Local college presidents favor proposed panel

A proposed blue-ribbon commission to evaluate higher education in Texas would benefit colleges and universities across the state, according to leaders of three Permian Basin institutions.

Presidents of Midland and Odessa colleges and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin today applauded a legislative proposal to establish the commission to review the state's colleges and universities, calling it a "sound move."

"I'm very supportive of it," said MC President Dr. Jess Parrish. "It will help to determine what's good and what's bad with higher education in Texas."

Parrish, chairman of the Texas Junior College District Legislative Committee, said following a meeting with lawmakers in Austin early this week, "Community colleges have everything to gain if the study is done properly."

He noted, however, that "representation is important. We must be sure that there are educators on the commission."

OC President Dr. Phillip Speegle remarked, "I'm not opposed to it. Junior colleges certainly do well whenever they (legislators) do a study of higher education."

Speegle expressed concern that lawmakers might "overemphasize" future findings of the commission. "I'm sure there will be a different emphasis of this commission because of the Perot study," he said.

The proposal, introduced by Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, and co-sponsored by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, and Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, creates the Select Committee on Higher Education to conduct a comprehensive study of all concerns relating to higher education in the state.

"Now that we have completed a total review of public education, I believe it is time we gave higher education the same scrutiny," Shaw has said. "It is a logical next step to take a look at how we are spending our money on higher education."

Lawmakers, including Gov. Mark White, House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, have indicated that an evaluation of the education system in Texas would answer such "hard questions" as whether or not to abolish the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"This is by no means a witch hunt," Lewis has said. "If there is a duplication of services (at institutions), we want to find that out."

According to UTPB President Dr. Duane Leach, "Higher education could benefit (from a study) in the long run. I don't think we have a great deal to be concerned about, but I do feel that we should withhold from making any statement until we know what they're setting out to do."

The House Appropriations Committee recommended last week to close UTPB and the Texas A&M University at Galveston within two years in an effort to save state funds. But both schools are expected to be placed back in the state budget before it is approved by the Legislature.

"We're hoping it'll (replacing the schools in the budget) be done in committee," Lewis said, noting the universities may have to be restored on the House floor. "We'll get it done."

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, has indicated there are enough votes on the 29-member appropriations committee to rescind the proposal by Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, which would shut down UTPB and Texas A&M University at Galveston.

"I don't think the move on UTPB is a serious one," Parrish said.

Regarding the commission, White has said it should be aimed at reducing a "duplication of efforts" on the part of Texas institutions of higher education. "Every college and university should re-evaluate its mission," he remarked.

GISD board candidates don't intend to increase taxes

ELECTION 85

By JULIE HILLRICHS

Greenwood Independent School District traditionally has boasted a reputation for upholding conservative values.

And the issues which are arising from this, an election year, tend to reflect that tradition.

Greenwood voters are demanding that educators focus on the basics. And the message they are conveying to school board candidates indirectly implies that the winners will be those who undoubtedly work toward education excellence without raising taxes.

"I don't intend to raise taxes," said candidate Archie Blackwell, as did the six other candidates running for the three vacancies on the board.

Blackwell, who is vying for Place 2 (a one-year expired term), is a investigator with the Department of Public Safety auto theft division.

He chose to run for office because "I feel that as a parent, a taxpayer and a member of this community, my responsibility is to do what I can to make the school district run efficiently and economically and ensure and quality education for our children," he said.

THE PRIMARY campaign issue in 1985 is the student, according to Blackwell. "The kids have got to come first."

Next, are "the teachers," he said. "I'm like the teacher, I get paid by tax dollars so I know what kind of problems we have.

Blackwell claimed to advocate much of the education reform passed last year by the House of Representatives including exit level testing of students and rules concerning student absences.

But he said he strongly opposes teacher competency tests, noting, "I'm definitely against that. Look at our doctors, lawyers and other professionals. How many employees are required to take a test to keep their jobs?"

His opponent Kennenth Ellis said, "Greenwood is a wonderful school and I want to keep it that way. It's the best quality education there is."

Ellis, a retired employee with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., emphasized that to ensure quality education, GISD must hire qualified administrators. "If we want qualified teachers, we have to have qualified administrators. That's what we hire a superintendent for."

Seeking election to Place 6 are incumbent Patsy Herrington, Jeff Fair and James Donnell.

American freed from imprisonment in Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A 41-year-old American yachtsman was released today by Vietnam, where he spent 8½ months in solitary confinement on charges of espionage and violating territorial waters.

Bill Mathers, in Bangkok on his way home to Singapore, denied he was spying or that his schooner, the So Fong, was in Vietnamese waters when it was seized last July 22.

Mathers had been sailing from Singapore to Hong Kong via the Thai resort island of Koh Samui, and said the 80-foot schooner was about 36 miles off the Vietnamese coast, well within international waters.

Looking fit and composed, Mathers said, "I was treated all right. I had plenty of food, and — a phrase they liked — I always had freedom of my own space."

He said he was kept at times in a 10-by-10 foot room, and could not speak with anyone but his interrogators, who questioned him for days on end. No mail or news of the outside world was allowed, he said.

Mathers, who grew up in Oyster Bay, N.Y., but has lived in Singapore since 1970, hesitated when asked by a reporter if he had been mistreated or how he felt about his experience, saying he first would speak with Thai and U.S. officials to clarify his situation.

"Right now my opinions are somewhat biased," he said.

Mathers worked for a marine construction company.

His crew, four French citizens and one Australian, was released earlier, after fines were paid. Mathers' case was hampered by the lack of diplomatic relations between the United States and Vietnam.

A number of U.S. congressmen, the United Nations and the governments of Indonesia, France, Australia and the Netherlands had interceded on his behalf.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Bangkok said as far as he knew, Mathers' parents in New York paid the $10,000 the Vietnamese demanded for his release. Mathers said the Vietnamese held onto his schooner "in trust."

"We're very pleased that's he's free," the embassy spokesman said. "But we still feel there was no reason for him to be held in the first place or for any fine to be levied or any other sanction."

Mathers said he was interrogated on four different occasions, each lasting "quite a number of days." Mathers said he was accused of several crimes, including espionage, but declined to go into detail.

"I'll be very happy to meet with you later...I'm going to have a shave, and also enjoy the fact that I can talk to people," he said.

Talks stalled until decision made to bomb Hanoi

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth of a six-part series of excerpts from the book, "No More Vietnams," by former President Richard Nixon.

By RICHARD NIXON

NO MORE VIETNAMS
Part 5

In 1972 it was fashionable in academic circles to assert that the Vietnam War proved military power no longer had any utility in international politics. But the exact opposite was the case.

For almost four years, the North Vietnamese stalled both our public and private peace talks. But after the United States and South Vietnam decisively defeated their spring offensive, the North Viethamese for the first time began to negotiate seriously.

Hanoi's reading of American politics added an incentive to settle the war quickly. Because I was leading Sen. George McGovern by as much as 30 percentage points in the polls, the North Vietnamese had probably concluded that I was almost certainly going to re-elected on Nov. 7. They also probably believed that they might get better terms from me before the election than after it.

As a result, our private channel with the North Vietnamese became active in August. In late September, they presented a new proposal during a two-day session of our secret talks. Although it was significantly more forthcoming than any of their past proposals, it was still unacceptable on the key military and political issues. It was clear that the next meeting, scheduled for Oct. 8, would be decisive in determining whether they intended to reach a settlement before the presidential election.

When the talks reconvened, Hanoi made a proposal in which it capitulated on nearly all the major issues. Most of our remaining disputes were hammered out in another session of talks in mid-October. But on one major issue we could not budge the North Vietnamese from their position: They refused to withdraw their forces from South Vietnam.

We knew that there was no way to force them to concede this point. It is an axiom of diplomacy that one cannot win at the conference table what one could not win on the battlefield, and the North Vietnamese continued to occupy large areas of South Vietnam along the Demilitarized Zone and in the Central Highlands.

We had to consider how Hanoi viewed its options. We knew that if reaching a settlement required the North Vietnamese to give away territory that South Vietnam had been unable to take away, they could calculate that they were better off not concluding an agreement. If we had stood firm in demanding North Vietnam's withdrawal, there would have been no peace agreement.

In resolving the issue, we demanded that Hanoi pledge to stop the infiltration of men into South Vietnam. If the promise were kept, enemy forces in the South soon would have to withdraw or would wither away. When the North Vietnamese agreed to this, we set a timetable for signing a completed agreement by Oct. 31.

On Oct. 18, when Secretary of State Henry Kissinger flew to South Vietnam to explain the agreement, he ran into strong resistance from President Nguyen Van Thieu. Thieu understandably wanted the agreement to require the North Vietnamese to withdraw their forces from his country. But his objections went deeper: He was profoundly insecure about what would happen after the United States withdrew. As a result, he proposed over 20 changes to the draft agreement, seven of which the North Vietnamese would never accept. It now seemed to be inevitable that the Oct. 31 deadline would pass without an agreement.

While negotiating with Thieu, we were also negotiating with the North Vietnamese over his reservations to the draft agreement. Hanoi, noting the difficulties we were having with Saigon, pursued a cleverly calculated strategy. On the one hand, its delegates agreed to virtually all of the technical points we raised in order to build a perfect neogtiating record that, if publicized, would make it appear that South Vietnam was obstructing a settlement.

Mathers, dressed in a yellow sports shirt, neatly pressed gray slacks and leather moccasins, said he first learned of his coming release on Sunday, when his captors read out a final indictment.

He said he planned to return to Singapore in the next few days to settle his affairs, and then return to the United States to see his family.

"Reading," Mathers said when asked how he passed his months in detention.

He said the Vietnamese at first didn't give him anything to read. "But I was lucky. I was able to take (the novel) 'Shogun' with me and I was able to read it three times."

New computer delays IRS in processing returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service, bedeviled all year by a new computer system, has processed fewer than 58 percent of the individual tax returns filed during the first 13 weeks of 1985, delaying refunds for millions of taxpayers.

IRS figures released today show each of the 10 regional service centers where returns are processed has completed work on far fewer than during the same period last year. At this point a year ago, 77.5 percent of returns received had been processed.

"We're showing improvement each week but we're still behind," said IRS spokesman Ernest Acosta.

Officer's alleged assailant testifies

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 29-year-old former Midlander who testified Wednesday he didn't remember much about an alleged confrontation with police Nov. 6 because he had been drinking heavily since 9 a.m. that day faces either a felony charge of aggravated assault on a peace officer or a Class A misdemeanor charge of resisting arrest.

The six-woman, six-man jury selected Tuesday in 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin's courtroom was to determine today the guilt or innocence of Samuel Walker Orr, who is charged with assaulting Midland police officer Wren Calhoun, 32.

The defendant is alleged to have kicked Calhoun in the stomach in the early-morning hours of Nov. 6 when she and several back-up officers were trying to arrest him for public intoxication in the parking lot of the Stop 'N Go convenience store at Garfield and Whitmire.

The defendant, who now lives in Grand Prairie, took the stand Wednesday and told jurors he had been drinking heavily the day of the incident because he was upset about separating from his childhood sweetheart whom he married in 1974.

Orr testified he began drinking at noon Nov. 5 at the 007 lounge, where his mother is the manager. At 9 p.m., after "30-35 screwdrivers" Orr said he went to Harrigan's bar and restaurant where he danced and drank more.

The defendant said he remembers being at the convenience store parking lot, waiting to meet a man who was seeing Orr's estranged wife, but he said he doesn't remember calling the man from Harrigan's.

Buddy Cole, who has since married Orr's ex-wife, testified he was awakened early Nov. 6 by a telephone call from Orr, who said he wanted to meet "to talk."

Cole said he called police and met with Calhoun and her partner at a nearby restaurant.

There, Cole said, Calhoun advised him to go home and she would talk to Orr.

The defendant said he remembered talking with Wren Calhoun in the patrol car.

"The next thing I remember was just being on the ground wrestling with them," he said. "I don't remember putting my foot on her, or shoving her or striking her."

"Do you remember the next morning, when I came to the police department, what your reaction was when I told you someone was hurt?" asked defense attorney Mike Cunningham.

"I started crying," Orr testified. "I was praying to God that she was all right and asking forgiveness just like anyone else would."

Calhoun, who was hospitalized for six days and had $3,200 in medical bills after the incident, testified Tuesday she cannot remember many details of the alleged assault because of a concussion she suffered at that time.

Prosecutors fought to allow Calhoun to read a police report Tuesday morning that she wrote before she underwent tests and X-rays at Midland Memorial Hospital and after she collapsed at her desk at 7:15 a.m. Nov. 6.

The written report was the only direct testimony given during the trial that stated Orr kicked Calhoun.

During questioning of Calhoun's partner, MPD patrolman Harry Herington, and other city and county officers who provided backup during the arrest, Cunningham attempted to show jurors excessive force by the six officers present was used against Orr.

Sheriff's Office Sgt. Karl Calhoun testified he struck Walker three times in the face in an attempt "to knock the suspect out because the officers and I were not going to be able to control the suspect."

Sgt. Calhoun, who had been estranged from Officer Calhoun for 60 days when the incident took place, said he had responded to the scene after hearing his estranged wife call for assistance on the police radio.

Testimony from officers differed on how many were present when Sgt. Calhoun arrived and if Orr kicked or pushed Officer Calhoun back in defense of Sgt. Calhoun's blows or before the backup officers had arrived.

The officers' testimony indicated Orr was aggressive, threatened to kill Cole and fought them off.

Cunningham pointed out his client did not have a weapon on him when he was arrested.

Orr, also faces charges of burglary of a habitation. He is charged with breaking into the residence of his ex-wife Jan. 10 and attempting to kidnap one of their children, according to the indictment. He was released on a $25,000 bail in connection with that felony charge.

Closing arguments in the assault trial were expected to begin today after the charge to the jury was read at 8:30 a.m.

On the other hand, through leaks and press interviews, they portrayed the agreement as a communist victory. Their strategy sought to whipsaw Thieu between international and domestic public opinion. If he rejected the agreement, he would be attacked throughout the world for blocking what appeared to be fair terms. If he accepted it, he would be attacked within South Vietnam for caving in to what the Communists were presenting as terms favorable to them.

We soon concluded that meeting the Oct. 31 deadline was unrealistic. Thieu's unwillingness to agree to what I believed were the best possible terms was distressing. He seemed to be oblivious to the crucial issue. South Vietnam's survival did not depend on whether enemy troops occupied a few sparsely populated regions. It depended on whether the United States enforced the terms of the peace agreement, both with continuing aid and with credible threat of military action. That would be possible only if Saigon retained the good will of the U.S. Congress. If we did not settle the war quickly, the Congress would probably legislate an end to it in January.

We had scheduled the negotiations to reconvene after the election. We now found that both Saigon and Hanoi were playing a frustrating game with us. Our intelligence indicated that Thieu had told his generals to prepare for a ceasefire before Christmas, but he continued to pretend that he was willing to go it alone. Our intelligence also showed that Hanoi was preparing for military moves, but its delegates continued to affect a sincere desire to make peace.

The North Vietnamese had decided to try to take advantage of our differences with Saigon. Hanoi had come to two conclusions: It believed that a lack of progress in the talks would be blamed on Thieu and that, if an agreement were not forthcoming, the Congress would pull the rug out from under us. Therefore, its delegates started to stall.

On Nov. 28, our talks reopened in Paris. Kissinger presented Thieu's proposed changes, as well as some of our own. Hanoi's delegates objected strongly. After several tough negotiating sessions, I concluded that if we were to reach an agreement, we would have to abandon most of Thieu's major demands. I instructed Kissinger to seek a settlement along the lines of the October agreement. But Hanoi now began to stonewall us. It hardened its positions on the unresolved issues and pulled back concessions it had made on some resolved questions. Having reached an impasse, we recessed the talks.

On Dec. 4, when the talks reconvened, Hanoi turned obstinate. Its delegates not only categorically rejected every change we had requested, but also withdrew some that had already been agreed upon during the last round and introduced several new and unacceptable demands of their own.

In the following days, although we succeeded in resolving some issues, the North Vietnamese reopened others. They gave us just enough each day to keep the negotiations going, but not quite enough to conclude an agreement. With the prospects for an agreement actually receding, Kissinger and I reluctantly concluded that the enemy had made a conscious decision to prolong the war.

On Dec. 13, we recessed the talks. I had decided that since Hanoi had made up its mind to continue the war, we had to make a move that would change its mind. We had to convince the North Vietnamese by our actions, not just by our words, that they were better off concluding an agreement on our terms than continuing the fighting. This meant stepping up the bombing of North Vietnam.

On Dec. 14, I issued an order for B-52s to bomb military targets in the Hanoi-Haiphong complex. It was the most difficult decision concerning Vietnam that I made during my entire presidency. But I was convinced that if we did not compel the North Vietnamese to agree to our terms, Congress would force us to accept defeat by agreeing to a withdrawal in exchange for our POWs.

Our bombing provoked hysterical outbursts from our critics. But seldom has so much heated rhetoric been so wrong. Our critics denounced our actions as the "Christmas carpet bombing." But they were wrong on both points. We did not bomb on Christmas, and we never covered whole areas with a carpet of bombs, as had been the case with our bombing of German and Japanese cities during World War II.

Our bombing achieved its purposes. Militarily, we shattered North Vietnam's war-making capacity. Politically we shattered Hanoi's will to continue the war.

Adm. James Stockdale, one of our POWs, later described the scene when the prisoners heard the explosions as the bombs began hitting their targets. He wrote that "cheers started to go up all over the cell blocks of that downtown prison. This was a new reality for Hanoi."

He observed that the bombing took a heavy psychological toll on the enemy: "One look at any Vietnamese officer's face told the whole story. It telegraphed accommodation, hopelessness, remorse, fear. The shock was there; our enemy's will was broken.

Hanoi quickly accepted our first offer to resume the talks. On Jan. 8, when our high-level negotiations reconvened, North Vietnam agreed to our basic terms within 48 hours.

Was it all worth it? Our intervention saved 19 million people from totalitarian tyranny for 18 years — from 1954 to 1972. Our tenacity made similar wars less likely in that period by deterring those who would launch them and by buying time for nations like Indonesia, Thailand, and the Philippines to build their internal strength so that they could resist attempts to turn them into another Vietnam.

I knew all our gains depended on convincing Congress that simply concluding the Paris peace accords did not end our repsonsibilities. A peace agreement is only as good as the will of the parties to keep it. We knew that we would have to demonstrate to the North Vietnamese that we had the will to enforce the peace agreement.

On Jan. 27, 1973, almost 20 years after the French had lost the first Vietnam War, we had won the second Vietnam War. We signed the peace agreement that ended the war in a way that won the peace. We had redeemed our pledge to keep South Vietnam free.

FRIDAY: Losing the peace

GISD

Ms. Herrington, a registered nurse, is a six-year member of the board, serving three years as its president.

"WE NEED people who are experienced on the board," she said. "We've gone through a lot of changes in our school and apparently there's a lot more that will continue on through the next couple of years."

Ms. Herrington said that trustees first are accountable "to those children and then to the taxpayer." She noted, however, that a trustee "has just one voice. I don't think I would run for school board if I didn't think there were areas to improve."

Though she failed to mention what areas need improvement, Ms. Herrington vowed to work toward developing an "open line of communication" between teachers and the school board.

Donnell said his primary goal as a trustee would be to continually upgrade the education system at GISD.

"We need to look at and compare our TABS (standardized testing system) test results year after year to upgrade our curriculum standards and prepare our kids who go on to college," he said.

Donnell claimed to know that high school chemistry students have participated in only one class experiment this year due to a shortage of supplies. "The administration should be criticized for this," he said. "It makes you wonder why some of our kids don't feel our courses prepare them to go on to college."

Donnell also said GISD trustees tend to become complacent in their jobs. "I have a son who is a junior out here...I would continue to ensure that we provide our kids with the best education possible with the money we have to spend."

Fair, the third and final candidate seeking election to Place 6, openly acknowledged that "I've never run for office so I don't have the experience."

HE SAID, however, "I'm willing to learn. I have an interest in Greenwood Schools. I have a 2½-year-old son who will be here some day."

Advocating much of the education reform, Fair said he would work to clarify many of the areas which may be confusing to educators or unfair to students.

Fair supports teacher competency testing, rules governing student absenteeism and exit level testing, but says he opposes the state's "no pass, no play" rule.

Running a contested race for Place 7 is candidate J.D. Hanson.

Hanson, a teacher with the Ector County Independent School District, is completing his fifth consecutive year as a GISD trustee.

"We have gone through a lot of changes," he said. "We can expect a great deal more change within our school system, but our primary concern must be the education of our children."

A CONSERVATIVE voter on the board, Hanson abstained during a recent vote to adopt school textbooks in 1985-86. Among the texts was a controversial book for advanced biology students which had been critized for its descriptive photographs of a woman in childbirth.

Hanson also advocates the continued support of a district-wide hair and dress code. "I teach at a school where there is no dress code and believe me, the attitudes and morals there are entirely different from Greenwood," he said.

Hanson's opponent Don Morgan said Greenwood can be proud of schools. But he also indicated a need for change.

If elected, "I would make sure that teachers receive the supplies they need to teach their subjects. If there is a shortage of supplies, then there's somebody out there who's not doing their job, the Greenwood native said.

Morgan criticized GISD's policy of "feeding" students who travel to various communities to participate in extracurricular activities. "If we feed everyone, where are we going to stop?" he asked. "It takes money to feed these kids and it takes taxes to buy the meals."

Reagan meets with president of Columbia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colombian President Belisario Betancur, a key figure in the Central American peace process who just completed a tour of the region, met with President Reagan today at the White House to brief the president on his findings.

The two leaders posed for pictures in the Oval Office, sitting in wingback chairs.

Asked whether he had a new blueprint for peace in Nicaragua, Reagan replied, "We'll probably have something to say after we have these meetings." He refused to take additional questions.

En route here for today's meeting, Betancur traveled to Venezuela, Central America and Mexico to sound out leaders about the prospects for a regional treaty in advance of a meeting next week among the four peace mediation countries in Panama.

U.S. officials who briefed reporters Wednesday said Reagan is eager to learn about Betancur's findings as the Contadora countries prepare to resume their deliberations after a delay of several months.

A meeting scheduled for February was postponed because of a conflict between Costa Rica and Nicaragua over an asylum dispute. Next week's meeting was agreed to last month after the conflict was resolved.

Colombia joined with Mexico, Panama and Venezuela two years ago to try to work out a Central American peace treaty based on a series of principles, including respect for the principle of non-intervention, military parity in the region and the establishment of representative democracy.

Woman's testimony could free inmate

CHICAGO (AP) — A woman who now says she lied when she accused a man of rape went to court today in an effort to free him from the prison where he has spent the past six years.

Cathleen Crowell Webb, 23, arrived at the courthouse in suburban Markham holding her husband's hand and was ushered past reporters who lined up to attend a hearing on the case.

Gary Dotson, 28, wants his conviction overturned by Circuit Judge Richard Samuels, who sentenced him to prison in 1979 after Mrs. Webb told authorities Dotson had raped her.

Mrs. Webb, now a mother of two children and living in New Hampshire, in March filed an affidavit saying she lied about the rape.

Dotson's attorney, Warren Lupel, met with Mrs. Webb on Wednesday to discuss her testimony. He said, "She's a woman who's very much involved in her faith, and that faith will not allow her to do anything but tell the...truth as best she can remember."

Lawyers have said Dotson, who was sentenced to 25-50 years on charges of aggravated kidnapping and rape, could be freed from the Joliet Correctional Center within 24 hours if the judge overturned the conviction.

In her affidavit, Mrs. Webb said that in mid-1977 she had sex with a teen-age boy. She said she "was concerned about the consequences of my promiscuity and thought I was pregnant and therefore decided to claim I was raped."

"I ripped my buttons off my clothing, scratched my body with a piece of glass, pinched and bruised myself and did other things all to make it appear that I had been violently attacked," said Mrs. Webb, who at the time lived in suburban Homewood.

Committee approves education bill

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate Education Committee has approved 44 pages of changes it thinks should be made in the major public school reform legislation passed last summer at a special session.

Sen. Carl Parker, chairman of the Senate Public Education Committee, said he planned to offer the bill for debate early next week.

The omnibus education revision bill was approved 10-0 Wednesday by the committee without discussion or debate.

"It fine tunes and streamlines," said Parker.

A provision that would let the State Board of Education change the controversial no-pass, no-play eligibility rule captured most attention. But the overall measure contains numerous changes affecting both teachers and students in Texas' public schools.

If passed by the Senate and House, and signed by the governor, the measure would:

— Tell the State Board of Education to reconsider its present rule that a student will be suspended from sports or other extracurricular activities for six weeks if failing in one subject. The bill suggests a shorter period.

— Tell the State Board of Education to give teachers a basic skills test, mostly on reading, writing and math. It would allow the board to decide later, after the first test, if a more difficult examination on specific skills in teaching is needed to weed out incompetent teachers. The board has said it believes the first test will show up 90 percent of those who should not be teaching.

— Provide for probationary and permanent teaching certificates, with permanent certificates going only to teachers who have proved themselves satisfactory teachers.

- Set up a four-level career program for teachers that would give them a $2,000 raise for each level reached, based on above average talent, training and initiative. Librarians would be included with classroom teachers, but not teacher aides and counselors. School administrators also would be appraised.

— Provide for a system of school discipline that would give school officials power to suspend students for up to six days or to expel then from school for assaults on teachers or pupils or for distributing drugs or alcohol.

— Tell each school to provide tutorial or make-up classes, outside regular school hours, for failing or near-failing students.

The no-pass, no-play issue was settled by the committee Tuesday when it voted, 9-0, for a compromise plan to let the Board of Education make another effort to settle the controversy.

Mayors discuss billboard legislation with governor

AUSTIN (AP) — Mayors and representatives from eight Texas cities met with Gov. Mark White to discuss proposed billboard legislation.

A bill by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, calls for cities to pay cash to billboard owners for them to remove the signs. The bill passed out of the House State Affairs Committee 9-2 on Monday.

The coalition meeting on Wednesday with White included representatives from San Antonio, Lubbock, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Corpus Christi, Nacogdoches and New Braunfels.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros who also heads the Texas Municipal League said, "The issue is very important to cities."

Cisneros said the governor, who vetoed an identical bill in 1983, had told them to try to compromise with the billboard industry and fight the issue with the Legislature.

Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, said the governor "did not say that he would veto it again. He did say that he has not changed his position on the bill."

White House aides, Senate GOP leaders craft budget compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House aides and Senate GOP leaders are bumping up against a self-imposed deadline as they argue over defense, Social Security and education, the final major obstacles to agreement on a massive package of spending cuts in President Reagan's budget proposal.

Following several days of talks conducted in unusual secrecy, budget negotiators have "not a lot" left to do, Budget Director David Stockman said following Wednesday's discussions.

"Nearly all" of an agreement that would carve more than $55 billion from next year's deficit and $300 billion over three years has been worked out, agreed Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I.

But despite the optimism, sources cautioned the effort to find a compromise could fall apart if the final issues could not be worked out by week's end. And conceding that other trouble might lie ahead, Senate Republican Leader Robert C. Dole of Kansas said he was not assured of the votes needed for passage of the fiscal 1986 budget even if the final pieces fell into place.

"Hopefully, if the president gets behind this, we can have a wave of support behind us, a big wave," Dole said, suggesting Reagan might make a televised appeal if a final agreement could be worked out.

Dole has said he will present a budget proposal to the Senate by the end of the month — with or without an agreement with the White House.

Without any changes in spending — or a tax increase that the president opposes — the deficit is forecast at $230 billion next year.

Sources close to the negotiations said any agreement was likely to accept several of Reagan's original budget recommendations, including a freeze on Medicare payments to most doctors and hospitals and termination of most Small Business Administration programs, along with the federal Amtrak subsidy and the Urban Action Development Grant program.

