Key to move headquarters to Midland

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

At the end of August, Midland will become the official corporate headquarters for Key Energy Services. Francis Johns, chairman of the board, made the announcement Tuesday.

Corporate headquarters are currently located in East Brunswick, N.J.

Key Energy Services, which operates in every producing region of the United States, has 9,000 employees, operates 1,400 well service rigs and has 75 drilling rigs at 135 locations nationwide.

Johns said no personnel will be involved in the move, only some corporate functions such as the filing of the corporate earnings reports and the designation of Midland as official corporate headquarters. He said the move was the culmination of a long process in which more of the corporate functions gravitated toward Midland. Two years ago the Midland office had 20 employees; today it has 70 and that number is expected to increase as Key expands operations and services.

Johns said most of the 50 employees who have moved to Midland in the past two years have come from Houston, California and other locations outside the Permian Basin.

"We looked at a number of options for our corporate headquarters, including Dallas, Houston and Denver, but decided that Midland made the most sense," Johns said.

He said the fact Midland has a large pool of talented and experienced workers and was an hour and half by plane to 70 percent of Key's working rigs made it a very attractive choice.

"We have also found that the fact that our employees are only two to five minutes from home makes them much more productive. I am an hour and a half from home to my office in New Jersey," he added.

Johns said he would continue to live in New Jersey but would be in Midland much more.

Mr. Perry goes to Odessa

Governor says education initiative 'most important' role of Legislature

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Texas Gov. Rick Perry declared in Odessa on Tuesday "the most important issue" embraced by the 77th session of the Texas Legislature was the $295.3 million Texas Grant Program to provide college scholarships for young Texans.

Tim Fischer
Reporter-Telegram

Gov. Perry talks to a packed room Tuesday during his press conference. Perry is on a short tour of West Texas talking about the last legislative session.

"The dream of a college education became more than just a dream," Perry, 51, said at Odessa College to an applauding audience. "It's going to be a reality for 65,000 young Texans" who otherwise could not afford the price of college tuition and related expenses.

In his Jan. 27 State of the State Address, Perry had said Texans through their legislators "must invest in our future."

"We don't want your future to be limited because your finances are limited," Perry told his enthusiastic audience in the OC student union building.

The program is keyed to that "group of young men and women who otherwise would just be off to the work force without being able to get the training that they need for those technology-driven jobs of the 21st century," Perry said. "We are going to help make that a reality."

Council elects Morgan as new mayor pro-tem

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

District 1 Councilwoman LuAnn Morgan was unanimously elected mayor pro-tem by the City Council Tuesday.

Historically, the role of mayor pro-tem has been part ceremonial and symbolic. Ms. Morgan's selection, however, might be more than that. She backed Midland Mayor Mike Canon in the most recent election, shares a number of political philosophies with Canon, can provide a similar voice when the often busy Canon is unavailable and could be an invaluable resource for Canon, who leads a short-handed and relatively inexperienced Council.

Ms. Morgan was one of the three potential candidates for the job. At-large Councilman Bill Dingus and District 2 Councilman James Bradford were the others. All three have been on the Council for just more than one year.

The choice for mayor pro-tem was maybe more obvious after several recent turns of events. Canon defeated Dingus, among others, in the May 5 mayoral election. During the campaign, Canon was critical of Dingus' stance concerning not taking monies from the water and sewer funds and using

TAAS scores up, down for area elementary schools

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

Large gaps between high and low scores for local elementary schools topped discussion of the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills during Tuesday's Midland Independent School District board of trustees meeting.

While the percent of students passing was higher than last year's in almost every section, when it came to comparing elementary schools to other elementaries in the district the results were startling.

Joe Cummins, MISD's executive director of administrative services, evaluation and planning, presented the results to the board. He said the elementary level results were dealing with relatively small groups of students, particularly when it came to ranking the individual schools.

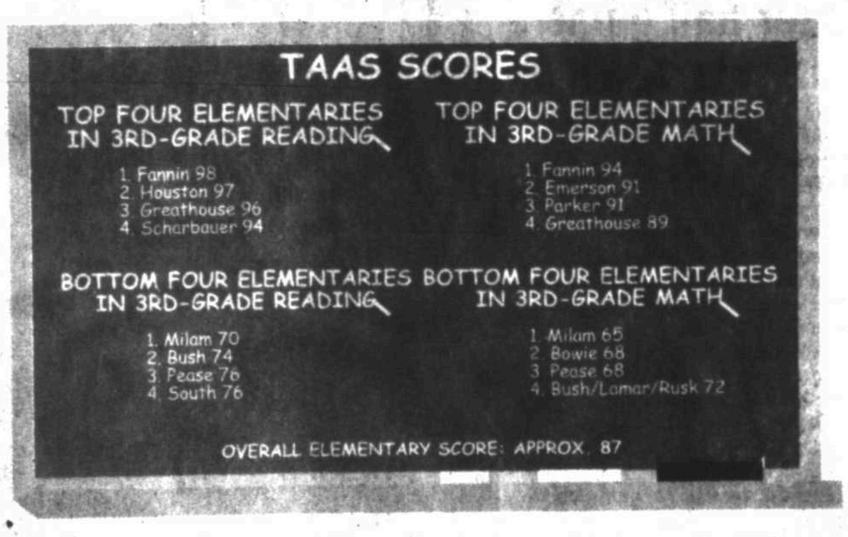

"Typically when you get to grade levels, you're dealing with small numbers of students, and this may create different swings," he said. "Changes in scores from year to year are what we look at to judge the program's effectiveness."

In third grade reading, 98 percent of Fannin Elementary students scored at or above the passing level. The lowest-scoring school in this category was Milam with 70 percent. In third grade math, Fannin again received the highest district scores with 94 percent, and again, Milam was in last place with a score of 68.

In fourth grade reading, Greathouse Elementary got 99 percent compared to 38 percent at Washington Elementary. Washington scored slightly better in math, with 53 percent, compared to 100 percent of Greathouse fourth-graders achieving passing scores.

Fifth grade reading scores showed similar gaps, like 100 percent of passing scores at Emerson Elementary and three schools with scores of 98 percent at Fannin, Greathouse and Houston — compared to 48 percent at South Elementary. Four schools (Emerson, Fannin, Greathouse and Houston) had 100 per-

Less sex, more birth control keep teen pregnancy falling

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The teen pregnancy rate hit a record low in 1997, with births falling fast and abortions falling even faster.

Experts credit long-lasting birth control, programs that encourage teens to postpone sex and a strong economy that gives them better opportunities.

In 1997, about 9.4 percent of all girls ages 15 to 19 became pregnant — a total of 872,000 pregnancies, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Tuesday. Fifty-five percent gave birth, 29 percent had abortions and the rest miscarried.

The teen pregnancy rate fell by 4.4 percent between 1996 and 1997, the most recent year for which data is available, continuing a trend that has marched through the 1990s.

Pregnancy rates are significantly higher in low-income communities, and black and Hispanic girls are more than twice as likely to get pregnant as white girls are. Still, the rates are falling among all races.

Most of the teen pregnancies are among 18- and 19-year-olds, though some 6.4 percent of girls ages 15 to 17 were pregnant in 1997. That's down 21 percent since the peak in 1990.

Overall, the teen pregnancy rate fell 19 percent in 1997 from its peak in 1991, and was the lowest since 1976, when the government began keeping records. The abortion rate fell by nearly a third since 1990, also reaching a record low.

The teen pregnancy rate is derived by combining the number of teens who give birth with estimates for abortion and miscarriage rates. Because data on abortion are difficult to collect, the statistics are several years old by the time they are released.

Teen-agers — particularly those who are young and unmarried — are rarely equipped emotionally or financially for parenthood, and there's near universal agreement that reducing their pregnancy rates is among the most positive social trends of the 1990s.

"We must continue to build on this success, for there is more we can do," said Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson, promising to seek more money for abstinence education.

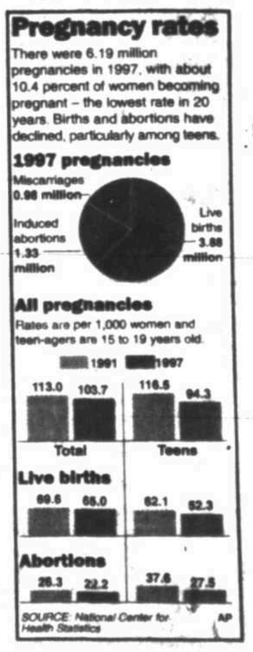

Federal surveys show that during the 1990s, teens were more likely to use birth control and less likely to have sex. In 1995, 51 percent of teen girls said they'd had sex, down from 55 percent in 1990; among boys, it dropped from 60 to 55 percent between 1988 and 1995.

And the sharp drop in the abortion rate suggests that most of the pregnancies being avoided were unwanted.

But it's much harder to figure out why teens decide against having sex or for using birth control in the first place.

"That is almost wholly up to spec-

Senate turns down education-vouchers program

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate rejected a Republican effort on Tuesday to establish a limited program allowing low-income students to use federal money for private school tuition.

The vote was 58-41 and came as leaders in both parties signaled a desire to wrap up work on President Bush's high-profile education legislation within the next few days.

At the same time, Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., announced that Democrats would use their new leverage as the majority party to press the White House to increase its commitment of federal funds for public education.

"Reform is impossible without resources," Daschle said in his first public challenge to Bush since becoming majority leader last week. "And we will continue to press for resources" when the House and Senate begin compromise talks. He said he had told the president last week "it was not our desire to complete this work until we have some understanding about the degree of resources that will be made available."

Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., advanced the effort to give low-income students in failing schools funds to apply toward the public or private school of their choice.

By whatever name, he said, "Choice, portability, vouchers to use the pejorative term, it's all about one thing: giving America's children the opportunity to learn. And it's especially about low-income children locked in the inner city whose only opportunity is to learn."

But Democrats argued the proposal was fraught with constitutional problems and would siphon off funds — already in short supply — that are needed in the public schools.

"The idea that this is going to open the door to parents whose children are in failing schools and want a way out is raising false hopes," argued Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "Before we have crocodile tears all over the floor about leaving no children behind, we're already leaving children behind," he said. He contended that Bush's budget proposals fall far short of full funding for the government's program of assistance to schools with low-income populations.

Overall, Bush's legislation would require states to administer annual math and reading tests to students in grades three through eight. Schools with low test scores would receive additional aid, but if a school failed to show enough progress after two years, low-income students would be free to transfer to another public school. After three years, the same students would be permitted to use federal funds for tutoring or transportation to another public school, but not for private school tuition.

All schools would receive some additional flexibility in their use of federal funds as part of the effort to improve.

But the legislation also would create a pilot program in which seven states and 25 school districts could receive far greater flexibility in their allocation of federal funds, a key demand of the White House and Republicans in bargaining with Democrats.

Gregg and other Republicans sought a similar approach with vouchers — a demonstration program in which a limited number of low-income students in failing schools would become eligible for federal grants they could use for private school tuition. The amendment would have created programs in up to 10 cities and three states, and Gregg argued that Democrats should readily agree to the proposal if they believed claims that parents would not want to make use of the opportunity.

Democrats argued otherwise. "Vouchers undermine our public schools. Vouchers leave children behind. Vouchers mean less accountability and vouchers are a distraction from the hard but essential work of ensuring all public schools are good schools," said Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash.

The amendment drew the support of 38 Republicans and three Democrats. There were 46 Democrats, 11 Republicans and one independent opposed.

In the political dynamic of the education bill, approval of the amendment would likely have complicated White House efforts to win passage of the overall bill. Democrats led by Kennedy negotiated an agreement with the White House on a basic framework for overhauling the federal system of aid to education, and have generally worked together to fend off major changes.

Former principal to be held without bond in sex case

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — A judge denied bond Tuesday to a former Baptist school principal accused of having sex with an 11-year-old girl during a school camping expedition and a cross-country trip.

William A. "Andy" Beith, 29, has been in custody since being arrested May 1 when police spotted him and the girl in a vehicle near the Las Vegas Strip.

Beith was charged last week by a federal grand jury with two counts of crossing state lines with intent to engage in a sexual act with a person under age 12. If convicted, he faces up to life in prison on each count.

Beith allegedly had sex with the girl in April during a Liberty Baptist Academy camping trip to Michigan. The girl's parents told reporters last month that they had complained to authorities that Beith became sexually involved with the girl that week.

Beith also allegedly had sex with the girl while they were on the run through 11 states, a trip that ended in Las Vegas. He was fired from the school after the two disappeared.

A hearing is scheduled July 3 to decide whether the girl should remain in state custody. She has been kept from her parents except for supervised visits since she complained last month that she had been sexually abused earlier.

Lake County Prosecutor Bernard A. Carter said his office is conducting an independent criminal investigation focusing on the girl's father. The father denies sexually abusing her.

Youths accused of beating child after ball game

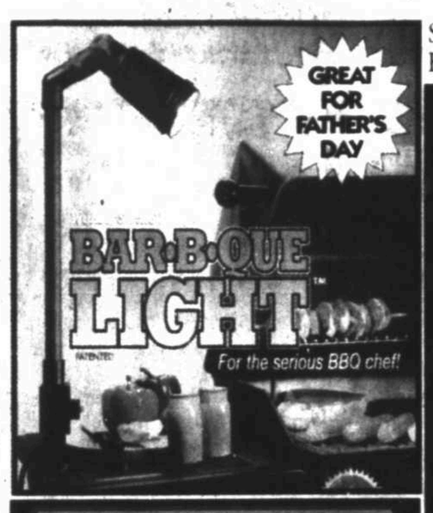

HADDON HEIGHTS, N.J. (AP) — Two boys ages 9 and 10 were accused of beating another child with bats after their team lost a pickup baseball game to his.

The boys, whose names were not released, were charged as juvenile offenders with aggravated assault in the May 31 incident and released to their parents. The 9-year-old victim suffered a concussion, police said.

Authorities said the winning team apparently beat the losing one by a lopsided score.

Some players later returned to the area to play basketball, and the victim said that following that game the two boys approached him from behind and hit him with an aluminum bat and a plastic bat. He said the youths also punched and kicked him.

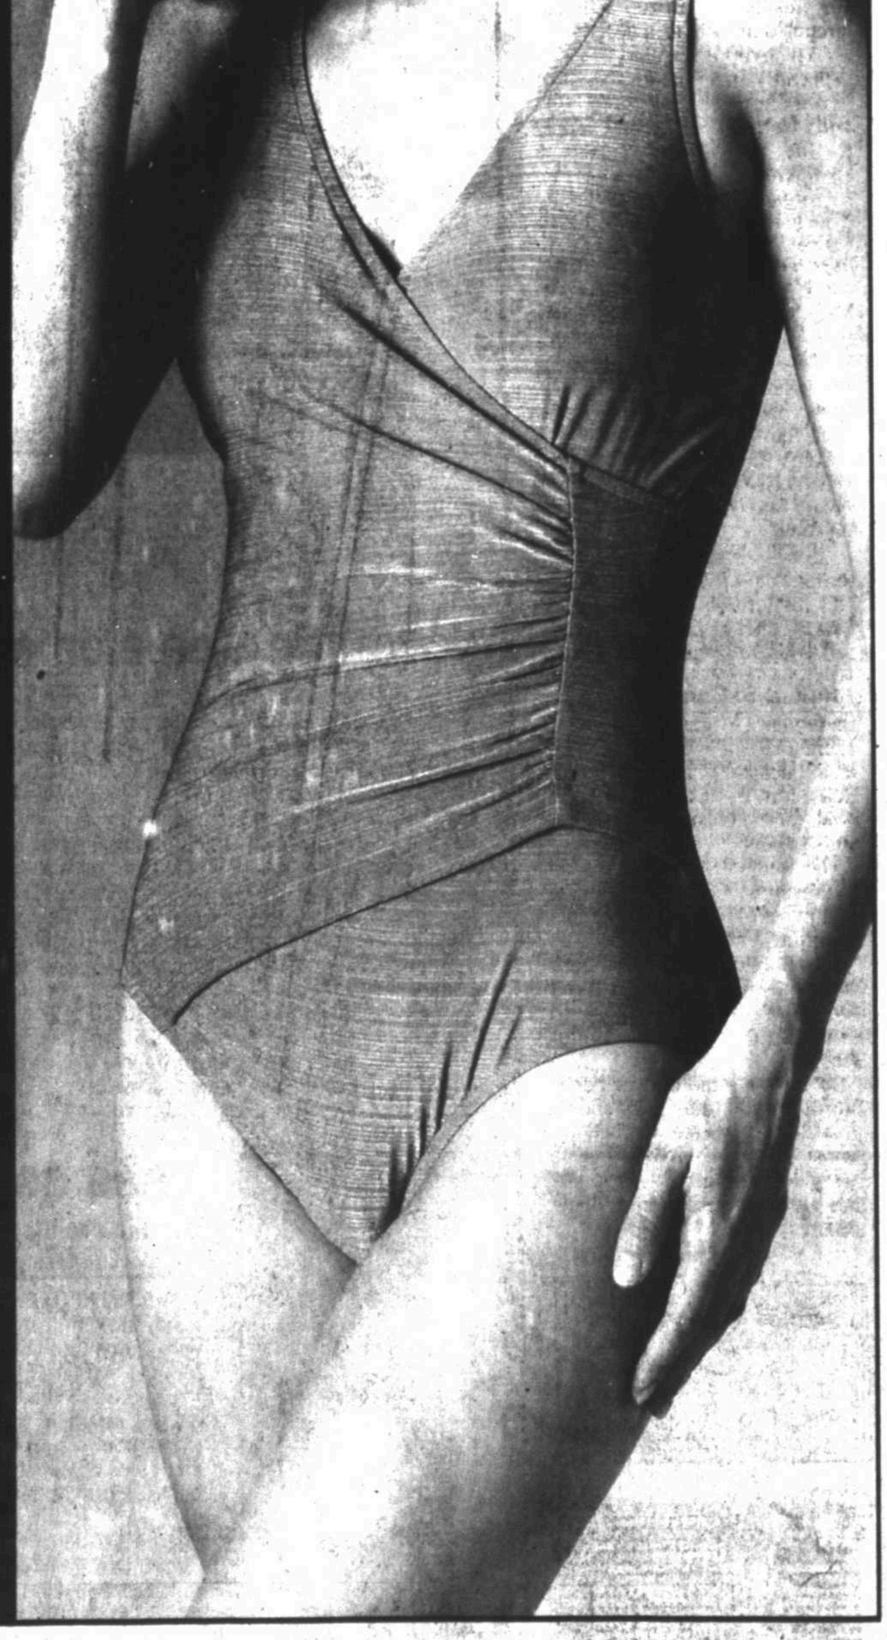

A countercomplaint was later filed on behalf of one of the defendants. It claimed the alleged victim kicked and punched him.

GOP lawmaker ready to support Democrats on patients' bill of rights

By Anjetta McQueen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Patients' bill of rights legislation gained momentum Tuesday with a key House Republican on the verge of endorsing a Democrat-backed bill.

Rep. Charlie Norwood, R-Ga., planned to announce today that he would sign on to a bill that mirrors Senate Democrats' plan and is opposed by President Bush, said a source familiar with Norwood's discussions with the White House.

Norwood had been negotiating with the White House for a compromise on the extent of lawsuits that patients should be allowed to file against their HMOs. Norwood, a dentist by training, grew frustrated with White House resistance to allowing patients to pursue claims in state courts, the source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Norwood announced late Tuesday that he would hold a news conference today on the issue with fellow Republicans. Among those appearing with him is Greg Ganske of Iowa, who has already said he would support a House version of the Democrats' bill.

In recent months, Norwood had hoped to reach a compromise with conservatives wary of potentially large jury awards against insurance companies — and against the businesses that offer their workers health plans.

Norwood was the author of an expansive patients' rights bill that passed the House two years ago with support of 68 Republican colleagues. On Tuesday, Norwood was telling such supporters of his planned announcement.

"Everyone in Congress knows his leadership has made a huge difference on the issue," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., a cosponsor of the plan that Senate Democrats plan to introduce. "His courageous action makes it less likely that President Bush will dare to veto this sensible bill."

Senate Democrats hoped to start work as early as Thursday on the sweeping plan, which would provide new rules for what health maintenance organizations must cover and new rights for patients to sue in state or federal courts if they are denied needed care.

"This is a critical piece of legislation, and after five years it's long overdue," Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle said Tuesday.

Leaders contend they have enough supporters to ward off attempts by conservative lawmakers to delay or kill the proposal.

The Senate bill's Republican cosponsor welcomed Norwood's support but expressed a willingness to bridge gaps with the White House.

"The last thing I want to have is a bill that the president would veto on this issue," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who had not talked to Norwood on Tuesday but said he was aware of his plan to sign on to the Democratic bill.

The Bush administration supports new rules for what HMOs must cover, such as reasonable trips to the emergency room. But the White House wants to restrict lawsuits to federal courts and limit damages injured parties could collect.

President Bush worries that lawsuits could scare insurers into raising premiums or abandoning workers altogether.

Business executives who agree with Bush injected the nation's 43 million uninsured Americans into the debate Tuesday. They started running newspaper ads and television spots, many trying to pressure moderate Democrats into abandoning their leaders on the issue.

"Something's wrong when a bill that should protect the people of Georgia may actually hurt," says one print ad that claims that 35,000 Georgians would lose their insurance. The ad asks voters to call Zell Miller and Max Cleland, a pair of Senate Democrats who could vote for the patients' rights bill.

"Voters understand that you can't sue your way to better health care," said Dan Danner, chairman of the Health Benefits Coalition, which represents 3 million employers who pay for their employees' health coverage.

The business groups' message could hit home for some policymakers, who are grappling with how to help 43 million Americans afford health coverage.

Concern is rising with reports that more employers, the most common providers of health insurance, are cutting back on the benefit as the economy slows.

"Making employer-sponsored health coverage more affordable and more accessible makes the most sense," said Mary Grealy, president of the Health Care Leadership Council. The health executives group would rather see Congress focus on tax credits to help the uninsured.

Their ad campaign calls for Congress to help families pay for policies, which could cost at least $2,000 a year for a family of three.

Bozo the clown tapes last show after 40 years

CHICAGO (AP) — Bozo has left the building.

The clown with the bright red hair and members of the cast of what was once one of the most popular shows in television history — and the longest running locally produced Bozo program in the country — taped their final show Tuesday in front of about 200 people at a WGN-TV studio.

"Bozo: 40 Years of Fun," will be aired July 14.

Adults brought their children to see firsthand a show that was a big part of their own childhood, and recounted the days when the wait for tickets to "Bozo's Circus" stretched as long as a decade.

"To anybody 20 years or older, especially in Chicago, the show was a big part of our lives," said Billy Corgan, formerly the leader of the rock group Smashing Pumpkins.

Corgan was such a fan that he put a group together to sing a song for the show, Bob Dylan's "Forever Young."

Geffree Dudley brought his wife, Carla, and their two young sons, to be in the final audience.

"This show was just pure, good fun," said Dudley. "I'm sorry there's not more for them (his children) like it around today."

Carol Bell, the widow of Bob Bell, WGN's original Bozo, said having fun was the whole point of the show.

"Bob's thing was 'I'm not going to teach them their ABC's, I'm just going to make them laugh,'" she said.

The last show included a lot of the kind of fun children enjoyed during the show's 40-year run. There was the grand prize game, where a kid throws balls in a line of six buckets. There were magic tricks, corny jokes and even a pie in the face for a member of Corgan's band.

