Stars wake town

BIG LAKE — While West Texans bundled up against a surprise cold front Tuesday night, one sleepy oil-field town witnessed a self-contained rainstorm pouring over one motel, courtesy of movie magic, a used water pump and a fire truck. For several days, Mirage Spring Creek Productions has shot exterior scenes of "Flesh and Bone" in Big Lake for the feature-length film while attempting to keep a closed set to protect Meg Ryan, Dennis Quaid and James Caan from star-struck curiosity seekers.

They must have had some bibulous days and nights six millenniums ago at the Sumerian trading post of Godin Tepe, in the Zagros Mountains of what is now western Iran. Archaeologists can tell by sampling the dregs. In the same room of the ruins where archaeologists last year reported finding the earliest chemical evidence for wine, they have now identified the earliest chemical evidence for beer. Announcing the discovery in today's issue of the journal Nature, the archaeologists said this established that people were making and drinking beer as early as 3500 B.C.

Arlo's dinner

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. — Undeterred by attempts to rein in his activities, Arlo Guthrie is planning a $1,000-a-plate Thanksgiving dinner to mark the 25th anniversary of a song that turned littering into music history. Guthrie, whose arrest for littering kept him out of the military and inspired the 1967 anti-war ballad "Alice's Restaurant," has sent out 400 invitations for the charity meal, to be cooked by the song's namesake: Alice Brock.

Bush vetoes $27 billion urban-aid tax measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Wednesday made good his threat to veto the $27 billion urban aid and tax bill, killing the measure because of its tax increases on businesses and upper-income Americans.

He signed the veto on Air Force One as he flew home in defeat from Houston. Bush's action kills the measure because Congress has adjourned for the year.

It was Bush's 46th veto, several coming after last month's adjournment. Only one veto — of a bill tightening regulation of the cable TV industry — has been overridden.

"I am withholding my approval ... because it includes numerous tax increases, violates fiscal discipline and would destroy jobs and undermine small business," Bush said in a

Clinton eyes transition, assures world leaders

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bill Clinton appealed to foreign leaders Wednesday to cooperate with George Bush during the president's final two months in office, then turned his attention to planning the Democrats' takeover of the White House.

Clinton said the "hard and vital task" of reviving the U.S. economy would be his top domestic priority. "The task has already begun," the president-elect declared on the first day after his electoral landslide.

The Democrat sought to soothe financial markets with a promise that "we understand

State draws school-fund reform plan

Area districts' aid would rise under proposal

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Midland, Greenwood and Ector County school districts would get an increase in state aid under a school equalization finance plan proposed by state leaders Wednesday.

Gov. Ann Richards called a special session beginning Tuesday to try to get legislative approval of a constitutional amendment that would allow the state to fund all schools equally and remove a threat by the Supreme Court to close schools if a plan in not in place by June 1.

If voters approve a constitutional amendment, state leaders are proposing legislation to require the wealthy districts to pay more into the Teacher Retirement System.

That would free state money that otherwise would go into the retire-

■ Education groups blast proposal, say property-tax increase is likely.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The state's top three leaders unveiled their public education funding proposal Wednesday. It was immediately blasted by school groups that said it would cause huge local property tax increases.

The School Finance Working Group, made up of a dozen different organizations, said the plan could result in local increases of as much as $3 billion over the next two years because of insufficient state funding.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who released the proposal with Gov. Ann Richards and lame-duck House Speaker Gib Lewis, said: "Local property taxes will go up." But he added that the plan leaves property tax decisions in local districts' hands.

Bullock said there's not support for a state tax increase. "Let there be no mistake, the approach advocated by the professional education bureaucracy will lead to a state income tax," he said.

The three state leaders want lawmakers to approve the "Fair Share Plan" in a special session that begins next Tuesday. The 1993 Legislature convenes in regular

Staff report

Winter made its first, brief appearance in the Permian Basin Wednesday as a cold front dropped temperatures by 10-15 degrees.

Wednesday's high reached just 51, compared to the normal upper-60 temperatures that prevail in early November. Temperatures were expected to drop into the mid-20s Wednesday night.

However, the sweater weather will last only through today, with temperatures rising the rest of the week. The daytime high is expected to be back in the 60s and the overnight lows should return to the 40s by Saturday.

A weaker cold front is expected to reach the area by Saturday, but temperatures will not drop

80 percent of county's registered voters flock to polls

E pluribus chaos: Somehow, it works

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press writer

Putting aside for a moment all that talk about the majesty of democracy, let's get to the bottom line. You have your winners, your losers, your goats and your Bubbas.

For instance, Mark Schwing was a winner — with a schwing! You might recall Schwing as the candidate whose name was miraculously the same as the wolf-whistle cry of the characters Wayne and Garth in the movie "Wayne's World."

He tasted sweet victory on Tuesday when he was re-elected to the Yorba Linda, Calif., City Council despite the loss of most of his campaign signs to overly zealous "Wayne's World" fans. "I would like to think I would have won without Wayne and Garth, but it didn't hurt," a triumphant Schwing said.

A loser? It is with no pleasure that we report that Jason Darnell, the 9-year-old candidate for Santa Cruz County supervisor in California, was unsuccessful in Voters turned out in near-record numbers across the country Tuesday and Midland County was no exception, with 80 percent of registered voters flocking to the polls.

"They listened to me and came to the polls like never before," said Bettye Calvert, Midland County Elections Administrator.

This year, 41,486 of 51,714 registered voters cast votes — predominantly for former Midland resident George Bush.

Perhaps more impressive was the 21,347 residents who voted early, 51 percent of the total votes cast.

"It's the convenience the early voters love. Some of them got used to it in the past and think it's their last opportunity to vote. They tell us that," Ms. Calvert said.

"It wouldn't surprise me if it's among the top early voting counties in Texas. And we didn't even have early voting counters at Wal-Mart, Kmart or other stores, like a lot of counties," she said.

And despite a shortage of ballots at several precincts, Ms. Calvert said the counting went relatively well.

FLU: Dreaded viruses loom

(From 1A)

Midland County Health Department to offer shots free to senior citizens during a day-long clinic Friday.

Health in Austin.

Dr. Barry Willingham, a general practitioner at Primary Medical Clinic, said the flu season here "starts anywhere from the first of November and lasts through February and sometimes into early March."

But the influenza viruses have not yet hit Midland, he said.

"I think as the colder weather gets here and people are spending more time indoors and closer together, it will come," Willingham said.

Spread of the flu also will increase during the holiday season as people travel and visit more, he said.

The flu, transmitted as an airborne pathogen, peaks in December and January, Willingham said.

"The best prevention is the flu vaccine . . . recommended to anyone who is at high risk or may have complications from getting it," the doctor said.

That includes people 65 years old and over, people who have chronic medical problems such as breathing and heart conditions, and doctors and nurses who may come into contact with flu carriers, he said.

The vaccine is a safe preventive step although a few individuals experience side effects, Willingham said. Anyone allergic to eggs or who has a fever at the time should not be given the vaccine, he added.

For those who can't avoid the flu this season, treatment is basically supportive as the virus takes its course — from seven to 14 days.

Someone in good health and not a high-risk individual is advised to rest and drink plenty of fluids. Taking acetaminophen (such as Tylenol) also helps, Willingham said.

High-risk individuals who contract the flu should see physician.

Local medical clinics and doctors are offering flu shots for a cost of about $13 to $15, according to several clinics.

This year's shot is designated to fight the A/Texas, A/Beijing and B/Panama strains of influenza that experts expect to affect people this year, Keenan said.

The Midland County Health Department will offer flu shots free to senior citizens during a day-long clinic Friday. Health Department nurses will give injections from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Dellwood Senior Center at Dellwood Mall. There will be no cost, although donations will be accepted.

"We generally give around 1,000 shots," said City of Midland Health Department Director Monette Burke.

Last Friday, the department immunized about 160 seniors at the Southeast Senior Center, Ms. Burke said.

"We are expecting to give around 800 this Friday," she added.

his first bid for elective office.

How bad was it? County election officials, a pretty grim bunch when it comes to rules, said they wouldn't even count the votes in his write-in campaign because he wasn't an official candidate.

Jason had campaigned right through Halloween and appeared on an Oakland TV talk show before the election, according to his aide-de-camp (and father), Larry. Larry Darnell also hinted that we haven't heard the last of Jason.

"He did say yesterday he wants to run for president. Hopefully, he'll grow out of that," he said.

The unquestionable Goat of the 1992 Election was the so-far anonymous person in Kevin, Mont., who screwed up the town's attempt to get 100 percent voter turnout.

Kevin has 153 registered votes; 152 turned out.

"We have an idea of who didn't vote, but we're not saying," said Janell Whitt, who organized the get-out-the-vote-or-else drive. No word yet on the fate of the non-voter.

A runner-up: Crook County, Ore., which blew its opportunity to remain the sole bellwether county in the United States. Heading into Tuesday's election, the county of 14,000 had picked the popular vote winner in every presidential election since 1884.

Carrying that legacy into the polls, Crook County voters chose President Bush.

Now, an amazing coincidence! Only one letter differentiates Crook County (Ore.) from Cook County (Ill.). And in Cook County, a.k.a. Chicago, Democratic Rep. William Lipinski ran against Republican challenger Harry Lepinske, a man who almost has the same last name!

Lipinski won handily, proving either that voters can spell or that someone had to win.

But not Nick Ferrara, and it's probably just as well. Ferrara is the Chicago Democrat who ran as a Republican for state legislature, but said he didn't want to be on the ballot and didn't know how his name got there.

Tip to future candidates: This is not a successful campaign tactic.

Ferrara got 8 percent of the vote.

Also in the winners-and-losers category, we have Mayor-elect Peggy King and Mayor-unelect Lewis Coker Sr. of Dixie Inn, La. They had tied 61-61 in an Oct. 3 primary, but King won a mandate for change in a stirring 17-vote victory Tuesday.

"Our town's been at a standstill for a few years now and it needed a change," she said.

And what about the Bubbas?

We all know about the Big Bubba, who of course was a winner and must now be referred to as President-elect Bubba, or Mr. Bubba, Sir. But what about Joe Bubba, the candidate for Congress from New Jersey? This is a man from a state not previously known for its Bubbahood, unless you consider the recent exploits of a racehorse named Bubba Clinton, but let's not.

Alas, Tuesday's election wasn't a mandate for Joe Bubba. He lost, proving something significant about the American spirit and the political viability of a man from a state where people are apt to say, "Yo, Bubba!"

We're just not sure what.

VETOES: President rejects $27 billion tax bill written message.

The tax bill contained elements of Bush's stalled blueprint for revitalizing the economy and luring businesses to hard-pressed inner cities and rural areas with enterprise zones.

But Bush said, "The urban aid provisions that were once the centerpiece of the bill have been submerged by billions of dollars in giveaways to special interests."

Some Republican lawmakers as well as Democrats had urged the president to sign the bill and nursed hopes that he would do so despite his pre-election vow not to raise taxes again. Congress delayed sending it to the White House after final passage on Oct. 8 in a vain attempt to change Bush's mind.

Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, was "disappointed but not surprised" by the veto, said a committee aide who declined to be identified by name.

The measure would have expanded tax breaks for Individual Retirement Accounts, renewed tax breaks for research and restored the targeted jobs tax credit.

But it also included such tax increases as limiting the deduction for job-related moving expenses to $10,000, requiring individuals with sizable amounts of income not subject to withholding and large corporations to pay more tax in advance and taxing securities dealers' inventories at market value.

"The original focus of the bill — to help revitalize America's inner cities — has been lost in a blizzard of special interest pleadings," said Bush.

He said the rejected bill would have raised $33 billion in new taxes over five years "on a wide array of American families, workers and small businesses."

Offsetting tax cuts reduced the total cost of the bill to $27 billion.

It would have created 50 urban and rural enterprise zones, repealed the 10 percent luxury tax on boats, airplanes, jewelry and furs and denied the deductibility of club dues.

It would have allowed individuals with incomes up to $75,000 and couples up to $100,000 to get tax deductions for IRA contributions. Currently, the limits are $35,000 for individuals and $50,000 for couples.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and an official of the city's riot recovery effort said President-elect Clinton and Congress should act quickly on urban aid in the wake of Bush's veto.

The Rebuild L.A. recovery organization "expected the president's veto. . . . It had become an election-year political football — to the detriment of our cities' urgent needs," Barry Sanders, the group's co-chairman, said in a statement.

ment fund, and the state would distributed that money to property tax-poor districts.

About 10.5 percent, or 111 of the state's 1,043 regular accredited districts, would face "recapture" of some local property taxes.

The 300-page "Fair Share School Finance Plan" provides estimates on how much the state would take from rich districts, but the figures are based on a number of assumptions.

The estimates are for the current financing plan for the 1991-'92 and 1992-'93 school years, and the 1993-'94 and 1994-'95 school years using the new Fair Share plan.

One assumption, in projecting total revenues, was that districts would increase local property taxes 3 percent each year.

With that assumption, local revenues to Midland would increase from $47.49 million in 1992 to $52.78 million in 1995, while state aid would increase from $29.96 million to $41.27 million.

Greenwood's local revenues would climb from $3.50 million to $3.93 million, and state aid would jump from $2.75 million to $2.90 million.

The increases for Ector County would be from $59.69 million to $70.75 million in local revenue, and $40.93 million to $50.71 million in state aid.

VOTE: Ballot shortages occur

(From 1A)

"We had 273 to hand count. It's a laborious thing. Someone has to call them out and someone else marks with stick figures. It caused a delay but we managed," Ms. Calvert said.

The computer count concluded at about 10 p.m., but the hand count delayed the process until about 11:30 p.m., she said.

Shortages of a handful of ballots were reported at several precincts with Precinct 407 at Fairmont Park Church of Christ falling 106 ballots short.

Copies of the ballots were immediately sent but the computers were unable to absorb the data, forcing the hand count.

"At Fairmont Park Church of Christ I ordered 88 percent of their registration and they ran out by over a hundred. That's amazing," he said.

Next year — much to the dismay of Ms. Calvert — the early-voting process will have a new outlook.

Because of a state law that takes effect in September 1993, counties with 100,000 to 200,000 people will be required to have polling places in each commissioner's precinct.

"But here, since a huge portion of our residents live in the city or in the immediate vicinity, I think it's a waste of money," she said. "But we'll do it because it's the law."

Ms. Calvert doesn't believe the new law will increase the percentage of votes locally.

"And it's inviting the potential for voter fraud."

PLAN: Tax increase likely, school groups say

session in January.

Their proposal includes shifting about $400 million a year from school districts with the most property wealth to poorer ones, to meet a Texas Supreme Court order for equalized school funding.

It also would put an equity standard for school funding into the state constitution, as a way to avoid continued court entanglement on the issue. The standard would require that 95 percent of state and local revenue in the public education system be equalized.

Richards said it is crucial to pass the proposed constitutional amendment, which requires approval of two-thirds of the Legislature and voters.

The plan "gets us out of spending our time and our energy in an endless discussion with the courts about financing the schools," she said. "It allows us to progress to the real discussion of how to make our schools better."

The proposed amendment also would provide state bond money for school facilities, and it would authorize the redistribution of local tax money from school districts with the most property wealth to poorer ones.

The Texas Supreme Court in January ruled unconstitutional the current "Robin Hood" system of transferring local property tax money from wealthier to poorer school districts within counties.

It gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993, to come up with a new plan for equalizing school funding.

The leaders' plan would transfer about the same amount of local property tax among districts next school year as the current law, using a different method that funnels money from the wealthier districts through the Teacher Retirement System. State money to the Retirement System would be reduced, and the funds routed to poor districts.

Other redistribution methods also could fit within the proposed constitutional amendment, Richards said. Bullock said leaders are looking at a backup to routing the money through the Teacher Retirement System.

The plan anticipates $650 million in new state funding over the next two years, which is expected to be available without a tax increase, rather than the $3.9 billion increase called for under current law.

But $650 million is less than the Texas Education Agency has estimated will be needed just to cover student enrollment growth.

"We understand the leadership's reluctance to increase taxes on the state level, but under their plan, even the poorest of the poor school districts will have to raise local property taxes to unbearable levels just to stay even," said Jim Nelson, president of the Ector County Independent School District board and spokesman for the school groups.

School administrators long have said the state relies too heavily on local property taxes. Of $15 billion in state and local public education funds currently, about $8 billion is local money, said Dan Casey of the Texas Association of School Boards.

State GOP Chairman Fred Meyer also criticized the Democratic leaders' plan, calling it the "son of Robin Hood."

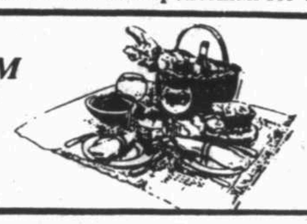

"It's another money-laundering scheme of the governor's, put together behind closed doors, to try to put a trickery, treachery and deceit on the voters and citizens of Texas, and I don't believe that will sell," Meyer said.

Paul Williams, Richards' chief of staff, said it is up to school districts how much to raise local taxes.

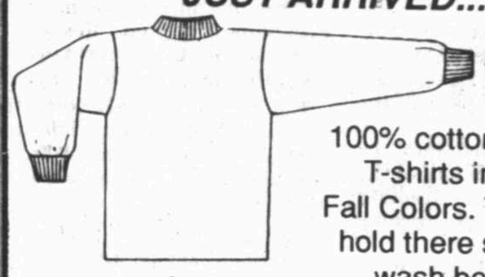

"We've got to face reality" about the funding that's available, Richards said. "Quite frankly, school finance is like dividing up your sweet old aunt's estate. Someone's always going to get the coffee mugs when, they really wanted the rolltop desk. We all live under financial constraints."

Bullock said, "To those who would pick fault with this plan, I offer a very constructive challenge: Step forth with an alternative which is drawn under the same constraints that the three of us and our staffs worked under, and that is that the plan be based on available revenue . . . because if you promise more than that, you just cannot deliver."

WEATHER SUMMARY

BLAST: Cold air drops in

as dramatically.

The year's first blast of cold air produced up to 8 inches of snow in the mountains of West Texas and freezing rain in other parts of the state.

Temperatures dipped into the 30s across the northern half of the state, and the National Weather Service issued a freeze warning for Wednesday night.

Most of the snowfall occurred in far west Texas, with significant accumulations in the higher elevations. A heavy snow warning was posted for elevations above 5,000 feet in the Chisos Mountains of the Big Bend. A snow advisory was posted for elevations above 3,000 feet in Brewster County.

"We've got about three inches on the ground," said a police dispatcher in Alpine. "It's nasty, slushy, and the temperature is going down."

The dispatcher, who would not give her name, said 3 to 5 inches of snow was expected in the area Wednesday night, and all the department's officers were on call to handle the extra load.

Up to 8 inches of snow was reported in the higher elevations of the Guadalupe and Davis mountains of West Texas, but officials reported no major road closings or other problems.

Hudspeth County sheriff's dispatcher Abel Ramirez said the weather in Sierra Blanca had cleared by Wednesday afternoon.

"This morning it was covered with snow," he said. "It's pretty cold out there now, but it's beautiful. Just a few clouds."

The weather service reported some areas of freezing rain and sleet in east and southeast Texas, but officials there reported no problems.

The cold front had made it to the normally temperate Rio Grande Valley by Wednesday, and evening temperatures were expected to dip into the mid-40s in some areas.

"It's a little unusual," said Joseph Wanja, a forecaster with the National Weather Service in Brownsville.

He said the average temperatures for this time of the year normally range from the 80s during the day to the upper 50s at night.

Wanja said the lower temperatures are not expected to affect crops in the region.

The weather is expected to remain cold and wet through the weekend.

West Texas expects partly cloudy skies with some chance of rain and snow with highs mostly in the 40s and lows in the 20s and 30s.

North Texas expects the rain and sleet to end by today with highs in the 50s and lows in the 30s.

NATION

Raw, winter-like weather whipped much of the nation Wednesday, with high winds in the South, as much as 3 feet of snow in the Northwest, heavy rain over the Gulf states and record cold in Hawaii.

Winds reaching 40 mph barreled through southern Alabama, toppling trees and ripping roofs off buildings. No injuries were reported, but damaged buildings included the Troy State University auditorium, in Troy, Ala., which lost part of its roof.

The National Weather Service also reported tornadoes near Mobile and Summerdale.

Thunderstorms pounded the central Gulf Coast during the afternoon, and rain and clouds covered much of Georgia, Virginia, West Virginia, Louisiana, Mississippi, western Florida, the northern Plains, western New York and western Pennsylvania. Drizzle and fog shrouded New England.

Snow fell early in the day in Casper, Wyo.; Des Moines, Iowa; Omaha, Neb.; Bismarck, N.D.; and Rapid City, S.D. More than 3 feet fell in Sheridan, Wyo., the National Weather Service reported.

In Texas, the year's first blast of cold air brought 8 inches of snow to the state's western mountains.

Heavier raifall during the six-hour period ending at noon CST included 1.72 inches in Mobi , Ala.; 1.70 inches in Montgomery, Ala.; 1.55 inches in Milton, Fla.; and 1.38 inches in Atlanta.

In the West, winter-like temperatures chilled the northern Rockies, Washington, Oregon, New Mexico and Arizona, where readings were in the 30s and 40s.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

The Clinton victory

Behind the vote

White House race a runaway

Bleak economy transcends the issues of character and trust

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press Writer

Given the choice between "trust" and "change," the voters took a chance on change.

You know me, trust me, President Bush asked. He had been caught short by a recession that his advisers had told him was over.

Bill Clinton capitalized on that. He made his pitch not on who he was but on what he promised — an economic revival.

In a nation that has suffered a loss of confidence, what counted were the wallet and the work force.

Two other themes jumped out: a yearning for fresh starts and a touch of rebellion in Ross Perot's substantial showing.

Proposals to limit the terms of members of the House and Senate — a way to punish entrenched incumbents — won in all 14 states where they were put to the people.

The voters sent record numbers of women and blacks to Capitol Hill, including the first black woman ever to sit in the Senate.