On the other hand, they said the president's original call for increased payments by Medicare patients would be scaled back, as would his proposal for $1 billion in Medicaid savings. Reagan's proposal to cut the pay of federal workers by 5 percent was likely to be rejected, they added, and mass transit grants probably would be reduced rather than ended.

On agriculture, the bargainers have tentatively decided to recommend $16 billion in cuts over three years — compared with $26 billion in Reagan's original budget — including $8 billion from target price supports.

These sources discussed the talks on condition they not be identified by name.

Officials said the toughest outstanding issue appeared to be Social Security. "We don't want to touch that," White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan said, although Senate leaders favor canceling next year's cost-of-living increase.

Another option under consideration would grant a reduced inflation adjustment for Social Security, rather than canceling it, one source said.

On education, Chafee and Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., said they balked at Reagan's proposal for stricter eligibility rules on guaranteed student loans, and are offering to make smaller cuts through administrative changes.

Sources said it was possible other senators would decide to override the two lawmakers' objections and strike a bargain without them, anticipating a fight when the package reaches the Senate floor.

Air Force 'wasting' funds on radar jammer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators said today the Air Force is wasting up to $3 billion by developing its own radar jamming equipment for combat aircraft while at the same time working on a similar jammer with the Navy.

The General Accounting Office said the "proliferation of jammers" not only wastes money, but leaves versions of the same aircraft with separate systems for jamming enemy air defense radar.

"F-16s to be deployed in Europe will have one jammer and those deployed in the Pacific will have another jammer," said Frank C. Conahan, director of the national security and international affairs division of the GAO.

Conahan testified before a House Government Operations subcommittee in a hearing that was partially closed at the Air Force's request on grounds that classified information would be discussed.

Air Force officers did not testify in the public session. But one official said in an interview that the service needs its own jammers because it cannot use the joint system in its older airplanes.

Conahan said the Pentagon's own figures showed $1.2 billion was wasted by the failure to have a common jammer system. But, in answering questions from Brooks, he said the problem was more serious.

"We have identified $3 billion" in Air Force expenditures for its own system, he said.

Conahan also testified that the Air Force began production of new jammers without operational testing even though the system it is replacing proved unreliable.

The previous jammers, which are electronic devices that emit electronic signals that interfere with radar-controlled air defense weapons, broke down so often that a top Pentagon official said he found it "difficult to support continued production..."

An Air Force official, speaking only on condition he not be named, said in an interview the GAO findings on waste are incorrect because the Air Force cannot use the Navy-compatible jammers in its older aircraft.

Newer Air Force planes will use the compatible system, and the service has ordered 1,800 of those jammers, up from an initial requirement of 580, the official said.

But he contended it would cost "four times more" to install the compatible system in older planes than to adapt the Air Force's own jammers.

"The down time of the plane would be 90 to 120 days" to install the compatible system, the official added.

The Air Force installed its first jammers during the Vietnam War. A sophisticated substitute called the ALQ-131 was produced from 1979-84, and the new Air Force-only version, scheduled for initial delivery this month, is an improved model of the ALQ-131.

Man tries to jump off balcony

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A man charged with shooting his former wife and two daughters to death outside a church on Palm Sunday tried to jump off a second-floor courthouse balcony, and a round-the-clock guard has been posted on his cell, authorities said.

"If he had jumped, there was a good chance he would have killed himself," said Lawrence A. Roth Jr., warden of the Montgomery County Prison. "The railing itself is a couple of feet high. Then he would have fallen another 15 feet, and he probably would have landed on the cement floor head-first."

Marijuana trade thriving in tiny Central American nation

ORANGE WALK, Belize (AP) — He sizes a visitor up in a practiced way, swats at the flies on the rotting produce in his grimy market stall and lays out the deal:

"Tell us how much marijuana you want and when and we'll deliver it to your plane," he says. "Five hundred pounds? We can do it in a day. We have the runway and we have the security. It's guaranteed. We flew 1,500 pounds out in a load last week. No problems."

And, he adds, "I'll get you the really good stuff."

The product is Belize Breeze, a powerful, seedless marijuana that has popped up everywhere in this tiny Central American country. Income from sales in the United States, where nearly all of it goes, easily surpasses the income from sugar, the traditional top money-earner.

Political pressures scrubbed an American-financed plan to spray the marijuana and, as a result, production has skyrocketed, making Belize a major headache for American drug control agents.

The greengrocer's unimpressive business front belies a huge and growing industry. If there's a big marijuana deal here, this jovial man with the torn shirt, pot belly and homemade tattoo likely will be involved.

There are many like him in Orange Walk, a kind of boom town where sugar is king no more.

A good grade of Belize Breeze, he said, sells here for about $25 a pound in large lots and will cost a wholesaler in the United States four to five times that price. By the time the marijuana gets to the street, its price will be multiplied many times more.

In three years production has soared, making Belize a major source of the drug imported to the United States.

Tons a week are flown from clandestine strips across the country, making Belize a major target of American eradication efforts.

The millions of dollars it brings in, government officials here say, threatens to corrupt the police and military.

Murders, which were rare outside of family or land squabbles, are up sharply, especially in marijuana-marketing centers.

Estimates of how much will be grown this year vary among drug agents and U.S. Embassy officials from 500 to 2,300 metric tons with a retail value of up to $100 million.

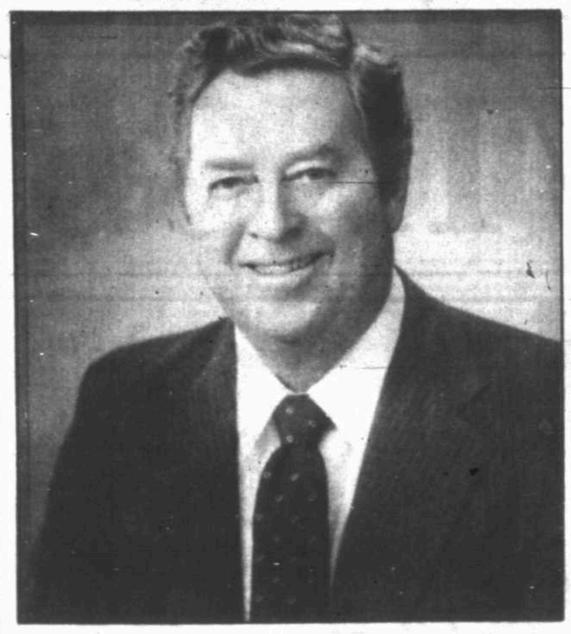

The size of Massachusetts, Belize is virtually an unpoliced country. It has a population of only about 150,000 people and a national police force of about 600 that also must patrol the tense border with Guatemala. The farmland is rich and isolated; the main marijuana market is only a two- or three-hour flight away.

Wedged between Mexico and Guatemala, Belize has had a tradition of local use of marijuana since East Indian laborers brought it with them in the 19th century. The quantities now harvested for export are recent and follow the collapse of world sugar prices, which are half of what they were five years ago.

The United States directed a program that involved two sprayings with the controversial herbicide paraquat in October and December of 1983 and covered about 3,000 fields.

VOTE A.A. THOMAS Jr. APRIL 6th

Pd. Pol. Adv. A.A. Thomas Jr. Campaign Fund, Treas. Leon Shrader, Western Bank, Midland, TX., 79701

"We believe you should vote for Manuel Carrasco for Councilman, at large... Here's a few good reasons why."

- He's a proven civic leader.
- He's an experienced administrator.
- He's a successful self employed businessman.
- He's lived most of his life in Midland.
- He's for getting the most out of our tax dollar and improving cooperation among taxing entities.

"We all have worked closely with Manuel Carrasco over the years . . . in our public schools, the United Way, Chamber of Commerce, Permian Basin Girl Scouts and many other community organizations. He has shown himself to be a man who thinks clearly, prepares for the business at hand, speaks his mind, and displays a welcome sense of humor.

"In short, he's the sort of person we believe should be allowed the privilege to serve on the Midland City Council."

Israelis raid Shiite Moslem villages

WORLD

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli forces raided two Shiite Moslem villages in south Lebanon today, Beirut radio stations said. The Israeli military command said its troops killed eight guerrillas who attempted to flee.

A roadside bomb injured three French soldiers of the U.N. peacekeeping force in Israeli-occupied south Lebanon, a U.N. spokesman said. Christians and Moslems battled for a seventh straight day in Sidon, killing two people and injuring 22, the radio stations said.

Government radio and private stations said Israeli troops in 40 armored personnel carriers and trucks rolled out of their occupation zone and entered the villages of Kawthariet Assiyad and Ghassanieh this morning.

The Israelis ordered the men of both villages to assemble at mosques for questioning, and soldiers searched houses in the towns about 12 miles south of Sidon, provincial capital of south Lebanon, according to radio reports.

The Israeli military command said in Tel Aviv that eight "armed terrorists" who tried to flee were killed in the raid on Kawthariet Assiyad. It said five died when they tried to escape in a car, and three others were killed as they attempted to flee a cave.

Israeli soldiers found large caches of weapons, including Soviet-made Kalashnikov rifles, bombs and seven rocket-propelled grenade launchers, the announcement said.

Military sources in Tel Aviv said there was Israeli army "activity" in Kawthariet Assiyad and a village within the occupation zone, Bourj al-Shemali. The sources, who declined to be identified, said they knew of no such activity in Ghassanieh.

The military sources confirmed that the Israeli army had carried out searches and made arrests Wednesday in the Shiite village of Teir Zebna, eight miles east of Tyre. They had no details.

Israel has mounted more than 40 search-and-arrest operations in south Lebanon in the past six weeks in an effort to check escalating guerrilla attacks against Israeli troops, who are expected to complete their withdrawal from Lebanon by June.

Three French soldiers of the U.N. peacekeeping force were injured in the Israeli-occupied zone as a roadside bomb was detonated east of Jouaya, nine miles east of Tyre.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. force, said it was the first time such an attack had been directed against the force, which arrived in Lebanon in 1978.

Goksel declined to speculate on a motive.

Apartment damaged in embassy grenade attack

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ROME — An apartment below the Jordanian Embassy was damaged in a grenade attack Wednesday, and Italian police later said they had arrested a Palestinian and that the Black September terrorist organization claimed responsibility.

Police said no one was hurt in the attack, in which a U.S.-made M-72 anti-tank grenade was used.

The suspect was caught by a quick-thinking concierge who held him captive until private security men took over, police said. The suspect had tried to use a gun, but the weapon misfired.

An anonymous telephone caller later told police the attack was carried out by the Black September group "in order to put agents of the Jordanian secret service out of action."

Black September first came into prominence after the 1970 fighting in which Palestinians were driven out of Jordan.

Police said the grenade was launched from a range of between 330 feet and 400 feet. The grenade missed the fifth-floor embassy office, hitting the private apartment a floor below.

A 22-year-old man in the apartment escaped injury by being in another room.

Salvadoran council won't void results

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The three-member Central Election Council, including two members of rightist parties, has rejected rightist demands to void this week's election results because of alleged widespread voting irregularities.

Council President Mario Samayoa, the only member of President Jose Napoleon Duarte's Christian Democrats on the panel, made the announcement Wednesday night after the country's military leadership denied charges the armed forces had pressured voters in Sunday's election.

Two council members representing parties of the main right-wing coalition joined Samayoa to unanimously reject a rightist petition demanding the results of Sunday's legislative and municipal elections be thrown out.

Francisco Merino, election council representative of the extreme-right Republican Nationalist Alliance, or ARENA, said the panel agreed the elections could not be voided "because of irregularities in a few municipalities."

Samayoa said ARENA made an accusation of military pressure on voters in an official protest over the conduct of the elections.

ARENA leader Roberto d'Aubuisson, who lost the presidential election to Duarte last May, claimed Tuesday night there were widespead voting irregularities, including stuffed ballot boxes, and demanded results be thrown out.

But on Wednesday, he denied the petition to have vote results voided included the accusation the military had pressured voters.

Samayoa said the official count of votes would resume Monday, after the Easter Week vacation. The tabulation was stopped because of the complaint by the rightist parties.

The council has released no official results, but the Christian Democrats say their count shows they won 33 of the 60 National Assembly seats.

ARENA and the National Conciliation Party formed an election coalition against the Christian Democrats. A bloc of conservative parties has dominated the assembly since it was elected in March 1982, holding 34 seats to 24 for the Christian Democrats.

Six members of the 11-member executive council of the National Conciliation Party criticized the party's secretary general Wednesday for joining d'Aubuisson in calling for the elections to be voided.

In a communique, the military said the armed forces will "never abandon their condition of an...obedient, apolitical institution."

The military communique said that during the last four elections, beginning with the Constituent Assembly elections in March 1982, the army has watched over the balloting and guaranteed results be respected.

Turkish air force jet crashes into business district

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A Turkish air force jet crashed today into a business district in the western city of Balikesir, killing at least 13 people and injuring 21, a government official said.

News agency reports said the plane was an F-104 and that one pilot was killed, but that the co-pilot ejected safely and suffered only minor injuries.

Provincial Gov. Bayram Ozen said the aircraft crashed into a coffeehouse in the middle of furniture and carpentry shops at the outskirts of Balikesir.

The governor told The Associated Press by telephone that the death toll could mount as rescue workers cleared away rubble.

Ozen declined to give any information about the aircraft, saying the Turkish military would have a separate announcement on that.

The independent Hurriyet news agency said the F-104 Starfighter was on a training flight when it developed mechanical failure.

The jet exploded as it hit the ground and touched off a fire which quickly spread to surrounding shops, Ozen said.

"We put out the fire. Now we are clearing the rubble and we shall not know the exact death toll until this is completed," he said.

Investigators seek source of salmonella contamination

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Illinois' most extensive outbreak of salmonella probably has run its course, but it may take investigators weeks to find out how a batch of low-fat milk became contaminated by the bacteria.

Test results released Wednesday indicated salmonella almost certainly caused the contamination that sickened more than 900 people in three states.

Reported cases in what officials called the biggest salmonella outbreak in state history rose to 937, with 515 confirmed. Of those, 898 were in Illinois, 30 in Indiana and nine in Iowa.

There have been no life-threatening cases, officials say.

Symptoms of the bacterial infection include abdominal pain, diarrhea, nausea, vomiting and fever.

Preliminary results of tests on samples of the milk indicated it was contaminated with salmonella "Group B," said Barbara Weiner, an assistant director of the Illinois Public Health Department.

Reports of salmonella poisoning were expected to increase this week, but because of the ailment's incubation period, its onset should have ended Tuesday, Ms. Weiner said.

The batch of milk linked by officials to the contamination was sold in cartons dated March 29. Tests of milk containers dated March 30 and March 31 were negative, Ms. Weiner said.

While the salmonella contamination was almost a certainty, she said, investigators had not pinpointed its source.

Black's election to state's high court 'breakthrough'

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The election of Judge Ernest A. Finney Jr. to the state Supreme Court is a "tremendous breakthrough" for blacks in South Carolina, a lawmaker says.

The General Assembly on Wednesday unanimously chose Finney to fill a vacancy caused by the elevation of Julius "Bubba" Ness to chief justice this summer.

Finney, a 54-year-old Sumter resident elected as the state's first black circuit judge eight years ago, will be the first black justice on the state Supreme Court since Reconstruction.

"Now across the entire spectrum of the court system blacks have a presence," said state Sen. I. DeQuincey Newman.

Finney received a rousing ovation from lawmakers and a gallery packed with civil rights leaders, black dignitaries and schoolchildren brought to witness the historic election.

House Speaker Ramon Schwartz nominated Finney, who ran unopposed. Legislators representing nearly every county in the state rose to second Finney's nomination.

Finney, engulfed by a crowd of people waiting to congratulate him in the State House moments later, said the reason he was elected was not the color of his skin.

Kirkpatrick makes it official, switches to Republican Party

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick has jumped to the Republican Party, but one of her allies among conservative Democrats says he doesn't expect her political conversion to signal a rush to the GOP.

"It seems to me to be less than a landslide," said Ben Wattenberg, a founder along with Kirkpatrick and others of the Coalition for a Democratic Majority.

Wattenberg said Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Elliott Abrams, an assistant secretary of state, were the only two CDM members who switched party affiliation, although several others had gone to work in foreign policy and defense positions in the Reagan administration.

A fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, Wattenberg made his comments Wednesday shortly after Mrs. Kirkpatrick informed Montgomery County, Md., election officials she wanted her registration switched from Democrat to Republican.

Wattenberg said the bright side for the Democrats might be that her defection "in some way, large or small, may say to Democrats, now we've lost somebody who's a very bright person, who's an admired person. We have got to do things so we don't start losing people like that again."

He called Mrs. Kirkpatrick someone who expresses her views "about as well and elegantly and intelligently as anyone in America. In that sense, she is surely a great asset to the Republican Party."

There was no doubt GOP officials agreed.

At a news conference, Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter, said, "We are very thrilled," and Republican National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf Jr. chimed in, "I can think of no greater pleasure to me."

The two accompanied Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who said that despite the fact she "was born a Democrat" and "grew up a Democrat," she felt the party had moved away from her.

"I am tired of swimming against the current of my own party," she said.

Recently, she added, when people asked her, "Aren't you a Democrat?" she had increasing difficulty answering honestly.

"I didn't feel like a Democrat anymore," she said.

Her conversion apparently did not diminish her admiration for some past Democratic leaders.

"If Harry Truman were running for president today, I would vote for him," said Mrs. Kirkpatrick. She noted that another Truman supporter back in 1948, when she cast her first vote, was Ronald Reagan.

As for the Democrats she left behind, "I wish my friends who stay and fight, good luck."

Mrs. Kirkpatrick recently resigned her United Nations post after four years to return to lecturing and writing. She insisted she has no plans to run for office.

Freeing equity

A proposal now before the Legislature in Austin would give Texas residents the same opportunity now enjoyed by residents of the other 49 states to use the equity in their homes to obtain a secondary mortgage. There are a couple of different bills, but the one known as the Brooks/Danburg Home Equity Lending Legislation appears to be a reasonable attempt to free the $260 billion in assets frozen in the Lone Star State.

The prohibition to homeowners using their homestead equity to obtain loans for their youngsters' college educations or other pursuits dates back to Texas' settlement days when the intention was to get residents here and keep them here, and to keep unscrupulous lenders from foreclosing on them. Furthermore, the fear factor has been kept at the forefront by experiences in other states such as California where home equity loans were grossly abused.

The Brooks/Danburg legislation provides a prohibition against "stacking" loans, stipulating that only one home equity loan could be made at any one time and that the homeowner could borrow only 80 percent of the assessed value of his homestead.

What's more, supporters point out that this piece of legislation will not repeal homestead protections now contained in the Texas Constitution. The measure also contains numerous consumer safeguards such as preventing lenders from requiring additional collateral, setting a minimum loan amount of $5,000 to insure careful consideration of using home equity and not jeopardizing the availability of signature loans since it provides for a minimum loan term of one year and prohibits any primary lender from forcing a borrower to refinance existing loans as a condition for making a home equity loan.

Even if this measure is passed by the Legislature, it will have to go on the November ballot for approval by the state's voters.

All-in-all it looks like a reasonable attempt to free up Texas' massive home equity lending market. It should be approved.

Fitting valedictory

When Jeane Kirkpatrick became the United States Ambassador to the United Nations she was quickly recognized as a diplomat who speaks her mind. She remained in character on her final day in office by calling for financial aid for rebels fighting the Communist government in Nicaragua.

The Congress cut off covert aid to the "Contras" last year. The Reagan Administration is asking for $14 million to stem the tide of Soviet and Cuban influence on our southern doorstep.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick has taken a special interest in Central America. She has frequently warned of the threat to United States security posed by the presence of Cuban and Soviet soldiers and equipment so close to our shores. During the recent presidential campaign some of the Democrats tried to make us believe that what was going on in Nicaragua and El Salvador was merely a "local problem," and had nothing to do with Moscow or Havana.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick, an unusually knowledgeable observer of Central America, knew better and repeatedly said so during her ambassadorial tenure on the East River.

She chose an appropriate time to repeat her reminder of the dangers of dictatorship in Nicaragua. Jeane Kirkpatrick's valedictory should be heeded by the United States Congress.

Another View:

Iraq's evil war

The Iraqis, attempting to repulse Iranian counter-invaders, have used chemical weapons — this time apparently mustard gas — on at least five occasions in March, the American government reports. Iraq denies it, but some among the estimated several hundred casualties are in the European hospitals where Iran has sent them to be treated and seen. "Some were in severe pain and were just crying out for Allah," a witness to their Vienna arrival reported. "They were a shocking sight."

The war has gone on for years, and neither party enjoys high favor in the West. The effect is an attitude in world opinion holding that the two sides pretty much deserve the worst they can do to each other. There is no great outcry when Iraq — though Iran also is known to have a chemical capability — conducts a form of warfare regarded as so horrible and menacing that it has been formally outlawed for 60 years.

This attitude is myopic. Chemical weapons are fairly called the poor nation's nuclear bomb. Five countries had a CW capability 20 years ago, but 14 or 16 do now, and others are shopping around or otherwise making preparations. It may be a bit odd, when you consider all the ways that people have devised to do violence to each other, to worry overly about any particular method. The attempt to restrict this particular form of warfare, however, represents one of the very few organized international efforts to put at least a symbolic civilizing limit on the suffering caused in war.

The United States sees a strategic interest in supporting Arab Iraq and containing fundamentalist Iran. But this political tilt has not kept the Reagan administration from going public, as well as private, with a protest against Iraq's CW policy. It is only by this demonstration of a single standard that a government gains the authority to have its protests heard when its target is an unfriendly government.

Do protests matter? The Reagan administration in its first term led an international campaign criticizing the Soviet Union for the use of chemical agents by Soviet troops invading Afghanistan and by Soviet-supported Vietnamese troops fighting elsewhere in Indochina. One cannot be laboratory-sure of cause and effect in these situations. It is noteworthy, however, that there have been no confirmed reports of chemical use in Indochina for at least two years and in Afghanistan for one. It may not help immediately or directly, but it cannot hurt for the Iraqis to be held up to obloquy and censure for the use of gas.

— The Washington Post

GEORGE F. WILL

Officer's death ushers in detente

WASHINGTON — The Soviets have murdered an American officer but have promised not to bear a grudge about it, and we have promised to work with them to prevent such "episodes." Detente is back and standing tall.

George F. Will

The Soviets have been intimately involved in killing scores of thousands of U.S. servicemen, but generally have used Korean and Vietnamese surrogates. Still, who will remember Army Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson, Jr., a month from now? Who remembers Peter Fechter? He was shot in 1962 while tryiing to climb the Berlin Wall and was left, like Nicholson. to bleed, while persons eager to help were kept away at gunpoint. Today, the Wall is a state-of-the-art killing machine with automated firing devices. Behind the Wall is a U.S. Embassy. "Normalization."

The Soviet empire requires low-tech murder, too. The day after an Afghan officer led a defection from a convoy reinforced by Soviet troops, the Soviet troops arrested 40 civilians. Patrick David, a physician with Aide Medicale Internationale, told representatives of Helsinki Watch: "They tied them up and piled them like wood. Then they poured gasoline over them and burned them alive."

The Soviet empire is based on murder, retail as well as wholesale. A Polish priest is murdered by secret police wholly subservient to the KGB. The attack on the pope is organized by Bulgarian secret police subservient to the KGB. The Soviets watch Nicholson bleed for an hour, and stalk Korean Airlines flight 007 for two hours, and what price do they pay? Pay? President Reagan said the murder made him especially eager for a summit with Gorbachev, who used Chernenko's funeral to threaten military action against an American ally, Pakistan, if it continues to aid Afghan freedom fighters.

About four hours after Nicholson was murdered, the President, breakfasting with journalists, was asked about Soviet violations of arms-control agreements — violations his administration has documented. He spoke about "language problems" and "ambiguity" leading the Soviets to a different but equally sincere "understanding" of what the agreements require. He spoke of finding "ways where we can by deed prove what our intentions are." The Soviets are in the 68th year of a murder rampage and the problem is a misunderstanding: If we can just prove our benign intentions....

In 1982 a French officer operating under the 1947 agreements that covered Nicholson's activities was killed when his car was run off the road by East German forces. British officers operating under the agreements have been involved in suspicious "accidents." Six days after Nicholson was shot — the day he was buried in Arlington National Cemetery, within sight of the office where Secretary of State Shultz met with Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin — those two men discussed having discussions to prevent such "episodes." It was "murder" one day, an "episode" the next at a State Department dissolving in pleasure because the Soviets have agreed to cooperate with us.

Will the murder interrupt, even momentarily, the talks whereby we get the Soviets to agree to allow U.S. taxpayers to subsidize, with credits, the sale of high-technology to the Soviet war machine? No. So mesmerized is the administration by the arms-control "process," it is too paralyzed to respond even to murder, lest a response jeopardize that "process."

Historians may conclude that it was during this administration that the United States conclusively lost the Cold War. By "lost" I mean forfeited the last chances to embody in action correct thinking about the Soviet threat. This severe judgment is justified in spite of the fact — actually, because of the fact — that this administration is wiser than its recent predecessors and probably wiser than its successors will be. It is the wisest the nation has had in a generation. Measured that way, it is commendable. Measured against the task, it is unsatisfactory.

This conclusion is compelled by things done and left undone, from the failure to use the weapon of enforced default against the Polish regime's debts, to the current squandering of energy on the charade of arms control. The debacle of policy toward Poland demonstrated the degree to which a conservative administration, especially, is incapable of subordinating commerce to geopolitics. The Carteresque elevation of arms control to the rank of centerpiece in U.S.-Soviet relations demonstrates the degree to which democracies allow their wishes to control their thoughts.

One week after Nicholson bled to death, the President described the death as "cold-blooded murder." There has not been even a Soviet apology. Has the President asked for one? If not, why not? If he has asked, what price will he make the Soviets pay for refusing — for compounding cold-blooded murder with ostentatious disdain for the murdered officer's commander in chief?

IRS joins Marcos to kill newspaper

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service is threatening to shut down a crusading little newspaper, the Philippine News, which Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos has tried but failed to destroy.

Jack Anderson

This San Francisco-based, English-language paper, targeted at the Filipino community in the United States, has already been driven to the brink of ruin by Marcos. As we reported in 1975, Marcos pressured major travel agencies and airlines to stop advertising in the newspaper.

The advertising boycott had a devastating effect on the paper's income. It recently filed for protection under the bankruptcy act.

One of the paper's creditors is the IRS, which is owed $213,500 in back taxes, penalties and interest. The government has slapped a lien on the newspaper's assets, which makes it almost impossible for publisher Alex Esclamado to obtain new financing.

Recently the IRS notified Esclamado that it would seize one of the paper's most valuable assets — its mailing list — and will then move on to the remaining physical property. This would close the paper, silence this voice of opposition, and delight Marcos.

Hoping to prevent this, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., intervened with Treasury Secretary James Baker. In a phone call and a followup letter, Cranston pleaded for leniency.

As Cranston pointed out, Esclamado had tried to arrange a compromise with the IRS — something that delinquent taxpayers do all the time. The publisher offered $16,000 cash to settle the actual tax bill — or payment of $63,500 in taxes owed over a two-year period.

Esclamado told our associate Lucette Lagnado that his newspaper's physical assets totaled just $10,600 — $7,800 for the mailing list and $2,800 for a few desks, chairs and other office equipment. It would be foolish, he argued, to seize this instead of accepting his offer of $16,000 in cash or the whole sum over a two-year period.

The IRS rejected Esclamado's compromise offer, and last week the publisher filed for bankruptcy — which temporarily prevents any IRS seizure of his assets.

Cranston may have committed a tactical political error in his appeal to Baker for leniency.

He mentioned the newspaper's history of opposition to Marcos, and the Philippine president's determined efforts to shut the paper down. Closing the Philippine News, Cranston wrote, would be "something the Marcos government could not do alone but could accomplish with the aid of the government of the United States."