The audience included Alan Livingston, who created Bozo at Capitol Records for a children's record in 1946.

"It will probably be the thing I will be most remembered for," said Livingston, who went on to become president of Capitol Records.

By the time the cast gathered Tuesday night, the 9,500 shows broadcast had been watched by almost 2 million "boys and girls, moms and dads" in the studio audience and countless more in their homes.

MOVE: Chamber pleased with Key's choice

(From 1A)

Dennis Clayton, economic development manager with the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said after several years of major companies leaving Midland to relocate to Dallas or Houston, Key's decision brings a psychological boost not only to the Permian Basin oil industry but to the morale and confidence of Midlanders.

"We're always thrilled that in the process of mergers and consolidations, a company like Key that has a base in Midland finds it efficient to locate their headquarters here," Clayton said. "Key is a major employer and a major part of our economy."

In conjunction with the designation of Midland as official company headquarters, Johns said Key would invest $30 million to $35 million over the next five years in the construction of a satellite communications system that will connect the corporate office to every Key rig in the United States. John Hood, formerly with ARCO Permian, has become the new information technology officer for Key and will implement the system.

The board chairman said Key was developing a corporate culture to make the well servicing industry attractive to oil industry executives, and being in Midland was part of the strategy and part of the success.

NEW: Canon states work with Morgan factor in choice

(From 1A)

it as an incentive to bring Cingular Wireless to Midland.

Subsequently, Councilman Bradford was arrested for DWI in late April. Although Bradford, the Council's eldest member, maintains his innocence, the timing might not have been right.

Canon, though, didn't state either was a factor for the Council's selection.

And since District 4 Councilman Berry Simpson has already held the pro-tem seat, those three were next in line. The pro-tem seat is held by a councilman for one year and moves based on seniority. Simpson has plenty of experience to offer the Council because his five-plus years service is more than the rest of the Council combined. However, he will have to find other avenues to demonstrate that leadership.

The sixth member of the Council is District 3 Councilman Scott Dufford, who just kicked off his first term.

After Tuesday's meeting, Canon stated his previous work with Ms. Morgan was a big factor. They have seen eye to eye on many issues in the past. Again, when Ms. Morgan opted not to run for the mayor's seat this past May, she immediately threw her support behind Canon.

"She did support me and I was glad to provide her the opportunity," Canon said.

Canon also remarked — and Ms. Morgan confirmed — that the councilwoman actively had sought the pro-tem seat.

"It will be a great experience," Ms. Morgan said. "I was interested in running for mayor, but with my eldest son going to college, the timing wasn't good. This is the next best thing. It will be a perfect opportunity.

"It will be some good experience, then someday when I do run, I will have some experience."

CANON HOSPITALIZED: Midland Mayor Mike Canon was hospitalized this past weekend as he battled a brief bout with cellulitis — an acute spreading infection of the skin.

Canon received cellulitis after being pricked by a rose thorn at the tip of his thumb. The bacterial infection started at his thumb, invaded his hand and went down into the wrist, forcing him to seek medical attention.

After a heavy dose of intravenous antibiotics, the problem was corrected, and Canon, who was wearing a protective brace on his right hand Tuesday, was back to his usual business.

City Council has little trouble with first meeting

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

The first meeting of Midland's newest and very green City Council wasn't without a few minor stumbles and glitches. With a new mayor and a truckload of busy items on Tuesday's agenda, it was to be expected.

However, Mayor Mike Canon and the rest of the six-person City Council got through the business of the day, which included the nomination and vote for the city's next mayor pro-tem (District 1 representative LuAnn Morgan) and the process of creating the city's first tax abatement with little trouble.

The most notable item of the 2 and a half-hour meeting came during a second public forum regarding the Community Development Block Grant.

During that time, Midland Neighborhood Housing Service officials stood front and center in Council chambers as the City Council and one concerned Midland citizen — and former executive director — questioned the issuance of $180,750 CDBG funds for home buyer assistance and homeowner ship incentive programs.

MNHS was questioned on many fronts, including spending habits and what was called a lack of leadership from continually changing executive staff and board of directors.

"There were questions raised based on the audit which was conducted," District 2 Councilman James Bradford said. "The audit that was conducted clearly showed there were some irregularities, but not disappearance of funds."

Bradford added that MNHS would get CDBG funding this year, according to the CDBG preliminary list, but it will also be watched to make sure it uses to the best of its ability.

"We want to make sure money is put to good use, and there is not a lot of eternal bickering going on and that money doesn't get dissipated in anyway," Canon said.

"MNHS will be monitored to see if they have achieved the goals of correcting those deficiencies," Bradford added.

An item concerning the regulation of group care homes was discussed, but there was a motion to table the item until the Council's next meeting.

Other Council Items

■ The Council approved a grant which will help link an existing hike/bike trail from the middle of the city to the west. The 2001 Statewide Transportation Enhancement Program offers up to 80 percent of project costs ($902,201).

The proposed trail is 1.5 miles long and will begin at Lancaster Park, traveling across the city in a southwesterly course, which joins Loop 250 approximately 150 feet north of the Thomason Avenue interchange.

The second proposed trail is approximately three miles long and will begin at Grasslands Neighborhood Park, go west and turn north adjacent to Nueva Vista Golf Course and connect with Abell Junior High, continue north along Crowley and join an existing trail at C.J. Kelly Park.

■ The Council awarded a contract to Reece Albert Inc. of Midland for the streets, parking lots, parking lot lighting improvements and landscaping at the Scharbauer Sports Complex.

Reece Albert Inc. was the low bidder at $3,539,868. This was $28,434 under the pre-bid estimate. Taking into consideration all previous bid amounts versus the total funds available for this project, the project is $290,381 under the funds available amount.

■ The Council passed a resolution which supported and approved the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Convention and Visitors Bureau's application for funding from the statewide Transportation Enhancement Program of the Texas Department of Transportation for construction of the Old Rankin Highway Visitors Center on Interstate 20.

■ The Council passed a motion authorizing and directing the City Secretary to move forward a copy of the proposed tax abatement agreement with Cingular Wireless to the presiding officer of the Midland Independent School District, Midland Hospital District, Midland College District, Midland County District and the Midland Central Appraisal District.

The tax abatement is the city's first-ever offered to a company.

cent of their fifth-graders pass the math section, compared to 63 percent at South.

Fuller also commented on the large gap between the higher and lower scoring schools.

"There are 11 schools who scored below the district average," he said, referring to a specific category of elementary school students. "That's what people are ultimately going to care about. The fact that 11 schools are below the district average show we need to get on the same page at the same time."

Greathouse, Emerson, Fannin and Houston rounded out the top-scoring elementary schools in the district. Greathouse had the highest average at 97 percent.

Greathouse Elementary Principal Trudie Thomason said her school's positive scores are the result of planning and year-round skills assessments.

"We did several things this year," she said. "We test children when they come to us, and offer reading and math series tests for each unit. Then, we can see what each child is missing and teach it.

"Last year, we were a little bit lacking in math scores, especially third grade math," she said. "So we upgraded each student's time from one hour to a minimum of an hour and a half. That extra time on task helped us to bring up our math scores."

The four lowest-scoring elementaries overall were Milam, Pease, South and Washington. Washington had the lowest average score at 68 percent. All assessments of school averages were made by adding the overall scores for each grade level and dividing them to obtain the average score.

Milam Elementary Principal Tom Miller said low scores at his school can be attributed to the socioeconomic status of the students.

"I think you have to look at the population," he said. "Research indicates that students from high (socioeconomic) families score higher on standardized tests. TAAS is a standardized test."

Miller also said the school's administration would be evaluating the scores carefully to determine the problems.

"We're going to take a long look at the scores, then go question by question and see how our students answered," he said. "Then we'll emphasize what we need to do based on the student's answers."

Despite the irregularities among elementary school scores, depending on which area of the TAAS the schools are being measured on, MISD scores are above or even with statewide averages in some areas, while still below state average in others.

The test results are broken down by grade and subject. For example, 86 percent of third-graders in MISD scored a passing grade in reading, which is the same as the state average, but one point higher than Ector County Independent School District. But 79 percent of the same third graders passed the math section compared to 82 percent statewide and 75 percent in ECISD.

District 1 school board member James Fuller expressed disapproval of several scores, particularly those in reading and writing assessments.

"To see the performance in grade 10 ... that's critical," he said. "That should be reversed, because in two years, they'll be out."

Other board members focused on the district wide improvement over the past three years. District 5 board member Charles Tighe pointed out the scores for fourth-graders, for example, were an improvement from last year's scores for third-graders. This, he said, should indicate an improvement in those students.

"It's more significant to look at the improvement from year to year, and in comparison to other schools with supposedly good teachers," he said.

MISD board votes to approve Fuller

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

In addition to a presentation of the district's 2001 Texas Assessment of Academic Skills results that lasted more than an hour, the Midland Independent School District board of trustees also approved a number of action items during Tuesday night's meeting.

By a unanimous vote, the board approved a motion to endorse District 1 board member James Fuller in his campaign for District 18 representative. The position on the Texas Association of School Boards is currently held by Price Robinson, whose term will expire this summer.

Fuller briefly outlined his platform at the board meeting.

"We as a board should take a much more active role in leadership outside of the district," he said. District 18 covers 34 school districts in West Texas, which will all be petitioned by MISD for support of Fuller's campaign.

MISD Executive Director of Administrative Services, Evaluation and Planning Joe Cummins recommended that Title I funds to go to DeZavala, South, Crockett, Lamar, Travis, Burnet, Milam, Long, Henderson, Jones and Bonham Elementary schools.

His presentation was joined by Patricia Stevens and Jodie Baugh, of West and Bunche Early Childhood Centers, respectively, to ask for Title I funds be extended to pre-kindergarten groups at their schools. Their request was unanimously approved by the board.

"We feel we have many at-risk students," Ms. Baugh told the board. "And early intervention is the key."

Ms. Stevens, who said 96 percent of her school's population qualified for free or reduced lunches, agreed. The funds, she said, will go to more than staff development.

"We have needs for these students that go way beyond staff development, but for materials and supplies," she said. "When you have 20 4-year-olds playing with one puzzle, it won't last long."

VISIT: Perry discusses plans for campaign

(From 1A)

A more skilled, trained and educated work force will "make this a more (economically) stable state," Perry said. "We are going to impact this state. This is an economic investment in the future of Texas."

Perry, who in late 2000 moved up from lieutenant governor to governor after then-Gov. George W. Bush was elected president, is to campaign for election as governor in 2002.

Perry cited various accomplishments in the 140-day, biennial session of the Texas Legislature:

■ The $10 million Texas Grant II program for students enrolling in junior colleges; $10.2 million to encourage students to major in engineering and computer sciences; $27 million in research funds for four state health-science centers; $20 million to develop Houston Biotech Park.

■ A total of $537.3 million for the Student Success Initiative to ensure students perform at grade level; $30 million to recruit and keep mathematics teachers; $16 million for Teach for Texas Grants; $1.2 billion for school-employee health insurance; $2 million to fund a charter-school pilot program; $175 million for a border-road bond program; $72.8 million for the Texas Immunization strategy;

■ The $1.4 billion for Children's Health Insurance Plan (CHIP) to enroll 492,799 children by 2003; $58 million more to the $880-million child-care budget; $36.7 million in general-obligation bonds to build, repair and improve parks; $700 million for a 4 percent pay raise for prison guards and others; $19.8 million to better train defense attorneys for handling indigent cases.

■ Nursing-home funding totaling $478.3 million and $24.8 million in new funds for Child Protective Services that has a $528 million budget to "safeguard the lives of our most vulnerable citizens — our oldest and youngest Texans."

■ Senate Bill 2 to provide protection and planning for Texas' water supply and to assist ground water districts in managing and conserving aquifers; and a measure to phase out punch-card voting systems.

"This was a very environmental-friendly session of the Legislature," Perry said.

The governor noted the $30 million "Math Initiative" will go toward preparing fifth-grade through eighth-grade students for geometry, calculus and trigonometry in high school.

"They are going to be prepared," Perry said. "We are not going to see students dropping out because they are not prepared for that very important subject of mathematics.

Perry noted the "landmark Teacher-Health Insurance Program" would help public schools to retain "our most qualified individuals (teachers) in the classroom." He cited the "1999 historic school-financing bill and the record pay raise for our teachers" that focuses on teachers as priority in society.

"Outside of the parents, the most important job we've got in the state is teaching our children," Perry said. "And we are making progress."

In the criminal-justice realm, Perry said the legislators "passed some very tough new laws that clearly sent a message to those who are not going to live civilly in our society. We also passed DNA laws that are going to help our prosecutors more expeditiously and more exactly be able to make sure that our system is fair."

The Texas Legislature in 2001 "made great strides in many areas on behalf of future generations."

Perry cited a proverb on the prudence of planning: "The beginning of wisdom ... is the planting of a tree that you know you will never sit in the shade of."

Of Perry's role in the 77th session of the Texas Legislature, Democratic Ector County Commissioner Wilmer Ray, 60, said "the governor is there to keep the flow going. He has to sign the bills.

"It's the legislative body, the Senate and the House of Rep (Representatives), that really handles the meat of whatever" is being legislated.

"The 77th Legislature did a tremendous job only because they were able to bypass some of their issues that were party-driven," Ray said. "In order do anything for the people of Texas, we have to work in a bipartisan way. Humanity comes before (political) party."

ulation," said researcher David Landry of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, which focuses on reproductive health issues and collects some of the abortion data used in the government report.

Those who support a greater emphasis on abstinence — telling teens to just say no to sex — tend to credit an increase in support for these programs, which saw a massive infusion of government money beginning in 1997.

Those who believe the availability of birth control is key point to new, more reliable methods of contraception.

Other possible reasons: fear of AIDS has made teens more conscious about using condoms, and the strong economy has given them other options for their futures. And much of the decline comes from a sharp drop in second births to teen-agers.

Tuesday's report also included data on pregnancies to all American women.

It found that in 1997, there were about 6.2 million total pregnancies, also a record low, driven largely by the drops among teens. About 21 percent of all pregnancies ended in abortion.

The pregnancy rate declined among women in their 20s but increased slightly for those in their 30s. Overall, the abortion rate for U.S. women hit a record low, down 19 percent since 1990.

Nichols awaits second bombing trial in Oklahoma

By Tim Talley
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — After the execution of Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh, many victims turned their scorn toward co-conspirator Terry Nichols who is facing state murder charges that could also bring the death penalty.

But Tuesday's appointment of a new Oklahoma County chief prosecutor raises questions about whether Nichols will ever face a state jury.

Wes Lane starts his new job as district attorney on June 30, when Bob Macy retires. Lane, a longtime assistant to Macy, declined to discuss his plans for the Nichols' case on Tuesday, but acknowledged there are a "ton of victims that are of differing opinions" on whether to proceed with it.

While that is far from a sign of faltering support for the case, it is a departure from the stubborn stance taken by Macy, who personally filed 160 state murder charges against Nichols and thinks he should die for the crimes.

Many in Oklahoma have no question about what they'd like to see next.

"One down, one to go," said Matt Story, whose mother died in the April 19, 1995, bombing, which killed 168 people and injured more than 500.

Mickey Sawyer, who also lost her mother, watched McVeigh's execution Monday on closed-circuit television and wants Nichols to suffer a similar fate.

"Let him be next," Sawyer said.

"We're ready for another execution," her sister, Shari Sawyer, added.

Nichols, 46, was sentenced to life in prison on federal bombing charges and would face the death penalty if found guilty of the state charges.

Jim Denny, whose two children were injured, supported McVeigh's execution but feels it would be unfair to try Nichols again and that it would be an imposition on bombing victims and their families.

"We don't need it," he said. "There comes a time when we are going to have to draw the line."

Dan McKinney, whose wife died in the bombing, said he's not going to think about Nichols for a while.

"I'm just going to put that on hold for a couple of weeks and enjoy the peacefulness that I feel like I'm going to have now that Timothy McVeigh is gone," McKinney said.

Nichols' state prosecution has been beset by problems. No trial date has been set, and a preliminary hearing to determine if there is enough evidence to hold him for trial has been postponed three times.

Macy was ordered off the case for violating a gag order. His office is also under scrutiny in a matter involving police chemist Joyce Gilchrist, a frequent witness for the prosecution, who has been accused by the FBI of misidentifying hair and fiber evidence in at least five cases.

Legal observers believe state prosecutors face more serious legal problems as the case moves closer to trial.

"They've got to proceed very, very carefully," said Andrew Coats, dean of the University of Oklahoma Law School and former district attorney. "Nichols not only has to have a fair trial, he has to almost have a perfect trial."

Prosecutors allege that Nichols worked with McVeigh to steal and purchase the bomb ingredients and pack the bomb inside a Ryder truck on the day before the blast.

Nichols' defense team has asked a judge to dismiss the murder charges. The lawyers argue that publicity surrounding Nichols' conviction on federal involuntary manslaughter and conspiracy charges for the deaths of eight law enforcement officers in the bombing will make it impossible to find 12 jurors who do not believe Nichols is already guilty.

"Where in Oklahoma can you go pick a jury?" said Jack Dempsey Pointer, president of the Oklahoma Criminal Defense Lawyers Association.

District Judge Ray Dean Linder postponed Nichols' latest preliminary hearing date, May 21, after the FBI disclosed it had failed to turn over more than 4,000 bombing-related documents and other materials to prosecutors at the federal trials of Nichols and McVeigh.

Nichols' defense attorneys have appealed the federal conviction on the grounds he was deprived of a fair trial because of the missing documents.

The documents were delivered to state prosecutors on Monday. Linder scheduled a July 11 hearing when a new preliminary hearing date may be announced.

Survivors of border tragedy to be released from custody

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Eleven of the 12 survivors of a deadly border crossing in southern Arizona are on the verge of being released from U.S. custody.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Morton Sitver ordered that the men be released for a trip to San Luis, Ariz., to complete Immigration and Naturalization Service paperwork before returning to Phoenix, where jobs and apartments await them.

The men have been held by U.S. authorities since last month, when U.S. authorities rescued them in the desert east of Yuma. They are considered key witnesses against a man accused of leading them and other migrants into the desert and abandoning them.

Fourteen people died. The accused smuggler was among the 12 survivors.

Federal officials have arranged for the witnesses to have special INS permission to stay in the country until they testify at the trial. All gave videotaped statements last week.

On Monday, Sitver ordered that the group, from the Mexican state of Veracruz, not leave Arizona without permission.

Phil Noland, an attorney for two survivors, said only one of the 11 is still hoping to return home before the trial.

The government arranged for the group to have furnished apartments that will be paid for the first month, Noland said.

The government also arranged for jobs in a refrigerated plant that pays $7.50 per hour, Noland said. He wouldn't identify the plant out of fear of threats against the survivors, who already have provided information about the smugglers who brought them from their southern Mexico homes.

The 11 are scheduled to make another appearance in U.S. District Court in Phoenix on June 25.

Terrorist bomber of U.S. embassy sentenced to life without parole

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A follower of Osama bin Laden received life in prison without parole on Tuesday in the deadly bombing of the U.S. embassy in Kenya after a jury deadlocked amid concerns that imposing a death penalty would create a martyr.

After five days of deliberations, jurors said they couldn't agree Mohamed Rashed Daoud Al-'Owhali deserved to die for his role in the Aug. 7, 1998, attack on the embassy at Nairobi that killed 213 people and wounded thousands.

"I'm disappointed," said Ellen Bomer, a career government employee blinded in the explosion, who had testified during the death penalty hearing. "If ever there was a person who needed to be put to death, this is the one."

Al'-Owhali, 24, also was convicted of conspiracy in the nearly simultaneous bombing on the U.S. Embassy in Tanzania.

Another defendant, Khalfan Khamis Mohamed, could face the death penalty for the attack in Tanzania, in which 11 people died. The same Manhattan jury is to hear his penalty case next Tuesday. Two others also were convicted but were not subject to the death penalty.

Al-'Owhali's life was spared one day after Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh became the first person executed by the federal government since 1963. Under a 1996 federal law, prosecutors can seek the death penalty in terrorist murder cases.

Defense attorney Frederick Cohn, noting that the panel was told to avoid coverage of the McVeigh case, said he saw no connection between Monday's execution and the jury decision.

"This is an extraordinary victory for a system that was really put to the test," Cohn said. "I'm about as numb as my client."

In a statement, U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White said the death penalty "is uniquely a matter for the jury to decide, and we respect the verdict."

But families of the victims were critical of the jury. Howard Kavaler, a Foreign Service officer who lost his wife in the Kenya blast, accused the jury of buying "some or all of the blatantly false and dishonest arguments to save the life of a convicted mass murderer."

Sue Bartley, whose husband and son were killed, was in tears. "Anyone who kills this many people and thought about it, should be put to death," she said.

Before the jury's verdict was announced, Al-'Owhali appeared relaxed at the defense table, smiling as he awaited word. At one point, he held a copy of the Quran.

In a lengthy "verdict sheet" used by the jurors to reach their decision, the panel provided several reasons for staying away from the death penalty.

Ten of the 12 jurors concluded that executing him could make him a terrorist martyr; nine said it would not relieve the victims' pain; four said lethal injection is humane and the victim would not suffer; five found life in prison is a greater punishment; and four noted that he was raised in a different culture and belief system.

"We the jury do not unanimously find that the death sentence is appropriate," the jury decided. "We understand that the consequence of this is that Al-'Owhali will be sentenced to life imprisonment without the possibility of release."

There was no exact breakdown of the jury vote, and none of the jurors was available to discuss the case. U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand will impose the sentence on Sept. 12.

On Monday, the jury sent out a note asking for instructions if it was unable to reach a unanimous decision on the death penalty. Sand instructed the jurors that they could simply indicate there was no agreement, and the defendant would instead receive life without parole.

The last person sentenced to death in U.S. District Court in Manhattan was Gerhard A. Puff, a bank robber executed in 1954 for killing an FBI agent. One year earlier, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were executed for nuclear espionage.

Al'-Owhali, of Saudi Arabia, rode in the truck used in the bombing of the U.S. embassy in Nairobi before leaping out and hurling stun grenades at guards.

He then ran for his life as the truck exploded.

Mohamed, 27, of Tanzania, helped build the bomb used in Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital.

The others convicted — Wadih El-Hage, 40, of Arlington, Texas, and Mohamed Sadeek Odeh, 36, of Jordan — face life in prison when they are sentenced.

The indictment alleged that the four conspired with others in bin Laden's organization, al-Qaeda, to attack Americans anywhere they can be found to pressure the United States to stay out of the Middle East.

Report recommends against discipline for Park Service officials in New Mexico blaze

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A new report on last year's wildfire that left more than 400 families homeless in Los Alamos recommends against disciplining any National Park Service workers, blaming the fire on inadequate agency policies, not employee mistakes.

The report from a federal board of inquiry, released Tuesday, recommended no disciplinary action be taken against former Bandelier National Monument Superintendent Roy Weaver or other employees involved with a planned burn that grew into the Cerro Grande Fire. The report also recommended more oversight of planned burns.

Weaver, who retired last year, has said for months he expected the board of inquiry to exonerate him and other Bandelier officials. He said prescribed burn plans had been reviewed at the Park Service's regional level until the oversight ended in the mid-1990s because of government "downsizing."

"They probably think it would be good to have somebody who is not directly involved in the fire review the plan," Weaver said Tuesday.

