Texans still 'taking liberty' on Independence Day

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Today is Texas Independence Day — and most state employees took the day off — but any Texas-sized celebrations probably will be postponed until 1986.

That year, on March 2, Texas will celebrate its Sesquicentennial, or the 150th anniversary of its independence from Mexico.

A commission already is at work planning for the event, which is expected to include the opening of a multi-million dollar state museum in Austin and a book based on Texas by author James Michener.

This year is the 146th anniversary, and Gov. Bill Clements said Monday that Texans would do well "to think long on the solid ideals bequeathed us by our forefathers."

Texas' Declaration of Independence was signed March 2, 1836, on a cold and windy day at Washington-on-the-Brazos, and Clements said in a proclamation that the document is "tattered" but retains its "vitality."

"The deep significance of Texas Independence Day — its importance to our heritage and its signficance in the eternal struggle for freedom — is observed each March 2 as a day of great meaning to all Texans, and it will never be lost so long as Texans throughout the world celebrate the historic event."

A story that goes along with Independence Day is how University of Texas President G.T. Winston — who had just come to the state from North Carolina — refused to grant a school holiday in 1897 so students could celebrate.

Students responded by borrowing a cannon and setting off shots that shattered windows in the Main Building. The boys were ordered to remove the cannon but later more shots were heard, and Winston finally joined the group and made a speech which has become a tradition:

"I was born in the land of liberty, rocked in the cradle of liberty, nursed on the bottle of liberty, and I've had liberty preached to me all my life, but Texas University students take more liberty than anyone I've ever come in contact with."

This year UT students, faculty and alumni will salute Texas independence with midday ceremonies, a cake, barbecue and orange beer.

In keeping with another tradition, which the Legislature started in 1932, Clements also has designated the entire week of March 2 as Texas Week.

Reagan won't seek further gas decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, facing a number of uphill battles this year, has decided he does not want to overload his legislative agenda by adding natural gas decontrol to the list.

The White House said in a statement issued late Monday that Reagan had decided he would not ask Congress to accelerate the decontrol of natural gas at this time.

Consumer groups said the decision will spare consumers from seeing their bills double, costing a total of $40 billion annually. But they warned that the administration is trying to accomplish the same speed-up through the "back-door" by administrative actions.

"After extensive consultation with congressional leaders and groups representing producers and consumers, the president concluded that much-needed changes to the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 would overload the already heavy legislative agenda," Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said.

Speakes said Reagan still believed that natural gas decontrol "remains an essential component of a sound energy policy."

However, he gave no indication when the president might bring decontrol up again.

Energy Secretary James Edwards said he hoped the administration would introduce a "comprehensive legislative package" early next year.

The American Petroleum Institute, the oil industry's main lobbying arm, had been one of the groups pushing the administration to honor Reagan's campaign pledge to seek faster decontrol.

In a statement, the API said it regretted Reagan's decision but understood the reasons behind it. The API said it hoped "the government will get on with decontrol as soon as feasible."

Under the 1978 law, prices of all gas discovered since April 1977 are rising until all controls on this portion of supplies — about 60 percent — are removed on Jan. 1, 1985. Reagan would like to make those price hikes steeper and include the 40 percent of "old gas" supplies scheduled now to remain under controls forever.

These price hikes would spur domestic production and the increased gas supplies would cut down on oil imports, the administration argues. A bill to accomplish this was unanimously approved by Reagan's Cabinet Council on Natural Resources last July.

However, the proposal became entangled in a dispute over whether decontrol should be accompanied by a "windfall" tax to capture between $10 billion and $20 billion of the price increase for the U.S. Treasury.

Reagan said he opposed such a tax, but congressional leaders said the measure had no chance of passage without it.

Last week, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois met with Reagan to urge him not to submit decontrol legislation this session. Afterwards, officials said they believed Reagan would go along with the request.

Willaim Winpisinger, president of the International Association of Machinists and the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, said Reagan had finally "recognized the enormous political costs of open support for gas decontrol."

But Winpisinger warned that the administration would now try to get "back-door" decontrol through the Reagan-appointed majority on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which enforces the 1978 decontrol law.

GOP eyes the 'ayes' of Texas

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — If city representatives and Republican National Committee members can hammer out financial terms, President Reagan will get his way and Dallas will be targeted for the 1984 GOP nominating convention, officials said.

"The president wants us to have it here and if we can work out all the financial aspects, it looks like Texas will be the place," committee chairman Richard Richards Monday.

President Reagan has written Texas Gov. Bill Clements that he would like the convention held in the nation's seventh-largest city, and Richards traveled to Dallas on Feb. 10 to take a preliminary look.

He returned Monday with eight members of the national committee's site selection committee to tour the city, examining both Reunion Arena and the Dallas Convention Center.

He said site selection committee members would return April 13 to inspect hotel facilities. A formal vote still must be held by the full committee July 19.

"Dallas is the only city that we've looked at, to be honest with other cities, that had an interest in us," Richards said.

He said officials from another city had contacted GOP authorities and asked that their city be kept in the running. He declined to name the city.

Earlier cities mentioned as possible sites were St. Louis, Atlanta, Detroit and Kansas City, Mo.

"We'll begin our negotiations with your city concerning financial matters and hope it all works out," Richards said at a news conference here. "I don't know of a place that has greater potential than you have here."

Richards said he planned today to telephone White House Chief of Staff James Baker, a Texas native, to report the committee's findings.

Richards confirmed that the national committee expected Dallas to foot the bill for convention security, but he said Dallas commerce would benefit in return, estimating that the conventioners collectively would spend $25 million to $40 million a day.

Dallas Mayor Jack Evans said the city should be able to provide enough security for those attending the 1984 convention.

Registration deadline near for April 3 voting

By ED TODD

Janeice Builta is concerned that some Midland voters may become flustered April 3 when, as they line up to vote, they discover that they are without valid voter-registration certificates.

Mrs. Builta, the Midland County deputy voter registrar, said Monday that the 5,000-plus registered voters who haven't yet received their 1982-84 salmon-colored voter-registration certificates due to changes in address have until Thursday to get their addresses corrected and cards validated.

"They've got to give us changes of address," said Mrs. Builta, whose office is in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse. "We're desperate over here." She is eager to get to the voters their validated certificates prior to the April 3 city-school elections and before their names are purged from the registration rolls.

In her office are 5,452 unclaimed voter-registration certificates, which were returned last month after the U.S. Postal Service could not deliver the cards due to changes of address. By law, postmen are prohibited from forwarding the cards even if they have forwarding addresses.

Currently, about 37,000 Midlanders, not counting the 5,000-plus voters represented in the returned cards, are registered to vote.

In order to vote, a citizen must be registered to vote at least 30 days prior to a given election. But once registered, a voter will stay registered unless, for example, he changes his residence and fails to notify voter-registration officials. At that juncture, his name may be stricken from the rolls, and the formerly eligible voter will have to re-register to vote.

"They (certificates) keep coming to you ever two years whether you vote or not," Mrs. Builta said.

The "old" certificates, which were valid from March 1, 1980, to Feb. 28,

CRMWD builds 'stasticial case' for cloud seeding effectiveness

BIG SPRING — The Colorado River Municipal Water District's weather modification efforts via cloud seeding continue to build a case for "agricultural enhancement" — more rainfall.

However, the extent to which cloud-seeding results in increased runoff is not so clearly defined, according to Ray Pat Jones, the CRMWD meteorologist. Indications are that cloud seeding may be linked more to intensity and length of a particular storm system, he reported.

The "statistical case" for cloud seeding's effectiveness on increased cotton yields is strengthened on the 1981 precipitation enhancement report by Jones, who related the program to cotton yield in 12 counties, which includes the four-county (Borden, Scurry, Howard, Mitchell) target area and contiguous counties. Crop yield over a 10-year (1971-80) period indicates an increase over base of 52 percent. This exceeds by 46 percent the increases in the four-county (Lynn, Dawson, Martin, Glasscock) upwind area, which is least likely to be affected by the cloud-seeding operations. However, in the downwind counties (Garza, Kent, Fisher, Nolan), which are in the direction of the cloud or storm drift, the percentage of increase was 47 percent or only 5 percent less than the target area.

FROM TABLES which compare cotton yields per acre from the 1941-80 period with that of the 1971-80 time frame, Jones concluded that in 1971-80, "distinct changes in crop responses are evident. During this period a complete reversal becomes evident.

"In seven of the last 10 years, cotton production for the cloud-seeded counties has surpassed cotton production for both upwind and downwind counties," Jones observed. "Historically, this had never occurred before. In the years following 1941, there were only three occasions (1941, 1950, 1970) when cotton production in the target-area counties exceeded that produced by the other areas."

In some years in the past decade, the target-area counties sometimes exceeded other areas by as much as 70 pounds of cotton per acre. Moreover, the pattern of yields appeared to be

James Watt to attend city GOP dinner

Secretary of the Interior James Watt will be in Midland March 11 for a fund-raising dinner, according to the Republican Party of Texas.

The dinner starts at 7:30 p.m. and will be held in The Midland Hilton. Tickets, at $100 per person, may be purchased from the Republican Party of Texas, Oil Congress Ave., Suite 520, Austin, Texas 78701.

Midland County Republican Chairman Bill Shaner said this morning he was unaware of the plans, but added that Watt should be well-received because "he's conservative and the people here are conservative."

Police end investigation, label Williams 'mass murderer'

ATLANTA (AP) — Police have ended the investigation of what the world came to know as the Atlanta child killings by branding Wayne B. Williams a mass murderer, blaming him for 21 slayings beyond the two a jury convicted him of.

The announcement that police would "close the books" on the other cases came after law enforcement officials met for 80-minutes Monday, two days after Williams was convicted of murdering Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, and Nathaniel Cater, 27.

Payne and Cater were the 26th and 28th victims on a list of 28 young blacks — most of them children and teenagers — whose deaths over a 22-month period beginning in 1979 were investigated by a special police task force.

"I think we share the relief everybody feels in this community to put this behind us," said Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown. He said the task force, formed in July 1980, will be disbanded March 8, adding that it had become "symbolic" and had "served its purpose."

When asked if he believed the black freelance photographer and self-styled talent promoter had committed 23 murders, spanning the entire period, Brown replied, "Yes."

Brown met with top law enforcement officers from federal, state, city and county agencies and Fulton County prosecutors at the storefront headquarters of the task force.

Israeli consul hopes for common market

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Tensions in the Middle East won't relax during 1982, predicted the Israeli consul based in Houston during a news conference Monday morning at Midland Regional Airport.

"There is no chance of complete Middle East stability," although that is the Utopia of which Israel dreams, said David M. Zohar of the Consulate General of Israel.

"We would like to see a common market of the Middle East where know-how will be united for the common prosperity of all. Can you imagine what a paradise we can turn the Middle East into?" he asked. "We have the know-how to make the desert bloom and the Arabs have the cash to do it."

But there must be peace to accomplish that, he said. Israel and Egypt are taking the first step by carrying through on the Camp David Peace Accord.

"The Israeli foreign policy is to stabilize the Middle East and begin the peace process that was started at Camp David. It's been very successful so far. We had no illusions it would be an easy way. Looking back on what's been accomplished, we're doing reasonably well."

ISRAELIS WORK on the philosophy that you take one step at a time in solving problems, according to Zohar who was born in Britain in 1939 and immigrated to Israel in 1948.

"The problem of diplomats has been that they try to solve everything at once."

Despite these efforts to achieve peace, Zohar noted that Israel is ready to fight back at any time and he named specifically antagonisms coming through PLO military buildups in southern Lebanon, or right on Israel's doorstep.

"They've now installed missiles which can blanket northern Israel," said Zohar.

And he pointed out that the increasing supply of missiles, cannons, artillery rockets and SAM missiles had been confirmed by Secretary of State Alexander Haig in a Feb. 5 story. "It's an aggravation of the efforts we have been engaged in to prevent the outbreak of conflict," Haig reportedly commented.

> "We would like to see a common market of the Middle East where know-how will be united for the common prosperity of all. We have the know-how to make the desert bloom and the Arabs have the cash to do it."

The PLO, contended Zohar, "is being built up by the Soviet Union and is being trained by the KGB." And a primary source of money for arms is pouring out of Saudi Arabia, he said.

To date, while the PLO has been staring at Israel's northern border, Zohar said Israelis have restrained themselves to a point. "But you can be pushed to the limit. Eventually, you have to be first on the draw if the bad guy comes. We're facing a 'high noon' situation with the PLO."

ZOHAR SAID the Israeli government understands the U.S. now is trying to balance its allegiances. "But our perception is that the balance is leaning too far away from Israel. Squabbles between leaders of the two countries he termed a family affair. "There are different perceptions, too, because we're on different sides of the globe."

To shore up the bond between the U.S. and Israel, Zohar noted Israel is trying to promote trade, tourism and pilgrimages.

The trade aspect is growing with Israel selling fertilizer to the U.S. and America selling grain and beef.

And now Israel is looking for Texans willing to gamble on that country by trying their hand at wildcatting over there. Zohar noted that under the Camp David Accord, Israel had to give up its oil-producing land to Egypt. Those wells, he said, provided all of Israel's oil needs with some left over for exporting.

Noting that Israel is sandwiched between two oil-producing countries — Libya and Saudi Arabia — Zohar said Israelis are hoping oil will be found in their ground.

"What we need are the skills," he said. "Several Texans already are wildcatting in Israel and the signs are good."

LOOKING AT THE arid Midland landscape, Zohar said it is much like southern Israel. "Texans would feel very much at home under the big skies of Israel," he commented, adding that the tiny country is about 1/26th the size of Texas.

As an aside, he said the U.S. is importing another item which has become a big hit in Israel, and that is the television show, "Dallas." The latest trend in trend in Israel sees people buying up cowboy hats and boots.

Turning back to the situation of peace, he contended that other Arab countries don't want to make peace. Those that seem magnetized by the Soviet Union are Syria, Iraq, Libya, Ethiopa, South Yemen and Afghanistan. North Yemen, Kuwait and Jordan are getting heavier pressure from the Russians. And Iran and Lebanon are embroiled in civil wars, which could result in their turning to the Soviets, according to Zohar.

Saudi Arabia, he said, is described as neutral between the East and West. However, he warned the U.S. should be wary of depending upon the Saudis for help. "You're building on shifting sands; I suggest you build on the solid Rock of Jerusalem."

Few Arab countries support the Camp David treaty, and that number includes Morocco. "It is unique in the Arab world in that they are decent to the Jewish minority there."

But he doesn't foresee peace happening in other Arab countries, who have been fighting each other for more than 1,000 years, he said. "More Arabs have been killed by other Arabs than were ever killed in wars against Israel."

Israel's success in any war with another country is essential, according to Zohar, who noted that "Israel has to lose only one war to be completely destroyed, and the Arab hotheads know that."

In pushing Israel's peace philosophy, he said, "The virtue of peace is peace itself. We want to look forward to a happy life with our grandchildren."

Local Braniff workers await pay cut

When Braniff International's airline employees went to work this morning at Midland Regional Airport they heard through news reports that they may not receive a full paycheck Thursday.

"My employees keep asking me if they are going to get paid this week," said William M. Thurmon, director of customer service of Braniff.

According to The Associated Press, Braniff employees will be paid half of their normal salary this week because of a shortage of funds, and they will receive the balance next week.

"There has not been an official company statement," Thurmon said late this morning. "I'm not denying it isn't true. I just haven't heard anything yet."

AP also stated that Sam Coats, vice president of Braniff, said the unions were notified in advance of the pay cut, adding that the decision did not require union approval.

"The unions could have leaked the information, but I still don't know what to say," Thurmon said. "Payday is not until Thursday."

Strong winds give taste of spring

Although Monday was a beautiful spring day, the charade was over today as area residents received a taste of a typical Midland March.

Today's gusty winds which blew from the south and southwest at 20-30 mph and gusty, will decrease slightly tonight to 20-25 mph. Winds will turn westerly at 20-30 mph once again Wednesday.

It will be partly cloudy tonight and warm again on Wednesday. The low tonight will be in the middle 40s, with the high on Wednesday expected to reach near 80.

Monday's high temperature of 73 was 12 degrees cooler than the record high of 85, set in 1976. The overnight low of 48 was 39 degrees warmer than the record low of 9, set for that date in 1980.

Thief takes new Lincoln worth $15,000

In burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, Angela Lambert of 1905 North D St. said her home was entered through a rear window and assorted jewelry worth $7,050 was missing. Also taken was a 1982 Lincoln valued at $15,000.

Construction equipment worth $1,910 was stolen from a construction site at 4601 Sinclair Ave., it was reported Monday.