Continued publication of the paper, Cranston wrote, is "very much in the best interest of our nation."

But Baker may well be deaf to such a plea. The White House is pushing for $300 million in military and economic aid to Marcos in this year of severe budget restraints. It seems unlikely that Baker will accede to a request for leniency toward a vocal opponent of a government the Reagan administration is supporting.

Yet Esclamado is convinced that he could keep his paper going if the IRS would give him a chance. He has a circulation of about 60,000 nationwide, and with support from local advertisers unintimidated by Marcos, he expects revenue of about $1 million this year.

One asset that has no precise monetary value is a note Esclamado received from Marcos's most prominent opposition leader two years ago. Just days before Benigno Aquino flew back to Manila and was assassinated on the steps of his plane at the airport, he wrote:

"Your newspaper has not only been the beacon but the vital link between those actively engaged in the struggle and the mass of our people. (It is) the oasis in the arid desert of government-controlled media."

ART BUCHWALD

Fee buys more than high-priced PR!

One of the better jobs in Washington these days is working for a public relations firm. There are hundreds of them all over the city and anyone with a decent name in the government can find a home at one — at triple his or her present salary.

Art Buchwald

There was a time when PR companies worked cheaply and secretly for their clients. Now they charge enormous fees and get their names in the newspapers as frequently as the people they're supposed to publicize.

What do PR firms in Washington do to earn their money? I dropped in on Robert Flack, founder of one of the hottest firms in the business. Among those listed as vice presidents on Flack's door are two retired assistant secretaries of state, the wife of a congressman, an ex-presidential advance man, a South American general and the former emperor of Tubistoland.

Flack's large penthouse office overlooks the White House.

"Boy," I said. "You have some view."

He smiled as he pointed out the window. "Some of the happiest days of my life were spent in the Rose Garden over there."

"I'll bet you miss it," I said.

He sighed, "It's only a stone's throw away and the old man said I can smell the flowers anytime I want to. What can I do for you?"

"There's been a lot of stuff about Washington PR firms in the papers lately and I was curious. Why the high profile?"

"Well, first and foremost, we need clients who can afford our services. In order to get them we have to make sure everyone is aware that we know the right buttons to push. Excuse me just a moment ... Miss Blackwell, if Ed Meese calls tell him I'm still out to lunch.... What were you saying?"

"Is the client buying access to people in power?"

"Let's get this straight. I never mention my White House or Hill connections to get a client. I don't want them to think I can open any powerful doors for them just because I'm asking for a six-figure retainer."

"Then why do you have that autographed photo of Tip O'Neill on your desk?"

"It makes me feel good just to look at him."

"How about the one next to it of Nancy Reagan?"

"Nancy gave it to me, and I'm scared to death she's going to walk in here one day and not find it."

"Okay, so you don't use your government connections for your business. What do you do for your clients?"

"Hold it," he said. "Miss Blackwell, call Caspar Weinberger and tell him he looked great on the Ted Koppel show last night."

"You know Caspar Weinberger?" I asked.

"I never talk about anybody in Washington that I know," he said. "Back to my business. What we do is present our client's image in the best light. That does not mean we lie or are dishonest. But there are two sides to every story. Here's a perfect example," he said, holding up a photo of dead people lying in the street. "A foreign government retained us because American television kept showing their troops shooting demonstrators. We immediately put out the story that the only reason the people were shot was because demonstrations are forbidden in the country and the people were breaking the law."

"Didn't President Reagan say that about South Africa at his press conference a few weeks ago?"

"We had nothing to do with that," he protested. "South Africa isn't our client."

"I didn't say it was. So what do you do besides make bad countries look good?"

"We don't make bad countries look good. We make strong countries look good. We also represent U.S. industries under attack from the government, and create favorable climates for businessmen who are going to be indicted by a federal grand jury. We provide junkets for the media and will even write their stories and film their TV news spots for them. America couldn't have an informed public without people like us."

"I believe it. Thanks for your time."

"Don't mention it. Oh, by the way, if you see Henry Kissinger out in the waiting room tell him I haven't forgotten he's there."

Official: U.S. charges lack proof

MEXICO CITY (AP) — J. Antonio Sam Lopez, director of the federal government's anti-drug program, says he hasn't seen proof of many American allegations about the extent of the narcotics trade here.

"If we knew how much there were, it would already be destroyed," he said in an interview Tuesday night with The Associated Press.

Sam Lopez, whose official title is director general of narcotics' control for the federal Attorney General's Office, said he could not confirm or deny U.S. authorities' estimates of poppy and marijuana production in Mexico or how the major drug rings operate.

"Up to this moment, they haven't brought proof," he replied when asked about information released by Drug Enforcement Administration officials regarding the way narcotics traffickers function here. "We couldn't describe it...We don't have proof."

U.S. officials here now estimate as much as 30 percent of the marijuana and 38 percent of the heroin consumed in the United States may come from Mexico.

DEA officials have been particularly outspoken about drug trafficking in Mexico since the kidnap-murder of special agent Enrique Camarena Salazar in Guadalajara.

His body was found along with that of a Mexican pilot he worked with on March 5, and six Jalisco state policemen and a former officer have been charged in the case.

Sam Lopez denied that corruption impedes the anti-narcotics campaign.

"I think that corruption is an obstacle not only in Mexico but in any country in the world," he said. "Corrupt people have never been an obstacle to the anti-drug fight...We have not had any example that has impeded work."

Monterrey to end water rationing

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Thousands of residents of this northern industrial city will have running water in their homes for the first time this summer and a long, annoying rationing program will be relaxed for others, the government has announced.

An underground maze of aqueducts designed to deliver water throughout the metropolitan area is scheduled for completion in June, said Enrique Torrez Lopez, director of Water and Drainage of Monterrey.

The aqueduct is part of the Nuevo Leon state government's so-called "project of the century," a $190 million system including a dam, pumping stations and treatment plants designed to end this city's most critical problem.

Monterrey, Mexico's third largest city with 2.5 million people, is the capital of Nuevo Leon state and located 143 miles south of the Texas border at Laredo. The city sizzles under spring and summer temperatures that often surpass 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

Monterrey has been under a year-round water rationing program for as long as most residents can remember.

Its main water source, La Boca Dam just south of the city, failed miserably to meet the skyrocketing demands of a rapidly expanding city that uses 2,288 gallons of water a second.

More than 800,000 residents in the region's poorer housing developments lack running water in their homes and must haul it in buckets from collective faucets or water trucks, often over long distances in the hills.

Residents of even the wealthiest suburbs have tolerated the rationing — which cuts the water supply for half of each day — or bought water tanks for their homes to circumvent the program.

Last July 27, President Miguel de la Madrid inaugurated the Cerro Prieto Dam southeast of Monterrey in Linares. An 83-mile-long underground aqueduct — said to be the longest in the Americas — and a system of five pumping stations carry the dam's water nearly 1,000 feet uphill to a treatment plant on the outskirts of Monterrey.

Reagan to offer 'new ideas' on Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is prepared to offer "new ideas" for dealing with the leftist government of Nicaragua while triggering a process leading toward a congressional vote soon on releasing $14 million in aid to rebels battling the Sandinistas, a White House spokesman said today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes declined to spell out Reagan's new proposals, but said the president "has some suggestions, ideas he will be discussing."

On Capitol Hill, congressional sources said the administration plan includes a comprehensive proposal designed to encourage the Sandinistas to negotiate a peace settlement with the rebels.

Late Wednesday, Reagan sent Congress a report that will set up a congressional vote, probably around April 19, for release of the $14 million in aid, Speakes said. The report, which is classified, outlines the administration's arguments for assisting the rebels.

Submission of the report was ordered by Congress last year as a condition for releasing the funds. With the report in hand, administration backers can submit a resolution in both the House and the Senate seeking money for the rebels.

Once the resolution is submitted, the House and Senate have up to 15 days to vote on the matter.

Reagan's action comes on the heels of a warning from a White House ally, House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, that the administration's hopes for the $14 million in rebel aid was "dead in the water."

WORLD in brief

U.S. Senate wants report on South African shooting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Denouncing South African policies, the Senate is asking the Reagan administration for a report on a police shooting incident in the African nation in which at least 19 people were killed.

"This is a way of showing our outrage," Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said Wednesday as the Senate adopted the non-binding resolution by an 89-4 vote.

The vote came after House Democrats unanimously endorsed a resolution urging economic sanctions and other pressure until South Africa demonstrates progress in ending its apartheid policy of strict racial separation.

Sponsored by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., the Senate's measure was adopted without debate.

The major discussion on South African policies will come later on legislation also sponsored by Kennedy and Weicker to impose tough economic sanctions.

Iraq launches missile attack

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said today it fired missiles at two Iranian cities, and Iran said 25 people were killed and more than 70 injured in one explosion.

The rocket attack came shortly after Iran announced that it was suspending its own raids on Iraqi cities, due to a reduction in attacks on its cities.

An Iraqi military spokesman said the missiles were fired at the cities of Bakhtaran and Hamadan in western Iran as part of a campaign he said would continue until "the rulers of Iran accept the course of peace."

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, in a dispatch monitored in Nicosia, Cyrpus, confirmed that a missile hit Bakhtaran, but made no mention of an attack on Hamadan.

IRNA said 25 people were killed and more than 70 injured in the attack on Bakhtaran, located 100 miles east of the border with Iraq.

North Korea proposes talks

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea today proposed dates for resuming two sets of talks with South Korea, the official Radio Pyongyang reported.

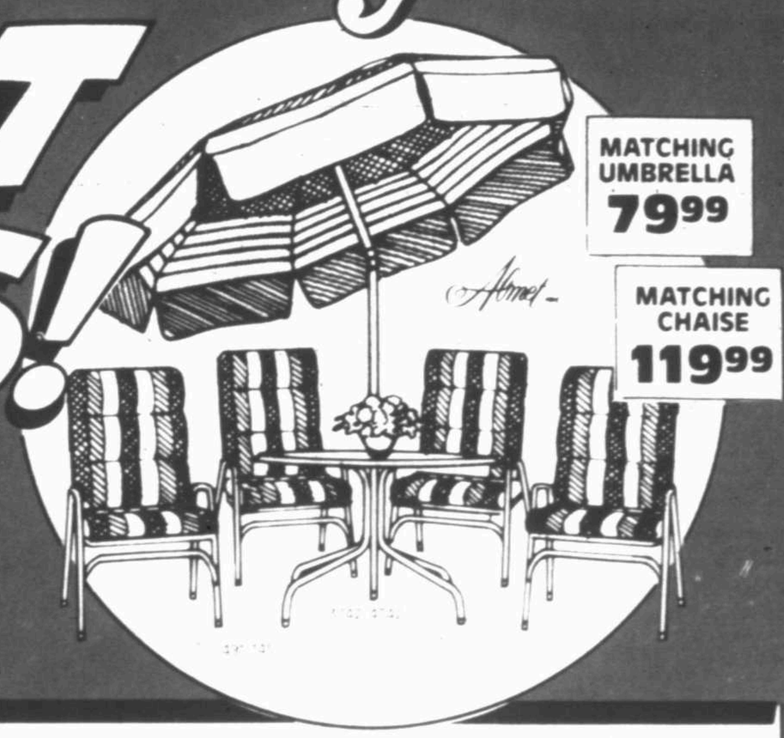

The radio, in a broadcast monitored by the Japanese agency Radio Press, said authorities telephoned South Korean officials and proposed economic talks at the armistice village of Panmunjom on May 17, and a meeting of Red Cross officials in Seoul, the South Korean capital, on May 28.

Wind west 10 to 15 mph. Friday: partly cloudy, colder and high upper 70s. Wind north to northwest 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Showers forecast for Midland

From Staff and Wire Reports

Rain is expected to dampen the Midland area tonight as northerly winds blow in cooler temperatures Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for partly cloudy skies through Friday with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight and a low in the mid-50s, warming to a high in the upper 70s Friday. Tonight's westerly winds at 10 to 15 mph are expected to increase from the north to northwest at less than 20 mph Friday.

Wednesday's high of 88 was 6 degrees below the record set in 1946. This morning's low was 24 degrees above the 1945 record of 28.

STATE

Southerly winds of up to 25 miles an hour were common across much of North Central and South Central Texas today as the result of a low-pressure system that formed in Kansas, the National Weather Service said.

In the South Plains and Panhandle, which is more accustomed to gusty winds this time of the year, winds were from the west at about 10 mph, while southerly winds of 10 to 15 mph were reported across South Texas and East Texas.

Skies were generally fair across the state, except for low clouds in Southeast and South Central Texas and patches of high-level clouds in West Texas.

The winds kept early morning temperatures on the mild side, with readings generally in the mid-50s to mid-60s.

NATION

Showers and thundershowers ranged from southern Indiana to southeast Iowa early today, with thunderstorms over central Illinois dropping marble-sized hail on at least two communities.

Rainshowers also were scattered across the central Plains, while a mixture of rain and snow fell from Idaho into Montana and in parts of the Northeast.

Strong, gusty winds were reported Wednesday night across the central Plains into Colorado, where gusts up to 53 mph with blowing snow were reported in Denver. Winds of 68 mph were clocked at Chadron, Neb., and 61 mph at Grand Junction, Col.

Skies were mostly cloudy over much of the northern half of the nation, while clear or fair skies prevailed across the Southeast and portions of the Southwest.

Racing realities effecting '85 Indy field

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The realities of modern Indy-car racing — big-dollar budgets and the constant development of new state-of-the-art cars — are having a distinct effect on the entry list for the 1985 Indianapolis 500.

Entries for this year's race are expected to fall nearly 40 shy of last year's record total of 117. The deadline is midnight Friday, but the total was up to just 48 on Wednesday, though more entries are expected to be announced today.

Last year's Indy 500 featured the first all-200-mph qualifying field. Among the 33 starters, only the car driven by Dennis Firestone, a two-year-old but updated March, was anything but brand new.

Now, after extensive testing of the new March, Lola and Eagle racers during the offseason, it seems apparent that even the 1984 models are going to be obsolete this May.

The new cars have unofficially broken track records at Phoenix, Ariz., International Raceway and Laguna Seca in Monterrey, Calif., in test sessions, while defending CART-PPG Indy-car champion Mario Andretti had an unofficial fast lap of more than 209 mph in testing his new Lola T-900 at Indianapolis last month.

Tom Sneva, driving a 1984 March, set the all-time Indianapolis mark of 210.029 mph for a four-lap qualifying run last May.

"I think the people this year with two- or three-year-old cars that think racing comes cheap have come to the realization that unless they have an '85 there is no use coming," said longtime Speedway official Bob Laycock, explaining the fewer number of entries.

"They think they would be wasting their time," he added.

Laycock estimates this year's entry total will be between 75 and 80.

The entry list reached 100 for the first time in 1979, with 93 in 1983 the lowest total since then.

AT LEAST 27 of last year's entries have not asked for entry blanks this year, including Mayer Racing, for whom Tom Sneva drove last year.

Other regulars not entered by Wednesday included Rolla Vollstedt, who brought Janet Guthrie to the 500; VDS Racing; Jerry Karl; Jerry Eisert; Grant King; American Dream Racing; Rattlesnake Racing; Center Line Racing; Theodore; H & R; Mergard and Armstrong.

Norm Elder, vice president of Sherm Inc., said Armstrong, who once entered five cars here, is looking for a sponsor to defray the heavy costs of running the 14-race Indy-car circuit.

"Basically, the cost to support a first class operation is between $1 million and $1.5 million," Elder said. "We still are leaving our options open."

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway, which found itself without enough garage facilities for all the entries last May, compounded the situation for the smaller teams this year by raising the entry fee from $1,000 to $3,000.

"That may have discouraged some people from putting their ficticious entries in," Elder said.

In the past, some smaller teams, with no real chance of making the race, recouped their entry costs by selling pit passes they received as an entrant. They came to the Speedway just to be part of the scene. But those days appear to be over.

A.J. Watson, a mechanical wizard who has been coming to the Speedway since 1948, was the man to beat in the late 1950s with Rodger Ward as his driver. His cars have not been serious contenders in recent years, but Ralph Wilke intends to enter a 1984 March for Watson, and Kenny Moran will pay the fee for a second year-old entry.

"I think the main reason (for the drop in entries) is on account of the $3,000," said Watson. "Everybody doesn't have a backup backup, if you know what I mean. Three thousand dollars, it's high for us. That's most of our budget."

WATSON, WHO insists the 1984 cars haven't been proven obsolete yet, admitted top teams such as Penske Racing have such high budgets they put him "out of the ballpark."

It's generally agreed you need at least six people to maintain and prepare a car properly. Watson will come to the Speedway with three at most. He also said Wilke spends between $150,000 to $200,000 a season.

"That's not enough," Watson said. "You need at least $500,000."

A new March or Lola costs about $140,000 and each new engine another $50,000 to $60,000.

Lee still perfect in 4-5A

Bulldogs have chance at revenge

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The first half of the District 4-5A baseball season came to a successful conclusion for the Midland Lee Rebels Tuesday, at the expense of cross-town counterpart Midland High, 9-5.

The Rebels, 7-0 in league action, 15-4 overall, start the back-stretch of district action today when they take on the trouble-plagued San Angelo Bobcats at Lee Field at 4 p.m.

The Bobcats are coming off an 18-13, 12-error performance against Big Spring and are in a three-way tie for last place with Abilene High and Odessa Permian at 2-5.

With the loss to Lee, Midland High fell to 3-4 in league action and into fourth place, a full four games behind Lee and three behind second place Abilene Cooper, 6-1.

The Bulldogs are also home today, having adjusted their schedule with Big Spring in the first half of the season to help the Steers out of an eight-hour rule jam. The Bulldogs lost that game 5-4, snapping Big Spring's 15-game 4-5A losing streak dating back to the 1983 season.

With the passage of time, that loss no longer seems as embarassing as it did in Week One of play. The Steers have since won two more games to even their record at 3-3 and hold a 10-6 lead over Odessa High in a game called for darkness. The Steers and Bronchos will conclude the game before their next regularly scheduled meeting this month.

THERE ARE several factors contributing to the success of Midland Lee this year. In 19 games, the Rebels have put together a strong one-two-three combination of pitching, hitting and fielding. Of their four losses, three have come to perennial West Texas power Lubbock Monterey and one to Abilene Cooper, which is ranked second in this week's baseball poll.

On the mound, Lee's rotation of Mike Rittenberry, George Matta and Mike Small have carried the biggest portion of the workload and have helped combine for a 2.51 earned run average.

The three have each suffered only one loss and are led by Matta with a 6-1 record and one save. Small is 5-1 and Rittenberry 4-1 with two saves. Rittenberry leads the team in ERA at 2.08.

Defensively, Lee has committed 35 errors in 19 games (1.8 per game but only nine since 4-5A play began (1.3). The Rebels have allowed 72 runs (3.8 per game) and 28 (4.0) in district action.

As a team, the Rebels are hitting .318 (171-for-538) and have scored 117 runs (6.2), 58 (8.3) in league play.

Lee has eight players hitting better than .300 for the year, led by Donny Rivas at .394, Keith McDonald at .389, Tuey Rankin and Dirk Bergoon at .377, Mike Small at .350, Greg Shaw at .314, Paul Colwell at .306 and Cary Brown at .302.

And, for the most part, their averages have improved in the seven 4-5A games with Rivas as high a .727 (in a limited number of at bats) and McDonald at .517.

WHILE THINGS have been going smoothly at Lee, there have been a few problems at Midland High, mostly on the mound.

The Bulldogs can hit with the best of teams in the league, they most recent proof to that claim was a 12-hit attack against Lee Tuesday that produced the five runs. More could have been scored as 10 runners were stranded.

Offensively, MHS is hitting .315 for the year, raising the team average in each of the last three games.

Individually, the 'Dogs are paced by Kenny De La Garza with a .455 average while Matt Sears follows at .417 in limited action.

Six more Bulldogs are in the .300-plus range. Mark Torres, one of the top hitters among all 4-5A batters (league play only), has raised his overall average .116 in five games to .375 and is hitting at a .500 click in district action.

Greg Hatcher comes in at .365, Darren Thorpe, .333; Mike Stanton, .310; Anthony Deande, .303; and Ricky Castaneda, .302.

Castaneda (.421), Sears (.400), Ben Grimes (.308) and Deande (.300), join Torres as the best Bulldog hitters in 4-5A games.

Midland High needs all the hits it can get to compensate for a pitching staff that is inconsistant, holding a 5.60 team ERA in 115 innings pitched. The Bulldog staff has given up 149 hits, 121 runs and has walked 93 batters, one more than its total earned runs allowed for the year.

Of the three-man rotation, Michael Gonzalez and De La Garza have been the most effective with 4.09 and 4.83 ERA's respectively.

Since the Big Spring Steers have been involved in many high-scoring slugfest this year, it stands to reason that balls could be sailing to all points of Zachery Field and the runs crossing home plate in a steady flow.

Kent Porter Reporter-Telegram

Midland High first baseman Ben Grimes has trouble handling the ball in a recent game at Zachery Field. The Bulldogs have also had a few problems this year, falling to 3-4 in District 4-5A play. Today they try avenge one of those losses when they host Big Spring at 4 p.m.

Memorial Stadium's new track surface is still paying big dividends for local youngsters as nine running event records in the Midland City Junior track meet fell Wednesday afternoon.

When the youngsters hit the new paved surface for the first time last year, 23 records fell in the meet that hosts seventh, eighth and ninth grade competitors. Nine more bit the dust Wednesday.

Lee also set a 44.08 record pace in the 400 relay and Joe Woodard of Lee set the 200 mark with a 22.96.

In the seventh grade, Goddard took team honors with 171 points while Alamo was second with 113. Brian Conaway led the Goddard charge with a record 1:36.79 in the 600 and a 3:46.93 record in the 1200. The other record in the division went to Bill Swearingen of Goddard with a 39.66 in the 300.

High school shortstop dies of heart attack

From Wire Reports

A massive heart attack has been blamed for the death of a Star, Miss., high school shortstop who collapsed and died during a game Tuesday, authorities said.

Rankin County Coroner Jimmy Roberts announced the cause of death after an autopsy on Mike Abel, 15, of Brandon.

Abel complained to his coach that he wasn't feeling well, then collapsed and died in the dugout, said Coach Charlie Butts. Abel had to be assisted from the field during the fifth inning of McLaurin High School's game, said Butts.

Just before Abel collapsed, Butts said the youth turned to assistant coach Terry Brister and said, "Coach, I ain't never felt this bad before. Please help me."

The coroner said that there was no history of heart disease. He said that the boy's heart appeared healthy, although it was a bit larger than normal. 'Still, there are a lot of people walking around like that," Roberts said. "It could be that playing sports and bumping around may have aggravated it."

Coach Butts said there had not been any kind of blow, accident, collision or anything before Abel collapsed, although he said he did fall. "My pitcher walked their leadoff batter. Mike called time out. I could tell when I looked at him that something was wrong. I hollered from the dugout and asked if he was OK. He told me he didn't feel very well," Butts said.

FOOTBALL — The executive committee of the SEC decided not to strip Florida of its first-ever SEC football crown. The committee, which last November banned the Gators from going to a post-season bowl because of a string of NCAA rules violations, said Florida should not be deprived of the SEC football championship it won on the field last fall.

The Gators nailed down the SEC title with a 5-0-1 league mark and 9-1-1 overall record, but stayed home from the bowls under the SEC's ruling.

The Houston Oilers signed six free agents to NFL contracts Wednesday.

They are: Scott Gordon, 6-4, 265, guard, Santa Clara College; Matt Harlien, 6-4, 270, tackle, Texas Tech; Tim Harris, 5-9 206, running back, Washington State; David Klug, 6-4, 230, linebacker, Corcordia College; Mark Schlecht, punter, 6-2, 200, Nebraska-Omaha and Jack Weil, 5-11, 175, punter, Wyoming.

Midland's Canales fifth in PBA's Old Spice Classic

From Staff Reports

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. — Midland rookie bowler Randy Canales, less than two months on the Professional Bowlers Association national tour, came out of rabbit qualifying earlier this week and moved into fifth place of the $150,000 Old Spice Classic after the first 12 games of competition.

Canales, who was bowling in the Oil Stars League at Tall City Lanes earlier this year, rolled a 2,692 to hold a two pin lead over John DiLutis of Baltimore and trails Mike Aulby of Indianapolis, a two-time winner this season, by 177 pins. Aulby rolled 2,869 for his 12-game effort.

John Gant of Pittsburgh is in second at 2,778 followed by Sam Maccarone of Glassboro, N.J. at 2,720 and Charlie Tapp of St. Paul at 2,718.

Canales is one of two Tall City bowlers currently on the PBA tour. Last fall, Midland's Charlie Lacy was a rabbit qualifier in a tournament one week before winning $23,000 in the True Value Open.

To gain the finals in a PBA event, the top five bowlers after a week of qualifying gain the TV finals where they bowl step-ladder eliminations until a champion is determined.

All's well when Bird's well

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

There was nothing wrong with the Boston Celtics that the return of Larry Bird couldn't cure, but the Philadelphia 76ers still can't figure out what to do about the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Bird missed two games with bursitis in the elbow of his shooting arm and Boston promptly lost two games in a row for the first time all season. But he returned to action Wednesday night and scored 35 points in leading the Celtics to a 119-103 National Basketball Association victory over the Indiana Pacers, who suffered their 12th consecutive setback.

Boston's victory increased their Atlantic Division lead to five games over the Sixers, who were beaten by Cleveland for the fourth straight time 113-110. The Cavaliers, still 10 games under .500 despite a 31-24 record since a 2-19 start, are the only team to beat Philadelphia four times this season.

"I'm very concerned, especially at this time of year," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "We had no patience, took bad shots. Every time we play them something different hurts us. They've got a lot of depth. Someone else always seems to contribute."

With the score tied 6-6, the Celtics took control against Indiana with a 13-point run in which Bird scored the last 11 en route to a 16-for-28 shooting night. Kevin McHale added 26 points for Boston while Vern Fleming led Indiana with 20.

"The elbow feels pretty good," said Bird, who played 39 minutes. "A couple of times on long passes I came up short so I didn't take a lot of long shots. Sitting out two games was like being in a cage. It feels good now and if I can extend my arm, I'll play.

"I came back tonight because we have a lot of injuries. I don't think I could have played last night (Tuesday), but I woke up today and the elbow felt good."

Spurs 122, Lakers 108

San Antonio played without George Gervin, who has a sprained ankle, while Los Angeles was minus flu-stricken Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Mike Mitchell paced the Spurs with 36 points and added 14 rebounds while Johnny Moore had 17 points, eight steals and 13 assists.James Worthy was high for the Lakers with 32 points.

Cavaliers 113, 76ers 110

Cleveland hit eight consecutive free throws in the final 2:33, four by Phil Hubbard, to post its fifth consecutive triumph and spoil a Philadelphia comeback.The Sixers trailed 99-89 with 9:51 remaining but evened the score at 105-105 with a 16-6 burst. With the score tied at 109, Hubbard hit two free throws and Philadelphia's Charles Barkley one before Cleveland's Lonnie Shelton ended the scoring with a pair from the foul line.

The Cavaliers, who have taken four of six meetings with the Sixers, didn't make a field goal in the final 2:33 but were 8-for-8 at the line.World B. Free led Cleveland with 25 points and Hubbard added 23 while Malone had 26 for Philadelphia.

"The breaks went our way," said Hubbard."We just didn't give up. We've been playing great basketball."

Cleveland Coach George Karl said the Cavaliers, who are three games ahead of Atlanta in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth, "had good defense, good ball movement, a great first half. We just gutted it out in the second half. That was playoff basketball out there, a lot of intensity."

Nets 113, Knicks 100

Albert King scored 23 points and Buck Williams added 22 points and 15 rebounds as New Jersey gave Stan Albeck his 300th victory as a pro coach.Micheal Ray Richardson added 17 points and a season-high 17 assists.The defeat stretched the Knicks' losing streak to six games and was their eighth in a row against the Nets. Ernie Grunfeld led the Knicks with 26 points.