Earlier reports on the blaze, including one from the U.S. General Accounting Office, concluded Bandelier staff members seriously underestimated the fire danger in the dry Jemez Mountains last year before moving ahead with the prescribed burn.

The fire, which burned more than 42,000 acres in May 2000, started from the controlled burn set by the National Park Service on nearby Bandelier.

The fire was intended to burn underbrush on about 1,000 acres to reduce the threat of a catastrophic fire. Instead, winds swept the flames into the northern and western edges of Los Alamos, forcing the evacuation of the entire town and Los Alamos National Laboratory.

Rita Hemsing, whose family lost their home of 23 years to the flames, called the report disappointing.

"It just seems like when you get devastated like this, you think somebody should be to blame," Hemsing said. "Surely somebody has to be held accountable. ... What a cop-out to say, 'Oh, the policy.'"

The report did criticize Mike Powell, who was directing the burn, for not lining up adequate firefighting capabilities before going home at 3 a.m. on May 5, 2000, just before the fire went out of control.

Wade said Powell's "actions were the most questionable" among Bandelier officials, but added: "I think he was trying to follow the rules as best he understood them."

A message left for Powell at Lava Beds National Monument in California, where he was assigned after leaving Bandelier last year, was not immediately returned.

Bush tells Europe he won't allow any issues to isolate countries from each other

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

MADRID, Spain — President Bush opened his first overseas trip Tuesday declaring there is "much more that unites us than divides us" despite a European rebuff on global warming and differences on missile defenses and the death penalty.

Promising to work for common ground, the president said, "I refuse to let any issue isolate America from Europe, because Europe is too important for America's future."

At the same time, he remained steadfast against an international global warming treaty and said that the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty strongly backed by U.S. allies was "a relic of the past" that should put aside.

Bush and his wife, Laura, watched deer and wild boar roam the wooded animal preserve of Madrid's Zarzuela Palace, where the president and first lady were welcomed by King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia of Spain. The president also joined Spanish Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar at his whitewashed ranch south of Madrid, finding common ground on missile defense and global warming.

But those were among the few bright spots on the first day of a tough, five-nation trip that concludes Saturday in a summit with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

Just hours after Bush arrived in Spain, the European Union in Brussels, Belgium, denounced the president's new proposals on climate change as "short on action" and demanded anew that he back the Kyoto Protocol on global warming.

Responding at a news conference with Aznar, Bush called the 1997 agreement flawed, "unrealistic" and not based on sound science. "We have a different approach" to solving global warming, Bush said, "but we have the same goals."

The European Union announcement, released two days before Bush travels to an EU meeting in Sweden, set a cold tone for a trip that could pit Bush against Europe — testing the consensus-building skills of America's new president.

"I look forward to making my case," Bush said.

Several hundred protesters gathered across the street from the U.S. Embassy as Bush met with U.S. diplomats and their families. "Bush Go Home!" some of the protesters chanted. One sign, critical of Bush's position on the environment, read in English: "The earth is our mother, not your supermarket."

Another protest drew about 1,000 people in Brussels, where Bush will attend a NATO meeting today. Demonstrators decried U.S. policy on the environment, Cuba and the death penalty.

A day after the U.S. government executed Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh, Bush said the death penalty is "the will of the people in the United States." He said it was not an easy issue but that the majority of Americans believe that "if the death penalty is certain, just and fair, it'll deter crime."

He also issued his strongest statement to date against the 1972 ABM Treaty which restricts missile defense systems in the United States and Russia.

"The ABM Treaty is a relic of the past. It prevents freedom-loving people from exploring the future, and that's why we've got to lay it aside," he said, previewing the case he will take to Putin on Saturday in Slovenia.

Russia vehemently opposes Bush's intentions to build the missile defense system. The system is contrary to the 1972 treaty, which Moscow says is the foundation of global security. The United States argues that a missile defense is needed to protect against nuclear attacks by small "rogue" states.

Some allies are skeptical about the threat. Others agree the threat exists, but see the response as political. Still others fear abandoning the ABM treaty would engender an arms race and weaken security in Europe.

Bush was animated in making his case.

"It starts with explaining to Russia and our European friends and allies that Russia is not the enemy of the United States, that the attitude of mutually assured destruction is a relic of the Cold War," Bush said.

"I realize it's going to require a lot of consultation," Bush said. "But I'm willing to listen."

Aznar gave Bush credit for addressing legitimate security threats, though he stopped short of endorsing the president's missile defense plans.

In a joint statement, Bush and Aznar agreed on the need for a "comprehensive security strategy that encompasses both offensive and defensive deterrent systems."

The two leaders also reaffirmed their commitment to free trade and NATO expansion and they condemned "extremists, such as those in Macedonia, who subvert the democratic process through the use of violence. Our two countries are committed to NATO-led operations in Bosnia and Kosovo."

On global warming, Bush has pledged to research technological solutions to slow greenhouse gas emissions without harm to the American economy.

Cigarette-makers try to cultivate next generation

Adults who swore off cigarette smoking years ago, are waking up to a startling reality — their teen-age sons and daughters are picking up where they left off.

A new report indicates cigarette advertising is proving to be a seductive tool in tobacco companies' recruitment of a new generation of smokers.

The study by the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg Public Policy Center tells us young people are being convinced by advertisers that smoking can make them look older, more mature and more attractive. To self-conscious teens often struggling to establish an identity, such an easy gimmick must look awfully tempting.

Teens are exposed to cigarette advertising in magazines, at convenience stores and through promotional events in bars and restaurants, the report said.

Young people often see themselves as invulnerable. So it's no surprise the new study indicates that young people who start smoking occasionally aren't taking into account the long-term health risks of cigarettes.

The Annenberg report said young people had misconceptions about the risks of smoking, indicating that 63 percent of young people incorrectly thought there were more deaths each year due to drug and alcohol abuse than to tobacco.

And about 80 percent of smokers said they thought smoking was addictive, but about 60 percent said they thought quitting was "either very easy or possible for most people if they really try." Perhaps, these young people have never talked to an adult smoker who has desperately tried and wanted to quit, but simply couldn't overcome the addictive power of cigarettes.

As part of the 1998 landmark tobacco industry settlement, cigarette-makers agreed to cut back on advertisements, particularly those that might entice teen-agers, including giving the ax to that famous smoking cartoon figure, Joe Camel.

But as cigarette-makers continue to fight for survival and profitability, they know they must tap into the next possible pool of lifelong customers.

Frankly, we don't believe any of the tobacco company chieftains when they try to deny they are trying to find clever, creative ways to tempt young people to light up.

While advertising plays a powerful role in winning young people over to cigarettes, we believe parents still wield the most powerful weapons.

We encourage parents to talk with their children about smoking and the very real health risks smokers face. Advertising makes it all look too easy and too tempting.

As parents, it's our responsibility to remind young people about the cold, hard reality of life.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, June 13, the 164th day of 2001. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 13, 1971, The New York Times began publishing the Pentagon Papers, a secret study of America's involvement in Vietnam.

On this date:

In 1888, Congress created the Department of Labor.

In 1898, the Yukon Territory of Canada was organized.

In 1900, China's Boxer Rebellion targeting foreigners, as well as Chinese Christians, erupted into full-scale violence.

In 1927, aviation hero Charles Lindbergh was honored with a ticker-tape parade in New York City.

In 1942, President Roosevelt created the Office of War Information, and appointed radio news commentator Elmer Davis to be its head.

In 1944, Germany began launching flying-bomb attacks against Britain during World War II.

In 1966, the Supreme Court issued its landmark Miranda decision, ruling that criminal suspects had to be informed of their constitutional rights prior to questioning by police.

In 1967, President Lyndon Johnson nominated Solicitor-General Thurgood Marshall to become the first bl[illegible]ice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1977, James Earl Ray, the convicted assassin of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., was recaptured following his escape three days earlier from a Tennessee prison.

In 1981, a scare occurred during a parade in London when a teen-ager fired six blank shots at Queen Elizabeth II.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled a jailed suspect represented by a lawyer in one criminal case sometimes may be questioned by police about another crime without the lawyer present. Tragedy struck the first round of the U.S. Open golf tournament when lightning struck and killed a spectator.

Tax system finally becomes incomprehensible

WASHINGTON — It's broken, and they can't fix it. The tax bill just signed into law by President Bush cut some taxes, raised some taxes, and is about to distribute some taxes already collected ($300 for single taxpayers). What it also did was finally make the U.S. tax code incomprehensible.

Anderson

Various administrations and congresses have been trying to accomplish this feat for some time, and now they have finally done it.

This march to incomprehension stalled briefly in 1986 when the Tax Reform Act actually simplified the tax code by eliminating some deductions, closing some loopholes, and altering the rates that reduced the number of people required to file returns.

Then came former President George Bush's tax increase of 1990 and President Bill Clinton's tax increase of 1993, not to mention all sorts of tinkerings and adjustments along the way, all of which reversed the progress of 1986. Now, the final straw has come with the $1.35 trillion Tax Relief Act of 2001.

This new law adds loopholes, deductions, credits, and special favors for certain industries, not to mention new rates and new inclusions for the Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT). The AMT was originally enacted to nab high earners whose various deductions exempted them from taxation, but, like most such attempts it is merely going to end up biting the middle-income earners. That is because the qualifying amount was not indexed for inflation. So yesterday's big earners who paid $33,000 per year are now paying many times that amount. But that amount, the base for the AMT to kick in, is not unusual for today's middle-income earners.

Then there are the planning problems created by the new tax law. The estate tax will be fully repealed in 2010, the same year the entire tax law expires. Other benefits and deductions will also phase in almost up to the expiration date, making 2010 a year that may be remembered as the time the government took away what it just gave. But most of all, the law is downright complex, and those $300 rebate checks might be just enough to make the down payment to your accountant, whose time to calculate your tax return is going to increase dramatically.

The good news in all this is that Americans may finally wake up and ask themselves what have they done. They have created the most complicated tax system ever devised. Through free elections they have voted for people who imposed a tax system that would never have been attempted by an unelected despot. So, perhaps at last Americans will say "enough," and scrap the whole system.

The obvious solution is a pay-as-you-go national sales tax because it already exists in the form of a gasoline tax. It merely needs to be expanded to selected commodities, and it can continue to be administered by the states, which would be free to tack on their share, just as they do now.

The primary argument against this is that it is not graduated. Yet, when payroll taxes are included, the current income tax is not graduated because the typical middle-income taxpayer today is paying in federal, state and local taxes that eat up nearly 50 percent of his income. High income earners will now pay in the 45-percent range. In any event, a pay-as-you-go sales tax will eliminate that accounting bill that just got higher.

McCain enjoys his time in spotlight

WASHINGTON — If Arizona Sen. John McCain were predictable, he wouldn't be Sen. John McCain.

No matter. The capital's power brokers are consumed with predictions about McCain anyway, trying to guess whether he so enjoys the delicious political mischief caused by James Jeffords' dramatic party switch that he might follow the senator from Vermont right out of the Republican nest.

McCain himself spurred the speculation by issuing an inconclusive statement noting that he has "no intention" of leaving the GOP to become either an independent or a Democrat. You can read into that carefully chosen phrase whatever you want. It was hardly a concrete pronouncement of unavailability and was immediately seen as a hint that he hasn't ruled out the move.

Means

If he had really meant to convince us of unshakable party loyalty, he could have echoed Civil War Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, who rejected feelers for an 1884 presidential bid with the classic, "I will not accept if nominated and will not serve if elected."

Or McCain could have taken a more colorful course, quoting Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas when approached about the presidency by Democrats in 1948. "I never was a-runnin', I ain't a-runnin' and I ain't a-goin' tuh," Douglas said in a mock drawl.

McCain's non-denial denial was his response to the news that he was meeting at his secluded vacation cabin recently with Democrat Tom Daschle, the incoming Senate majority leader. The staffs of both Daschle and McCain insisted it was merely a harmless social event, but the exquisite political timing looked suspicious.

McCain advisers are publicly pushing him to run for president in 2004. He has not tried to muzzle them.

Asked if he planned to seek the presidency either as a Republican or an independent, McCain once more hid behind a verbal veil. "I don't envision running again," he said.

Indeed, it does not seem to be in McCain's interest at the moment to become an independent, either to exert more influence in the Senate or to prepare for a presidential campaign. But it's surely in his interest to keep President Bush worrying that he might.

And Bush is so nervous that he called McCain to be reassured, at least temporarily.

McCain has some of the same complaints that drove Jeffords to defect. Many conservative Republican senators shun him and try to block his pet projects. White House officials apparently refuse to hire anyone suspected of having supported McCain during his bruising primary fight against Bush.

GOP senators delight in privately putting McCain down, complaining that he is too prickly, too opinionated and too vain. Their current rap against him is that he is posturing in pursuit of attention and publicity. This latter charge is rather mysterious. A senator who seeks publicity? Horrors! Imagine that!

McCain disagrees with the Senate Republican leadership on several major issues such as protecting patients' rights in health maintenance organizations. And party leaders are still fighting him over campaign finance reform. Senate Republican leader Trent Lott only recently sent the bill to the House for consideration, although it passed the Senate in April. And it may be bottled up indefinitely.

There are many issues that McCain and Daschle can use in putting together a bipartisan coalition. The Democrats are eager to work with McCain as part of their campaign to avoid legislative gridlock that would make them seem unable to govern.

McCain is a natural leader but not a natural compromiser. His role as a centrist thus far is spotty. He formally joined the bipartisan Centrist Coalition, which helped him rally support for campaign finance reform. He is co-sponsoring with last year's Democratic vice presidential candidate, Sen. Joe Lieberman of Connecticut, a bill to mandate background checks on purchasers of weapons at gun shows.

But McCain is a true conservative. The American Conservative union says he voted for its key issues 81 percent of the time last year. It's his willingness to defy party orthodoxy on selected high-visibility issues and his reputation for independence that drive conservatives nuts.

If he does still lust for the presidency, McCain would be better off remaining a Republican and taking on the party incumbent than running as an independent. Going it alone without the backing of a major party's financial and organizational support is extremely difficult, and thus far no candidate has reached the White House that way. A rousing repeat of the Bush-McCain primary struggle would, however, galvanize party moderates unhappy with its rightward drift. It would be a long shot but not impossible.

Yet all of this speculation is greatly premature. McCain cannot make a career move in isolation. Much depends upon the political condition of the Bush presidency in a year or so. For now, McCain can only put Bush on notice that he expects better treatment than he has been getting.

Bush is no dummy. My hunch is that will be forthcoming. It's not smart to mess with McCain.

Politicians play role in gasoline price increases

Most people don't have a clue about what it takes, or what it costs, to get fuel from its source to our homes and vehicles. Ignorance has not, and will not, however, deter politicians from attempting to "fix" the latest round of price increases to garner votes for themselves and demonize the fuel industry.

Democratic politicians are blaming "President Bush's friends back in Texas" for the price hikes. According to this line, oil companies are gouging the public and reaping outrageous profits.

According to the American Petroleum Institute, crude oil costs have actually declined from $1.63 per gallon in 1981 to 60 cents per gallon as of last month. What's driven the retail price up are regulations and taxes. As of last month, API reports, the taxes on a gallon of gasoline amounted to 42 cents. That includes an average 18.4 cents in federal taxes and an average 23.6 cents in state taxes. In 1981, combined taxes averaged 28 cents per gallon.

Thomas

Over the last four years, according to API, the average profit for all American industries was 6.4 percent, while the fuel industry's was 4.9 percent. Last year, profit margins for the fuel industry averaged 6.7 percent, which was just 0.3 percent more than the average for all industries and below the profit margins of many other industries, such as banking, telecommunications and broadcasting.

No new refinery has been built in this country in more than 20 years. Clean air regulations have produced 15 different types of gasoline because of varying state requirements. Instead of producing one type of fuel for every state, refineries must tailor-make 15 different types, adding to their costs.

As the May issue of Consumers' Research magazine notes, "There is no consumer problem so bad that it cannot be made worse by inappropriate public policy." California Democratic Governor Gray Davis is trying to convince President Bush to adopt an inappropriate public policy by lobbying him to impose a temporary cap on wholesale electricity prices in California. Price controls on fuel have been imposed before by Republican and Democratic presidents. All have failed miserably, often making the supply and/or price situation worse.

Many factors contribute to energy price variations. In California, currently the object of attention because of possible power shortages this summer (and because a Democrat governor and his party want to damage the GOP in that state and nationally), higher gas prices are supposedly caused by price gouging. In fact, major reasons for increased costs include explosions and fires that have affected pipelines and refineries, as well as the unique formulation of gasoline the state requires.

As Consumers' Research reports, Midwest gas price increases were partially caused by problems supplying a new, cleaner-burning gasoline that complies with Environmental Protection Agency standards and also meets the objectives of state and local governments to promote the use of ethanol as an additive. Aggravated pipeline problems and low inventories also helped drive prices up in the region.

Competition will help drive prices down. Costco and Wal-Mart are two major chains that have recently decided to sell gasoline at lower prices. Previous gas price increases have contributed to self-service options, as well as production of higher-efficiency cars. It cost an average of 5 cents per mile to drive in 1998. Today, it costs about 8 cents per mile, but vehicles get more miles per gallon, depending on car type and frequency of use.

The ingenuity of the American people and our capitalist system will be more effective in addressing our needs and wants than government regulation. Politicians, in an effort to show the public they "care," will be tempted to "do something" to force gas prices down.

Romanians mesmerized by toddler who fell down a well

By Alison Mutler
Associated Press

BUCHAREST, Romania — Bulldozers, villagers and even other children struggled for hours to save a 2-year-old girl who plunged into a well, a drama that played out on Romanian TV and made a heroine out of a lanky teen-ager.

The saga began when Alina Pascaru's mother turned her back Monday afternoon and the toddler climbed into a bucket, riding it 16 feet down the well shaft until her mother grabbed the crank, jolting it to a stop. The child fell out and became wedged between the bucket and the wall.

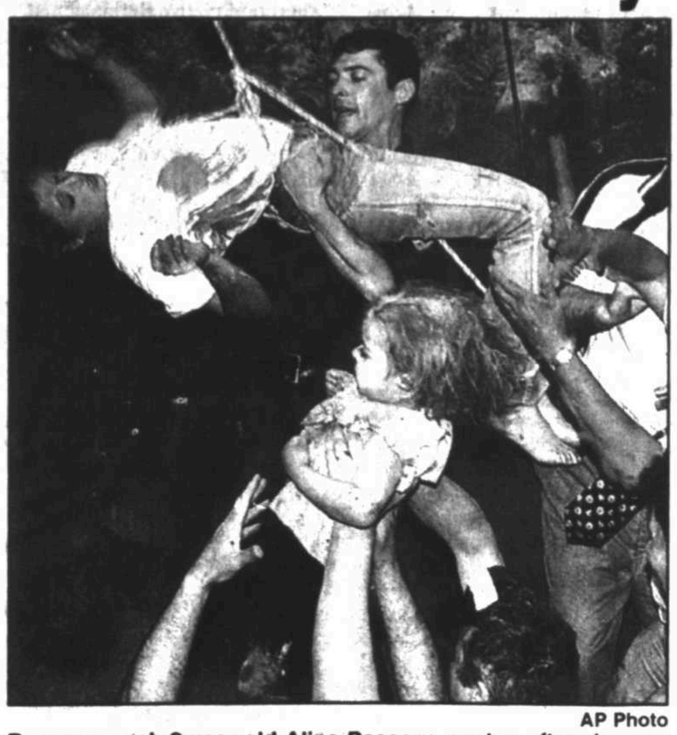

"It happened in a fraction of a second," Alina's mother, Marilena, said Tuesday.

Millions of Romanians watched the rescue effort — broadcast live on Romania's three television stations — riveted by the six-hour drama.

Neighbors rushed to the well in the village of Pipera, using spades and their bare hands to try to dig the child out. Soon, television crews arrived.

Unable to persuade Alina to grab ropes so she could be pulled out, rescuers tried lowering two other children headfirst into the well in hopes they could take Alina's hands and pull her to safety. But the children panicked inside the dank shaft and had to be pulled out.

News anchors pleaded with viewers to call in suggestions for rescuing the child.

AP Photo
Rescuers grab 2-year-old Alina Pascaru, center, after she was plucked from a water well by teen-age volunteer rescuer Oana Furnica, top left in rope, in Bucharest Monday evening. Alina was hospitalized and treated for hypothermia and shock. Doctors said her condition was stable Tuesday.

As night came, a slender teenager, Oana Furnica, volunteered to slither down the shaft, her legs secured by a green rope lowered by rescuers. She plucked a shocked and muddied Alina to safety on the second attempt, grabbing her hands and hoisting her up.

Cheers erupted as Alina and her rescuer were hauled to safety. Villagers wept. Alina's father clung to his daughter, who tightly hugged his neck.

Alina was hospitalized and treated for hypothermia and shock. Doctors said her condition was stable Tuesday. The village mayor awarded Furnica a plot of land for her courage and viewers pledged about $5,000 for the teenager.

Amid the rejoicing, there was criticism about public safety in Romania, where people regularly fall into uncapped manholes and wells that dot the country.

The open holes reflect a lack of concern for safety and a shortage of government funding for public works projects.

Some of the troubles are attributed to thieves who steal manhole lids for scrap metal.

"It's not just children but grown people, too, who fall down holes," said Marilena Abibi, 24, who runs a grocer's shop in Bucharest. "I was praying for the girl all evening."

Marian Vladu, 37, stopped on the way to the post office to describe how her son had also plunged down a well.

"We don't have the right equipment in Romania," she said. "In other countries, there is a rapid reaction force. They even have equipment to save a dog," she said. "My son was lucky because he was sturdy and he didn't fall too far."

Alina's mother, meanwhile, watched her child Tuesday as she slept among dozens of teddy bears and toys sent by people who watched the rescue.

"We will never return to that house," the mother said. "A child is more important than a house."

Troops find two beheaded Filipinos

ZAMBOANGA, Philippines (AP) — Troops scouring a southern Philippine island for rebels holding some 28 hostages discovered two decapitated bodies Tuesday. Officials said both were Filipinos, including a man who had volunteered to negotiate in the 3-week-old crisis.

The Abu Sayyaf guerrillas said early Tuesday that they had beheaded Guillermo Sobero, one of their three American captives, as a "gift" to commemorate the 103rd anniversary of Philippine independence from Spain.

But National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said one of the bodies found on the western part of southern Basilan island was apparently that of a negotiator who contacted the Abu Sayyaf. The second body was apparently unrelated to the ongoing hostage crisis, Golez said.

By this morning, troops searching the eastern area of the island, where Abu Sayyaf guerrillas said they killed Sobero, had found no sign of his body.

Several hundred reinforcements joined thousands of troops today to hunt the Abu Sayyaf, who claim they are fighting to create a southern Islamic state.

"Tell Gloria to hurry up and solve this with her rescue operation because you might not have any hostages left," guerrilla leader Abu Sabaya tauntingly told the Radio Mindanao Network, making reference to Philippine President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo.

Sobero, 40, a Peruvian-born Californian, was vacationing in the Philippines when he and other tourists were seized from an island resort across the Sulu Sea in late May.

The Abu Sayyaf has refused to free them until the government allows the participation of Malaysian negotiators who helped secure the release of other hostages last year.

The government agreed Monday, but Sabaya questioned the sincerity of the concession and said he beheaded Sobero anyway.

