Foundation pledges $250,000 for park

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

A local foundation is expected to provide $250,000 in matching funds if the city and several local sports organizations can complete work on a new northwest side park by 1991.

"We have three years to get this in," said Community Service Director George Logan, who revealed the nature of the grant, but did not formally name the foundation.

Blue Bird Park — a 33-acre site located just north of Loop 250 on Blue Bird Lane — will provide local sporting organizations with seven new T-ball fields, 13 soccer fields, four Little League fields and a neighborhood playground for the Crestgate development when its completed.

Midland already has spent $110,000 to contract out work to clear the land and now is installing an irrigation system and fencing, according to Logan.

But city officials admit the real work hasn't even started. For one thing, local sporting organizations must raise $250,000 on their own because Midland has no surplus funds on hand.

Midland Councilman Bill Williams had no comment today on the report of the grant. "All I can say is we're waiting on an announcement...I was hopeful that we would hear something this week."

Midland had initially planned for a 150-acre site on SBC Corp.-owned property near Grassland Estates. However, local residents overwhelmingly rejected that idea when the parks and recreation department attempted a $4.2 million bond issue last September.

Earlier this week, Williams met with about 75 neighborhood residents at Santa Rita Elementary School to discuss the project as well as answer questions about efforts to raise private funds for playground equipment.

Williams told the council 65 percent to 70 percent of all children that will make use of the park are from the local neighborhood.

Bobby Holt

Holt unsure if his future in politics

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Bobby Holt is to politics what Peter Ueberroth is to baseball and the Olympics — a highstakes fundraiser and organizer.

Then, again, maybe the Midland oilman is running for something. It's too early to know for sure.

On Tuesday, Holt, a 25-year veteran of George Bush's Texas brain-trust, talked candidly of his life and his possible future role in Texas and U.S. politics.

As co-chairman of the 1989 presidential inauguration, he helped tally a estimated $750,000 profit on the $25 million event — payable to the charity of George and Barbara Bush's choice.

Two main political rumors are currently swirling through Midland about Holt.

One is that he wants to be a U.S. ambassador.

Not so, he said Tuesday.

"I want to come back home."

The rumor he didn't quit altogether, however, was whether he'll throw his hat in the 1990 governor's race.

He's not saying yes and he's not saying no.

The primary is more than a year away and West Texans are gutting their political market as it is.

Former Midlander George W. Bush, son of the president, Midland oilman Clayton Williams, Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance of Lubbock and Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens have all been mentioned as possible Republican candidates.

Holt said the younger Bush, whom many consider the early frontrunner, should decide whether he'll run by late this summer.

That decision could help determine what many of the other potential candidates decide to do.

Holt also reflected on his feelings on election night last November in Houston, where he spent time with the president-elect.

The elder Bush and Holt had thought it bad luck to talk about inauguration plans in the early hours of Nov. 8, 1988 when official election results were still out, he remembers.

But the two "couldn't wait until about 12 o'clock Tuesday night." The planning began.

Information center opens at airport

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

No red carpet was rolled out and the marching bands stayed home. But the opening of the Visitor Information Center at Midland International Airport was welcomed just as warmly as any VIP.

A ribbon cutting ceremony this morning opened the booth, a joint venture between the Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce. The Midland M-Squad, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Ambassadors and Odessa Ambassadors participated.

"I'm excited," remarked Steve Davidson, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

"I think this is one more tool, one more step for these two communities to work together to promote this area. If we're going to promote this area, diversify our economy, promote tourism, we have to do it ourselves."

The booth, located across the lobby from Dobbs House, is a temporary location. The chambers announced plans for a permanent visitors booth to be located in the airport lobby. It will be topped by the renovated Pliska plane.

No date for building the new booth was announced.

The booth is seen as more than a chance for Midland and Odessa to work together. "We have high hopes for the booth, not just as a welcoming center and expression of the area's hospitality but as an opportunity to provide information about the area's attractions and events," said John Fowler, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, prior to the ribbon cutting.

He added: "Many thousands fly into Midland International Airport on business trips, and if we can encourage some of them to stay one extra night in Midland or Odessa, the economy will benefit."

Peggy Meeks, director of Odessa's Convention and Visitors Bureau, stated that "We see the booth as a vital tool for visitors coming into the area that will help increase visitor traffic. It's a resource for the visitor to use that will save them time. They can go to the booth for any information they need. It'll make a positive impression."

Marcy Blauvelt, administrative service and properties manager at the airport, sees the booth as a way not only to inform visitors about Midland, Odessa and the Permian Basin but about the airport.

Midlander Cody Baker, 4, holds the letter and picture he received from Hugh Trendell of Midland, Ontario, Canada, after releasing a helium-

Youth's balloon found by another Midlander — in Midland, Ontario

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

The balloon that local resident, Cody Baker, 4, released January 21 didn't just travel across town, although another Midlander found it.

Eight days later and about 1,800 miles away, Hugh Trendell saw the blue balloon — a bit deflated and caught in some brush — as he was riding a snow mobile outside Midland, Ontario, Canada.

"That's rather unusual — Midland to Midland," Trendell observed with some understatement Tuesday.

The 58-year-old hospital maintenance supervisor lives about 85 miles north of Toronto in the town which lies on the shores of Georgian Bay, an adjunct to Lake Huron.

According to Cody's father, Steve Baker, 1605 S. Loraine St., the helium-filled balloon, a Paproni's pizza parlor souvenir, almost didn't make it airborne.

Baker had placed a plastic Baggie around a note with Cody's name and address on it and then tied both to the end of the balloon's string. But the weight was too much.

After removing the Baggie and shortening the string, the balloon and note headed up and east toward Big Spring, and Cody, an energetic, talkative child, waved and yelled, his father said.

Trendell said he was returning from a day spent snow-mobiling with friends when he saw "this blue

Hollings: Bush hurting himself by backing Tower

By CHARLES J. LEWIS
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, a leading Democratic critic of John Tower, said Wednesday that President Bush should withdraw the nomination of Tower to be secretary of defense because Bush is losing credibility in standing by Tower.

Hollings said the Tower nomination will come to the Senate floor possibly Friday or next week. If the vote were held today he said, Tower's nomination would be defeated.

Democrats hold 55 of the Senate's

Hollings

100 seats, and Hollings indicated his head count shows 57 or 58 senators would vote against Tower, a former Republican senator from Texas.

"The Tower nomination is ruining the president's credibility with the people when he persists because he doesn't have good reason to persist. John Tower is not that all important to the country and he (Bush) is hurting himself by persisting," Hollings said.

Hollings also criticized the FBI investigation of Tower. He said his reading of the secret FBI report on Tower's drinking and private relations with women showed FBI agents were "trying to cross-examine witnesses to try to get them to modify or ameliorate, tone down what they were saying and the witnesses were categorical" in their views about Tower's drinking.

"This was not a good report," he told reporters. "I wish we had sent out our own investigators."

On the other hand, Hollings defended the FBI's report against Republican criticism that it was based on rumor or innuendo.

The report "uses words like 'crocked,' 'bombed,' 'excessive drinking,' 'sloshed,' 'stoned,' 'comatose'... All of this stuff about character assassination and innuendo is horse." He did not say what "horse" meant.

Hollings also said the FBI report provided information that casts doubt on Tower's pledge last weekend that, if confirmed as secretary of defense, he would not take a drink during his tenure at the Pentagon.

Mitchell announces opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell announced his opposition today to John Tower's nomination as defense. Speaking an hour before Tower was to address the National Press Club to press his own case, Mitchell said he was troubled by Tower's work as a defense consultant. "He received payment while it was widely assumed that he might be a nominee for defense secretary if President Bush were elected," the Democratic leader said.

Turning to the controversy over Tower's personal conduct, Mitchell said "it is not moral perfection or the qualifications of senators that are at issue here."

"Public officials have a right to a private life," he said. "They do not have a right to engage publicly in behavior which could interfere with the discharge of their public duties."

"A single lapse in judgment — or perhaps even a few — should not disqualify an individual from public service," Mitchell continued.

Bill would ban payments to athletes

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Pete Laney and Sen. Bob Glasgow said Tuesday they hope to clean up Texas university athletic programs by making it a felony offense for coaches or alumni to offer illegal inducements to attract student athletes.

Senate Bill 429, which passed the Senate Criminal Justice Committee on a 6-0 vote Tuesday morning, and House Bill 967 would make it a third degree felony, with a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine, to offer illegal inducements such as money or cars.

The bills would make it a Class A misdemeanor offense, with a maximum one year in jail and $2,000 fine, for students or their parents to seek or accept inducements, Glasgow and Laney said at a Capitol news conference.

Recruiting scandals have plagued nearly every school in the Southwest Conference, and also have hurt the state's reputation, said Glasgow, D-Stephenville. "This legislation aims to restore credibility to Texas colleges and their athletics," he said.

Glasgow noted that a student would have immunity from prosecution if he reported an illegal offer within 60 days.

Darrell Royal, who spoke in favor of the bill at the hearing, said he never had to offer illegal inducements when he coached at the University of Texas, but he knew it was going on at other schools.

But National Collegiate Athletic Association investigators are stymied by lack of subpoena power, which the bill gives to prosecutors.

Investigators can get a good idea if players are getting illegal payoffs by visiting the parking lots of athletic dorms and checking closets of athletes, he said. "If they're riding BMWs and wearing cashmere sweaters and they grew up in a shack, it doesn't take a genius to figure it out," he said.

But the NCAA does not start investigating a school until someone complains, he noted.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and low temperatures in the middle 30s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Winds will be southerly 10-15 mph.

Partly cloudy skies will continue through Thursday with the high near 70 and southwesterly winds from 10-15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 45 was 42 degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 87 set for that date in 1940. The overnight low of 39 was 25 degrees warmer than the record low temperature of 14 set for this date in 1962.

STATE

Some scattered showers and thunderstorms are possible across South Texas tonight, but a warming trend is expected across most of the state Thursday.

It will be clear to partly cloudy over extreme West Texas and the Big Bend area and variable cloudiness over the rest of the state through Thursday.

Light freezing drizzle was reported early today in northwest portions of the Panhandle and drizzle and light rain fell across portions of North Texas and South Texas. A few thunderstorms rumbled over southern portion of North Texas during the pre-dawn hours.

NATION

Snow fell over the Rockies and the Plains today, and up to 7 inches of rain drenched southern Florida.

Advisories for snow along with strong winds were posted for the mountains of northwest Montana, the upper Yellowstone Valley in south-central Montana and the Idaho Panhandle.

A freezing rain advisory was posted this morning at the Pikes Peak-Palmer Divide in east-central Colorado, and a winter storm watch was posted for tonight and Thursday in the northern mountains of Idaho.

In the Southeast, afternoon and evening thunderstorms produced as much as 7 inches of rain near Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and more than 3 inches at Davie, Fla.

Snow was falling today in parts of Washington state, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and Michigan.

Today's forecast called for snow showers extending from northern New England across northeast New York and along the lower Great Lakes, in upper Michigan, from Iowa across southern Minnesota, South Dakota, northern Nebraska, Montana and western Washington. Snow was to change to rain in eastern Washington.

Midland statistics

Tonight Partly cloudy, low in the middle 30s, southerly winds 10-15 mph. Thursday: Partly cloudy and warmer, high near 70, southwesterly winds 10-20 mph.

Committee confirms Watkins BALLOON

WASHINGTON (AP) — James D. Watkins won unanimous support from a Senate committee today for confirmation as energy secretary, opening the way for the retired admiral to clear the decks in an agency management he has described as "a mess."