"...I think all institutions need constant change and renewal," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, a Maine Democrat, "...It's a healthy thing."

Change carried the day — not everywhere, but often enough to send a message to the old order.

The Perot factor

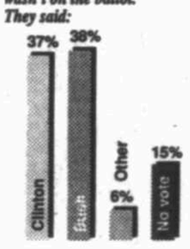

Ross Perot's independent candidacy for the White House won 19 percent in the three-man race with President Bush and Bill Clinton, and he hurt each just about equally, according to exit polls.

When asked who they would have voted for if Perot had not been on the ballot, the nationwide polling of Perot voters found 38 percent said they would have voted for Clinton and 37 percent said they would have voted for Bush; 15 percent said they would not have voted and 6 percent listed other candidates.

In some states where the Bush-Clinton race was close, Perot may have tipped the balance.

Exit polls in his home state of Texas showed Perot hurt Bush more than Clinton, with 48 percent of Texans who voted for Perot saying they would have voted for Bush if Perot had not been on the ballot. One-third said they would have voted for Clinton; 11 percent said they would not have voted and 4 percent chose other candidates.

Perot voters were asked who they would vote for if he wasn't on the ballot. They said:

CLINTON: Democrat turns attention to transition

the need to pursue stability even as we pursue new growth." Clinton said his changes "will strengthen America's market systems, not weaken them."

With Vice President-elect Al Gore at his side, Clinton sought to reassure world leaders there would be a smooth transition of power and no disruption of American foreign policy.

Clinton said he would continue Bush's effort to broker Middle East peace and negotiate a START II arms treaty with Russia.

"America has only one president at a time," Clinton said, speaking outside the Arkansas governor's mansion. "America's foreign policy remains solely in his hands."

Clinton told ABC's Ted Koppel that several world leaders called while he slept on Wednesday. He did not identify them, but said he hoped to return the calls on Thursday.

"I'm anxious to have some conversations," he said.

As world leaders offered congratulations, and tried to assess any shifts Clinton would make in foreign policy, the president-elect used his first big step on the world stage to urge continuity.

"The greatest gesture of goodwill that any nation can make toward me during this period is to continue full cooperation with our one president, George Bush," Clinton said. "The greatest mistake any adversary could make would be to doubt America's resolve during this transition."

Later, Clinton met into the evening with his six-member transition team and other aides at the Arkansas governor's mansion to discuss policy and personnel decisions. Initial announcements were likely by the end of the week, aides said.

One of Clinton's first decisions was picking a transition director; campaign manager Mickey Kantor, campaign chief of staff Eli Segal and former Urban League director Vernon Jordan are some of the most widely mentioned names.

Aides said picking a White House chief of staff was also high on Clinton's list, because many of the other decisions will fall from there. In weeks past, Kantor had been often listed for that post, too, but one senior Clinton source said Kantor was not as high on the list as he once was.

In addition, Clinton was expected to make up his mind soon about when the resign his governor's post. Aides expect Clinton to stay in Little Rock — conducting most of the transition from there rather than an office in Washington — until at least year's end.

Clinton's itinerary for the next few days consists of, "meet, talk, get his voice back, think, return phone calls," said communications director George Stephanopoulos.

While Clinton set about the business of assuming power, members of his campaign's high command took to the lectern one by one at a midday briefing to lay out what in the end was a winning strategy for breaking the "Republican coalition" that held a 12-year lock on the White House.

Clinton's speech came after he walked out of the mansion with Gore. Their wives, Hillary and Tipper, followed them out a few minutes later and stayed in the background. During his comments, the mansion cat — Socks, who is black with white feet — scampered behind him.

Clinton laid out a brief sketch of his agenda on domestic and international fronts.

"It will not be easy but we will spare no effort to restore jobs, growth and income to the American people," Clinton said.

As for foreign affairs, Clinton said he wanted to make progress in global trade talks, assist Russia and other former Soviet republics in their transition to democracy and deliver aid to Somalia's famine victims.

He started his first day after the election with a morning stroll with his wife.

"I am happy, exhausted, thinking of all the work to be done," Clinton said. There has been no decision yet on whether Clinton would take a few days off or set out on a "victory tour" as some aides had suggested.

Clinton's decision on when to resign as Arkansas governor is somewhat complicated by a lawsuit over whether the lieutenant governor would automatically take over, Clinton would get to appoint a successor, or a special election would be called.

At the midday briefing, Clinton's aides offered several explanations for how the Arkansas governor — written off several times earlier in the year — pulled off the win:

- Pollster Stanley Greenberg said Clinton made inroads with suburban middle class residents who'd voted for Ronald Reagan.
- Clinton stayed on the economic message. "He did not give the same stump speech everyday, but he gave the same message," said strategist Paul Begala.
- Unorthodox advertising decisions to save money and not go on the air in big states like California, since Clinton already had a lead there.

Correction

The headline on a letter from Ralph Dishman in the Oct. 30 edition incorrectly indicated that a city position was to be decided in Tuesday's election. The letter referred to the county treasurer's race.

Iran arrests American on spy charges

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian authorities said Wednesday they arrested an American businessman and accused him of spying.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said Milton Mayar, 58, was providing vital business information from Iran to several international companies. It said he also had links with foreign intelligence agents.

Sources in Tehran said Mayar owned a travel agency in Iran and was trying to promote tourism in the country. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

Neither the sources nor the Iranian news reports gave a hometown for Mayar.

His arrest was announced in a statement by the Ministry of Information, the news reports said. It did not say when Mayar was arrested, but the announcement came on the 13th anniversary of the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by Iranian militants.

Tehran radio said thousands of Iranians gathered in front of the building for a rally commemorating the takeover, during which Iranian militants held 52 Americans hostage for 444 days.

Protesters chanted "Death to America!" and carried placards with anti-American slogans, the Iranian news agency said.

Mayar's arrest appeared partly to be an attempt by the government to demonstrate that Iran's Islamic revolution remains capable of standing up to the United States.

Since revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini died in June 1989, his successors have been struggling to keep the revolution alive, but infighting among various factions has undermined their efforts.

There was no official Iranian reaction to Bill Clinton's victory in the U.S. presidential election, and the news came too late to appear in Wednesday's newspapers.

The Iranian news agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Mayar was accused of "illegal establishment of several trade firms, collecting important economic information and identifying leading elements at commercial institutions and environments."

It said he was the brother-in-law of Gen. Nematollah Nasiri, the head of the late shah of Iran's secret police, who was executed after the 1979 Islamic revolution.

Fischer earns a draw, still leads 9-5

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Despite playing with the advantage of white, Bobby Fischer on Wednesday failed to secure the final victory he needs to crown his return to competitive chess.

Fischer escaped with a draw after falling into what he described as "a semi-losing position." Spassky looked to be in a clearly superior if not winning position but was criticized for his move 38.

Fischer leads the $5 million rematch 9-5. The first player to take 10 games receives the winner's prize of $3.35 million. The loser gets the remainder.

Draws do not count. According to match rules, if the Russian-born Spassky now comes back to tie him at nine games each, the match will end in a draw and the two players will split the prize money.

Fischer chose the main line of the Ruy Lopez opening for the 29th game instead of the exchange variation he used when he last played white, in game 27.

Spassky relied on the Breyer Variation, as he did when the series began two months ago.

The two players exchanged bishops on move 18. At that point, Yugoslav grandmaster Dragutin Sahovic said Fischer's position in the close match was "maybe a little better."

But Fischer said he overlooked Spassky's queen to f6 on move 19. After the 24th move, when Fischer was forced to sacrifice two pieces for a rook and a pawn.

After 38 moves, it was clear the Fischer was struggling to hold a draw. His move to g3 was his only chance to hold the game, Fischer said.

The two meet again today.

To Make Money In The Stock Market, You Need A Little Skill. To Make Money From Lotto Texas, You Need A Little Pencil.

LOTTO Texas is a new game from the Texas Lottery, and you could make millions of dollars by filling out a playslip and paying a dollar. (Apologies to those who have made their money through skill and savvy.)

The purpose of this is to instruct you on how to play. OK. To play, you must pick six numbers from one to fifty. If you happen to pick the same six numbers that come up at the drawings, then you could win millions of dollars.

OK. Step number one. Go to any of the LOTTO Texas retailers. You can only play where you see the red and yellow sign that says LOTTO Texas.

Step number two. While you're at the retailer, pick up a LOTTO Texas playslip and a pencil. There's a picture of the playslip on this page. You may find playslips in a stand called a play station. If not, just ask for one.

Step number three. (My, we're moving right along now, aren't we?) Choose SIX numbers from one to fifty. You can play up to five times on each playslip. Completely fill in the numbers that you choose on the playslip ONLY WITH A BLACK OR BLUE BALLPOINT PEN OR A PENCIL. The one featured on this page would work just fine.

Also, do not erase any mistakes you make. Just fill in the VOID box on that play and you will not be charged.

Step number four. (Past the halfway mark.) Take a dollar (that's how much it costs to play LOTTO Texas) and give it and the playslip to the retailer. It takes just a few seconds. When you're done, you'll be handed a ticket which will verify the numbers you picked. Please take the time to sign the back of your ticket so no one else will be able to redeem your prize.

Step number five. Tune in to the televised drawings on Wednesday and Saturday nights at 9:58 p.m. Central time to see how well you did.

If you picked all six of the numbers which are randomly chosen on the ball machine, then you could become a millionaire. If you missed the drawing, the numbers will always be posted the next day at LOTTO Texas retailers around the state and in your local newspaper.

The jackpot is paid out to you in 20 annual installments. You can also win second and third prizes by matching five out of six numbers or four out of six. Also, match three out of six and you will win $3 automatically. If you win up to $599, you can collect your prize at any LOTTO Texas retailer. Winnings of $600 or more can be claimed at any one of the 24 Texas Lottery claim centers. You can also claim prizes through the mail by using a claim form that you may pick up at any Texas Lottery retailer. Please make copies of the front and back of your ticket before you send it in. The Texas Lottery is not responsible for tickets lost in the mail. Prizes must be claimed within 180 days of the drawing.

Finally, LOTTO Texas can be played up to 10 drawings (that's five weeks) in advance. If you want to play those same numbers for several drawings in a row, fill in the multi-draw box on your playslip with however many drawings you want to play.

One more thing. You must be 18 years or older to play. When you play, your palms may sweat, your heart may pound, but please do try and have a little fun.

Voting is over, now America can be first

Election 1992 is over and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton will be sworn into office in January as the 42nd president of the United States.

Still, we can't help wondering how President George Bush's campaign might have fared had not Dallas billionaire Ross Perot, who stayed in the race until the last as an independent candidate, and Pat Buchanan, the choice of the far right wing of the Republican Party, run their largely divisive and vote-sapping campaigns. In the end, when added to the other obstacles Bush's re-election effort faced, the president could not overcome Clinton's challenge. He simply was not able to articulate strongly enough his own concern about what was the Number One issue in voters' minds — the lagging economy.

In conceding defeat Tuesday evening, Bush was gracious in pledging a smooth transition of power and wishing Clinton well in office. Likewise showing grace in victory, Clinton asked for a round of applause for Bush's lifetime of service to this nation and praised the president's successes in the arena of foreign affairs.

Clinton vowed to confront problems that he said have been "too long ignored" — the economy, AIDS, the environment and others. He's correct to assert that now they are his problems to resolve. He will have ample opportunity to do precisely that and he will be called to account if the problems are still remaining at the end of his term.

That is the way it should be. Politicians should be held accountable for their promises. Bush, of course, will be accorded his rightful place in history for his accomplishments on the international stage and his attempt to bring a degree of order to the post-Cold War world. He did score meaningful accomplishments while in the Oval Office.

In another regard, Bush was hoping to bring a sense of unity to all Americans when he told them, "Regardless of our differences, all Americans share the same purpose." He's correct. It's time for the divisiveness of the election season to be put behind us.

Americans are one nation behind one president. As the president said, the election is over, "America should now come first."

Voters show they want ethical, stable leaders

Midland County voters generally seemed content with most of those now serving in local elective office in the Tuesday balloting. In fact, Midland County voters even supported the re-election of Democratic Congressman Albert Bustamante of San Antonio whose 23rd Congressional District includes part of Midland, but statewide Bustamante lost his re-election bid.

Midland County Precinct 3 Commissioner Louisa Valencia and County Treasurer Carol Baker, who was appointed to her position when the sitting treasurer resigned earlier this year, both won. That was also the case for Congressmen Lamar Smith of the 21st Congressional District and Larry Combest of the 23rd Congressional District.

The wins by these incumbent officeholders appeared to reaffirm voters' preference for stable, effective leadership.

Of course, the race that was an exception to that rule was that for the vacant seat on the Railroad Commission resigned earlier this year by Lena Guerrero. Ms. Guerrero had stepped down from the chairmanship of the commission after it was revealed that she had lied about being an honors graduate of the University of Texas. Voters apparently did not accept her explanation and apology.

Bustamante also had come under fire in recent years for questionable practices as they elected to the District 23 seat Henry Bonilla of San Antonio, a Republican.

Our congratulations to the winners. The strong support for these and lack of tolerance for unethical behavior by those in office perhaps explains exactly what voters want: Ethical and stable representation in public office.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Nov. 5, the 310th day of 1992. There are 56 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 5, 1605, the "Gunpowder Plot" failed as Guy Fawkes was seized before he could blow up the English Parliament.

On this date:

In 1872, suffragist Susan B. Anthony was fined 100 dollars for attempting to vote in the presidential election for Ulysses S. Grant. (However, Anthony never paid the fine.)

In 1911, Calbraith P. Rodgers arrived in Pasadena, Calif., completing the first transcontinental airplane flight in 49 days. (Rodgers had left Sheepshead Bay, N.Y., on Sept. 17 and required about 70 stops along the way.)

In 1912, Woodrow Wilson was elected president, defeating Progressive Republican Theodore Roosevelt and incumbent William Howard Taft, who ran on the regular GOP ticket.

In 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt won an unprecedented third term in office as he defeated Republican challenger Wendell L. Willkie.

In 1942, 50 years ago, American showman George M. Cohan died in New York at age 64.

In 1956, Britain and France started landing forces in Egypt during fighting between Egyptian and Israeli forces around the Suez Canal (A cease-fire was declared two days later).

GEORGE WILL
We might as well try someone else

WASHINGTON — A dozen Novembers ago, at the dawn of a conservative presidential era, Walter Mondale, in his graceful concession speech as vice president, spoke of the majesty of the people wielding "their staggering power." Only four times in American history has one party held the presidency for more than 12 consecutive years (the Republicans have not since 1896-1912) and this year the people's power ended a 12-year reign. But the people's decision was a kind of continent-wide shrug: Might as well try someone else.

Will

Sixty-two percent of those who voted, voted against the incumbent president. But 57 percent voted against the next president. Ross Perot's dalliance interruptus with the electorate produced a plurality president. No novelty, that.

From 1824 (the first election in which most electoral votes were determined by popular voting rather than voting in state legislatures) through 1992 there have been 43 elections. In 15 the winner received less than a majority of popular votes. Only four times has the winner received less than 44 percent, but two strong presidents, Lincoln and Wilson, received 39.8 and 41.8 respectively. Wilson and Nixon (who won a first term with just 43.4 percent) won re-election.

Although Clinton got just 43 percent of the popular vote, his 69 percent of the electoral votes is much better than the 56.4 percent of the electoral votes Kennedy won in 1960 with 49.7 percent of the popular vote. In fact, the 1992 result resembles the 1912 three-way race when Wilson's 41.8 percent of the popular vote won him 81.9 percent of the electoral votes. The disparity between Clinton's popular and electoral vote percentages resembles Eisenhower's disparities in 1952 (55.1 popular and 83.2 electoral) and Reagan in 1980 (50.7 popular and 90.8 electoral), two elections when previous voting patterns were emphatically ruptured.

In their most recent four victories prior to Tuesday, Republican presidential candidates won a stunning average of 91 percent of the electoral votes — better than the 88.3 percent that FDR won in four victories. On Tuesday Bush won just 31 percent. But Republican strength was already ebbing four years ago, when Bush did worse among Democrats than any Republican had done since 1952. Dukakis, although now derided, did unite his party, winning back a majority of "Reagan Democrats" (who were just 7 percent of the electorate). Bush was the first Republican to win a first term while his party was losing strength in both the House and Senate.

This year Bush became, in part, a belated casualty of his greatest success, the Gulf War. His postwar popularity convinced him he could coast to re-election, relying on his nimbus rather than an agenda. Bush's campaign confirmed historian Robert Conquest's droll law: The behavior of an organization often can be predicted by assuming it to be controlled by a cabal of its enemies. But Bush's campaign — constant improvisation revealing consistent insincerity — was condign punishment of the Republican Party for making Bush its leader.

Democrats are government enthusiasts: They are unsure what justice is, but are sure that only government can deliver it. Their activism is both a cause and consequence of "interest-group liberalism" — belief in brokering maximum satisfactions for the maximum number of factions. Republicans, being less comfortable brokering interests, require a higher quotient of appealing ideas, both to motivate themselves and attract supporters. Hence the party should not have put itself in the hands of a person so unlike the "conviction politician" who preceded him in the presidency.

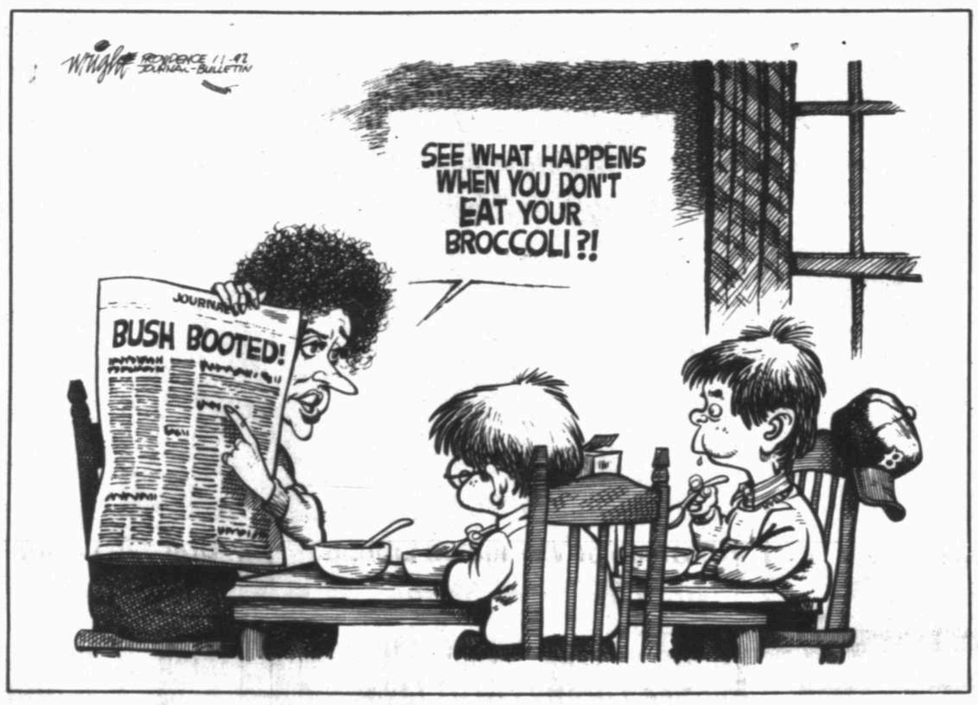

Bush lacked authority, a derivative of convictions connected to passions. The epitaph of his presidency could be Kingsley Amis' poem "The Masters":

That horse whose rider fears to jump will fall,
Riflemen miss if orders sound unsure;
They only are secure who seem secure;
Who lose their voice, lose all.

As usual, and contrary to naive expectations, incumbents were not an endangered species on Tuesday. Only three incumbent senators lost and 93 percent of House incumbents won. Those numbers explain this one: In all of the 14 states where the political class could not prevent the people from voting on term limits for U.S. senators and representatives, the people imposed limits to enhance political competition. As a step toward radical reform of Washington's political culture, this is potentially more important than the presidential result.

The electorate seems to have cast a cold eye on government and politicians and decided that it and they have only limited purchase on only some problems. Hence the sense of a nation serious but unenthralled. Hence at the end of the campaign, the continental shrug: Might as well try someone else.

Men shouldn't make decisions for women

My favorite section of your paper is the opinion page. For the past couple of weeks I have been reading letters written by men about abortion. I would like to ask these men what gives us the right to make this decision and what right do we have to decide what a woman can or cannot do? Men do not carry babies and men do not go through the pain and embarrassment of being an unwed mother. We just have to tolerate our wives when they want a snack at 3 in the morning.

Men have it easy compared to women. We do not have to worry about getting pregnant, and some men do not even worry about raising their children. Abortion is a hot issue right now, the medical profession still cannot agree on the subject, so why should I expect my wife and I to agree on it.

I believe that abortion is a subject that should be decided by women. They are the ones who are having the procedure done, not men. Why does the male population feel that some feudalistic code still applies? Women are not our possessions, they are very much our equals. Women are very capable of making decisions that affect them and this should be one of those.

I would prefer to see abortion removed from the political platforms since our government has a hard enough time doing what it should be doing. Men should not be worrying about other people's business until they can handle their own. In fact, men should not have a voice in this issue until all and I mean all the back child support payments are made.

As a man, I agree with my wife on this issue, but I will stand beside her on her decision and when I have a daughter, I will do the same. I do not plan on trying to make moral decisions for others until I am perfect.

We should all unite and help each other all the time. The government needs to govern and men need to work with their partners to solving family problems. Let's solve the problems that we all agree on first, like drugs, the homeless, government spending, gangs, and drive-by shootings. Let's make a better world for the people who are here and stop trying to impose our views on women. After all men do not get pregnant or give birth.

Man encourages hunters to help hungry program

I wish to remind all hunters and friends of hunters in Midland and the surrounding area of the Hunters of the Hungry program. This program consists of a provider (the hunter), a local participating processing facility, and a food bank to distribute the food to the hungry.

