

The $1.6 billion heart of EPA scandals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter saw the "superfund" — $1.6 billion earmarked to clean up the deadly residues of America's chemical revolution — as one of his biggest environmental achievements.

For Ronald Reagan, the "superfund" is a super headache — complete with a contempt of Congress citation, tales of paper shredders and allegations of political corruption.

And those controversies of the last two months come on top of criticism that the administration has missed every deadline for getting the "superfund" program underway, has been stingy in handing out money for cleanups and timid about forcing responsible chemical companies to pay.

"From the day this administration walked in, they have done everything they can to frustrate the intent of Congress in passing the law," says Lester Brown, a House staff expert on hazardous waste.

Critics say only five sites — out of 420 on a national priority list — have been totally cleaned up, and only $104 million had been spent through the end of last year of $525 million collected in the fund.

EPA officials say it is not surprising that only five sites have been totally cleaned up. Big dumps will take four years or longer to finish, officials say.

But one White House source, who spoke on the condition he not be identified, admitted that the overall EPA controversy has "spotlighted the need to look at the way the 'superfund' operated."

Such a turn of events was not on the horizon when Congress, responding to the Love Canal disaster in New York, passed the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act in December 1980.

The law authorized taxes to be levied on the oil and chemical industry for five years and put into a fund dubbed the "superfund." The money collected would be spent to clean up hundreds of inactive chemical dumps that dot the countryside.

Carter hailed the law as a "landmark in its scope and in its impact on preserving the environmental quality of our country."

With the 1980 election, the Reagan administration took charge of the "superfund." Despite proclamations that "superfund" was its No. 1 environmental priority, the administration has come under fire for not pressing guilty companies harder to pay for clean-ups.

The problem is that the fund's $1.6 billion is expected to pay for cleaning up only 170 sites. To cover the other sites on the list of 420, Congress expected to recover costs from the companies responsible.

"The law simply said establish a national priority list of at least 400 sites. It does not mandate that they be cleaned up," said William Hedeman, director of the EPA "superfund" office. "A lot of them are going to present problems that are so costly to correct, that the fund will not be able to deal with them."

The administration has stressed voluntary settlements with companies, rather than lawsuits. Critics call those "sweetheart deals" and point out that the administration has yet to sue a single company for the maximum damages.

Rains drench California

Storm system hits Gulf states

By The Associated Press

Subtropical storms spawned in the Gulf of Mexico blew through the Southeast, disabling an oil rig and killing a pilot in Florida, while rain and high winds slammed into California, causing mudslides and a soggy reception for Queen Elizabeth II.

Sunday's violent weather-maker along the Gulf Coast came off a lingering jetstream system that has sent storms pulsing into the southern states for the past week, said Nolan Duke of the National Weather Service at Kansas City.

"We've had a jet stream pattern from the southern tip of Texas to the southern tip of Florida," Duke said today. "This sets up a pattern of Gulf Coast storms. The energy is there."

In California, Duke said, a Pacific cold front created storms that buffeted the West Coast through the weekend, cutting electrical power in the Los Angeles area and sending two Bay Area homes sliding on their foundations late Sunday.

The pilot of a twin-engine cargo plane died when his craft crashed near Brooksville, Fla., 35 miles northeast of Tampa, authorities said.

In the wind-whipped Gulf of Mexico, workers aboard a floating oil rig that foundered in high seas managed to stabilize it late Sunday, but the craft was left partially submerged.

The rig, about two-thirds the size of a football field, was being towed by four tugboats about 80 miles off the coast from Galveston, Texas, when it began taking on water in one of its pontoon compartments.

A crew of six men stayed aboard to try to steady the vessel, a Coast Guard spokesman said, but was evacuated when the platform lost its derrick and began slowly to sink.

Heavy seas and gale-force winds of 50- to 60-knots nearly sank a tugboat about 130 miles off the Louisiana coast today when the boat began taking on water, but the seven-man crew later located the leak and stabilized the boat.

Tow trucks were busy rescuing stalled and abandoned cars along U.S. Highway 1 in Fort Lauderdale.

Jaime Meza hearing set

Jaime Moriel Meza, who is charged with the murder of Jose Carlos Soto on August 14, 1982, will have a pretrial hearing on March 8 at 10 a.m. in 223rd District Court.

Meza is charged with firing six shots at Soto during a Mexican-American dance in the Tex' S Rose Lounge, 758 W. Brown, on the night of August 16.

Soto was given first aid at the scene by Pampa police officers and was transferred to Coronado Community Hospital where he was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge.

Prestidge ordered an autopsy, which showed that Soto had been hit by five of the six shots, believed to be from a .22 caliber rifle. Soto was reportedly playing pool in the bar when he was shot by a man standing in the back door. He was surrounded by nearly a dozen people at the time of the shooting.

Meza, 23, who was living in Pampa at the time, was arrested a month later in El Paso, where authorities believed he might flee to his native Mexico.

He was arraigned on September 27 before Prestidge, who denied him bond. Meza has been confined in Gray County Jail since his arraignment.

Neither David Martindale, Meza's lawyer, or District Attorney Guy Hardin could be reached for comment about the case this morning.

Governors' meeting

Governors seek better management

WASHINGTON (AP) — Governors, agitated over the financial state of their states, were taking their case for better management at the top to President Reagan and Federal Reserve Board Chief Paul Volcker today.

State chief executives attending the annual winter conference of the National Governors' Association planned a breakfast meeting with Volcker and then were to meet with the White House for a private session with Reagan.

Certain to come up was the governors' effort to gain a voice in the overall design of the federal budget, including demands for less defense spending and more taxes if necessary to restrain booming deficits.

A resolution for the first time injecting governors into national budget decisions was approved by the executive committee Sunday with one dissenting vote, despite doubts expressed by all sides.

Some Republicans were concerned that the resolution might be seen as an attack on the president. But Democrats said it should be tougher. And some governors said they had no business dictating to Washington on such things as defense spending.

In the end, seven members of the executive committee voted for it with only Gov. Joseph E. Brennan, a Maine Democrat, dissenting. And even Brennan said he saw some merit in its assault on federal deficits.

The resolution, a blueprint for a national budget and national recovery, called for action to hold any deficit to 2 percent of the gross national product.

To achieve this, they would allow slight additional cuts in domestic programs cut over the past two years, and they would absorb one-fourth of the impact of inflation on their own federal grants.

But they would hold growth in defense spending to 4 to 6 percent over the next two years and 3 to 5 percent over the entire 1984-88 span. They also want some restraints on the so-called untouchable parts of the budget, including government funded pension programs.

The package goes before the full conference in the closing general business session on Tuesday, where it will require the vote of two-thirds of the governors present to carry.

Gov. Scott Matheson, a Utah Democrat and chairman of the association, predicted it would be approved, but only after some changes.

"We've got to fiddle enough with it to get some Democratic votes," Matheson said. "But I think we have a good chance of resolving it with the Democratic governors."

If Matheson's Democrats can be held in line, the measure would be assured of passage, since Democratic governors outnumber Republicans by 34 to 16 following last fall's election sweep.

But some of the most formidable supporters of the measure are Republicans who support President Reagan and who share his fear of rising deficits.

Although the Congressional Budget Office forecasts the deficit will rise to $267 billion by 1988, the White House wants it kept to $116.7 billion.

The governors' target is a $90 billion deficit by 1988.

Canadian water tower bursts, water rationed

CANADIAN — After a 200,000 gallon water storage tank ruptured here Saturday, City Manager Van James expects to have "temporary service" available for residents of Canadian sometime today, he said this morning. Water pressure is currently at about half the normal pressure.

The steel tank rupture was discovered between 7 and 7:30 a.m. Saturday, according to Code Enforcement Officer Burt Kelley. City officials have been asking Canadian residents to conserve water since Saturday, limiting its use as much as possible.

James said this morning that repair crews had bypassed the ruptured tank in the system, thereby allowing the city to fill other storage tanks.

The ruptured tank also knocked out power to a booster pump at the East Booster Station, and partially emptied its sister tank which holds 500,000 gallons. James said the city started refilling the 500,000 gallon tank yesterday.

New valves have been installed and piping has been repaired in the booster station, so "it's operational if we need it," James said.

"We lost close to a million gallons," James said today.

The rupture affected about half the city's water supply. James said the tank in its present condition is "scrap." The tank "rusted out and ruptured, not even at the seam," according to Canadian Mayor Teresa Abraham.

The booster station is used to pump water from underground storage tanks to above-ground tanks like the one that ruptured, James said, which increases water pressure. The city hopes to have the tank replaced by summer, Abraham said.

The city council voted in emergency session Saturday night to advertise for bids for construction of a new storage tank.

County commissioners meet Tuesday morning

Gray County Commissioners will consider allowing the Pampa Satellite Center to hire an additional case worker and consider authorizing a Gray County deputy sheriff to purchase a used Department of Safety (DPS) vehicle through the county at its regular meeting Tuesday morning at 9:30 a.m. in the county courtroom, second floor in the courthouse.