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee voted 18-0 to recommend that Watkins, 61, be made the first career military man to head the Energy Department.

James McClure of Idaho, the committee's ranking Republican, said he hoped the nomination could be voted on by the full Senate by the end of the day.

"We're very, very pleased with Admiral Watkins," committee Chairman J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said before the vote.

Members of the committee, at a confirmation hearing last week, raised not a word of doubt about Watkins' fitness for the job. He was warmly praised for a reputation of diligence and strong leadership.

Although he has no experience in the conventional energy field, Watkins developed an expertise in nuclear power during a 41-year Navy career that included training in reactor technology as well as the command of a nuclear submarine.

Now he's about to enter battle against one of the Bush administration's biggest challenges: revitalizing the Energy Department's nuclear weapons complex and planning a long-range cleanup operation that may cost $100 billion.

The Energy Department spends about two-thirds of its budget, which this year is $14 billion, on developing, building and testing nuclear weapons for the Pentagon. The remaining one-third is spent on conventional energy projects, mainly research.

Key parts of the 12-state weapons complex are shut down because of safety, technical and managerial concerns, leaving to United States without the capacity to build nuclear weapons for the first time since the dawn of the nuclear age.

"It's the most daunting management task I think we've ever given to anybody I've seen in government," Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said during Watkins' Feb. 22 hearing.

Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, said that although the weapons plant problems were created by past administrations, "You, Admiral Watkins, will be the man in the limelight or hotseat charged with getting the situation effectively under control as quickly as possible."

Watkins told his confirmation hearing the Energy Department's weapons complex was "antique, out-of-date, desperately in need of change." He also ripped the department's management structure, calling it "a mess" and vowing to install the core of a new management team to oversee the plants within six months.

Watkins is a 1949 graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and was hand-picked by the late admiral Hyman G. Rickover.

thing" caught in a snowy field along a fence line. He retrieved it and stuck it to his windshield while he rode home.

After giving it to his wife and daughter to investigate, "They said, 'Hey, you know where this is from?'"

"And I said, 'Yeah, Paproni's Pizza.'"

"And they said, 'Yeah, in Texas.'"

A few days later, Baker was surprised to find a letter from Canada in his mailbox.

"I didn't know what it was until I opened it and started reading it," Baker remembered. When he called Cody, who was staying with his grandparents, "he was really excited about it," the father said.

Cody's mother, Denise, read the letter to him and then helped him compose an answer to Trendell, but the boy probably doesn't understand how far his message travelled.

Asked where the balloon landed, he replied, "Candada!"

Royal attributed the violations found at Texas schools to the divided loyalties in the state and investigative reporters who would not be tolerated in many states, including his native Oklahoma. "A guy named Frank Boggs did some investigative reporting (on Oklahoma) and he literally had to move out of the state," he said. "He needed police protection for his home."

Earl Campbell, former UT football star, now an assistant to the UT president, endorsed the bill. When he was a highly sought recruit from Tyler, he said, "My feeling was that my people have sold themselves long enough, and I'm not for sale."

But coming from a family of 11 whose father had died, Campbell added, "It sure was hard to turn down an El Dorado and a white Corvette."

Campbell supported the idea of universities giving student athletes a monthly stipend of $150 to $200 in addition to their scholarships. Glasgow and Royal also supported the stipends, but Royal said smaller schools always voted down such attempts to provide spending money for students.

Laney, D-Hale Center, chairman of the House State Affairs Committee, said the education should be the inducement for athletes to go to college, and he said the bill would help universities control their alumni.

He also said the bill would help private institutions compete with larger state universities, which have greater financial resources to draw upon.

The report revealed that Tower promised his second wife, Lilla Burt Cummings, when he married her in the late 1970s, that he would not use excessive alcohol, according to Hollings. Hollings said Tower violated that pledge repeatedly in the 1980s.

Hollings said he was basing his opposition to Tower on the nominee's drinking because he was concerned that military discipline could suffer if Tower were confirmed.

Hollings said Tower "could not serve in the nuclear Navy nor could he be promoted from corporal to sergeant" because of his drinking.

PARK

"I think once it's done it will be the most attractive park in the city," he said. "A lot of time and thought went into the design of this...if we've done our homework right, there shouldn't be a problem for anyone."

One problem that could crop up has to do with traffic and parking for about 500 vehicles. However, Williams said the design, itself, addresses many of those concerns.

While no firm funds are in place, the goal of the parks department is to eventually construct several picnic pavilion areas, concession stands, restrooms and trails.

It's estimated that between 2,500 to 3,000 children will make use of the park once it's finished based on local sports organization registration numbers.

HOLT

Bush's first three appointments — Secretary of State Jim Baker, Secretary of Commerce Bob Mosbacher and Holt — are, of course, all from Texas.

"I said, 'George, you're off to a good start.'"

Within days Holt had moved to the nation's capital and with the help of a "lovely lady from Waco" — Penne Korth — turned an abandoned military building into the nucleus of the 1989 presidential inauguration.

He returned to Midland two weeks ago and said the Washington inaugural office should be closed within a year.

The 1989 inauguration ran a lot smoother than the one in 1985.

Time was the biggest obstacle he and Ms. Korth faced while managing 40,000 inaugural staffers, military personnel and volunteers, he said.

"We had a little joke that Penne did the fluff and I did the finance operation."

Regardless, the two pulled it off in a mere 60 days.

The second Reagan inauguration, for which Holt served as finance chairman, cost $5 million less than Bush's, he said.

Court overturns Adams' conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals today set aside the controversial capital murder conviction of Randall Dale Adams, found guilty in 1977 of the slaying of Dallas police officer Robert Wood.

Adams, whose case came to public attention after a movie called "The Thin Blue Line," had maintained that he was innocent and had not received a fair trial.

He initially was sentenced to death in 1977 for the slaying of the police officer, but that sentence was commuted to life in 1980.

The court ordered Adams transferred from prison to the custody of the Dallas County sheriff.

In Dallas, assistant District Attorney Norm Kinne said the case was being reviewed to determine whether to retry it.

"We have one of the prosecutors reviewing evidence and interviewing witnesses in the case. We're in process of determining whether we have sufficient evidence for a retrial," Kinne said.

He said that determination could be made quickly. "We have had him (the prosecutor) investigating more or less reviewing the case and talking to witnesses for some time."

Adams has served 12 years in Texas prison for the 1976 slaying of Wood.

The appeals court reviewed the case on the recommendation of state District Judge Larry Baraka of Dallas, who said after a hearing in December that Adams did not receive a fair trial.

Adams' attorney, Randy Schaffer of Houston, could not immediately be reached for comment.

The Court of Criminal Appeals made the decision on three grounds. It said Adams' right to due process and due course of law was violated when the state knowingly suppressed an inconsistent statement made by a woman who testified against Adams.

The court said the state knowingly suppressed evidence that the witness, Emily Miller, had failed to identify Adams in a police lineup; that a police officer advised her she didn't identify Adams, and that the officer told her the person she should have identified.

The court also said Adams' conviction was obtained in violation of due process and due course of law when Ms. Miller committed perjury by testifying outside the presence of the jury that she had identified Adams in the lineup.

Adams' case was resurrected with the of New York filmmaker Errol Morris' documentary "The Thin Blue Line," which strongly suggested the slaying was committed by a prosecution witness.

"But when the lapses in judgment form a pattern of many incidents spanning many years, and when there is insufficient evidence to demonstrate that the pattern has been broken, then there are reasonable grounds to question whether the individual possesses the qualities necessary for the uniquely demanding job of the secretary of defense."

Mitchell's position was widely anticipated, particularly since all Democrats who have expressed an opinion on the nomination have opposed it, and almost all Republicans have endorsed it.

But at the same time, the Democratic leader said he hoped the Tower struggle would not have "an adverse impact on relations" between the Democratic majority in the Senate and the administration.

"I do not believe any senator's decision should be based upon partisan considerations," he said. "This is a personal decision for each senator to make..."

Correction

In Tuesday's edition, the Reporter-Telegram incorrectly reported that county commissioner's Monday took a vote to continue maintenance of County Road 115 West — an undesignated county road.

In reality, commissioners agreed in principle to continue with the maintenance work. No vote was taken nor was it required on the measure.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Article says Communist Party spreads 'political lies'

MOSCOW (AP) — In an attack unprecedented in the state-run press, a prominent sociologist has accused the ruling Communist Party of spreading "political lies" that have deceived the Soviet people for generations.

Igor M. Klyamkin's article in February's editions of Novy Mir magazine comes as the Soviets prepare for next month's national elections — the first in which voters will have more than one candidate to choose from.

In an obvious reference to President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's push for "democratization" as part of his reform campaign, the author asserts that genuine democracy will not be possible unless the 20 million-member party permits open dissent.

Klyamkin hints at the central paradox of Gorbachev's "democratization" push — that it is occurring under the aegis of a party that has declared itself society's sole legitimate ruler.

The author does not openly call for the creation of a multiparty system, but that seems the inescapable conclusion many will draw from his criticism of anti-democratic practices he says the Communist Party has engaged in starting from the days of Vladimir I. Lenin.

"The major reason for lies starting to dominate society was that the majority, whatever it was composed of, was fated to limit interparty democracy and violate the rights of the minority. This was discovered even when Lenin was still alive," Klyamkin wrote.

"The political lie," he said, "leads to catastrophe when some organization or group of people has a full monopoly on power and information, where nobody can catch them deceiving others, or to put it more simply — when there is no democracy."

The article seems certain to fuel debate about the party's role in political institutions being created this year as part of Gorbachev's plan to define more clearly the responsibilities of party and government.

Later this month, Soviet voters are to elect a new 2,550-seat Council of People's Deputies that will choose a more active Supreme Soviet parliament.

ment and the country's president, the government position held by Gorbachev, who also is party general secretary.

Klyamkin said the political reforms are flawed by measures "which even the most vivid imagination cannot call democratic."

The political changes give the party and other officially recognized organizations the right to directly fill one third of the seats in the new assembly and, unlike current practice, impose a two-step system for the election of Supreme Soviet deputies, who since 1937 have been directly chosen by voters but who will now be elected by the Council of People's Deputies.

"There are no free elections yet, and I'm not sure that there will be any soon," wrote Klyamkin, who works at the Institute of Economics of the World Socialist System, a Kremlin think tank.

He also said anti-democratic traditions in the party had not palpably changed in the nearly four years that Gorbachev has been at the helm and that open debate on major issues is still muzzled by the quest for "monolithic unity."

The article was the latest published by official media criticizing the role of the party in society.

In January, the Leningrad-based magazine Neva said Gorbachev's campaign for economic and social change was being sabotaged by a "new class" of party and government bureaucrats, and that the leadership was powerless to stop it.

