An old friend takes last bow

Elbow Elementary nearing the end of its educational run

It's time to say goodbye, but I think goodbyes are sad and I'd much rather say hello. Hello to a new adventure.
 — Ernie Harwell, sportscaster (1918-2010)

BY LYNDEL MOODY

Staff Writer

It's time to start saying goodbye before a new adventure begins for those who once and still call Elbow Elementary their school.

By summer, the long-time landmark of the Elbow community will shut its doors for the last time as a new elementary building located in Forsan will begin housing the first through fifth grade levels of Forsan ISD come August.

A community wide "Remembering Elbow Open House" is scheduled for May 2, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at Elbow Elementary School.

"We are excited about our new elementary school and the memories that will be created there," said Tammi

Jones, chairman of Elbow Heritage Committee. "At the same time, we don't want to forget Elbow's history and its contributions to students' lives."

The committee is requesting former students and employees to bring snapshots, class pictures, annuals, reports card and any memorabilia connected to the school to be added to a display which available at the open house. Items must be brought to the school or submitted via e-mail at tajones@forsan.esc18.net before May 2 Those items will be returned to the owner.

"We'd especially love to have some things from Elbow's early years when the mascot was the Eagles and colors were green and yellow," Jones said.

During the open house, several staff members and former students will share their personal memories of their time at Elbow Elementary.

The first school to be built in Elbow – a farming community — was in 1906, according to information available on the FISD web site. By 1960, FISD consolidated with Elbow schools. At this time, high school age students attended school at Forsan while elementary and junior high age students attended classes in their own community at Elbow or Forsan.

By 1964, the information states, Elbow became the junior high school building for FISD while elementary and secondary students attended classes in Forsan. In 1966, the Elbow campus became the primary school for FISD and continues today with the kindergarten and pre-kindergarten levels added later.

"We have grandparents in the community who have their grandchildren go here and we've created a community here at Elbow," said Jones, a former Elbow Elementary student herself who now teaches at

Texas House OKs new abortion restrictions, then backtracks

By EVA RUTH MORAVEC

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — The Texas House gave preliminary approval to tighter abortion restrictions involving fetuses with severe abnormalities before withdrawing a sweeping health bill that included the new limits.

The unexpected vote Thursday marked a reignited push by Republicans to further Texas abortion restrictions, which are already among the toughest in the nation.

Abortions are banned in Texas after 20 weeks, except when the fetus has severe health defects. While the Republican-controlled House debated a health agency bill, state Rep. Matt Schaefer successfully tacked on a rider that would end that abortion exception.

The entire bill was later pulled down after Democrats launched technical objections.

Amarillo Republican Rep. Four Price said the bill meant to improve operations at the Department of State Health Services would be sent back to committee for more work.

He added that he withdrew his proposal "to save the life of the bill."

As he laid out the bill, Price said he wouldn't accept amendments that were unrelated to the proposal.

Republican Rep. J.D. Sheffield, a physician, urged his House peers to join him in voting against the fetal abnormalities amendment.

"When parents have to make a decision whether their child will have a life, or a life of suffering, why should the heavy, blunt hand of government come into that most heart-rendering decision?" Sheffield asked.

Democratic Rep. Ed die Lucio III said the measure was "wrong, and unnecessary, and strictly to gain political favor."

But Price and 82 other representatives voted for Schaefer's fetal abnormalities amendment. Another amendment by Schaefer that would have required abortion facilities to file monthly, electronic reports on abortion procedures also passed.

While awaiting a decision on a point of order, Democrats met behind closed doors and Republicans clustered on the House floor in what appeared to be a prayer circle.

Also, please do not enter the dance circle unless invited by the Master of Ceremonies, who this year is Steve Zavala. When approaching a dancer, please do not touch his or her regalia and please ask before taking photographs, McKinney said.

"Please never say to a dancer 'I like your costume,' this is an insult to the dancer," McKinney said in his last Sunday column for the Big

McKinney added the committee hopes the community will not only attends but takes part in this "celebration of life."

"We try to be educational," he said. "We will explain the dances. We will explain the various forms of regalia, explain what people are actually seeing."

DAILY PRAYER

May we remain diligent about reading Your word, Lord, for our life.