Philippine authorities held out hope Sabaya was bluffing — but seemed increasingly resigned he wasn't. A military intelligence task force put the likelihood Sobero was dead at "very, very high," Armed Forces Chief of Staff Diomedio Villanueva said.

Police Senior Supt. Akmad Mamalinta said today that 60 rebels were spotted near General Santos city earlier this week, 230 miles west of Basilan island. He said the men, toting machine-guns, bought food from farmers before disappearing into jungle.

Sabaya earlier this week threatened to send out units of fighters to attack several areas of the southern Mindanao region.

The rebel chieftain also threatened to kill Muslim clerics — called ulamas — who criticized the Abu Sayyaf on Monday, saying their activities counter Islam.

"They should be the first in fighting those that oppress us," Sabaya said. "Now they are working together with the government. One day we'll behead the ulamas, too."

Arroyo denounced the reported beheading and ordered an all-out war against the guerrillas.

"They did this dastardly act to prove that they are not kids making empty threats, underlining the ghoulishness and viciousness of the Abu Sayyaf," she said.

Sabaya had been threatening to execute an American at noon Monday but pushed back the deadline when the government gave into his demand that former Malaysian Sen. Sairin Karno be brought in to negotiate.

Sabaya rebuffed the offer Tuesday, telling the military to look for Sobero's head near the town of Tuburan.

"We ... can see that the government wants to outsmart us with these negotiators. What are we, stupid?" he said. "So we've cut off negotiations. We will call again when we've beheaded another to let them know."

Arroyo has offered $2 million for the capture of Abu Sayyaf leaders but has refused ransoms. The millions reportedly paid for the release of hostage last year is believed to have funded the arms and speedboats used in the May 27 raid.

Yellow ribbons adorned the trees in Sobero's neighborhood in Corona, Calif., east of Los Angeles. But only the oldest of Sobero's four children, a 13-year-old daughter, knows her father was kidnapped, his brother Alberto Sobero said in Cathedral City, Calif.

"They think he's on vacation," said Neuza Chiong, a cousin of Guillermo Sobero's wife, Fanny. "I'm not sure when we'll tell them."

Likely next mayor of Berlin declares he is gay, spurs debate on privacy

By Burt Herman
Associated Press

BERLIN — With a single sentence, the man destined to be Berlin's next mayor has spurred debate on whether the privacy of German politicians has been obliterated by the increasingly aggressive press.

"I am gay, and that's a good thing," Klaus Wowereit said Sunday just before delegates of his Social Democratic party unanimously named him candidate for mayor.

Wowereit's remark is resonating across the country as gay groups call for all other homosexual politicians to out themselves, while others wonder why he bothered to make it into an issue at all.

Few outside Berlin political circles had heard of Wowereit until last week, when he was thrust to the fore as his party's candidate to replace Christian Democratic Mayor Eberhard Diepgen after the collapse of Berlin's governing coalition.

Now, Wowereit has become the most prominent openly gay politician in Germany. He is expected to take office Saturday and stay mayor at least until new elections, likely in the fall.

Already in March, Paris voters gave a sign that Europe is increasingly at ease with sexual frankness in politics by electing an openly gay mayor.

Germany also has liberal attitudes toward homosexuality, and the Social Democrat-led government last year approved a law to grant greater rights to same-sex couples. Berlin is a center of gay life in Europe, with a thriving scene centered around the city's western Schoeneberg district.

"If Berlin wasn't such a worldly city, then I wouldn't make the effort to become mayor there," Wowereit said Monday in a talk show on Germany's main public television station, where his coming out was the first topic of discussion.

Wowereit

Not long ago, politicians' personal lives were generally taboo in the media.

Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder is on his fourth marriage, but that wasn't raised as an issue before his 1998 election win. Ex-Chancellor Helmut Kohl's private life was strictly off-limits to reporters back in the quiet former capital, Bonn.

However, along with the capital's return to Berlin in 1999, the once-sleepy political media have been injected with big-city brashness. Tabloids now report on marriage breakups and affairs of top government ministers — and the mainstream press hasn't been far behind.

At the same time, politicians seem to realize the value of presenting a human face.

"A politician appears possibly boring without a pinch of exhibitionism," the Berlin daily Tagesspiegel wrote Tuesday.

Wowereit, 47, says his coming out wasn't all voluntary: He did so because of rumors that conservative tabloids were planning to make an issue of it, after news leaked that he told party leaders last week he was gay to warn that it could be used in the campaign.

One conservative Berlin tabloid, BZ, questioned Tuesday whether Wowereit's move was merely a "PR gag." Editor George Gafron promised in a commentary that his newspaper wouldn't write any more about Wowereit's homosexuality.

The expert on gay issues for Berlin's Christian Democrats, Marcus Mierendorff, said the party had no plans to use Wowereit's personal life in the campaign and that homosexuality was "something normal."

Germany's Gay and Lesbian Federation this week heralded Wowereit's openness as a milestone for the community and called on all homosexual politicians to come out.

Rains cause landslide, at least 36 dead

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — An avalanche of rock and mud slammed down on a group of stranded motorists in the Andes east of the capital Tuesday, killing at least 36 people, authorities said.

Torrential rains set off the deadly landslide that swept over the victims as they hovered around a campfire, trying to get warm after their vehicles were blocked by an earlier avalanche, Ecuador's Civil Defense office said.

The tragedy occurred early Tuesday about 30 miles east of Quito, according to a statement released late Tuesday by civil defense. No other details were immediately available.

The deaths brought to 41 the number of people killed during several days of heavy rains in Ecuador's Andes Mountains.

Meanwhile, nearly 2,500 other people, mostly in Ecuador's eastern and southern Amazon region, were forced to evacuate their homes because of rivers overflowing their banks, officials said.

A landslide also ruptured Ecuador's main oil pipeline, sending flames shooting into the air.

Rodolfo Barniol, president of Petroecuador, said the rupture is expected cut off transport of crude oil for four to five days.

The landslides near the village of Papallacta, about 30 miles east of the capital, Quito, had damaged a 200-foot stretch of the oil pipeline. He said the landslides had also ruptured a 500-foot section of a nearby pipeline carrying home cooking gas.

Barniol said in an interview with Radio Quito that technicians would take "between four and five days to repair both lines." He added that there was no danger of gas or oil shortages as a result of the damage.

Between 800 and 1,000 barrels of gas had escaped and was on fire, and some 10,000 barrels of crude had also spilled nearby, he said.

Sheriff shorted on funding for vests

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

Federal funds for bulletproof vests for the Midland County Sheriff's Department will be less than what sheriff's officials originally anticipated.

The Midland County Sheriff's office will receive $2,861.46 from the federal government to purchase bulletproof vests for county deputies, District Attorney's Office investigators and Midland constables under a federal grant provided by the Bureau of Justice Assistance Bulletproof Vest Program.

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest announced Monday that Midland's share of a nationwide pool of $25 million would come in, but Sheriff Gary Painter said the amount approved falls short of the amount actually requested under the Justice Department's matching grant program.

"This drastically reduces the number of vests we can get," Painter said.

Painter said they put in a request for $7,000 — $3,500 of which would come from Midland County. Painter added the vest company they were planning to order from would provide a bulk order discount, but without the extra money, the county is not likely to get the jackets at the discounted price, which cost between $400 and $700 each.

The program is set up to provide 50 percent of the funding to populations with less than 100,000 people. And while the U.S. Department of Justice doled out the money with potential to provide each jurisdiction with one new vest per officer per year, some jurisdictions received more funding than others.

Rick Lain, a technical assistant operating the application portion of the program for the Department of Justice said applications for the program poured in causing officials to decrease appropriations for everyone.

"We never anticipated we'd receive that many applications," Lain said.

Lain explained that populations more than 100,000 received only 20 percent of the requested amount, while those less than 100,000 received 35 percent of the grant request.

Odessa is set to receive $6,999 under the program applying only as a city police jurisdiction while Midland applied as a county. With a county population more than 116,000, Midland County received only 20 percent of the requested amount, while Odessa's population of 91,572 set them well within the limits to receive 35 percent of their requested amount.

Odessa Police Sgt. Debbie Whitson said their department will be

BBB warns of electricity scam spreading in the Permian Basin

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

The Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin is warning consumers and investors about a new scam claiming to give residents free electricity.

The electricity scam asks for $5 to become an investor/user of a new technology that doesn't exist, said Permian Basin BBB President Dick Rowland. He said the con artist is attempting to spread this scam to West Texas — a scam that originally started in the late 1980s.

"We've had a few call on it. Mostly what we're getting is this spread like a multi-level marketing thing," Rowland said. "People have a very loose understanding of how this stuff works, and they want to get the best deal they can, but the way this operates ... it's just impossible."

The scam requires a payment of $5 — and for an additional $9.50 plus shipping costs — people can get a videotape demonstrating how the machine, which generates electricity, operates.

The idea is fairly simple. The machine, while working under the power of a home's electricity, generates more power with a "new technology" so the scam victim can sell that power back to the utility company as well as neighbors.

Then for each person who sends in $5, he or she can sign up others for the generator. To sign up, each new requester of this generator must send in five dollars. The problem is that no one has received the generator, which is supposedly free.

However, a close look at flyers, Internet pages and the actual registration form with International Tesla Electric Company show a complete glimpse at what the company plans.

The actual contract states, "You will never be required to pay anything to receive the technology 'if and when' it is ready for application to homes in the USA."

Further examination shows the scam is not illegal because the registration form states, "The company acknowledges your position in line for the use of a FREE ELECTRICITY MACHINE to be delivered and installed on your home, 'if and when' they are available."

The actual contract gives the suspected con artists another loophole adding ITEC generators "to be placed if and when (ITEC) make the units available."

Rowland said the enticement is as Proposed Midland visitor's center on historic road begins approval process

By Andrea Fryrear
MRT Correspondent

After months of planning, the Midland Chamber of Commerce is ready to send off its funding application for the $1 million visitors center the Chamber hopes to build on Old Rankin Highway — also known as Interstate 20.

The funding for the center is based on committee approval. Monday marks the deadline for the funding applications.

For the past two months, the Chamber has been working on research and applications to receive funding from the Statewide Transportation Enhancement Program of the Texas Department of Transportation.

According to Shura Lindgren, the Director of Convention and Visitor Development at the Chamber, there are 12 to 13 categories the Chamber could have made applications under. The Chamber chose Category 4, a visitors center with regard to a scenic or historic highway program.

Under Category 4, the Midland Chamber of Commerce had to establish that a highway in the county had scenic or historical significance, which Ms. Lindgren says they certainly did with Rankin Highway.

"Midland is the oil center of West Texas because of Rankin Highway," explained Debra Westmoreland, who assisted the Chamber in its application process.

"That has really been the importance behind the project. We want to let people know of the heritage that lies behind Rankin Highway."

With the help of Nancy McKinley of the Midland County Historic Museum, Ms. Westmoreland and the Chamber uncovered the engaging history of Rankin Highway, which will form the foundation of the proposed visitors center.

According to Ms. Lindgren, Rankin Highway's significance began in the 1900s, when it was the only means of transportation for residents of Upton County to get goods and supplies from Midland.

The postal line to Midland developed along Rankin Highway. And when the Santa Rita started the oil boom in West Texas, the road was quickly paved to provide rapid transportation to scouts and samplers, and ensure Midland's place as the center of the petroleum industry.

"It has been a fascinating experience to learn what an important part a transportation venue could play in a city's development," Ms. Westmoreland said.

The extensive research was necessary to complete the applications, which Ms. Westmoreland says are complicated and packed with questions. She is gathering all her data and materials and preparing to send them in for approval — a three-step process Ms. Lindgren says could take as much as year to complete.

"The City Council's approval was the first step and we have passed that hurdle," she explained.

The City Council passed a resolution

Just when it all seems to be over — student loan payback

By Hillary S. Condon

The happy college graduate. He walks across the stage in his perfectly pressed gown, his mortarboard cap with the tassel now hanging over the left side of his face. He accepts his degree, shakes the hands offered to him and returns to his seat.

Soon after, he hopes to start a new, exciting career in his chosen field and has dreams of financial success in the future.

Then the bill comes.

The unfortunate thing about a loan repayment grace period is that it's just enough time for our happy graduate to forget about his debts. Even if the college student with loans has not graduated, he is required to start loan repayment within six months of leaving school.

Six months after a student graduates, lenders assume the education they paid for will have led to a job. If the payments do not begin after the grace period is over, credit agencies and the federal government may get involved to elicit payment.

"The jig is up once the federal government joins in," said Midland College Dean of Enrollment Robert Haines, who works with students to acquire student loans and grants. "But it's important to remember that it can all be avoided if you

MATT JOSEFY

Even on a volunteer, part-time basis, it is still America's pastime

Maybe I wasn't a first round draft pick (my congrats to Jayson), but I'm proud to announce that I got picked up off waivers last week.

Yep, I got waived from my Mid-City Cubs back in the 7th grade, but last week I took the field again — admittedly playing a slightly different game.

"I've never thrown a softball in my life," I warned them. "And I haven't played ball at all since junior high."

Josefy

But they refused to listen. "Every intern needs to play," the coach told me. "I don't care if they're any good or not; they at least need to be out here trying."

I dusted off my glove — complete with some major leaguer's duplicated signature, for which he received a handsome salary — more than I'll make this year I'm sure (Hmmm... maybe I could set up an autograph stand and sell Bulldog autographs on commission. There's no U.I.L. up here to deal with; but then they probably don't exactly know or care too much about Texas baseball here either. Oh well.).

When the subs went in, naturally I had started on the bench, I bravely summoned all my courage and manned right-center field.

The other team must have sensed the rookie-like fear emanating from behind my sunglasses. They tested me right away, as they very well should have. It figured that with my luck I got the hardest fly ball of the night — the kind that go straight back over your head and you're not sure which way to turn and run. I instinctively began running back and to my left.

My instincts were a little rusty. I tried to flip around and go back the other way, but that wasn't happening.

I tripped to the ground and the scorekeeper triumphantly marked an E on No. 9. I was kicking myself.

It got worse in the bottom half of the inning when I swung the bat twice and sat right back down, adding neither to the "R" column or even the "H" column, but the "K" column (This league starts the count at 1-1 to speed up play).

The second game of the doubleheader was substantially better. I fielded the one ground ball that came my way successfully, but the second baseman speared my line drive to end the game.

Little did I realize when I signed up to play that softball was to become a part-time job. Sunday afternoons in the Oklahoma heat are spent shagging balls, doing fielding drills and hitting dozens of balls and usually we practice another day during the week also.

Quickly the wannabe A-Rod in me surfaces, with emphasis on the wannabe. They say practice makes perfect. I'm not sure about that, but I can tell you practice definitely increases your probabilities. My hit at the next game still defied all odds.

It was a hard hit ball to first base, if I do say so myself. Considering this is a slow-pitch church league, you might be more likely to understand exactly how the first baseman failed to stop the routine groundball.

But still, I thought to myself as I rounded first and began a sprint towards second, I had at least gotten a hit. I slid into second, beating the throw without too much difficulty. I stood up and began dusting myself, somehow missing whatever happened next. When I awoke from my trance, I heard the third base coach screaming at me. It was then that I noticed the ball lying on the grass on the left side of the infield.

My out-of-shape body screamed at me as I tried to turn on the acceleration. By the time I touched the bag, the ball had been transported to the backstop behind home plate. Once again, I pumped my legs as fast as I could and slid under the tag at home plate.

HOME RUN!!!

"That was the ugliest home run I've ever seen, if you can call it that," the coach told me later that evening. I think the official scorekeeper said something about a couple of errors, but I couldn't care less.

I just shook my head and shook a couple hands on my way back to the dugout.

Mark McGwire I am not, but that didn't matter. I'd scored a run, and stirred up so much excitement in the stands that I may as well have hit a grand slam.

There is a moral to that story, but I'm still trying to figure out what it is so I'll have to get back to you on that.

Needless to say I haven't won any MVP awards, but I am proud to announce I am in the running for most improved. Due to some personnel issues (our first baseman was either holding out for more money or was on vacation), I was nominated to play first base during the next game. I gobbled that ball up like, well, like the first baseman was supposed to.

We won the game, despite my three groundouts that ended three of the six innings.

Now I sit here, mentally preparing myself for our doubleheader tonight.

America's pastime they call it. I'm not quite sure what is so enjoyable about swinging a stick at a ball, racing to get back to exactly where you started, and then letting somebody else take a turn doing the same thing.

But I sure have a good time doing it. And I've gotten to know the kids I'm working with pretty well in the process.

Maybe I missed my calling. I may never take an at-bat as a Houston Astro, a Texas Ranger or even a Midland High Bulldog, but you can bet your Cracker Jacks that I'm going to stay on this team no matter how many errors I make this year.

the sole benefactor of the money, which will purchase about 30 vests to protect officers from gunfire.

"We've actually had officers shot at. Unfortunately, I have been shot at," Whitson said.

Combest said in his announcement he strongly supports the program, seeing it as a program that helps protect law enforcement officers.

"This funding helps protect the folks who protect you. I strongly support this program, which is not only an investment in a better-equipped local law enforcement, but also an investment in our community," Combest said.

The program allows for the purchase of vests approved by the National Institute of Justice. The protective vest shields the chest, back and abdominal areas, but is not a guarantee to save an officer's life. However, the vest does add to the officer's safety.

Southern Baptists to focus on divorce within church

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The denomination that sees itself at war with American culture over divorce, gay rights and the place of faith in daily life revealed plans Tuesday to turn a critical eye on itself.

Disturbed by the high divorce rate among born-again Christians, the Southern Baptist Convention's Council on Family Life is developing a blueprint for churches on preparing couples for marriage and ministering to single parents.

Few details have been finalized, but the aim is to strengthen the church and have Southern Baptist families serve as models for non-Christian couples, said the Rev. Thomas Elliff, who leads the council.

"It is our conviction that a healthy God-centered family ... is a winsome testimony," Elliff said on the first day of the two-day annual meeting of the country's largest Protestant denomination at the Louisiana Superdome.

The national divorce rate is estimated to be between 40 percent and 50 percent, and Elliff said some studies indicate the divorce rate among born-again Christians is similar.

LOANS: Government can garnish wages if debt not paid

let your loaners know you're unable to make payments."

The way to avoid the surprise, according to a new advice booklet released by the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corporation, is to treat student loan debt like any other debt — and to realize it must be paid after a student has been out of school for six months, even if he or she did not graduate, cannot find a job or did not receive a quality education.

"There's no reason any student should be unaware," said Haines. "Every school is required to do entrance and exit counseling, and we make sure the students know they have to pay them back."

Haines said students are often confused about repayment because the loan changes hands many times before the student is required to start paying it back. When a student enrolls, he or she usually accepts a loan from a bank. The loan is then sold to a secondary market, an organization like Sallie Mae or Panhandle Plains, which consolidates and services the loan.

"The loan could change hands 10 times before a student even has to start repayment," Haines said. And the changing of hands has just begun if a student falls into default with his loan repayment.

Midland College students like Bud Davis have to deal with the confusion before and after the acceptance of student loans. Davis is studying business management under the Lubbock Christian Program, which allows 18 months for associates degree holders to get a bachelor of science degree. He said he will try to get grants before he applies for any loans.

"I want to take out as many grants as possible, so I don't have to pay them back," he said. "I am very illiterate about the requirements and policies about loans."

Davis's situation is not unusual, although many students, like freshman Alma Sanchez, count on scholarships and local support and avoid the hassle of loans and loan repayment.

"MC is unique, because we've got a lot of community support and lots of grants and scholarships," she said. "Most of us don't need the hassle, anyway."

It is also important to remember that continuing education may not stop the continuing payments.

Yolanda Marinelarena is a graduate student at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and will graduate with a master's of Bilingual Education in August. She has grants to cover her master's, but had to apply for loans for her undergraduate degree.

"I just didn't have the resources to to go college otherwise," she said. "So I needed them to help pay for my bachelor's. The school was very helpful, very proactive about making sure I didn't take out more than I needed."

The TGSLC is the agency between the school, the lender, the federal government and the student, and takes over the loan in the case of default. Then the federal government may take over, and even contract the debt to a private collection agency.

If the loan payments do not resume after that, the federal government can track down the former student, and can garnish wages, withhold income tax refunds, even stop an accountant, law, medical or other certification from being renewed until the debt is repaid.

Haines also said loan default is not claimed until at least six months have passed since the last loan payment after payments have begun. Even then, there are a number of deferment options for people who simply cannot repay the loan.

Susan Orosco and Marisela Gonzalez both work in the Financial Aid Office at UTPB, and took out student loans to cover expenses.

"I got grants and all that, but I had to take out loans for other expenses," said Ms. Orosco. "My tuition was covered, but then the cost of books and housing was too much."

UTPB asks students interested in loans to complete "Mapping your future," an Internet-based program by TGSLC that outlines the requirements, benefits and responsibilities of student loans.

"We have tons of students who come in for student loans," said Ms. Gonzalez, who graduated from UTPB this past May and now works as a financial aid counselor. "This helps, because it gives a detailed explanation of repayment, default, consolidation, everything. You have to know all about it before you can pull out a loan."

TGSLC's new handbook, called "New Directions: A Guide to Repaying Your Student Loans," details the interest rates and various payment plan options available to student loan recipients. It can be accessed at www.tgslc.org.

Now the application will move to a committee of 6 state-wide organizations that will vote on a ranking for the visitors center based on "how close it comes to the type of project they want to spend their money on," said Ms. Lindgren.

If the Midland Chamber's application receives a medium or high ranking from this committee, Ms. Lindgren says it will move on to a group of three state commissioners for its final approval.

DPS unveils new look for underage driver licenses

By Connie Mabin
Associated Press

AUSTIN — New vertical driver licenses for people under the age of 21 were unveiled Tuesday by the Texas Department of Safety, where officials hope the new design will help deter underage drinking and tobacco use.

The design also comes with beefed up security features aimed at making it harder to make fakes.

The legal drinking age is 21 in Texas, where tobacco products can be legally sold to people 18 and older.

"We're hopeful the new under 21 design will make it much easier for merchants who sell age restrictive products, like alcohol and tobacco, to identify underage consumers," said Col. Thomas A. Davis Jr., DPS director. "Added security features will provide law enforcement with additional tools to more easily identify counterfeit and altered licenses."

The licenses will be up-and-down, compared to the current Texas driver's license, which is horizontal, like a credit card. The person's photo will be at the bottom, instead of on the right and a picture of the Texas Capitol is in the background.

Licenses for people 21 and over will remain horizontal, but will include the new security features and Capitol design.

Last year, the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission issued 24,016 alcohol-related citations and warnings to minors in Texas. That doesn't count the thousands more issued by local law enforcement.

Of those TABC citations, 176 were issued for minors using fake or altered IDs. Thirty-nine warnings were issued.

"Obviously, there's an underage drinking problem in Texas and the current design of the licenses hasn't been doing what it needs to do," said Bill Lewis, legislative liaison for the state chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

The vertical licenses are "not going to stop the underage drinking problem, but it will help," Lewis said.

The licenses will make it easier for merchants, wait staff and others selling alcohol to recognize underage customers, he said.

Businesses "do not want to break the law. It's just not worth it for whatever the profit it may be on a six pack," Lewis said.

Anyone under 21 who has applied for a driver's license as of June 1 will get the new version. The horizontal style will be phased out over the next six years, the DPS said.