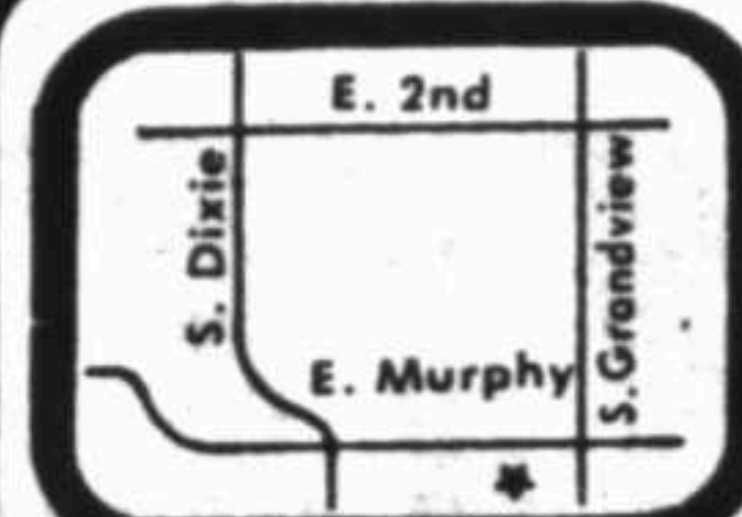

Despite the party's claim that it serves the people and is the "vanguard of society," the average Soviet "practically never had access to the real levers of power and doesn't have it now either," biologist and plant director Sergei Y. Andreyev wrote in Neva.

In a speech Friday in the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, Gorbachev used traditional formulas in describing the party he leads as the "vanguard social force," but said it should be society's guide, and not its commanding officer.

Kenya bans 'Satanic Verses'

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — At the request of its Muslim minority, the government of this predominantly Christian country has banned the sale and possession in Kenya of Salman Rushdie's novel "The Satanic Verses."

James Njiru, minister for national guidance and political affairs, said Tuesday that the banning was based on "a short review" of the book, which many Muslims consider blasphemous.

The review, Njiru said, "clearly indicates that the content of the book is offensive to Muslims who constitute an important section of the Kenyan community."

About 6 percent of this African country's 20 million people belong to the Islamic community, which had asked the government to institute the ban.

Other countries that have banned the book include India, Pakistan, Egypt and South Africa.

Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has called on Muslims to seek out and kill Rushdie, who is in hiding, and his government has threatened to break diplomatic relations with Britain unless it denounces the author.

Britain is among more than a dozen European countries that have recalled their ambassadors from Iran over the death threat.

U.N. troops in Namibia able to buy South African goods

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Overriding Black Africa's objections, a General Assembly committee has voted to allow U.N. peacekeepers in Namibia to buy goods from South Africa as long as it continues to be the cheapest supplier.

Countries led by Zambia and Zimbabwe had delayed approval of the $416 million appropriation for the force by trying to make the United Nations heed its own calls for trade embargoes on South Africa.

The General Assembly was expected today to vote final approval for the Namibia force, which beginning April 1 is to implement a one-year plan for turning the South African territory into a sovereign state.

Britain, France and the United States opposed the restrictions on purchases for the force, citing the higher cost of buying goods and services elsewhere that are available from South Africa.

Late Tuesday, the assembly's budget committee adopted language that noted the embargoes but called on the United Nations to buy from the lowest bidder among the "widest possible sources of procurement" in the interest of "economy and efficiency."

A dejected Zambian Ambassador Peter Dingswayo Zuze said he viewed the compromise as the "best as can be."

U.N. fiscal controller Luis Maris Gomez pledged that the world body would not buy helicopters from South Africa, as the Black African states had feared.

He said peacekeeping troops would bring their own military vehicles, but mine-resistant vehicles would be needed in the early stage of the mission, and these would likely be leased from South Africa.

Other U.N. officials noted that South Africa is readily able to supply the $10.2 million in gasoline and aviation fuel the Namibia force will need.

The Black African states had proposed that fuel be bought from Angola or the Congo — a more expensive proposition.

In December, the five permanent members of the Security Council had clashed with the Black African states over the size and cost of the mission. The Africans wanted 7,500 peacekeepers sent, at a cost of up to $700 million.

The Security Council instead adopted the Big Five plan of sending just 4,650 personnel, with the rest held in reserve.

The Big Five — the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China — together pay 57 percent of all peacekeeping costs.

Suspected Nazis being hunted in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Hundreds of suspected Nazi war criminals migrated to Australia after World War II and about 250 are under active investigation for major atrocities, a government-appointed Nazi hunter said today.

Bob Greenwood, head of the Special Investigations Unit, told The Associated Press he has more than 500 names on file, all immigrants who took out citizenship when immigration formalities were virtually nonexistent.

Greenwood previously had said his department was investigating almost 400 names supplied by the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Vienna, Austria.

He said he was shocked at the level of atrocities committed by some people who now regard themselves as Australians.

Most of the crimes Greenwood is investigating were committed by Eastern Europeans, he said, refusing to go into detail.

"We have in excess of 540 people and about half, or 250, are under active investigation," Greenwood said. "We are dealing with people who came to Australia after World War II, took out citizenship or became longstanding residents, who had committed war crimes."

The government enacted legislation last year to prosecute Nazi war criminals but exempted Australian war veterans and Japanese.

Prime Minister Bob Hawke appointed Greenwood after a radio program on the government-funded Australian Broadcasting Corp. alleged that former Nazis sought refuge in Australia after 1945 and were now living comfortably.

Opposition Liberal Party member

Peter Baume says he has found out with the help of Australia's Freedom of Information Act that some of the suspected war criminals are guilty of killing thousands of people.

The Brisbane Sun newspaper said Greenwood may be forced to seek more time from Attorney-General Lionel Bowen to complete files on Australian citizens suspected of committing wartime atrocities.

He initially began investigating 70 names, but more were provided by Wiesenthal, who spent part of the war in a Nazi death camp. The newspaper said the first of 12 major prosecutions are expected in June.

Opponents of the War Crimes Act have argued that war crimes trials would be too time-consuming and expensive. Critics also have argued against the reliability of Soviet evidence in such exercises.

Greenwood is due to report his findings within one month but he told the Brisbane Sun newspaper, "We still have a long way to go."

Greenwood has traveled to the United States, Israel, Canada and Britain to pursue his investigations.

Springtime storms can prove deadly

Tornadoes in recent years at Saragosa and Sweetwater have made most West Texans well aware of the dangers lurking behind springtime's gentle breezes and warm temperatures. That beauty can turn ferocious in a matter of minutes and rain death and destruction on a community.

Fortunately, residents are being reminded of this season's potentially deadly weather as part of Severe Weather Awareness Week, which began Sunday and will continue through Saturday, according to Midland's Emergency Management coordinator, Bob Edgerton. The purpose of the week's activities is to heighten awareness of the weather dangers in order to make residents more prepared to cope with what Mother Nature may throw at them.

While tornadoes may be the most severe weather most Texans will encounter, there are numerous other types of storms that potentially can be life-threatening with high wind, hail, and flash flooding being three of those other dangers.

Local officials say that an informed public is a much safer one than residents of a community who do not realize weather's dangers. In fact, storms that typically result in numerous deaths or injuries often strike when there is little chance for emergency workers or news media to warn the area's residents of the approaching storm. So it's important for local residents to know how to respond to a potentially dangerous weather situation.

In signing the proclamation designating this week as Severe Weather Awareness Week, Gov. Bill Clements noted that 13 people in Texas lost their lives to severe storms last year. He went on to note that severe weather frequently occurs during the spring.

"A community prepared to face the situation brought about by severe weather will be able to handle emergency situations that arise and be better able to recover," said Gov. Clements.

Local emergency management officials are prepared to provide residents all the information they need in order to better protect themselves in the event of severe weather. Midland residents should take advantage of that assistance by contacting those officials for detailed information.

Everyone in Mena works for CIA!

WASHINGTON — The joke around Mena, Ark., is that everyone works for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Mena is a tiny town of 5,000 nestled in the Ozark Mountains, far from the interstate. Its most noteworthy landmark is what locals call "The Barry Seal Memorial Airport," in memory of a notorious drug smuggler.

From 1982 to 1986, Seal used the airport as the headquarters for a massive drug-dealing, arms-smuggling and money-laundering operation. During part of that time, he was both a smuggler and an undercover federal informant posing as a smuggler. Seal paid the ultimate price for playing both sides of the fence: He was killed in 1986 by the Medellin cocaine cartel of Colombia.

State and local police suspect that the Mena airport is still being used by smugglers. But efforts to prove that have been stymied at every turn. Police have been stonewalled by the Justice Department, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the FBI and even the Internal Revenue Service. When the heat is on, the suspects fall back on the line that worked for Barry Seal. They say they work for the CIA.

Sources tell us that several Mena businesses have used that line to discourage state officials from asking too many questions about their activities. State and local police say that they have received strange phone calls from people claiming to be FBI agents, asking them to stop nosing around Mena.

In late 1987, a firm which once had a minor maintenance contract with the Strategic Defense Command, used that tie to convince the airport authority to build a security fence around a hangar and supply more guards to protect an airplane.

A former top Pentagon criminal investigator checked through the Pentagon's top secret "black" channels to see if the government is sanctioning any covert activities in Mena. The answer was no.

Sources familiar with the ongoing activities in Mena speculate that the area is one of several places used to ship private aid to the Nicaraguan contras. "They pushed Ollie (North) aside and kept going," one source said.

A congressional investigator told our associate Jim Lynch that covert support operations that used to be in highly visible places in southern Florida were moved to remote locations. The former Pentagon investigator said some of those operations are suspected of financing their private military aid by running drugs.

Since Seal's death, a new cast has settled in at the Mena airport. One business calls itself an "international aircraft delivery company," another "delivers aircraft parts all over the world." State police are wondering why all those international services picked a remote base in the Ozarks.

Among the strange goings-on in Mena was the construction of a primitive airstrip 15 miles from town. The former Pentagon criminal investigator claims that up until a year ago, the strip was used for commando training and to teach pilots how to land without lights.

Freddie Hampton owns land on which the airstrip was built. He said the commando stories are ridiculous, that he built the strip for "recreation." Hampton owns Rich Mountain Aviation, and Barry Seal once used the company's facilities. But Hampton noted that even Seal had said publicly that Hampton was not involved in illegal activities.

Last year, Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., asked the General Accounting Office to investigate any government involvement in drug and arms trafficking to Central America. He specifically wanted to know about a link to Mena.

A string of letters shows that the National Security Council told the GAO it would speak for the administration in the investigation. Then the NSC instructed other government agencies not to cooperate with the investigation, and it gave the GAO no answers.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher whined to The New York Times that not enough fat-cat contributors to the Bush campaign were rewarded with high-level government jobs. Tsk tsk. We thought big contributors were buying influence, and all along they were buying jobs. Mosbacher belly-ached that "quite a high percentage of those who have been helpful haven't gotten anything..." Correction. They got the president they wanted.

Plain speaking isn't always appropriate

Asked at a news conference about his refusal to support a ban on semiautomatic rifles, President Bush promised to take "a hard look." Beyond that, he said little and said it badly.

"But I also want to have — be the president that protects the rights of, of people to, to have arms. And that — so you don't go so far that the legitimate rights on some legislation are, are, you know, impinged on."

It was discouraging enough to hear the president expressing banalities ("I am in the mode of being deeply concerned and would like to be a part of finding a national answer") on one of the deadliest problems Americans face; or reaching for political advantage ("I'd like to find a way to be supportive of the police who are out there on the line all the time") when he has been unwilling even to endorse a ban on "cop-killer" bullets.

But could he not express himself at least in, like, maybe, you know, sixth- or seventh-grade English, rather than speaking as if he were Dan Quayle trying to explain the Holocaust?

Here is more Bushspeak, concerning Middle East policy: "Now we want to see that there's some follow on there. So the policy is set. I campaigned on what the policy is... So the principles are there and I think we're, you know, we've got to, now, flesh that out and figure out what we do specifically."

