Soviet officials say...

Tests caused nuke disaster

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Badly prepared experiments conducted to see if turbine generators could provide enough electricity to run an atomic power plant in case of an accident caused the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, a Soviet offical said today.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov, responding to questions at a news conference, said he could not provide full technical details of the experiments.

He said specifics would be published in a report "hundreds of pages" long, to be presented to the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency by September.

In a later telephone interview, Gerasimov said the experiment was intended to test how long the turbine generators that produce electricity at the Chernobyl plant would keep operating after a reactor shut down and before a backup power supply took over.

"When you shut the station, the generator is still working," Gerasimov told the news conference, according to an official English translation of his comments. "The experiment (was) ... if there is an accident, could the generator provide energy for the station for 40 to 45 minutes.

"The capabilities of the generators were studied," he said.

However, in the telephone interview, Gerasimov insisted he had said 40 to 45 seconds.

Senate warns sanctions may come

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is moving ahead with plans to impose sanctions on South Africa, despite warnings by the Reagan administration that such steps would hurt U.S. chances of nudging the white-ruled government toward sharing power with the black majority.

Secretary of State George Shultz carried the administration's case to Capitol Hill on Wednesday, repeating President Reagan's televised plea of a day earlier that Congress shouldn't order sanctions.

But Shultz, appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was told by Democrats and Republicans that the GOP-controlled Senate will likely pass some type of sanctions.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the panel, told reporters after the four-hour meeting that he thinks most of the 100 senators support some kind of sanctions, but there is no agreement yet on what action to take.

The panel is likely to decide within the next several days, Lugar told Shultz.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said "some senators are so angered" by Reagan's defense of his current policy that they wanted to attach sanctions amendments to unrelated legislation required to raise the nation's debt ceiling.

Whatever passes the Senate will have to be reconciled with the action of the Democratic-controlled House, which last month approved a stiff package of sanctions.

U-Way budget reduced

A 15 percent reduction in the projected goal for this year's United Way campaign was recommended Wednesday by the budget committee for the county's largest organized fund raising effort.

By recommending a total goal of $85,000 this year, the committee also trimmed dollar amounts from every agency seeking United Way's help.

Last year, United Way honored a record-setting $100,000 campaign.

In recommending a reduced budget, committee members pointed to the uncertainties facing the county economy due to the recent decline in the price of oil.

"We had to face a double deal this year," noted Donny Brown, United Way president and a budget committee member.

"One, money is going to be harder to raise, and two, the needs of the people we help get bigger when times get harder.

"In the end, we tried to come up with a realistic amount of money that they can expect from us this year."

He noted it was first considered to set an across the board percentage cut for each request.

"We found out that wouldn't work because each agency's situation is too different."

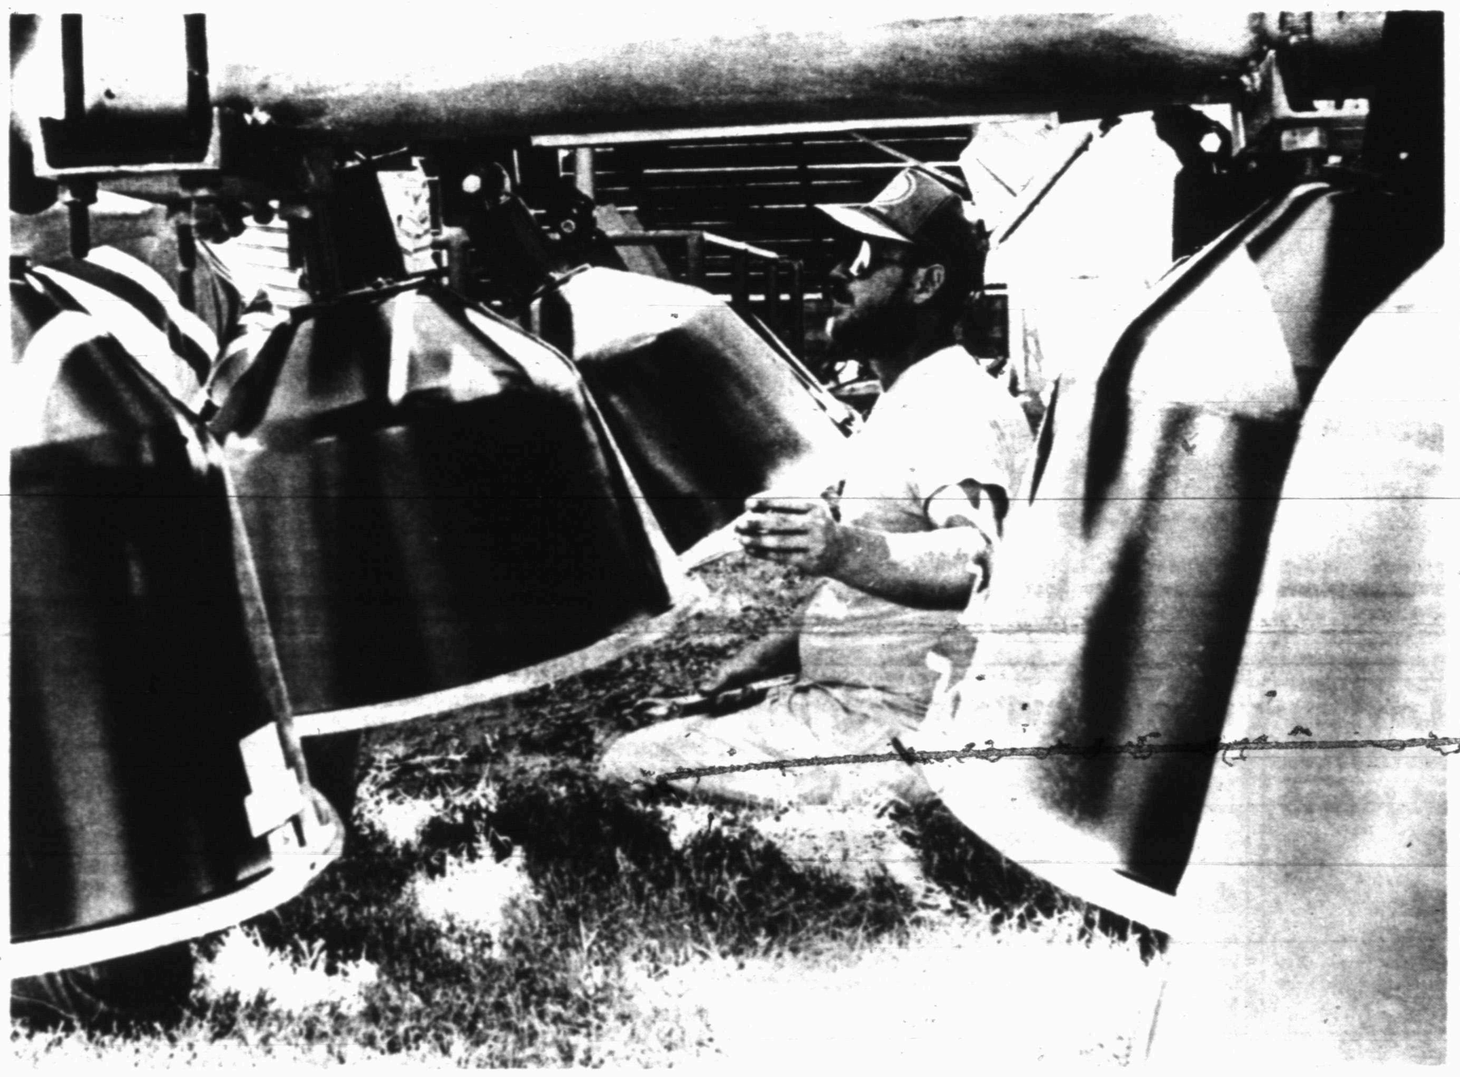

"I think we favored those agencies which count on United Way as their primary source of funding."

In line with this, he pointed to the Boys Club, the Snyder Child Day Care Center and the Oil Patch Foster Parents.

These three had funding amounts recommended which ranged from 3 to 9 percent below the amount allocated last year.

Other agencies which receive United Way dollars took harder cuts, to include the local donation to the Midland-based Boy Scout council which serves Scurry County — a 27 percent reduction

Former local has law practice seized

LUBBOCK–A state district judge here has assumed supervision of the law practice of a former Snyder attorney.

Alex P. LeFeuvre, who this week failed to appear with his client for a scheduled trail in 132nd District Court in Snyder, was targeted in a motion filed by the State Bar of Texas.

An order issued by 99th District Court Judge Thomas Clinton turned LeFeuvre's legal practice over to Lubbock attorney Bob Jones.

In order to protect client interest and deal with unfinished matters in various cases, Clinton assumed jurisdiction over LeFeuvre's practice and named Jones custodian of files and records.

The order directs Jones to tell clients to hire other lawyers, obtain information about pending cases, apply for court extensions, file motions and open mail sent to LeFeuvre's office.

LeFeuvre is the subject of disciplinary action brought by the State Bar for alleged misconduct in the handling of some civil cases.