SCAM: Law enforcement waiting for Lee to slip up tricky as its suspected creator.

"This thing is a scam. The guy who set this up has been involved in a variety of scams and con games, a lot," Rowland said.

That suspected creator is Dennis Lee, who operated in New Jersey before operating scams all over the nation. Lee travels the country charging people up to $275 for admission to see his operation and explanation of this electricity generating machine.

In these seminars, people claiming to have severe misgivings for the potential of the electricity generating machine stand and make praise for Lee's proving demonstration. Other spectators have grown suspect believing the reverse saying praising audience members were people planted in the audience.

One Midland resident who paid for the service continues to receive mail from the company. According to those documents, Lee and his company are planning a similar demonstration in Austin in October of this year.

To make matters more cumbersome, ITEC explains the reason for the wait for distribution of this invention is to accumulate a waiting list of 1.6 million.

In a frequently asked questions sheet distributed by a company associated with ITEC, they explain a demonstration was conducted in the late 1980s by Lee, but shortly after the demo, "law enforcement officials raided his headquarters and took all of the technology and all of the records (technology and financial)."

It also explain Lee realized his invention was released without a strong public demand for the product that would help overcome "the powers that be," which the FAQ lists as a "tragic mistake."

Rowland believes this to be a fictionalized account to garner support for Lee and his free electricity generator.

Meanwhile, while more and more people catch onto Lee's scam in the Permian Basin, law enforcement and judicial officials all over the nation wait for Lee to slip up and prove to make his very own tragic mistake in falsely s[illegible] products that do not exist.

Group to fast six days for dolphins

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Animal rights activists are on a six-day hunger strike to call attention to their opposition to a proposed dolphin exhibit at the Texas State Aquarium.

The activists will not eat and will drink only water, said Ernest Samudio of Action for Animals, an Austin-based organization that is among the groups participating. The hunger strike began Monday.

The protesters believe that dolphin exhibits harm dolphins, causing them health and mental problems.

Thomas Schmid, the aquarium's executive director, said the exhibit wouldn't harm dolphins and that the new facility is the best way to educate people about the mammals.

"If you talk to the average person, they think this kind of exhibit is essential to teaching people about dolphins and gaining support for their preservation," Schmid said.

A proposed 25,000-square-foot dolphin exhibit with outside and underwater viewing areas is expected to open in spring 2003.

Eric Clapton to retire from globe-trotting, but not from touring

LOS ANGELES — Don't fit Eric Clapton for that gold watch yet.

Retirement isn't on the horizon for the blues virtuoso despite persistent rumors to the contrary, a Clapton spokeswoman said.

In interviews promoting the U.S. leg of his world tour, the 56-year-old Clapton has said this will be his last globe-circling marathon. But that doesn't mean he's retiring, said Clapton spokeswoman Ronnie Lippin, who said the guitarist's remarks have spurred an avalanche of rumors to that effect.

"He probably will do smaller tours and he's going to honor all the commitments he's made for 2001," Lippin told The Associated Press on Monday. "He will be recording in the future. The only thing he won't commit to doing again is 12 months on the road.

"The last time he did this was 10 years ago," she said of a year-long world tour. "He's in his 50s now, and he figures he's not going to want to be doing another of those tours 10 years from now."

The U.S. portion of Clapton's current tour ends Aug. 18 in Los Angeles. But Lippin said overseas dates will be announced in the next few weeks.

ST. LOUIS — Rap star Nelly has filed a complaint with TWA, saying he received poor treatment during a flight because he's black.

The 23-year-old rapper said a flight attendant refused to give him a pillow as he sat in first class from St. Louis to Denver on Saturday.

He said when he got up later to find one, the pilot ordered him back to his seat and threatened him with arrest if he failed to do so.

Minutes later, the attendants gave Nelly two pillows, but he said police officers were waiting at the gate when the plane landed in Denver. He said he tried to get the pilot's name to file a complaint, but police told him to leave the gate or he'd be arrested.

"The way it escalated was a result of me being a black man," said the rapper, who complained to the airline on Monday.

TWA spokesman Mark Abels denied Nelly's account of the confrontation and said a witness backed up the airline.

Nelly was in St. Louis last weekend taking part in a charity fundraiser, the St. Lunatics Celebrity Basketball Benefit. His hit "Ride Wit Me" has been in the top five of the Billboard singles chart for the past month.

LOS ANGELES — "Dumb & Dumber" co-star Lauren Holly and her husband have adopted an infant son.

The 37-year-old actress and her investment banker husband Francis Greco were present when Alexander Joseph Greco was born five weeks ago, said her publicist, Brad Cafarelli. It's the couple's first child.

No other details were disclosed.

Holly stars opposite Patrick Stewart and Marcia Gay Harden in the upcoming TNT film "King of Texas."

NEW YORK — Don Cheadle wants to make it easier to reach out and touch him — but not too easy.

The co-star of "Swordfish" and last year's "Traffic" said he'd like to start a Web site for his fans, because he hasn't always liked how they've contacted him.

"It would involve what I'm doing now and what's going on and how to get in touch with me," Cheadle said. "Because I was getting a lot of mail at my house, a lot of fan mail at my house, and some fan sent me a letter with the last six addresses that I have lived in the letter."

But the 36-year-old actor admits he's not the most computer savvy guy.

"I don't know much about it. I mean, I want to know more, but I don't want to get more involved," he said. "I'm kinda mistrustful of the conduit that the Internet is, and all that access, because I feel like you're being as watched as you are watching."

NEW YORK — Michael J. Fox, the voice behind the young explorer Milo in "Atlantis: The Lost Empire," is narrating an interactive digital book version of the new Disney film.

"Spending quality time with my kids is a passion in my life," Fox said in a statement Monday. "And one of the things we do together is read stories — it's some of the best times that we share."

Through Friday, the book is available through the Random House (http://www.randomhouse.com/kids) and Radio Disney (http://radiodisney.com) Web sites.

The 40-year-old actor suffers from Parkinson's disease, and Random House has made a donation to the Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research.

"Atlantis: The Lost Empire" has opened in New York and Los Angeles. It will be in theaters nationwide on Friday.

LOS ANGELES — It was an early Father's Day for actor Blair Underwood.

Seven pound, 2-ounce Blake Ellis Underwood was born Sunday in Los Angeles to Underwood and his wife, Desiree, publicist Lee Wallman said.

The couple have a 4-year-old son and a 2-year-old daughter.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, June 13, 2001:

Expect good things to happen as early as next month. Your optimistic attitude and willingness to keep an open mind help to broaden your horizons this year. Travel could be involved. You might even develop an interest in a new philosophy or religion. News that you have been anticipating could reach you in October. If single, a friendship can turn into a romance early next year. A person from your past might come forward unexpectedly. If already attached, you could find yourself discussing important relationship issues with your partner. Reticence about asserting yourself must be overcome, and only you can do that. PISCES can stir your emotions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Delays are likely, no matter how well you plan. Getting that special feeling of satisfaction might seem unreachable. Only the little steps forward keep you going. If you are traveling, take a book to occupy your mind while you wait. Tonight: Visualize success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You find that everything is happening in slow motion. Little frustrations can get in your way. Try not to let them make you give up. Put financial issues aside for another day. Take time to smell the roses. Notice all the comforts around you. Tonight: Use your imagination.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Don't even try to have a serious discussion with someone right now. Either this person won't remember it, or you'll find yourself in the middle of an argument. Instead, expand your mind with new knowledge about a subject you hadn't considered before. Tonight: Early to bed and early to rise; you know the rest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ If it feels good, do it. But if it involves spending money, keep your head about you. In your present frame of mind, it shouldn't take much to get that special feeling. A box of chocolates will do fine. Tonight: You gain from communication if you keep it light.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You could be at odds with another person now, and the wrong words could come back to haunt you. Challenge your mind with a literary selection or a puzzle rather than mind games with others. Obsess intellectually rather than verbally. Tonight: Physical activity releases tension.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Twisted words and miscommunication continue to rule the next couple of weeks. You can use this time wisely to re-evaluate, redo and rectify something. For best results, put a lid on new ventures until the end of the month. Tonight: Expand your mind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ An opportunity for romance might occur while you are working, or you might have your eye on a special person you wish would pay attention to you. Maybe you just want a little sympathy or understanding now. If that's what you need, ask for it. Tonight: Review the day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You could be feeling emotionally drained if you let things bother you. Try to go with the flow and avoid being overeager. A larger crisis could be a clue that something in your life has to change. Let go of what is no longer needed. Tonight: Allow yourself to have dessert.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Optimism invites extravagances that might or might not be reasonable — only you can decide. Put off making travel plans for a few weeks. You're likely to change your mind before the date of the trip. What feels good now might be undesirable later. Tonight: Enjoy a flick with a friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Why worry about what might happen? Focus, instead, on clearing your mind of all that disturbs you or that keeps you from thinking clearly. Choose your words carefully. Tonight: A surprising connection with another person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ If you're alert, you won't miss an opportunity. Everything depends on your ability to respond quickly. As usual, you're ready for anything new, even if only to break the routine. Stay on your toes. Tonight: Cut out frills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ If you think you can do something, you can. Keep focused on your dreams. It's OK to be guided by your feelings. Do only what feels right. Tonight: A small reward surprises you.

The duel between an expert defender and a master declarer can be fascinating to watch. This one features France's Christian Mari and Taiwan's Patrick Huang, two of the world's great players, in a world team championship encounter.

Had South denied a major in response to the Stayman two clubs, North would have investigated the possibility of playing in a minor. Once South was known to have four hearts, the chances of locating a strong fit in a minor lessened, so North blasted into six no-trump after checking on aces. (By agreement, North's four no-trump was Blackwood, not quantitative.)

West (Mari) led a middling club, won in the closed hand. A low spade was led to the queen, which held as East produced the four, and Huang (South) ran the diamonds, discarding two hearts from hand. On the penultimate diamond, Mari, foreseeing a possible endplay, discarded the four of hearts! On the last diamond he parted with the three of spades.

Declarer next played off the remaining club winners, coming down to the ace and another heart and the king of spades in hand, while Mari discarded the jack of spades. It was now tempting for Huang to exit with a low spade, playing West for the ace of spades and two hearts. However, East's play to the first trick was the four of spades, showing an odd number of spades. Declarer, therefore, deduced that West still held the ace and another spade and only one heart.

The odds favored East, who clearly had started with heart length, to hold the king, and so a finesse was called for, but West's early discard of a heart from a doubleton would have been a rather strange choice. Backing his card-reading ability against cold, hard mathematical figures, Huang led the queen of hearts and, when East followed with nine, rose with the ace. The king came tumbling

Parents arrested after malnourished girl found in closet

By Susan Parrott
Associated Press

HUTCHINS — A South Dallas County couple locked an 8-year-old girl in a dark, lice-infested closet for four months, where she was wrapped in a urine-stained blanket and ate bits of bread and water, police said Tuesday.

"It appears this suspected abuse may have been ongoing for several months or even years," Hutchins Police Chief Gregory Griffin said Tuesday.

Lauren Calhoun weighed only 25 pounds, about half what she should have, when she was rescued Monday night. When officers arrived, she was sitting at the kitchen table eating spaghetti.

"She was eating as fast as she could," Hutchins Police Officer Gary McClain said. He said the girl, who was filthy with matted hair, was the size of a toddler.

"When I looked in her eyes, it looked like she'd been in a dungeon for days and days. I thought, 'My God, how can anybody do that?"

But the girl was talking and in good spirits, McClain said.

"She probably thought coming to the dinner table was the highlight of her night," he said.

Officials said the girl had spent much of her time in a 4- by 8-foot closet that was littered with human waste and soiled clothing.

Lauren was in serious but stable condition at Children's Medical Center of Dallas, where she was being treated for malnutrition. Officials said the child's skin was peeling on her back and buttocks, her teeth were broken and her stomach was bloated.

Police said the girl was 3 feet tall and should have been about 4 feet tall.

The girl's mother, Barbara Catherine Atkinson, 30, and stepfather, Kenneth Ray Atkinson, 33, were charged Tuesday with injury to a child and were being held in the Dallas County Jail. Atkinson also faces an outstanding charge of theft by check and probation violation in Ellis County.

Dallas County Magistrate Dorothy Shead recommended bond of $100,000 for each.

Five other children in the home, ranging from 22 months old to 11 years, were placed in emergency foster care. Police said it did not appear they were malnourished, although the mobile home they lived in was filled with dirty clothes, trash and pet feces.

The child's siblings told investigators that Lauren was often locked in the closet for "eating too much and running away," according to investigators' court affidavits obtained by The Dallas Morning News. The affidavit also said Lauren's 11-year-old sister said none of the other siblings were treated that way and Lauren was kept in the closet, "when she is bad. She states that she is bad a lot."

CPS will ask a Dallas County judge today to take temporary custody of the six children.

The newspaper reported that CPS investigators had twice before tried to look into allegations of child abuse, but the family moved before investigators could question them.

McClain said Kenneth Atkinson told a neighbor at the Pebble Creek Mobile Home Park about the girl Monday evening. Joe Rivers, the neighbor, then went to the fire station and contacted police.

When police arrived, Atkinson was feeding Lauren. The girl's mother was gone.

Atkinson provided birth certificates and immunization records for the children, McClain said. Barbara Atkinson was arrested when she returned home around 2 a.m. Tuesday. Police did not say where she had been, but the newspaper reported she had been gone for six days and apparently was returning to get the other five children.

Rivers said he had befriended the man and that their children played together at the mobile home park. But he didn't know until Monday that the 8-year-old was living with the family.

He said he wished he could have helped earlier.

"I sat at his kitchen table playing cards," Rivers said, crying. "That just makes me sick."

Rivers said Kenneth Atkinson blamed his wife for the abuse, saying it continued in some form for 18 months.

"He said that she (the mother) couldn't control the child. But if you'd seen the child, what kind of trouble could she have caused?"

Barbara Atkinson's sister, Rene Allen, told the newspaper she does not believe the allegations. She said relatives saw Lauren at Christmas and did not suspect anything was wrong.

"There's so many things being said that are not true," she said.

But the mother's brother, who refused to disclose his name, told the newspaper that he and his family had not seen the girl for at least two years.

Every time he inquired about her, he said her mother replied that she was staying with friends.

"We're all floored about it," he said. "We're going to cooperate with the district attorney and CPS to help however we can. We're not that type of people. This isn't real."

The stepfather did not seek help, Rivers said, because he feared authorities would take away all the kids, three of which were his biological children.

"He feels terrible," Rivers said. "He said the nightmares were killing him. But he was terrified of losing those kids."

Perry has problems with execution bill

By Chris Roberts
Associated Press

EL PASO — Gov. Rick Perry said Tuesday he has problems with a bill to ban the execution of mentally retarded killers because he says it fundamentally changes the jury system.

"If this bill becomes law, it would change our jury system process to where a judge, a single judge, can override the will of a jury," Perry said at a news conference held at the University of Texas-El Paso. "I have a real problem with that."

However, Perry said he hasn't decided whether to sign the bill, veto it or let it become law without his signature as a Sunday deadline approaches.

According to the Death Penalty Information Center in Washington, D.C., 14 states have laws banning the execution of mentally retarded people. The center says, since 1990, Texas has executed six convicted killers who were mentally retarded.

"We should never execute anybody who is mentally retarded," President Bush said Monday in a roundtable discussion in Washington with a group of European reporters. "And our court system protects people who don't understand the nature of the crime they committed, not the punishment they're to receive."

Bush, the governor of Texas before he was elected president, has consistently defended the justice system in Texas, the nation's most active death penalty state.

'If this bill becomes law, it would change our jury system process to where a judge, a single judge, can override the will of a jury.'

— Gov. Rick Perry

There has been some confusion over the definition of mentally retarded. Many of the states banning the executions set an IQ level of 70 as the cutoff for being considered mentally retarded. A person determined to be sane enough to stand trial and who understands the difference between right and wrong still could be considered mentally retarded.

On Tuesday, Perry at first said, "We don't execute the mentally retarded in Texas," but he then added, "An individual that does not know right from wrong is not executed in Texas today."

Later in the day, Perry referred to the case of John Paul Penry, who was convicted for the 1979 rape and murder of Pamela Moseley Carpenter at Carpenter's home in Livingston.

"Mr. Penry knew right from wrong," Perry said.

On June 5, the U.S. Supreme Court threw out Penry's death sentence stating that jurors didn't receive clear instructions on the mental retardation issue.

Perry said he will leave the definition of mental retardation up to the U.S. Supreme Court, which is expected to rule on the issue based on a North Carolina case.

In that case, Ernest McCarver, described by his lawyer as having the mind of a 10-year-old, was sentenced to death for the 1987 murder of a 71-year-old cafeteria worker who had befriended him.

Even some prosecutors say mentally retarded people shouldn't be executed, but they are concerned about the standard for retardation and whether it can be faked.

Dianne Clements, president of Justice for All, a Houston-based victims' rights advocacy group, said the group has asked Perry to veto the bill.

Clements said the convicted murderers are still responsible for their actions.

"They hide. They lie. They deflect responsibility. They're violent criminals," she said.

'Hounds rally late, but it's not enough in loss

■ Midland falls in 7-0 hole, drops 9-7 decision to Tulsa Drillers at Christensen.

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

As the winds of West Texas pick up, so did the Midland RockHounds' offense after a sluggish start in Tuesday's game against the Tulsa Drillers at Christensen Stadium.

Unfortunately for the RockHounds, as much as Mother Nature tried to help their cause, the early hole that Midland dug for itself proved to be too much to overcome in a 9-7 win by the Drillers, who took three out of the four games in the series.

Down 7-1 going into the eighth inning, the 'Hounds needed some sort of a lift if they expected to earn at least a split in the series. They got one in the form of some strong dusty wind gusts blowing in from right field. It was enough to make many of the Tulsa players bury their heads in their gloves to avoid getting dirt in their eyes. It also made the Midland bats come to life. Up to that point, Midland had only scattered four hits against Tulsa starter Corey Lee (4-7).

Midland got back-to-back singles from Rusty Keith and Oscar Salazar. Salazar would later score off a Ryan Ludwick single to close to within 7-3 of the Drillers.

In the top of the ninth, Tulsa added two insurance runs which proved to be huge. Harry Berrios led off the inning with his second home run of the day — a wind-aided solo blast over the left field wall. Dave Meliah then followed with a single and later scored on a double play groundout for a 9-3 lead.

Things got very interesting in the bottom of the ninth as Midland rallied with three straight one-out singles by Jay Pecci, Brian Luderer and Esteban German to load the bases. Derrick Cook, in relief of Lee, then walked Keith to walk in a run.

Not taking any chances, Tulsa manager brought in J.J. Pearsall from the bullpen. Pearsall did his job by striking out a swinging Salazar for the second out.

Down to the final out, Jacques Landry, the leading home run hitter in the Texas League, then hit a Pearsall pitch deep into dead center field. Tulsa center fielder Corey Wright must have thought he had good positioning to make the catch but then backpedaled when the wind pushed the ball toward the wall. The ball sailed over Wright's head and three runs scored to cut Tulsa's lead to 9-7. Landry ended up at third in what was ruled a triple by the official scorer.

Ludwick, representing the tying run at the plate, also had his pop up do all kinds of crazy things thanks to the wind. The ball popped up and appeared to be an easy out on the first base side. But instead of falling into the glove of first baseman Javier Flores, the ball sailed back toward the infield and landed just to the right of first base. The ball was scooped up by Tulsa second baseman Matt Halloran who was in position to touch the first base bag and end what turned out to be a very crazy ninth inning.

Tulsa took a 7-0 lead before Midland, who was eliminated from the first half Texas League Western Division race on Sunday, finally responded with a run in the sixth inning.

Midland starter Aaron Harang (4-4) took the loss after struggling through seven innings. Three errors, however, didn't help Harang's cause early.

Midland now turns its attention to Wichita, which is fighting for the lead in the Eastern Division

Midlanders do well at West Texas

By Clay Zachery
MRT Correspondent

ODESSA — Three Midland women won their matches in the opening round of the Women's West Texas 67th Annual golf championship held at The Club at Mission Dorado Tuesday afternoon.

Jo Dickson of Midland won her match 4 and 3 over Kasey Hardin to advance to the second round, where she will play the top seed, Marian Barker of Lubbock at 11:20 a.m. today.

Barker shot a 69 in the qualifying round on Monday to earn the top seed.

"When Tiger Woods says he got lucky, I don't believe it. He's just that good. I got lucky today, I think," Dickson said. "Kasey (Hardin) is a very good player, I feel fortunate to have won today."

Putting was the difference as the greens were treacherous on Tuesday.

"I didn't play too good today, I missed a lot of putts," said Midlander Trina Albright, who fell into the consolation bracket after falling to Denise Flores 6 and 4.

On the other end of the spectrum, Dickson made the putts necessary to advance to the second round.

"I made a lot of really good long puts, which is hard to do here," Dickson said.

In a game of inches, luck plays a big part for everyone and it was certainly in Dickson's favor Tuesday.