If you are a hunter who always ends up with plenty of meat and have to throw some of it away. Stop doing that! If you have plenty of meat and wish to participate in this program, take that extra deer you really won't be eating to a participating butcher/meat processor. There are several participating processors in Midland. Pay the processor $15 — a small amount of money compared to what it costs us to have our hunting fun. Tell the processor you are participating in the Hunters for the Hungry program. You or the processor can call the local food bank who will pick up the meat for distribution when it is ready. It should be wrapped in two pound packages by the processor.

One more thought: If you are cleaning out your freezer to make room for new meat this fall, call the Permian Basin Food Bank at 687-3663 and they will come by your house and pick up the meat at no charge to you. So go have a great hunt and give a deer to the Hunters for the Hungry program. Good Luck!

Midlanders tell story of former treasurer

July 26, 1958 — seven candidates vie for the county treasurer's position. Dee Thompson is one of two left standing after the July 26th primary. Midland County citizens vote her in. Thus begins her 33-year, eight-election stay in office. She had many opponents over the years, the last being Tom Miller, a Republican, in 1986. Ms. Thompson fought hard and won this race.

May 1989 — Ms. Thompson had minor surgery and missed a few weeks of work, but was right back in the office as soon as recovery took place, serving Midland County as usual.

Primary 1990 — No one runs against Dee Thompson. This will be her eighth term as county treasurer. She has already served 32 years. Almost half of Ms. Thompson's life has been devoted to Midland County.

November 1990 — Ms. Thompson becomes ill with pneumonia and is placed in the hospital. Test after test is run when it is discovered she has a rare disease that affects only one in 20,000 people. She is treated for Temporial Artiritis. The one medication for this condition has many side effects including causing cataracts of the eyes.

In late 1990 or early 1991 Ms. Thompson, along with two other county elected officials, change their party from Democratic to Republican. All three are invited to Washington, D.C. to meet with President Bush. Ms. Thompson is too ill to attend.

Ms. Thompson returned to work off and on in 1991 before going to Ross and White to be rediagnosed with the disease.

Ms. Thompson served you as Midland County Treasurer for over 33 years. You elected her in 1958 and continued to do so up to the November 1990 election.

Ms. Thompson did not choose to become ill and leave her position that you (Midland County) elected her to. Her health no longer would allow her to serve you as she had in the past. She chose to leave in order to take care of herself. Those of us close to her are grateful for that.

This is not an official year for the county treasurer to run. It only took place because Ms. Thompson fell ill.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

WHOM TO WRITE

Following is a list of the names and addresses of various state and federal officials Midlanders may wish to contact from time-to-time:

PRESIDENT: George Bush (R), The President, The White House, Washington, D.C. 20500.

SENATORS: Lloyd Bentsen (D) and Phil Gramm (R), Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510.

REPRESENTATIVE: Lamar Smith (R), District 21, 422 Cannon House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515; or 201 W. Wall, Suite 104, Midland, Texas 79701.

GOVERNOR: Ann Richards (D), State Capitol Building, Austin, Texas 78701.

U.S. asks GATT to allow sanctions against EC

GENEVA (AP) — The threat of a trade war between the United States and the 12-nation European Community loomed Wednesday after the EC blocked a U.S. effort to place $1 billion in tariffs on European farm goods.

At a meeting of the decision-making council of the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade, community members turned back a U.S. request for approval to impose the sanctions.

The United States has threatened to impose $1 billion in tariffs on French wine and other EC farm goods. That could raise prices on wine and various other imported goods for U.S. consumers.

EC trade chief Frans Andriessen has vowed to fight back if Washington carries out its threat.

Deliberations were expected to continue through the remainder of President Bush's term, but it appeared the trade tensions would be among the first international challenges to be faced by Bill Clinton's administration.

The United States contends subsidies paid to European oilseed producers to help them compete unfairly encourage higher production and have led to reduced European demand for U.S. soybeans, which enter Europe duty free.

U.S. farmers lose $1 billion annually in soybeans sales to Europe, and oilseed exporters in nine other non-EC countries are also losing $1 billion yearly, according to U.S. figures.

Oilseeds, which include sunflower seeds and cotton seeds in addition to soybeans, are widely used as an inexpensive substitute for grain in animal feed.

EC negotiator Tran van Thinh said his side won't put off trying to solve the crisis until Clinton takes office in January although President Bush is now largely powerless.

"We believe that on the U.S. side there is a kind of continuity, mainly for the Congress," Tran told reporters. "We see the same people will remain there, so we do not believe we have to play that kind of game."

Washington's move raised the specter of the dispute's growing into a trade war. It also increased doubts about the future of wider GATT talks aimed at revamping world trade rules, which have been blocked for two years by EC-U.S. farm disputes.

Any farm sanctions would be suspended for 30 days to allow for binding GATT arbitration, and Washington would not immediately apply the full amount of sanctions, U.S. chief envoy Rufus Yerxa told council delegates.

"Our goal is to encourage compliance with GATT obligations, not to impose countermeasures," his statement said.

On Tuesday, U.S. and EC negotiators ended three days of talks in Chicago without agreement on U.S. demands that Europe reduce both its oilseed production and its subsidized exports.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan said he will recommend President Bush impose punitive tariffs on European farm goods to offset the losses for U.S. farmers.

Both Madigan and EC Farm Commissioner Ray MacSharry said they wanted to continue to work toward a settlement.

Many countries backed the U.S. stand at the GATT session Wednesday, officials said.

Two GATT arbitration panels have backed the United States since 1989.

Yerxa said the United States "has gone the extra mile to resolve this problem" without unilateral sanctions.

"We are open to suggestions but we can not leave the matter where it is," he told reporters.

Tran charged it would be "the death" of the GATT talks, known as the Uruguay Round, if the United States slaps on sanctions.

'Pocketbook election' causes long voter lines, but will it last?

By John Soldman
Associated Press Writer

■ More nation news/5B

WASHINGTON — Pat yourself on the back, America. The 1992 elections drew an estimated 104 million people — an all-time record — to the polls to exercise their right to vote.

That represented the highest percentage of people eligible to vote — about 55 percent — to cast ballots in two decades.

"Democracy is the big winner," said Becky Cain, president of the League of Women Voters. "American voters demonstrated that when given the opportunity, they will register to vote. When given real issues, they will listen. Once involved, they will vote."

Several states set records either in total numbers voting or percentage of eligible voters participating. Even the District of Columbia — long the symbol of voter apathy with traditionally low turnout — set a record.

But to do it, voters had to brave snow in Minnesota and Nebraska, long lines everywhere and inconveniences like a broken voting machine in Indiana and ballot shortages in California and Florida.

"It was a resounding victory for ... citizenship," District of Columbia Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly said as voters in her city turned out in droves to oppose a death penalty referendum imposed by Congress.

But experts cautioned that the break in an otherwise three-decade downward spiral of voter participation may be short-lived and may not have much to do with President-elect Clinton's landslide win either.

Democratic turnout posted less than a 1 percent gain and Republican turnout was down more than 6 percent, making the 19 percent independent vote for Ross Perot the single biggest gain, said Curtis Gans, a voter turnout expert who founded the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

"The bulk of the gain is recession driven and change driven but the overwhelming beneficiary was Perot, not the Democrats even though they won," Gans said.

About 55 percent of eligible Americans voted this time around, up 5 percentage points from the all-time low 50.2 percent mark set in 1988, Gans said. This year's was the highest percentage turnout since 55.2 percent cast ballots in 1972, he said.

In terms of raw numbers, an estimated 104 million Americans voted Tuesday, eclipsing the previous high of 92.6 million set in 1984, he said.

With 99 percent of the vote tallied Wednesday in the presidential race, more than 101 million votes were counted. Gans' estimate takes into account absentee ballots and voters who skipped the presidential ballot but still voted in other races.

But Gans cautioned that this was a "pocketbook election" in which economic concerns spawned a magnitude of turnout that is likely to be short-lived unless reforms address more serious problems of voter apathy.

"The biggest reason is the recession and a little bit of 'Read my lips' and a little bit (Ross) Perot. ... But there's nothing in the election itself to say it is anything but temporary," he said.

Indeed, the economy clearly was on the minds of many as long lines wrapped around polling sites from dawn to dusk across the nation, forcing some voters to wait as long as three hours to cast their ballots.

"Basically, our problems are related to the economy so we need someone experienced and successful in this area to pull us out of the crunch," said David Osentoski, 37, of Land O' Lakes, Fla.

And records were set everywhere. Gans projected Louisiana, Georgia and Virginia had record participation in terms of percentage.

But bigger turnout spelled longer lines and inconveniences in many places.

Voter turnout reaches record numbers

■ Lagging economy, independent candidate sent Texans to polls in highest election participation since 1968.

By Darryl Ewing
Associated Press Writer

A sour economy and a third-party candidate sent Texans to the polls in record numbers Tuesday, making the percentage turnout for this year's presidential election the highest in the state since 1968, preliminary records show.

"Texas has been hurt by this triple-dip recession, and a lot of jobs, particularly in the defense industry, have been threatened or lost," said University of North Texas political scientist Frank Feigert, who specializes in voting behavior.

"There were a number of salient issues, specifically the economy. (Voters) wanted to send a message."

On Tuesday, 71.9 percent of registered voters — 6,069,986 of 8,440,143 registered voters — cast ballots, according to preliminary numbers from the secretary of state's office in Austin.

In 1968, some 75.6 percent of Texas registered voters cast ballots in the battle between Republican Richard Nixon, Democrat Hubert Humphrey and third-party candidate George Wallace.

That compares with 66.2 percent of registered Texans casting ballots in 1988 and 68.3 percent in 1984.

Political analysts aren't rejoicing yet over the new numbers.

"We have to put those numbers in perspective. The percentage of unregistered voters is still appallingly high," Feigert said.

Texas billionaire Ross Perot generally has been credited with drawing into the political process large numbers of people who had either "dropped out" of politics or had never registered to vote at all.

"He definitely made an impact here in Tarrant County," said county election administrator Robert Parton. "A lot of people got excited who would have otherwise ignored the entire election."

Harris County Clerk Anita Rodeheaver offered a different explanation.

"Two of the presidential candidates were from Texas, and the other was a neighbor," she said. "People like to vote for one of their own."

Texas' "no excuses" early voting process also allowed more than 2 million Texans to avoid long lines on election day.

'There were a number of salient issues, specifically the economy. (Voters) wanted to send a message.'

—Frank Feigert
political scientist

Preliminary reports from the secretary of state's office show four of Texas' five largest counties topped the 70 percent margin, while only two, Travis and Tarrant had accomplished that in 1984 and 1988.

Economically hard-hit Tarrant led the pack with a turnout of 78.94 percent, followed by Travis, home of the University of Texas, at 78.25 percent, Dallas at 75.02 and Bexar at 71.01.

Harris County trailed the large counties with a turnout of about 68.56 percent, early figures show.

It's still too early to determine minority voter turnout. However, the Southwest Voter Research Institute in San Antonio, which tracks Hispanic voting, is projecting 60 percent turnout among registered Hispanic voters in Texas.

That compares with 53 percent participation in 1988, said Andrew Hernandez of the institute.

About 56 percent of registered black voters in Dallas County cast ballots Tuesday, according to projections by the staff of newly elected U.S. Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson.

On the set in Big Lake

Bright stars wake sleepy Texas town

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

BIG LAKE — While West Texans bundled up against a surprise cold front Tuesday night, one sleepy oil field town witnessed a self-contained rainstorm pouring over one motel, courtesy of movie magic, a used water pump, and a fire truck.

"Oh mercy, the rainstorm was something. It went on until 3 a.m. (Wednesday) and all of the kids ran to the movie set to watch it," said Louise Matthews, a gift shop owner in the small town that is one of the Texas filming sites for "Flesh and Bone."

For several days, Mirage Spring Creek Productions has shot exterior scenes in Big Lake for the feature length film while attempting to keep a closed set to protect Meg Ryan, Dennis Quaid and James Caan from starstruck curiosity seekers.

The story was written by Steve Kloves, who also wrote the screenplay. He wrote and directed "The Fabulous Baker Boys" which garnered four oscar nominations and a Writer's Guild nomination for best original screenplay. Sydney Pollack was the executive producer and Paula Weinstein and Mark Rosenberg, producers.

Pollack, Weinstein and Rosenberg have reunited to produce "Flesh and Bone."

Ms. Ryan, who recently starred in "Prelude to a Kiss," and is probably best known for her title peformance in "When Harry Met Sally," plays the role of Kay Willets "a charming, but wounded soul," according to press information, who falls for drifter Arlis Sweeney, her real-life partner, Quaid.

Academy Award winner and Emmy nominee Caan, who gained audience sympathy as the captive novelist in "Misery," portrays Arlis' father, Roy Sweeney, a man with a penchant for violence.

"I've visited on the set with the stars and they are just folks," said longtime Big Lake resident Mae Swanzey. "They are just there with the crowd and they seem like everybody else." The 83-year-old gift shop owner is debuting as an extra in the film. "They are even using my station wagon. It's on the set more than I am," she said.

The cast and film crew of more than 100 have lodged in nearby Ozona, 45 miles southeast of Big Lake — a town of 3,400 which offers only 29 rooms for rent.

"This means we are waiting on people and some equipment in transit every day," said one Callie Production's worker in an office set up across the street from the town's weekly newspaper, The Wildcat.

The production's tight security has offended some townspeople and business owners who "haven't appreciated having our streets blocked off while security people wave away customers."

"It's been a real surprise for friendly West Texans, who are accustomed to just walking up and talking to people, to find out they can't do that," said David Werst, editor and fourth-generation owner of The Wildcat. "Those who have seen the stars were also surprised that they looked like everybody else."

He said the Houston-bred Quaid, wearing a cowboy hat and jeans "looks like any Texas boy you might see walking along the railroad tracks."

Movie crew workers for Callie Productions lift equipment into Big Lake's Mustang Motel during filming of "Flesh and Bone," starring Meg Ryan, Dennis Quaid and James Caan. The motel scenes are crucial to story since it is where Quaid and Ms. Ryan meet and become romantically involved.

Campaigns should strive for ideal in most-imperfect world

Mixed messages abound and particularly so in politics.

Pity. But that's the way of war and its aftermath. Kill the rascals in the passion of battle, but outwardly honor — or at least civilly tolerate — the defeated enemy when peace reigns.

Todd

To excuse the mire of campaigning by saying, "Ah, that's politics," is hardly a valid reason for putting up with the vulgarity and grossness, the hyperbole and half-truths, the lies and deceptions, and the derision of political campaigns.

Ideally, you'd think a presidential campaign would take on a princely air of nobility and highmindedness. After all, the presidency is a honorable state.

Campaigning ought to test the thought processes, the logic, the reasoning, the depth, the values, the temperament, the loyalties and the mettle of the candidates. It ought to examine the past performances, flaws, backgrounds and strengths and foibles of the candidates.

The campaign ought to probe the candidates' views on "the issues" and the candidates' perspective on history, the purposes of a nation of people, and how that nation can restore or preserve its sense of morality and its economic health.

The means to reveal candidates' character would be through academic debates, not vain ramblings, to try to figure out "how" candidates think; through muckraking to turn up any foul deeds and misdeeds; through research to examine valiant and "good" acts which the candidates have wrought.

Candidates, pledging their honor, would not be allowed to hire speech writers to interpret the candidates' broad views and the nuances within those views. The victor ought to be required to write his or her inaugural address and State of the Union message.

Alas! Can you image the disillusionment and the consternation which would emanate were evidence uncovered to prove that President Abraham Lincoln did not, indeed, pen the Gettysbury Address and that he had hired a speech-writer to prepare that astounding document? Would the British people have mustered the courage to survive the Axis onslaught during those trying days of the Battle of Britain had Prime Minister Winston Churchill's exquisite exhortations not been his own?

It is most disappointing, albeit possibly exciting and full of gossip, when mud-slinging dominates a campaign. It is certainly despicable, dishonest, unfair, and not exactly respectable in a race that ought be dignified and intelligently executed.

And after it is all over and the race is history, the erstwhile quarrelsome candidates high tail it to the peace table and talk about what a grand and honorable and honest and hard-fought campaign each candidate waged.

It's not fair. The mixed-up message to the nation, especially to its precious youth, is this: It is perfectly acceptable (but not "all right") to lie, cheat, steal and kill (by character assassination) when you are striving for a goal on the playing field whether that be in sports or in academics. Are the concepts of "sportsmanship" and honor to be applied only when they conveniently serve a purpose?

After the "campaign" — the seeking phase — is over, then do you suddenly become honorable, honest, trustworthy, genteel?

That stance fails.

An honorable person, discounting the innate flaws associated with being human, is honorable throughout and is not selectively honorable.

Campaigns, especially presidential campaigns, ought to strive for the ideal in a most-imperfect world and should not be acts of desperation and should not say, effectively, "Chuck the rules. Win regardless. Lie, cheat, steal, kill, but win."

Politics, it seems, is a sick body and needs major doctoring to cure its malaise.

State in brief

■ Police accuse teen of violating probation

BEAUMONT — The case of a Beaumont teen-ager who was given probation in a gang-related slaying and returned to jail one day later may point up shortcomings in the legal system, a police officer has said.

Officers arrested Seab Garner Smith, 18, on Tuesday for violating probation by unlawfully carrying a weapon.

District Court Judge Larry Gist on Monday sentenced Smith to 10 years deferred probation after Smith pleaded guilty to a murder charge in the death of Richard Coleman Jr., 19, on May 6, 1991. Smith was accused of throwing a 40-ounce beer bottle that struck Coleman and killed him.

■ Car hits, kills election judge at polling place

MILLSAP — A Parker County election judge removing polling place signs has been struck and killed by a car.

Graves "Bascome" Wester, 73, was hit at about 7:15 p.m. Tuesday outside the Millsap Community Center, about 40 miles west of Fort Worth.

"It was right after the polls closed," said volunteer firefighter Jeff Edwards. "He had gone out to take the election signs out that tell people where to vote, and he just walked out in front of a car."

The street, Farm Road 113, was dark except for one street light, Edwards said. The driver was driving at about 30 mph and was not issued a citation, he said.

■ Dallas man wins 'America's Funniest Dentist'

DALLAS — Dr. Steven Stutsman likes to keep his patients smiling.

Stutsman, 41, used a TV-evangelist skit to beat out 78 licensed dentists for Colgate's crown.

The flamboyant, slightly sleazy "Rev. Dr. Bubba Bookout" wears a peach polyester suit, white platform shoes and heavy jewelry.

"He doesn't make fun of God or religion," Stutsman said. "But he does make fun of a stereotyped TV evangelist."

Visitation will be from 6-8 p.m. today at the funeral home.

Pittman died Wednesday in a Dallas hospital.

He was born on Oct. 4, 1931, in Midland, where he grew up and attended school.

He was a U.S. Army veteran of the Korean War. He served as a paratrooper for two years and returned to Midland after his discharge. He worked as a painting contractor. He moved to the Dallas area in the early 1950s and remained there until 1980 when he returned to Midland. He retired from painting in 1986 and then worked part time for Ace Transportation.

He was a member of the Dallas VFW, and the Eagles Lodge of Midland, where he was past president.

He was preceded in death by one brother, John Hampton "Buster" Pittman and one sister, Marie Sigler.

Survivors include his wife, Mildred Rasco Pittman of Midland; one son, Steven Pittman of Garland; one daughter, Debbie Carpenter of Garland; two brothers, Lloyd Pittman and Kenneth Pittman, both of Midland; four sisters, Inez Jobe and Evelyn Snody, both of Midland; Louise Joyce of Colorado City and Beulah Ann Hunter of Pasadena; five grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Public hearing on Annual Plan, CHAS to start today

Staff report

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs will hold a public hearing on the state's 1993 Annual Plan and the Annual Performance Report of Comprehensive Housing and Affordability Strategy (CHAS). The hearing will be held in the Midland City Council chambers at 6 p.m. today.

The CHAS is a five-year state housing strategy required by the federal government under the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act of 1990. It details the state's priorities for allocating available funds for affordable housing for low income Texans. Each year, an updated plan and a performance report on the past year's program must be submitted to the federal government in order to be eligible for federal funds under the HOME program.

The plan discusses the affordable housing activities which the state proposes to undertake, the residents to be assisted and an investment plan which identifies available resources to address housing priorities.

The public is invited to attend the meeting and offer their comments on either or both of these documents. Depending on the outcome of the hearings, these documents may be revised to reflect the public comment on the housing needs and priorities of low income Texans.

Workshop to begin Saturday

Staff report

ODESSA — "A Day With Albert Ellis," a workshop in cognitive-behavior therapy and rational-emotive therapy, begins at 7:30 a.m. Saturday in the gymnasium at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Ellis, president of the Institute of Rational-Emotive Therapy, will demonstrate how RET principles can be used to treat stress and anxiety in the workplace, violence in the family and alcohol and drug addiction. The workshop is designed for professionals in the medical and psychological fields.

Sponsors of the day-long seminare are Glenwood Hospital and Treatment Center, the Psychological Association of Greater West Texas, U.T. Permian Basin Psychology Club/Psi Chi and Texas Tech Health Sciences Center School of Nursing.

For more information call Dr. Perry Marchioni, 684-4540.

Police arrest two for possession

BIG SPRING — Two Big Spring residents were in jail Wednesday after police officers found cocaine at their residence late Tuesday.

According to a police report, a search warrant was issued for the residence at 2500 Carlton. Officers seized an undetermined amount of cocaine, more than $4,400 in cash and a 1983 Cadillac and a 1985 Camaro.

Rudy Olivas, 25, and Amy Christian, 30, were arrested and charged with possession of a controlled substance.

Man suffers injuries in plane crash

PECOS COUNTY — A Fredricksburg man suffered minor injuries after the plane he was piloting lost power and went down Tuesday near Fort Stockton.

According to a Texas Department of Public Safety, Ray Tschirhart, 56, was piloting a Cessna 206 plane east about 18 miles northwest of Fort Stockton. At about 8:53 p.m. Tuesday, he lost all power in the engine and, after failing to get the engine back on, glided into an open pasture and landed.