Also on the agenda is the approval of a Hangar Area lease at Perry LeFors Airport, and receiving bids for a new motor-grader for use in Precinct 3; the southwest corner of the county.

Commissioners will also consider a request for a fire protection contract with the Wheeler Volunteer Fire Department and a request by the Mobetie Fire Department for a contribution from Gray County to help pay for the department's radio equipment.

According to County Judge Carl Kennedy, who presides over the Commissioners' Court, the Mobetie Fire Department is now paid $75 for each fire run they make into Gray County, and because Mobetie answers fire calls in the county, Mobetie is asking for help with buying radio equipment.

The Wheeler fire department is seeking a fire protection contract similar to the one recently signed with Shamrock. Kennedy said that contract pays the Shamrock Fire Department $125 per run into Gray County.

The commissioners will also consider purchasing professional liability insurance for 223rd District Judge Don Cain, and pay salaries and bills.

Job Hunter

Gordon Ellsworth, 31, left his position as chief clerk in the Chase Manhattan Bank and moved to Pampa 2½ years ago. "to go to work in the oil field."

After 18 months with Serco as a truck driver, he was laid off last June. Although his wife is working, it takes more than her salary to provide the necessities for their four children. The three boys are 16, 13 and eight years old and they do eat, says Ellsworth. The baby is an 18-month-old girl, who doesn't eat as much, but has used the diapers.

Now that his unemployment has run out he is really anxious. "I just keep hoping for a job."

He saw the "Job hunter" column in The Pampa News and is hoping someone who can use his talents will call.

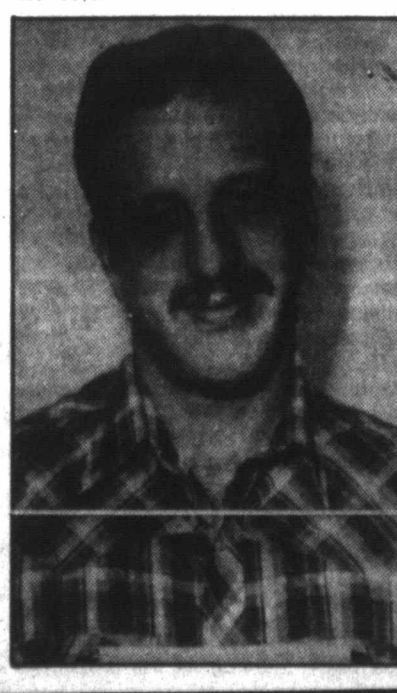

Ellsworth ran a vending machine route, servicing and fixing minor problems, for three years; he managed a liquor store for a year and a half; and then went to work at the Chase Manhattan Bank, where he was chief clerk for three years.

He has an associate of arts degree in business and a commercial driver's license, so he feels he can do or learn to do most anything. He has reliable transportation and is willing to do any honest work.

Ellsworth has looked for a job with every oilfield company, restaurants, "you name it. I've been just about everywhere" looking for a job.

"My wife's job is pretty steady, but if the right job came along I would relocate," he said.

To interview Gordon Ellsworth, call 669-9668.

School board meets Tuesday

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees will have a regular meeting at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Carver Educational Service Center Board Conference Room, 321 W. Albert Street.

There will be an audience with the Board of Trustees, possibly in executive session.

Another on the blink

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Challenger's third engine has the same defect that was found over the weekend in No. 2, and a further delay in its maiden launch is certain since both engines must be removed and repaired, NASA said today.

Reagan seeks more money for El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, seeking approval from a Congress skeptical about his expected request to increase military aid for El Salvador, summoned House and Senate leaders to the White House today.

The president squeezed in the meeting on El Salvador with Republican and Democratic leaders, and a conference with the nation's governors, before his planned departure for California and visit there with Queen Elizabeth II.

According to a Defense Department official, who requested anonymity, the new request was made necessary because El Salvador's army is "about to run out of ammunition."

U.S. officials, speaking on condition that they not be identified, said Reagan will ask for an additional $60 million in military aid for El Salvador this year. But they said there has been no decision on how to get the money from Congress, which has been skeptical about overseas spending in general and about funds, in particular, for the Salvadoran government's battles against leftist insurgents.

The insurgents have been waging their latest offensive for about four months. Reagan administration officials have expressed concern about the Salvadoran army's performance, but have publicly discounted the seriousness of the guerrilla attacks.

The administration is seeking $85 million in military aid for El Salvador in fiscal 1984, which begins Oct. 1. It requested approximately $63 million for the current fiscal year, but Congress approved $26 million.

On April 7, 1982 sometime after 7 p.m. an unknown person of persons broke through a window at the rear of Halls Tire Co. at 700 W. Foster.

A large amount of stereo equipment and accessories was taken. The estimated value was in the thousands of dollars.

Crime Stoppers will pay $500 cash for information leading to the arrest and indictment of those responsible for this crime. Anyone having any information about this or any other crime, please call Pampa Crime Stoppers at 669-2222.

According to the Defense Department, that money has been spent, and more is needed for rifles, ammunition and helicopter spare parts. The $26 million "fails to address pressing security needs in that country," State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said recently.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger suggested last week that the administration could use $60 million of a $75 million emergency fund intended for military emergencies anywhere in the world. But he also said there were other potential sources for the funds.

Set up in 1961, the emergency fund has been used in Vietnam, Cambodia, Thailand and twice in 1981 in El Salvador.

One State Department official, also speaking anonymously, said the Pentagon seemed interested in using the emergency fund but the State Department feared it would have trouble justifying that the action was in response to an unforeseen emergency, as the law requires.

There were at least two other options for obtaining the money.

Under one, the administration could re-program funds intended for use elsewhere. This would require specific notification of Congress, which could veto the plan.

The president could also request a specific appropriation, but this could get bogged down in the House, where a stronger Democratic majority has been increasingly critical of administration policy toward El Salvador.

Two fires in same vacant house

Pampa firefighters responded to two calls in two days at a vacant one-family house at 617 E. Francis. The first call was taken at 11:27 a.m. Saturday, and three units and five firefighters responded. The house sustained heavy damage to the kitchen and attic in that fire.

The second call for a fire at 617 E.

Francis came in at 12:44 p.m. Sunday, barely 24 hours after the call on Saturday. One unit and four firefighters responded to the second call.

Assistant Fire Chief J.D. Ray said the fires have been turned over to the fire marshal for investigation. Ray also said the house was totaled after the second fire.

Weather

Warmer weather comes our way this week, with Tuesday's high expected to be near 70 degrees. Tonight will be fair with the low in the mid 30s, and westerly winds at 10 to 15 mph. Tuesday will be partly cloudy with afternoon highs near 70 and southwesterly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

Utility bill stuns homeowner

PRITCHETT, Texas — A 29-year-old housewife knew she had been using a little more electricity than usual, but wasn't prepared for the utility bill that her five-year-old daughter brought in from the mailbox one day.

It was for $1,081.20. The big bill pitted Carla Shillings against the Public Utilities Commission. The battle begins Friday at a hearing to appeal the amount charged by the Upshur Rural Electric Cooperative Corp., which serves Mrs. Shillings' house.

"I thought they were wrong," she said. "I called them to come check the meter. They came and checked it and said everything was fine ... pay the bill by the 15th."

The electric cooperative doesn't claim that Mrs. Shillings used $1,081 worth of electricity in one month. It charges she has been misreading her meter — customers must read their own — since October 1981, and wants to charge her for 20,000 kilowatt hours of unreported usage on her December and January bills.

The January bill was $497. The housewife disagrees with the claim that she misread her meter.

"I'm not saying I've read it right every time," she said. "I could have looked up there and seen the wrong number once, but not consistently. That's insulting."

She didn't pay the four-figure bill that she received Dec. 1. Instead, she called the Public Utilities Commission five days later and a representative told her that she could pay the average of her bills over the last year — $116 — until the disputed higher amount is resolved.

Five other people served by the co-op who also have had electric bills of up to $900 in the last few months have also been told they were misreading their meters, Mrs. Shillings said.

M.G. McGill, general manager of Upshur Rural Electric Cooperative, would not comment on the bills. He wrote Mrs. Shillings in December and said that she could pay her bill off a little each month.

Mrs. Shillings, who doesn't work, said she and her husband Danny, an operator at a chemical manufacturing plant, couldn't afford to do that.

"We don't have a cent in savings," she said. "We're down to one car. If I go ahead and pay that bill, I'm saying I'm a liar and a cheat and I've been misreading the meter. I'm not."

Braniff back in court fighting for approval of deal with PSA

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Braniff International officials find themselves today in the now-familiar position of pleading in court for permission to sign a deal that would put about half of its fleet of Boeing 727 aircraft and about 2,000 former employees back to work.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here scheduled hearings this afternoon on the deal with Pacific Southwest Airlines that would help grounded Braniff repay at least part of its $1 billion debt.

PSA officials have said that if the deal can't be signed by Tuesday, the plan is dead.

