FHA Interest Rate Set At New High

HUD Secretary Calls Hike 'Necessary'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maximum interest rate that will be allowed on government-insured home mortgages was raised to a record 10 percent Friday by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The half a percentage point increase, to become effective on Monday, marks the first change in the rate since last June 29.

It will apply to single-family home loans covered by both Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration insurance programs, a HUD statement said.

The current 9½ percent rate will continue to be the maximum allowed on mortgages for multi-family units, HUD said in a statement.

The statement quoted HUD Secretary Patricia R. Harris as saying she was "reluctant to take this action" but that it was "necessary to bring the FHA rate in line with other competitive rates in both the mortgage and financial markets."

Conventional Rates Still Higher

Effective conventional rates — mortgage interest plus some initial home-buying fees amortized over 10 years — have been more than 10 percent since December, according to government statistics. In recent weeks they have surpassed 10½ percent.

Vondal S. Gravlee, president of the National Association of Home Builders, termed the FHA increase "regretable but probably inevitable in light of record rates in the conventional mortgage market."

He said conventional rates were being pushed up "to the 10 percent to 11 percent range nationally by the Federal Reserve Board's tight monetary policies."

Borderline Buyers May Be Out

The change, he said, might force borderline buyers out of the market but would make FHA-insured loans more attractive to lenders.

Mrs. Harris said the increase in the government rate was "dictated by the persistent high level of discounts prevalent for FHA-insured loans.

"This condition has created hardships for many families in their efforts to achieve home ownership and to sell their homes, particularly among low-and moderate-income families who need the more-favorable terms available in FHA and VA financing."

A discount, or point, is money paid by the seller to a financial institution to make up the difference between the government-dictated mortgage interest rate and the prevailing rate on conventional mortgages.

Discount Should Go Down

HUD said the boost in single-family home rates should substantially reduce the five points to seven points now being charged.

A point would be 1 percent of the mortgage amount, or $300 on a $30,000 mortgage. Five points would translate to $1,500 on a $30,000 mortgage, savings and loan officials said.

A mortgage specialist, who asked that his name not be used, said that an increase in a mortgage interest rate from 9½ percent to 10 percent would boost, for example, the total payment of principal and interest on a $50,000 mortgage with a 30-year term by $6,610. This figure does not take into consideration points or mortgage insurance, he said.

The FHA was created by the National Housing Act of 1934 to operate a variety of loan insurance and subsidy programs.

The FHA or VA borrower pays an annual insurance premium of 0.5 percent of the average principal outstanding.

In the early years, the maximum allowable interest rates on the government-insured mortgages were in the 4½ percent to 5¾ percent range. They moved up to 6 percent in October 1966.

The rates were identical for single-family and multi-family units until Jan. 5, 1976, when HUD lowered the ceiling for single-family homes to 8¾ percent while holding multi-family rates at 9 percent.

In recent years, the FHA has insured some $13 billion in mortgages, about two-thirds of them home mortgages, industry statistics show.

More Credit Buying Seen By Stores

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE RISING cost of just about everything has seen a similar rise in the number of Lubbock residents buying on credit, local retailers say.

And, they add, these customers are using their increased credit to buy necessities rather than luxury items.

Spokesmen for local store and bank credit offices agree that a tight money situation is making area residents more cautious of the price they pay for goods, but the number of persons going into debt with credit cards apparently has not decreased in the past 12 months.

Credit application polices, however, have not been made more stringent, and the percentage of delinquent payments has not risen substantially, according to credit spokesmen at J.C. Penney, Dunlap's, Sears and Dillard's department stores.

Buying More Necessities

"People are buying more necessities than they have before and are watching prices more than before," said Irene Brown of Penney's credit department. "I admire the young people (because) I notice it more with them."

Dunlap's continues to be "pretty lenient" about opening charge accounts, according to store manager Bill Vaughn.

He said he has not noticed "a big difference in the number of charge accounts we're opening," but added that the number of delinquent payments are up "a little but not much."

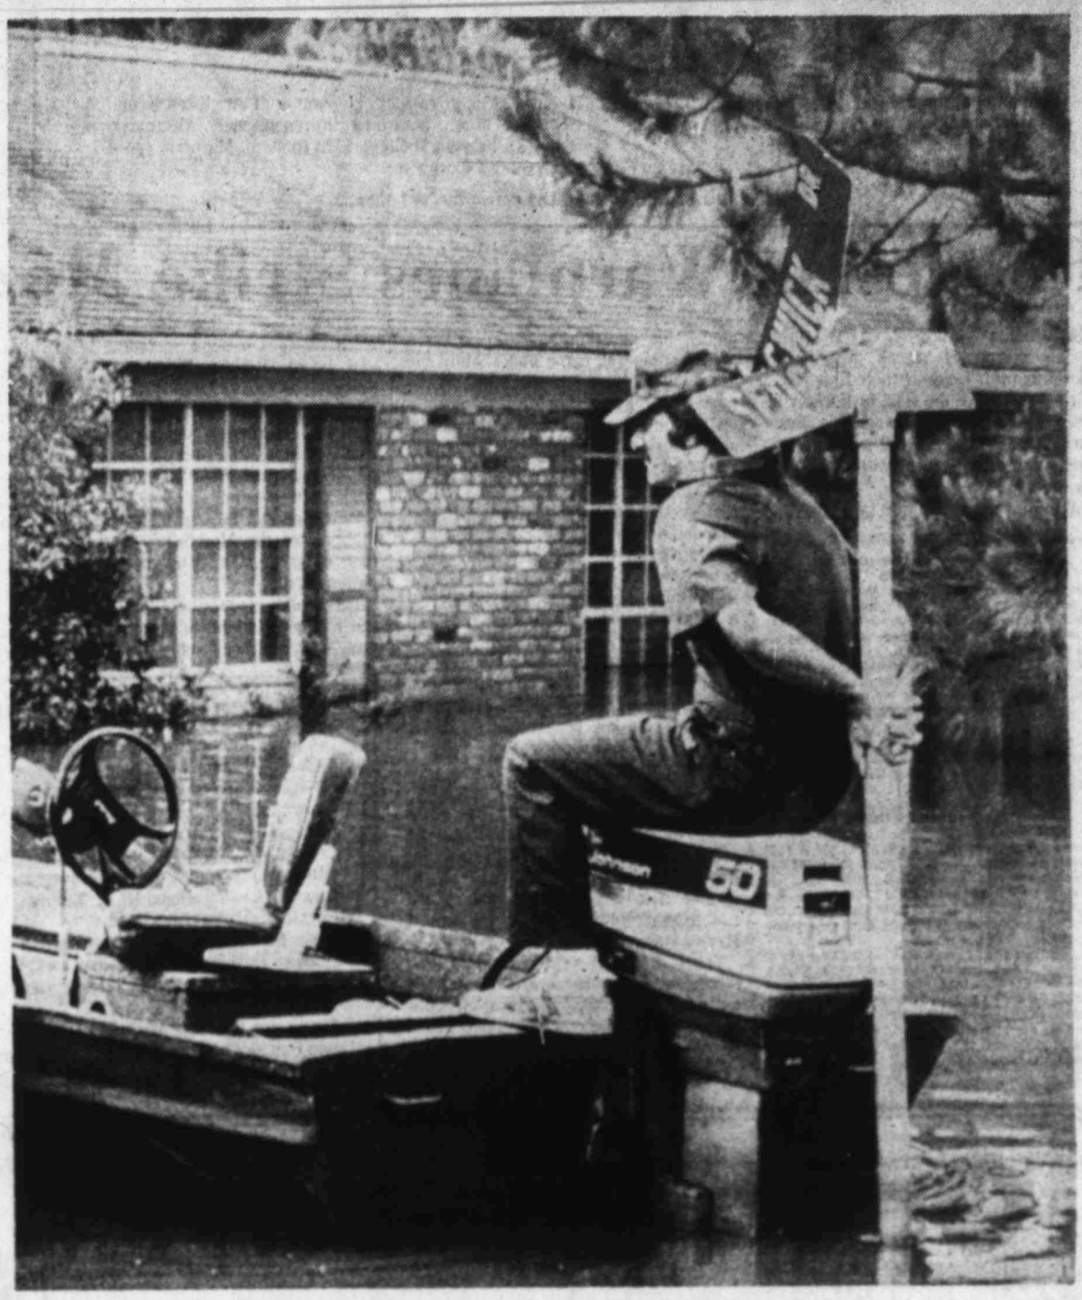

"January and February may have been a little more slow because of the poor crop," Vaughn said. "With money problems a little bit tight, customers are watching prices and buying a little more closer."

Credit Paces Cash Purchases

After the first of the year, more Sears customers were making purchases on credit than with cash, according to a credit spokesman. However, the number of customers delinquent in paying their bills on time is somewhat lower than last year, she said.

Dillard's collecting office, headquartered in Oklahoma City, Okla., has not changed its credit policies and shows no

Waist-High Water Swirls Across Southeast Texas

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

TEXANS WADED through water up to their belt buckles around Houston and Beaumont Friday as spring floods splashed into new territory in several states and Mississippi officials complained they received inadequate information before the rising water struck.

An East Texas deluge poured 6 inches of rain in some areas, sending water 5 feet deep through the streets of Beaumont, and routing hundreds from their homes. The Red Cross opened seven emergency centers to care for refugees.

The torrential rains in the Houston and Beaumont areas forced at least 1,500 families from their homes in Harris and Montgomery counties this week, according to Civil Defense estimates.

A 50 foot by 40 foot section of a department store roof caved in Friday afternoon at the Greenspoint Mall in Houston but no injuries were reported. Harris County Sheriff's Department deputies said the roof apparently collapsed from the weight of accumulated water.

Local Conditions Stay Dry, Mild

Tormenting thunderstorms, flooding and winds gusting up to 55 mph in much of Texas late Friday should continue to evade the Lubbock area.

Forecasters instead predict dry air to maintain mild afternoon highs in the middle 70s this afternoon and the upper 70s on Sunday.

Skies should remain clear to partly cloudy through the weekend as Friday's northeasterly winds that blew up to 20 mph shift to the east-southeast and slow to 10 to 15 mph.

West Texans can expect a slow warming trend to spread over the area through Wednesday, but a chance for thundershowers should return to the forecast by midweek.

Midwest Farmlands Inundated

Water also submerged rich farmlands along the Red River separating Minnesota and North Dakota, and the 7,000 residents of East Grand Forks, Minn., were braced for what is expected to be the area's worst flood of the century when the river crests Monday.

In Grand Forks, N.D., the evacuation of 70 homes was ordered by Grand Forks Mayor C.P. O'Neill Friday. "The stuation has turned from serious to critical," he said.

Floodwaters of the Pearl River swirled deeper into south Mississippi, surrounding hundreds of homes in Morgantown and Columbia, where about 3,500 of the city's 8,000 residents have fled.

Civil Defense spokesman Jim Thornhill said rains were forecast for the next three days, aggravating the already deteriorating situation.

More "Ruinous" Rain Expected

"It's going to ruin us," Thornhill said as his civil defense staff broadcast a warning that the river would reach 12 feet above flood stage Sunday. "I knew this was coming, but this could be a flood that comes once every 500 years."

"We've got 3,500 persons evacuated now and it could reach 10,000 persons in Marion County before it crests," Thornhill said. "Water probably will be all over town."

In Jackson, where damage from this week's flood is put at an estimated $500 million dollars and 17,000 were driven from their homes, the water was receding but refugees were lined up at federal disaster relief centers.

Jackson Mayor Castigates Feds

Jackson Mayor Dale Danks Jr. complained that federal agencies provided "woefully inaccurate" information in advance of the flood and said hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property might have been saved.

Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., said he would request a congressional inquiry into "the true facts about why citizens were not given more accurate facts."

House Defies Clements On Teachers' Pay

AUSTIN (AP) — The House voted to boost teacher pay by 7 percent a year in defiance of Gov. Bill Clements on Friday and then went on a log-rolling spree before adjourning for the weekend.

Speaker Bill Clayton had hoped to finish the $20.2 billion spending measure this week. But a Republican cocktail party and apparent lack of interest threatened a quorum and halted work at 7:15 p.m. Friday. By then, only 111 out of 150 representatives — only 11 more than a quorum — remained on the job.

Before quitting for the weekend, the House added $23.2 million for junior colleges, $8 million for the University of Texas at Austin, $4.8 million for Texas Southern University and Prairie View A &M, $200,000 for UT-El Paso and $6.4 million for UT-San Antonio.

The three days of House debate on the general appropriation bill have cut $157 million from the $370 million that originally were "on the table" for tax relief or other spending.

By far the biggest addition was the $106 million inserted in the bill by a 93-25 vote Friday to give teachers 7 percent annual

Fuel Cost Levy Changes Sought

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE TEXAS Public Utilities Commission voted Friday to actively seek the end to automatic fuel cost adjustments, but government and industry officials agree that any forthcoming changes would not lower electric bills.

"We did not abolish the fuel cost adjustment charges," said PUC spokeswoman Martha Bartow. "We hope it will be removed soon, but we won't know until we get some new plans."

In the new order handed down Friday, the PUC stated it is "actively seeking appropriate and necessary changes which will end the automatic fuel cost adjustment as currently allowed."

The move to eliminate the fluctuating fuel costs adjustments from monthly electricity bills sounds appealing, but "even if they do get rid of it, it's not going to lower your electric bill any," said Frank Lee, a Southwestern Public Service spokesman in Amarillo.

"The rate-making power in Lubbock lies with the city council," said Lubbock Power and Light executive Carroll McDonald, explaining why any changes would have no effect on electricity users in Lubbock, regardless of the company they dealt with. "The PUC has no jurisdiction over rates within the city limits, here or in any city where the power companies are municipally-owned or regulated," McDonald said.

The notion to do away with the adjustment in its present form came about after the PUC, in a lengthy probe, discovered that abuses of the fuel adjustment clauses "can and have occurred," said commissioner Alan Erwin. "The fuel adjustment clause had a good purpose, but it has a lot of holes."

"The purpose of the fuel adjustment clause has been exploited and abused," said the PUC's Rhonda Starnes. But neither Miss Starnes, Miss Bartow nor Erwin gave specific examples of the abuses hinted at.

"We're for it," Lee said of the plan to work around the adjustment. "It will enable the PUC to publicly verify SPS's fuel costs. We already do that, but this would show everyone just where the money goes."

The two major objectives of the changes are to move the automatic fuel adjustment clause to the electricity base rate, and to look into the possibility of giving financial breaks to power companies attempting to use alternative energy sources, like nuclear or solar power.

Moving the fuel clause to the base rate could change the appearance of some electric bills (though not LP&L's), Bartow said. "At least you'd have some idea of what your bills might be, without that fluctuating adjustment every month."

McDonald agreed. "If you get a bill for $40 rate and $40 adjustment, you'd pay $80. Under their type of changes, you'd probably get a bill for $80. I don't think it's going to make any difference to the consumer, though. The bottom line is what comes out of your pocket for the bill."

Without seeing the order, SPS district manager Roy Holmes said it seemed it would be "quite cumbersome" to roll the fuel cost into the base rate, and that it probably would require an adjustment of the base rate "quite often."

The chore of arriving at the new policies has been given a "high priority" rating by the PUC staff. Erwin has recommended the preparation of a new procedure for setting rates that will eliminate fluctuating fuel adjustment charges and force all utilities in the state to obtain specific approval from the commission for fuel charges on a six-month period.

Other suggestions have been proposed, but none have been finalized. Bartow said she expected it would be 60 to 90 days before the PUC discussed any concrete plans.

The commission also ordered three electric utilities serving one-third of the state to refund $3.2 million to their customers for overcharges.

The refunds, affecting Texas Electric Service Co., Texas Power & Light Co., and Dallas Power & Light, are the first ever ordered for an electric utility in the three-year history of the commission. Chairman George Cowden said the overcharging came as a result of a series of cntroversial sales of cheap gas among the subsidiaries of Texas Utility Fuel Co.

Fliers Survive Midair Collision With Double 'Miracle' Escape

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP) — Two U.S. Air Force F-111 fighter bombers collided off the Scottish coast and plummeted into the North Sea Friday, but both two-man crews bailed out in what was called a double "miracle" escape.

The planes, which were believed to be unarmed, collided while flying a training mission over the Dornoch Firth's Tain bombing range off the northeast coast of Scotland about 20 miles from Inverness.

The four Americans bailed out in the planes' ejection capsules which have automatic equipment to send out a distress signal. An Air Force spokesman said he could not say if the crews had ejected before or after the collision.

A spokesman for the Royal Air Force, which rescued the men, said one capsule apparently capsized when it hit the water, but its flotation tanks inflated and it was undamaged.

The Americans were rescued by an RAF vessel in the area and by a fishing boat that went to the scene while a British air force Nimrod reconnaissance plane circled overhead, according to an RAF spokesman who, in accordance with normal British practice, declined to be named.

Within 40 minutes the officers had been flown by helicopter to a hospital at the RAF base in Lossiemouth, 40 miles northeast of Inverness.

"The first miracle was that both crews should come out OK from a mid-air collision," the spokesman said. "The second was that they should be picked up uninjured in that kind of time."

The men were returned later Friday to their base at Lakenheath in Suffolk county, southern England, and an Air Force statement said, "They are fine. They were suffering from shock, but they were able to walk off the helicopter."

The Air Force said the rescued officers were: Capt. Stephen R. Ruttman of Norman, Okla.; Capt. Timothy A. Schlitt, of Affton, Mo.; Capt. Roger L. Webb, of Staunton, Va.; and Capt. Joseph Peluso, of Rosedale, N.Y.

All four are 28 years old and belong to the 48th Tactical Fighter Wing at Lakenheath.

Rhodesian Warplanes Strike Mozambique Guerrillas

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesian warplanes struck neighboring Mozambique Friday in their first cross-border raid since the start of five-day elections here for limited black rule. Voter turnout edged toward the government's prediction of 60 percent with one day to go.

A military communique said only that planes hit guerrilla bases in southern Mozambique and came home safely. No details were given and there was no immediate comment from Mozambique.

Election officials said 57.1 percent of an estimated 2.8 million eligible voters had voted for what will be Rhodesia's first black majority government since British empire-builder Cecil Rhodes founded it 90 years ago.

Guerrillas have vowed to disrupt the elections, which they claim are a sell-out to white minority interests. Police reported a "fairly busy day" with guerrillas Friday. They said 27 persons were killed, including three blacks who hit a mine as they walked to a voting booth. Freedom House, an American-based human rights organization that sent observers here, said the elections represented a "significant advance" toward black rule.

An interim report by the 38-year-old organization said "the country has never had so inclusive and free an election."

The Freedom House team includes Leonard Sussman, executive director, former New York congressman Allard Lowenstein and black civil rights activist Bayard Rustin.

The U.S. government refused to send official observers because it has insisted upon internationally supervised elections with the participation of externally based guerrilla movements.

Almost 70 observers have turned up from Western nations, including unofficial representatives from the United States.

Foreign Minister P.K. van der Byl declared he felt foreign governments would find it "impossible to argue" with what he described as the "tremendous success" of the elections.

He called the turnout a "total confirmation" of the March 1978 agreement that set up the plan for a "government of national unity."

This week's elections are for 72 seats in the nation's first black majority parliamet. Whites although only three percent of the population, will maintain 8 seats i the 100-member legislature and four Cabinet posts. Whites will retain control of security forces, the judiciary and civil service for at least five years.

Rhodesia broke away from Britain in 1965 to head off black majority rule. As a result no nation recognizes the Salisbury government. Rhodesia hopes the elections under way will lead to recognition and a lifting of the trade embargo honored by most nations.

At one station, officials said, "a very pregnant African lady" showed up to vote. She disappeared behind a nearby building.

"She came back, handed over her newborn baby to another lady, voted, deposited her ballot, retrieved the baby and went home," said Deputy Internal Affairs Minister Thomas Thorpe.

Before voting started Tuesday, Rhodesian planes and troops made a number of strikes against guerrilla bases in Mozambique, Zambia, Botswana and Angola, including a ground attack on guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo's home in Luusaka, Zambia.

The strikes apparently were to weaken guerrilla strength and lessen their ability to disrupt the elections.

Safety Board Says Flight Crew Responsible For Air Disaster

WASHINGTON (AP) — A jetliner's flight crew caused North America's worst air crash but it was not guilty of a lack of discipline, a federal safety board concluded Friday.

The National Transportation Safety Board said the crew of Pacific Southwest Airlines flight 182 must bear the prime responsibility for the jet's collision with a small Cessna 172 over San Diego last Sept. 25. The two planes plunged into a residential area, killing 144 persons.

The dead included all 135 persons on the PSA Boeing 727, an instructor and a student in the Cessna and seven persons on the ground.

The board said the jet crew failed to keep track of the Cessna as required by the visual approach rules under which it was operating.

The vote on the main cause of the accident confirmed a tentative decision reached Thursday. But it was not formally adopted until Friday because board members were divided on what to list as contributing causes.

The board said Thursday that a cockpit voice recorder tape indicated there was a lax atmosphere in the jet cockpit and that the crew seemed to be joking about the whereabouts of the Cessna, which it had lost sight of.

One of the proposed contributing causes was "lack of discipline in the cockpit." That was eliminated Friday on a 2-2 vote after discussion on the difficulty of determining from the tape the precise atmosphere on the flight deck and whether it contributed to the accident.

The Air Line Pilots Association said it was shocked by the board's decision singling out the jet's crew.

"The board has taken the easy way out," said Capt. J.J. O'Donnell, ALPA president. "It is laying the primary blame on the dead flight crew when in fact it is the system that is at fault. Pilots are but one small element of that total system."

O'Donnell noted that the board members had agreed in their open meeting that had any one of the factors been absent, the accident probably would not have happened.

The board remained divided on most of the 10 items proposed as contributing causes and adopted only one of them.

That one blamed air traffic control practices at San Diego "which authorized controllers to use visual approach procedures to separate two aircraft on potentially conflicting tracks." The board said this was not a wise practice when controllers are able to provide vertical or lateral radar separation to either aircraft.

Three other proposed contributing causes were defeated by 2-2 votes, but the board decided they were important enough to be discussed at length in the body of the report.

PILOT OF ILL—FATED JET — Captain James McFeron, shown in a 1977 photo, was the pilot of a Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner which collided with a small pland last Sept. 25 over San Diego. A federal air safety board has blamed the PSA crew for the accident in which 144 people died. (AP Laserphoto)

These were failure of the Cessna to maintain an assigned course, failure of controllers to restrict the jet to a minimum altitude of 4,000 feet while it was in the airspace of nearby Montgomery Field and the fact that two separate air traffic control facilities were handling traffic in the same airspace.

Investigators found that the Cessna deviated slightly from course one minute and 16 seconds before the collision, putting it on the same heading as the PSA jet. Had the smaller plane not turned, they said the two aircraft would have missed each other by about 1,000 feet.

But after reviewing the evidence, the board concluded that the primary cause of the accident was the PSA crew's failure to keep the Cessna in sight and then not to report to the ground when it disappeared from view.

"The PSA plane had a responsibility to keep the Cessna in sight," said board chairman James B. King. "I feel the Cessna was a victim."

Also discounted by the board was the possibility that when the jet first reported it had spotted the Cessna, the crew may actually have seen a third plane in the area.

Board member Francis H. McAdams favored many of the proposed contributing causes that were rejected. He said he would file a dissenting statement.

A spokesman for PSA said in San Diego that the board's conclusions were "not at all representative of the information made public during the course of the investigation. There were a great many other factors discussed both at the hearing and by the news media which would lead persons to believe the single probable cause listed by the NTSB is not adequate."

Engineers Cut Reactor Temperatures Below Boiling Point At Power Plant

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Temperatures in Three Mile Island's devastated reactor dropped below the boiling point for the first time Friday, 24 days after the nation's worst nuclear accident.

Technicians reported temperatures dropped 60 degrees since Thursday after more steam was allowed to escape from the reactor's primary coolant system while cold water was added. It stood at 175 degrees, 37 below the boiling point, as of 3 p.m. Friday. Officials said the temperature will be held at that level.

The hottest spot in the damaged uranium core, exposed when a series of human and mechanical errors robbed it of vital cooling water, dropped by 54 degrees to 276 degrees.

Victor Stello, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's operations chief, said he will provide a timetable next week on when the plant will be taken to cold shutdown.

"This is taking a lot longer than any of us would have wished," he said. "The plant is not considered to be in a cold shutdown condition. That will come when the plant is on natural circulation."

Stello said decay heat will be present in the reactor core for about 150 days, but cooling water will keep it harnessed.

NRC spokesman Karl Abraham said the drop in temperature came as technicians released more steam through a turbine and simultaneously pumped fresh water into the cooling system.

"It's sort of the same thing as standing under a shower that's a mixture of warm and cold water and you suddenly turned up the cold water. That would lower the average temperature of your shower. And that's really what's happening here," he said.

"It shows we're getting everything down in temperature and continue to approach cold shutdown. That's the main objective we have now," he added.

The heat comes from the core's 100 tons of uranium fuel. The NRC reported earlier that none of the uranium melted, but its protective shields were cracked and bent.

NRC spokesman Jan Strasma said the plant is not considered in cold shutdown because an independent backup cooling system is still being designed. It would help establish natural cooling circulation, preventing the reactor from heating up again.

Last Friday, technicians began the final phased cooldown by tediously reducing the heat in the 280-degree primary cooling system, forced through the reactor by a 9,000-horsepower pump.

Meanwhile, officials reported a sharp drop in iodine 131, a cancer-causing isotope which is still drifting from the plant in small amounts. It has been leaking since the March 28 accident.

"The environmental measurements are very low. The samples taken overnight were all less than the minimum detectable activity," said Strasma.

The NRC finished its computerized "whole body" radiation tests after checking 721 area residents over the past 10 days.

Though the NRC said none had internal contamination from the accident, nine people had higher than normal radioactive elements in their bodies.

"But these were not iodine and apparently resulted from people living or working in stone or brick buildings," the NRC said. Brick and stone are a natural source of radiation, it added.

State Legislators Denounce UT Funding

AUSTIN (AP) — Thunderous denunciations of The University of Texas System failed to block a state budget amendment Friday that restored $8 million in faculty salary cuts.

The House voted 99-21 to return money that was removed by the House Appropriations Committee from the general spending bill and to add another $4.8 million for two black colleges.

Reps. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline; Don Rains, D-San Marcos; and Frank Gaston, R-Dallas, said the university could tap its $50 million annual income from invested oil money if it wanted to restore the cut.

Hollowell said the income — called the Available University Fund — should be controlled by the Legislature and appropriated back to the university for specific items.

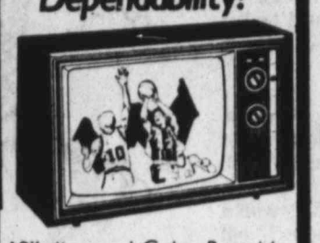

"But the Legislature never had the courage to stand up against the rich fat cats who get appointed to the Board of Regents of the University of Texas," he said.

A holder of law and master's degrees from UT-Austin, Hollowell said there were some "quality instructors" at the school "but they've got some of the biggest duds I've ever seen" who are safe in their jobs because of tenure.

Rep. Al Brown, D-San Antonio, responded that Hollowell was being "punitive" toward "one of the Texas' greatest institutions.... This university is our showplace, in which all Texans take pride."

AN EDITORIAL:

Libel Versus The Newsroom

THE SIGNIFICANCE of a Supreme Court decision permitting public figures suing for libel to inquire into the "state of mind" of editors and reporters is the effect it will have on that state of mind.

In one respect, the decision will cause those who write, publish or broadcast allegations of official wrongdoing to be more diligent in efforts to present a balanced, objective account of the facts.

That's the good side.

This very caution, though, can become a state of mind that inhibits newspapers, TV stations and other news media from an aggressive search for the truth about public officials whose actions are open to question.

That's the side which could have the effect of denying the public information it needs for intelligent self-government.

THE SUPREME COURT'S potentially far-reaching decision came in a case that former Army Lt. Col. Anthony Herbert filed against the CBS network.

Herbert gained national prominence when he was stripped of his command after charging his superiors with war crimes in South Vietnam.

A "60 Minutes" program about him, Herbert subsequently alleged, falsely and maliciously portrayed him as a liar, injuring his reputation to the tune of $44.7 million.

Now, under a 1964 Supreme Court ruling, a public figure must show "actual malice" against him in order to prove he was libeled. This means the defendant must have known a statement was false or recklessly disregarded whether it was false.

Herbert claimed that, in order to make such a showing, he had the right to question CBS about its decision-making process in what to use and not to use in the telecast.

The Supreme Court now has ruled he has that right. He still has the burden of proof in the case.

IN NEWSROOMS across America, though, the decision already is causing debate over how much more vulnerable journalists will be to libel suits.

Without doubt, those media outlets with a reputation for hard-hitting "exposes" will have to reconsider their news policies.

That tenet of responsible journalism which requires that editors and reporters be certain of their facts and present them in a balanced, objective manner now will become more urgently impressed upon those who heretofore have operated on the fringes of that responsibility.

To that extent, every public figure who has believed himself to have been unmercifully and untruthfully "crucified" by the press will rejoice.

THE OTHER SIDE of the picture is that those public officials who themselves have operated, and are operating, on the fringes or in the shadows of wrongdoing also will rejoice.

Without the power of subpoena and other investigative tools, newsmen always have been at a disadvantage in getting enough facts to expose violations of the public trust.

Even with this handicap, newspapers have "broken" the vast majority of cases involving official misconduct long before investigative agencies and prosecuting attorneys have bestirred themselves.

THE INHERENT DANGER in the Supreme Court's latest decision is that editors and reporters will be too hesitant to "go to press" with information which points to a strong probability of official wrongdoing but which might not be provable in a court of law.

In many such cases, investigations sparked by early and incomplete articles will develop the necessary proof; but without that first spark, the evil may remain hidden.

An editor now must be especially cautious not to get himself in the position of having instructed a reporter to "go after" a public figure who subsequently might be found innocent of breaking the law.

Whether this works out in practice to be a caveat which forces all news media outlets to practice more responsible journalism, or becomes a threat which causes them to be too cautious in their role as public watchdogs over government is a question which greatly affects every American.

AN EDITORIAL:

State Of Unions

A BILL THAT has the potential for saving the state of Texas substantial sums on future construction projects has been approved by the Senate Economic Development Committee.

If passed into law, the measure would encourage non-union contractors to bid on state building programs by removing a requirement that they pay the "local prevailing wage" to the construction workers.

"This law has kept non-union companies out of public construction and has escalated costs 15 to 20 percent," Jerry Arterburn of the Associated Building Contractors of Greater Houston argued.

Non-union workers often draw lower wages, partially because they don't have to pay union dues and partially because non-union contractors can keep them busy more of the time.

Incensed, a spokesman for the AFL-CIO warned the Senate Committee, "You have awakened the sleeping dogs" and threatened ballot box reprisals against supporters of the bill.

Opposition notwithstanding, it is in the taxpayers' interest that the state get out of the wage-setting business.

ART BUCHWALD:

Photographer Develops Art Of Shooting Bull

WASHINGTON—It's amazing how history can turn on so many little events.

According to an excerpt in Gerald Ford's book, Henry Kissinger, his secretary of state, James Schlesinger, his secretary of defense, and the President were in a heated debate over how to react to the Cambodian seizure of the Mayaguez, and whether the United States should retaliate with massive air strikes.

White House photographer David Kennerly was taking photos of the debate when he interjected himself into the conversation and said, "Has anyone considered that this might be the act of a local Cambodian commander who has taken it into his own hands to stop any ship that comes by?"

Apparently the three great men hadn't, and Kennerly's view prevailed. Instead of massive air strikes, Ford writes, he ordered only limited air strikes against a few Cambodian military targets.

I WASN'T there, of course, but when I read the excerpt I began imagining the scene.

KENNERLY: "All right, Mr. President. You get in the middle. Henry will be arguing with you on your right, and, Mr. Schlesinger, you look as if you're disagreeing with both of them."

KISSINGER: "Mr. President, I say we bomb the hell out of them. We have to teach them the United States is still the major power in the world."

FORD: "Yes, that would be a good idea. Jim, can you tell the Pentagon I want a massive air strike?"

SCHLESINGER: "No problem. We have B-52s all loaded and ready."

KENNERLY: "Great. Let me just get a light reading. All right now, how about the President sitting down and then you gentlemen studying a map of Cambodia? In this one I'd like a smile from you, Mr. Schlesinger."

SCHLESINGER: "I NEVER smile."

PRESIDENT: "That's true, David. I've never seen Schlesinger smile."

KISSINGER: "I can smile."

KENNERLY: "Well, since you're thinking about massive air strikes against Cambodia maybe you better look serious."

PRESIDENT: "I agree. Since this is for history we want to make sure the American people know that I consider the taking of one of our ships a grave matter."

KENNERLY: "Mr. Schlesinger, would you mind taking your pipe out of your mouth? The smoke is covering up the President's face."

SCHLESINGER: "I always have a pipe in my mouth."

KISSINGER: "THE WAY I see it, we just keep dropping bombs day and night until they give us back the Mayaguez."

KENNERLY: "Henry, maybe you could use your hands to simulate a bombing attack. Don't look at me. Look at the President. That's a beautiful scowl, Mr. Schlesinger."

SCHLESINGER: "I'm not scowling."

PRESIDENT: "That's the way Jim looks all the time, David. Gentlemen, you don't think I'll be accused of over-reacting, do you?"

SCHLESINGER: "Who cares?"

KISSINGER: "The American people are crying for some sort of action after our ignominious withdrawal from Vietnam. A good massive bombing will make everyone feel better."

KENNERLY: "THAT was terrific. Let's try one more. How about the President in a football crouch as if he's going to center the ball? Henry, you be the quarterback, and, Mr. Schlesinger, you look as if Henry's going to give the ball to you."

PRESIDENT: "I think before we go ahead we should ask someone else's opinion. David, what do you think about bombing Cambodia into the Stone Age?"

KENNERLY: "The way I see it, probably some hotshot local commander decided to grab the Mayaguez without checking with Phnom Penh."

KISSINGER: "Why didn't we think of that?"

PRESIDENT: "Good work, David."

GEORGE F. WILL:

Inhuman Sacrifice?

WASHINGTON—Twice in 18 months, Philadelphia doctors deliberately killed infants. I say "killed" because this story should not be muddied by euphemisms.

The doctors acted responsibly and with moral valor in cases that were both sad and inspiring.

They shared a liver and a complete four-chambered heart fused with an incomplete two-chambered heart. Consider the October 1977 case.

Baby Girls A and B appeared to be hugging. No babies joined that way have lived more than nine months. (Siamese twins occur once in 50,000 births; twins with joined hearts occur once in 100,000).

Such one-and-a-half hearts cannot stand the strain. Without separation, both babies would die. Separated, the one given the indivisible heart would have a slight chance.

The parents were spared an awful choice: The heart could function only with Baby B's circulatory system. Surgeons believed they could build for Baby B a chest cavity to hold the heart, perhaps using grafts from Baby A's ribs.

The parents are devout Jews; the chief surgeon, a Presbyterian; six of the seven nurses who assisted the operation are Catholics. At three weeks, both babies were alertly making eye contact.

Nurses saw personality differences emerging. Everyone agonized about the idea of "sacrificing" either baby.

A RABBI wondered: Are there two babies? Could Baby A be considered an appendage? The chief surgeon said there were two brains and nervous systems, thus two babies.

Lawyers sought grounds for holding the surgeons safe from homicide charges. They argued that Pennsylvania law says death occurs when the heart stops; thus, because there was only one heart, there was only one life involved.

The court rejected this route to classifying Baby A as an appendage.

Then the lawyers argued that no crime occurs if an act is done under a court order issued because the good anticipated from the act outweighs the bad. They cited an argument similar to one the rabbis had been pondering:

A mountain climber falls and is saved from instant death only by hanging from a rope attached to his partner. But the partner's hold is not so secure that he can keep both himself and his friend from falling to their deaths.

EITHER, ONE climber must die, or both will, so the climber with the more secure hold is justified in cutting his partner's rope.

The different groups considering God's and Pennsylvania's laws agreed: The operation should occur. It did. Baby A was sacrificed; Baby B lived, but only three months.

The survivor of a similar operation last month is alive, and is the first such survivor to leave a hospital.

Now, what I am about to cite, from Dennis Bloodworth's "The China Looking Glass," is ghastly, but germane:

"Somerset Maugham tells us...how he came upon a little tower on a Chinese hillside with a single small hole in its wall, from which came a nauseating odor.

"THIS WAS the baby tower, and it covered a deep charnel pit into which parents threw their unwanted children through the aperture, or, if they were more gentle, lowered them in a basket on a piece of stout string...

"Perhaps nothing measures the enormous abyss between Chinese living and Western understanding than a passage from a Chinese book of travel...in the last century:

"'England is so short of inhabitants that the English rear every child that is born. Even prostitutes who bear children do not destroy them.'"

This passage refers to China during a period of hideous privation. The point is not that it is in "the nature" of any people to treat life casually.

On the contrary, the point is that the value placed on life is to some extent contingent, socially rooted, changeable.

THE PHILADELPHIA cases attest reverence for life. But that reverence may be moral capital inherited from another age and dissipated in this age.

Our society has suddenly decided that abortion can be a mere convenience, a morally insignificant form of birth control for the careless.

There are a million abortions a year in America, a society that does not understand how fast and far it is moving from the sensibility that dignified the deliberations in Philadelphia.

The Brighter Side

A doctor who is the son of a doctor says his father was an excellent physician but his bedside manner sometimes was a bit abrupt. He had one patient, for instance, a loquacious lady who babbled on and on about her symptoms.

Finally, the doctor cut into her monologue, saying tersely, "Stick out your tongue." She did. "Now," said the doctor, "keep it there until I've told you how to get well."

ANDREW TULLY:

007 Is A Girl

WASHINGTON—We seem to have a live one over at the J. Edgar Hoover building on Pennsylvania Avenue. Since he took over as director of the FBI in February 1978, William H. Webster has broken new ground by quietly re-ordering the bureau's priorities.

Before Hoover died in May 1972, he had squandered the bureau's resources on the sort of activities that built imposing statistics—minor bank robberies and stolen cars, for example.

Without ever voicing criticism of his predecessor, Webster has moved to reduce the number of relatively petty crimes that occupied so many agents.

Today, the FBI is putting more effort and manpower into the investigation of white-collar crime, organized crime, and foreign counter-intelligence.

ITS PRIME targets in the field of white-collar crime are government frauds, public corruption, and major bank embezzlement cases.

When Webster took office, the FBI was investigating 574 cases of corruption at all levels of local, state and federal government. A year later, that number had exceeded 900.

The FBI has identified 27 "families" engaged in organized crime, but it doesn't confine itself to those traditional operations; it looks at all ongoing criminal enterprises which have "continuity" as their essential ingredient and involve large numbers of people as organized crime.

Meanwhile, a statute known as RICO—the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization law—is being used more and more. The statute covers any criminal enterprise; it's possible for a city council to be a criminal enterprise if it's operating as such.

WEBSTER, A former St. Louis appellate judge, also has taken a step forward into the light of the Republic's Egalitarian Age.

Early on, he recognized that the FBI's operations would not be damaged by the infusion of women and blacks into its prestigious corps of special agents.

Hoover was not so much anti-black and anti-female as he was convinced that to recruit them into the corps would be meddling with perfection. Besides, he honestly believed that women and blacks were happier in lower-level jobs.