Bulls 100, Bullets 91

Michael Jordan scored 14 of his 25 points as Chicago outscored Washington 30-10 in the third quarter.The victory was only the third in the last 21 road games for the Bulls but clinched a playoff spot for the first time in four seasons.

Leading 50-49 at halftime, the Bulls stormed to an 80-59 lead with 1:15 remaining in the third period.Orlando Woolridge also scored 25 points for Chicago.Jeff Malone had 22 to lead the Bullets.

Clippers 124, Kings 122

Derek Smith scored a career-high 41 points and the Clippers survived a late scare.Kansas City cut the Clippers' 99-90 lead to three points with 5:32 left when Smith took charge. He scored six points to key an 8-2 spurt that lifted Los Angeles to a 120-111 lead.Reggie Theus, who passed the 10,000-career-point mark, and Otis Thorpe each had 20 points to lead the Kings.

Norm Nixon's sixth assist of the game that set up Smith for a slam dunk late in the second quarter moved him past Dave Bing into eighth place on the all-time NBA assist list. Nixon finished with 12 assists to give him 5,404 in his career.

Lamar's Foster drops from Arkansas coaching race

BEAUMONT (AP) — Lamar University basketball Coach Pat Foster said Wednesday he is withdrawing from consideration for the head coaching job at the University of Arkansas, which lost Eddie Sutton to Kentucky, a Lamar spokesman said.

From Chicago where he is on a recruiting trip, Foster said, "I understand that I am being considered for the head coaching vacancy at the Uiversity of Arkansas. But I want to reaffirm that I am committed to Lamar University, the city of Beaumont and especially my players.

"I will not be pursuing the Arkansas position past this point. This action underscores my belief that there is not a basketball program in the country that has more potential than the one I'm connected with at Lamar Univeristy," Foster said.

Shoulder injury sidelines Cowboys' Donley for year

DALLAS (AP) — Wide receiver Doug Donley will not return to the Dallas Cowboys lineup next season because of a nagging shoulder injury, Coach Tom Landry said Wednesday.

"He won't play for us this year. That is for sure," Landry said.

The National Football League's team doctor, Marvin Knight, had said Donley could not pass the training camp physical because of a chronically sore right shoulder that has been operated on three times.

Landry told Donley he could retire or be placed on waivers if he still wanted to play.

"It's a closed book," Donley said. "He just told me his hands were tied. Knight won't pass me, so he can't let me go on the field to prove that I can play.

"I fell I can still play. My shoulder is in the same condition it was four years ago. This should be resolved on the football field, not in the doctor's office. I like Dallas, and I have some business opportunities here, so I might not do that. I'm not depending on football for the rest of my life, but I still want to play," Donley said.

Donley started nine games at wide receiver last year. After catching nine passes for 137 yards against in the first game against the Rams, he fell on his shoulder in the second game. He aggravated a hamstring a few weeks later and did not catch a pass in seven games.

Howser makes one prediction: 84 wins won't win title

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

American League West Preview

Dick Howser, manager of the Kansas City Royals, says he is "not much for predictions." So how do you feel about repeating as champions of the American League West, Dick?

"I am optimistic about contending for the title. I don't like to make predictions about winning titles, but I do feel good about our chances."

When pressed, however, Howser will make one prediction with virtual certainty: "There's no question that it's going to take more wins this year for the division title."

The Royals were only 84-78 last year — they didn't get above .500 to stay until Sept. 5 — and finished three games ahead of the California Angels and Minnesota Twins. In fact, all seven teams in the division finished within 15 games of each other, the same margin that separated first-place Detroit and runnerup Toronto in the AL East.

"We finished on a high note by playing excellent baseball over the last half of the season (they were 10 games under .500 at one point)," says Howser. "We have some good reasons to be positive. First of all, we are starting with a good, young pitching staff (Bud Black, Mark Gubicza, Bret Saberhagen). One element we have to our pitching that few other teams have is Dan Quisenberry (124 saves over the last three years). He's the guy who is going to finish games for us.

"We also believe we are a stronger club defensively. The addition of Jim Sundberg (C), along with the emergence of Onix Concepcion (SS) to go with Willie Wilson (CF) and Frank White (2B), makes us as strong up the middle as any club.

"It will be important for us to have George Brett (3B) and Wilson all season. Wilson makes things happen and Brett is our big bat. Steve Balboni (1B) got over the hurdle last year and gives us a legitimate power hitter."

After a two-year hiatus, Gene Mauch is back at the helm of the Angels and predicts they will be "solid contenders. What a lot of people seem to forget is this club came within three games of winning the division last year. That's not a lot of ground to make up."

Mauch is looking for starters to join Geoff Zahn, Mike Witt and Ron Romanick. And he appears to be serious when he says that the bullpen of Donnie Moore, Doug Corbett, Luis Sanchez, Curt Kaufman and Jim Slaton "is certainly one to be reckoned with."

Elsewhere, Mauch is counting on veterans like Brian Downing (LF), Doug DeCinces (3B), Bobby Grich (IF), Rod Carew (1B), Bob Boone (C), Rob Wilfong (2B), Reggie Jackson (OF-DH) and Juan Beniquez (OF) to provide leadership for youngsters like Dick Schofield (SS), Gary Pettis (CF) and Mike Brown (OF).

It is best, however, to remember one fact: Mauch holds the major-league record of having managed for 23 years without winning a pennant.

Minnesota hasn't finished over .500 since 1979 but Manager Billy Gardner says the Twins are "now at the point where a winning record and being a contender is expected."

Gardner expects starters Frank Viola, Mike Smithson and John Butcher to keep the Twins in most games. However, relief ace Ron Davis must rebound from a 7-11, 4.55 season; he saved 29 saves but let almost that many slip away.

The Twins will score runs in the Metrodome with the likes of Kent Hrbek (1B), Tom Brunansky (RF), Mickey Hatcher (LF), Gary Gaetti (3B) and Kirby Puckett (CF). Newly acquired Mike Stenhouse (DH) provides even more punch and Tim Teufel (2B) had a fine rookie campaign, but the key may be whether Roy Smalley, back after a three-year trip to New York and Chicago, can still play shortstop. He couldn't for the Yankees or White Sox.

Jackie Moore begins his first full season as manager of the Oakland A's, who swapped base stealing king Rickey Henderson to the Yankees for a quartet of young pitchers. One of them, Jay Howell, had the best strikeout-to-innings-pitched ratio in the league and will replace Bill Caudill as the bullpen ace. The two players Oakland got for Caudill — Alfredo Griffin (SS), Dave Collins (LF) — will be regulars.

Although Tony Phillips (2B) will be out for a while with an ankle injury, Bruce Bochte (1B) came on strong in the second half of 1984 and Carney Lansford (3B) hit .300 for the fourth year in a row. Dwayne Murphy (CF) socked 33 homers and won his fifth consecutive Gold Glove. The A's other power hitter is DH Dave Kingman (35-118).

Oakland was rock-bottom in the league with a 4.48 ERA. Don Sutton, Curt Young and Chris Codiroli are the only sure starters.

The Chicago White Sox collapsed from a division title in 1983 to a sorry fifth-place finish in '84, 25 games off their '83 pace. Manager Tony LaRussa promises they will field a much faster team this season thanks to the arrival of Luis Salazar (3B-OF) and Ozzie Guillen (SS), who came from San Diego along with pitcher Tim Lollar in the LaMarr Hoyt trade. Salazar and Guillen join speedsters Daryl Boston (CF), Rudy Law (CF) and Julio Cruz (2B); Boston and Guillen have been touted as Rookie of the Year candidates. Harold Baines (RF), Ron Kittle (DH), Carlton Fisk (C) and Greg Walker (1B) provide the punch.

Despite the trade of Hoyt, LaRussa expects the pitching to be strong with Tom Seaver (288 victories), Richard Dotson, Floyd Bannister, Britt Burns and Lollar. Bob James joins 42-year-old Ron Reed in the bullpen.

Chuck Cottier starts his first season as manager of the Seattle Mariners, who have been under .500 each of their eight years in the league. The Mariners' prospects start with first baseman Alvin Davis (27 homers, 116 RBIs), the 1984 Rookie of the Year, and Mark Langston, who led the league in strikeouts while winning Rookie Pitcher of the Year honors.

Seattle's offensive strength other than Davis lies in the outfield, which includes Dave Henderson, Phil Bradley and Al Cowens. The return of DH Gorman Thomas from shoulder surgery would be a big help.

Cottier calls the rotation of Langston, Jim Beattie, Mike Moore and Matt Young "the best starting foursome in the American League." Edwin Nunez may be ready to join Ed Vande Berg in the bullpen.

Despite a last-place finish, Texas Manager Doug Rader is "very optimistic when I assess our chances" because "we received outstanding performances from a number of individuals." They include starting pitchers Frank Tanana, Charlie Hough and Mike Mason, Pete O'Brien (1B) and Buddy Bell (3B). Rader says the outfield of Gary Ward, George Wright and Larry Parrish is one of the best in the league.

The Rangers acquired a full-time DH in Cliff Johnson and a new catcher in Don Slaught, but Dave Schmidt and Dave Stewart must come through in the bullpen.

Prediction: Chicago, Kansas City, Minnesota, Seattle, California, Oakland, Texas.

Garner, Tolman pace Astros to easy win over Mets

Associated Press

Spring Baseball

Phil Garner and Tim Tolman each drove in four runs Wednesday as the Houston Astros raked Sid Fernandez for 10 hits and eight runs in four innings on their way to a 12-2 exhibition victory over the New York Mets.

Tolman's two-run homer set the stage for the assault against the Mets left-hander, who has given up 15 runs in his last 11 1-3 innings.

Roger McDowell, recently promoted to the Mets staff, gave up three more runs in the eighth. Jesse Orosco was the victim of an Alan Ashby solo homer in the ninth.

The Astros suffered the loss of pitcher Mike Madden, who fractured a left thumb attempting to bunt in the second inning.

Braves 8, Rangers 4

Paul Zuvella's 3-run double capped a 6-run Atlanta eighth inning as the Braves came from behind to defeat Texas.

The victory was the seventh in a row for the Braves and ensures them a winning spring with a 15-10 record with four games remaining.

Claudell Washington opened the decisive inning with a single, followed by a walk to Dale Murphy. Ken Oberkfell and Terry Harper hit back-to-back singles scoring Washington and Murphy to tie the game.

Bruce Benedict was safe on a fielder's choice that was bobbled by Gold Glove third baseman Buddy Bell. After Glenn Hubbard flied out, Chris Chambliss drove in Oberkfell with a sacrifice fly to foul territory.

An intentional walk to Terry Harper reloaded the bases, and shortstop Zuvella followed with his bases-clearing double. Zuvella has 13 RBI for the spring to lead the team.

White Sox 11, Yankees 3

Harold Baines continued his torrid spring by going 3-for-4 and driving in three runs as the Chicago White Sox pounded the New York Yankees.

Baines, batting .439 this spring with 16 RBI, extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a run-scoring double in the first inning. In the second inning, Baines delivered a two-run single and Greg Walker belted a three-run homer.

Brewers 7, Mariners 5

Cecil Cooper's two-run home run in the ninth inning lifted the Milwaukee Brewers to a victory over the Seattle Mariners.

After the Mariners had tied the game with two runs off Ray Searage in the top of the ninth, Robin Yount tripled with one out off loser Ed Vande Berg. Cooper hit Vande Berg's next pitch over the right field fence for his third home run of the spring.

Royals 4, Reds 1

Dane Iorg's bases-loaded single fueled a four-run eighth inning that carried the Kansas City Royals to a come-from-behind victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Royals scored all four runs off Reds starter John Stuper, 1-2, who took a five-hit shutout into the eighth.

Kansas City loaded the bases on Pat Sheridan's single, an error by first baseman Cesar Cedeno, and Pat Putnam's single. Iorg's single put the Royals ahead 2-1, Putnam scored on a wild pitch by Stuper, and Iorg came home on a force play.

Blue Jays 2, Pirates 1

Buck Martinez drove in both Toronto runs and Dave Stieb tuned up for the season opener by limiting Pittsburgh to three hits as the Blue Jays edged the Pirates.

Stieb, who will start Monday against Bud Black and the Royals in Kansas City in the season opener for both clubs, allowed one run while striking out six in his seven inning stint.

Expos 7, Orioles 5

The Montreal Expos scored three runs in the sixth and seventh innings Wednesday to defeat the Baltimore Orioles.

Rookie third baseman Fritz Connally made two errors in the sixth inning to set up three unearned runs that enabled the Expos to tie the game. A single by Terry Francona and a double by Vance Law accounted for the three runs in the seventh.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 6

A mental lapse by Boston right fielder Dwight Evans and a wind-blown triple by Detroit's Larry Herndon contributed to a five-run seventh inning as the Tigers beat the Red Sox.

With the Red Sox leading 4-2, reliever Mark Clear walked Lou Whitaker and Alan Trammell to start the Detroit seventh. Whitaker stole third and scored on Kirk Gibson's single. Bob Ojeda came on after Lance Parrish popped out and gave up an intentional walk to pinch-hitter Marty Castillo that loaded the bases.

Barbaro Garbey then lofted a pinch sacrifice fly that Evans caught on the warning track, but both Trammell and Gibson scored as Evans held onto the ball. Herndon then hit a pinch triple that fell between three players down the line in shallow right. Herndon scored when Ojeda balked and the Tigers led 7-4.

Cubs 8, Indians 4

Steve Lake singled, doubled and tripled and drove in four runs to give the Chicago Cubs an 8-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The Cubs, 15-13, spotted Cleveland a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Mel Hall cracked a two-run homer off Lary Sorensen, 3-0.

But Lake singled in one run in the second and tripled in two more during Chicago's five-run third inning against Bert Blyleven, 1-4. Ron Cey drew a bases-loaded walk and designated hitter Jody Davis added a sacrifice fly during the outburst, which put the Cubs ahead 6-2.

Mike Hargrove's two-run homer in the fourth brought the Indians, 12-13, back within 6-4, but Chicago got the runs back on Lake's RBI double in the fifth and Keith Moreland's run-scoring single in the sixth.

Philadelphia 3, St. Louis 2

Juan Samuel's two-out single in the ninth drove in Greg Gross as the Philadelphia Phillies edged the St. Louis Cardinals for their fifth straight victory.

Gross ran home from third in front of a late throw from Ozzie Smith, who had caught Samuel's grounder deep in the hole. Gross had doubled to get on and advanced to third on an infield out.

The Cardinals led 2-0 going into the seventh. Phillies starter Charles Hudson gave up single runs in the first and second innings on doubles by Darrell Porter and Tom Herr. St. Louis starter Danny Cox gave up six hits and struck out four over five innings.

The Phillies evened the count in the seventh with RBI singles by Gross and Samuel off reliever Kevin Hagen.

Seven-hit pitching paces M-Angels past Quad Cities

From Staff Reports

MESA, Ariz. — The Midland Angels punched their exhibition season record to 5-2 Wednesday, posting an 8-0 vitory over their Class A affiliate Quad Cities here.

Starting pitcher Bryan Price thres five three-hit shutout innings to claim the victory while Thomas Bryden allowed three hits in two innings and Spiro Psaltis one hit in two.

The Angels backed the seven-hitter with an errorless defensive effort and came up with 11 hits.

Leading the way at the plate was Devon white, 3-for-5 with two doubles and a home run for three runs scored and an RBi. He also recorded a stolen base.

Billie Merriefield added a pair of single and Kevin Davis a singel and double to spark the Angels. Mark Mclemore, who collected one hit, ran his way to three stolen bases.

The Angels are less than a week away from opening the Texas League season. On Tuesday, they debut in El Paso with Don Timberlake, a 15-game winner in Redwood, Calif., in the California League last year (Class A), scheduled to start.

Tall tales not true, Guerrero doesn't drive a VW

VERO BEACH — They tell stories down in the Caribbean about Pete Guerrero, the mighty third baseman of the Dodgers.

They tell how he was walking down a road one night and came upon a poor devil, trapped underneath an overturned truck and trailer, who begged Guerrero to go for help. Pete said: "Sure, just as soon as I lift that truck off you."

They tell of the time he was trying to prove to the umpire that he had been struck in the biceps by a pitched ball and the biceps was all right but the ball was bleeding. What was left of it.

They tell about the time he crashed into a catcher at home plate and it took a blowtorch and two crowbars to cut the guy loose. To this day, they say, the catcher has Dodgers stenciled backward on his chest.

They tell about how his body is so hard you could scratch a match or cut glass with any part of it. He wasn't born, he was quarried. He's so strong that whenever he can't find a parking space for his Volkswagen, he just carries it around with him.

When he goes downtown, they say, he should wear rubber tires around him, like a tugboat, so that he doesn't smash things he bumps into.

He could bend a crowbar, they tell you, provided that he didn't break it first. He's probably the only guy in the lineup who doesn't need that bat. He could homer without it.

And so on. The stories are all apocryphal, of course. Guerrero doesn't even drive a Volkswagen.

SOME YEARS ago, when he first showed up in their uniform, Pedro Guerrero looked to the Dodgers like the second coming of Babe Ruth. Coming off a year in which he was co-MVP of the World Series, he hit 32 home runs two years in a row, batted over .300 and knocked in more than 100 runs.

The Dodgers began to wonder what they needed that expensive supporting cast for. Pete was a pennant all by himself.

So they began unloading high-priced supporting players, such expendables as Steve Garvey, Ron Cey and Dusty Baker, and replacing them with the meat of their minor league lineups from San Antonio and Albuquerque. I mean, would Caruso need another tenor?

Suddenly, all Pete had to do was make up for the loss of 660 lifetime home runs and about 45 years of experience. He began to see pitches you wouldn't throw to Hitler.

You see, even though baseball is not precisely a team game — it's more a series of solo performances by the artists — it does have its occasional teamwork fallout.

For instance, the more dangerous the lineup generally, the better it is for the individuals in it.

Therefore, when Guerrero was batting behind — or in the middle of — a corps of batters that included Cey, Garvey and Baker, he got to see the kinds of pitches you could bring home to mother. Nice, honest, earnest out pitches. The kind you can hit. Far.

WHEN HE began to be surrounded by triple-A types who could not be presumed to scare a major league pitcher, he began to look at the kinds of pitches that should be arrested for loitering — sick sliders, scurvy fastballs, dirt curves, all well outside the strike zone. They were pitches that had popup written all over them. The best pitch Pedro got to hit usually was Ball 4.

There is an axiom in baseball that says: "Don't ever let the big guy beat you a ball game."

Loosely translated, it means: "Don't ever give a good pitch to a Henry Aaron or a Willie Mays or, indeed, any cleanup hitter with the game on the line."

Baseball's book calls for a pitcher to throw anything but strikes in that situation. To walk him, if necessary.

But, that is possible only when Mr. Big is surrounded by banjos, punch-and-Judies, out men and other derogatory baseball terms for unskilled professionals. You don't take a chance on walking the batter when the next batter is Babe Ruth. Or Steve Garvey.

But when you've got two unproven hitters from Albuquerque, or a chorus of banjos following along, you can throw some pitches that are right out of a Peoria alley. Very few strikes. Lots of gutter balls.

THIS IS known as pitching around a dangerous player. Also known as taking the bat out of his hands, it is a well-worn tactic in the deployment of a skilled team. It is a major frustration to a man expected to carry (i.e., lead to the pennant) a ball club.

Guerrero does not reason that the Dodgers pay him a million dollars a year to draw walks, semi-intentional or otherwise. Walks are not for guys who can lift trucks or walk through walls. Walks are for guys who bunt for hits, not swing for homers.

"I know what's coming up there," says Guerrero. "I have had pitchers tell me they're not going to let me beat them. They're going to make the rest of the lineup do it."

It's hard to maintain a pace of 32 homers a year on pitches that may bounce on their way to the plate, or scrape your belt buckle on the way past it. Ball 4 is not your basic gopher pitch.

Guerrero's home run production dropped in half.

Stars in a lot of professions resent sharing the spotlight. They want all the closeups to themselves. Or they work alone.

Guerrero is not fussy. He'd be glad to share the home run record with two or three co-stars if he could also share the fastballs. He's tired of doing a solo. Even Jesse James needed a gang, Caruso an orchestra.

In a baseball order, sometimes it takes three to tango.

Stars defeat Maple Leafs in fight-marred game

Associated Press

The Minnesota North Stars and Toronto Maple Leafs have suffered through difficult, depressing and disappointing National Hockey League seasons. In their final meeting of the season, they let their frustrations show.

Minnesota, which won the Norris Division title last season but has sunk to fourth this year, outscored the Maple Leafs — last in the division and holders of the worst record in the NHL — 9-7 Wednesday night. Dino Ciccarelli had a goal and three assists, while Brian Bellows and Steve Payne each collected a goal and two assists.

NHL Roundup

Black Hawks 5, Devils 0

Host Chicago closed within two points of first-place St. Louis in the Norris Division as rookie Warren Skorodenski stopped 34 shots for his second shutout of the season. The line of Ed Olczyk, Curt Fraser and Troy Murray accounted for two goals and four assists.

The Hawks have two games remaining, while the Blues have three.

Flames 5, Canucks 3

At Calgary, the Flames sneaked within a point of the second-place Winnipeg Jets in the Smythe Division as Carey Wilson scored two goals and set up another. The Flames, who went 7-0-1 with Vancouver this year, trailed 3-2 entering the final period. Paul Baxter tied it at 7:42 and Doug Risebrough got the winner two minutes later. Cam Neely scored twice and Peter McNab had three assists for the Canucks.

Red Wings 3, Penguins 2

Detroit clinched third place in the Norris when Gerard Gallant swept a loose puck past goalie Denis Herron late in the third period to hand the host Penguins their eighth loss in nine games. The Red Wings will meet either Chicago or St. Louis — whichever finishes second in the Norris — in the playoffs.

Hearns' pick: Hagler to fall in third round

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A confident Thomas Hearns began his final training for his fight against undisputed middlweight champion Marvin Hagler with predictions of a third-round knockout.

Hearns opened up the Las Vegas portion of his training Tuesday for the fight by going eight rounds against southpaw sparring partner Cecil Pettigrew a few hundred yards away from the site of the bout at Caesars Palace. He trained earlier for three weeks in Florida.

"I feel I can do it in three rounds," Hearns said. "I predict a third round knockout."

Hearns is now the favorite among oddsmakers in this gaming city, who earlier had listed Hagler as a favorite. Hearns is now favored by a 6½-5 margin at most books.

Hagler is training in Palm Springs, Calif., and plans to arrive here on Monday for his final sessions.

Hearns looked sharp against Pettigrew, who imitated Hagler's southpaw style, while fighting four minute rounds wearing gloves ten ounces heavier than those he will use in the ring against the champion.

Hearns, the 154-pound champion whose only loss was as a welterweight to Sugar Ray Leonard, is moving up in weight for the second time and said he feels better at the heavier weight.

"I just feel a lot stronger than I usually do coming into a fight," he said. "I usually feel weak because I have to get down in weight. This is closer to my normal weight."

Hearns said he weighs about 164 pounds now and plans to come into the fight right at the 160-pound middleweight limit.

"I'm just about there," he said of his training. "I'd say another week and I'll be there."

Hearns, who fought Leonard three years ago to similar hype in the parking lot of the same resort hotel, said he has adapted better this time around to the crush of interview requests and demands for his time.

"It doesn't have any effect on me at all this time," he said. "I set aside time for the press before training and it has worked out well."

The actual fight, he predicted, will also go better than against Leonard, who knocked Hearns out in the 14th round.

"It's always easier the second time around," said Hearns.

Sports writer, daughter arrested for bookmaking

MONROVIA, Calif. (AP) — Sportswriter Gordon Jones and his daughter pleaded innocent Wednesday to bookmaking charges stemming from the handicapping school they operated at Santa Anita racetrack.

Monrovia Municipal Court Commissioner Kirkland Nyby set a pretrial hearing for May 16 in Municipal Court.

Jones, 54, and his daughter, Joanne Jones, 20, were arrested Feb. 23 at the Santa Anita Inn, across from the racetrack where Jones wrote handicapping stories for the Los Angeles Herald Examiner. Jones ran classes there teaching people how to handicap. His was one of several such schools in the area.

The Joneses are charged with misdemeanor bookmaking, which involves illegally receiving bets. Conviction carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Psychic bidders remember and boast about their rare successes; they tend to overlook their many failures. East's efforts on this hand produced a spectacular Pyrrhic victory.

After North's takeout double, East's bid of one spade would be considered mandatory my most psychers. South correctly doubled to show a spade suit, then bid hearts at his next turn. We are at a loss to understand North's raise to three hearts — perhaps he feared a bad spade break, or was worried that his partner might have only three spades and five hearts.

East had succeeded in his objective — he had kept his opponents out of their 4-4 spade fit. However, at four spades — the contract North-South would probably have reached had East not indulged in his shenanigans — declarer would have had to lose three side-suit tricks and a trump. Let's follow what happened at the rather strange contract of four hearts.

West led the king and ace of clubs and continued with a third round of the suit. (No other defense would have been any better.) Dummy's queen won and declarer sluffed a spade. Declarer led the jack of trumps from the table and, when that was allowed to hold, he continued with the ten of hearts, overtaking in hand with the queen.

South was fortunate that, when West won the ace of hearts, he could not continue another club, which would have forced declarer to ruff. No matter what West chose to return, declarer would be able to win in hand, draw the last trumps and come to ten tricks via three trumps, two spades, four diamonds and a club.

Perhaps we should rewrite our bidding texts to cater for 4-2 fits instead of 4-4!

Lauper wins six American Video Awards for two videos

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Eccentric songstress Cyndi Lauper dominated the American Video Awards as her "Time After Time" and "She Bop" won a total of six honors, including best pop video and top female performance.

The romantic "Time After Time" took the pop video and female performer awards Wednesday night along with best director for Ed Griles and best lighting design for Michael Negrin. "She Bop" won best choreography honors for Pat Birch and best costume design for Laurel Wills and Biff Chandler.

"Heart of Rock and Roll" by Huey Lewis and the News was named best group performance; "Eat It" by "Weird Al" Yankovic won best performance by a male artist; "When Doves Cry" by Prince claimed best soul video; and "Where's the Dress" by Moe Bandy and Joe Stampley was named best country video.

The National Academy of Video Arts and Sciences staged the third annual awards at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium with radio's Casey Kasem, jazz star Herbie Hancock and TV personality Lisa Hartman as hosts. The taped show will be carried later via syndication.

Miss Lauper, 31, who won a Grammy in February as best new artist and was nominated seven times for video honors, didn't let down her colorful image Wednesday. With hair in a wild plume of orange, red and a few other colors, she wore brown paisley silk pajamas and a cartridge belt with celluloid filmstrips draped over her shoulders.

"When I wrote it, I didn't sit down to write a hit song," Miss Lauper said of "Time after Time." "I wrote it to be a very special song that was very, very real. It was based on very real feelings."

The video portrays a woman breaking up with her boyfriend.

Ken Kragen, the driving force behind the pop charity project, "USA for Africa," received a special humanitarian award.

" 'USA for Africa' is not about taking awards," Kragen said. "It's not about accepting credit. It's about feeding people."

Yankovic accepted the award for "Eat It," a takeoff on Michael Jackson's single "Beat It" from 1983, in the best male performer category. The other nominees were Bruce Springsteen, Don Henley and George Michael.

"I'm sure that Bruce Springsteen is crying right now. I feel real bad about it, but that's the business," said Yankovic, whose comedy album picked up a Grammy earlier this year.

Yankovic's video about fear and loathing at the breakfast table used the same sets as Jackson's video about gang warfare but had the fighters square off with forks.

Yankovic impersonated a couple of Michael Jackson dance steps as he presented an award for best home video to Michael Jackson's sister, Rebbe, who accepted her brother's award for "The Making of Michael Jackson's Thriller."

