Holiday Turns Into A Killer

JUST DUCKEY

The Erwin girls, Claudin (6), Frankie (5), and Teddy (9), and their friend Bond Beam (4), second from left, watch with apprehension as the veterinarian splints the leg of their pet duck "Duckey." Duckey, known and loved by all the neighboring children, broke his leg trying to participate in one of the more strenous games played by the kids at their home in Dallas. The doctor said Duckey will probably survive the ordeal. (NEA Telephoto)

Russian Warships Being Watched

LONDON (UP)—Nato naval forces today were reported maintaining a close watch on a squadron of Soviet warships moving down the coast of Europe toward the Mediterranean Sea.

The Soviet warships—the heavy cruiser Zhdanov and four destroyers—steamed out of the Baltic Sea Sunday, tailed by a Danish naval patrol.

It was another in the series of Soviet naval movements which has led Western naval observers to suspect a Russian fleet buildup in the Mediterranean, possibly to attempt to balance the influence of the U.S. 6th Fleet in the waters west of the simmering Middle East area.

Radio Moscow and the official Yugoslav news agency said the Soviet warships were heading for Yugoslavia on a courtesy call.

"A squadron of five warships of the Red banner Baltic fleet, including the cruiser Zhdanov... sailed yesterday on a friendship visit to Yugoslavia," Radio Moscow reported Saturday.

Naval sources here said British or Norwegian units of the NATO north Sea command would help shadow the Soviet warships. Other NATO naval units will keep close watch when the Soviet squadron steams past Gibraltar and into the Mediterranean, the source said.

At least five more Soviet warships, including two heavy cruisers, are in the Mediterranean, heading toward Albania. The Soviets are believed to have a major naval base at Albania's Saseno Island.

Maureen May Be Called To Witness Stand

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—The prosecutor in the Confidential criminal libel trial indicated today that redhaired Maureen O'Hara may be one of two "surprise" rebuttal witnesses slated to attack defense testimony that the actress cuddled with a "Latin lover" in the rear of a movie theater.

Dept. Dist. Atty. William Ritzi revealed that he planned to call two witnesses when the trial resumes Tuesday.

"I can't tell you whether the two witnesses will be movie stars," Ritzi said. "I can only say that you will be able to recognize their names."

Indications that Miss O'Hara will take the stand grew with the prosecution's suggestion that the jurors see for themselves if it could have been possible for Miss O'Hara to engage in a torrid love scene in the now famed "row 35" of Grauman's Chinese Theater. The six men and six women in the jury will visit the theater Tuesday to inspect the seats where a Confidential Magazine story described the "cuddling" occurred.

Ritzi maintains that it would have been impossible for a couple to make love sprawled across the theater's seats.

Miss O'Hara angrily denied outtrue. The defense has gone to great lengths in an attempt to prove that Confidential reported the truth about the actress.

16th Blast Is Fired By AEC

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (UP) — Scientists made up lost time for numerous weather-caused delays early today by triggering the 16th nuclear blast of the 1957 Atomic Energy Commission test series at the Nevada Proving Grounds.

The shot, dubbed "Galileo," was fired at 6:40 a.m. cast from atop a 500-foot steel tower. It was the third atomic test within four days.

A gigantic fireball, changing in color from bright red to orange, zoomed skyward as the blast vaporized the steel tower. The force of the nuclear explosion was equal to 10,000 tons of tnt, about one half the size of the atomic bombs which were dropped Japan during World War II.

A research group participated in a human action's experiment following the detonation. About 100 Army troops with full combat equipment ran through an obstacle course about 4,800 yards from where the tower stood seconds before. The test was aimed at testing the reaction of human beings under "atomic combat" conditions.

Economic Limitation Scheduled For Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (UP) — A Syrian cabinet minister Sunday urged "limitation of economic freedom" to bring Syria in step with the "advanced European countries."

The call was made by Minister of National Eeconomy Halail Kallas at the opening of a trade fair in Damascus, dominated by a massive Soviet pavilion. Because of a virtual boycott by the Western powers, the fourth annual trade fair was a showplace for communism.

Western observers saw considerable significance in Kallas' statement. They interpreted it as the first indication by a government minister that Syria might abandon Western free enterprise in favor of a "progressive directed economy."

Kallas said the government should put forward a "progressive" scheme for the management of Syrian national economy.

The economics minister lauded the Soviet Union as "that great power which backed our cause." He said Russia had given aid to Syria with no-strings attached.

He charged that "imperialists" had "spread various falsehoods" after the announcement of Soviet economic aid to Syria "so as to prepare public opinion for any aggressive acts that might be taken by some states against Syria."

Kallas did not directly attack free enterprise. But he did explain a government - devised plan to "defeat factors of weakness."

The plan included establishment of a higher economic council and an economic development institution. The latter, he said, should for the new Syrian economy, basdraw up a comprehensive plan ed on a survey of the nation's resources.

Fair Weather Promised In US

By UNITED PRESS

Forecaseters promised mostly fair weather today for motorists heading home from Labor Day holiday outings.

The weather map showed no major storm centers, but scattered thunderstorms were seen for sections of the Southern Plateau, the Plains states and parts of the Mississippi Valley.

Scattered showers also were predicted for parts of the Gulf states, the mid-Atlantic states and along the Oregon coast.

No relief was seen for a 90-degree heat wave over most of the eastern half of the nation, but a cool air front was expected topush from eastern Nebraska north to the upper Mississippi Valley.

Rainfall associated with the cool front Sunday night dumped about one inch of precipitation at Sioux City and Spencer, Iowa, Omaha, Neb., and Grantsburg, Wis.

The only other rainfall Sunday was in the form of scattered showers in Texas, the Mississippi Valley and parts of the Rockies.

The wave of cooler air dropped temperatures an average of 10 degrees in the Dakotas, Nebraska and the upper Mississippi Valley. North Platte, Neb., reported an early morning reading of 55 degrees, 19 degrees lower than the day before.

Marine Was Acquitted In Shooting Case

TOKYO (UP)— A U.S. Marine was courtmartialed for shooting and wounding a Japanese woman metal picker last September in a case that closely paralleled the case of Army Specialist 3-c William S. Girard, it was learned today. The Marine was acquitted by the military court.

In the Girard incident, Mrs. Naka Sakai died almost instantly when hit in the back by a shell casing Girard fired toward her from the grenade launcher on his rifle.

In the Marine incident, the woman, Mrs. Unue Negami, was badly wounded when a shell casing, similarly fired, penetrated her right side and lodged near her spinal column.

Both incidents happened on U.S. military firing ranges where Japanese metal scavengers defied authorities to pick up spent shell casings to sell as scrap metal.

A U. S. military spokesman said that the Marine was acquitted and that he was returned to the U. S.

There appeared, however, to be a reluctance on the part of U.S. military men in Japan to disclose details of the court martial. Records of the case no longer are in Japan, they said.

"It's all old finished business said a Navy spokesman. "We can do no good in tying it in with anything else," in an apparent reference to the Girard case.

The name of the Marine who shot the woman could not be ascertained. Military sources gave four different names, the only similarity being that they all started with a "T."

Bids Are Opened By Commission

Bids for four storm doors for the Gray County Courthouse and two tractors for Precinct 1 and 3 were opened in a meeting of the county commissioners this morning.

Prior to opening the bids the commissioners approved the Jarvis - Sone Addition to Pampa which was previously approved by the Pampa City Commision.

J. D. Fish, McLean Constable, appeared to ask for a raise in salary. Fish claimed that all other county officers had received a raise since he had had one.

However, at press time neither the accepting of any bids or action on Fish's salary had been taken.

Police Seek Mad Gunman In Nebraska

DECATUR, Neb. (UP)—Authorities in two states today sought an enraged gunman who shot and killed two persons, savagely beat his wife and left her for dead and wounded his father-in-law.

The Nebraska safety patrol Sunday night found the abandoned car of Arthur McCluskey, 37, Omaha, southeast of here.

McCluskey fled in the car Saturday night after killing Mrs. Ida Stoddard, 59, his mother-in- law, and Orville Brewer, 60, a friend of the family.

He then beat his estranged wife, Betty, 29, with a crow bar and shot and beat his father-in-law, Glenn Stoddard, 68. Stoddard was shot in the shoulder and clubbed with the butt of McCluskey's gun.

Police Holding Hose For Owner

Pampa police were holding between 75 and 100 feet of hose for the owners identification this morning.

The hose, which apparently was used in painting, was found yesterday in the middle of the street in the 300 block of E. Kentucky by Morris Ehloe.

The owner may claim the hose at the local police department.

EJECTED SAFELY

Flight Officer Sidney Hughes of the British Royal Navy became the first human to be safely ejected from a moving jet at ground level in the United States. Hughes was catapulted from a Grauman F9F-8T jet flying at 120 m.p.h. with its wheels almost touching the ground at the Patuxent River, Md., Naval Air Station. Farewell Sermon

Tremendous Crowd Hears Billy Graham

NEW YORK (UP)—The largest crowd in the history of modern evangelism jammed Times Square Sunday night to hear Billy Graham deliver the farewell sermon of his New York crusade.

The 38-year-old preacher said he came to "the crossroads of the world," a place frequented by dope addicts, alcoholics and harlots, as well as "the finest citizens in the world," to make Times Square a symbol of the religious revival in America.

Police estimated the crowd at approximately 75,000 persons but Graham, in a statement later, challenged the figure.

"Before I went to the rostrum I was told the attendance was over 200,000," Graham said. "Certainly to anyone present the attendance was fare more than 75,000. I do not think anyone will ever know exactly how many were present but I'm certain it was the largest it has ever been my privilege to address."