Registration deadline approaching for upcoming city-school election

1982, were on printed on white paper stock. The postal-card-size certificates, which are issued every two years, automatically are mailed out to the voters' addresses as reflected on the records.

Instructions on back of the card, noted Mrs. Builta, tell the citizen what to do in case of a move: "If you move within the county, or if you change your name, or if any of the information on this card is incorrect, correct the information, sign below and return this card to the voter register."

"If they would just read the instructions on the back of the voter-registration card" and follow them, Mrs. Builta said, the voters would avoid the rush to get their cards validated in time for the April 3 election, which is the first of three elections this year. The Democratic Party and Republican Party primary elections are May 1, and the general election is Nov. 2.

At this date, Mrs. Builta noted, it is too late for voters holding expired cards to mail the old ones in, get new ones processed, and to get the new cards in time for the April 3 election.

"It's too late now," she noted. "They're going to have to come in" to her office by Thursday to re-apply to vote.

Otherwise, they will be asked to re-apply for new certificates at the polls when they show up to vote and may crimp the voting process.

Citizens who recently have moved to Midland and others not registered to vote in the county may drop by Mrs. Builta's office on the east end of the downtown courthouse before 5 p.m. Thursday and register to vote.

Preacher says liberals, critics have no heart

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. B. Samuel Hart says liberal journalists and critics who disregard "the voice of the church" hounded him out of contention for a seat on the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

The Philadelphia radio preacher told the Washington Baptist Ministers Conference on Monday that his stands against homosexuality and abortion — not his views on true civil rights issues — drew fire after President Reagan announced plans to nominate him to the rights panel.

Reagan agreed to withdraw the nomination last week after Hart requested that his name be dropped from contention.

"I'm over 50. We were brought up in the days when we sat in the back of the bus and trains and were kicked out of restaurants," the black evangelist told a group of about 150 fellow ministers.

"I know what a violation of civil rights is. The press has given them (Hart's critics) their ideas. They really don't know what I think," Hart said.

Hart said the news media and political leaders are ignoring and criticizing the words of religious men because moral views based on the Bible are unpopular.

"Today, the voice of the church is disregarded. It is being silenced," he said during a 15-minute speech at the Trinidad Baptist Church which was punctuated by shouts of "Amen" and "Praise the Lord."

"If you come before people with your simple, rational statements, that you know are Christian, immediately, you are faced with opposition and the liberal press," Hart said.

Hart said liberal critics unfairly attacked his positions on moral issues, positions he said wouldn't necessarily interfere with human rights policies that are set by the commission.

"If you happen to take a stand for a strong, traditional family, a biblical family where a man is the father of the house and a woman is the mother and the children are brought up in subjugation to the parents, then you've got them all against you," Hart maintained.

"The attacks coming out of the woodwork are against the family. I trust that we, as men of goodwill, recognize that we didn't invent the family, God did," he added.

"The media failed to report that the taxes are for the current year and aren't due until March 15," Hart said. "They also didn't tell you that I sat down with federal loan officials and worked the problem out and the SBA loan is now current," he said.

CRMWD builds case for cloud seeding effectiveness

In the drought years, the picture follows somewhat the same trend, but the differences are not as marked. This seems logical, speculated Jones, because seeding effectiveness depends first of all upon presence of clouds to seed. Nevertheless, in 1980, which was one of the most "punishing" summer droughts on record, the target counties produced more cotton in pounds per acre than did the upwind counties.

RAINFALL IMPACT is evidenced by this calculation: Increasing rainfall over the four-county target area by one inch represents an additional 192,000 acre feet of water, while a two-inch increase represents 384,000 acre feet. Lake J.B. Thomas's capacity is 204,000 acre feet, and Lake E.V. Spence's holding capacity is 488,000 acre feet.

The 1981 season was only "fair" so far as seedable opportunities are concerned, reported Jones, who works with Donald Couvillion, who coordinates the seeding program with the Texas Department of Water Resources. Due to high pressure aloft in June and July, the seeding missions were held to 22 for the year. The average, since CRMWD began its seeding operation in 1971, is 35 per year. Last year, more moisture fell in April and August than it did in May and September, and that is a departure from the norm.

On April 13, reported Jones, a strong line of thunderstorms was seeded from near Lamesa to Gail in Dawson County, and Lake Thomas subsequently received 15,000 acre feet of water, that was the lake's biggest gain for the year.

For the seeding season, the heaviest cumulative rainfall was 18 inches in north central Mitchell County, which is almost in the center of the target area. Sixteen inches were received over most of the south central part of Mitchell County and along the common border of Scurry, Kent and Fisher counties.

THE TIME of duration for storms approximated five hours for the season, but a few, which were regarded as statistical accidents, collapsed after three-quarters of an hour. One storm persisted for a "remarkable" 42 hours, Jones said.

The convective clouds, which result from heat pushing air and moisture into cold altitudes, are most likely to occur in July and early August and are seeded just as the storm begins to form. Longer-lasting and faster moving systems, however, can be seeded effectively as they grow. Lingering slow-rain systems do not lend themselves to seeding.

The water district has two cloud-seeding aircraft, which distribute silver iodide crystals into the rain clouds. Results of operations are checked by a system of 106 recording and 81 fence-post rain gauges in the target area. Wesley Cox monitors the gauges on the day or or the day following a rain.

CRMWD provides potable water for several West Texas cities, including Midland, Odessa, Stanton and Big Spring, and for industries, including the petroleum industry.

Lions' Pancake Jamboree to be held Saturday

All members of the Downtown Lions Club, more than 300 strong, will be engaged in staging the club's 26th annual Pancake Jamboree, which will be held Saturday, March 13, in the Dellwood Mall Shopping Center.

President Jerry Speck said the members have been assigned to eight general committees charged with planning and conducting the big community-wide event.

Jack Darden is the Jamboree's general chairman, aided by Jim Chapman as assistant general chairman.

The committees and their chairmen are: Entertainment, Duke Jimerson; Acquisition, Brad Blackburn, Lloyd Jobe and Glen Redmond; Cooking, Roy Darden; Equipment, Kenzel May; Service, Victor Horn; Tickets, George Loudamy; Publicity, Russell Robken and Tom Sawyer; Afterglow, Eloy Villafranca.

Serving hours will be from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. on the day of the big event.

Tables and other equipment will be set up the evening before the Jamboree, and the first pancakes will come off the grill at 7 a.m. the following day. From then on it will be an almost continuous flow of pancakes and sausage to the serving counters, until 8 p.m.

Special entertainment of a varied nature will be presented continuously from 8 a.m. to closing time, amid the atmosphere of a county fair.

Darden said that all residents of Midland and vicinity are invited and urged to join in the festivities, while getting their fill of delicious pancakes and all the trimmings.

All proceeds from the event will go toward financing the club's numerous activities and projects during the coming year.

Passenger, captain wrestle would-be hijacker

AP Laserphoto

Pasengers aboard United Airlines Flight 674 from Chicago to Miami subdued a Latin male who was attempting to hijack the jetliner to Cuba. The would-be hijacker was taken into custody by Miami police.

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Passengers on a jet that had landed in Miami said they were putting on a charade to convince a would-be hijacker the plane was in Cuba when a burly auto racer awoke from a nap, sized up the scene and bowled the man over.

The burly passenger and the captain of United Airlines Flight 674 wrestled the man to the floor of the Boeing 727 jetliner at Miami International Airport and the passenger, John Celestin of Chicago, held him in a headlock until he "turned blue."

Guillermo Lazaro Major-Diaz, a 23-year-old Cuban native, was arrested by FBI agents and charged with air piracy and using a weapon in the commission of a felony, authorities said.

"I didn't have time to be scared," said Celestin, who was credited with ending the hijacking attempt. "But now I'm shaking."

MAJOR-DIAZ was allegedly carrying a bottle of clear liquid that he threatened to ignite with a pocket lighter unless the Chicago-to-Miami flight, carrying 92 passengers and nine crew members, was diverted to Havana, authorities said.

He shouted "Cuba! Cuba!" and told passengers he wanted to visit his family after the death of his mother on Sunday.

Passengers said the captain deliberately flew the plane south of Miami to the Florida Keys in an effort to make the hijacker believe the plane was headed for Havana. Instead, the plane actually circled back to Miami.

The jet landed at Miami International Airport at 8:50 p.m., about 45 minutes after the would-be hijacker announced he wanted to go to Cuba, said United spokesman Mike Beirne.

THE PLANE'S emergency escape chutes were extended and about 20 passengers escaped, Beirne said. Then the captain headed back to talk to the hijacker.

Celestin, a bearded six-footer who was dressed in a three-piece suit, said he was awakened by other passengers clapping their hands and chanting, "Cuba, Cuba." The passengers were trying to convince the hijacker the plane had landed in Havana, Celestin said.

The would-be hijacker was holding a flight attendant at his side and carrying a bottle filled with fluid, Celestin said.

Passenger Joyce Wilson of Miami said she believed the hoax was a success and that Major-Diaz believed he was in Havana.

BUT WITNESSES said Major-Diaz, possibly having seen the emergency chutes, tried to light a napkin stuck in the bottle.

"I saw he didn't have a gun, so I rushed him," Celestin said. "He just crumbled when I hit him."

Celestin said he held the man until he "turned blue."

"I was trying to break his neck," he said.

Beirne said the unidentified captain acted properly. "He's in charge of that flight and takes responsibility for what happens. He just decided this was the thing to do," Beirne said.

"WE ALL YELLED 'Cuba' to make him think he was in Cuba," said passenger Nita Johansson of Denmark. She said passengers clapped their hands as they went along with the hoax.

China prepares for worsening relations

PEKING (AP) — China warned the United States today it is "preparing for the worst" in Sino-U.S. relations if the Reagan administration insists on long-term arms sales to Taiwan.

It was a strong hint that the Chinese government might reduce the level of diplomatic relations between the two countries, as it did last year with the Netherlands because the Dutch government agreed to the sale of two submarines to the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan.

"The matter has developed to such a point that China is forced into a corner without any options," said a commentary by the official news agency Xinhua, which reflects government policy.

"If the United States insists on a long-term policy of selling arms to Taiwan, Sino-U.S. relations will retrogress. That isn't something too awful to conceive. Though a poor nation, China is in a better position than anyone else to survive any difficuty."

The commentary said China hopes for good relations with the United States but is "striving for the best and preparing for the worst."

Peking, it said, "has been very patient and realistic in its negotiations with Washington and has put forth many reasonable and just proposals."

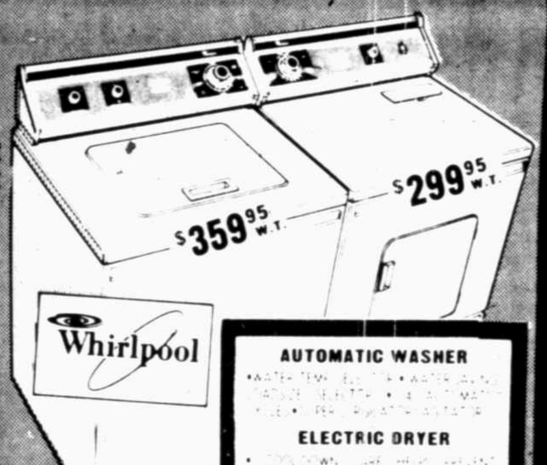

Some Americans believe China is so dependent on the United States that it "will swallow any bitter pill insisted upon by the U.S.," the commentary continued, but it warned: "This reasoning is false and dangerous."

A place to sleep

Midland's housing shortage is so severe and affects such a wide spectrum of the city's population that it would be difficult to determine which facet to address first. Different aspects of the housing situation are being addressed in various ways.

In last Sunday's Reporter-Telegram, readers were informed about a relatively recent program launched to assist one segment of the city's transient population under auspices of the Salvation Army in Midland. The program, through which transients with no place to sleep can obtain a hot meal and a place to spend the night is well accepted and growing in size because of the number of individuals and families moving to Midland in search of jobs and a better way of life.

From a humanitarian standpoint, the program is a highly commendable one. It provides a vital service in an area of temporary emergency housing for those who otherwise would be left to seek shelter where they might find it — or remain at the mercy of the elements. Some of those who take advantage of the generosity extended through the Salvation Army will become permanent residents of Midland. Others may choose to move on and seek their fortunes elsewhere, hopefully remembering the courtesy offered them by caring people in the Tall City.

But this one aspect of the housing problem in Midland — in fact, this one aspect of the temporary emergency housing need — is precisely that: Just the tip of a very big icebery as far as housing and Midland are concerned. The needs go much deeper. There is the housing shortage new employees must cope with, the restrictions the housing dilemma places on local companies hoping to expand their work forces and, of course, the skyrocketing price of all kinds of Midland housing.

In a nutshell, housing is Midland's biggest headache, just as it has been for the past couple of years and will continue to be for the foreseeable future. The TEAM (Transient Emergency Assistance of Midland) program being operated by Salvation Army can't even hope to meet all the needs of Midland's total transient population. The incoming population is simply too overwhelming. Other programs will be needed to address the transient housing needs of this rapidly growing city.

But TEAM offers relief for some of the city's transient population — probably the most needy segment. For that, we can all be grateful.

An unworthy treaty

It's been a long time coming, but it looks like the United States finally is coming to its senses on the proposed international Law of the Sea. The U.S. now ought to do what should have been done the first time around: Deep-six this ill-advised plan.

As it is, the proposed seabed treaty has been sailing along for a decade or more, looking for a port in which to land. Prior to the Reagan administration, it appeared as though the treaty might find a comfortable berth in the U.S.

All that may have changed with the administration's pronouncement that the proposed international sea law must give private corporations more freedom to mine the sea floor and give the United States more say over how it is done. Up to now, treaty drafts have given the U.S. short shrift.

The Reagan administration's position departs sharply from those of previous administrations, which appeared willing to surrender American interests.

With its new and firmer stand, the United States now seems to be rejecting even the basic theory that an organization composed of most of the world's nations should administer undersea mining of mineral deposits in international waters, with all the countries having an equal vote.

"A system designed to regulate about two-thirds of the world's surface should take account of the fact that one of the players does consume about 25 percent of the earth's resources," said Leigh S. Ratiner, counsel for the U.S. delegation to the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea.

It also should take into account that most of the expertise involved in undersea mining would be American. It makes no sense for the United States to be left holding an empty bag while other countries fill theirs at America's expense. The Law of the Sea, a bad idea to begin with, has not improved with age. It should be dumped overboard.

CHARLEY REESE

Ignoramuses blundering to disaster

President Reagan ought to fire Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and clean out the ignoramuses in the Pentagon and State Department before they blunder us into disaster.

Charley Reese

I don't know what's going on inside Weinberger's head. Maybe he just can't let go of his association with the Bechtel Corp. which has made a fortune off the Arabs. But he is hell bent to form an alliance with the Arabs. That is like taking a swim in quicksand.

The more you learn about what's going on in this world and what's gone on before, the more you get sick of well-educated ignoramuses who get better people killed because they don't know what they sit on from a well.

Let me pose a series of questions. If the Arabs cannot trust each other, what makes the Pentagon and State Department believe that we can trust them? If no two Arab countries can form an alliance that lasts more than a year, what makes these hotshots think we can form an alliance with them? What makes them think they can overcome 1,000 years of Arab hostility toward the West and Christendom?

In World War I, the Arabs fought with the Turks, who were oppressing them against the West. Only a few, bribed by British gold and led by British officers, made a few bandit raids British propaganda called a revolt.

In World War II, not an Arab lost his life in defense of the West and freedom. Their sympathy was entirely with the Nazis. Do those morons in the Pentagon and State Department think that a single Arab is going to die to protect the West's imperialistic interests in Arab oil?

No, they don't think so. The name of the game is to bribe the sheiks not to throw the American oil companies out on their cans. Pure greed. Has nothing to do with foreign policy or America's strategic interests. Plain, pure greed of a private few at the expense of the many.

We are not dependent on the Persian Gulf. Japan and Western Europe are, but you don't see them calling it a strategic area, do you? No, because the Persian Gulf is indefensible. Two frogmen with limpet mines could seal that sucker tighter than a drum. Drop the bottom out of a tanker in the Straits of Hormuz and the Persian Gulf is sealed. Blow two ports — just two — and the Saudi oil goes up in smoke.

I've got news for President Reagan. My sons are not going to die to defend the oil concessions of the Rockefellers. Aramco gouged the Navy in World War II. The multi-national oil companies are about as patriotic as a cotton mouth moccasin is friendly.

If Reagan doesn't wake up, let me tell you what's going to happen. The Pentagon is going to load the Arabs down with advanced arms and entirely upset the balance. The State Department is going to club the Israelis over the head in an effort to make them grant concessions to the Arabs.