In the year after he arrived at the Hoover Building, the number of women special agents increased almost 50 percent—from 91 to 143. During the same period the number of black special agents increased from 143 to 172.

IN AUGUST 1978, 39 budding agents entered the new training class at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va. Of those 39, 17 were minorities and nine were women.

It is not a record to cause dancing in the streets among female and minority libbers, but it is a start.

And the future of equal rights in the bureau was brightened by Judge Webster's pronouncement that "hiring minorities and women is more than simple justice; it is important to our operation."

King Hoover is dead. The latest of his successors was pledged to face up to a uniquely American fact of life.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Price Of Progress

AFTER ALL the red-carpet treatment, after all the White House wining and dining, now it turns out the Communist Chinese aren't going to be a billion-dollar customer after all.

Not that they've cashed in their grandiose dreams for that "great leap forward" to modern times. But they've been counting up their cash and they've discovered they have a bulldozer appetite and a wheelbarrow budget.

Translation: They can't pay for all the technology they need.

Deputy Prime Minister Deng Xiaoping (you might remember him as Teng Hsaio-ping) hasn't exactly zipped up his checkbook, but he's listening longer these days to salesmen peddling equipment for light industry and agriculture.

Seems he's suddenly caught on to what his technicians have been telling him all along, that dragging Red China into the 20th century is going to take more than a proclamation.

IT'S GOING to take contracts and loans and an export trade that brings in enough foreign money to finance heavy industrial equipment.

And that's what the Communists are short of at the moment. Their reserves of foreign exchange add up to around $2 billion, which isn't much for a giant country with 900 million people.

Tiny Taiwan, for instance, has a currency reserve of $8 billion and a credit rating that makes loan officers fall over themselves to lend it money.

So much for Deng's dreams of a billion-dollar buying binge in American markets. So much, too, for President Carter's big excuse for dumping Taiwan in favor of mainland China:

That we need to be "lao pengyou" ("old friends") with a country that will import $200 billion in goods between now and 1985.

NO WAY, says a Commerce Department report. A little more than half that would be more likely. And even under "the most favorable circumstances," our share of China's total hard currency imports would come to only $12 or $15 billion in the next six years.

Some American firms made it. Coca-Cola got in early, and a construction group sponsored by the Chase Manhattan Bank has just wangled a contract to build a $300-million trade center in Peking. But Chase had to loan the Communists $30 million to get the project rolling.

Deng is also having second thoughts about those big hotels he was going to put up for tourists and businessmen. Seems he's decided (even as you and I) that it's cheaper to fix up the old places than to get financing for new ones. Another hitch in his modernization plan is the fact that he still hasn't talked the U.S. into granting China "most-favored-nation" status for future trading deals. That's partly his own fault.

HE FLEW into a snit last month when Congress passed a bill outlining official relations with Taiwan and expressing American concern for the welfare and security of its people.

In retaliation, Deng is stalling on his agreement to pay back $80 million to American companies, religious groups and individuals who lost property worth $197 million when the Communists took over in 1949.

Until the claims issue is settled, Washington isn't going to be doing much of anything to speed up action on a most-favored rating, which would let China pay lower tariffs on goods shipped to the U.S. and—even more important—let it get in line for loans from the Export-Import Bank to pay for American goodies.

And you can bet Jimmy Carter's hoping Deng will cool down and decide to pay up without demanding a veto on the Taiwan bill first.

DENG IS between a rock and a hard place. He was hoping to get rich quick on oil sales, but now it turns out that finding and drilling for China's oil is going to take a lot longer than he expected, that it will be a while before he will have billions of petrodollars to play with.

And that's why, as one disillusioned trade official puts it, the Bank of China has a bellyache.

And those polite snickers you hear in the wind just might be floating across from Taipei, which expects to do $12 billion worth of business with the U.S. in the next two years, treaty or no treaty.

Q. "DO PEOPLE eat alligators?"

A. Alligator tails, yes. And they're exceedingly flavorful, I'm told, if they come from an alligator between four and six feet long. Bigger alligators aren't recommended. The older they get, the more they taste like they look.

Priscilla Davis Gets Car, Horse, $3.3 Million

FORT WORTH (AP) — Industrialist Cullen Davis was granted a divorce Friday by a judge who ordered him to pay $3.3 million to the wife he is accused of trying to kill.

But the judge said Priscilla Davis, 37, who had sought $50 million, must surrender the couple's $6 million mansion within 30 days.

State District Judge Clyde Ashworth, the third judge to preside over the nearly 5-year-old proceeding, also said she could keep her luxury car, personal belongings and her horse, Freedom.

"She is welcome to get on Freedom and just ride out of town," commented Davis, 45, who said he was "just happy to get it over with."

"I thought it was a fair decision. I am not pleased she got so much money," he said, "I didn't want to give her anything."

Davis said he probably would not appeal and said he planned to marry his girlfriend, Karen Master, "as soon as she will have me."

Ashworth awarded Mrs. Davis $3,340,818 but said the mansion was built on land owned by Davis and was not part of the community property.

In issuing his decision, Ashworth told both parties he was "frankly sorry you've had unhappiness in your lives and your marriage."

"If there was some way I could do it," the judge said, "I'd like to turn back the pages to the fall of 1968 and erase much of what has happened."

Mrs. Davis told one reporter she would be glad to move out of the 20-room mansion. "It already has termites," she said.

However, she said she didn't know where she was going to live. "I really don't know right now. I'll kick it around and come up with something."

Division of property was the only issue in the bitter proceeding, which was delayed by Davis' 1977 Amarillo murder trial and his Houston murder-solicitation trial.

Ashworth ruled that Davis acquired the majority of his vast fortune before he married Priscilla. He said Davis made $6,649,999 during the couple's stormy 10-year marriage and ruled Mrs. Davis would receive half that amount.

He also ordered Davis to pay the couple's taxes for 1978 and all previous years.

Lawyers for Mrs. Davis had argued she was due half the $100 million they claimed Davis realized in corprate profts from his 4-company business empire. They aso contended she should receive the mansion, her personal belongings and her car in any settlement.

Ashworth awarded Mrs. Davis' lawyers $1.25 million, ordered Davis to pay half and ruled Mrs. Davis must pay the remainder.

"I think he (Ashworth) went through what he felt was the facts and ruled on those," said Mrs. Davis.

Mrs. Davis also said her third divorce did not sour her views on marriage.

"I think it is marvelous," she said. "I still believe in it. It is like the U.S. government — it is still the best in the world."

The Fort Worth industrialist was acquitted by an Amarillo jury in August 1977 of charges he killed his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, during an August 1976 shooting rampage at the Fort Worth mansion.

He also faces murder charges in the slaying of Mrs. Davis' lover Stan Farr, and attempted murder charges in the wounding of Mrs. Davis and a chance visitor to the mansion.

A mistrial was declared last January when the jury could not reach a verdict in the trial in which Davis was charged with trying to solicit the murder of the first judge in the divorce proceedings, Joe Eidson. Prosecutors have said they will try the industrialist again on the charges. Eidson was not hurt.

Eidson disqualified himself from the divorce case and was replaced by retired State District Judge John Barron, who then became embroiled in a squabble with Tarrant County prosecutors when they subpoenaed trial records.

After reporters learned Barron had met privately with Davis, Barron disqualified himself. He denied any wrongdoing and said he met with both parties separately trying to arrange an out-of-court settlement.

Antitrust Suit Hits Dow Chemical

NEW YORK (AP) -Dow Chemical Co. was charged in a $12-million civil antitrust suit Friday with monopolizing the market for polyethylene foam plank and using "predatory pricing-cutting" and other tactics to squelch competition.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court, Manhattan, by Packaging Industries Group, Inc., of Hyannis, Mass. and two affiliates that manufacture foam plastic packaging material.

Packaging Industries Group claimed Dow is the nation's dominant manufacturer and seller of the packaging material and that Dow "has monopolized that market." It added Dow was using price-cutting tactics, threats and other unfair competitive means to take away the large customers of the plaintiffs and drive them out of business in order to extend its monopoly.

Russians Plan To Restore Ancient Cathedral

RARE RESTORATION — One of the best-known buildings in the world, St. Basil's Cathedral in Moscow's Red Square, has disappeared inside what the Russians call a "forest" of scaffolding for a rare restoration. From now until autumn, the 10-domed church will be a fuzzy blur of iron piping beside the Kremlin, from its 16th century foundations to its glittering golden crosses. (AP Laserphoto)

MOSCOW (AP) — One of the best-known buildings in the world, Red Square's St. Basil's Cathedral, has disappeared inside what the Russians call a "forest" of scaffolding for a rare restoration.

From now until autumn, the 10-domed church that looks some-thing like a giant multi-colored tutti frutti will be a fuzzy blur of iron piping beside the Kremlin, from its 16th century foundations to its glittering golden crosses.

As soon as Moscow's spring frosts melt, a band of 120 workmen trained in ancient construction techniques will begin cleaning the grime — from a nearby power plant — off the cluster of onion-shaped domes decorated like a cornucopia of pineapples and artichokes.

Meanwhile, historians are climbing about on the scaffolding, searching the building's vaults and crevices for clues to its history.

"As long as I've worked with this building, there is always a new surprise," said arhitect Nikolai Sobolev, who has spent more than 50 years studying St. Basil's.

His tenure goes back to the days when the building still housed a working church, in 1929, and spans the Stalin years of wanton destruction of churches, during which time St. Basil's itself was narrowly saved from demolition.

Only in recent years have Soviet newspapers confirmed that the demolition was planned. It was stopped after prominent architect Pyotr Baranovsky threatened to kill himself if the scheme was carried out. Baranovsky was jailed but later released.

The new restoration work, the second in the church's history, points up the atheist Soviet government's new attitude toward Russia's unique onion-domed churches, whose newly recognized value as tourist magnets and historical monuments have led to a new preservations law.

Of the 657 churches in Moscow on the eve of the 1917 Bolshevik revolution, only 100 to 150 stand today, according to Soviet officials, and only 46 of these are ever used for worship.

But the government spend thousands of rubles a year in the restoration of selected churches, as non-religious "architectural monuments." The St. Basil's restoration alone will cost $840,000, Sobolev said.

St. Basil's itself is now a museum, the architectural symbol of Russia, drawing one million visitors a year — so many, Sobolev said in an interview, that its brick-and-stone floors are worn down and must be replaced each five years.

Not everbody finds St. Basil's beautiful. A French traveler a century ago huffed, "certainly ... the men who go to pray in this box of glazed fruit are not Christians."

Sobolev said the church's restorers will repaint faded interiors and exteriors with chemical-based paints that use the natural pigments of the original colors, will replace broken masonry and brick, and will bring to life some faded or hidden frescoes of the inner walls.

The restoration crew is the same that has almost completed a major 10-year refurbishing of the neighboring Kremlin with its massive red-brick walls and towers and its ensemble of graceful churches.

They will try as far as possible to restore the original 16th Century look to the church that has been added on to repeatedly over the centuries — making an exception for the familiar multi-colored domes which were once faced entirely in Swedish iron.

But when St. Basil's emerges from its "forest," Sobolev said, there will be no major changes to the tourist's eye — except that the church will sparkle with brighter colors than before.

Czar Ivan the Terrible ordered the building of the church, whose formal name is the Pokrovsky Cathedral, in 1554 to glorify his victory at Kazan, the seat of the Tatar invaders who had ruled Russia for three centuries. The church was consecrated three years later but not completed until 1679.

According to legend, the czar was so pleased with the work of his architects, Barma and Postnik, that he had their eyes put out. But Sobolev laughed off this story, noting that the two men did later work "which would have been very difficult if they had been blind."

The church was looted and used as a stable by Napoleon's soldiers in 1812, but was restored in mid-century, when its cupolas were for the first time painted the gay colors that remain today.

In his researches into the church's history, Sobolev has found that it contains a leaning tower, the central, tent-shaped dome, which tilts slightly off center. But since this tilt seems to have remained constant, no measures have been taken to shore it up.

In addition, Sovolev has discovered the traces of what he believes were an additional 12 small cupolas that have been lost in various rebuildings. He dreams of putting the 12 cupolas back in place.

Whooping Crane Chick Dies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — One of the rare whooping crane eggs being tended by foster jungle fowl hens hatched Thursday, but the chick immediately died, David McKelvey, senior aviculturist at the San Antonio Zoo, reported Friday.

Two other fertile eggs are still being tended by the bantam hens, while two have been sent to the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center in Laurel, Md., for incubation, McKelvey said.

The avocado-sized eggs are from Ektu and Crip, the only two of the rare whooping cranes in a public zoo. Ektu produced five eggs before Crip died March 27 after three decades in captivity and produced three more afterward.

Only five of the eight proved fertile, however, McKelvey said.

There are only about 100 whooping cranes remaining. The species nearly became extinct during the 1940s.

McKelvey said the chick began hatching about 10 a.m. Thursday. "It started making little crane noises, poked its beak through the shell and promptly died," he said.

"Everything went right up to the end. We don't know why it died, but we're running tests to try to figure why. This is a heavy blow," he added.

McKelvey said he sees no reason why the other eggs shouldn't hatch on schedule in about two weeks. "We see no reason why they wouldn't, but let's say we're expressing guarded optimism.

"After all, one does not count one's cranes until they hatch," he said.

VOLUNTEER WEEK SET

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has designated April 22-28 as "Texas Volunteer Week." Clements said his wife, Rita, will visit outstanding volunteer projects in Dallas, Houston, El Paso, Odessa, Fort Worth and Corpus Christi.

Scientists To Study Rare Phenomenon

DETROIT (AP) — Researchers at the University of Minnesota say they will study a rare phenomenon when they reunite 55-year-old twin sisters separated since age 4.

Betty Teetzel, of Redford Township, Mich., and Nancy Faircloth of Atlanta, Mich., have seen each other only twice since their childhood separation, the result of their parents' divorce. They will spend the week of May 20 at the university, according to Dr. Thomas Bouchard.

Auto Theft Rings Smashed In El Paso

EL PASO (AP) — Almost 50 persons have been arrested in El Paso in the past 48 hours in connection with an intensive undercover investigation into several car theft rings, police officials in the border city announced Friday.

The cover was blown Tuesday night when five men suspected of stealing cars apparently tried to rob three undercover officers they thought were merely fences, said Lt. Ed Agan, public information officer for the El Paso Police Department.

Two suspects were killed, two officers were wounded and one suspect was wounded in a shootout that followed.

Warrants went out immediately for suspects on whom officers had gatherd evidence in recent months. By Friday afternoon, 43 persons had been arrested on charges of felony theft, with bond ranging from $10,000 to $20,000. All were from El Paso, except four from Las Cruces, N.M., and one from Sunland Park, N.M., a police spokesman said.

Police Chief Bill Rodriguez said undercover agents spent $63,000 — from a federal grant — in the past several months to recover 120 stolen cars and trucks worth approximately $800,000.

Agan said most of the vehicles were stolen in El Paso, although some were taken from rental agencies and some from car lots.

Agan stressed that the car thefts were "not all part of one large theft ring, but rather they were various unconnected operations."

El Paso's anti-fencing operation was operated jointly by the U.S. Customs Service and the El Paso Police Department.

Tuesday night's shooting occurred in the 4500 block of Montana Street, in a business district about seven miles east of downtown El Paso. A police spokesman said it was near where one of the fencing operations was set up.

Police Capt. Al Castro was reported in guarded but improving condition Friday in an El Paso hospital recovering from a bullet that went through his stomach. Customs agent John Voliva was reported in serious condtiion but improving in another hospital with a bullet wound in the back.

Killed in the shootout were Armando Barrera Esparza, 31, of El Paso, and John Alvin Mason, 25, of El Paso. Both were pronounced dead at the scene. Shot in the eye and seriously injured was Charles Wayne Lewis, 22, of El Paso.

Anthony Carl Smith, 25, of El Paso surrendered Wednesday morning and was charged with attempted capital murder. A fifth man suspected of taking part in the attempted robbery of the undercover agents was Joe Roberts, 19, of El Paso. He was arrested Wednesday morning at his apartment and also charged with attempted capital murder.

Bond was set at $25,000 for Smith and $50,000 for Roberts.

Initial reports were that the shooting was connected with a drug operation.

"The operation was so secret that the first officers arriving at the scene assumed it was drugs. Captain Castro originally was assigned to narcotics, and the operation was kept so hush-hush that very few within the department even knew about it," Agan said of the anti-fencing operation.

Lions To Vote For District Leadership

The Lions Club members of the large District 2-T2 will elect new district officers today during the second day of activities of their 1979 district convention being held in Plainview.

Scheduled events will begin at 8 a.m. today with a breakfast, followed by a business session at 9:30 a.m. A necrology service will be held at noon in the Brown Chapel and then members will meet the officers' candidates at a luncheon beginning at 1 p.m.

Voting is scheduled for 3 p.m., with club officers schools and a meeting of the newly elected officers.

The day's events will culminate with the 6:30 p.m. district governor's banquet at Hutcherson Center, followed by the governor's ball at 9 p.m. in the Plainview Country Club.

The wives of Lions Club members also have a slate of activities scheduled, beginning with a 9:30 a.m. coffee in the Recital Hall at Wayland College, honoring Carolyn Harrington, outgoing district governor's wife and Toma Snodgrass, incoming district governor's wife.

At 10:30 p.m., the women will be treated to "The Greatest Doll Shown on Earth," with Esther McMurty of Lubbock.

Following the necrology service at noon at the Brown Chapel on campus, a "Palmetto" luncheon will be held in the Slaughter Dining Hall.

"Saturday Afternoon Fever," at 3 p.m., will see door prizes given away to all attending. Then, at 6:30 p.m. the women will join their husbands for the district governor's banquet and subsequent governor's ball.

The convention, which began Thursday night with a reception and dinner at Wayland College, featured a golf tournament and the Queens Luncheon, with guest speaker Miss Texas, during Friday's activities.

Members and their wives also enjoyed a Queens Pageant, International reception and Queens Ball Friday night.

South African Finds Vigil Among Reptiles Nerve Wracking

IT'S THE PITS IN THE SNAKE PIT — South Africa's Peter Snyman discusses a best seller with one of his roommates in the snake pit at Hartbeestport, South Africa. Snyman is attempting to set a world record for time spent among poisonous snakes. His hopes were nearly wrecked recently when he carelessly bumped a black mamba on the snout. His vigil hasn't been dull, it coincides with the mating season for his reptilian pals. (AP Laserphoto)

HARTEBEESPOORT, South Africa (AP) — Peter Snyman's attempt to set a world record for sitting among poisonous snakes nearly came to a sorry end Friday, as did Snyman, when he bumped a black mamba's nose.

But it's mating season in the snake cage, and for now at least, Snyman's deadly roommates are more interested in each other than in him.

"A black mamba slithered behind me when I was talking on the telephone. My elbow hit its nose and he reared back to a striking position with his hood flared and mouth open, ready to bite.

"I froze, and he retreated," said Snyman, propped up on a lavender blanket. A puff-adder snuggled against his jacket pocket like a cat snoozing in the sun.

In all, 24 poisonous snakes live in the cage with the 25-year-old carpenter. Sometimes they slither into bed with him for a little body warmth and diversion from the mating season evident elsewhere in the cage.

He has 23 days to go to beat the old record of 36 days set in 1975 by countryman Trevor Kruger. Kruger died in an auto accident several weeks after setting the record.

The cage, 10 feet square, contains six black mambas, six puff-adders, six Egyptian cobras and six tree snakes.

"My nerves are running ragged," he admitted after two weeks at the Hartebeespoort Snake Park 65 miles northwest of Johannesburg.

He sleeps two or three hours a day and does his chores very slowly to avoid startling the snakes.

"It can take up to three hours to make my bed, and two hours to eat a meal," he said. The reptiles occasionally slither onto his plate.

"I have lost weight," he admitted.

"The black mamba are such a maligned species," Snyman said of the deadliest reptiles in the cage. "I want to show that they don't have to be killed at every opportunity."

The mamba is related to the cobra. A mamba bite in a major artery can bring death in 30 seconds.

The panic button over his bed would bring a doctor running, but the serum doesn't take effect immediately, Snyman said. Park authorities say they probably could get him to an intensive care ward of a hospital in time to save him from most bites.

He had his biggest scare earlier this week when all the snakes popped into his bed during a 20-minute power outage. The reptiles noticed the drop in temperature when the heat supply shut off and cuddled up to their human buddy for some warmth. They mosied off as the heat returned.

One purpose of all this, he said, is to master self-control. He is allowed out of the cage twice a day for a total of 30 minutes. For recreation, he watches park visitors watching him.

And he watches the snakes.

Doctors Ignore Parents' Plea For Baby

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors have delivered a premature baby girl, disregarding her parent's emotional pleas on religious grounds that blood transfusions not be administered to the infant.

The child, identified only as "baby girl Dorsey," was born April 12 and remains under care at Walter Reed Hospital, officials there said Friday. It was learned that transfusions were given.

Joseph and Doris Dorsey, both Jehovah's Witnesses had sought in court to block the transfusions despite doctors' contentions the baby might die without such treatment.

U.S. District Judge William Bryant, however, said "there comes a time when a child has some inherent rights." Despite the parents' claim that transfusions are prohibited by the Bible, he ruled that blood be given if necessary.

An appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals was denied.

It was uncertain precisely how premature the child is, although it was believed she was delivered about a month early.

Leonardo Da Vinci conceived the idea of contact lenses in 1508 but his theory wasn't tested until 1890.

Milk Inspection Plan Draws Criticism

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A state bill granting sole authority for the inspection and grading of milk to the Texas Department of Health would save the Lubbock Health Department money, but local health officials nevertheless remain unconvinced of the merits of the proposed legislation.

"I very seriously doubt that if the state took over they could do as good a job (as the city health department)," Lubbock director of public services Denzel Percifull said.

Dr. Marjorie Orr, the city health department director, said, "I'm sorry the state is considering taking it over because we've had a high rating (on the quality of milk inspection program)."

State Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, the sponsor of the bill, said most Texas cities lose money on milk inspections and added that some communities are voluntarily turning over the responsibility to the state.

He said the present system creates much duplication between state and local inspectors, adding that with milk now being transported long distances, local enforcement is meaningless.

Percifull agreed in part with Presnal's assessment, saying, "Just on pure dollars and cents, I would say the sponsor of the bill is correct about the burden on the cities."

A net income or net loss figure on the Lubbock milk inspection program could not be obtained, but Dr. Orr estimated a $35,000 to $40,000 annual cost to the health department for salaries and fringe benefits for two inspectors.

She said the annual total revenue from permit fees charged to area milk processors and dairies could not be easily tabulated because of varying fees charged to different type and size operations.

According to city health department spokesmen, two Lubbock sanitarians, Comer Sharp and Wesley Farmer, currently inspect the two major milk processing plants in Lubbock and dairies throughout Northwest Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

Dr. Orr said each of the sites is inspected once a month, always by the Lubbock sanitarians, since no state inspectors currently participate in the program.

The bill, which advanced in the state House of Representatives by a vote of 108 to 23 in a second reading Tuesday, will be considered by the House for final approval by early next week, Presnal said.

"It's already cleared the Senate, but it will have to go back because of a change in the form of an amendment," said Presnal. "I don't foresee any problem in the Senate," he added.

The bill does not contain a provision for funding, meaning that if the proposed legislation becomes law, a separate appropriations bill to TDH will be necessary to provide for increased milk inspector staff.

Presnal said such legislation would be presented if the current bill is enacted into law.

One opponent of the bill, state Rep. Luther Jones, D-El Paso, has called it a "$3.3 million gift," representing the five-year cost to the state to assume sole milk inspection authority.

Former Busboy Pleads Innocent

BOSTON (AP) — An unemployed, teen-age father has pleaded innocent to murder and arson charges in connection with two hotel fires in downtown Boston in which police said one person died and 69 were injured.

Julio V. Rodrigues, 18, a former busboy at the Copley Plaza and Sheraton Boston hotels, entered innocent pleas Wednesday before Suffolk Superior Court Judge Edward H. Bennett, who ordered the suspect held without bond on the murder charge. Bennett appointed a lawyer for Rodrigues, scheduled a hearing May 15 and set bond at $100,000 on each of two arson counts.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — I am a graduate of Texas Tech University with bachelor's degrees in applied music and music education. I am interested in playing in one of the top military bands. I am asking for your help in finding out if there are any trumpet openings in the Air Force, Marine, Navy, Army Field or Air Force Academy Bands. I have enclosed my resume and would appreciate your assistance. Thank you very much. — J.E., Levelland

SEN. BENTSEN RESPONDS — I am pleased to advise you that the U.S. Marine Corps Band has two openings in the trumpet section. None of the other military bands you mentioned has an opening right now, nor do they anticipate any openings in the immediate future. I am sure you know that competition for the Marine Corps Band will be very keen, but you have an opportunity to try out for one of the openings at an audition in early May. I wish you the best of luck.

MESSAGE — We recently moved our company offices to a new location in Houston and we are having problems with our evening mail pickup. I called the Post Office and was sent a slip saying it was not economical to provide our location with a collection box.

Our problem is that we send out about 5,000 pieces of mail a month, many of which are insurance checks, and they need to be in a fairly safe place to await pickup by the Postal Service. The closest box is only two blocks away, but it is outside and unprotected. Every afternoon, mail is stacked up around the box and that is unsatisfactory for our security. We need another box in this area and would appreciate your help with the Post Office. — D.M., Houston

SEN. BENTSEN RESPONDS — Postal Service officials tell me that, in addition to the box you are using, there are two additional mail boxes within a three-block area. They maintain that this provides an adequate level of service and feel that locating a fourth mail box in this vicinity would simply not be economical unless mailing patterns change drastically. They have assured me they will advise you as to the locations of the other existing boxes.

Do you have a problem with government? Message to Washington tries to help with answers to your questions about Social Security, veterans benefits, immigration matters and other problems you have run into in your dealings with the federal government. Write Message to Washington, care of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C., 20510. Petroleum Scholarships Set

Winners of this year's annual Southwestern Petroleum Short Course scholarships were recognized Thursday at the start of the 1979 meeting sponsored by the West Texas petroleum industry in cooperation with the Texas Tech University Department of Petroleum Engineering.

Each of the two scholarships provides $750 for a student majoring in petroleum engineering. The recipients are Scott Pullen of Phoenix and Arnold Nall of Monahans.

Pullen, a junior, was awarded the Norman Lamont Scholarship, which memorializes a former member of the petroleum engineering faculty who helped initiate the short course 26 years ago. Pullen, who already holds a bachelor's degree in zoology from Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, worked for more than two years on drilling and workover rigs near Farmington, N.M., before enrolling in the petroleum engineering degree program at Texas Tech. He is the son of Richard Pullen, 3136 W. Acoma Drive, and Mrs. Evelyn Pullen, 4734 N. 10th Place, Phoenix.

Nall, a sophomore, was awarded the SWPSC Scholarship. He is the son gof Mr. and Mrs. William D. Nall, 1208 S. Bruce, Monahans.

Prof. Duane A. Crawford of the Texas Tech petroleum engineers, and faculty said that "there still is a shortage of petroleum engineers, and graduates are in demand." Crawford is chairman of the SWPCS Board of Directors.

Dismantling Of Old Houses Halted By City Panel Action

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Urban Design Commission Chairman Beverly Stribling has declared a moratorium on further dismantling of two 13th Street houses located on property the First Baptist Church plans to use for additional parking.

The moratorium applies to the houses at 2219 and 2223 13th Street pending a decision by the commission on whether to designate the Overton South Neighborhood a historic landmark district, Mrs. Stribling said.

That decision will be made May 17, the same day the Zoning Board of Adjustment will be asked to approve the use of the three lots for parking.

Mrs. Stribling said she was asked to issue the moratorium by members of the Overton South Neighborhood Association, who also requested the neighborhood be considered for historic landmark district designation.

The moratorium was the first decision of its kind made by the commission since it was formed in September.

The two houses affected by the moratorium also are potential historic landmarks, Mrs. Stribling said.

The owner of the two houses, E.G. Cone of E.G. Cone Construction, said he'll probably cooperate with the moratorium.

However, he said he planned to meet with the city attorney to talk about the moratorium to determine "what I'm going to do."

The moratorium will "put me in a bind financially," Cone said, adding it seems "certain things should have been settled before now."

Surprisingly, Cone said he does not oppose the aims of the Urban Design Commission to save one of the houses, and said he planned to move both houses and restore them.

A two-story stone house at 2223 13th St. "should be taken down and restored if they really mean what they say," Cone said, because it is structurally unsound.

Cone said he had a lucrative offer to sell the stone off the house, but after researching some of the history of the structure decided instead to restore the house.

"I'm somewhat of a history buff," he said.

The house was built in 1928 with stone reportedly from Europe and some native stone, as well as petrified wood, he said.

However, Cone said the second house under the moratorium doesn't have the same historic value.

Materials taken off the house have been placed in interior storage and marked so the house can be reassembled following the move, he said.

A damaged portion of the roof has been removed, he said, but the floors of the house have been oiled and will be covered with plastic to protect them from weather damage, he said.

"I just feel that the house should be saved — that's my plan and the plan of my employees," he said.

He compared the house to the Statue of Liberty. "Someone may own the land it sits on, but the statue belongs to the people," he said.

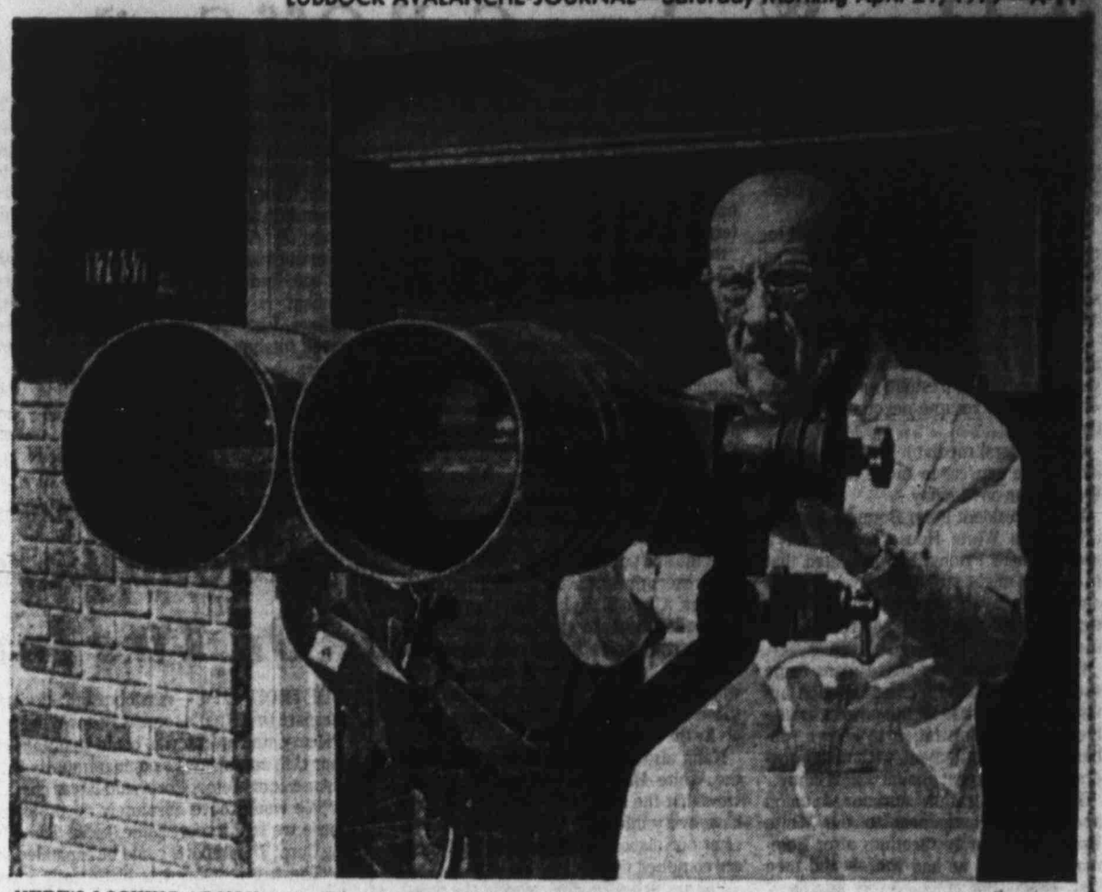

Cone predicted "once people get together to talk to their opponents, I don't think this will amount to much."

However, that opinion is not shared by Overton South Neighborhood Association Chairman Roger Loter.

Loter said the association voted unanimously to oppose any further encroachment into their neighborhood by tearing down more homes for church parking.

If the houses on 13th Street are removed or demolished, the front of the neighborhood from Broadway will be an alley, he said.

"When do you stop the encroachment of parking?" he asked. "They said the wouldn't acquire any more parking or request any more zoning (for parking)" until they presented a comprehensive plan for future development to the Zoning Board of Adjustment, he said.

Tech Honors Woman Of Year

Texas Tech University Legal Counsel Marilyn E. Phelan was named Woman of the Year at a reception Friday in the University Center Courtyard.

The four runners-up are Jane H. Brandenberger, director of University News and Publications and 1978 finalist; Joyce A. Arterburn, physical education instructor; Edna Maynard Gott, economics assistant professor and 1977 finalist; and Dr. Elizabeth Skidmore Sasser, architecture professor.

The presentation by Mortar Board and Women In Communications Inc. included a talk by last year's recipient, Dr. Helen C. Britton, associate professor of food and nutrition.

Dr. Phelan, the highest ranking woman in the Texas Tech administration, is the first woman on the vice presidential level of the university. She graduated with honors from Texas Tech, with bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees in business administration. She also graduated with honors from the University of Texas Law School.

Dr. Phelan has taught in the College of Business Administration and currently is professor of law. She served as assistant and associate dean in the Graduate School for four years before assuming her current position. She is also a certified public accountant.

The selection committee based its final selection on outstanding ability and service to the campus, community, profession, students and the role of women.

The Woman of the Year Award began in 1974, replacing the former Faculty Woman of the Year Award by the Association of Women Students.

Fuel Price Hikes Expected In City

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Gasoline Prices in the Lubbock area may reach $1 a gallon before the end of the peak summer driving season if present trends persist, a survey conducted by the Avalanche-Journal shows.

The survey indicated gasoline prices have continued their steady climb, with most grades going up by two cents a gallon.

Meanwhile, a nationwide poll conducted by the United Press International revealed prices were up as much as five cents a gallon over last week in some parts of the country. One dealer in Honolulu was reportedly selling gas for $1.02 a gallon, the highest in the U.S..

The average price for a gallon of regular leaded fuel in Lubbock hovered at 69.9 cents today at self-service pumps, up two cents from last week at most stations.

Full service regular ranged from 70.9 cents a gallon at Bolton and Fina stations to a high of 77.9 cents at one Texaco station, an average gain of two to three cents.

Increases in premium averaged a penny a gallon at most stations, from a low of 75.9 cents at one Chevron station to a high of 83.9 at one Texaco station, the highest in the city.

Self-service premium remained fairly constant in price. The low of 73.9 cents was reported at one Texaco station and the high of 76.9 at several Gulf and Exxon stations. The high octane premium is not sold at most stations, but remains the most expensive fuel at full service stations.

Unleaded fuel took the biggest price jump at most full service outlets, gaining from three to four cents. The reported low was 73.9 cents at one Chevron station and the high was 81.9 at a Texaco station.

Self-service unleaded ranged from a low of 72.9 to a high of 78.9, up one or two cents at most stations in the survey.

Dealers across the city say their allotments have been cut back and that they have had to shorten their hours as a result.

"I'm just about out of gas right now," said one Fina dealer. "I should be receiving more today, but I'm not sure how much I'll get." He said his allocations have cut back considerably the last couple of months.

"I still get the same amount of gas that I did last year," explains an Exxon dealer. "But the demand is greater and I've had to cut back on the hours I'm open.

A local Gulf dealer said his allocation has been cut so much that he has to close on Sunday and stay open fewer hours during the week.

The Department of Energy, reportedly receiving nationwide complaints by the thousands of stations overcharging for gas, has dispatched investigative teams in some parts of the nation to crack down on possible price-gouging.

Although there have been no reports of such activity in the Lubbock area, residents may call the DOE hot line number in Washington if they suspect any stations of charging unfair prices. That toll-free number is 800-424-9246.

The DOE "sweep" teams have already slapped subpoenas on two stations in Manhattan which were suspected of overcharging at the pump.

Most dealers in the Lubbock area reported business as brisk, but didn't know whether they'll be able to keep up with the increase in demand during vacation time.

Priest Faces Charges In Boutique Robbery

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest will be arraigned May 18 on charges that he attempted to rob a Glenn Mills, Pa., boutique. No money was taken in the holdup.

The Rev. Bernard T. Pagano, 53, assistant pastor at St. Mary Refuge of Sinners Church in Cambridge, Md., was told Thursday to appear on charges stemming from the Feb. 22 incident.

This case is similar to six pending against Pagano in Wilmington, Del., where the priest is accused of being the "Gentleman Bandit," a well-heeled gunman who operated in January and February. He faces trial May 28 in Wilmington Superior Court on five charges of armed robbery and one charge of attempted robbery. Pagano is free on $30,000 bond in Delaware and $500 bond in Pennsylvania.

Appeals Judge Reviews Court For Lawyers

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin has gone through a number of radical changes in the past two decades, Appellate Judge Tom Davis told a Lubbock County Bar Association luncheon Friday.

"When I first went on the district court bench in 1959, criminal law was fairly static," Judge Davis said in the Lubbock Club meeting. "Then came the '60s and a deluge of cases from the United States Supreme Court holding that numerous federal rights were applicable to cases tried in state courts through the 14th Amendment.

"These and other decisions of the Supreme Court made the trial of criminal cases in a state court an entirely new ballgame in the '60s."

Davis, a native of Haskell County and one of nine judges on the appeals court, said the Texas Penal Code of 1974 also brought drastic changes in criminal procedure.

The justice said one reason he accepted an invitation to speak here was a paper Lubbock attorney Don Hunt presented to a group of appellate judges early this year "in which he stated that there was a need for appellate courts to inform the members of the bar as to how they function..."

He said the number of appeals filed with the court increased from 867 in 1968 to 1,628 in 1973 and 3,104 in 1978.

Only about 20 percent of the court opinions, those considered legally significant, are published, he said, but all reversals are published, which he said "may give a distorted view of our reversal rate."

"Last year we had a reversal rate of 8.1 percent," he said, "compared to 13 percent in 1977. Over a period of years the rate appears to run from 7 percent to 15 percent."

Rubber Workers Call Off Strike; Negotiations To Continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Rubber Workers union called off a threatened weekend strike in the rubber industry Friday after snubbing the White House in a dispute over President Carter's voluntary wage guidelines.

"There will be no strike at midnight tonight," when current contracts covering 55,000 rubber workers expire, URW spokeswoman Janis Froelich said from Akron, Ohio, where the union is based.

She said negotiators from the union and "Big Four" tire makers — Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone and Uniroyal — planned to resume negotiations Monday.

Chief federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz said he expects to move the talks to Washington on Monday.

URW President Peter Bommarito, who rebuffed a White House request for a meeting here Friday, had indicated that the union might strike Uniroyal at 12:01 a.m. Saturday if agreement on a new three-year contract was not reached by then.

Cancellation of any strike plans came shortly after Carter's chief inflation advisers vowed to use all the powers available to the administration to keep a rubber industry settlement within the government's 7 percent annual wage ceiling.