Tschirhart was transported to Pecos County Memorial Hospital with minor cuts and abrasions. He was treated and released.

MOVIE: Texas town welcomes Hollywood running the show," she said, laughing.

And running the show has meant weeks of coordinating with the advance crew. "Everything is done all up front. It's unbelievable the amount of work which goes on ahead of filming the movie," she said.

Ms. Farmer said all of the filming in Big Lake has been done at night. "Everything has been tucked in during the day when they are not filming. Then they get bustling like worker ants when shooting starts."

The chamber secretary said the production company insisted on privacy for security reasons. "We did advertise for auditions and announced — in that ad — when they would be filming. But that's it," she said. "It's expensive and time-consuming to keep crowds back, and filming delays cost money, so they try to keep things quiet."

On the set there is a lot of waiting, waiting and more waiting, according to Ms. Swanzey. "I haven't been on the set so far, but I am supposed to be there when they start shooting at 5 p.m. today," she said Wednesday.

While Ms. Swanzey said she has been patiently waiting behind the camera, her car has been in the limelight every day the crew has been filming.

"I have a 1975 station wagon," she said. "They wanted the oldest station wagon in town, and I guess mine is the oldest."

"They wanted pre-1987 cars, not foreign, but American," said Ms. Farmer, who noted separate "auditions" were conducted for cars. "So I didn't get cast and neither did my 1986 foreign car," she said with a sigh.

Ms. Farmer said filming has been concentrated in the Mustang Motel and the Cozy Inn bar, both owned by James Mica who has a cameo in the film — in a role which must be second nature — as the motel owner.

"It's been nice seeing the Mustang Motel's neon sign lit up again. It's been off for years. And two rooms in the motel have also been refurbished for the film," Werst said.

Ms. Farmer said Big Lake's wide streets and western store facades are a beacon to movie location managers looking for a town with the right look for a certain time period, in an isolated area and with a small population for privacy.

"A couple of years ago, some scenes from "Mermaids" were shot down the road just west of here," she said. "The first scene in the movie — with Cher driving an old station wagon — was shot just west of Big Lake."

So if Hollywood knocks, will Big Lake answer?

Several residents said, "you bet."

"We're ready. We've got this down," Ms. Farmer said. "This is a real congenial town. Whether natives will like the Hollywood version of West Texas, I don't know. There's no telling if everyone will like it or not. But I will like it because I know what went into it. In Big Lake we've got everything anybody could want stuck in this little spot."

Since Big Lake has no operating movie theater, Ms. Farmer said residents will probably drive 90 miles northwest to Midland or about the same distance east to San Angelo to see the film and watch for glimpses of local celebrities.

"We are not on the interstate. We are off the beaten path, so this has given us a real boost," Ms. Farmer said.

Mirage Spring Creek Productions will continue filming this week in several other West Texas locales.

Filming is expected to be completed before Christmas.

Pet behaviorist placates pesky animals

By Michael Precker
Associated Press Writer

IRVING — Tigger wasn't always like this.

The sleek, gray cat was sweet and playful, calm and friendly, Lynn Roney's beloved companion.

Now Tigger is hunkered under the coffee table, fearful and angry. Her beautiful green eyes are dilating, a sign of rising stress. She emits a half-whine, half-growl that sounds like something out of a bad Exorcist remake.

A bowl of tuna isn't helping. Soothing voices expressing compassion and reassurance aren't helping. Looking out from under the table and seeing lots of shoes — which may be the source of Tigger's trauma — definitely don't help.

"This cat is my baby," says Ms. Roney. "I just know something has happened to her. If a family member has a problem, you don't just kick them out. You try to help."

That is why she called Diane Arrington, a Dallas woman who began training dogs for friends nearly two decades ago and wound up as a pet behaviorist. It's a growing specialty in the pet business and a reflection of the importance of dogs and cats in millions of American households.

House calls for people have become a quaint symbol of years gone by, like soda fountains and big finned Chevys. But if Sparky is irrigating the rug or Sheba doesn't like the new baby, a behaviorist — part trainer, part psychologist — will come to your door.

"I'm the last straw," Ms. Arrington says "Seventy or 80 percent of my calls are 'If you don't do something about my pet, I'm going to have to put him to sleep.'"

On her first visit to Tigger, the behaviorist wore a pair of ankle-exposing flats. "She bit me to the bone," Ms. Arrington says.

This time she changes into well padded athletic shoes and thick socks before climbing the stairs into Ms. Roney's apartment. Tigger doesn't bite, and even the hunkering and growling signify improvement.

"Before this she would have sniffed you for about 45 seconds and then she'd freak out," says Ms. Roney, a nurse. "She hits, she bites, she scratches, she lunges. Some of my friends call her 'Psychocat.'"

The only explanation for this, Ms. Roney figures, is that about a year ago someone kicked Tigger so viciously and traumatically as to warp the cat's personality.

Undoing the damage isn't easy. Ms. Arrington and Ms. Roney play with Tigger, reward her with praise and tuna, anything they can think of to defuse tension while getting the cat used to having people around again. Between appointments, the owner repeats the sessions with friends.

"Our real goal is to get her back to what she was, and we're 50 percent there," Ms. Arrington says. "But cats aren't as resilient as dogs are. I'm really not sure we'll get to that point."

Diane Arrington's father tells her that when she was 2 or 3, she already was teaching the family dog to sit. She simply remembers always having an affinity for animals.

"I hope this doesn't sound weird, but I think it's a gift," she says. "I just know I'm doing what I was meant to do."

Whether teaching classes or making house calls, training new pets or trouble-shooting old ones, her rules are the same: no scolding, no yelling, no hitting. "I won't use anything I wouldn't use on a child," she says.

Dallas billionaire earns right to be part of American politics

DALLAS (NYT) — Ross Perot has long described himself as the grain of sand in an oyster.

Whether he ultimately produces pearls or just plain irritation, the Dallas billionaire has earned himself the right to be a very large grain of sand in the flesh of American politics.

After pulling 19 percent of the votes cast in Tuesday's presidential race — a stronger showing than any independent candidate since Teddy Roosevelt's 1912 bid as a "Bull Moose" — the man who once fought General Motors isn't likely to go away quietly.

"He will be a spokesman for what he thinks are the pressing issues of the country," said Perot's son-in-law and campaign counsel, Clay Mulford, in an interview Wednesday.

Nothing said it more clearly than Perot's election night performance, when he held up a freshly printed "Perot In '96" bumper sticker at his chili dog and apple pie reception in a North Dallas ballroom.

Perot told thousands of adoring fans to cooperate with the Clinton administration. If that didn't work, Perot said, they could always "bring out the stray dog from the dog pound again."

If Clinton won a mandate to lead, Perot's supporters are claiming their own mandate to breathe down the necks of a new administration.

Perot, who so artfully framed the presidential debate and may even have helped bring down President Bush, has already taken on the role of national conscience. If Clinton fails to respond quickly to the issues he beat on during the campaign — the deficit, the economy, the quality of American jobs — Perot could come back with a vengeance, his aides and supporters say.

"There's not a doubt in my mind that Ross Perot will continue to be concerned and will react to the needs of the country. What role that will lead him to play depends on the new administration," said Murphy Martin, the former network anchorman and Perot media adviser. "If they do not respond and respond quickly he will continue to be the lightning rod to get this country going again."

The Perot and Clinton camps were mum Wednesday about communications between the two men as well as about speculation of a possible role for Perot in a Clinton administration.

Nonetheless, ebullient Clinton aides treated Perot on Wednesday as they had for months — delicately.

Asked about any efforts to appease Perot's millions of supporters, Clinton senior staffer Paul Begala said obliquely: "I wouldn't use those words. These are people who deeply love their country and want to see change. I think they'll be very happy with a Clinton presidency."

Perot aides meantime were discussing the future of the Perot political organization, called United We Stand.

The group's national director, Orson Swindle — a conservative former Commerce Department official appointed under President Ronald Reagan — said that the group would continue as a self-sustaining political organization without Perot's money.

"The common question is are we going to keep this thing going?" said Swindle. "In all candor, there's no way we can stop it. This is truly a phenomenon unparalleled in the history of this country."

Swindle said that the time appeared to be ripe for a third party. Mulford said the group would explore developing into the kind of special interest that Perot often chastised: a Political Action Committee.

But some in and outside Perot's camp have questioned whether the movement can continue without Perot as a candidate or without Perot's vast checkbook that dropped $60 million into the campaign.

Perot's followers already rightfully claim that they have shaped the debate in the 1992 election. Only history will measure their claims of forever altering presidential politics.

Texans to play big role in new administration

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros led the list of Texas names floating around Wednesday as possible appointees in President-elect Bill Clinton's administration.

"Henry Cisneros — that seems to be everybody's top name," said Dallas attorney, novelist and Clinton campaign fundraiser Paul Coggins. "I've always thought in many senses Henry would rather be in an appointive position rather than an elective one."

Coggins said Cisneros has been mentioned most as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development or Transportation.

Another Clinton campaign official in Texas, media director Craig Sutherland, said he has heard Cisneros mentioned possibly as Secretary of Education as well as HUD.

"He's got a strong background working in urban areas. That includes education and housing and urban development," Sutherland said.

Cisneros, who now runs a private asset management company in San Antonio, resigned his seat on the Federal Reserve Bank Board in Dallas earlier this year to become a senior adviser to the Clinton campaign.

Cisneros was in Little Rock, Ark., Wednesday and not immediately available for comment, his office said. He has said he did not get involved in the campaign to secure an administration position, but would not rule out a accepting an appointment.

Campaign officials point out that their speculation is just that — speculation. In the next several weeks the Clinton administration will start to take shape.

"I don't think there's anybody out there that's any surprise," Sutherland said. "Your Henry Cisneros, your Garry Mauro, I'm sure are going to be under consideration."

Mauro, Texas Land Commissioner, headed Clinton's campaign in Texas and also is often mentioned as a possible Clinton appointee. He also was en route from Little Rock Wednesday and not immediately available for comment.

Meanwhile, Coggins said that in the final days of the campaign he was asked to prepare a resume for the new administration.

"If there's a position that seems like a good fit, I'd be interested," Coggins said, adding that he would consider posts in the Justice Department or the Office of General Counsel.

Coggins also said his wife, attorney Regina Montoya, could be a Clinton appointee.

Both Coggins and Ms. Montoya are friends of Bill and Hillary Clinton since their college days, and the Dallas couple became involved in the Clinton campaign in its early stages.

Coggins said now that Clinton has been elected, rumors are rampant about who might be going to Washington.

"You hear a lot of names, and you hear a lot of rumors," he said. "I know Bill Clinton, and he's looking for diversity and he's looking for really bright people. He likes people who challenge him. He doesn't like a lot of yes-people around him."

Republicans make gains despite Bush's defeat

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Republicans may have lost the White House, but they continued to chip away at Democratic dominance in Texas.

By Wednesday, near-final election returns showed the GOP adding another statewide official, grabbing an unprecedented number of seats in the Texas Senate and cracking the Democratic lock on state's highest criminal court bench.

"We will have more Republicans in office in Texas than ever before," said state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer. "That's encouraging and important."

President Bush carried his adopted home state to no avail. Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton will be the next president, and Texas Democrats said that signals a major change.

"You're seeing a real reflection for the first time that there is a new Democratic Party," Gov. Ann Richards said.

"A lot of us are putting an emphasis on frugality, on taxpayers getting their money's worth. I'm very serious when I say that the old image of the Democratic Party in this nation, I hope, is gone," she said.

But while the governor could boast about the national win, closer to home she suffered some personal defeats.

Her first and most visible appointee, ex-Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero, was trounced by Republican Barry Williamson, a virtual unknown just weeks ago.

Ms. Guerrero's 12-year lie about holding a college degree angered thousands of voters.

"Clearly, it was a statement by the people that they were not satisfied with her explanations about her resume," said Bill Cryer, the governor's press secretary.

Williamson, a Dallas oilman, becomes the second Republican to serve on the panel that regulates oil and gas. Kent Hance won a 1988 election to fill an unexpired term there.

Williamson also joins state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison and Agriculture Commission Rick Perry as Republicans holding statewide office.

Another Richards appointee to be defeated was Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Pete Benavides. A narrow victory by Republican Lawrence Meyers, an appeals court judge from Fort Worth, gives the GOP its first seat on what had been a nine-Democrat court.

Cryer said that defeat shouldn't be seen as a statement about Richards, either. "Both Lena and Pete Benavides were extraordinary appointments," he said.

GOP chief Meyer saw it differently. "The real loser here is Ann Richards," he said.

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, disagreed.

"There was a lot of picking and choosing in those state races," he said. "And I think what Ross Perot did was cut traditional Democratic margins in some areas."

Democrats still have their hands firmly on the reins of Texas government.

Both the governor and lieutenant governor are Democrats, as are all three leading candidates for House speaker. Democrats still control both houses of the Legislature and have majorities on the top two state courts.

But the Republicans made big inroads in the state Senate on Tuesday, gaining four seats for a total of 13. That's their largest share of the Legislature's upper chamber since Reconstruction.

While Democrats hold an 18-13 majority, the GOP now has more than one-third of the Senate seats. That's a key threshold which, for the first time, allows them to block some legislation, stop proposed constitutional amendments and reject gubernatorial appointments.

"The dynamics of the state Senate have changed dramatically," said Rob Mosbacher, chairman of the GOP's Victory '92 campaign arm.

"Clearly, we have made significant gains in the Senate ... We made serious inroads in the Senate and have some voice," Mosbacher said.

The Democrats' Martin, however, blamed the shift not on philosophy but on "appointed Republican federal judges" who drew this year's state Senate redistricting map.

"We think it's one-time-only partisanship," Martin said. "There's no mandate, there's no state policy being discussed, it's not a reflection on the state's leadership."

GOP lawmakers have held more than one-third of the state House seats for several years. So the likely makeup of 93 Democrats and 57 Republicans for the 1993-94 session shouldn't mean much change.

The state Supreme Court races were a wash. Democrats held a 5-4 edge going into Tuesday's elections. They held a 5-4 edge coming out.

Russians optimistic about Clinton, treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — Ordinary Russians greeted Bill Clinton's victory with optimism Wednesday, while lawmakers gave the American president-elect reason to be rosy about U.S.-Russian ties by approving a nuclear arms reduction treaty.

President Boris Yeltsin said he hoped the United States and Russia would be able to forge a stronger partnership. Many Russians, accustomed to viewing older leaders with suspicion, hailed Clinton's youth.

Alexei Ulyukayev, a top economic advisor to Yeltsin, said that he once suspected a Clinton victory would lead to isolationism, but now feels "the Democrats will be able to act more freely in international areas than the Republicans."

Speaking to The Associated Press in Berlin, Ulukayev pointed to Russia's need for U.S. help in postponing payments on its $71 billion foreign debt, but said Russian manufacturers' access to American markets was "much more important for us."

Russia's Supreme Soviet voted 157-1 to ratify the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, which was signed by President Bush and former Soviet President Mikhajl Gorbachev in 1991. Hardliners said the vote was an unwarranted gift to Clinton.

"Some people want to present it on a silver platter to the U.S. president-elect," said legislator Vitaly Sevastyanov.

Generally, however, people interviewed in central Moscow were glad that a younger man would be at the helm of Russia's former nemesis. Clinton is 46, Bush 68.

"It's the time of young people," said army Col. Mikhail Reznikov, who was shopping for food with a fellow officer, "because they are much more flexible. They look at all things. Without doubt, it's much, much better."

Gorbachev called Clinton a "natural leader, born after World War II, and he represents the new, younger people."

In the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, historian Danyl Yenevsky welcomed the election of a "Beatles epoch" leader. Ukrainian Prime Minister Leonid Kuchma also praised Clinton's youth and made a swipe at Bush.

"I hope that we will have more fruitful relations with the U.S.A. as, so far, apart from advice, we have not had anything," Kuchma said.

Ukrainian opposition activist Serhiy Odarich confessed to "a gut reaction against old politicians" because of the succession of geriatric general secretaries who had led the Soviet Union.

But in St. Petersburg, the head of the city council's press service said many Russians were sorry to see Bush defeated.

"In Russia we're afraid of change," Alexander Varetin said. "We never like to see a leader fall and a new one rise. Usually it just means new trouble, some crazy new policy and people suffering."

People vote for term limits in 14 states

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press Writer

The Clinton electoral landslide was accompanied by a term-limit tidal wave, as 14 states imposed brakes on how long members of Congress may serve. But these laws faced immediate challenge — in the courts.

Hours after Florida voters approved term limits by a 3-to-1 margin, a suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Tallahasee, seeking to block the new rules. Others challenges were expected elsewhere.

"If they take this to the courts, the courts are going to say to them, you are taking it to the wrong people," said Jim Coyne, a former Republican congressman from Pennsylvania who organized Americans to Limit Congressional Terms, one of several such groups.

"We view this as an unstoppable tidal wave."

Adoption of term limits in states ranging from Florida to California means about one-third of Congress is now subject to mandatory turnover.

But few voters seemed interested in changing representatives on Tuesday. Among 28 U.S. Senate incumbents seeking re-election, 23 kept their jobs, as do about 93 percent of 349 U.S. House incumbents.

The same goes for state legislators. One in five — about 1,500 of the nation's nearly 7,500 state lawmakers — retired, lost primaries or were shoved out by redistricting. Among those who survived to Election Day, 92 percent won re-election.

"It shows the reason we have called for term limits is as valid the day after the election as it was the day before," Coyne said. Incumbents get money from special interests, enjoy extra privileges and membership in a political elite, he said.

Thomas Cronin, a political science professor at Colorado College in Colorado Springs and expert on the use of the ballot initiative, said it was only logical to approve both term limits and incumbents.

"It's saying, 'I don't think those guys in general should be there, but I like our congressman," Cronin said. "When pressed, (the voters will) say, 'I'm willing to give that guy up.'"

The biggest single issue in one year since the advent of citizen initiatives, congressional term limits won strong approval everywhere they appeared: in Florida, California, Ohio, Arizona, Arkansas, Nebraska, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Oregon, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming and Washington state. Passage was as high as 77 percent in Florida and Wyoming.

All but California and North Dakota adopted limits for state lawmakers too. Arkansas, Michigan, Montana, Oregon and Washington also limited terms for their governors and other executive offices.

They join Colorado, which limits Congress and state legislative offices and Oklahoma, which limits state lawmakers. California adopted limits for its state legislators in 1990.

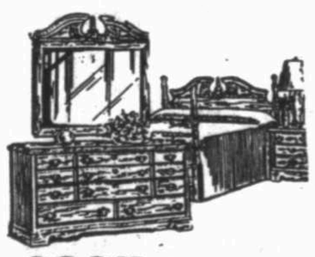

All limit U.S. Senators to 12 years and House members to six to 12 years, depending on the state.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New business and professional trends begin to work to your advantage. Long-distance travel could be part of your plan for achieving greater financial success in 1993. An extended business trip will be much more productive if postponed until next May. Nurture your ambitions in secret to avoid arousing others' jealousy. You have what it takes to accomplish great things! If romance seems lackluster next summer, be spontaneous. Show your tender, sentimental side.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: rock star Bryan Adams, playwright Sam Shepard, actress Tatum O'Neal, cowboy star Roy Rogers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although a job offer sounds good, employment benefits could give you second thoughts. Banish self-imposed restrictions. You are much more creative than you think!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A wonderful day lies ahead if you work with a will to get things settled. Be careful not to let someone down. Your psychic sensitivity is on the rise. Trust your instincts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Face facts. Someone is less dependable than you would like. Rely on your own efforts. This evening could mark the end of your participation in a group.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good eating habits and regular exercise will boost your stamina. Kick the junk food habit once and for all! Invest in something that really interests you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A confident attitude makes you popular now. Do not waste time on trivial matters when there is a big audience you can influence. Refuse to let others dump their problems on you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An abrupt change of pace occurs. A business or marriage proposal is featured. Take your own sweet time to think it over. You may have to change certain social plans to accommodate others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be hesitant to promote yourself or your plans today. A staunch ally goes to bat for you in a dramatic fashion. Do your best to live up to this person's expectations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not play games with another person's emotions. If you are not serious about a commitment, say so, but in a gentle manner. A romantic partner could throw you a curve!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can do your best work alone today — far from distractions and interruptions. Do not get frustrated if new methods prove difficult to master. Persevere.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stop doubting your unique abilities. Hard work and perseverance will help you accomplish miracles. Counsel an associate who has financial woes. Romance is fulfilling.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Draw the line with a family member who does not want to shoulder responsibilities. Someone may pressure you for an answer to a recent query. Being diplomatic might buy you more time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your spirits get a big boost when a pal calls with exciting plans. Go along with the tide. It could turn out to be an interesting adventure. Play it cool in romance.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are affectionate but self-sufficient, content to spend time alone working on their special projects. School work is usually a breeze for these youngsters. They accept responsibility with grace and pursue their goals with intensity and discipline. Their strong curiosity about human nature is revealed by their favorite reading material: mysteries and crime stories. When it comes to romance, these Scorpios can be quite possessive. Trying to make them jealous would be a big mistake.

Opening lead: Six of ♠

If you trust partner, you can come up with some spectacular defenses. Watch Swedish stars Mats Nilsland, East, and Bjorn Fallenius, West, in action against Venezuela during the recent 9th World Bridge Olympiad.

After a competitive auction North-South did well to bid all the way up to five hearts. East-West can come to 10 tricks at spades by finessing for the queen of spades and K 10 of diamonds. Given the lead of the six of spades, would you rather play or defend five hearts?

At the table, declarer routinely played low from dummy and East followed with the three! After winning the first trick with the six of spades, West shifted to a trump and, when he regained the lead with a diamond, led another trump. Declarer could ruff two diamonds and set up a long club, but then had no entry to dummy to enjoy it. Or, if he preferred, he could maneuver one discard on the long club, but could not ruff two diamonds. That was down one. Try it for yourself.

However, that does not mean you should have chosen to defend five hearts. If you elected to declare, you can get home by covering the six of spades at the first trick. East wins, but cannot remove one of dummy's vital trumps.

