Massachusetts General Hospital, both in Boston, and UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles.

Tropical Storm Allison's floods, which swamped the Texas Medical Center in June, interfered with research on the project at the heart institute when labs were destroyed.

Founded in 1962 by heart surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley, the Texas Heart Institute was the site of the first successful heart transplant in the United States, the first implantation of a total artificial heart, and has pioneered the use of mechanical devices as bridges to transplant and the development of new applications for stents and stent-like devices.

Allen: Subject of terrorist attacks to be fair game for indie filmmakers

LONDON — Woody Allen says Hollywood studios will be too afraid of stirring public opinion to make films about the terrorist attacks in the United States.

But the subject will be "fair game" for independent filmmakers, the actor-writer-director said.

"I think there will be a lot of trepidation in commercial cinema about that subject matter. I am sure the people in Hollywood, whose main drive in films is to make money, would feel any reference or use of the word hijack or any reference to anything violent or remotely associated to that terrible tragedy would lose customers for them," Allen said in remarks Thursday night at Britain's National Theatre.

"That will be the only criterion that would matter and so they will force the minions that work for them to remove these things from their movies or not make movies about that subject," he said.

Allen said he would not make a film about the attacks because his work focuses on comedy and psychology. Other filmmakers, though, could offer valuable, artistic insights into the tragedy, he said.

"If the idea occurred to me I wouldn't hesitate," Allen said.

LOS ANGELES — The legal troubles for "The Price is Right" host Bob Barker continue, as two former female employees filed wrongful termination lawsuits.

Sherrell Paris and Sharon Friem filed the lawsuits Thursday against the show's production company, Mark Goodson Productions, and the show's 77-year-old host, claiming they were fired in retaliation for their testimony against Barker in a lawsuit that another former employee filed.

Barker's publicist could not be reached for comment.

Paris said she'd worked for the production company since 1978 and was an executive assistant for the game show. Friem was an editorial consultant for the show.

The lawsuit alleges both women were fired on Oct. 19 in retaliation for "having testified truthfully, and against (Barker's) interests, in an action brought by Barker against model Holly Hallstrom," who was a former model on the show.

Hallstrom sued Barker and his attorneys last September for malicious prosecution, shortly after Barker dropped his five-year libel lawsuit against her. The libel lawsuit came after Hallstrom alleged she had been fired from the show after 19 years because she was too old and too fat.

Both Paris and Friem have asked for lost wages and damages, based on allegations of emotional distress. Paris claimed Barker "became distant, hostile, abrupt, snappish, would dismiss her from his dressing room, and generally wanted nothing to do with her" after she refused to take his side in the lawsuit.

BURBANK, Calif. — It's been nearly a half-century since the TV show "American Bandstand" got audiences dancing in their living rooms. Now, host Dick Clark, the man known as America's oldest teen-ager, will relive those memorable years.

In the spring, ABC will mark the 50th anniversary of "American Bandstand" with a two-hour prime-time special. Clark, 71, will show classic moments from the shows and new performances by music superstars spanning five decades.

"Time marches on, doesn't it?" Clark said.

Things have changed since the days when baby boomer entertainers pointed to Elvis Presley, Chuck Berry or the Beach Boys as major influences on their careers, he told The Associated Press on Thursday. The new generation looks back a mere decade for those influences.

"What's shocking to me is people now say they were influenced by Madonna," he said.

LOS ANGELES — Scott Bakula says he's thrilled to be "the first captain on the first starship to go out" on UPN's new "Enterprise," the fifth TV series in the "Star Trek" franchise.

Set in the 22nd century, "Enterprise" reaches back some 100 years before Capt. James T. Kirk and his crew first traveled the galaxies.

Bakula, who plays Capt. Jonathan Archer, says he's also attracted to the challenge of balancing the series' peaceful message with action-adventure fun.

"That's where the effort to make it as truthful and honest as we can is so important," he told The Associated Press. "You want to give the audience as much as they are giving you."