Winding up his crusade in what he calls "the most unchurched city" in America, Graham told his followers, many of whom have attended nearly ever one of his meetings:

"On the theater marquees here at Times Square, we can see many inscriptions that describe the condition psychologically, materially and spiritually of millions today.

Names Movies

The movies he named were "The Ten Commandments", "The Lonely Man", "The Walking Dead", "Love In Oyuma."

Broadway was jammed with crowds from 42nd Street south to Herald Square. Side streets were see the proceedings but listened to them over loudspeakers.

It was Graham's 100th sermon in 15½ weeks of evangelizing in the nation's most populous city.

More than 50,000 persons have made "decisions for Christ" at crusade meetings that cost $2,500,-

Police Chief Urges Safety In Driving

Police Chief Jim Conner today appealed to Pampa motorists to be particularly careful while driving in town during the coming weeks due to large numbers of children walking to school.

"Many kiddos will be starting to school for the first time, and the streets will be crowded," Conner said.

He further reminded motorists that the speed limit of 15 miles per hour in school zones would be rigidly enforced. Another law, no passing in school zones, will also be enforced, Conner said.

Traffic Death Toll In 'Alarming' Climb

The long Labor Day week end threatened to become the worst killer holiday of the year today with the traffic death toll climbing at an "alarming" pace and the worst yet to come.

Safety officials blamed hot, humid weather, which prompted an apparent record number of motorists to seek heat relief, and carelessness on the highways for the disappointing traffic toll.

A United Press count at 9:30 a.m. c.s.t. showed at least 332 killed in traffic. In addition, 44 persons drowned, and 41 died in miscellaneous acidents for a total of 417.

California had the worst record with 37 killed, or an average of about one highway death an hour. Ohio was next with 20 deaths, followed by Texas with 22 and New York with 17.

The National Safety Council had estimated that 420 persons would be killed in traffic during the three-day holiday, but hoped the count could be held to about 375—the average number of fatalities for a non-holiday period at this time of year.

But Ned Dearborn, president of the National Safety Council, said it now appeared the council's original estimate may have been "too low."

Dearborn said it was "generally feared" by traffic officials that the life-saving records chalked up by motorists over the Memorial Day and Fourth of July holidays, when traffic deaths were held to a non-holiday average, would be shattered.

The Labor Day week end period, traditionally the last big fling of summer, began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight tonight.

Dearborn urged motorists to cooperate with trafic enforcement officers who have given up their holidays to "help you save your lives."

"The least we can do is give them an asist by driving carefully, courteously and sensibly," Dearborn said.

Another severe crash killed three young motorists Sunday when their cra slammed into a railroad abutment near Belsano, Pa., and burst into flames.

'Dollar Day' Will Be Observed Here Next Monday

Because of the Labor Day holiday, "Dollar Day" in Pampa has been postponed until next Monday.

Most Pampa merchants "closed up shop today to enjoy one of the six holidays officially observed as set up by the merchants' activities committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Next Sunday's paper will carry advertisements for "Dollar Day" barginas which may be found in Pampa stores.

Death Toll In Texas Inches Upward

By UNITED PRESS

The holiday death toll in Texas today inched steadily toward the 33 deaths predicted by the Department of Public Safety.

Twenty-one persons had been killed in traffic accidents, 3 persons had drowned, 1 man was electrocuted and 5 airmen were killed in the crash of an Air Force C-124 Globemaster for a total of 32.

The DPS predicted that 33 would die by traffic, drowning and miscellaneous causes between 6 p.m. last Friday and 12 midnight tonight when the Labor Day holiday officially ends.

Three persons were drowned Sunday.

Walter H. Dawn, 31, of Houston, stepped into a deep hole while surf fishing with a companion in the Gulf near Galveston and was swept away by the swift current.

Sand Pit Claims One

Alton Ray Burroughs, 21, was drowned when he tried to swim across a water-filled sand pit four miles east of Beaumont near Vidor.

A Spur Negro, John Irvin, about 21, drowned in a stock tank on the Guitar ranch about eight miles west of Spur.

The electrocution victim was Melvine Eugene Percival, 29, of Medicine Lodge, Kan., who was fatally shocked at Lariat, Tex. when a steel bar he was holding came in contact with a 12,000 volt-power line.

Sunday traffic victims were:

L. A. Jones of Friona, who died in an accident two miles west of Friona on U.S. 60 Sunday. Three others were injured.

An unidentified service man and a girl riding with him, also unidentified, killed in a head-on collision two miles east of Wichita Falls on Highway 287.

Aggie Killed

Ronald John Lehman, 20, of Beeville, a student at Texas A&M, killed when his automobile struck a bridge abutment on U.S. 281 about seven miles north of Alice.

Told To Clean Out Corruption

Union Leaders Attend Labor Day Mass

WASHINGTON (UP) — The nation's top union leaders attended the fifth annual Labor Day mass today and heard a warning that "corruption" in a few unions "could assume grave proportions unless courageously met and defeated."

The mass at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart keyed a holiday salute to American working men and women across the nation.

Intermixed with the tributes were pleas for rank-and-file union members to snap from their "apathy" and root out "crooks and hoodlums" who havve infiltrated the labor movement.

The Rev. Mark Fitzgerald, director of Notre Dame's industrial relations section, urged the labor leaders in a sermon to dedicate themselves to maintaining the integrity of huge union welfale funds.

The Catholic educator said the "American union movement is facing a critical internal challenge to its prestige which must be overtime. The forces of corruption, though minor now, could assume grave proportions unless courageously met and defeated."

Corruption is being stopped by labor leaders who, in codes of ethical standards, have "rejected the evils of individualism and avarice," he said.

Meany Attends

Among the 1,200 officials and guests attending the observance were AFL-CIO President George Meany and Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell. The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Wjvlahington, celebrated the mas

President Eisenhower issued a statement from the White House paying tribute to labor's contribution toward a "climate of general well-being" in the country.

"We live in a favored land where the fruits of production are widely shared. More Americans are holding jobs and enjoying security than ever before," the President said.

Hoods Deplored

Sen. Irving M. Ives (R-N.Y.), vice chairman of the rackets committee, said in a statement that a "handful of crooks and hoodlums" were threatening to give the labor movement a "bad name." He blamed "rank and file apathy" for permitting racketeers to gain the upper hand in some unions.

He predicted legislation will be passed next year to protect pension and welfare funds from abuses by union officials.

Labor Secretary Mitchell called for renewed efforts to make sure that equal job opportunity "becomes a reality and not just a slogan."

Meany, meanwhile, called attention in a statement to inflation and automation as threats to national prosperity.

He Wants Probe

"We of the AFL-CIO believe very strongly that there should be a full-scale, impartial congressional investigation of the whole price-profit - wage relationship so that some effective and intelligent program can be launched to combat inflation," Meany said.

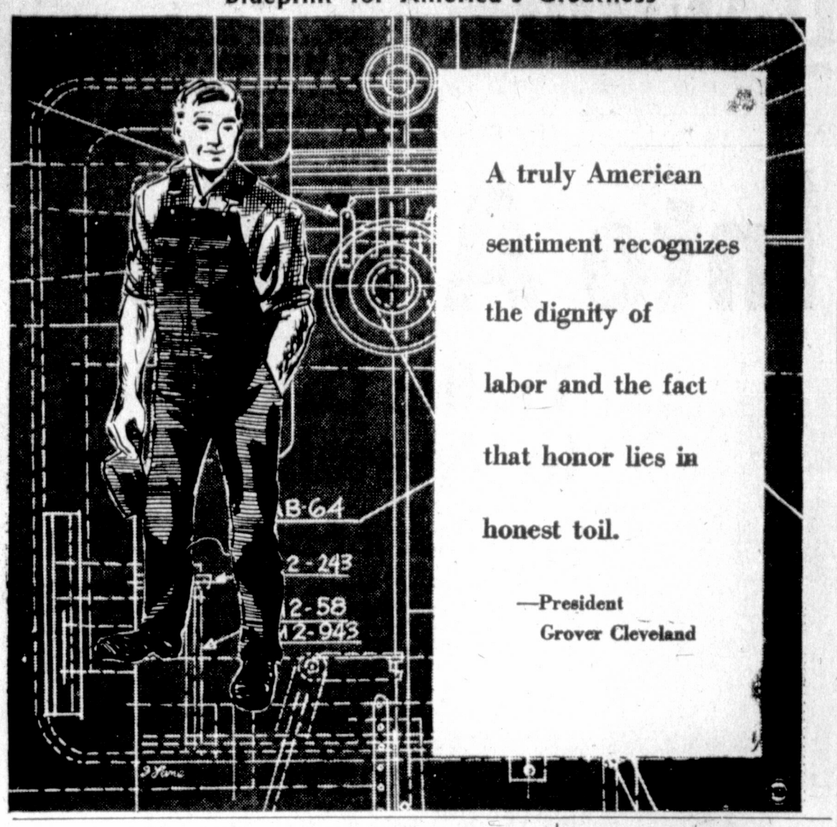

"Big business in recent years has taken more than its share of profits and has insisted on charging the consuming public all the traffic would bear," he said. The AFL-CIO chief added that "we have demonstrated the sincerity of our pledged to keep the labor movement clean of communism and corruption."

PARIS (UP)—Premier Maurice Bourges - Maunoury warned Frenchmen Friday they face the prospect of more tax hikes and budget cuts to get France out of her financial crisis.