The Arabs, being Arabs, will misread the whole business and attack Israel, hoping after five failures in 32 years to drive the Israelis into the sea and to murder every Jew between the Jordan River and the Mediterranean.

The Israelis, when they are backed up to the sea, will nuke them and about 36 million Jews, and a number of oil fields will be converted into smoking, radioactive ashes. The world economy will collapse into rubble.

That's the tragedy in store for the Middle East unless Reagan has sense enough to get rid of the idiots and lackeys of oil companies and international banks which infect his administration. Just once in my lifetime, I'd like to see a president who represents the American peoplé instead of the multinational interests.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

SFRC action helps show how Congress works

WASHINGTON — Most of the important work of Congress is done in its committees. Members devote more time and effort to committee work than anything else — with the possible exception of the eternal quest for re-election.

Jack Anderson

And committees can be as helpful to a member politically as they are important to the nation. A timely hearing on the right subject can bring the kind of media exposure no amount of money could buy.

The public has only a dim perception of the way a congressional committee operates. Most mysterious of all, probably, is the backstage managing that goes into the production of House or Senate hearings, which often seem to spring full-blown onto the front pages and evening news shows.

Now I can lift the veil of secrecy that covers the careful planning of these attention-grabbing events. The hard-working staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee got together recently to consider a 25-page briefing paper that laid out a proposed agenda for this year's committee hearings. This revealing document was meant to be kept strictly internal, but my associate Dale Van Atta has seen a copy of it.

The purpose of the briefing paper was to identify the issues likely to merit the committee's attention and assess the potential in each. Along with a brief description of the issue, the staff noted the "administration plans" on the subject, than the "SFRC (Senate Foreign Relations Committee) goals," and, finally, what the document calls "CHP action" that is indicated.

The last entry refers to Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., the well-intentioned but irresolute committee chairman. For while congressional committee chairmen don't have all the dictatorial power they once enjoyed, they still exercise final authority over their committees' agenda. An issue isn't an issue if the chairman doesn't recognize it; conversely, a non-issue can achieve instant importance to a committee if the chairman thinks it's hot stuff.

Here are some of the possibilities the Foreign Relations Committee staff will offer to Percy for his selection:

— U.S.-Soviet relations, particularly the Polish crisis. No surprise here, but there's an interesting note under the "CHP action" column: Percy must "balance Illinois-SFRC roles." This acknowledges an important fact of political life: The chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee happens to number among his constituents the largest concentration of Poles outside the old country. Percy's "Illinois role" is, at the very least, to avoid offending Polish-American voters in Chicago.

— Human rights in Latin America. The fix is in, apparently. The committee staff accepts as a foregone conclusion that the White House will "make certifications required by 1981 bill" requiring the president to attest to progress in human rights by governments seeking U.S. aid — specifically El Salvador, Argentina and Chile. The recommended "CHP action" is to "support administration unless unforeseen evidence arises" at the hearings the staff proposes. In other words, barring some shocking massacre or dramatic testimony of torture and repression, the committee should rubberstamp the president's certifications.

— "Yellow rain." The use of Soviet chemical-biological weapons in Asia is an important issue that has been given serious attention by the White House. The staff recommends subcommittee hearings.

— Latin America. The staff urges Percy to chair more hearings himself on Latin America than in any other area — apparently to take the ball away from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the acerbic, conservative subcommittee chairman.

— Stolen vehicles. Despite the demands on Percy's time, the staff suggested he might want to handle personally the stolen-cars treaty with Mexico. Why? An insider explained that several years ago Percy investigated the international traffic in stolen cars. By right of discovery, he now "owns" the issue.

LETTING THE SUN SHINE IN: The budget-pinched Energy Department has given a new meaning to the "voluntarism" the Reagan administration favors. It let one of the companies it regulates pay for a color-slide and music show for a department-sponsored panel discussion at a conference on energy and the elderly.

Paula Unruh, head of the department's consumer affairs office, wanted something snappy for the panel discussion, so she asked her friends at the Sun Company (Sun Oil) to put together a presentation. Company officials were delighted to volunteer their services and save their regulatory overseer a little money.

A Sun spokesman said it was impossible to determine the cost of the production, on the peculiar grounds that it came out of the company's public relations budget.

Unruh said she saw no impropriety in accepting favors from a company the department regulates. "I do think it's proper for everyone to get together and help one another," she said.

Ken Cohen, an attorney in the DOE general counsel's office, said the law allows acceptance of any gift "to carry out the mission of the department," but added that "one would be totally naive" not to question the general propriety of seeking favors from a regulated company.

One member of the discussion panel, David Kummer of the Red Cross, was turned off by Sun's little show. "I found the whole thing rather silly and unnecessary," he said. "It detracted from the panel presentation itself ... And I object to the whole idea of a major oil company doing this."

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan overrules Baker in tough Caribbean Basin speech

WASHINGTON — President Reagan personally overruled pollster Richard Wirthlin and White House chief of staff James A. Baker III in deciding to lace his Caribbean Basin speech with tough warnings against "Soviet-backed, Cuban-managed support for violent revolution in Central America."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Wirthlin's polling data, showing popular fears of U.S. military involvement in El Salvador, convinced Baker and other senior White House staffers that Reagan should steer clear of the worsening security problem in the Caribbean. They wanted the speech limited to the president's new economic and trade program.

National security aide William P. Clark, joined by Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Assistant Secretary Tom Enders, objected strenuously. However, Reagan had exactly the same reaction himself without any prompting. He took an early draft of the speech, stripped by White House speechwriters of the offending rhetoric, and personally inserted seven tough paragraphs attacking the Soviet-Cuban campaign "to establish Cuban-style Marxist-Leninist dictatorships" throughout Central America.

JACK KEMP'S 'EDUCATION'

When Rep. Jack Kemp ran into Secretary of State Alexander Haig in the White House Feb. 23, four days after Haig was reported saying, "We need to educate the Jack Kemps of the world," Kemp asked: "When is my education going to start, Mr. Secretary?"

The report on Kemp's "education" was included in the Washington Post's revelation of private comments attributed to Haig at his early-morning meetings with State Department aides.

Haig, reaching out to shake hands with the conservative congressman, said he felt "very badly" about the remark attributed to him. Kemp minimized the embarrassing incident and genially accepted Haig's apology. The secretary's "education" crack resulted from Kemp's strong opposition to heavy U.S. financing of multinational foreign aid programs.

PUTTING JERRY DOWN

Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown Jr., who in his eighth and last year as governmor of California has not yet gained the respect of fellow governors, was put down harshly by a Democratic colleague during a widely-attended reception during the recent governors' conference in Washington.

"Jerry, you've demeaned us all," snapped Gov. Bruce Babbitt, criticizing Brown's unrestrained attack on President Reagan's new federalism. Babbitt, one of the most highly-respected governors among his colleagues, is a liberal Democrat but wants Reagan's ideas to get serious attention and sober criticism.

On the next day, Brown proved again that he is a quick learner. Interviewed over national television, he took a much more conciliatory posture, asserting that Reagan's proposals should be given thorough study as the basis for possible compromise.

SEND FOR GREENSPAN

In the midst of the chaos caused by Congressional Republicans against the Reagan budget, one senior White House aide is privately pushing for the return to Washington of balanced-budget militant Alan Greenspan as Reagan's economic czar.

Greenspan, who runs a highly-profitable economic consulting firm in New York City, is unlikely to come to Washington full-time. Nevertheless, the senior aide's desire for Greenspan to become Reagan's economic strongman exposes disaffection about Reaganomics within the president's own staff.

As a strict fiscal conservative who believes budget deficits are the source of most evil, Greenspan never has been enthusiastic about Reagan's supply-side tax cuts. An opponent of tax reduction when he was President Ford's chief economic adviser, Greenspan in a similar role for Reagan probably would try to sidetrack the cuts passed last year.

PEKING MOVING LEFT

Western intelligence reports communist China has established close contact with the Soviet-oriented French Communist Party, an important development that can be used by both friends and foes of close U.S. ties with Peking.

Chinese contacts with the French Communist Party, a member of the left coalition governing France, have gone far enough to tentatively schedule high-level talks this spring either in Paris or Peking. Unlike other Western European communists, the French party quickly and unequivocally endorsed the Soviet-directed imposition of martial law in Poland.

This development, say opponents of strong Washington-Peking links, proves that Communist China cannot be depended upon not to renew its Soviet connection. But in the State Department's view, this only shows what will happen if the U.S. angers Peking by getting too close to Taiwan.

Gasohol industry development stalled

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Supporters of gasohol as a potential major alternate fuel source fought long and hard during the last two legislative sessions to win tax breaks for their product.

But, now that they've gotten those tax concessions, low gasoline prices and high interest rates appear to be stalling development of the gasohol industry.

In a statement released Jan. 7, Ron Awtrey of Friona, chairman of the newly-organized Texas Alcohol Products Association, said the alcohol industry in Texas was "entering a new age" with the passage of the law exempting gasohol from the five-center state gasoline tax, and he predicted a bright future for the fledgling industry.

But two months after that law went into effect, very few service stations are selling the mixture of ethanol and gasoline, and most of the proposed plants to produce the alcohol fuel are on hold because of lack of financing.

"We knew two years ago when we lost the bill in the session that that was the timeto get it (gasohol) going in the state," said Rockdale Rep. Dan Kubiak, the author of the 1981 legislation and the man who was dubbed the "father of gasohol."

In 1979, people were more aware of the need for alternate fuel sources because of long gasoline lines, and money was more available for financing multi-million dollar plants, said Kubiak, who admitted he doesn't know of any service stations selling gasohol in Texas.

The present "glut of gasoline," poor market conditions and the advent of higher mileage automobiles have contributed to the slow start of the gasohol industry, even though the five-cent tax exemption makes the product more competitive, Kubiak said.

The Diamond Shamrock Corp. and the 7-Eleven convenience store chain were two companies that attempted to market gasohol during 1981, but both later backed off the product because of low sales and lack of consumer interest.

The fact that high interest rates are holding up construction of fuel alcohol plants in Texas is another contributing factor, the Rockdale Democrat said.

The Texas Alcohol Beverage Commission, which licenses fuel alcohol plants, reports some 184 permits have been issued, but the only plants built so far are small-scale or "on-farm" stills used to produce fuel for use in the owner's tractors and other agricultural equipment.

"We just don't have alcohol available" to market gasohol across the state without importing it, Kubiak said, adding that alcohol produced in other states already is committed for use in other areas.

Bob Avant, coordinator of biomass and wind programs for the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council, agreed with Kubiak's assessment of the "lack of activity" in the gasohol field, as did Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, who said interest in the fuel is "at high center right now" because of the present abundance of regular unleaded gasoline.

Avant said potential fuel alcohol producers are taking a "much, much more cautious approach" to the industry, even though large scale plants are still planned for Hutto, Muleshoe, Dimmit, Dumas and other areas.

Kubiak said Hutton farmers, who have formed the Central Texas Grain Products Cooperative, are ready to begin construction of their plant but cannot find an investor to put up the 15 percent down payment to get the project started.

"Long-term money is in short supply — investors are holding back," said Kubiak. "Until the situation improves, they're not going to be able to place their loans."

Many Texas farm groups had looked to gasohol to provide markets for their grain and other agricultural products, but for the time being surplus grains still will have to be "dumped on world markets" at below cost, Kubiak said, while more and more family farmers are leaving their land.

Although the state comptroller's office has not figures yet on how many distributors have sought the gasohol tax exemption, Kubiak said the amount of taxes lost because of the new law this year will fall far short of the estimated $6 million.

The seven-term veterans of the Texas House estimated that no more than $100,000 will be lost during the first year of the exemption.

Avant said the current oil glut could last anywhere from six months to several years, and the climate for gasohol might not improve until regular gasoline prices reach the $2-per-gallon range.

When more distributors do get into the field, the product probably will begin showing up not as gasohol but as "premium unleaded with ethanol," he said.

Advertising the ethanol as an "octane additive" is a "fairly intelligent marketing strategy," said Avant, who predicted no quick changes in the gasohol situation.

"That's unfortunate because people have forgotten the long lines and the trouble we had to go to just to get a tank full of fuel," Kubiak said. "Those days will be coming again."

It was drilled to 9,092 feet and plugged back to 7,850 feet. Casing of 4 1/2-inches was set at 9,092 feet.

The site is 790 feet from the north, and 1,440 feet from the west line of section 10, block 22, H&TC survey.

Venezuela cuts oil price; British reduction expected

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Venezuela has reduced the price of its lower-quality crude oil by $2.50 a barrel and Great Britain is on the verge of cutting its price for the second time this year, industry sources say.

Monday's developments underscored a trend in oil prices that some analysts believe may lead to an unraveling of OPEC's current pricing structure.

"What we're seeing now in terms of contract prices is a crumbling at the edges," said a U.S. government analyst who asked that he not be identified.

The price of Britain's oil from the North Sea is informally linked to that of Saudi Arabia's best grade of crude which, at $34 a barrel, serves as a benchmark for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

A reduction in Britain's average $35-a-barrel price would undercut the Saudi price, complicating diplomatic relations and pressuring other OPEC members to lower their prices as a competitive step.

A price cut by the state-owned British National Oil Corp., which oversees Britain's sales of North Sea oil, would be its second in one month. BNOC lowered its prices $1.50 a barrel to an average $35 in early February.

One American oil company executive said Monday he expected a price cut of up to $4 a barrel. He said a meeting of BNOC and U.K. Treasury officials was scheduled for today, signaling the likelihood that a reduction will be announced soon. The executive asked that his name not be used because his company is negotiating with BNOC.

Britain's oil is selling on the open market for as much as $5 below the official contract price. That gap reflects a worldwide oversupply of oil that is pressuring many countries to lower their contract prices.

Last week Mexico cut its heavy crude price by $1.50 a barrel and dropped $2.50 a barrel off the price of its light crude. A new reduction by Britain could spark a series of price cutting moves elsewhere, industry sources said.

In an effort to avert such a possibility, some OPEC have called for an emergency meeting to cope with the problems of slack demand and falling prices. Iraq's oil minister, Taieh Abdul-Karim, reiterated his country's backing for a special OPEC meeting and said the group's survival was at stake.

Other OPEC members, including Libya and the United Arab Emirates, are believed to favor an OPEC meeting in advance of its regular May session. But Saudi Arabia, the group's most powerful member, apparently is resisting.

Some analysts believe Saudi Arabia, by keeping its production at or near its official ceiling of 8.5 million barrels a day, is setting the stage for a major shakeup in OPEC's price structure. Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, has said repeatedly that high crude prices are forcing the United States and other oil-importers to convert to other fuels like coal and nuclear power.

Edwards defends Reagan's plans to dismantle DOE

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary James Edwards is defending the Reagan administration's plan to dismantle his department, even though he acknowledges it won't result in much additional savings to the taxpayers.

Edwards told the House Appropriations energy subcommittee Monday that the department already has saved taxpayers about $10.4 billion by such actions as redirecting federal funds away from projects industry could better handle and eliminating 200 regulations.

"From this point on, it's very difficult to say what further savings will be accomplished," Edwards said. "There will be some. ... I would be surprised if we couldn't save in the area of $80 million, $90 million, $100 million."

Rep. Thomas Bevell, D-Ala., subcommittee chairman, said the savings already in effect would remain even if Reagan's plan to dismantle the 4-year-old department is rejected by Congress, where it has received a cool reception.

Edwards agreed, but defended the president's proposal, contending that with the abolition of federal energy price and allocation controls there is no longer a need for a separate cabinet-level energy agency.

He also said that congressional failure to approve the dismantling plan would force him to return to Congress by mid-summer for additional money over the department's proposed $11.8 billion budget for 1983. He did not say how much more would be necessary.

The 1983 energy budget, contingent on the department's dismantling, is $1.3 billion less than this year's. More than half the department's funds would go for nuclear armaments.

Under Reagan's plan, the bulk of DOE's current responsibilities would go to the Commerce Department, with the Interior, Justice and Agriculture departments getting the rest.

But subcommittee Democrats said that instead of eliminating the department the responsibility for all energy policy should be completely consolidated in DOE.

"Turn it over lock, stock and barrel, that's no improvement," argued Appropriations Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss. "You've got it now under one head, and you (want to) dissipate it between two departments. Nothing's worse than to have ... big operators trying to work together with divided authority."

But Edwards said the plan still insures clear-cut authority over the critical aspects of energy policy such as the nuclear program for defense, the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, basic energy research and development and the gathering of energy information.

"I don't think it matters where it is as long as you manage it efficiently and vigorously," he said.