The administration summoned union and industry bargainers to the White House for separate meetings after Bommarito claimed he had won — and then lost — a settlement far exceeding the 7 percent standard, a figure Bommarito has rejected as inadequate.

Bommarito agreed to the meeting Thursday, but unexpectedly cancelled out on Friday, saying he misunderstood the purpose of the sessions.

He said he thought the discussion would focus on his charge that Uniroyal had tentatively agreed to new economic terms but then reneged. Instead, he said, "the real purpose of the meetings was to discuss the Carter administration's wage-price guidelines."

The administration's highly unusual 11th-hour intervention into the contract dispute was a clear signal by Carter's inflation team that it was intent on pressuring bargainers to stay within the guidelines.

Carter's advisers met as planned Friday afternoon with chief executives from the major tire companies. The advisers had planned to meet afterward with Bommarito.

At the start of the session with the company executives, Carter's chief inflation adviser, Alfred E. Kahn, said the meeting was called because of reports that some of the companies tentatively agreed to contracts "substantially in excess of the wage standards." Kahn said rumors of those settlements persisted despite denials by the companies.

Kahn also said he called the parties to the White House to express "our firm view that the guidelines are alive and we have every intention of using every power at our disposal to make sure that they are complied with."

Charles Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said the companies were warned of "the consequences" if the voluntary pay standards were violated.

He did not detail consequences, but the companies could be threatened with the loss of contracts to sell tires to the government if they exceed the guidelines.

Bommarito said from his union's headquarters in Akron, Ohio, "If through their mathematic gymnastics the government can find a way to state that our agreement is in compliance with the guidelines, I have no objection. I do not, however, intend to be a party to it."

Charles J. Pilliod, Goodyear's chairman, said as he arrived for the meeting that "I would hope" to reach an agreement that falls within the guidelines.

Bommarito, who repeatedly has vowed to ignore the guidelines, announced Thursday he had reached tentative agreement on new economic terms with Uniroyal, Firestone and Goodrich, but still had other issues to resolve. The three companies, however, denied any agreement had been reached.

Later Thursday, Bommarito, charging that an unnamed Uniroyal executive had reneged on the agreement, said he had approval from his executive board to seek wage and fringe benefit boosts of more than 30 percent over three years.

On Friday, an industry source said the terms Bommarito was seeking would mean wage and benefit boosts "in excess of 40 percent" over three years — or more than 13 percent a year.

Carter's advisers then called for Friday's meeting, "because they were terrified there would be a settlement way above the guidelines," said the source, who asked not to be named.

The source said the URW's demands include general wage increases of about $1.20 an hour over three years, an improved cost-of-living formula that would generate additional wage boosts and "major improvements" in pensions and other fringe benefits.

"As far as I know, nobody (at the companies) ever agreed to a package of that size," said the source.

Currently, rubber workers average about $8 an hour and receive fringe benefits worth about $3 an hour.

Before Thursday's turn of events, Goodyear was the only tire maker to propose a full economic offer, according to the union. The offer adhered strictly to the guidelines, offering a boost in wages and benefits of 7 percent a year. Bommarito rejected the offer.

Carter's inflation advisers say the wage guidelines were bent — but not broken — by the recent Teamsters union settlement on a new national contract for 300,000 members in the trucking industry.

Because of concessions granted by the administration, the Teamsters won contract boosts they estimate at more than 9 percent a year. But the administration maintains that the settlement still falls within the guideline.

The administration previously has said the rubber negotiations, along with the Teamsters talks and upcoming auto negotiations, would be a major test of the success of Carter's guidelines.

Automakers To Rely On Tire Inventories

DETROIT (AP) — A rubber industry strike wouldn't mean your new car has no spare tire. That's some way down the road.

Heavy tire inventories could maintain car and truck production for a while, four U.S. automakers said unanimously Friday.

American Motors Corp. said it was checking on how it would be affected.

"We would have absolutely no problem because of our inventories and because we still import some," said Tom McDonald of Volkswagen Manufacturing Corp. The imports could be expanded, he said.

"The tire industry has historically inventoried tires to protect our production," said a statement read by a General Motors Corp. spokesman who asked not to be named.

In a statement attributed to Clint D. Lauer, director of body and assembly purchasing, Ford Motor Co. said, "We have adequate inventories of car and truck tires and the company does not anticipate any problems in maintaining production schedules should a tire strike occur this week."

"Our inventories are such that, if they go out, we'll be able to chug along for a while," said Chrysler Corp. spokesman John Montgomery.

Only Chrysler would answer the question: Will cars have to be shipped without spare tires, as manufacturers ended up doing in the 141-day 1976 rubber industry strike?

"Yes, we may have to do it again, if there's a long strike," Montgomery said.

The Big Three manufacturers would not say precisely how long they could keep going under a long rubber industry shutdown. A GM source hinted at "other sources" but did not elaborate.

More than half the tire plants in the United States are non-union. Additionally, some tires are imported. It was not known how far those sources could be stretched.

UPI Dispatch Sells For $130

NEW YORK (UPI) — An original United Press International teletype printout dealing with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963, was sold at auction Thursday night for $130.

A spokesman for Charles Hamilton Galleries said the bid set a world's record for a teletype story.

The UPI dispatch, printed on a series of blue sheets, consisted of an account received that Friday evening from Dallas.

In part it read: "...The President was struck by the first shot. The Governor heard the crack and turned slightly in his seat toward the President. He too was shot... Alive but unconscious when he received the final sacraments of the Roman Catholic from Father Huber. Death came to the President as he lay face up on an examining table in the emergency room."

Hamilton did not know the name of the buyer.

Soviet Jews Pardoned Of Hijack Attempt, Allowed To Emigrate

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev has pardoned five Jews who spent nearly nine years in prison for attempting to hijack a plane and escape from the Soviet Union, according to one of the men.

Wolf Zalmanson, contacted by telephone in Riga Friday, said he and the four others also were receiving exit visas and would leave their homeland by the end of the month. They had 14 months remaining on their 10-year sentences.

Five other persons convicted of the hijacking attempt in Leningrad on June 17, 1970, are still in jail, serving terms ranging from 12 to 15 years.

Soviet dissidents said Brezhnev's action, along with the granting of visas to several Jews in Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev, were linked to a visit here by a delegation of U.S. congressmen.

Activist Yelena Bonner Sakharov said the pardons were issued because Soviet leaders "want most-favored-nation status" for trade with the United States. Mrs. Sakharov, wife of dissident leader Andrei D. Sakharov, noted that the Kremlin has been unhappy about trade restrictions imposed by the United States because of the Soviets' negative policy toward Jewish emigration.

Zalmanson, 39, told The Associated Press he and three other prisoners — Boris Penson, 33, Anatoly Altman, 36, and Leib Khnokh, 35 — were set free Thursday after a release order was signed by Brezhnev as head of the Supreme Soviet — parliament. They are residents of Riga.

Zalmanson said he did not know if the fifth man, Hillel Butman, 46, of Leningrad, had yet been released, but Jewish sources in London said Butman telephoned relatives in Israel and told them he was free.

Twenty-six persons were convicted in four trials of trying to hijack an aircraft from Leningrad's Smolny airport to Sweden, and 21 have now been freed. They had planned the hijacking after requests for exit visas were refused.

Zalmanson said authorities were "doing all they can to speed and ease the formalities" to issue visas now. He declined to speculate on the reason for the pardons. "Nobody expected them. Nobody asked for them," he said.

Moscow dissidents said Soviet officials also have issued visas or approved travel plans for Leonid Slepak, 19, the son of Jewish activist Vladimir Slepak who is serving a five-year term of Siberian exile; Felix Aronovich of Leningrad, who applied for a visa seven years ago; and six Jewish families in Kiev.

Still in prison for the hijacking attempt are Eduard Kuznetsov and Mark Dymshits, who originally were sentenced to death but then were given 15 years; Alexei Murzhenko, 14 years, and Iosif Mendelevich and Yuri Fyodorov, 12 years.

Kuznetzov was identified at the trial as the ringleader. His wife, Silva Zalmanson, and two of her brothers, Wolf and Israel Zalmanson, were among those convicted. She served four years and Israel eight. Both are in Israel now.

U.S. officials reported the March figures for Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union set a record as the Kremlin continued to try and improve its relations with the United States while the two countries near agreement on a strategic arms limitation pact.

According to Washington statistics, 4,418 Soviet Jews reached Vienna last month. Vienna is the main transit point from Moscow.

The U.S. officials said that on the basis of the first three months, nearly 50,000 Jews may be allowed to emigrate this year.

The highest yearly total so far was about 35,000 in 1973. The previous record for a single month was 4,406 in October 1973.

Acreage Added To State Park

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The size of Big Spring State Park, which embraces Scenic Mountain, will be increased by about 38 acres, thanks to a conveyance property announced by the General Services Administration.

U.S. Rep. Charles W. Stenholm announced Friday that the GSA had initiated the transfer.

The acerage formerly was a part of Webb Air Force Base. It has been assigned to the Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service in the Department of the Interior, which in turn will deed it over to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department for park and recreational use.

The property is irregularly shaped and has no improvements on it. It is located along the eastern edge of the old base between the family housing area and land acquired by the city for public airport and industrial purposes.

Rampant Gold Rush Rumors Put To Rest

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Cancel that Rhode Island gold rush. A federal agency said Friday an analysis of ore taken from a supposed gold mine in Glocester failed to show signs of unusual amounts of the precious metal.

Reports of that gold was found at the old Durfee Hill Mine last month caused a stir in Glocester, a rural town in the northwestern part of the state.

But William R. Barton, head of the New England regional office of the U.S. Bureau of Mines said Friday the excitement was unfounded.

"We took five samples from the site and found nothing," he said.

The results of the survey have been forwarded to the state Department of Environmental Management. The state owns part of the property, the rest is owned by a group including Allen Balboni of Glocester, who claimed to have uncovered a major find.

"If you look hard enough, you can find specks of gold virtually anywhere," Barton said.

"He can make any claim he wants. I can only speak for the five samples of ore we analyzed," Barton said.

Miss Roman, a junior at New Home High School, was found unconscious at her home by a neighbor Wednesday night. She was taken by private vehicle to the hospital, where she was pronounced dead.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy had withheld a ruling in the death until Friday morning when he received an autopsy report on the young woman.

According to a pathologist, the illness, marked by a severe sore throat, high fever and prostration, usually can be cured by a shot of penicillin.

The teen-ager apparently had not received such treatment.

A 13-year-old brother who was with Miss Roman when she was found, told authorities his sister had taken several tablets of a prescription medicine belonging to their mother.

Services for Miss Roman will be at 1:30 p.m. today in New Home Baptist Church with the Rev. Jack Lee, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park under direction of White Funeral Home of Tahoka.

A Catholic, Miss Roman was a member of Future Homemakers of America and her school's volleyball team.

Survivors include her parents Oscar Roman and Rita Roman, both of New Home; her grandfather, Cipiano Arcate of California; a sister, Sylvia Balderas of New Home; and three brothers, Frankie, Oscar Jr. and George, all of New Home.

Four individuals involved in a fraudulent income tax refund scheme operating from Big Spring during 1976 and 1978 were sentenced Friday in the U.S. District Court in San Angelo.

J.C. Woodard, Calvin Lee Camp and Nathan Baker, of Big Spring and Howard McCormick of Abilene, bring to 12 the number of persons who have been sentenced in connection with the scheme.

Shooting Suspect Surrenders Here

Gregory Sanchez, 17, of 2124 Ave. V, charged with the attempted murder of a city cab driver, turned himself into the Lubbock County Sheriff's Department Friday morning.

Sanchez was being held Friday in the county jail in lieu of $25,000 bond. The suspect was charged with the shooting of Hank Eugene Dubey, employed by Yellow Cab Co.

Dubey, 28, of 1615 29th St., was shot about 10:30 p.m. Sunday on East 19th Street, about two miles east of Loop 289. The driver alleges he was shot by a passenger in his cab, after the suspect asked him to stop on the side of the road.

Formal charges were filed Monday against Sanchez, and authorities had been looking for him until he surrendered this morning.

Dubey was listed in serious condition at West Texas Hospital, but is said to be improving.

SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco was founded as the pueblo of Yerba Buena in 1834. The San Francisco Bay area was visited in 1769 by Spanish Sgt. Jose Ortega. The city proper has a population of less than 700,000 but it is the center of a metropolitan area of more than 3 million, sixth largest in the U.S.

Man Unhappy With Small Check Bounces Person Responsible

Frank E. French told police he had hired a black man between 36 and 45 to pull weeds from his 1522 24th Place yard. However, French said, when he wrote the man a check for his work about 11:15 a.m., the suspect got upset with the amount he was being paid.

After yelling that he deserved more money, French said, the suspect then attacked his employer with a metal yard tool.

In a report of vandalism, construction company worker Stan Sedgwick told police two houses being built in southwest Lubbock sustained a total of $12,000 damage Thursday night when a forklift was driven into their walls.

Sedgwick said a house being built at 2907 94th St. had two walls pushed in, while four walls of a residence under construction at 9315 Elgin Ave. were damaged.

Charles E. Moore, owner-manager of Inland Discount Marine at 1318 E. 50th St., told police six pairs of water skis, totaling $1530, a $100 battery and $7 battery box were stolen from his business Thursday afternoon, possibly while he was showing a customer boats in another portion of the firm.

Mike Robison told sheriff's deputies $1,525 in tools were stolen from a house under construction three miles north of Loop 289 on FM 1264. Robison said the burglars broke down the front door of the house to get to the equipment stored inside.

Verna M. Taylor of 5032 27th St. said cameras, kitchen appliances, jewelry and $350 cash were stolen from her residence last week while she was out of town. She estimated her loss at $1,477.

Nine Home Box Office units, worth $1,044, were the target of burglars who broke into two of Lubbock Cable Television's pickup trucks Thursday night, according to Jack Walker.

Walker, technical supervisor for the company, told police seven of the units were stolen from one truck and the other two taken from the second vehicle, both parked inside a fenced parking lot by the business. He said vent windows in each truck had been pried.

Arnold Kersh said a $125 .22-caliber pistol and two stereo speakers worth a total of $750 were stolen from his 4109-A 16th St. residence between 6:30 p.m. Thursday and 3:45 a.m. Friday.

A 22-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 2 a.m. Friday after he allegedly assaulted the woman he lives with, and then followed her to Health Sciences Center Hospital where she was being treated for scratches on the back and chest.

The woman, 30, said the man had come home shortly before 1 a.m. Friday drunk and violent. She said he became angry at her and began beating her.

Nurses in the HSCH emergency room later called police, reporting that the man was causing a disturbance there. The man was apprehended as he attempted to drive off from the hospital, and was taken to the county jail.

In other activity, a teen-aged woman was arrested at her residence about 9:45 p.m. Thursday when she offered sex for money to an undercover policeman.

Reports show the officer called a number given in a classified "nude modeling" advertisement in The Avalanche-Journal and the 19-year-old suspect gave him her address and invited him over. She was arrested after reportedly leading the vice officer into her bedroom and offering him sex for $60.

Police answered an alarm about 12:15 am Friday at a home construction company at 9602 S. University Ave. and found that the building had been vandalized, with damage estimated at $3,000.

Doors, windows and the sign outside the business had been torn up, and a tractor had been left running outside.

Witnesses said they saw two men drive around the business several times and then heard a loud crash. Police were searching for a man who had been fired from the company last week.

Chaney Robinson Hall of 3010 E. Fourth St. told police that between 6:20 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Thursday his residence was broken into and $4,610 in property stolen, including jewelry, guns and clothes.

Five shotguns and five rifles, totaling $2,000, was the loot taken when burglars entered William Ross Anthony's 3202 43rd St. residence between 4:25 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

Mario Perez Jr. of 2023 17th St., rear, said burglars struck his apartment Thursday and made off with a guitar, television and stereo equipment, totaling $1,150.

Heiress Faces Eviction

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Socialite Louise Vanderbilt has lost her bid for an appeal of her eviction, and her landlord says he plans to put her out of one of her two Newport apartments within a week.

The state Supreme Court decided on Thursday not to hear Mrs. Vanderbilt's request for an appeal of a Superior Court eviction order.

The landlord, Harry B.B. Casey, wants to evict Mrs. Vanderbilt from one of the two apartments she rents in a Victorian house because she paid her March rent five days late.

Last year, she joined a ow-incometenants group to fight for rent control after Casey tried to raise her rent from $940 a month for both apartments to $2,700.

Car Given Last Rites

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A heavy equipment operator got tired of a car monopolizing his apartment parking spot for days. So he decided early Friday to bury his problem — literally, police said.

The scrappy 45-year-old man apparently crushed the Ford Pinto with a backhoe and buried it the earthen apartment parking lot about 3:30 a.m.

Police reported that a witness found the man about half an hour later as he was smoothing the last clumps of dirt over the unusual grave.

An officer said he arrived to find the satisfied man standing beside his car cemetery. He was taken into custody.

The apartment manager, who said he did not expect to press any charges, said the pulverized Pinto belonged to a man he had recently evicted. Police were still trying to locate the car's owner.

The manager said he casually mentioned to one tenant a few days ago that he didn't know what to do with the evicted man's unclaimed car other than dig a hole and bury it.

Watergate Reporter Promoted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Woodward, whose reporting with Carl Bernstein on the Watergate scandal won a Pulitzer Prize for the Washington Post, will become the newspaper's assistant managing editor for metropolitan news on May 1, the Post announced Friday.

Woodward has been an investigative reporter and deputy metropolitan editor in recent years. Bernstein left the paper in 1976 to write books.

Rizzo Bows Out, Not Quietly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor Frank Rizzo, in a typically two-fisted local radio interview, has predicted that Philadelphians will be "clamoring" for his return once he leaves office.

Rizzo, during the two-hour interview on WWDB-FM Thursday, saved his best broadsides for the coterie of liberals he claims led a smear campaign against him. "The ultra-liberal community ... Unless you dance to their tune, you're Idi Amin," said Rizzo, referring to the former Ugandan dictator.

"I'll be retired in nine months. They'll be clamoring for Frank Rizzo ... You got to have stomach to run this town, or those idiots will run all over you and ground you up."

Rizzo was overwhelmingly defeated in November in his bid to change the City Charter so he could seek an unprecedented third term.

A former policeman and the city's former police commissioner, Rizzo said he'd carry a gun or two once he left office.

Governor Bids To Cut Salary

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — When he took office in January, Gov. Fob James said he would cut his own pay from $50,000 a year to $45,000.

Then he was told he couldn't do it. State law fixes the salary at $50,000, and the state constitution says it cannot be raised or lowered during a governor's term.

Friday James told reporters "we broke the law" and he is drawing only $45,000. And he added, "if someone sues us for not taking the right pay, it would make an interesting lawsuit."

However, his office said he is getting $50,000 because the state comptroller has to pay it in accordance with the law. So James decided, his office said, to turn the money back in later.

Paisley Preserves Play

NORTH ROYALTON, Ohio (AP) — A local production of the play "P.S. Your Cat is Dead" will go on as scheduled, because of a compromise involving a pair of paisley undershorts.

Producer Thomas Asad said Thursday that "for the sake of good will" with the community he agreed to the compromise under which the lead actor will keep on his paisley shorts when he drops his pants during the show.

Smith Leaving ABC News

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newscaster Howard K. Smith, unhappy about what he sees as a lesser role at ABC, is leaving the network after 17 years as television anchorman and commentator.

SMITH

An ABC News spokesman said Thursday Smith had been offered a new five-year contract calling for work including "occasional commentary." And the spokesman said ABC was sorry to see Smith leave.

But Smith, who will be 65 next month, said in a memo to colleagues in the network's Washington bureau that he felt company executives had "made it clear that my commentary on the evening news would not be part of the (contract) offer," that it was being phased out "to lighten the show.'

"Imust try now to find another professional outlet," Smith said in his memo. "I hope I will succeed."

Cheers, Hugs, Kisses Greet Carters' Arrival In Plains

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter, dressed casually and carrying his grandson, was greeted with cheers, hugs and kisses Friday as he arrived in his hometown for an overnight stay.

The president, fresh from an eight-day vacation on secluded Sapelo Island, said: "I feel like I've come home."

The helicopter that brought Carter, wife Rosalynn, son Chip and grandson James Earl IV from the island touched down in the grass at Peterson Field a few miles from here.

Carter, wearing a short-sleeve, brown shirt and lightweight, tan slacks in the hot sun, handed baby James to his mother-in-law, Miss Allie Smith, and headed toward a welcoming crowd of more than 100 people.

"It's been good so far," the president said of his vacation, which ends when he returns to Washington Sunday.

His mother, Miss Lillian, and sister, Gloria Carter Spann, who were attending a library conference in Topeka, Kan., were due here Friday night.

"I will never wash my hand again," one woman shrieked after shaking Carter's suntanned hand.

A woman from Alabama, apparently unable to resist, kissed him on the cheek three times.

Also on hand were several organizers of a reunion next week for the Peanut Brigade, a group of volunteers who worked for Carter during the 1976 presidential election.

One of the organizers, Logan Lewis, a contractor, said he expects 450 persons, including the first lady, to attend the events in Thomasville, 68 miles south of here, next Friday.

He said the events include a barbeque and square dance.

Lewis, who said he's known Carter since they were boys, said the reunion is being held "to inspire them a bit to get ready for these volunteer trips" for the 1980 election.

They drove to their family home on Woodland Drive, where they stayed only a few minutes, before setting out on foot for the three-block walk downtown, holding hands part of the way and stopping briefly to greet neighbors.

His leisurely stroll had a Pied Piper effect. He began with a group of reporters and Secret Service agents trailing him, but tourists soon gathered and pushed close to shake his hand.

They ducked into most of the stores in the two-block-long downtown area, eating ice cream cones at the Peanut Patch and chatting with cousin Hugh Carter in his antique store.

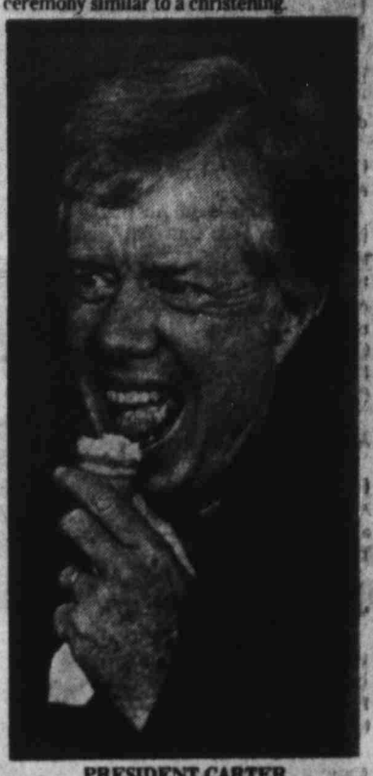

Displayed prominently in the store was a photograph of the president with the deposed shah and empress of Iran taken in November 1977.

The last stop was the Carter peanut warehouse, which figures in a government financial investigation.

When he emerged, Carter was asked how business was. "Things are pretty good," he replied. "They are planting peanuts now."

The president told cousin Hugh that Billy Carter, currently in an alcohol rehabilitation center at the Long Beach Naval Hospital in California, intends to spend the night with the first family next weekend.

From here, the presidential family travels to Calhoun, Ga., Saturday for an overnight visit with their eldest son, Jack, and his family. Jack's 4-month-old daughter, Sarah Rosemary, will be "dedicated" in the Baptist church Sunday in a ceremony similar to a christening.

Israeli Sentenced For Propaganda

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A man who moved back to his native Iraq for several years and worked for its government before returning to Israel was sentenced to four years in prison for broadcasting anti-Israeli propaganda and passing secrets to the enemy, Radio Israel reported.

Yaakov Oved, an Israeli army veteran, worked in the propaganda department in Iraq and broadcast appeals to Iraqi-born Jews to return, charging discrimination in Israel. But he became disenchanted in Iraq, returned to Israel and was arrested.

The broadcast said the court gave Oved a "light sentence" because his mental state was unstable.

Explosion Damages City Hall In Rome

ROME (AP) — A powerful bomb tore the door from Rome's stately city hall Friday and heavily damaged the Renaissance structure that houses offices of the Marxist mayor. Rightists claimed responsibility for the blast on the square designed by Michelangelo.

Police sources said it was the worst assault on a major work of art here since a hammer-wielding Australian geologist broke off the left arm and disfigured the face of the Madonna in Michelangelo's Pieta in St. Peter's Basilica in 1972.

President Sandro Pertini, in a telephone call to Mayor Giulio Carlo Argan, termed the Friday morning bombing "a shameful and cowardly act."

The dynamite explosion opened cracks in the marble arcades of the Great Hall and knocked down part of the thick stone wall of the Tabularium archives building across from the Palazzo Senatorio. Sections of the ceilings fell from the front rooms of the twin buildings housing the Capitoline museums, and the ceiling of the red velvet "wedding room" where civil marriage ceremonies are performed also was damaged. Officials said the blast was so powerful some pieces of marble and masonry were hurled to the city hall's bell tower.

The city hall is on Capitoline Hill, the highest of the seven hills of ancient Rome and the center of Roman government for 2,500 years.

The experts who assessed the damage said it will take "months or more" to restore the building. They said the first floor will be closed to visitors until repairs are made.

The bomb, which went off shortly after 1 a.m., had apparently been planted where the double staircases come together in front of the building, behind the fountain with figures representing the Tiber and Nile rivers. Thousands of Romans awakened by the boom called police emergency telephone numbers.

The terrorist group, which has claimed responsibility for earlier attacks on Communist Party members and public buildings where Communists hold office, threatened more bombings for April 25, Italy's National Liberation Day, unless the government frees an unidentified right-wing militant.

Pietro Ingrao, the Communist president of the Chamber of Deputies, said the explosion represented "a symbolic attack on the state" and called for stern measures to deal with those who did it.

Police sources said they expect more vandalism and terrorist attacks during the campaign leading to the June 3-4 national elections.

Language-Hunters To Discuss African Treks

Ever tramped the survey trail...in Africa no less?

Ed Mueller — who has lived with his family in West Africa for five years — has!

"In rain time mudholes and swollen rivers are problems, but in dry time we eat dust!"

Serving as Sierra Leone Field Director for Messengers of Christ — Lutheran Bible Translators (LBT), headquartered in Orange, Calif., Mueller can't count the miles he and his wife have traveled over rough terrain in search of langugages.

But they wouldn't change a thing. They have come to love the country and her people.

Mueller, Dr. Modupe Taylor-Pearce, and Jeff Baker are discussing the LBT work during the dinner. Reservations must be made before Sunday by calling Nita Kiesling at 799-5928.

Targets for Lutheran Bible Translators are geographical areas where the language has been traditionally oral. Once the survey worker has defined the geographical boundaries of a given language, the missionary linguist enters the scene.

HELP ON THE WAY — Colleen Shannon-Thornberry of Atlanta, an excutive for the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., discusses ways of helping victims of the recent tornado with Hal Oakley, an intern pastor at First Presbyterian Church of Wichita Falls. Interfaith Tornado Relief Group Formed

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

WICHITA FALLS — Members of the Wichita Falls Ministerial Fellowship voted at a recent meeting to form an interfaith disaster relief organization to help victims of the tornadoes that hit the city April 10. Also at the meeting, ministers of the city's churches heard progress reports from federal and Red Cross officials on recovery efforts.

The proposed interfaith disaster relief organization would be similar to one formed in Omaha, Neb., following the 1974 tornado in that city, according to the Rev. Jerry Elrod. Elrod said such a group would help needy persons who did not meet the guidelines for services offered by the Red Cross and Salvation Army. The organization also would be able to supplement many of the other services offered by those groups, he said. He emphasized the importance of person-to-person continued contact which those working in the church effort were able to give.

A steering committee, made up of past presidents of the Wichita Falls Ministerial Fellowship, was named to decide the next steps for the interfaith group, which may include receipt and disbursement of funds designated by churches for Wichita Falls disaster relief. The Rev. Bruce Weaver will head the committee.

Also present at the Tuesday meeting were representatives from the Texas Council of Churches and Church World Service. A delegation from Lubbock representing Palo Duro Union Presbytery also attended.

It was stressed at the meeting that used clothing and food are no longer needed and that churches and others wishing to send assistance to the stricken area should do so in the form of cash donations.

Gospel Quartet To Perform

The Blackwood Brothers, a widely-known gospel music quartet, will give a free concert at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the South Plains Junior College's Dome at Levelland.

The quartet has traveled extensively in the last several years singing and promoting Bibles in their Communist countries ministry. They have made several tours of Russia, distributing Bibles and singing, and will travel there again in May, during which they will sing in several churches.

During the performance Sunday, the group will introduce a new tenor singer in the quartet, who is making his debut in Texas. The group performs old favorite gospel music, as well as new and contemporary songs.

Spring is a season of warm sunshine, fields of flowers, lingering twilight and gentle breezes. Spring is tender and romantic. It is a wonderful time to be alive.

This delightful season draws us like a magnet to the magic world of the great outdoors. Flowers begin to bloom in all their radiance, and birds sing once more. There's an assurance in the air itself of fresh, new hope.

Spring is also a time when we're more receptive to thoughts of the eternal mystery of life. It's a special time to marvel at God's supreme plan for each of us and for all of His creation.

This week discover a new sense of wonder of the divine power that sends us a bright, new spring year after year . . . in church.

Teacher Pay Vote Defies Governor

cost of living increases.

The House Appropriations Committee had recommended a 5.1 percent across-the-board raise — the same as state employees — at a cost of $315 million over the next two years.

Clements says that's all teachers should get. He wants to eliminate the automatic step-ups that provide yearly raises to teachers in the first 12 years of their careers.

The 7 percent pay raise amendment by Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, would take effect only upon passage of an overall school finance bill.

"Off-the-record," a knowledgeable bureaucrat said, "they're throwing a challenge at the governor.... This is a pure game, because they've got to write it into the school finance law.... Ron knows that."

He said that if the 7 percent pay raise sticks, there won't be enough state funds to help school districts cover rising costs of electricity, gas, school bus operations and supplies. Then, he went on, the districts would raise property taxes and legislators would catch the blame.

"We need to let teachers know we are not going to forget them. We need to tell them we don't equate them with state employees who make more money than they do," Coleman said.

Rep. Don Rains, D-San Marcos, said he, too, would like to raise teacher pay more than 5.1 percent but "the money's not there. ... There is no more money."

The House also voted 60-62 to lop $9 million from the budget for regional education service centers.

Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, said he taught high school government and history for 12 years and came to resent the service centers.

He told of in-service training with $300-a-day consultants but out-dated materials.

"We divided into little groups. It was kind of like vacation Bible school.... It was also humiliating," Haley said as the House roared with laughter.

Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, said the former director of the service center at Mount Pleasant used public money to buy a car, "and he drove to Beaumont in that Oldsmobile 98, where he received a five-year probated sentence for income tax evasion."

"It is really unfortunate that we had that bad experience in East Texas.... But to take that incident and because of it to wreak havoc with all the service centers across the state would be wrong," argued Rep. Tom Massey, D-San Angelo.

The House voted 114-15 against an amendment by Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, to eliminate the tuition equalization grants and use the money to raise salaries of young teachers.

The Texas A&M graduate and Church of Christ member had attempted earlier this year to kill a bill raising the maximum possible grant for private college students from $600 to $1,250 a year.

Gov. Bill Clements signed that bill Thursday.

Whaley said church college presidents regularly swear in writing they do not hire faculty based on religious beliefs but called this "a white lie." Whaley said he wondered if the presidents "didn't hear a cock crow" each time they signed — an allusion to Peter's denial of Christ shortly before the crucifixion.

One school told him, he said, "they do hire a few janitors and people down below" of other faiths, but not teachers.

He said continuing the tuition grants would result in "entanglement" of church and state.

House members learned that their decision Thursday to raise Department of Public Safety salaries would cost twice as much as they thought — $12 million instead of $6 million.

But they stuck with the decision and simply voted the additional money to finance the raises.

The House voted 68-63, to remove $6 million for construction of new cellblocks at the prison system's Wynne Unit and use the money for community-based corrections.

"It would be a place where you can put defendants instead of throw them out on he street.... In some places, they just put 'em on the streets and tell 'em to be good," Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, said.

Clements Won't Tell Primary Bill Plans

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite advance notice that he will veto any home interest increases, Gov. Bill Clements said Friday he will not tip his hand in advance on his plans for a presidential primary.

"I do know this," Clements told a news conference, "I think the people of Texas want a presidential primary."

Earlier in the week, Sen. Walter Mengden R-Houston, was quoted as saying Clements would veto any bill that called for a presidential primary on a separate date from the May primary elections.

Clements refused to confirm Mengden's statement. "I have not made up my mind," he told a news conference.

"I am positively not going to announce a veto on this subject prior to the time it gets to my desk," he said. "That goes for any special sessions too."

Meanwhile, the House made a move that apparently guarantees the presidential primary issue will become one of the end-of-session topics settled by 10-member conference committees, along with state spending and school finance issues.

House members approved on voice vote an amendment to their version of the general appropriation bill that says no state money can be used to finance a presidential primary unless it is held at the same time as the regular May primary election. Some representatives said they could locate only about 40 votes, out of the 150, against the amendment, even without a record vote.

Clements said he had talked with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clements this week about the presidential primary question.

"There wasn't any money in the bill for it anyway," Clayton said after the House vote. "I don't think we will know what the sentiment is on it (a presidential primary bill) until we get it out on the floor and vote on it."

Clayton said he was continuing to consult legislative leaders in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Louisiana about holding separate presidential primaries at the same time in March, ahead of the regular primary elections.

On other subjects, Clements told the news conference:

— That he was sticking with his pledge to veto any effort to raise home interest rates from 10 to 12 and he found no crisis among Texans seeking new homes.

— That he still expects the Legislature to pass a state spending bill that will leave $1 billion for tax relief.

Buyers Take Closer Look At Prices

increase in delinquent payments, said Jack Williams.

Dillard customers, however, in general are using credit more, he said, but he could not speculate whether the purchases were more necessities than luxury items.

"It depends on what you consider a necessity," he said.

Visa and Mastercharge cardholders are using their cards more frequently, according to Marshall Vose, head of the Plains National Bank check and credit division.

"Credit activity is 6 percent above last year," he said, "which can be a result of many more issuances of cards."

Average Transactions Up

The average rate of use of the cards was two and a half transactions per month last year, he said. This year the average is closer to four transactions per month.

With the higher rate of use comes "rather abundant" credit line increases, he said, and higher card holder balances. Balances have risen from "around $300 to $320 to approximately $390 to $400."

Credit card criteria for his bank is "probably a little more lenient than in the past," he said, adding that it is less expensive for a bank to issue a credit card than to issue an installment loan.

"It probably costs less than $2 to set up a complete card account," Vose said. "It's an easier outlet for banks and interest rates are higher with cards."

"Maybe people have the attitude they can live in debt," he said.

No Negative Effect Seen

No negative long-term effect on the nation's economy is forecast because of the high rate of credit use, according to Archie Huckabee, senior vice president of Lubbock National Bank.

Credit usage "has not increased to the point of being dangerous," he said, adding that costs naturally have increased the use of credit over last year.

"People possibly have gone more into debt," he agreed. "In 1978 people saved at a rate of 6.5 percent of their income; in 1979 it will be at a rate of 4.5 percent."

The delinquent percentage nationwide was 32 percent, or 3.4 percent of all outstanding debts, which, Huckabee said, "is not out of line at all."

"What is owed can never be paid off because of the natural way credit is handled," he said. "As soon as they get out of debt for one thing, people want drapes or something."

One Dead, One Missing In Neches River Blast

NEDERLAND (AP) — Firefighters found the charred remains of one crewman Friday and were still searching for another feared lost when a lightning strike triggered a series of explosions that ripped through a Liberian oil tanker, Coast Guard officials said.

The Coast Guard said Thursday night's blasts injured 30 of the Sea Tiger's 33 crewmen and two dockworkers at the Sun Oil Co. terminal on the Neches River.

The missing crewman was last seen dangling on a rope hanging over the side of the blazing ship. Justice of the Peace Johnny Knowles said other crewmen reported the man could not swim.

Coast Guard Cmdr. Merrill Louks said the unidentified dead crewman was found on the deck this morning and that the other man was presumed dead.

A "big flash of lightning" hit the tanker, followed by an "explosion — a big boom," according to Warren Davis, who was standing about 150 feet from the Sea Tiger. "We got away from it as fast as we could."

He said the flames shot 150 feet in the air.

The blasts sent most of the sailors scampering to get off the blazing Sea Tiger and into the river.

"I could see the men running down (the anchor rope). Some were running down and some were falling off. Men were just running off the ship," ambulance driver Pat Riley said. He was one of the first to arrive at the scene.

Seven Still Hospitalized

A spokesman at Park Place Hospital said seven persons remained hospitalized Friday, three in in the intensive care unit in stable condition.

"An explosion from within just peeled the metal back" Fire Department spokesman Jerry May said. "There is a hole in the ship 100 to 150 feet long in the top middle. The metal is just laid back. There is a crack about 40 feet long down the side of the hull."

Coast Guard Lt. Kim Zigler said the tanker was resting on the bottom in about 40 feet of water. But he said the top of the ship was still above the water line

Zigler said Friday there had been only a minor leak of residual cargo oil from the ship that still had a cargo of 24,500 barrels of oil.

While fire fighters battled the blaze, a Japanese tanker, the Fukuyama Maru, was moved from a neighboring dock to avoid the threat of further explosions, Coast Guard spokesman Dave Galgay said.

Shaw said the Sea Tiger was manned by an Italian crew and had been leased to Gulf Oil Co.

The flaming ship closed the Neches River and authorities said they did not know how long it would be before the channel could reopen.

Israel Sends Weizman To Negotiations

By United Press International

Israel announced Friday it will send Defense Minister Ezer Weizman to Egypt to negotiate the first phase of the withdrawal from the Sinai Pensinula.

Egyptians overwhelmingly approved the peace treaty with Israel, with a 99.95 percent vote in favor of the pact. Egyptian villagers shouted "Allahu Akhbar" (God is great) when they heard the news from President Anwar Sadat's spokesman.

North of Israel, the self-declared Christian ministate in south Lebanon threatened to execute the Lebanese army commander and wage guerrilla war against the Beirut government.

The Israeli-backed rebels cut all roads between Israel and the southern Lebanese port of Tyre, briefly surrounding the U.N. peace-keeping command in the region. The An Nahar newspaper reported a statement by the rebels warned no Lebanese army units would be allowed near the Christians' border enclaves.

At the United Nations, Secretary General Kurt Waldheim warned that the 6,000-man U.N. buffer force must function unhampered in Lebanon if peace is to be maintained there and the entire Middle East.

Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat said President Carter has betrayed the Palestinians in bringing about the Israeli-Egyptian treaty and vowed to punish American interests in the Middle East.

"Striking at the American interests by the Arab nations is possible," Arafat said in an interview with the Arabic-language weekly magazine Al Mustaqbal, based in Paris. "We are capable of doing that and who hits us once we will hit him twice. Iran is the best example."

Israel's Defense Ministry announced in Tel Aviv that Weizman, a personal favorite of Sadat, would go to Cairo Sunday for a three-day trip to negotiate the initial withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula, which Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East War.

Under the Egyptian-Israeli treaty, Israel will complete its first phase of the withdrawal from the largely desert area by the end of the year, with the full Sinai going back to Egypt in three years. Israel will give back the peninsula's unofficial capital of El Arish May 27.