Amen

An exercise, or somethig sinister?

It's fascinating, isn't it? Jade Helm 15, military exercises in our back yards at 3 a.m., Walmart closings in “strategic locations” across the nation, and speculation of a government take-over becoming one of the hottest topics of conversation in coffee shops and living rooms across America.

Admittedly, I wish I could trust the government and the media to tell me the truth about everything, but I know that isn't going to happen. It's never been true, and in recent years the documented list of outright lies told by talking heads out of Washington is staggering.

Simply because of global unrest and the instability of the financial structure of our world, common sense dictates we Americans need to be prepared for anything. God only knows what's really happening in our world today.

This summer, a military exercise known as Jade Helm 15 is set to kick off in the southwestern quarter of the United States. The operation, which will run from July 15 through Sept. 15, labels Texas and Utah as “hostile areas.” The military says that under the operational guidelines, New Mexico “isn't much friendlier.” California, Colorado, Arizona and Nevada are also involved in the exercise.

The drill will see Special Operations forces from all four main branches of the military conduct hostile “take-over” training on civilian soil. But many are concerned the operation is a prelude to martial law. The military, however, says there's nothing to be concerned about.

“The nature of warfare is always changing and U.S. Army Special Operations Command's mission is to make certain the Army's various Special Operations Forces are trained, equipped and organized to successfully conduct worldwide special operations in support of our nation's interests,” Army spokesman Lt. Col. Mark Lastoria told the Washington Post in a statement issued a few weeks ago. “Training exercise Jade Helm is going to assist our Special Operations Soldiers and leadership in refining the skills needed against an ever changing foreign threat.”

But many on Main Street America and social media aren't convinced. A number of Twitter users are calling the exercise a “prelude” to World War III, while others say it's part of an effort to institute martial law.

“While we're obsessing about the Walking Dead, Martial Law is coming to fruition in the US,” one person said on Twitter Monday. Some claimed to have spotted Turkish troops operating in Texas. Some have said the recently-reported Wal-Mart closures in Texas, California, Florida and Oklahoma are part of the drill.

Examiner's David Thornton, however, said there's nothing to be concerned about after donning his tinfoil hat to investigate the matter. The military, he said, “answered many of the conspiracy charges” in a Stars and Stripes article in which Jade Helm was compared to similar exercises held in the past. The primary difference, according to Lt. Col. Mark Lastoria of the US Army Special Operations Command, was “the use of new challenging terrain,” which, Thornton explained, “is similar to the regions where the special operations forces have been fighting. Presumably, this is a reference to Afghanistan and Iraq.”

I'll go on record as saying I have no personal knowledge of anything happening as it might relate to the many theories we are hearing about the Walmart closings being connected to the DHS and the martial law concerns. I am not (yet) building a shelter in my back yard in which to hide during an invasion. I will, however, say that the level of secrecy and the almost laughable explanations I am getting from the government and news sources interest and concern me. But is there really anything to be alarmed about?

Martial law is an extreme and rare measure used to control society during war or periods of civil unrest or chaos. According to the Supreme Court, the term martial law carries no precise meaning (Duncan v. Kahana-moku, 327 U.S. 304, 66 S. Ct. 606, 90 L. Ed. 688 [1946]). However, most declarations of martial law have some common features.

Generally, the institution of martial law contemplates some use of military force. To a varying extent, depending on the martial law order, government military personnel have the authority to make and enforce civil and criminal laws. Certain civil liberties may be suspended, such as the right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures, freedom of association, and freedom of movement. And the writ of Habeas Corpus, which allows persons who are unlawfully imprisoned to gain freedom through a court proceeding, may be suspended.

In the United States, martial law has been instituted on the national level only once, during the Civil War, and on a regional level only once, during World War II. Otherwise, it has been limited to the states. Uprisings, political protests, labor strikes, and riots have, at various times, caused several state governors to declare some measure of martial law.

Martial law on the national level may be declared by Congress or the president. Under Article I, Section 8, Clause 15, of the Constitution, Congress has the power “[t]o provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel Invasions.” Article II, Section 2, Clause 1, of the Constitution declares that “[t]he President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual Service of the United States.” Neither constitutional provision includes a direct reference to martial law. However, the Supreme Court has interpreted both to allow the declaration of martial law by the president or Congress. On the state level, a governor may declare martial law within her or his own state.