Democrat Says Red Missiles 'Real Danger'

WASHINGTON (UP)— A Democratic critic of administration defense policies believes there is a "real danger" Russia will produce intermediate and long range missiles faster than the United States.

Sen. Henry J. Jackson (Wash.) said "I think we are neck and neck in the intercontinental race, but it is conceivable that they could be ahead of us."

"The real danger based on their past record of performance," he said, "is that they will be able to run out these missiles so fast, as compared with what we may be able to do. . . that they will have more operational 1,500 and 5,000 nautical mile missiles than we will have at a future date."

Jackson called for the restoration of budget cuts in the ballistic missiles program and production of B-52 jet bombers.

He said the Defense Department was "completely inconsistent" in giving top priority to missiles, and then placing a 38 billion dollar ceiling on military spending.

Jackson a member of the Senate Armed Services committee, made the statements in an interview over the CBS-TV "Face the Nation" program Sunday.

LONDON (UP)— Moscow Radio today bragged about Russia's intercontinental missile and then reported the "failure" of the latest American one.

Its morning "news from abroad" program for Soviet listeners quoted a French news agency report from Washington that the "Thor" missile "failed to achieve its destination" in a test flight from Florda.

GRAND TOUR—The opening of the newest leg of the New York Thruway east of Erie, Pa., adds another 46 miles to the grand tour of U. S. turnpikes you can make for $38.45. Numbers on Newsmap locate turnpikes. A tour of these roads would cover about 2,500 miles. The cost of such a tour is approximate because small segments of the network being brought to completion vary the tolls. The only turnpike not shown is that at Boulder, Colo.

Today's hand, sent me by Mrs. Wilma Hass of West Englewood, N.J., illustrates several interesting points of bidding and play.

West hld a sound opening bid and North's aggressive bidding put his partner in a slam contract which would have been a laydown if suits had broken nicely.

West was too smart to double. He did not expect to set the hand more than one trick and he knew that a double would be bad percentage. He wasn't quite so smart in his choice of an opening lead. If he had put his hand on a spade, club or trump he would have set the hand, but he chose to lead the ace of diamonds.

West was too smart to double. He did not expect to set the hand more than one trick and he knew that a double would be bad per-

West shifted to a small trump. South won in dummy and saw that he could handle a four - one break in either clubs or hearts but not in both. He played a second trump and found that trumps would break three - two. His next play was to lead the king of diamonds and discard one of his clubs. The ace of clubs was led and a small club ruffed. He reentered dummy with its remaining trump. All cards in dummy were good except for the small diamond, but South had one trump left for it.

After the diamond opening South would also have made his contract against a spade continuation. He would have ruffed in dummy, trumped a low diamond, ruffed a second spade, led a trump and overtaken in his own hand. Three trump leads would have allowed three club discards, whereupon dummy would have been good.

Drivers Are After Records

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP) — Hot rod drivers were out to break records in 30 classifications toowind up the third annual national drag races today.

Champions were decided Sunday in most classes, and a Phoenix, Ariz., rodder, Bud Sampson, won the title of "Mr. Hot Rod."

Sampson pushed his dragster to a speed of 141.50 miles per hour to comme from behind in the last 10 feet to become top eliminator of the national meet before a crowd of 20,000 fans.

The elimination run, which set an official national speed record for a quarter-mile run in gas-powered competition, was made in an elapsed time of 10.42 seconds..

Sampson nosed ahead of Le Roy Mackey of Corpus Christi, Tex., who was driving a Class A modified roadster. He succeeded Melvin Heath of Rush Springs, Okla., as national hot rod champ.

In the closing day of the four-day event, class championships were to be decided in stock and sports car divisions.

WASHINGTON — Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-N.Y.), on the charge that airplanes are becoming flying saloons:

Judging by this sign in Junction City, Kan., the youngsters attending the one-room schoolhouse, left, have learned about safety, as well as readin' and writin'. Fire Razes Warehouse

DALLAS, Tex. (UP) —Deputy Fire Chief D. C. Lester estimated damage at $75,000 from a fire which gutted a three-story brick warehouse near the State Fair of Texas grounds Sunday. The warehouse, containing furniture and upholstery materials, was owned by the Mid-City Realty Co.

Barbara Hale's Son Sells Dad's Fan Pictures

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Actress Barbara Hale says she and her actor - husband, Will Williams, have gained courage and this week will come out of their home in daylight hours.

Miss Hale said that several weeks ago Bill, Jr., 6, told her proudly that he had a job. To prove it he showed her a handful of change — his earnings. Mother became suspicious — and not just because she's on the CBS-TV "Perry Mason" detective series. She asked the nature of his employment.

Bill confessed he'd been taking his father's fan pictures and selling them door to door in their exclusive residential neighborhood. He'd been explaining to the neighbors that his family needed the money.

Ike's Doctors Insisted He Get Flu Shot

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower's doctors had to resort to high - pressure tactics to get him inoculated against Asian flu.

Here's the backstage story of the President's flu shot.

The White House staff tried earlier this month to persuade Eisenhower to let himself be inoculated. They argued that he is clearly in the "essential worker" category for which the Public Health Service recommends priority.

But the President adamantly refused. As he told a news conference, he was determined to wait for his shots until supplies were available to "ordinary people."

A member of the White House staff got on the telephone and talked to a Public Health Service official. A short time later, Surgeon General Leroy E. Burney publicly declared his belief that the President should be among the first inoculated.

Burney's statement failed to budge Eisenhower.

More telephone calls followed, and last Saturday the Public Health Service put out a special statement to the press. The release baffled reporters because it merely emphasized what Burney had said many times before — that older people who have had chronic diseases, like heart trouble, should be among the first inoculated.

This statement, it can now be revealed, was really addressed to one ex-heart patient — Dwight D. Eisenhower.

But the President still was not moved.

Then desperate White House aides told Eisenhower that he had apparently been exposed to Asian flu.

Dr. Gabriel Hauge, the President's economic adviser, came down with what were described as symptoms of the diseases last week shortly after conferring with Eisenhower.

This argument finally induced Eisenhower to let the doctors vaccinate him Monday.

Jamaican Train Wreck Kills 50

KINGSTON, Jamaica, (UP)—An estimated 50 persons were killed and 400 injured Sunday night when a 12-car excursion train left the rails just outside of Kendal station. It was one of the worst train wrecks in the history of Jamaica.

From Kingston, the island's chief medical officer, Gussie Peat, rushed four doctors and 10 nurses.

Peat made an island-wide appeal for blood donors.

Cause of the derailment was not known.

Negotiations Deadlock In Galveston

GALVESTON, Tex. (UP)— Negotiations for a union shop contract with the Sante Fe railroad have reached a deadlock, according to company president E. S. Marsh.

The talks had been under way for a month between company officials and a committee representing 15 non-operating unions.

The unions wanted to make membership compulsory, and the railroad said it would agree to making all employees pay dues but did not think they should have to participate in other union activities.

Marsh said Sante Fe could not "reconcile ourselves to... any agreement that would go counter to the rights of employees, both union and non-union, and to which so many of them have voiced their objections in letters and petitions addressed to the management."

Stassen Goes Back To London

WASHINGTON (UP)—Presidential disarmament adviser Harold E. Stassen headed back to the London disarmament talks today expressing last - ditch hopes of some agreement with Russia.

But reports from London said for all practical purposes serious East-West disarmament negotiations there have ended.

Stassen planned to meet with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles this morning for a final conference before leaving. He was scheduled to leave this afternoon for New York enroute to London. The disarmament talks resume Tuesday.

U.S. officials said Stassen believes there is a chance the Russians may have second thoughts about their rejection of the United States' latest disarmament proposals and may accept some of them.

They said Stassen realizes the prospect for continued disarmament negotiations in London is unpromising. But he contends that no one really knows what the Russians have in mind until they give their "final word."

Stassen was reported to be placing emphasis on the fact Soviet disarmament negotiator Valerian A. Zorin appears to have had his rejection ready evven before the Western paper was read.

Woman Gives Helpful Hints In Raising Baby Wild Creatures

By DOC QUIGG
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP) —If you eve have to become foster parent to just-born raccoon—and the wa the world is going, you might a well be prepared for anything — here's a helpful tip.

A red leather lady's purse makes a fine incubator.

Also, a doll's baby bottle is just fine for feeding a wee critter that won't take more than half an ounce at a time. A brand new raccoon, by the way, is not much bigger than a mouse and has to be fed every two hours.

These items of pioneering research were gleaned by Mrs. Mary Cafarelli, of the Bronx, who had a two-hour-old raccoon thrust upon her in an emergency and took it home to raise.

Nothing New For Her

She had had some experience previously in being a mama to wild creatures. She had taken to her home, in succession, a baby starling, a month - old woodchuck, and a two-day-old Chinese water deer.

But none posed the problems of the tiny raccoon, which is now doing fine, thank you, and sporting the name of Daisy Crockett II.

Mrs. Cafarelli is an assistant to the Children's Zoo, a little institution that nestles within the immense confines of New York's famous Bronx Zoo.

The newborn raccoon was found in another part of the zoo, apparently deserted by its mother.

Borrows Pocketbook

Mrs. Cafarelli borrowed a pocketbook—a rather ancient red leather one—from a friend. She put a hot water bottle, wrapped in cloths, inside and put the raccoon cub, well swaddled, on top of the bottle.

She got some doll baby-bottles from her daughter, mixed a formula of half water and half evaporated milk, and was in business.