A Fort Worth federal bankruptcy judge who has approved the deal said that if Braniff is allowed to lease 30 of its 61 Boeing 727s and other equipment to PSA, the failed carrier will be able to pay 12 cents on the dollar when liquidated instead of the 9 cents that could be paid without any additional revenue.

If approved by the 5th Circuit, PSA officials say they would have a new, low-fare Texas division of the San Diego-based airline in the air by May 1.

But the deal has drawn stiff opposition from federal agencies and competing airlines, who appealed the case to the 5th Circuit on a claim that PSA does not have a right to acquire Braniff's old landing slots.

Before Braniff collapsed May 12 and sought protection from creditors in Fort Worth federal bankruptcy court, it had 411 "slots" — permission from the Federal Aviation Administration to land at certain airports at certain times.

Those landing slots, rationed during the air traffic controller's strike, proved to be perhaps one of Braniff's most crucial assets. Federal Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers of Fort Worth ordered the FAA to return the slots to PSA because without them, Braniff's fleet would be virtually worthless.

The FAA temporarily allocated 350 of the slots to competitors when Braniff shut down, and promised to return them to Braniff, or its successor, within 24 hours. Several airlines and the FAA filed appeals in court claiming that PSA was not a successor airline.

U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon of Fort Worth upheld Flowers' ruling, and then refused to stay his own order. But last Tuesday the 5th Circuit issued a stay, blocking the deal until it could hear arguments on the merits of the plan.

PSA already has begun interviews of former Braniff employees to man its planned Texas division.

The Internal Revenue

Service and the FAA joined at least six airlines — American, Delta, Muse, Continental, Southwest, and Northwest — in filing objections to the plan. Committees representing secured and unsecured creditors and the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport have approved of the deal.

PSA and Braniff originally planned a joint venture that could have eventually led to a takeover of Braniff. But that deal fell through when several unions refused to agree to contract concessions PSA required.

Flowers dissolved the union contracts, freeing PSA to employ former Braniff workers on its own terms.

Under the terms of the current plan, Braniff will supply up to $20 million

Appetite suppressant may lead to a cure for autism

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An appetite suppressant being tested here and at five other medical centers may lead doctors to a method of treating autism, a disorder that causes children to ignore their surroundings, an investigator says.

"I'm not convinced that an appetite suppressant will be a breakthrough in the treatment of autism, but if we're lucky it will be the first step in a line toward the eventual breakthrough," said Dr. Gerald August, who is directing the year-long project at the University of Texas Medical Branch.

August said the chemical fenfluramine has been found to increase intelligence quotients and reduce aggressive behavior in three children in a pilot study.

August told The Galveston News it is too early to tell how effective the drug will be. He said little is known about autism.

"We've only started to get a handle on this bear in maybe this last five years," he said. "But treatment for the most part has still been symptomatic, consisting primarily of intensive behavior modification."

The study, launched at the University of California at Los Angeles, will also involve researchers at the University of Chicago, Oregon University, Yale University and the Texas Research Institute of Medical Sciences in Houston.

Dr. Edward Ritvo of UCLA, who conducted the pilot study, first tested the substance on rats and found that it reduced the level of a chemical frequently found in abundance in the brains of autistic children.

The chemical, serotonin, helps achieve equilibrium in the brain between one system that controls movement and motor responses and another that controls emotional behavior, August said.

Ritvo said about 40 percent of all autistic children tested show an unusually high level of serotonin.

August said the chemical imbalance prevents autistic children from processing impulses that enters their brains.

"They become bombarded by a constant influx of information and the resulting behavior is retreat, which the patient uses as a defense mechanism," he said.

Autistic children are likely to demonstrate a resistance to change, realistic behavior and a preoccupation with inanimate objects, August said. The condition occurs about five times in 10,000 births and is three times more common in boys than girls.

August said some autistic children develop "splinter skills," showing great aptitude for certain subjects. August said one of his patients, a 10-year-old, "played the entire Warsaw Concerto on the piano when he couldn't read the music to 'Three Blind Mice.'"

August said the nationwide study, which began in January, aims at producing conclusive evidence that fenfluramine minimizes or eliminates those symptoms.

Participating agencies received special permission from the Food and Drug Administration to use the substance because of the encouraging results of Ritvo's study.

To reconstruct ancient whale

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Slaughter will have a whale of a tale when he returns from Egypt.

Slaughter will lead a group of Southern Methodist University scientists to Egypt next month to discuss reconstructing a huge, ancient whale that 42 million years ago swam in an ocean that covered what is now a desert.

Slaughter, director of the Shuler Museum of Paleontology at SMU, said the group will discuss rebuilding the whale with officials of Cairo's new Museum of Egypt.

"This will be the largest animal ever reconstructed both skeletally and the way it appeared when it was alive," Slaughter said.

The whale to be reconstructed for the museum is about 50 feet long. The remains were discovered in the Western Desert last spring during an expedition led by Slaughter.

Ancient remains of whales, sharks, sea turtles, and sea cows have been found in the desert.

Fugitive figures in Kerr shooting

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Federal officials investigating an assassination attempt against former Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr hope that a fugitive arrested after a 10-year hunt will provide clues in the attack.

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal reported in a copyright story Sunday that Danny O. Armstrong, 34, of Austin is a "prime" figure in the investigation into the 1978 shooting attack on Kerr in San Antonio that preceded the assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr.

Armstrong remains in custody at a Bastrop federal correctional facility in lieu of $300,000 bond. He was arrested earlier this month after he checked into a Lubbock hospital for surgery.

"Some of it was just sheer luck" that led to the arrest and other information came from "confidential sources," said U.S. Marshall Bill Jonas of San Antonio.

Armstrong was sought about four years ago by the FBI in an effort to secure his testimony before a federal grand jury investigating the Kerr shooting attempt. Jonas told the newspaper.

Armstrong is a "prime" figure in the investigation into the assassination attempt, a federal official who declined to be identified told the newspaper.

Kerr's luxury car was riddled with 19 bullets on Nov. 21, 1978, but the prosecutor was only cut by flying glass. Seven months later, Wood was gunned down outside his San Antonio townhouse.

Charles V. Harrelson of Dallas, a previously convicted hitman, was convicted of shooting Wood.

Armstrong has been sought since May 22, 1973, when he failed to appear before Wood in a Del Rio federal court to face charges of conspiracy to import marijuana and possession with intent to distribute marijuana.

Although no one has yet been charged in the Kerr shooting, a motorcycle club member was convicted in 1979 of federal firearms violations stemming from a raid by agents seeking weapons used in the assassination attempt.

Daniel A. Thomas, 43, was convicted after FBI agents received a tip that a gun similar to the .30-caliber automatic carbine used in the shooting was hidden at his house. Authorities entered the house and found 10 other guns.

Earlier this year, El Paso drug trafficker Jimmy Chagra was quoted in excerpts from transcripts of FBI tapes as talking about hiring a man to kill Kerr. He was described as a principal federal prosecutor of drug cases in the Southwest at the time of the attempt against his life.

A Jacksonville, Fla., jury acquitted Chagra of charges that he paid Harrelson $250,000 to kill Wood.

Federal officials are placing greater emphasis on solving the case because the case of the assassination of Wood "for all intents and purposes is over," an FBI spokesman in San Antonio said.

The statute of limitations in the case expires in November, prosecutors say.

Two men wearing black gloves ambushed Kerr at an Alamo Heights intersection as he drove to work. His Lincoln Continental was riddled with bullets by an automatic weapon and a shotgun.

Kerr had earlier been directing a federal grand jury investigation into drug trafficking concentrating on the El Paso area.

Armstrong's attorney, Rip Collins of Austin, said last week he was not aware that Armstrong was sought for questioning in the Kerr shooting.

However, he said he did "learn from my own investigation the FBI was diligently looking" for Armstrong in 1978.

Collins said he is seeking to have Armstrong's bond reduced to $50,000 at a scheduled hearing. He has also filed a motion to have the trial in which Armstrong is charged with failing to appear in the earlier case transferred from Del Rio to Austin federal court.

Armstrong was taken into custody Feb. 18 by a federal deputy marshal. He had signed in at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock Jan. 25 under his own name for a back operation. Authorities believe he has relatives and financial ties in the Lubbock area.

Armstrong was one of at least five people implicated in connection with a February 1972 attempt to smuggle marijuana into the Eagle Pass area from Mexico, said Drug Enforcement Administration officials in Eagle Pass and John Foster, Armstrong's former attorney.

Foster, of Del Rio, represented Armstrong 10 years ago and said that Kerr prosecuted the case.

Inmate remains in serious condition

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A 25-year-old condemned killer wounded by a federal marshal after he brandished a handgun during a court hearing remained in serious condition today at a local hospital.

The condition of Charles Rumbaugh was upgraded from critical Sunday. Doctors expect to move him out of an intensive care unit today.

Rumbaugh, who has been twice convicted and sentenced to die in the shooting of a jewelry store operator during a robbery, was shot once in the upper left chest late last week.