According to the court order, LeFeuvre's whereabouts is unknown. The court order cited LeFeuvre's excessive use of drugs.

In Snyder this week, the trial of William Riley Bounds–scheduled to begin Monday–was postponed until August after LeFeuvre, Bounds' attorney, failed to appear.

A jury panel had been summoned Monday morning. The attorney telephoned District Judge Gene Dulaney to report that his car had broken down near Slaton.

The prospective jurors were released and told to return for jury duty Monday afternoon. Again, LeFeuvre did not appear and jurors were dismissed and the trial postponed. Bounds was to stand trial on a charge of sexual assault.

The State Bar filed a professional miscount suit against LeFeuvre on June 27 asking that the attorney be "reprimanded, suspended or disbarred" for allegedly violating four disciplinary rules of the Bar.

Allegations include failing to obtain for more than a year a judgment in a divorce case after

Diamond M painting in worldwide exhibit

An original painting by N.C. Wyeth which is part of the Diamond M Museum collection will soon be included in a traveling exhibition which will visit Moscow, Tokyo and other major world and U.S. cities.

To be "on loan" will be "The Rescue of Captain Harding," which was painted by Wyeth as an illustration for the Jules Verne book "Mysterious Island."

The painting is expected to leave Snyder for the two-year tour in November or December, according to Marcy-Jean Mattson, museum director.

The exhibit will feature the works of the three famous painters, N.C. Wyeth, Andrew Wyeth and James (Jamie) Wyeth.

It is the first international exhibition to include the works of the three artists.

Through August, the local painting will be featured in a special exhibit at the museum. Called "Illustrations from the Diamond M," it will display other paintings in the collection which have been used as illustrations.

The traveling exhibit for the Wyeth works is to appear at the Soviet Academy of Arts in both Leningrad and Moscow; the Fitzwilliam Museum in Cambridge, England; the Palazzo Reale in Milan, Italy; the Setagawa Museum in Tokyo; the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.; the Dallas Museum of Art; the Terra Museum in Chicago; and the Brandywine River Museum in Chadds Ford, Pa.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "All things come to him whose name is on a mailing list."

On both Snyder golf courses, it is a requirement that carts be kept on the paved cart trails. Enforcement of such a rule helps keep the fairways lush and green in an area where moisture normally is at a premium.

The lone exception to the rule is the person with a medical disability. Such a person can get approval from the club pro to drive in the fairways, and that person's golf cart is designated by a red flag.

That explains the red flag, but that yellow flag sticking out of Floyd Duncan's bag took some investigation. Duncan is now one of those full-time golfers following his retirement from Amoco Pipeline.

Duncan may want to blame it on the heat, but he made one of those long snake putts–the kind they like to re-run on TV. Duncan was trying to hide his excitement, so he held the flag stick while the others putted out.

Rather than returning the yellow flag stick to the hole, his playing companions watched in amusement as Duncan carried the flag stick to his cart, placed it along with his clubs into his golf bag, and drove away.

Quote of the week comes from Colorado Gov. Lamm who said:

"Two thirds of the world's lawyers now practice in the United States. History shows no occasion where a nation has sued its way to greatness."

Attorneys make their living giving advice. We like the story about the famous criminal lawyer who was roused from his sleep by a telephone call from a prospective client who said:

"I'm on death row. They've shaved my head, given me a last meal, cut slits in the legs of my trousers, and rolled up my sleeves. What do you recommend?"

Undismayed, the lawyer clamly advised, "Don't sit down."

Bus blast kills

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A bomb exploded aboard an intercity bus in north-central Sri Lanka today, killing 28 passengers and wounding 40, a military spokesman said.

The spokesman, who cannot be identified under military briefing rules, said the bus was en route from the town of Vavuniya to the sacred Buddhist city of Anuradhapura about 33 miles away when the bomb exploded.

The blast occurred about nine miles outside Vavuniya.

City to divest

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston will divest from companies that do business in South Africa after city officials voted to pass an ordinance hailed as milestone legislation by groups pushing for economic sanctions.

"This is one of the strongest divestment ordinances anywhere in the United States," said Councilman Ernest McGowen, who for more than a year has spearheaded the Houston move to take sanctions against South Africa.

Lewis charges tax stump 'waste of time'

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby is taking his tax talk on the road, but Speaker Gib Lewis says Hobby is wasting his time.

Tax bills must start in the House, and Lewis said Wednesday there is no chance of that happening in the August special legislative session. Spending cuts, not tax hikes, will be used to attack the deficit, Lewis said.

Hobby's office has announced he will go to seven cities to talk about his plan.

"He's really definitely concluded the only way to deal with the problem is a combination of spending cuts and revenue increases," said Saralee Tiede, Hobby's press secretary.

Lewis said the special session, scheduled to start Aug. 6, is no place to offer a tax bill. Gov. Mark White, who has said spending cuts are the top priority, called the special session to deal with a state deficit that is expected to grow to at least $3 billion by Aug. 31, 1987.

"I just don't think with the economy of the state we can afford a tax increase," Lewis said.

Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said the Hobby trip is a "great thing."

"The other side needs to be heard from," Rudd said, branding as "the other side" anyone who wants a tax hike.

The chance of getting a tax bill through the House is "minus 1 percent," he said.

The appropriations panel on Wednesday continued looking at possible spending cuts. No action will be taken until the special session begins, Rudd said.

Ms. Tiede said Hobby will begin his tour Tuesday in Dallas and make stops in Lubbock, Amarillo, El Paso, Midland and San Antonio before winding it up Aug. 4 in Houston.

"He is going to name some of his recommendations for spending cuts and for where you can raise revenue," Ms. Tiede said.

Hobby also will tell his audiences why he believes it would be irresponsible to make all the spending cuts needed to balance the budget, she said.

Among the plans Hobby will push is an expansion of the sales tax to cover many services now exempt.

During the tour, Hobby will talk about his plan with business, civic and local government leaders.

"You know, persuasion really is not what is needed at this point," he said. "People understand what the budgetary problem is. It needs to be solved by a combination of cuts and tax increases to replace the revenue lost by the collapse of oil and gas."

Ms. Tiede said Hobby knows he faces a possible roadblock on the House side.

"We've talked to the speaker, and the speaker made it very clear he sees no way he is going to pass a tax bill," she said. "But Lt. Gov. Hobby feels it is important to try and explain what the situation is."

While several House members have said they are waiting to see White's plan, the governor has asked for help from local government leaders.

In a July 11 letter sent to 14,000 local election officials, White said, "Most of you are facing a similar budget situation with even fewer revenue options. I invite you to share your experience, give me your ideas and actively participate with me and members of the Legislature as we embark on this important mission."

Postage for the mailing cost more than $3,000 and was paid for with state money.

Civic cheerleading increases as oil industry fortunes plummet

CRANE, Texas (AP) — With unemployment figures climbing into double digits as energy industry fortunes plummet, civic cheerleading must try harder than ever.

The effect on Crane has not differed from that on any other small town with an economy based primarily on oilfield service and production.

Several small businesses have closed in the town of 3,500. Dozens of jobless residents are moving out. What little oilfield service business is left goes to Midland-Odessa companies.

"Everywhere you go — at coffee shops, on street corners, in offices — all you hear is how bad things are and how much worse they're going to get," said Gene Clack, president of the Crane County Chamber of Commerce board of directors.

To fight back, the chamber has hung a new shingle on its door. No longer just cheerleaders, chamber leaders are using psychology to turn the town around.

It's called the United for Crane campaign. A letter to the editor in the Crane newspaper described it as an effort to organize businesses and individuals to help one another during difficult economic times.

"I hope there will be several things accomplished, the main one being to make some sort of mental adjustment in people's attitude about where Crane is headed," Clack told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

Thus far, the most specific plans are to host a countywide rally on Aug. 21, to print weekly, "What's so good about Crane" columns in the newspaper, and to encourage major oil companies to hire Crane oilfield service companies.

Major business operators tend to use Midland-Odessa companies because they underbid small town companies, said Jincy Burks, chamber secretary-manager.

Burks said city and county governments will be asked to pass resolutions to support Crane businesses.

"It's mostly to build up morale and remind people that the town is not dying and remind them of why we're living in Crane," Burks said.

Clack said representatives from major and independent oil companies will be invited to the rally as well as merchants and social and service organizations.

Although the purpose is to adjust the town's attitude, Clack believes the goal is supported by physical evidence.

"I realize things are tough, but they're not impossible," Clack said.

Some small retail businesses have opened recently and nine new houses are under construction, he said.

"I'll bet that's more than in Odessa," Clack said.

Association recommends property insurance boost

AUSTIN (AP) — Damage caused by too much bad weather the past three years is the primary reason a personal property insurance rate increase is needed, according to two recommendations to the State Board of Insurance.

The Texas Insurance Advisory Association, representing the industry, recommended an statewide increase of 16.9 percent.

The board's staff recommended a statewide average increase for all classes of 5.3 percent, including the widely sold homeowners policy.