Maybe the next few months in Big Spring are going to be like a movie set with tanks rolling down Gregg Street and helicopters landing on the golf course. I'm sure everybody has a camera within reach.

I honestly don't know what's really going on and I'm not convinced anyone does. All I know for sure is that God is keeping an eye on the situation so I'm sleeping just fine these days.

You may not agree with anything I've said, but I column as I see 'em.

On the internet, no one knows you're a fraud

There's been some tense back-and-forth over the Canadian mother who said she had stopped opposing vaccinations after all seven of her kids came down with whooping cough. Some say we should loudly thank Tara Hills for publicly disowning her anti-vax campaign. Others — me, for instance — are feeling less grateful.

Hills went beyond spreading lies about the “dangers” of vaccinations and exposing her Ottawa neighbors to serious disease. She strongly implied that the best medical authorities are “puppets of a Big Pharma-Government-Media conspiracy,” according to The Washington Post — and on a site demoniacally named TheScientificParent.org.

You've probably seen the famous cartoon showing a dog at a computer saying to another dog, “On the Internet, nobody knows you're a dog.” The word “dog” could have been replaced with “fraud.”

As more Americans turn to online forums for advice on everything from where to eat to whether they need surgery, concerns mount about the quality of the information. Readers often use the consensus of forum participants to bypass the views of recognized experts. And because these forums are usually little-monitored, the “weight of opinion” is often determined by the most verbose and those with too much time on their hands.

Millennials have become especially reliant on (apparent) group consensus, according to a report by PricewaterhouseCoopers on the “sharing economy.” “If trust in individuals and institutions is waning or at best holding steady,” the report notes, “faith in the aggregate is growing.”

That is, consumers who disbelieve a hotel chain's claims of fine accommodations will show up at the door of a total stranger, renting a room via Airbnb — their trust totally based on reviews submitted by who-knows-who.

As we know, interested parties or crazy people can create a phony consensus.

Then you have people like the Ottawa mother, who seemed truly committed to her beliefs but was unable or too lazy to examine expert opinion in reaching them.

In a similar vein, Sarah Watts wrote an interesting essay about her online confab with other millennial new mothers on caring for an infant. At the time, her own mother was on the scene urging her not to worry if baby June cried shortly after a feeding. The crying will stop, the mother's mother said. That advice turned out to be good.

“I had been scouring message boards and Facebook groups during June's nursing sessions,” Watts said, “and I had stumbled on discussions of every kind of parenting issue imaginable.” Some were issues she had never heard of, such as cord clamping and vitamin K shots.

Most posted questions, Watts observed, resulted in respondents “bandying conflicting research like a weapon, every one of them armed with a battery of qualifiers to describe her personal parenting philosophy.” (I might take her skepticism one step further and wonder whether the other “moms” were actually mothers or even women.)

It's crazy out there. Good sites are often so plagued by armies of the uninformed filling their forums with dimwitted comments that smart people stay away. But some well-run forums are hugely interesting.

It's a sign of the times that Californians trying to tighten the vaccination mandate for schoolchildren now worry that the drawn-out legislative process will open the door to anti-vaxxers intent on poisoning public opinion.

In many cases, readers won't even know who they are. The scary part is many won't even care.

EDDY PRINCE

Joseph's coat is sent home to Jacob

When Reuben returned and found Joseph was not in the pit, he became frantic and tore his clothes in grief.

"The boy is gone! And I — where can I go?" meaning "As first-born, I am responsible for him! How far must I run to hide?"

So they killed a goat kid and dipped the tunic in the blood. They sent the tunic to Jacob with the message, "We found this; identify, if you please. Is it your son's tunic or not?"

Remember this phrase...it will come back to haunt them.

Jacob did recognize the robe, "My son's tunic! A savage beast devoured him! Joseph has surely been torn to bits!" Then Jacob rent his clothes and put sackcloth on his loins; he mourned for his son many days.

All of his sons and daughters tried to comfort Jacob. But he said, "I will go down to the grave mourning for my son!"