DURHAM, N.C. — Kevin Costner is returning to Durham, some 12 years after filming "Bull Durham" here.

Costner will be the featured celebrity at the first fund-raiser of the ALS Association Carolina Chapter.

The Feb. 2 event at the Carolina Theatre will honor Major League Baseball's Jim "Catfish" Hunter, a North Carolina native who died in 1999 after battling amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

ALS, or Lou Gehrig's disease, attacks specialized nerve cells called motor neurons, which control the movement of voluntary muscles.

Costner played Crash Davis in 1988's "Bull Durham." The character was inspired by the actual Carolina League catcher of the same name. Davis recently died at age 82 in Gastonia.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Sept. 29, 2001:
Emphasize the quality of your day-to-day life. Let your work reflect your interests, and your health will mirror your well-being. You develop new habits and patterns. Express your creativity and ingenuity in all facets of your life. Daydreaming and time alone replenish your imagination. If you are single, check out any interest with care, as you could hook up with someone emotionally unavailable. Take good care of yourself. If you are attached, you often might react by feeling insecure.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Events push you in a new direction. You have a lot to daydream or think about. Brainstorm with a dear friend. Perhaps you should invite one person to join you in an adventure. You renew your outlook when you get away from your norm. Tonight: Play it intimate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Surround yourself with those who care. You might opt to discuss a professional decision, knowing that others do care and want to pitch in. Once you clear your mind, you're ready to join your friends. Tonight: Wherever your friends are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Sometimes you carry far more power than you desire. You might want to defray some of the responsibility. Have a discussion with someone who cares and understands your situation. Think in terms of scaling down, doing only what you want. Tonight: Bring others together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Gather others together for a fun afternoon or outing. Whether you go to see a play or visit a museum, you relax. Let your imagination flow. Share more of your core self with a close associate. Understand that a loved one wants to indulge you. Tonight: Let it all hang out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You might not feel in control, but what is evident is how much someone cares. Discussions remain on a one-on-one level. At this point, your vulnerability magnetizes more than your charm. Let the natural warmth between you and another build. Tonight: Add romance to a partnership.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You could make a call or two, but quite obviously, others seek you out. Surround yourself with people, as you won't want to be alone. What becomes clear is how many choices you have. Play the field, wander or maybe just visit with a couple of friends. Tonight: Wherever you are, it won't be alone.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Make it OK to further a project or share a hobby with a friend. You don't always need to be center stage or part of an entourage. Allow your imagination to flow. Others delight in swapping ideas as you share more of yourself. Express caring through your actions. Tonight: Put your feet up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Allow your imagination to meet a child's fantasy. Together you have a ball. Others choose to be more childlike with loved ones, perhaps your sweetie. Adding lightness to relationships adds to the trust and exchange. If single, someone you meet could be significant. Tonight: Romp away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Opt to spend a cozy day at home, even if you get involved in a project. Your sense of humor emerges when with a friend who reads your mind cold. Laughter comes out of nowhere, perhaps making others wonder. Invite friends over soon. Tonight: Stay close to home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Don't just think about making a call. Do just that. Others are thrilled to hear your voice. Be spontaneous and come up with plans. Give up an old grievance. Shop for a bargain with friends. Tonight: You don't need to go far.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Expenses could go out of whack very easily, and you seem to not care. Remember that there is a tomorrow. Indulge loved ones and friends as much as you want. To express your affection, just be authentic. Tonight: Keep costs down.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Finally, you beam and draw more of what you want. Others respond to your innuendo as well as to your requests. Just don't postpone expressing yourself. An invitation might simply be too good to resist. Make time for a special loved one. Tonight: You decide.

Events & Entertainment Schedule

10am-3pm	Face Painting, Lindy Bell	1:00pm	Daddy Olympics
10am-3pm	Harlan the Balloon Man	1:30pm	Diaper Dash
12 Noon	Diaper Dash	2:00pm	Granny Grand Prix
12:30pm	Mom's Sticky Situation	2:30-3pm	Grand Prize Giveaways

Diaper Dash:
On your mark, get set, GO! Crawlers will compete in this adorable race (on a soft surface) to see whom is the best crawler this side of the Rio Grande. The first baby to cross the finish line will win a $250 gift certificate. Babies must be registered prior to the race. Four names will be drawn prior to race.