The board was to consider today the recommendations from both its staff and the industry that Texas homeowners pay more for personal property insurance the next year.

However, the staff recommendations would give apartment dwellers a reduction on personal property insurance.

In 1985, the statewide average was increased 2.2 percent, while the 1984 average, which did not become effective until March 15, 1985, was a 5.3 percent increase.

The staff recommendation called for a statewide increase in homeowners insurance of 8.6 percent. The standard homeowners policy covers insurance for fire and lightning, windstorm, hurricane and hail, explosion, vandalism and malacious mischief, freezing and insurance for accidents that happen on the property.

The staff recommended a 10.8 percent decrease in tenant homeowners insurance.

The industry proposed an increase of 19.9 percent in homeowners rates, and a 1.1 percent increase for tenant homeowners.

The association said the difference between the two recommendations was "attributable to the industry's traditional inclusion of a 5 percent provision for profit and contingencies and differences over the trending of losses and other technical matters."

The industry statement said the primary factory in the rate increase was the catastrophe losses in Texas the last three years.

"Specifically, the effect of Hurricane Alicia in August 1983, the severe winter weather of December in 1983 and the record number of weather-related catastrophes that Texas suffered in 1985.

The largest 1985 weather loss in Texas was at Lubbock where wind, hail and tornadoes caused $57.3 million in damages on May 6-8.

Many architects, especially those designing small homes, are including diagonal walls in their plans these days. According to Better Homes and Gardens, angled walls do two important things; They break up small spaces without creating a boxy room, and they can be situated to leave sight lines open to the out-of-doors and to other parts of the house, further expanding the space.

Weight gain increases fetal survival rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who gain 26 to 35 pounds during pregnancy run a significantly lower risk of losing their child to stillbirth or late miscarriage than women who put on less than 16 pounds, a government study shows.

The study by the National Center for Health Statistics said women who gain less than 16 pounds have a fetal death rate of 10.5 per 1,000 live births, compared with a death rate of 3.8 at the higher weight range.

The statistics, based on a sample of nearly 16,000 pregnancies, suggest that current obstetric guidelines for weight gain may be too conservative. Those guidelines, issued in 1983, suggest that weight gains during pregnancy should be between 22 and 27 pounds.

But the new figures show progressively better outcomes with weight gains up to 35 pounds. Above 35 pounds, the fetus is at slightly higher risk but still is statistically safer than at any weight gain below 26 pounds.

With a weight gain of 16 to 20 pounds, the fetal death rate was 6.7 per 1,000 births; 21 to 25 pounds, 4.8 per 1,000 births; 26 to 35 pounds, 3.8 per 1,000 births; and more than 35 pounds, 4.1 per 1,000 births.

The study, released Wednesday, also showed that children born alive to women with little weight gain tended to be small babies, who have more health problems and higher infant mortality rates.

Despite the value of the added weight, the study said a substantial proportion of pregnant women do not gain enough.

The statistics showed that 23 percent of the women giving birth in 1980 gained less than 21 pounds during pregnancy, and 12 percent gained less than 16 pounds.

Black women were 50 percent more likely than white women to gain less than 21 pounds, the study said, and they were twice as likely to gain less than 16 pounds.

Other groups of women likely to gain less than average weight include women who are overweight, who smoke during pregnancy, who have a low family income, who are teen-agers or over 35, who have less than nine years of education, who have already had three children, or who are unmarried.

Lean prehistoric nutrition learned

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — People of the Stone Age could teach modern man about good nutrition.

Dr. Dee Graham of Del Monte USA says prehistoric man consumed more fruits and vegetables and ate meat that contained less fat, all prescriptions for a healthy diet.

They also worked to obtain food, getting more exercise in the process. Americans today are encouraged to eat less fat, more fruits and vegetables and to get more exercise.

Although there is no betting in bridge, players will sometimes make a bluffing bid, hoping to stop the opponents from leading a particular suit. What is not so common is to make a bluffing play, attacking your weakest suit in an attempt to cajole the opposition into leading your stronger suits.

With the opening lead of a diamond, declarer had eight tricks. The obvious source of additional tricks was in the heart holding. If East had the heart king, a successful finesse would even provide an overtrick. And if West had the heart king, perhaps he would not know to switch to spades. So declarer went to dummy with a club and took the heart finesse. Defender West was on his toes. If South had A-J in diamonds, the club ace and as much as A-Q of hearts, the only defensive hope was that East held A-Q of spades and some spade length. So West won the heart king and switched to spades to set the contract.

What if declarer makes a bluffing play? Let him lead a club to dummy and play a spade back to his 10. West will win the king and may well reason that East has strength in the heart suit. A switch away from the heart king will then allow South to make his contract by means of this bold swindle.

Cystic Fibrosis marker identified

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Drs. Robert Schwartz, a cystic fibrosis specialist, and Richard Doherty, a geneticist, at the University of Rochester Medical Center say they have identified a DNA marker associated with cystic fibrosis.

The discovery, made in collaboration with Integrated Genetics Inc., could soon lead, they say, to direct identification of the game for cystic fibrosis and eventually to new treatments for the killer disease.

The researchers are now developing a diagnostic test, called direct carrier screening, which would permit advance warning to couples at risk of having children with cystic fibrosis. One in every 400 American couples is in the at risk group.

Educational reform...

Give teachers larger role

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fourteen of the nation's top education experts called on state officials today to begin a wave of school reform giving teachers more power and stressing experimentation and flexibility in the classroom.

The report, "What Next? More Leverage For Teachers," was unveiled at the Education Commission of the States national forum and annual meeting.

While hailing educational reforms of the past few years, the commission report stressed the need for greater professionalism for teachers and more individualized instruction for students.

New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean, the commission chairman, said the test for education in the next five years rests on the quality of people attracted to teaching, not on the passage of reform bills pending in many states,

The commission report is a follow-up to one issued in May by the Carnegie Task Force On Teaching As A Profession titled "A Nation Prepared: Teachers For The 21st Century."

Three areas for redefining the teaching profession are discussed in the new report: restructuring teacher training; changing teacher working conditions; and making teaching more like a profession.

Creating great schools of education is one way to achieving greater success in the educational field, the experts said.

Diane Ravitch, adjunct professor of history and education at Teachers' College, Columbia University, suggested abolishing undergraduate education departments.

"If teaching is a profession, we have to move training to the graduate level. What we're doing now is permitting people to use undergraduate education courses to crowd out the real education they should be getting," she said.

A second area addressed in the report is the stifling effect of school administrations on teachers.

"Schools operate in an incredibly bureaucratic culture, at the bottom of which we find the teacher," said Marc Tucker, head of the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy and a contributor to the report.

"The organization of schools has evolved pretty much along the lines of a factory; administrators are like factory supervisors and teachers are like factory workers," Ravitch said. "We can't continue to attract people with those sorts of working conditions."

Patricia Albjerg Graham, dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Education, said requiring administrators to teach might help solve the problem.

"Once they experienced some of those working conditions, they might be more willing to face up to the difficulties," she said.

Most mentioned was the need to give teachers more authority.

"Powerful people take the jobs that entrust them with the important things," said Theodore Sizer, author of the widely regarded education reform book "Horace's Compromise." "If you want good people in the teaching profession, you have to set it up so teachers have authority over the important things."

Gary Sykes, a former English teacher and governmental policy analyst, said teachers need to be thoroughly involved in running schools. "Nobody else can do it," he said. "The only way is to invest more authority in teachers."

The report also says teacher pay is not the heart of the matter.

"Listen to the good teachers," Sizer said. "They talk about pay, yes. But they talk more passionately about the fact that other people are telling them what to do. I would say the heart of the matter is substantial control over time and materials; pay follows that."

Other experts contributing to the report were: Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching; Bernard R. Gifford, dean of the Graduate School of Education at Berkeley; Ann Lieberman, chair of the Curriculum and Teaching Department at Teachers' College; Sara Lawrence Lightfoot, professor of education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education; Andrew Porter, professor of educational psychology at Michigan State University; Phillip Schlechty, executive director of the Jefferson County Public Schools-Gheens Professional Development Academy in Louisville, Ky.; Lee S. Schulman, professor of education and affiliated professor of psychology at Stanford University; P. Michael Timpane, president of Teachers' College; and Linda Darling-Hammond of the Rand Corporation.

Tenneco blames depressed oil prices for earning drop

HOUSTON (AP) — Depressed oil prices are being blamed for Tenneco Inc.'s 47 percent drop in second-quarter earnings.

Net income for three months ending June 30 totaled $80 million, compared with earnings of $152 million for the same quarter a year ago. Earnings per share were 43 cents, compared with 95 cents for the similar period in 1985, the company said Wednesday.

"As long as oil and gas prices continue at current depressed levels, Tenneco's earnings will remain under pressure," said James L. Ketelson, Tenneco chairman and chief executive officer.

Sales and operating revenues for the quarter were recorded at $3.7 billion, equal to the second quarter of 1985.

"Although most of the company's other major divisions had increased operating income compared with the second quarter of 1985, these improvements were not sizeable enough to offset the adverse effects of significantly lower oil and gas prices on exploration and production operations," Ketelson said.