He earlier had wished to refuse medical treatment for the wound at Northwest Texas Hospital.

"He's not happy about it, but I think that treatment is being provided because he is a ward of the state," said a hospital supervisor who declined to be identified. "We anticipate that he will be moved from intensive care Monday."

Doctors at the hospital have said that Rumbaugh, as a ward of the state, had no right to refuse treatment. He remains under 24-hour guard at the hospital.

Rumbaugh suffered no complications from the surgery Thursday that removed part of his lung, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The confrontation began when Rumbaugh stood up in a courtroom witness stand and yelled that he had chosen his "way to die." He then brandished a metal handle covered with cloth and shouted, "Shoot me!"

Deputy U.S. Marshal Olen R. McClendon shot Rumbaugh after the inmate swung his makeshift weapon at the officer.

Rumbaugh had just testified at his competency hearing that he was not depressed and was aware of his surroundings. Rumbaugh's parents, who say their son has exhibited suicidal tendencies since he was 13 years old, are trying to save him from execution. They say he is not competent to waive his right to appeal the death sentence.

Murderer's wife on trial for lying about judge's death

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Already convicted of obstructing justice, Jo Ann Harrelson will probably testify in her third trial on charges stemming from the assassination of a Texas federal judge, her lawyers said.

Mrs. Harrelson, 42, wife of the man convicted of murder in the 1979 sniper killing of U.S. District Court Judge John H. Wood Jr., was to begin trial today, accused of lying to a grand jury investigating the murder.

She has already been convicted in Texas of obstructing justice and buying the rifle allegedly used in the first assassination of a federal judge in this century.

"She's in a pretty good state of mind," her attorney, Charles Campion, said earlier. "I visited her Monday and she just wants to get on with it."

The perjury trial was shifted to Shreveport from San Antonio, Texas, because of pre-trial publicity.

Each of the five counts of perjury against her carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison. "The penalty is quite serious, but we're confident the truth will come out," said her lawyer, Charles Campion.

In December 1981, she was convicted and sentenced to three years in prison for using the name Faye L. King — "faking" — to buy a rifle 12 days before Wood was ambushed outside his San Antonio townhouse.

She was convicted of obstructing justice Dec. 14, and is to be sentenced March 8.

Her husband, Charles V. Harrelson, was convicted of murder, murder conspiracy and obstructing justice. A third defendant, Elizabeth Chagra, also was convicted of murder conspiracy and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Mrs. Harrelson did not testify in the San Antonio trial, but Campion said she probably would take the stand in Shreveport.

Prosecutors say big-time gambler Jamel "Jimmy" Chagra paid Harrelson $250,000 to shoot the judge. However, Chagra was recently acquitted of murder charges in a trial moved to Jacksonville, Fla. He was convicted of two lesser charges.

The perjury indictment charges that Mrs. Harrelson lied to grand jurors when asked about purchasing the rifle and about a trip that Mrs. Harrelson's daughter made from Corpus Christi, Texas, to Las Vegas, Nev.

Prosecutors said Mrs. Harrelson forced her daughter, Teresa Starr, to be silent concerning a trip to Las Vegas to pick up the alleged payoff.

Paroles, drinking laws focus of busy Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — Busy senators had 26 measures before them today, including a proposal that would alter the state's parole process and another to tighten drinking laws.

The House has 10 more days before a rule prohibits it from taking up any but emergency measures. The House has no major bills on its floor schedule today, the 50th day of the Legislature's 140-day regular session.

A proposal by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, would require the governor to appoint all three members of the Board of Pardons and Paroles. Currently, one is appointed by the governor, one by the chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court and one by the presiding judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Farabee's proposal also would eliminate the governor's power to revoke paroles. Separate legislation would eliminate the need for the governor to approve parole decisions made by the board.

If approved by the Legislature, the proposed constitutional amendment would be submitted to the voters at a Nov. 8 statewide election.

Also ready for a vote by the full Senate was a bill that would make it more difficult for people younger than 19 years old to purchase alcoholic beverages. The bill would require that people who sell alcoholic beverages must first ask to see a valid Texas driver's license or other identification card issued by the Department of Public Safety.

Another Senate bill would restrict political parties in replacing a candidate on the ballot after the candidate has been nominated in the primary election.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, had a proposal before the Senate that would extend the period for taxpayers to get a discount if tax bills are not mailed by Oct. 3. The current law grants 3 percent to 1 percent discounts for taxes paid in October, November or December. The bill would establish that any tax bill mailed after Oct. 3 would become due within 120 days.

Senate committees were scheduled this week to consider proposals that would alter the Public Utility Commission, the proposed budget for Texas A&M University and nominations for regents to Texas A&M.

The Senate State Affairs Committee had before it 10 proposals by eight senators to change the PUC, including bills to elect commissioners, rather than appoint them, and to set up a special office within the commission to represent the public.

The budget request for the Texas A&M University System was before the Senate Finance Committee.

On Tuesday, University of Texas regent Sam Barshop of San Antonio is scheduled to appear before the Senate Nominations Subcommittee. Barshop was appointed by outgoing Gov. Bill Clements and survived on a 15-16 Senate vote an effort last month to return his name to new Gov. Mark White.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP OF TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVELouise Fletcher
PublisherAnthony Randles
Managing EditorThe gas tax and jobs

The "moderate" Republicans in the U.S. Senate and usual clutch of liberal Democrats recently had a field day pillorying Senator Jesse Helms for his attempt to filibuster the five cent a gallon gasoline tax up for consideration just before Senate's Christmas recess.

If you will recall, the sneers concerning Senator Helms' efforts were standard fare on the 6:00 o'clock TV newscast and on the editorial pages of the likes of the New York Times and the Washington Post.

Of course, Helms was absolutely correct as to the consequences and timing of the five cent a gallon tax. It was a typical political boondoggle wrapped in the mantle of "saving the infrastructure." Further, we were all told that such a tax would provide some 320,000 jobs, even though there was never any mention made by the tax's advocates of the jobs that would be lost because of the diverting of this money from other consumer choices.

We recently encountered a letter to the editor of the Oakland Tribune by a gentleman named Stuart Oliver which pretty much reduced the jobs argument of the gasoline tax to the level of abysmal stupidity that it deserves. We quote Mr. Oliver:

"Since the federal government states that the 5-cent gasoline tax would provide 320,000 jobs, then a 10-cent hike would provide 3.2 million jobs. We could solve the entire unemployment problem with a $1-a-gallon tax, thus employing 6.4 million.

"A $2-a-gallon tax would give jobs to the unemployed in India, Africa, China and the jobless of the world.

This certainly would prove that the capitalist system is the best system devised by the mind of man. Who needs factories, farms or merchant marine? When all you need is a tax on gasoline and all the problems of the entire world are solved."

Speaking of artificial Harts...

Reagan the debt-builder

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Reagan, who has incessantly stressed his commitment to balancing the federal budget, now is well on his way to adding more to the national debt than all of his predecessors combined.

When Reagan was sworn into office in January 1981, the national debt — the dismal heritage of the federal government's deficit spending since the founding of the republic — stood at $934 billion.

The White House now is released (with as little fanfare as possible) figures which show that if the president serves two full four-year terms and if Congress approves all of his budget proposals, the national debt will increase by more than $1.2 trillion during Reagan's tenure.

During the current fiscal year alone, "the deficit we now estimate... is well over $200 billion," admits Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman. That single-year figure exceeds the deficit accumulated by any prior president during his entire term in office.

Those comparisons are somewhat misleading because they are not adjusted for inflation which has steadily eroded the real value of the dollar — but Reagan's deficits are enormous even after compensating for inflation.

In February 1981, less than a month after he moved into the White House, the president unveiled his "Program for Economic Recovery" which promised a balanced budget by 1984 and surpluses in all subsequent years.

But when Treasury Secretary Donald Regan was recently asked to identify the year in which the Reagan administration now predicts a balanced budget, he replied: "We're only required to have five-year projections (through 1988). ...It wouldn't happen in that five years."

The devastating admissions on the part of Regan and Stockman came during a White House news briefing immediately prior to the president's State of the Union address — a speech which could have left casual listeners confused about Reagan's political affiliation and ideological orientation.

The speech was rife with expressions of compassion for groups of citizens usually the subject of Democrats' oratorical concern — steel and auto workers, black teen-agers, working mothers, single parents, members of minority groups and victims of unemployment.

It covered virtually the entire catalog of traditional Democratic causes — including rescuing Social Security, expanding employment opportunities, ending discrimination against women and enforcing fair housing laws.

The words "fair" and "fairness" — which the Democrats have sought to monopolize as a rhetorical weapon to attack the Republicans in recent months — were used in various forms no less than a dozen times in the president's address.

But behind that rhetoric lies essentially the same program which has provoked criticism of the president from Republicans as well as Democrats in recent months.

Indeed, after GOP congressional leaders were given a preview of the president's speech, they emerged from the White House with gratuitous praise for Reagan and patronizing comments about his ability to govern effectively.

Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., the House Republican leader, said he was "impressed by the fact that the president is living in the world of reality" — a remark suggesting that the congressman is among those who believe that until now Reagan has been residing elsewhere.

Especially disturbing to many members of Congress is the fact that the president is determined to pursue a course requiring substantial spending reductions in domestic social programs whose funding already has been severely slashed while promoting military spending at extravagant levels.

Stockman acknowledged that the president's proposed budget for the next fiscal year, assuming a 5 percent rate of inflation, calls for a 10 percent increase in defense spending but a 3 percent cut in all non-defense programs.

Those priorities hardly comport with the claim, advanced by one of Stockman's deputies, that the Reagan administration is committed to "focus on the poor, the victims of discrimination and middle-income families."

The androgynous style

a computer, work like a dog and care like a woman."

She also likes to quote 19th century writer Samuel Coleridge who defined great minds as androgynous: "...the poetic spirit coupled with a logical approach."

Executive Murphy confides that sometimes men, hearing her talk topic, chide her with such questions as, "Do you want a sexless society?" or "You don't expect men to be like women, do you?"

Men, however, have nothing to fear from the new theories of effective management. The blurring of sex roles already is evident in the home today, where husbands often help with child care, cooking and cleaning. It is evident in the courts, where many divorced fathers are now being considered as suitable, nurturing parents.

Why shouldn't androgyny extend to the work place? Why shouldn't men and women seek to harmonize their differences?

After all, the difference between two sexes should never have been distorted to mean the deficiency of one.

Playing for all the chips

By ART BUCHWALD

The trouble with disarmament talks is that every time one side suggests something, the other side rejects it out of hand. The reason is that if one of the parties suggests it, then it must mean it's bad for the other side.

This is how it goes:

"Kizinsky, we've decided to disband NATO, withdraw all American troops from Europe, and depend on the good will of the Soviets to remain within their own borders."

"This is the most ridiculous proposal you have suggested so far, Downey. How can we verify how many troops are facing us without NATO? Suppose I told you that my government has instructed me to tell you that we are willing to tear up the Warsaw Pact alliance, and let the Soviet satellites fend for themselves?"

"Threats will get you nowhere, Kizinsky. Do you think we would accept the breaking up of the Warsaw Pact military infrastructure for one moment? Our entire defense strategy is based on its existence. But I'll tell you what we will do. We'll dismantle all our ICBMs and turn them into plowshares at no cost to you."

"I'm trying to keep my temper, Downey, but if you think my country is going to stand by while you people dismantle your intercontinental missiles, then we might as well adjourn these talks."

"Why do you say that?"

"The only reason your side would turn its ICBMs into plowshares is that you've developed a plowshare that could do more damage than an ICBM. You know very well we can't turn our SS-20 missiles into plowshares."

"All right, we're willing to give up the plowshare idea. What if we cancelled our B-1 bomber program? Would you accept that?"

"Of course we would not accept it. We have spent 200 million rubles developing a defense against it. Put something on the table that will at least make some sense."

"Your side hasn't put anything on the table that makes sense to us."

"What about our agreement to remove all our Backfire bombers out of range of Western Europe?"

"Washington thinks the idea stinks. We never thought the Backfire bomber was much of a threat to begin with."

"But you were the ones who brought up the Backfire bomber in the first place."

"Yes, but we didn't think you would agree to our proposal. Once you bought it we realized it was a bad idea. The fact that you want to put a bomber out of range means it's a much better plane than we thought. Did you tell the Kremlin we are willing to back off of the MX Dense Pack Program?"

"I did, Downey, and they instructed me to tell you if you give up Dense Pack as a viable weapon, they will cancel all wheat purchases from the U.S."

"Why would they do that, Kizinsky? I thought the Soviets were scared silly of the MX Dense Pack Program."

"They were until you offered not to build it. Listen to me, Downey. In order to play disarmament you have to have chips. It's obvious every chip you've offered so far is something you don't need to threaten us."

"You haven't come up with anything of substance yourself."

"What would you say if I told you we will put every one of our nuclear submarines in mothballs, and let you keep the ones you have now?"

"Get off it, Kizinsky. If you're really serious about the arms race give me something solid I can take back to Washington."

Dear Abby

Wife's surgery severs
her husband's love

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Why don't gynecologists warn their patients that after they've had a hysterectomy they are no longer sexually desirable?

At age 47, I had a total hysterectomy. I had tumors and was told I should have my uterus removed. But had I known then what I know now, I would have put it off as long as possible, or even taken my chances and not had the operation at all!

After my surgery my husband told me that our love-making wasn't the same — that I had lost my appeal for him. Then he found someone else.

The same thing happened to a friend of mine. After her hysterectomy, her husband said she didn't "feel" the same, then he took up with a young woman in his office.

Would I be wise to forget about men? I take Premarin and I haven't lost my sex drive. I'm attractive, neat and clean, and people tell me I look about 40. I need a truthful answer, Abby. Would a man ever be sexually satisfied with me now?

REJECTED

DEAR REJECTED: Yes! In a total hysterectomy, the uterus is removed, which in no way diminishes the sexual satisfaction of lovemaking. A man cannot tell whether his partner has a uterus or not. If he claims he can "feel" the difference, he's either looking for an excuse to look elsewhere, or the problem is not in her body, but in his head!

DEAR ABBY: How do I tell a good friend I do not want to lend her my clothes? She is leaving for a trip and has hinted that she would like to borrow two new dresses she saw in my closet. I bought them on sale last fall and they still have the tags on them!

What kind of excuse can I give her without losing her friendship? I've never borrowed anyone's clothes in my life, and I don't want to lend mine. Hurry, please. I know she'll be asking me soon.

STUCK

DEAR STUCK: Don't look for an "excuse," tell her the reason: "Sorry, I don't lend my clothes to anyone." If you lose her friendship, what have you lost? A friend with whom you can't be honest.

DEAR ABBY: We're expecting our first child, and we are thrilled. My husband is a health nut. He jogs, watches his diet, takes vitamins and gave up smoking.

When "Bob" learned that I was with child, he insisted that I quit smoking. I promised I would and said I had, but I've been sneaking cigarettes whenever possible.

Bob caught me and gave me a long lecture. I told him he wasn't my father, then I asked, "What are you going to do the next time you catch me? Give me a spanking?" He said, "That's a good idea."

I thought he was kidding, but last night he caught me smoking again, so he put me across his lap and spanked me with my hairbrush. I cried.

Is smoking really harmful to the unborn child? And is spanking grounds for divorce in New Jersey?

SPANKED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR SPANKED: Yes, doctors have agreed that a mother's smoking is indeed harmful to the unborn child. And a New Jersey lawyer can tell you whether spanking is grounds for divorce.

...

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Gardening by Moon Signs

By LOIS BOYNTON

The Moon will be Decreasing: 1-14; 28-30. The Moon will be Increasing: 15-27.

Fruitful signs are: 3-4 (Scorpio); From 1:50 p.m. the 12th through 14 (Pisces); 22-23 (Cancer); 30-31 (Scorpio).

Semi-fruitful signs are: 1-2 (Libra); From 12:30 p.m. 7-9 (Capricorn); 17 until 2:20 p.m. to 19th (Taurus); 28-29 (Libra).

Barren signs are: 5 through 12:30 p.m. (Sagittarius); 10 through 12 until 2 p.m. (Aquarius); 15-16 (Aries); From 2 p.m. 19th through 21 (Gemini); 23-24 (Leo); 25-27 (Virgo).

Dear Friends, this rounds - out my eight year in coming to you from the pages of The Pampa News. It has been a wonderful experience to me. I hope at times it has encouraged you to work a little harder at gardening, perhaps given you impetus to try again when you have failed.

A garden is a project of error and success. This is why with the snows we have had in the past two months we are encouraged again and waiting for the next season to start.

In my measuring we have had 34 inches of snow since it started in January. It takes about 10 inches of snow to make one inch of moisture. Although snow may not have any nutrient value, its gradual thawing improves the texture of the soil.

If you are planning on growing your own plants such as tomatoes, broccoli, peppers, petunias, etc., they really should have been planted last month. But there is still time to get them started the 18th or 23rd. We could have a frost as late as May.

This is the season to prune your fruit trees. You should have three major concerns when pruning fruit trees. 1. — Develop a strong framework of branches. 2. — Keep the tree relatively open. 3. — Head the branches back to keep the tree at a convenient picking height.

Starting with a young tree, select main branches that are six to eight inches apart up and down the trunk. During the first year, you may have only two or possibly three branches. As more develop higher up, try to leave at least six inches between adjacent branches.

As the tree grows, keep thinning out, removing all crossing branches that grow close together. The tree must be open so the light can get to the leaves and fruit. As the tree becomes larger, head the tall branches back to maintain a desirable height.

Don't be afraid to cut your tree down to size. A low tree will make maintenance easier. It is better to prune your tree and make mistakes than to allow it to grow into a mess of tall 'bangled' branches.