Macabre Joke Fad Thrives In Wichita

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A new fad has emerged in Wichita Falls, where a tornado last week killed 44, injured hundreds and destroyed thousands of homes.

Despite the devastation that hit much of the city, residents whose homes or apartments were destroyed have inserted a humorous touch — through signs erected in front of their particular pile of rubble.

"For Rent — One Hall With Adjoining Bath," reads one sign.

One resident urged: "We Need Another Piece of the Rock."

Children Find Severed Head

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A human head, apparently slashed from the body, has been found in an alley by several children, police said.

Sgt. Tom Mundy, police spokesman, said the head appeared to be that of a young woman, perhaps in her teens. He said it showed no signs of decomposition when found Thursday night.

Mundy said officers were told the children were attracted to the find by a dog, which apparently was trying to bury the head. Tracking dogs were brought in to search for the rest of the body.

He said the head had been cut from the body by a downward strike from behind one of the victim's ears into the torso.

Odd Parties Run On Odd Issues

LONDON (AP) — Auberon Waugh is thumping the tub for dog's rights, and 75-year-old Bill Boaks, leader and lone member of the Public Safety Democratic Monarchist White Resident Party, is lubing up his canopied campaign bicycle for his 17th election try. He figures he'll lose and says that's Britain's hard luck, not his.

Eccentric candidates are perennial in British democracy, but for those bored with the Laborites, Conservatives and Liberals, this year's field for the May 3 elections presents a rich variety of choices.

The Wessex Regionalist Party is reborn under the pigtailed Viscount Weymouth, 46, with seven candidates crusading for self-government for eight counties that once made up an ancient kingdom in western England.

Lord Weymouth captured 0.8 percent of the vote in 1974 and declares: "Last time, 521 people voted for me, and I will be very pleased if I can get into four figures this time."

Most formidable of the fringe parties is the new Ecology Party, which has 52 candidates, thus qualifying for five minutes of free television time to press its case.

"We are not bothered if the main parties dismiss us as cranks, because we consider them irrelevant," declares Chairman Jonathan Tyler, a Birmingham University lecturer who specializes in rail transport.

"We've no chance at all of winning any seats," says another Ecology leader, Teddy Goldsmith, brother of food tycoon Sir James Goldsmith, "but our credibility is increasing all the time."

Boaks, a former Royal Navy officer, has lost 16 elections since he entered politics in 1951 but his unbroken string doesn't bother him.

Boaks feel if people haven't the sense to vote for him, so much the worse for them.

Screaming Lord Sutch, a former rock singer, now a sedate 37, drew 351 votes with his Go to Blazes Party in 1974, but hopes to do better this year as the Ban the Old Fogeys candidate. His platform: A new TV channel by and for people under age 30.

Artist Amanda Fleming pledges if elected to make trepanning — boring a hole in the skull — available free under the National Health Program.

Because this is not now available on demand, Miss Fleming had to do hers herself. She claims it enhances the flow of blood around the brain and that now she feels increased well-being and energy and experiences things more vividly.

"It's not painful, since you can use a local anesthetic," Miss Fleming says, "but it can be dangerous. That's why I want to see it available on the National Health."

The Evening Standard newspaper keeps Londoners current on the campaign of Dogs' Rights Party master Auberon Waugh. The candidate, like his late father Evelyn, is a novelist. His campaign manager is a Great Dane.

Bringing back the spirit of World War II is the aim of the United Country Party, which so far has united a dozen neighbors in a West Sussex village. Civic callousness, inflation and filthy streets spurred the founders to call upon the old British virtues of indomitability and self-sacrifice.

"It should be a younger man than me," standard-bearer Edmund Iremonger says — he is in his 60s — "but no one else was prepared to come forward."

PIG DAY AFTERNOON—Dog day afternoons for Lucky, the pig, are numbered. Although Lucky feels at home in the livingroom of Mrs. Edna Lynn's home in Duncan, Okla., it will soon be back to the pigpen for her, according to Mrs. Lynn. More Evacuations Seen As Texas Floods Worsen

Papal Condolences Received

"I wish to manifest my deep solidarity with all the people of your area who have suffered so greatly by the flood disaster," the pope's message said.

In Texas, Harris County Civil Defense officials predicted more flooding and evacuations of about 1,000 more persons before the week is over, especially along the swollen San Jacinto River east of Houston.

Civil Defense Director John Caswell said 111 persons were evacuated Friday from the Bella Woods area and another 100 from Banana Bend.

Minneota Gov. Al Quie and other officials Friday toured the Red River area, where it was still raining and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was dumping more clay on the 10-year-old dikes at East Grand Forks, where the river is expected to crest Monday at 49.5 feet, the highest level since 1897.

Flooding was also reported near or in the North Dakota towns of Crystal, Hillsboro and Mayville. Mayville officials were trying to keep rising water from a water treatment plant, and said the flood which covers a low-lying area is the worst in the city's history.

Mayor Byrne Sues For Access To Files

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Jane Byrne said Friday the city may file suit to recover files allegedly removed from City Hall by former Mayor Michael A. Bilandic and his top aides during the last days of his administration.

Mrs. Byrne also said she heard rumors that, during the last two weeks of the Bilandic administration, city officials had been shredding dozens of documents.

"I more or less expected it," she said during a taping of the WMAQ radio program Chicago News Conference, to be aired Sunday at 9 p.m.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My friend and I recently attended a seminar given by a financial advisory firm. My friend is 32, divorced with one dependent. He has an annual income of more than $25,000, savings of $10,000 and $10,000 life insurance.

He asked the finacial adviser for suggestions for tax relief and long-term growth. The adviser recommended a real estate investment trust and the purchase of investment-grade diamonds. What is your opinion of this advice? Do you have any other suggestions?

A. That advice is about the worst I've ever heard. If you are at all serious about your friendship with that young man, use your influence to keep him away from that "adviser" and others of the same ilk.

Most real estate investment trusts — REITs, for short — have been absolute investment busts. Although some REITs have done reasonably well, the history of that industry is strewn with losses amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars.

There's no denying that diamond values have risen sharply over the years. But diamond buying is a very specialized business. It's no place for average citizens — who buy at retail prices and sell at wholesale. Because of the big markup in gem prices, the price of a diamond has to skyrocket before an ordinary investor — not a professional — can sell at a price at which he or she will even break even.

Also, there are all kinds of con artists in that business. The newspapers have been full of diamond scam stories in recent months.

Because your friend's income puts him in a reasonably high income tax bracket, the tax free income from municipal bonds or municipal bond mutual funds could save him tax dollars. But, as a young man, he should really be investing in things that hopefully will grow in value.

The stamped, self-addressed envelope you sent along is bringing you a list of stocks that have grown in the past. There's no guarantee they will continue to do so in the future. But, at least, they are not wild speculations, such as REITs and diamonds.

• • •

Q. According to what I have read, the short-term performance of most "growth" mutual funds has been poor but the long-term records of well-managed growth funds have been good.

In reading the prospectus of each fund, I wonder about the chart showing how an initial investment of $10,000 has grown in value. Are those charts checked for accuracy by any outside authority?

A. Indeed they are. The financial statements in each prospectus are audited by the fund's outside public accountant. The "mountain chart" you refer to is an extension of the financial statements.

And each prospectus is then gone over with a fine tooth comb by the U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission (SEC). Yes, I know, the cover page of the prospectus states, in bold type: "These securities have not been approved or disapproved by the SEC nor has the commission passed upon the accuracy or adequacy of the prospectus. Any representation to the contrary is a criminal offense."

That's simply the SEC's own hedge clause, to get that government agency off the hook — if there turn out to be misstatements in the prospectus. The SEC allows no known fibs to creep into a prospectus.

• • •

Q. Is the number of Keogh retirement plans for self-employed people too numerous to list? If so, can you give a general idea of those most commonly used?

A. Yes, the list — running into the thousands — is far too long to be printed here. The most commonly used Keogh investments — not necessarily in the order of popularity — are savings certificates issued by banks and savings and loan associations, mutual funds, individual stocks, insurance, annuities, face-amount installment certificates and U.S. Retirement Plan bonds.

Money Men Warned Of Inflation Danger

NEW YORK (AP) — Inflation and high interest rates "will be with us for quite a while," Federal Home Loan Bank Board Chairman Robert H. McKinney told savings and loan executives Friday. He warned the officials they must adapt to this situation or see their industry become "a relic of history."

McKinney, whose board regulates federally chartered savings and loans, warned the people who run thrift institutions in the New York area that they should stop hoping for a return to traditional ways of doing business — with low interest rates on savings accounts and on mortgages — and prepare for a new marketplace.

McKinney spoke at the annual meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank of New York, one of the Federal Home Loan Bank System's 12 regional banks comparable to the Federal Reserve banks.

In times of inflation, thrift institutions must offer higher-yielding accounts to small savers or lose these depositors to commercial banks, where slightly lower yields on deposits are offset by the convenience of having checking accounts, credit cards and other consumer services, McKinney said.

The chairman said thrifts should press Congress to authorize variable rate mortgages, whose higher rates in times of inflation can offset the costs of paying higher interest on savings.

He warned that figures collected by the board show that young people, as a group, are becoming customers of commercial banks. At the same time, federally chartered thrifts are attracting, or holding on to, generally older customers, he said.

Federal banking regulatory agencies have proposed new regulations to help small savers that provide for higher interest rates on savings accounts and lower minimum deposits on high-yield savings certificates.

McKinney admitted that these improvements for small savers would mean higher costs for the savings and loans. But, he said, thrifts should accept this change, not fight it, and join with him in urging Congress to authorize variable rate mortgages nationwide.

With these mortgages, banks are allowed to raise, within limits, the rate of interest charged during the life of the mortgage. In all but four states — California, Ohio, Wisconsin and Massachusetts — a mortgage carries the same rate as long as it is in effect, usually 20 to 30 years.

Charging higher interest on residential mortgages, thrifts' primary investment, can offset the greater costs of paying higher interest on savings, thrifts' primary source of funds, McKinney said.

At a news conference after the speech, McKinney said he has been disappointed that thrifts have been cool to the small saver proposals and have shown "no enthusiasm or support" for variable rate mortgages.

He said thrift executives seem "complacent" because 1978 was a great year for earnings despite the run-up in interest rates that usually provokes a recession in the mortgage business. He emphasized that the strong rate of return on assets in the last six months of 1978, which averaged 0.83 percent nationwide, was possible only because the introduction of high-yield money market certificates kept plenty of funds on deposit at savings and loans.

Profits at thrifts are in for a severe pinch, he warned, because the push to help small savers has momentum in Congress, which means federally mandated low ceilings on savings account interest rates are on the way out.

To give the thrift industry a chance to give their views on the small saver proposals, McKinney has scheduled a public hearing for May 1.

"We don't want rhetoric, we want facts. And don't look for any extensions of time," he said. He set the hearing on such short notice "to focus on the urgency of the situation," McKinney said.

No Change Seen In Monetary Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's monetary policy was left essentially unchanged last month by the Federal Reserve System's Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank reported Friday.

There were, however, four dissenting votes to the decision — the most since four "no" votes were cast on Sept. 20, 1977, according to a Federal Reserve spokesman who asked that his name not be used.

The Federal Open Market Committee, which is made up of members of the Federal Reserve Board and presidents from five of the Federal Reserve's 12 banks, meets monthly but does not release a report on its activities until about 30 days later.

The committee decided "to direct open market operations initially toward maintaining the federal funds rate at about the current level, represented by a rate of about 10 percent or slightly higher."

The board in January had reached the same conclusion about the federal funds rate, which is the rate of interest banks charge in lending their free reserves to other banks.

Federal Reserve Board records indicate that the federal funds rate has been slightly above 10 percent since November when the government rates were raised as part of the "dollar rescue" effort.

If the federal fund rate goes down, banks pay less to borrow overnight from one another. When conditions are right, they pass this lower cost on to their customers, thus having the effect of "loosening" credit and lowering interest rates in the market.

The reverse occurs when the federal funds rate rises.

Those voting in favor of retaining the current monetary policy included Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller, who has been extensively quoted in recent days as saying that current economic conditions did not warrant further "tightening" that some top Carter administration officials have urged.

Others voting "yes" were Federal Reserve Board members J. Charles Partee and Nancy H. Teeters and bank officials John Balles, Robert Black and Robert Mayo.

Against the decision were Philip E. Coldwell and Henry C. Wallich, both Reserve Board members, and bank officials Paul A. Volcker and Monroe Kimbrel.

The open market committee also decided the "ranges of tolerance" for the annual growth rates of the nation's money supply.

M-1, which represents cash and checking accounts, should grow in March and April in a 4 percent to 8 percent range, the committee decided.

For M-2, which is M-1 plus most commercial bank savings accounts, the range was set at 3.5 percent to 7.5 percent.

"If the two-month growth rates of M-1 and M-2 appeared to be significantly above or below the midpoints of the indicated ranges, the objective for the funds rate was to be raised or lowered in an orderly fashion within a range of 9.75 percent to 10.5 percent," the committee decided last month.

Goering Signature Goes For $600

NEW YORK (AP) — A letter signed by Hermann Goering, Hitler's Luftwaffe chief during World War II, was sold Thursday at auction for $600 by a New York firm specializing in autographs.

The letter was written by the Nazi official March 18, 1946, while he was being tried in Germany for war crimes. It was addressed to a nurse in Straubing, Germany, but was intercepted by a souvenir-seeking American GI who recognized the famous name.

In the letter, which had to be passed by the American censor at the prison in Nuremberg, Goering told the woman he appreciated her loyalty and urged her not to believe what she may have read in the "enemy press."

Savings Account Rules Axed By Appeals Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The District of Columbia U.S. Court of Appeals on Friday ruled illegal a variety of new devices permitting customers of banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions to treat savings accounts as though they were checking accounts.

But the court said the practices need not be halted until Jan. 1 to give Congress time to decide whether to update regulations to make the practices legal.

The order covers three different types of banking transactions:

—In banks, the automatic transfer of funds from interest-paying savings accounts into checking accounts;

—In savings and loans, machines that permit customers to make withdrawals from savings "by a device functionally equivalent to a check";

—In credit unions, share drafts which are the equivalent of checks drawn on interest-paying accounts.

The opinion, by three judges of the appeals court, said three agencies that regulate the nation's financial institutions went beyond the power granted them by Congress when they authorized automatic transfers from interest-paying savings accounts to checking accounts that do not pay interest.

"Three separate and distinct types of financial institutions created by congressional enactment to serve different public needs ... (are) offering virtually identical services to the public, all without the benefit of congressional consideration and statutory enactment," the court said.

"We recognize that there are arguments that Congress has, at some times and in some measure, tacitly approved part of these regulatory authorizations, but by no means directly, explicitly or in the whole," the court ruled.

"It is the responsibility of the Congress and not the courts to determine such policy."

The court said transfer methods authorized by the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the National Credit Union Administration are outdated by modern technology.

"We are neither empowered to rewrite the language of statutes which may be antiquated ... nor are we empowered to make a policy judgment as to whether the utilization of these new methods of fund transfer is in the overall public interest," the court said.

"Therefore, we have no option but to set aside the regulations authorizing such fund transfers. ... We do so with the firm expectation that the Congress will speedily review the overall situation."

O'Neill's Remark Touches Off Furor In Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A remark by U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill that Britain has made a "political football" out of war-torn Ulster touched off a furor Friday. Britons hotly denied the charge and suggested that Irish-Americans were out of touch.

Margaret Thatcher, leader of the opposition Conservative Party, told a London news conference: "We have never used Ulster as a political football between the parties. Events there are too deeply tragic for any of us to do that."

The Irish Republican Army has been waging a war since 1969 to sever the Protestant-dominated province from Britain and unite it with the Irish Republic in the south, which is 94 percent Roman Catholic. An upsurge of violence in the past two weeks has killed 12 members of the security forces.

O'Neill's remark, seen in Britain as unwelcome American intervention in the touchy Northern Ireland dispute, was part of a speech he made Thursday night at a Dublin banquet for him and five other congressmen currently on a tour of Ireland.

O'Neill said: "There is no more serious problem on the agenda of British politics than a crisis which has claimed 2,000 lives and caused almost 20,000 serious injuries. The problem has been treated as a political football in London, or has otherwise been given a low priority."

Cabinet minister Shirley Williams, speaking for the Labor government, said Irish-Americans had little understanding of what is happening in Ireland and O'Neill's remarks were "unfair."

"Many of them, I believe, still regard the situation in both parts of Ireland as essentially that existing when they first left for the United States in the 19th or early 20th Century," Mrs. Williams told a London news conference.

More criticism came from Ciaran McKeown, former leader of Peace People, the reconciliatory Northern Ireland group that won the 1976 Nobel Peace Prize.

"For Mr. O'Neill to indulge in third generation Irish nationalism is much the same thing as suggesting that white America should withdraw from the land plundered from the Amerian Indians at about the same time that famine and the Irish troubles were driving the ancestors of such as Mr. O'Neill out of Ireland," he said.

He characterized O'Neill's opinions on Ireland as "a combination of sentimental Irish-Americanism and a calculated interest in the Irish-American vote."

O'Neill and his delegation spent Friday in Belfast and Londonderry, Northern Ireland, meeting Roman Catholic and Protestant politicians and other leaders.

As they did so, O'Neill's "political football" remark became the lead item on British television newscasts, and thrust the Northern Ireland issue into the forefront of the election campaign. British voters will elect a new Parliament May 3.

There was tight security in Ulster for O'Neill's visit. He used the home of the American consul in Belfast, Charles Stout, to meet leaders of the four main political groupings in the troubled province: Harry West, Official Unionist; Gerry Fitt, Social Democratic Labor Party; the Rev. Ian Paisley, Democratic Unionist and Oliver Napier, Alliance Party.

Fitt, a Roman Catholic, told reporters he was in general agreement with O'Neill. "I made it clear there was no military solution to the problem. He listened intently and obviously showed a great deal of sympathy for the people of Northern Ireland."

Paisley merely said he'd given the Speaker "a few pointers."

O'Neill refused any comment on his controversial speech, but issued a written statement late Friday which said:

"I condemn the wave of violence that has taken 12 lives over the last two weeks. Terrorism resolves nothing. I repeat my commitment to peace and reconciliation and renew my appeal to Americans to shun words or actions that help or encourage in any way those engaged in violence."

Splinter Of IRA Claims Shooting Responsibility

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish National Liberation Army, a Marxist ally of the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing, said Friday it — not the IRA — was reponsible for Thursday's shooting in Armagh that killed a woman prison officer and wounded three.

Shortly after gunmen firing from a speeding car shot the four women Thursday, the IRA said its men had done the shooting. The dead woman was identified as Mrs. Agnes Jean Wallace, 40, the mother of six children.

The little-known INLA terrorist group last month claimed it had killed Airey Neave, Britain's Conservative Party spokesman on Northern Ireland. Neave died March 30 when a car bomb exploded as he was leaving Parliament. He was the most prominent British figure slain by Irish terrorists since 1922 when Northern Ireland was partitioned from the Irish Republic.

It was the first time in a decade of violence that women prison officers were guerrilla targets.

The INLA statement said, "The attack was carried out in accordance with our policy of attacking all agents of the British occupation forces and as an act of solidarity with the women political prisoners in Armagh who have been on protest for political status for over two years.

"If the British government wish to place women in the front line of their repression and torture machine, they must accept full responsibility for the consequences."

The head of the Prison Officers Association in Northern Ireland met with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill to denounce the killers. O'Neill, leading a congressional delegation in Northern Ireland, touched off a furror Friday by saying Britain had made the Northern Ireland issue a "political football."

The predominantly Roman Catholic IRA has been waging a war since August 1969 to sever the Protestant-dominated province from Britain and unite it with the Irish Republic in the south, which is 94 percent Roman Catholic. An upsurge of violence in the past two weeks has killed 12 members of the British security force.

At least 1,902 people have been killed in the 10 years.

Placebo Effect Causes Medical Dissatisfaction

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This series, written by a medical doctor, examines the practice of behavioral medicine, a unique concept of health care incorporating the principles of medicine, physiology, psychiatry and psychology. It takes a future look at personal health in four parts, running in the "Dimensions" section of your Avalanche-Journal each Saturday during April. It is adapted from Dr. Herbert Benson's book, "The Mind/Body Effect.")

Feature Series--Part III

SPOTLIGHT

By DR. HERBERT BENSON

Medicine has made truly wonderous progress in recent decades. It has effectively eliminated many of the scourges which have afflicted mankind throughout history.

In the Western world, the plague, cholera, smallpox and polio are essentially nonexistent. Children are expected to live to adulthood; it is rare to lose a child to disease. Appendicitis is no longer life-threatening. Pneumonia, once a dire disease, is now curable. Syhilis, which has killed and maimed millions in the past, also is curable. Diabetes can be controlled with insulin. Pernicious anemia, a fatal disease which mimics a cancer of the blood, can be alleviated by administration of vitamin B-12. Pellagra, a very serious system, has been recognized as a nutritional deficiency and can be cured by increasing the intake of specific vitamins.

Surgery now can be performed with reasonable safety and effectiveness on any organ of the body. Sight and hearing can be restored to some of those who would have been permanently blind and deaf.

These advantages in medical science are reflected in death statistics. A person born in the United States in 1900 could expect to live an average of 49.2 years, whereas in 1975 the average life expectancy at birth has risen to 72.5 years.

Despite this progress medicine has made, many people are dissatisfied with health care. They feel medicine is not meeting their needs and that it is exorbitantly expensive. Although the reasons for this dissatisfaction are multifaceted, it may be analyzed and explained within the framework of the placebo effect. The placebo effect, as noted previously, is dependent upon a combination of factors involving the patient, the physician and the relationship between the two.

Medical schools are required to teach a vast body of knowledge based upon scientific approaches, even though much of this knowledge is in a rather incomplete state. The new scientific "facts" proliferate at an ever increasing pace.

In order to keep abreast of these scientific advances, medical students and physicians require so much training that the beneficial factors inherent in the doctor-patient relationship are given only token attention.

Dr. William J. Mayo, one of the founders of Minnesota's Mayo Clinic, remarked: "One meets with many men who have been fine students, and have stood high in their classes, who have great knowledge of medicine but very little wisdom in application. They have mastered the science, and have failed in the understanding of the human being."

Another result of the ever increasing knowledge which physicians are re-

Lubbock Chapter Names Cancer Drive Chairman

Molly Hall has been named residential campaign chairman for the Lubbock chapter of the American Cancer Society, Dr. Preston DeShan, president and crusade chairman, announced Friday. She is the wife of attorney Mark Hall.

MOLLY HALL

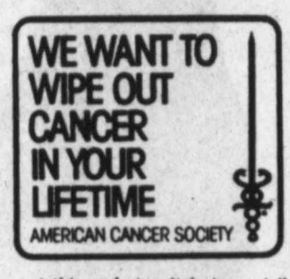

Mrs. Hall will be responsible in heading up approximately 3,000 volunteers in a door-to-door canvass to raise $15,000 of this year's cancer society goal of $56,000. The residential drive also will serve as a public education drive in that volunteers will be distributing cancer society literature to Lubbock residents.

The residential fund-raising drive is beginning this month, which is cancer control month," and will continue into May and June, according to Mrs. Hall.

Mrs. Hall said she is still recruiting persons who would be willing to work with her in the residential campaign.

Cancer is the one thing that is touching all of us every day, my family has been touched by it," said Mrs. Hall, explaining her reasons for being a cancer society volunteer.

"I feel that if we don't have research in the areas of cancer and the money to do the research, we will continue to be constantly affected. The only way we can prevent this and stop it is to contribute money for cancer research and education," she said.

"It's important that people realize that our fund-raising drive is also an education drive to let the public know of cancer's warning signals and that it can be cured through early detection and treatment," Mrs. Hall added.

Mrs. Hall said it also is important for the public to know that 90 percent of all monies raised by the cancer society goes to research, public education and directly in aid to cancer patients. Only 10 percent is used for administrative and fund-raising costs.

Mrs. Hall is a Lubbock area native. She is a member of the Junior League of Lubbock and has been active in many volunteer projects in the city. She also works part time for a stock brokerage firm.

For further information call the American Cancer Society at 762-0825. Donations may be sent to the Area One Office, 1902 Ave. M, Room, 101, Lubbock, Tex., 79405.

ENCOUNTER ON A BEACH

Black Disc Remembered

By TOM TIEDE

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (NEA) — It was a fine if blustery morning, and the tides of the night before had left the sand of the beach hard and unblemished. The temperature was just below 70 and the wind was from the ocean, blowing salt and some mist against the shore.

I was out early, shoeless and in walking shorts, proceeding north of the resorts. Already, spring tourists were laying down blankets near the surf. Kids were burrowing for sea creatures, fishermen were casting about and college couples were emerging red-eyed and suspect from sleeping bags.

It was no day for scavenging. The beach was clear for miles. I had hoped to find flat rocks with rings around them, which I'm certain are nature's amulets, but the sea had done its cleaning. The only items for an hour's walk were Budweiser bottles, which the prophets say will be the last survivors.

Then, just below Flagler Beach, where suburban sprawl gives way to primeval Florida, I saw a black disc in the sand. Surely it was the wheel of a UFO, I thought, or the emblem of office of a far-away prince. That's what's marvelous about beachcombing: expectation. A black disc? The blood warms.

Alas, it turned out to be a piece of roof sheeting, or, colloquially, tar paper. It had been cut in a four-inch circle, for what purpose I do not know. It was smooth on one side, and grained on the other. It was lying well above the reach of the surfside foam, and was therefore warm and dry.

I was naturally disappointed. And so I tried to imagine the disc had hidden meaning. Do people from other worlds paper their roofs? I recalled the lost tribes of antiquity that used wafers for currency. But it was no use. I sighed, resigned, and tossed the black disc toward the oncoming ocean.

Then I raced to a dune, to scare a pelican, and afterward I established a record for the shoeless 50-yard dash. As I stood to catch my breath, gloating at my victory over illusion, something rolled up and gently touched my leg. I looked down to see the black disc, now leaning against my ankle.

How could it be? I had tossed the worthless thing away. There it was, however, wiggling in the wind at my feet. It was still dry, thus it had not gone into the water. I concluded that the wind had caught it and, by coincidence, had sent it back to me. On the other hand, maybe it wasn't coincidence.

I threw the disc at the ocean again, and this time watched what happened. It hit the sand in front of the surf, but did not fall flat. Instead, it balanced on its edge and began to roll with the wind along the beach. It went another 40 yards, and stopped only when it came to a small depression.

I was delighted now. And I tried it again and again. I found that however I threw the black disc, it would right itself on its edge and roll for as long as the beach was level. It would not roll toward the water, though; when the surf rushed in the disc would sense trouble and detour to avoid it.

I'm not exaggerating. The disc had something of a life of its own. For example, it would not move at the same speed as the breeze, but seemed to choose a rate of travel nearer to that of my walk. Indeed it kept me company. As long as there were no obstacles, it tumbled along as if it were leashed.

I soon realized that one could become attached to tar paper like this. It was a kind of pet rock with personality. I thought about naming it, which I didn't. But I did start a conversation. I felt I should explain what I was doing on a

PROTECT DIGESTION

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — The amount of fiber listed on a food label underestimates the actual fiber content in a serving of that food, says Prof. Peter Van Soest of Cornell University. Soest's research shows not all the fiber available in a food shows up when analyzed for "crude fiber." He says adding too many bran-type foods and seeds to your diet may give you too much crude fiber, and could cause a deficiency of some nutrients that fiber tends to pick up as it moves through the digestive tract. The best approach, he says, is including whole grain breads and cereals in your diet along with fruits and vegetables.

South analyzed the lead as fourth best. That meant that the defense had set up three spade tricks.

South could be sure of one spade — he had that trick in the bank — plus one heart and two clubs. He needed five diamond tricks to make his three notrump. It would be nice to collect six tricks in that diamond suit and they would be there for him if he let his king of diamonds hold the first diamond trick and the suit broke 3-3, or the jack-10n was a doubleton.

South was not greedy. He decided that he wanted to take the best line of play to gather in five diamonds. If he chucked an overtrick away by taking that line he wouldn't be at all unhappy.

Therefore, at trick two South overtook his king of diamonds with dummy's ace and was very happy when he saw East drop the eight. Dummy's queen was played next and when East dropped the jack, the nine and seven had become equals and South had his five diamond tricks.

Note that South's play would have led to down three instead of down two if the doubleton diamond had not been either jack-10, jack-eight or 10-eight, but that had been a thoroughly justifiable risk.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Wilson were honored last evening with a dinner marking their golden anniversary. Hosts were the children of the couple. The former Nancy Jane Foster and Wilson were married April 18, 1928 in Carlisle, Kan. They have lived in Lubbock 31 years.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Please tell me how to organize my pantry. You should see mine. No, you shouldn't either. I put Fibber McGee and Molly in the shade...

Thanks for many years of great hints. You are a chip off the old block. — Ethel Parrish

Everyone has her own methods and ideas on keeping house, most handed down from generation to generation — "the way Momma did it is the way I do it."

So, consequently, I've followed in my mother's footsteps in storing canned goods. She found the best way to do it, after trying several different methods, was by color.

Place all your green things in one section and mark the edge of the shelf "green." Anything green which comes in a can should be located in this space: peas, green beans, asparagus, pickles...yes, even pickles. Here's why:

Let's pretend you're making a sandwich and you need pickles. Why move ketchup bottles, mayonnaise jars and such to find the pickles?

No need to. Pickles are green, so look on the "green" shelf.

Orange: canned yams, carrots, peaches.

Reserve one shelf or section for all canned meats. Another space for nothing but dried and boxed goods such as biscuit mix, custards, rice, etc.

Another point to remember is to place items most often used at eye level or waist level for easier access. For instance, you're going to be using those green beans a lot more than, say, those boxed goods.

Perhaps you will want to reserve a special place for all "spreads," which would include anything that goes on a piece of bread, such as honey, jellies or jams.

I realize we all have different amounts of cabinet space available, but no matter how much we have, it's never enough, right?

So hopefully this will get you started on thinking and planning what will best serve your particular need.

I do believe you will find that a well-planned kitchen can save you many extra steps and minutes and, believe me, those minutes begin to add up, especially on a day when we can't seem to spare them.

Love you all — Heloise

When it's time to do laundry, I notice the pin attached and give the item the necessary treatment prior to washing. — Mrs. Weaver

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: How do you hang on to your job anyway? You are so square it's pitiful. I refer to your moldy views on marijuana. People depend on you for straight facts. So why do you print those trumped-up scare stories about pot? Instead of getting people off it you look foolish.

I've been smoking pot for six years. I'm what you'd call a weekend smoker. It has made me much more relaxed and put me in touch with my real feelings. I look forward to the calm and peace I get from five or six joints an evening. The only trouble with pot is that it's getting awfully damned expensive.

Please get some fresh information and give us the facts, Ma'am. That's what you're there for.—Living Proof You're Full Of Baloney

Dear Baloney: The "fresh facts," according to a recent report from the federal drug enforcement officials, are as follows: Most marijuana now being sold in the United States comes from Colombia instead of Mexico. Colombian pot is three to ten times more powerful than Mexican pot.

Five years ago 75 percent of the pot came from Mexico. Today it's less than ten percent. The reduction in Mexican pot is due to the strict policing done in Mexico and at the U.S. border.

You are right about the price. A lid (ounce) used to sell for $20 or $30. Today it's $40 and $50. Hawaiian pot (Maui Wowie) goes for $150 an ounce.

The potency of pot is determined by the amount of tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) — the hallucinogenic agent it contains. Mexican pot has one to two percent of THC. Colombian pot has from 6 to 10 percent.

My information comes from a report by Peter Bensinger, administrator of the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency. These facts are reinforced by teachers who tell me more teenage students are falling out of their seats Monday morning, stoned, spaced-out and incoherent — a result of those weekend pot parties.

My position on pot is the same as it was ten years ago. Some people can handle it — others can't. Most teenagers have enough problems without messing with chemicals that can screw up their heads. Some long-time smokers call me crazy and insist that pot has not damaged them in the least, but pot-heads, like alcoholics, are not the best judges of the shape they're in.

Unless a teenager is a chemist, there's no way he can be sure of what he is ingesting. The possibility of getting angel dust sprinkled in with pot should be enough to scare even the dumbest cluck off the stuff for life. Angel dust can blow your mind to smithereens. Granted, pot can give you a temporary high and produce a carefree attitude toward problems. But there is no evidence that a carefree attitude ever helped to solve a problem. It can help your glaucoma or relieve a migraine headache. It can also cost you a heck of a lot of money and waste an awful lot of your time. Contemplating one's navel isn't exactly the most productive way to spend a weekend.

Queen Elizabeth Dines At White House

By SHEILA RABB WEIDENFELD

JULY 8, 1976

The Queen of England came for dinner last night and the White House is still reeling. Three days after celebrating the 200th anniversary of our rebellion from the crown, Americans trampled each other for a tiny glimpse of the current crown-wearer. We may be the country of the common man, but nothing turns "common man" on quite like royalty.

Details of the dinner were, for some reason, shrouded in secrecy, leaving my desk cluttered with questions without answers. Penetrating questions, too. Such as, "If the lobster is being shipped from New York City, why is it being called 'New England Maine Lobster'?"

The most urgent question came in a phone call from cooking celebrity Julia Child at about 5:00 p.m. "Where is my platter?" she asked.

"Your what?"

"My platter? The chef won't give me my platter!"

A little calm questioning revealed that Julia Child was doing the "play by play" of tonight's dinner for the Public Broadcasting Service. She had, with the help of a White House media liaison, taped a tour of the kitchen and interviewed the chef. Now she needed a platter sampler of the State Dinner meal. And suddenly the White House people said No. Her White House liaison was nowhere to be found and someone had suggested she call me.

"How can I tell viewers what it tastes like if I can't eat it?" she asked.

Well, that made sense, I called Chef Haller. He said he couldn't put the platter together.

"Why?"

"Call Rex Scouten."

I called Rex Scouten.

"'Word'" I said. "Whose word?"

"Mrs. Ford."

I called Mrs. Ford. She was dressing, but her secretary confirmed "the word."

"No food for Julia Child."

"Who says?"

"Maria Downs."

"Why?"

"Who knows?"

It had to be a joke. "No food for Julia Child" was, after all, a contradiction in terms. I was getting punchy. I tried Maria Downs. The social secretary was not around. I tried the kitchen again.

"C'mon," I teased. "What is this silliness, 'No food for Julia Child?'"

"That's what Maria Downs decided."

"Why?"

"Who knows? Who knows!"

I pictured the dramatic gestures that were accompanying the words on the other end of the phone. "Let me tell you something about this social secretary. A menu was recently prepared for her approval, and she called and asked 'What are scallops?' WHAT ARE SCALLOPS! Can you imagine? A social secretary who does not know what scallops are?"

Click.

I guess he felt that answered my question.

With the knowledge that the Maine Lobster came from New York, that the social secretary did not know what scallops were, and that somewhere in the White House, in front of kleig lights, Julia Child was gazing into an empty platter, I got dressed for the Queen.

It got worse.

As I stood with the press on the South Lawn watching the guests go through the receiving line a BBS broadcaster stood nearby on camera, telling the audience who was who. The only problem was that the commentator did not know. She stood there uncomfortably saying "and now...uh...here is...uh..."

I felt as though I were part of a comedy routine.

The sensation grew stronger as I dealt with the press. I explained to angry photographers that there would be no pictures during dinner (the Queen won't chew on camera). Lavish State Dinners seem to bring out the press' most tacky characteristics. As Britain's royalty dined in splendor with America's royalty (the President of U.S. Steel, IT&T, Barbara Walters, Ella Fitzgerald, Cary Grant, Telly Savalas) one White House reporter asked to take the place of another in the press pool because "I'm shorter than she is so I would take up less room."

But it was a wonderful party. "I've been coming to White House functions since 1947, and this party is number one," said ever enthusiastic Vice President Rockefeller. "No, really, it is the greatest."

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION—KANSAS CITY—JULY

I sent the kids in as substitutes for Mrs. Ford whenever I could, and they did beautifully. All four appeared together at an "off-the-record" luncheon Newsweek held. Sitting around the big conference table, they made a beautiful picture: four handsome healthy, youthful specimens, each one sharing certain features with the rest, yet each one with his (or her) own look and his (or her) own personality to go with it.

It was an important moment for Jack, because for the first time he was the leader. He had become the seasoned politician. He coached the others and took over the conversation at the beginning to give them a chance to warm up. Then he introduced his sister and brothers.

Steve talked about rodeos, Susan photography, Michael the church. All talked affectionately about their upbringing and their parents.

At the end, Katherine Graham, publisher of the Washington Post, handed me a note she had scribbled on some scrap of paper. She asked me to give it to Mrs. Ford. It read:

"Dear Betty,

"Your family is finishing an editorial lunch with Newsweek. As a mother, I can't resist sending you a note telling you they are magnificent—dignified, individual, articulate, decent, human—devoted to you and to their country. They are truly moving, and I wanted you to know.

With admiration and affection—Kay Graham"

Mrs. Ford was in terrible shape when we arrived in Vail. She just collapsed. There were stories about how bad she looked when she arrived, but once out of the spotlight and removed from the need to perform and after two days' rest, she began talking about the "big game"—the football game between her Secret Service agents (the "family detail") and the President's. Jack was playing on the family detail team. Susan was cheering. Mrs. Ford wanted to be there, too.

I didn't think she'd make it, but as the teams took to the field the First Lady showed up wearing the "Blue Chippers" T-shirt of the family detail team and a funny hat. She was there to coach. She yelled, screamed, waved her hands around, fought with the referee, huddled with the team, reprimanded them, and did not sit still for one moment. The guys loved it. The press loved it.

SEPTEMBER 7, 1976

We had our second annual birthday celebration today: Reagan and Ellison Golubin, Susan, Barbara Manfuso, Patti Matson and I went out to lunch. I was chagrined to hear that Susan's favorite "whom" was still the yet-to-be-divorced football player.

I listened attentively as Susan brought her friends up to date. He had been dating another Mt. Vernon student but now he had switched to Susan. And he was still working on the divorce. He was 30 years old. And he was gorgeous... just GORgeous. What a build.

What a resume.

Susan always described boyfriends in muscular (as opposed to cerebral) terms, perhaps because she chooses beaux whose biceps are bigger than their head circumferences. No poets on the roster.

Her sense of "self" is so absurdly healthy that it seems to remove her from external pressures. That is both her best and worst characteristic. It makes her a wonderful daughter, in that she bucks the "generation gap" theories and peer pressures to rebel. She is very devoted to her parents and does not hesitate to express that devotion, fashionable or not. She is tuned in to them, perceptive enough to sense an anxiety and soothe it away, always concerned about her mother's health, her father's happiness. Friend, too. If she is not with them, she calls her mother every single day. Not out of duty, but out of desire. She likes to talk to her.

At the same time, however, she bucks other pressures too—the pressures to learn campaign issues, for example, to read the front page of the newspaper, to succeed in academia. All intellectual activities elicit yawns from Susan.

Instead, she is involved in her own world, which is the world of rock concerts and boys and a new apartment she just moved into in Virginia with three other classmates.

She says so's politics.

SEPTEMBER 13, 1976

I got into bed feeling as though something was wrong. A feeling of doom? The scent of defeat?

Tossing and turning in semi-sleep, I began to wonder which verdict would be a real victory. Without turning on the light, I grabbed a piece of paper from the table next to the bed, wrote something down, and then fell asleep.