War in El Salvador creates 10,000 orphans

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer

ZARAGOZA, El Salvador (AP) — Little Hugo cuddles up to visitors but communicates only by grunts and signs.

Asked his age, he shyly holds up six fingers. But he looks younger because he is underweight.

Sores on his shaved head are healing, and his second set of teeth are coming out. He has nightmares and often wets his bed.

Hugo is one of El Salvador's estimated 10,000 war orphans, their parents among the estimated 32,000 civilian dead or the 200,000 to 300,000 adult refugees displaced in the war between government forces and leftist guerrillas.

With financial help from the Roman Catholic diocese of Cleveland, Ohio, the church in Zaragoza is caring for 110 of the children ranging in age from 8 months to 13 years.

"All of them are underweight," said Dr. Jose Romano, the orphanage's physician. "Not enough food, and also their background. Most of them came from poor rural families in the first place. Add to that the war and the trauma of seeing parents killed and..."

"We try to give them a special diet to bolster them up. Plus some vitamins if we get them. Otherwise, they fall prey to all sorts of disease.

"They develop parasites, internal disease, things like bronchitis and catarrh, and because of the living conditions and crowding, also skin ailments like boils and sores.

"They eat beans, rice, corn and milk every day. And we try to give them meat — and by that I mean mostly chicken — twice a week. Three times if we can manage it.

"Our biggest shortages are food, clothing and medicines, in that order. Milk is very difficult to get. Antibiotics are also difficult, like most medicines, there is a shortage. And then we need shoes, and a lot of other things."

Most of the children don't know their surnames and are hazy about their ages.

"When they first arrive here, they almost all refuse to talk," said Romano. "They show acute signs of either depression or hyperactivity.

"They fight a lot among themselves — they're very aggressive. But eventually they slowly quiet down.

"They also have nightmares and many of them, even 6- and 8-year-olds, wet their beds. Eventually the nightmares die down and they begin to have more or less normal dreams, and they start asking for their parents and talk about their parents more objectively as an object of their fondness or love."

The church runs three other orphanages around San Salvador and another at Santa Ana, the country's second-largest city, 109 miles to the west. War orphans are also cared for by other parishes across the country and the Red Cross. But most of them are in the refugee camps.

AP Laserphoto

A group of children huddles at this orphanage near San Salavador. More than 10,000 children have been orphaned as a result of the political violence in the Central American nation of El Salvador.

The Zaragoza operation costs between 300 and 500 colones a day, most of it for food, the doctor says. That's $120 to $200 at the official rate of exchange and $75 to $125 at the present black-market rate.

Romano says the government provides no help. The money comes from the church, private donations and the Cleveland diocese.

"There are eight of us here," he continued, "the two priests, a nurse, a director of the school and a teacher, a secretary and a woman in charge of the nursery."

On one side of the yard is a small wooden building with a corrugated roof housing the dispensary, the doctor's office and three crowded classrooms where the older children were receiving basic instruction in reading and writing.

Across the yard was a larger building, 60 feet long and 25 feet wide, also one story, also made of wood with corrugated roofing, divided into two rooms.

The smaller room was the nursery, spotless, with six babies 8 months to 2 years old in crude wooden cribs. Some of the babies played quietly with their toes, others slept perspiring in the noonday heat. Some whimpered from time to time.

The larger room contained three rows of three-tiered bunks, 66 in all.

"The older ones sleep one to a bunk," said Romano, "but the younger ones two and sometimes three to a bunk. It helps give the younger ones security if they sleep together."

City applies for permit

AUSTIN — Texas Department of Water Resources is to review a city of Midland application to direct the flow of the's city effluent to southeast of Midland in a proposed $20 million water transmission line.

The city's application for an amended permit is to be delivered to the Austin-based department by Wednesday. Afterward, noted a department spokesman, a public hearing will be called, and public notice will be made 30 days prior to hearing.

However, "There will be no hearing" Wednesday, the spokesman said to counteract an apparent misunderstanding by some Midland County residents who were under the impression that a hearing before the three-man Texas Water Commission would be held Wednesday without citizen input.

The spokesman also said that some Midlanders had surmised that Water Resources and the city of Midland were conniving to get the proposed amended permit OK'd without a public hearing and without flak from critics of the city's plan to dispose its treated waste water.

"There isn't any conspiracy," the spokesmen said. "I'll guarantee it."

The public hearing is to be held in mid-April.

Men's fashions returning to 'gentlemanly' look

By BARBARA SCHULER
Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The dressmaker to Her Majesty the Queen was talking about his less regal but more profitable customers — men.

"It's a very happy period, I think," said London designer Hardy Amies, who was in New York recently to promote his various menswear lines. The currently popular tailored, classic look comes naturally to men, said Amies. "I don't think that when it was hinted we should wear crepe de chine shirts — no, voile shirts — with wisteria growing over them, I don't think we all were particularly happy. I know I wasn't."

Amies, one of three London designers who hold warrants as dressmakers to Queen Elizabeth II (the others are Norman Hartness and Ian Thomas), pretty much limits his women's clothing to the made-to-order things produced in his Savile Row establishment. But while his work for royalty may have earned him fame, it's his menswear that's earned him fortune — his approximately 45 menswear licensees worldwide are projected to gross more than $200 million this year.

The success, explained Amies, is at least in part a result of a renewed emphasis on British fashion. Now, don't get the wrong idea here. Fond as he is of the royal family, Amies was not talking about Diana-mania or anything of the sort. He was referring specifically to menswear and to what he believes is a return to the kind of menswear that is an English tradition.

"FASHION HAS GONE TOWARD what I can only describe as a gentlemanly look," said Amies. "Now the English may have had dull clothes, but they've never had ungentlemanly clothes." Today, said Amies, himself the epitome of the English gentleman, "the best Italian clothes, the best American clothes, the best French clothes all have a very strong British flavor."

All of this, said Amies, has caused a sudden awakening in the corporate headquarters of Genesco, the huge conflomerate that owns Phoenix Clothes, producers of Hardy Amies suits. "They've had me under contract for quite a while, but they've never really pushed it," said Amies, who now finds himself caught up in a flurry of promotional activities, advertising plans and new clothes to make.

His beautifully British reaction to it all: "charming," a word that equally well describes Amies. Born in London in 1909, Edwin Hardy Amies (he does not use his first name) went to work for Lachasse, a London couture house, shortly before his 25th birthday. He served in the British Army in World War II, opening the Savile Row couture house upon his discharge. He began designing for Queen Elizabeth II while she was still a princess and has been marketing menswear under the Genesco umbrella since 1967.

Early in his career, he founded his own corporation, Hardy Amies Ltd., to handle his business dealings. He sold the corporation to the British retail chain Debenhams in 1971 but bought it back three years ago "because I didn't like what they were doing with it."

Clearly, Amies insists on being in control of any situation. In a recent interview in the Manhattan townhouse rented by Genesco for its designers' showings, he paused before launching into a description of one of his fall suits and gently queried an interviewer: "Now, how much do you know about men's clothes?"

SATISFIED THAT HE won't be misunderstood, he showed off his new jacket shape, a single-breasted gray flannel with a nat7ral shoulder and a lower-than-usual button fastening that the designer thinks makes for an easier fit. Moving on to the classic gray flannel trousers, Amies administered a slightly impatient tug to the model's belt.

"He's not used to having his belts tight. Americans never wear tight belts," he complained. Is that bad? "For the modern trouser, it is," said Amies. "It must fall from the waist."

Replacing the single-breasted jacket with a double-breasted version, Amies fairly gloated over the versatility of it all. "Now this is exactly the same body," he said. "As a business suit, you can see it's marvelous . . . and the single-breasted looks marvelous as a sports jacket as well."

BOTH JACKETS ARE part of Amies' new Belgravia collection, a line of suits using the finest of fabrics and retailing in the $350 to $500 range. Why Belgravia? "If I say it was not my choice, it sounds as if I disagree with it," said Amies, suggesting that is not the case. The company, explained Amies, simply wanted "a snob English name" and Belgravia, it turns out, is a residential area near Buckingham Palace that is London's answer to Sutton Place.

There's also a collection of more moderately priced suits called 14 Savile Row (his London address), ties, shirts and sweaters coming in March. Amies appears to be especially proud of the sweaters. Sending for one from downstairs, where workmen were getting ready for his show the next night, Amies could hardly wait to begin the discourse on its attributes.

"The interesting thing about the sweaters is this shape," he said, spreading the mauve brushed shetland on the coffee table ever so carefully. The sleeveless, high-necked sweater is made to be worn without a tie, and in Amies' opinion it's a garment long needed in menswear. It's the perfect thing, he said, for those times when a man wants to wear a sweater and a jacket, but not a tie. "You don't want sleeves," he said, "because it's damned uncomfortable wearing a jacket."

The designer also has recently entered the lucrative fragrance market, with Hardy Amies cologne and aftershave. Again, he has limited the endeavor to the men's market. "If I were to go into women's scents, he explained, "I'd have to compete with the finest French parfumiers. . . all the wonderful Guerlains, all the Carons, all the Yves St. Laurents and Diros. Those have all the whole power of the French industry behind them, which we don't have in London." What's more, he continued, "around the world, I am known as a men's designer . . . There's no need for me at this stage to have a women's scent."

An Amies women's coat or suit sells for around $2,000, expensive by English couture standards.

A development program

By CINDY MANN
County Extension Agent
Home Economics, 4-H
Midland County

How can anyone influence the development of people to make them responsible, self-respecting members of our democratic society?

The 4-H program can provide experiences!

When our nation was younger and even up to one or two generations ago, young people did not have the problem of meaningful experiences. They were in small, intimate groups, mostly farm and small church oriented, where they fit into the picture. But because most people live in an urban setting today, meaningful experiences may be limited.

That's where 4-H comes in, said Cindy Mann, Midland County Extension Agent.

4-H can help the family, church and community provide proper development of young people by providing the right kind of experiences. Most of the things we want young people to become are a part of the 4-H program. The whole idea of 4-H is development of young people. Since 4-H is family oriented and co-educational, it is tryly people.

4-H starts in one of our first "groups" — the family group which has so much influence on us. The 4-H program goes down to the "grass roots" because the people in it — from Extension people to local leaders and even the young people themselves — actually help decide the kind of program they want.

So, besides involving the family group, 4-H also closely involves the community group.

Anyone who works with young people can tell you that most want and need to belong, be recognized, be respected for what they are, develop a sense of responsibility and freedom which disciplines, and have the good feeling of doing something meaningful by themselves.

Arthritis occurs in all age groups

ATLANTA (AP) — Although often regarded as a disease of old age, arthritis occurs in every age group, including infancy, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

The foundation reports that over a quarter million children have juvenile arthritis.

Most cases of rheumatoid, scleroderma, and lupus — three potentially severe forms of arthritis — begin before age 40.

Of the 31 million Americans with some form of arthritis, one-half are under 60.

$3,800 minimum French pension

The minimum old-age pension in France amounts to about $3,800 per year per person. This allowance, which goes to some 2 million senior citizens, has more than tripled since 1974. Its purchasing- power increase has averaged nine percent a year.

DEAR ABBY

Woman wants more from man with everything

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am living with a man. He's 29 and I'm 27. He's almost a saint. He doesn't smoke, drink or curse. He opens doors for me and treats me with the greatest respect.

He would do anything in the world for me. He wants what most people want — home, family, love, etc. So do I. So what's the problem? I don't love him the way he loves me. He's very romantic, likes candlelight, soft music, long foreplay and the works. Me? I'm just a 1-2-3 lover. I do a lot for him (physically), but he doesn't really do that much for me. I'm honest. I don't play games. I try to explain that just because we have different needs doesn't make either one of us weird. We are just incompatible when it comes to love.

I have been in love and I know how it's supposed to be. I'm not really miserable with him, but I'm not completely happy either. Why do we both continue in this arrangement? Am I hurting both of us by staying?

He says he loves me and he's content. But is contentment enough? I don't want to hurt him. He's a wonderful man and most woman would feel lucky to have him.

What do you make of this? — MISSING SOMETHING

DEAR MISSING: If he's content, knowing that you don't feel for him what he feels for you, you aren't being unfair to him. But whether you're being unfair to yourself is another question.

When people feel they're "missing something" (you provided the signature, I didn't), in time they usually go looking for it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 84, single, of sound mind, in fairly good health, and I have no heirs. I recently completed a will with a bequest to a particular friend, and I made the mistake of telling her what I had willed to her.

Since then she has been asking for additional items! I told her plainly that my will was written and I had no intention of altering it. I wonder if other elderly people have had a similar experience, and if so, how they handled it.

This friend now appears to be more interested in my early demise than in me. — APPALLED

DEAR APPALLED: Ignore her requests. Feeling as you do, I wonder why you would want to leave her anything.

DEAR ABBY: I wonder why the feminist groups haven't challenged the age-old tradition of the bride's parents paying for the wedding. That custom dates back to the days when the male reigned supreme and a female was made to feel fortunate if a man asked to marry her. Parents of daughters used bribes (dowries) to unload them. And parents were only too happy to pay for the wedding. Talk about sex discrimination!

If women want equality with men, isn't it time they abolished that ridiculous, demeaning custom? Today's women work as hard as men, and many of them earn more than their husbands.

I'm for splitting the cost of the wedding 50-50. Are you with me, Abby? — FOR EQUALITY

DEAR FOR: One hundred percent!

Future space shuttle pilot teams named

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three space veterans and seven aging rookie astronauts who have waited in the wings a total of 105 years have been named to fly the fourth, fifth and sixth flights of America's space shuttle program.

Included are the first cargo-carrying commercial mission of Columbia and the maiden journey of the second shuttle, Challenger.

The new teams were announced Monday by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Navy Capt. Thomas K. Mattingly, 45, and Henry W. Hartsfield, Jr., 48, will fly the fourth mission — Columbia's final test trip — a seven-day journey scheduled for early July. They were backup pilots for the second launching and have the same role for the upcoming third flight, set for liftoff from Cape Canaveral, Fla., March 22.

Vance D. Brand, 50, and Marine Col. Robert F. Overmyer, 45, will be at the controls when Columbia becomes operational in November, ferrying two communications satellites into orbit. Serving as mission specialists to deploy the satellites and conduct experiments during the five-day voyage will be Dr. Joseph P. Allen, 44, a phyicist, and Dr. William B. Lenoir, 42, a professional engineer.

Challenger, second of a planned fleet of four shuttles, will make its space debut next January, guided by Paul J. Weitz, 39, and Air Force Col. Karol J. Bobko, 44. Mission specialists will be Donald H. Peterson, 48, and Dr. Story Musgrave, 46, a surgeon, mathematician and biophysicist.

During the two-day Challenger mission, Peterson and Musgrave will place in orbit a large data relay satellite which will serve as a commmunications switchboard between Mission Control Center in Houston and future shuttle flights.

Mattingly served as command module pilot on the Apollo 16 moon-landing mission in 1972. Weitz was aboard the Skylab space station for 28 days and Brand flew on the joint U.S.-Soviet flight in 1975.

The others have waited a long time to make a space journey.

Bobko, Hartsfield, Overmyer and Peterson were named as astronauts in 1966, in the Air Force's military space program, the Manned Orbiting Laboratory. When that project was cancelled in 1969, they were transferred to NASA's astronaut corps. They possibly could serve as crews on future shuttle military flights.

Allen, Lenoir and Musgrave all were named scientist-astronauts by NASA in 1967. Each has continued to work in his speciality while awaiting the summons to space.

At the time these men were named, the agancy expected there would be more moon flights and that the shuttle would develop much sooner than it did. But three lunar trips were canceled for budgetary reasons, and technical bugs delayed Columbia's maiden launch nearly three years.

Columbia's first two test flights were classed as successful last year, even though the second was shortened by a faulty fuel cell. The reuseable ship faces its longest test later this month when Marine Col. Jack Lousma and Air Force Col. Gordon Fullerton take it up for a seven-day trial.

Lousma is a Skylaab veteran. Fullerton is another of the Manned Orbiting Laboratory pilots who have waited a long time.

Crews begin loading Columbia's propellants

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Crews on the space shuttle's launch pad have begun preparations for loading hazardous propellants — a delicate process slated to begin Thursday.

Workers at opposite ends of a shuttle "fuel farm" on Monday prepared hydrazine fuel and its oxidizer, nitrogen tetroxide, for the fill-up of Columbia's sytems. Because of the volatility of the two propellants, their storage facilities are widely separated.

The pad will be cleared Thursday of all but the propellant-loading crews in special safety suits. The toxic compounds will then begin to flow into the orbital maneuvering system and the reaction control system, which handles the pitch and yaw movement of the spacecraft.