Huey Lewis and the News' "Heart of Rock and Roll," a montage of their nationwide road show, beat out Van Halen, REO Speedwagon and Wham!, which was named best new video artist for "Wake Me Up Before You Go Go."

"The Making of Michael Jackson's 'Thriller'" also received an award for best long form video.

Prince's award was accepted by Apollonia, who starred with him in the film "Purple Rain." Clad in a see-through black negligee, she told the celebrity-studded crowd: "Prince is working this evening. He's viciously doing what he does best."

Chuck Mangione's "Diana D." won a best editing award for Zbigniew Rybczynski and best set design was given to Gray Lipley for "The Wild Boys" by Duran Duran.

Along with Miss Lauper's "Time After Time" and Springsteen's "Dancing in the Dark," the other nominees for best pop video were Philip Bailey's "Easy Lover," Paul McCartney's "No More Lonely Nights" and Thomas Dolby's "Hyperactive."

Rod Stewart, whose "Young Turks" video was selected best of the year at the first American Video Awards in 1983, was honored as a member of the NAVAS Hall of Fame.

Candidates included all videos produced and distributed to cable or broadcast television between Dec. 2, 1983 and Dec. 1, 1984. Nominees were selected after two ballots by the 500 eligible members of the academy which was founded in 1980 for professionals in the new video industry.

'We Are the World' tops charts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "We Are the World," the song recorded by a 45 pop music stars to help African famine victims, hit No. 1 on Billboard magazine's charts.

The song featuring the likes of Dionne Warwick, Kenny Rogers, Bob Dylan and Stevie Wonder became No. 1 in the United States on Wednesday "and more importantly, it's No. 1 across the board on the hot singles, the top 30 in sales and the top 30 in airplay," Billboard associate publisher Tom Noonan said.

The single fell short of predictions that it would skyrocket to No. 1 in two weeks, but Noonan said sales in the single's fourth week were strong and seemed likely to last.

More than 3 million of the seven-inch $1.98 version of the single had been sold, while just over 500,000 of the longer 12-inch, $4.98 single had been sold, Columbia Records said.

In addition, the album featuring the single got off to a flying start by selling more than 1 million copies in less than three days, Columbia Records announced Wednesday.

The cookbook features the shrimp salad of Joan Rivers, the gazpacho of Joanne Woodward, Gay Talese's tortellini with chicken and Powell's Popcorn Croutons, a specialty of Jane Powell.

But 11 of the cooks included in the book were among 7,000 entrants from around the nation who submitted their favorite recipes, acording to Newman's publicist, Anne Reznikoff.

The booklet, called "Newman's Own 22 Favorite Recipes," was released Wednesday and soon will be available to anyone who clips a label off a Newman's Own product and orders a copy for $1.95.

As has been the case with all of Newman's food products, profits from the sale of the book will go to charity.

Newman, 60, introduced his first product, salad dressing, as a joke in August 1982. Since then, the products have made $4 million.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC's entertainment division, "is the best in one of the most difficult jobs in the industry," the company's chairman said after approval of Tartikoff's new contract.

The 36-year-old Tartikoff, who has been credited with breathing new life into NBC programming since he took the job in 1980 was given the new, multiyear contract Wednesday.

"I am delighted he has agreed to continue as our quarterback and I hope he stays with NBC forever," said Board Chairman Grant A. Tinker in a statement released by the network after the board's action.

Tartikoff, a native of Long Island, N.Y., joined NBC in 1977 after four years with ABC and its affiliate, WLS-TV in Chicago.

NEW YORK (AP) — Austrian architect Hanz Hollein, who won the most prestigious award in his field, is known for buildings that include a touch of fancy.

The winner of the 1985 Pritzker Architecture Prize, who also has designed furniture, sunglasses and a coffee maker, has had only two commissions in the United States, both noted for their entrances.

A Manhattan art gallery features a chrome-plated cylinder at the bottom of the cubistic stucco facade and a doorway to a Fifth Avenue shop has arches downward, instead of upward.

Hollein, 51, has designed a tourist office in Vienna that is graced by palm trees with trunks encased in bronze, a broken marble classical column and an Indian-style pavilion to suggest exotic, far-off destinations.

About 400 architects were considered for the Pritzker, which includes a tax-free check for $100,000.

Home-health care nursing agency already expanding

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Only two months old, the Visiting Nurses Service of Midland has already expanded into a newer and larger office and has "around 12 patients" on its roster.

The offspring of Community and Senior Services of Midland Inc., Visiting Nurses opened its doors Feb. 8 "to help provide low-income people with home health care."

"But it's not only for indigent care," said Steve Edwards, the organization's director. "It's for people of all incomes, for all kinds of services."

The difference between Visiting Nurses and other home health care agencies, however, said Connie Glover, executive assistant for CSS, is that "need is what determines who gets assistance. "If one person is chronically ill but doesn't have any money and another doesn't have a great need but has the money, then the greater need will win out."

"No one is refused service," said Edwards.

Concern over the low-income homebound was raised two years ago by Clara Usrey and Betty Jackson, members of the Task Force Committee, which formed the agency.

"They saw that there was a great need and brought it to Dr. Eileen Piwetz," said Ms. Glover. Ms. Piwetz also is on the committee.

"They approached us in July 1984 and the committee was formed," said Ms. Glover.

According to Edwards, Visiting Nurses is the only one of its kind in Midland.

"We're the only non-profit home health care agency in Midland," he said. "There is Hospice, but it's for the terminally ill."

Edwards stated that Hospice has referred patients to Visiting Nurses that did not fall into their area.

Services provided by the agency include physical therapy, respiratory therapy, occupational therapy, nutritional counseling, speech therapy, changing of dressings and catheters and "just providing company."

"We have one full time nurse and are contracting the other professionals as needed," said Edwards. "They also do home assessment. If they notice that the patient needs a social worker or meals, then they contact the correct agency."

Although most of the patients have been elderly, Edwards stated that one teen-age mother was referred by the hospital.

"We also get referrals from doctors and families calling in.

Funding for the new agency is supplied by monies from the CSS (60 percent), grants from foundations, individual donations and from patient fees.

Visiting Nurses uses a sliding scale method of billing for low-income patients, according to Edwards. The system is based upon a point system. Income, number of household dependents, length and severity of illness and "additional factors" are assessed by the visiting nurse when considering and giving point values. A higher total point value results in less cost to the patient.

Feud claims another victim; Murder charges to be filed

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Additional charges of murder are expected to be filed today against three men following the death about 9:40 p.m. Wednesday of a 19-year-old man who had been critically wounded Tuesday evening.

Police Wednesday afternoon formally charged a 17-year-old Odessa man with attempted murder in connection with the shooting and wounding of two young men shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Isreal Carrasco Patino, 1325 Boatright, was arraigned before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly on a charge of attempted murder in connection with the shooting of Terrance Lopez, 17, 613 Harless, who was struck on the chin by a bullet fired from a rifle of unknown caliber, according to Odessa police.

Weatherly set Patino's bond at $10,000.

Patino was taken into custody at the police station Wednesday afternoon on a warrant alleging attempted murder.

By late this morning, Patino had not been charged with murder in the shooting of Daniel A. Castillo, Route 12, Box 3214, who was struck in the head by one of several bullets fired into the car in which he, Lopez and 18-year-old Rene Gomez, 805 Honeysuckle, were riding.

Two other suspects at mid-morning were still being sought by Odessa police in connection with the shooting incident.

Police spokesman John McAhon said the suspects, ages 20 and 18, are being sought on warrants alleging attempted murder, with additional charges of murder expected to be filed.

The weapon used in the shooting, which occurred at the intersection of West Clements and Summer Street Tuesday evening, has not been found, McAhon said.

According to police reports, Lopez, Castillo and Gomez were headed west on Clements, approaching Summer Street, when they noticed a car containing five or six men following them. At the intersection, one of the men allegedly leaned out a window and fire several shots at the Lopez car.

The condition of Lopez at Medical Center Hospital this morning was described as good. Gomez managed to escape being struck by any of the bullets because, police said, he ducked down in the back seat of the Lopez vehicle.

According to Odessa attorney John W. Smith, Terrance Lopez is the younger brother of Christopher Phillip Lopez who has been convicted of murder in the death of a 15-year-old youth and sentenced to 50 years in prison.

Another older brother, Ronald Don Lopez, and 18-year-old John Moreno were killed last July in what has been described as a continuing family feud.

Smith, who defended Christopher Lopez and plans to appeal his conviction, termed the latest shooting incident "an effort to get rid of all members of the Lopez family."

Jessie Lopez, the 37-year-old mother of the three boys, was seriously wounded in May 1984 when someone fired several shots into the family's home.

Lawmakers agree on water program

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Lawmakers seeking a compromise statewide water plan have agreed to a bond guarantee program — despite initial objections by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock — which will allow the state to back cities seeking better credit ratings for their bonds.

Such a program was included in the House version of the water plan, but deleted from the Senate version by Montford, who replaced the program with additional funds for the state's Water Development Fund.

The program won't affect Midland, according to Public Utilities Director John Lowe, because it "is primarily designed for smaller cities with smaller tax bases."

"The city has never participated in that sort of program," Lowe said today in Midland. "I don't think it would affect us one way or the other."

Montford said Tuesday he opposed the bond guarantee program because it had no cap and "resulted in an inundation of the commercial bond market with Triple-A bonds."

Montford asked colleagues on the House-Senate conference committee on water, which began meeting last month to iron out a compromise water plan for the state, to compromise by setting a reasonable cap for the guarantee program "so it's not wide open."

He also asked them to approve "some type of periodic legislative report concerning the impact these bonds are having on the marketability of commercial bonds." More discussion on other financing provisions is expected at another meeting of the committee Wednesday night.

"I had some objections to it (a bond guarantee program)," Montford said after Tuesday's three-hour meeting, adding, "I don't look at it (compromise) as give and take, but as writing a passable bill."

The 10-member conference committee has tentatively agreed to a water package authorizing $980 million in state bonds for water supply, water quality, water storage and flood control. Whatever bond package is ultimately approved by the committee and the legislature must be passed by Texas voters in the form of constitutional amendments.

In other action Tuesday, the committee reversed a decision made last week and removed a $100 cap on water-well fees which can be imposed by water districts, and substituted instead with "a reasonable fee."

Montford argued letting districts set a "reasonable" fee will give them more local control, noting districts have been reasonable in the past regarding fees.

Bill to levy local sales tax passed

From Staff Reports

The Texas Senate has passed a bill which would allow Midland to levy a local sales tax up to one cent — with voter approval — to fund mass transit, and Mayor G. Thane Akins said the bill, if approved by the House, could provide an alternative source of funds for MidTran.

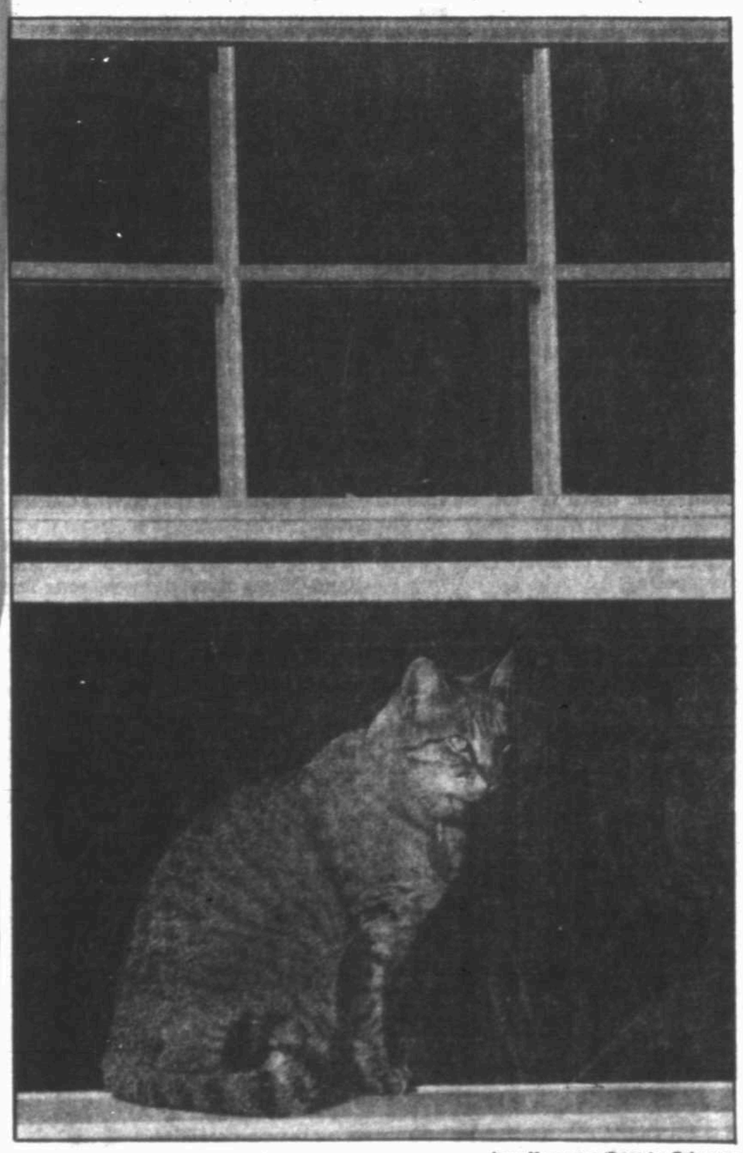

"It's a way of raising the funds (to make up any lost federal funds) with a sales tax rather than by raising property taxes," he said today. "With the condition MidTran's in, if the federal government cuts back with operating funds, we'd be further in the red."

The federal government now provides about 50 percent of MidTran's funding, according to Akins, who added that some of the money raised by the additional sales tax could also be used for street repairs.

The legislation, sponsored by Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, also provides for the creation of a mass transit department in certain cities, and for administration of the department. The bill does not apply to cities which have a metropolitan transit authority, but would affect 13 cities with a population of at least 50,000 which operate a mass transit system, Brooks told his Senate colleagues.

Other West Texas cities which would be affected by this bill include Abilene, Amarillo, Lubbock and San Angelo.

Under the bill's provisions, the board of the transit department could call an election to approve increasing the local sales tax to fund mass transit. This option is already available in larger cities such as Dallas and Houston, "and all this bill would do is bring it down to cities our size," Akins said.

Ranchers want business away from out-of-state companies

WACO, Texas (AP) — A Waco cattleman has teamed up with other area ranchers in an attempt to wrest the auction insurance business away from an out-of-state company.

Johnny Watkins, who also hosts an agriculture show on KCEN-TV, has filed an application with the state to create the only company in Texas to provide federally mandated short-term insurance for livestock while in auction barns.

The company would be called the Texas Livestock Marketing Insurance Inc. and be based in Marlin, according to the application Watkins filed recently with the State Board of Insurance.

All 130 auction barns in Texas now buy their coverage from an insurance company in Kansas, Watkins said.

"We're going to give a good sales talk about dealing with Texas companies," said Watkins, who breeds Texas dairy cattle.

Committee announces festival parade route

From Staff Reports

The Midland Centennial Parade Committee has announced the route for the July 4 CentennialFest Parade.

The parade will be a historic re-enactment of Midland's first 100 years. All Midlanders are encouraged to participate.

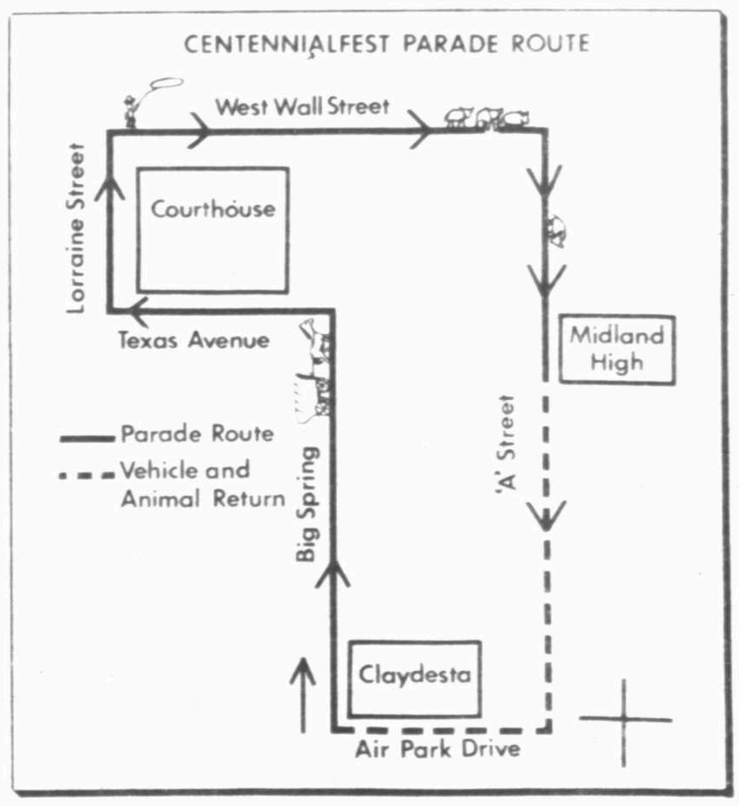

The parade will begin in the Clay-Desta area at Air Park Drive and Big Spring. It will head south down Big Spring to Texas and then turn east and circle the courthouse on Lorraine and Wall. The parade will continue east on Wall to A Street and then turn north on A.

The parade will officially end at Midland High School, but vehicles and animals will continue on A to the original starting point on Air Park Drive. The parade route is just over three miles.

The parade will begin at 10 a.m. July 4. Some streets will be temporarily blocked to permit passage of the parade and the committee asks that people who wish to view the parade get to a spot along the parade route early due to an expected large turn-out.

One hundred years of growth marked by key events that have shaped Midland's history will be remembered. These key events will include the first election, first commissioner's court, early day Midland, the first water well, covered wagons, Indians, buffalo, Cowboy Carnival and modern day Midland. Groups may come up with their own ideas for entries, subject to approval of the committee.

For further information, contact Gayle Dodson at 682-3376, Hank Henry at 561-6520 or Dorothy Strickland at 686-5340. Deadline for entering the parade is May 1 to reserve a space and June 3 for complete entry descriptions. An entry form must be completed to be in the parade.

ED TODD

What does Midland have to look to now?

Midland is in search of a fountainhead, an earthly but inspiring god that will give comfort and confidence to the town variously known as the Tall City, the Oil Capital of West Texas, the Headquarters City of the Permian Basin and Odessa's neighbor along the notorious Monahans Draw.

The proud city's former bastion and financial bulwark, The First National Bank, crumbled 1½ years ago to the regret of many, including its competition, admirers, critics and customers. FNB was succeeded by another community corporate citizen, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

But unlike The Bank, The FDIC is not fondly regarded as a friend and benefactor, though, in an important respect, the FDIC is the community's financial savior. I don't recommend that we pay our respects to the FDIC as we most certainly do to the Internal Revenue Service, but we shouldn't be without gratitude.

Of course, without the FDIC, Midland might not have the rash of bankruptcies it is experiencing; probably, there would be no one to collect the old debts, those outstanding loans. And without the FDIC, there would be many more Poor Boy Oil Companies and just a bunch of folks pondering the poor house and moaning that they've lost their country-club status.

Of course, we've got those conditions with the FDIC. And as the FDIC gets more and more eager for the bank's money, it may have the effect of running more businesses, corporations and Johns and Marys into bankruptcy court.

However, let's not lose perspective. The FDIC converged onto Midland by invitation only. Maybe that invite wasn't pre-meditated, but it had the effect of being a deliberate plea.

Rumors say the FDIC doesn't plan on taking on permanent residency in Midland, so it won't be necessary to bring in the king's throne. But while we're considering candidates for the fountainhead, we might consider the FDIC as the Big One.

I know it hurts Midlanders to do that, for they rarely have anything kindly to say about the federal bureaucracy, which they equate with bungling and squander of time and money. Yet, when times really get rough and intolerable, and pump jacks and inhibited free enterprise can't cure the ills, Midlanders and other Americans are disposed to call on the federal government for help.

So, don't discount the FDIC as Corporate Citizen No. 1. The FDIC folks will be moving on after awhile, a long while, perhaps. But in the meantime, we might critically review the FDIC's might and the crutch it has lent the community.

Since the Big Bust of '83, banks and savings-and-loan institutions have become as common as casinos in Las Vegas, churches in Abilene, bars in Odessa and restaurants in San Francisco. Nowadays, big bucks get passed around in small numbers.

So, who or what do Midlanders salute today? You'd wear your arm out saluting banks, and you'd never find all the churches. The Chamber of Commerce is too modest to sit on a throne and is busy drumming up business for the town.

We could worship the arts. We could put our stock in education once we're convinced knowledge could save us from another downfall.

We could, as many do, invest in stocks, bonds and certificates of deposit and speculate widely on real estate and minerals.

I suppose we could form graven images and look to them for answers and solace just as astrologists gaze into the heavens and read charts.

Or we could take the self-reliance stance and look into mirrors for guidance. Are we not willing to give advice, even to ourselves?

Or we could call on the unseen world, the realms of spirits, if all else fails.

Meanwhile, let's organize a community-wide nomination committee to find the Midland fountainhead.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Centennial commission receives Exxon grant

From Staff Reports

Exxon Company has given a grant to the Midland Centennial Commission for the composition of a Midland "Centennial Overture."

The grant of $6,500 will go to commissioning a celebratory overture to be premiered by the Midland-Odessa Symphony. Provisions for a recording of the work is included in the grant.

The Centennial Commission, in conjunction with Exxon and Midland-Odessa Symphony conductor Dr. Thomas Hohstadt has chosen Dr. Samuel Jones of the Shepherd School of Music at Rice University to compose the piece. Jones, founder and first dean of the Shepherd School, serves as professor of composing and conducting. He stepped down as dean to devote more time to composing.

Jones has composed numerous works that have been performed around the world. His works have been performed locally and he has served as a judge for the Young Artists Competition.

"I will investigate songs and music that were written and played around the time Midland was formed," Jones said. "I want to capture Midland and that period in this work. I want to have a feel for the land, the people, and the economy come through in this work."

Exxon is involved in other symphony projects throughout the country, but chose to do this project for a different reason, according to Dan Mendell, manager of Exxon's Midcontinent Division.

"We came to the Centennial Commission wanting to do a project of lasting importance for the Centennial. We have 700 employees here, and we wanted to contribute something tangible to the Centennial that they could be proud of," he said. "There was a desire from the Centennial Commission to have a special piece of music written this year for Midland. We're glad Exxon was here nd able to fulfill that for the Centennial."

The world premiere of this work will be this fall as part of the Midland-Odessa Symphony season. The recording will be made at a later time.

"To date, this is the largest corporate gift we have received for a Centennial project," said Joan Baskin, a Centennial commissioner who was instrumental in getting the project together. "Exxon is an excellent example of great corporate citizenship. It's people like the ones at Exxon who have made Midland the great place it is today."

Lawyer claims officials had A&M exercise list

BRYAN (AP) — Brazos County authorities have had the exercise list that led to the death of a Texas A&M University cadet for more than a month even though they said it was lost, a defense attorney says.

Hank Paine, defense attorney for 21-year-old Gabriel Cuadra, said Wednesday night the list is a copy of the one his client destroyed after the Aug. 30 death of Bruce Goodrich "to keep it out of the media's hands."

Goodrich, 20, a transfer student from New York, died of a heat stroke after being rousted out of bed in the middle of the night and forced to participate in motivational exercises.

Three former A&M cadets pleaded guilty to reduced charges Feb. 25 in the hazing death and were given probated 90-day sentences. Cuadra pleaded guilty to tampering with evidence and received one year's probation.

Paine says he is "shocked and outraged" that Brazos County Attorney James Kuboviak had not told him that the copy had been located and said he learned about it by accident Tuesday.

Cuadra apparently copied the list before he destroyed it and gave it to Paine, who said he in turn gave it to the grand jury investigating Goodrich's death.

Kuboviak later said the list had been lost, and although a judge ordered it to be produced, it never came to light during the trial that netted Cuadra the probated sentence.

Paine said Kuboviak's silence was "a direct violation of the court order."

Before finding out about the list, Paine had already sought another trial for Cuadra, who is now attending school in Florida, and a hearing is scheduled on his new-trial motion for April 10.

Paine said the list "is an exact duplicate of that specific night's exercises. It's most helpful to us because it establishes that Gabe had no culpability, that he had no intent to hide anything from police."

At 7 p.m. today a Maundy Thursday service will be held. Maundy means commandment. Maundy Thursday is traditionally observed in remembrance of the Lord's Supper where Christ spent his last evening with his disciples and broke bread with them, knowing he would be betrayed by Judas and led away to be crucified the next day.

The Maundy Thursday service at Hope Lutheran will include stripping the altar in readiness for Good Friday, the day of Christ's death.

On Good Friday, Hope Lutheran will mark Christ's crucifixion with a 7:30 p.m. Tennebrae Service. The worship will include dramatic readings by Deanna Mutter and Becky Smith, scripture readings regarding Christ's crucifixion on the cross and choral anthems centered on the theme of the worship experience.

The public is invited to attend either of the worship services. Both will be about one hour in length and will be led by the church's pastor, the Rev. Jonathan Holmer.

A freewill offering will be taken at both services.

Church to hold communion

The public is invited to attend a special Maunday Thursday communion service at 7:30 p.m. today at Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway.

The service will include a short sermon-drama by the Rev. Rob Scoffield along with an anthem solo by Dr. Stan Engebretson, director of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale and music director for Memorial Christian.

A communion service will conclude the service.

Special music depicting Christ's passion will be sung by the Chancel Choir, and the Holy Week meditation will be delivered by the Rev. John F. Anderson, interim pastor.

The Christ candle will be hooded at the end of the worship to represent Jesus being placed in the tomb. At the 8:30 and 11 a.m. services Easter, the candle will be unshielded as the congregation, accompanied by organ and instrumental ensemble, sing "Christ the Lord is Risen Today."

Grace to hold service

Grace Presbyterian Church will hold a Maundy Thursday service at 7 p.m. today. This is a communion service commemorating the Last Supper.

The next day, a Good Friday service will be held at 7 p.m. This service will reflect on the Crucifixion with a Tenebrae service of shadows, a reminder of the pain and darkness of the cross which comes before the light of the Resurrection.

Easter Sunday at 11 a.m. a service of worship and communion celebrating the Resurrection will be held. The Grace Chancel Choir has prepared special music for both the Tenebrae and the Easter service.

The public is invited to attend.

Letter sent to Washington

DAVENPORT, Iowa (A.P) — Roman Catholic priests of the Davenport diocese have sent a letter to Washington's Archbishop James Hickey voicing disappointment at his role in scuttling a top appointment at the Catholic University of America.

The Rev. John Boyle, dean of the School of Religion at the University of Iowa, had been accepted by the Washington institution's religious faculty as its new dean, but withdrew his name when it was learned that Hickey would be "uncomfortable" with him there, The Catholic Messenger of Davenport reported.

The diocesan Council of Priests later adopted a statement saying "we are disheartened and disappointed" at Hickey's action, and praising Boyle as a scholar, theologian and "faithful servant of the church."

AUSTIN (AP) — State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein said Wednesday water conditions have returned to normal in several Texas bays and shellfishing may resume.

Opened Wednesday by Bernstein's order were Copano, Mission and Port bays. Scheduled to reopen Thursday are the West Galveston and San Antonio bays.

Heavy rainfall and the resulting runoff had polluted bays and made them unsatisfactory for the harvesting of shellfish, the department said in a statement.

Judge ends legal dispute

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has ended a six-year legal dispute by ordering oil company stock worth more than $34 million transferred to the widow of Dallas entrepreneur W.W. Browning.

Humble Exploration Co. Inc. has been the center of a controversy between Jane Browning and Pat Holloway, her late husband's former business partner and lawyer.