This morning I found it. Some people write poetry in the middle of the night. I write press statements. On the back of a White House news summary, I had scribbled: "I truly think the family is relieved, and, while disappointed in the outcome, are eager to return to their former life—a normal life. There is nothing normal about living in the White House."

Steven's Date In Close Call At White House

DECEMBER 4, 1976

Barbara Walters taped her White House tour today and it went off smoothly. It could have turned into a wild modern version of Goldilocks and the Three Bears.

It seems Steve had quite a night last night, an evening that began in one Georgetown bar, proceeded to several others, and ended up with his taking his date (whom he had picked up en route) on a weaving tour of the White House.

"And this," he declared dramatically and tipsily at the end of the long corridor, "this is the Queen's Bedroom. You know, prior to this moment, five queens have slept in that bed. Tonight—a sixth!"

Everything blurs, thank goodness, until some daylit hour this morning, when Steve finds himself and his queen in the Queen's Bedroom with a terrible headache, a lot of noise in the hallway outside, and the vivid recollection that he promised his mother's Press Secretary he would officially receive the White House Christmas tree this morning at 10:30. To further complicate matters, he also remembered that he has to go to the airport first, to meet a blind date David Kennerly set up. He opens the bedroom door a crack, and matters become more complicated. There are lights and cameras and crews right outside the door.

My God, the White Huse tour!

(Imagine how surprised Barbara Walters would have been if she opened the door to the Queen's Bedroom.)

Steve decided neither to giggle nor to slash his wrists (the two most logical alternatives) but instead spun into action. He got Queen Number Six to her feet, briefed her carefully, and called a White House limousine for her. Then, as Steve walked—head high, shoulders back, smile firm—out of the Queen's Bedroom, intentionally attracting the attention of the representatives of the American Broadcasting Company, last night's queen sneaked out of the room, around the corner, and down a hidden stairway to her waiting get-away car.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: I'm a 28-year-old prison inmate. I've been in for four years. Believe me, there's no help in here, and I need some. I read your column daily. I was a heavy drinker on the outside and had the DT's four times. My nerves never have gotten straight and I shake all the time. Also, doctor, my eyes have never cleared, and I look like I'm on a hangover 24-hours a day. They are a dirty yellow and I'd like to get them back to clear white if possible. Please tell me how. — S.P.

Your history of DT's (delirium tremens) and alcoholism is often associated with liver damage. The shaking and the dirty yellow color of your eyes are part of that your prison doctor would be able to diagnose jaundice by looking at your eyes. Any other eye problems you have could be checked out at the same time.

Your shaking can also be related to alcoholism, probably aggravated by tensions in prison. If you have access to a library, try to find a book on some form of relaxation technique.

I agree with you about the paucity of adequate medical attention in prisons. If the stories we read are true, next to capital punishment, the worst sentence is to be imprisoned with a medical problem. The inadequacy of prison medicine would make any prospective criminal go straight if he or she knew about it.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I developed cysts under my arms. My doctor immediately asked me if I was using a deodorant. I was. He told me to stop. Could this have caused the cysts? — K.S.

Yes, if the deodorant material was clogging your pores, which some kinds might do in some persons. Perhaps switching brands would help.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can taking diuretics for a long time cause your legs to cramp? I have noticed this lately and wonder if it is important enough to report. — N.P.

It might be if the diuretic (water pill) is strong enough to cause you to lose too much potassium. It is certainly worth reporting to your doctor the next time you go in. You'll find a discussion of other causes of such cramping in my booklet on leg cramps. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please answer a couple of questions concerning sneezing. When a person sneezes, what effect does it have on the heart? I've heard that the heart either skips a beat or stops for a brief instant. Is this true? Also, is it possible to sneeze without closing your eyes? — L.V.

Sneezing may decrease the flow of blood to the heart during the instant of the sneeze, but the heart keeps on beating. It is doubtful that anyone could break the automatic reflex of closing the eyes when sneezing, even the chronic sneezer. I may hear from some wide-eyed sneezers about this.

• • •

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

What's up in kids' clothing?

It's an all too familiar story: Child leaves home in the morning wearing a brand new outfit — only to return that afternoon with it hanging in shreads.

There's no way to eliminate the problem. But you can minimize it by observing these five steps for buying longer-lasting children's clothing from the quality-control experts at Health-Tex:

1. Lightly tug at all buttons and fastenings. They should be sewn securely with plenty of thread. No loose strings should be left hanging.

2. Test the zipper to see that it glides easily without sticking. Zip it closed and pull on the fabric on either side; the zipper should lock in this position to avoid embarrassing slippage.

3. Check that stress points are reinforced. For instance, pockets should be secured at opening corners with double stitching or sporty rivets.

4. Turn the garment inside out to check the seams. They should be stitched evenly with no gaps or loose strands. The stitching should not be too tight; that can cause puckering after washing. All seams should be finished to prevent raveling.

5. Check the fiber-content label, which is attached by law to all garments. Fabrics containing man-made fibers of polyester, acrylic and nylon have increased strength as well as resistance to shrinking and fading. They are also easier to care for.

Granny knew best

If you're willing to jump rope, give up red meat, salt and alcohol and look upon each part of your body as another battle in the war on unsightliness, Adrien Arpel says she can make you beautiful.

The above are just a few of the rules in the beauty expert's best-selling guide to gorgeousness, "Adrien Arpel's 3-Week Crash Makeover/Shapeover Beauty Program." The guide claims to be able to get even the busiest and laziest among us on the right track. And you don't need a fortune to do it. It turns out all of great-granny's beauty tricks were on target all along.

Have hair trouble? Slather some mayonnaise on. Need a face mask? Use an egg white. Yellowing fingernails? Stick them in a lemon. Need a soothing bath? Throw salt and baking soda in the water. It's that easy. Of course, real industrious sorts can move on to mixing astringents, toners and cleansers made from an assortment of supermarket items.

There's a lot of experience behind Ms. Arpel's tips. At the age of 17, she started her own cosmetics company with $400 she had earned babysitting. Today, she heads a multi-million dollar cosmetics company.

The only problem with her beauty program is she may be putting her own company out of business. Once you start washing with yogurt it's only a small step to crushing berries for rouge.

As we talked, or as I talked and the disc listened, I invented a rationale for the tar paper's behavior. I concluded that it could not fall flat when I for the tar paper's behavior. I concluded that it could not fall flat when I threw it because the wind engulfed it with a stability that kept it upright. And it rolled in a straight and steady line for much the same reason.

Eventually, witlessly, I decided to test the rationale. Why can't we leave well enough alone? I dipped one side of the black disc in the Atlantic, altering the balance of its weight, and the magic ended. When I threw the disc this time it dropped with a smack, too heavy for the play of the wind.

I had wounded it with curiosity. I tried to wet its other side, to restore equal weight, but by now the disc was in no mood for coaxing. I set it in the sun, to dry, and continued by myself along the beach. When I returned later, on the way back, the disc was gone, most probably washed to sea.

And now I miss the thing. No doubt I could make a replacement, with scissors and tar paper, but my heart wouldn't be in it. I prefer to believe the black disc will return to land again some day, to wait for me on a beach, and I will welcome it with proper wonder, and ask no other questions.

Sub Duty Found Depressing For Sailors' Wives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wives of men serving long tours on nuclear submarines suffer from depression and grief the Navy neither recognizes nor deals with adequately, a psychological study reports.

While the Navy is concerned with effects on seamen of their three-months-at-sea, three-months-home rotation, it doesn't deal with the severe stress this pattern poses for wives, the University of Hawaii at Manoa study says.

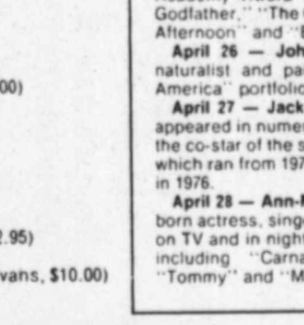

The researchers said the Navy provides counseling services, but informal social pressures make wives reluctant to use them. Moreover, the counseling doesn't adequately address the problem's seriousness, says the report published in American Journal of Psychiatry's April issue.

"The wife seeking help may be labeled 'dependent' or 'weak' by other wives, her the husband returns this role generally husband's superiors or even her own husband," said the report.

Faced with constant pressure to be a sacrificing, "good military wife," a woman often is forced to hide her feelings and grief, the report said.

The researchers tested 24 wives of nuclear submarine personnel based in Hawaii to assess their depression when husbands were at sea and at home.

Survey Shows Americans Fear Blindness Second To Cancer

THROUGH A GLASS DARKLY — Once for the privileged few, eyeglasses are now worn by one out of every two Americans. (The Spectacle Maker, 16th-century woodcut from the Bettman Archive.)(NEA Photo)

By LARRY MURPHY

NEW YORK (NEA) — A Chinese emperor may have worn them. Good Queen Bess I certainly wore them, and benign Ben Franklin was the toast of two continents with them.

What were they? Why, those fashionables and practical appurtenances were health aids called eyeglasses or spectacles.

In medieval, renaissance and colonial periods, they were rarities available only to the rich, powerful or inventive. Today, one of every two Americans wears glasses.

Despite inflation, eye care cost today is still a bargain for a priceless asset — vision. An estimate by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics indicates that over a 20-year period, prices of most products has risen 169 percent; eyewear has only increased 106 percent.

Vision is the most important of the senses; 80 percent of knowledge is gained through the eyes. But like health generally, eyesight is often taken for granted until it is damaged or lost, notes the Better Vision Institute, a natinal non-profit educational organization observing its first half-century of public service.

Founded April 25, 1929, "to create and provide actual and practical methods of promoting better vision," the institute is supported by optometrists, ophthalmologists, opticians and optical companies. Its message reaches millions today via TV, radio, the printed press and school informational programs.

Public opinion polls have indicated that the affliction Americans fear most, after cancer, is blindness. Several million U.S. citizens are visually impaired, two thirds of them over age 65. Blindness and eye disorders are major problems for our youth, with at least 32,000 teen-agers blind.

Yet most people don't have their eyes examined as often as the should. Once every few years is not sufficiently frequent to protect the precious gift of sight.

Nevertheless, Americans as a people are seeing better today then ever before because of better-educated and trained ophthalmologists, opticians and optometrists and because of new and better eyeglasses and other vision aids. And they probably know more about their eyes thanks to the institute's half-century educational effort.

Over the years, celebrities from the worlds of sports, society and entertainment have helped to dramatize the importance of better eye care. An early institute campaign kickoff was an eye test in 1930 atop the then new Empire State Building involving aviatrix Amelia Earhart and other celebrated fliers.

On film and radio, blind Helen Keller and one-eyed newsman Floyd Gibbons urged eye tests by reputable professionals and, where needed, prescriptions and glasses. During World War II, the importance of good vision to war production was emphasized. One institute ad urged: "Let's give Hitler a black eye by keeping your eyes in 'the pink.'"

One historic event was a fashion eyeopener, a 1931 showing at New York's Waldorf Astoria featuring eyeglasses for the first time as both beautiful and practical. The event shocked many of the fashionable in an era when glasses were considered a necessary evil — certainly not a fashion accessory.

But it probably wouldn't have surprised the elite few once privileged to wear spectacles, such as the 13-century Chinese emperor who got a new slant on life through heavy quartz glasses with ivory, frames. Or Queen Elizabeth I, who saw a few favored courtiers through round and horn-rimmed sight aids.

Or especially suave, witty and wise Ben Franklin. His invention of the bifocal lens caused a sensation when Uncle Sam was a babe, and two centuries later his wire frames were right back in the height of fashion.

Alcohol Rated As Greatest Temptation For U.S. Teenagers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alcohol remains more tempting than tobacco or marijuana to teen-agers, a government statistician says.

But the percentage of teen-age cigarette smokers is dropping while marijuana smoking is on the rise, according to surveys of youths aged 12 to 17 in 1977.

"If the trends noted in 1977 continue, it will not be long before more adolescents are using marijuana than nicotine," Mary Grace Kovar of the National Center for Health Statistics wrote in an article in Public Health Reports.

Surveys have estimated that among the 24 million American youths, 53 percent have tasted alcohol, 47 percent have tried cigarettes and 28 percent have sampled marijuana.

The number of experimenters increases with age, so that among high-school seniors in 1977 more than 90 percent had tried alcohol, 76 percent tried cigarettes and 56 percent marijuana, she noted.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare expressed alarm earlier this week about the jump in current adolescent marijuana smokers from 12.4 percent in 1976 to 16.1 percent in 1977. The survey defined current as someone who had used the substance in the previous 30 days.

At the same time, current adolescent drinkers dropped to 31 percent in 1977 from 32 percent in 1976 and 34 percent in 1974.

WHERE THE JOBS ARE

Over 70 percent of all Americans who work hold government or service jobs. The pace of state and local government hiring, which mushroomed in the early 1970s, is slackening.

Country's Highways Becoming Truck Drivers' Playgrounds

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When teamster Timothy Andrews drove into a Missouri weigh station a few months ago to use the lavatory, he was surprised to find the facility closed. Surprised? He was beaucoup enraged, do ya read. And police say he destroyed the $100,000 building with one pass of his truck.

Happily, Andrews was traced and arrested (he left a telltale mudflap at the scene of the crime), but rather than become a disgrace to his profession, he has become its folk hero. Scores of other truck drivers say destroying a weigh station is a patriotic act, and have raised $500 for Andrews' defense.

And so it goes with America's contemporary cowboys, its long haul truckers, rolling down the nation's last frontier, its interstate highways. Once storied for their adherence to the rules of the road, many teamsters today have become little more than thugs with deadly, 18-wheel weapons.

State police from the evergreens to the Everglades report hair-raising stories regarding the vehicular acrobatics of what appear to be increasing numbers of truckers. And a depressing number of them are not just knocking down weigh stations; they are aiming at other motorists as well.

Recently, a teen-age girl in Florida told authorities of a Mack truck operator who bumped her vehicle three times at 60 mph and made obscene gestures when she stopped. In California, passenger car drivers have complained of being forced off roads by truckers, then verbally harassed or even beaten.

And Frank Nye of Iowa tells a tale of a highway confrontation that is both chilling and common. Nye, a Cedar Rapids newsman, says he angered a trucker on Interstate 80, and as a result: "I was boxed in the inside lane by five trucks, at 70 mph, and I was not allowed to exit for 20 minutes."

Nye says the truckers were angry with him because he was driving too slow. Police say this kind of anger probably occurs on every busy road in America every hour of every day. In most cases, truckers quite naturally contain their frustrations: More and more, though, police say they do not.

In Texas, troopers recall a truck driver who got into a hot argument with a motorist by way of citizens band radio. When the motorist tried to pass the truck, the teamster abruptly crossed the yellow line, whereupon the driver of the car lost control and was killed in a spectacular overturn.

Not that the Texas incident is necessarily reflective of trucking in general. On the whole, the National Safety Council says truck operators are exceptional drivers: With 28.5 million trucks in operation, the accident rate is less than six per million miles (the non-truck accident rate is 11.05).

Yet the safety statistics are not totally encouraging, particularly those regarding heavy motor carriers. Federal records suggest there are about 1 million big trucks today, which is only 1 percent of all vehicles, but they figure in 4,000 deaths a year, or 9 percent of all road fatalities.

What's more, the big truck record is especially grisly when small vehicles are involved. Figures show that when heavy trucks collide with other vehicles, 91 of 100 of the fatalities are in the other vehicles. When trucks hit passenger cars, fully 97 percent of the deaths are in the cars

> Police say there is probably no truck operator in America who obeys the 55 mph limit.

This means that big trucks, many weighing as much as 130,000 pounds, are far more menacing than other vehicles. And so are the big truck drivers. The accident rate among all motorists is growing at about 1.2 percent a year, but the rate among long haul truckers is nearly 14 times as high.

It should be said that most heavy truck operators dispute these figures. They claim the majority of their accidents are beyond their control, hence the accident figures are misleading. Truckers say four-wheel drivers cause most trucking mishaps; also, they insist their job itself is responsible.

Police admit the truckers are right about faulty motorists (studies indicate as many as 14 million Americans drive without valid licenses). And the teamsters may also be right about the killing nature of their work; to some extent commercial trucking and safe trucking are a contradiction of terms.

For one thing, the cab of a minor carrier can be a torture chamber. The noise reaches levels above that of jetliners, and the air is filled with toxic gases. When laboratory animals are put in cab conditions, the result is a proliferation of such ailments as bleeding ulcers and anemia.

Then there is the lonely monotony of the road. Some operators are away from their families for 250 to 300 days a year. "And pressure?" says one driver. "You don't know what worry is unless you got a load of pears to get to Cleveland by Friday, and you break down all day Thursday in Miles City."

True, most truckers take pride in the burdens of their work, but many pay dearly for it. One study of union drivers reveals that most chain-smoke, many drink coffee by the quart, and one in four have impaired physical or emotional health. Says the researcher: "These are not relaxed men."

Neither are truckers patient men. Police say there is probably no operator in America, "not one," who obeys the 55 mph limit. Sixty-three mph is the national average, according to federal investigators. And in the nether regions of the West and Midwest, rigs travel regularly in the 75-80 range.

Not only are the truckers speeding, federal inspectors say they are doing it in vehicles that are frequently neglected and unsafe. Last year the U.S. Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety conducted a spot test on 676 trucks in rural Pennsylvania, and found half of them not fit for the road.

The BMCS says brakes are the most common defect on heavy trucks. In the Pennsylvania test, inspectors found that 60 percent of the unfit vehicles had some kind of braking irregularity. Actually, 65 of the trucks had entire pieces missing from their complex brake systems.

BMCS officers believe there are hundreds of thousands of unsafe trucks on the roads today. But most of them roll with impunity. The BMCS employs only 130 inspectors to cover 50 states, or one for every 28,000 interstate trucks; at best then, they can only see one percent of the vehicles each year.

Police likewise miss all but a fraction of the outlaw truckers. Capt. Lloyd Jennings of the Indiana State Patrol says he only has 100 men per shift to cover 92 counties, and "this means that some parts of the state can't be patrolled at all." Small wonder, he adds, that road anarchy triumphs.

Even when truck drivers are caught speeding, or drunk, or floating on marijuana, their punishment normally does not fit the crime. In many states the fine for a speeding, 30-ton truck is about $50; that can be more than covered by the extra profits a driver will earn from faster deliveries.

And so what if citations lead to a suspended license? Ken Nathanson of Washington says drivers often have back-up permits. He should know. A trucker once crashed into his car, killing his daughter; the driver had been suspended in his home state, but was operating on a valid license from another.

Since that accident, Nathanson has formed Citizens for Better Driver Records, and advocates a standard U.S. license for teamsters. As it is now, he says, a driver in, say, Pennsylvania can get a license for P.K. Jones, another for Paul K. Jones, a third for P. Kevin Jones — and on and on.

Nathanson says some truckers use licenses "like decks of cards." And police add that this gamble routinely involves matters of life and death. Truckers kill themselves at a rate of 90 per 100,000 per year (vs. 70 per 100,000 for miners); in all, trucks are involved in one of every 11 road fatalities.

And no one expects the slaughter to abate soon. Not while there is anarchy on the highways. Capt. Jennings of Indiana says the old-time cowboy believed it was his proper right to cut up and stuff it to the established order. The officer thinks the diesel riders of today are expecting nothing less.

So they strut and bully and believe they own the road. Last year in Iowa, while state troopers conducted a crackdown on speed, two protesting truckers drew side by side on Interstate 80, and held up traffic for miles. When police asked why, one driver said: "We do what we want, Smokey."

Indeed, too often they do. Police say some truck drivers have turned truckstops into whorehouses, highways into racetracks, and they've reduced CB radio to a humiliating disgrace. Not all the drivers are raising hell, but those who are have eroded the good public image of an entire industry.

And things may get worse. Researchers predict the size and number of long haul trucks will double in 20 years, but law enforcement staffs will hardly grow at all.

Even many truck operators worry that matters are out of control. Olen Welk, for instance, the 1977 Truck Driver of the Year, started on the roads in 1920, and covered 3.5 million miles without an accident. Now he's retired, and glad of it. "It's getting to be murder out there," he says.

CHILD LABOR — It takes a lot of effort and an unconventional technique, but four-year-old Ryan Mohr of Bellingham, Wash., manages to push the family lawnmower around just like the big boys. He doesn't recognize yard boundaries, though, and often cuts a swath through three adjoining lawns. (AP Laserphoto)

Soviet Labor Lawyer Working To Form Independent Unions

MOSCOW (AP) — Vsevolod D. Kuvakin, dismissed summarily from his job as a legal inspector after criticizing the Communist system, has taken up defending Soviet workers' rights. He hopes his efforts will help bring about independent labor unions in the country.

Unlike many dissidents, the 36-year-old labor lawyer hasn't given up completely on trying to further the human rights movement through official Soviet channels.

Kuvakin requested — and won — official permission to appear in court on behalf of a worker fired for complaining about misuse of state funds by his boss and the head of a Communist Party district committee.

The people's court in Kalinin, about 100 miles northwest of Moscow, didn't like Kuvakin taking the place of a normal defense lawyer. He recalls that the three judges treated him "hostilely."

But they listened. Subsequently, an embezzlement case against the complaining worker, Rif Faizin, was dropped. And Faizin was given another job — not as good as his old one, but still a livelihood.

Kuvakin's court appearance last December marked another in a series of steps which he and a small group of dissident colleagues have been taking recently to help defend workers' rights.

Eventually, Kuvakin hopes their efforts will lead to creation of an independent Soviet trade union, similar to movements for workers' rights in Poland and elsewhere in Eastern Europe.

Yet actually achieving this goal here — or even coming close to it — will be no easy task. Within the past 16 months, two separate attempts have been made to form a comparable independent labor union. But both efforts soon collapsed.

In late January 1978, a group headed by former coal miner Vladimir Klebanov announced the creation of a "Trade Union for the Defense of Workers" and said it would seek support from the Geneva-based International Labor Organization.

Klebanov told Western correspondents that an independent union was needed because official Soviet trade unions — enrolling 98 percent of the work force — have failed to deal effectively with problems such as plant safety violations, firings without cause, low pay and corrupt supervisors.

Less than two weeks later, Klebanov and five other key members of the fledgling union were seized by police. Klebanov was forcibly confined in a psychiatric hospital and activist Valentin Poplavsky was sentenced to a labor-camp term.

Most other members of the group were expelled from Moscow and warned to cease all independent union activities.

Last October, another group emerged calling itself the "Free Interprofessional Association of Workers." It charged that existing Soviet unions "betray the interests of the workers" by frequently siding with state authorities in labor disputes.

This second group, known by its Russian initials as "SMOT," also soon came under pressure from Soviet authorities and has been largely inactive during the past several months.

Kuvakin, in a recent interview, criticized the two previous attempts to form an independent union, saying they were poorly organized.

Built-In Insect Repellant Boasted By Various Plants

By ROBERT C. RADCLIFFE
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Mother Nature will be there to lend a hand when you plant your vegetable and flower gardens.

Not with a shovel, but with a strategy to turn plants against pests and bug against bug.

Generation of growers with green thumbs swear to the power of these natural "pesticides," claiming they do the job of chemicals without unwanted side effects, says the National Georgraphic News Service. The lineup of gardeners' legendary allies and how folklore says they work include:

Marigolds, planted fence-like around gardens, keep away striped cucumber beetles and other invading insects because these showy, yellow flowers smell repulsive to them. The same goes for nasturtiums and geraniums.

Herbs, growing among other plants, are off-putting for many insects. Rosemary, thyme, oregano, and savory, for instance, keep away munching beetles and worms.

Basil, rue, and pennyroyal keep mosquitoes and flies moving on. Some farmers plant mint and spearmint around barn doors because the leaves' fresh smell helps keep ants, beetles, and horseflies away.

Radishes planted between cucumbers, tomatoes among asparagus, and horseradish in with potatoes defeat cucumber beetles, asparagus beetles, and Colorado potato beetles.

A nice garlic-onion spray, blended with water and hot peppers, is repugnant to many insects and animals. Applying the spray to corn repels Raccoons, and a mash made from the spray and spread among vegetable rows is too much for sensitive rabbits and woodchucks.

A rope soaked in creosote dragged around the garden leaves a line these varmints supposedly won't step over.

Empty beer bottles planted neck deep at the ends of vegetable rows make a sound in a sound in a breeze that is too mournful for marauding moles. Snails and slugs will slither irresistibly into a plate of beer and drown.

Skunks are a gardener's friend, not because they are equipped with one of nature's most awesome repellants, but because they prowl among vegetables at night with a voracious appetite for insects. Geese and ducks are great bug eaters, too: a growing duckling puts away 200 insects an hour.

Toads, frogs, lizards, and snakes should be encouraged — they're wild about bugs. A box turtle can make a meal of insects, but also low-hanging tomatoes. A short-tailed shrew eats his weight in insects every 24 hours.

Ladybugs may devour 40 aphids an hour, and praying mantises are ruthlessly efficient bug catchers. Both insects are bought in quantity by gardeners.

A few experimenting gardeners have spread newspapers around their vegetable plots. Laboratory tests have revealed that the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, and the Boston Globe, for instance, keep hungry bugs from growing up, thanks to a juvenile growth hormone in the trees the paper is made from.

However, a phenomenon described by a Puerto Rican has not been explained. "The only magazine I can keep down here is the National Geographic," he wrote the magazine. "The ants and termites, they get into all the books and all the magazines except yours, and when they taste the Geographic they are poisoned and die immediately."

Robbers Attempt To Batter Way Into Bank Vault

CARMINE (AP) — Robbers using a 1953 fire truck as a battering ram and a sledge hammer for close-up work failed Thursday in an attempt to burglarize the Carmine State Bank.

"We had a little excitement," said Carmine City Garage operator J. C. Pohl, who chased two would-be burglars with his shotgun. "I'd say half the town was involved in the investigation this morning."

The daughter of a restaurant cook who lives near the bank saw one of the volunteer fire department's trucks slamming repeatedly into the wall just before 6 a.m. and shouted at the driver.

The driver jumped out of the truck and ran to the front of the single-story, yellow-brick building on U.S. 290.

A phone call brought Pohl, who gave chase in his pickup truck but could not catch the car.

Bank President H.L. Doerr found the bank had been entered through a broken front window. Doerr said several knobs and gears were broken off the door of the vault holding safety deposit boxes but it was intact.

Long Term Trade Agreement Between East, West Germany Eyed

'Europe Is The World's Safest Continent After Australia'

By FRANZ SCHURMANN
(c) 1979 Pacific News Service

A casual remark made by East Germany's top economic official early in March to his West German counterpart could have consequences changing the direction of European history.

During the annual Leipzig grade fair, top Communist Party member Guenter Mittag pulled anote out of his pocket from his boss Erich Honecker and told visiting West German Economics Minister Count Lambsdorff that East Germany would like to conclude a longterm trade agreeement with West Germany.

The news unleashed a flurry of interest in West Germany, Europe's mightiest economy and most potent member of the Common Market. To many observers it signaled a dramatic shift in East Germany's hard line policy toward West Germany. And the apparent shift comes at an auspicious time — on the eve of June elections for the first West European parliament, a symbol of European political unity that had long terrified the Warsaw Pact governments.

However, that concern has lately been mollified as the likely makeup of the new parliament becomes clearer. Judging from public opinion polls, socialists will be the leading party in the new Euro-parliament, and West European socialists, especially West Germany's, have been calling for closer East-West ties.

East Germany is the last East European country not to have a long term trade agreement with West Germany's even though the two countries have recognized each other as sovereign states since 1972 and enjoyed mutual tariff-free trade.

Economic relations between kthe two Germanys has, in fact, been improving ever since West German Chancellor Willy Brandt introduced his famous Ostpolitik, or "eastern policy", in 1969. That policy represented a West German bid for the huge industrial and consumer markets of Eastern Europe and Russia, lands which the Gemans have fought for and/or traded with for centuries.

In fact, heavy trade between the two Germanys has been going on throughout the entire post-war period. East Germany, which is the Soviet Union's chief high technology workshop, needs the West as both an export market that pays in hard currency (Russia pays in raw materials), and as a source of consumer goods for a population that is demanding a higher standard of living. While West Germany has less immediate need of East German trade, it is indispensible as part of its growing economic ties with the East European Economic Community (COMECOM).

But despite the economic enmeshment that already exists between the two countires, they have remained deeply suspicious of each other. East Germans worry over Western attempts to undermine their regime, and West Germany's press abounds in horror tales about the Eat German Stasi, or secret police. The heavily-mined border between the two countries and the uneasy standoff of hundreds of thousands of soldiers on each side is testament to their political hostility.

However, those hostilities are subject to broader issues, such as East-West relations generally, and U.S.-Soviet relations particularly. And these broader framework now seem to bode reasonably well for better relations between the two Germanys. Despite the delicate nature of recent world events, the Carter Administration remains committed to concluding a SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union. And as for intra-European relations, a certain stability has settled over both East and West.

There have even been rumors in the West European press about secret negotiations between West Germany and the Soviet Union concerning European disarmament–a sign of the impatience and frustration felt on both sides with the longterm failure of the U.S.-Soviet dominated Mutual Balanced Force Reduction talks in Vienna.

Indeed, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, now recognized a Western Europe's leading statesman, remarked in March that "Europe is the world's safest continent after Australia" — a comment that undoubtedly raised eye-brows at NATO headquarters.

This relative easing of East-West tensions in Europe comes at a time when the Eastern Bloc needs the Western economic connection more than ever. East Germany's pressing economic problems are a microcosm of those that afflict its Communist neighbors. In short, they cannot maintain their high rates of industrial investment and at the same time satisfying the rising consumer demand of the populace.

When Erich Honecker came to power in Eat Germany he promised the people a high standard of living. He gave it to them, and now they live the best of all peoples in Eastern Europe.

But without access to Western capital and technology, Honecker cannot continue to pay for a consumer society and keep up his industrial apparatus at the same time. He thus needs a greater foot in the door to the west, an opening such as a longterm trade agreement with West Germany represents.

But of course, it also represents more than that. No East German official, including Honecker, would make such a move without the clear consent of the Soviet Union, to which the Germans remain slavishly loyal. So the note passed in Leipzig bore a clear, if invisible, Soviet stamp.

Does this mean that the Soviets are testing the political winds for the possibilities of some still remote East-West "common market," an economic enmeshment of the European Economic Community and COMECON?

If so, they will find fresh gusts blowing in from West Germany, where a number of Social Democrats centered around Herbert Wehner, an influential party spokesman, has been calling for a "German Common Market" embracing East and West.

"The idea of a German Common Market is useful," wrote Professsor Wolfgang Seiffert, until last year a close advisor to the East German government, in a recent issue of West Germany's magazine Der Speigel. "Though the concept of a common market in international relations as well as international law has never been precisely defined, in general one can say that it means the adherence of two or more states to a single economic region in which all tariffs and other obstacles to trade in internal regional trade are removed and a common foreign trade tariff posture is developed toward third parties in a way that a single common market arises."

Proponents of the idea argue that such an enmeshment would have the double effect of moving the Eastern countries from their harsh, Stalinist past into a peaceful and economically oriented socialism. At the same time it could exorcise the spectre of imperial communism that still haunts much of Western Europe, and give a significant boost to social democracy everywhere.

And perhaps most importantly, the "other obstacles to trade" which Seiffert says would be removed would have to include barriers to the free flow of labor between East and West. And once those barriers are removed, permitting the movement of ordinary workers between the two Germanys, some form of political ties would be likely to follow.

Suprantional economic integration is now a powerful world force. In the Western Hemisphere there is talk of a common market of the U.S., Canada and Mexico. China and Japan, the longtime antagonistic giants of Asia, are now almost inextricably enmeshed in trade. Western Europe is now moving beyond economic integration to political integration in a Euro-parliament. If the East German offer is sincere, it could signal a vast new economic zone stretching from the Atlantic to deep inside the Soviet Un-

People Bathed In Radiation 'All The Time'

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — People are bathed in radiation all the time whether they know it or not, but barring a nuclear accident it's mostly natural radiation.

Cosmic rays from space, for example, give a person about 40 millirems a year at sea level, even more at higher altitudes. A millirem is a thousandth of a rem, the standard unit of radiation exposure.

More natural radiation comes from uranium, radium, and thorium in stone, concrete, and soil, as well as radioactive carbon and potassium in the body and in water and food. These sources give the average person a whole-body dose of about a hundred millirems a year.

Besides absorbing natural radiation, many people are exposed to man-made ionizing emissions. Medical diagnostic X-rays, for example, give the average person 70 millirems a year. TV sets and radium-dial wristwatches add perhaps a millirem a year.

From these natural and man-made sources, the average person gets close to 200 millirems of radiation annually, reports Kenneth F. Weaver in a major nuclear energy story in the April National Geographic.

A nuclear reactor, properly operated, adds little to this burden: no more than a few millirems a year for the exposed public. Coal-powered plants emit about the same amount of radioactivity because of radium and uranium in the coal.

But radioactive elements such as iodine 131, cesium 137, and strontium 90 — all produced in nuclear reactors — are especially hazardous to man if they get into the food chain, because of biological concentration.

How much radiation does it take to cause harm? Radiobiologists regard a single dose to the whole body of 600 rems — 600,000 millirems — as lethal to most people; 100 whole-body rems can cause radiation sickness; 10 can damage the lymph nodes and spleen and decrease the bone marrow and blood cells, although the symptoms are not felt.

A few millirems or even a few rems seem small by comparison, especially spread over a period of time. However, many scientists insist that no radiation level is harmless, and that ionizing radiation is something to avoid if at all possible.

When emissions from radioactive substances enter the human body, they injure cells by ionizing (tearing electrons from) atoms. If the damage is slight, or takes place slowly, the body usually makes repairs. But if damage is great, adequate repairs are impossible and the biological consequences can be severe.

Some of the more extreme consequences are illness, reduced life expectancy, eventual cancer. Or genetic defects may appear in future generations.

Certain parts of the body, such as the gonads, thyroid, and bone marrow, are especially sensitive to radiation. Moreover, some radioisotopes have particular affinities. Strontium 90, for example, is a bone seeker, and iodine becomes concentrated in the thyroid instead of being eliminated.

President John F. Kennedy proclaimed Sir Winston Churchill an honorary citizen of the United States.

Hero Of Guadalcanal Still Fighting For His Medal Of Honor

By TOM TIEDE

WEST ISLIP, L.I. (NEA) -There are precious few times when a president of the United States has the opportunity to do something that, at once, is correct, judicial, decent and noncontroversial. Jimmy Carter has recently been presented with the opportunity, but, apparently, he's letting it slip by.

Let's begin at the beginning.

The opportunity in question has its roots in World War II. The date was November 1, 1942, and the place was Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands. One of the soldiers engaged in the combat there was Anthony Casamento, a raw and skinny kid from the streets of New York who had joined the war as a U.S. Marine.

ANTHONY CASAMENTO

Casamento was part of a 30-man unit that was attempting to establish a machine gun emplacement on the top of a ridge. The ridge overlooked coral formations occupied by Japanses resisters. When Casamento's unit began to dig in, the Japanese retailiated with automatic fire and fragmentation grenades.

The enemy assault was so fierce that 27 of the 30 Marines were quickly killed. Rather than retreat, however, Casamento stayed to protect two men who has been shot but who were still alive. He then initiated a quite extraordinary and single-handed defense againt hundreds of advancing enemy troops.

To this day, no one knows exactly how long Casamento held off the Japanese forces. But in saving the lives of his comrades, he very nearly forfeited his own. When the enemy was driven back by an American rescue mission, Casamento was found slumped over his gun and suffering from at least 14 wounds.

And that's how it began, 37 years ago. When officers heard of Casamento's survival, they properly considered giving him the Medal of Honor. Alas, in the midst of war, there was a snafu: No one could find the men Casamento had saved, and, without witnesses, the decoration for valor could not be awarded.

When Casamento recovered from his punishment, he was sent home with a few small awards. He was also given a monthly pension for disability. But the Medal of Honor? It was all but forgotten. Nothing more was said of it, actually, until 1964, when Casamento received a letter from the men he'd saved.

The men wondered why Casamento had never received the big award. And they offered to become the witnesses theretofore missing. Thus encouraged, Casamento asked his old company commander to argue his case before the Navy's advisory Board of Decorations and Medals. And this was done on June 18, 1965.

To say the least, the Navy board was impressed with the retelling of the Casamento heroism. It decided that the man's disregard for his own safety was indeed, bravery beyond the call of duty. After the hearing, Casamento was informed the board had unanimously recommended him for the Medal of Honor.

As it happened, though, the recommendation was to be short lived. Going against precedent, the secretary of the Navy (Paul Nitze at the time) overruled the board's decision. Nitze said Casamento's valor could be appropriately commemorated with a lesser deoration, in this case the Navy Cross.

Nitze did not explain his ruling. But the Navy said the secretary was merely following the book. Service rules stipulate that recommendations for the Medal of Honor must be made within three years of the act of heroism, and the award must be made within five. Hence Casamento was just too late.

The secretary's decision angered Casamento. Previously he had merely dreamed of the medal; now, with the Navy board's recommendation, he believed he deserved it. So he began a long and painful campaign to, as he says, "get justice." Now 58, he runs the campaign from his home here in West Islip.

Casamento says the campaign has cost him his life savings, and a chunk of his faith in the system. His children have gathered petition signatures, his wife has conducted a 10-day fast, and he has rolled his wheelchair up and down the walk in front of the White house. But still the award is not his.

Last year Casamento's congressional representatives joined the protest. Rep. Tom Downey (D-N.Y.) and Sen. Jaob Javits (R-N.Y.) sponsored bils which allowed President Carter to waive all restrictions and give Casamento the Medal of Honor. The bills passed and the president signed the legislation.

But so far Carter has refused to go further. He could award the medal anytime, and delight Congress, Casamento and many people who know the story. Yet aides say he has no plans to do so. In fact, he's turned the matter back to the Navy Department, which continues to adhere to its original decision.

And there the matter stands. On square one. Tony Casamento says the long experience has been the saddest thing in his life. He believes the Marine Corps has abandoned him, the Navy has cheated him—and as for Jimmy Cater, well, "If the president of the United States can't help me, who can?"

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Administration Seeks To Free Texas Woman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has asked Israel about possibly freeing an American woman convicted of supplying information to Arab guerrillas.

The woman, Terry Fleener of San Antonio, Texas, confessed during a one-day trial in January 1978 and is serving a five-year sentence.

A U.S. official, who declined to be identified, said the United States was trying to determine whether her case is considered by Israeli authorities to be similar to those of a number of Palestinians who were released with the signing of last month's peace treaty with Egypt.

The official said he understood that Miss Fleener's lawyer planned another appeal. "We are not attempting to judge the case," the official said.

Miss Fleener, 24, was arrested in October 1977 on arrival at Ben-Gurion Airport. She was charged with gathering information in Israel to pass to a member of an Arab guerrilla organization in Lebanon.

Her mother, Mary Boettcher, of Enon, Ohio, and Catherine Edwards, her former professor at the University of Texas in San Antonio, testified as character witnesses during the trial.

"She is idealistic, somewhat naive, impetuous, and fiercely loyal to her friends and principles," said Mrs. Edwards. "She was interested in the Middle East and very well read.

"She confessed in court ... but the sentence does not reflect what she actually did. She didn't hurt anyone," Mrs. Edwards said.

According to her mother, Miss Fleener went to Lebanon in 1975 and worked as a stewardess for Kuwait Airlines, living in Kuwait and traveling throughout the Middle East. She quit that job in 1976 and returned to her studies in Texas.