Daddy Olympics:
Calling all Dad's . . . It's time to show off your parental prowess! Dads will compete in an obstacle course filled with surprises. The lucky contestants will showcase their baby skills by mixing formula, bathing, diapering and dressing a life-like doll. First "super dad" to cross the finish line with his bundle of joy wins the grand prize! Interested daddies must pre-register at the Baby Expo prior to the event. Four names will be drawn for the competition.

Mom's Sticky Situation:
Mom, it's a hectic morning. The phone is ringing, the baby's crying and you just remembered that this is your week to make sandwiches for your kindergartner's class! The trick is that you have to assemble as many peanut butter and jelly sandwiches as you can before noon and it's 11:59! Your juggling skills will be put to the test in this exciting and fun race. The mom with the most sandwiches assembled within the allottpd time is the winner. Interested moms must pre-register prior to the event. Four names will be drawn for the competition.

Granny Grand Prix:
It's Granny's day with her precious grandbaby. It's been a long day filled with laughter and lots of food (mostly sweets) and you're little angel is a mess! Mom calls to inform you that she has to work late, dad's out of town and the baby is scheduled to take his first baby picture, and she needs you to take him! The race is on! You have to finish feeding, clean-up, dress, assemble diaper bag and transport junior in record time. Mario An-Granny to the rescue! This is a timed event. The granny with the best time wins the grand prize. Interested grandmas must register prior to the event. Four names will be drawn for the competition.

GENERAL INFORMATION:

To ensure the integrity of our newspaper, for the benefit of our readers and advertisers, the Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right the revise, reclassify, edit or refuse any advertising. We also reserve the right to convert all advertising into digital and/or audiotext formats within our other products and services.

Please check your ad the first day it appears, and, if you find a mistake, please call our office at 682-6222 so we can correct the error immediately. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. If an error does occur, you can choose to rerun your ad once for free, or we'll gladly refund the cost of the portion of the ad affected by the error. If an ad is inadvertently omitted, we will assume liability up to the cost of the ad itself – consequently, we will publish your ad in our next available edition or refund the price you have paid.

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classifications require payment in advance. Credit applications are required for business accounts.

We welcome your suggestions or comments. Please call: Brandi Alexander, Telephone Sales Supervisor, 687-8813.

PLACING AN AD:

Call 682-6222, Monday through Friday, from 8a.m. – 6p.m.

A friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❸ Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson", "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.

Traditional luxury touring:
2002 Cadillac Eldorado Coupe

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

For nearly 50 years, the Eldorado has helped distinguish Cadillac from the competition. The flagship Cadillac coupe has been a technological showcase in recent years, debuting new groundbreaking innovations.

Last year, production of the Cadillac Eldorado was shifted to the Lansing Craft Centre in Lansing, Mich. This move was designed to create manufacturing efficiencies, a better balance between available facilitates, market demand and improving overall quality.

Available in ESC and ETC models, the Cadillac coupe is powered by two versions of the improved Northstar 4.6L V-8 engine bolted to the silky smooth 4T80-E four-speed electronic automatic with overdrive and viscous-type converter clutch. Additional Northstar technology, including Magnasteer variable-assist power steering and independent four-wheel suspension, make driving this car an impressive experience. The ETC adds such powerful performance and control goodies as the StabiliTrak control system and a continuously variable road-sensing suspension combined with electronic level control.

Cadillac did not skimp on the creature comforts either, with a thoughtful layout of displays and controls as well as improving the feel of the front seats. The positioning of the climate controls are located in the center console for ease of use.

Rear-seat passengers were not neglected, with "B" pillar-mounted grab handles to aid in entry and exit. The rear seat is a roomy place that features an armrest and two cupholders. Two adults are easily accommodated without problem. A low lift-over highlights the trunk opening, with slightly more than 15 cubic feet of nicely finished cargo area available.