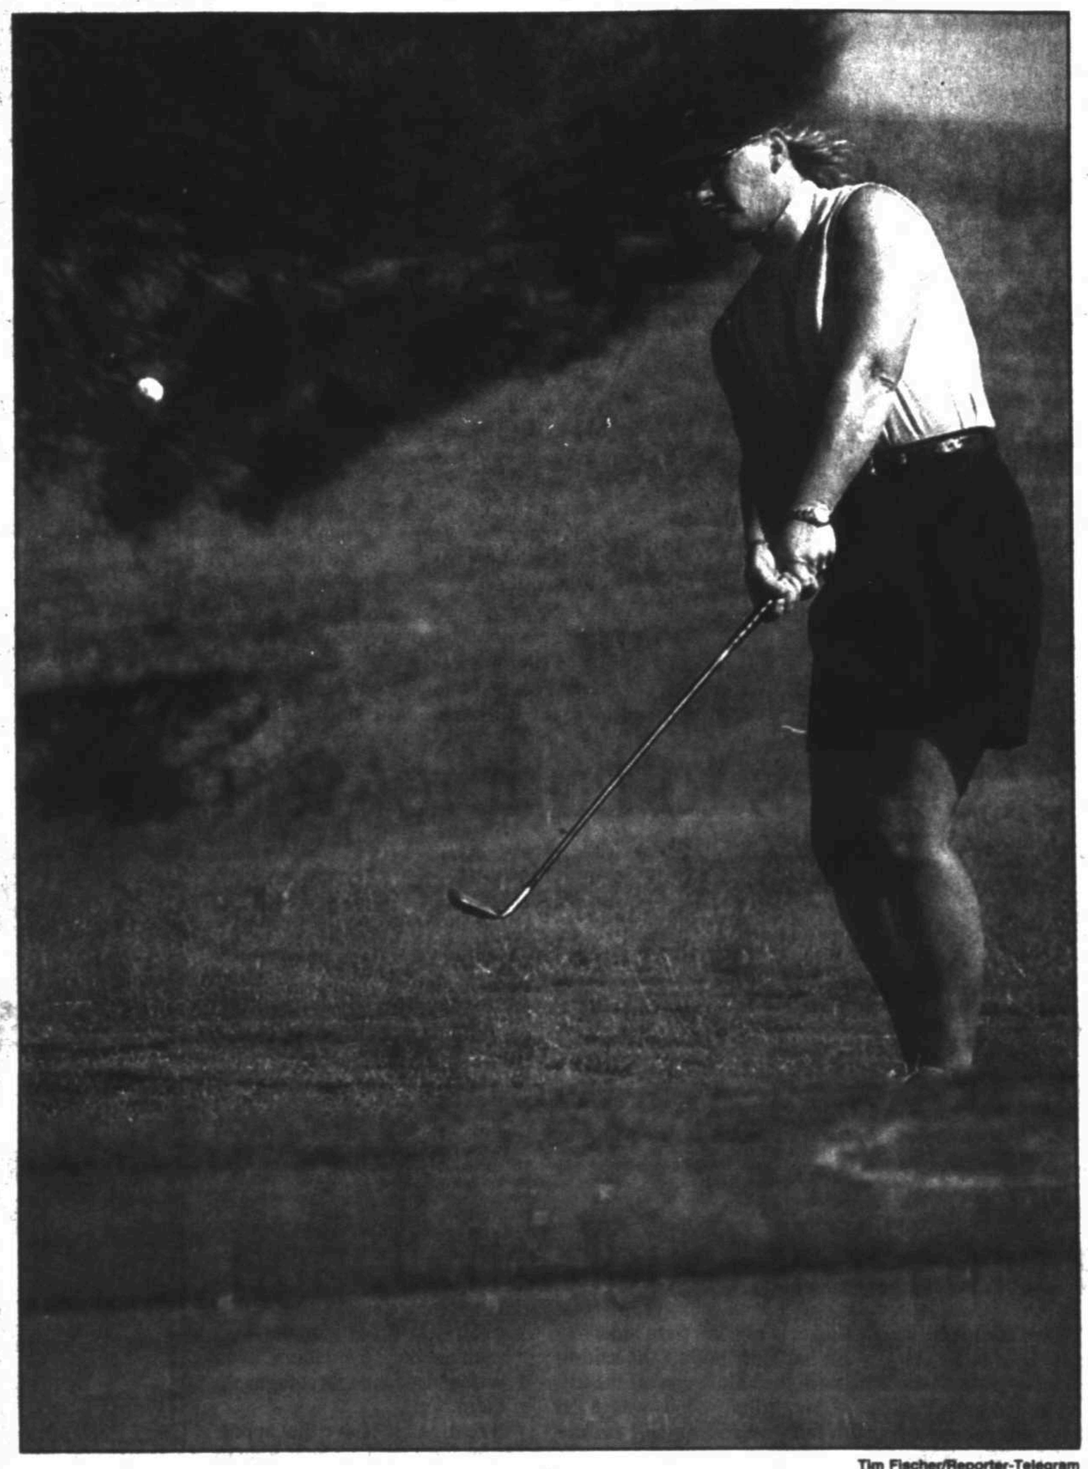

"I stayed out of trouble by getting a lot of good bounces," Dickson said.

Lettia Collins, Midland's highest seeded player (2) also advanced to the second round by defeating Betty Perkins 5 and 4. She will tee off today at 11:30 a.m. against Flores.

Another Midlander and defending champion, Lisa Beck, advanced to the next round by defeating Rosa L. Rios 8 and 6. Beck will play Sandra Hill today at 11:35 a.m. Hill had a tough test on Tuesday in a match with Andrews' LaNell Guelker, winning 2-up through 18.

The three Midlanders moving on to the second round are the 2 seed (Collins) the 3 seed (Beck) and the number 9 seed (Dickson). Both Collins and Beck are higher seeds than their opponents, while Dickson will have to play against Marian

Will Open be Tiger's new fish?

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

TULSA, Okla. — Forget about the power and the precision, or even the deadly touch around the greens. The success of Tiger Woods can be traced to what he did the week before the U.S. Open.

He wasn't on a golf course, but on a river in Utah, fly fishing with Mark O'Meara. Once a novice with a fishing rod, Woods was casting like a pro with nearly flawless loops.

"He kicked my butt," O'Meara said Tuesday. "He doesn't like to lose at anything."

What amazed O'Meara was not so much the competitive nature of Woods, but how much he mastered in such a short time since they first started fly fishing.

"He is an expert at processing information," O'Meara said. "He takes in only what can make him better and manages to discard the old. He always wants to learn how to get better."

That explains why Woods decided to rebuild his swing, step by step, after winning the Masters by 12 strokes. That explains why the best player in the world spends more quality hours refining his swing instead of celebrating where that swing has brought him.

And that explains why Woods arrived at Southern Hills as such an overwhelming favorite that oddsmakers have turned this U.S. Open into Tiger against the field.

"Would I put money on me? Probably not," Woods said. "Just because I don't think it would be a good business decision with those odds."

Then he paused, sensing his remarks could be interpreted the wrong way.

"Now, do I like my chances? Yes, I do."

What's not to like?

The only tournament Woods has failed to win in the last three months was the Byron Nelson Classic, when he returned from his longest layoff of the year and showed signs of rust. He closed with a 63 and tied for third.

When it comes to the majors, Woods has no peer. His two-stroke victory at the Masters gave him an unprecedented clean sweep of the majors. The opportunity that awaits at Southern Hills is to become the first player ever to win five in a row.

Bobby Jones won four straight majors — all in 1930 — when they were the U.S. Open, U.S. Amateur, British Open and British Amateur. Young Tom Morris also won four straight majors, but that was from 1868-72, when the British Open was the only major.

"I'm not trying to win five, I'm trying to win one," Woods said. "Whatever I've done in the

Iverson, Sixers aren't concerned about deficit

By Rob Maaddi
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Allen Iverson playfully revved the engine, sped around the court on a utility cart, stopped near an entrance tunnel and greeted the Los Angeles Lakers upon their arrival for practice.

If Iverson feels any pressure because the Philadelphia 76ers trail the Lakers 2-1 in the NBA Finals, the league's MVP didn't show any signs of it Tuesday.

"I hope everybody's confident. I am," Iverson said.

After concluding his interview in the press room, Iverson returned to the court, saw reporters gathered around teammate Aaron McKie, grabbed a microphone and jokingly asked questions until his arm tired of holding the mike.

Iverson then left the court and emerged driving a cart with his right hand while dribbling a basketball with his left. He maneuvered through a crowd of reporters and cameramen on his way out, came back for another spin minutes later and parked near a tunnel while the Lakers filtered off the team bus.

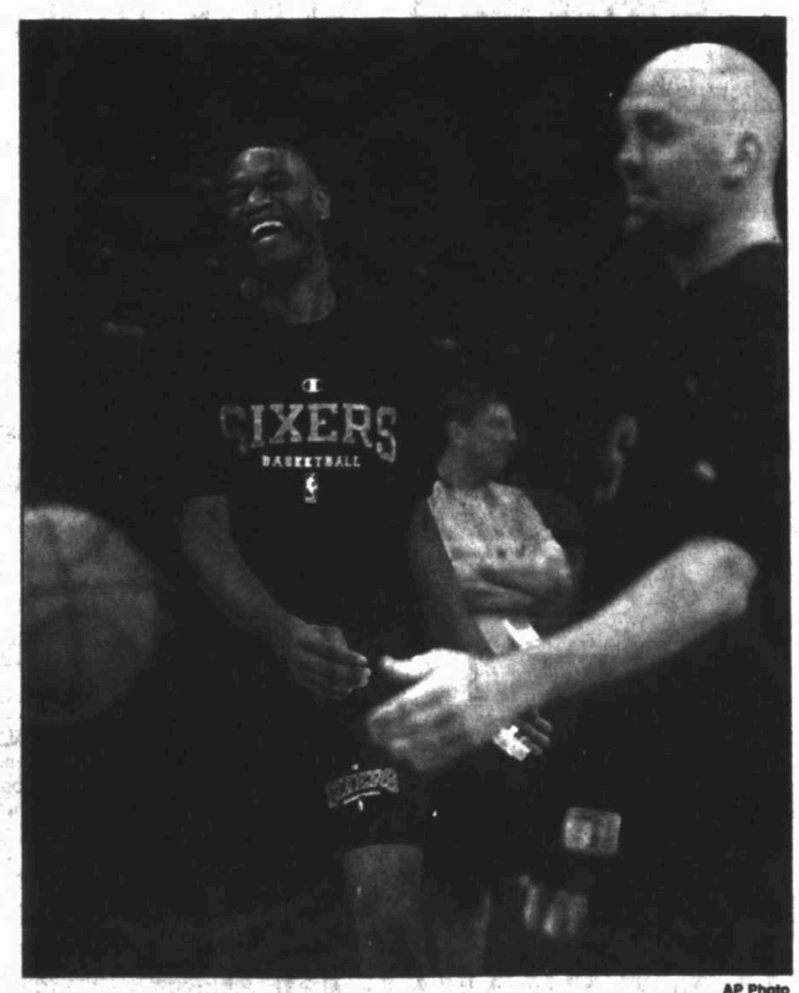

"We hoped he wouldn't crash out, man," Lakers guard Kobe Bryant said. "He was going pretty fast. He cut the corner going pretty fast."

While Iverson showed he was loose on the eve of Game 4, Sixers coach Larry Brown was figuring out who will be available to play Wednesday night.

Small forward George Lynch, sidelined with a broken left foot since May 13, will be in uniform for the first time since Game 4 of the conference semifinals against Toronto. But Brown doesn't know how long he'll be able to go.

Lynch would back up Jumaine Jones at small forward and could see time at power forward in place of Tyrone Hill, who has been ineffective in this series.

"I'm dressing and hopefully he'll put me in," Lynch said. "I'm hoping he won't have to put me in, that we're up 10 the whole game."

The Lakers are looking to take away any hope the Sixers have left after three, grueling, down-to-the-wire finishes. A victory Wednesday practically clinches a second straight championship for Los Angeles.

A loss gives the Sixers all the momentum heading into Friday's Game 5.

"I think it's very pivotal," Lakers guard Derek Fisher said. "They can either tie the series or we can go up 3-1. For both teams, it's a life or death situation."

Philadelphia has been in this position in each of the last two series and responded by winning Game 4 on the road both times.

"There's a lot of pressure on us," said McKie, who needed intravenous fluids to combat fatigue the last two days. "It's important we get this win because we know we're a good road team and we can win in their arena."

The Lakers, however, haven't lost on the road in the postseason. At 6-0, Los Angeles is one victory shy of the record for consecutive road wins set by the Houston Rockets in 1995.

Also, the Lakers are 13-1 in the playoffs, and victories in the next two games would give them the best postseason winning percentage in NBA history. The 1982-83 76ers hold the record of .923 (12-1).

"I wouldn't put too much on that," forward Horace Grant said. "We just want to win the game. We can't worry about being undefeated on the road. We just need to come out, stay focused, take care of this game and let history take care of itself."

The Lakers, prohibitive favorites after sweeping through the playoffs, have had a tougher time than most expected against Philadelphia. If the Sixers hadn't missed 10 free throws in the fourth quarter of Game 2 or hadn't left Robert Horry open to nail a 3-pointer in the closing minute of Game 3, Los Angeles could be facing a 2-1 or 3-0 hole.

"Whether you win by 20 or you win by one, you win," Lakers center

Houston pro teams aiding flood victims

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Four Houston sports franchises, plus one that left town, are chipping in to help flood victims.

Championship memorabilia donated by the Houston Rockets and Comets will be put up for auction this weekend to help those devastated by deadly floods last week related to Tropical Storm Allison.

Houston "has always supported us when we've needed it, and now it's our turn to help our neighbors in need," said Leslie Alexander, who owns the teams.

Some 20,000 Houston-area families were displaced from their homes by raging flood waters.

The Comets' arena, Compaq Center, took on four feet of water. Monday night's game with the Los Angeles Sparks was postponed indefinitely. It was unclear if the arena would be ready for Thursday's game against the Portland Fire.

Nearly 300 items, including autographed jerseys, balls and rings from championship years will be auctioned Saturday. The Rockets won NBA titles in 1994 and 1995 and the Comets have won four straight WNBA championships.

The Astros announced Tuesday they will donate $100,000 to the American Red Cross, a gift matched by major league baseball. The

LOCAL SPORTS

City golf run set

The 38th annual Midland Women's City Golf Tournament will be held July 23-26 with the match play event covering four local courses.

On July 23, the qualifying round will be held at Ranchland Hills Country Club. Entrants with a 16.9 handicap index or less must qualify for the championship and first flights.

Match play begins on July 24 at Midland Country Club and then will move to Green Tree Country Club for the second round on July 25. The tournament ends on July 26 at Hogan Park where championships will be determined in all flights.

To be eligible to enter, you must have been a resident of Midland for a minimum of 30 days with a current established handicap. Entry fee is $30, which does not include cart fees. Deadline for entry is July 17.

For additional information, contact Vera Espinosa at 699-2360.

Odessa hosts Toughman

ODESSA — Over two dozen men and women from the Permian Basin have already called to enter the Coors Original Toughman Contest.

The Toughman event comes to the Ector County Coliseum on June 22-23 at 8 p.m. each night. Tickets can be purchased at Endless Horizona, Luskey's Western Wear, Lechuga's Video, Twin Cities Tigers Boxing Gym and Sound Decisions and charged by phone at 1-800-883-4897. Ticket prices are $20 for Silver Circle, $15 for reserved and $13 for general admission.

The southern U.S. office for Toughman says the calls to enter the event range from humble curiosity like Chuck "The Crusher" Cruise of Midland to experienced aggressors like Raymond "The Jailer" Dobbs.

Fighters interested in participating can go by Neal's Health & Fitness or call 1-800-TUFGUYS to enter. The elimination tournament is divided into three divisions of Light Heavyweight (170-185 pounds), Heavyweights (186-400) and Women's.

Campbell is money leader

Andrews product and former Midland College All-America golfer Chad Campbell has become the leading money winner on the Buy.com Tour.

Campbell has earned $170,540 on the tour this year and leads Jonathan Byrd by just over $3,000. Byrd has earned $167,333. Campbell has played in 10 tour events while Byrd has earned his money in just six tournaments.

Campbell has qualified to play in the U.S. Open this weekend in Tulsa, Okla.

Double eagle

Lane Branum produced a double eagle at Midland Country Club on Sunday by holing his second shot on the par-5 fourth hole.

Branum is a member of the Midland High golf team. He was playing with MHS teammate Blake Braun as well as playing partners Donnie Evans and Billy Munn.

Twosome wins tourney title

Tom Morgan and John Philbeck won the Knights of Columbus 2-man scramble golf tournament on Sunday at Hogan Park.

Pablo Rivera and Renee Molinar took second place while Mo Dominguez and Jesse Reyes placed third.

San Jacinto takes crown

The San Jacinto 7th and 8th grade Junior League Baseball team finished its season over the weekend by capturing the Midland City Championship.

The SJ Rangers finished the season with a perfect 22-0 record in their sweep of league and city titles.

team also plans food and blood drives.

The Astros have made more than 1,600 parking spaces available at Enron Field for downtown workers who have nowhere to park because much of the area's underground parking remained submerged.

The Texans, Houston's expansion NFL team, open their first season in 2002., The team donated $100,000 to the Red Cross, a gift matched by NFL Charities and Tennessee Titans owner Bud Adams, a longtime Houston resident who moved the Houston Oilers to Nashville after the 1996 season.

"Bud and I live across the street from each other, and fortunately we were able to avoid most of the ravages that many of the people in our community were not able to avoid," Texans owner Bob McNair said.

"What we're doing won't solve the problem, but it will offer some assistance and let people know that we are concerned about it," he said. "We're part of the community, and we want to be a participant in helping to find a solution to the problem."

Pierce returning to coach Blast Futbol

Staff Report

Tony Pierce, a former head boys soccer coach at Midland High, is now back in the Tall City.

Shane Barden, coaching director of the Blast Futbol Club, announced Tuesday that Pierce will be joining the club's coaching staff for the upcoming season.

Pierce recently returned from River Forest, Ill., where he was the head men's and women's soccer coach for Concordia University, an NCAA Division III program.

"Obviously, I'm thrilled to have Tony Pierce coaching in the Blast system," said Blast president Mike Ford. "It's not just the Blast players who will benefit, but our soccer community as a whole."

Pierce is looking forward to his new coaching assignment, but knows the challenges ahead.

"Coaching is hard because you must manage 18 players and bring them together under one common goal," Pierce said. "You teach your players about so much more than soccer, like sportsmanship, ethics, teamwork, being a teammate, how to win, how to lose, learning to improve ourselves. Overall, you learn about being a good person, working hard for everything you get and taking pride in you work. I coach to give back to the game that has given me so much."

In high school, Pierce was named All-State and was a Parade Magazine All-America choice. He played on the Junior National Team and toured Italy and Switzerland before returning to the United States to attend the University of Connecticut.

In four years at UConn, Pierce was part of an NCAA Division I championship team. He was also a member of the NCAA Division I Final Four in two more seasons at UConn as a goalie.

The Milwaukee Wave, a professional soccer team, signed Pierce out of college. His career with the Wave lasted eight years, during which he achieved All-Pro Goalkeeper status three times.

"My goal was to play for one team my entire career, but I was shooting for 10 years," Pierce said. "Currently, I am the only player to have played for every coach the Milwaukee Wave has ever had. When Keith Tozer leaves, that little trivia question will change.

"I have always worked hard at whatever I do. Playing for five different coaches with one franchise demonstrated my work ethic and ability to do my job well."

Pierce coached two years at Midland High and had the Bulldogs in the state playoffs.

GOLF: No. 1 seed has to fight for win

(From 1C)

Barker and her No. 1 ranking.

Barker, however, had a rough first round match against No. 16 seed Randi Reed, winning 1-up after 18 holes.

With four groups advancing to the second round, Midland has three of the eight remaining golfers, including the defending champion in Beck.

Beck won the title last year 2-up over Amarillo's Carol Buchanan, and will help to lead the charge as the Midland women take aim at keeping the title at home for another year.

The tournament will continue today with the second round and will be followed by the semifinals on Thursday, with the finals to be held on Friday morning.

Tuesday's match play results from the Women's West Texas golf tournament being held at The Club at Mission Dorado in Odessa.

previous four majors isn't going to help me hit any shots out here. I'm not going to have an out-of-body experience and sit there and watch myself hit a shot."

Any more, it seems like that's what everyone else has been doing — watching him, wondering what it will take to beat him in the most important championships.This week figures to be no different.

A year ago, O'Meara played a practice round with Woods at Pebble Beach on the eve of the U.S. Open and declared to friends that the tournament was over. He was right, as Woods turned in perhaps the greatest performance in history to win by 15 strokes.

O'Meara isn't going to declare this Open to be case closed. Then again ...

"He's primed to play well," O'Meara said. "I wouldn't hesitate at all to say he'll be in the last two groups on Sunday. I don't see any weaknesses in his game."

Mark Calcavecchia joined them for a practice round and reached the same conclusion.

"I've seen him hit it worse and win majors," Calcavecchia said.

Southern Hills is a test unlike any other major over the past three years because of fairways that bend around trees and are framed by fickle Bermuda rough, greens that are fast and firm and heavily contoured and can wreak havoc when the ball is on the wrong side of the hole.

Woods loses an ally in that Southern Hills has only two par 5s, one of which is the longest hole in U.S. Open history at 642 yards (No. 5). Woods used driver off the tee during his practice round Tuesday morning and watched it roll across the canted fairway toward a bunker down the right side.

"What's the point?" he said to himself, then hit 3-iron off the tee.

A day earlier, Woods was in the fifth fairway and waiting for the green to clear, unaware that Eduardo Romero was waving him on, wanting to see if Woods could get home in two.

Woods hit an easy 3-wood that hit the green and trickled into the rough. Romero retrieved the ball and placed it 4 feet from the hole.

Such are the expectations, even if Woods doesn't get caught up in them.

"I really don't have that appreciation for what I've been able to accomplish because I've been so focused on that and I don't see the periphery and what it really means," he said. "All I see is trying to shape a shot and trying to make a putt."

FINALS: Both teams appear loose for game

(From 1C)

Shaquille O'Neal said. "For example, if you had a Mercedes-Benz with the rims or without the rims, guess what? You still have a Benz. So it doesn't matter to me how we win as long as we get the job done."

O'Neal's mood was much lighter Tuesday. He even joked about his battle with Dikembe Mutombo after accusing the defensive player of the year of flopping in Game 3.

"Dikembe is a great player and, of course, I respect his game," said O'Neal, who fouled out with 2:21 left Sunday night. "You know, it's nothing but us trying to bring the ratings up higher. We're going to go out, he's a classy individual, I'm a classy individual. It'll be two warriors going at it."

You can bet the smallest warrior of them all — Iverson — will keep his utility cart parked for this one.

The Country Gospel Music Guild Has Just Voted The Marksmen As "The Country Gospel Quartet of the Year"

Over a period of thirty years, the Marksmen evolved into one of the top Bluegrass Gospel Groups in the nation. For many years a dynamic force on the southern gospel circuit. Several years back, the Marksmen began to tread new ground on the bluegrass circuit as well, but always with their familiar brand of music, with a gospel message. This new direction for the Marksmen has proved to be the most productive phase in their career.

Crude rises

NEW YORK — Crude oil and products futures rose at the New York Mercantile Exchange Tuesday amid hopes that optimistic inventory data would extend a recent surge in prices, analysts said.

Heating oil and crude futures, strong throughout much of the trading session, pulled gasoline futures into positive ground on bargain-hunting and shortcovering after the nearby gasoline contract made a day's low at 86.76 cents a gallon.

Gasoline futures rose 1.17 cent to close at 89.51 cents a gallon.

After markets closed, industry data for the week ended June 8, showed mixed inventories of motor gasoline, crude and distillates, which include heating oil and diesel fuel.

Crude oil futures held onto much of their gains, up 14 cents to close at $29.18 a barrel.

Heating oil futures have shown surprising strength recently on the "best fundamentals in the petroleum complex, with supplies below normal levels," said Bill O'Grady, analyst at AG Edwards.

Heating oil futures ended at 80.17 cents a gallon, up 1.9 cent, while natural gas rose 1.22 cent to $4.301 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar down

LONDON — The U.S. dollar slipped Tuesday against most major currencies in European trading.

The euro was quoted at 84.95 cents in late European trading, up from 84.15 cents Monday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 84.76 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Monday, included 121.90 Japanese yen, up from 121.89; 1.7922 Swiss francs, down from 1.8040, and 1.5228 Canadian dollars, up from 1.5166.

The British pound was quoted at $1.3781, up from $1.3724.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 121.62 yen, and the pound was worth $1.3776.

Based on late European euro rates, the dollar was worth 2.3010 German marks, down from 2.3228; 7.7171 French francs, down from 7.7905; 2.5926 Dutch guilders, down from 2.6172, and 2,277.96 Italian lire, down from 2,299.61.

In London, Brent crude from the North Sea fell 11 cents to close at $29.46 a barrel in trading on the International Petroleum Exchange.

After the markets closed, Tuesday, The American Petroleum Institute reported that U.S. inventories of crude oil fell 13.1 million barrels to 312.2 million barrels from 325.3 million a week ago.

Gold up

Gold closed in London at $269.40 per troy ounce, up from $267.20 on Monday. In Zurich the bid price was $268.65, up from $266.70. Gold fell $3.62 in Hong Kong to $268.25.

Silver up

Silver closed in London at $4.36 bid per troy ounce, up from $4.34.

'Jetsons' a step closer to reality

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The cartoon scenario of Jane Jetson pushing a button and popping out a fully-cooked dinner as George whizzes home could be inching closer to reality.