Tenneco's other energy businesses — natural gas pipelines and oil processing and marketing — both reported somewhat higher earnings compared to the same quarter last year.

Among Tenneco's non-energy divisions, construction and farm equipment, automotive, packaging and chemicals had improved operating results for the quarter.

Tenneco's insurance businesses also had improved results for the quarter. The company recently announced reaching an agreement in principle to sell those businesses to I.C.H. Corp. of Louisville, Ky.

The transaction is expected to be completed this year, the company said.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We live in a highly desirable section of town. A few years ago when our neighbor's little boy was 3, I observed his father teaching him to relieve himself off the side of their house! He's 7 now, and he's still urinating outside whenever he feels like it. (In the winter it's freezing cold here, but that doesn't seem to matter.)

We have a daughter (now 8) who has been taught to come into the house to use the bathroom. She knows that urinating outside in public is nasty, unsanitary and ill-mannered.

These same neighbors have a 4-year-old girl who is following in her big brother's footsteps. Our son, just turned 3, sees these kids pottying in the yard, and now he's doing it.

I realize that the neighbors have a right to do whatever they want on their own property, but it's setting a terrible example for our children. The neighbors across the street are also upset about this because their children play over here. What can we do? Please don't mention our town or name, as this family is pretty good at throwing eggs, too.

APPALLED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR APPALLED: First, speak to the offending neighbors and explain the unhygienic aspects of using the yard as a toilet. Advise them that the department of public health disapproves of this practice, and you will report them to the authorities if they do not clean up their act. Then have no hesitation to make an official complaint if necessary.

DEAR ABBY: Remember me? I'm "Katherine in Georgetown, Texas." I wrote to you last September saying that I wanted to donate my organs after death but couldn't get any witnesses to sign the consent form. Members of my family refused to sign it, fearing some doctor might get "scalpel happy" and remove the organs they need before I'm dead. I took the form to church five Sundays in a row but couldn't get anybody to sign it. (They said I might need all my parts at the Resurrection.) Even my own husband wouldn't sign it!

Well, Abby, you printed my letter, explaining that my husband needed to understand that willing one's organs after death in order to improve the quality of life for the living is one of the most generous acts a person can perform. And the possibility that some "scalpel-happy" surgeon might remove one of my organs before I was dead was impossible because a patient must be pronounced dead by two doctors before a death certificate is signed. And as for "needing" all my organs for the Resurrection, should a person return to live again in the body of his previous life, the good Lord could be trusted to miraculously replace the missing parts.

To make a long story short, when my family saw your explanation in the paper, they not only offered to witness my donor form, they became donors themselves!

And listen to this, Abby. Last week I had major surgery, and when I gave my doctor my donor card to clip to my chart, he asked me what it was. He said he had never seen one before! So please print this and tell everybody who has a donor card to inform their doctors now, in case one day they'll need emergency surgery and are in no condition to let the doctor know. Thank you.

KATHERINE IN GEORGETOWN, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: May I suggest a more appropriate reply to the question, "I'll bet you don't remember me, do you?" How about, "You win!"

STAN HAUXHURST, CORONA DEL MAR, CALIF.

DEAR STAN: Beautiful. You win!

Government ready to help drought area

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — President Reagan, wrapping up a Southern campaign swing in drought-parched South Carolina, says his administration "stands ready to help" farmers suffering from the Southeast's devastating heat wave.

Reagan, in a speech prepared for delivery at a campaign rally for the gubernatorial campaign of Rep. Carroll Campbell, observed that the drought "is reaching tragic proportions."

The president made no mention of any specific action, except to say that he had sent an Agriculture Department team to South Carolina earlier this week "to assess the situation."

"Even when times are tough, you show your mettle," Reagan told his listeners in a state where agricultural experts estimate a $100 million crop and cattle loss.

"I want you to know that our administration stands ready to help," Reagan said.

Thousands of bales of hay have been unloaded from Air Force cargo jets to aid the state's beleagured farmers. Last week, Reagan directed the Air Force to help speed hay donated by Midwestern farmers to the starving cattle in the South. As of Wednesday, 250 tons of hay had been airlifted to the state.

Estimates of the cost to states throughout the Southeast from the drought have put damage approach $1 billion. Some state agriculture officials in the South are calling for increased federal loans to help financially strapped farmers repackage existing loans to lighten their debt burden.

In his speech for Campbell, Reagan kept up the attacks on Washington and liberal Democrats that have helped him raise nearly $2 million for GOP campaigns in his two-day swing.

Only knows one speed...

Bates goes all out to fill Clinkscale's shoes

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - Bill Bates hurtles his body into a pileup during a scrimmage and Dr. Walter Knight just shakes his head on the sidelines.

"He told me he'd take it easy today because of his pulled hamstring," said Knight, a Dallas Cowboys physician. "I don't guess he ever takes it easy, does he?"

Bates is particularly driven during this Cowboys training camp because starting strong safety Dextor Clinkscale is apparently thinking about retirement.

He sees it as his big chance, although it really won't change the way he plays - all out all of the time.

"Whether Dextor comes to camp or not I'm concentrating on playing my best," said Bates. "His absence means I'm going to get a lot more playing time, a lot more repetitions out there."

Bates was asked if he was risking early season burnout with his aggressive play in practice.

"I only know one speed and that's all out at all times," Bates said. "I just want to make the point I can."

Bates is faster this season thanks to off-season training that lowered his time in the 40-yard dash from 4.7 to 4.58.

"You run on this machine that makes you run faster than you can," said Bates. "It trains your muscles to accept a faster pace. It makes you feel faster and helps your confidence."

Bates, signed as a free agent in 1983, intercepted four passes in 1985 and was the leading tackler among non-starters.

"Bill Bates will hit anybody," said Coach Tom Landry. "He could be our starting strong safety. He just needs to control his impulses enough to keep everything under control in order for him to be a real solid player."

Landry said he likes the fact Bates is a competitor.

"He's the type of player you need on the field," Landry said.

Bates returned punts part of the time last year, but that's not expected to be a part of his chores this season.

"I'll return punts and play on the special teams, or anything else it takes to win," Bates said.

Former assistant coach Gene Stallings, now the head coach of the St. Louis Cardinals, used to be amazed by Bates.

"You can go to a game and not know anything about football and still see Bill Bates," Stallings said. "He'll trap somebody, make a tackle on a kickoff or knock somebody down."

Bates admitted he needed to ease off more in training camp.

Sims forced to retire; others sign contracts

by The Associated Press

From now on, Billy Sims will be running a business instead of running to daylight.

"Playing football was great, but I knew it was a short-lived career," the Detroit Lions' star said Wednesday in announcing his retirement from pro football. "I'll miss the game and I'll miss the players. It was fun while it lasted."

It only lasted five years, but in that time Sims piled up a club-record 5,106 yards in Detroit as well as a team-high 47 touchdowns. However, he hadn't played a down since Oct. 21, 1984, when he damaged ligaments in his right knee in a game at Minnesota.

"I feel I still had a little more running to do here," said the 30-year-old Sims, who came into the NFL as a 25-year-old rookie from Oklahoma. "I wanted to play at least until I was 32 or 33. I didn't get a chance to continue."

Sims may leave the game with some regrets, but not without some wealth.

He has a 40-acre ranch in his hometown of Hooks, Texas. He has real estate and apartments in Texas and he has Billy Sims Enterprises, which he hopes will do business with Detroit automakers.

Sims, the 1978 Heisman Trophy winner from Oklahoma, was Detroit's No. 1 selection in the 1980 draft. In fewer than five seasons, he broke 10 team records, including most career rushing yards.

While Sims announced his retirement, other players took first steps to begin their NFL careers, including top draft choices John L. Williams with Seattle, Markus Koch with Washington and Mark Haight with the New York Jets.

Williams, a fullback, became the fifth first-round selection in the NFL's draft to come to an agreement with their clubs when he signed a four-year deal with the Seahawks.

Koch, a defensive lineman from Boise State, signed a contract worth a reported $700,000 over three years.

Miller trying again to play pro football

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - Junior Miller was tired of waking up tired of Junior Miller.

"I'd go out drinking beer and be miserable the next day," Miller said. "People fool themselves. They get drunk, do stupid things and blow their money. I wasn't happy and I didn't feel life was worth living."

That was when Miller was an All-Pro tight end with the Atlanta Falcons.

"I had it all, big money, my family, a big house, a big car, and at the top of my profession," he said.

Miller's drunken world came crashing down on him in 1985 when no professional football team wanted his services. He thought about suicide.

"I considered driving my car off into a lake," he said.

Instead, Miller said he found the Lord.

"I was crying and found a Bible next to me and started reading it because nothing was bringing me the happiness I needed," he said.

Prayer helped when the bill collectors came calling.

"To be honest, I owed everyone money but I was happy, I had peace, I had my faith," Miller said. "I had been kicked in the teeth but I felt good."