He said this not knowing that Joseph was sold as a slave to Potiphar, a courtier of Pharaoh. Potiphar was the Chamberlain of the Butchers.

Let's think about this for a minute.

The brothers did not tell their father a lie. The Scripture says they dispatched the robe to him, so most likely they sent a servant to deliver the blood stained robe. This way they would not even have to tell Jacob the news and see him grieve.

So Jacob, himself, supplied the tragic details they had intended for him to assume.

Now, Joseph worked in his master's house and everything that he did was blessed by God. Joseph found favor with Potiphar and he was appointed over his master's household; he trusted Joseph in everything.

If Joseph was in charge of the house, the household prospered. If Joseph was in charge of the fields, the fields prospered. Scripture says that Potiphar concerned himself with nothing except the bread that he would eat. This may be an idiom meaning Potiphar's wife.

But Joseph was a handsome young man and with his new prestige he became preoccupied with his appearance and to curl his hair. One of the sages is quoted, "God said, 'Your father is mourning and you curl your hair! I will incite the bear against you.'" (meaning Potiphar's wife.)

Some scholars are of the opinion that since Potiphar was part of Pharaoh's court he may have been a eunuch. And Potiphar's wife did desire Joseph; she tried many times to seduce him, but he refused her. Once she grabbed his tunic and tried to pull him to her, but Joseph slipped out of his tunic and fled.

She showed the robe to her husband, "See? When he could not lie with me, he fled!"

Then Potiphar became angry and threw Joseph in prison, the same prison where the king's prisoners were confined.

Again, God gave Joseph favor with his master, the prison warden, who placed all the inmates of the prison in Joseph's custody. And again, God blessed him; everything that Joseph did prospered.

Can you see God's hand throughout Joseph's story? Can you see His will being woven into the fabric? Even though Joseph must walk through many trials, God is with him. God's plan is coming to be.

Do you really want to see and hear?

Jesus was a great teacher, but everyone who heard Him teach did not listen or understand. Why not?

The short answer is that it all comes down to the attitude (the heart) of the listener. You probably know the expression, "That message just fell on deaf ears."

Does that mean that everyone in that particular audience was deaf? No, it means that most of the audience did not care enough to pay attention to the message or did not care enough to later consider and benefit from the message. So it was with Jesus and His message. Some followed Him only to be healed physically. Some followed Him only to be fed physically. But there were some who recognized that He was different and that He was special and they wanted to hear and see more.

In Matthew 13:10-17, Jesus is asked by His disciples, Why do you speak to them in parables? Jesus' answer may seem confusing at first glance. He responds with this, To you it has been given to know the secrets of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it has not been given. For to the one who has, more will be given, and he will have an abundance, but from the one who has not, even what he has will be taken away. This is why I speak to them in parables, because seeing they do not see, and hearing they do not hear, not do they understand (12-13, ESV).

Now was Jesus just being an evil conservative capitalist wanting the rich to get richer at the expense of the poor? (Sorry, I know it's not politically correct for preachers to joke about politics!) So what is Jesus saying, really? He knows that the reception of a message or teaching is dependent upon the heart and mind of the one hearing it.

Remember back to your school days. Summer was the most glorious time of the year... because you were out of school. There were no lessons, no teachers, and you could play all day long (at least that's what it felt like). But when you had to go back to school in the fall, it seemed like the whole first month was relearning all the stuff from the previous year you had forgotten.

How many of you had to take Algebra in high school? How many of you could sit down and write out the quadratic equation right now? (Me neither!) How many of you had to learn a foreign language in school? And how many of you can have a conversation in that language? This brings to mind another phrase, "Use it or lose it!"

Some people just want to do what they want to do, and they don't want anyone else to tell them anything different. Are you that type of person? God speaks to us through His word, the Bible.

Sometimes what God is saying to us is not what we want to hear. If you apply yourself to learning more about God and His word, just like the student who studies and practices solving math problems or studies and uses another language, you will be given more — more knowledge and more understanding.

But, if you turn away from God or never turn to God, then that knowledge and understanding will never be attained or will fade away from lack of use.

May God's glory never fall upon covered eyes and may His word never fall upon plugged ears and may His grace and mercy never be thwarted by hardened hearts!