The loading of the propellants into these and other subsystems was expected to take until early next week, Kennedy Space Center spokesman Mark Hess said. The third mission for Columbia — the world's first reusable spacecraft, is scheduled to begin March 22.

'Separation' to be major issue at crash hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traffic was so tight when Air Florida Flight 90 crashed that another jetliner had touched down on the same runway seconds before the Boeing 737 lifted into the air, according to investigators.

Federal Aviation Administration regulations require a separation of at least two miles between departing and arriving aircraft.

But calculations by federal investigators show that at one point Flight 90 and an incoming Eastern Airlines jet briefly shared the same runway — which is 6,866 feet long.

As Flight 90 passed its "point of no return" — after which its pilot had no choice but to proceed with takeoff — the Eastern jet had just touched down near the other end of the runway, the calculations show.

The issue of separation was expected to be a major topic when Federal Aviation Administration officials began testifying, possibly today, before a board of inquiry of the National Transportation Safety Board.

The NTSB investigators and other sources emphasized that no link had been found between the degree of separation and the accident, which killed 78 people when the Air Florida jet hit a busy commuter bridge and plunged into the Potomac River.

But one pilot knowledgeable about conditions that prevailed on the snowy Jan. 13 afternoon at National Airport said, "For this type of weather it's extremely close." The pilot asked that his name not be used.

The calculations developed by the NTSB's air traffic control group show that Eastern Flight 1451 touched down at 31 seconds after 4 p.m. on National Airport's runway 36. At the same time, according to a transcript of the Flight 90 cockpit recorder, the Air Florida jet was still struggling to get off the ground toward the other end of the runway, having just reached its point of no return.

Michael J. Pangia, associate counsel for the FAA, said Monday that FAA officials were expected to respond to the NTSB calculations in their testimony. Other sources said the calculations might be challenged as to their accuracy.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said that even if it were found that separation rules were violated the reason could have been the inability of Air Florida Flight 90 the gain proper acceleration during its takeoff.

The air controller handbook requires that a minimum of a two-mile separation be maintained between departing and arriving aircraft. But Farrar said that as a practical matter controllers are told they can bring an arriving plane to within two miles "as long as the departing plane has started its takeoff roll."

A report submitted by the NTSB task force's air traffic control committee concludes that "compilation and extrapolation of radar information indicates" that the separation between Flight 90 and Eastern Flight 1451 came to less than a mile (.89 nautical miles) eight seconds before the Eastern jet landed.

The transcript of the Air Florida jet's cockpit recording showed the Air Florida crew appeared not to be concerned about the incoming jet. The air traffic controller handling Flight 90, however, warned the pilot when giving takeoff clearance not to delay because, he said, the other jet was only 2½ miles out.

Witnesses to the takeoff of Flight 90 reiterated their concern Monday about ice and snow on the aircraft as the NTSB opened its first day of public hearings.

"I saw quite a bit of accumulation of snow and possibly ice all along the top of the fuselage," testified Capt. Hall S. Bond, a 32-year veteran with Braniff Airlines. He said he also saw snow and possibly ice on much of the forward surface of the left wing and on part of the engine.

Some survivors of the crash — including the only surviving flight attendant — said they noticed the plane being de-iced, but said the de-icing occurred 50 minutes or more before takeoff.

The survivors all said they noticed immediately upon takeoff that the plane was not gaining enough speed. "After we lifted (off) the airplane started vibrating. ... It felt like it was going to shake to pieces," recalled Bert Hamilton, who was in the last row seats.

Portable pump allows patients to administer own morphine

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A portable pump that allows post-surgical patients to "administer their own morphine could help patients recover more quickly and ease the workload on nursing staffs, University of Kentucky researchers say.

"There is a serious nursing shortage right now and it can be as long as a 30-minute wait for a nurse to give someone a shot," Dr. David Graves said Monday. "This (pump) could change that."

Graves, a pharmacist, and seven other researchers from UK's College of Medicine spent two years studying patients who used the infusion pump to control their own morphine dosages after surgery.

A report of their findings in the February issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association said patients used "significantly less" morphine with the telephone-size device and recovered quicker.

The technique, called patient-controlled analgesia, allows a patient to give himself an intravenous dose of morphine with two pushes of a button. The research team hopes to submit a final proposal for the pump to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration this summer.

"This is the first time anything like this has been done in the United States and we believe we can completely alter pain levels in patients who have had major surgery," said researcher Thomas Foster.

The traditional method, usually a 10-milligram shot of morphine every three or four hours, often fails to relieve pain entirely, said Foster, a pharmacist. And in many cases, patients were rarely awake during their first days of recovery.

"Those patients who are asleep during the first days have depressed breathing levels and run the risk of contracting pneumonia through the buildup of fluids in the lungs," said surgeon Ward O. Griffen Jr.

Angelo Buono, a 47-year-old auto upholsterer, sits in a Los Angeles courtroom Monday as he listens to opening arguments in the 'Hillside Stranglings' case.

'Hillside Strangler' trial focuses on killings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A prosecutor making his opening statement in Angelo Buono's rape-murder trial said he can link the auto upholsterer to 10 "Hillside Strangler" killings with fragments of evidence and one key witness: Buono's cousin, Kenneth Bianchi.

Depicting Buono and Bianchi as "sex-oriented, manipulative" killers, Deputy Attorney General Roger Boren started his detailed opening statement Monday.

The prosecutors previously handling the case had dropped it as unwinnable, but Superior Court Judge Ronald George insisted the case be tried, and Boren, the new prosecutor, says he believes the case can be won even though it is circumstantial.

"If we did not believe we could try the case and be successful, we would not prosecute it," Boren said when he took over.

He accused Buono and Bianchi of being partners in the crimes. But he spent most of the day outlining how the women died, barely touching on evidence about who may have killed them.

He spoke of the relationship between Buono and his cousin.

"Kenneth Bianchi and Angelo Buono were sex-oriented, manipulative individuals," Boren said. "When these two individuals came together ... there was a chemical reaction .... It resulted in these 10 victims losing their lives."

Boren recalled for jurors the epidemic of murder that swept Los Angeles in late 1977 and early 1978, and of the 10 women and girls, some as young as 12 years old, who were raped, tortured and murdered, their bodies dumped on hillsides.

Slowly, he walked past the jury box holding up color photographs of the bodies. Later, he placed on an easel a giant montage of the death photos along with portraits of the young women in life.

Buono, on trial alone after Bianchi turned state's evidence in a plea bargain to escape the death penalty, sat solemnly beside his attorneys, who planned to give opening statements later in the week.

Buono is charged with 10 counts of murder in addition to kidnapping and rape which, if he is convicted, provide special circumstances permitting the death penalty under California law.

Testimony is expected to last up to nine months.

von Bulow lawyers say they have some surprises

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Lawyers for Claus C. von Bulow say they expect to take only about a week to refute charges that he tried to murder his heiress wife, but the lawyers say they have some surprises in store.

The defense has refused to say whether von Bulow will take the stand when his trial resumes today. Von Bulow's lawyer, Herald P. Fahringer, wouldn't disclose the names of the witnesses he planned to call this week.

Von Bulow, a 55-year-old Danish-born financial consultant, is accused of twice trying to kill his wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, with insulin injections. He faces two counts of assault with intent to murder in connection with Mrs. von Bulow's two comas — a brief one in December 1979 and another in December 1980, from which she is not expected to recover.

The state contends von Bulow was motivated by love for another woman and greed for the $14 million he stood to inherit from his wife.

Attorney John F. Sheehan said the defense would take about a week to present its case. The defense has said it would rely mostly on cross-examination.

Fahringer said in his opening statement to the jury that his case would include some surprises.

Braniff employees to get only half pay

DALLAS (AP) — Employees of financially troubled Braniff International will be paid only half of their normal pay this week because of a shortage of cash, company officials report.

Braniff vice president Sam Coats said employees will receive the balance of their normal paychecks next week. The 9,500 employees are normally paid every two weeks.

Coats said unions were notified in advance of the pay deferral, but he noted that the decision did not require union approval. Employees of the financially troubled airline have agreed in the past to every wage and schedule concession proposed by management since the financial problems surfaced.

"Our cash situation right now is very tight and this is a way to increase our cash flow by $8 million," Coats said.

The pay deferral includes everyone on the airline's payroll, Coasts said, including airline president Howard Putnam.

The airline's monthly payroll is about $25 million, he said.

Braniff reported last week that the airline lost $161.1 million in 1981, compared to losses of $131 million in 1980 and $44 million in 1979.

In addition, the airline reduced its work force from 15,000 employees in 1979 through periodical layoffs to 9,500 last week. The airline also closed 10 city ticket offices and laid off 825 employees, including four vice presidents, in January.

The airline got all employees to agree last year to a 10 percent pay cut and also reached an agreement allowing pilots and dispatchers to work longer hours for the same wages.

Braniff also has worked with creditors and obtained extensions allowing it to defer payments on long term debts of $733 millionn until Oct. 1.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, March 3, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Both Alexander Graham Bell and the late Hollywood legend Jean Harlow were born on this date. You become more ambitious in the months ahead, and things really start to happen for you where your career is concerned. Your dreams can become reality, but it is up to you to make it happen! Any backing you need—either cash or moral support—will be available in both the fall and around Christmas time. Be sure to pursue romance during the summer months. Confident and determined, you are hard to resist. Be your most charming when asking for what others call "the impossible."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Devote more attention to mate and home, less to adventure and acquaintances. Enjoy the time you spend on domestic pursuits. Outside interests dominate later in month.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance sizzles now! You and loved one have a lively time. Your affection for money and possessions is greater than usual. Collect any funds that are owed you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The love of your life is very demanding now. Sort out that overloaded closet before going shopping. Tend to business or you might not be able to afford a new wardrobe.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The pace accelerates as you assume additional responsibilities at home or office. Rearrange your schedule to preserve your stamina. Romance will take precedence tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not allow your emotions to interfere with business decisions. Make every effort to harmonize opposing forces. Joint monetary issues require immediate attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Partnerships are in the spotlight. Do not be influenced by others where money or career is concerned. Actively participate in any creative projects at place of employment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Hire experts to solve a business or financial puzzle. Lost objects surface in a strange way. Ask no questions. Resolve to put any past differences behind you and look forward.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not lose sight of your personal or professional goals. You are in a reflective mood today and interested in creating the best possible climate for spiritual growth.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are now in the midst of making up your mind about an important commitment. Marriage could be involved. Search for information that will help you make a better business deal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Success depends on your ability to clarify your goals. Exercise self-control and you will wield power. A family member is bluffing. Make this person put his/her cards on the table.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accept the reality of a sad situation and get on with your life. You will be surprised by what you can accomplish! Hiding or running will solve nothing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep in closer touch with a family member who lives at a distance. First impressions are important right now. Put your money into things that will enhance your appearance.

It is difficult to fault East for making a penalty double of four hearts. After all, he thought he was looking at four tricks in his own hand opposite a partner who had made a two-level overcall. A mother lode seemed to be on hand! But West must be blamed—both for his featherlight overcall and for his decision to sit for the double. Since his values were all distributional, he should have made a prudent retreat to five diamonds.

West led the king of diamonds, and declarer was not delighted with his prospects. It seemed he would have to lose three clubs and a trump or two. But there was a slight chance if the distribution was friendly.

Declarer won the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He crossed to the queen of spades and led a low trump from dummy. East played the ten and the king won. Declarer crossed back to dummy with the king of spades and ruffed another diamond. Next he cashed the ace of spades, and when West failed to follow and was unable to ruff, the contract was as good as made.

Declarer ruffed his last spade in dummy. With eight tricks in the bag, he led dummy's last diamond. If East ruffed low or failed to ruff, declarer would score his nine of trumps and the ace would be the fulfilling trick. So East ruffed with a trump honor and declarer countered elegantly—he discarded a losing club! Then he sat back with his A-9 of trumps poised over East's Q-7 and waited for two more tricks, and his contract.

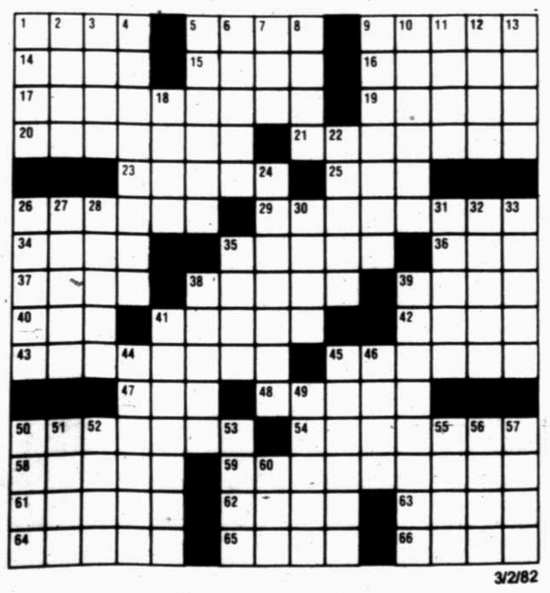

Had there been no bidding, and no double, declarer would surely have drawn two rounds of trumps at some point, and gone down.

Hepburn's effort to educate 'boor' on theater manners applauded

Hepburn

NEW YORK (AP) — Katharine Hepburn stepped out of character for a moment to scold a theatergoer who put his feet on the stage where Miss Hepburn was starring in "The West Side Waltz" on Broadway.

"You must take your feet off the stage," the actress said Friday night to the male patron in the front-row-center seat, who had crossed his legs and put his feet on the rim of the stage.

She picked up her lines and the show went on, but during her curtain call, according to company manager David Hedges, the same theatergoer stood up and let go with a camera equipped with flash bulb. Cameras are forbidden in Broadway theaters.

"You must never again do a thing like that in the theater," Miss Hepburn admonished him.

Remembering his feet, she said, "I was expecting that the next thing you'd want was for me to bring you a pipe and slippers.

"You shouldn't be a boor. You shouldn't pick on us like that, being rude, because we are sitting ducks up here."

The audience broke into cheers at her rebuke, and the man faded into the crowd as the theater emptied.

Dozier

VERONA, Italy (AP) — Brig. Gen. James Dozier is getting yet another "welcome home" party, but this time it will mean he's come full circle since being captured by terrorists.

NATO staff members are planning a ceremony for the U.S. general when he returns to work this week, but the date hasn't been announced.

Dozier, the highest ranking U.S. officer at the NATO base in Verona, was kidnapped from his home Dec. 17 and held for 42 days by the Red Brigades. He was rescued from a "people's prison" by Italian police four weeks ago.

Dozier and his wife, Judith, vacationed in the United States and returned to Italy last Friday.

Security for Dozier will be stepped up when he resumes his duties at the Verona base, officials said last week. Dozier is expected to stay in Italy until June when his two-year tour of duty ends.

Thomas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Danny Thomas says he'll return to the Copa showroom he opened three decades ago in hopes of resurrecting "the good old days" of a bygone Las Vegas era.

Thomas said Monday at a news conference he hoped other entertainers who had played the famous Sands Hotel showroom would follow his lead and "give back some of what this city has given them."

The 70-year-old entertainer, who will return for a week-long engagement March 17, criticized stars and agents for demanding exorbitant pay at a handful of Strip hotels. Most Strip hotels have gone to stage or package shows because entertainers' salaries have soared as high as $350,000 a week. Hotels still maintaining a star policy are charging $35 to $50 a person for dinner-leaving shows.

Sands officials said Thomas' show will run $14.95 a person.

Thomas said he worked at the Sands 21 years, opening the Copa Room Dec. 15, 1952, and never asked for a raise.

"You don't do that to the goose that laid the golden egg," Thomas said. "Las Vegas is the goose in this case. Let her live ...

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher regards her official residence at 10 Downing Street as a place for "bed and breakfast and somewhere to store her clothes," says her daughter, Carol Thatcher.

"Yes, she does have a lot of clothes, but then she needs to," Carol said in an article in today's edition of Woman magazine.

"Mum doesn't wear jeans, they're not her scene and don't suit her lifestyle. In fact, I can only recall her wearing trousers a few times, when it was essential," said Carol, giving a glimpse into the life of the first woman to serve as Britain's prime minister.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Three steps could help

Dear Dr. Solomon: Sometimes when I go to my doctor I get so much advice I don't know what to do first. So usually I don't do anything. My father and an older brother have both suffered from hardening of the arteries. Can you tell me just a few things I can do to help avoid this? — Gus, Detroit

Dear Gus: Here are three things that all people have it within their power to do. Although they may sound simple, they can have a profound beneficial effect on health: (1) Stop smoking, or, if you don't smoke, don't start; (2) cut down on your intake of saturated fats; and (3) exercise. By following these three rules, the life you save will be your own.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I graduated from high school about 20 years ago and am now taking a course in psychology in an adult education program. Maybe it's because I've been away from school for so long or maybe the material is just over my head, but I find it hard to believe some of the things the instructor says. Recently he said that some people are fat because they want to avoid sex. Is this his own idea or do doctors believe that this is true? — Mrs. E.O., Newark, N.J.