According to court documents, Humble, based in Giddings, Texas, has estimated its oil and gas reserves at $100 million at the close of 1984, and assets of $34 million.

Tuesday's decision by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders affirmed a 1982 ruling by a state district court jury, which decided Holloway had mismanaged the Browning heirs' trusts.

The jury awarded Browning $72 million in damages, along with the oil company, which at the time was valued at $10 million.

Holloway placed Humble in bankruptcy in 1979 in an attempt to block Mrs. Browning's litigation.

Last week, a state appellate court dismissed Holloway's appeal of the verdict.

Auto registrations increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Combined new car and truck registrations in January increased 12 percent over January 1984, "indicating a healthy automotive industry in 1985," the Texas Automobile Dealers Association said Wednesday.

Registration figures released by the association showed 80,881 new cars and trucks were registered in Texas in January, an increase of 8,763 from January a year ago.

Agency tentatively OK'd

AUSTIN (AP) — House members tentatively approved Wednesday, by a four-vote margin, a new state agency to issue statewide licenses for electricians.

Another House vote of approval is needed before it goes to the Senate.

"There are 38 kinds of electricians' licenses and permits issued in Tarrant County," said Rep. Charles Evans, D-Hurst. "This would just make it where if you had a state license you could work anywhere. It is similar to what the plumbers have now."

"This is really a tax on electricians," said Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas.

"This would just set up a big new state bureaucracy to remove our local control," said Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston. "This would allow other people to come into a city and do work that may not be up to city standards. The only purpose of this bill is to get around local control of electricians who work in that city."

Evans' bill also would apply to electrical contractors.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose early today in light pre-holiday trading that dealers said was dominated by technical factors. Gold prices moved lower.

The professionals were mostly engaged in short-covering — buying up dollars to meet contracts for future delivery, dealers said. Short positions turn a profit if the dollar drops between contract signing and delivery date.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 254.00 yen from Wednesday's 253.05. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 254.25 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

–3.1520 West German marks, up from 3.1180

–2.6715 Swiss francs, up from 2.6405

–2,011.50 Italian lire, up from 1,990.50

–1.3765 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3710

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $316.30 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $319.

Mortgage rates, auto sales rise

Associated Press

Interest rates for fixed-rate mortgages climbed one-quarter of a percentage point in March — their first increase in eight months — but the average cost of an adjustable-rate mortgage edged down, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said.

Meanwhile, late-March sales of U.S. cars climbed 6.9 percent from a year earlier and sales for the month were up 5.6 percent, the automakers said.

The bank board said Wednesday that fixed-rate mortgages averaged 13.7 percent early last month, up from 13.45 percent in early February.Analysts said they believed the increase continued through mid-March.

However, they took encouragement from signs that mortgage rates, as well as a variety of other interest rates, have started back down in recent weeks.

The bank board report found that rates for adjustable-rate mortgages, which accounted for half of all mortgages taken out in March, declined slightly during the early part of the month.

The bank board said the most popular adjustable-rate mortgage fell to 11.52 percent in March from 11.59 percent in February.

Adjustable-rate mortgages provide limits on how much the lender can raise or lower the interest rate over certain periods of time.

Fixed-rate mortgages reached a high last year of 15.23 percent in July and the declines since then have helped to spur a rebound in housing sales.

Sales of new single-family homes rose 6.2 percent in February as potential home buyers moved to take advantage of the lower mortgage rates, the government reported last week.

The gains in sales of domestic cars continued to be led by Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., which have offered cut-rate financing and other incentives that industry leader General Motors Corp. has only recently matched.

In the latest March 21-31 period, the six major U.S. manufacturers sold 301,496 vehicles, or 33,500 per day, compared with 313,443, or 31,344 per day, a year ago.

There was one less actual selling day in the latest 10-day period compared with a year earlier, and the 6.9 percent sales gain for the period is based on the daily sales rate.

There also was one less selling day for the full month compared with March 1984.

Ford's sales climbed 7.9 percent in late March, while Chrysler's rose 32.6 percent. GM, however, had a gain of only 1.2 percent.

For all of March, the combined sales of the six major U.S. manufacturers totaled 768,927 cars, compared with 756,164 in March 1984.

David Healy, an industry analyst for the investment firm Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said the latest gains trailed increases recorded earlier this year, but that "the sales boom is continuing."

U.S. sales of Japanese cars fell 4.5 percent in March from a year earlier. However, when adjusted for the different number of actual selling days — 26 this year and 27 in 1984 — Japanese sales slipped less than 1 percent.

Japan and other importers release only their monthly sales results.

March was the last month of Japan's agreement to limit its car exports to the United States to 1.85 million vehicles annually.

Japan has since announced that in the current fiscal year that began Monday, it plans to raise that annual shipment rate to 2.3 million units.

GM, Toyota dedicate venture

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Co. planned American and Japanese ceremonies dedicating their $400 million joint venture, New United Motor Manufacturing Inc.

GM Chairman Roger B. Smith and Toyota Motors Chairman Eiji Toyoda were to be accompanied by Gov. George Deukmejian and other officials today at the ribbon-cutting and breaking of a Japanese kusudama, a ball filled with colored strings, papers and ribbons.

The Japanese ambassador to the United States, Nobuo Matsunaga, canceled plans to participate in the ceremonies because "trade tensions are so high," between the United States and Japan, said a spokeswoman for the Japanese consulate in San Francisco. Matsunaga is in Washington for trade talks.

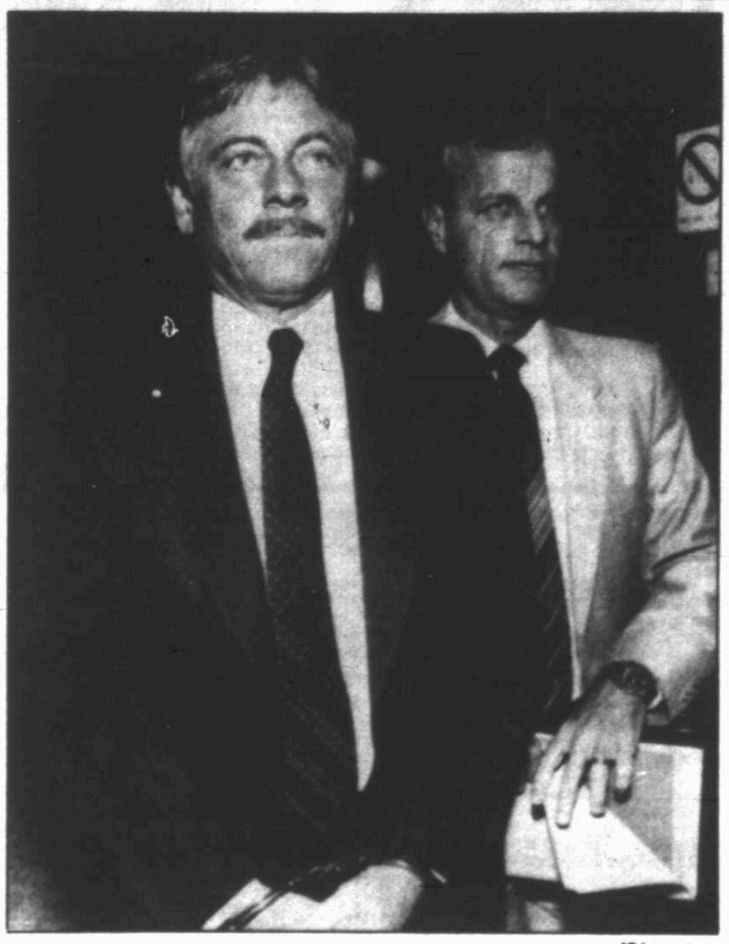

The formal dedication is four months after production started on the first of 50,000 Chevrolet Novas to be built this year at the plant.

So far, 600 Novas similar to Toyota Corollas have rolled off the assembly line in preparation for sales starting in May or June in the Midwest, General Manager Bob Hendry said.

When the plant reaches capacity in mid-1986, 250,000 cars a year are expected to be produced, Hendry said.

The plant is a resurgence of hope for area auto workers laid off when GM closed its plant here on March 4, 1982.

The NUMMI operation is smaller than the old GM plant, with a peak workforce of 2,500 planned compared with 7,500 during the GM plant's peak.

Nicholas Wallace (left), former ESM Government Securities, Inc. vice president, is escorted while handcuffed after being charged with falsifying a will for the company's late president.

Attorneys say charged ESM officers to plead innocent

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — At least two of the three men charged with forging the will of the late president of ESM Government Securities Inc., whose collapse shocked the financial community, will plead innocent, attorneys say.

Former ESM President and Chairman Ronald R. Ewton and Vice President Nicholas B. Wallace and accountant Jose Gomez, who issued rosy reports on the company before its collapse, surrendered to state authorities Wednesday.

All three were accused of forgery, a felony that carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine. Wallace was charged with perjury, which carries a five-year term, said Assistant State Attorney Martin Jaffe.

Attorneys for Gomez and Ewton said their clients would plead innocent but Wallace's attorney refused to reveal his client's plans.

The will would have left the entire estate of the late ESM President Alan Novick to his wife, Sonya. Without a will, Florida law requires Novick's estate to be divided between Mrs. Novick and her three children.

Gomez, 37, and Ewton, 42, were freed on $5,000 bond each while Wallace, 44, posted a $10,000 surety bond.

"All three aided and abetted in the forging of the will," Jaffe said.

Jaffe did not explain the alleged role in the forgery played by Gomez, who resigned two weeks ago as a managing partner of the Miami office of Alexander & Grant Co., a Chicago accounting firm, amid SEC allegations he took kickbacks from ESM officers while issuing audits declaring the company solvent.

The prosecutor also refused to discuss why the will was forged or Mrs. Novick's possible involvment in the alleged forgery.

Attorneys for Gomez and Ewton said their clients would enter innocent pleas, but Wallace's attorney refused to reveal his client's plans.

Ewton and Wallace were witnesses for a will purported to written by Novick, who ran the day-to-day operations of ESM until his death of an apparent heart attack Nov. 23 at company headquarters.

Directors said to be involved in problem loans

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally and two other prominent directors of First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc. are involved in loans that could cost the holding company millions of dollars, according to a proxy statement.

The loans, which also involved oilmen Corbin J. Robertson and Roy Huffington, were made according to common banking practices, said James Day, First City vice president. The interest rates and other terms were the same as other loans made under similar circumstances, Day said.

One of the loans was made to Bryan Lewis, a former employee of Barnes/Connally Investments, and was guaranteed by Connally, according to the proxy statement issued Wednesday.

The $4 million loan to purchase and refurbish a home was signed in August 1981 and was due in February 1984. It has $3.68 million outstanding.

The interest rate was set at 12 percent annually and the loan currently is non-performing, meaning no interest or principal is being paid but the lender believes the loan eventually could be paid off, the statement said.

It is not unusual for a bank director to be involved in a loan, bank executives said, but any non-performing or charged-off loan involving directors must be reported to shareholders.

The proxy statement also noted a problem with a set of loans made to Houston-based Quintana Energy Corp. and a subsidiary, Nueces Petrochemical Co., for $23.8 million.

The loan was made in 1981 to finance the purchase of half of a Nueces oil refinery in Corpus Christi and to provide capital to several other Quintana subsidiaries.

First City wrote off about $5 million of the loan in 1984 after the refinery and other property was sold. Robertson and other family members guaranteed repayment of 25 percent of the total loan.

First City expects $9 million to be repaid in 1985 with the remainder being secured by oil and gas properties, the proxy statement said.

The other problem loan was made to Paramount Petroleum Corp., one-fifth of which is controlled by a subsidiary of Roy M. Huffington Inc.

The $15.4 million loan was made in April 1981 to Independent Valley Energy Co., which later merged with Paramount. A California oil refinery, a second lien on other assets and a security interest in a crude supply contract are its collateral, the statement said.

About $7.1 million has not been paid, and First City has written off $5.1 million and considers the rest non-performing. Paramount is in bankruptcy proceedings and no payments are being made, the statement said.

Senate eases IRS record-keeping, corporate airplanes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Strict new record-keeping rules for tax-deductible vehicles and home computers are about to become a thing of the past. But first, Congress must decide whether business executives deserve a tax break for recreational flights on corporate planes.

The record-keeping law, ridiculed as a textbook example of the bureaucracy out of control, was rejected overwhelmingly by the Senate Wednesday a day after the House took similar action.

But the Senate, in voting 92-1 to repeal the requirements, added new tax benefits for corporate executives and for workers who drive company vehicles on personal business. The Senate package, which would add more than $5 billion to the federal deficit over the next four years, was approved a few hours before senators refused to extend federal benefits for unemployed workers.

The Senate bill is considerably different from the version passed 412-1 a day earlier by the House, but they agree on the central issue: both would repeal the law requiring detailed up-to-the-minute logs.

That law was enacted after Congress, looking for ways to cut the deficit, was told that well over $3 billion worth of false business deductions — most dealing with vehicles — are claimed each year.

But Congress was not prepared for the howl from business people and farmers, who complained they were being turned into pencil pushers. The flood of mail — some lawmakers say they received 100 letters on the records rule for each one they got about the MX missile — spurred the congressional tax committees into action this week.

The differences between the House and Senate bills must be resolved by congressional negotiators. Among the key differences:

—The Senate, on a 51-42 vote, accepted an amendment by Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., that lets some workers avoid paying taxes on the value of their personal use of company vehicles. That is not in the House bill. The $1-billion-a-year change would benefit workers required to drive company vehicles home at night (on-call plumbers, for example) and those whose cars are an integral part of their business, such as traveling salesmen.

If such vehicles are used at least 75 percent of the time for business, the employee could have tax-free use of the remainder. Without the amendment, they would be treated like most other workers and personal use of a company car would be taxed as income.

—The Senate version includes a section by Majority Leader Robert J. Dole that directs the Internal Revenue Service to reduce the value it places on executives' personal use of company planes. An effort by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, to kill Dole's provision failed on a 47-46 vote.

Metzenbaum found irony in the timing of the Senate vote.

"While refusing to extend unemployment compensation for unemployed workers ... we are ... saying to corporate executives who are making good salaries, 'we're going to take care of you,'" he said. "Have we lost our head?"

Dole, whose home state of Kansas is headquarters for several aircraft firms, said the IRS is overvaluing such corporate flights. "Anyone who has every flown in a small plane will tell you that, while it may be the best way to get from one place to another, it is not as comfortable as flying first class on a commercial airliner," he said.

Under present law, an executive who flies himself and friends on the company Learjet from St. Louis to a West Coast football game must pay income tax on the estimated $4,335 value of that flight. Dole's amendment would cut that by two-thirds, to the price of a first-class commercial ticket.

Pickens says end of unfriendly oil takeovers may be near

WASHINGTON (AP) — While a major oil company executive testified that large-scale corporate mergers are being fueled by "junk money" from people with questionable motives, one renowned corporate raider said the end may be near for the recent spate of unfriendly takeovers in the energy business.

Claude S. Brinegar, senior vice president for the California-based Unocal Corp., told a Senate subcommittee on Wednesday his firm would be glad to consider a full cash tender offer for its stock, but it has not received one.

Meanwhile, he said, the people trying to take over his company and others "are trying to use junk money to sell a phony idea. It's a stampede and the shareowners are not able to understand what's going on."

Brinegar referred to the practice of some corporate raiders of issuing so-called "junk bonds," at high interest and high risk, to finance their takeover attempts.

One of those raiders, T. Boone Pickens, told another congressional hearing Wednesday that while his sights remain trained on the Unocal Corp., "we're about at the end of the trail in mega-mergers" among energy firms.

Pickens, the chairman of Mesa Petroleum, urged the House Judiciary Committee to cast aside a variety of legislative proposals designed to discourage hostile takeover bids for major companies, be they in the oil business or elsewhere.

He said Mesa has invested $1.1 billion in Unocal stock, for more than 13 percent of the outstanding shares, and has $100 million more to spend for that purpose.

After that, he said, "we'll probably be talking to partners" to expand the holdings further in his attempt to gain control of the California firm, one of the 15 largest oil companies in the nation. Mesa is about one-tenth the size of Unocal.

Pickens, meantime, denied he had ever used the junk money approach, including the current raid on Unocal. Rather, he told the House panel, he has put up Mesa's assets as collateral. In four previous takeover bids, Pickens and his group earned $800 million by driving up stock prices but failed to gain control of any of the companies, including Gulf, General American, Cities Service and Phillips.

Various bills pending in Congress would either strengthen antitrust prohibitions against takeovers that lessen competition or would deny tax deductions for the interest borrowed by people like Pickens to finance such moves.

Flowing tubing pressure was gauged at 1,270 pounds per square inch (psi).

The H. F. Mares No. 2, was drilled in Wise County. It tested at a rate of 6.1 million cubic feet per day on a 28/64-inch choke, with flowing tubing pressure of 1,195 psi, from perforations between 6,457 and 7,000 feet in the Bend Conglomerate. Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed a tariff with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to introduce a new service offering called ESSX-400 and to limit all rate plans for Centrex services to existing customers.

Rate plans for all Centrex services, as provided in this tariff, are applicable only to customers with service as of the effective date of this tariff. Centrex customers will be able to expand existing systems and enhancements will continue to be provided. The net effect of this tariff would be no change in total billing for Centrex customers.

The Commission has assigned this matter to Docket 6146. A prehearing to discuss the proposed change is scheduled at 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, April 17, 1985, in the Commission offices at 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard in Austin, Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Committee says stiffer penalties for illegal profits may be needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Banking Committee members, told that the Bank of Boston's profits from illegally-unreported cash dealings were twice the amount of the bank's fine, say stiffer penalties may be needed.

The bank pleaded guilty on Feb. 7 and was fined $500,000 for failing to report $1.2 billion in cash transactions with foreign banks as required under the Bank Secrecy Act. Bank chairman William Brown testified Wednesday those transactions earned about $1 million for the bank.

"It leads me to conclude our current penalties are not enough," said Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn. "This would be a mere blip" on the bank's earnings chart, he said.

Committee Chairman Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., also told how the bank took $300,000 in old $100 bills from a repute organized crime family and exchanged them for cashier's checks without reporting the transactions to authorities, as required by law.

"You guys really have a way of getting out from under without going to jail," said Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill. "That's the miracle. Anyone can pay a ... fine."

"No one has been disciplined," said Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., noting that bank profits — and Brown's salary — had gone up. "The penalty for doing something wrong has to be more than promising not to do it again."

But Brown said his institution was penalized enough.

"I thought we paid a heavy fine when we had no intent to breech the law," Brown said, maintaining the violations were the result of administrative oversights.

The bank's guilty plea has spurred a wave of self-examination in the banking industry, including some major New York banks coming forward last week with admissions of unreported transactions.

However, none has approached the scope of the Bank of Boston's problems, which continue to come to light.

Last week, the bank told its stockholders of another $110 million in unreported cash transactions with foreign banks.

The disclosures continued Wednesday with St Germain's report on the exchange of old $100 bills for cashier's checks.

At the bank's North End branch on Feb. 8, 1980, the Angiulo family exchanged $50,000 in old $100 bills for five $10,000 cashiers checks. Five days later, $250,000 in old $100 bills was traded for five $50,000 checks, according to bank records cited by St Germain.

The checks were later used to purchase a yacht in Florida, he said, which changed hands again before being repurchased by the Angiulos.

Brown blamed the problem on retired branch manager Gloria Cushing, who exempted two Angiulo accounts from cash reporting rules and persuaded her supervisor to go along.

Analysts say Armco needs cash

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — Financial analysts say Armco Inc.'s efforts to sell one of its profitable divisions is evidence of major difficulties, but one believes the diversified steelmaker has a chance to rebound once its cash flow improves.

"There is no doubt that this is a serious situation that Armco's in," said Robert Barnard, manager of the local Vercoe-Adveststock brokerage office. "The company is forced to sell off a profitable division and maybe other profitable segments, but we think the company can get back on its feet, maybe because of this kind of move.

"Look at Chrysler a few years ago when it was flat on the floor. They had to sell their most profitable operation, the tank division, to get cash. And (Lee) Iacocca brought it back to a profitable company. Look at it now."

Middletown-based Armco's main problem is similar, Barnard said.

"The company has the assets but needs to generate cash," he said.

Armco announced Monday that it plans to sell its aerospace equipment division, the latest step in efforts to recover from three years of losses. Officials said they plan to use proceeds from the sale of the Aerospace and Strategic Materials Division and other assets to restructure.

Armco is trying to pull out of a three-year slump that included losses of $672.5 million in 1983 and $345.1 million in 1982.

The company began diversification in the 1970s, getting involved in leasing, insurance, an expansion of its oil and gas equipment and exploration efforts, and a major coal-marketing operation.

But a downturn in business led Armco to sell its West Virginia coal operations and put its insurance and leasing business on the market in 1984. The company ordered a 25 percent cutback in its headquarters work force last week.

There are about 6,400 workers in the aerospace equipment group, representing about 14 percent of Armco's total worldwide employment of 44,000. The company had more than 67,600 employees worldwide at the peak of employment at the end of 1981.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective April 29, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the Commission.

While proposals as to specific rates vary, it is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish a 10.5 percent increase in the Company's unadjusted test year intrastate revenues.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas and with each affected incorporated municipality served by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's rate application. This filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for local exchange service, intraLATA long distance, intraLATA interexchange private line service (which includes foreign exchange service) and to decrease certain access service rates.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

This filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for intraLATA long distance and for intraLATA, interexchange private line service (which includes foreign exchange service) and to decrease certain access service rates. Changes in such rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide certain services in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's tariffs.

Notice to All Customers Concerning Access Charges and Certain New Service Charges

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, as a part of this filing, is also proposing to reduce certain access rates charged such customers as AT&T Communications, Inc., MCI and other carriers. The resulting reduction in revenues is proposed to be offset by revenues from two new service charges, late payment charges applicable to business customers only and for certain operator services such as busy line verification, plus stimulation of access service charge revenues. Since this portion of the filing, if granted, would have essentially a zero net revenue effect on Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company is proposing that this portion of the filing be expeditiously handled by the Commission and not await Final Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso Público

En conformidad con las disposiciones de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company anuncia mediante el presente aviso su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel de tarifas telefónicas en Texas, con vigencia a partir del 29 de abril de 1985, salvo disposición en contrario de la Comisión.

Si bien existe variación entre las propuestas en cuanto a las tarifas precisas, se anticipa que el arancel tarifario solicitado aumentará en un 10.5% los ingresos intraestatales no ajustados de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company durante el año de prueba.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel de tarifas se halla archivada en las oficinas de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos en Austin, Texas, así como en cada municipalidad incorporada afectada que tenga servicio de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa se halla sujeta a cambio toda vez que Southwestern Bell Telephone Company solicite nuevas tarifas. El registro de esta tarifa incluye, pero no en forma limitativa, las propuestas de aumentar las tarifas por servicios de centrales locales, de larga distancia intraLATA y por servicios de línea privada interLATA entre centrales (incluyendo servicios de centrales externas) así como las propuestas de reducir ciertas tarifas de servicio de acceso.

Aviso a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono

El registro de esta tarifa incluye, pero no en forma limitativa, las propuestas de aumentar las tarifas por servicios de larga distancia intraLATA y por servicios de línea privada intraLATA entre centrales (incluyendo servicios de centrales externas) así como las propuestas de reducir ciertas tarifas de servicio de acceso. Los cambios en dichas tarifas también afectarían a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono, puesto que dichas compañías proporcionan ciertos servicios de acuerdo con las tarifas especificadas en los aranceles tarifarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Aviso a todos los clientes con respecto a los cargos de acceso y a determinados cargos nuevos de servicio

Al registrar esta tarifa, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company también propone reducir ciertas tarifas de acceso que se les cobran a clientes como AT&T Communications, Inc., MCI y otras compañías de larga distancia. La consecuente reducción de ingresos se piensa compensar por medio de dos cargos nuevos de servicio (cargos por pago atrasado que se aplicarían solamente a usuarios comerciales, y cargos por ciertos servicios de operadora, tales como verificación de línea ocupada) además de la estimulación de los ingresos por cargos por servicios de acceso. En vista de que, en caso de otorgarse esta parte del arancel tarifario registrado, su efecto real en los ingresos de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company sería igual a cero, ésta propone que la Comisión tramite dicha parte de la tarifa en forma expeditiva sin esperar la Orden Definitiva.

Toda persona que desee intervenir o participar en el presente proceso debe notificar a la Comisión lo antes posible. Las solicitudes de intervención, participación o información deben dirigirse a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Para obtener mayor información debe llamar a Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division, (512) 458-0223, o (512) 458-0227, o al (512) 458-0221 si requiere teletipo para personas con impedimentos de audición.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Bid made for Hilton Hotel Corp.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Golden Nugget Inc. offered to acquire Hilton Hotels Corp. for $1.95 billion, but Hilton rejected the proposal as inadequate.

Golden Nugget offered first to purchase 6.78 million shares of Hilton's stock, or about a quarter of its total shares outstanding, from the estate of Conrad N. Hilton for $72 a share cash, for a total of about $488.3 million.

If that offer succeeded, Golden Nugget said it might offer "a similar value" for the rest of Hilton Hotels' stock.

Golden Nugget spokesman James Fingeroth said the second offer also would be worth $72 a share, but that the stock might be purchased with a combination of cash and notes.

"We believe that the acquisition of a significant interest in Hilton would be beneficial to Hilton and its stockholders, particularly in light of recent developments in New Jersey," Stephen A. Wynn, chairman and chief executive of Las Vegas, Nev.-based Golden Nugget, said in a statement released Wednesday.

Both of the hotel-casino operators have suffered setbacks recently in their pursuit of Atlantic City, N.J., operations.

Fixed rate mortgages up slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates for fixed-rate mortgages rose one-quarter of a percentage point in March, the first increase in eight months, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported.

Fixed-rate loans averaged 13.7 percent last month, up from 13.45 percent in early February, the agency said Wednesday.

Analysts said they believed mortgage rates increased by about 1 percentage point through mid-March. However, they took encouragement from signs that mortgage rates, as well as a variety of other interest rates, have started back down in recent weeks.

The bank board's report found that rates for adjustable-rate mortgages, which accounted for half of all mortgages taken out in March, declined slightly during the early part of the month.

The most popular adjustable-rate mortgage, with limits on how much the interest charge can go up or down, fell to 11.52 percent in March from 11.59 percent in February.

Fixed-rate mortgages reached a high last year of 15.23 percent in July and the declines since then have helped to spur a rebound in housing sales.

Remington can keep ad ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Remington Products Co. can keep advertising the fact that its electric shaver got a high rating from Consumer Reports Magazine, a state judge ruled.

Consumer's Union, the non-profit product testing and research firm which publishes Consumer Reports, had sued Remington for $2 million. The suit was dismissed Wednesday by State Supreme Court Justice Bruce Wright, who said Remington had "done no more than quote from a newsworthy report already disseminated to the public."

Consumers Union claimed the Bridgeport, Conn., company had violated Section 397 of New York's General Business Law, which prohibits using the name or symbol of any non-profit group for commercial advertising or trade purposes without the written consent of the organization.

The November 1984 issue of Consumer Reports gave Remington's XLR-3000 Microscreen shaver a top rating compared with others. The rating was later quoted in newspaper and radio ads and in sales displays.

RRC fines H&R Oils, Inc.

The Railroad Commission fined H&R Oils, Inc. of Dallas $10,000 in administrative penalties for pollution violations involving a commercial saltwater well on the Dankworth lease, located three miles south of Ballinger in Runnels County. The company agreed to the penalty.

Commission field inspectors visited the Dankworth lease several times between January and September 1984, noting unauthorized pits containing oil and saltwater. The inspectors also found large oil and saltwater spills on the ground around the well and storage tanks. Samples of saltwater found at the lease showed chloride concentrations between 69,000 and 80,000 parts per million.