The Children's Zoo previously had a raccoon named Daisy Crockett, so the new one has been named Daisy II. It is now two months old and will go into the zoo as soon as it gets a little more stature.

"This is all supposed to be very secret—but let me know if I'm not whispering loud enough!"

RAGPICKERS UNITE

TOKYO (UP)—Eighty of Tokyo's 60,000 ragpickers met Thursday night to organize a union intended to protect them against "exploitation" by wholesale junk dealers. The new organization will be known as the "Tokyo Resources Collectors Cooperative Assn."

TRAILED BY TRICKLE

CHICAGO (UP)—Leon Kucewicz was in hot water today on charges of crashing into a parked car and leaving the scene of the accident. Kucewicz's car radiator was damaged in the collision and left a trickle of water which police followed along city streets, netting Kucewicz at the end of the watery trail.

Public Might Be On Verge Of Supersonic Commerical Travel

Last of Four Dispatches
By GLENN STACKHOUSE
United Press Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — The two most anxious questions being whispered behind the "no admittance" doors of the world's commercial airplane factories are: "How fast?" and "How soon?"

For the public may find itself in the amazing position of being thrust into the era of supersonic flying almost before it has a chance to get used to the pokey, 600-mile-an-hour contraptions now aborning.

Some of the world's biggest jetmakers, facing a knockdown struggle in domestic and foreign competition, have even stopped whispering and are talking out loud about mach two — twice the speed of sound.

The latest and probably most significant public statement about the prospects for supersonics came from London recently from Sir Miles Thomas, chairman of a government committee set up to study British air transport.

VTO Model

Sir Miles' committee recommended that Britain start development of a 1,500 m.p.h. jet airliner capable of flying at 60,000 feet and making the London - New York flight in about 2½ hours. The plane would be a vertical take-off model with a 135-passenger capacity.

The committee judged that such an aircraft could capture the "blue ribbon" transatlantic route "within 12 years."

This statement from Britain is certain to prod American designers into action.

In this country the loudest rumblings of supersonics have come from Boeing and Lockheed. Both firms have indicated they feel that the 1,500-2,000 m.p.h. plane could be in production by 1970.

With the exception of British Overseas Airways Corporation, most airline executives register horror at the suggestion of supersonics by 1970.

Fear Expense

They point to the billion-dollar investment to which the industry is already committed in subsonics and the number of years it will take to liquidate that outlay. They also fear that any supersonic plane would be so expensive to fly it would boost tariffs clear out of the reach of the passenger's pocketbook.

Both Lockheed and Boeing deny this. Hibbard was quoted recently that "the supersonic airliner, when it comes, will be no more costly to operate, per seat mile, than presently designed planes."

A Boeing spokesman echoed: "we don't believe in building planes that will cost more to operate than the previous ones." He said Boeing's 707 jet, to be put into service next year, is no more costly to operate than the present piston planes and said the supersonic type "will hold the line."

Like it or not, when the needle-nosed, knife - winged supersonics come along, the world's airlines will have to buy them.

HAS IT HAPPENED TO YOU?

You're walking down the street. The sun is shining, and the rain of yesterday has washed the buildings and streets to a new brilliance. You've taken off a few minutes from your work to meet your wife. She wants to get a new hat, and you're going to supervise her selection. As you step off the curb to cross the street, a good friend hails you from behind. You turn to greet him, and notice that he has with him another gentleman whom you do not know. Introductions are made, and the three of you walk abreast across the street to the corner. Your friend turns in one direction. The new acquaintance, however walks your direction and you casually chat about the rain of the evening before.

At tne end of the block, you see your wife awaiting you. You think to yourself of how you'll get her to buy one of those small, sensible hats. As the two of you near her, you say, "I'm meeting my wife here to supervise her hat-buyin!" The new acquaintance says, "Oh — I'd like to meet your wife." "Sure," you say, "She's right here..." Suddenly you begin groping. "What is this guy's name?" you say to yourself. "Brent? Caldwell? Davenport?...Oh...Why can't I remember names?" Now it's too late. Hoping the name will come to you, you start the introduction ...but the name doesn't come. You feel small as a mouse when you turn and say, "I'm sorry, but I can't remember your name!"

Looking lovely at all times is the business of Joan Crawford, a great motion picture star who has been at the top for many years. Her figure measurements are the same as they were in 1925; her face is smooth and unlined. Her beauty secret is discipline. Here, she wears clothes that are typically Joan Crawford (left). She likes simple, trim and understated fashions. She is not tall but she wears large hats very well because her proportions are excellent. The star believes in brushing her red-gold hair for beauty (center) and she thinks it's important to brush away from the scalp. Here is the famous Crawford stance (right). First heels, then calves, then hips touch the wall; the hand is withdrawn from the small of the back and you've a youthfully straight figure with no hint of slump. This is an excellent check on your posture.

Disneyland Theme Of Birthday Fete

(Special to The News)

LEFORS — A "Disneyland" theme was used by Mrs. F. C. Jones when she entertained with a party honoring her son, Donny, on his sixth birthday Tuesday afternoon in civic center.

Acting as hostesses other than Mrs. Jones were Misses Judy Lane, Karen Carruth, and Gayle Henson.

Balloons depicting Disnleyland characters were used as decorations on the center pole, over the serving area, and on the serving tables which were covered with bright - colored crepe paper.

As the guests arrived, they presented honoree with gifts which were displayed on a table surrounding the cake. The cake depicted a little red school-house with swings, slides, surrounded by blue blossoms, to bring out the theme that the honoree will begin school this year.

The guests were led in games by Miss Henson.

The group was seaated by Misses Lane and Carruth at the table after the six red candles were lit, as "Happy Birthday" was sung to the honoree. The cake was then served to the guests with ice cream, and fruit punch with bubble - gum and blowers given as favors.

Guests were Jimmy, John and Octavia Pinkerton, Walter Todd, Shiela, Patsy and Leona Shoffitt, Charlotte Oualline, Paula Wall, Jerry Lane, Vicki Jo Cochran, Deborah and Denise Roach of Pampa, Carolyn Davis of Amarillo, Lee Wayne, Elaine and Lynn Foshee, Linda and Bubba Smith, Patricia Moxon, Richard Harkum, Ronny Wilson, Richard and Morris Roberts, Sharon Reed, and Stevie Bigham.

Adult guests were Mmes. Joe Cochran, Letha Pinkerton, Granny Johnson, A. W. Shoffitt, Frank Roach, Freland Davis, Earnest Foshee, Billy Smith, Earl Lane, M. E. Bigham, E. R. Auldridge, and Charles Roberts.

Manners Makes Friends

If you should break a dish when visiting a friend, note the pattern and try to replace it. If it cannot be replaced, it would be thoughtful to give your hostess a gift with a note saying that you tried to replace the dish and couldn't.

Accidents do happen and all the one responsible for them can do is to try to make up for the loss.

Schedule Is Secret Of Actress' Magic Who Does Beauty Aids With Other Jobs

By JOAN CRAWFORD
Written Exclusively for NEA Service

EDITOR'S NOTE: There's a real beauty lesson for every woman in the story of Joan Crawford, a star since the 1920's. Today, she has a figure that a young girl might envy and a face that's unlined. In this story, written exclusively for NEA Service, she tells how she has kept her beauty. The star is curerntly appearing in "The Golden Virgin" for Columbia Pictures.

It's my firm belief that a motion picture star owes it to her public to look lovely consistently, not just when she is making a picture.

This is somewhat difficult to do, for the life of an actress is both hectic and busy. There is little time for a carefully planned beauty routine. Minutes must be snatched from here and there during the day to do the things that most people do at a set time each morning and evening.

There are, undoubtedly, many women who face similar difficulties — women whose schedules make it impossible for them to adhere to a rigid beauty routine.

I have found that discipline is the only answer to this problem. The time that can't be found at a certain hour in each busy day must be made throughout that day.

Exercise, for instance, is vitally important. And neither hard work nor running about to keep appointments will give anyone the type of exercise needed to preserve an attractive figure.

Perhaps it will help other busy women to know how I've managed to get the proper exercise during my day. I have taught myself never to pick up anything without bending from the waist.

When I need something from a high shelf, I reach from the waist so that I can feel the pull. It's amazing how many times during each day the opportunity for stretching the muscles is presented. It's just a matter of remembering to tak advanthge of each chance.

Early in my career I learned the importance of good carriage. Without perfect posture, even the loveliest figure looks unattractive.

It is, of course, important for me in my business to watch my weight. I find that the time to watch my diet closely is when I've gained the first pound. It's easy to get rid of that one, but a good deal tougher to lose the first extra five.

Complexion care is another thing that can't be neglected, no matter how crowded the schedule may be. I find that using my favorite face cream for about 20 minutes a day — minutes that aren't wasted, for I make necessary phone calls at the same time — works wonders for me.

Fighting dry skin is a challenge to any actress, for it takes a lot of down - to - earth scrubbing to remove the grease paint and oil base we must use while working. I've found that using a lot of butter on my food helps keep my complexion smooth and moist.

Every smart woman knows that good taste demands a minimum of makeup for street wear. I use only powder, lipstick and mascara. Fortunately my eyebrows are dark and need no pencil for emphasis. At one time they were sparse enough to be practically nonexistent. And here's a hint for anyone with the same problem:

Buy a jar of yellow petroleum jelly. Remove half the jelly and fill the space with castor oil. Mix the jelly and oil together, and, with a stiff brush, brush the brows in the opposite direction from which they grow. I found it wonderfully successful.