After she confessed and was convicted, Miss Fleener's Israeli lawyer, Felicia Langer, called the five-year sentence "cruel and unbased." The lawyer asked that Miss Fleener be expelled from Israel as soon as possible.

FIRST WOMAN CANDIDATE

Placebo Effect Blamed For Dissatisfaction With Health Care

quired to attain has been the trend toward specialization. Since no one individual can be an expert in all fields, specialists have become common.

Dr. Henry Wechsler of Boston's Medical Foundation Inc., has noted that the actual number of primary-care physicians, whom he defines as those involved in general practice, pediatrics, family practice or internal medicine, has decreased even though the number of doctors has increased. In 1974 there were 859 fewer primary-care physicians than in 1964, a decrease of one percent. In the same decade the number of specialists had increased by 45,604, a change of 37 percent.

Unfortunately, this trend removes the patient from a meaningful relationship with his doctor because many physicians often take care of one individual. As Dr. R.B. Greenblatt of the Medical College of Georgia stated: "The emotional disenchantment between patient and physician started with the vanishing family doctor and the emergence of the specialist. Depth of personal understanding has yielded to bredth of medical knowledge."

In so fragmenting the doctor-patient relationship we have created a void in medical care. Have we not lost more than we have gained? We should not be surprised to find that modern medicine, with its potent interventions, has even contributed to ill health.

This brings us to the ancient dictum, primum no nocere ("first of all do not harm"), generally attributed to Hippocrates and considered the cornerstone of medicine.

The underlying principle that should be applied is that of the risk-vs.-benefit ratio. The risks of the diagnosis and treatment of a disease should be weighed against the benefits to be expected from these procedures. If a disease is not suspected or is minor and poses little discomfort, it would be foolhardy to expose a patient to medical procedures which pose risks.

However, Dr. Louis Lasagna of Johns Hopkins University believes that "Given a choice between no treatment and effective treatment with a risk of toxicity, the modern physician must usually pick the latter."

Both patients and physicians carry their expectations and beliefs in to their interaction. Patients hope to have their complaints attended to and their discomforts and diseases alleviated. What a doctor is able to do, however, often is limited.

A physician who does not write a prescription for a patient suffering from an ailment and who does not order tests frequently is considered to be inadequate by the patient. Further, it may be anxiety-producing for a physician himself to do nothing. To "do something" is what most often is taught in medical school.

To watch and wait in cases which do not require immediate action rarely is taught and often is considered to represent a lack of knowledge. Dr. Lasagna has noted that "there is unfortunately a 'furor therapeutics' in many physicians, which demands that every symptom be treated (almost at the spinal reflex level) by administration of a drug." The needless prescriptions and tests often have replaced the worthwhile aspects of the doctor-patient relationship. This is not progress, but rather an overemphasis upon modern technology at the expense of time-proven approaches. Not only is this shift of emphasis needless, but it also may cause disease, which has been termed "iatrogenic" disease.

Iatrogenic comes from the Greek words iatros (physician) and gennan (to produce). Originally the term referred to disorders induced in the patient as a result of the physician's examination, manner or discussion. That is, latrogenic ailments were those precipitated by a physician who was not sufficiently aware of his patient's anxiety or of the effects of his words and actions upon the patient.

The word is now applied to any adverse condition or illness which is engendered by the physician. For centuries, the physician's power to harm has been recognized.

Iatrogenic reactions leading to death, especially those related to drugs, have reached alarming proportions. In a report published in 1975, Dr. Nelson S. Irey of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology estimated that between 6,000 and 12,000 deaths occur annually in the United States from adverse drug reactions. The tragedy of this situation is tht many of these deaths are unnecessary, since we are overusing drugs. If the risk-vs.-benefit principle were approximately applied, drug usage would be decreased.

In one study, three John Hopkins University doctors found that 15 percent of the patients at that major medical center experienced iatrogenic effect from drugs. These doctors defined an adverse drug reaction as "any adverse response to medication undesired or unintended by the physician."

In another study, Dr. Elihu M. Schimmel of Yale University reported that over 10 percent of patients hospitalized experienced deleterious complications associated with the administration of drugs.

Since hospitalization usually involves not only more drug usage but also more diagnostic tests and procedures, iatrogenic reactions are more prevalent within hospitals. Schimmel also found that 20 percent of patients investigated experienced deleterious complications associated with medical care. The incidence of life-threatening iatrogenic complications was approximately five percent of the total hospital population.

Another much more insidious type of introgenic disease may be caused by people's excessive concern with health. This concern is fostered by a well-meaning medical profession, by commercial interests or by both. High blood pressure, or hypertension, is a good example of how preoccupation with health may lead to disease.

Hypertension is a disease of excessive blood pressure within the arteries, and it is of unknown cause in the vast majority of cases. A person afflicted with hypertension usually has no symptoms for many years, yet it leads to hardening of the arteries or arteriosclerosis. It may lead to strokes or shock, heart attacks, or death of kidney cells.

Since hypertension can be treated, and these diseases prevented or delayed, extensive hypertension-detection campaigns have been initiated. These programs are certainly worthwhile if verifiable hypertension is discovered. However, the detection programs may be counterproductive.

If emotional factors lead to hypertensioin, and there is a growing body of evidence indicating that they do, some of our detection campaigns may trigger iatrogenic hypertension.

A research team at the University of California at Irvine and Los Angeles analyzed the presence of coronary risk factors in people with no history of coronary heart disease. They measured the major risk factors of this disease (blood pressure, cholesterol levels in the blood serum, tobacco-smoking habits, obesity and tendency toward diabetes) in 2,524 adults. After the first set of measurements, the subjects were divided into two groups. The first 1,250 people who volunteered participated in an educational program concerning coronary risk factors. The second group received no such educational interventions.

Ten to 11 months after the first set of measurements, all the participants were invited to be remeasured. Comparisons were made between the group who underwent the educational program and those who did not. There were significantly increased blood pressures recorded during the second set of measurements in the group that participated in the educational program.

Generally, when you feel well, you are well. You should not seek excessive reassurance such as repeated blood pressure recordings when there are no medical complaints. You should not allow unwarranted worries about health to develop. The worries themselves may create a disease.

Top Quality USED CARS

Chevrolet's first economy car of the '80s.

CHEVY CITATION

Citation goes a long way on a tank of gas. But that's just the start. Citation has the traction of front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, and a transverse mounted engine that's cradled in rubber cushioned mountings to reduce engine vibration. Sleek Citation is easy to park, yet big enough for five adults and lots of cargo. See Chevy Citation for yourself. And to really appreciate it, get behind the wheel!

EPA ESTIMATED MPG CITY ESTIMATE 24
38 HIGHWAY ESTIMATE
With standard 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission.

Remember: Compare the estimated MPG to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on your speed, trip length, and weather. Your actual mileage will be lower in heavy city traffic, and your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway fuel economy. the "estimated MPG" is more likely to reflect actual overall mileage than the "combined estimate".

TEST DRIVE THE ALL NEW CHEVY CITATION.

DATSUN 200-SX. RUNS ON REGULAR.

THAT'S SX-APPEAL YOU CAN BANK ON.

Here's a sporty car that'll sip along the highway without sapping you at the gas pump. Datsun 200-SX. The frisky but thrifty Datsun 200-SX with standard 5-speed transmission has an EPA estimate of 21 mpg on REGULAR GAS.* Now how's that for combining high mileage with high styling?
STANDARD EQUIPMENT: ●Power-assist front disc brakes ●Steel-belted WSW radials ●Full instrumentation including tachometer ●AM/FM stereo radio ●Fully reclining front bucket seats ●Tinted glass all windows ●Electric remote-control driver's door mirror ●Cut-pile carpeting ●And many more features all at no extra cost.
*Remember, Compare these estimates to the "estimated mpg" at other cars. You may get different mileage, depending on how fast you drive, weather conditions and trip length. Also remember that your actual mileage will probably be less than the EPA estimated highway figure.

PUT YOUR MONEY IN THE BANK, NOT IN THE TANK.

Engineering Professor Gets 1979 Teaching Merit Award

Tau Beta Pi, engineering honorary association, annually presents an Outstanding Professor of the Year award, but the 1979 presentation to Prof. Louis J. "Jack" Powers represents an entirely new concept.

Tau Beta Pi members and pledges spent more than a year developing new criteria for the award, designing a special granite trophy which will carry photo-etched plates of recipients, and designing a new plaque for the personal possession of future recipients.

Powers will receive the award at the Engineering Honors Banqet beginning at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Lubbock Country Club.

Tau Beta Pi Chapter President Matthew T. Scott of Midland said the purpose of the 1978-79 award project was to make the award more meaningful. Les Bannister of Amarillo, who directed the design group working on it, sad that more than 50 members and pledges performed special tasks related to the trophy aspect alone.

Selection for the award is made by a Tau Beta Pi committee including two members from each department in the Texas Tech College of Engineering.

The trophy, which will remain in the Texas Tech College of Engineering Center, is wedge-shaped, made of granite and encased in acrylic especially formed to fit the stone. The polished granite face slants and has on it the Texas Tech seal and the seal of Tau Beta Pi. It has a special frame for 10 aluminum plates on which will be etched the photograph and name of each recipient for the next 10 years.

"After that time," Bannister explained, "the plates can be removed to a permanent collection and photographs of future recipients placed on the trophy."

Tau Beta Pi pledges have been primarily responsible for design and construction of the trophy and plaque, Bannister said.

Powers, a member of the faculty since 1942 and chairperson of the Department of Mechanical Engineering from 1952 to 1972, was cited for his effectiveness as a teacher.

"Probably one of the strongest assets Professor Powers has," his nomination read, "is the ability to motivate students to levels of output which the student himselves did not think possible."

The nomination added that "he has honed his teaching abilities to a sharp edge and keeps a sharp edge in his knowledge of the subject he relates."

Powers was honored with an AMOCO Outstanding Teaching Award by the university in 1969.

The criteria developed by Tau Beta Pi emphasized the professor's work with committees and student organizations, teaching loads, research conducted, previous awards and overall achievements. Stressed, however, are activities of the past calander year.

Powers holds degrees from Texas Tech and The University of Texas and has taken advanced study at six major universities. Many summers have been spent in research in industry.

Powers is a former president of the South Plains Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers, which named him "Engineer of the Year" in 1969. He is a member of the Lubbock Electric Utilities Board and was chairman of that body from 1973 to 1975. He is a member of both the Texas and national Society of Professional Engineers, and he holds the prestigious designation as Fellow of Tau Beta Pi. He is a former member of the Policy Board on Education of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Research Biologist Joins Tech Faculty

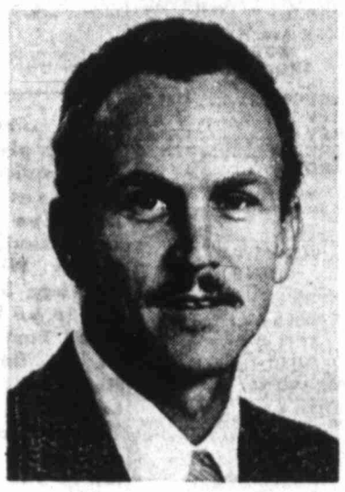

Dr. Samuel L. Beason, research biologist, has joined the Great Plains Wildlife Research Laboratory of the Rocky Mountain Forest and Range Experiment Station at Texas Tech University.

The station, headquartered in Fort Collins, Colo., is part of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service.

Scientists at the lab work with Texas Tech researchers, focusing their efforts on wildlife habitat development and economic opportunities associated with outdoor recreation, particularly hunting.

Beason has had a longtime interest in the economics of managing native wildlife on private landholdings. His special interest has involved the practical land use management techniques of coordinating domestic livestock production with wildlife production.

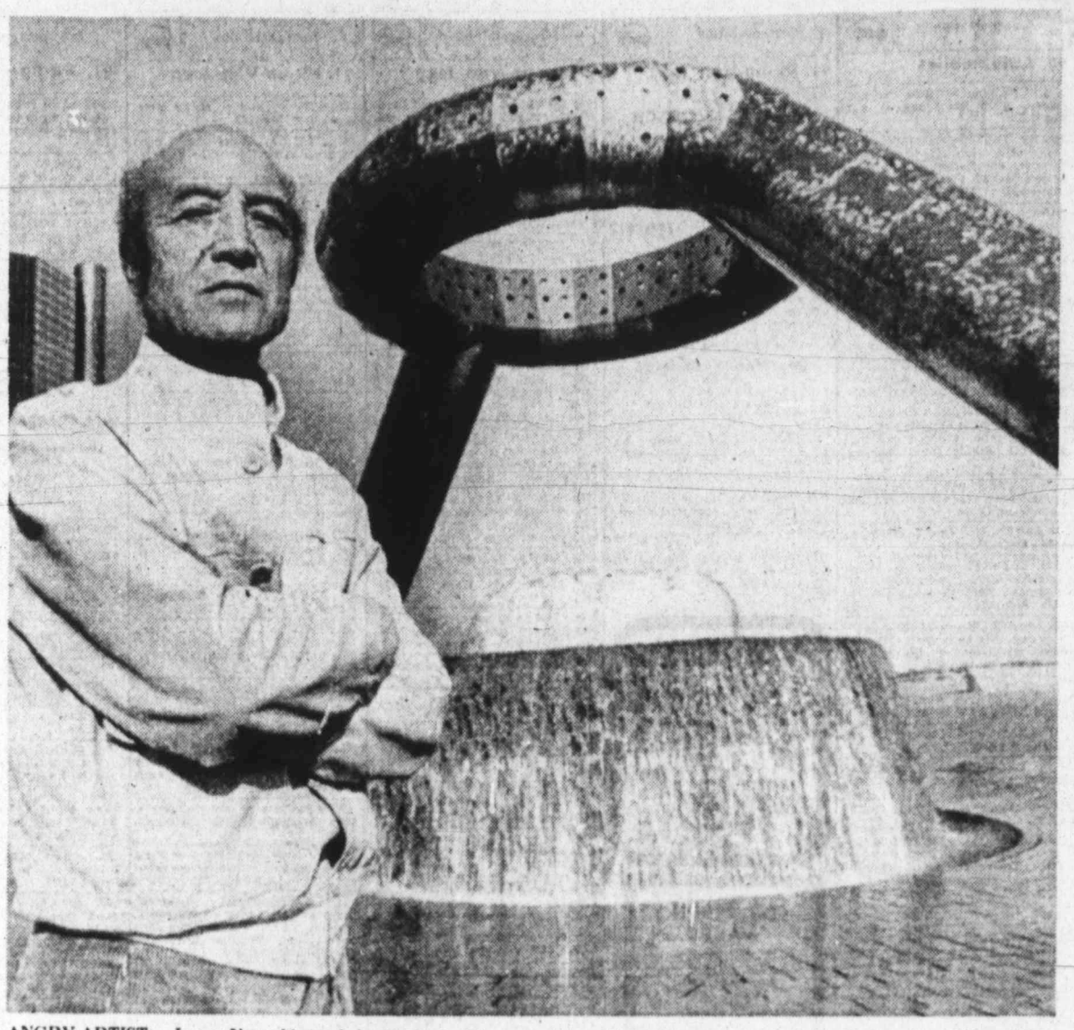

A native of San Antonio, Beason earned the bachelor's and doctoral degree at Texas A&M University and the master's at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He left the New Mexico State Game Department, where he was a population analyst, to join the Forest Service at Texas Tech. Previously he had taught at Texas A&M where, as a member of the wildlife and fisheries sciences faculty, he was named professor of the year in 1974. While serving in the Army, Beasom was a biological sciences assistant at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington.

SAMUEL L. BEASOM

Beasom is president of the New Mexico Chapter of the Wildlife Society and has been president of the Texas chapter. He has held several other offices in the Texas organization. He is a technical adviser to the Animal Damage Control Subcommittee of the National Cattlemen's Association and is a member of the Predator Task Group Committee of the American Society of Testing Materials.

He is author or co-author of 25 scholarly publications.

Plant Construction Generating Activity In Small Texas Town

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — It takes some looking to find this Fayette County town of 400 or so. But once you find it, you'll want to stay a while.

Fayetteville, Texas, is yesterday still living today, a town where youngsters have some of their classes in the same 1910 red schoolhouse where their grandfathers threw spit-wads and learned the Palmer method of handwriting.

It's a town where business is still conducted in and around the picturesque white frame courthouse in the middle of the square, a town where Sofie Michalsky's cafe puts crunchy, homemade pickles on your hamburger.

Yet, in this town of yesterdays, a growing number of young to middle-aged families are looking for tomorrow.

Fayetteville, says architect Clovis Heimsath, is "the little town that's coming back to life," partly because of economic stimulation from the construction of the Austin-Lower Colorado River Authority new generating plant nearby. But the big thing, says Heimsath, is a reawakening of town pride and an influx of what he calls "mid-40s" people tired of big city living and ready for country ways.

Almost all the buildings in Fayetteville have been around for a long time. Around the square, they're built with roofs that extend out over the sidewalks, sheltering from the elements friends and neighbors who like to stop and visit while they shop.

Mayor Billy Graeter and his wife, Rosie, who run the town's only laundromat and sell auto supplies, both grew up not too far from here but tired of big city living before settling in Fayetteville.

"It was sort of like moving back home," says Rosie, who works alongside her husband in the business.

Jimmy and Sharon Turner moved here with their three children a couple of years ago from Louisiana to set up a nursery and an insurance agency.

"The people are so great," Turner says. "I feel like I have lived here forever. I don't think you could pick a better place to raise kids."

Marie Zdaril — everyone calls her Hattie — will vouch for that. She was a youngster in Fayetteville "a while back" and she distinctly remembers having a great deal of fun in the small town.

"We went to school in the old Germania building. We had school on the bottom and a dance hall on top," the spry 87-year-old recalls. "I danced many a waltz there and I still love to dance."

The landmark Zapp Building, across the street from the bank, was built in 1900 on the ruins of a store built in 1865.

When Clovis and Maryann Heimsath purchased it, their main idea was to have room for their offices and studios — he is an artist and writer as well as architect and she is a photographer who also makes woodcuts and silkscreen prints.

But the quaint old building, which had been a dry goods emporium, hospital and boarding house on its way to falling into the good hands of the Heimsaths, has so much room, the owners just had to do more with it.

So, in a room back of their offices, a dining room called "The Country Place," furnished with mismatched old tables and chairs, opens each Saturday night at 6, serves two full houses and closes down at 9 p.m. for another week.

The Country Place is Maryann Heimsath's pride and joy. In it she serves, among other things, gourmet food, cottage cheese made from milk from their own cow, chickens they raised themselves and what she terms "a very good French wine." Upstairs, the Heimsaths fixed up six rooms for rent and, for $15 a night, you can sleep in an antique carved bed topped with a handpieced quilt, lulled by the gentle whirr of a ceiling fan supplying you with air-conditioning in the old way.

The creative Heimsaths would like to see Fayetteville become the Santa Fe of Texas and say they believe artists should be subsidized when necessary.

They have already renovated the Fayetteville Professional Building and furnished Pat Johnson, the town's first potter-in-residence, with studio space rent-free until she is able to pay.

Now when townsfolk and visitors stroll around the square they frequently stop to watch the potter turn out clay creations on a wheel in the front window.

Pat's husband is a Texas A&M graduate and a rancher. The two say they have found at Fayetteville just what they want.

"I grew up in Houston," she explains, "and after graduating, I went back to get the big money job, then found I was isolating myself in the big city.

"It's true," she insists. "People are not half so free in the city to do what they want and go where they want as they are here."

School superintendent Ben Cobb, after five years in Fayetteville, says the town "has something that's unique — the atmosphere of community here is definitely very strong."

What the Heimsaths found in Fayetteville, they say, is a sense of identity with the past providing a strong link to the future.

"Fayetteville may be more like the city of tomorrow than the current city of today is," says Heimsath, pointing out that a really severe curtailment of energy could render the city's fixed-window skyscrapers and superslab expressways all but useless, while places like Fayetteville, where such things have never mattered anyhow, continue to thrive.

"What's important is here already — family, church, community — a meaning system which fits nature's rhythm and provides continuity," the architect explains.

Although Jimmy Turner agrees, he wouldn't mind seeing the town have a few new businesses, he says.

"What we'd love to see is some good clean industry," he explains, "but nothing that would make a lot of changes. To change a whole lot would be disastrous."

Postal Size Standards Announced

Size standards for envelopes, cards and other pieces of mail will become effective July 15, the Postal Service has announced, following a Salt Lake City, Utah meeting of its Board of Governors.

The Postal Service's Governors also adopted a recommended 7-cents surcharge for oversized and odd-shaped pieces of mail.

The new size standards were recommended by the Postal Rate Commission in April 1976, and adopted shortly after that by the Postal Service's Governors. It was stipulated that they would not become effective until after the spring of 1978, giving customers at least two years to prepare for the change and exhaust their supplies of non-conforming envelopes and cards.

The Governors directed that both the surchange and new minimum size standards become effective on the same date.

This means that after July 15, pieces will be non-mailable if they are less than 3-½ inches high, 5 inches long, or seven thousands (.007) of an inch thick.

Subject to the 7-cent surcharge will be first-class mail weighing one ounce or less and single piece third-class mail of two ounces or less that exceed any of these dimensions: 6-⅛ inches high, 11-½ inches long, or ¼ inch thick.

Also subject to the surcharge are odd-shaped pieces within the weight units noted above. The acceptable size ratio for such pieces is: the length must be between 1.3 times and 2.5 times the height.

There are two basic reasons for the new standards. The surcharge on oversized and odd-shaped pieces will reflect the extra costs of handling them.

Because of their dimensions, they ususally cannot be put through letter sorting machines. The upcoming prohibition on smaller mailing pieces and flimsy cards is based on the fact that they can become trapped in other mail, tear and jam mail processing machinery. And, as a result, other mail can be damaged.

There are some exceptions to the minimum-size prohibition. If a piece is more than one-fourth of an inch thick it does not have to measure at least 3 1/2 inches high or 5 inches long.

Thicker pieces, such as film mailers, can be mechanically culled from the "river" of letter mail moving through a post office's facing and cancelling equipment.

Also exempted — from all but the minimum thickness standard — are keys, identification cards and tags. Film cartridge envelopes, if lightweight, will be subject to the surcharge.

Summer School Preparations Underway

Registration materials and schedules for summer school at Texas Tech University will be available Monday through Friday next week, from 1-6 p.m., in West Hall, second floor Conference Room according to Don Wickard, registrar.

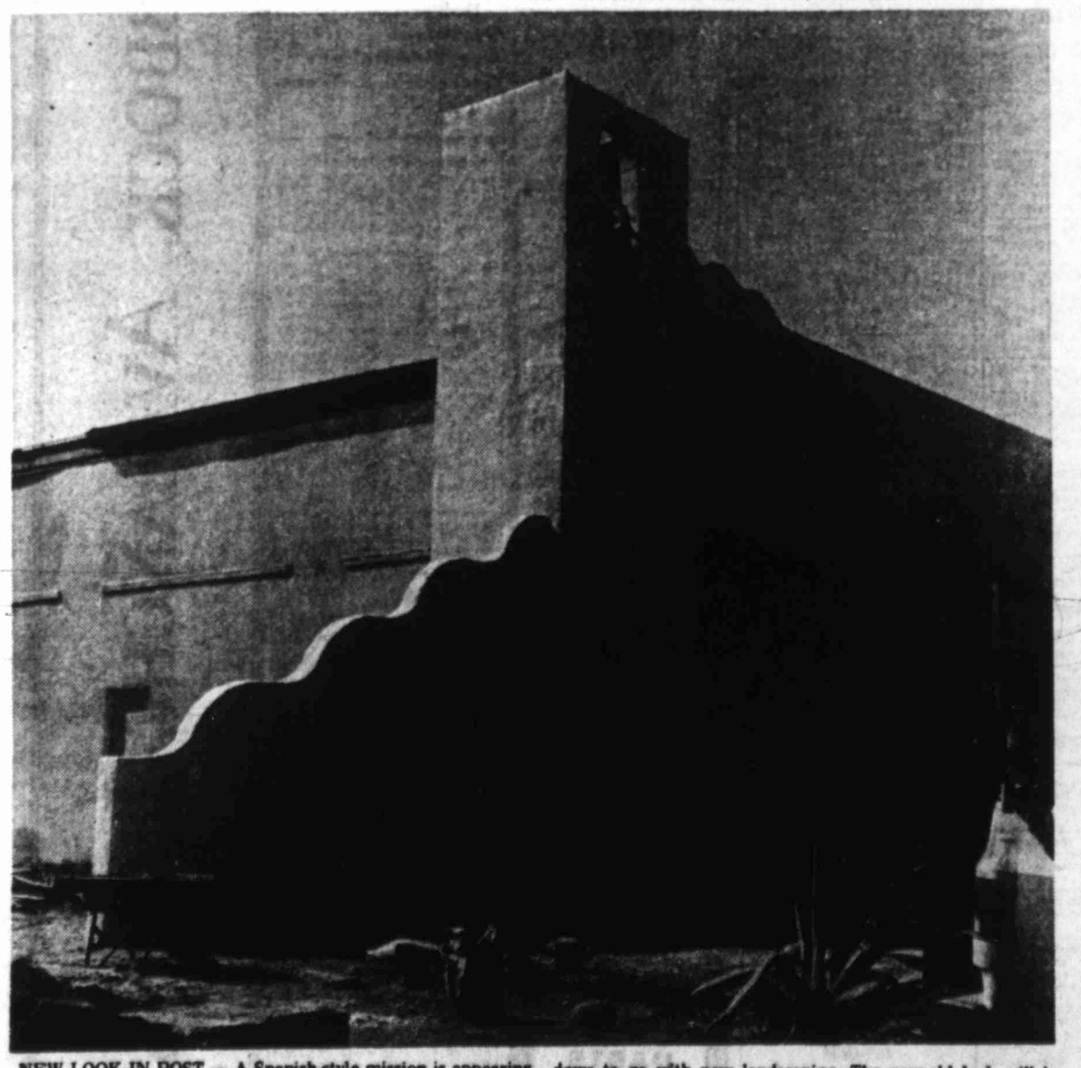

Registration for the first summer session will be June 4, 7:30 a.m. — 6 p.m. in the Municipal Coliseum. Classes will begin at 7:20 a.m., June 5, Wichard said.

Registration materials for the 1979 fall semester will be mailed the first week in August to permanent legal addresses on file for students during the 1979 spring semester.

Students may make address changes by completing forms which can be obtained in the second floor Conference Room in West Hall, next week, from 1-6 p.m., according to Wickard.

GLACIAL ORIGIN

Any large mass of snow and ice on the land which lasts many years is a glacier. Glaciers are formed over a number of years where more snow falls than melts. As this snow accumulates and becomes thicker, it is compressed and changed into dense, solid ice.

Koreans Complete Shopping Spree

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — South Korean representatives say they have completed a four-city shopping spree in which $2.3 billion in orders were placed for heavy machinery, aircraft parts and raw materials.

The special buying team purchased American products and services over the past three weeks to "strengthen ties between the two countries," Gak Kyu Choi, Commerce and Industry minister for Korea, said Thursday. He said purchases in Seattle, New York, Chicago and Los Angeles were made partly to compensate the U.S. for its trade deficit with the Asian nation.

Phone Facililty Set For Relocation

Southwestern Bell's switching office at Broadway and Avenue W, put into service in 1976 to serve Texas Tech University before the downtown building was completed, will be disassembled and moved to Frankford Avenue in southwest Lubbock.

"The structure breaks down into modules that are small enough to be transported to other locations," said Bob Dunbar, division manager in Lubbock. "The telephone company may consider this concept more often in the future to meet customer needs more quickly."

Construction will take two to three months after the structure is moved. The new facility is expected to begin operating in November.

Moving the switching office is part of a three-year construction project that will result in a new wire center and central office in the southwest part of the city to be called Lubbock Frankford 794 wire center.

The $3.3 million facility initially will serve 3,800 customers and will expand to service 10,240 lines, Dunbar said.

Outstanding Teacher Awards Announced By Tech President

Announcement of the recipient of four AMOCO Outstanding Teaching Awards highlighted a general faculty meeting at Texas Tech University recently.

Texas Tech President Cecil Mackey made the announcement as part of a "State of the University" address.

New Horn Professors, named at last month's regents meeting, were also honored. They are Dr. Richard E. Saeks, professor of electrical engineering and Dr. Robert J. Baker, professor of biological sciences.

Named in memory of Texas Tech's first president, the Paul Whitfield Horn Professorships are conferred for attainment of national or regional distinction for outstanding teaching, research or other creative achievement.

"Outstanding Teaching Awards" recipients were Dr. Peder G. Christiansen, professor of Classical and Romance languages and director of the Arts and Scienes Honors program; Dr. Gene L. Hemmle, professor of music and former longtime chairman of the Music Department; Dr. C. Eddie Palmer, assistant professor of sociology and member of the graduate faculty; and Dr. Ronald C. Smith, assistant professor of plant and soil science.

Criteria for selection as an "outstanding" teacher include teaching excellence, intellectual impact on students and colleagues, scholarship, concern for individuals, professional integrity, innovation in teaching methods and evidence of previous recognition for teaching. Each recipent is awarded $1,000. The awards are supported by the AMOCO Foundation.

Baker has attained not only national, but international recognition for his research on systematics and evolution of animals and, in particular, for his work on bats. He has pioneered studios in mammalian cytotaxonomy.

His colleagues praised his achievements as an active mammalogist, editor of the "Journal of Mammalogy" and author of papers in his field. "He clearly qualifies as one who has attained national distinction in teaching, research and other creative achievements," a nominating document said.

Baker's bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees came from Arkansas A&M College, Oklahoma State University and the University of Arizona, respectively. He has been a Texas Tech faculty member 11 years.

Saeks was cited for his "exceptional interest in the development of students" and his "international reputation for his research activities in the area of circuits and systems."

The professor "combines his knowledge of electrical engineering and sophisticated mathematics with a gift for clear verbal exposition and the discipline needed for scholarly written works."

Formerly on the Notre Dame University faculty, Saeks has been a member of the Texas Tech faculty for five years. He received the Ph.D. degree from Cornell University, the master's from Colorado State University and bachelor's from Northwestern University.

Previously recognized for his teaching excellence by the National Honorary in Journalism, Kappa Tau Alpha, Christiansen has had a "beneficial and lasting impact upon collegues as well as students."

Student ratings of his teachings are "extremely high." Individual comments stressed the intellectual impact he has had upon students, particularly in the honors program. His "nurturing of the desire to think and to learn" were mentioned frequently by students. His commendations included his willingness to work with individual students, his evident work in preparation for classes and his stress upon appreciation and understanding of language.

Christiansen's bachelor's degree was granted by Carroll College, Waukesha, Wis., and his subsequent degrees by the University of Wisconsin, Madison. He joined the Texas Tech faculty in 1963.

Hemmle was chosen for his "highly individual combination of scholarship and pedagogical zeal which makes him not only a good teacher but a memorable one." Faculty and student comments substantiate his "dynamic quality and intensity of enthusiasm with which he infuses his undergraduate music literature courses."

He joined the Texas Tech faculty in 1949 as chairman of the Music Department, in which capacity he served until 1973 when he relinquished the post to devote his time to teaching.

He received the Bachelor of Music degree from Southern Methodist University and the master's and doctorate from Columbia University.

Palmer's selection was based on his "use of firsthand sociological research in teaching and use of many outside resources." His areas of interest in qualitative methods, deviant behavior, and occupation sociology have yielded a number of publications in a variety of journals. He also has served as an editorial reviewer for three journals in the field of sociology.

He received the BA and MA degrees from Mississippi State University and the Ph.D. from Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He had teaching experience at Virginia Polytechnic and Virginia State University. The Univeristy of Texas at El Paso and Delta State University in Mississippi before joining the Texas Tech faculty in 1975.

Smith was cited by fellow teachers for "dedication, enthusiasm and excellent reputation for classroom instruction as well as participation in student activities outside the classroom."

His contact with industry and involvement in extracurricular activities as well as scholarly achievements supports his selection for the award. He previously has received a distinguished teaching award while at Ohio State University.

The Horticulture Society of Texas Tech recognized Smith for his sponsorship of its activities, including professional seminars and competitive field events. He held industry positions in the landscape field before coming to Texas Tech in 1976.

The horticulturalist received the bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Georgia at Athens and the Ph.D. from Ohio State University.

Currier & Ives Prints To Go On Exhibit

America 100 and more years ago will go on exhibit with a collection of 125 Currier & Ives lithographic prints to be shown April 25-May 30 in The Museum at Texas Tech.

The prints are from the Esmark Collection of 650 originals made between 1835 and 1890. The collection was acquired by Esmark Inc., a Chicago holding company, in celebration of the nation's Bicentennial. Four touring collections are being shown in major art museums, outstanding university art centers in the United States, as a special exhibit in Asia, Africa and Europe and by Esmark companies.

The Texas Tech museum exhibit is sponsored by the West Texas Museum Association. The association's Women's Council will have a reception from 3:30 to 5 p.m. May 2 for persons of retirement age and those who would like to see the Currier & Ives reminders of times past.

Currier & Ives prints are considered historically important because they record many events in early American history before photography was developed. When an important or interesting 19th century event took place, a print was likely to be commissioned.

Other than historical events, the prints depict almost every phase of American life — hunting, fishing, whaling. The views include steamboats, railroads, the great clipper ships, rural scenes and urban views.

Currier & Ives had its beginning in 1834 as Currier & Stodart, a short-lived company that produced primarily letterheads, sheet music and business forms.

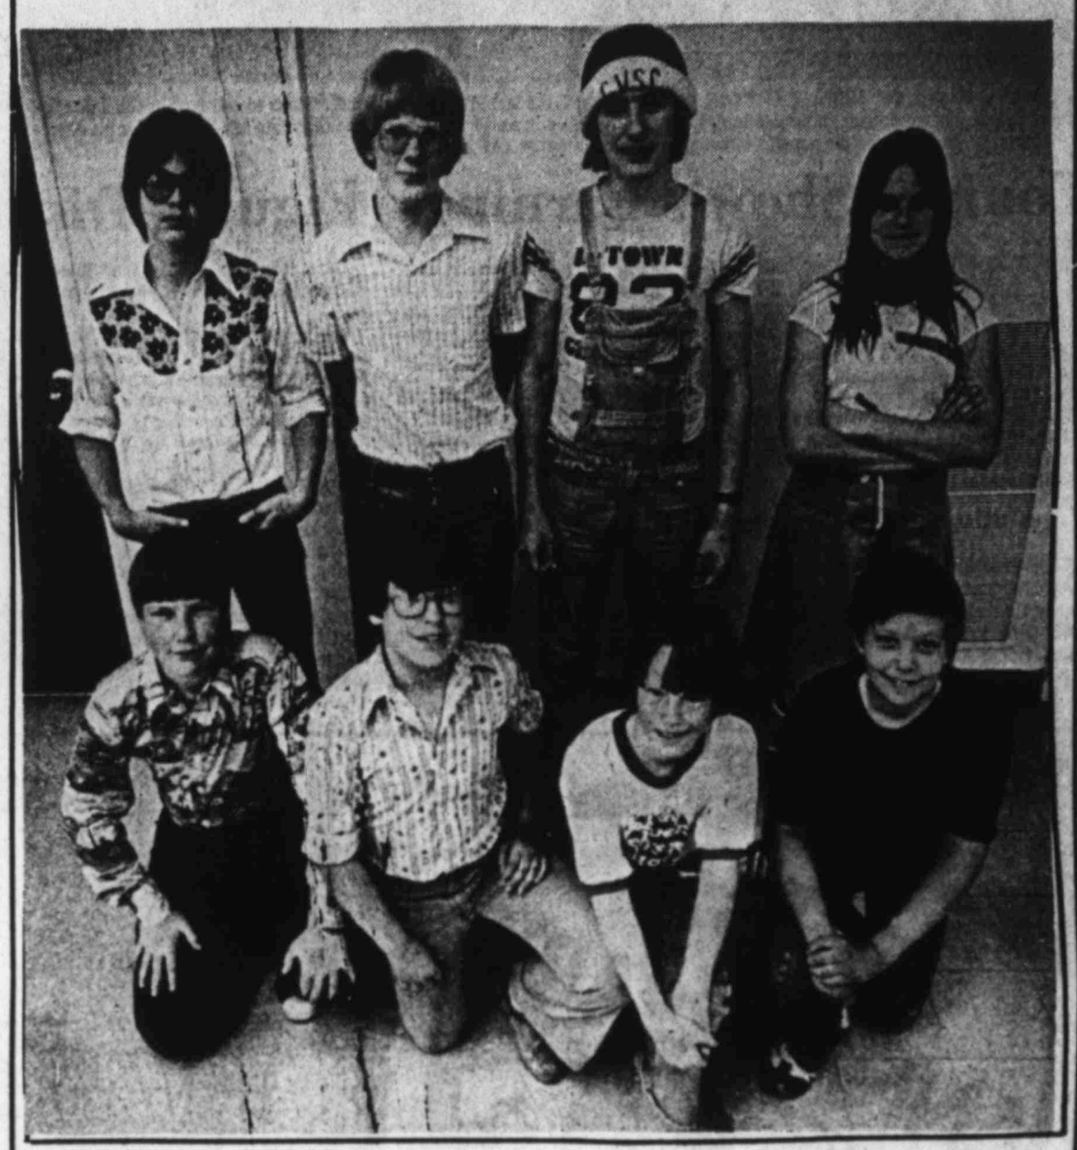

Nathaniel Currier, born in Massachusetts in 1813, received his early training during a five-year apprenticeship with William S. and John Pendleton of Boston, one of the first successful lithography firms in America. After spending a year with a Philadelphia lithographer, he moved to New York in 1834 to start his own business. In 1857 he made his office manager, James Merritt Ives, a partner.

Many outstanding artists of the time were employed to create the original pictures. George Catlin, specialist in Plains Indians, was one of these as were political cartoonist Thomas Nast, Louise Maurer and Eastman Johnson. Fanny Palmer was the most prolific of the Currier & Ives artists. Most of the prints were colored by hand.

The vast output — close to 7,000 prints — by Currier & Ives provided one of the greatest sources of color impressions of the early American scene, but the development of practical, mass-produced photographs in the late 1800s gradually diminished interest in the lithographs. The company ceased printing the famous lithographs in 1907.

NBC Threatened With 'There Goes Johnny!'

THE MANY FACES OF JOHNNY CARSON — Entertainer Johnny Carson, shown dressed in three of many different types of costumes he has worn on his popular late-night program in the last 17 years, reportedly wants to call it quits this fall. Carson's attorney says that no firm date has been set for his departure. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For beleaguered NBC, it was news the network could well have done without: Johnny Carson, its biggest star, wants off "The Tonight Show," one of NBC's few successful programs.

"I'm tired," Carson was quoted by a network source as saying. "I just can't face doing it until the spring of '81," when his current contract expires.

Carson, perhaps America's best-known and almost certainly television's best-paid performer, has been host of "The Tonight Show" for 16½ years. He's spoken of the strain of his routine, and sources at the network said that is the reason he wants out of his contract. His lawyer, Henry I. Bushkin, concurred.

"After 17 years, Johnny feels he's given it his best shot," Bushkin was quoted by the Los Angeles Times as saying.