Does that "figure out what we do specifically" remind you of an earlier Bush puzzlement? Perhaps his not having "sorted out" what the penalties should be for women who engage in what he had called, in a debate with Michael Dukakis, the crime of abortion?

Bush also has a way of saying nothing at numbing length — this, for example, on whether or not his support for former President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative was "conditional" on a 90-day review (my boldfacing of his clichés).

"I'm not ruling anything in or not. I have stated my support for the principle of S.D.I. I have not favored what some would call premature deployment, but on the other hand I will be very interested in seeing what this overall review comes up with. And I'm not going to close any doors or open any in regards to this or any other systems. We're going to have to make some tough choices on defense. I'm aware of that and so let's wait and see what the review produces."

Read carefully — and how else could you read him? — the president may be saying that he might favor "premature deployment" if the "overall review" "comes up with" such a proposal. You betcha.

On his way to Japan, at a stopover in Alaska, Bush was in good form. Asked at a news conference if he would present "new initiatives" in Tokyo, he replied, or something: "We're ready to roll, yeah."

Let them figure that one out at the K.G.B. If, however, "yeah" meant that Bush indeed was ready with "new initiatives," he was confounding his national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft. General Scowcroft had said in a pre-departure briefing that "the substance will not be extensive" in the president's talks with other leaders.

Bush has learned one presidential lesson well — when in doubt, point to the press. He was asked last week if there was "nothing you can do about the murder capital of the United States (Washington D.C.) as the No. 1 resident?"

"Well," the president ventured, "we need the help of all the press to do something about it." Then, boldly pursuing the subject, he evoked the ghost of Willie Horton: "The answer is the criminal — do more with the criminal."

Most Americans talk about as Bush has been talking. Almost everyone lapses into clichés, leaves sentences hanging in the confidence that listeners will understand, adds meaning to utterance with eyebrows and hands, and relies on, like, you know, the vernacular and slang. But George Bush is not "most Americans." He is the president of the United States and needs to speak as well as look like a president.

For one thing, he should set a needed example, in precision of speech as well as clarity of thought, neither of which distinguishes his constituency nor many of his predecessors. Bush will find, moreover, that Americans may be briefly charmed by a president who talks as they do, but that the charm will wear off; remember Jimmy Carter's sweater. Finally, a president can't afford to be imprecise, in speech or thought, when his every word is weighed in the capitals of the world.

Andover, where are you when we need you? Eli Yale, speak to your favored son.

KGB work dirty, but someone has to do it!

One question I am constantly being asked is, "Did the press have the right to investigate and print stories about the private life of Sen. John Tower when he was being considered by the Senate Armed Services Committee for the position of secretary of defense?"

The answer is, "Only if the Russians already knew about it." Tower's off-duty activities are nobody's business, with the exception of the National Enquirer. They are only significant if what he does for recreation could give aid and comfort to the enemy, while the enemy provides aid and comfort to him.

Few people are aware that the KGB has a large department called The W&D Division — W&D stands for Womanizing and Daiquiris. The purpose of the department is to find out which Pentagon officials like womanizing and which ones prefer to play miniature golf. If they discover an official who likes to do both, the KGB refers to such a person as a "twofer."

With one of the largest budgets of any agency in the Soviet Union, the W&D has training quarters, actually luxury hotels, where beautiful women are instructed on how to be friendly and warm to Westerners in high places.

At this very moment, the KGB is holding a Miss Secretary of Defense 1989 contest, with the most beautiful women from all over the Soviet Union competing. The winner gets 12,000 rubles, a Ziss convertible and an opportunity to meet a U.S. secretary of defense in the bar of her choice.

The girls have to appear in bathing suits and then evening gowns. There is also a talent category. Each contestant is asked how she would get the NATO order of battle while making pillow talk.

To make the contest more interesting, each woman has access to any clothing in Raisa Gorbachev's closet and is issued a Diner's Club camera hidden in the neckline, which goes "click" every time she is bitten on the neck. One of the most important qualities that the judges look for is how many people in high government positions she can catch in a revolving door.

I only mention what is going on in Moscow right now because our president can't be too careful when selecting a secretary of defense for this country. While Tower may not be guilty of anything, we would be fools to ignore the fact that the KGB's Miss Secretary of Defense 1989 is about to be chosen and start on her world tour.

The KGB is a vicious, calculating organization and there is nothing it would like more than to have its beauty queen party with Sen. Tower on a nuclear submarine, even if he doesn't want to. The Russians are taking the position that Tower may not be a swinger, but they have to be ready for any emergency. While shooting photos of Tower's bedroom, a KGB man was overheard to say, "We're not talking about a man falling in love with an agent — we're talking about finding out what's screwed onto the undercarriage of the Stealth bomber."

The odds-on favorite to win the Miss Secretary of Defense 1989 title is Miss Smolensk. She used to be a ballet dancer with the Bolshoi, but she kept falling down and they had to let her go. She is not only reported to be a seductive Mata Hari, but she also speaks fluent Pentagones.

In any case, the KGB officials have big plans for the winner. They are going to ensure that she meets Tower at the Military-Industrial-Complex Cottillion in Washington, which defense company lobbyists hold every year to present their daughters to Washington society.

Miss Secretary of Defense 1989 will have strict orders that under no circumstances is she to discuss Star Wars with Tower until their second date.

The KGB has never denied that attempting to make Sen. Tower a security risk is a dirty business, but they say if they don't do it, who will?

Headline was shocking

I am shocked by the fact that the best news the Midland Reporter-Telegram could choose for its Feb. 23rd headlines is "Bush gets front row seat at funeral." Who cares? Especially since the funeral he was attending was that of Emperor Hirohito — the very man who was emperor on the "Day of Infamy" when the nation he was leading killed and wounded thousands of American soldiers and civilians in a sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Who among us, that were old enough, can ever forget the newsreels and newspaper accounts of countless atrocities, some almost too gruesome to report, that were committed by Japanese soldiers for their emperor? We should remember, the Japanese people certainly won't. The accounts of the Japanese involvement in World War II have been glossed over and censored in all Japanese textbooks so that even their own children don't really know the truth. You can bet on one thing: If the outcome of World War II had been different and the Japanese had won, no Japanese representative would be attending a funeral of one of our leaders — because we wouldn't have one!

I'm sure that Bush's front row seat was made available because of many reasons, the foremost of which is trade between the two countries. The trade deficit between the U.S. and Japan which is due to Japanese laws and tariffs prohibiting importation of numerous American products is one of the primary reasons for our huge national debt.

I know this has rambled on, coherently I hope, for probably too long. Even if you don't print this letter I feel better for writing these things. I know the Christian thing to do is to forgive, but we should not forget. I hope and pray we don't have to bomb Pearl Harbor to retake it from the Japanese who have bought it!

A bird sanctuary?

My work schedule has been so busy I have put off writing about the pigeon atrocity but busy or not, I would be less than happy with myself as a human being if I failed to speak.

When we first came to Midland from Lubbock in 1978, we were more than a little dismayed. Coming into the city, however, I saw a sign that said "Midland is a bird sanctuary." I said, "Look, children, this has to be a very nice place if the whole city is a bird sanctuary." Shortly thereafter, at Edison Freshman School where my oldest daughter was attending, thousands of birds were slaughtered in the patio area. My daughter came home crying and told me she never wanted to go back to school there.

I called and wrote letters protesting but the protests were ignored because the birds were "a health hazard," according to school officials. The trauma which resulted for the children was irrelevant. Several years later, there was another "pigeon kill" in downtown Midland. The streets were littered with dead and dying birds. Anyone with any compassion at all couldn't stand to go downtown and see the carnage. Now it's happening again. I shudder to think what would happen if Midland were not a "bird sanctuary."

In response to Clem L. Ware's letter, if he finds the agony of living things so amusing, he must have found the holocaust to be a real hoot. It frightens me to know there are people like that around. As long as there are, I doubt that Midland will find a more humane way to control the pigeons, such as the plastic owl used in the AT&T Tower mentioned in another letter. That is entirely too inexpensive and easy — besides Mr. Ware and his friends would miss all the fun.

I doubt that you will publish this, but I had to try.

Letter brought memory

Mary Frances Beverley's letter about people saying "Where is it at?" brought an amusing memory of my English teacher's dislike of the same question with "at" added. Students were thoughtless and lazy who used it. Each time a student said, "Where is it at?" she replied, "Behind the 'a' leaning back on the 't' with feet propped on the 'a'." The picture she created of careless laziness was vivid. Soon students were repeating it when they heard "at" added to the question.

Whether the vivid quote reduced the use or increased the use, it certainly made our class aware of "Where is it at?" and many were saying, "Where is it?" instead.

Airlines agree to $800 million plan to modify planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new plan to require $800 million in work on aging airliners will provide an extra margin of safety, even though the planes already are "perfectly safe," an airline trade association official said today.

Officials of United, Delta and American airlines who worked on an aging-aircraft task force joined Tuesday in endorsing the group's far-reaching recommendations to increase the safety of older Boeing airliners.

Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner says steps are being taken to write the proposal into law.

"Collectively we decided that it was far better to be pre-emptive in our maintenance activity rather than to wait for problems to develop," Clyde Kizer, vice president of the Air Transport Association, an airline trade group, said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

The task force, which also included other U.S. and foreign industry and government safety experts, called for $800,000 in modifications and replacements on each of more than 1,300 older Boeing 747s, 737s and 727s.

"The aircraft that are out there right now are perfectly safe and the activities that the airlines are taking in regards to the maintenance were satisfactory," Kizer said. "This supplies an extra protection margin."

Bob Doll, United Airlines vice president for technical services, said the proposals conform with steps the airline is already taking to keep its older airliners in shape.

"We don't anticipate anything over and above what we've already planned to do," said Doll.

Kizer said the proposals had nothing to do with damage to United's oldest 747 on a flight from Honolulu to Auckland, New Zealand, last Friday.

Investigators into the incident in which nine passengers were hurt to their deaths over the Pacific Ocean say they have found no signs of metal fatigue or corrosion associated with aging. Instead, they have focused on possible mechanical problems with the cargo door that ripped off along with a portion of the airliner's skin.

Julian May, Delta vice president, said none of his airline's fleet of 130 model 727s would be affected by the proposals right away.

"It will be several years before we are affected because of fleet age," he said.

Pan Am's top executive, Thomas G. Plaskett, also endorsed the proposal, saying that unless older airliners are restored and kept operating, there may not be enough planes to serve the growing worldwide travel demand.

No airlines would be scrapped under the proposal which asks the Federal Aviation Administration to order the work that would include replacement of parts subject to wear rather than repeated inspections and repairs only when they wear out.

An official of Boeing Commercial Aircraft Co., which manufactured the affected airliners, said the older jetliners covered by the plan are safe and should last indefinitely if the recommended work is done.

"We believe that the aircraft out there flying are safe," said Ben Cosgrove, Boeing engineering vice president who sits on the task force. But he said the work was needed to reduce the number of regular inspections needed for older aircraft.

The recommendations are based on 150 service bulletins issued by Boeing, which is now to write them into a single massive bulletin for presentation to the FAA.

Skinner praised the task force's work as the first product of a cooperative international government and industry effort to deal with the problem of the world's aging airliner fleet.

The average age of the 8,800 airliners in use around the world is just over 13 years, and aviation experts predict that will increase each year for several years as new airliner construction is backlogged and few old aircraft are junked.

In all, more than 1,300 airliners worldwide would be affected by the plan, about one-third of them operated by U.S. carriers.