Suppose East continues with a spade. Declarer ruffs low, crosses to the king of clubs and leads a diamond to the king. Declarer wins the trump return in dummy, singles in his remaining low trump by ruffing a spade, and then has a high cross-ruff after cashing the remaining club winner, scoring all nine trump tricks and two clubs!

Late Ava Gardner was the love of Sinatra's life, actress says

NEW YORK — Marcia Gay Harden, who is playing the late Ava Gardner in an upcoming television mini-series about Frank Sinatra, says the sultry actress who was the crooner's second wife was "the love of Frank's life."

"They went over the top with each other," she said in a recent interview. "You know, shooting up lampposts in Palm Springs, that sort of thing. They fought so much, they eventually fought their way out of love."

Sinatra and Gardner were married in 1951 and divorced in 1957. Gardner died in 1990.

Harden, 33, who got her big break in the film "Miller's Crossing," said she was worried at first about playing the Gardner role because of the late actress' flamboyance and her legendary beauty. "They ended up doing a lot of makeup work on me," she said. "For me, it became a matter of finding her essence — that raw, gutsy power she had."

Harden said of her own performance in "Sinatra," scheduled for broadcast Sunday and Tuesday on CBS: "Sometimes I thought, 'Oh, Marcia, this is just extraordinarily bad acting on your part — all this breathy, nostril-flaring stuff you're doing.' But at times I really got caught up in her and the story and believed it all."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Barbara Mandrell says it was eight years before she was her old self after a car wreck left her with a brain injury.

Mandrell

"Until I was rehabilitated, until I was healed, Barbara Mandrell and mommy to my children and wife to my husband — she was dead," Mandrell said Tuesday.

Mandrell, 43, was preparing to testify before a Tennessee legislative committee studying brain injuries and the problems faced by victims and their families.

The singer was injured in September 1984. Mandrell has said her seat belt saved her life.

She said the accident left her a different person who stuttered and endured enormous mood swings. The response to her 1990 autobiography "Get to the Heart: My Story" encouraged the Country Music Association's two-time Entertainer of the Year to testify about her injury.

"I feel so fortunate and so blessed to have healed that I think it's the absolutely only Christian thing to do. If I'm needed, I'll go in and speak."

Mandrell is known for her hit songs "Sleeping Single in a Double Bed" and "If Loving You is Wrong (I Don't Want to be Right)."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Singer Billy Ray Cyrus says Grand Ole Opry performer Del Reeves took advantage of him by signing him to a contract that would have cost almost all his earnings.

Cyrus' comments came in a response filed in Davidson County Chancery Court to a lawsuit Reeves and his wife, Ellen, filed in September.

The singer, who topped both the pop and country charts this year with his debut album "Some Gave All," said in court documents that Reeves talked him into signing a record production agreement in 1988.

The deal involved Cyrus paying 8 percent of "the suggested retail list price of all records sold" plus 15 percent of his gross earnings if Reeves got Cyrus a recording contract, Cyrus said.

The longtime Opry performer charges that he was a key in Cyrus signing a contract with Mercury/Polygram Records.

Ellen Reeves is suing the singer to enforce an "investor agreement" in which Cyrus agreed to pay her 2.5 percent of gross earnings in his first year to repay $2,200 she spent for demonstration tapes.

LOS ANGELES — Andy Garcia has high regard for his new film, "Jennifer 8," and makes no apologies for his current release, "Hero," which never developed into a hit.

Garcia, 36, stars in "Jennifer 8" as a cop who quits mean L.A. for Northern California only to get caught up in a serial murder.

"The script was incredibly precise and well-written and loaded with contradictions and complexities and demons for the protagonist to overcome," Garcia said of "Jennifer 8," which opens Friday.

Meanwhile, "Hero," with Dustin Hoffman and Geena Davis, has not done well at the box office.

"I think it's doing well enough," Garcia said in a recent interview. "Commercially, you're setting yourself up, getting greedy if you want to just take everything home for yourself. ... I have no disappointments about that; I would've been disappointed if we had made a bad film or one that was somehow destroyed in order to aspire to be commercial. It's doing well enough, for me."

LOS ANGELES — Elton John and Bernie Taupin, the songwriting team responsible for such hits as "Sad Songs" and "Don't Let the Sun Go Down on Me," signed a publishing contract Wednesday worth about $39 million.

Lamesa part of 2-4A jumble

■ The Tornadoes' playoff hopes hinge on tonight's Levelland-Lubbock Estacado game and a 12-point win Friday.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

■ AREA FOOTBALL

Please excuse the Lamesa Tornadoes if they get caught looking to the north around 7:30 p.m. tonight. That's when Levelland meets Lubbock Estacado at Lowrey Field in a District 2-4A game, where a tie would effectively eliminate Lamesa from the playoff hunt.

But barring an unlikely tie between the Matadors and Loboes, Lamesa will still have life when the Tors host the Plainview Bulldogs at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Lamesa, which moved to 2-2 in league play with a clutch 23-14 win last week at Snyder, stands one game behind the three-way logjam for first place between Plainview, Levelland and Estacado, which are all 3-1. So a win by either Estacado or Levelland tonight, coupled with a Tornado win over Plainview, and Lamesa will find itself in a three-way tie for second place as the 2-4A regular season comes to a close.

Unfortunately for the Tors, that tie would be broken according to 2-4A's positive 15-point method, which means Lamesa would have to defeat the visiting Bulldogs by no fewer than 12 points to secure the remaining postseason playoff berth. Still, the Tors, who did not win a league game in 1991, like the thought of capping the regular season with a meaningful game.

"We're excited to be where we are," Lamesa head coach Gary Yoder said. "We started the season hoping that our last game would mean something and it very definitely does.

"We're looking at the possibility of making the playoffs, but any kind of a win would give us a 7-3 record for the year and that would be a feather in our cap."

Other games with playoff implications for area teams include Midland Christian's homecoming fray with the El Paso Agape Christian Conquerors in which the Mustangs can finish the regular season with a perfect 9-0 mark and capture another DistrictvI Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools title.

Such a victory would push MCS into the TAPPS playoffs, where the Mustangs could play in defense of their 1991 state title.

Another area district with playoff spots up for grabs is 8-A, where Rankin will look to retain the top position against visiting Fort Davis and Garden City must compete for life at Grandfalls.

Rankin overpowered Sanderson 45-0 last week, moving to 7-1 for the season and 3-0 in the loop. Fort Davis stands 1-2 in the league and a Red Devil win will clinch no worse than a tie for the district top spot with one game left in the regular season.

But that last game on Nov. 13 will be at Garden City, where the 5-3, 2-1 Bearkats will be setting up an ambush. Garden

Chap Classic

The 1992-93 junior college basketball season kicks into high gear today with the opening of the 15th annual Chaparral Classic at Midland College's Chap Center.

Midland College hosts Jacksonville in a 7:30 p.m. game, but the tournament opens with a 3:30 p.m. game pitting Odessa College and Alvin. Sandwiched in between the afternoon and evening games is the Ranger-South Plains game, scheduled for a 5:30 p.m. tip-off.

Williams hailed

NEW YORK — Erik Williams of the Dallas Cowboys earned a rare honor for an offensive lineman on Wednesday when he was named the NFC's offensive player of the week.

Minnesota's Jack Del Rio was named NFC defensive player.

Ken O'Brien of the New York Jets was named AFC offensive player and Cincinnati's Alfred Williams earned defensive honors.

Erik Williams, a second-year player, had a key role in the Cowboys' 20-10 win over Philadelphia on Sunday, blocking All-Pro Reggie White throughout the game and opening a huge hole for a 51-yard run by Emmitt Smith. Smith gained 163 yards and became the first back to rush for 100 yards against Philadelphia in 54 games.

Olympic dreams

NEW YORK — Although the United States Baseball Federation has no interest in the kind of "Dream Team" arrangement that won Olympic gold for America in basketball, some familiar names could show up on its roster for the 1996 Games at Atlanta.

"We don't want a Dream Team," Dick Case, executive director of USA Baseball, said Wednesday. "We don't feel we want active pros involved."

That position was confirmed two weeks ago at Los Angeles where the International Baseball Association rejected the use of active major league players in the Games.

What Case would like as an alternative is retired major league players to supplement the usual college stars. "We could have some marquee names," he said.

By 1996, players like Ozzie Smith, Dave Winfield, George Brett, Dennis Eckersley, Nolan Ryan and Robin Yount are likely to be finished with their major league careers and could be available.

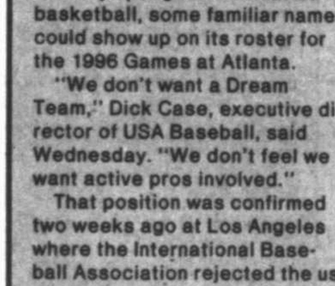

Cambridge out

DALLAS — Dallas Mavericks rookie forward Dexter Cambridge is expected to miss the first eight weeks of the season because of a stress fracture in his right tibia.

Cambridge, a former Texas Longhorns star, suffered the injury when he was accidentally kicked during Monday's exhibition game against the San Antonio Spurs.

Listach Rookie of Year

■ Milwaukee shortstop Pat Listach garners AL Rookie of the Year honors.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pat Listach, who failed to make the Milwaukee Brewers' opening day roster, was voted the American League Rookie of the Year on Wednesday.

Listach

The Milwaukee shortstop was chosen first on 20 of 28 ballots and received 122 points in voting by from the Baseball Writers Association of America. Cleveland outfielder Kenny Lofton was second with 85 points, followed by Seattle pitcher Dave Fleming with 23 and Milwaukee pitcher Cal Eldred with 22. Lofton got seven first-place votes and Eldred one.

"It came as a surprise, the difference in the voting," Listach said during a news conference Wednesday at Milwaukee's County Stadium. "I expected it to be a lot closer. I didn't know if I'd come in first or second."

Listach hit .290 with one homer and 47 RBIs. He also stole 54 bases to break the Brewers' previous rookie record of 30, set by Paul Molitor in 1978.

"I didn't set any goals," Listach said. "I didn't even expect to be here this year.

"I was new to most of the other teams in the league. Off the bat, early in the season, they didn't know I would run. I got a few cheap stolen bases. As the season went on, it got harder."

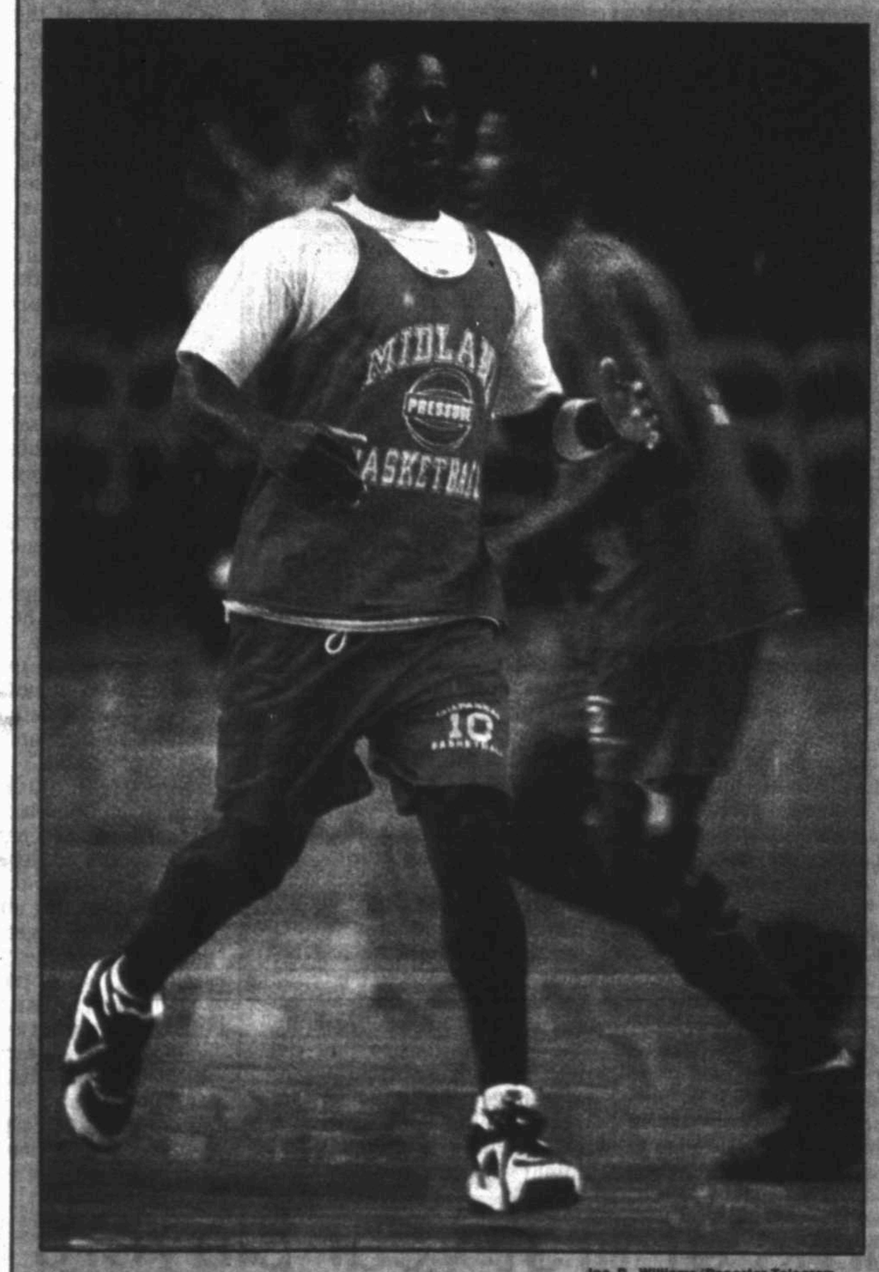

Rookie manager Phil Garner sent Listach to the minors in his first round of spring training cuts, figuring Bill Spiers would be his regular shortstop. But Spiers didn't recover from offseason back surgery and the Brewers called up Listach one day after the season started.

"It's a long way once you think about it. I expected to start the season in Denver," Listach said. "I was fortunate enough to come in on opening day and get some chances to start."

"We all felt like he had the qualities to be an exciting player," Garner said. "We

HIGH HOPES AT MC

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram
Three-point hot shooter Terrance Rone is one of four returning sophomores back for the 1992-93 season.

■ As Midland College prepares to enter the 1992-93 season, a feeling of optimism hangs in the air.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Not since the 1985-86 season have the Midland College Chaparrals entered a basketball campaign with as much optimism.

The names to remember then were Mookie Blaylock, Lincoln Minor, Todd Duncan, Ricky Grace and Eddie Frazier.

The names to remember now are not yet household in nature, but second-year head coach Steve Green's second recruiting class is loaded with talent to go along with the likes of sophomores Terrance Rone, Ari Rodriques, Kelon Haynie and Shawn Morris, all of whom return from last year's 23-9, Region V semifinalist team.

The Chaps have been picked to win the Western Junior College Athletic Conference by the league's coaches, a mark which they fell just short of last season. MC has also gained at least three Top 10 rankings, having been chosen No. 9 by the NJCAA, No. 6 by The Sporting News and No. 7 by Dick Vitale's College/Pro Basketball Annual.

Intestinal disorder hospitalizes MacPherson

Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — The reeling New England Patriots got another jolt Wednesday when coach Dick MacPherson was hospitalized on his 62nd birthday with a serious intestinal disorder.

He was expected to be away from the team for at least two weeks while receiving treatment for acute diverticulitis. Assistant coach Dante Scarnecchia was named to fill in.

The ailment is the latest blow in a stressful season in which the Patriots (0-8) have the NFL's worst record and must face the strong New Orleans Saints (6-2) at home Sunday.

"I don't think that this is only stress," Patriots chief executive officer Sam Jankovich said of MacPherson's condition. "There's a lot to be said about diet ... and then the nerves definitely play a big role in it."

There was no definite word on how long MacPherson would be out, but Jankovich said he expected the second-year coach to return this season.

"It is extremely important that Mac divorce himself from the team for a while, that he watch his diet, that he stay away from stress," Jankovich said. "I

Bi-district matchups already decided

With one more week still to play in the Class 5A regular football season, it's interesting to note that the District 4-5A versus District 3-5A bi-district playoff matchups have already been set.

Price

Fourth-ranked Odessa Permian (7-1 overall, 5-0 in district), can still wind up in a three-way tie for the 4-5A championship with San Angelo and Abilene Cooper if it loses in San Angelo Friday. But a Panther win makes Permian the undisputed district champion.

Regardless of the outcome of that game, though, Permian will be the 4-5A No. 1 seed in the Small School playoffs because San Angelo (6-3, 4-1) will enter the Big School bracket while Permian and Cooper (7-2, 4-1) go into the Small School field. Last Friday's 31-30 Mojo win over Cooper guaranteed Permian the No. 1 berth.

Got it? Wait, I'll confuse you yet.

In 3-5A, Amarillo High (8-1, 4-0) can end up tied for the district title against either Amarillo Palo Duro (6-3, 3-1) or Amarillo Tascosa (7-2, 3-1). Amarillo High plays Lubbock Monterey Friday and, just like Permian, can clinch the title with a win.

A loss, however, sends the Sandies into a tie with the winner of Saturday's Palo Duro-Tascosa game. Since Tascosa will go into the Big School bracket, though, and since Amarillo High beat Palo Duro, it doesn't really matter.

So that leaves us with these bi-district certainties: Permian versus Palo Duro (4-5A No. 1 seed against 3-5A No. 2), Amarillo High versus Cooper (3-5A No. 1 against 4-5A No. 2) and San Angelo versus Tascosa (Big School versus Big School).

Bearing that in mind, officials at all parties involved have already announced the sites and times: The Small School bracket is easy, as both games will be played as a doubleheader Saturday Nov. 14 at Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

The Permian-Palo Duro game is set for a 1 p.m. start, while Cooper-Amarillo High will begin at 4:30 p.m. San Angelo and Tascosa, on the other hand, eschewed a neutral site. San Angelo lost the home field advantage decider (not a coin flip. We will delve deeper into this in the paragraphs to come).

So Tascosa will host the Bobcats at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 13 in Amarillo's Dick Bivins Stadium.

AS FOR the format of deciding a home field, San Angelo head coach Dan Gandy is among the movement afoot to forego a coin flip. It has to do with zip codes.

One of the two teams' representatives will name a town listed in the "Texas High School and College Coaching Directory." The other representative will immediately guess whether the last number in that town's zip code is odd or even. A correct guess means you get to play at home that week.

Gandy got to play three of four playoff games decided in the manner a year ago. As a matter of fact, when the Bobcats played El Paso Socorro the town Gandy offered was Iraan. The Socorro coach who guessed odd missed the answer, even though at one time he coached and lived in Iraan.

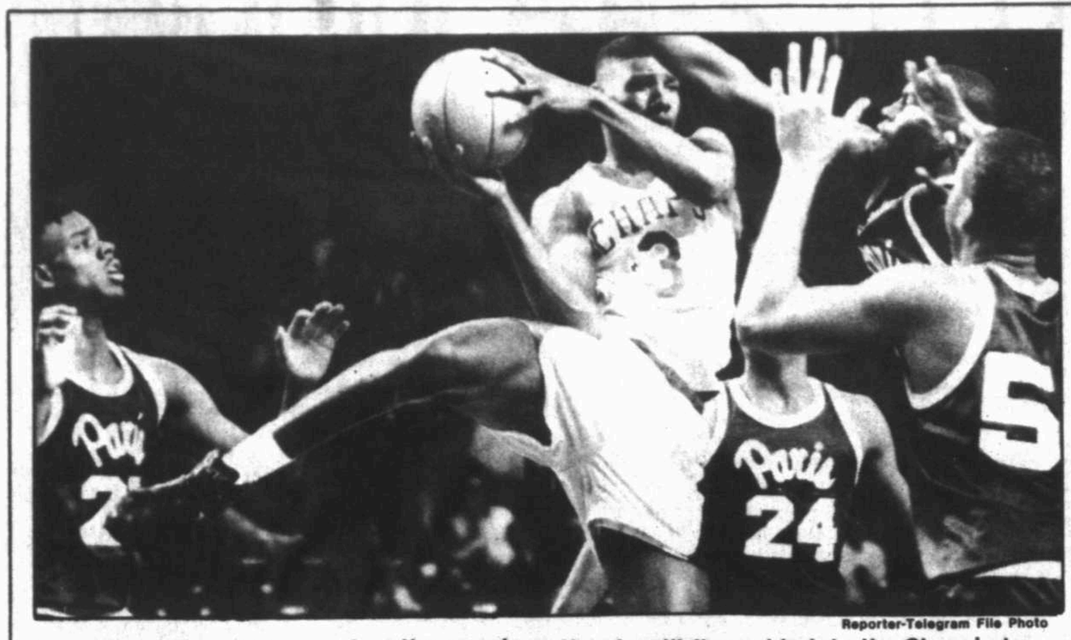

What we don't know is whether the old five-digit code is used, or whether the coaches heed the Postal Service's advice and use the nine-digit code (in either case Iraan is even at 79744-0486).

But if Gandy's luck (is it luck or does he stay up nights studying the directory?) continues in the same fashion it did this week, he may opt for another way of deciding the home field. Tiddlywinks anyone?

WJCAC deals with two defections

■ With Western Texas' basketball program gone and Clarendon slipping to a lower level, the league's remaining members are hurting.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Last season, it was five coaching changes that had the Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball race in an upheaval.

This year, it's the schools themselves that are altering the shape of the league.

In June, Western Texas College, long a staple of junior college basketball — a school that even owns two NJCAA titles — decided to drop its men's basketball program. Although the school board extinguished the sport on the condition it be allowed to re-enter the league in 1993-94 should its financial situation improve, some coaches in the league are already acting as if that will not happen.

Then, in August, Clarendon College trustees voted not to return as a member of the WJCAC. The Bulldogs will play a lame duck schedule this year with none of their games counting in the conference standings for either them or their opponents. Clarendon will simply be fulfilling its obligation of games to the seven remaining league schools this season.