It seems absurd, but it is often true that a person whose job consumes the major part of her day finds more time to devote to her appearance than many women who have a great amount of leisure. Your mind becomes as busy as your body. You think and plan constantly, and you amaze yourself at how much you can accomplish.

So if you feel that you have little time for beauty, sit down and give some intelligent thought to your daily schedule. Chances are you'll find there are many minutes you could be using to far greater advantage. Remember that if you want to, you can make every movement of your body work for you.

RUTH MILLETT

"I just can't seem to talk to my 15 - year - old daughter," a mother writes.

Lots of parents find it hard to stay on easy conversational terms with their adolescent children. If they ask questions, the kids feel their privacy is being invaded or that they aren't trusted.

If they discuss the adolescent's friends, the slightest hint of criticism may be resented.

If the parent tries to be helpful, the adolescent all too often feels he is being lectured.

So there is a special art or knack a parent has to learn in order to keep conversations between parent and adolescent friendly and free - flowing.

When your daughter comes home from a party, don't say brightly, "Now tell me all about the party." Chances are that will only get you a gloomy, "There's nothing much to tell."

Asking a teen - ager to tell you "everything" about anything makes him shut up like a clam.

If you want to hear all about the party, ask one unimportant little question, and chances are a lot of information will follow.

If you want to know more about your daughter's friends, don't ask a lot of prying questions that indicate you are trying to find out if they are the "right sort." If you don't appear to be eager to disapprove, your child wonn't feel she is constantly having to protect her friends against your criticism.

When a teen - ager confides in you regarding something you don't approve of, don't jump down his throat. Hear the story out and then gently ask, "Don't you think it might have been better if you had done such and such?" You'll hear a lot more confidences if you can keep your reactions from putting your adolescent child on the defensive.

It takes tact and patience and understanding to keep the lines of communication open between a parent and a teen - age son or daughter. But it can be done.

Officers Study Lake Findings In Murder Case

CHICAGO (UP)—Authorities today studied a growing mound of objects dredged from a Lake Michigan harbor by 100 skin divers in hopes of finding clues to the torso murder of 15-year-old Judith Mae Andersen.

Some 3,000 persons watched as the divers, equipped with oxygen masks made an inch - by - inch search of the 12-to-76-foot deep Montrose Harbor where the victim's body was found floating in two oil drums.

Among the items brought up from the harbor bottom were a 12-inch U.S. Marine bolo knife, a sledge hammer, a "zip gun" containing a .22 caliber bullet, a rail spike, a brown-stained rubber mat and a pair of men's shoes.

Police begn scientific tests of the objects in an effort to determine if any of them were used in connection with the gruesome killing.

A special police task force searching Chicago's Northwest side reported several persons in a neighborhood about four miles from Judith Mae's home heard a woman screaming early in the morning of Aug. 17.

They told authorities the woman screamed: "You're going to kill me. You might as well kill me anyway." Judith Mae had disappeared hours earlier while en route from the home of a girl friend.

The victim's torso was found stuffed in an oil drum in the harbor Aug. 22. Her head and hands were found two days later in another oil can in the harbor.

Man Falls To Death In Cave

FRANKLIN, W. Va. (UP)—Robert W. Keplinger, 22, of Keyser slipped from a rope Sunday and fell 165 feet to his death in a Pendleton County cave.

Keplinger had descended 15 feet on a rope from the mouth of the cave and was climbing back to the top when he lost his grip on the rope, authorities said.

He had gone into the cave to find a ledge which he and four companions from Keyser might use to reach the bottom. The rope had been put up by members of the National Speleogical Society which is holding its annual old timers reunion at Franklin.

Members of the society recovered Keplinger's body from the jagged floor of the cave.

President Must Decide On Appointments

WASHINGTON (UP) — President Eisenhower must decide what to do about two high-level appointments that Congress left in his lap.

One—Dr. Paul D. Foote as assistant defense secretary — the Senate Armed Services committee pointedly postponed acting on this year.

The other—Arnold R. Jones as Tennessee Valley Authority director — was sharply questioned by the Senate Public Works committee during a week of hearings that ran until Congress adjourned. No action was taken.

The Senate also failed to act on nominations for 10 U. S. marshal posts, a number of postmasters and other minor posts.

It is customary in such cases for the President to authorize temporary recess appointments. He then may seek Senate approval when Congress reconvenes in January.

But neither the Jones nor Foote appointments exactly come under the customary category.

Eisenhower nominated Foote, 69 year old retired Gulf Oil Co. scientist, to become assistant defense secretary in charge of research and engineering. The Armed Services committee postponed approving him on Aug. 22 after he said he could not give up stock holdings in the Gulf and Standard Oil companies which represented a "substantial part" of his life savings.

"All I did was plug it in!"

Civil War Survivor Dies Sunday

CRESTVIEW, Fla. (UP)—William Alen Lundy, one of the three surviving veterans of the Civil War, died Sunday night at Okaloosa Memorial Hospital. He was 109 years old.

Death came to the doughty old warrior at 12:30 p.m. e.d.t. He had not been ill recently and death was unexpected.

Lundy was admitted to the hospital at little after 10 p.m. with a high fever, according to Dr. Maurice Cohen, who would not say immediately what was the cuase of death.

Lundy first came under a doctor's care in early spring of 1937 when he was admitted to the Crestview Hospital for minor surgery.

Hospital officials said there was no connection between the surgery and his death.

Frank Lloyd Wright Tells Of Feelings Toward Architecture

NEW YORK (UP) — Architecture, the common man, and the American Legion took a verbal lambasting from Frank Lloyd Wright Sunday night on the (ABC) television program, "The Mike Wallace Interview."

The 88-year-old architect said building construction was not innate or organic and does not have character.

He said he had plans for a mile-high skyscraper on his drawing board that would make those "silly boxes" in New York City look foolish. Put two of them in Central Park and "you could destroy the rest of the city and plant grass."

He'd Change Nation

Admitting that his boastfulness may be "arrogance," Wright said that if he had 15 more working years, he would change the nation. He said that for 500 years "what we thought was architecture was phony."

Asked what he thought of the American Legion, Wright said "I never think of it if I can help it." He said "they are professional warriors and I'm against war."

Wright, whose many innovations and completely revolutionary ideas have made him one of the most controversial figures in the architectural field, said the common man was responsible for a drift toward conformity in the United States and "will ruin our democracy." He said the common man believes "in what he can see and can't see anything he can't put his hands on. He's a block to progress."

He Doesn't Care

"I never care much which way the public was going or what was the matter with it," he added.

There was one phase of American architecture in which Wright found himself in accord with the common man.

In reply to a question by Wallace as to what he thought about Marilyn Monroe's architecture, Wright quickly said:

"Miss Monroe's architecture is extremely good architecture."

Forgery Ring Is Cracked

EL PASO (UP)—The arrest of an Army captain and a man in Oklahoma has cracked what authorities describe as a six - state forgery ring.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents "conservatively" estimated the gang has taken $20,000. Special agent Ed Boyle of El Paso said more arrests were expected.

Arraigned on forgery charges Army Capt. Arvil Gale, 36 os Fort Bliss, and Lamarr Bailey Jr., formerly of the Midland area but arrested in Tulsa.

Boyle said the FBI entered the seven-month-old case after it was established that checks forged by the gang had an interstate angle —having been cashed in the El Paso area on a Tulsa bank.

Forged checks drawn on accounts of the old Republic Insurance Co., and the Continental Casualty Co. began showing up after a burglary of the Lyle Adjustment Co., Farmington, N. M., last February.

Boyle said the firm later was broken into for more blank checks.

Officers also were invvtigating a report that blank checks matching the stolen ones had been printed, on Gale's orders, by a Juarez, Mexico, printer and had been passed in the United States.

TEACHERS TO BARGAIN? —Carl J. Megel, president of the American Federation of Teachers, will preside over the organization's annual meeting in Chicago, Aug. 19-23, which will study collective bargaining as a method of securing better teachers' salaries and teaching methods. Megel, a Chicagoan, maintains that schools will open this fall with a shortage of 400,000 degree teachers, and in need of nearly 500,000 classrooms, to replace obsolete buildings and eliminate double shifts and overcrowding.

Reds Shut Braves, 6-0; Phils Split With Pirates

Roberts Hurls Win After Sentence To Bullpen Duty

By EARL WRIGHT
United Press Sports Writer

Robin Roberts is the kind of a guy who inspires even the Philadelphia Phillies to collect a barrel of basehits.

Manager Mayo Smith "sentenced" Roberts, one of baseball's all-time pitching greats, to bullpen duty after he suffered his 18th loss of the season Aug. 25. But Smith gave Roberts another chance to start Sunday because the Phillies have two weekend doubleheaders.

Roberts responded by showing some of his old-time magic while holding the Pittsburgh Pirates to seven hits. Robin's normally weak-hitting mates made it easy for him.

Swinging as though inspired by seeing the former Illinois farm boy back in the starting lineup, they battered four Pirate pitchers for 16 hits and an 11-3 victory.

Pirates Win Nightcap

The Philly batters were back in their normal groove into the second game. They got nine hits as Pittsburgh's one-eyed rookie, beat Charles (Whammy) Douglas, Pittsburgh's one-eyed rookie, beat them, 6-3.

The Chicago White Sox remained 5½ games behind the New Yolk Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals cut the Milwaukee Braves' lead to 6½ in pennant races already considered "dead" by the oddsmakers.

Chicago shut out the Kansas City Athletics Sunday, 5-0, while New York edged Washington, 3-2. Bill Fischer allowed Kansas City six hits and drove in two runs. Andy Carey's ninth-inning single scored Jerry Coleman and enabled New York to beat the seventh-place Senators for the first time in their last five meetings at Yankee Stadium.