New York buys nuclear plant for $1

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo signed a new agreement to buy the $5.4 billion Shoreham nuclear plant for $1 and close it permanently, but some opponents were skeptical, saying "Shoreham continues to rise from the dead."

Under the agreement, the Long Island Lighting Co. will sell the debt-ridden, unused plant to the state, which will dismantle it. The plant, which has been subject to repeated licensing battles since its completion in 1985, had come close to bankrupting the utility.

"It is time to end this matter once and for all and turn our energies to new, productive measures for Long Island and the state," said Cuomo in announcing the agreement Tuesday.

Unlike a similar agreement last year, which was killed by state legislators, Cuomo predicted this deal would succeed because it largely bypasses the Legislature.

Reaction from opponents of the plant was mixed. Long Island business leaders contend the $2.5 billion loss that LILCO plans to take on the plant during the next three years will be passed to its customers, who already pay among the nation's highest electric bills.

Jack Kulka, of the Association for a Better Long Island, said his business group was "very, very skeptical" because "Shoreham continues to rise from the dead."

But Suffolk County Executive Patrick Halpin, whose county is where the plant is located, said: "I am pleased that Long Island's longest-running soap opera has finally gotten its cancellation notice."

In December, the state Legislature refused to act on a deal negotiated in June by Cuomo with the utility that would also have had the state buy the plant for $1 and dismantle it. In that deal, LILCO would have been guaranteed 5 percent rate increases for at least three years, and possibly for a decade.

At the time, key lawmakers said the deal was too expensive for LILCO customers. Cuomo said the legislators were simply afraid to face a politically tough situation.

Under Tuesday's agreement, LILCO is guaranteed no particular rates, which are decided by the state Public Service Commission. Cuomo predicted the rates would be lower than proposed in the earlier deal, probably less than 4.5 percent.

"Nobody is going to be responsible for the rates," quipped Cuomo. "It's wonderful."

Cuomo said he made the new deal because he believed the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission was about to grant LILCO a license to operate the plant at 25 percent of full power.

Wright accused of threatening to expose officer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ethics investigation of House Speaker Jim Wright was expanded to include an allegation that he threatened to expose a federal thrift regulator's homosexuality unless Texas thrift executives gained access to Washington officials, The Washington Times reported today.

Wright said through a spokesman the allegation was "preposterous," the newspaper said.

The Times quoted sources as saying Wright was accused of threatening federal officials in Washington with "blowing the whistle" on a federal thrift regulator's alleged homosexuality unless Texas thrift executives were allowed to meet with Washington officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Executives of at least two Texas savings and loan associations felt they could not get fair hearings at the bank board's Dallas office, where the federal official in question worked, the Times said. The Texas thrift executives were complaining of over-regulation, and some of them were friends of the speaker, the newspaper said.

Wright's spokesman, Mark Johnson, told the newspaper, "The speaker never threatened to expose anything. It's a figment of someone's imagination, someone with an obvious ax to grind."

Daley wins Chicago mayoral nomination

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard M. Daley's Democratic primary victory over Mayor Eugene Sawyer carried him to the door of the City Hall office his father held for 21 years, but a new foe and an old nemesis want to bar his entry.

By defeating Sawyer Tuesday, Daley advanced to the April 4 general election and a contest Democrats have won without fail since 1931 — including six straight terms captured by Richard J. Daley, the late, legendary boss of Chicago politics.

The 46-year-old white nominee faces third-party candidate Alderman Timothy Evans, previously Sawyer's chief black rival and now Jesse Jackson's choice. He also faces the Republican primary winner, a title claimed by Edward Vrdolyak, who bucked GOP leaders by launching a write-in candidacy a week ago.

Daley, Cook County state's attorney, rarely invoked his father's name during the primary, but said in a reflective moment Tuesday night, "Today, when I was walking down to vote with my wife...when I looked up, I know he was looking down on me."

He then repeated advice he received from the man who died in 1976, three months into his third decade in office.

"You're going to have ups and downs, you're going to win, you're going to lose," he recalled his father saying. "Remember, (choosing politics) is your decision."

With 2,843 of 2,911 precincts reporting, or 98 percent, unofficial totals showed Daley with 481,370 votes, or 56 percent, to 367,919 votes, or 43 percent, for the black acting mayor. Three other candidates shared the remaining votes.

"This is not the end of Eugene Sawyer," said the 54-year-old Sawyer in conceding. "I will continue to work...to heal, to build and to bring people together in this city."

Daley rode overwhelming white support to win, capping a three-month campaign that was largely free of racial strife and, by Chicago standards, rancor.

But Vrdolyak, a former Democratic alderman and county party chairman, could cut into that base if his write-in challenge is successful. Vrdolyak won more than 80 percent of the white vote in his unsuccessful 1987 third-party challenge against the late Harold Washington, Chicago's first black mayor.

With 96 percent of 2,911 precincts reporting, unofficial results gave Vrdolyak 10,711 votes, or 45 percent, to 10,234 votes, or 43 percent, to GOP endorsed candidate Dr. Herbert Sohn. Two others each had 5 percent.

"You made history," Vrdolyak told cheering supporters. "You did something in seven days that no one has seen before. You showed that you can write someone in for mayor of Chicago."

Sohn refused to concede and County GOP Chairman Jim Dvorak said the race was too close to call. Because of the difficulty of counting write-in votes, the outcome of the Republican race might not be known before Thursday.

If Daley faces Vrdolyak and Evans next month, the battle would be reminiscent of the one Washington waged to become the city's first black mayor.

Washington narrowly won the 1983 Democratic primary when the younger Daley and incumbent Jane Byrne split the white vote.

New secrecy issue stalls North trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial is in disarray over a new secrecy issue, following the judge's discovery that memos the government claimed were classified had already been made public.

At a hearing Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell said he will reconsider how he will handle classified material at North's trial.

"For 2½ weeks, a jury has been ready to try this case and hasn't been able to try it," said Gesell. "Now I hear we are dealing with classified documents that can be classified ex post facto," or after the fact.

The memos written by Robert Owen, a onetime courier for North, were censored before the trial by U.S. intelligence agencies, which claimed that release could endanger national security. However, the same memos had already been turned over to a private group in a separate legal case eight months before.

Owen's lawyer, Thomas Hylden, turned over copies of the memos last June to the Christie Institute as part of a lawsuit the activist group filed alleging a criminal conspiracy to supply the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. In the memos, Owen spelled out for his boss a wealth of detail about the private Contra supply network overseen by North.

North is accused of lying to Congress and the attorney general about secret Reagan administration efforts to aid the Contras when Congress had banned U.S. aid to the rebels.

The trial was halted Monday when North's lawyers wanted to use the name of a Costa Rican official, former security minister Benjamin Piza, from one of Owen's memos in cross-examining Owen. Piza's name had been censored by U.S. intelligence agencies.

Owen's lawyer, Thomas Hylden, had informed independent counsel Lawrence Walsh's office on Feb. 10 that the Christie Institute already had the memos. But North's lawyers said they didn't find out about it until Monday night when they were notified by Hylden.

Prosecutors working for Walsh said inaction by the office security director and inattention on their part, rather than any intent to hide information, was the reason North's lawyers hadn't been notified.

The defense alleged prosecutorial misconduct, but Gesell said he was "not trying to look for sanctions" against anyone. However, the judge said he was concerned about "getting to the bottom of what's going on" regarding the use of classified information at the trial.

"My concern is whether this presents an example of looseness in governmental dealings with this problem of classified information," he said.

The judge questioned whether all his pretrial work on rules for handling such information would have to be done over.

Gesell noted that he had a continuing motion from North's lawyers asking whether a fair trial is possible under rules set by a law governing disclosure of state secrets at trial.

City joins others in Bell rate case before PUC

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

A rate intervention case involving a number of Texas cities added Midland to its list Tuesday.

The case — involving certain over-earnings made by Southwestern Bell Telephone — is now before the Public Utilities Commission's rates staff in Austin, which the council voted to support.

At question is whether or not the Bell unit overcharged its customers by some $90 million statewide since the 1986 Tax Reform Act took effect.

That act reduced corporate taxes by about 12 percent a year.

Darlene Gifford, Bell's area manager-public relations, attempted to convince council to hold off on any action until the utility could furnish its members more information on its Texas First program.

The five-year program — designed to improve communication technology in rural areas — has been Bell's answer to date on just how those "over-earnings" should be pumped back into the state economy.

Ms. Gifford's argument did not fall on deaf ears. However, council members supported intervention, noting First Texas is a separate issue from the rate case, according to Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas.

City Manager Fred Poe said Dallas, Abilene, Amarillo, San Antonio and Arlington are among the cities that have intervened in the case on behalf of the PUC staff.

Under the 1986 tax overhaul, Poe said there already is one bill pending in the state Legislature that would recoup all savings incurred by utilities in relation to the drop in corporate taxes.

"I don't have any idea what the outcome will be ... it could be less than $90 million or more than that ... I suspect it would be more. We need to support the PUC staff," he said. "We owe it to the citizens to be part of that case."

Midland has until May 23 to join other Texas cities in the case and apparently will waste no time in doing just that.

Ms. Gifford said what now is at question is Bell's 12.39 percent return on investment — a question that forced the PUC to file a "show of cause" statement. While Bell has made no formal response, it is expected to be by the deadline.

If Bell is forced to reimburse consumers, Ms. Gifford suspected it wouldn't amount to more than $3 annually per residential customer.

According to her, Bell would prefer plowing its earnings and the estimated over-earnings back into its First Texas program, which would freeze all residential and business rates for a period of five years. It also would allow the company the opportunity to "upgrade" 195 central offices in rural areas.

Ms. Gifford said Bell's stated over-earnings probably won't amount to more than $24 million based on its own estimates through December 1988.

"What's at issue here is whether or not 1988 (over) earnings should be put back into many of these communities or just refunded. The resolution they (council) passed now gives them the inroad to intervene."

If the PUC agrees that Bell's First Texas program is an amenable solution to a refund, Ms. Gifford said Bell could end up investing an estimated $700 million to update its statewide system.

4 new measles cases confirmed in area

From Staff Reports

Four new cases of measles were diagnosed in the area Monday and Tuesday, officials said.

In Midland, a 24-year-old woman's suspected case was confirmed Tuesday, said Monette Burke, Midland City-County Health Department administrator.

It was not known this morning where the woman works, Ms. Burke said.

Several additional blood samples have been sent to the health department's laboratory for measles confirmation, she added.

There are now three cases in Midland, Ms. Burke said. In Odessa, another three new measles diagnoses have been confirmed, one involving a student at Alamo Elementary, said Toby Cross, Ector County Health Department administrator.

At least 130 students and staff members at Alamo were inoculated with the measles vaccination Tuesday in response to the outbreak, Cross said. The other two cases are "scattered throughout the community," Cross said, and don't involve students. A total of 35 cases have been reported in Odessa.

Cross said the student outbreaks perplex health officials because that population has been inoculated.

Both health departments will inoculate persons believed to have been directly exposed to the measles, officials said.

MISD board tables two major items

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

School board members Tuesday night tabled two major agenda items and opted to survey people to ensure the correct decision is made.

Midland Independent School District trustee Bill Sewell had to miss Tuesday night's board meeting, so the decision on the George Bush Elementary boundary was tabled.

Sewell had requested the move so he could be present when the issue was discussed.

The school board did elect to conduct a telephone survey of a north-west city quadrant for feedback on the boundary decision.