The biggest headache the two schools' departure creates is scheduling. But there are other bad feelings expressed by the coaches.

"As a conference, we lose a little bit because Western Texas has a lot of tradition dating back to Nolan Richardson," said second-year Howard College head coach Jeff Kidder. "They won a couple of NJCAA titles there. It just affects the conference in the traditional sense. And Clarendon's been in the conference for years.

"Anytime you have two teams that have been in here for so long, it takes a lot away. But the strong parts remain intact and that makes us still one of the best conferences in the nation ... the good athletes we have and the strength of the programs."

New Mexico Junior College head coach Ron Black agreed with Kidder, saying, "I hate to see it. It weakens the conference."

For NMJC and South Plains College, rescheduling non-conference games is an even greater hardship due to the distance those schools are from other junior colleges. Schools such as Ranger, Cisco and Hill that often make trips to Midland are more hesitant to travel the even greater distance to Levelland and Hobbs, N.M.

"For South Plain College, it is a problem," SPC head coach Ron Mayberry said. "It's harder for us to get to Ranger and Cisco. That's a long way to go for a home-and-home (series). There's just not that many schools that are close to us."

The maximum number of regular season games a school can schedule is 29. To round out their seasons this year, NMJC and Howard made up for their two lost games against WTC by joining the lineup of the Dallas Community College Classic, a tournament WTC had been scheduled to play in. NMJC jumped in and took WTC's place, and when Kidder called to see if his Hawks could play as well, tournament officials decided to up the number of teams in the event. So the defection of WTC has already had a direct impact on schools outside as well as inside the WJCAC.

Speaking more to the point, Midland College head coach Steve Green is also disgruntled about the conference's new, sleeker look.

"Western and Clarendon stuck it to us by pulling out," he said. "We play 17 games in the first semester (14 of which are in November alone) and 12 in the second semester. Everybody is that way. No, I don't like it.

"Basketball is a second semester sport. It's ridiculous how many games you have to play in November and December to get your games in."

As bad as it may seem this year, next year could be even worse, especially for SPC and NMJC. Schools will then likely have to reschedule four lost games, if both Clarendon's and WTC's programs do indeed remain either non-existant or not affiliated with the league.

"Losing two with Western and two with Clarendon will be a real hardship," NMJC's Black said. "If they want to come down here and play I'll play them, but I don't think I want to drive all the way to Clarendon."

One of the solutions that has been discussed has been a pre-season conference tournament, but Mayberry, the WJCAC Coaches' Association chairman, said that seems unlikely.

"I've already made up a simulated bracket and sent it to all the coaches in the conference," Mayberry said. "I haven't heard from any of them yet. I don't think there's much interest in it."

And what does the future hold in store for the WJCAC? It doesn't appear to be good news: Frank Phillips has discussed dropping to a lower level of basketball like Clarendon, and this year, New Mexico Military Institute joined a football conference consisting of schools primarily in New Mexico and Arizona. If its basketball team should follow suit, and if FPC opts for a lower level, basketball membership in the WJCAC would be cut nearly in half from just one season ago.

CHAPS: Bevy of early games

(From 1C)

Rone Haynie Rodriques S. Morris

have to take any back seats to talent and ability this year.

"My goal this year is to win every time we step on the floor. To win every game we play. The first one, the last one, and the middle ones. That's a difficult thing to do. The greatest teams coming through here haven't done that."

Green said he expects the four returning sophomores, the two first-year sophomores and the eight remaining freshmen to gel well.

"We're a lot more competitive I think than we were last year," Green said, "which, if nothing more, shows one of our strengths is we've got added depth. We've got 10 or 11 that can contribute.

"I think they'll play well together. We have a lot of guys coming back from last year, and they're all a year older, a year more experienced and a year stronger."

The four returning players represent a great deal statistically. As a freshman, Haynie led the 1991-92 team in assists (4.0 pg), blocks (38) and steals (2.5 pg), and was second in rebounds (5.5 pg). Rodrigues was first for MC in free throw accuracy (79.2 pct), second in scoring (14.3 ppg) and third on the team in rebounds (5.0 pg). Morris, first off the bench at point guard, proved more than capable of running the team while spelling the departed Chris McKinney. Of the seven Chaps who played at least 27 games last year, only then-sophomore Fabian Mina had fewer turnovers last year (42) than Morris' 48. In addition, Morris' assists-to-turnover ratio was nearly 2-to-1 (83-48).

And then there's Rone. The 6-1, 205 pound sophomore out of Chicago who was easily the crowd favorite at Chaparral Center his freshman season. Rone's ability to hit three-pointers in the late going of tight games earned him respect around the WJCAC. Rone led the Chaps in three-pointers (48), three-point attempts (119) and three-point accuracy (40.3 pct), and was second in free throw accuracy (75.3 pct) among players who attempted at least 50 FTs.

"Terrance is the same old Terrance," Green said. "Just bigger and stronger. He still thinks he can hit almost every three-pointer he tries. From Terrance's standpoint, he thinks he's a clutch player, and lord knows that's about 90 percent of being a clutch player is believing you are. He's very strong willed."

Haynie, coming off arthroscopic surgery on his left knee, is still slightly hobbled, but, "should be 100 percent by mid-November," Green said. Morris' "30 games under his belt has to be to our advantage," and "Ari comes back a lot bigger and stronger. His rebounding has improved, and his playing time will be directly proportionate to his attempts at going to the glass."

The return of Haynie in November will be very advantageous to a Chap club that sees 14 of their 29 games in the season's first month. Of November's 14 contests, nine are at Chap Center and three at neighboring Odessa during the OC Classic Thanksgiving weekend.

As is his practice, Green declines from speculating on a starting five for the season opener.

"You want to go with the guys who have been there before," Green said, "but we, as coaches, think the reason we'll be better this year is because of the additions we've made. What we haven't determined yet are whether the additions are better than the ones we had last year.

"We haven't found a clear cut (starting) five yet. Hopefully we won't. I want to find five that can get us off to a good start in games, but the most important thing is the five you've got on the floor in the last five minutes of the game."

Corps of first-year players boost for MC

By Jimmy Patterson

Coursey Drew Greer Ford C. Morris Russell

Midland College's crop of newcomers this season consists of a Wyoming Player of the Year, an All-Illinois player from Chicago, Mookie Blaylock's cousin, and a member of the National Honor Society.

Oh yeah, one other thing: They can play basketball pretty well.

"We're really pleased with our freshman class," head coach Steve Green said. "Matter of fact, we've divided up three or four times in scrimmage, and the freshmen have played evenly or better than the sophomore team two out of the three times.

One of the most promising newcomers is Demeitreus Drew, a powerful offensive player who likely will be one of MC's top scor-

Prognostication pieces give the author license to take on appearances as an expert. Or, if you're a homer and write for the Clarendon College paper and pick the Bulldogs to win it all every year in basketball, it can make you look pretty goofy.

Mostly though, readers take prognostication columns with little more than a grain of salt (thank God), toss them aside after they're through, and by the time the end of whatever season has arrived, have forgotten that you picked, say, Texas Tech to win the Southwest Conference football race in 1992.

To make a long story short, let's forget about 1992 predictions in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball race for a month or so. We'll get around to those when the season arrives.

For now, let's be a bit bolder. Let's make some guesses about what the WJCAC basketball scene will look like in the year 2001:

■ Riding an upswing in basketball popularity, not to mention a financial boon due to a surplus in state funding, junior college basketball takes on expansion. The WJCAC expands to nine member schools, welcoming No Trees, Ciudad Juarez and Clarendon College-Pampa Branch as its newest members. (Clarendon College itself is still without a team in 2001, so Pampa Branch will just have to do.)

■ Former Midland Lee head coach Jon House becomes the most successful coach in Midland College basketball history, prompting Chaparral Center director Mike Stevens to wage a campaign to rename his facility "The House That House Built."

■ Former MC coach Steve Green, now the 23rd coach in the last 10 years of the sinking Dallas Mavericks, returns for his 10 year homecoming at MC. The homecoming is also attended by three referees, which throws Green into a rage.

■ The Midland College Lady Chaps, in their second season, advance to the Region V tournament under first-year head coach Sally Gibson.

■ Odessa College recruits its fifth player by the name of Larry Johnson. By the year 2010, experts predict someone named Larry Johnson will be on the rosters of all 27 NBA teams.

■ After returning to his office at Reunion Arena in Dallas, Green finds a pink slip on his desk after the Mavs won their first game of the season while Green was away at his MC reunion. South Plains head coach Ron Mayberry is named the Mavs' 24th coach since 1992.

■ WJCAC officials vote to increase the number of referees to four per game, therefore creating a police-state atmosphere at most contests.

■ League officials also approve a measure that would make it illegal for fans to shout out the name "Woody" during any basketball game. The violation would allow the visiting team a three-shot technical.

■ Breaking with tradition, former Midland High head coach Jack Stephenson bolts from the high school ranks to the junior college ranks, accepting the head coaching job at Clarendon-Pampa Branch. In his first season, Stephenson figures his team will "compete for the WJCAC title."

■ After learning of his firing from the Mavericks, Green finally decides to give up basketball altogether. He marries and has a family, buys a Chevy Suburban and becomes a neckwear model for Dillard's catalogues. His favorite hobby is attending Chap games where he repeatedly draws the ire of MC fans for constantly yelling the name "Woody" during games.

■ Upon being fired from his job as head coach of the Dallas Mavericks a mere 23 games after taking over for Green, Ron Mayberry follows in Green's footsteps, accepting a job as a necktie model for Wal-Mart.

TIP OF THE WEEK

If you are dissatisified with your scoring after several years of bowling, you might want to check the span on your ball. After long use, the muscles in your hand will stretch out and the span on the ball will become too short. This will cause you to "cup" the ball and not get the full roll you need to scatter the pins. If you suspect this may be your problem, check with your local pro shop attendant.

ers this year.

"He's a pretty versatile player," Green said. "He can score, play both inside or outside. We kind of re-design offensive schemes with him in mind to let him take advantage of both positions.

"He was the Player of the Year in Wyoming, whatever that means," Green quipped. "It was between him and a steer. I didn't know they played basketball in Wyoming. The only player I've ever heard of out of Wyoming is Demeitreus."

Kelly Greer, from Chicago, joined Drew last year in making the move to Midland College. Both sat out last season and are eligible for only one season at MC.

One of the more promising freshmen is Dominique Coursey, a 6-5, 195 point guard out of Midwest City, Okla. "He shoots it well, passes it well, and he's going to be an extremely good player."

Richard Edwards transferred to Midland College from Texas-Arlington. A freshman from Everman, Edwards is an off-guard who can play both inside and outside.

Mookie's cousin — the second one to play at MC after Kiki Stanley three seasons ago — is Corey Tubbs, of Richardson.

Calvin Morris is the brains of the team, graduating from Montgomery (Ala.) Carver High School as a member of the National Honor Society and French Club. At MC, he'll be a 6-7 off-guard.

The Chaps will have a local high school-ex on the roster for the first time in several years. Midland Lee graduate Keenan Henry, who averaged 8.4 points per game for the Rebels last year, will see time at a guard slot this year.

Kirk Ford, of Lafayette, La., Steve Walston, of New York City, and Brazil's Luis Cambraia also join the Chaps in their first year.

Oklahoma St. wrestling hit with NCAA sanctions

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — The NCAA came down hard on the Oklahoma State wrestling program Wednesday, banning the Cowboys from postseason competition this season and eliminating new scholarships for this school year and next.

The NCAA's Committee on Infractions said several major violations were uncovered, but that the school's cooperation kept Oklahoma State from getting the "death penalty," which would have meant suspension of the program.

The committee said the program, which has 29 national titles to its credit, may not provide official visits to recruits until after Aug. 1, 1993. It also said wrestlers on scholarship cannot compete in non-intercollegiate competition this school year.

The committee also extended Oklahoma State's probationary period for an additional three years, to Jan. 5, 1996. The school was placed on four years' probation in January 1989 for violations in the football program.

The university said it did not expect to appeal the findings or the penalties.

The wrestling violations date to 1985 and occurred under former coach Joe Seay. Seay was suspended with pay in May 1991 and was not rehired when his contract expired this summer. The committee banned Seay from working at any NCAA institution for five years without first going before the Infractions Committee for permission.

MACPHERSON: Surgery possible

don't think there's any way in the world he should rush this."

Jankovich said surgery was a possibility.

MacPherson has been treated for the ailment since June but showed no signs it had worsened before he told Scarnecchia Tuesday night and the team Wednesday. Then he left for Massachusetts General Hospital before practice.

Scarnecchia said "everything should function as normal" on game day with defensive coordinator Joe Collier calling the defensive plays and offensive coordinator Dick Coury calling the offensive plays.

Scarnecchia called his position "nothing more than a glorified whistle blower at practice," and the Patriots emphasized that he was not an interim or temporary head coach.

However, Jankovich said Scarnecchia would make such decisions as whether to punt or go for a field goal on fourth down.

Scarnecchia, the special teams and tight ends coach, was choked up as he talked about MacPherson, an enthusiastic, vibrant leader who is liked by his coaches and players.

"He was unbelievable in front of the team today, far better than I'm doing right now," Scarnecchia said as he fought back tears. "He asked me if I would do this (job), and I told him that I would. I'd do anything for the guy."

Scarnecchia, 44, was the Patriots special teams and tight ends coach from 1982 through 1988, spent the next two years as offensive line coach with Indianapolis and returned to New England last year.

Although MacPherson didn't let his players or coaches see his pain, Jankovich said it was important that it be taken care of now.

"If it (his intestine) would have burst then it would be a very serious problem," he said.

Players were surprised when MacPherson told them about his problem.

"It was a shock," offensive tackle Pat Harlow said. "We didn't know anything was wrong with him and, all of a sudden, he's gone."

"He's been his same energetic self on the sidelines and in the meetings," linebacker Vincent Brown said.

"He preaches to us all the time that our family comes first," defensive end Brent Williams said. "In this situation, he's our first concern."

Scarnecchia said the Patriots take the absence of MacPherson's leadership "as another challenge to us. Lord knows, we've had our share of challenges.

"This isn't any great opportunity for Dante Scarnecchia, by any stretch of the imagination," he added. "My concern is for Mac. I wish he were here."

LISTACH: Rookie scores 93 runs

just didn't realize he would do it this soon. He was consistent all year. It seemed like just about every night he did something to help us win a ball game."

"It's hard to imagine how far I've come in the last eight months," Listach said.

Listach, 24, was supposed to be a utility player when the Brewers brought him back but his speed eventually earned him a starting role.

Listach, a switch-hitter with a .250 average in four minor league seasons, led all rookies in hits with 168 and scored 93 runs.

"He came up here and he was going to sit but he kept himself ready," Garner said. "He's played well in all aspects. He kept impressing me until I decided to give him more playing time."

Milwaukee made Listach its second-round pick in the 1988 amateur draft. He played on the Arizona State team that advanced to the College World Series championship game against Stanford in 1988.

"He improved by leaps and bounds over the season," Milwaukee infield coach Tim Foli said. "He's not the kind of rookie who's in awe of what other players can do. He says 'I can do it, too.' We knew he was a great athlete, but he's also a great student."

Lofton hit .285 with five homers, 42 RBIs and 66 steals in 78 attempts for the Indians. Fleming was 17-10 with a 3.39 ERA for the Mariners and Eldred went 11-2 with a 1.79 ERA in 14 starts after Milwaukee brought him up.

Pardee gets tough with Oilers

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston Oilers coach Jack Pardee, praised as a player's coach, got tough in a team meeting Wednesday, trying to shake his sagging team out of its mid-season doldrums.

Defensive end Ray Childress said the team lacked discipline and quarterback Warren Moon agreed. Safety Bubba McDowell wondered if Pardee had been too "nice."

Not after Wednesday's team meetings.

"Jack had a good talk this morning and hopefully that shook some people up," Moon said.

Did some players take advantage of Pardee's calm nature?

"I think they did up until today," Moon said. "He just had some very strong words to say about our football team and where we're headed and that we'd better get on track or there might not be a lot of guys around here."

Pardee didn't repeat his team speech but it was clear he's not in a coddling mood as the Oilers prepare for Sunday's game in the Astrodome against the Cleveland Browns.

"I don't care what the players say," Pardee said. "They're the players and they're going to play the way we want it done. Their job is not coaching, it's playing."

The Oilers, strong preseason favorites to repeat as AFC Central Division champions, fell to second place following Sunday's 21-20 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Pardee listened on Monday to second-guessers about his coaching decisions in the game. On Wednesday, he was hearing his players' explanations about their dilemma.

Defensive end Ray Childress pointed to a lack of discipline.

"We have a serious, serious discipline problem," Childress said on his KSEV radio show. "Some guys make just enough money that they feel like they don't need this."

McDowell said some players are treading on the mild nature of coach Pardee.

"All I'm saying is things shouldn't be let go as easy as they have been," McDowell said. "A lot of players take coach Pardee's kindness for a weakness."

Pardee doesn't think he's been soft on the team.

"If you take a look around here, there are four starters left from a few years ago," Pardee said. "We're going to play the ones with the best chance to win and the other players aren't here."

Moon said he thought Pardee's comments were overdue.

"I think we need an attitude adjustment there's no doubt," Moon said. "As far as discipline, there's a large majority of our players that have a lot of discipline and there are a few guys that don't.

"I wouldn't blame the whole team for not having discipline. I'd just take a few guys and try to turn them around and that will help the whole team."

Moon, without naming players, said the undisciplined players know who they are.

"They've been talked to but these are grown men, you can't keep badgering away at them," Moon said. "They know who they are and they know what they're doing right and what they're wrong.

Leconte beats Sampras in Paris

PARIS (AP) — Henri Leconte, playing inspired tennis reminiscent of last year's Davis Cup final, beat No. 2 seed Pete Sampras 6-3, 7-5 Wednesday in the second round of the Paris Open.

Sampras's Davis Cup teammates, Andre Agassi and John McEnroe, also lost.

Brad Gilbert, a two-time Paris Open finalist, upset the seventh-seeded Agassi 6-1, 6-2. No. 9 Boris Becker defeated McEnroe 6-4, 6-4.

With the crowd cheering similar to the way it did at the Davis Cup at Lyon, Leconte beat Sampras for the second time in three meetings.

"The crowd was a little like the Davis Cup and I played the same," Sampras said.

"I didn't have it today. He played with a lot of emotion and I played with no emotion.

"A lot has to do with the crowd. If I played Henri anywhere else but in France, the result would be different."

Four other seeds lost in second-round matches. Arnaud Boetsch of France beat No. 5 Petr Korda of Czechoslovakia 7-5, 6-4; Wally Masur of Australia upset No. 15 Sergi Bruguera of Spain 6-3, 7-5; Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland ousted No. 8 Wayne Ferreira of South Africa 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, and Jim Grabb downed MaliVai Washington.

Dallas stays with rookie Tech kicker

Associated Press

IRVING — Lin Elliott is a rookie who knows how the NFL works. If a placekicker doesn't produce, the equipment manager will be cleaning out his locker.

Elliott had a near-waiver wire experience in the Dallas Cowboys 20-10 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles on Sunday.

"I thought if I missed another one I'd be on a bus to Waco," Elliott said.

Elliott missed field goal attempts of 36 and 42 yards against the Eagles and the Texas Stadium boo birds gave the former Texas Tech star the kind of hoots they used to save for former quarterback Danny White after an interception.

Elliott understood. And he was glad the coaches did, too.

"The fans deserved to boo," Elliott said. "I'd missed two kicks. But nobody turned on me who wasn't in the stands. The coaches stayed with me."

In particular and more importantly, Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson.

"I told him to hang in there because we needed him to kick the winning field goal in the fourth quarter," said Johnson, a psychology major in college. "I told him he was going to be with us all four quarters. You can't fire your kicker during a game."

It all turned around for Elliott on a kick that didn't count.

He tried a 52-yard kick in the second quarter and it would have been good. However, Dallas got a delay of game penalty.

"That gave me confidence," he said. "It let me know I wasn't going to miss everything. I'd been making those kicks in practice. It wasn't like their was a force field or something around the goal posts. I felt I could do it. They didn't have a backup kicker. I felt they had to stick with me."

Elliott then hit a 35-yarder just before halftime and added a 48-yarder in the second. Also, all five of his kickoffs during the game went into the end zone.

He won the placekicking job in summer camp with his kickoffs, beating out Brad Daluiso, a Plan B acquisition from Buffalo. Dallas was desperate for a kicker after Ken Willis went to Tampa Bay under Plan B.

"I think Lin showed a lot the way he came back," said Johnson. "I think he will be a good kicker. He has a history of consistency. He's got the ability to win games. Let's face it. We are living with a rookie kicker who's going to be a good one."

Elliott missed his first field goal by hooking the ball. He pushed the second one right of the upright.

"I got it corrected in time to avoid a disaster," Elliott said. "I don't think coach Johnson has lost confidence in me. He's still calling my number. I'll be kicking against Detroit on Sunday. I know I'm a good kicker."

Raiders reduce Allen's role, want Bell to get more carries

Associated Press

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — The three-man tailback rotation for the Los Angeles Raiders will be reduced to two, coach Art Shell said Wednesday.

And the odd man out will be Marcus Allen, the team's career rushing and touchdown leader.

Eric Dickerson, who ranks second behind Walter Payton on the NFL's career rushing list, has been the starting tailback for the Raiders, but has shared time with Allen and Nick Bell through the season's first eight games.

Dickerson has gained 347 yards on 95 carries while Bell has rushed for 172 yards on 30 carries and Allen has gained 159 yards on 42 carries.

ASHBURN, Va. — Although it's been a long time in coming, Desmond Howard's first NFL pass reception could be very near.

The Washington Redskins have gone 11 quarters without scoring an offensive touchdown, so the decision to spice up the offense by adding last year's Heisman Trophy winner would seem like a no-brainer. But coach Joe Gibbs, cautious by nature and fiercely loyal to his veterans, likely will pick and choose Howard's spot with great care.