But another source said Carson's frequent absences from "Tonight" led to friction between the entertainer and NBC's president, Fred Silverman. Silverman reportedly asked Carson to appear on the show more often than his current three-to-four times a week, noting that "Tonight" ratings drop in Carson's absence.

The dispute flared, the source said, with reports Carson would like to leave the show on his 17th anniversary, next Oct. 1, 18 months before his current contract expires.

That pact calls for a $2.5 million annual salary and requires Carson to show up not more than three times a week for 25 weeks, four times per week for 12 weeks. He has 15 weeks vacation a year.

Despite word to the contrary, NBC said there was no hostility between Silverman and the entertainer.

ABC News, meanwhile, said correspondent Barbara Walters spoke early Friday with Carson, and quoted the entertainer as saying he had not talked with Silverman since March 17.

Miss Walters, in a report on ABC's "World News Tonight," said Carson told her he probably would not leave "The Tonight Show" as early as Oct. 1, "but doubted doing it past late fall, certainly not beyond the first of the year."

The prime-time season has been a disaster for NBC and a constant cause of concern for Silverman, who was hired last year at a reported $1 million annually to lift the network from last place in the ratings.

Several NBC affiliates have jumped to ratings-leader ABC, and NBC is concerned several others might be waiting for an excuse to follow.

There would seem to be many. Aside from the painfully weak prime-time entertainment schedule, NBC's previously successful news operations, "Today" and "The Nightly News," now are under siege. The morning news and talk show has lost ground in recent weeks to its ABC rival, "Good Morning America," and last week, ABC's "World News Tonight" scored its highest-ever rating, coming within one percentage point of NBC's "Nightly News." CBS, as usual, was first.

"The Tonight Show" is the network's most famous success and also a big revenue earner, garnering about 17 percent of NBC's profits last year. NBC believes — and the ratings support the belief — that "Tonight" sinks without Carson.

Officially, NBC would not talk about the damage Carson's departure might cause. The network's only official statement was, "NBC's contract with Johnny Carson continues to the spring of 1981 and we expect him to honor it."

Unofficially, the network was not much more talkative. "We've talked to the guy at his request," said the network source. "He just says that he's tired. Our position is very simple. We're not going to resolve the situation by making macho statements in the press. The only way to solve it is to talk to Johnny privately."

Silverman was here this week for corporate meetings. Stockholders in RCA, NBC's parent company, meet in New York May 1, and NBC's affiliates gather here May 13-16 to consider fall programming.

SHINTOISM

Shinto, the ancestral religion of Japan, developed out of primitive nature and ancestor worship sometime before the sixth century, when written records first appeared. The term "Shinto" is the Chinese equivalent of "the way of the gods," and came into use at that time to distinguish it from the Buddhism that was then being imported from the Chinese mainland.

Tonight Show's Earnings Figures Disputed

NEW YORK (UPI) — RCA Corp. said Friday published estimates that the Johnny Carson show accounted for $23 million, or 17 percent, of National Broadcasting Co.'s pretax profit "are much too high." The same estimates said the show grossed $115 million in a year.

RCA refused, however, to give the correct figures, saying it did not break down its revenues and earnings in that fashion in its financial reports.

Fred Anschel of Dean Witter Reynolds, a Wall Street securites analyst who specializes in broadcasting securities, also said the published estimates seemed much too high.

But Anschel said the Carson show was obviously one of NBC's best moneymakers because it runs five nights a week and it provides a wide latitude in the sale of advertising.

"Also, it is very low cost show in comparison to prime time shows," Anschel said.

But he pointed out that the Tonight show has been slipping steadily in the ratings primarily because Carson has been taking advantage of every opportunity permitted in his contract to take nights off and "because there are too many reruns.

"I'm a Carson fan, but I'm getting out of the habit of tuning him in because I never know whether he'll be on or whether the show will be a rerun," Anschel said.

The news of Carson's attempt to get out of the remaining two years of his contract was blamed for a decline of 37 cents a share in RCA stock Friday morning on the New York Stock Exchange.

Carson is said to be the only person in the NBC family earning more than the $1 million a year salary of Fred Silverman, the program director brought over from ABC, who so far has not been able to repeat for NBC his success in lifting ABC to the top of the ratings.

Replacing Carson now would add to NBC's troubles, which have filled the broadcast columns and the financial press for some time.

In the entertainment world, an employment contract of an established star is a more rigid matter than an executive's contract in most businesses.

The entire enterprise, whether it be a play, a film or a broadcast show, along with the livelihoods of everyone involved depend on the star. Therefore, the star normally cannot get out of his contract except for the gravest reasons. Fatigue is not normally considered sufficient.

Population Of Capital Shows Steady Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although population fell 2 percent last year in the District of Columbia, the number of whites and elderly persons is on the rise, officials say.

Overall, the city's population fell to 676,100 last year, according to a report released by Assistant City Administrator James O. Gibson.

The district's white population in 1978 was 173,800, or 25.7 percent, according to the report. The city's non-white population was 502,300, or 74.3 percent last year.

Palo Duro, Slaton Lead In Qualifying

By MAURI MONTGOMERY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Pat Jefferson of Coronado and Lubbock High Westerner Melanie Brooks both spawned field-event points for their track teams in the UIL Region I-AAAA girls track meet here Friday, and their efforts were the highlights of their respective team's performances.

Miss Jefferson took a second place in discus competiton and Miss Brooks grabbed the third place spot in long jump action to give their squads fourth and fifth place starting positions going into the preliminary running events, but when the distance competition rolled around Coronado only managed to qualify in the 100-yard dash and in the mile relay while Lubbock High could only muster a qualifying place in the 80-yard hurdles.

And oddly enough it was none other than Melanie Brooks that put the Westerners' name on the running board.

Bryan walked into the preliminaries with the highest tally after the two field events, scoring 14. Big Spring followed with 13 and El Paso Parkland followed in third after accumulating 10. The final field event competiton is slated to begin at 9:30 a.m. today.

The Amarillo Palo Duro Don tracksters seemed to have the least trouble in the 14 team field as they led two events and had the second-fastest times in the preliminaries.

Trackster Theola Freeman of Palo Duro won first in her heat of the 440-yard dash with a qualifying time of 57.2 and then did a double-take in the 100 yard dash with a time of 10.75.

Ruth Maxwell sprinted the 440 yard dash with a leading qualifying time of 60.4. Barbara Anzley won her 220-yard dash heat with a 25.4 time and the Slaton girls took first in the 880 and mile relays with times of 1:43.6 and 3:57.77. Naturally, with the top times in the prelims, Slaton will be favored in today's relay races.

The final running events are scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. today at the Fuller Track Stadium at Tech. Winners and runners-up will advance to the state meet at Austin.

Coronado Picked For Track Crown

For the first time in several years, the Coronado Mustangs find themselves in the peculiar posiiton heading into today's District 4-AAAA track meet at the CHS field.

For the first time, the Ponies, who have racked up four team titles already this year (most in the history of the school), come into today's meet firmly as the squad to beat for the loop title.

The Jim Gandy-coached team will rely on its depth as it tries to knock off reigning district champion Monterey. CHS has never won a district track title.

Led by hurdler Howard McCool and quarter-miler Archie Moore, the Mustangs are expected to fare well in both the running and field events which get under way at 9:30 a.m.

Moore, a regional qualifier for the past two years, in the 220, is considered one of the strong favorites to cop a first or second-place finish and garner a berth in the Region I meet next week at the Tech track.

But, don't go counting out the Plainsmen.

Led by high jumper Chuck Perry and miler Curtis Conaway, a pair of state qualifiers last year, the Plainsmen, under the direction of Bob Gay, are again expected to challenge for the title. Last week in Levelland, Monterey edged CHS 75-73 for second place.

Perry, who cleared 7 feet last spring to win the state Class AAAA championship in Austin, will get a strong challenge from Plainview junior Kenneth Storey. Storey is currently the state leader in the event and the only schoolboy this season to clear 7 feet.

However, Storey has been saddled with a knee injury the last two weeks and was unable to compete last week against Perry.

Meanwhile, Conaway will be looking to go under the 4:20 mark for the first time this year. The Monterey senior, who ranks second in the state in the half-mile with a 1:53.2, has a best of 4:25.0 this season in his specialty.

Another top competitor to watch is Paul Bell of Hereford. The stocky West Texas State-bound gridder rocketed to a 21.8 clocking in the 220 last week and currently ranks second in the state.

He also runs the anchor leg on the Hereford mile and sprint relays and is defending champion in the 440.

DUMAS — Maybe it's just a coincidence, or maybe it's not, but the first four letters in Robert Humphrey's last name tells exactly what the Estacado senior did Friday afternoon.

The New Mexico State-bound gridder turned in one of the fastest 100-yard dash times in the state Friday at the District 1-AAA meet when he sped to a 9.4 clocking. He also anchored the Matadors to wins in the sprint relay and mile relay along the way.

"I was running with inspiration," said the musculer runner. "I just wanted to win.

Last week at the Levelland track meet, Humphrey jumped the gun in the finals and was disqualified. He said that was still on his mind and maybe that's why he got off to what is called a "tremendous start."

"I felt good when I came out of the blocks," recalled Humphrey. "It was probably the best start I've ever gotten. . .I just sort of rolled out. I was still thinking what had happened (at Levelland), but I didn't let it bother me."

Humphrey came out fast and took the lead from Dunbar's Jerry Isaacs in the first 30 yards and then commenced to "pull away from the rest of 'em" the remaining 70 yards down the all-weather surface.

"At 50 yards, I knew I had it won," continued Humphrey. "I really felt good, so I really started pulling away from the rest of 'em. I knew it was a good time, but I didn't know how good."

Humphrey now qualifies for the Region I-AAA meet next week in Odessa. However, because the track at W.T. Barrett Stadium is still a cinder layout, Humphrey knows his chances of going below 9.4 are slim.

"I think I'm capable of running a 9.2," said Humphrey. "But that will have to come in Austin, because of the track (at Memorial Stadium).

The Matadors, who had scored only 16 points heading into the afternoon running finals, rolled up 116 to claim the district crown for the fourth consecutive year.

Dunbar was second with 91 points.

It was Humphrey's superb running on the anchor leg of the sprint relay team that started the ball rolling for Estacado. He took the stick trailing Dunbar's Isaacs by about two steps but overtook him about 60 yards from the string as the Matadors equaled their best time of the year, 41.9.

Likewise in the mile relay, Humphrey grabbed the baton with just a slim lead of 3 yards and held on to win as Estacado posted a 3:20.9 time.

The win in the mile relay was a bit anticlimactic, since the Matadors had aleady clinched the team title prior to running of the mile.

"He (Humphrey) had a great day," said EHS coach Percy Hines. "I knew he was capable of running that (9.4) and even lower when he gets on good track. I'm really looking for some good things from him next week and hopefully in Austin."

When Humphrey ran his 9.4, Hines, who was sitting in the stands, became so exhited, he snapped off his stopwatch and had to wait until the time was relayed back to the PA man before knowing what it was.

"I haven't been this excited in a long time," said Hines. "It was really a great race."

Watson Leads Champs

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson, pro golf's most outstanding performer over the last two seasons, smoothly cut out a spectacular 6-under-par 66 and established a solid 3-shot lead Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Tournament of Champions.

Watson, a playoff loser to Fuzzy Zoeller last week in the Masters, took command of this prestigious event with a 36-hole total of 135, 9 strokes under par on the 6,889-yard La Costa Country Club course.

Bruce Lietzke, who lost a playoff to Jack Nicklaus the only other time he appeared in this elite event that brings together only the winners of regular PGA Tour titles from the last 12 months, shot a 66 that lifted him into sole possession of second place at 138.

"I don't place the emphasis on the majors that many players do," said Lietzke. "I don't live and die in Augusta. So I don't have a letdown. I came in here playing pretty well and I'm pumped up and excited about playing."

And, Lietzke pointed out, "I won the Canadian Open last year, and that was the week after the U.S. Open. I think this attitude of placing no more emphasis on the major tournaments than I do in any other is the right one for me."

Gary Player of South Africa, the defending champion, and Lee Trevino, who armed himself with a new putter lifted out of the bag room, were next at 140. Player shot a 69 and Trevino, using the new putter for the first time, shot a 68.

"I've been putting so bad you wouldn't believe it," Trevino said. "I was in the bag room this morning and I saw this putter sticking out of a bag. I asked whose it was and the guy said, 'If you want it, take it.' So I practiced with it a while and decided to use it. And I putted pretty good.

"I don't know who it belongs to. All I know is it says 'custom' on the bottom."

Dr. Gil Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist, Jerry Pate and Larry Nelson were the only other men in the select field of 28 able to break par for 36 holes. They were tied at 143, one under. Nelson shot a 69, Pate 71 and Morgan matched par 72.

Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this title, played with Lietzke this time and again shot par 72. He's at 144 and hasn't birdied a par-five in the tournament.

"He didn't play very good," said Lietzke. "He seems tired, letdown from the Masters. He puts an awful lot into that tournament."

U.S. Open champ Andy North shot 76—151 and Zoeller, the new Masters titleholder, improved to a 72 and 149. PGA champion John Mahaffey is not competing due to an injured hand.

Watson, Player of the Year the last two seasons and the leading money-winner this year, took command of the tournament with a spectacular 31 on the front side and actually had a five-shot lead when he made the turn.

"I didn't drive it very well on the front, but I drew some good lies in the rough," Watson said.

LHS, Monterey Open Second-Half Action

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

As Lubbock High Bart Hernandez watched Noel Jaime take his swings in the batting cage, the Westerner mentor folded his arms and shrugged his shoulders.

"I have no idea how he does it," replied Hernandez in reference to Jaime's batting stance.

The Lubbock High second baseman-shortstop-pitcher's slugging style also has caused Monterey coach Bobby Moegle to make some eraser marks on the scouting report in regard of how to pitch to Jaime.

"We've tried to throw up and in to him," said Moegle. "But we didn't have very much success the first time we played."

Well, the Plainsmen pitching staff will get the chance to find Jaime's sucker pitch as the Lubbock High and Monterey begin the second half of the District 4-AAAA baseball race today in a doubleheader at Lowrey Field. The twinbill will begin at 1 p.m.

When the two teams met the first time, Lubbock High won the opener 10-6, with the Plainsmen taking the second game 19-5.

The rest of the city high school baseball schedule has Estacado at Canyon, while Dunbar hosts Dumas at Mackenzie Park at 1 p.m. Both are 1-AAA games.

Monterey, which shared the first-half loop title with Coronado, will bring an 18-5 overall record into the twinbill. Monterey and Coronado finished the first half race with 6-2 district marks. Lubbock High finished the first half with a 4-2 loop mark and is 14-8 overall.

It really doesn't matter to Jaime how pitchers experiment when he's at the plate. The 5-7 senior just waits for a strike.

"I used to keep the bat level," said Jaime after taking his last cut in the cage. "But when I kept the bat level, I was popping the ball up a lot."

The Westerner senior will bring a .485 average to the plate when he leads off the second-half district race. His hitting list shows three homers, two triples and five doubles.

Monterey will pitch Ricky Pinkerton (4-0, 1-0) and Steve Coleman (6-1, 4-1), while the Westerners will counter with Sammy Chavez (7-3, 3-1) and Andy Vasquez (4-3, 0-2).

According to Moegle, Jaime and Larry Walker are the heart of the Westerner team. The Monterey coach feels it's important to keep them off base.

"Walker is more of a spray hitter," said Moegle. "He keeps a defense honest."

Walker believes though that there is a reason for for the reputation.

"They (pitchers) throw me down and away a lot," said Walker. "I just have to go with the pitch."

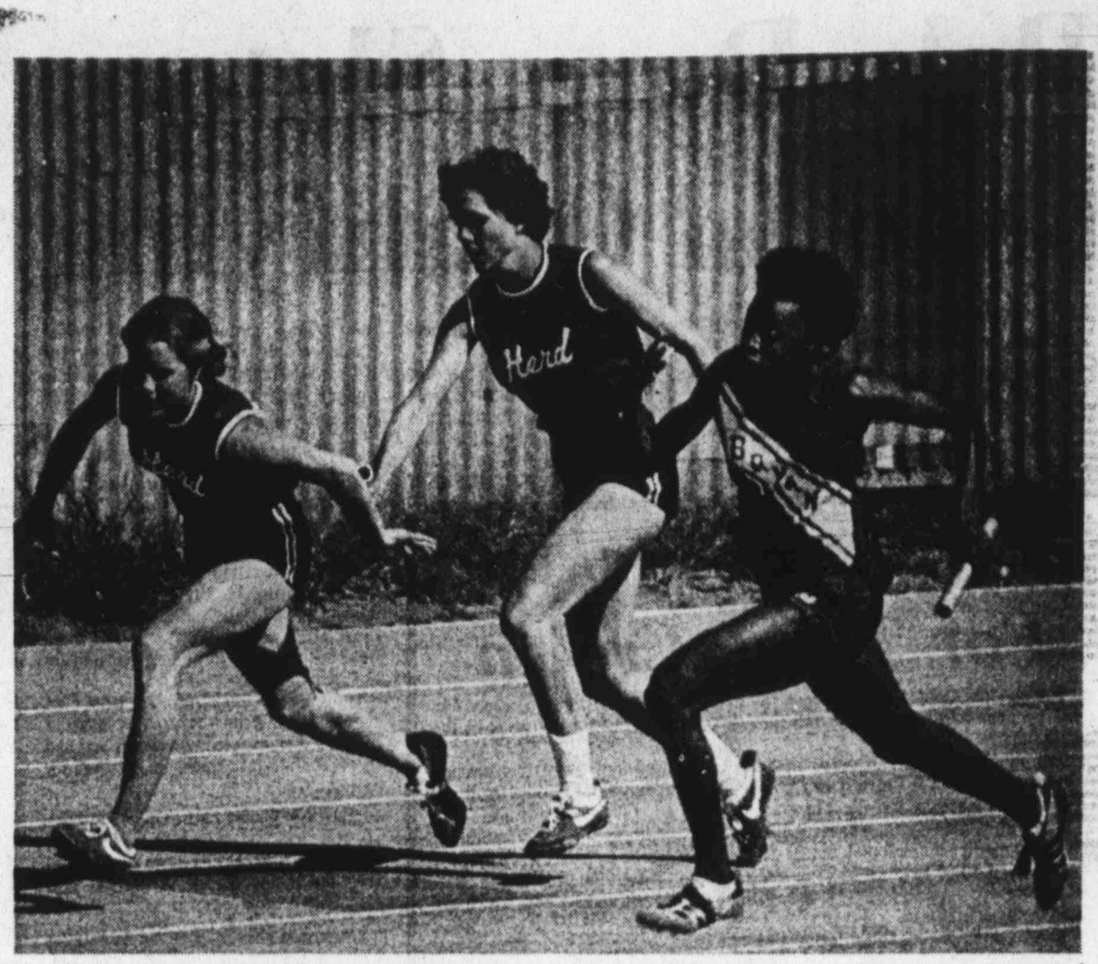

So now that Moegle has been given a chance to express his concerns, it's time to turn the stage over to Lubbock High coach Hernandez.

"No question that the pressure is on us," said the Westerner coach. "At least Monterey already has a share of the title. They have something to play for.

"We can't afford to lose two games or the season will be over for us.' Hernandez feels that Lubbock High's chances of winning will depend on how well the Westerners keep Plainsmen second baseman Randy Ledbetter and centerfielder Andy Barron off the base paths.

"They hurt us the first time," said Hernandez. "Ledbetter moves the ball around real well. It just seems that those two get things going for them.

"We just have to take both games."

Aggies Blank Tech 9-0

Texas A&M combined 11 hits with seven walks and four Tech errors to breeze to a 9-0 win over the Red Raiders at the Tech Diamond Friday afternoon.

The victory gives the Aggies a Southwest Conference mark of 11-4 while Tech drops to 7-12. Both teams play a doubleheader today at 1 p.m. at the Tech diamond. Tech coach Kal Segrist tentatively has scheduled righthander Mark Johnston to pitch the first game and lefty Robert Bryant the second.

The Aggies jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning on three hits. Shortstop Bryan Little led off with a walk off losing pitcher Steve Ibarguen (3-5), a surprise starter (Segrist had originally slated Jamie Miller, 0-2 in SWC, to pitch the series opener).

After second baseman Randy Woodruff walked and Ibarguen retired Rodney Hodde, catcher Kyle Hawthorne delivered a 2-run double to left center, and later came around to score the third run of the inning.

Tech's most serious scoring threat of the day came in the bottom of the first. Rightfielder Randy Newton led off with a walk off winning pitcher Mark Ross (7-3) and advanced on a single by leftfielder Larry Selby. But Newton was thrown out at the plate on a controversial call to end the threat. Tech players thought the throw to third to try to nail Newton had bounced into the Aggie dugout, which would have meant an automatic advancement of one base — on to home for Newton.

The Aggies added 2 runs in the third inning on two hits, an error and a walk. Single tallies in the seventh and eighth and a pair in the ninth rounded out the scoring.

Tech threatened again in the fourth with runners at second and third, but Ross got second baseman Johnny Vestal to fly out to end the inning.

UH Assumes Golf Lead

TYLER (AP) — Blaine McCallister, a sophomore from Fort Stockton, put together six birdies for a 5-under-par 67 Friday and helped push the University of Houston into a three-stroke lead after the first round of the 1979 Southwest Conference golf championships.

Three other golfers shot 68s — UH's Fred Couples, Texas A&M's Steve Bowman and TCU's Mark Knutson.

Houston, seeking its sixth straight conference golf title, posted a 282, with A&M just back at 285. The conference tournament, being staged at the par-72 Briarwood Country Club here, is a 54-hole event scheduled to wrap up on Sunday.

SMU, not figured on to be a threat, was third at 292, 10 shots back. TCU was fourth at 293, while Texas, which was expected to be the major threat to Houston, was at 297. Next were Arkansas at 300, Texas Tech 303, Baylor 304 and Rice 307.

Tech scores: Mel Callender 73, Gregg Jones 75, Chris Brown 77, Randy Waterhouse 78, Mark Jarrett 80, Larry Seligmann 82.

Two Class A Records Set At Odessa

ODESSA (Special) — Linda Shoulders of Sunray and Jody Graves of Crowell set Class A Region I records in the shot put and triple jump, respectively, at the regional track and field meet here Friday.

Miss Shoulders tossed the shot for a new mark of 41-9 and Miss Graves leaped 35-6½ to make the record book in the triple jump.

There were no Class AAA final events, and only the hurdles required preliminaries. The finals begin this morning and continue this afternoon, with the two top placers in each even making it to the state meet.

World Mark Set In Baylor Meet

WACO (AP) — Missouri's sprint medley relay team exploded for a world record 3:13.66 Friday night for a world record in the Baylor University Invitational Track and Field Meet.

Dan Lavitt and Ed Ofill ran 220-yard legs, with Dale Udo going 440 yards and Scott Clark in the anchor 880-yard leg.

MHS Claims Golf Crown

HEREFORD (Special)— Well you can bet your socks that Monterey's Clif Baggett was doing the buying on Friday night.

Earlier in the year, when Baggett and teammate Brian Sheffield narrowed the race for district medalist to a two-man show, they had vowed that the loser would buy the dinner — or whatever the new medalist wanted.

And Friday at Hereford, Sheffield claimed the honor of choosing his fancy as he fired a 76 in the final district golf meet of the year. He finished with a season total (through six tournaments) of 442. Baggett who shot a 83 on Friday finished second with a 456.

Monterey captured the team title by 105 strokes, turning in a team score of 1,857. Coronado, which held off a late rally by Plainview, finished second at 1,962. The Plainview linksters carded a team score of 330 Friday to come within three stokes of the Mustangs.

To complete Monterey's domination of the local track scene this year, the Plainsmen placed four men on the five man all-district squad. Only Coronado's David Groom cracked the MHS lineup.

The other all-district winners were Baggett, Sheffield, Stacy Nix and Steve Covert— all of Monterey.

Team Totals — Monterey 327—1,857, Coronado 348—1,962, Plainview 330—1,965, Monterey B 345—2,014, Hereford 346—2,022, Plainview B 347—2,029, Coronado B 340—2,052, Lubbock High 352—2,120.

76ers Turn Back Spurs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Julius Erving scored 39 points, but it was huge Darryl Dawkins' 14 points and seven rebounds in the final period which enabled the Philadelphia 76ers to beat the San Antonio Spurs 123-115 Friday night for their first win in three games of their National Basketball Association playoff series.

San Antonio, after trailing all but the first 1:22 of the game, moved in front 86-85 on a basket by James Silas with 1:34 left in the third quarter. The Spurs held the one-point advantage at 88-87 on a jump shot by Larry Kenon just before the buzzer ended the period.

The 76ers, however, outscored the Spurs 12-2 at the start of the fourth quarter to gain a 99-90 lead.

San Antonio, which won the first two games of the series at home, rallied to reduce the 76ers' margin to 107-105 with 3:52 remaining on a pair of free throws by Silas, who scored 32 points in the game.

The 6-foot-11½-inch Dawkins, who had contributed only four points through the first three periods, suddenly got hot and personally outscored San Antonio 10-4 to give Philadelphia a 117-109 lead with 1:09 left to play to put the game out of reach.

In addition to Erving's 39, Bobby Jones had 21 points for Philadelphia. Kenon scored 32 and George "Iceman" Gervin 22 for the Spurs.

The 76ers led 40-32 after one period and 63-57 at halftime. Erving had 15 points in the first period, just two in the second, erupted for 14 in the third and eight in the final quarter.

Kupchak then sank two free throws and, following a layup by Tom Henderson, converted a three-point play with 4:31 remaining, giving the Bullets a 77-71 lead.

Kevin Grevey came back with two straight 20-foot baskets, offsetting a shot by Atlanta's John Drew, and the Bullets were in control with an 81-73 lead with 2:24 remaining.

Kansas City, Birdsong Trip Suns

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Guard Otis Birdsong funnelled in 23 points and Scott Wedman added 22 to power the Kansas City Kings to a 111-91 victory over the Phoenix Suns Friday night and even their National Basketball Association playoff series at one victory apiece.

The two teams will meet Sunday in Phoenix for Game 3 of their best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series.

Birdsong, the Kings' leading scorer throughout the season, pumped in 21 of his game-high total in the first half when the Midwest Division champs bolted to a decisive 61-42 bulge.

Kansas City did most of its damage in the opening period, capitalizing on 58 percent shooting and 10 Phoenix turnovers to build a 35-21 margin. Down 8-6 after three minutes, the Kings went on a 15-2 spurt. Bill Robinzine's reverse layup making it 21-10 with 5:43 remaining.

The Suns never got closer than eight the rest of the way and the Kings stretched their margin to as many as 23 points in the second period.

In the final half, the Suns made several minor runs at the Kings, but the Kansas City margin was never less than 16 points and Lucius Allen's layup with 8:35 left gave the Kings their biggest lead, 97-72.

Wedman spread out his scoring output, dropping in 12 in the first half and 12 after intermission. The rest of the Kings' attack was well balanced as Bill McKinney had 10, Robinzine had nine, followed by Phil Ford, Allen and Sam Lacey with eight points apiece.

Abernathy Girl Aims For Track-Tennis Double

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Just ask Coronado tennis coach Jim Carter why he would rather see the Region I tennis competition held at the Lubbock Municipal Tennis Center than at the Texas Tech courts.

"I remember one year when I had a boy playing for a chance to go state," said Carter. "We were playing at Tech and he looked up and his car was being towed off — that doesn't help your concentration any."

A lack of adequate parking space is just one of the problems that hinders the playing conditions at Tech, and so the Region I girls meet that began Friday was held at the Tennis Center.

The finals in the AAAA and AA divisions also are being held there beginning with the third-place matches at 9 a.m. today; the finals start at 11 a.m.

At Odessa, Joni Russell of Andrews will face teammate Sherry Abney in the AAA finals of Region 1 Tennis Tournament today.

In AAA doubles, Sylvia Layfield and Laura Price of Sweetwater will play Jennine Scott and Mariona Welborn of Monahans.

The semifinals in Class A will be played at 9 a.m. today and the finals at noon.

But the only Lubbock girls that will be playing today is Coronado doubles team of Beth Nickels and Susan Mangum, who face Cheryl Hall and Megan Neely of Amarillo Tascosa in the AAAA consolation match.

In the AAAA doubles finals it'll be business as usual for a couple Odessa Permian teams. Karen Wilson and Susan Naworski will face teammates Sandra Bruce and Carmen Lewis — both teams are headed for state regardless of today'stcome.

And it was the Permian powerhouses that spelled doomed for the Lubbockites. Miss Mangum and Miss Nickels fell to Miss Wilson and Miss Naworski in a tough semifinals match, and Monterey's Lori McClure and Pauline Musil bowed out to Miss Bruce and Miss Lewis in their opening match.

In the AA division, tiny Ramona Irlbeck, who caused quite a sensation last year by winning the singles tennis title and the regional mile run on the same day as a freshman, set the stage for a repeat performance today.

But it didn't come easily for Miss Irlbeck, who had to go three sets in her first two matches Friday to reach the finals. And she's only a sophomore.

"Ramona was up against a different kind of pressure today," said her father and coach Carl Irlbeck. "Last year she was just a freshman and nobody was ready for her — but this year she was No. 1 and everybody was gunning for her."

In the AA doubles action Denver City's Suzanne Mills and Kellie Mull will face Kristina Chandler and Rhonda Burns, Seminole, in the final today.

The girls AAAA singles final will feature highly ranked Vicki Vasicek, of Midland High, versus Susie Garner of El Paso Coronado. Miss Garner spoiled Plainview's Teresa Landry's try at a state bid by defeating the Plainview netter 6-1, 6-3 in the semifinals.

Miss Vasicek should be the favorite today as she swept through her first three matches almost without breaking a sweat. She only lost two games on Friday.

But Abernathy's Miss Irlbeck could be the star of the show today. She will meet Electra's Annette Willingham, a senior, in the finals. Miss Irlbeck also faced the Electra netter last year's finals — winning in straight sets.

But the biggest problem for Miss Irlbeck is time.

She isn't scheduled to play until 11 a.m. and the mile run at the Tech track, 02 blocks from the tennis center, is scheduled for 2:45 p.m.

"Hopefully Ramona can just turn loose and play her normal game," said her father. "She doesn't have to worry about qualifying for state any more — so she ought to play better.

Tech Hosts Hog Netters

The Arkansas Razorbacks claim they are in a position where they desparately need to win, while the Texas Tech tennis team would probably sell its collective soul to be such a "desperate situation."

The Raiders host the Hogs at 1:30 this afternoon at the Tech courts in the final home match of the year for the Techsans.

Currently the Raiders are 0-5 in SWC play and 9-12 on the year. The Hogs, currently ranked No. 4 in the nation, are 25-4 and in second place in the conference.

"We are in a position where we desperately need a 9-0 win at Tech," said Arkansas coach Tom Pucci. "We are seven points behind SMU and I doubt that they will sweep their last match with TCU, although SMU should win it handily."

But for Tech a more tangible battle is at hand— the Raiders are still looking for their first SWC victory in nearly three seasons.

The Raiders take to the road after today's action to play a couple of makeup matches against Texas and Baylor.

Pappas In Lead In Bowling Meet

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Hot-shooting George Pappas extended his lead in the $150,000 professional bowling Tournament of Champions Friday with just eight games of match play remaining.

The Charlotte, N.C., bowler, who has held the lead from the start of the tournament and is averaging 223 for 40 games, moved to a 195-pin advantage over Dick Ritger of River Falls, Wis. Pappas had a 9,268 total to Ritger's 9,073.

Next came Tommy Hudson of Akron, 9,008, Jeff Mattingly of Tacoma, Wash., 8,895, and Steve Martin of Kingport, Tenn., 8,889.

Tech Teams Enter UTEP Meet

EL PASO (Special) — After spotting a pair of team victories at home last weekend, the Texas Tech track teams will find the competition much stiffer here today in the annual El Paso Invitational.

The Tech men will jump into an eight-team fiel headed by the host Miners of Texas-El Paso. Also in the power-packed lineup will be Texas, Arizona, Arizona State, Nebraska, Auburn, and New Mexico State.

The women's field has Tech, UTEP, Arionza State, New Mexico and Morgan State.

Last weekend, the men defeated Eastern New Mexico and Angelo State in a triangular, and the women won over six other teams.

En route, the women qualified Barbara Bell in the javelin, Jennifer Perdue in the discus, Pam Montgomery in the 100-meter dash and their 440-yard relay team for national meets. The men saw halfmiler James Mays reach NCAA qualifying standard.

In both divisions, Tech will have limited teams, because of the competition level.

The women will compete in five field events and four relays only here today, but, according to coach Beta Little, with the state championships less than two weeks away, the meet is worth the travel.

"We had our last chance to qualify for the state meet last Saturday, and we have people represented in every event except the 800, 1500 and 3,000 meters," said Miss Little.

"But, this weekend is important in preparing for the state meet. We'll have great competition in the 440 relay because Morgan State is supposed to have the top sprinters in the country. And our medley relay team can be competitive if our anchor (Dora Bentancourt) can get down to a 55-second quarter."

As was the case last week, the men's meet could see one of the best races in the 800 meters.

In addition to Mays, who ran a school-record 1:48.07 last week, Texas will have Charlie Taliaferro (1:48.98), along with the NCAA indoor champion from Nebraska and the outdoor NCAA champion from UTEP, Peter Lemashon.

"We're hoping that Ricky McCormick can qualify in the 1500 meters," said track coach Corky Oglesby. "The time is 3:45 and he has run 3:49. The field is fast enough forhim to qualify."

In the pole vault, Tech will have David Thompson, a juco transfer from South Plains who went 15-8 last week.

However, the Raiders will be without one member of the team, as jumper Andrew Luma has a severe case of shinsplints and did not make the trip.

Preliminaries will be begin at 10 a.m. CST, and the finals beginning at 2 p.m.

TECH MEN'S ENTRIES

Chi Chi Ties For Lead At Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Young Tim Simpson and veteran Chi Chi Rodriguez each shot five birdies Friday as they moved to a tie with Bob Mann for the second-round leadership of the $100,000 Tallahassee Open.

Simpson, a 22-year-old Atlanta native seeking his first Professional Golfers Association tour victory, shot a 68 for a 9-under 135 total, while Rodriguez, 45, who hasn't won since 1973, shot a 69 to go with his first-round 66.

Scores were slightly higher Friday, but the cut, made by 55 players, was a 3-under 141.

Mann bogeyed three holes to card a 71, after an 8-under 64 in the first round. John Lister, who aced the third hole, Rex Caldwell and rookie Mike Brannon each shot 67 to tie Gary Koch and Wayne Levi at 8-under 136.

"I've been in a bad slump," Simpson said. "But I think I'm out of it. I'm feeling very confident. I'm not saying I'm going to win, but I'm going to scare them."

Rodriguez has yet to finish in the top 10 in seven tournaments this year, but the slight veteran said a physical fitness program has him ready to become a force on the tour.

"I've been working hard at home. I get up at 6 o'clock in the morning to jog. I'm a health-food nut. I take care of myself," Rodriguez said.

"I've fit myself for the next five or six months, and I expect to do very well," he said. "I'm really keen on physical fitness. I really believe that I'm going to live to be 140."

After his scorching start, Mann said he wasn't surprised that his score rose in the second round.

"I'd hardly had a chance to let the 64 sink in. I barely had enough time to look at my picture in the newspaper, and then it was time to go again," Mann said. "There was a little letdown, but I'm ready now."

Caldwell said he expected to do better on his home course in the final two rounds. "I'm playing solid. But I'm not playimg good," he said. "This is my home course and I think I can win on this course."

Caldwell aced the third hole Wednesday in pro-am play. Tommy McGinnis aced the third hole Thursday, and Lister used a 6-iron Friday to bounce in his tee shot on the par-3, 183-yard hole.

Three Share Citrus Top Spot

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Long-hitting Joyce Kazmierski and Connie Chillemi joined Debbie Meisterlin Friday in a three-way tie for the second-round lead in the $100,000 Ladies' Citrus Golf Classic.

Miss Kazmierski fired a 4-under-par 69 and Miss Chillemi a 3-under 70 to catch up with first-round leader Miss Meisterlin at 141 — five strokes under par — on the 6,209-yard, par-73 Rio Pinar golf course.

Miss Meisterlin, who fired an opening-round 67 on Thursday, faltered a bit Friday and turned in a 74 in the Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

"I got into trouble at the first hole, and immediately began playing catch-up," said Miss Meisterlin, who entered the round with a four-stroke lead. "After scrambling for the next eight holes, I finally decided to start playing percentage shots and settled down. . .I played about as bad as I could, so I figure I got it out of my system."

Miss Kazmierski, who says she uses astrology and numerology to help her get a perspective on life, credited her putter with her bogeyless round to make another challenge in a tournament. Miss Kazmierski, as well as Miss Chillemi and Miss Meisterlin, have never won on the circuit.

Miss Chillemi called her round of 70, "the best I've done so far this year. I have the confidence to win, and I think I can do it."

Alone at 142, one stroke back of the leaders, was Jane Blalock, who shot a 5-under-par 68 to go with her opening round 74.

Two shots back of the leaders were pretournament favorite Sandra Post, who shot 70, Sandra Palmer, with a 71 and Hollis Stacy, who fired a 71.

Next came Dot Germain, Jo Ann Washam, Vivian Brownlee, Debbie Massey and JoAnne Carner at 144.

Miss Kazmierski, 33, a 10-year pro who has won $177,419 but no LPGA events, said she has been "a bit frustrated over finishing second so many times." But she said she uses astrology and numerology "for guidance along the way. It's fun. It's a hobby."

Nuggets, Moe To Talk Job

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The National Basketball Association's Denver Nuggets have received permission from the San Antonio Spurs officials to speak to Spurs coach Doug Moe about the Denver coaching job, Nuggets officials say.

Carl Scheer, president and general manager of the Nuggets, told the San Antonio Express on Thursday that Spurs president Angelo Drossos had given him the permission, although Scheer and Moe have not "talked specifically" about the job.

Moe, whose Spurs lead a best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series 2-0 over Philadelphia, has another year on his Spurs contract.

Scheer said Drossos told him the Spurs expect the Nuggets to buy up the remainder of Moe's contract if they hire him. That might present "a significant obstacle," said Scheer.

Larry Brown resigned as the Nuggets' head coach in February and was replaced by interim coach Donnie Walsh. The Nuggets were eliminated in the first round of the playoffs.

Scheer also confirmed he has talked to Indiana Pacers coach Bob Leonard and former Boston Celtics coach Tom Heinsohn about the job.

"I've talked to Carl many times, but never about the coaching job. We haven't discussed that at all," said Moe, who was in Philadelphia for Friday night's third game of the series with the 76ers. "And I didn't know Carl or anyone else had asked permission to speak with me about another job.

"I have a contract for another year so I expect to be here (San Antonio). And if I had my choice of a place to be, it would be here. I think with all the openings coming up, I could get a job. But I'm not worried about that. With the playoffs, that all seems so distant."

HOT TIME DOWN SOUTH — Race car driver Bobby Unser shields himself from the sun and wipes perspiration from his face after qualifying eighth behind Johnny Rutherford for Sunday's CART Twin Dixie championship at Atlanta International Speedway. Indy Rejects Six CART Entries For 500 Race

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A week-long standoff ended Friday when the U.S. Auto Club notified six of the rival Championship Auto Racing Teams that their entries for the May 27 Indianapolis 500 had been rejected because they were "not in good standing with USAC."