"We think it's getting closer," laughed Kristen Hendrix, a spokesperson for SBC Communications, which is introducing home and small office networking for its DSL customers.

Through an arrangement with 2Wire Inc., customers can use 2Wire's HomePortal gateways with standard or wireless Digital Subscriber Lines (DSL) modems to establish a local area network, connecting up to 10 computers in a home or small business to high-speed Internet access and peripherals like printers, scanners and fax machines. Users can then share files, play games head-to-head or quickly send or receive large video or picture files or connect personal data assistants or handheld computers.

Pricing of DSL service depends on what the customer orders.

Ms. Hendrix said the home networking offering is an important part of the company's broadband strategy and lays the groundwork for smart appliances and home monitoring systems in the future.

"If your home monitoring system is tripped by an intruder, it can send you an e-mail," she said, or "a smart refrigerator can download recipes."

It also will change how we receive entertainment, she said, noting, "We're looking at movies on demand, establishing a library of movies and with a click of a mouse you can order a movie" to be viewed on television or computer with the videocassette recorder-like ability to rewind or fast forward or pause. Music could be delivered the same way, she said.

The company, parent of Southwestern Bell, has been expanding Midlanders' access to DSL services, which allows high-speed access to the Internet. Initially, DSL service was available to only 27,000 homes and businesses within a three-mile radius of the central office, but the activation of DSL "gateways" has allowed 10,000 more homes and businesses to receive DSL service and Ms. Hendrix said plans are to open additional gateways and double the number of homes and businesses with access to DSL service over the next 12 months.

An unidentified woman sends out commands through her laptop computer to handle various tasks.

Legislation has been introduced to ensure rural areas like the Permian Basin have the same access to high speed Internet service as urban areas. Rep. Lamar Smith of Texas introduced the "Rural America Broadband Deployment Act" which would provide $300 million over the next three years to the U.S. Department of Agriculture rural development program for broadband deployment. Noting that surveys find 75 percent of farmers and ranchers use the Internet regularly, Smith said the nation's rural areas also need broadband technology to compete.

Growing demand for high-speed access to the Information Superhighway — one survey found two-thirds of respondents would rather give up their morning cup of coffee than high speed access — has given rise to companies that are giving Midlanders a choice in who provides their DSL service.

One new arrival is New Edge Networks, which recently debuted its TransEdge high-speed business-class broadband Internet access for area business customers.

Jay Emmet, vice president of sales and marketing for New Edge, said the company offers symmetrical data transmission (SDSL) or the uploading and downloading data as the same speeds.

"All of our business-class DSL options are comprehensive packages that include everything a business customer needs to get up and running such as equipment (routers) with security software and added functionality for connecting every computer in the office to one DSL connection," Emmet said.

Dallas-based ionex telecommunications has also recently rolled out DSL service in Midland, offering customers complete communications packages — DSL Internet access, local and long distance telephone service — on a single bill.

Like New Edge, ionex offers SDSL service.

"For companies that rely on the Internet to communicate or transfer files, SDSL can significantly increase productivity," said McK Hartgrove, branch sales manager for Midland. "What might take 10 minutes to send through a dial-up modem could take as little as 10 seconds over SDSL."

The company offers unlimited usage, free DSL equipment and installation and multiple value-added features like five free e-mail accounts and a managed Internet security package.

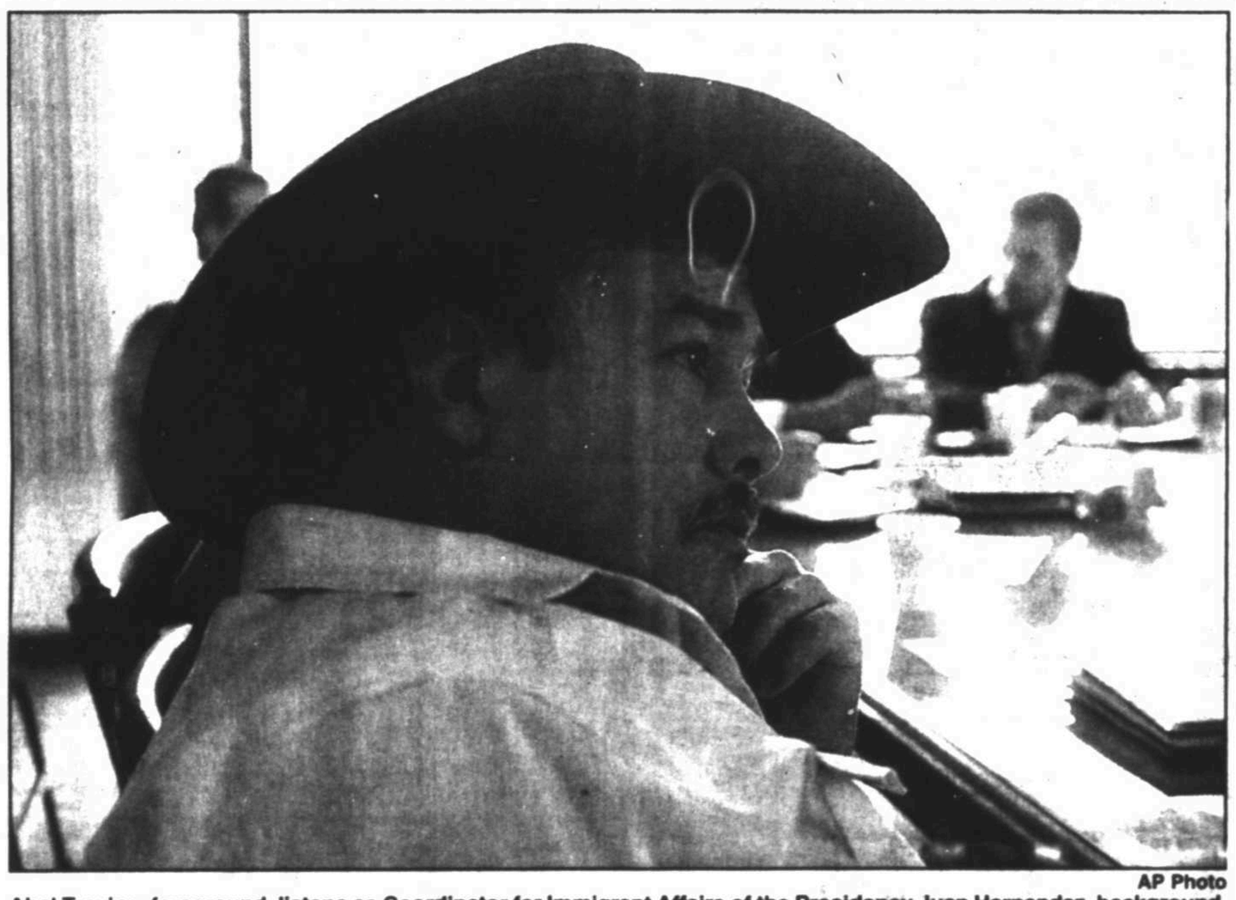

Its fully-funded expansion plan included roll-out of DSL service in Abilene, Amarillo, San Angelo and Lubbock in addition to Midland.

Ms. Hendrix of SBC said the rise in employees "telecommuting" via computers from home and the growing number of households with multiple computers has helped fuel the demand for high speed Internet access and home networking capability.

It is reaching the point, she said, where high speed Internet access could become as important as phone service.

The arrangement with 2Wire Inc. is just one step in SBC's plans to add additional services on top of its broadband pipe "like with telephone service, adding services like call waiting and caller ID."

Senators ask Bush to block Mexican trucks' access to U.S. roads

Trevino owns a small transportation company in Houston whose drivers cross the border regularly.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten Democratic senators are asking President Bush to reconsider a plan to allow Mexican trucks full access to U.S. roads.

The senators said in a letter Monday they are supporters of the North American Free Trade Agreement, but they have safety concerns about the trucks operating on U.S. roads without safety checks for 18 months.

Granting access "could seriously jeopardize highway safety, road conditions and environmental quality," the letter said.

The public has until July 2 to comment on the proposal. Transportation officials want the rules finished in time to let the trucks operate in the United States before the end of the year.

The proposal would require all Mexican trucks to apply for permission to operate in the United States. A safety audit would be conducted within 18 months.

The Clinton administration, citing safety concerns but also under pressure from unions representing U.S. truckers, refused to implement the provisions. Mexican trucks now are limited to a zone north of the border where they transfer their loads to American trucks.

A NAFTA arbitration panel ruled in February that the United States was violating the treaty, and Bush pledged to comply.

The senators said they think Bush has legal latitude to reconsider his decision, despite the panel's ruling.

Stocks end Tuesday mixed after dropping on earnings warning from Nokia

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks averted a third day of sharp losses Tuesday, turning mixed in late trading despite an earnings warning from Nokia that sent prices tumbling earlier.

The upturn, which came in the last hour, appeared to be the result of bargain hunting after nearly three days of sharp declines.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished the day up 26.29 at 10,948.38, recovering from an earlier 133-point deficit. In trading Friday and Monday, the Dow dropped 167 points.

Wall Street's broader market indicators ended the session narrowly mixed. The Nasdaq composite index slipped 0.83 to 2,169.95, registering its third — albeit small — consecutive loss. The Standard & Poor's 500 index inched up 1.46 to 1,255.85.

Stocks initially fell and continued to slide after Nokia warned early Tuesday that second-quarter earnings and revenue will be lower than expected. The announcement exacerbated investors' fears about a delayed rebound in the economy, and in turn, earnings.

"It brings into question whether the economy is really go to turn around in the second half," said Ricky Harrington, a technical analyst for Wachovia Securities in Charlotte, N.C., of Nokia's announcement.

Nokia was among Tuesday's biggest losers, plunging $5.45 to $23.26, a loss of 19 percent.

The mobile phone maker's news hurt companies that supply it with equipment. Qualcomm fell $1.81 to $57.97. Competitors also suffered; Motorola declined 86 cents to $14.

But the overall market began to recover late in the session as investors got some positive news. Dell Computer, for example, rose 84 cents to $26.10, after its shares were upgraded by Morgan Stanley, which said the personal computer market is stabilizing.

Other tech issues seemed to benefit from the prospect that demand for their products will improve. Hewlett-Packard finished up 50 cents at $28.30.

However, analysts said the biggest factor behind the last-minute recovery was simply that prices have fallen sharply in recent weeks, and investors, while still concerned about the outlook for earnings, felt compelled to place a few bets.

"We keep hearing 'The bottom is here, the bottom is here,' then we get a little rally," said Richard A. Dickson, a technical analyst at Hilliard Lyons in Louisville, Ky.

But he said the upturn could be short-lived because of unclear information on which way the economy is heading.

"In terms of consistency, there is nothing in the economic numbers that points to either weakness or strength," Dickson said. "Nobody really has a clear picture."

Now open at 2609-B Midland Dr. is PARADISO, an art gallery.

Owner Sherry O'Connor, who moved here with her husband from Atlanta about two years ago, said she wanted the gallery to have a Midland flair and features not only her art work but that of other local artists.

The artwork includes not only oils and watercolors but ceramics, sculptures and jewelry. She does not do framing but will gift wrap pieces.

In July, Paradiso will be participating in the Museum of the Southwest's "Twin Sisters Twin Cities" show and display artwork by 10 artists from Midland's sister city of Wirral, England. O'Connor will host a party for participating artists on July 14.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday; hours may be extended in July during the Twin Sisters Twin Cities show.

Set to open its doors Friday in the Imperial Shopping Center, 3211 W. Wadley Ave., is UNIQUE BOUTIQUE. A ribbon cutting is set for 10 a.m. Friday.

"We're unique," said Michelle Standridge, who owns the store with Darla Keller.

She said the boutique carries a line of casual dressy clothing — currently a large inventory of capri pants and slacks, shorts and coveralls and jumpers, with some dresses and skirts on order. She said more dressier items will be added for the holidays. Accessories are also carried and the store has an extensive line of Natural Basic body products from lotions to soaps, bath salts and gels. Other items include jewelry, frames and candles.

The store also features a circuit of seven toning beds that each target different parts of the body and takes about an hour, and a tanning bed. Customers can pay to use the toning circuit or tanning bed by the month.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Bacani powers Fullerton past Tulane with 2 HRs and 5 RBIs

By Dennis Waszak Jr.
AP Sports Writer

More Sports/1D

OMAHA, Neb. — After watching David Bacani lead Cal State-Fullerton over Tulane in the College World Series, coach George Horton was trying to figure out a way to keep the senior second baseman around for a few more seasons.

"Maybe we'll change his name next year and bring him back under an alias," Horton said Tuesday after Bacani homered twice, drove in five runs and made a number of outstanding defensive plays in the Titans' 11-2 victory in the elimination game.

"Apparently he didn't want his season to end today," Horton said. "And I don't want his season to end."

Freshman Darric Merrell allowed two unearned runs, six hits, struck out four and walked three in a solid pitching performance for the Titans.

"Fullerton just was outstanding in every phase of the game today," Tulane coach Rick Jones said. "I wish Bacani had stayed back at the hotel. He was a one-man wrecking crew. And Merrell did a super job on the mound."

Merrell (8-4) lost a bid for the first College World Series shutout in five years when he gave up two unearned runs in the eighth inning.

Cal State-Fullerton will play Stanford on Wednesday night in a rematch of Sunday's 5-2, 10-inning victory by the Cardinal. And a lot of the credit has to go to Bacani, the Titans' 5-foot-8 spark plug.

"David's a warrior and has been ever since he walked onto our campus," Horton said. "He's all about winning. And the way you've seen him here at the College World Series is the way he's played throughout his career. We call him Mighty Mouse and he plays like he's 6-foot-6."

The loss ended Tulane's first trip to the College World Series. The Green Wave (56-13) were the nation's winningest team and lost to Stanford in the series opener, but eliminated fellow first-timer Nebraska on Sunday to set up the matchup with Cal State-Fullerton.

"I'm proud of our club and I'm proud to be coach of this team," Jones said. "I'm disappointed the season ended today, but you just have to tip your hat to them."

Merrell hadn't allowed a hit since the third inning when the Green Wave finally broke through against him in the eighth.

Anthony Giarratano reached on third baseman Shawn Norris' fielding error. One out later, Jon Kaplan and Andy Cannizaro hit consecutive singles to load the bases. Jake Gautreau hit an RBI groundout, James Jurries walked and Michael Aubrey, who started on the mound and was the designated hitter, hit an RBI single to make it 8-2.

"He had good stuff today," Gautreau said of Merrell. "He hit his spots when he needed to. He was really competitive."

The Titans added three more runs against Barth Melius in the ninth. Aaron Rifkin hit an RBI double, Chris Stringfellow had a sacrifice fly and Matt Belfanti hit a pinch-hit RBI single to make it 11-2.

Cal State-Fullerton took a 2-0 lead in the second off Aubrey (3-1) on an RBI double by Stringfellow and an RBI single by Louie Lamoure, who went 3-for-3.

Brett Kay hit a one-out single, stole second and scored on Stringfellow's double one out later. Lamoure's blooper to center drove in Stringfellow to make it 2-0.

The Titans manufactured a run in the third to make it 3-0. Norris walked to lead off the inning and moved to second on Bacani's bunt single. Norris moved to third on Robert Guzman's sacrifice, and scored on Jason Corapci's sacrifice fly to center.

Bacani broke it open for Cal State-Fullerton in the fourth with a three-run homer. Stringfellow drew a one-out walk and moved to third on Lamoure's double. One out later, Bacani drove a 1-1 pitch into the bleachers in left-center field to make it 6-0.

"I don't think it's the park, in particular," Bacani said. "I think I just got hot at the right time. I'm hitting confidently right now."

Bad night: Radke shuts out Astros, Dierker gets ejected

Associated Press

■ Pro Baseball

MINNEAPOLIS — Win or lose, it's tough to get Brad Radke excited. Houston had just as hard a time Tuesday night trying to get on base against him.

Radke (8-2) pitched a four-hitter for his first win in five starts, leading the Minnesota Twins back into first place in the AL Central with a 7-0 win over the Astros. With typical nonchalance, Radke insisted afterward he had better stuff last Thursday against Cleveland when he gave up six runs.

"I threw a lot of strikes, but a lot of times they got themselves out," Radke said.

Doug Mientkiewicz, Cristian Guzman and Torii Hunter homered for the Twins, who have been at least tied for first in the AL Central for all but seven days this year. The Cleveland Indians, who lost 4-2 to Milwaukee, fell a half-game behind Minnesota.

After beating Boston on May 17, Radke had three straight no-decisions and a loss last Thursday to Cleveland.

"I wanted the team to have some confidence in me," he said.

How could they not?

Radke, who retired 21 of the last 22, struck out seven and walked none in his first shutout of the year and the fifth in his seven-year career. He joined Joe Mays as the Twins' second eight-game winner.

"Man, he was solid out there," Hunter said.

Jeff Bagwell, 5-for-11 in his career against Radke, had two of Houston's hits.

"His game is control," Bagwell said of Radke, who has walked 10 batters in 14 starts. "He makes every pitch seem like you have to offer it."

Scott Elarton (4-6) failed to win in his seventh straight start. He struck out a season-high eight in 6 1/3 innings, allowing seven hits and five runs.

Elarton, who walked four, last won on May 6 against Montreal. He walked Guzman before Nelson Cruz relieved and hit Corey Koskie with a pitch. Mientkiewicz snapped an 0-for-22 slide with a three-run homer to right, his 10th, that made it 7-0.

"I'm not out of it yet," said Mientkiewicz, who was hitting .403 on May 22. A 10-for-74 slump has shrunk his average to .312. "It just felt good to actually contribute for once in a long time."

Hunter, who has seven of Minnesota's 16 home runs since May 19, homered to right-center in the second inning. Then the Twins scratched out two runs in the third, but could have added a lot more.

Luis Rivas and A.J. Pierzynski hit back-to-back singles, and Quinton McCracken moved them up with a sacrifice bunt. Then the speedy Guzman was safe on a chop to second base that scored Rivas.

Replays showed Guzman was probably out, and Astros manager Larry Dierker was ejected by first-base umpire Dan Iassogna for arguing the call.

"I said I thought he missed it," Dierker said. "He said he didn't. I told him to check the replay, and he kicked me out."

After that, Matt Lawton's single drove in Pierzynski, and Koskie walked to load the bases. But Mientkiewicz struck out and Hunter did the same on a neck-high pitch from Elarton.

Guzman, 16-for-38 batting second, homered for the second straight game in the fifth to make it 4-0.

Braves 3, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Odalis Perez shut out Toronto on five hits in eight-plus innings, and the Braves beat the Blue Jayst.

Perez (4-4), unbeaten in his last six starts, left in the ninth when he gave up two more hits, consecutive doubles to Homer Bush and Brian Simmons that put runners on second and third. John Rocker relieved Perez and got the final three outs for his 19th save in 21 opportunities.

Pinch-hitter Bernard Gilkey hit a two-run double in the eighth for the Braves.

Red Sox 4, Marlins 2

BOSTON — Frank Castillo (6-4) pitched five shutout innings, and suddenly powerful Boston got homers from Troy O'Leary and Trot Nixon.

The Marlins (30-32) missed a chance to reach .500 for the first time this season as their interleague record fell to 41-29, the best in the NL. They lost for just the second time in six games.

Devil Rays 9, Phillies 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Ben Grieve hit his fourth career grand slam and Greg Vaughn also homered to help rookie left-hander Joe Kennedy (2-0) and Tampa Bay beat Philadelphia.

Grieve, who hit his other three grand slams last season with the Oakland Athletics, pulled out of a 1-for-18 slump with a run-scoring single in the third inning.

Mets 10, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE — Robin Ventura hit two homers and drove in four runs, and Timo Perez had a career-high four hits as New York defeated Baltimore.

Tsuyoshi Shinjo had three hits for the Mets, who built a 9-3 lead in the fourth inning and coasted to their second straight blowout win. New York beat Tampa Bay 10-0 Sunday.

Brewers 4, Indians 2

CLEVELAND — Richie Sexson singled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning in his return to Jacobs Field as Milwaukee defeated Cleveland.

Sexson, dealt to Milwaukee last July 28, lined a pitch from Paul Shuey (5-3) to left field to snap a 2-2 tie. Chad Fox (2-0) pitched a perfect eighth inning for the victory.

Pirates 13, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Abraham Nunez hit a bases-loaded triple to highlight Pittsburgh's nine-run fourth inning as the Pirates won their first game since general manager Cam Bonifay was fired.

Pittsburgh also scored four runs in the fifth inning to help give Todd Ritchie (1-8) his first win of the season. Ritchie allowed one run in eight innings.

Expos 2, Yankees 1, 12 inn.

NEW YORK — Mark Smith hit a disputed home run off Ramiro Mendoza in the 12th inning as Montreal beat New York.

Derek Jeter's RBI grounder in the fifth put the Yankees ahead, but Mariano Rivera blew a save for the third time in 21 chances, allowing his fourth homer of the season, Michael Barrett's one-out drive in the ninth inning.

Smith's two-out homer off Mendoza (3-2) went straight down the left-field line, and replays appeared to show it landing to the foul side of the pole. Ron Kulpa, the third-base umpire, signaled fair.

White Sox 5, Reds 0

CHICAGO — David Wells bounced back from the shortest outing of his career to pitch seven shutout innings as Chicago beat Cincinnati.

Royals 7, Cardinals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chad Durbin came within two outs of Kansas City's first complete game of the season, pitching the Royals past St. Louis.

Mariners 10, Rockies 9

DENVER — Mike Cameron hit a solo home run off Juan Acevedo in the ninth — Seattle's sixth homer of the game — to lift the Mariners to a win over the Rockies.

Tennessee eliminates Trojans

By Doug Alden
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. — In their first two College World Series games, Tennessee pitchers gave up 33 runs.

The staff ERA improved dramatically Tuesday night, thanks to Wyatt Allen's eight solid innings in the Volunteers' 10-2 victory over Southern California in an elimination game.

"Pitching gets you places. It got us to the World Series and we were embarrassed with the way we played the last couple of games," said Allen, who allowed eight runs in less than two innings just three days earlier.

Allen (10-3) did just that. The right-hander took a two-hit shutout into the sixth and ended up holding the Trojans to two runs and six hits.

Ryan Case hit a three-run homer and Jeff Christensen hit a two-run shot and drove in four runs for Tennessee (48-19), which will play Miami on Thursday.

The Hurricanes beat the Volunteers 21-13 Saturday in a first-round game in which Allen didn't last two innings. Before the game he decided to go from a four-seam fastball to a two-seam and was in control all night.

"I figured I couldn't any worse," he said. "I felt real good. I tried to beg for the ninth inning and I didn't get it."

Matt Samuels allowed two baserunners in the ninth but got Seth Davidson to fly out to center for the final out. Anthony Lunetta and Michael Moon each drove in runs for USC (45-19), which was knocked out of the CWS in three games for the second straight year.

"We like Omaha this time of year and we would have liked to stay longer," USC coach Mike Gillespie said. "For it to end in such a thud and so suddenly is dramatically disappointing for all our guys."

Anthony Reyes (5-4) took the loss for the Trojans, allowing six runs and six hits in 4 1/3 innings. The Vols, who had to rally to get past Georgia on Monday, took an early lead and held it against the Trojans.

Congratulations to the State Champions...