"He probably deserves a chance," Gibbs said. "It's tough when you've got three receivers like we've got. We've won a lot of games with those guys, but as we go along we'll try to get Desmond in there."

NFL Notes

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana reportedly threw the ball again Wednesday, but coach George Seifert said there were no immediate plans to bring him back to the roster.

Montana also threw 75 passes Monday to tight end Wesley Walls at an undisclosed location near his Atherton home and later announced that he wanted to go on the practice roster next week.

But Seifert couldn't confirm Montana's latest effort to get back on the roster.

"I believe he threw today, but I really can't comment on it," Seifert said Wednesday.

PHOENIX — Arizona voters approved a paid state holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr., ending a long controversy that hurt the state's economy and cast the state in the eyes of some as racist.

AREA: Rangers face Kermit

(From 1C)

City suffered its first league loss last week to Wink, 39-27. But with a win Friday over Grandfalls (3-4, 1-2), the 'Kats will stay in the postseason hunt down to the season finale.

Big Spring will be looking to get back to the .500 mark when the Steers visit Pecos (5-4, 2-3) in a District 3-4A game. The Steers, 3-4-1 for the season and 1-2-1 in the loop, bounced back from a two-game losing streak to whip Lake View 50-0 two weeks ago, then took a week off.

With a home game next week against Fort Stockton, the Steers have a solid chance to finish the season on an up note.

District 3-4A leader Andrews (9-0, 4-0) is open this week, but Sweetwater takes its 4-0 loop mark to Monahans for a showdown with the 2-1-1 Lobos. A Sweetwater victory would set up a title tilt on Nov. 13, when already playoff-bound Andrews wraps up the regular season at Sweetwater.

Greenwood's Rangers got in the District 6-3A win column last week with a whopping 42-8 triumph over Colorado City and can finish the league schedule with a .500 mark with a win at Kermit on Friday. The Rangers, 3-5-1 overall, are 1-2-1 in the loop and take on a Kermit team that stands 3-5 and 2-2 and still has a shot at the No. 2 playoff berth behind undefeated Reagan County.

The Tornadoes will finish with their best record in years with a win over Plainview. And it's a win that just might be possible, despite the size of the Plainview program, which dropped from Class 5A status after the '91 campaign.

"It's a classic David and Goliath," Yoder said. "They're the biggest school in the district and we're the smallest.

"But I believe that the way this district is, any team that does not play its best can be knocked off by any other team. We just have to line up and get after them, not give them anything easy and force them to drive the length of the field.

"If we do that and don't give up any turnovers in our end of the field, then we believe we have a chance to win the game."

No. 1 Washington readies for game at Arizona

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

If you like high-scoring shootouts, you'll probably be disappointed by Saturday's game between No. 1 Washington and No. 12 Arizona.

Each team is allowing only 9.3 points per game, tied for second-best in the nation. Washington hasn't allowed a rushing touchdown in its last five games, while Arizona hasn't given up a touchdown in the first half all season.

The Huskies (8-0) and Wildcats (5-2-1) are particularly good at stopping the run. Arizona is No. 1 in rushing defense, limiting opponents to 54.9 yards per game. Washington has been almost that good the past five weeks, giving up only 77.2 yards per game on the ground.

While Arizona has a slight edge in defensive stats, Washington has better offensive numbers. The Huskies are averaging 29.4 points and 391 yards, compared to Arizona's 23.5 and 289.8.

Washington uses two quarterbacks (Mark Brunell and Billy Joe Hobert) who have been Rose Bowl MVPs, while the Huskies' best offensive weapon is Napoleon Kaufman. The sophomore tailback averages 100 yards rushing per game, and is one of the most dangerous kick returners in the country.

Arizona's offense has struggled at times, but appears to be improving. Senior quarterback George Malauulu has thrown for 862 yards and five touchdowns, while sophomore Ontiwaun Carter leads the team in rushing with 640 yards and six TDs.

Arizona needs a victory to stay in the Rose Bowl hunt. Washington must win to maintain its bid for a national championship and second consecutive perfect season.

The Huskies won the last two meetings by a combined score of 108-10, but they're only favored by a touchdown Saturday ... WASHINGTON 17-7.

Houston Davis loss streak can break 72-game national record

Associated Press

DALLAS — Houston Davis is proof that losing can be a disease — a dreaded condition that physically and emotionally scars those inflicted, often requiring a miracle to cure.

Since the seventh week of the 1985 season, Davis hasn't had a remedy. The Panthers are expected to break Iberia, Mo.'s national record of 72 consecutive losses today against Houston Worthing.

"They had that defeatist attitude when I took over," said Chuck Arnold, the third Davis coach since 1988. "It's real hard to change that. It isn't curable in a short period of time."

The root of the problem is buried deep, beneath several skeletons which Arnold said are better left covered.

In their wake, however, are a battered program suffering from a lack of students interested in playing, a miniscule budget and dilapidated facilities in Houston's impoverished Fifth Ward.

Arnold knew of the school's pathetic recent past when taking over the job and even was aware of Thursday's pending date with history, which he says is merely a formality.

Ending the streak is important, but victories are a later phase of his long-range plan to resurrect Panther Pride.

Arnold, who had only 19 players attend his first practice, said his first step is to increase the size of his squad, allowing him to lay a foundation for future success.

Potential players are able to avoid Davis by taking advantage of several types of transfers offered by the school district, forcing Arnold to, in effect, become a recruiter.

He has spoken to students at five middle schools and their parents and followed his visit with letters.

"The kids know our program is there. They just choose not to be here," Arnold said.

He has more to offer than just a football team. His school has a unique guaranteed four-year, $4,000 college scholarship for every graduating student with a 2.5 grade point average, courtesy of Tenneco.

"But you (try to pitch) that and two days later the coach from Yates says to a kid, 'Why do you want to go there when you can come here and win right away and have a chance for an athletic scholarship,'" Arnold said.

Alan Page wins seat on Minnesota Supreme Court

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Alan Page, a Pro Football Hall of Famer, emphasized his accomplishments off the field in winning a seat on the Minnesota Supreme Court.

Page's opponent in Tuesday's election, Hennepin County prosecutor Kevin Johnson, based much of his campaign on accusing Page of trading in on his name as a Hall of Fame defensive tackle with the Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears.

Page responded with a list of his non-athletic accomplishments, including 13 years as a lawyer, assistant attorney general and service as a University of Minnesota regent since 1989.

"The people of Minnesota have supported what I've done, supported me in my challenge to get my name on the ballot and supported the kind of campaign that I have run," Page said. "That's really gratifying."

The campaign was brisk and lively, drawing national attention, with Page getting feature stories and frequent mention on ESPN.

"I don't know if it was our strategy to focus on non-athletic accomplishments as much as it was Alan Page the attorney and the community activist," campaign manager Steve Cervenik said. "Many people already knew Alan Page the football player."

The nature of campaigning for the judgeship influenced Page's strategy. The candidates were not allowed to discuss issues they may be expected to rule on from the bench, so the debate inevitably hinged on personalities.

"What you have left is talking about your experience, qualifications and administrative improvements you might make," Cerkvenik said. "And administrative improvements are boring to the average voter."

Page, 47, is the first black ever to sit on an appellate court in the state.

He said his historical election as a person of color was "tremendously important."

It was the first race since 1966 for an open seat on the seven-member court.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices plunge

Energy futures prices plunged to six-month lows Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange in reaction to the latest American Petroleum Institute data showing a buildup of crude oil stocks in the latest week.

The already weak energy market was pushed lower by API data out late Tuesday showing crude oil stocks grew by 3.6 million barrels. The market was expecting a drawdown in stocks, said analysts.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled 37 cents lower at $20.33 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Navajo Refining and Texaco Trading and Transportation lowered their posted price 50 cents to $19.

Natural gas for December delivery fell 3.9 cents to $2.402 per thousand cubic feet.

Also weighing on energy futures was the increase in daily crude oil production by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The post-election jitters also may have had an impact on the market.

Some traders say the election of Gov. Bill Clinton as president could lead to the lifting of the U.N. embargo of Iraqi oil sooner rather than later, increasing to the glut of crude oil on the market.

Money seminar

The Charles J. Givens Organization will host free seminars on "Money Strategies" Sunday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa at 11 a.m. and again at 3 p.m.

Givens is the author of "Financial Self-Defense" and "Wealth Without Risk".

For registration, call 1-800-484-1016 and dial 2737 after the tone.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly higher on world currency markets Wednesday in moderate, post-election trading.

In New York the dollar settled at 123.05 yen, up from 122.40 yen on Tuesday.

In New York it cost $1.5435 to buy one pound, less expensive than Tuesday's $1.5505.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell Wednesday in what analysts described as a round of technical selling that followed Bill Clinton's presidential victory.

Analysts said investors' attention soon will focus on basic economic issues, such as interest rates, job growth and foreign trade.

According to preliminary calculations, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 29.44 points at 3,223.04.

Market 'quiet' after Clinton's win

■ Calm trading the day after the election surprises some analysts.

Associated Press

Bill Clinton's decisive presidential victory evoked a remarkably mild response Wednesday on global financial markets, where uncertainty and any drastic U.S. political shifts historically have alarmed traders and investors.

Stocks strengthened in Asia, showed little change in Europe and weakened modestly in the United States. The dollar's value rose a bit. U.S. bond prices, a key barometer of investor fear of the future, were mixed.

"I am surprised to the extent that stocks and bonds are so quiet," said David Bostian, an economist at the New York investment firm of Herzog, Heine, Geduld Inc. "I'm truly astounded by it."

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average fell less than 1 percent — closing at basically where it was at the start of the week.

Traders and economists said it was one of the more muted post-election responses they've seen. After Ronald Reagan defeated Jimmy Carter in 1980, for example, the Dow average jumped nearly 2 percent and fell back a day later.

Four years earlier, when Carter was elected, the Dow average fell 1 percent, partly recovered then dropped 2.4 percent in the days following the election.

A number of trading strategists said the calm Wednesday was at least partly because a Clinton triumph had been expected for some time.

"The markets discounted the Clinton victory to begin with," said Zlatko Glamuzina, a senior currency trader at the New York branch of Banco di Sicilia, an Italian bank.

Some traders said they regard Clinton as a moderate who won't do anything reckless that would spook investors, sabotage low inflation or bring back the double-digit interest rates of the Carter years.

Others said that whatever Clinton's plans, he doesn't take office for a few months. They were more concerned with more immediate influences on the market, such as the nation's October unemployment rate, which will be reported Friday, and the demand for U.S. Treasury bonds at a quarterly refunding auction next week.

"The market is certainly concerned about Clinton's future policies, but it will be several weeks at least before we get a sense of what they might be," said William Gross, managing director of Pacific Investment Management Co. in Newport Beach, Calif.

There is a widespread view in the financial markets that Clinton understands the constraints on his ability to stimulate the economy through more government borrowing.

The country already is struggling with an unprecedented load of debt, which many economists say is a key reason for the slow growth of the past three years.

"There's a sense that Clinton doesn't have the flexibility that any previous U.S. president has had, certainly from a fiscal standpoint," Gross said.

'Personal communicators'

ED Inc., a small startup company backed by AT&T, on Tuesday unveiled the first "personal communicator," which combines the cababilities of a pager, phone, fax machine, computer and electronic organizer. The communicator, to be available early next year, will be priced between $1,999 and $3,299.

Economy stuck in slow-growth rut, Fed says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy in most regions remains stuck in the slow-growth rut that contributed to President Bush's defeat Tuesday, according to a Federal Reserve survey released Wednesday.

The central bank singled out manufacturing as the weakest sector in most of the nation, but a separate report from the Commerce Department offered a hint of revival.

It said new orders to factories rebounded 1.1 percent, to $239.4 billion, during September. But that only partially made up for declines during the two previous months.

"The economy still is mired in stagnation," said economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "That's where George Bush started and that's where George Bush will end."

A bimonthly survey of business executives by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce showed confidence in the economy in October plunged 8.1 percent to the lowest level since December.

Meanwhile, domestic automakers said their cars and light trucks sold at an annual rate of 10.7 million during the last 10 days of October, up 10.3 percent from last year. For the full month, the sales rate was 10.3 million, up 8.4 percent from a year ago.

Dederick and other analysts said Federal Reserve surveys during Bush's final days in office and President-elect Clinton's first three to six months in office probably will continue to portray a sluggish economy. But, by late next year, they expect a pickup.

"I would rather be Clinton today than Bush two years ago because I think we are going to see an economy on firmer ground," said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

Publicity may have saved First City depositors

HOUSTON (AP) — Publicity about the amount of uninsured deposits at First City Bancorporation's weakest banks before they were declared insolvent may have saved depositors as much as $80 million, a bank research executive said Wednesday.

When First City's Houston, Dallas, San Antonio and Austin banks were seized Friday, they reported $260 million in uninsured deposits, said Alan Whitney, spokesman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

That's less than half the $651 million they reported June 30, said Paul Bauer, president of Bauer Financial Reports, a Coral Gables, Fla., bank research firm.

Depositors whose accounts exceeded the FDIC's $100,000 limit at those four banks will receive only 80 percent of the uninsured amount, meaning a potential loss of $52 million.

But if First City failed June 30, uninsured depositors could have lost as much as $130 million, Bauer said.

The Wall Street Journal and The Houston Post reported Bauer's estimate of First City's uninsured deposits two weeks before regulators seized the bank.

Sears has 'light to moderate' response to auto repair offer

CHICAGO (AP) — She didn't have proof or even a driver's license, but when a woman told Sears Auto Center manager Isiah McMahon that his shop had worked on her car, she walked out with $350 worth of coupons.

"We don't argue," McMahon said Wednesday, three days after Sears launched the offer to settle charges of auto repair fraud.

"Our instructions are to take care of the customers," said the Trenton, N.J., manager. "We give them the benefit of the doubt."

Chicago-based Sears is counting on the nationwide coupon offer to help restore consumer confidence in its auto shops, where sales have been off by as much as 15 percent since the fraud allegations were aired in early June in California and New Jersey.

Under a class-action settlement announced in September, Sears is offering $50 worth of coupons good toward the purchase of any Sears merchandise or service to customers who bought certain auto services between Aug. 1, 1990 and Jan. 31, 1992.

Sears began advertising the offer, which lasts a year, on Sunday. Proof of service is not required; applicants without proof must sign a form and provide the make and model of their car. That would allow managers at the 850 Sears auto repair shops to verify that the work was done.

"There are safeguards, but that's not really the focus of the program, to question people's motives," Sears spokesman Greg Rossiter said.

He said the response so far has been "light to moderate."

McMahon said he's had 76 people come in for coupons, about 60 percent of whom did not have service receipts. Rick Rivera, service manager at a Sears auto shop in San Jose, Calif., reported responses from about 60 people.

Power of attorney doesn't include CD transfer

By Bill Doyle

Q: My sister is in a nursing home. She is blind, nervous and cannot walk. When she was in good health, she took out a certificate of deposit, making my granddaughter the beneficiary.

I have my sister's power of attorney. The bank refuses to take her name off the CD and put my name on. I need the CD money to pay my sister's bills.

Doyle

Can the bank refuse to recognize the power of attorney?

A: Not if it is a properly drawn power of attorney. But that does not mean the bank will substitute your name for your sister's name on the CD. Doing that would change the CD's ownership.

The power of attorney gives you, the representative your sister has chosen, the authority to act for her in legal and financial matters.

By using that power of attorney, you can collect the CD's interest or even redeem the CD and use the money to meet your sister's expenses. However, you cannot transfer the CD's ownership.

There are two types of powers of attorney: durable and springing. The former becomes effective as soon as it is written and signed, and designates the chosen representative — you, in this case. A springing power of attorney becomes effective only if and when the person who granted it — your sister — becomes incompetent.

Some springing powers of attorney specify that the grantor be examined by two licensed physicians. If that's the story, have two doctors certify your sister's physical and mental condition.

Q: Following the death of the wonderful man to whom I was married, I have not been able to get the life insurance money from the policy he had at work.

I know he named me beneficiary. He told me he had done so. But he failed to give me the papers. He even asked the company to send someone to our home to explain my benefits. They did not, although they did telephone.

Now, the company cannot find the paperwork, and failed to put it in the computer. What an awful oversight by the company. My husband's ex-wife says she should get the insurance money. I know he never would want her to get it. She was married to him for only four years. I have hired a lawyer.

Please warn wives in second marriages to make sure they have the papers in their hands.

A: That's good advice for wives and husbands of multiple — or even first — marriages. Every family should check the wording on insurance policies, retirement plans, deeds, wills, etc., to make sure who gets what upon death — and have the proper documents handy.

As you describe things, the foul-up at your husband's workplace was and is inexcusable. Here's hoping your attorney can get things squared away. However, as in that line from "Casey at the Bat," the outlook is not brilliant.

You ought to face up to the possibility your husband never changed the beneficiary on his life insurance policy and that phone call you mention was a scam. Stranger things have happened "the second time around."

Q: My husband and I both have wills. Whoever dies first leaves everything to the surviving spouse. Our properties, securities and bank accounts are in both names. The only exception is an individual retirement account in his name, and I am the beneficiary.

Is it necessary to get a living trust to protect from probate court costs and other costs when one of us dies?

A: That's unlikely. Assets registered in joint ownership or co-ownership are not subject to probate and thus escape the sometimes costly and time-consuming probate process. The same thing applies to IRAs, Keogh retirement plans for the self-employed and some other retirement arrangements.

Living trusts can save costs in some cases but do not seem appropriate for you.

Makeup artists say most 'stars' easy to work with

Associated Press

Television makeup artists find big stars easy to work with — even if Arnold Schwarzenegger once lifted a makeup woman like a barbell. Joan Rivers uses hers to test jokes and Sylvester Stallone has been known to demand more blush.

"The big stars don't worry. They're usually nice," makeup artist Mark Sanchez said in an article by Janice Kaplan in the current issue of Cosmopolitan. He cited Sophia Loren as an example.

"I was so nervous that she was coming, but the minute she walked through the door I felt at ease. She's very relaxed, and the only challenge in doing her makeup is that you have to draw all her eyebrows in. I guess they were plucked back in the '60s."

Sanchez said Jay Leno is just as easygoing as he seems, and stars like Richard Pryor and Robin Williams seemed almost comatose in the makeup chair.

"I don't know if they were studying people or going over the material in their heads — but they would just sit and stare," he said.

Sanchez, who left "The Tonight Show" to work for Joan Rivers when she began her own talk show in New York, said Rivers has her hair and makeup done simultaneously — and uses the time to try out some of the jokes she plans to use on the show.

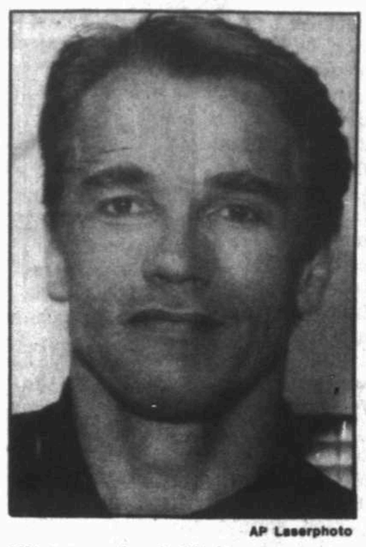

"Her makeup session is like her dress rehearsal," he said. "If we don't laugh at something, she takes it out of her routine."

Sanchez, who spent 10 years on "The Tonight Show," added, "It's the up-and-coming kids who are so neurotic."

Josephine Rosa, whose credits include Diane Sawyer and Kathie Lee Gifford, also has made up sports telecasters Frank Gifford and Al Michaels, using sheer foundation and tinted lip pencil set with powder to eliminate shine.

"Never let a guy see mascara, or he'll run from the chair," she said.

Sanchez said all men on television wear foundation, and many also ask for eyeliner and shadow.

AP Laserphoto

When asked if he was as strong as he looked by an onlooker, Arnold Schwarzenegger lifted makeup artist Donna Mensching-Kayser over his head like a barbell as she attempted to dab color on his face.

He recalled when Stallone looked over his makeup and asked for more rouge.

"I tried hard to not laugh," Sanchez said, "but I kept wondering what would happen to his macho image if people heard him asking for blusher."

Donna Mensching-Kayser, who makes up Joan Lunden for "Good Morning America," recalled dabbing color on Schwarzenegger when an onlooker asked him if he was really as strong as he looked. He jumped out of the chair and lifted Mensching-Kayser over his head like a barbell.

"I think he's calmed down since then," she said. "I've made him up many times since then, and always kept both feet on the floor."

One of her favorites is Patrick Swayze.

"The real surprise is that he's so funny," she said. "He had me laughing so hard I could hardly put his makeup on."

Kevyn Aucoin, whose buddies include Isabella Rossellini, Cindy Crawford, Liza Minnelli, Audrey Hepburn and Paloma Picasso, was recently hired for an important photo session with Barbara Walters.

AP Laserphoto

Joan Rivers tells jokes to her makeup artists while they work. If they don't laugh at a joke, Ms. Rivers removes it from her routine.

"She didn't make any suggestions while I was working," he said, "and when I finished she was very happy. The best part was that she wrote me a fabulous thank-you note afterward."

First ladies present a special problem for makeup artists. Barbara Bush made it clear to Mensching-Kayser that "she'd never been interested in fussing with her hair or makeup and she wasn't going to start at this late date." And Sanchez said doing Nancy Reagan's makeup was "not an easy job."

"She undergoes a huge transformation once her hair and makeup are done," he said.

AP Laserphoto

Comedian Richard Pryor seemed almost comatose in the makeup chair, according to makeup artist Mark Sanchez.

AP Laserphoto

Sylvester Stallone once asked for more rough from makeup artist Mark Sanchez.

AP Laserphoto

Makeup artist Mark Sanchez said Sophia Loren put him totally at ease while he did her makeup, his biggest challenge being that all her eyebrows had to be drawn in.