Greg Surles is the preacher of Birdwell Lane church of Christ.

Reflections: Repentance

Perhaps the one word most needed in our age of addictions is the word that seems to be missing from our vocabularies.

In his classic devotional book, My Utmost For His Highest, Oswald Chambers wrote, "The entrance into the kingdom of God is through the sharpest, sudden pains of repentance colliding with man's respectable 'goodness.' Then the Holy Spirit, who produces these struggles, begins the formation of the Son of God in the person's life (see Galatians 4:19). This new life will reveal itself in conscious repentance followed by unconscious holiness, never the other way around. The foundation of Christianity is repentance."

Whenever we do things wrong we most often try to justify our actions. We might agree that what we did was wrong, but we search for excuses. We feel sorrow, regret or remorse. But we seldom, if ever repent. Perhaps the idea doesn't even cross our minds.

When John the forerunner introduced Jesus to the world, he did so by calling people to repent.

"In those days John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness of Judea and saying, 'Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven has come near.'" (Matthew 3:1-2) Thousands sought him out, confessed their sins and were baptized as a sign of repentance.

When Jesus launched his public ministry He also preached repentance.

"From then on, Jesus began to preach, 'Repent for the Kingdom of Heaven has come near.'" (Matthew 4:17). On one occasion, Jesus said, "Unless you repent, you also will perish." (Luke 13:3).

Most of us understand repentance as a decision to stop doing bad things. To turn from our sin and to turn to God. John the forerunner defined repentance by our actions.

He urged the crowds to "produce fruit in keeping with repentance." To some he said, "Any one who has two shirts should share with the one who has none, and any one who has food should do the same."

To the tax collectors he said, "Don't collect any more than you are required to." To the Roman soldiers he said, "Don't extort money and don't accuse people falsely — be content with your pay." (Luke 3:7-14).

Repentance enables us to move beyond remorse and hating ourselves for what we have done. Judas felt remorse after he betrayed Jesus and then hanged himself. Peter also felt remorse for denying Jesus and wept bitterly. But, unlike Judas, he repented, was forgiven and served Christ the remainder of his life.

Repentance is a gift of God's grace. We cannot simply repent on our own. It must come from God. After Cornelius was converted, the disciples concluded, "So then, even to Gentiles God has granted repentance that leads to life." (Acts 11:18). Paul wrote, "Opponents must be gently instructed, in the hope that God will grant them repentance leading them to a knowledge of the truth." (2 Timothy 2:25).

Repentance is more than an act of the will, it is a transformation of the mind.

The word translated

"repent" is the word metanoia, which means literally "transformation of the mind." This is why Paul encouraged believers not to be conformed to this world, but to be transformed by the renewing of their minds. (Romans 12:2). When we repent and place our faith in Christ, we see God, the world and ourselves in an entirely new light.

Bill Tinsley has served as pastor, church planter and missions executive. In 2009 he launched the Tinsley Center, LLC to promote authentic faith that changes lives. He lives in Waco, Texas with his wife, Jackie. Email bill@tinsleycenter.com.

The Big Spring High School Steers will try and create a 2-4A standings tomorrow afternoon – and force a one-game play to determine the district championship.

The Steers, 10-7 overall, will face off with district-leading Sweetwater beginning at 2 p.m. in Sweetwater.

Should Big Spring manage to knock off the Mustangs, they would move into a tie for the district title. The two teams would need to play a one-game district playoff to determine the district No. 1 and No. 2 playoff representatives.

Sweetwater enters the final game of the regular season at 8-1 in district play, thanks in part to an 18-5 win over Big Spring earlier this month.

Anthony Godwin settles under a fly ball in the outfield during the Steers' recent win over Snyder. Big Spring can force a tie for the District 2-4A title on Saturday by handing Sweetwater a loss. The Steers, now 10-7 overall and 7-2 in district play, trail Sweetwater by one game.

The Big Spring Lady Steers already know they are in the postseason. On Saturday, they will find out if it will be as the No. 2 team.

Big Spring will square off the Sweetwater Lady Mustangs in a key District 2-4A match that will determine the runner-up honors in the district standings. The Lady Steers can clinch the 2-4A runner-up honors with a win. BSHS enters the game with a 1-game lead over Sweetwater.