There are two rules you should always remember. First, when removing a branch — either small or large, make sure you cut as close as possible to the main trunk or branch which you are removing. Second, when heading back a branch make sure you cut just above a bud or a strong branch.

It is well to check your perennial beds and borders for heaving. Where heaving has occurred, press the roots gently back into the soil and cover with compost or straw.

A friend told us about a small tree she had growing for several years heaved out of the ground. The ground is so very wet and the tree with much accumulated snow allowed itself to be toppled over. The roots should be placed back into the soil and other soil packed around the roots. The tree will need a strong stake. We would use a two - inch pipe driven close to the tree. Using nylon hose, tie the trunk securely to the pipe.

This is the best time of year to plant grapes. They may be grown on a trellis, pergola arbor, fence or they may be espaliered. Pruning is essential to the growth of good grapes.

Our trellis is 20 feet long and five feet high. We have posts stationed along the 20 feet at eight foot intervals. Instead of using wire, we have used 1/4 - inch pipe attached to the posts, the first being about two feet from the ground, attached to the post. The other is attached near the top.

During the first season, the plants are allowed to sprawl on the ground at will. The second year, the vine is cut back leaving only the strongest cane which is cut to leave only two buds.

The third year the strongest cane should be long enough to reach to the top of the trellis, where it is tied. (This will become the trunk.) Two of the next strongest canes are tied left and right.

The four - year pruning will be accorded to the mature vine. Four canes will be selected to carry the fruit — one right, one left — on each of the arms. These should be cut back to leave from 25 to 60 buds, depending on the vigor of the vine.

Grape vines should be fertilized in the spring and watered through the growing season.

Order your bush and tree fruits. You should have a box of compost, sand and garden soil inside your garage or someplace out of the weather. You should have the hole dug and filled with straw, so that when your nursery stock arrives you will be prepared even if the ground is frozen.

If your African violet bloom is lax or tardy, the plan may need dividing and separating.

Separate the bunched plants into individual pots. Be sure the growing mixture is not soggy, but it should be wet. We use African violet mix, prepared for the violets.

It is hard to believe that the variety of apple, pear, plum or cherry that we have today originated 'way back from a pip, seed or stone. Yes, you can raise your own apple trees from a pip, do you have the patience to wait. OK, why not plant a pip. Take the pips from your favorite apple and sow them in six - inch filled with potting soil.

In a year's time you will have several tiny apple trees, three or four inches high. Select one of these, not necessarily the biggest. Quality does not always go with size.

Having made your choice, replant in fresh soil in a six - inch pot. After two years, your apple tree should be a foot high and you can now plant it out permanently in the garden where it will have light and room to grow.

After four or five years, you should dig up and examine its roots. The taproot should be shortened but leave all the small fibrous roots and replant. Pruning of the taproot is to avoid rank, sappy growth and will tend to hasten the fruiting stage.

Now you will have to wait. In the fullness of time, your apple will produce flowers and fruit. There will be no other apple like it. It is your own apple.

We have a friend living in Pampa who has been doing this with pecans for a number of years and he has some beautiful fruits that he has grown from seed.

Someone has said, in his opinion, that whoever could make two ears of corn grow on a spot of ground where only one grew before would deserve better of mankind and do more essential service to his country than the whole race of politicians put together.

Counselor's Corner

Body language is worth a thousand words

By DAVE BRUMMETT, MDiv

No only does the mind give messages of illness, our bodies give information, too. Body signals or language are helpful in diagnosing problems, illnesses and needs.

I have been suffering from a common virus that causes stomach cramps, loss of appetite and fatigue. The first step is at the doctor's office for medication to bring relief, then home to bed to recover. The medicine is taken, the low - grade fever drops and physical health is restored.

Julius Fast wrote a book on nonverbal communication titled "Body Language," a runaway best seller in the early 1970s.

Nonverbal language has been a part of our communication for centuries. Body language often contradicts verbal communication. Numerous clients have informed me of their happy marriages and close family ties while shaking their heads from side to side. What do I believe? The words or the body.

Words get the message across eventually. But body language tells us immediately. There is hand - arm language, leg talk, facial messages and overall body performance telling another person something significant. Most of us are unaware of the meaning.

Body language can reveal loneliness. Seeming someone handle an inanimate object can be a loud and urgent plea for understanding. A body speaks clearly its message for us to notice. Even while scolding a child, his body language of dropped head and sluggish walk tells us our means of imposing guilt have been successful.

In churches I have known people whose places in the sanctuary were well roped off — saying "that's my place." No one dared invade for such an act would bring condemnation for certain.

Body language tells us immediately when someone's personal space has been trespassed upon. Most of us clear as much territory as possible in case someone takes up more than his share. Nations of people have pushed their boundaries beyond limits to expand and have more room. Those who felt the crunch retaliated and wars were waged.

Touch is a body message. Some individuals shy away from those who like to embrace and hug. They feel uncomfortable. Whenever persons of the same sex touch, they are likely to be labeled. To touch a person of the opposite sex is expected, however. Some parents seldom touch their children and they mature at a distance. This practice is easily recognized in an person who likes isolation and distance between himself and others.

I am from a touching family. At each reunion everyone's body language is open and inviting. "Come touch me" is the immediate message. For us, touch is as common as breathing.

Linking of posture to emotions is seen in the deliberate march of military personnel. Standing and walking straight, stiff, leads to feeling immovable and determined. It has been said that retracted shoulders represent suppressed anger, raised shoulders are related to fear, square shoulders indicate the taking on of responsibility and bowed shoulders carry the burden, the weight of a heavy load.

Emotional states are visible through physical manifestations. If the way in which a person walks, sits, stands, moves, if his body language, indicates his mood and personality and ability to reach others, then there must be ways of causing a person to change his body language.

It doesn't work that way. Emotions must be changed before the body language will be open and free, comfortable and proud. Once aware that his body language is uptight and withdrawn, a person can change his emotional state.

Sometimes the body language is confusing and must be understood along with the verbal communication. One must be aware of reasons for tension before he can change them.

Body language is a wonderful communicator.

Posture tells us "I will not let you in," rubbing the nose equals disapproval; patting another person's back says, "Everything is gonna be alright." Someone sitting upright immediately says, "I'm interested in what you have to say and I'm confident in myself." A drooping appearance usually signals depression. A person stands their ground by a straight, tall look, shoulders out, firm and committed.

A glance indicates a person's state of mind. Looking away during conversation may mean that that person is still explaining himself and needs more time. Locking a gaze means someone can interrupt at a pause. Looking away from a person who is speaking means, "I'm dissatisfied with what you are saying." If a person looks away while he is speaking, he is saying his information is uncertain. Direct eye contact with the speaker indicates interest or agreement.

Glances and facial expressions tell a lot. A glancing frown can signal disapproval. A glance with approval can be an invitation. A frown without even a glance means "Beware." A quick glance can easily mean recognition. A "double take" can mean something attracted attention the first time.

Body language and spoken language depend on each other. By listening to spoken language alone will allow for distortions. To follow body language only will not give the whole meaning. Man is a speaking, physical being whose totality gives the whole message.

Pay attention to the whole person and receive the true message. Then your response will communicate accurately, eliminating confusion. This guarantees a person good mental health.

Consumer Reports: hear distant radio

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: I live in Ohio and would like to own a radio so that I could get New York, Boston, Pittsburgh, St. Louis or any place where they have a good talk show. I like to know what people are thinking about outside of Ohio. I would prefer a radio that could fit in the space one finds in a bed bookcase. It should have earphones, and, if possible, not cost more than $150.

DEAR READER: Consumer Reports electronics engineers say that a shortwave radio with a good outdoor antenna might serve.

Programming over the shortwave band is quite varied and with a shortwave receiver, you should be able to pick up broadcasts from all around the world.

Some shortwave sets also include the AM and FM frequencies. While long-distance FM programming would be very difficult for you to pick up because of the nature of the frequency, you should be able to pick up talk shows from major cities that are quite distant with "clear-channel" stations on the AM bands. When the electronics engineers last tested shortwave radios, each set's AM sensitivity and dynamic range was evaluated, in addition to its shortwave and FM performance.

A radio's sensitivity is a measure of how well a receiver can bring weak signals out of the background noise. The electronics engineers said that the AM sensitivity in all of the sets tested was adequate when outdoor antennas were used. Dynamic range is the difference between the weakest and strongest signals that a radio can receive without a kind of distortion called overload. An example of overload would be when you can hear the signal from a powerful local radio station at points on the dial where it shouldn't be.

Some sets offered better AM dynamic range than others. However, none of the sets tested may be available any longer.

The electronics engineers suggest that you discuss the matter with radio dealers in your area to see if they have any sets that will meet your needs and price range. You can obtain more detailed information about shortwave radios in the July 1980 issue of Consumer Reports magazine available at your local library.

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: I am interested in purchasing a gas, hot-air furnace. Are inexpensive ones as good as expensive ones?

DEAR READER: A properly installed septic system will maintain its own biological activity without additives of any kind, unless you kill or "shock" the bacteria by overloading it with strong detergents or acids/caustics. Consumer Reports chemists say that you can reduce the "shock" possibilities by diverting "gray water" from dishwashers or clothes washers into a separate sump.