Dear Mrs. O.: Some psychiatric theories do maintain that some people — and I emphasize "some" — unconsciously use obesity as a defense against the possibility of sexual involvement. The rationale is that an obese person is not sexually attractive and therefore will not have to deal with sexual overtures.

I should note, however that while obesity may present health problems and may not be attractive to some people, others may find it quite attractive. Moreover, obesity itself does not interfere with sexual activity. Dr. Evelyn Gendel, director of the Human Sexuality Program at the University of California, San Franciso, says that overweight is rarely the major issue when an obese couple comes to her for sexual or marital therapy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Since my brother has a child with Down's syndrome, I'm particularly interested in reading your comments about amniocentesis, and how the problem can be detected before a woman gives birth. What I'd like to know is whether there is any way to detect that a woman might have such a child even before she becomes pregnant. — Agnes, Toledo, Ohio

Dear Agnes: As of now, the answer to your question is "no," but there is a possibility that a method may be found of identifying women before they become pregnant who are at high risk of having a child with Down's syndrome.

Dr. Julius Kerkay, of the Cleveland State University, reports having found a specific protein in the blood of each of more than 70 women who later gave birth to children with Down's syndrome. On the other hand, the protein was not found in 50 women who gave birth to normal children. There were no other apparent biochemical differences between the two groups.

It is too early to tell whether these findings mean that a screening test can be developed. But the preliminary results suggest that this is an area that is certainly worthy of further investigation.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Stuntman calls off Asner recall effort

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A stuntman who launched a recall drive against Screen Actors Guild President Ed Asner has called it off since the star of the "Lou Grant" series promised last week to make it clear he is speaking as a private citizen when he talks about politics.

"I am not going on with the recall," stuntman Tony Cecere said Monday.

But he added, "If Asner should do something like leading the guild into the political arena, the members might decide to do something like this again."

Cecere said 800 signatures had been gathered and petitions he sent out for others to circulate were still coming in but the recall move had been "put on hold."

Asner generated controversy among guild members when he announced in Washington last month that he was donating money to aid the guerillas battling against the U.S.-backed government in El Salvador.

Charlton Heston and Robert Conrad were among the actors who criticized Asner for not noting his statements had nothing to do with SAG.

City offers to help save Daily News

NEW YORK (AP) — The city is offering labor mediation, possible tax incentives and other financial help to the owners of the New York Daily News "to assure the long-run survival" of the troubled paper.

The offers were contained in a letter to President Stanton R. Cook of the Chicago-based Tribune Co., which owns the News, from Deputy Mayor Karen Gerard, who also is executive director of the city's Office of Economic Development.

After Williams conviction 23 cases closed

ATLANTA (AP) — Twenty-three murder cases were closed by Public Safety Commissioner Lee P. Brown after the conviction of Wayne B. Williams in two of the slayings.

The list includes 22 victims on a special police task force list of 29 cases which took place during a 22-month period beginning in July 1979. The additional name is that of John Howard Porter, 30, whose death last April was investigated by the task force but never officially added to the list.

Williams was convicted of murder in the deaths of:

—Jimmy Ray Payne, 21. Last seen April 22 when he left his southwest Atlanta home to sell some old coins at the Omni. Found April 27, 1981 in the Chattahoochee River west of Atlanta. The cause of death was listed as probable asphyxiation.

—Nathaniel Cater, 27. Last seen May 21 at a downtown Atlanta motel, where he rented a room. Found May 24, 1981, in the Chattahoochee River. The cause of death was strangulation.

Some other cases on the task force list which Brown said were being closed as a result of Williams' conviction are:

Atlanta trial cost $200,000

ATLANTA (AP) — The nine-week murder trial of Wayne B. Williams was the most expensive trial ever in Fulton County, costing the county's taxpayers nearly $200,000, Sheriff Leroy Stynchcombe says.

"In round figures, the trial has probably cost close to $200,000, let's say about $195,000 so far," Stynchcombe said Monday. "We've never had a trial that was this expensive."

Williams, 23, was convicted of murder Saturday in the deaths of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose slayings over a 22-month period were investigated

Texas, SMU, Rice prove 46 isn't magic number

By The Associated Press

If there was a lesson to be learned from the first round of the Southwest Conference basketball tournament, maybe it was this: don't stop at 46 points.

Rice, Southern Methodist and Texas were all eliminated in Monday's first round and they all had 46s shining on the scoreboard when the buzzer sounded.

Texas Christian cruised by SMU 54-46, Baylor nudged Texas 48-46 on a field goal at the buzzer and Texas Tech's starters ended their Rice game on the bench, slapping each other on the back as reserves polished off a 60-46 win.

THAT PUTS TCU against Tech in the second of Thursday's quarterfinal games as the tournament moves to Reunion Arena in Dallas. In the opener, Texas A&M — recipient of a first-round bye after earning a third-place regular-season finish — goes against Baylor.

It seems ironic that Texas' downfall ended where it began this season — in Baylor's Heart O' Texas Coliseum. The Longhorns were ranked No. 5 nationally and cruising with a 14-0 record when they reported to Waco for a Jan. 26 match with the Bears.

During that game, Texas forward Mike Wacker went down with a knee injury that knocked him out for the season and, from that point, Texas won only two of its last 13 contests.

Monday's loss to Baylor was courtesy of Bear forward Jay Shakir, who made a steal and a layup to tie the score at 46, then canned a 25-foot jump shot at the buzzer for the winning points.

"I don't apologize for Jay's shot going in at all ... I don't care how long it bounced around up there," said Baylor coach Jim Haller. "It was the first break we got all night."

BAYLOR OVERCAME a nine-point Texas lead and an off-night by SWC career scoring champion Terry Teagle to post the win.

"It's hard to believe that we would win when Teagle has a night like that (5-of-16 field goals)," said Haller. "He just wasn't in his rhythm ... He will have to play well for us to beat the Aggies."

"Have you seen that before?" a deflated Texas coach Abe Lemons asked rhetorically. "Did that look familar? ... We go crazy at the wrong time — missing free throws and throwing the ball away. That pass that Baylor stole, I could read 'Spalding' (brand name) on it as it was coming toward me."

Tech had a somewhat easier time against Rice, even though the Owls had beaten the Raiders twice during the regular season.

"It's tough to be able to beat somebody three times in a year," grinned Tech coach Gerald Myers, who sat his starters down to a standing ovation as time expired. "We had good concentration ... it was the best game we have played on defense all year."

Tech forward Joe Washington was given the job of guarding Rice's Ricky Pierce, the nation's No. 2 scorer, and he held Pierce to 14 points, less than half his season average.

"THEY REALLY played some ball tonight," said Pierce. "They put the pressure on and controlled the tempo and denied us the ball."

"The guys ... just kept patting each other on the back," said Raider center Clarence Swannegan. "Everybody was fired up and that kept us going."

TCU coach Jim Killingsworth did not have much praise for his Killer Frogs, even though they won.

"We couldn't seem to get anything going," he said. "We didn't have any rhythm at all."

He did laud junior guard Darrell Browder for a team-leading nine rebounds and his team direction.

"I thought he did a great job of running the offense, probably the best of his career," Killingsworth said.

Greenwood rips Robert Lee, 56-32

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

SNYDER — The Greenwood Rangers, once they figured out how to go about it, had little trouble disposing of Robert Lee in the Class A Bi-District championship game here at Scurry County Coliseum Monday night.

In fact, once the Rangers found the right answers to their early problems, it was no contest as they posted a 56-32 victory to advance to this weekend's Region I Tournament in Levelland.

Robert Lee came out in a slow-down offensive attack and zone defense that gave Greenwood fits throughout most of the first half. When the points did start coming, they came slowly with neither team able to maintain much of an advantage.

Greenwood got the first three buckets of the game for a 6-0 lead with 4:10 left in the quarter, but couldn't hold on to the edge as the Steers came back to take the lead at 9-8 on a three-point play by Darren Williams with 1:11 remaining. The Rangers got a free throw from guard Homer Lopez 35 seconds later to knot the score for the first time in the game at nine and that's where it rested until the buzzer.

With 5:35 gone in the second quarter, Robert Lee's Kirby Rasco canned a 10-foot jump shot to tie the game for the fifth and final time, 17-17. It was the last time the Steers scored in the half and, as it turned out, the last points they would get until the third quarter was nearly over.

FOLLOWING THE jumper that tied the game, Greenwood came down court and got a bucket from postman Jim Lee from underneath for a 19-17 lead and then Lopez made a steal at mid-court and drove for an easy layup with 1:49 left in the half. Larry Dickerson added a free throw 15 seconds later and a minute after that Lopez chipped in two from the line. Stuart Burleson, the game's leading scorer, added the final three points of the half from the free throw line and the once-deadlocked battle had a 10-point spread, 27-17.

The second half belonged entirely to Greenwood. The Rangers added 10 points to their lead in the first six minutes of play and didn't give any back to Robert Lee until the clock had wound down to 40 seconds. Williams snapped the scoring freeze with a pair of free throws. Greenwood got the final score of the frame from Lee for a 39-19 advantage.

The Rangers took their 20-point third-quarter lead and finished the night by outscoring Robert Lee 17-12 in the final period to gain the 24-point margin of victory.

"I THOUGHT Robert Lee played us real tough," said Greenwood coach Hershel Burleson. "I think they slowed down the offense and slowed down the tempo of the game to take us out of our running game. They came well prepared, knowing they couldn't run with us and slowed it down. I think Robert Lee is a good representative for their district and that we're a good representative from ours.

"We didn't play as well as we're capable of playing," continued Burleson. "We had to change the lineup some. Last week we played two fine teams, Slayton and Regan County, and we played well. Tonight, I thought we didn't play the kind of ball we are capable of and I give the credit for that to Robert Lee."

The lineup change Burleson mentioned involved moving his son Stuart into the Rangers' inside attack where he began pulling double, and sometimes triple, coverage. Not only did that open up the outside game for Greenwood, it also sent the junior forward to the free throw line twice in the first half and three times in the second for nine points (out of 10 attempts).

Burleson led the Ranger scoring attack with 19 points and was given strong help from Dickerson who added 12 and Lopez with nine.

For Robert Lee, Scot Long was the only player to do much damage as he scored 13 points.

The Rangers now have three days to prepare for their next step enroute to a possible state playoff berth. On Friday they will be in Levelland for a 2:30 p.m. game against Wellman in the Region I Tournament.

Midland High's Joel Carrasco leaps high in the air to nab a peg to second base, but this Pecos runner was safe. However, MHS opened the 1982 baseball season with an 8-4 victory.

Bulldogs capture season-lifter, 8-4

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland High opened its baseball season Monday and if the Cactus and Grapefruit leagues are as lucky when they launch the major league exhibition season this weekend, they'll have weather nearly as nice.

For Coach Tim Whalen, the weather was just an extra bonus to go with the Purple Pack's 8-4 win over the Pecos Eagles at Memorial Stadium Field.

"I was so pleased with the way we played. We hustled, scraped and took the extra base. Defensively, we made all the plays in the field. Just one error. They did a great job," he enthused. "After last Saturday, I wasn't sure what would happen today. We scrimmaged Midland Lee and had them down 3-0 when everything went wrong. We did everything wrong and they scored 13 runs in one inning. After that we settled down and played good ball."

WINNING PITCHER Billy Miles and Joel de la Garza collaborated for a four-hitter while Joel Carrasco, Peter Galinde, Tim Davis and Judd Ryan led Midland's 11-hit offense with two hits each.

Midland jumped in front with three first-inning runs as Carrasco was hit by one of Sam Lujan's pitches to open the game, took third on Galinde's double to left and scored on a wild pitch. After Tim Davis walked and the runners moved into scoring position on another wild pitch, Daniel Castaneda delivered a two-run single.

The Pack struck again, with the aid of three errors, for two second-inning runs with a walk and singles by Carrasco, Galinde and Tim Davis doing the damage. Lujan was chased in favor of lefthander Grenville Granado during the uprising.

DOUBLES by Faustine Grande and Ryan made it 6-0 after three.

Miles, who pitched a no-hitter as a JV against Ector last year, started out like he had similar intentions, giving up only a pop up single to short left in the third for his only hit in four innings.

De la Garza came on in the fifth and was tagged hard after walking Tim Windham. David Michaelis doubled, Jaimi Rodriquez tripled and then an error let a third run score and Whalen wondered "if it was going to be Saturday all over again."

But De la Garza settled down to whiff the side in the sixth and finish with six strikeouts in three innnings.

MIDLAND returns to action in the preseason District 5-5A tournament Friday, playing Odessa Permian at Permian 11 a.m. Friday morning. Lee will face Odessa at 1:30 p.m. Friday at Odessa High.

Whalen indicated he would start Miles against the Panthers. "I only planned to use him four innings, but I could have stayed with him longer. He didn't throw as many pitches as I expected him to," Whalen said.

Looking ahead to the 5-5A race, Whelan looks for Abilene, Midland Lee and Odessa to be among the leaders and "Cooper always has good athletes, so you can't count them out. Abilene has everybody back, except their pitchers, thank goodness. They were big, lean and mean and didn't mind throwing at you. Ernie (Johnson) has a good defense and if he gets any pitching..."

Dodgers run out of patience with star

By The Associated Press

Last season, it was simply Fernandomania. This time around, it has turned into Fernando's money mania.

Monday night, Fernando Valenzuela, the only player ever to win the Cy Young and Rookie of the Year awards in the same season, became the highest-paid second-year player in baseball history ... without his approval.

On the day spring training officially opened, the Los Angeles Dodgers announced they have renewed Valenzuela's contract after they were unable to reach an agreement with representatives of the 21-year-old left-hander.

TERMS WERE not announced, but the Dodgers said in a statement that the contract calls for Valenzuela to become the highest-paid second-year major leaguer in history.

The Dodgers reportedly had offered Valenzuela $350,000, but the pitcher's agents, Tony DeMarco and Dick Moss, demanded $1 million. In renewing the contract, the Dodgers could have cut Valenzuela a maximum of 20 percent from the $42,500 he earned in 1981, his rookie campaign.

"We have tried hard to sign Fernando and we have made a number of very fair offers," said club President Peter O'Malley. "Many proposals were exchanged and considered, but we were unable to persuade Fernando's representatives how unrealistic their demands are. Our only alternative is to renew Fernando's contract."

Added Vice President Al Campanis, "We expect Fernando to honor the contract, which is now in effect, and to report immediately."

VALENZUELA stunned the baseball world a year ago by winning his first eight decisions. He finished the strike-interrupted season with a 13-7 record, a 2.48 earned run average and major league-leading totals of eight shutouts and 180 strikeouts.

In other training camp news:

— Pitcher Doyle Alexander will be fined for failing to report to the San Francisco Giants' camp but General Manager Tom Haller said the club hasn't decided on the amount yet. Alexander, the team's top winner last year, claims the Giants have agreed to improve his contract.

Although Haller said that "nothing is imminent" in the way of a trade, Manager Frank Robinson said, "This is the last year of his (Alexander's) contract and we're not going to be able to sign him, so we might as well try to get something for him."

— SLUGGER George Foster donned a New York Mets' uniform for the first time and predicted his presence in the lineup, along with Dave Kingman and Ellis Valentine, will improve the club's pitching.

"The pitchers will benefit with me and Dave and Ellis in the lineup knowing they don't have to pitch a shutout every time," Foster said.

— And on the first official day of spring training, California Manager Gene Mauch cut the Angels' workout short ... because they looked tired.