Treat Dad with two homemade goodies this Father's Day

By The Associated Press

Chocolate is a favorite flavor, always a good bet for a pleasing snack or dessert. Here are two easy recipes to consider making as Father's Day, June 17, draws near.

Chocolate Toffee Crunch Squares are a toothsome treat that could be an easily made family production. Guess who isn't required to pitch in.

The no-baking-needed recipe combines chocolate, toffee, peanuts and pretzels, topped with a white drizzle. Add coconut flakes for an added dimension of flavor and texture. Preparation time and clean up are minimal, while kids can help with mixing the ingredients and drizzling on the finishing touches.

CHOCOLATE TOFFEE CRUNCH SQUARES

Two 11 1/2-ounce packages milk chocolate chips
1 cup crushed toffee pieces or packaged toffee bits
1 cup salted peanuts
1 cup halved pretzel sticks
1/2 cup sweetened coconut flakes (optional)
1/2 cup white chocolate chips
1 teaspoon shortening (do not use butter, margarine, spread or oil)
Paper candy cups (optional)

Line a 9-inch square pan with plastic wrap. Place chocolate chips in large microwave-safe bowl. Microwave at HIGH (100 percent) 1 minute; stir. If necessary, microwave at HIGH an additional 15 seconds at a time, stirring after each heating just until chips are melted and mixture is smooth when stirred.

Immediately add toffee bits, peanuts, pretzels, and coconut, if desired; stir to coat.

Spread mixture into prepared pan; cover with plastic wrap or foil. Refrigerate 45 minutes or until firm.

Place white chips and shortening in small microwave-safe bowl. Microwave at HIGH 1 minute; stir. If necessary, microwave at HIGH an additional 15 seconds at a time, stirring after each heating just until chips are melted and mixture is smooth when stirred. Using fork, drizzle white chips mixture over chocolate mixture in pan. Cover; refrigerate 5 minutes or until firm.

Bring to room temperature. Remove chocolate mixture from pan and place on cutting board, top side up; discard plastic wrap. Cut into 1 1/2-inch squares. Place each square in a candy cup, if desired. Store in covered container in a cool place.

Variation: Chocolate Toffee Haystacks: Prepare chocolate mixture as above. Instead of spreading square pan, drop chocolate mixture by slightly heaping tablespoons onto wax paper-lined cookie sheet or tray. Refrigerate until firm. Melt white chips as directed above; drizzle over "haystacks."

Give Dad a Hand Cookies deliver their Father's Day message in their shape. Bake them ahead of time and surprise the hero of the day.

These chocolate cookies would be simple for moms and kids to make, using unsweetened cocoa powder that blends easily with other baking ingredients. After the cookies have baked and cooled, kids can have fun tracing a hand shape on paper, cutting it out and outlining the hand print with icing.

GIVE DAD A HAND COOKIES

1 cup (2 sticks) butter or margarine, softened
3/4 cup granulated sugar
3/4 cup packed light brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 eggs
2 and 1/3 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
Decorating icing in tube or can
Heat oven to 350 F.

Beat butter, granulated sugar, brown sugar and vanilla in large bowl on medium speed of mixer until creamy. Add eggs; beat well. Stir together flour, cocoa, baking soda and salt; gradually add to butter mixture, beating until well blended.

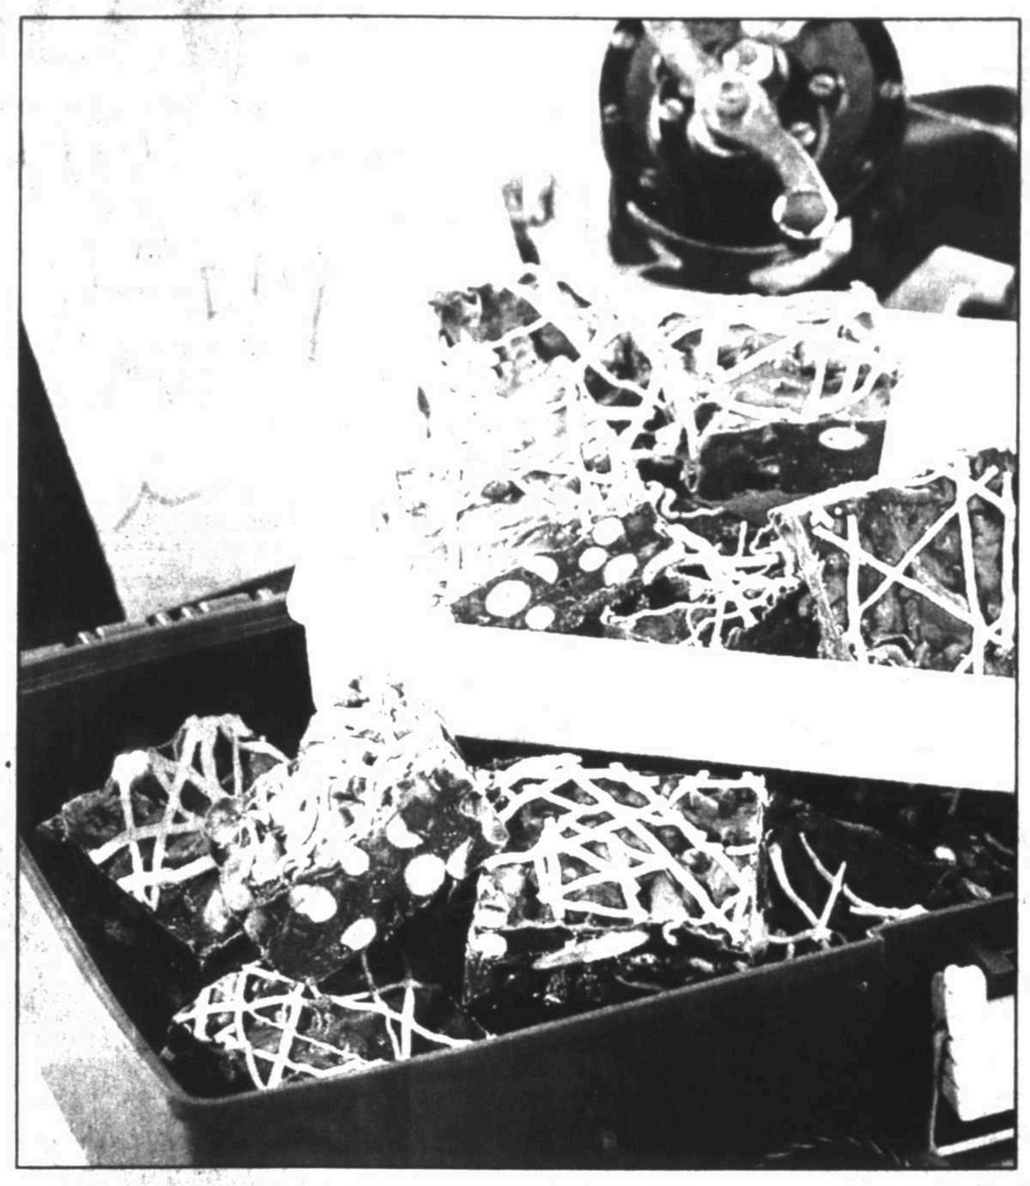

Drop dough by slightly heaping 1/4 cupfuls onto ungreased cookie sheet, about 3 inches apart (put only 4 on a cookie sheet). Shape into balls. With palm of hand, flatten to 3 1/2-inch rounds.

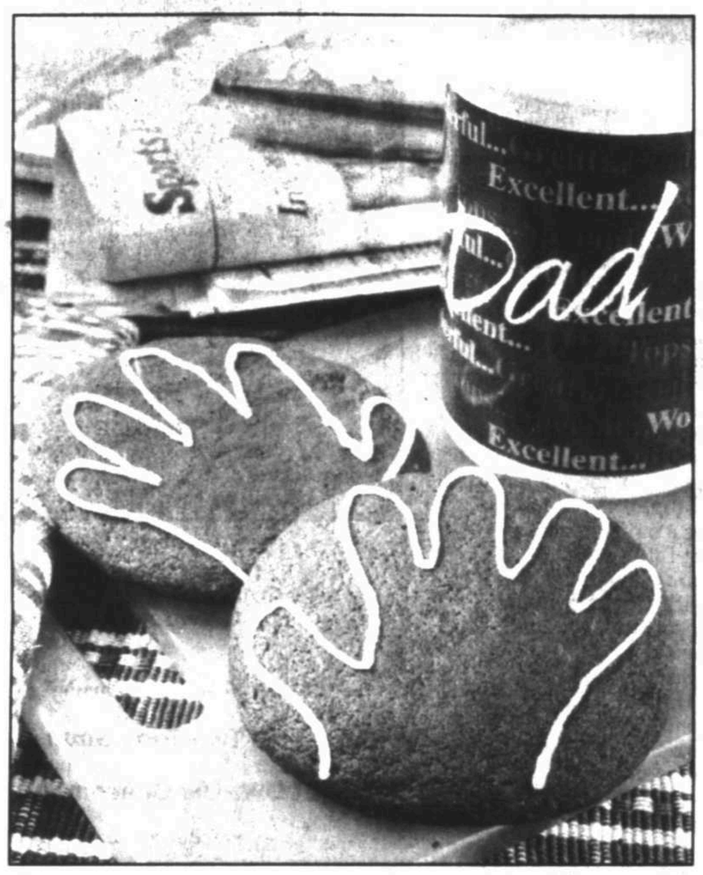

Bake 8 to 10 minutes or until set. (Cookies will spread during baking; baked cookies will be about 5 inches in diameter.) Cool 3 minutes; using a wide spatula, carefully remove from cookie sheet to wire rack. Cool completely.

Make a pattern of child's hand on paper, with fingers spread. Cut out the pattern; place pattern on cookie. Using pattern as a guide, outline hand with icing; repeat with remaining cookies. Garnish if desired.

Driving contract is good way to drive home responsibilities

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please reprint your advice and driving contract for parents who have a teen-ager who wants to borrow the car. I would like to use it as a contract between my newly licensed daughter and us. Thank you. — KAREN EAGLESON, NEPEAN, ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR KAREN: I'm pleased to print it again. The "Driving Contract" was the brainchild of a pair of "Proud Parents" who shared it with me many years ago. I frequently receive requests for it. I think it's terrific because it clearly spells out the young person's responsibilities, so there's no question about what the parents expect of the new driver. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: As parents of a 16-year-old who has just passed his driver's license examination, we're sure that other parents are also apprehensive about their child's newly found freedom, and might like to ease some of that anxiety by drawing up a contract as we did, as a reminder of the seriousness of this new responsibility. It has worked wonders for us.

DRIVING CONTRACT

I ( ), on this day, do agree to the stipulations stated below rendering me the privilege of driving my parents' cars. If, at any time, I violate the said agreement, the driving privileges will be forfeited to the extent and degree of violation.

■ Should I get a traffic violation ticket, I agree to pay for the ticket as well as the difference in the insurance premium for as long as the premium is in effect.

■ I agree to pay for damages that I incur not covered by insurance.

■ At no time will I ever drink alcoholic beverages and drive at the same time, nor will there be any liquor or beer in the car at any time.

■ I will never transport more passengers than there are seat belts, and will not drive the car until all passengers have buckled up.

■ I will keep the car that I drive clean, inside and out, and be aware of its needs for gas, oil, etc., plus wax the car once a month.

Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

I have read the above agreement and do sign this in accordance with the rules.

DEAR ABBY: We have four married children. My husband's nephew is getting married. His mother called today and said they could invite only one couple to the wedding. We're not sure which couple. As it stands, three couples' feelings will be hurt, along with ours.

I feel they should invite all or none. Would it be proper to tell her my feelings on this? What do you suggest our family do? — APPALLED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR APPALLED: Since it's obvious the guest list is being limited due to financial constraints, do not take this personally and do not criticize. Call the mother of the groom and tell her that rather than having any of your children feel left out, you will be happy to represent your family at the festivities. (Your "children" may be happy to be off the hook.)

DEAR ABBY: Our high school honors English teacher announced that four kids turned in the same term paper. They copied it off the Internet. The teacher said these students should no longer be in honors classes or the Honor Society.

One of the kids' fathers is president of the school board. The principal said, "This has all been a mistake, and it shouldn't affect their future." Then he nominated the son of the school board president for a distinguished award.

My younger siblings will be attending this school in the fall. What should I tell them about this messed-up system? — CYNICAL BIG BROTHER

DEAR CYNICAL: Tell them the truth: There are serious ethical challenges in the school's administration. Unfortunately, it's an early lesson that some people in authority blatantly misuse their positions of power.

Arizona town is blast from past

From Staff Reports

WILLIAMS, Ariz.— The northern Arizona community of Williams is celebrating three milestone anniversaries in 2001: 100 years since incorporation, 100 years since the completion of the Grand Canyon Railway and 75 years since the certification of Route 66, which runs through the heart of town.

The community was founded in 1881, and it quickly earned a reputation as a rough-and-tough cow town with a collection of loggers and railroaders. By the time it incorporated as a city on July 3, 1901, the community was a bustling cultural melting pot where visitors were likely to hear Spanish, Swedish or Chinese spoken on the streets.

The certification of Route 66 on Nov. 11, 1926, marked a change in the way most people would visit the Grand Canyon and this mountain community. "The Mother Road" runs through the heart of Williams and was the last city on Route 66 to be bypassed by the Interstate Highway system in 1984.

Today, a walk along Route 66 through downtown Williams is a walk through American history. Turn-of-the-century brothels and saloons that were once crowded with dusty cowboys stand alongside roadhouses and soda fountains that offer a taste of America in the 1950s.

For more information on visiting Williams, call the Williams-Grand Canyon Chamber of Commerce at 1-800-863-0546.

FOOD

Dear Abby/9C

With the right recipes and a little ingenuity, your're just ...

15 minutes to fame

It doesn't take a lot of time to get rave reviews in the kitchen. All kinds of impressive dishes can be prepared in 15 minutes or less with readily available ingredients. Your guests need never know the shortcuts you've used, when you prepare these deliciously quick, easy recipes. They were created by professional chefs, who were asked to put on their thinking "toques" and come up with ideas that would suit the lifestyles of people who love fine food, but are too busy to cook. Chefs know that presentation is everything when it comes to setting the stage for great cuisine, and these offerings reflect that. They show you how to double the taste and eye appeal of a first course with Two-Tone Soup. And you can see for yourself what serving Olé Guacamole in a margarita glass can do to dress up an old favorite for a party.

When you have fun with food, your guests will enjoy themselves too. A wealth of imaginative ideas for unexpected serving vessels, garnishes, and tips for hosting unforgettable gatherings are available on a special Web site. LEFT: Two-Tone Soup

BELOW: Ole Guacamole

Bloody Mary Gazpacho

Gazpacho is a cold Mexican soup. This version has a little Bloody Mary kick to it.

4 plum tomatoes
1 medium red onion
1 cucumber (seedless), peeled
1 red bell pepper, cored
16 ounces tomato juice, chilled
1/4 cup olive oil
1 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 1/2 teaspoon horseradish
2 tablespoons vodka (optional)
Juice of 1 lemon
1/2 teaspoon dried dill
1/2 teaspoon Tabasco
1 clove garlic, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste
Crackers

Chop the first four ingredients into large chunks.

Put all ingredients in a food processor and pulse quickly to combine. Do not overprocess as gazpacho is much nicer when chunky. Chill before serving.

Serve with crackers.

Serves 6.

Hints: Use as a casual barbecue side dish or an elegant appetizer. Also, it is a nice brunch addition when served in a big bowl with a basket of crackers. Sour cream is a classic garnish.

Can be prepared a day ahead.

Grilled Corn Salsa

2 ears sweet corn
2 tomatoes
10 fresh basil leaves
1 tablespoon olive oil
Juice of 1 lime
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
Salt and pepper to taste
Crackers

On a hot grill, cook corn in husks until black on all sides (about 2 minutes on each side). Cool. Coarsely chop tomatoes and basil and combine in bowl with oil, lime juice, garlic, salt and pepper. Remove husks from corn and slice the kernels from ears (hold over bowl and scrape with a knife). Mix well. Chill and serve with crackers.

Hints: You can also use leftover ears of corn. Simply place corn on medium hot grill until lightly browned on all sides. Be careful not to burn.

May store for a couple of days. Spices integrate better with time. Add fresh roasted red peppers to the mix for even more summer flavor.

For a Southwestern twist, add 1/2 cup cooked and chilled black beans, and replace basil with 2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro.

Two-Tone Soup

It takes only minutes to compose a symphony of a first course. All you need is a can opener, a steady hand and a little imagination. Use this as your base recipe, and take it from here.

1 can tomato or cream of tomato soup
1 can condensed cream of asparagus soup with water, milk or half and half, added according to directions on soups
Crackers

Whip each condensed soup with the liquid (water, milk or half-and-half) separately in a blender until smooth and creamy. Heat soups in separate saucepans until hot. Fill large flat bowls partway up with cream of tomato soup. Ladle cream of asparagus soup in a pattern on top of the tomato soup. For a more intricate pattern, carefully draw a fork or knife through the soups and swirl. Do not overwork.

Serves 2 to 4.

Hints: This recipe works wonderfully with any thick, pureed soups in contrasting colors. Squash soup, pea soup and cream of broccoli, corn, or mushroom are other good choices. The soups should be of the same consistency. If you need to thicken one of the soups, add a pinch of flour or cornstarch while cooking. A garnish of chopped fresh parsley adds a nice touch. Or, for added eye appeal, consider repeating one of the soup's ingredients as a garnish: Fresh chopped tomato, a single steamed asparagus tip, one perfect sauteed oyster mushroom, etc.

Luscious Lox

8 ounces cream cheese, softened
3 ounces smoked salmon
2 tablespoons cream
1/2 teaspoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon horseradish (or to taste)
Pepper to taste
1 seedless cucumber, sliced thin
Fresh dill
Crackers

In blender or food processor, whip cream cheese. Add smoked salmon, heavy cream, lemon juice, horseradish and pepper. Process until smooth. Place into a crock or serving bowl. Garnish with cucumber and dill. Serve on a platter with cucumber and dill garnish and crackers.

Hints: To make salmon mousse in decorative shapes use any metal cookie cutters. Spray the insides of the cookie cutters with nonstick cooking spray. On a cookie sheet lined with waxed paper spoon salmon and place another piece of waxed paper on top. Roll with a rolling pin until 1/2-inch thick. Freeze on cookie sheet for 5 minutes, then cut with cookie cutters. For bridal showers or wedding, use all heart shapes. Try stars for an evening theme.

Another option is to top crackers with cucumber and dill, then pipe the salmon spread into a small florette on top of each cracker. Serve with red peppers or capers and chopped red onion.

Olé Guacamole

You don't have to start from scratch to create this south- of-the-border favotite. Just add a few fresh ingredients to the store-bought variety and your guests will never know.

1 large container good quality guacamole
1 large ripe plum tomato, seeded and chopped
2 tablespoons red onion, chopped
A few sprigs fresh cilantro

Reserve some of the chopped tomatoes and onions for garnish, and add the remaining chopped tomatoes and onions to the guacamole. Blend by hand. Spoon into margarita glasses. Garnish with reserved chopped tomatoes, onions, and cilantro sprigs.

Hints: Dip margarita glasses in water and freeze for a frosty look. Dip the rims of the glasses in water, then in sea salt, to add real margarita flair. Serve with crackers and garnish with fresh lemon wedges, cherry or grape tomatoes, maybe a few black olives.

Toasted Pecan Fruit Spread

1 8-ounce package cream cheese
3 tablespoons honey
3 tablespoons apple juice
1/2 cup chopped apples
1/2 cup seedless grapes, chopped
1/2 cup chopped pecans
Toasted pecan or walnut halves

Soften cream cheese. In medium bowl, stir together cream cheese, honey and apple juice. Stir in apples, grapes and toasted pecans. Spread topping onto crackers. Top with toasted pecan or walnut halves. Or serve in a crock with crackers and bunches of grapes.

Cheese course

From brie to blue de bresse and port salud, there has never been a more abundant selection of domestic and imported cheeses available in supermarkets, or guests who are more eager to sample them all. Cheese is always appropriate as an appetizer. But you can also do as the Europeans do and serve a cheese course before dessert. Or plan an entire party around cheese and the wines of your choice. Sparkling apple cider or whitegrape juice are delicious non-alcoholic accompaniments.

Ingredients:

A variety of cheeses in contrasting textures, tastes and colors, about 2 ounces per person as part of a course, more if it's the main event.

Vinta, Cabaret, Breton and Bremner.

Your own imagination.

Hints: Always serve cheese at room temperature, never cold. To avoid drying out, don't cut cheeses before serving. Include utensils so your guests can select their own portions.

Use your imagination to create a dramatic presentation. Paper leaves available in many specialty stores add a nice touch.

Sliced apples, pears, and grapes are classic accompaniments. Dust moistened grapes with granulated sugar and freeze for a spectacular garnish. Toss sliced fruit in a bit of lemon juice to avoid browning. You can also create an international event by selecting cheeses from a particular country like Italy or France. Include wine from the same region and decorate accordingly. What could be an easier way to entertain?

Release of photos will inflict pain, says Earnhardt's widow

By Mike Branom
Associated Press Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Dale Earnhardt's widow testified Tuesday that she has tried to stop the public release of her husband's autopsy photos to spare her family "painful emotional distress."

"The photographs are humiliating, disgusting and negative," Teresa Earnhardt said. "That could be nothing but harmful and painful to anyone involved with my family, my company, our fans, anyone."

A hearing into whether the photos can be made public was expected to continue Wednesday. A college newspaper, The Independent Florida Alligator, and a Deland-based Web site are seeking access to the autopsy photos.

Appearing slightly irritated under questioning from opposing lawyers, Earnhardt said she filed a lawsuit blocking the release of the photos to spare her family from "humiliation and harm."

Lawyers for The Alligator have suggested that NASCAR influenced Earnhardt's decision since the images could raise questions about safety at NASCAR races.

Earnhardt denied that NASCAR played a role in her decision. Under questioning, she also said she didn't think the photos would show anything that could prevent driver deaths.

She added that her decision had nothing to do with her interest in protecting her company, Dale Earnhardt Inc., and Earnhardt's image as a revenue source.

"I don't think it has anything to do with sales. I think it has to do with personal feelings and privacy," Earnhardt said. "It would affect our state of minds because we would be personally harmed."

An attorney for The Alligator argued that the images should be made public to show whether investigators did an adequate job of determining what killed him.

"We don't know if the photographs are consistent with the autopsy report or inconsistent with the autopsy report," said attorney Tom Julin. "It's an important check on the medical examiner's office and an important check on the police department."

The Alligator and Websitecity.com were rebuffed in their first attempt to gain access to the photos.

Volusia Circuit Judge Joseph Will on Monday upheld the constitutionality of a new law forbidding the release of postmortem photos unless allowed by a judge. Florida lawmakers passed the legislation following Earnhardt's death in a last-lap crash in the Daytona 500 on Feb. 18.

Will had ordered the photos sealed four days after Earnhardt's death. Teresa Earnhardt sought the order, saying her family's privacy would be violated.

Monday's ruling left the Alligator and Websitecity.com to argue that the law violates the state's public-records statutes.

Websitecity.com owner Michael Uribe said he wants to view the photos to prove the Volusia County medical examiner's office did a poor job of Earnhardt's autopsy. Uribe already has posted autopsy photos of drivers Rodney Orr and Neil Bonnett on his Web site.