DEAR POLLY — When I make homemade strawberry ice cream, I add a package of strawberry-flavored drink mix powder. This gives a distinctive strawberry flavor and a nice rich color.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS
Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesia (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be handicapped. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

Strive to be enterprising this coming year, because there are indications you may be able to open up an additional source of income equal to your present earnings.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your greatest possibilities for success are likely to come from joint ventures today, especially if you're the helmsman who steers the ship to port. Your 1983 predictions for Pisces are now ready. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic combinations and compatibilities for all signs.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could be extremely fortunate today in partnership situations where, collectively, you have a long-range objective in mind. Breaks might suddenly develop.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Where your work or career is concerned, be alert for unusual signals that which could be indicative of new opportunities. Two major signs to flash.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone you're quite fond of could be instrumental at this time in introducing you to a new circle of friends with whom you'll have much in common.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You should be quite lucky today regarding goals you've planned for. However, matters might not develop in the ways you originally envisioned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to make a good impression on any new people you may meet today. There's a strong possibility one or more could play prominent roles in your future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If negotiating a matter of material value today, it's to your advantage to wait until the last possible moment before making your closing moves.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your optimistic attitude today will smooth your own path and also encourage those who walk by your side.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Heed your hunches today regarding ways to feather your nest or add to your income. Don't discount perceptions, even though they may be grand in scale.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could be extremely lucky in two unrelated areas today; one is romance, the other is the furthering of a new project or enterprise. Think "win" in both cases.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions which went against you yesterday could suddenly make a positive reversal today. Obstacles should now begin to fall by the wayside.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You've got a number of exciting things going for you today which could help make your hopes a reality. Of these, your resourcefulness is the most outstanding.

Nevada-Las Vegas drops another

(AP) — Before taking his Nevada-Las Vegas basketball team to Morgantown to play West Virginia, Jerry Tarkanian expressed serious concern about the Mountaineers' tough court. His fears proved valid, but it wasn't only West Virginia's home-court advantage that was the undoing of the nation's top-ranked team Sunday — rather a sharpshooting guard named Greg Jones.

"I just took what the defense gave me," Jones said after scoring 32 points to lead the Mountaineers to an 87-78 victory over the Runnin' Rebels. "I thought it was a great team effort. The coach prepared us well."

West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett called his 6-foot-1 guard "the best in the country" and while Tarkanian did not wholly endorse that statement, he certainly was impressed.

"I didn't think he was that good of a shooter," said the UNLV coach. "Jones really shot well."

Jones made five three-point shots among his field goals, as the Mountaineers, 19-6, won the game from the field, hitting an overall 53.6 percent to Nevada-Las Vegas' 46.3.

"If we made some more free throws we could have been up 18 or 20 at halftime," Catlett said, pointing to a poor 50 percent from the foul line.

The defeat was the second straight for the Runnin' Rebels, who were 24-0 before losing at Fullerton State last Thursday night. Part of their problem has been a rash of sickness that has hit Danny Tarkanian with bronchitis and John Copeland with the flu. On Sunday, the Rebels got another blow when Jeff Collins hit his head on the floor during the game and was believed to have suffered a concussion.

Nevada-Las Vegas' recent losses notwithstanding, West Virginia players still showed great respect for Tarkanian's team.

"They deserve to be No. 1," Jones said. "They have a great fastbreak and great power forwards. I guess we just played a better team ball today."

Another ranked team was upset Sunday when No. 17 Iowa was beaten 71-69 by Minnesota. In other action Sunday, No. 3 Virginia beat North Carolina State 86-75; No. 10 Kentucky beat No. 20 Tennessee 69-61 and No. 11 North Carolina outscored Clemson 93-80.

On Saturday, No. 2 Houston stopped Rice 86-52; Michigan State shocked No. 4 Indiana 62-54; No. 5 Louisville beat Western Kentucky 73-62; No. 6 Arkansas routed Texas Tech 77-63; No. 7 Villanova nipped No. 9 St. John's 71-70 in overtime; No. 8 UCLA defeated Southern Cal 71-64; Kentucky beat Georgia 81-72; No. 12 Wichita State whipped Illinois State 72-62; No. 14 Memphis State was upset by Florida State 74-72; No. 15 Ohio State clobbered Michigan 81-71; co-No. 15 Missouri tripped Nebraska 54-51; No. 18 Georgetown beat Seton Hall 71-60 and No. 19 Boston College walloped Pitt 70-52.

Tommy Davis' three-point basket with five seconds left boosted Minnesota over Iowa.

Iowa Coach Lute Olson felt the game was decided on the boards: "When we give up 16 offensive rebounds, that's going to be a great deal of trouble." Still, Olson thought the Hawkeyes could have sent the game into overtime on the last-second inbound pass from guard Bob Hansen to Greg Stokes.

"Stokes was wide open," Olson said. "If the pass is on the money, it's a slam."

Rick Carlisle scored 23 points and four other players hit double figures as Virginia whipped North Carolina State. "He hadn't been shooting the ball well," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said of Carlisle, a transfer from Maine who sat out last season. "It was only a matter of time before it started going in for him again. He's such a hard worker."

Kenny Walker scored 19 points as Kentucky beat Tennessee. With the victory, the Wildcats clinched at least a tie for their 34th Southeastern Conference championship.

"This is the best Kentucky team I've seen since I have been at UT," Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe said. "It has quality and also quantity."

Meeting about proposed Pampa public golf course draws crowd

A meeting to plan a public golf course here drew a huge crowd Sunday at the Pampa High School Fieldhouse.

About 170 supporters heard golf-course architect Bill Cantrell of Lubbock say that they could be playing golf on a new course as early as next year, if plans continue to fall into place.

"We've got to take the bull by the horns. The reason we don't have a municipal course now is that everyone was waiting on a government agency to build it," organizer Buddy Epperson said.

Pampa has two private golf clubs, a nine-hole course for Celanese employees and the private Pampa Country Club, which has a restricted membership and expensive dues, according to supporters of a municipal course.

Epperson said 100 Pampans have already donated $250 each to help build a municipal course here. The course will be built with private donations, Epperson said. He said more individuals, businesses and local industries will be asked to help fund the course.

The organizer also said course supporters will soon meet with the M.K. Brown Foundation's board and try to get that organization behind a municipal course.

Several sites for the course, expected to cost $1 million to build, are being studied now, Epperson said.

Those who have donated the $250 are now charter members of the planned course and more are needed, he said. The $250 amount is also proposed as annual green fees when the course is opened. Those paying the amount would be exempt from daily green fees others would be charged for playing. The course would be open to anyone who wants to play, Epperson.

The organizer said a survey previously conducted by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce indicated at least 1,200 Pampans support and would play on a municipal course.

"We would also draw people from around the area," Epperson said about future players.

The group said green fees and rentals will make the course self-supporting. After the course is built by the private donations, it may be donated to the city, Epperson said.

He said the group is also still looking for someone to donate land for the course.

Epperson said anyone who wants to work toward building a municipal golf course here should call him at 669-6291 or Pat Albert at 665-4671.

Coghlan breaks indoor mile record

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — After he crossed the finish line, Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan focused his eyes on the unofficial scoreboard clock high above his head. It told him what he already knew — that he had become the first runner to break the 3-minute, 50-second barrier in the indoor mile.

"When I looked up and saw 3:49 I knew I was going very, very fast," Coghlan said after he broke the world record Sunday with a 3:49.78 clocking in the U.S. Olympic Invitational track meet at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

Coghlan threw his arms in the air after erasing the world indoor best of 3:50.6 he had run at San Diego in 1981. Then, taking a victory lap on the track he helped design, he blew a kiss to the cheering crowd and jumped in the air, a leap for joy.

"What I accomplished today can't be taken away. I was the first to go below 3:50," he said. "It compares to Roger Bannister breaking the four-minute barrier (outdoors in 1954) and (John) Walker breaking 3:50 (also outdoors in 1975)." England's Sebastian Coe now holds the outdoor record of 3:47.33.

"I'm psyched," said the 30-year-old Coghlan, a former star at Villanova University. "I wanted to break the record and become the first to go under 3:50."

Coghlan said he began mapping his plan to break the record in his hotel room Sunday morning, writing down split times for each quarter mile.

"They were exactly the same as I wrote down," said Coghlan.

Coghlan needed someone to set a quick pace for his splits to be exact. That's where Ross Donoghue came in.

Donoghue, a one-time standout at St. John's University and Villanova, led the field through a fast-paced quarter-mile in the unofficial time of 56.6 seconds. Coghlan and American record holder Steve Smith were close behind.

Coghlan accepts congrats

It was the same order at the half-mile mark of the 10-laps-to-the-mile track, with the unofficial time of 1:55.7.

When Donoghue didn't continue at a swift pace, Coghlan moved in front for his race for the record.