Puffy coats ski down from slopes

By Jackie White
N.Y. Times News Service

Once upon a time the puffy coat was relegated to the ski slope, the football game and the mall. Then Paris suddenly discovered the "Northern Exposure" look and reincarnated it as urbane chic.

In recent years quilted parkas and anoraks have been thrown over everything from stirrup pants to evening gowns. What once was casual pickup truck stuff is now the making of designer shows.

The ultimate endorsement for unexpected juxtapositions of high and low couture came from European designers. In the new how-to book "Italian Chic," writer Susan Sommers lists the parka as a must-have for the basic Italian wardrobe. For example, stark puffy Michelin-man-style jackets were combined with 16th-century silhouettes for the quintessential mix of metaphors last spring in Italy's Romeo Gigli's fall show in Paris.

Credit for quilted parkas also goes to Chanel's Karl Lagerfeld, the master of street interpretations, who combined them with biker boots, exercise tights and chiffon skirts.

American designers from Donna Karan and Calvin Klein to Ralph Lauren have promoted the rugged notion. Even the Limited has a Gigli-style version.

Such jackets have sold "really well," noted Roseanne Morrison, an editor with "Tobe Reports," a retail newsletter. Calvin Klein's short puffy style has sold out.

Latest endeavor is silk

N.Y. Times News Service

Every few years, Diane Von Furstenberg reinvents herself. From wrap jersey dresses she went on to cosmetics, to licensing her name for products, to a boutique on Fifth Avenue, to a literary salon in Paris, back to a dress collection in New York.

On Saturday, she will introduce her latest endeavor on television: a line of silk clothing to be sold on the QVC shopping channel. There she will be, from 9 to 11 a.m. Eastern time, wearing one of her new silk dresses and showing the components of the wardrobe she calls Silk Assets.

"I want to go directly to the consumer, to use television as a store," she said last week in an interview at her Fifth Avenue design studio. "By eliminating the middleman, we can put the quality into the product."

Prices range from $50 to $150 for the first collection, which consists of basic skirts, blazers, pants and dresses in bright purple, green, pink and black, with coordinated prints.

"Every two months we'll add colors and styles," she said, "but they'll all work with what went before. The idea is to build a wardrobe of collectibles."

Viewers will be able to call in and ask questions of Ms. Von Furstenberg or place orders, which will be filled by QVC. "The best thing for me," she said, "is I don't have to have the inventory. QVC does all that."

Children's eyewear is high-style

By Rebecca Howard
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Eleven-year-old Danny Mascari has worn glasses since the age of 7. His current pair, round and scholarly with thin brown rims, perch atop his nose lightly and seem to be the appropriate accompaniment to his sophisticated personality.

He has always been proud of his spectacles. In fact, his mother, Nina, said she had no trouble initially convincing her son to wear them.

"After the eye doctor told us he needed them, Danny was thoroughly excited. He wanted to go right out and buy them," she recalled.

Danny said he liked getting glasses because it gave him "a new look."

"I thought it would be neat to wear glasses and show all my friends," he said. "They make me look smarter — like a scientist or a mathematics person. It's just a neat look."

Danny's not alone in his view about glasses. While wearing glasses at a young age, wearers could expect to be called "four-eyes" and "nerd" from cruel classmates. But today, hip and trendy youngsters look through rose, and other colored, glasses.

"I think kids wearing glasses now are more stylish. When I wore glasses, you were considered a nerd," Nina Mascari said. "Now it's more of a fashion thing."

VINCENT WHITE, a Beverly Hills optometrist, estimated that 40 percent of the country's population wears corrective lenses. Of that 40 percent, 15 percent are children. He said that an increased use of computers and other close-eye work seems to have increased developmental disability in vision among children.

"Because of that developmental difficulty, designers have started to cater to children — and children can be big business. This is a tremendous developmental fact," White said.

Gisselle Menice, 13, owns four pairs of glasses. She prefers round, thin frames in an array of shades that fit into her schedule of sports and play.

"I wear the ones that are bendable for sports," said the eighth-grader who plays volleyball and basketball. "And when I go out with my parents, I wear these glittery yellow and black frames."

Dr. Roger Friedman, a pediatric ophthalmologist in suburban Tarzana, said more children are wearing glasses because more of them are examined at younger ages.

"It's fortunate that manufacturers have become aware of that market. Now there are fabulous frames for those children," he said.

So fabulous that kids who have good vision walk out of Friedman's office disappointed that they won't be wearing specs anytime soon, he said.

Some children with good vision want glasses so badly they go so far as to complain of vision problems to get into the eye doctor's chair, said Dena Desipris, a certified ophthalmic technician with ophthalmologist Sheryl Handler in suburban Encino .

"We have kids who come in here who want glasses and don't need them," Desipris said. "They complain they can't see when they can because their friends wear glasses and they want to, also. They even try to fool you in the eye exam."

OPTICAL DISPENSERS now carry complete lines of eyeglasses in trendy styles for children. The styles range from bright-colored, playful frames, to sophisticated wire rims that seem smaller versions of popular adult looks.

Kim Bozerocki of For Eyes Optical in Tarzana said some of the children's frames they carry are even purchased by small-faced adults.

"A lot of the kids like to look like adults. The wire frames in kids' styles are in for adults, too," she said.

Friedman said that while he does not carry frames in his office, he has a referral service to several optical dispensers.

"We ask that our opticians offer a good selection of glasses — variety, cost-wise and style-wise," Friedman said. "We want a good economic variety because a lot of families don't want to spend a fortune."

Costs of frames alone can be as low as $40 or as high as $189, said Stella Zilber, an optician at the Wizard of Eyes in Encino.

"The highest priced ones are smaller-sized Giorgio Armani frames," she said. "On the average, people spend anywhere from $80 to $130 for frames."

IN SELECTING frames, Zilber recommended letting children who are old enough play a big part in the choice.

"If they help pick them out and like them, they'll want to wear them," Zilber said. "They won't want to take them off."

And allowing the child to participate in picking out their glasses may help them overcome any trauma they have about having to wear them, Friedman said.

"Parents can tell their children, 'We can make you see better. We're going to pick out some great glasses for you.' The key thing is to allow the child to participate in the selection. That is, unless the child picks something really bizarre," he said.

Desipris said showing children pictures of other children in glasses and being patient with children will help them adjust to wearing glasses.

"Don't make it traumatic," she said. "Once child realizes how much better he can see, the problem is usually over."

But the worries of nerd labels seem to be a thing of the past like the extinct chunky frames worn by kids who were once limited in their style options.

Menice said that having glasses has nothing to do with being a nerd.

"If you go around with your head in a book all the time, and don't have any friends or anything, you're considered a nerd," she said. "It's who you are, not your glasses. If your friends really like you, they'll look beyond the glasses."

DEAR ABBY

Even raunchy speech worthy of protection

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have no opinion about foul language on television because I no longer watch television. Withdrawal was painful, but after a year or two, it became a liberating experience.

Van Buren

As for foul language in movies and other media outlets: Art imitates life. There are rude and crude people among us, and a writer or director must have the freedom to depict them.

Moreover, the only alternative to foul language is censorship. Movies are rated; if foul language is a problem for someone, that person should see only G-rated movies. The ratings do provide a clue to the content; and reviews often go beyond this, with such a line as, "... rated R for violence and nudity."

Unrestricted freedom of speech is important. In George Orwell's "1984," he depicts a society where a new language was implemented specifically for the purpose of restricting the range of ideas that could be expressed, along with active programs to restrict thought by other means.

Movies, other media outlets, and especially rock and rap lyricists are testing the limits of freedom of speech daily.

While we may occasionally feel that freedom of speech is carried to extremes in the United States, we must realize also that there are some people trying to curtail our liberties, and we must stand up to them. — DOUGLAS CAMPBELL, CLINTONVILLE, OHIO

DEAR DOUGLAS: You make some excellent points. If you don't like what you hear on TV and radio, you can always turn them off — or walk out of a movie. However, freedom of speech is still protected under the Bill of Rights.

Last May, a reader complained in my column about foul language in some of our "best" movies and TV shows. I told her that I agreed, and asked my readers to let me know how they felt about it.

At last count, 67,783 readers felt many movies and TV shows today insult our values, intelligence and morals. Only 213 readers disagreed.

Perhaps the key word here should be "responsibility." Let's hear it from Phil Boatwright, who reviews films for a living:

DEAR ABBY: I'm afraid I'm a perfect example of why Americans put up with obscenity in films and on TV. I've had your address, but I have continued to put off writing. We all just get too busy!

I would encourage others of like mind to respond to Hollywood's disregard for morality. Profane language, exploitative sex and extreme violence seem to be in almost every film released these days. Surely it is the right of filmmakers to show such material, but Hollywood should exercise more responsibility.

Parents also need to show responsibility and concern. I review films for a living, and I can't tell you how often I see kids in PG-13 and R-rated films. Their heads are not only filled with crudity, but with cynicism, racism and a disregard for life.

If we are concerned about saving Mother Earth, shouldn't we also be concerned with nourishing the spirit of man? — PHIL BOATWRIGHT, THOUSAND OAKS, CALIF.

Animal behavior gets boring after a while

By Erma Bombeck

I never thought I'd say this, but I have overdosed on nature shows on television.

Bombeck

After watching them for so many years, I find they are limited to what the animals can do to entertain. All they can show us is how they eat, mate or give birth.

I'm at a stage now where I leave to pop corn while a lion is having sex. When a wildebeest gives birth in the middle of a stampede, I doze off. And the other night when a viper sfiake ate a large rodent whole, I jumped up and said to my husband, "Did you buy any of those cheese curls I like?" and headed toward the kitchen.

It didn't used to be that way. When animal shows first came to the screen, I was mesmerized because I knew so little about them. When Jim Fowler was wrestling a crocodile on "Wild Kingdom" and Marlin Perkins was back at the tent explaining why Jim liked to work alone, I was riveted to the screen.

I couldn't get enough of what was lurking out there in the trees and the swamps. I watched "A Day in the Life of a Secretary Bird." (What did I think was going to happen? A lech would chase her around the desk?) I watched George Page do a breakdown on the secrets held by elephant dung. I watched a woman one night try out a new shark-proof diving suit — which wasn't — and as they dressed her arm wounds she said excitedly, "We're making progress," and I shouted at the screen, "We are, aren't we?"

Between beeper collars, researchers hanging from trees, Jane Goodall lurking in the bushes with notebooks, blinds set up in forests and underwater cameras, we have poked into the private lives of animals about as far as we can go. The only thing left would be if they talked, and then it would be a whole new ballgame.

They could star in family sitcoms, do cooking shows (guess who I just had for dinner?) or narrate documentaries on people.

This is not to say I am no longer interested in wildlife. I've learned a lot from these shows — lessons that could take me through life. I've learned that you never turn your back on animals with horns growing out of their heads. Never surprise an animal you can't run faster than. If an arctic bird bites David Attenborough, no one is safe.

The other night I was focused on sexy Robert Urich narrating a segment on National Geographic. My husband said, "Why are you watching? I thought you said all these shows are about is mating, eating and giving birth."

"If Robert does one out of three," I said, "it's worth waiting for."

Spring fashion looks soft, retro

By Marylin Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Longer skirts and pretty dresses are on the shopping lists of two Atlanta boutique owners attending the Women's and Children's Spring Apparel & Accessories Market at the Atlanta Apparel Mart. But they split over bell-bottoms.

"I don't think they were in good taste in the '70s and certainly not now," says Bonnie White, with boutiques in Lenox Square and Park Place.

Jackie Rogers, owner of Chez Jackie in Peachtree Center, plans to stock up on bell-bottoms. "My fashion-forward customers are requesting them," she says.

This market, which attracted 12,000 store buyers from throughout the Southeast, ended Wednesday. Merchandise bought at the market arrives in stores in February.

Kaye Davis, the mart's fashion director, lists four trends for spring:

■ Sensual nonchalance: A soft, clean, feminine look, featuring stretched-out silhouettes, subtle fabric contrasts and some layering; main colors are blues, greens and neutrals; fabrics include linen, knits, silk and cotton.

■ Tribal: Inspirations come from Africa, Indonesia and the Caribbean. Watch for sarong skirts, cutouts on everything, wide-leg pants and fabric mixes.

■ Water sense: Fluid styles based on watercolors and prints. Also, sportswear inspired by 1970s bell-bottoms and tunics.

■ Prairie: Romantic layered petticoats; full skirts; bra tops; camisoles and cancan skirts; smock dresses in eyelet, chambray and jersey.

Ski gear differs with levels of advancement

By Glen Martin
N.Y. Times News Service

If nature has been somewhat remiss in dumping snow on the Sierra over the past few winters, private industry has proved far more reliable in generating blizzards of a wholly different kind. Each year, we are deluged with new merchandise as the wheel — or rather, the ski — is endlessly reinvented.

The choices are numbing, even for the retailers who purvey the stuff. And yet, it's all part of the ritual. Whether or not we need new skis, boots and ancillary gear, we crave them.

Skiers of different abilities require different equipment — the squishy-soft ski suitable for the greenest beginner will not please the expert.

Generally speaking, beginners pay less for their equipment than intermediates or experts; but as with everything else, you get what you pay for. Cheap skis and boots seldom seem like bargains once on the slopes, where their shoddy workmanship can become painfully apparent.

Below are equipment recommendations geared to four ability levels: beginner, novice, intermediate and advanced. Admittedly, these are one man's opinion — but that one man is Martin Sulser, the Zurich native and schusser extraordinaire who has hawked skis and advice from Swiss Ski Sports, his Clay Street shop, for 30 years. He knows his stuff.

Small products have big impact for skiers

By Caroline Scarborough
N.Y. Times News Service

Sometimes, it's the little things that make skiing a pleasure: the whistle of the wind, a sparkle of snow or the surge of exhilaration after a well-skied run.

It's the same with ski gear. You can buy the most expensive boots in the world, but if the socks are wrong, your boots may blister your feet.

Below are little things that are well designed, functional and versatile:

■ Avocet's Vertech Alpine and Ski Watch: This watch does just about everything except buckle your boots. Through a miniature altimeter, it translates air pressure changes into vertical feet, meters skied and vertical rate of descent. It also doubles as a barometer, thermometer and stopwatch. Approximately $100; available in ski shops or call (415) 321-8501.

■ Kombi Hot Mitts: To keep kids insulated against the cold, Kombi's waterproof hand wear has pockets that hold disposable heat packs. Packs are sold separately. Mitts are $35; in ski shops or call (203) 723-6306.

■ Cap Trap: Here's a simple way to help children — or adults — keep up with their headgear. It's very basic: a nylon cord with two clips on each end. One clips to the hat or cap, the other to the collar. Approximately $4; in ski shops or call (408) 867-2191.

■ Newport Canvas Company's Ski and Snowboard Bags: These stylish, padded bags come in various lengths and colorful patterns. Prices are $36 for ski bag and $45 for snowboard bag; in ski shops or call (310) 324-1197.

■ Industrial Strength Eyewear: These lightweight and durable sunglasses snap completely apart: If the weather changes, change the lens; if the light changes, change the lens; if the sport changes, change the lens. The titanium-based frames come in three textures and five colors; lenses come in four shapes and eight colors. Preassembled, $70-$85; components, $8-$55. Available at sporting goods stores or call (800) 753-0171.

■ Patagonia's Duckbill Cap: The Synchilla Duckbill cap has a closely fitted crown, a foam-stiffened visor (black on the underside to reduce glare) and an adjustable back. $29. Also:

■ Patagonia's Stretch Capilene Sports Bra and Zip T: Extra wide shoulder straps and a racer back design make this bra flexible and comfortable. The Stretch Capilene Zip-T has a low bulk, mid-height collar for easy layering. Bra is $32; Heavyweight T is $64; mid-weight, $54. Available at Patagonia's San Francisco store at 770 North Point or call (800) 336-9090.

■ Thermosport: This all-in-one hot-and-cold wrap offers relief from common ski aches and pains. It's portable, reusable and easy to use — just fill the wrap with ice water or hot water and put it on. There are wraps for shoulders, ankles, knees, back and neck. Prices range from $29.95 to $49.95; at Big 5 Sporting Goods stores or through (800) 729-8002.

■ Nike's Air Whyomin: Hate those goofy, apres-ski boots with fake fur? For a down-to-earth look and stride, try Nike's Air Whyomin. Made of full-grain leather, they have an inner-sleeve stretch tongue for a snug fit and Nike "air" cushioning. $85; at athletic shoe stores.

■ WRS Back Support: This light, durable belt offers support and warms up lower back muscles, helping to reduce pain. It comes in four waist sizes. $45; in bike stores or call (800) 299-3366, ext. 292.

BEGINNER

Ski instructors have a code word for the tyro skier: flounder. Presumably, this is a reference to beginners' tendency to flounder about in the snow.

But even the bluefin tunas and sailfish of the ski world were once drab, flat flounders — it's an inevitable stage. Happily, ski equipment manufacturers are more than happy to cater to such humble fish:

■ Skis: The Dynamic S20 Vatal is the essential beginner ski, says Sulser. It has no slalom or giant slalom side-cut and has a light swing weight on the tip and a medium stiff forebody, making it very easy to turn under most snow conditions. Price: $100.

■ Bindings: The Tyrolia 740 is a reliable, no-nonsense design for beginners and intermediates. Price: $140.

■ Boots: Beginners usually find rear-entry models easier to handle and more comfortable than traditional buckled boots. The Nordica 857 allows skiers to adjust boot stiffness in three different areas through tabs and dials. Price: $200.

■ Poles: Reflex poles are both adequate to the task and cheap: $20.

■ Outerwear: Ski pants cost between $50 to $70. Jackets can be pricey, but Sulser suggests combing the racks for last year's models. Right now, last year's jackets from K2 and Peregrine can be picked up for between $100 to $200.

■ Total package price: $710 to $830, depending on the jacket. Sulser observes that most ski shops will offer package prices on skis and bindings at considerable savings.

NOVICE

A year or two of experience may mandate an upgrade in equipment, the conventional wisdom being that it's better to grow into gear than to be limited by it.

■ Skis: The Dynastar SLS is basically a slalom ski, says Sulser, so it's disposed to quick, easy turns. Its soft flex pattern makes it generally forgiving, a factor that also makes it good in the bumps. This latter quality may also qualify it as a sound choice for intermediates who plan to move up to moguls. Price: around $395.

■ Bindings: The Tyrolia Freeflex has a special rod that connects the toe with the heel. This allows the ski to flex under the boot, preventing the excessive "load up" on the toe that can lead to a premature release. Price: $200.

■ Boots: The Nordica F-7 is a hybrid "mid-entry," buckled boot that combines much of the easy access of rear-entry models with some of the stability and control of standard top-entry, buckled boots. Price: $320.

■ Poles: Scott makes "good, reliable, rugged poles," says Sulser. The price is right at around $30.

■ Outerwear: Pants can be picked up for less than $100. As for ski jackets, Sulser recommends Obermeyer garments. They're water repellent, well-made and sell for between $150 to $250.

■ Total package price: $1,145 to $1,265, depending on the pants and jacket.

INTERMEDIATE

■ Skis: Midlevel skiers should choose skis which are familiar and comfortable, but which offer some latitude for pushing the envelope. One model that fulfills both criteria is the Rossignol 4XK. This is a so-called "X-Comp" ski, one which combines basic giant slalom configuration with a slalom side-cut. "It turns quickly, but it holds well through the entire turn," says Sulser. "You don't have to get off and on the edges quickly as you do with a true slalom ski." Price: $475.

■ Bindings: The Marker M-38 employs a mechanical friction plate which assures positive release even if the boot soles and toes are dirty. "A safety feature like this is important for skiers who are trying to move up to more difficult terrain," says Sulser. Price: $200.

■ Boots: Technica is known for its comfort and stability, and the TNS model has a special "cutthroat" design that features an inner lining that extends all the way to the top of the outer shell, allowing exceptional lateral support. A "Powercore" sole also provides quick edge response. Price: $450.

■ Outerwear: Sulser recommends Nordica jackets, which employ an especially effective waterproof material called Microft. Price: Between $250-$350. Boulder Sport makes excellent insulated pants that sell for around $100.

■ Poles: Like novices, intermediates will find Scott poles suitable for their needs.

■ Total package price: Total price will range from $1,455 to $1,555, depending on the jacket chosen.

ADVANCED

■ Skis: This category includes the rarefied expert designation. Skiers of this ability may require a variety of different skis to accommodate the difficult, widely divergent terrain they enjoy. Generally speaking, however, their tastes run to high-performance slalom skis, and none fits this definition more precisely than the Salomon 9000 Equipe 2S. "This is a monocoque ski," says Sulser. "The top layer, not the core, controls torsional flex, so it gives you a better grip on hard pack and ice." Price: $595.

■ Bindings: Sulser likes the Salomon 977 Equipe Driver Plus. "It puts you higher on the ski, so you can get more edge," he observes. Price: $250. Another option is the Marker SC, which retails for $335. "It has an adjustable control that allows you to set the bindings for different snow conditions," says Sulser.

■ Boots: Lange is widely acknowledged as the premier manufacturer of high-performance boots, and Sulser's recommendation happens to be Alberto Tomba's favorite: the Lange 9X Race. "It's Lange's highest performance boot," says Sulser. "I can't think of anything that gives better control." Price: $485.

■ Poles: Goode makes a revolutionary fiberglass pole that is very thin and extremely light. The bottom line: minimal wind resistance. The price is $80.

■ Outerwear: Experts lean to powder suits. Bogner and Descent specialize in these one-piece garments, which are both waterproof and "breathable" thanks to such advanced fabrics as Entrant and Supermicroft. Prices range from $500 to $800.

■ Total package price: De pending on bindings and outerwear, between $1,860 to $2,295.

NATIVITY SCENE

The creche as a Christmas symbol dates back to 1224 when St. Francis of Assisi set up a manger scene in the hills of Italy. You can create a similar effect using these 2/3 life-size, full-color nativity figures. Mary, Joseph, the Christ Child, wise men, shepherd and other scene figures are printed in vibrant color on heavy weather-resistant paper. Just glue the sheets onto plywood, saw out and mount.