The Cincinnati Redlegs made some progress against a far bigger jinx by shutting out the Braves, 6-0, behind the five-hit pitching of Brooks Lawrence and Bob Thurman's hitting. It was only Cincinnati's third triumph over Milwaukee in 19 games this season.

The Cardinals scored a 10-inning 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs and advanced from third to second in the National League when the New York Giants rallied to defeat the Dodgers, 7-5. Brooklyn now trails Milwaukee by seven games.

Stobbs Loses 18th

Jim Bunning's three-hit pitching backed by Al Kaline and Dave Philley homers, eased the Detroit Tigers to a 6-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians and the Baltimore Orioles edged the Boston Red Sox, 2-1, in the other American League games. George Kell's two-out single scored Tito Francona from second with Baltimore's decisive run in the bottom of the ninth.

Crowley Leads IC Golf Tourney

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UP)—Dark-horse Bob Crowley of Weston, Mass., who hasn't three-putted a single green in 54 holes, carried a two-stroke lead over the "name" pros into today's final round of the Insurance City Open.

Crowley needed only 26 putts on Sunday's third round as he carded a four-under par 67 for a three-quarter total of 200 strokes.

Two strokes behind were defending champion Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., and Gardner Dickinson of Panama City, Fla. And three strokes behind at 203 was red hot Doug Ford, Masters champion from Mahopac, N.Y., who had the best score of the third round, 65, to close within striking distance.

At 205 with an outside shot at the title were Tom Nieport of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Art Wall of Pocono Manor, Pa. Bill Nary of Tucson, Ariz., was alone at 206 and there was a six-way tie at 207, including former Masters champion Jack Burke of Kiamesha Lake, N.Y.

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—Olympic oarsman Jack Kelly, a brother of Princess Grace of Monaco, stroked the Vesper Boat Club eight-oared crew to a four-length victory over the West Side Club of Buffalo, N.Y., Sunday in the Middle States Rowing Regatta on the Schuylkill River.

SW Championship Teams Begin Practice For '57 Fall Football

By UNITED PRESS

Defending champion Texas A&M, Cotton Bowl champion Texas Christian and last place Texas launched fall football practice Sunday.

Arkansas, SMU, Baylor and Rice get started today.

The Aggies had a raft of players missing or on the injured list when they reported to Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant.

The Cadets have lost four players for the season due to injuries on summer jobs. They are Harold Hees, Kim Gray, Lloyd Wasserman and Bill Webb.

A halfback, Ed Dudley, who letters in 1955, has dropped football to concentrate on other sports.

Center, End Absent

Two sophomores, center Larry Ward and end Harold King, did not show up for the light workout Sunday, and center Ed Neill, a sophomore, has transferred to Abilene Christian College.

Personnel changes on opening day included the moving of tackles Darrell Brown and Jim Stanley, both lettermen, to guard; Bill Darwin, center, to right tackle, and center Bill Cauthorn to end.

The two top centers at the moment are letterman John Glibert and sophomore Byron Caruthers, who was an end on the freshman team.

Sixty candidates, including 21 lettermen, reported to new Coach Darrell Royal at the University of Texas.

The Longhorns went through a rigorous two-hour session under a hot sun, drilling on numerous phases of play including punting, punt receiving, handoffs, dummy blocking, stance and pass defense.

One letterman, Carl Wylie of LaMarque, has decided not to play this season. That makes four men lost for the season in the past month. The others were Vince Matthews of Houston, knee injury, Danny Myers of Waco, kidney ailment, and Bill Carrico, Denton, who transferred to North Texas State.

Yanks' Newly Acquired Maglie Can't Pitch In '57 World Series

By NORMAN MILLER
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—Sal Maglie, newest member of the pennant-bound New York Yankees, regrets very much that he is ineligible to pitch in the World Series.

But the reason for that situation is a tribute to the respect the National League has for this 40-year-old curve ball artist.

Maglie, acquired by the Yankees Sunday for an estimated $30,00 and two minor league players to be delivered next spring, cannot pitch in the series—if the Yankees make it—because the deal was completed after the midnight Aug. 31 deadline.

The Dodgers would not let Maglie go before that time. The reason? National League prestige. If Maglie ever beat the National League entry in the series, other club owners and general managers would never forgive Vice President Buzy Bavasi of the Dodgers. The act of giving the dominering Yankees a pitcher of Maglie's craft, comptitiveness and experience would be regarded as the worst kind of double-cross to the rest of the National League.

So the Yankees have to be content with having Maglie for the last month of the regular season where he can lend his talents to Manager Casey Stengel's somewhat spotty pitching staff. And in the meantime, the crafty "Barber" can provide Stengel with the most authoritative "book" available on how to pitch to the Milwaukee Braves—or any other club that wins the National League pennant.

Stengel was the first to greet Maglie after he arrived at the Yankee clubhouse after a drive from Ebbets Field, where he had reported in the morning.

"We're very happy to get you," Stengel said, gripping Maglie's hand. "And that goes for all the players, the coaches, myself and the front office."

"When do I go to work, skipper?" Maglie replied with a grin.

"Don't worry, you'll get your chance," Stengel answered.

Hugh McElhenny Back In Running

Things are looking brighter for the San Francisco Forty-Niners now that Hugh (The King) McElhenny is running through rival defenses in his old-time form.

Hampered by injuries the past three years, the former University of Washington halfback believes "this may be my best year" in the National Football League "if I can stay all in one piece."

Hurryin' Hugh never looked better Sunday as he scored two touchdowns — one on a 54 - yard scamper in the final minute—to carry the Forty - Niners to a 21-17 victory over the Cleveland Browns. It was San Francisco's third straight exhibition game victory and the Browns second defeat in three pre-season warmups.

In two exhibition games Saturday night, the Los Angeles Rams walloped the Chicago Cardinals, 63-21, at Portland, Ore., and the Detroit Lions downed the Washington Redskins, 31-14, at Birmingham, Ala.

Miami Warriors Begin Season With Twelve 1956 Lettermen

Coach Steve Scott of the Miami Warriors may have a dream team for the 1957 season as he enters the six-man football district with 12 of his lettermen returning from last year.

Among the twelve lettermen are six former starters, which should compose a likely squad to take the district crown from presently reigning Mobeetie.

The only losses suffered from last year's team are Doyle Smith, due to a game injury, and Johnny Lopez, who was injured in a car accident. Lopez participated in the all - star game held in Abilene at the six-man team coaches clinic.

Coach Scott will field a team of six seniors, eight juniors, two sophomores and three freshman, which is sufficient to give happy thoughts to Miami fans for the next two years.

Outstanding at quarterback will be Toby Cunningham, backed up principally by Bill Breeding. At halfbacks will be Terry Gill, Sam Harris, Bill Lard anl Wiley Bailey.

Bolstering the line are Lewis Rogers, Jim Seitz, Calvin Crail, Arthur Turner and Charlie Christopher. Pepper Burnett and Wayne McLaughlin are set to fill the center position.

Miami finished third in the district in 1956, but Coach Scott expects to better that mark this year. He stated that he had good depth and experience, with an over - all weight average of 155 pounds.

The Warriors open the new season with Booker on Sept. 13, in a game Coach Scott stated should be one of the roughest of the season.

As a general district outlook, Scott stated that, without loss due to injuries, this could easily be the big year for Miami.

What Side For You

We have been asked again to provide a definition of socialism. It seems that even at this late date there is considerable confusion about the meaning of the term.

Socialism is an economic theory. It is not a government nor a religion. It is a theory which contends that all of us would have more of every material thing if only forced distribution could be universally secured.

Socialism does not concern itself with production. As one socialist puts it: "We already understand how to produce. What we have never solved is the proper way to distribute.

The essence of socialism, since it is based upon distributing wealth, is that private ownership of property must cease. So long as private property pertains, distribction will be uneven. This means that some persons will have more than others. The dream of the socialist is that this inequality relating to the world's goods and services, shall perish. The socialist theory imagines a world of plenty in which all goods and serviies are distributed to all men on the basis of need. The socialist dreams of production "for use" and not "for profit."

If we employ simple terms to describe this theory we could sum up the meaning of socialism by stating that it is grand theft. It provides that those who have, the hated capitalists, shall be forced to part with what they have so that others may share with them. This enforced sharing is brought about by stealing. The act of plundering can be defined as a forceful sharing.

Another way of stating it would be to say that the socialist idea calls for a world in which something for nothing is the rule. Behind this theory is a massive sophistry. It is that by virtue of a person's being alive, that person is deserving of food, clothing, shelter, security and a host of blessings. The idea is fairly reeking with illogic. But it is clothed in a disguise called "Christian virtue." It is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

The character of the wolf is quickly seen. The socialist presumes that everything needed for the abundant life of all is already in plentiful supply. There is enough for everyone, he insists, if only man's greed can be overcome. And since persuasion has been tried to cure man of this greed and persuasion has failed, we must finally resort to force so that man, despite his greed, will be compelled to be good.

If this sounds good to you, check your mental reflexes. The truth is that what is needful for the abundant life of all has yet to be produced. What all of us require in the way of food, clothing, shelter and the luxuries has never been produced. We are in a frantic race to bring into existence enough of everything so that starvation can vanish from the earth and so that an abundance can yet be found.

The only thing that can provide that abundance is work and more work. And the only way that work can be accomplished is to establish a system of rewards wherein those who do the most, receive the most in return for what they do. This may appear to provide for a basic inequality but it is merely justice, blind, impartial and exact.