Pampa meets Mansfield in area game

Pampa plays eighth-ranked Mansfield at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Vernon High School gym at Vernon.

The contest is an area playoff to see which team advances to the area finals, enroute to the state tournament.

The winner of the game will meet the winner of the other area contest, which pits Borger against Wichita Falls. Borger and Hirsch clash in the Pampa gym at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Tickets to the Pampa - Mansfield game in Vernon will be available at the gate only for $2 and $4.

Pampa coach Garland Nichols said Mansfield will try to blow the Harvesters off the court with speed.

"They run — throw — and gun," Nichols said about Mansfield's explosive offense.

The team has been scoring an average of 82 to 85 points per game, Nichols said.

Nichols expects the Harvesters to slow the tempo down and play their own game.

"We played real well against Lamesa. Our kids have progressed," he said.

Pampa routed Lamesa 79-65 Saturday to take the Class 4-A, BI-District title.

"When you get into these playoff games, it takes a little luck to win," the coach said. But he indicated the team looks to be in top form after the thrashing of Lamesa.

Pampa takes a 23-6 record into Tuesday's contest. Mansfield sports a 27-2 record.

Pampa tennis players advanced

Several players on the Pampa High School tennis team advanced to semifinal and quarterfinal play over the weekend at the Abilene Invitational.

In Class B - girls singles, Andi Elliot reached the semifinals. Enroute she defeated Tammy Eiteljorge of Midland Lee, 4-6, 6-3, 6-0. She whipped Ann Lawrence of Sweetwater, 6-3, 6-4, before losing in the semifinal to Laura Dickson of San Antonio Glenn, 6-2, 6-2.

In Class B - girls doubles, Cheryl Starnes and Colene Hofack beat Angela Morton and Kim Draithoite of Stephenville, 6-2, 6-4, and whipped Bolden and Craig of Midland Lee, 4-6, 7-6, 7-6. In the semifinal, the Pampa doubles team lost to Galbraith and Pugh of Abilene Madison, 6-0, 6-0.

In Class C - girls singles, Stephanie Trollinger beat Michele Cheurie of Abilene Mann, 7-5, 6-1, and whipped Sandra Leseur of Forsan, 6-1, 6-1. Trollinger got by Tiffany Hogan of Abilene Madison, 6-0, 6-3, before dropping the quarterfinal game to Kendee Dotson of Abilene Lincoln, 6-2, 6-1.

In C - boys singles, Sall Mohan won three matches, and Eric Hallerberg won two. Trent Sellers and Randy Hendrick won one match each.

In B - girls doubles, Tricia Hawkins and Leslie Eddins reached quarterfinals.

Mickey Mantle doesn't care that Kuhn banned him from baseball

DALLAS (AP) — Former New York Yankees slugger Mickey Mantle, who recently signed to represent a hotel-casino in Atlantic City, says he's not overly upset at being banned from baseball by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"What's he banning me from?" Mantle said. "I haven't done anything in baseball that's amounted to anything since I retired 14 years ago. It's no big deal. I'm not doing anything wrong."

Mantle told the Dallas Morning News that money was the major factor in his decision to forego any involvement with baseball.

"If I turned down over $100,000 for something that would earn me only $10,000 or $15,000, I'd better go back to school and learn to count," he said.

The Claridge House, located on the Atlantic City boardwalk, is paying him for public relations work. Mantle said he will be helping to stage four golf tournaments and four dinner roasts.

"We've got the first roast under way now," he said. "It concerns Don Larsen's perfect (World Series) game in 1956. Whitey Ford, Hank Bauer, Larsen and Sal Maglie are already in line."

Mantle said he first heard that the Atlantic City offer might cause trouble when he received a telephone call from Lee MacPhail, president of the American League.

"MacPhail heard I was discussing such a deal, and he called and reminded me that Willie Mays had been banned from baseball for a similar situation," Mantle said. "I told him it made no difference."

Mantle said he received a hand-delivered note from Kuhn on the day of a news conference to announce his association with the casino.

"I don't remember the exact words, but it was short, only a paragraph or two that informed me I was banned," he said. "I really don't know what it all means. I have not talked to the commissioner about it, nor do I have any plans to discuss it with him."

Mantle won't be spending his customary two weeks in spring training as a special batting instructor with the Yankees. He also won't be able to assist club owner George Steinbrenner in the future.

"About all I was doing for Steinbrenner was attending roasts, dinners and things like opening days for the farm team at Columbus," Mantle said. "That's no great deal."

Overall, Mantle said he has no baseball bitterness.

"Shoot, I always felt like I was overpaid when I was playing," he said. "I was getting pretty good money for having fun."

But Mantle said he doesn't understand the salaries of today's performers.

"There are guys making $400,000 a year now who don't even belong in the majors," he said. "Do you know that Joe DiMaggio made a total of $700,000 during his career. Me? I made a million-and-a-half in 18 years with the Yankees. Now, there are guys making more than that in one season."

Arguello comes back with win

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — What a difference four years can make. Vilomar Fernandez scored a decision over Alexis Arguello in a boxing match in Madison Square Garden.

But Saturday, Arguello was in command, chasing Fernandez for a $200,000 payday and a possible chance for a junior welterweight World Boxing Association title rematch with Aaron Pryor.

Arguello, a three-time world champion, controlled most of the fight with Fernandez Saturday but earned a 10-round unanimous decision.

Arguello, from Miami, landed a right hook in the fourth round that forced Fernandez, from New York, to collapse along the ropes.

"I hit him on the chin with a left hand and followed with a right," said the 140-pound Arguello, now 77-5.

"He was always running when I hit him. My strategy was to put together punches but that's hard when someone is running. I didn't feel in control at all in the fight. But I was not frustrated by his movement."

Arguello is seeking a rematch with Pryor, the WBA Junior Welterweight champion.

Fernandez said he was a different fighter when he scored a decision over Arguello.

"The last time we fought I was quicker. But now I've slowed down," said the 140 1/4-pound Fernandez, now 27-10-2.

"His punches were stronger than they were four years ago," added Fernandez. "Everytime I'd throw a punch, he'd throw power."

Fernandez earned $50,000.

CHICAGO (AP) — The seizure of $24 million worth of opium near O'Hare International Airport could mean that a heroin processing plant is operating in the Chicago area, authorities said. Opium usually is processed into heroin before the heroin is smuggled into the United States. The fact that it wasn't in this case suggests the processing may be underway here, says U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb.

Police and federal agents seized 14 pounds of opium as they made three arrests Saturday night.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A man convicted in the abduction of an Illinois abortion clinic operator plotted to gain his release by having the wife of a jail official kidnapped, a published report says.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch in Sunday's editions quotes St. Clair County Sheriff Mearl Justus as saying Don Benny Anderson hoped to get out of prison by having another man help him with the kidnapping plot. The deal fell through, the sheriff said, after authorities got a tip.

Anderson, 42, was sentenced to 30 years in prison after being convicted last month of conspiring to obstruct interstate commerce by threats of violence in a case involving Dr. Hector Zevallos and the doctor's wife, Rosalie Jean, of Edwardsville, Ill.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) — One of America's best known "singing cowboys," Gene Autry, will be back in the saddle again.

Autry, a veteran of 93 films and now a businessman whose holdings include the California Angels baseball team, will serve as parade grand marshal during North Platte's Nebraska Days in June.

Autry, 75, began singing on an Oklahoma radio station in 1928 as "Oklahoma's Yodeling Cowboy." He sold more than 40 million records and was awarded his first of eight gold records for "Silver Haired Daddy of Mine."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Norman Cousins, former editor of Saturday Review magazine and author of "Anatomy of an Illness," which dealt with his recovery from cancer, says he learned many things about himself while fighting the disease.

"The tragedy of life is not death, but what dies inside us while we live," Cousins said Saturday while receiving a "Doctor of Human Service" degree from the University Without Walls, a seven-year-old alternative college in Santa Monica.

Cousins, 67, told the commencement audience we should "never underestimate our problems, never underestimate our capability for meeting those problems."

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Former prisoner of war James Stockdale has a new mission — telling others how he survived 2,714 days in captivity during the Vietnam War.

Ten years after he and 115 other American POWs walked out of a Hanoi prison, the Navy's most decorated Vietnam veteran conducts a seminar twice weekly at Stanford University called "Combating Coercion and Manipulation."

It deals with "the power of the human spirit and the human mind under deprived and hazardous conditions," Stockdale, 59, says in this week's issue of People magazine.

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Civil rights leader Julian Bond says "the last time business provided 100 percent employment for blacks was over 100 years ago. It was called slavery."

The Georgia senator made the comment to 300 people gathered Sunday at the University of Nevada-Reno in an observance of Black History Month.

Bond, 43, urged black voters to make their voices heard. He said U.S. Rep. Harold Washington's victory in Chicago's Democratic mayoral primary last week should serve as an example of black voters' power.

"I did not think that black people could get loose of the kind of plantation politics they've been under for so many years," Bond said. "I say 'congratulations.' I didn't think they could do it. It shows what you can do."