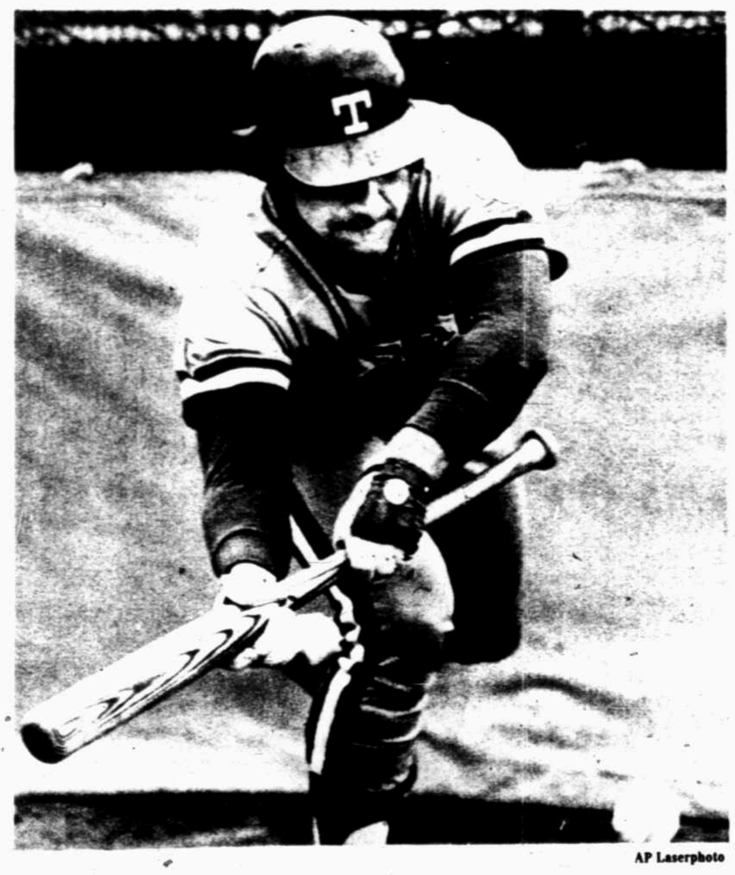

"We have taken so many swings, the players were suffering from arm weariness during the last hour," said Mauch, whose Angels began working out last Thursday.

Fans seem ready to forgive and forget

An AP Sports Analysis
By BOB GREENE

New faces and pennant hopes — not last year's mid-season players' strike — are on the minds of baseball fans, if the preseason sale of season tickets are any indication.

A poll by The Associated Press indicates ticket sales for the 1982 season are generally up.

And those teams which show a decrease in sales blame it on the economy, not last year's players' walkout, and to January's cold weather.

The trend appears to support what Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said last week — that last year's strike would have no effect on this year's attendance.

"I'd say things are very good, considering the current squeeze from the recession," said Mark Bloomquist, director of sales for the Seattle Mariners. "We're talking about the entertainment dollar, and people are spending it on baseball."

BLOOMQUIST SAID the Mariners expect to exceed last year's season ticket sales of slightly more than 3,000. Seattle opens at home April 16 against the Oakland A's, which Bloomquist said attracted a lot of group sales and "buyers off the street."

"You add Billy Martin to the regalia and festivities of opening day and you've got ticket sales," he said.

Slugger Reggie Jackson has already paid dividends for his new team, the California Angels.

"Our mail has been very heavy and season renewals have been very good, better than we expected, said Angeles ticket manager Carl Gordon. "We expected a bad year because of the strike, but it hasn't turned out that way."

Asked about Jackson's possible influence on sales, Gordon said: "With the renewals, I think if they were sitting on the fence deciding whether to buy season tickets again, they may have said to themselves, 'Well, since Reggie's here, let's give it another season.'"

In Milwaukee, the Brewers sold out opening day on Jan.20, the same date as last year.

"We are ... running about 10 percent ahead of last year," said Dick Hackett, Brewers vice president for marketing. Group sales are "just fantastic," he said, ahead of last year, and individual tickets through coming in "very heavy."

THE NEW York Mets also are up 10 percent in season ticket sales over last year. A team spokesman said a number of season ticket renewals were based on the George Foster trade, fans saying, "If you get Foster ... or make a similar big move ... we'll renew. If not, we won't."

Even the depart of Reggie Jackson hasn't hurt the New York Yankees in the pocketbook.

"Anytime you lose a player of Reggie's caliber, you run the risk of losing some fans," said Dave Szen, public relations director of the Yankees. "But for every fan who's cancelled his tickets because of Reggie, there are two or three fans who would love to have those seats. So what we lose, we make up immediately."

The Pittsburgh Pirates are in the minority. Their season ticket sales are about 10 percent behind last year.

"The biggest drawback is the recession more than the baseball strike," said Steve Greenberg, Pirates director of season ticket and group sales. "People are out of work and companies are cutting back. We depend on a lot of corporations and when they cut back people it's difficult for them to justify buying tickets."

The Boston Red Sox are also feeling the pinch because of the economy.

"It was going slow, but last week it picked up," said Arthur Muscato, Boston's director of ticket sales. "We expect that, because when they (the team) go down to spring training, it perks up. It's strictly the economy now."

In Chicago, spring brings new hope to the baseball fan.

"We are running ahead, definitely, dollar and ticketwise," said White Sox ticket manager Robert Devoy. "Close to 5,000 season tickets have been sold already, which is ahead of last year."

Over at Wrigley Field, Jerry Foran, the Cubs' ticket manager, said: "Season sales are running 25 percent ahead of last year. Other sales also are ahead, maybe 10 to 15 percent of last year. We'll be sold out for opening day.

"I think there's more entusiasm than last year," Foran said. "Remember, we have new owners and new things are being done. They're not coming back in droves, but they are coming back."

In Detroit, sales are "going good," according to Tigers ticket manager Jerry Bucholtz, while Tom Pfannenstiel, director of ticket operations for Kansas City, said the Royals are "probably down a little bit" from last year, but "I don't think it's so much the strike as the economy."

THE CLEVELAND Indians are looking up. Jerry Waring, the team's ticket director, attributed the increase "to various trades this club has made since last season."

Full season ticket sales for the Baltimore Orioles is running just behind last year's sales, which would make 1982 the second-best season in the club's history. A club spokesman said this time last year, the Orioles had "just over 4,700 full season tickets" sold, while this year they have "just under 4,700 sold."

Andrea Jeager is only seed left in Avon meet

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andrea Jaeger, the top remaining seed in the $150,000 Avon Championships of Los Angeles, faces unseeded Sabina Simmonds of Italy in a first-round singles match tonight.

Jaeger, 17, took over the favorite's role when Tracy Austin, the top seed in the women's tennis event, was forced to withdraw Monday because of first- and second-degree burns suffered when boiling water was spilled on her over the weekend.

Jaeger, seeded second, is coming off an impressive 7-6, 6-4 victory over Chris Evert Lloyd in Sunday's title match of the Avon Championships of Oakland tournament.

Austin, 19, said a restaurant employee accidentally dropped a pot of boiling water on her left arm and stomach. She said she could not play because the burns on her arm were too painful.

The incident occurred Saturday night in nearby Torrance. She was hospitalized where she was treated for first-degree burns of the stomach and second-degree burns of the arm before being released.

Austin hasn't played in six weeks because of a back injury. It was announced that she should make a complete recovery from the burns and be able to return to playing tennis within a week.

"I feel sort of sorry for her," said Jaeger, speaking of Austin. "It's unfortunate that she's having all this bad luck."

Don Sutton to be ready

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Pitching ace Don Sutton, whose kneecap was broken by a pitch five months ago, will be ready to go when the 1982 season opens April 6, Houston Astros' Manager Bill Virdon predicts.

Virdon made that predictiion Monday after the 36-year-old right-hander pitched in practice.

"I know he'll do whatever it takes to get himself ready by the time the season starts," Virdon said.

Astros' pitching coach Mel Wright agrees.

"He threw today for about eight minutes and had no trouble," Wright said. "He threw his full assortment of pitches."

Wright said he would have Sutton throw every day for four or five days, then give him a day off before letting him pitch batting practice for the first time Sunday.

Sutton, who caused a stir in the off-season by saying on a radio talk show that he would like to end his career with the California Angels, arrived to find his locker decorated with bubble gum cards and other paraphernalia from that team.

J.R. Richard, who was wild in his first turn at pitching batting practice last week, complained of a sore shoulder Monday. It was the third time that ailment caused him to scratch a turn on the mound this spring.

Richard is attempting to come back from a near-fatal stroke during the 1980 season.

Spears, Thomas team earn win

Marion and Bob Spears combined with Jane and Bill Thomas for a 128 Sunday to win the Midland Country Club's monthly Mixed Foursome golf tournament.

Becky and Jack Huff teamed with Jane Wyant and Charlie Koch for a 130 team score, which was good for second place. The scores were obtained from a best ball format with couple's scores added together.

Tar Heels are back on top

By The Associated Press

Preseason favorite North Carolina, which reigned over the elite of college basketball from the beginning of the season until late January, once again rules the Associated Press poll following a week of upsets among the nation's Top Twenty teams.

A dozen members of last week's Top Twenty, including then top-ranked Virginia, lost at least one game during the week. West Virginia, ranked sixth at the time, also saw its 23-game winning streak — the longest in the country — end against Rutgers.

North Carolina, ranked second last week, collected 36 of 60 first-place votes in the balloting by nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters Monday. The Tar Heels, 24-2 following victories over Georgia Tech and Duke last week, picked up 1,162 of a possible 1,200 points — 40 more than runner-up DePaul.

Ray Meyer's Blue Demons received 16 first-place votes after raising their record to 26-1 with victories over Furman and Notre Dame. DePaul now has the nation's longest major winning streak at 21 games.

Virginia slipped to No. 3 following its 47-46 loss at Maryland. The Cavaliers still managed five first-place votes and 1,097 points.

Oregon State, which has clinched the Pac-10 title and an NCAA tournament berth, and Missouri retained the fourth and fifth positions, respectively, although Missouri was surprised by Kansas State, 57-56, early in the week.

Oregon State, which got three first-place votes, received 1,043 points, while Missouri, now 23-2, got 797.

Idaho, 24-2, jumped up three positions and edged Minnesota and Georgetown, D.C., in that order, for the No. 6 position. The Vandals had 766 points — 32 more than the Gophers, who were ranked 13th last week when they downed Big Ten rival Iowa. The Hoyas of Georgetown, 23-6 after victories over Providence and Connecticut, were another 10 points back at 724.

West Virginia, now 24-2, and Tulsa, ranked eighth last week when it was upset by Bradley in overtime, rounded out the Top Ten. The Mountaineers got 617, while the Golden Hurricane had 565 to nip both Iowa (562) and Fresno State (560) for 10th place.

Memphis State slipped three slots to No. 13 following a loss to red-hot Louisville, and was followed by Arkansas, Kentucky, Wake Forest, Kansas State, Alabama, UCLA and Alabama-Birmingham, which won the Sun Belt Conference tournament Sunday and a berth in the NCAA tournament.

San Francisco, outlasted by Pepperdine last week, and Tennessee, a losers to both Georgia and Auburn last week, fell from the Top Twenty, being replaced by Kansas State and Alabama-Birmingham.

Last week, the Second Ten was Iowa, Georgetown, Minnesota, Fresno State, Arkansas, San Francisco, Alabama, Wake Forest, Tennessee and UCLA.

The week's biggest plunge was taken by Kentucky, which tumbled from No.7 to 15th place following a 94-78 loss to Louisiana State.

Evansville wants berth in NCAA tournament

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — University of Evansville basketball coach Dick Walters believes that his Aces deserve to be playing in a post-season tournament.

Walters, who in four years has rebuilt a basketball program wiped out by a plane crash, says, "There is no doubt in my mind we're one of the top 48 teams in the country."

The Aces are 21-5. They are among the national leaders in winning margin, field goal percentage and defense against the field goal.

"We've got a one point loss to the (then) No.3 team in the country (DePaul) at their place," Walters said Monday. "We've got an overtime loss to Kansas at Kansas.

"It's going to be hard to keep us out (of the tournament)," he continued.

Even thinking about getting into the NCAA tournament would have been more than a little boastful just a few years ago.

When Walters took over at Evansville in 1978, the team, the university and this southern Indiana community were reeling from a tragic airplane crash which claimed the lives of the entire team, all but one of its coaches, several school officials and some supporters.

That team, under rookie coach Bobby Watson would have been the first Evansville club to compete on the Division I level. The Aces dominated the college division during the 1960s and early 1970s, winning four national titles.

The team has consistently improved under Walters, who was recruited for the job from a successful stint at the junior college level.

Evansville clinched the regular season championship of the Midwest City Conference Feb. 20 with two games remaining in conference play by defeating Loyola on the road. The Aces followed that with a heartbreaking loss to Detroit at home.

The regular season finale found Evansville back on track with a 68-58 victory over Butler.

The rap on the Aces all year long has been their schedule. Loyola, Detroit and Butler aren't exactly household names among even the most fervent college basketball fanatics.

Neither, for that matter, is the Midwest City Conference.

The NCAA thinks enough about the conference to give its champion an automatic bid to the March tournament. But the champion will be decided in a tournament that begins this week at Tulsa, Okla.

It's been 20 years since incredible 100

NEW YORK (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain seemed surprised that 20 years had gone by since that incredible game in which he scored 100 points and set eight National Basketball Association records that still stand.

"Twenty years? I didn't realize I was getting that old," Chamberlain, 45, smiled. "Frankly, I didn't even know the anniversary was coming up until you fellows mentioned it."

It was March 2, 1962 that Chamberlain, then in his third year with the Philadelphia Warriors, became the only NBA player to score 100 points in a game and forever inscribed Hershey, Pa., in the minds of sports fans for something other than candy bars.

IN THAT game, which Philadelphia won 169-147 over the New York Knicks, Chamberlain set records for most points in a game; most points in a half (59 in the second half); most field goals attempts in a quarter (21), half (37) and game (63); most field goals made in a half (22) and game (36); most free throws made in game (28).

"I enjoyed some of the things that happened in that game," Chamberlain said, adding deadpan, "especially the 28 fouls shots."

Throughout his career, the 7-foot-1 superstar was hooted and laughed at for his often-frustrating efforts from the free-throw line. "I just lost my concentration somewhat most of the time," Chamberlain explained. But not that night. He missed only four times in 32 tries.

Ironically, he found the touch not in Philadelphia, where it was not unusual to hear boos when Chamberlain missed foul shots, but some 90 miles away in Hershey, where the Warriors would occasionally play home games.

The 4,100 fans at the game played a part in the event because their chanting in the small arena inspired him to go for triple figures, Chamberlain said during a visit with his Wilt's Athletic Club for the USA-Mobil track and field meet last Friday night.

"I WASN'T aware of how many points I had until I hit 75, and the fans started to chant, "We want 100. We want 100.'"

Chamberlain reached 75 points in the fourth quarter, and some writers who were there recalled that public address announcer Dave Zinkoff began to announce Chamberlain's point total at about that time.

The fans also were chanting, "Give it to Wilt," which were the same instructions given the players by Warriors Coach Frank McGuire, who said he had a feeling when Chamberlain had 69 points by the end of the third quarter that 100 points was possible.

Wilt's teammates, who had been kidding him that winter about averaging 47 shots a game, really didn't need McGuire's orders. They, too, were caught up in the excitement.

"My teammates made more of a conscious effort than I did," Chamberlain recalled. "They took it upon themselves to be sure I got the ball. Guy Rodgers, a tremendous feeding guard, Al Attles, who is now the Warriors' coach, and the others ... they gave of themselves to make sure I got the 100."

Rodgers, who averaged 7.9 assists that season, had 20 in that game.

"It was not a sideshow," said Chamberlain, aware that the term had been used in the intervening 20 years to describe the performance which turned into a deliberate effort — at the expense of all other aspects of the game — to reach the 100-point figure.

"It was something the people wanted to see, getting into triple figures. It was a nice round number."

CHAMBERLAIN had been scoring high numbers all season. McGuire, when he took over as coach that season, had made it clear he wanted "Dipper," a nickname the 25-year-old star preferred to "Wilt the Stilt," to be a scoring machine, even if it meant neglecting other duties on the court. Chamberlain recalled that when McGuire suggested he could average 50 points a game, he told the coach he was crazy.

Chamberlain, though, took McGuire at his word. Before the 100-point game he scored 78 points in a triple overtime, set a regulation-game record with 73 points and twice scored 67 points. He wound up averaging 50.4 points a game that season, another record that still stands.

Chamberlain takes more pride in that mark, and the record 55 rebounds he pulled down in a 1960 game, than he does in the 100-point game.

"I think those two will stand up longer than the 100 points. All records eventually will be broken, but those two will be around longer," he predicted.

Still, only two other players have scored 70 or more points, David Thompson of Denver, 73, in 1978, and Elgin Baylor of Los Angeles, 71, in 1960.

As the 100-point game got down to the frantic last minutes, Chamberlain broke his own all-time record of 78 points with 7:51 remaining. He had 89 points with five minutes to play. There was a period of two minutes and 15 seconds when he didn't score at all, but he got to 98 points with a little more than one minute to play.