If it is possible for a person to receive his necessities and even his luxuries without effort, then why should he make effort? This is not equality, but gigantic injustice and inequality. It is a method of discouraging the worker and rewarding the indolent. Further, it is a method of punishing the diligent. If you are to labor long and hard only to be robbed of the products of your labor, are you not a fool? Would it not be wiser for you to forego your efforts, since if you toil not, you can have all that you require without toil?

We mention above a system of rewards. What is that system?

It is called private ownership. The reward of labor is property which is owned by the laborer as a return for his labor. The harder he works and the more he produces, the more he will have. This is equality. And it is just.

The system is called by other names. It is capitalism. It is free enterprise. It is freedom. Freedom to work and to produce. Freedom to buy and sell. Freedom to save or to spend. Freedom to invest and to multiply one's efforts.

If we can produce enough, and are free, we have no need to worry about distribution. The distribution will occur as persons strive to satisfy their wants by putting into the stream of marketing, the products of their own labor, in exchange for the products of other men's labor.

This method does not admit of robbery. It is not socialism. It is Americanism.

Clearing House

Articles for this column are preferred to be 300 words or less in length. However, longer articles may be printed.

Those union organizers and other members who try to make it their business to get people to join the union by trying to "sell" them on the good of "unionism", should first try to "sell" this strange and unexplainable doctrine to the members themselves. If the policies and practices of the union are too unreasonable and unfair for even union members to explain, then how, unless by intimidation (calling names), deceit (telling new employees such things as that they must join within a certain time or lose their jobs, when this would be denied by their employer if he was asked), or by force (Union Shop and other "compulsory membership" contracts), can these organizers ever expect to get new members? All three of these methods are foreign to any organization to which it is worth belonging. The best reason for not joining ANY organization is that its organizers do use one or more of them.

It is very doubtful whether those union members, supporters, defenders, sympathizers, AND, those who remain silent, really deserve any sympathy when they are harmed, deprived, or otherwise inconvenieced by a strike which causes them to lose work and wages. Why should anyone listen to their complaints about and criticism of the union when they wait until THEY, PERSONALLY, are harmed by it with a strike, while ALL the time they willingly belong to, support, defend, or otherwise assist a group which does, or will if possible, use force against a third party (their employer) to cause him to fire them if they do not both belong to and help support this group?

Of course a few try to defend themselves with the poor excuse that they MUST belong to the union or lose their job. They seem unable to explain why they MUST keep ANY specific job, except that it offers them a higher wage than they could get elsewhere, and-or it allows them to stay with the kind of work they prefer.

When anyone will SELL his freedom for higher wages or better work, it makes others wonder whether he deserves any freedom, especially when, by selling HIS freedom, he is supporting and strengthening a group which is destroying that freedom of others which the later value more than higher wages or better work.

Conditions will never change as long as enough people support, defend, assist, or "go along with" them. If anyone criticizes or complains about certain conditions today, such as the use of strikes, they should ask themselves to what extent they unnecessarily assist in supporting them, such as by silence, if not by membership. If they assist at all, in order to benefit personally through better wages or work, do they think that they must not PAY for what they get — and that they probably deserve their "wage"?

Sincerely,
R. J. Smith

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. Holles

Government And Business

Since our government — local, state and federal — is growing so rapidly, an article in the August, "The Freeman" magazine under the heading of "Government and Business" should be very interesting to all who want a good government. The article was written by Dr. Emerson P. Schmidt, director of Economic Research, Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

He starts out by showing how the government is now taking one-third of our national income. He explains how doing this has retarded the accumulation of private capital.

Monetary Controls

Since so few people know the results of the government interfering with money and credit, what he has to say should be useful to all who want to know enough about it to better protect their own interest. He puts it this way:

"In the field of money and banking, we have had a steady growth of intervention in government.

"Criticisms of the alleged tight money policy have emanated from Washington almost on a daily basis in routine fashion. Here there exists a basic organized drive against the free market system, and few see the implication for a free economy. There is good reason to believe that a free economy and, indeed, human freedom are impossible unless there is also a flexible money market. This is an idea almost never discussed in the economic literature or the popular press.

"If the interest rate is driven downward by artificial forces, that drives the demand for capital ever upward and generates pressures for government intervention on a geometric scale.

"Lord Keynes during the depression of the 1930's wanted to drive the interest rate to zero— 'the euthanasia of the "rentier" class. He has had many followers in Washington. They are regimenters and totalitarians — whether consciously or not. To make the point clear: Interest - free perpetual loans, for example, would be the equivalent of making capital a free gift. When things are free, there is no possible limit to the demand for them.

"Similarly, government guarantees of loans and easier and easier borrowing arrangements, with interest rates forcibly depressed below market levels by law or by fiscal and monetary policy as prior to March 1951, likewise drive the demand for capital through the roof. This puts the economy under constant inflationary pressures and creates political pressures for direct government lending, direct controls, and regimentation. It must finally lead to capital investment rationing, compulsory saving, price and wage controls, profit controls, the allocation of labor to specific assignments — a regimented economy. In 1956, the President's Economic Report urged that the Executive and the Congress study the question of direct control of installment credit. Such controls would further reduce human freedom and create more 'social overhead' in the form of laws, regulations, policing, bureaus — on and on.

"This set of ideas on economic interrelationships has been inadequately discussed in the United States by those who favor human freedom and a free economy.

"Opinion polls have found that for more than a decade a vast majority of persons consistently have said 'Yes' when asked: 'Do you favor price controls?' What they actually want is lower or reasonable prices. They see or understand only one way to get such prices, namely, price control. And interest is the price of money.

"Unless more individuals in whom the people have confidence come to understand the anatomy of money, credit, commercial and central banking, the function of a flexible interest rate, we may drift by default into the regimentation and controls which have gripped other nations.

"C. Canby Balderston, vice - chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, made it clear that every attempt to create a preferred position for any group concentrates, in a full employment economy, the stringencies on the balance of the economy that much more fiercely. He put it this way: .

"The alternative to free markets is to resort to government subsidies, guarantees, and tax benefits. These may shelter preferred groups and meet apparent social needs, but we must not forget that each time we use them we subtract from the credit, materials, and labor available to others who must rely upon the free market. The greater the amount of special shelter provided by government, the more difficult becomes the situation of those not so protected. In a free society, it is axiomatic that not everyone can be sheltered. It is understandable, therefore, that free markets should be looked upon as the central feature of our private enterprise system."

Union Shop Forces Abhorrent Conditions

VICTIMS OF THE UNION SHOP

By Maurice R. Franks

In my last article, I pointed out that the selfish and racketeer labor leaders are the principal beneficiaries of compulsory unionism, with an occasional unscrupulous, avaricious employer benefitting at the expense of his employees. However, there are employers who are compelled by economic circumstances to sign a union-shop contract in lieu of experiencing a strike of such devastating proportions as to threaten the very existence of a business. That present labor laws allow a strike to be called to enforce a union's demand for compulsory unionism presents many an honorable employer with a dilemma that can be resolved only by acccepting for his employes a condition his deepest nature abhors.

Consider such a dilemma: To have a strike on such an issue, especially if the employer in point is experiencing stiff business competition, would throw his workers out of their immediate livelihood and would cut off his stockholders from the profits they were counting on when they invested in his business. The employer in point owes a moral obligation — and a large one — to both his workers and his stockholders. And that obligation weighs heavily on his mind as he looks over and balances the full schedule of union demands. He sees that to stand firm on the union-shop issue could mean a long-protracted shutdown of his plant and an indefinitely continuing boycott of his products in a highly competitive market even if he were somehow to "win" the strike and resume some measure of production.

That's how this union - shop Frankenstein got going and pumped itself up to the point where it can boast inclusion in 70 per cent of union - management contracts. It had its pirates and promoters, its suckers and sorrowful servants. It still has them, one and all. And out of their combined contributions a wretched pattern took shape — a pattern the labor leaders now point to with academic pride, as they seek to grab the remaining 30 percent.

There are the workers who have lost their American pride and independence, along with the very democracy that once made their unions their own. There are the workers who see their hard-earned money fattening the estates of criminal hierarchies. There are the workers who learn how their hard-earned money is used to "educate" them away from the very institutions that people of Alabama could have put to right good use for their own needs that $735 million spent for foreign aid during the past twelve years in helping relieve their steadily increasing local tax burdens. This same illustration, of of course, could be applied to each state in the Union.

Perhaps the solution of this would be to place the appropriation authority in the hands of the various state legislatures! Who is to believe that legislature of Alabama would have appropriated $735 million for foreign aid during the past twelve years if this had been the case? Who is to believe the legislature would appropriate $35 million for that purpose this year?

Why, then, are the Congressmen from the various states so docile about appropriating their constituents' hard earned tax dollars for this purpose? Do they also think it comes from the Federal Government and not from the taxpayers of the various states? We know better; they just don't get enough complaints from their constituents about it, so they keep on appropriating the money

It is this very obscurity about the source of federal funds, however, that undoubtedly is the cause of much of our large and wasteful Federal Government spending. Just the other day we noticed a newspaper item to the effect that a local chamber of commerce was quite exultant over getting a certain project approved by the Federal Government, and both the chamber of commerce and the newspaper were exuberantly pointing out that three-fourths of the funds required were being furnished by the Federal Government. Where do they think the Federal Government got the funds?

The Doctor Says

By Edwin J. Jordan, M. D.

All of the information which I have seen indicates that the best food for a new-born infant is the mother's milk. It's a mistake for a mother not to nurse her infant unless she's physically unable.