The question is whether 30 students' younger siblings should be allowed to be exceptions to the proposed boundary's "grandfather" clause for the new Bush Elementary.

The proposed exception would allow students currently in the second grades at Parker and Rusk elementary schools and in the third grade at Parker to remain at those campuses instead of being transferred — as per the proposed boundary — to Bush next year.

Trustees did appoint Toby L. Ward, principal of Burnet Elementary, to the principal's post at Bush. The job will be effective next fall. Earlier in the day, an MISD teacher-committee reported to board members how educators feel about a proposed reduction in the district's

District could owe state $1.4 million

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

School district officials got an expensive letter last week from Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock.

It's a complicated matter, but the bottom line is that the Midland Independent School District could owe the state of Texas as much as $1.4 million.

A recent court decision invalidated portions of the Texas franchise tax law, a mandate applying to as many as 30,000 corporations and banks.

After 1984, school districts throughout the state had received a portion of their state support from Texas banks' franchise taxes.

The recent ruling repealed a provision, however, that allowed Texas corporations to make certain adjustments that can lower the taxes they pay on gross receipts.

The order will allow Texas banks to file retroactive claims on 1985, 1986 and 1987 franchise taxes they wouldn't have paid under the new law.

■ Please see related story Page 3B

"It is impossible at this time to know what liabilities each local jurisdiction may face," read a letter to the MISD from Bullock.

"We estimate now that local liabilities may exceed $60 million for the total three-year period."

Local refund liabilities will vary according to the banks that were in each jurisdiction in the years in question, MISD officials explained.

MISD has received $14 million in bank franchise taxes over the past three years, district business manager Don Ferguson said.

The school district may be liable for the entire amount or at least 60 percent, he explained.

Because banks haven't filed claims for the entire three-year period yet, it is impossible to know what amount the district will repay, Ferguson said.

Money will come, however, from district reserve funds, Superintendent Joe Baressi said Tuesday night.

merit pay or "Career Ladder" stipends.

Opposition was expressed to the proposed cuts, so board members voted to conduct a "one Social Security number-one vote" referendum on the issue.

A district official suggested decreasing Career Ladder II merit stipends $250 to $1,750 and Career Ladder III merit stipends $500 to $3,500. Career Ladder stipends are mandated by the educational reform law, House Bill 72, and are funded by the state based on a function of attendance figures and other spending constraints.

Although the merit stipends would be less — $1,150 and $2,300 after taxes — more staff members would be eligible, MISD Director of Human Resources Tom Holland explained.

Although merit pay might be on the decline, trustees voted Tuesday to raise the starting salaries of MISD teachers to aid recruitment efforts.

Next year, teachers with no experience will earn anywhere from $20,250 to $22,000 depending on their degree.

Though the new salaries are above the state base, Holland said they might be surpassed by Ector County Independent School District's proposed pay raises.

Local farmer, Odessa fight it out over draw

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

STANTON — A Midland farmer and city of Odessa representatives will convene in neutral Stanton next week to resolve a 6-year-old dispute over the flooding of Monahans Draw onto farmland operated by the farmer, Lee Bell.

Odessa discharges its treated sewage waters — effluent — into the draw, which flows eastward through Midland County and just south of the Midland city limits.

Bell and his ex-wife, Debbie, are seeking almost $2-million in the suit, which originally was filed in Midland's 142nd Texas State District Court in March 1983 but has since been transferred to 118th Texas State District Court in Stanton, where Judge James Gregg of Big Spring will preside over the Bell-versus-Odessa jury trial beginning Monday.

Bell, 35, claims waters in the "saturated" stream are prone to overflow particularly when rain-water runoff and effluent flow together in the draw.

"They have been doing that forever (since the 1970s), and it's just not right," Bell said Tuesday night.

"I understand that Odessa has got to have a place to do something with their sewage water. I can understand that, and I can appreciate their situation," he said.

And Bell said he does not want to "go over there and tell everybody that they have got to quit flushing their toilets."

Nevertheless, he said, "It's not right for them to just dump on me without any remuneration of any kind. That's just not right."

In his original petition, Bell claimed that the discharge into the "normally dry meandering draw" flooded 80 acres of a 424-acre tract southeast of Midland at Farm-to-Market Roads 715 and 1213 and Midland County Road 1160 and has damaged additional acres and had led to "contamination of the underground water supply of the entire farm." Additionally, prospects of converting some of the Bell farm acreage to residential development have been dropped because of the flooding, he said.

The Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation from mid-February 1988 to mid-October 1988 spent $792,721.81 in repairing flood-damaged FM 715 and 1213 and putting in culverts to handle draw waters, according to a highway department spokesman.

Hispanic chambers push school finance reform

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A coalition of Hispanic chambers of commerce came to the Legislature Tuesday to promote an agenda that includes school finance reform and the legalization of home equity lending for business purposes.

Leaders of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce said in a news conference at the Capitol that education must share center stage with business-related issues on their agenda because the state's dropout problem breeds increased crime, taxes and unemployment.

"By reversing the dropout rate, our state will not only avoid many of these problems, but it will benefit from the productive activities of an educated and trained workforce," said association Chairman Sam Guzman of Austin.

Highlights of the group's lobbying agenda include:

■ Continued funding for pre-kindergarten and kindergarten programs in an effort to avoid future dropouts.

■ Equal access to educational funds for all school districts.

■ New ways of generating capital for small businesses, including a change in the constitutional ban that forbids mortgages for reasons other than an original purchase of a home or home improvements. The banking industry has put off that push for this session.

■ New laws aimed at making a good-faith attempt to steer state contracts toward businesses owned by women and minorities.

State Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, and state Reps. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, and Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, endorsed the thrust of the association's package during the news conference.

Truck 'never slowed down,' trooper testifies

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Testimony was scheduled to continue this morning in the trial of 24-year-old Troy Richburg, who is accused of the July 23, 1988, drunken driving deaths of five persons on a darkened highway west of Midland.

Richburg is being tried for involuntary manslaughter before an eight-woman, four-man jury in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court. Tuesday, the Department of Public Safety trooper who witnessed the accident said Richburg's pickup truck was traveling more than 80 mph when he spotted it traveling westbound on U.S. Highway 80.

John Madden, an eight-year DPS veteran, said he tried to catch up with the truck but could not.

"It could be no less than 84 (mph)," Madden said when asked the truck's speed at the time of the accident. "He never slowed down."

Madden told District Attorney Al Schorre he "had no trouble at all" seeing the Ramirez vehicle — which was stalled in a crossover between the highway's traffic lanes — despite the darkness and his speed.

The impact spun the car around and drove it back, and the truck with Richburg inside overturned, Madden said. Bodies were scattered on and along the roadway, he testified.

DEATHS

H.W. 'Chief' Colbert

Graveside services for H.W. "Chief" Colbert of Midland will be at 1 p.m. Thursday at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. J.B. Stewart of First United Methodist Church officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Colbert died Monday at his residence.

He was born March 6, 1904, in Kiowa Indian Territory, Okla., and resided in Hewitt and Ardmore, Okla., as a child. He married Mary LaCroix in 1923. The couple moved to East Texas in 1930 and then to Midland in 1951.

Mrs. Colbert preceded her husband in death on Nov. 16, 1982.

Colbert had been a drilling superintendent with Norwood Drilling Co. for several years and retired in 1979 from his security job at the Gulf Oil Co. building.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. James P. (Betty C.) Merriman of Midland; three grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland Inc., P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas, 79702.

Alma I. Davis

Graveside services for Alma I. Davis of Shawnee, Okla., formerly of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Fred Davis, in 1978.

Madeline Robinson

Madeline Robinson, 79, of Midland, died Tuesday at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

William R. Riggins

William Robert Riggins, 72, of Midland died early Wednesday at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Andrew Simmons

Andrew Simmons, 68, of Midland, died at his home Monday following a lengthy illness.

Services are pending with Thomas Funeral Home.

Dale Carnegie Inc. seeks high school students

By JULIE HILLRICH
Staff Writer

Dale Carnegie Inc. is looking for more than a few good boys and girls. In selling out $37,000 in scholarships, the company wants to offer 44 Midland-Odessa high school students a chance to enlist in its 14-week business course through Junior Achievement.

"I'm looking for kids who already are doing things and want to find a way to do them better. I'm not teaching a remedial course," said Ron Bowman, area associate for Dale Carnegie seminars in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

The courses are scheduled from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. each Saturday at First City National Bank.

Bowman, who has been a Dale Carnegie associate the past 14 years and previously worked for IBM Corp., has tutored more than 3,000 people in Dale Carnegie techniques.

The thought of this new challenge has Bowman reeling with excitement.

"Part of Dale Carnegie's mission statement and my personal philosophy is that you've got to give something back; you can't just take from the community," he said.

Besides Bowman, three other instructors are sharing in the teaching duties for the next 14 weeks. Their backgrounds run the gamut from the chaplain of High Sky Children's Ranch to a representative of the Woolgrowers Association in San Angelo.

Each of the four instructors have gone through an extensive preparatory program, said Bowman, observing that each most likely completed six Dale Carnegie program when they finished training.

During the 1950s, Dale Carnegie targeted inmates at state penitentiaries across the country in hopes of making productive citizens out of violent criminals and repeat offenders.

When that failed, the organization changed its emphasis to focus attention on high school students involved in Junior Achievement.

Bowman attributed the change of emphasis to the organization's desire "to help youngsters develop before they get into trouble."

"Keep in mind that these kids are the future leaders of this country," he said. "This is a way of developing leaders."

In the next three-and-a-half months, local students will practice skills that will help them develop self-confidence as public speakers.

Also, they will learn how to think on their feet and how to better interact with people at home, school and in public.

Later on, the students will discover problem solving skills on an individual and group basis to help them participate more effectively in meetings.

Goal setting and stress control also are among the course's objectives.

Bowman said the course is being offered to freshman and seniors from at least five area high schools, including Lee High and Midland High, Odessa's Permian High School, and Midland Christian School.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Dean Rucker certified as family law specialist

From Staff Reports

State District Judge Dean Rucker recently received his certification as a family law specialist from the Texas Board of Legal Specialization.

To qualify for voluntary certification, Rucker — a family district judge since February 1988 — was required to show substantial involvement and competence in the area of family law.

"Family law is a highly specialized area of the law," Rucker said. "It is important that those who seek the assistance of this court feel that the judge has sufficient knowledge, proficiency and experience in family law matters. The certification is one small way for the judge to demonstrate this."

Prior to his appointment to the bench, Rucker served as chairman of the Midland County Republican Party and was a member of the State Republican Executive Committee.

He currently is a member of the Midland County Bar Association and the State Bar of Texas, and is admitted to practice law before the U.S. Supreme Court and other federal courts, including federal district court in Midland.

Rucker and his father, Hal Rucker, were partners in the law firm of Rucker & Rucker.

BIG SPRING — The '89 tour of Nashville Stars Country Music Spectacular comes to Big Spring High School Auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday.

The evening's entertainment represents the 5th annual "Grand Ole Country" presentation sponsored by the Big Spring Police Department.

Featured guest artist is banjo and mandolin player Tim Mayberry. Also performing in the Leon Ashley Show will be Margie Singleton, country singer and song writer, and George Riddle and the Strings of Nashville.

Advance tickets, priced at $3, are on sale at Big Spring business firms. For more information call the Big Spring Police Department, 1-263-8311.

Admission at the door will be $4.

World prayer day Friday

The Church Women United of Midland will observe the 102nd World Day of Prayer at 10:30 a.m. Friday in the First United Methodist Chapel, downtown at Illinois Avenue and Main Street.