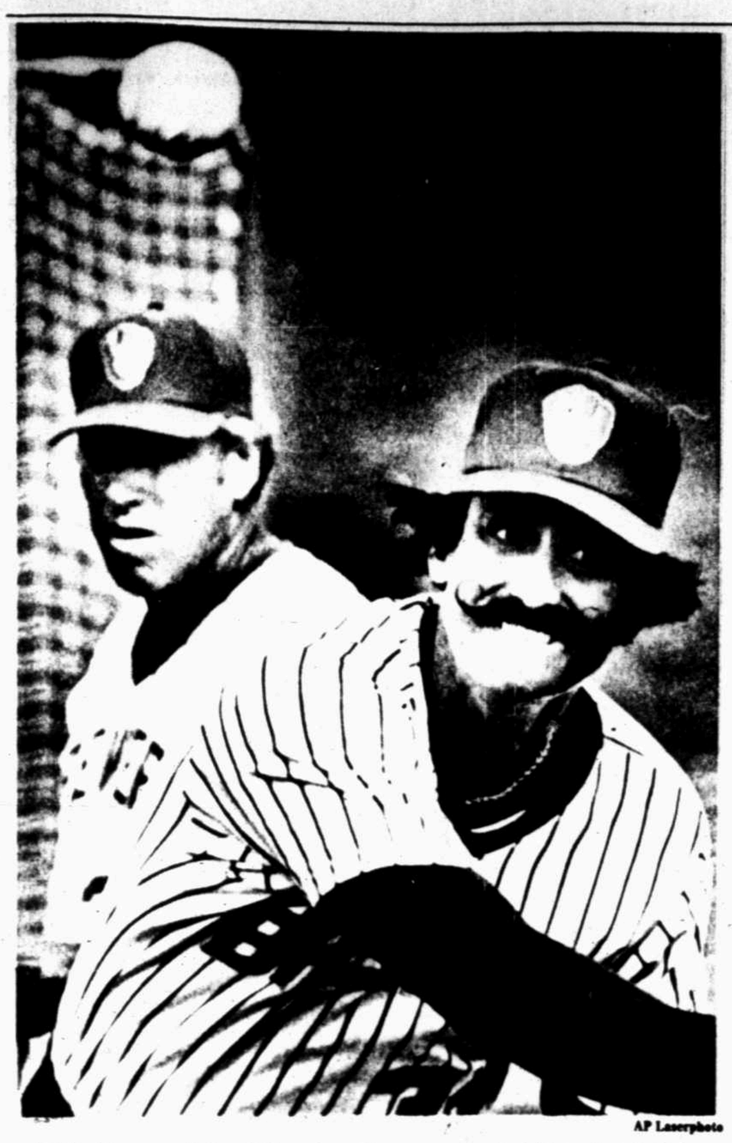

The crowd was on its feet by then, and roared when Chamberlain missed both a shot and the followup on a rebound. Then, with 46 seconds to go, Chamberlain leaped, grabbed a pass from Joe Ruklick, and, with both hands, stuffed in the basket that gave him 100 points.

THE CROWD poured onto the court, his teammates left the bench and so did some of the Knicks.

"They never finished that game," as Chamberlain remembered it. "People came on the court and it was all over."

Chamberlain, who recently rejected an offer to come out of retirement, pays little attention to pro basketball these days. Instead, he is involved in track and field, which he called his first love.

But his eyes sparkled when he talked about that game played 20 years ago. "In retrospect, it was a sensational situation," he said.

Collusion is term new to baseball

An AP Sports Analysis
By HAL BOCK

Collusion.

The word is ominous and carries with it suggestions of behind-the-scenes maneuvering and underhanded tactics. It is frought with illegal implications and it is the term Marvin Miller chooses to describe baseball management's dealing this winter with the re-entry draft free agents.

"There is no question about it," says Miller.

How else, asks the executive director of the Major League Players Association, can you explain the fact that 18 free agents who were on the open market place signed contracts with their old clubs?

"Consider that in the five prior years of free agency, the total number of players who stayed with their former clubs was 19," Miller said. "That total includes players who were totally free — that is, those who got no bids from other teams — and others who were free agents only for purposes of winter roster limitations. Put them all together for five years and you total 19. Now, all of a sudden, we have 18 in one year."

It does seem odd.

"Here and there I think a player signed with his old team by preference," Miller continued. "There is some evidence that (Seattle pitcher) Glenn Abbott could have gotten more money elsewhere and there might be a couple of more like that. But by and large, it reeks of collusion."

THAT WAS Miller's message to Congress last week when he testified before a House subcommittee examining baseball's historic anti-trust exemption. Miller also believes baseball has conspired to circumvent the results of last summer's strike which set the boundaries of compensation when free agents move from one team to another.

When the 1981 class of free agents listened to offers, Miller said, they were unable to find any bids higher than the ones tendered by their old clubs. "Was that a coincidence?" he wondered.

He cites as a flagrant example pitcher Sid Monge, who finished his contract obligation with the Cleveland Indians and went shopping for a new team. One club which was interested was the Philadelphia Phillies.

"Philadelphia made one miserable offer that represented a cut from what Monge made at Cleveland last year, Miller said. "For six weeks, there was no improvement."

Finally Monge re-signed with the Indians, agreeing to waive a standard clause in the free-agent contract which said he could not be traded before June 15. The next thing he knew, he was swapped to Philadelphia for outfielder Bake McBride. The Indians had obtained compensation for Monge, bending the rules established after the strike.

Miller howled.

ON THE surface, it seems that the Phillies were snookered. Instead of signing Monge the first time around at a reasonable figure, they were forced to pay the much higher price which the Indians had agreed to — and had to surrender a player as well. How did Philadelphia benefit from that? How is that collusion?

"Part of a collusive effort is that it does not always work to your immediate advantage if you live up to it," Miller said. "Ron Guidry is a good example. Here was a player who could help some team win a pennant. But there was no significant bidding for him."

Guidry, of course, remained with the New York Yankees, one of the 18 loyalists who did not move.

Miller has already filed a grievance and is certain the collusion case will wind up in arbitration. That's because management denies any such plot.

Female boxer now seeks competition for Michigan

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Jill Lafler, turned down by a federal judge earlier this month in her bid to compete in a men's amateur boxing competition, now is backing an attempt to form a separate women's boxing organization in Michigan.

And the 19-year-old Lansing Community College student says she will ask her lawyers not to pursue the lawsuit which led to the decision because he fears it may hurt the move toward a women's organization. However, she will not ask that the lawsuit be dismissed.

"I don't want them to totally put the case off," Lafler said, explaining that she wants to have the suit "as something to fall back on" in case the women's organization fails to materialize. "The whole point is to get something around for women. I just want to compete."

Lafler also revealed that she is due to give birth in the fall, but said her pregnancy had nothing to do with her decision "since I just found out."

Lafler said she made her decision to support creation of a separate women's group after talking to Dennis Sprandel, executive director of the Michigan chapter of the U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation.

Twin-Cities Speedway offers stock schedule

ODESSA — The Odessa Speedbowl is no longer. It's now the Twin-Cities Speedway under new promoters John David, Bill Feles, Joe Erwin and John Foster.

The new group has also announced an ambitious schedule of events for 1982 for asphalt stock car racing at the Twin-Cities track, located five miles east of Odessa on Highway 80.

The first special event will be the Texas Spring Invitational Street Stock Championship, which is scheduled for March 21 at 2 p.m. The event will carry a $1,500 purse, which is the largest purse ever for a street stock division in Texas. The Mid-Season Championship will be held June 25.

In the March race, the top six cars from three heat races will go to the feature and an additional two cars from the consolation will complete the 20-car feature. Prize money can be won in both the heat and consolation races, but all 20 cars will be paid in the feature with 11th through 20th places receiving at least $10. The feature winner will earn $350 while second will pay $250. Third place is $125 and fourth $100. Entry fee for the event is $15 per car.

The track will open at 11 a.m. with hot laps running from noon until 1:30 p.m. The first heat race is at 2 p.m.

Beginning Friday, April 2, weekly stock car shows will feature late model stock cars and street stock cars, running through Sept. All races will be held on Fridays at 8 p.m., except the March 21 event and other special events on July 4 and Labor Day.

Promoters have added over $200 above the purse in lap money in both the late model division and the street stock division on all weekly races. And as an added excitement for fans, spectators can participate in one-lap races on the semi-banked, quarter-mile asphalt oval in all weekly events.

Twin-Cities Speedway, formerly the Odessa Speedbowl, is going through major clean-up improvements, such as dust control and modern restroom facilities. The track has adopted a new tire rule to cut racing costs. This year's track tire will be the McReary EC82.

Twin-Cities Speedway will be open for practice March 21 from noon till 10 p.m. and again March 31 from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. For more information, call 563-2261 or 332-3542.

UAW considering new GM talks

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press W iter

DETROIT (AP) — After signing an unprecedented concessions pact with Ford Motor Co., the United Auto Workers' president said he will talk to the union's locals to see if they would support reopening similar discussions that failed at General Motors Corp.

And the union's American Motors Corp. council voted unanimously Monday in Chicago to seek more information about a proposal from AMC that in effect asks 15,000 workers to loan the company their wage and benefit increases.

But AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland asserted in Washington that the wage concessions granted to Ford and signed Monday reflect only the auto industry's slump and "do not necessarily" mean the nation is entering an era of austerity for unionized workers.

"We will be talking with the local unions at (General Motors Corp.) within the next few days and will make a determination" on whether to respond to the No. 1 U.S. automaker's call for concessions talks, UAW President Douglas A. Fraser said.

He said union leaders would discuss new talks today with the union's 11-member GM national bargaining committee.

Fraser's comments Monday came after he and Ford Chairman Philip Caldwell signed the historic 31-month contract at the No. 2 automaker's headquarters in suburban Detroit.

The signing came a day after Ford autoworkers ratified the pact 43,683 to 15,933. It is expected to save Ford up to $1 billion.

The union's 70-member AMC council will meet with officials of the No. 4 automaker Monday in Milwaukee, said Ray Majerus, the union's secretary-treasurer. Canadian members decided at the five-hour meeting in Chicago to reject the idea of giving concessions and said it was the government's job to help out, not the workers'.

After the Monday meeting, "we will proceed and have a council meeting and decide whether to reopen contract talks," Majerus said.

The American Motors proposal asks the autoworkers to forgo $150 million worth of increases in wages and benefits in return for repayment, with interest, in later years.

Ford, GM and AMC have sought concessions in the midst of the worst domestic sales slump since the Depression. The union held concessions talks with GM, but the talks broke down Jan. 29.

Although UAW workers at Chrysler Corp. agreed to concessions, the Ford pact is historic because it affects workers nationwide. The Chrysler agreement affects mainly workers in the Midwest.

The auto industry's current slump continued last month, according to figures released Monday. February car production at the five major U.S. carmakers fell to its lowest level in 34 years, with just 323,661 autos turned out, the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association said. In February 1948, 275,056 cars were produced. February production was down 32 percent from the number of cars built in February 1981.

Caldwell said Ford, which reported 1981 losses of $1.06 billion, "will use this next two and a half years to demonstrate that this contract is a living document."

The contract, which went into effect Monday and runs until Sept. 14, 1984, wipes out 3 percent annual wage boosts for Ford's 170,000 autoworkers, defers cost-of-living allowance payments for nine months, eliminates eight paid personal holidays and a Sunday bonus payment and lowers wages and benefits for new hires.

Analysts estimate it will save Ford $1 billion over the life of the pact, but Ford and union officials refused to confirm the figure.

Company and union officials say nothing in the contract promises the savings will result in lower car prices.

David Eisenberg, auto industry analyst at Sanford Bernstein and Co. in New York, said the labor cost savings should amount to about $160 per car, but that's "hardly enough to get car sales turned around" even if Ford returned all the savings to the consumer.

In return for the concessions, Ford said it will deposit immediately $70 million into a benefit fund for laid-off workers, guarantee income for higher seniority workers, implement profit sharing and agree to a two-year moratorium on plant closings due to sending work abroad or to non-union companies.

Local OKs contract though jobs at risk

SHEFFIELD, Ala. (AP) — The United Auto Workers local here threw its support behind the newly-ratified agreement with Ford Motor Co. even though members knew it might not save their own jobs, a union official says.

The moratorium on plant closings contained in the agreement does not cover the Sheffield aluminum casting plant because it was slated for shutdown last fall after the workers refused to accept 50 percent cuts in pay and benefits or an employee ownership plan.

The workers voted against the earlier proposal because accepting the pay cut would have broken the national wage and benefit agreement between Ford and the union, Local 255 President Sonny McCanless explained at the time. The local would not make any concessions, it said, unless the national union approved.

Ford had said the 25-year-old plant was losing as much as $3 million per month.

"It was not a matter of not wanting to do things (to help save money)," McCanless said Monday night. "It was a matter of not wanting to be singled out."

When the national union officials worked out a new agreement with Ford, the Sheffield local gave overwhelming approval Sunday, voting 451 for and 65 against.

The decision to stick with the union contract in both instances was a sound one, McCanless said, since many of the 1,100 workers at the plant stand to gain even if Ford proceeds with the planned shutdown.

GMC sport car sales up

DETROIT (AP) — While most of the domestic market lies in a deep slump, sales of two General Motors Corp. high-performance models — the Chevrolet Camaro and the Pontiac Firebird — are on the increase.

The resulting increased production meant 1,600 GM workers returned Monday to work at the Norwood, Ohio, plant which makes the popular sport models.

The recall, which was announced several weeks ago, was prompted by the addition of a second shift at the Ohio plant, GM spokesman Bruce MacDonald said.

A GM assembly plant in Van Nuys, Calif. also is working two shifts to build the cars, he said.

No clear signal seen of recession's end

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

President Reagan says the recession "has begun to level out" despite a ninth month of declining economic indicators, while his Commerce secretary says it "has yet to run its course" and a deputy treasury secretary says unemployment could reach 10 percent.

Reagan's comment came Monday after reporters asked if the recession was deepening. When Reagan said the decline was slowing, a reporter suggested a metaphor — the Titanic sank despite a change in its rate of decline.

"The ship is afloat," Reagan responded. "It's just in the hollow of the wave and riding out for the next curve."

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, meanwhile, commenting on the fact that the index of leading economic indicators fell again in January, said, "the recession has yet to run its course."

He was not totally pessimistic, adding, "The fact that the indicators were on the minus side in January is not inconsistent with forecasts of a second-quarter recovery in the economy."

Deputy Treasury Secretary R.T. McNamar, speaking to an insurance industry group, said "the current downturn will be far worse than envisioned in our earlier scenarios." He said the unemployment rate, which stood at 8.5 percent in January, "may yet go to 10 percent before we get things turned around."

Reagan's comment came after a meeting with advisers and Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee, in which he called for support to tell Congress, "no, you may not touch our tax cut."

A program enacted in 1981 cut personal income tax rates 5 percent last Oct. 1 and is scheduled to provide a 10 percent cut in July and another 10 percent cut in July 1983. Pressure to delay, reduce or eliminate the pending cuts has grown in an attempt to reduce the federal budget deficit.

One sign of continued economic weakness came in a report from the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association, an auto industry group, that February car production fell to 323,661 vehicles, the lowest level in 34 years and down 32 percent from the same month a year ago.

Production for the first two months of the year reached 603,432 cars, off 35 percent from the same 1981 period. But an industry journal said automakers plan to produce 522,000 cars in March.

The Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Indicators fell 0.6 percent in January and that an earlier report of an 0.6 percent December rise in the gauge of future economic health was revised to a 0.3 percent decline.

The January decline would have been 2.8 percent if Commerce Department officials had not deleted a sharp drop in the average workweek from the computations of the index. The report said severe weather in January had such an impact on business that it was more meaningful to exclude the decline in the average workweek to 36.9 hours from 39 hours.

Baldrige and several private economists still said the economy could recover from recession in the April-to-June quarter, even if economic pain increased before then.

Alan Greenspan, an economic adviser to Reagan, told the Senate Budget Committee, "while the evidence the rate of (economic) decline is slowing and, in fact, may have hit bottom, indications of an upturn are scant at best."

The Labor Department said productivity in non-financial corporations — accounting for nearly two-thirds of all private sector employment — rose 2.5 percent last year, the highest increase since the 2.7 percent rise in 1977.

Productivity measures the volume of goods and services the private sector produces in each hour of paid working time.

The Commerce Department reported new constuction by U.S. builders fell 1.5 percent in January from December and dropped nearly 11 percent from January 1981 levels. It also revised the figure for December from a 1 percent decrease to a 1.2 percent increase.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development said it is lowering the interest-rate ceiling on federally backed single-family home loans to 15.5 percent from the 16.5 percent level adopted Jan. 25. The ceiling reached a record 17.5 percent last September.

The change covers home loans made by private lenders and insured by HUD's Federal Housing Administration or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration.