Acting on Commission demands to clean up the pollution on the lease, H. & R. Oil brought the lease back into compliance with Commission rules by October 1984.

After discussions between H. & R.'s attorney and the Commission, H. & R. notified the Commission it would pay a $10,000 administrative penalty for violating the Commission pollution rules.

Under state law, the Railroad Commission has the authority to levy up to $10,000 per day in penalties for pollution violations of the Texas Natural Resources Code and Commission regulations.

Coastal acquires 94% of ANR

HOUSTON (AP) — The Coastal Corp. has acquired 94 percent of the outstanding shares of American Resources Co., a Detroit-based energy firm.

The estimated $2.4 billion merger probably will be completed in two or three months, said Coastal spokesman W.F. Osterloh.

A statement issued Wednesday said the Houston-based Coastal would continue to purchase ANR shares at $65 each, even though the tender offer expired Tuesday.

Coastal will acquire the remaining 6 percent of ANR stock at $65 a share under a merger agreement to be filed with the secretary of state in Delaware, where both firms are incorporated, Osterloh said.

The takeover is being conducted through one of Coastal's subsidiaries, Colorado Interstate Corp.

ANR headquarters and its pipeline subsidiary will remain in Detroit. Under the merger agreement, Coastal promised the operation and assets of ANR's prinicipal business lines of Pipelines, Exploration and Production and Coach would be unchanged.

Gallbladder surgery more effective, less costly than medication

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother-in-law will soon be entering the hospital for a gallbladder operation. Whatever happened to this medicine that was supposed to get rid of gallstones without an operation? If I had my choice, I would rather take medicine than have an operation, and I don't understand why there isn't more publicity. Has the medicine been discontinued? — Mr. W.D., Allentown, Pa.

Solomon

Dear Mr. D.: It appears that treatment with medication such as chenodeoxycholic acid has not been as successful as was anticipated when it first began to be used. According to Dr. Ira S. Goldman of the University of California, San Francisco School of Medicine, surgery is more effective and less expensive. Therefore, surgery is considered the treatment of choice except for patients who are poor surgical risks. These patients may benefit from medical treatment.

One of the problems with chenodeoxycholic acid therapy is its side effects. A relatively large number of patients develop liver problems and even more get diarrhea. In addition, the treatment is fairly expensive.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What do you think of physical exercise as a means of combating menstrual cramps? Some of my friends say it works, but others say they have tried it and it does absolutely no good. What are the facts about the value of exercise? — Ms. N.J., Camden, N.J.

Dear Ms. J.: The facts appear to be in keeping with what your friends have told you. Exercise works for some women in relieving menstrual cramps, but not for others. Dr. Kathryn Schrotenboer, of Cornell University School of Medicine in New York, points out that even female athletes, who engage in regular exercise, do not necessarily experience relief from menstrual pain. Dr. Schrotenboer adds that women who use oral contraceptives may find that this affords them some relief from menstrual cramps.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Our doctor has told us that my father has dementia, and he has referred us to a community agency for help with the problem. I don't mind doing anything that has a chance of doing some good, but I don't want to run around just so people will say that I'm a good daughter. Is there anything that can be done for a person with dementia that would do any good? — Joanne, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Joanne: The answer to a large extent depends on the individual patient, but many patients with dementia can be helped. For example, encouraging some form of physical activity, such as walking, can produce results. So can social contacts with family members and peers, and the establishment of a stable, familiar environment. The task is not an easy one but the results can be very rewarding.

For Barbara, San Francisco: Try shopping for shoes late in the day, when your feet are larger. You may find that you get a better fit.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Many small-town banks don't pay any interest

Q. My widowed mother lives in a very small town where there is only one bank. That bank pays no interest on savings accounts and does not have interest-paying checking accounts or certificates of deposit. Mother lives on Social Security and the money my father left in a checking account.

Daddy left about $10,000 of Series E U.S. Savings Bonds, purchased since the 1940s, which are mother's total savings. Her banker told her those bonds draw interest and are better for her than anything else. Can anything be done with the bonds to bring her more interest? I live in a city with all the banking advantages and want to help her.

A. It probably comes as a surprise to most readers to learn that some banks don't pay interest on customers' accounts. Nonetheless, that is the story in certain small towns where the new era of banking competition hasn't taken hold.

Doyle

Your mother should move the money she now has in that sterile checking account to a bank or savings and loan association where it will earn interest. You can help her accomplish that, through the mails.

She can open a 5.25 percent "NOW" checking account or, with $1,000 or more, a "super-NOW" checking account paying higher interest. She might want a 5.5 percent savings account or, with $1,000 or more, a higher-interest-paying money market deposit account.

Each bank and S&L sets the interest paid on its super-NOWs and MMDAs. Shop around. Just make sure you pick a bank with Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. or a S&L with Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. coverage.

If any of those E bonds are more than 40 years old, they have stopped accumulating interest and should either be redeemed or exchanged for Series HH bonds. HHs pay interest by check twice a year at a 7.5 percent annual rate.

If she redeems the Es, the money should go into interest-paying accounts. If she can tuck that money away, a CD would be a wise choice.

Assuming she's not pinched for cash, your mother should keep her newer E bonds until at least Nov. 1, 1987. That way, her bonds will earn the new — and higher— variable rates in effect since Nov. 1, 1982.

Determining time, date of Easter celebration complicated matter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The major Christian festival of Easter is at hand, with most Americans preparing for the event unaware of the complexity involved in determining just when to observe the celebration.

Indeed, as happens more than half the time, there will be two Easter celebrations this year — one for churches tracing their roots to Rome, the second for Orthodox congregations.

This year the two are only a week apart, April 7 for the Western churches, April 14 for those from the East.

To the average person, determining the date of Easter simply means flipping open a calendar and looking at the Sundays in late March and April to see which is labeled Easter.

But calendar-makers don't choose the date by whim — they consult a slender booklet entitled "Astronomical Phenomena," jointly published by the United States and British governments.

And the date printed there is derived from centuries of church debate and tradition that is consulted by scientists at the U.S. Naval Observatory and the Royal Greenwich Observatory.

In its simplest form, the date of Easter is based on the resurrection of Jesus, three days after his crucifixion.

That occurred at the time of the Jewish holiday of Passover, the 14th of the month of Nisan on the Jewish calendar.

The current confusion, however, derives from attempts to translate that date to the Christian Julian, and now the Gregorian, calendars.

The Christian calendars are based on the cycle of the sun, covering 365 days in a year.

But the Jewish calendar derives from the moon and has only 354 days. In order to make that cycle come out even with the seasons, a leap month is added seven years in every 19, explained Rabbi Daniel Zemel of Temple Micah in Washington.

UT archaeologists head for classical countryside

By CHERYL COGGINS

AUSTIN (AP) — When they set this thing up, the premise was quite simple, really. Forget the priceless vases. Steer clear of the cities. Ignore the exquisite museum-fillers that have seduced so many for so long.

Instead, University of Texas classical archeologist Joseph Carter and his international crew of scholars and students headed for the ordinary in southern Italy. Rather than temples and palaces, it was clumps of ancient manure and elderly olive pits found in simple country settings that called to this group of scholars.

"The cities have been excavated," says Carter, director of the Institute of Classical Archaeology and a classics professor at UT. "We could have gone somewhere else and found another theater."

"But we decided not to duplicate what others have done, all this glamour stuff," adds Karl Galinsky, chairman of the UT classics department.

While not always the stuff of glamour, what Carter and his crews have unearthed in southern Italy hasn't exactly been ordinary, either. Before it's all over, this little project is quite likely to rewrite a few history books.

Begun in 1974, Carter's project, which draws scholars and graduate students from around the world every summer, has concentrated on excavations around an ancient Greek colony in southern Italy. The work near that city, Metaponto, and a second Greek colony, Croton, have yielded valuable evidence about the society, economy, cults, and daily life of rural inhabitants of those areas more than 2,500 years ago.

"BEFORE WE started our work, it was thought that all of ancient Greece lived entirely in the city," says Carter. "No one bothered digging out in the countryside and finding the homes. Nobody has excavated outside of Athens, and no one ever will — it's all developed."

Instead, classical archeologists have concentrated on the cities, "where they could find beautiful works of art with the idea of filling up museums," Galinsky says.

"That skewed our perception of the ancient world," says Galinsky, because the rural population — or 90 percent of the inhabitants of ancient Rome and Greece — were ignored in the studies.

"It's as if someone dug up the civilization of the United States 3,000 years from now, and they dug up College Station, Love Canal, or Las Vegas. What kind of image would they have of our civilization?"

If Carter's work will help fill in some gaps in the big picture of classical Greek and Roman civilizations, it will do so through a series of tiny, remarkably detailed glimpses of life in rural areas surrounding the ancient Greek colonies 2,500 years ago.

Among those pictures is that of a pair of delicate gold earrings found next to the skull of a 17-year-old girl who probably died in childbirth. In another family grouping of graves, archeologists have found a child's grave in which 56 sheep knucklebones were placed.

"They were used as dice and were a typical child's toy," Carter says. "In this case it could have been a child's toy, or it could have been a symbol of chance that took the child at an early age."

OTHER PICTURES will show what the ancient rural inhabitants placed on their dinner tables or planted in their fields. Entire grapes and leaves, olive pits, and fig seeds preserved in the oxygen-free environment of extremely moist clay have survived the centuries to tell about the agricultural interests of the forgotten rural population.

"We opened one clod of manure from 2,500 years ago, and flies were attracted to it immediately," Carter says. "We had found something very rare. We had found the smell of the past."

Samples of agricultural materials found at the sites are being analyzed at specialized facilities at the University of California at Berkeley, UT, Texas A&M, and in Rome.

In the summers and falls since the project began, Carter's groups have surveyed one-fourth of the territory of Metaponto, a Greek colony settled about 650 B.C. on the instep of the Italian boot. In recent years, the project — in search of evidence that Metaponto's rural community is not unique — has expanded to include the territory of Croton, another Greek colony, which is about a three-hour drive south from Metaponto.

So far, the researchers have excavated 10 rural sites in Metaponto — including a half dozen farmhouses, a village, and an industrial development — and have located 600 others. In Croton, survey teams have identified 240 rural sites. Excavation at those sites should begin soon.

THE 11 YEARS of study, which will resume again this summer if Carter obtains financing, have not gone without notice. During the 1979 centennial celebration of the Archaeological Institute of America, the dean of American classicists, Homer Thompson, pointed to the UT project at Metaponto as one of four significant excavations undertaken by Americans in the last century in Italy.

The project has put UT at the international forefront of this type of classical archeological research, the UT professors say.

"This comes back to the overall mission of UT," Galinsky says. "UT really wants to be at the cutting edge, which means making substantive contributions to new knowledge. And this is a project producing genuine results. For every dollar the university has given to this project, it has gotten five or six from the outside."

That outside support, which has been worth about $300,000 during the years, has come primarily from Texas foundations and private donors, with matching grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities. And every year about this time, Carter faces the time-consuming task of raising from scratch the 80 to 90 percent of the funds needed to keep the project going.

But the work to raise funds and to organize the project hasn't dimmed Carter's enthusiasm for his summer tasks. Things don't exactly get dull in the Italian countryside when Carter and his crews start digging.

JUST OVER two years ago, the first of what turned out to be almost 300 tombs was discovered in a country cemetery about two miles outside of Metaponto. The cemetery, or necropolis, was discovered when a century-old olive grove was uprooted in preparation for a winter crop of lettuce. "When they started pulling out olive trees, piece of pots also started coming out of the ground," he said.

Carter says the cemetery, which contained tombs dated from 575 to 275 B.C., is arranged in family groupings. "We can date the tombs and identify the skeletal remains as to age and sex. And we can actually work out family trees. The skeletal information can give us information about blood type," he says.

The tombs' contents, which have been carefully removed from the ground and placed in a guarded storehouse near the archeological excavation, are dated by the vases — and their painters — that are found in the graves.

While most of the items found inside the graves are modest, Carter and his fellow archeologists discovered that some of the rural inhabitants didn't skimp on the grave goods. In fact, many of the poorer inhabitants are thought to have some of the more elaborate items in their graves.

"The aristocrats had an aversion to ostentation in terms of grave goods," says Carter. Instead the rich went for more substantial tombs than the poor.

ALTHOUGH Carter never really set out to do so, his teams have unearthed beautiful and valuable art objects that will indeed someday find their way to museum shelves. Some of them are painted by outstanding artists of ancient Greece, such as the Berlin painter and the Dolon painter. And, although archeologists don't like to attach price tags to their discoveries, the rarity and quality of some of the Metaponto vases would bring $50,000 to $60,000 on the market if the vases somehow were smuggled out of the country.

The most common item found in the tombs of women were mirrors, says Carter. "It was symbol of femininity. It was especially common for women who died before marriage. The mirrors may have simply been objects that people treasured, or they may have been placed there to show that they (the deceased) were looking forward to some sort of marriage in afterlife," he says.

By CHRIS KELLEY

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The visitor greeted Sean Pevsner, a 14-year-old cerebral palsy victim confined to a wheelchair who was unable to communicate — until recently.

Blue-eyed and blond, Sean greeted his visitor with a grin as he sat perched in a wheelchair connected by wires to Max, an Apple IIe computer.

Suddenly, Sean began twisting his small body and throwing his head backward, squirming to depress two paddles on his chair that were wired to the computer. Beads of sweat formed on his forehead as he contorted his face and body, slowly tapping out his message on the computer's monitor.

"Hi-Chris," Sean said. "Thank-you-for-doing-a-story-on-me."

Until he got Max in August, Sean was cut off from the world, a creative bundle of adolescent energy with lots to say — but no way to say it.

With Max, Sean is able for the first time in his life to communicate. He memorized the Morse code language of dots and dashes last summer and began using it to talk.

"It-was-easy-as-pie," Sean said. "Max has opened up a whole new world for Sean," said his father, Ron Pevsner. "Before Max, I couldn't communicate with him at all, and that was super frustrating to me. I didn't know him as a person. Now, I can't keep him quiet."

Sean communicates by using his head and left arm to hit Morse code dot-and-dash paddles attached to his wheelchair that in turn send signals to the computer. The computer is programmed to interpret the code and display the corresponding letters. It's a physically demanding process that usually leaves Sean dripping in sweat after just a few minutes, but it's worth the effort.

"The first time he wrote a complete sentence, I cried," said his mother, Carol. "I never thought he would be able to do that."

Sean's first words: "Are-you-proud-of-me?"

The computer has been especially helpful in school, his parents said. At school, the Shackelford Junior High eighth-grader uses a computer similar to Max supplied by the Arlington school district.

Sean attends many regular classes in the morning — English, Texas history, and math — and works on his reading and other studies on the computer with teachers in the afternoon, school officials said.

For the first time, teachers can measure Sean's academic progress, said Lynn Hampton, the school district's special education consultant.

"Before, Sean's teachers had no way of knowing how intelligent Sean really is," she said. "Now he can give the feedback to teachers that tell them what he is capable of. It's been marvelous to find out how intelligent Sean actually is."

Sean began using computers to communicate about two years ago, but the systems were unsophisticated and limited Sean's communication, his father said. But with the help of a computer analyst who's a volunteer for the Arlington Handicapped Association, Sean became friendly with Max.

"This machine has given Sean a medium to express himself," said his teacher, John Newman. "It has allowed him to communicate as any other human being would. It's amazing how he uses it to show his creativity."

And Sean has been creative with Max, his parents said. Max came with a printer and a telephone hookup so that Sean can write letters, homework assignments and stories and hook up to computer bulletin boards and reference sources such as "Reader's Digest" and a local newswire, his father said.

Texas sharecropper's son Owens 'pretty well fixed'

ENTERTAINMENT

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The thing about Buck Owens, properly Alvis Edgar Owens Jr., the son of a Texas sharecropper, is that he has done very nicely. Even Buck will admit that he's pretty well fixed. He has diversified his holdings, as they say, and he owns this thing and that, such as radio stations and ranches, and so on.

And when he performs in concerts it's mostly for charity unless he's doing a TV special such as the "New Year's at Opryland" he did a few months ago. And of course he's been a regular from the start on the ever-popular "Hee Haw."

He delights in "Hee Haw," which is going into its 17th season. "We just have fun on that show," Buck says. "Roy Clark and me, we don't rehearse. We just read from the cards and enjoy ourselves. On 'Hee Haw' we don't have any big causes and we don't throw up any banners. Just plain old fun and we're patriotic, too."

In Bakersfield, Calif., Buck drives a fine old, yellow 1936 Packard with the rumble seat and he usually goes around in his boots and his dungarees. And one day recently a writer from Fortune was out doing a piece on the fantastic economic growth in Bakersfield and spotted Owens on the road in his Packard and wanted to know if he might be a local rancher.

"Oh, I got me some land," Buck replied. Which he does. The truth is, they will not have to hold any tag days for Buck Owens.

But he remembers other days. Buck remembers, for example, when he was picking cotton and hoeing the land in Texas as his father did what's known as "farming on the halves."

Said Buck: "My daddy always said there's a difference between farming on the halves and sharecropping. But no matter how you slice it, it's all sharecropping which is what he did until I was 18. 'Halves' means the owner furnishes mules, land and seed and you furnish the labor and at the end of the year you split with the owner 50-50. But most times you never had much to split.

"Anyway," Buck says, "we had a dog and a horse and both of them were named Buck. One day when I was 3 years old I came to supper and I said to the family, 'Call me Buck.' And they all did.

"It was nice being called Buck like the dog and the horse but that didn't help the land none."

Calamity Creek's annual 'Boondoggle' to open Friday

ALPINE — Boondoggle, annually held on Calamity Creek at the Woodward Ranch, opens Friday.

The event will be held Friday through Sunday. Saturday events include a horseshoe tourney, chili cook-off, lemon rolls, and cow chip throwing competition.

April 7 will feature an old-fashioned musician jam and an amateur comedian competition with cash prizes.

Commercial booths include arts and crafts, some food and traditional Boondoggle T-shirts, which have new designs each year.

Performers this year include Cody Hubach and Alvin Crow from Austin, Longview's Dennis Ross and the Axberg Brothers, The Moon Pie Dance from El Paso, Odessa's Wayne Sterling and from Lubbock, Ron Riley, Mike Pritchard and Jesse "Guitar" Taylor. Taylor will also conduct a guitar seminar Saturday. The camp site has an outdoor concrete dance floor.

An auction, a portion of the gate proceeds and the money raised from the Chili Cook-off will go to benefit the local chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, which provides services for 48 counties throughout West Texas.

The camp site is rustic, but for those preferring to camp at a motel, Alpine is a 15-minute drive from Calamity Creek.

Registration or ticket information is available through Bruce Riley, 686-7205, or the Permian Basin Multiple Sclerosis Society, 699-4944.

Writers' group offers workshops in non-fiction, magazine writing

The Professional Writers Workshop is conducting four workshops in April.

The workshops include: "How to Write the Non-Fiction Book," evenings Tuesday through April 12; "Writing to Sell the Juvenile and Young Adult Market," April 13-14; "How to Write the Magazine Article," mornings Tuesday through April 12; and "How to Get Free Publicity," April 15-16.

Writer and teacher P.M. Fielding of Tulsa, Okla., will teach the classes in writing non-fiction and for the juvenile market. Jheri Fleet, a public relations consultant with over 100 bylined articles, will teach magazine writing and free publicity.

Ms. Fielding says anyone who has worked at their job or a hobby for five years has some area of expertise and could turn that knowledge into a non-fiction book and write articles.

"People learn on a job and enjoy on a hobby," she says. "Some people think of writing as a way to share that information."

In the non-fiction area of publishing, one out of every two proposals are selling, Ms. Fielding says.

Ms. Fielding writes fiction and non-fiction books as well as articles.

"I tell the aspiring writer what will work and what won't. I have written in most areas and have over 100 published students who share their experiences with me and I pass them along."

For more information call Ginger Rawlings, 685-3568. Seating for the four workshops is limited.

Musical duo likens 10-year odyssey to 'Cat Juggling'

By ROBERT MACY

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Robert and Linda Forman liken their 10-year odyssey through the record production jungle to the unlikely feat of juggling kittens. So they called their new album "Cat Juggling."

Bolstered by the belief that the music they wrote, performed and recorded had a chance of beating the industry's 100,000-to-1 odds, Forman raised $500,000 from 22 Nevada investors and began knocking on doors in Los Angeles.

A decade of dreaming gave way to reality this last month when Scotti Brothers, a division of CBS Records, began distributing "Cat Juggling" in the United States, Canada, Europe and Japan. It's the first album in an eight-record, five-year pact for the Formans.

"We have very high hopes for the album," Scotti Brothers president Johnny Musso said in an interview. "Bob Forman's a very unique writer and the album has a very interesting sound that will appeal to everyone from rock 'n' rollers to soft music lovers. The demographic appeal is great, which gives it the potential of being a very big album."

With hundreds of thousands of tapes annually inundating record companies, the Formans credit a lot of luck, the right contacts, a different sound and a hefty dose of tenacity for the LP contract they finally won.

Forman, 31, was raised in Dallas on bluegrass music and learned to play a variety of instruments to complement his distinctive singing voice. He worked his way through the University of Texas playing warmup for such acts as Willie Nelson.

He met secretary Linda Teglia while playing a Reno, Nev., Fourth of July celebration in 1973. The two married and played lounges at major hotels in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe, always dreaming of an elusive record pact.

He quit the business in 1977 and began selling cars, "because entertainment was not the most stable environment" for the family they were starting.

The Formans moved to Los Angeles in 1980 when one of his car customers offered him a job as sales manager at television station KSCI.

"We kept seeing those recording buildings and we wanted so bad to get into the business," Linda Forman recalled. "So finally we decided we were going to go for it."

Gerald Abrams likes to put people's lives on film

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Gerald Abrams likes to put people's lives on film. He's already done biographies on James Dean, the actor, Roy Campanella, the baseball player, and Golda Meir, the politician — a diverse bunch indeed. His latest portrait is Florence Nightingale, the nurse.

The NBC movie, "Florence Nightingale," will be broadcast Sunday.

"I wanted to do Florence Nightingale because everyone has an image of her," he said. "That's why I've done a lot of biographies. People had an image of Golda Meir (the late Israeli prime minister), but no one really knew anything about her. The same is true of Florence Nightingale.

"Everyone knows that she was a nurse, the 'lady with the lamp,' as the soldiers in the Crimean War called her. The film biography to me is proof that truth is stranger than fiction. I think people are interested in people. Newspapers, magazines, electronic journalism are dedicated to people. People are fascinated with people, and real people are the most fascinating of all."

Jaclyn Smith, who previously starred in "Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy" and was Sally Fairfax in the "George Washington" miniseries, plays Florence Nightingale.

Miss Nightingale founded the modern nursing profession. She was the first to introduce sanitary nursing conditions on the battlefield. She arrived in charge of 38 nurses in the Crimea in 1854, just as casualties were coming in from the Charge of the Light Brigade, made famous by the poem by Alfred, Lord Tennyson. During the war she helped bring the death rate down from 42 out of every 100 wounded to two in every 100.

"A lot of the projects I consider never get made because there's no interesting story. But sometimes they do get made," he said. "There was the James Dean film and 'The Jesse Owens Story,' which we backed out of. They weren't about anything. In both cases you almost had to manufacture a story.

"The best films have been about people who are household names that people don't really know much about. You have to have a story. Just doing a film about a famous person doesn't guarantee that it's going to be interesting. Sometimes, there are good stories about people who aren't well known."

Until he started the research, Abrams was unfamiliar with Miss Nightingale's story. "The story is that she felt a calling from God but didn't know what it was," he said. "She lived during the Victorian era when women of privilege didn't do these things. It was a story of a woman who dared to help people in a time when no one helped anybody. It was a time of poor medical services."

Abrams said Miss Smith was the only star he considered for the role. He wasn't deterred by some people still associating her with "Charlie's Angels."

"She had done film biographies before and one performance in particular showed that she could do them well," he said. "That was as Sally Fairfax in 'George Washington.' She did a little sequence about the 'language of the fan.' I was impressed by that."

He was also not deterred from doing the biography of an Englishwoman in England with an American star.

"I went on the British equivalent of the 'Today' show and said that the most famous American film was probably 'Gone With the Wind' and who played the Southern belle? An English actress (Vivien Leigh). There were some protests, but the rest of the cast and crew was English so we got her work permit."

Talk show offers viewers something really personal

By MARK PETERSON

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Television is the most intimate medium, and Sally Jessy Raphael offers viewers something personal — really personal.

"If you want to talk sex over breakfast, I'm your girl," she said in an interview after a recent show, which originates at KSDK-TV in St. Louis. "We're taking the issues of the world and leaving them to the other guys. Love, romance, human relationships and the fun things of life are ours."

Few holds are barred or even discouraged in the 30-minute, five-day-a-week program.

"The unpredictability is a big part of our appeal," said Burt Dubrow, the show's executive producer.

On one day Ms. Raphael will deal with 120 infants and toddlers brought to the studio for a pediatric free-for-all and baby-food taste test, and the next day talk to a troupe of male burlesque dancers, or clothing designer Alexander Julian, or commuter spouses, or couples who swap sex partners, or a woman who had a lesbian relationship while she was a nun.

"Some of the stuff we do is pretty racy," Dubrow said. "(But) the public is catching up with us."

Since the show first appeared in St. Louis 1½ years ago on a trial basis, it has been syndicated by Multimedia Entertainment to more than 50 other markets, including New York, Boston, Miami, San Diego and New Orleans.

Not bad, considering Dubrow's reaction when he first crossed paths with Ms. Raphael at a station in Cincinnati, where she was appearing as a guest on a talk show.

"I thought, 'Who...is Sally Jessy Raphael anyway?'" Dubrow said.

She was then, and still is, the host of a very successful nighttime radio call-in show on NBC's Talknet, broadcast in 160 markets. She has anchored the news on WPIX-TV in New York. She used to be the host of a cooking show — and has "stayed away from kitchens ever since." She's been an album-rock disc jockey and a rip-and-read newscaster for the dinkiest of radio stations. She has lived in Mexico, Paris and Puerto Rico. She now spends three days a week in St. Louis, the others in New York.

She is "somewhere over 40," short, very blonde, and wears bright-red eyeglass frames, which are always slightly askew. She is married with eight children, "some adopted, some foster and some biological," most girls. She is a connoisseur of wine and chocolate and drives an inexpensive van. She and her husband work in tandem at home, each "taking care of anything the other hasn't gotten to."

Attenboroughs share parents, interest in films

By MICHAEL E. HILL
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

What do David and Richard Attenborough have in common?

Parents and films.

Richard is the film-making brother who directed "Gandhi" and is working on "A Chorus Line."

David is the student of zoology, geology and anthropology who produced "Life on Earth," in which he compressed roughly 3,500 million years of the development of life on the planet into a limited TV series.

Now David is back, this time with "The Living Planet: A Portrait of the Earth," a 12-part weekly series for PBS examining the many environments found around the globe, and how plants and animals adapt to them.

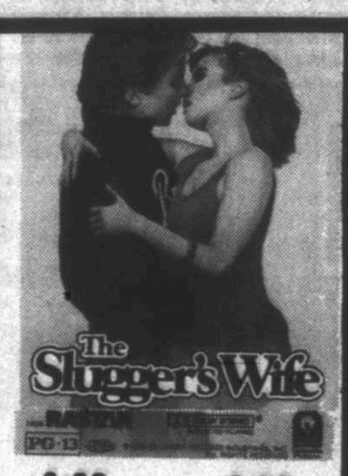

"'Life on Earth' dealt with the development of animals," said Attenborough. "But it did not show how environments interrelated. That was a lack. We decided to look at environments worldwide — jungles, mountains, deserts," sea and sky.

The idea is to show "what makes a desert a desert or a jungle a jungle. That's not been distilled before. What makes a rain forest what it is? Why do they have things in common, even though the animals and plants in each differ from each other, and yet the basic notion of a jungle remains the same?"