With a victory, the Lady Steers would finish the year at 16-5 and earn the district's No. 2 seed. Snyder clinched the district crown on Tuesday with a 17-6 win over Big Spring.

The BSHS-Sweetwater showdown is scheduled for 1 p.m. on Saturday afternoon in Sweetwater.

Steers, Lady Steers gun for Area track titles

Big 4 will carry Lady Steers' hopes at area meet

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

The Big Spring Lady Steers will be able to judge the chances at the area track and field today by the performance of four athletes – seniors Erin Pollard, Autumn Minter, Karina Alvarado and sophomore Kaitlyn Mathews.

Not because they are the only BSHS athletes competing in the meet, which begins today in Canyon. But because each on will be competing in four events.

Pollard, one of the top female athletes at BSHS, will be competing in two individual events in addition to teaming with Mathews, Rachel McCa-lister and Minter in the 4x200-meter relay, and with Samantha Solis, Mathews and Minter in the 4x400-meter race.

She will be participating in the high jump and running in the girls' 400-meter race.

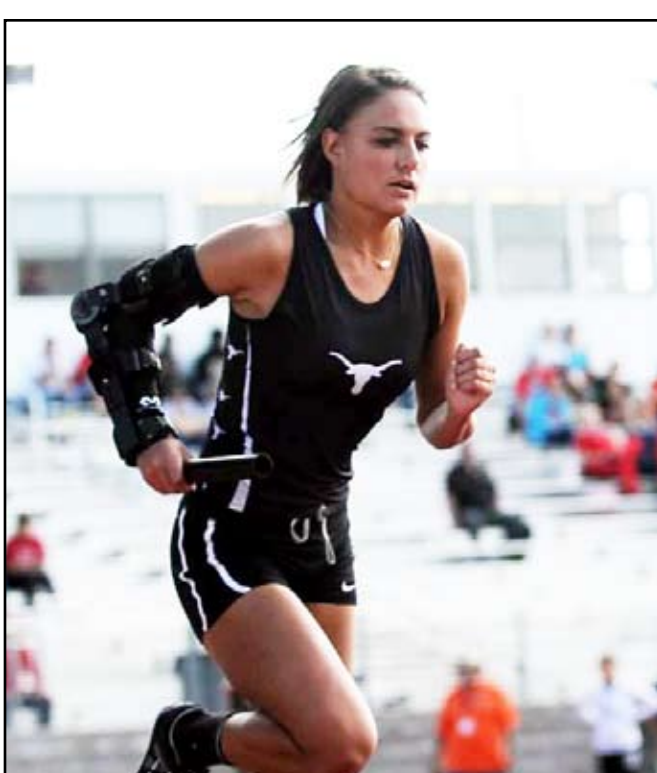

Mathews, the lone Lady Steer to qualify in five events, will be competing in the 400-meter dash as well as the long jump and triple jump.

Minter will see action in the girls' 100-meter dash and the shot put.

Alvarado will be running in the 1,600- and 3,200-meter races, as well as the 300-meter hurdles. She will also compete in the pole vault.

Hope Arguello is also an entrant in the 1,600- and 3,200-meter races.

The top finishers in each event will advance to the Region UI-4A Track and Field meet next week in Lubbock.

Former HC star plays well in Celtics' loss to Cleveland

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

Despite seeing his team fall into a 3-0 hole against the Cleveland Cavaliers, former Howard College standout Jae Crowder has represented himself well in the first round of the NBA playoffs.

Crowder, who led Howard to the national title in 2009, scored 16 points in the Boston Celtics' 103-95 loss to Cleveland on Thursday night. The 6-foot-6 stand-out has averaged 12 points per game for Boston.

Crowder joined the Celtics midway through the season after being traded in a deal that sent Rajon Rondo to the Dallas Mavericks.

A JUCO All-American who attended Marquette after graduating from HC, Crowder averaged 7.7 points and 3.6 rebounds per game this season, his second in the NBA.

Crowder was originally drafted in the second round by Cleveland, but was dealt to Dallas on draft night.

Crowder and the Celtics are scheduled to play Game 4 of the best-of-7 series on Sunday at 1 p.m.