Then the Dallas Cowboys rang. They signed the 6-foot-4, 240-pounder as a free agent. He's now in training camp trying to recapture the magic that made him an All-American at Nebraska and an All-Pro for the Falcons.

Trying to knock the rust off a year away from football, Miller is struggling but still rates a chance to be one of the three tight ends Coach Tom Landry keeps.

"I have good days and bad but I know I can catch the ball and I know I can block," Miller said. "I'm going to make this club then I'm going to tell kids at churches and schools how they can ruin their lives with alchohol."

In his rookie year, Miller, the seventh player chosen in the 1980 NFL draft, caught eight passes for 117 yards and two touchdowns in a game.

Cooper hoping to boot back former position with Oilers

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) - Joe Cooper suffered through one of the most trying periods of his life last year when he won the Houston Oiler kicking job and lost it - all in the same training camp.

Now Cooper's back on the Angelo State University campus, trying to win the job from Tony Zendejas and once again facing tough odds at earning a job.

Cooper hit 11 of 13 field goals for the Oilers while subbing for injured Florian Kempf in 1984. Kempf was released in the 1985 training camp, leaving the kicking duties to Cooper.

But after thinking he'd won a job, former Coach Hugh Campbell traded for Zendejas and cut Cooper.

Cooper, a third-year law student in Fresno, Calif., turned down a tryout with the San Francisco 49ers to face another possible rejection by the team he felt treated him unfairly last year.

Why?

"The Oilers were the first team to give me an opportunity to prove myself and I did prove myself," Cooper said. "There is an emotional attachment. After weighing both situations, I decided I'd have the best chance here."

Cooper's emotions bordered on resentment when he was waived last year.

"He (Campbell) told me if I'd gone 10 for 10 in preseason, he still had to make that trade," Cooper said. "That's all the explanation I got."

Being released after thinking he had won the kicking job made Cooper's dismissal more devastating.

"Ollie (quarterback Oliver Luck) and I were registered in law school, I had a place to stay and the power hooked up," Cooper said. "It's difficult to describe the feeling. I was in shock."

When the Oilers called in 1984 seeking a substitute for Kempf, Cooper was in the midst of law school studies but he juggled footballs and law books to lead the Oilers in scoring.

Then came the slap.

"I took it too hard, I wasn't the same person for a long time," Cooper said. "It almost abrogated my feeling for human nature. It was bewildering to me."

Cooper's grandfather died a short time after he was cut, adding to the gloom.

"It wasn't a very good fall for me last year," he said.

But with the help of his fiance, Lisa Eurrizola, and his determination to survive the ordeal, Cooper is once again seeing his future positively.

"I lost my faith in human nature and she's the one I took it out on," Cooper said. "She's been the strength that pulled me through."

Cooper likes his chances of making the roster but he still doesn't like training camp.

"In these halls the ax swings and people are on edge at times," he said.

Buffs crush Colorado City; advance to state tournament

SWEETWATER – Snyder's Buffs will undoubtedly have a harder time down the road, but at the district level they were clearly the best.

Snyder slammed the Colorado City White Sox 15-4 here Wednesday to sweep up a district championship in Texas Junior Teenage League action and earn a berth to next week's state tournament in Gainesville.

The Buffs will open the week-long tournament at 10 a.m. Tuesday, meeting an as yet unknown opponent. The eight-team tourney will be double elimination.

This tournament was double elimination, too, but the Buffs never lost. In fact, with wins of 17-3 over Sweetwater, 12-3 over Tri-City and 15-4 over Colorado City, they didn't even come close.

Wednesday's contest fit the mold as Snyder ran up a 10-0 first-inning lead and coasted the rest of the way.

The Buffs jumped on Colorado City pitcher Sam Garcia quickly. Randy Morris led off with a single and Tommy Lane followed with a home run. Lee Fletcher then walked, rounded the point on a passed ball, and scored on Todd Perry's single; 3-0.

Next-up Willie Garcia offered up a run-scoring double, and after Joey Felan walked, Shane McCarter slugged a two-run single. Chuck Barbee followed with a single and Jason West capped it off with a two-run basehit. When Sam Garcia walked Morris moments later, he was yanked from the mound.

New pitcher Rene Silva had a better time and only allowed one more Snyder run in the inning. It came when Perry slapped a sacrifice fly.

Snyder tacked on two runs in the third inning and three more in the fourth. Both Fletcher and Perry scored on errors in the third, while Perry and Willie Garcia had RBI singles in the fourth. A sacrifice fly by Felan accounted for the other run.

Willie Garcia picked up the win for Snyder. He gave up just three hits in four innings of work.

In all, Snyder banged nine hits. Gilbert Hernandez was two-for-two while McCarter was two-for-four and Perry and Willie Garcia were both two-for-five.

Snyder All-Stars tripped 8-3; eliminated from LL playoffs

ABILENE – Snyder's All-Stars dropped a two-run lead and were eliminated from further Little League playoff competition here Wednesday evening.

Snyder led 3-1 after three innings but a single, two walks and four errors helped Abilene Southern go on to post an 8-3 victory. The loss ends Snyder's bid in the playoffs while Southern will advance to face Abilene Dixie here at 7:30 tonight in the tournament championship game.

Southern led 1-0 when Corey Morris singled and scored on a basehit from Josh Quick. Snyder retaliated in the bottom of the first inning as Richard Morris got a timley, two-out single. His hit helped to push across Eric West, who had walked, and John Conger, who had reached on a fielder's choice.