For instance, he said, "there are certain ways to get over sand dunes. So snakes and lizards will evolve those ways separately, whether they live in the Sahara or the Nambib desert."

Attenborough's professional history has been one of coupling an academic pursuit to mass-media outlets. As a young man, he studied at Cambridge University and, after leaving the Royal Navy, went to work at a publishing house.

Mail contest tips

- Don't be deceived by letters that look official or urgent. Some contest promoters use names that resemble official organizations or an envelope that looks as if it contains a telegram.
- Read the letter carefully, especially the fine print. It may tell you the cash value of each prize or that you must attend a sales seminar as part of the contest.
- Think carefully before you attend a sales meeting for the sole purpose of winning a big prize. Your chances of winning a valuable prize are likely to be very slim.
- If you do attend a sales meeting, do not sign a contract or give the salesperson a deposit right away. Ask for a few days to consider your decision and get additional information about the seller from your state or local consumer protection office. Be wary of offers that purport to be for a "limited time" only and efforts to make you buy "on the spot."
- Before signing, make sure you read the contract carefully. If the salesperson has made a claim that is not in the contract, it is not in force.

'Super Grapefruit Pill' smells sour to postal authorities

By LINDA TRUITT

You have seen the grapefruit diet pills advertised nationally on television and in newpapers. Usually the ads will have testimonials from people who supposedly have used the pills and lost weight immediately; newspaper ads will even show "before and after" pictures. The ads claim the pills "burn off fat" while users consume as much food as they want. The truth is the pills don't work.

The Food and Drug Administration has not approved any "grapefruit pill" for weight loss or any other medical purpose and is unaware of any valid scientific or medical evidence proving such products both safe and effective.

Some grapefruit pills contain, in addition to grapefruit extract, a diuretic such as caffeine or a bulk-forming agent such as glucomannan. Others may combine a legally sold appetite suppressant, such as phenylpropanolamine, with herbs or other ingredients. Taken alone, any such pill would provide inadequate daily nutrition.

Often the claims and guarantees made in print and broadcast ads are not on the label of the grapefruit pills. In addition, purchasers usually receive a leaflet advising that reduced food intake and/or increased exercise are necessary for the pills to work; a fact not stressed in the advertising.

"Super Grapefruit Pill" has been targeted by the U.S. Postal Service. Following a complaint by the Postal Service, an administrative law judge initially decided that the product's distributor, Citrus Industries in Los Angeles, and the company's sole proprietor, Eric "Lucky" Linder, unlawfully engaged in a scheme to obtain money through the mails by means of false representation.

The judge recommended, among other things, that mail addressed to the company containing orders or payment for the company's Super Grapefruit Pills be returned to the sender marked "Order issued against addressee for violation of false representation law." The company has appealed.

Pending a final decision of the administrative law judge, the U.S. Postal Service has obtained a preliminary injunction detaining delivery of mail addressed to the company.

One customer of Citrus Industries complained to the Better Business Bureau that he gained weight as a result of using the grapefruit pills. Instructions stated he could eat what he wanted and still lose weight, but instead his weight increased.

Regardless of the action taken against Citrus Industries, grapefruit pills are still being advertised. Some promoters are using 800 telephone numbers and private mail delivery services to circumvent the U.S. Postal Service's control.

Before spending any money on mail-order diet pills, you may want to write the advertiser and ask to receive the bottle's label and any package insert to be fully aware of what the diet plan requires. But the best advice is to seek the help of professionals and don't believe in miracles when it comes to losing weight.

Bargain hunter, alias 'Coupon Queen' publishes own newsletter

Hearst News Service

Smart shoppers, prepare to meet thy queen: Mary Anne Hayes, a New Jersey housewife and bargain-hunter par excellence who's been dubbed the "Coupon Queen."

Hayes possesses the uncanny ability of loading up a shopping basket with $150 worth of Jeno's pizza, Thomas' English muffins, Heinz ketchup, Shake 'N' Bake, Pepsi Diet soda and the like, but paying only $30 or $40.

Hayes, 28, mother of three, wife of a sheet metal worker, has been written about in countless newspapers and magazines. She publishes her own newsletter, which has more than 50,000 subscribers, and now has her own syndicated radio show, "Ask the Coupon Queen," which is also the title of her new book. The blurb on the cover of "Ask the Coupon Queen," reveals she has "amazed audiences on 'The Mike Douglas Show,' 'America Alive' and the Walter Cronkite news Program."

"Amazed" is right. Only two days after she appeared on a national news spot, Hayes received more mail than the entire town of Lakehurst, where she lives. There was so much mail that her small Toyota was packed to the roof and she had to make a return trip to the post office the next day to pick up the rest.

Hayes, without a doubt, is a terror behind the wheels of a shopping cart. During a television sequence, she managed to buy $80 worth of vittles, but using coupons for free this and free that, she paid only $7. It seems that everyone wanted to know how she did it. What was the secret?

The secret is no secret; it's called refunding. Saving money is as easy as stripping off a label, addressing an envelope and licking a stamp. Refunding, says the queen, is a snap.

Refunding is not to be confused with cash-off coupons, which usually mean 10 to 25 cents off on something you don't particularly want to buy in the first place.

"I don't think they're worth the trouble," says Queen Mary Ann.

Refunds usually offer a cash rebate of a dollar or more. Sometimes, they'll entitle the redeemer to a free package of whatever. Sometimes, a refund includes a coupon for a dollar off on a certain product. To get a refund, customers are asked to send in one or more proofs of purchase of particular products or brands, often accompanied by a sales receipt.

Hayes says that at any given time there are approximately 3,000 refund offers. Most are not limited geographically. You find refund offers on the backs of packages, in the Sunday and Wednesday newspapers, in women's magazines. Another way to learn about what's being offered is to subscribe to one of several refund magazines or newsletters.

Refunding involves not only keeping on the lookout for offers, but saving labels, packages, proof of purchase stickers and can lids. Hayes keeps about three years' worth of labels. Nothing is thrown away.

Easter food safety questions raised

By MARIAN FARR

Hard-cooked eggs and ham are familiar foods that get special treatment at Easter. It's this "special treatment" of decorating and hiding Easter eggs or serving a fresh ham for a large family gathering that raises questions about food safety.

Consumers commonly have the following questions about food safety for these Easter treats:

Q.: Is it safe to eat the hard-cooked eggs used in an Easter egg hunt?

A.: Yes, but they must be handled properly. First, cool hard-cooked eggs in cold water immediately after cooking and then refrigerate until they cool all the way through. If any eggs crack while cooking, don't use them for the hunt since bacteria can easily get through the openings and contaminate the eggs.

Q.: How long will hard-cooked eggs keep in the refrigerator?

A.: Hard-cooked eggs in the shell should be used within one week. Use eggs with cracked shells or those with the shell removed within one day.

Q.: Is there any danger of trichinosis from hams?

A.: If you choose a fully cooked ham, there is no danger. They are specially processed according to USDA guidelines to kill trichinae organisms. These hams are ready to eat without further cooking.

If you choose a fresh ham, take extra care in preparation. Cook the fresh ham until the center reaches a temperature of 170-F. To make sure this temperature is reached, insert a meat thermometer in the thickest part of the cut, not touching the bone or fat.

Inspectors seek nightmares

With the average cost of a new single-family home today nearing the $100,000 mark, older houses are becoming more attractive buy than ever. "But before investing, it makes sense to have a professional inspector make sure your dream house doesn't turn into a nightmare," advises a recent Family Circle article.

According to the magazine's "Cashing In" column, in three hours a good inspector can tell you whether the house you've decided on has a solid foundation, whether there's been flooding in the basement, and how soon you might have to replace the furnace and roof.

An inspector does not guarantee the condition of the house — that could make him liable later on. But he does point out trouble spots that a prospective buyer might overlook. And he can provide sound judgement as to the quality of the plumbing and electrical wiring.

A home inspection can be performed by a general contractor, an engineer, an architect or by one of the growing number of professional home inspectors. The American Society of Home Investors now has about 325 members throughout the U.S. who have met the Society's standards and have been certified.

Specify that your offer is contingent on a professional home inspection when bidding on a house.

'Lite' makes right

By LINDA ANDERSON

Quickly, class, what is the latest national pastime craze? Football? Baseball? Soap operas? The answer is none of the above.

The correct answer is personal physical fitness. Looking like a young hunk or hunkette is a top individual priority, and Americans are going to great lengths to accomplish this goal. Exercise (massive amounts of it) and proper diet are the tools they use.

Food manufacturers are aware of this phenomenon (they probably belong to fitness spas themselves), and have begun marketing products designed to fit this new lifestyle. Even foods which have been traditional taboos for fitness freaks have been re-marketed in "new, lite, reduced-calorie" forms.

One such forbidden food reappearing in supermarkets in "light" form is mayonnaise. Long a definite no-no for waist watchers, mayonnaise is now marketed in low-calorie form by many companies.

We tested Kraft Light Reduced Calorie Mayonnaise against the Kraft Real Mayonnaise for taste, price and advertising accuracy. The adults, teen and children who taste-tested the product are trying to limit fat and calorie intake.

Kraft mayonnaise is a popular national brand. A 32-ounce jar cost $1.89. The same amount of Kraft Light Mayonnaise cost $1.99. (Prices listed are from a local super market. Prices at other locations may vary.)

"Light" mayonnaise contains 40 calories per one-tablespoon serving; regular mayonnaise contains 100 calories for the same size serving, according to information on their labels. One obvious reason for the calorie difference is the lower-calorie mayonnaise lists water as its first ingredient and soybean oil is listed second; regular mayonnaise lists soybean oil as its primary ingredient and secondary ingredients are eggs and water.

In addition to the oil, water and eggs, both products contain vinegar, salt and egg yolks. But the light mayonnaise contains more strange-sounding ingredients — such as phosphoric acid, dl-a-tocopheryl acetate (listed as Vitamin E) and calcium disodium edta as a preservative.

The usual taste-test experts came to the consensus that the two products have a definite difference in flavor when sampled from the jars. The 4-year-old tester preferred the regular mayonnaise because it tasted "more lemony."

But when mixed with chicken, tuna, egg or macaroni the two mayonnaises taste the same.

If you want to have your chicken salad but not all the calories, Kraft Light Mayonnaise may help. But remember, too much of a good thing is never a good thing.

Child car seats improperly used

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most states now have laws requiring small children be placed in safety seats when in autos, but officials warn that many are being endangered by improper use of the seats. The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety warns that as many as 65 percent of child car seats are used improperly. One study found that nearly 40 percent of children were simply placed in the seats but not strapped in.

An open letter to all women who use Playtex® Tampons

Soon you will find new Playtex Slender, Super and Super Plus tampons in your store. These Playtex tampons will no longer be made with a highly absorbent fiber containing polyacrylate. Playtex "Regular" tampons now being produced and distributed do not contain polyacrylate and are not affected by the change.

Why is Playtex doing this? Because there are some questions about whether or not certain super absorbent substances, such as polyacrylate, increase the risk of Toxic Shock Syndrome.

Playtex will continue to support research on the subject of Toxic Shock Syndrome. In the meantime, we have decided to act now by eliminating any controversy that might exist associated with polyacrylate by voluntarily eliminating it from our products.

If you have Playtex Slender, Super or Super Plus tampons, Playtex will replace them without charge. Discard these tampons and mail just the front panel from the empty box (or boxes) to: International Playtex, Inc., P.O. Box 7010, Dover, Delaware 19903.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Spring good time for air-layering

By ELVIN McDONALD

It's been a miserable winter for a lot of my readers, both in North America and Western Europe. Despite plant losses and the likelihood of unseasonably low temperatures lingering in some areas, spring is here.

I've spied vigorous new shoots and flowerbuds on African gardenia, Mitriostigma, Eucharis, clivia, amaryllis and haemanthus are all blooming at once and cuttings of cinnamon-leaf basil set to root last week have already done it.

I haven't personally been hurt by this winter's cold, except a few sharp pains felt around my billfold at the supermarket and green grocer's. However, in the past I have had several home greenhouses freeze solid.

It's normal to feel staggering loss at first, even anger. Then you accept that with mud, sweat and tears any garden can be coaxed back to life.

Where any frozen plants are concerned — but I write specifically of those indoors or in a greenhouse — it pays not to be too hasty in consigning everything to the compost pile. Woody types and any sort having a swollen root system, bulb, tuber, corm, rhizome — may come back when warmer conditions prevail.

Immediately cut off leaves or other soft tissue such as flowerbuds that have been obviously killed by freezing. If not removed they invite rot in parts that might otherwise revive.

Nothing helps recover from loss or disappointment more quickly than digging into some serious plant propagation. Most seeds offered now in packets from local racks will sprout in record time — part of their miracle is the built-in timer that recognizes the approach of spring even when we may have doubts.

A moss wrapping is traditional for air-layering.

The period from late winter through early summer is ideal for air-layering almost any woody or fleshy-stemmed indoor plant that has grown too tall, or which you want to multiply. Rubber plant and other ficus come to mind, along with dieffenbachia or dumbcane, dombeya, and hibiscus. Air-layering can also be applied to a vine inclined to having aerial roots along the stem, philodendron, Hedera ivies, hoya and piper, to name a few.

The time-honored technique for air-layering is to (1) notch or partially ring the stem bark with a knife; (2) wrap this part with well-moistened and squeezed out long-strand, unmilled sphagnum moss: (3) then wrap this all around with plastic, securing gently but firmly top and bottom with a twist-tie.

An updated improvement you can put to work right away is to substitute a well-soaked Jiffy 7 peat pellet for the sphagnum moss. Peat pellets are not only more widely distributed, and thus easier to obtain, the manufacturer has agreed to send one sample for free to each of my readers. Request "Jiffy 7" and send $1 handling charge to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, 225 E. 57 St. New York, N.Y. 10022. In addition to the sample you'll receive a colorful growing guide and my notebook sheets that show how to air-layer house plants and how to layer shrubs outdoors.

After you set an air-layer into action, check at least once a week to be sure the moss or Jiffy 7 is well moistened. If only damp, add some warm water. Rooting begins within days in some plants, not for weeks or months in others. Once a promising roots system has developed, cut just below from the parent and pot separately.

Q. I favor frangipani-scented candles but have had no luck obtaining the plant itself. Can I grown it in Memphis?

A. Yes, as a container plant, ideally outdoors in warm weather, inside in a cool but frost-free spot in fall and winter. Frangipani is known botanically as Plumeria. The only specialist grower I know is Richard Eggenberger, who is appropriately enough president of the Plumeria Society; for a price list send $1 handling charge to the Plumeria People, Box 720291, Houston, Tex. 77272.

Publisher: Directories can save government money

PURCHASE, N.Y. (AP) — Two directories, which their publisher says will help the federal government save money, are slated to be published this spring.

They are "Management Services" and "Information Services."

Lawn a national obsession

Hearst News Service

Technically called turfgrass, lawns are a recent offspring of the largest and most varied family in plantdom. Wheat, oats, rice, corn, barley, sugar cane and bamboo are members of the sprawling family of grass.

The first lawnmower was patented in 1830 by Edwin Budding of Stroud Gloucestershire, adapted from a machine already used in the British textile industry to cut the nap on carpets. The machines are described as having been considerably larger than modern hand mowers but of the same basic design.

And did their need spread! British immigrants to America brought with them their love for grass fields, and various strains of domestic and imported grass grew well in wet Eastern climates.

Settlers had less luck with grass as they moved West. Farmers cut back the native "short grasses" of the Midwest. Then drought came, and the soil blew away in great terrifying clouds.

In the Western states, suburbanites planted the same grasses their forebears might have picnicked on in Scotland, then had to create water projects to keep their backyards green.

By the 1950s, a Texas A&M specialist noted that the nation's most expensive crop was its lawns. And for many, turf grass has gone beyond a simple crop to the level of complex obsession.

In 1976, a Wisconsin suburbanite set a legal precedent when the state court ruled unconstitutional a local ordinance requiring residents to keep lawns cut below 12 inches. Donald Hager, who worked as a biologist for the U.S. Forest Service and had been arrested for having an uncut lawn, argued that allowing grass to return to its natural condition saved energy, provided food and ground cover for native wildlife and eliminated the need for fertilizers and chemical conditioners.

An estimated 300 million pounds of grass seed were sold last year in the United States, according to the Oregon Rye Grass Commission — enough to seed 1.3 million acres of yards, golf courses and football stadiums.

An Illinois college mathematics professor set out to determine the quickest way to mow a rectangular lawn. Four patterns were tested:

A: A peripheral pattern, starting around the outside and finishing in the middle;

B: A back-and-forth motion in which the mower made a 180-degree turn at the end of the row;

C: A back-and-forth motion in which the mower never turned but finished one row and pulled back;

D: A diagonal, in which the mower worked at an angle.

Methods A and C were found equal, though it was noted that manufacturers warn that using a power mower with method C while barefoot risks nipping off your toes.

DEAR ABBY

Heirloom trapped in tug-of-war

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: It seems that my mother-in-law, who lives quite a distance, promised both my husband and his older sister the same piece of antique furniture. Both have admired this piece for a long time.

Recently, my husband returned from a visit to his mother's triumphantly bearing this treasure. It is now sitting in my living room, and I haven't the nerve to tell my sister-in-law we have it. (She lives near us and visits often.) I am dreading her visiting us and seeing it here, as I am sure the sparks will fly!

Frankly, the piece doesn't mean that much to me. I've tried to get my husband to offer it to his sister, but he flatly refused, saying, "This is the only decent thing I have from my mother's home; my sister has already managed to get everything else."

I suppose it's true, but I like my sister-in-law a lot, and I'm torn between the two of them. They are both very stubborn, and I need some advice on how to keep peace in the family. — IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: You are not in the middle unless you put yourself there. If your sister-in-law has most of the heirlooms, and this is the only "decent" piece left, I can't blame your husband for feeling that this one belongs to him. Stay out of it.

And while we're on that subject, read on:

DEAR ABBY: My grandmother is a wonderful, generous lady, but she has already caused a lot of hard feelings in the family because she keeps promising the same pieces of jewelry to three or four members of our family.

I don't want to appear grabby, but when my grandmother promised me her pearl necklace, I should have asked her to put it in writing. — OUT OF LUCK

DEAR OUT: If you had put those pearls of wisdom into action, you'd have soon found out whether your grandmother was stringing you along.

DEAR ABBY: Our parents' anniversary is coming up soon. Some of us would like to make them a gift of a family portrait including their children, their children's spouses and their grandchildren.

We want to limit this portrait to legitimate family members only, which would exclude the mother of one of the grandchildren and her son from a previous relationship.

We would like to include our brother and his legitimate child without including the woman he lives with and her illegitimate son. Is it possible to do this without causing hard feelings? — PROBLEMS IN SOUTHERN CALIF.

DEAR PROBLEMS: No. Abandon the idea. There are no illegitimate children; just illegitimate parents.

DEAR ABBY: Should you ever doubt that women are paid less than men for doing the same job, let me assure you that my personal experience will confirm that fact.

I was born a male and trained to be a computer programmer. I am also a transsexual and have had sex-reassignment surgery. I am now a female, physically and legally.

After my sex change, I took a job doing exactly the same work I had done as a man, but as a woman, I am paid $10,000 a year less! — A WOMAN IN A MAN'S WORLD

Government studies diets, breast cancer

Hearst News Service

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — A long-awaited government study designed to see if very low fat diets can prevent breast cancer has begun amid some real doubts about what it will eventually show.

The multi-center study coordinated by the National Cancer Institute already is recruiting the 12,000 women whose participation scientists hope will explain suspected links between diet and the cancer that will strike one out of 11 American women in their lifetime, but critics suggest the study may be either looking at the wrong part of the diet issue or at a diet that may be too difficult for most women to stick to over the projected five to 10 years of the study. And some say the $15 million to $30 million price tag may wind up paying for too little that is really useful.

The NCI study proposes to ask half the women enrolled in the study to eat diets with total calories made up of 20 percent or less fat — a third less than the 30 percent recommended now for healthy Americans by the American Cancer Society and the NCI. The typical American diet is about 40 percent fat.

The reason for the emphasis on reducing fat is that populations which eat low fat diets have a lower incidence of breast and other cancers. Other studies have linked obesity to breast cancer.

According to Dr. Peter Greenwald, director of the division of cancer prevention and control at the NCI, fat is suspected to exert its influence on cancer development via the body's hormonal system. The tie between fat and breast cancer — if it exists — is still a scientific mystery, however, and that mystery forms the basis of many of the doubts about the usefulness of the study.

"It could well be that the diet this study appears to decry is the one that keeps us alive long enough to get the disease we're talking about," says Dr. David Kritchevsky, associate director of The Wistar Institute and a past president of the American Institute of Nutrition. "The United States has one of the highest female life expectancies in the world and there is no question that our diets have played a major role in longevity."

Kritchevsky has emerged as one of the chief critics of the NCI study. At a science writers' seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society here this week, he said his own and others' animal studies suggest the prevention study may be asking the wrong questions of a lot of women.

In his Philadelphia laboratories, Kritchevsky has compared the effects of many diets on the development of breast cancers in animals. Experiments in mice and rats show, he says, that the total number of calories — not fat calories — are the more likely villains in the breast cancer story.

"Based on what I know of animal studies, my only dietary recommendation right now is to eat less," Kritchevsky says. "It is true that cutting down on fats is the fastest, easiest way to reduce total calories, but American women should not on the basis of what is known now be scared about fats."

Cancer drug treatments become more effective

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Combinations of drugs have effectively reduced the side effects of large drug dosages given to some cancer patients and have overcome the ability of cancer cells to resist chemotherapy, researchers say.

Up to 80 percent of patients with solid tumors such as breast, lung, testicular and ovarian cancer respond to standard chemotherapy, but far fewer of those are actually cured because many become resistant to anti-cancer drugs 18 months to two years after treatment started, said Dr. Robert F. Ozols, head of the National Cancer Institute's experimental therapeutics section.

Ozols said that combining chemotherapy and other drugs increased the survival of patients with ovary and testicle cancers and "provide optimism we will increase the effectiveness of chemotherapy and reduce toxicity."

The technqiues already are in use at some medical centers, he said during the American Cancer Society's annual science writers' seminar.

In ovarian cancer, resistance to adriamycin apparently occurs when the membrane around tumor cells changes and the cells expel the drug so it can't kill them, Ozols said. But laboratory experiments have shown adriamycin can be trapped in cancer cells if combined with verapamil, normally used to treat abnormal heart rhythms.

So the NCI researchers are giving a combination of the two drugs to eight women whose ovarian cancer has been considered terminal because they are resistant to adriamycin.

Preliminary results show it is possible to give the women enough verapamil to overcome their resistance to adriamycin, but Ozols said it's too early to tell whether the treatment will save their lives.

He said some cancers are resistant to low drug doses but can be halted with high doses. However, high doses can be toxic to normal cells.

Cisplatin is used against ovarian and testicular cancer but high doses damage the kidneys. Dr. Charles Litterst at NCI recently demonstrated a dose of cisplatin that normally killed lab animals could be made completely safe if administered in a 4 percent salt solution.

Deputies use armored truck to break into farmhouse fortress

WILTON, Calif. (AP) — Deputies in an armored truck crashed an electrified fence and booby-trapped front door to get into a farmhouse fortress and found a drug laboratory, a cache of automatic weapons and a decomposed corpse, authorities said.

Nine people, including two juveniles, were arrested in the house, which was guarded by pit bull terriers and bulletproof windows that deflected tear gas canisters, said Sacramento County sheriff's spokesman Roger Dickson.

The Wednesday raid capped a two-month probe stemming from reports by suspicious neighbors who told police about the log-and-wire electric fence, the five pit bulls that wandered through the acre of land around the house and armed residents mowing the yard.

"They knew something was going on," said Sheriff's Sgt. Morris Bailey.

The drug laboratory was capable of producing $500,000 worth of "speed," or methamphetamine, each day, said state narcotics agent Joseph Lindsay.

City-County Narcotics Lt. Hal O'Kane said the suspects probably distributed to at least a hundred dealers. "If you look at it that way, potentially their customers numbered in the thousands," he said.

"When I heard all the noise this morning it didn't suprise me," said neighbor Judy Conn. She said the house was always "dead quiet" during the day but at night "cars started pulling up."

About 40 deputies surrounded the house, located in an area of farms and isolated mobile homes 22 miles southeast of Sacramento, and told the residents to surrender, Bailey said. Several people, including women and teen-agers, emerged from the home, but two men refused to come out, he said.

The raiders, armed with search warrants and firing tear gas that was deflected by bulletproof windows, used patrol cars to ram the fence and a 12½-ton armored truck to crash the door, touching off a blast that sent flames through the house, which was demolished, Dickson and Bailey said.

The truck was one of two on loan from the Rancho Seco nuclear power plant, which is required to have such vehicles under federal law, Bailey said.

Two men, one with an automatic pistol, fled the flames and were arrested outside, Bailey said. Those arrested were held on drug and arson charges.

Investigators found the badly decomposed corpse in an automobile baggage carrier amid loose debris in a barn near the house. The corpse could not immediately be identified.

Rifles, drug manufacturing equipment and instruction manuals; cartridge belts, ammunition boxes, gun barrels and various automatic weapons, including an automatic rifle, were found in the charred debris. The house also contained a sophisticated machine shop, including an expensive lathe, Bailey said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Federal agents raid Philadelphia offices of financial company

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Federal agents raided the Philadelphia office of Shearson Lehman-American Express Inc. and seized corporate records in an investigation one law enforcement official reportedly called a money-laundering case.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Sarmousakas said the investigation involved alleged violations of a federal law requiring financial institutions to file forms on currency transactions involving more than $10,000.

The raid Wednesday morning was conducted by agents from the Internal Revenue Service, the FBI and the U.S. Customs Service.

An unidentified U.S. Justice Department official called the raid "a money-laundering case," The Philadelphia Inquirer reported. Money laundering refers to transactions designed to disguise illicit cash profits.

"Most of the people who work in the Philadelphia office have been subpoenaed" to appear before a federal grand jury, said Laurie Heffner, a vice president for corporate affairs at the New York City headquarters of Shearson, the second largest brokerage firm in the country.

Bishops postpone economic letter

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Catholic bishops are postponing a major statement on the American economy, saying they need more time to deal with a flood of reaction to a first draft that urged greater government aid for the poor.

Spokesmen for the bishops and for conservative critics of the original version of the pastoral letter agreed on Wednesday that delaying a vote on a revised draft from next November until sometime in 1986 shouldn't be read as a sign the bishops are backing off.

However, Michael Novak, main author of a separate letter from a generally conservative group of lay Catholics, did say that in light of the bishops' apparent attention to reaction so far — including some cautioning comments from Democratic politicians — "the reworking is bound to be more practical."

On the other hand, one source generally familiar with discussion within the bishops' national organization, commenting on condition of anonymity, said the final document would likely retain "the same basic tenor" of the first draft.

Four indicted for changing grade

PALATKA, Fla. (AP) — A grade of "C" in a high school masonry class was raised to an "A" to allow an athlete to accept a college football scholarship in 1981, officials said after four people were indicted.

Palatka High School Principal Kelly Nash, Assistant Principal Jim Ward and former principal Carl Herring were indicted Tuesday by a Putnam County grand jury on charges of official misconduct and making a false report to a law-enforcement authority. Masonry teacher John Harmon's indictment accused him of perjury.

The grade change made Clayton Beauford eligible for a football scholarship to Auburn University in Alabama, where he was a senior wide receiver last year, according to statements released by the school board.

Brown Derby to be reopened

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The landmark Brown Derby restaurant will be reopened at a new site in about six months, said a spokesman for the owners, who closed its doors after 56 years in business.

The restaurant where Clark Gable is said to have proposed marriage to Carole Lombard was built in 1929, said bartender Miles Haithcock, two years after the original hat-shaped eatery, which was saved from demolition by preservation groups five years ago.