This year's theme is "Jesus, Teach Us to Pray." The prayers and worship resources were written by an ecumenical group of Christian women in Burma.

The board of CWU will meet at 9:30 a.m. in the parlor of First UMC. The public is invited to attend the 10:30 a.m. World Day of Prayer observance.

Arts reporter to speak

Midland Reporter-Telegram arts and entertainment writer Georgia Temple will serve as guest speaker for the March 11 meeting of Texas Press Women.

A native Midlander, Ms. Temple has been with the Reporter-Telegram since 1980. The topic of her speech is entitled, "As I See It."

The meeting is slated to begin at 2 p.m. in the board room of the Reporter-Telegram, which is located at 201 E. Illinois Ave.

The meeting is open to the public.

For information, call 684-5122 or 688-7418.

Lions Camp orientation set

The Midland Committee for the Texas Lions Camp in Kerrville will have an orientation meeting for prospective campers at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Cerebral Palsy Center, 802 Ventura.

The purpose of the camp is to teach eligible handicapped and diabetic children to be more independent. The summer sessions are paid for by Texas Lions Clubs.

All handicapped and diabetic children, their parents and Lion Club members are urged to attend.

For additional information, contact a Lions Club member or call 684-5667.

Tech regent appointed

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman and chief executive officer of GTE Corp., James L. "Rocky" Johnson, has been appointed to the Texas Tech University Board of Regents.

Gov. Bill Clements announced the appointment Wednesday.

In making the appointment, Clements said Johnson's "strong management and leadership skills helped build one of the nation's greatest telecommunications firms and can now be put to work for higher education in Texas."

Johnson, 61, of Dallas, is a Tech graduate. He replaces Gerald J. Ford of Dallas, whose term expired. If confirmed by the Senate, Johnson would serve until Jan. 31, 1995.

Johnson became GTE's chairman and CEO last year, having joined the company in Lubbock in 1949, when it was known as Southwestern Associated Telephone Co.

Celebrity waiters will turn tables on wealthy diners

From Staff Reports

Organizers of the third annual Celebrity Waiters Charity Luncheon hope to raise more than enough dough to benefit the South/West Texas Chapter of the Leukemia Society.

The star-studded event is slated to kick off at noon Thursday at the Midland Hilton.

Money hungry leaders of local civic organizations will disguise themselves as waiters during the $20-a-plate benefit luncheon, and will be begging for tips to add to the contributions.

Modesta Williams is serving as this year's honorary maitre d' and Clayton Williams will act as master of ceremonies.

Celebrity waiters include Mike Barker, Bonnie Beard, Gin Kulbeth Black, Ray Branson, Gary Burnett, Robbie Casey, Sharon Crouch, Judy Devenport, Jane Dees, Sam Flores, Dennis Grubb, Henry Hammons, Steve Harper, Elvia Hernandez and Max Holman.

Also, Susan Horton, David Jones, Pete Martinez, Becky Neighbors, Joe O'Neill, Gary Ott, Clay Pollard, Janet Pollard, Charles Seltzer, Peggy Simmons, Charles Spence, Harry Spannaus, Janet Storie, Nick Taylor, Lydia Torres, Rick Wells and W.C. Wilson.

The South/West Texas chapter of the Leukemia Society provides direct financial assistance to Midland area patients who suffer from leukemia, Hodgkins Disease, lymphoma or multiple myeloma.

The funds go to help patients pay such out-of-pocket expenses as drugs, X-rays, chemotherapy and transportation costs, program coordinator Linda Bower said.

"Our goal with this event is to inform the public that the Leukemia Society is available to assist them when in need and to raise much needed funds to continue this program," she added.

Leukemia is typically known as a major life-threatening disease for children, but affects eight times more adults each year, with 70,000 new cases diagnosed annually.

Still, the prospects for prolonged life expectancy have improved dramatically over the last 20 years — from a 5 percent survival rate to a 65 percent survival rate — because of Leukemia Society-supported research.

Luncheon reservations may be made by calling Suzanne Mitchell at 688-3005.

'Dead' Colorado fugitive arrested near Monahans

MONAHANS (AP) — A fugitive from Colorado was arrested near Monahans almost two months after a death certificate indicated he had died of a heart attack in Houston.

Harold Dickerson was alive and well Tuesday when Ward County Justice of the Peace J.R. Wooten ordered him held on $1 million bail on charges of drug possession and bail jumping. Colorado authorities requested the high bail because Dickerson fled the state in December after skipping his sentencing on an attempted felony theft conviction.

Dickerson was arrested after he was stopped Feb. 19 for a traffic violation on Interstate 20. He was arrested after he refused to identify himself. Dickerson's death certificate, some cocaine and a stolen handgun were found in the vehicle.

Even before the arrest, officials already had an inkling Dickerson wasn't really dead.

First of all, the 41-year-old has at least 17 aliases and four Social Security numbers. More importantly, the death certificate, filed with the Houston bureau of vital statistics, said Dickerson died Dec. 23 of a heart attack and was buried Dec. 28. But the cemetery and mortuary listed on the document could not be found, and the doctor who signed it apparently is fictitious.

"Given Mr. Dickerson's history of pulling cons, it didn't seem plausible," said Pete Weir, a deputy district attorney in Golden, Colo.

Soon after Jefferson County, Colo., investigators concluded the death certificate seemed fraudulent, Dickerson was arrested and identified.

Dickerson went to court in Jefferson County on Dec. 14, read a presentence report for his attempted felony theft conviction, then walked out of the courthouse and skipped his sentencing, authorities said.

Colorado plans to ask for Dickerson's extradition, Weir said. Authorities said Dickerson faces aggravated robbery and kidnapping charges in Roanoke, Va.

Other than the Bell suit, other lawsuits are pending against Odessa, Bell noted. In his suit, Bell is being represented by Midland lawyer Paul Bohannon. Odessa is being represented by Austin lawyer Shannon Ratliff.

The Bell suit was transferred to Stanton in 1984 upon motions by the city of Odessa counsel, who claimed a fair and impartial trial in Midland on the case would be unlikely due to the "great prejudice against persons living in" Odessa and Ector County and because of the publicity of Odessa's discharging of effluent into the draw.

The case went through several postponements in 1988 alone. Bell said that — despite the flooding and saturated fields — he tries to return acreage into production.

"Odessa keeps acting like it is permanent damage. Well, it's not," he said of his farmland. "If they would quit that (discharging), then it wouldn't be. And I try to put it back in (into cotton production) every year. Some years I grow a good crop, and get to gather it. And then other years, it just floods me."

At times, the draw contains the water, "depending on wet weather," he said. "It's the sewer water that keeps that draw saturated. And then we have wet weather, wet conditions, more (water) comes down there and messes up" and farmland.

Monahans Draw handles a natural flow, he said.

Several years ago, Midland dealt with a similar problem on and along Midland Draw and ultimately built a pipeline to carry the city's effluent to holding ponds in the Spraberry area for use on agricultural land.

"Midland had exactly the same problem and exactly the same deal," Bell said. "And Midland was forced to correct their problem. And I think sooner or later, Odessa will be forced to correct their problem, also."

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown, who individually and in concert with the Commissioners' Court and the Midland City Council has dealt with Texas Water Commission and Odessa over Monahans Draw, said that "probably everybody up and down the draw is watching" the Bell court case against Odessa.

"They (Odessa) were constantly in violation until they got that new (treatment) plant going" in recent years, he said.

"It's my understanding it's probably one of the cleanest coming out of the plant," Brown said.

"Here again, the water's coming out. What are they going to do with it? They bought the place before water was coming down. Now water's coming down."

The county was concerned about the possible contamination of underground water along farm, ranch and residential land bordering the draw and about the draw's water becoming breeding grounds for mosquitoes.

"We have been out money because of the mosquito problem," Brown said. "Some years, it's bad. Some years it isn't."

"There's no telling how many times we (the county) have dumped larvae up and down that thing to get the larvae out of it. We've put those little dickens (larva-eating fish, guppies) in there and kept it pretty much in check."

"We were hollering about getting the water cleaned up, do something with it, irrigate with it, or raise peanuts," Brown recalled. "Do something, recycle it. There is a number of places that recycle (wastewater). They were studying it about 10 years ago."

Monahans Draw "affects a number of our people there," he said. "Right now, we are just going to sit back and watch, and see what happens with this case."

TRIAL

Madden somberly read the names of those killed in the accident from his report: Ascension "Chon" Ramirez Sr., 38, and his daughters, Amy Michelle Ramirez, 16, and Amanda Rose Ramirez, Derek Ryan Sanchez, 7, and Amanda Kaye Harker, 16 months old.

When he approached the truck and helped the injured Richburg from it, Madden smelled alcohol on Richburg's breath, Madden testified.

The first witness was Yolanda Sanchez Ramirez, who was driving the car at the time of the accident. She told jurors engine trouble forced her to try and reach a crossover to a convenience store and a pay telephone. As the car rolled into a crossover, her husband "Chon" got out and began to push the car, she said.

Defense attorney Roy Bell wondered aloud several times why she failed to turn on one of several earlier crossovers, and why they would attempt to cross a busy Highway 80.

"No traffic was coming when my husband started pushing the car," Ms. Ramirez told the attorney. She said she was trying to reach the Runway 7 store near Midland International Airport.

Schorre also then quizzed her about the traffic that night. "Before you entered the highway, did you look back to the east," Schorre asked.

"Yes," she said.

"Did you see any headlights at all?" the prosecutor asked.

"No," she replied.

Ms. Ramirez suffered a broken foot in the wreck.

From Staff Reports

Midlander Lawrence Culver was injured in a one-vehicle accident north of San Angelo Monday night, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Culver's two children Police Roundup were in the car at the time of the Monday night accident, and one was injured enough to require hospitalization, the DPS said.

Culver, 39, a local businessman, suffered internal injuries and cuts and was taken to Shannon Memorial Hospital in San Angelo, according to the accident report. This morning he was hospitalized in the intensive care unit, and asked that information about his condition not be released, according to Charlotte Drone, nursing coordinator at Shannon.

The accident occurred at 9:25 p.m. Monday, on U.S. Highway 87, six miles north of San Angelo in Tom Green County, the DPS report said.

Culver was driving a 1983 Chevrolet station wagon which ran off the right side of the road, then struck a concrete embankment, according to the report.

Lauren Culver, 6, suffered a broken leg and was hospitalized at Shannon. Two-year-old Cory Culver was in the car but was not injured, the report said.

House franchise

AUSTIN (AP) — A $200 million franchise tax bill the Texas House would pass the state budget, Speaker says.

The House approved which would yield over three years, with Tuesday. That sent the Senate, where quickly approved it with a 13-0 vote.

"What do we do with balance our budget, now short of doing reporters."

At least a two-thirds in the 150-member member Senate to allow effect immediately want quick enactment of a franchise tax bill so that the bill "would not be available at this point. But he added, "We're still a billion."

The measure is designed to capture that the comptroller filed for use by the next two-year budget of lawsuits challenge laws.

A House vote on the measure was scheduled for Tuesday but was postponed after Rep. James Hurry, D-Galveston, asked for the delay with which the bill proceeded. The bill last week in the House later was approved by hearing by the Committee, which the Committee to take full House voted on.

Lewis and Gov. Bill also supports the measure. The bill is not a tax speaker calls it a needed because of Hurry said the bill try and plug those holes about as a result of the bill would require allowing corporations.