I do not mean to imply that infants cannot be successfully bottle fed, since artificial feeding of this type has been carried out satisfactorily many times.

It is clear, however, that the breast fed usually gain more weight and are healthier than the bottle fed.

The food needs of infants are important both from the standpoint of quality and quantity. Modern infant care includes frequent weighing during the first few months. Any failure to gain weight because of insufficient intake is thus discovered quickly and remedial steps can be taken.

Quality means what kinds of food are given. The starch, fat, protein and mineral needs are excellently supplied in mother's milk. Even this, however, is frequently supplemented by giving an infant some orange juice and cod liver oil which supply important vitamins. In the artificially fed children, such additional substances are even more necessary.

Cow's milk, which forms the basis of most artificial feeding formulas, differs chemically from human milk. It contains a larger amount of protein, a smaller amount of sugar. There are some less important differences.

When artificial feedings are necessary, however, cow's milk with sugar added serves as the basis of the formula. Protein in the form of strained meats has been reported valuable for infants in preventing anemia.

Milk continues to make up a large part of the food during the first year of life. But pureed vegetables, mashed bananas, egg yolk and perhaps other foods are usually added to the diet during this period.

At no other time of life is growth so rapid as during the first year. Consequently, at no other time is it so important to maintain a satisfactory diet all the time.

The greatest gain in weight is during the first six months when the average infant doubles its birth weight. During the second half of the first year, the weight gain slows down and weaning or removal from bottle feeding is generally completed.

It seems to me that the need of an infant for a satisfactory diet is well illustrated by the following:

What Do International Set Take Vacations From?

By HENRY McLEMORE

ROME — When I read that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor had gone to Baden-Baden for a holiday, I thought for a moment of hitch-hiking back to Germany and trying to get the answer to something that has long puzzled me.

Ever since I became aware of the International Set, and adopted Miss Elsa Maxwell as my pin-up girl, its members and their holidays have been a source of wonderment to me.

One moment they'll be stretched out on the beach at Cannes and the next they'll announce they are off for a holiday in Palm Beach or St. Moritz.

I don't get it!

For one thing, when you're stretched out on a beach you're on a holiday, and it doesn't make bat sense to say you need another one. How can the Duke and Duchess have it any easier at Baden Baden than they do everywhere else? And I'll bet you that they will not have been at Baden-Baden a week before they have made plans to go on a holiday to a plantation in Georgia, or join friends for a rest on a yacht.

I don't mean to pick on the Duke and Duchess. They're not the only ones who find life unbearable under an umbrella by a pool, or become exhausted from lolling on a villa verandah and have to move on to another vacation spot. Aly Khan is just the same, and so are all those Greek shipping tycoons whose names look and sound as if they had been pulled out of a hat. Garbo comes to mind, too. She takes fifteen or twenty holidays a year, and spends what little time she has in between looking for new and more ideal places to rest.

Rest from what? That's the real puzzler.

Not rest from resting, surely. People aren't built that way. Even a duke or a billionaire doesn't get run down from lying flat on his back, eyes shaded from the sun. That's a physical impossibility.

The International Set doesn't have to rest from work. Not that its members have anything against work. In fact, one of their leading spokesmen, Porfirio Rubirosa, came out strongly for work and said that the only reason he and his colleagues didn't do any was due to the regretable fact that they didn't have the time.

If I were in Baden-Baden and found myself next to the Duke in a hot mud bath, I think I'd make a suggestion to him.

"Duke," I'd say, "why don't you take your next holiday in a business office? It would do you good and give you a complete change. Hire some rooms, engage a stenographer, install some telephones, and get down in the morning at nine and stay until five, with only a short break for lunch at a nearby durg counter.

"At the end of eleven and a half months of this you'd really be ready for a holiday. You'd pack the Duchess in the car and head for the hills or the seashore and, once you got unpacked, a team of horses couldn't get you to move to another spot."

At least that's what I would plan to say. What I really would say, probably, is, "Your Highness, you need a little mud between your shoulder blades. May I put it on for you?"

Judge Tells Of Fears Of Communist Tactics

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Senators, "the public" and one former justice of the Supreme Court, James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, have questioned the professional and tempermental fitness of members of the Supreme Court and other federal courts.

Judge Harold R. Medina, of the Court of Appeals in New York, clearly nominates himself for serious public scrutiny. In gratuitous, unoffical speeches outside his court, Medina has widely ballyhood his physical fears during his most notable exploit, the trial of the eleven so-called top Communists. He has thus aroused a difference of opinion in the minds of lawyers and some of his brethren on the bench. He permitted the security authorities to surround him with armed "protection." Tom Dewey, on the other hand, when he was District Attorney of New York County, rejected protection even for his small children lest the underworld think he was afraid.

Medina's speech to the Economic Club of Detroit on April 18, 1955, has been printed and Medina, himself, has distributed copies to other federal judges, inviting them to draw their own personal conclusions. I got my copy from one of those judges.

Medina made the astounding admission that "I really didn't know what a Communist was."

"I thought of them as a sort of rough-necks," he said, "who wanted to divide up our property and have a good time of it, but that was about all."

Yet this man had been acclaimed as a scholar, and whosoever shows him contempt in his court for this ignorance may be sent to prison.

"I won't go into a long palaver about the threats to shoot me and all that sort of business," he continued. ". . . They never bothered me at all." (Nobody did shoot at him, and there is no evidence that anyone even tried to.)

"This went on for a long time," Medina continued, ". . . and the Deputy Police Commissioner came around and said they were going to give me some protection and I said: 'Well, you take your protection and go along with it. There is no use dramatizing this thing and making it look like something big, and all this and that. Just forget about it.' Well, the next day, he was back again and he said, 'Now, Judge, you know your business, don't you'?

"I said, 'Well, I know a little about it.'

"He said, 'Well, we know our business and you're going to get the protection and we don't want any back talk.' Well, I understand that kind of talk all right and so from that time on, the FBI men, the city detectives, the state troopers — well, at first it was kind of exciting. We rushed out to our country place Friday afternoons with a state trooper ahead and an FBI car behind, and the sirens going. But I noticed when they got the people out of the way, they didn't know there was anybody behind the state trooper, you know, and boy, those fellows would cut right back in and I pretty nearly got picked off two or three times. So I had to keep about 10 or 15 feet behind this trooper's car, going about 65 or 70 miles an hour. And every old shoe, old nail, pebble or whatnot in the road got thrown up on my windshield and by the time the trial was over, I had to get a new windshield — could't see through the darned thing.

"But seriously it is a pain in the neck to have somebody watching you all the time. It sounds like exciting fun, but every time you go to brush your teeth, somebody is watching to see if you make out all right. And they are always pulling down the shades and running around. I guess it didn't do my wife much good."

Medina revealed horror lest Communist pickets drive him to plunge out a high window. These were his words to the Economic Club::

"I guess the first thing they tried on me there — remember how Forrestal jumped out of that window in that hospital? Well, about a month after that," pickets began carrying signs, "Medina will fall like Forrestal." Anonymous persons phoned him, "Jump, Jump. You've got to jump."

"You would be going along in the car and you would hear those quacks calling out. That was the only thing that really worked on me. It seems ever since I was a child, I had been afraid of height. I had this awful feeling of wanting to jump . . . it was years before I got over what they did to me . . . when I was going to bed, Mrs. Medina would put those big windows up. . I would say, 'Eth, please put those down!' She couldn't believe I really meant it . . . I tell you those fellows are demons. Positively demons. If you remember how many times in Russian history, people have jumped out windows —." He mentioned "Masaryk of Czechoslovakia" and the Russian schoolteacher who jumped out the windows of the Soviet consulate in New York.

"I used to think they pushed people out the window," Medina said. "But you don't need to do that. When they get working on you, they know the way how to do, you jump out by yourself. You don't need to be pushed."

Production Of Steel Hits Record

CLEVELAND (UP) — The nations mills produced a total 2,112,000 net tons of steel last week, pushing the all-time record for first eight months of any year to 78.6 million tons.

The figure represented a 6.2 million-ton increase over the corresponding period for 1956, according to Steel magazine.

Last week's yield—82.5 per cent of rated industrial capacity—continued the steady advance of three consecutive weeks and prompted hopes among producers that output would continue uphill.

The weekly magazine predicted "significant improvement" in steel demand would begin during the last quarter among producers of machine tools, foundry equipment and industrial furnaces.

Steel said the tool builders are most optimistic because of reports about three "major" automotive projects, tooling for which would have to be ordered this fall.

Foundries will probably increase buying, Steel predicted, because of renewed demands for castings from railroad car builders and giants among the automotive and appliance producers.

The metalworking weekly also pointed with encouragement to July machine tool orders, which climbed to their highest point since March, amounting to $55,850,000. Also, order cancellations were reported at their lowest level in 21 months, totaling $3,500,000.

Completion of inventory reduction and an upturn in demand from the automotive industry indicate that producers will be virtually assured of a pickup in activity, Steel said.

Users last week began paying a new high price for steel because of a 7 per cent boost in freight charges. Also, Kaiser Steel Corp., of Oakland, Calif., advanced prices $1 per ton on some products even though it raised in a steady line with the rest of the industry in July.

However, Steel cautiously pointed again the lone discouraging trend set by scrap prices, which are often considered the bellweather of steel production. For the second consecutive week, Steel's price composite on steelmaking scrap declined. In the week ended Aug. 28, the composite was $52.17 a gross ton, representing a drop of $1.33 from the preceding week.