House Party Moon

People act differently in their homes than they do out in the general public. If you have a friend you only know in a public setting and would like to get to know more about this person, the Cancer moon suggests a house party tonight.

HOLIDAY MATHIS

Entertaining or being entertained where one lives will be most delightful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). When you get together with friends, prompt them to bring friends, too, and prepare to benefit in unforeseen ways. In fact, the more new people you meet the luckier you'll be.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). In entertainment, conflict is necessary for a good story. In life, not so much. In fact, the perfect amount of conflict for the story of this evening would be "none." See what you can do to minimize the drama!

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You are in the mood to discover, and your preferred learning style lately is hands-on, with instruction. That's one reason you'll be attracted to people who know what you'd like to know.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Maybe you won't be able to come up with the big idea, but don't worry. Lots of small ideas are going to be more interesting to execute anyway. Plus you'll get help.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Socializing is supposed to be fun, so don't let it get too labored. Stick with the conversation for as long as it's juicy. When you feel like you're down to the pulp and the peel, move along.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Tearing down the old to make room for the new is a process that has helped you in your work, and now it's about to help you in your personal life, too. You're ready to embrace a new identity and let go of who you were.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Using your body relaxes your mind. The reverse won't be true (especially not with the intense mental activity this day will bring), and so the best thing you can do for your creativity and general mood is exercise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Do you think it's true that you have to stop wanting something in order to get it? Unfortunately, it is difficult to consciously decide to no longer want something. Substitutions may keep you from holding on too tight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your favorite type of risk is a calculated one. You don't mind slim odds; you just want to know exactly what they are. The most exciting journeys are the ones with no guarantee of success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Self-promotion works best when the work itself is what's needed. That's why you're wise to find out what your crowd really wants before you try to market something less interesting to them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Everything you do with your friends costs money. Step back and make a plan, because the evening will get financially out of control unless you have one. Your social life doesn't have to be at odds with your financial life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You've trumped up a fear in your mind. A small act of courage is all that will be necessary to dispel it. This will be like flicking on the lights -- the scary shadows will disappear in an instant.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 24). Messages from parent to child will have a magical impact in May. June will bring dancing. New friends and possibly pets, too, will be featured in July. You'll take a wild ride in August. Work gets better once you get educated. You'll make more money where people skills and technical skills meet. Aries and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 14, 1, 49, 38 and 16.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES: Relax. This is not a make-or-break situation. This is only one of many chances you'll get to connect. TAURUS: Love will be like either a banana peel on the sidewalk that sends you toppling or a jetpack strapped to your back that sends you to the stars. GEMINI: You'll choose your friends and alliances based on their potential to make you laugh. CANCER: You'd rather not be pulled between two people fighting for your attention, and so you make arrangements that allow for focusing on one at a time. LEO: Everyone shows appreciation in his or her own way. Accept the many packages appreciation comes in. VIRGO: Something trendy will be fun. So don't shun the idea just because everyone else is doing it. LIBRA: You may not be extremely comfortable with favoritism, but you'd do well to take advantage of it when it happens to you. SCORPIO: A curtain closing doesn't have to mean the end of the play. It's often just a change of scenery. SAGITTARIUS: You're a compassionate teacher, and someone will blossom under your tutelage. CAPRICORN: Bring along your trusty conversation starter (ideally a cute dog) to make meeting people easier. AQUARIUS: The best thing you can do for your love life is listen carefully to the other person. PISCES: Don't wait around. Go, and they'll catch up to you at the perfect time.

COUPLE OF THE WEEKEND: As the Taurus sun reflects from the surface of the second-quarter Leo moon this weekend, the attraction between these two will heat up. Taurus is growing accustomed to being lavished with attention, and Leo will give the bull a reason to share the spotlight and net enthusiastic applause. They put on a better show together than either of them could give alone.

Dear Annie: My husband died 11 years ago. Our son, "Marcus," was 6 at the time. His dad was in intensive care for two months, and because of his young age, our son was not allowed to see his father.

Before he died, my husband asked his younger brother to keep his drum set until Marcus turned 18. Marcus' uncles used to call him every year on his birthday, which also is his father's birthday. But since my husband died, neither has called to wish their nephew a happy birthday.