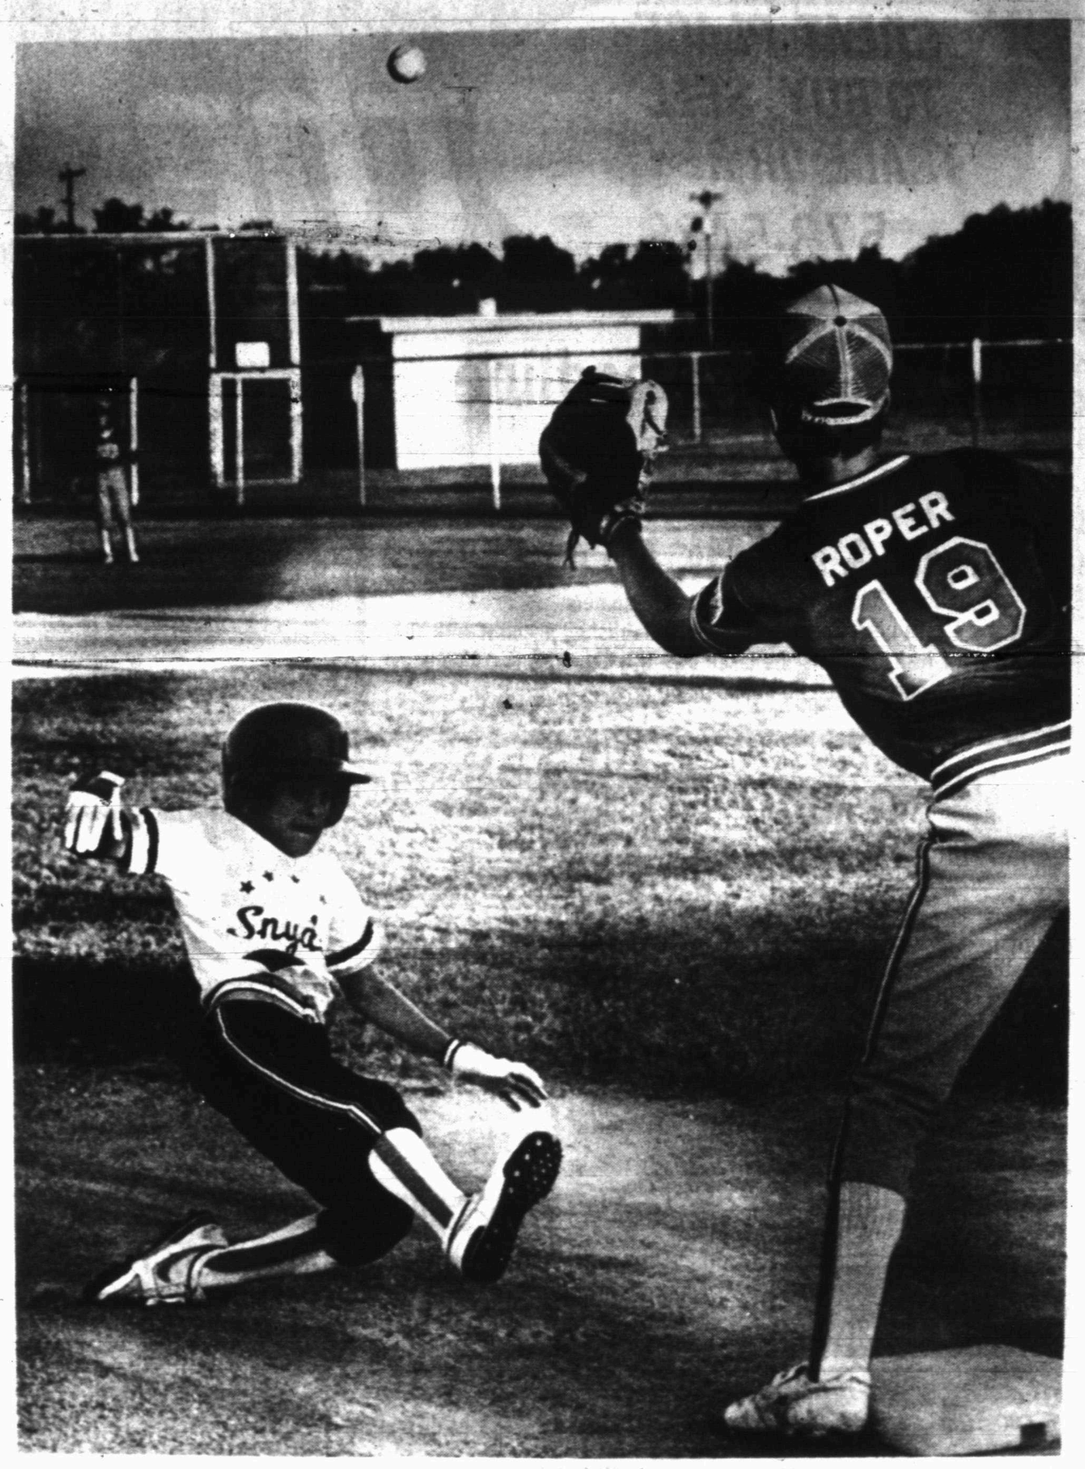

Snyder extended its lead to 3-1 in the third when Anthony Alvarez took first on an error and later scored on another error.

Southern struggled offensively until the fourth inning when a series of bunts led to Snyder's downfall. First-up Brian Roper walked and was moved around when Chris Landerbach bunted into a Snyder error. Mike Chisum then singled, and Jamie Hendrick also followed with a bunt which turned into a Snyder throwing miscue.

Southern added two more runs in the fifth, and closed out the show with a two-out homer in the sixth from Jay Pugh.

Corey Morris went the distance for Abilene. He allowed just one hit and struck out seven batters.

Steven Bollinger was tagged with the loss, despite a fine three-inning performance in the early stanzas. Bollinger struck out seven batters and gave up three hits before giving way to relief pitcher David Patrick after three and one-third innings.

USFL trial scheduled to go to the jury now

NEW YORK (AP) - Like virtuoso actors ringing down the curtain on a long-running Broadway show, Frank Rothman and Harvey Myerson spewed epithets across a packed courtroom.

It's now the jury's turn to decide which performance it liked better.

The lawyers in the USFL's $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the NFL had their final say Wednesday - Myerson for the USFL and Rothman for the NFL.

Now, U.S. District Judge Peter K. Leisure will read his 152-page charge to the jury and the five-woman, one-man panel will begin considering, either today or Friday, the USFL's request for damages and to have the NFL thrown off at least one major network.

The closing arguments were just what might have been expected after 11 weeks of contradictory testimony.

Playing to a crowd that jammed the aisles and doorways of the courtroom, Myerson opened his presentation by pointing at NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and yelling, "Nail 'em! That's what this country is looking for you to do."

At the end of his three-hour presentation, during which he blamed an NFL conspiracy for the USFL's $150 million in losses over three years, Myerson sat down in his chair and said: "Without minimum damages, this league is dead. Please God, find for us. God bless you."

Earlier, Rothman had accused the USFL of being all style and no substance, spewing out allegations that it couldn't make stick and trying to force its way into the NFL through the lawsuit.

"Under the antitrust laws of the United States, you do not penalize people for their success if that success has been earned," Rothman said of his clients.

Throughout his summation, Myerson's tone was consistently emotional as he took the jurors through the testimony, constantly repeating "pressure, pressure, pressure, pressure" to emphasize his contention that the NFL pressured the networks to deny the USFL a TV contract for its spring season.

And the villain, Myerson claimed, was Rozelle, who, the lawyer added, "lied and lied and lied" on the witness stand.

Rothman spent his time denigrating USFL witnesses and even got in a shot at Myerson, opening his summation with an attack on what he considered his opponent's antics during the trial.

"Histrionics, facial expressions, looking at jurors with disdain or displeasure, trying to convey signals as to what we mean or how we interpet testimony, is wrong," Rothman said.

Indians climbing into race, Ranger's streak now seven

by The Associated Press

The Cleveland Indians, 16 games over .500 for the first time since 1974, are beginning to consider their chances in the American League East - a rarity at this point of the season for a team that last won a pennant in 1954.

"I looked at the paper this morning and then when I saw on the scoreboard that Boston had got ten beat, everybody was saying, hey let's go," said Ken Schrom, whose complete-game five-hitter in a 7-2 win over Chicago pulled the third-place Indians within five games of the struggling Red Sox.

"I really can't put my finger on it," Schrom, 9-12 last season with Minnesota, said when asked about his own eight-game winning streak. "I feel like I'm throwing the same as I did last year. I've got the same pitches and I got my breaking ball over just as much last year, but last year my fastball just got hit more."

Schrom, 11-2, hasn't lost a game since May 25, the longest streak by a Cleveland pitcher since Fritz Peterson won 10 in a row in 1975.

Elsewhere, it was New York 3, Texas 2 in 10 innings; Oakland 9, Boston 2; Toronto 6, Seattle 2; Kansas City 7, Baltimore 3; Detroit 12, Minnesota 2, and California 3, Milwaukee 2 in 10 innings.

Tigers 12, Twins 2

Detroit's Jack Morris saw his scoreless streak snapped at 32 innings and his shutout streak ended at three. But he was more upset because Manager Sparky Anderson removed him after eight innings when he was shooting for his seventh straight complete game.

"As much as I wanted to finish, he was looking out for me, said Morris, 11-6 after allowing four hits in eight innings. "Sometimes, I think he looks out for me more than I do for myself."

Johnny Grubb backed Morris with a grand slam, his third homer in two games.

Yankees 3, Rangers 2

New York's Ron Hassey did the unorthodox thing, sliding into first base, but it gave him a game-winning infield single on ballshit to Texas first baseman Pete O'Brien. Ranger pitcher Mitch Williams was slow getting over.

"I figured it was going to be close," Hassey said.

The Yankees won for the ninth time in 12 games to move within three games of Boston in the East.

The Rangers' Scott Fletcher extended his hitting streak to 19 games, the longest in the league.

A's 9, Red Sox 2

Oakland's Carney Lansford is living proof that winning is fun.

"This was a job a few weeks ago. Now it's starting to be fun," said Lansford, who hit two two-run homers for Oakland, which has won eight of its last nine games to climb from 16½ games behind in the West to 11½.

Foster seated for hot rookie; Astros still on winning track

by The Associated Press

When the New York Mets signed free agent George Foster in 1982, they hoped his home-run hitting could turn them into a contender.

Now, with the Mets enjoying a runaway year, it does not appear Foster will be a major figure in their plans for rest of their season.

Kevin Mitchell, a hot-hitting rookie making his first start in place of Foster in left field, lined a two-run homer Wednesday night that gave the Mets a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"George has not been swinging the bat well, so I'm going to put him (Mitchell) in George's spot," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "I'm going to play Mitchell more and see what he can do."

Foster, 36, is batting .236 with 13 home runs and 37 RBI. He has only two hits in his last 25 at-bats, and had been platooned with left-handed Danny Heep.

Mitchell, 24, raised his average to .331 with his seventh homer of the season. He has driven in 24 runs while playing seven positions this season, everything but pitcher and catcher.

In other National League games, St. Louis beat San Francisco 4-3, Philadelphia downed Atlanta 4-2, Los Angeles topped Pittsbugh 6-5 and San Diego beat Chicago 7-5.

Astros 4, Expos 3

Davey Lopes, playing his first game for Houston, lined a run-scoring single with two outs in the 11th inning and lifted the Astros over Montreal.

Houston won its sixth straight game while the visiting Expos lost their fourth in a row.

Cardinals 4, Giants 3

Danny Cox won his first game at Busch Stadium this season and Ozzie Smith's tie-breaking single keyed a three-run sixth inning as St. Louis completed a three-game sweep of San Francisco.

Cox, 4-8, had not won in 11 starts at home since Game 3 of last year's NL playoffs.

Mike LaCoss, 9-5, took the loss, his first in four decisions against the Cardinals this season.

St. Louis' Willie McGee pulled his right hamstring muscle while running out a fourth-inning triple. He left the game and it was not definite when he would be back in the lineup.

Phillies 4, Braves 2

Philadelphia's Juan Samuel and Von Hayes hit solo home runs and rookie Bruce Ruffin continued to beat Atlanta.

Philadelphia won its fourth straight game while the Braves have lost three in a row and 14 of their last 16.

Ruffin, 3-1, pitched a six-hitter in his sixth major-league starts. He has two complete games, both victories over Atlanta.

Dodgers 6, Pirates 5

Ken Landreaux broke out of an 0-for-14 slump with a two-run homer and Mike Scioscia also drove in two Los Angeles runs at Pittsburgh.