USAC's decision affected 19 of the record 103 entries and such drivers as Al and Bobby Unser, Johnny Rutherford and Gordon Johncock, all former Indy 500 winners.

All of the CART owners and drivers were in Atlanta for practice and qualifications for a CART-sanctioned race on Sunday. A spokesman for Atlanta International Speedway said a meeting, presumably involving the CART owners, was scheduled later Friday.

Rutherford, contacted in Atlanta, said, "Everyone seems to be in total shock and disbelief. I really don't know what the move will be. I just don't know what to say. We will probably go to our lawyers and see what recourse to take."

The track spokesman, Bobby Batson, said the trackside feeling was that USAC's action was a move to split the CART ranks, although USAC's Paul Reinhard said in Indianapolis it was "not taken to be vindictive."

"We didn't take the action against the whole group," Reinhard said. "Each case was judged separately. The board felt that these six people had been taking action that was not good for racing in general, the (Indianapolis Motor) Speedway and USAC."

The CART teams affected were Penske Racing Inc., of Reading Pa.,; Patrick Racing Team Inc., of Indianapolis; Team McLaren, Ltd of Livonia, Mich., Fletcher Racing Team of Phoenix, Ariz.; Chaparral Racing Ltd. of Midland, Tex.; and Dan Gurney and Teddy Yip of Santa Ana, Calif.

The CART drivers were not affected by the action, Reinhard said. "The drivers could still come in and drive another car. At this point it is just against the entries, not the drivers."

Reinhard, the USAC public relations director, said he didn't feel the move was an attempt to split the CART ranks.

"The reaction could be that it's a move like that, but I don't see it that way. Each one was reviewed separately. We've worked at trying to put something together, and it wasn't working."

"It's just the overall thing taking place. These guys were the nucleus of a concerted effort to be harmful to auto racing. . .more specifically, to USAC and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway."

The board felt USAC had tried to be cooperative, but they just had to take a position. Through the FIA (Federation d'Internationale Automobile), and the International Sporting Code, this position was open to us."

Reinhard said 17 of the 21 members of the USAC board met about five hours Thursday. They included Speedway president Joe Cloutier, Indy chief steward Tom Binford, USAC president Dick King, USAC chairman Reynold MacDonald, car owner Rolla Vollstedt and drivers Gary Bettenhausen and Roger McCluskey.

CART broke from USAC late last year in a dispute over control of championship racing. CART signed a five-year sanction agreement with the Sports Car Club of America and scheduled its own series of races.

Last week, as the deadline for entry for the 500 approached, CART threatened to boycott the race and stage its own $1 million event on the same day unless its demands were granted. USAC and the Speedway stood firm, however, and CART submitted 44 entries two days before the deadline to avoid technical disqualification.

Notice of the refusal of entries was contained in telegrams sent out Thursday evening. USAC informed th teams that their $1,000 entry fee per car was being returned and any questions or contentions sould be referred to the Automobile Competition Committee for the United States in Washington, D.C.

Dispute Hits WHA

QUEBEC (AP) — A last-minute dispute over bonus money could scuttle the World Hockey Association's last playoffs set to begin today in Springfield, Mass.

"A few thousand dollars" separates the WHA Players Association and the league, Ron Roberts, director of the players association, said in a telephone interview from Dallas Friday.

If the dispute between the players an the league over how much bonus money to pay out to the four competing teams isn't resolved, the players probably wouldn't play, Roberts said.

"As of this late date, the owners haven't shown a willingness to compromise reasonably," he said. "Less than $100,000 is involved."

The owners don't want to pay bonuses agreed to prior to the regular season because the playoffs were shortened when the Indianapolis Racers folded in mid-season, he added.

Roberts said the players realize that since there are fewer games, they should be paid less, but the dispute is over how much less. He held out hope, however, that the matter can be settled later Friday.

The Cincinnati Stingers meet the New England Whalers in one quarter-final opener today in Springfield while the Quebec Nordiques play host to the Winnipeg Jets in the other best-of-seven series which starts Monday.

The Edmonton Oilers, champions in th regular season, have a bye into the championship final round, the last time the title trophy will be awarded, at least in the WHA. Next year, Edmonton, Quebec City, Winnipeg and New England will play in the National Hockey League.

Waltrip Paces Stock Qualifiers

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip, driving a new Chevrolet Caprice named for singer Dolly Parton, won the pole position Friday in the first round of qualifying for Sunday's $110,000 Virginia 500 Grand National stock car race.

Waltrip, currently leading the Winston Cup point standings, edged Richard Petty by just .007 of a second to earn his first pole position through nine starts this season, with a speed of 87.383 mph.

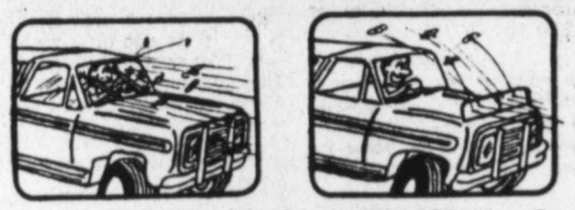

Petty, who had been fastest in prequalifying practice sessions, qualified at 87.354 mph. Bobby Allison was third at 87.005 mph.

Neil Bonnett, holder of the Martinsville Speedway track record of 88.923 mph set in 1977, qualified ninth in his first outing in the Wood brothers Mercury at 86.646 mph. Bonnett is replacing longtime Wood brothers driver David Pearson, who parted company with the team last week.

Bonnett had been scheduled to drive the Kenny Childers' car until the position with the Woods opened. Lennie Pond qualified the Childers car sixth fastest at 86.809 mph.

Munson Slugs Yanks By Texas

By The Associated Press

Thurman Munson rapped a pair of run-scoring singles as the New York Yankees defeated the Texas Rangers 5-3 behind the four-hit pitching of Ed Figueroa and Dick Tidrow.

The Yankees jumped on Steve Comer, 1-1, for two runs and three hits in each of the first two innings, with Munson singling Mickey Rivers home both times.

Meanwhile, Figueroa, 2-1, helped by sensational fielding plays by third baseman Graig Nettles and center fielder Rivers, was working on a no-hitter until Al Oliver drilled a run-scoring double in the sixth following a lead-off walk to Bill Sample. Oliver came around for the Rangers' second run on a pair of infield outs.

The Yankees scored their first two runs before Comer retired a batter on a walk to Rivers and singles by Willie Randolph, Munson and Reggie Jackson. They made it 4-0 with two outs in second on Bucky Dent's single, Rivers' RBI double, a walk and another single by Munson.

Nettles, who made a diving, back-hand stop of Bert Campaneris' smash in the third inning, delivered a run-scoring single off Dave Rajsich in the bottom of the fifth. Rivers raced into deep left center and made a lunging catch of Bump Wills' drive for the final out in the top of the inning.

Tidrow relieved Figueroa in the ninth following a leadoff walk to Jim Sundberg and Mike Jorgensen's single. Tidrow retired the side on two grounders and a strikeout at the expense of one run.

TIGERS 7, BLUE JAYS 2

Milt Wilcox, celebrating his 29th birthday, fired a six-hitter and got plenty of hitting support as Detroit defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 7-2.

The Tigers, winning their fourth in a row, gave Wilcox all the support he needed with three runs in the opening inning off Mark Lemongello, 0-2. Tim Corcoran hit a two-run single in the inning and Lance Parrish followed with an RBI-single.

Wilcox, 2-0, didn't give up a hit until Otto Velez bounced a ball off the third base bag to lead off the fifth.

Toronto's first run came in the seventh on a homer by John Mayberry. Blue Jays added a run in the eighth when Rick Cerone doubled and scored on a single by Al Woods.

ASTROS 5, PIRATES 4

Craig Reynolds reached third base on Pittsburgh third baseman Phil Garner's throwing error and scored on a sacrifice fly by Jeff Leonard in the 10th inning to give the Houston Astros a 5-4 victory over the Pirates.

Reynolds led off the 10th against Jim Bibby, 1-1, with a hard grounder to third and Garner heaved the ball into right field. Cesar Cedeno was intentionally walked and stole second. Jose Cruz struck out. Enos Cabell was also walked on purpose to load the bases, then Leonard batted for Rafael Landestoy and lofted his game-winning fly to center field.

REDS 10, CARDINALS 3

Ken Griffey singled, doubled and homered and Johnny Bench and Dan Driessen blasted solo home runs, powering the Cincinnati Reds to a 10-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

An 18-hit attack enabled veteran left-hander Fred Norman to coast to his first victory of the year in three decisions with a nine-hitter. It was Norman's first complete game in 39 starts since September 4, 1977.

PHILLIES 8, METS 0

The Philadelphia Phillies scored five unearned runs on only one hit in the fifth inning and went on to an 8-0 victory over the New York Mets behind the five-hit pitching of Dick Ruthven.

It was Philadelphia's fifth straight victory.

Ruthven, 3-0, was rarely in trouble after getting the lead on Garry Maddox's two-run single in the first inning. Manny Trillo's RBI single in the third made it 3-0, then the Phillies made it a runaway in the fifth.

RED SOX 9, ROYALS 2

Amazing Carl Yastrzemski drove in three runs with his 386th career homer, a single and a double in powering the Boston Red Sox to a 9-2 victory over Kansas City.

Yastrzemski, who will be 40 in August, also drew an intentional walk as the Red Sox boosted their record to 7-4 behind the relief pitching of Andy Hassler.

ORIOLES 6, BREWERS 3

Ken Singleton's first home run of the season snapped a fifth-inning tie and sent the Baltimore Orioles to a 6-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Brewers, who batted .309 while sweeping a three-game series from the Orioles in Milwaukee last weekend, had tied the score in the top of the inning on a two-run homer by Cecil Cooper. It was his fifth of the season, and fourth against Baltimore.

Sixto Lezcano hit his third homer of the season in the second inning off Steve Stone, 1-1, who was relieved by Don Stanhouse after a lead-off single by Larry Hisle in the eighth.

Singleton also knocked in a first-inning run on a groundout, after a single by Larry Harlow and Rick Dempsey's double, and Gary Roenicke followed with an RBI single.

Roenicke, who is 9-for-12 lifetime against Mike Caldwell, 3-1, singled in the third for the second of his three hits and came around to score on singles by Eddie Murray and Lee May.

Rich Dauer's RBI double and Harlow's run-scoring single in the eighth brought in two more runs for the Orioles.

PADRES 7, BRAVES 4

Jerry Turner drove in four runs with a homer and a single and Gene Tenace added a two-run homer, leading the San Diego Padres to a 7-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

After Ozzie Smith singled off Rick Matula, 1-2, to open the fourth inning, Turner hit his first homer of the season, over the wall in right field.

Turner also ignited a three-run San Diego sixth with a double and scored when Dave Winfield singled. Tenace then drilled his second homer of the season to left field. Turner capped the Padres' scoring with a two-run single in the eighth.

CHICUBS 8, EXPOS 5

Dave Kingman's grand slam homer in the third inning and three unearned runs in the fourth led the Chicago Cubs to an 8-5 victory over Montreal.

Lynn McGlothen posted his second triumph of the season — both over Montreal — and helped his own cause with two singles. Bruce Sutter earned his third save for the Cubs. Steve Rogers, 0-2, was the loser.

The Cubs scored a run in the first by a single by Scott Thompson and a double by Bill Buckner.

McGlothen opened the third with a single and was forced by Ivan DeJesus. Thompson then doubled and Buckner was given an intentionial pass before Kingman unloaded with a 400-plus-foot homer.

Errors by Andre Dawson and Larry Parrish enabled the Cubs to score three times in the fourth. Ted Sizemore's double and a single by McGlothen contributed to the rally.

WHITE SOX 4, INDIANS 2

Claudell Washington scored rookie Harry Chappas with a one-out single in the 10th inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Chappas appeared to be out by several steps as the throw was in plenty of time at the plate, but the home plate umpire the the 5-3 Chappas slipped under the tag.

Agencies Announce Cutbacks On Beef

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three federal agencies will sharply reduce their purchases of beef to make more available to private consumers and to help stem rapidly rising meat prices, the Council on Wage and Price Stability said Thursday.

The decision by the Veterans Administration and Departments of Agriculture and Defense to cut beef purchases by one-quarter was hailed by Alfred Kahn, the council chairman, as a sign that "the federal government will lead the way" in the inflation fight.

The cutback means that the agencies "will reduce their purchases of beef in the next 18 months by about 25 percent in favor of buying more poultry, pork and cheese than they had planned," Kahn said in a statement.

The government's cutback on beef purchases for military meals and school lunch programs means an estimated 57 million pounds of beef will be freed for purchase by American consumers, Kahn indicated.

This should have the effect of moderating beef prices, which have been rising rapidly for the last five months because consumer demand has outstripped supply.

There was no immediate comment from the council on what effect the increased government ordering of poultry, pork and dairy products might have on prices at American supermarkets.

At the wholesale level, beef and veal prices rose 4.3 percent in March and stood a whopping 35.7 percent above March 1978.

The higher beef prices have been blamed on the shortage of cattle for slaughter. The shortage exists because cattlemen cut back on herds after price controls forced beef prices to very low levels in 1976 and 1977.

Kahn, President Carter's chief inflation adviser, admitted in the statement that food prices, which have risen nearly 13 percent at the retail level in the past year, have not helped the government anti-inflation program.

"These (food) price increases threaten the success of our entire effort to slow inflation," he said.

In fact, labor unions have expressed hesitation about continuing to abide by voluntary wage guidelines that call for increases of 7 percent or less while inflation is double that rate.

Kahn acknowledged that higher beef prices were needed to get cattlemen to rebuild herds, thus insuring "adequate supplies and stable prices in the future."

He rejected the idea of controls as "counter-productive," adding: "On the other hand, it is certainly both possible and desirable for us to be more prudent shoppers. By doing so, we will not only be protecting ourselves somewhat from the effects of inflation. This moderation of demand, when supplies are short, will help keep price increases in check."

According to the council's figures, the three federal agencies had planned to purchase some 228 million pounds of beef in the next 18 months. The alternatives — poultry, pork and cheese — are "equally nutritious, but lower-priced sources of protein," the council statement said.

"All of the agencies have also suspended their plans to purchase raisins and other expensive fruit that is in short supply this year," the statement continued.

It added that the Defense Department will reduce its purchase of red salmon by 325,000 pounds this year and that the Veterans Administration will change some frozen food and fruit orders.

"We encourage consumers to increase their purchases of lower-priced meat, such as pork and chicken, as well as lower-priced substitutes for high-priced fruits and vegetables, so that inflationary pressures on scarce items are moderated, but the market for them is not disrupted," Kahn concluded.

ENERGY SPEAKERS — Conserving energy in the home was the topic of the 1979 oratorical contest of the South Plains Electric Cooperative. Winning orators were Ginny Reyes, left, from Ralls High School, and Robin Reeves from Cooper High School. Each will receive an expense-paid trip to Washington, D. C. June 8-19 on the Government-In-Action Youth Tour. Ginny is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse E. Reyes and Robin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Audrey Reeves. Finalists were Gay Hobgood of Abernathy High School and James Watson of Idalou High School.

Farmers Indicate Crop Cutbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers have indicated they plan to remove more than 11.2 million acres of cropland from production this year under federal programs aimed at holding down harvests of wheat and feed grains, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

The 11.2 million acres was an increase of about 2.5 million acres from the previous week. The set-aside signup began Feb. 15 and runs through April 30. Friday's acreage figures were as of April 12.

Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the signed acres of cropland included 6.05 million acres set aside under the wheat program and about 2.93 million under the feed grain program.

In addition, corn farmers agreed to idle about 1.5 million acres under a "diversion" program which provides extra payments, and grain sorghum farmers 338,518 acres.

Also, wheat producers earmarked 388,684 acres of 1979 wheat to be grazed by livestock or cut for hay before it is ready to be harvested as grain, Fitzgerald said.

THE FATE OF GIN COMPLIANCE with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's cotton dust standards still rests with the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Solicitors for the government agency won an extension on the time to answer the industry brief filed earlier this year, although Thursday was the deadline for OSHA to place the document with the court.

Attorneys for the ginning industry now will have an opportunity to answer, points out Tony Price, executive vice president of the Texas Cotton Ginners Association.

"EVERY EFFORT WILL BE EXERTED to delay the enforcement date of Sept. 4 for respirators and medical surveillance programs until the court has made a final decision in the case," Price says.

The TCGA has done extensive work in recent weeks in gathering information on how the medical surveillance requirement would affect gin operations.

"Attorneys indicate there is no way to predict just when the court will render a decision," Price says. "Action could come as early as August but, at this point, it should be assumed that the decision could be announced late in the year."

MEANWHILE, THE TCGA STILL AWAITS an answer to its request for a new interpretation of provisions of the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act being enforced by the Department of Labor's wage and hour division.

Under very narrow interpretations of the act, most gin managers would be required to register as contractors.

In meetings with the Departpent of Labor, Price says, it was pointed out that Congress did not intend for bonafide managers of corporations and cooperatives to be considered as farm labor contractors.

ONE OF THE CONSIDERATIONS, Price says, was that the wage and hour laws grant an executive exemption to managers who "hire and fire."

Yet, he adds, if they exercise that exemption, they are covered by the rather restrictive interpretations of the act.

Price says representatives of the Department of Labor have informed staff members for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Reps. Kent Hance of Lubbock and Charles Stenholm of Stamford that an answer is being prepared.

THE JAPANESE COTTON INDUSTRY expressed a number of concerns about U. S. cotton supplies and the outlook for the Japanese industry when a U. S. cotton team recently visited Japan.

The USDA says Japanese trade industry representatives expressed concern about some instances of damaged U. S. cotton which arrived under clean bills of lading.

The industry also questioned whether adequate supplies of San Joaquin Valley cotton would be available in the near future because of a 1978 decline in yields.

Another concern was the possibility of an unwarranted increase in freight rates, and the industry asked the United States to assist in trying to prevent such increases.

JAPANESE INDUSTRIAL REPRESENTATIVES also expressed some concern about the possible decline in general economic activity in Japan and the possibility of further increases in Japanese imports of low-priced textile products from developing nations.

The Japanese also urged that cooperative cotton promotion activities be continued and expanded in Japan because they significantly benefit U. S. cotton.

Some concern was expressed about the low funding of promotional activities in light of inflation and the sharp depreciation of the dollar against the yen.

The USDA said the U. S. team expected Japan would import about 1.1 million bales of U. S. cotton in 1978-79.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures closed mixed today in uneventful dealings on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Nearby soybean contracts declined up to 4¾ cents a bushel, mostly during a small closing selloff. Traders speculated about the progress of the Brazilian soybean harvest, which has been delayed by rain in some areas, and the quality of the crop.

Swine Virus Threatens Midwest Pork Producers

SPRINGFIELD, Ill) (UPI) — Midwest pork producers are facing a threat from pseudorabies, a swine virus that has the potential to completely wipe out a farrowing business.

Pseudorabies — which attacks the nervous system in hogs and cattle — is called "potentially the most economically damaging disease facing pork producers" by an Illinois Department of Agriculture animal disease expert.

The highly contagious disease presently is spreading at a rate of more than 10 percent per year in Illinois and other midwestern pork-producing states.

The National Pork Producers Council estimates the virus costs hog producers nationally more than $20 million a year.

Dan Hoffman, director of market relations for the council, said although individual farmers may suffer a severe economic loss because of pseudorabies, the disease has not affected the supply or price of pork.

"At this point we hope pseudorabies doesn't have a significant market effect, but the potential is there," Hoffman said. "It has a very, very real impact on an individual seed stock producer (breeder) that experiences a pseudorabies outbreak."

Dr. Paul L. Spencer, chief veterinarian for the Agriculture Department's bureau of animal health, said 54 cases have been identified in Illinois since last June. Seventy cases were reported in fiscal 1978 and Simpson said the 1979 total almost certainly will top that figure.

Spencer, who has been involved in pseudorabies research since the Agriculture Department first began studying the virus in 1974, said two new vaccines and more than $500,000 in research annually have barely kept the virus in check. The only aspect of the disease that isn't devastating, he said, is that it doesn't contaminate the animal's meat. Pseudorabies infected hogs can be sold for slaughter with no fear of affecting people who purchase the meat.

The disease can strike any swine, Spencer said, but the most damaging occurrence is in sows bearing piglets. He said a sow contracting the disease while carrying pigs can lose all of its newborn, and pigs up to five months of age can die from three to seven days after contracting the virus.

The presence of pseudorabies in a herd, Spencer said, doesn't automatically mean sows will birth stillborn pigs. He said the disease has been known to lie dormant — present in the bloodstream but not active — for years without killing the herd's productive capabilities.

But a catalyst — a change in the weather, a hard freeze or almost anything upsetting the animal's equilibrium — can activate the disease and totally destroy the herd's productivity, he said.

"Pseudorabies will not go away; it's going to be a major problem to the swine producer," Spencer said. "Vaccines (presently in use) will never eradicate the disease ... eliminating pseudorabies is maybe 10, 15 or 20 years off."

Pseudorabies is commuted by contact or ingestion, he said. The disease is most commonly passed on from within the herd, he said, although it may be commuted by dogs, raccoons or other animals.

Spencer said the best way for a pork producer to guard against pseudorabies is to be careful around his own hogs.

"If your neighbor has sick pigs, stay home," Spencer said. "Don't go look at them... the disease can be tracked in on clothes or footprints. If you have a dog that roams the neighborhood; confine it."

Cattle Prices Higher On Futures Markets

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 20 to 140 points higher except in the expiring April contract Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 38,044 cars. The market rallied to near the season's highs after April expired in a range of 27 higher to 22 lower.

Prices tumbled 130 early on news that the United States was curtailing beef purchases which tended to offset the constructive cattle on feed report. Late support came as beef held steady at noon.

There have been 354 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 110½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash cattle were up $1 to off 50 cents, with the best top $78 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 114,000 head. About 15,400 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 15 to 82 higher led by August with most contracts at the day's highs. Volume was 5,845 contracts. The market rallied after April expired at 25 to 75 lower.

Prices fell to one week lows on limit level loss of 150 in January following news that the United States is curtailing beef purchases. Support developed as cattle futures rallied and beef held steady. The cattle on feed report also brought buying.

Hog futures closed 30 higher to 25 lower on 4,908 lots. April expired in a range of 57 lower to 27 higher on 324 cars. Later months were up as much as 55 before faltering at the close.

Erratic trade followed unsettled action in cattle futures. The premium of hog futures to cash and lower slant to the latter made for selling.

Deliveries total 133 thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 cent at 68½ to 75½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to off $1 with the best top $46.25 per hundredweight, which is a two-week low. Kill was 344,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 32,500 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 25 to 85 lower led by May which fell 100 before the close. Sales totaled 3,338 cars. August briefly gained 42.

The erratic trade spilled over from similar action in other meat pits. Support came on firmness in cash and light storings locally. Pressure was associated with heavy hog runs and lower prices along with continued sizeable slaughter.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 cent at 47 to 54 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Ag Judging Contests Planned

About 1,600 vocational agriculture students from throughout West Texas will converge on the Texas Tech University campus today to participate in the 52nd annual Texas Tech Vocational Agriculture Judging Contests.

Coordinating the event is general superintendent Jerry D. Stockton, chairman of the university's Department of Agricultural Education. A special guest will be W. H. Meishen, executive director of the Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association, Austin.

Eleven contests will be held, with winners in six of them going on represent Areas 1 and 2 in state Future Farmers of America competition.

The five other events are known as Texas Tech contests. These are related to cotton, wool, crops, land and range and pasture plants. The latter contests were established because of their importance to the economy of the South Plains.

The livestock, dairy cattle and wool contests will be held at the new Livestock Arena, the first time this facility has been used for the annual vocational agricultural judging events.

Events begin at 7:30 a.m. and results are to be announced to 2 p.m. in the University Center Ballroom. Immediately after these announcements Jay Eudy, Area vocational agriculture supervisor, and supervisor Hulan Harris of Area 2 will certify the teams from their areas who qualify to attend the state FFA judging contests April 28 at Texas A&M University.

Directing the various contests will be Texas Tech faculty: Dr. Robert C. Albin, chairman, Department of Animal Science, livestock, dairy cattle, wool, poultry and meats; Dr. Dwane G. Miller, chairman, Department of Plant and Soil Science, cotton, crops, and land; Dr. Donald F. Burzlaff, chairman, Department of Range and Wildlife Management, range and pasture plants; Drs. Milton L. Peoples and R. Max Miller, milk and dairy foods; Prof. Marvin J. Dvoracek, chairman, Department of Agricultural Engineering, and Drs. Lewis Eggenberger and M.J. Cepica of the agricultural education faculty, agricultural mechanics.

CBS To Bleep 'Blasphemies' From Program

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS has decided to bleep six "blasphemous" words from its upcoming "Blind Ambition" miniseries, rather than risk offending some viewers, the network said Friday.

"It's not a matter of curse words," said Gene Mater, head of the network's program practices department. "Indeed, some curse words have been left in.

"Blind Ambition," an eight-hour miniseries based on John Dean's account of the Watergate crisis, will be broadcast on four consecutive nights beginning May 20 at 8 p.m. EST.

The program's producers re-created Oval Office conversations from tape recordings made by former President Nixon, and the six words were deleted from one of those discussions, Mater said.

He said all of the deletions were in the first hour of the second installment, to be aired Monday, May 21 at 9 p.m.

Mater said the word "Christ" was deleted three times, and the word "God" three times.

"In one instance, Nixon says, 'It's the God-damnedest thing you ever saw'," Mater said. "We've made it, 'It's the bleep-damnedest thing you ever saw.

"That might not offend people here and in Los Angeles and a lot of other places," the CBS executive said, "but it might offend a great many people in between, and we're sensitive to their feelings."

Mater said it is not unusual for the network to delete words or phrases that might offend viewers. "You notice it frequently during movies," he said.

"Blind Ambition" stars Martin Sheen as Dean, the former White House aide, and Rip Torn as Nixon.

Journalists Protest Broadcast Limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcast journalists have filed a protest with the Senate Ethics Committee over limits placed on television and radio coverage of committee hearings into complaints against Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga.

Sid Davis of NBC News, chairman of the congressional radio-television pool representing the three commercial networks, said in a letter that barring broadcast reporters from using cameras and recorders to cover the hearings "is an infringement on the First Amendment rights of broadcast journalism."

Davis' letter to Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., chairman of the ethics committee, called on the panel to lift the limits before the start of the Talmadge hearings next week.

If the application is not protested by May 10, the hearing may be waived and the request forwarded to a THFC voting session without a public hearing.

ACLU Drops Gay Student's Case

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Paul Guilbert's prospects of taking a male escort to his high school junior prom faded Friday when the American Civil Liberties Union decided not to take the case to court.

Michael B. Dollinger, executive director of the Rhode Island ACLU, said his board made the decision "reluctantly" because Guilbert's parents opposed their son's plans.

Dollinger said ACLU lawyers believe that the issue of civil rights for homosexuals would be superseded by the issues of parents' rights if the case were pursued in court. Guilbert is 17.

Guilbert, a Cumberland High School junior and an avowed homosexual, asked a male friend to the May 4 prom. The school committee canceled a hearing on the matter at his father's request.

"We believe — and continue to believe — in the underlying issues in this case: the rights of gay people," Dollinger said at a news conference.

"The feeling is that we probably could have won on the gay rights issue, but we probably couldn't have won on the parental consent issue," Dollinger said.

"Paul wanted to go ahead with it," he said. "He's very disappointed. I don't know what else he can do. Maybe he can wait until next year."

Guilbert could not be reached for comment. The friend he asked to the prom, Edward Miskevich, said he understood the ACLU decision.

"I'm not disappointed or furious," said Miskevich, 22, a Brown University senior. "Paul was certainly right in trying. Maybe someday another high school student will try it.

"It made people think about the issue," he said in a telephone interview. "If it changed some people's minds (about the rights of homosexuals), surely it was worth it."

Miskevich said he hasn't talked to Guilbert since the ACLU decision was announced. He said he would consider other legal action but would not go to the prom without school committee approval.

"We're not going to crash it. I'd only get a bloody nose," he said.

In an interview last week, Guilbert said he has been heckled and jeered by classmates and neighbors since newspaper reports about his plans appeared.

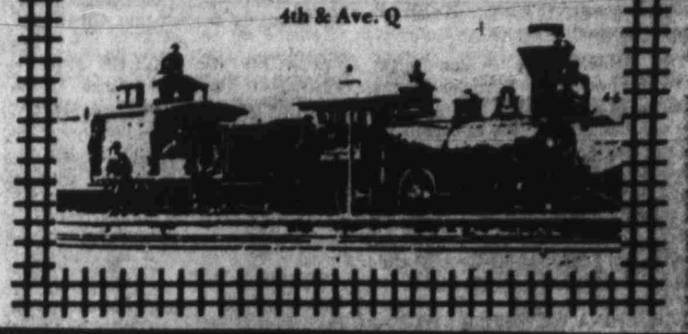

He said 150 students chanted "faggot" and "queer" outside his school one day.

"I really didn't want the publicity," Guilbert said. "All I wanted to do was go to the prom."

COMMISSIONER WOUNDED

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Fernando Augusto Mendez, a member of El Salvador's human rights commission, said four young men walked up to his car at an intersection in downtown San Salvador Thursday night, broke the windows and opened fire. Mendez said he dived to the floor and was wounded in the leg.

New Film Tells Tale Of Teen-Age Romance

NEW RELEASE

A LITTLE ROMANCE (PG) — Laurence Olivier, Arthur Hill, Sally Kellerman. Romantic comedy. This one will enchant you. A pair of teen-agers find each other, and find innocent romance, against a background of Paris and Venice. With lovely music and beautiful photography, this has fun, excitement and all those good things. GRADE: A.

GENERAL RELEASE

BOULEVARD NIGHTS (R) — Richard Yniguez, Marta DuBois, Danny De La Paz. Drama. Interesting but uneven character study of Mexican-American youths in East Los Angeles. Classic strong brother/weak brother story wrapped around gang warfare. Standout performance by newcomer De La Paz. Caution: some strong language, violence. GRADE: B-minus (Handler)

THE CHAMP (PG) — Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway, Ricky Schroder. Drama. Director Franco Zeffirelli has dusted off the old classic about the ex-champ and his son and the rich lady who used to be the kid's mother. He pulls out all the stops — no sob is left unsobbed — and it's a treat for the love-to-cry set. But it is overlong and very over-sentimental. Young Ricky Schroder is the best child actor in years, however. GRADE: B.

THE CHINA SYNDROME (PG) — Jane Fonda, Jack Lemmon, Michael Douglas. Thriller. This is a "what if" story — what if there was a malfunction in a nuclear power plant, and what if the gal TV news reporter sniffed it out, and what if the nuclear scientist didn't find it, and what it the power company brass tried to cover it up? It leaves you wondering — what if a real one had a flaw and blew up and left a hole in the sand clear down to China? GRADE: B-plus.

THE DEER HUNTER (R) — Robert DeNiro, John Cazale, John Savage, Meryl Streep, Christopher Walken. Drama. This is a powerful, memorable look at three Pennsylvania steel workers who go off to fight in Vietnam. Director Michael Cimino has created images you may never forget. It is too long and some of it is forced, but it remains a classic film. GRADE: A.

MURDER BY DECREE (PG) — Christopher Plummer, James Mason, David Hemmings, Susan Clark. Mystery. Sherlock Holmes vs. Jack the Ripper, but the issue is clouded with red herrings (radicals and psychics, etc.). Director Bob Clark tries hard to create a mood, but the mood is misty and the total effect is a film that is tedious. GRADE: C-plus.

NORMA RAE (PG) — Sally Field, Ron Leibman, Beau Bridges. Drama. Forget the drab title, this is a grabber of a movie. It's about the attempts — by a union organizer from New York and his ally, a little Southern gal — to organize a tough textile mill in the South. Director Martin Ritt must be commended not only for what he did, but for what he didn't do — he didn't seize on the obvious cliches, and so he has a warm, surprising film. GRADE: B-plus.

ON THE YARD (R) — John Heard, Mike Kellin, Thomas Waites. Drama. A prison drama that escapes the confines of a cliched settling. Plot and characters unfold gradually, showing how each of a varied group of cons comes to be his own victim. A nod to acting, directing and editing. Caution: strong language, some violence. GRADE: A-minus (O'Brien).

A PERFECT COUPLE (PG) — Paul Dooley, Marta Heflin. Romantic comedy. Director Robert Altman, never one to do the conventional thing, has elected to tell a love story in unconventional terms. He pairs a lonely girl rock singer with a lonely businessman, the son of an ultra-conservative family. They meet through a computer dating service, and theirs is hardly the run-of-the-computer love story. Often touching but often puzzling, too. Lots of good music. GRADE: B.

THE WARRIORS (R) — Michael Beck, James Bemar, Thomas Waites. Drama. Street gang action — it's "West Side Story" without soul and "A Clockwork Orange" without brains. But the actors' bluster, the violence choreographed more for bravura than blood, and the New York subway settings combine for one great, visually arresting spectacle. Perversely fascinating. Caution: may be hazardous to your health, since film is rumored to have incited several attacks by inspired viewers. GRADE: B. (O'Brien)

Catholics Begin Own TV Rating

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Catholic Archdiocese, saying television and the cinema "have begun to attack Christian standards openly and directly," is issuing its own ratings to help parents guide their childrens' viewing habits.

About 150,000 eight-page, tabloid-size copies of "Television Movie Facts for Parents" will be distributed in the 408 churches of the New York Archdiocese on Sunday. The guide compiles brief reviews and opinions of 82 continuing television shows and 102 movies.

Monsignor Eugene V. Clark, director of communications for the archdiocese, said the archdiocese is considering distributing the guide, planned as a twice-yearly publication, to other Catholic dioceses around the nation.

The reviews were described as a consensus of 131 concerned parents of the New York viewing area, and the final draft of the report was written by Ann Buckley, wife of former New York Sen. James Buckley.

For example, the report says that the popular ABC show "Three's Company" was marred by "Dedicated bad taste ... Cynical disregard for basic standards of life. Sex is the point of most jokes. The costuming and dialogue are suggestive, demeaning and immoral in tone."

Along with "Three's Company" on the guide's alphabetical 10-worst list were "Brothers and Sister," "Dallas," "Dating Game," "$1.98 Beauty Show," "Loveboat," "Newlywed Game," "One Day At A Time," "Soap" and "Starsky and Hutch."

Among the best shows, according to the report, are "Battlestar Galactica," "Diff'rent Strokes," "Donny and Marie," "How the West Was Won," "Little House on the Prairie," "Mork and Mindy," "Paper Chase," "The Waltons," "The White Shadow" and "World of Disney."

The movie reviews are generally descriptions of content, rather than value judgments, but the majority of films shown on television are not "good for general viewing," the guide says.

MICHIGAN

What is now the state of Michigan was first visited by French fur traders and missionaries in 1616. A mission was established at Sault Ste. Marie in 1641 and a permanent settlement in 1668. The entire region was transferred to Britain in 1763, following the French and Indian War, and provided a base for attacks on American settlements during the Revolution. The United States acquired the territory in the peace settlement, although the British returned briefly during the War of 1812.

Some Merchants Offering Discounts To Cash-Paying Customers

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A new effort is under way to encourage merchants to give a price break to people who pay cash instead of using credit.

Supporters of discounts say that retailers mark up prices to cover the processing costs of credit. It is unfair, they say, for cash customers to pay these costs.

Most discount programs so far have been local efforts with minimal organization. An exception is "Savings Plus," run by American Business Enterprises (ABE) of Sikeston, Mo.

Here's how it works:

Savings Plus cards are issued free by savings and loan associations and banks which sign up with, and pay a small fee to, ABE. To get a card, an individual must open a savings account at the participating institution. Holders of the cards are entitled to discounts when they pay cash at participating merchants.

When the customer makes a purchase, he or she hands the Savings Plus card to the clerk who runs it through an imprinting machine similar to those used for regular credit cards. At the end of each month, an amount equal to the sum of the discounts on all Savings Plus purchases at all participating merchants is deposited in the cardholder's savings account.

Suppose, for example, in the course of one month you buy $200 worth of groceries at a store offering a 5 percent discount for cash. You also buy a $300 television set from a merchant who gives a discount of 3 percent and you run up a $50 bill at a restaurant where you get a 10 percent discount for cash. At the end of the month, $24 is deposited in your savings account.

Jim Hulen, treasurer of ABE, said there are about 600,000 cardholders and 10,000 participating merchants across the country. He said the program started in southeastern Missouri in November 1977 and has spread to St. Louis, Cincinnati, Baton Rouge, La., Albuquerque, N.M., and "almost the entire state of Arkansas." Savings Plus plans are in the works for Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Minneapolis-St. Paul and Fargo, N.D., Hulen said.

Hulen said there are several advantages to the Savings Plus system — both for the seller and for the buyer.

The merchant, he said, does not have to calculate individual discounts for each purchase. He or she simply adds up all the Savings Plus receipts for a week, figures out the amount of the discount on the total and sends a check to the participating bank. The bank gets a computer tape from ABE enabling it to deposit the appropriate sums of money in individual accounts.

The merchants have to pay a fee to ABE — just as they would have to pay to a credit card company. But, said Hulen, they don't have to worry about running credit checks, they can improve their cash flow and they get a competitive edge.

Hulen said the cardholder appreciates the discounts more with the Savings Plus plan because he or she gets a lump sum rather than a few dollars here and a few dollars there.

The amount of the fee paid by retailers varies, Hulen said, but generally averages 2 percent to 3 percent.

He said the average discount for the customer is between 6 percent and 7 percent and the average purchase is for $25. Total monthly discounts run from $10 to $500, he said, depending on how much people spend.

Cardholders are not required to leave the discounts in their accounts, but Hulen said that most people do. "It's kind of like a forced savings," he said.

Until 1978, some of the major credit card companies included provisions in their contracts with retailers saying that the merchants could not offer a discount for cash. The Fair Credit Billing Act prohibited such agreements and several consumer groups predicted that the discounts would spread.

So far, it hasn't happened. Hulen says people are reluctant to try anything new. Other sources say there is a more basic problem. As one New York restaurant operator explained, people like the idea, "but they don't have the cash."

Heir's Wife Sues Newspaper

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vicki Bagley, socialite wife of the indicted heir of the R.J. Reynolds tobacco fortune, is suing The Washington Star for $9 million for alleged libel in an article about the couple.

Mrs. Bagley, a Washington real estate agent, and her companies filed the suit Tuesday in District of Columbia Superior Court claiming personal and business damage for libel, invasion of privacy and false light in the public eye.

The suit denies a statement in the Star article, published March 19, that several real estate agents quit Mrs. Bagley's firm accusing her of "unethical business practices." The suit also named Star reporter Lynn Rosellini, who wrote the article.

Mrs. Bagley's husband, Smith Bagley, and four other persons were indicted March 14 by a federal grand jury in Winston-Salem, N.C., on 11 counts of violating federal securities laws and misapplying bank funds.

Bagley, who now resides in Washington, was an early political supporter of President Carter, who once vacationed at Bagley's resort home on St. Simons Island, Ga.

Actor Henry Fonda Leaves Hosptial

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Henry Fonda was released from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center Friday after surgery this week that revealed some cancerous growth in his prostate gland, a spokeswoman for the actor said.

The 73-year-old actor was reported "significantly improved" after Wednesday's operation to relieve pain from an arthritic left hip, said publicist Kim Garfield. During surgery, doctors removed a urinary obstruction in Fonda's prostate gland and found the cancerous cells, she said.