Ratings & specifications

Engine performance numbers for the two versions of the Northstar 4.6 V-8 are as follows: 275 hp at 5,600 rpm and 300 ft/lbs of torque at 4,000 rpm (ESC coupe) and 300 hp at 6,000 rpm and 295 ft/lbs of torque at 4,400 rpm (ETC coupe). EPA fuel economy is 18 city/27 highway using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids easily accessible but not clearly marked.

Standard safety equipment includes dual front airbags, four-wheel disc brakes with antilock, all-speed traction control, daytime running lights, fog lamps, PassKey II theft deterrent system, front cornering lamps, retained accessory power, automatic programmable power door lock system and remote keyless entry. ETC adds StabiliTrak chassis control system, continuously variable road-sensing suspension and Rainsense wiper system.

StabiliTrak is available as an option for the ESC coupe as part of the $2,900 ESC Luxury Package. This package also includes a wood trim steering wheel, 16-inch chrome wheels and Bose AM/FM CD stereo system.

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the Cadillac Eldorado begins at $38,306 for the base model and $40,809 for the ETC. Destination charge adds $745. Dealers report an average supply of the Eldorado, so finding one should not be a problem.

Continuing Improvement:
2002 Chevrolet Malibu Sedan

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Designed with high standards for quality, reliability and value in mind for families, the Chevrolet Malibu has become a symbol of American excellence. For 2002, the midsize sedan receives an upgraded audio system featuring a single disc CD player standard. The LS sedan gets a new 100-watt, two-channel subwoofer system standard. In addition, front and rear floor mats are standard for both models.

Now built at General Motors' Lansing, Mich., assembly complex, the Malibu is available in base and LS trim levels. The LG8 3100 V-6 engine is now the sole powerplant available for the sedan. GM powertrain's smooth-shifting 4T40-E four-speed electronic automatic transmission with overdrive is standard. A manual transmission is not offered.

The Malibu exterior sheetmetal bears a strong family resemblance to the larger Impala sedan. A optional rear spoiler, $175, for the LS adds a sleek look. Aluminum wheels, body-color front and rear mud guards, Solar-Ray glass for windshield and backglass, wheel covers and two-piece door trim round out appearance enhancements.

It is both the fancy stuff and the neat stuff built into the car that make it so fantastic. There is a cupholder to the left of the steering wheel for those who need a place to put hot beverages during the morning commute. This is in addition to the 100,000 mile spark plugs, five-year antifreeze, and a sealed-for-life automatic transmission.

On the road, this car can move! The rigid body structure of the sedan enables precise turning of the suspension resulting in an effective balance of good handling and a smooth ride. The standard four-wheel independent suspension with MacPherson coil-over-struts in the front and a "tri-link" rear suspension help provide a comfortable ride and responsive handling. Noise, vibration and harshness are reduced as well as the feeling of "rear end slide" in harsh cornering. P215/60R15 blackwall touring tires are standard on both models.

Inside the cabin, occupants in the Malibu are treated to a well thought-out space, with wonderful outward visibility, comfortable seating – front and rear – and good placement for displays and controls. The LS features standard assist handles located in the headliners to help with entry and exit, in addition to power door locks with lockout protection. Fold down split rear seats are also standard on the LS. The trunk can hold 17.3 cubic feet of cargo.

Ratings & specifications

Engine performance numbers are 170 hp at 5,200 rpm and 190 lb/ft of torque at 4,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy figures are 20 city/29 highway using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are clearly marked and easy to reach.

Standard safety/security equipment for the Malibu includes dual front airbags, four-wheel anti-lock brakes, daytime running lights, side door beams, battery rundown protection and PassLock theft deterrent system. LS adds fog lamps, remote keyless entry and power door locks with lockout protection.

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price begins at $17,385 for the base model to $19,590 for the LS sedan. Destination charge adds $585. Local dealers report a good supply of Malibu sedans in stock.