Rick Reuschel, 5-12, lost for the eighth time in his last nine decisions.

Padres 7, Cubs 5

Marvell Wynne's RBI double broke an eighth-inning tie in Chicago and helped San Diego break its five-game losing streak.

Vehicle fire limited to part

Units of the Snyder Fire Department were dispatched to a reported car fire at 1:56 p.m. Wednesday in the 1300 Block of 24th St.

Firemen discovered a smoking spark coil in a 1979 Honda car owned by Tariq Mahmood of 314 East Highway.

Damage to the vehicle was confined to the defective coil.

Tire slashing prompts arrest

Police say they cleared a weekend tire slashing incident Wednesday with the arrest of a 22-year-old suspect.

The man was jailed on a charge of Class B misdemeanor criminal mischief at 4:05 p.m. in connection with the cutting of two tires on a car owned by Diana Peralez of 2807 Ave. E on July 20.

Value of damage to the Peralez vehicle was estimated at $138.

City police also jailed a bond jumper from Colorado City Wednesday afternoon.

Responding to a tip from Mitchell County authorities, police went to the Kingswood Apartments on 37th St. shortly after 5:30 p.m. and arrested 41-year-old Gerald M. Miller of Odessa on a warrant for bond forfeiture.

Local officers logged two other misdemeanor arrests Wednesday night including one suspect charged with public intoxication and one charged with driving on a suspended license.

The suit claims that LeFeuvre wrote a $1,800 bad check from his trust account to be used to admit a client's brother to an alcohol rehabilitation center.

Waiting White's decision...

Minnesota man may be released

HOUSTON (AP) — A 26-year-old Minnesota man is awaiting a decision by Gov. Mark White that could release him from prison and clear him for a rape prosecutors now say he didn't commit.

The state Board of Pardons and Paroles voted unanimously Tuesday to recommend a full pardon for Steven Lynn Fossum of Mabel, Minn., who has been in prison since April 1984.

"We hope to have a decision in the next 24 hours or so. We're hoping he (White) will go ahead and act on the recommendation," Mike Roach, spokesman for the parole board, said Wednesday.

For the victim's mother, the board's decision is an answer to her prayers.

"I never thought that he was guilty at all," Delone Fossum said. "He is a well mannered young man, quiet and shy and would never do the things they say he did."

Ms. Fossum, who arrived in Houston Wednesday evening with her oldest son, Roger, said Steven Fossum had moved to Texas from Minnesota six years ago to get a job. He worked for a water well drilling company before he was convicted, she said.

The two are anxious to take Fossum home, she said. Neither, however, know when the younger Fossum will be released from the Texas Department of Corrections Coffield Unit in Tennesee Colony.

"If we get the call, there's a car load of us ready to go get him," she said. Ms. Fossum has not seen her son since July 1, 1985, and he does not know she is in Texas, she said.

The parole board's action Wednesday came after Minnesota television station WCCO of Minneapolis uncovered new evidence that raised questions about Fossum's conviction.

Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes last week wrote the parole board and recommended that Fossum be freed. The board's recommendation was sent to the governor's general counsel on Wednesday.

Teri Greenwood, who works in the counsel's office, said lawyers were studying the case and preparing a memo on it for White.

"There's no definite time frame for a decision by the governor," she said.

Ann Arnold, the governor's press secretary, said White had made no decision.

According to Holmes, part of the new evidence included a detailed analysis of semen samples that concluded Fossum couldn't have raped the victim.

Semen tests done at the time of the trial were "inconclusive," trial defense attorney Xavier Grenas said. Attorneys said testing at the time wasn't sophisticated enough to yield the results now found.

John Ackerman, Fossum's lawyer, said the new tests "provided sufficient information that there were two different people involved, contrary to her (the victim's) testimony. And secondly, neither could have been Fossum."

Ackerman blamed the state for not questioning the story of the 23-year-old complainant.

"They relied too heavily on the word of (the woman) without doing any checking on the things she told them," Ackerman said.

Ms. Fossum says he doesn't have much faith in the Texas justice system.

"I feel that they don't have much justice to do this," she said. "We feel like they called us liars and the lying part was on the other end."

Authorities said that if Fossum is released from prison, he would still be on probation for a 1982 rape, which he was convicted of in November 1983. But Ackerman said he believes tests also may prove Fossum innocent of that crime as well.

Ms. Fossum said she hopes to clear it with a probation officer to take her son home to Minnesota.

Group seeks media image

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An organization known as Civilian Materiel Assistance has been unfairly depicted as a pack of trigger-happy, would-be soldiers of fortune, a group spokesman says.

"That's what the media says we are," Jim Kent, a retired Marine first sergeant, said Wednesday. "That's not the way we are."

About 100 of the organization's estimated 3,000 members are expected in Memphis this weekend for the group's first national convention.

Among the topics on the program are briefings on anti-Communist campaigns in Angola and Africa, "Communist misinformation" and CMA refugee operations.

Kent, the group's chief public relations man, said the CMA will also announce plans to patrol the Mexican border to intercept drug shipments and illegal aliens.

The organization won't pay any attention to Texas state officials who say the CMA is not welcome, he said.

"We've had several people tell us to stay out of their state," Kent said. "Should we decide to continue, the desires of the governor and the attorney general of Texas won't make any difference.

"We have had a favorable response from the people," Kent said. "Politicians are one thing, the people are another."

The state and federal governments should welcome the CMA's assistance, he said.

"We've got a major problem," Kent said. "Most of the drugs come across the Mexican border.

Local drive sets reduced budget from $18,000 last year to $13,000 this year.

"Boy Scouts will still receive the second highest dollar figure we allocate," Brown noted, "and there has been a feeling with United Way members for some time that we need to bring the funding to Boys Scouts more in line with Girl Scouts."

The funding recommendation to the Abilene-based Girl Scout council also was cut some 11 percent, to $8,000 this year compared to $9,000 last year.

The drive's three agencies which receive the least funding — Red Cross, Salvation Army and the West Texas Rehabilitation Center — also received cuts.

These included $500 less to the Abilene-based rehab center; $700 less to Salvation Army; and $800 less to Red Cross.

For the second year, the board recommended funding to Noah Project of Snyder, the haven for abused women and their children.

In addition, the board indicated it will recommend agency-status to Noah to the full United Way board at a meeting next week.

The funding recommendation to Noah was $11,500 this year, an 8 percent reduction from last year's amount of $12,320.

During the 1985 campaign, United Way granted two special contributions to Noah and SCOOP. No request for United Way dollars was submitted by the SCOOP organization this year.

The board also set its own expenses for the 1986 campaign at $5,500, approximately the same amount required last year.

This indicates the cost of running the campaign will equal some 6 percent of the total raised.

All recommendations regarding the budget allocations and agency status for Noah must be approved by the full 25-member United Way board of directors.

Budget committee members included Brown, Eddie Johnson, Bob Hawes, Rodger Sullenger, Ralph Williamson, Jack Gorman Jr., Lee McNair and Don Farmer.

The following shows the recommended funding level for each entity for the 1986 United Way campaign. The figure shown in brackets is the amount funded last year.

—Boys Club, $29,000 $(30,000).

—Buffalo Trail Council of Scouts, $13,000 $(18,000).

—Noah Project, $11,500 $(12,320).

—Snyder Child Day Care Center, $10,000 $(11,000).

—West Texas Girl Scout Council, $8,000 $(9,000).

—Oil Patch Foster Parents, $4,000 $(4,280).

—Red Cross, $2,000 $(2,800).

—Salvation Army, $1,500 $(2,200).

—West Texas Rehab Center, $500 $(1,000).

—Local expenses, $5,500 $(5,550).

—Campaign goal, $85,000.

Protests wage against voting fraud

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — Widespread protests continued Wednesday against allegations of vote fraud as diverse sectors of society in the northern border state of Chihuahua united against the country's longtime ruling party.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, won the governor's race, all 14 state legislative elections and 65 of 67 mayoral races in the July 6 elections. The PRI never has lost a major election in its 57-year history.

Cries of vote rigging, however, have united diverse sectors of Chihuahua society, including the traditionally silent Roman Catholic Church and the business community.

"Fraud is never the way to a legitimate triumph," said Archbishop Adalberto Almeida of the Chihuahua archdiocese, who canceled Mass for last Sunday to protest the "magnitude of this social sin."

He called off the protest at the last minute on orders from Pope John Paul II.

Archdiocese Vicar General Raul Trevizo said Tuesday, however, the church "will continue to denounce human rights violations" in the elections.

The city Chamber of Commerce, the Chamber of Industry and the Business Council called two, half-day work stoppages to protest and on Monday urged people to withdraw all their cash from banks for two days.

Andres Jimenez Sierra, director of the Chihuahua Banking Institution, said he had seen no panic withdrawals at the banks which are controlled by the government.

In its resounding election triumph, the PRI regained seven key mayoralities lost three years ago to the conservative National Action Party, or PAN, including the one in this state capital of 600,000 people and the border city of Juarez with 750,000 residents.