Marcus will be 18 soon. He is into music and wants the drums. I have asked his uncle on several occasions by sending a message on Facebook. I also asked my son's half-brother (from my husband's first marriage) to get the drums, and Marcus would pick them up from his house. Nothing has happened.

I recently noticed a picture on Facebook of a guy who used to play in a band with my late husband. In the photo, he is playing drums that look suspiciously like the ones that belong to my son.

Marcus has nothing of his father's. He was not included in any decisions on what to sell or what to keep, or even asked what he'd like to have. He was also given his dad's El Camino, but my husband put the title in the name of Marcus' half-brother, who sold it. He didn't even give my son any of the money from the sale. That was bad enough, but Marcus only really cares about the drums.

The entire family knows that my late husband wanted Marcus to have the drums. What should I do? File a lawsuit? How do I honor my late husband's wishes and give my son this final gift from his dad? -- Distraught Mom of a Musician

Dear Mom: Is anything in writing? If not, you might need to file a lawsuit, but in order to prove your case, you probably will need other credible witnesses to testify that your husband's wish was for Marcus to have the drum set. An attorney will let you know if you have a case.

But a lawsuit should be a last resort. Please stop asking for personal things on Facebook. Pick up the phone. Call the uncle who supposedly has the drum set. Be nice. Tell him what a wonderful birthday present it would be for Marcus to finally have this memento from his father. Ask when would be convenient to pick it up and what you can do to facilitate the transfer.

Marcus also can call his uncle. These relationships work both ways, and Marcus is old enough now to establish his own contact. And if he is close to his half-brother or another paternal relative, perhaps you or Marcus could get the relative to intercede on his behalf.

Dear Annie: "Holding My Breath" said she can't kiss her husband because of his halitosis. I had bad breath for 10 years. I brushed, used mouthwash and saw the dentist regularly. I also had frequent problems with my digestive tract. Finally, after having an endoscopy and a colonoscopy, my gallbladder was found to be functioning at 17 percent. It was removed, and my bad breath and constant low-level nausea went away immediately. -- Alabama Maggie

Dear Maggie: Thanks for writing. Readers, please don't assume these things are unimportant. They can indicate serious medical problems.

The Spider

During Mark Twain's days as a newspaperman, he was the editor of a small Missouri paper.

One day, he received a letter from a subscriber stating that he had found a spider in his paper and asked if this was an omen of good or bad luck.

Twain replied, "Finding a spider in your paper is neither good nor bad luck. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant was not advertising so that he could go to that store, spin his web across the door and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever after."

This Date In History

Today is Friday, April 24, the 114th day of 2015. There are 251 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 24, 1915, what's regarded as the start of the Armenian genocide began as the Ottoman Empire rounded up Armenian political and cultural leaders in Constantinople.

On this date:

In 1792, the national anthem of France, "La Marseillaise" (lah mahr-say-YEHZ'), was composed by Captain Claude Joseph Rouget de Lisle.

In 1800, Congress approved a bill establishing the Library of Congress.

In 1898, Spain declared war on the United States. (The United States responded in kind the next day.)

Thought for Today:

"The door to the past is a strange door. It swings open and things pass through it, but they pass in one direction only. No man can return across that threshold, though he can look down still and see the green light waver in the water weeds." ,Loren Eiseley, American anthropologist (1907-1977).

Howard women can clinch WJCAC crown against EPCC

By TOMMY WELLS
Sports Editor

The Howard College Lady Hawks' women's softball team can accomplish the first of their goals this weekend – winning the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

The Lady Hawks, ranked ninth in the latest NJCAA national poll, can clinch at least a tie for the WJCAC crown today with a sweep of their double-header against the El Paso Community College Lady Tejanos at Foundation Field, beginning at noon.

Howard College heads into its final four games of the season holding a 2-game lead over Midland College in the conference standings. The Lady Hawks are 19-5 heading into their showdown with EPCC. Midland College is 17-7.

Should Howard sweep today's games with El

Midland College closes out its 2015 regular season on Saturday against Frank Phillips.

A loss by Midland, combined with an HC sweep would give the Lady Hawks the WJCAC conference crown and enable Odessa College to sneak into the second-place playoff berth.