Protesters contend government representatives running the elections stuffed ballot boxes, removed known PAN supporters from voting lists, refused to admit PAN pollwatchers into voting places and delayed the voting process for up to 10 hours in PAN strongholds.

Gov.-elect Fernando Baeza, who met with President Miguel de la Madrid in Mexico City on Tuesday, said all doubts about the fairness of the elections would be clarified by the state legislature.

PAN congressional representatives met with Interior Secretary Manual Bartlett on Tuesday to present their evidence of fraud — which they say includes documents and videocassette tapes. They were scheduled to meet again Thursday.

The PAN, meanwhile, had called for another highway blockade in the state capital for Thursday. A one-hour blockade just south of this city on July 17 created a traffic jam of about 2,000 vehicles.

In Ciudad Juarez, about 10,000 blocked two international bridges to El Paso, Texas, on July 15 before riot-equipped Mexican soldiers moved in to push them back two hours later.

The Democratic Electorial Movement, a coalition of opposition parties, peasant groups, church members and private citizens, also has threatened to stage blockades of railroads, highways and airports.

Meanwhile, Chihuahua's 66-year-old mayor, Luis Alvarez, continued his 22-day old hunger strike for what he calls "democracy in Mexico."

"There's no reason now for me to discontinue the fast," the outgoing PAN mayor said this week.

Hightower criticized by party challenger

AUSTIN (AP) — Bill Powers, Republican candidate for agriculture commissioner, says the Democratic incumbent is not helping other state officials in trying to wipe out the state's $3 billion deficit.

"Texans realize that when the going gets tough, a one-liner joke and down-home humor won't cut the mustard," Powers told a news conference Wednesday.

A spokesman for Hightower said the Department of Agriculture had already had to "bite the bullet," with an 11 percent budget cut for 1986-87.

In recent hearings before the House Appropriations Committee, the Legislative Budget Board staff reported that the Department of Agriculture had made no proposed reduction in its 1987 appropriation of $19 million in response to Gov. Mark White's request for a 13 percent voluntary cut.

The LBB staff identified $2.5 million, or 13 percent, that could be trimmed from TDA appropriations, including a big slash in money for fire ant control.

The House committee has taken no vote on the proposal.

"I think it is arrogant disrespect for him (Hightower) not to work with that committee and for him not to step forward and talk with that committee about where cuts should be made," said Powers, who is executive vice president of the Texas Poultry Federation.

In special session...

Registered lobbyists will serve

AUSTIN (AP) — The August special legislative session could include two lawmakers who now are registered lobbyists.

The session also will catch the House one member short, leaving Abilene unrepresented.

Because the special session was unforeseen earlier this year, Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, and Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, went about their plans to resign and become lobbyists. Howard thought he quit in April to go to work for a law firm that lobbies for several clients.

But, because of a constitutional provision, Howard will be in office when the special session convenes Aug. 6. A legislator remains in office until a replacement is sworn in.

Messer, a registered lobbyist for several major groups, plans to resign his House seat soon, but he has not announced a date. Messer also will be in office for the special session.

Abilene will be unrepresented when the special session convenes because Gary Thompson resigned. Unlike Howard, Thompson's resignation sticks. The Texas Constitution makes him ineligible for office because he went to work for a state agency, the Teacher Retirement System.

Aug. 9 special elections are set to replace Howard and Thompson. If either race goes to a runoff, it might not be decided until the session is over.

"If I had the gift of prophecy, I might have done it differently," Thompson said of his move that leaves Abilene temporarily unrepresented. "I just have to hope there is no runoff and the winner can assume the position within four or five days."

Howard works for a law firm that lobbies for amusement parks, telecommunications companies and local governments. He was unavailable for comment Wednesday at his Austin office. Last week, he told a reporter he would temporarily withdraw his lobby registration when the session begins.

Messer has resigned as chairman of the powerful House committee that sets the daily floor agenda but has not given up his seat. He has said since February that he would resign so that the special election to replace him could be held in conjunction with the November general election.

Messer is registered as a lobbyist for several major groups, including the Texas Chemical Council, Texas Association of Bank Holding Companies and the Texas Hospital Association.

He said he is uncertain what he will do about the special session, but will avoid voting on anything that presents a conflict of interests. He also said he might avoid voting at all.

"Howard and I will probably do the same thing. We will either come and tell everybody this is who we had registered (as lobbyists) for and we won't vote if there is a conflict. Or we could come in and say, 'Here we are, now excuse us,'" he said.

"I'm probably leaning toward just not voting," Messer added. "I wish this wasn't happening."

John Hildreth, Texas director of Common Cause, echoed Messer's sentiments.

"Sure there's a problem. You should not have registered lobbyists actually voting in the legislative process. But it's difficult to suggest that any pocket of the state should be without representation," he said.

Low profile held during wedding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan's trip to London for the wedding of Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson was planned as a low-profile affair compared to her visit five years ago to attend Charles' and Diana's nuptials.

Some critics complained the royal extravaganza in 1981 was nearly upstaged by all the attention paid to the American first lady's comings and goings in one new designer dress after another on her first official trip abroad without her husband.

The hoopla contributed to the "Queen Nancy" image Mrs. Reagan acquired that first year in Washington, and it took her a long time to live it down.

This time, Mrs. Reagan was on what was described by her office as a private visit, inasmuch as she was the guest of Queen Elizabeth II for a family celebration of the marriage of the queen's younger son, rather than a state ceremony for the crown prince, as the event was billed five years ago.

That doesn't mean however, that Mrs. Reagan traveled in and out of town unnoticed.

"Because she is a public figure, she doesn't travel strictly privately," explained Betsy Koons, a spokeswoman who was left behind.

Accompanying Mrs. Reagan aboard an Air Force Boeing 707 intercontinental jet were her chief of staff, her press secretary, a deputy press secretary, an administrative assistant, director of scheduling and events, an official photographer, a medic, Mrs. Reagan's hairdresser and a personal maid, plus an undisclosed number of Secret Service agents.

Ms. Koons said only Mrs. Reagan — and her obligatory bodyguards — would attend the wedding ceremony itself.

The only public event on the first lady's schedule was tea on Tuesday with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Mrs. Reagan arrived for the brief meeting at 10 Downing St. in a five-car motorcade.

The remainder of her schedule was private, including a dinner given by U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Charles Price, a banquet in honor of the royal couple and a private wedding luncheon at Buckingham Palace after the wedding.

Asked how much the trip would cost U.S. taxpayers, Ms. Koons said such details were handled by the State Department, where a spokesman, Pete Martinez, said, "I don't know." He said he would try to find out but warned getting even an estimate could take some time.

The government also paid for the Reagans' wedding gift to the royal couple, which was presented by the first lady on behalf of the people of the United States. But Chief of Protocol Selwa Roosevelt refused to disclose its pricetag, saying: "We don't discuss that — ever. It wouldn't be polite."

She added, however, that the government gets special good-customer prices from firms such as Tiffany and Steuben which supply many official gifts. Steuben made the engraved "Andrew" and "Sarah" crystal marriage goblets the Reagans gave the couple as a wedding present.

How to assist medical research

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My father is in a nursing home, since he's at the end of a 15-year battle with Alzheimer's disease. My mother and I would like some good to come out of this experience and, to that end, would like to know how we would go about having an autopsy done for research when he finally passes away.

DEAR READER — Your father must be under the care of a physician who either works in the nursing home or is called when needed. Ask the doctor to make suitable arrangements for an autopsy when the time comes. Second, make sure that the nursing-home administrator knows of your wishes. Third, make sure that all the next of kin — your mother, brothers and sisters — agree on a postmortem examination. If they don't, there could be legal problems at an awkward moment. Finally, you might want to check with the nearest university or teaching hospital in your state. Usually, a routine autopsy will not further an understanding of Alzheimer's disease, whereas a special study performed by neuropathologists could be very helpful.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a new resident in Florida and have been hearing about sun poisoning. Could you discuss this?

DEAR READER — Sun poisoning is nothing more than severe sunburn that causes destruction of the outer layers of skin. It can affect large areas of the body, causing extreme discomfort, fluid loss, headache and — if it is severe enough — shock and collapse. There is some evidence that ultraviolet damage in the form of sun poisoning can predispose a person to skin cancer. Until your skin becomes adapted to the Florida sun, wear protective clothing or a sunscreen with a rating of 12 to 15 when you are out of doors.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Please settle a disagreement in our household. When you get burned from grease, water or touching something hot, what should you do? Maybe if everyone reads it straight from the doctor, they'll clip the information and save it.

DEAR READER — As a general rule, small burn areas of the household type are best treated with cold compresses. Avoid ice, because it can cause further tissue damage. If the burn involves more than some blistering — for example, charring — or if the burned portions are large, I recommend immediate medical attention.

From the sound of your question, I assume that you are interested in knowing whether butter or oil will help a burn. They will not. Nonetheless, there are salves containing local anesthetics and or aloe gel that may soothe burns after the cold compresses have been applied for several minutes. Some people keep aloe vera plants in their kitchen for just this purpose.