STATE

House OKs corporate franchise tax legislation

AUSTIN (AP) — A $279 million corporate franchise tax bill approved by the Texas House would help balance the state budget, Speaker Gib Lewis says.

The House approved the bill, which would yield the $279 million over three years, with a 142-3 vote Tuesday. That sent the measure to the Senate, where a committee quickly approved the legislation with a 13-0 vote.

"What do we do with it? We try to balance our budget, which we are now short of doing," Lewis told reporters.

At least a two-thirds vote is needed in the 150-member House and 31-member Senate to allow a bill to take effect immediately. Lawmakers want quick enactment on the franchise tax bill so it can be applied to the tax notices that must be mailed to corporations March 15.

The bill "would narrow that gap between what we need and what is available at this point," Lewis said. But he added, "We're not there yet. We're still a billion dollars off."

The measure is part of a package designed to capture about $1 billion that the comptroller has not certified for use by the Legislature in the next two-year budget period because of lawsuits challenging state tax laws.

A House vote on the bill initially was scheduled for Monday, but action was postponed at the request of Rep. James Hury, bill sponsor.

Hury, D-Galveston, had said he asked for the delay because of the speed with which the measure has proceeded. The bill was introduced last week in the House, and two days later was approved without a public hearing by the Ways and Means Committee, which Hury heads.

The postponement allowed a public hearing by the Senate Finance Committee to take place before the full House voted on the bill.

Lewis and Gov. Bill Clements, who also supports the measure, have said the bill is not a tax increase. The speaker calls it a "clarification" needed because of legal challenges.

Hury said the bill "is an attempt to try and plug those loopholes brought about as a result of court cases."

The bill would repeal a provision allowing corporations that do busi-

County can't accept 'gift' of half of official's salary

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — George D. Shaffer apparently will be forced to accept more than $21,000 he wants to give back to Nueces County, officials said.

Shaffer ran for county commissioner on a promise to cut his pay in half if elected. He tried to do that after taking office this year, but state law apparently won't allow him to return the money.

He asked the county auditor's office to reduce his pay by $21,654, half of the $43,308 salary for commissioners in 1988, but a recent state attorney general's opinion indicates he will have to take the money back.

Although the opinion prompted by a similar case in Uvalde County was not requested by Nueces County officials, it probably applies to the situation here, said Nueces County Attorney Carlos Valdez.

Valdez said unless Shaffer finds some other legal way to reduce his pay, "It looks like we'll have to make Mr. Shaffer take his salary."

The Feb. 23 opinion, requested by Uvalde County Attorney David R. White Jr., states that a county commissioner does not have the power to set a salary different from that voted on by the entire commissioners court.

"It is not within the province of an individual commissioner to determine that his salary differ from the amount set by the commissioners court," the opinion states. "A county commissioner may not make a donation of a portion of his salary to the county."

He received his full pay on Jan. 31 and then returned it, asking that half of a 1988 commissioner's salary be deducted.

"Hell, I don't need the money," Shaffer said in a telephone interview. "Everybody knows that."

The reduction amounts to 48.6 percent of a 1989 commissioner's salary of $44,604. Commissioners also receive a $5,400 annual car allowance.

Shaffer, a 58-year-old attorney, said he had not had time to study his options since receiving the opinion Monday.

"I'm just going to abide by the law," Shaffer said Tuesday. "I haven't decided whether to give it to charity or something."

The attorney general's opinion states that part of a salary cannot be returned to the county because the Legislature has not given counties the authority to accept donations from a county commissioner.

Lawyer thrilled by ruling against Mitsubishi Aircraft

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin lawyer said it was a "great feeling" when he and the Fulbright & Jaworski law firm were exonerated in a suit alleging legal malpractice, negligence and fraud filed by Mitsubishi Aircraft International Inc.

A jury Tuesday rejected a bid by Mitsubishi for a judgment of up to $9.5 million against the Houston-based law firm, which Mitsubishi claimed was guilty of legal malpractice.

"It's a great feeling after a six-week trial to have a jury come in with that kind of result," Austin lawyer Pike Powers said after arriving at the courtroom a few minutes after the verdict was delivered.

Sidney Ravkind, attorney for plaintiff Mitsubishi, said he was "appalled" at the decision.

The jury, when began deliberations Monday after 24 days of testimony, returned to the courtroom late Tuesday afternoon and delivered to State District Judge Pete Lowry a finding for Fulbright and Jaworski.

In the suit, Mitsubishi claimed lawyers acting on behalf of a Fulbright & Jaworski partner made changes in an aircraft contract to the detriment of Mitsubishi.

Since Mitsubishi had been a client of Fulbright & Jaworski for about 20 years, it asserted that the law firm and its lawyers had a responsibility to look out for Mitsubishi's interests.

At the center of the dispute was a 1984 contract to buy a Mitsubishi Diamond II business jet executed by a group of Austin businessmen that included Fulbright & Jaworski partner Powers, who is also chairman of the Austin Chamber of Commerce.

Ravkind, representing Mitsubishi, told jurors during closing arguments "the time is now and the place is here" to restore decency and honor to the legal profession.

Mitsubishi attorneys asked jurors to award the highest damages possible, about $9.5 million.

Defense attorney Richard McCarroll called Mitsubishi "a loosey-goosey organization" and told the jury that some claims made by the company were "outrageous" and "a joke."

Dallas decides fate of drug treatment center for indigents

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas County Commissioners Court will decide today whether to give a drug treatment center serving many indigents more money to maintain its current operations.

The decision will come following pleas to the court from indigent patients who use the Hillvale Alcohol and Drug Treatment Center.

The rehabilitation program is known as the last stop for many with little or no money for treatment. It will be forced to fire half of its 22-member staff and evict about two dozen patients if the county votes not to fund the center, officials said.

Dana Danchik, a 29-year-old mother of three, told the court she was an intravenous drug user who desperately needed help offered at the center.

"Cocaine had me in its grip," she said. "But for the last 10 days, I've managed to turn my life around. If I don't finish this drug treatment program, I'm going to die."

Ms. Danchik said she cannot afford the full treatment program she needs, and is begging the county to help her by releasing money to the center.

She was among several Hillvale clients who pleaded with commissioners to help fund the troubled drug-treatment facility.

"We've always operated in the red and on the back of a shoestring budget," said Hillvale spokesman Reginald Willis. "The staff has gone without pay for years. There's no other center that reaches out to these people and says 'We care.'"

Willis said Hillvale is the only facility in Dallas that treats indigent drug addicts and alcoholics.

THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will come to a crossroads. The choices you make in November will help determine your destiny. Your intuition is a terrific asset. Listen to your elders, not your peers. Self-improvement programs are favored this summer. Spruce up your wardrobe and shed or gain those extra pounds. A close relationship undergoes changes that will benefit everyone involved.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Desi Arnaz, actress Jennifer Jones, Mikhail Gorbachev, Rep. Robert H. Michel, author Tom Wolfe, "Dr. Seuss" Theodore Geisel, singer Karen Carpenter, Texas statesman Sam Houston, slugger Mel Ott, composer Kurt Weill, rock star Jon Bon Jovi.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not pursue too many interests right now. Best results will come from focusing on one thing at a time. Work with a passion! You can bring a project in on time and under budget.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You know exactly where you are going and will not be taken in easily. Beware of attractive lures. Luxury purchases are best postponed. Wait until you have better financing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your new ideas are exciting. Do not let a jealous individual throw cold water on them. Changes in a relationship bring quick dividends. Be prepared to handle family upsets. Emphasize your objectivity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are in an affectionate mood. Get some expert advice before making an important move. Substantial financial backing could become available, allowing you to advance a cherished personal goal. Choose partners with care.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You start the day in a bouncy, energized mood. Make headway while others are asleep at the switch. Put your energy and enthusiasm to the best possible use. Your leadership qualities command respect.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtaining everyone's approval is impossible. Loosen your grip on the family purse strings and talk things over. A child will respond to new responsibilities better than to lectures — so will mate. Be tactful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Creative endeavors are your best bet for raising extra cash. Travel can help cement a valuable relationship.

ship. Correspondence can be misleading. Read between the lines to avoid making a costly mistake.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You find yourself front and center at work today. Beware of someone who could be setting you up. Steer clear of a friend's shady financial scheme.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you feel a relationship slipping away, sit down and put your cards on the table. Get partner to do the same. Your ambition rises to the surface.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Resist the temptation to skip meals or sleep. You need to build up your strength. Consider buying property near the water. It is easier to turn a profit now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are in a more conservative mood and easier to deal with. Seize an opportunity to be part of an ambitious project. Someone will back you when the right time comes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Secondary duties could become a top priority in your plan. Hang on to procedures that work well, but be open to new ideas. Do not dismiss high-tech advances out of hand.

Opening lead: King of ♦

We know some bridge players who insist that they never misguess a finesse. That's all well and good, but we would still prefer to be in a position where we don't have to guess at all!

South's four-spade opening bid is acceptable in third seat. In first or second position, you would open one spade—never preempt opposite an unpassed partner on a hand with two aces. It makes it impossible for partner to judge what to do, should the opponents compete, if you are going to have that much in the way of defensive values.

West led the king of diamonds, ruffed by declarer. The problem was simple—with two sure heart losers, declarer simply had to hold his club losers to one to make his game. The trouble was that a finesse for the jack could be taken against either East or West.

The good guessers draw trumps and lead a club to the king. Later, they get back to the table with a trump and run the ten of clubs. Making four-odd. The not-soskilled guessers take the club finesse the other way and go down.

The good players avoid any guess. After ruffing the king of diamonds, they overtake the queen of spades with the king and ruff a diamond high. The seven of spades to the nine provides the entry to ruff dummy's last diamond. Then they cash the ace of hearts and exit with a heart.

The defenders can take their remaining heart winner, but whichever one is then on lead is endplayed. A red suit gives declarer a ruff-and-sluff, allowing him to get rid of a club. A club return picks up the jack for declarer. Either way, he cannot lose more than one club trick. Try it.

Fort Worth cattle broker rounds up top honors at Miss USA pageant

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A Fort Worth brunette, Gretchen Polhemus, was crowned Miss USA, marking the fifth consecutive victory for a Texan.

"They called my name and I was shocked," the 23-year-old cattle broker said after she won the pageant Tuesday night. Miss Polhemus said she thought her runner-up, Jill Scheffert of Oklahoma City, was the winner.

Richard Guy of Guyrex Associates of El Paso, director of the Texas USA pageant, said the agency's fifth winning entry in the Miss USA Pageant just showed that "classy, elegant — today women" are victorious. Guy was in the Texas cheering section waving a Lone Star flag.

He and his partner, Rex Holt, have developed into pageant gurus, coaching the last five Texas contestants, as well as the 1977 Texas entry, to victory through their agency, Guyrex Associates.

Guyrex last week was featured on an ABC-TV "20-20" segment that detailed the rigorous training given winning contestants represented by the agency.

A "20-20" team was filming Guy again Tuesday night.

Miss Polhemus was crowned at the conclusion of a dazzling, internationally televised two-hour production on CBS from the Mobile Civic Center. Dick Clark and Angie Dickinson served as masters of ceremonies.

"I'm so proud of her," Miss Polhemus' mother, Pat, said, hugging a "lucky" stuffed toy cow.

Prizes and gifts amounting to $200,000 goes with the title.

The other finalists, besides Miss Oklahoma, were Miss New Jersey Deborah Lee Hux; Miss Louisiana Elizabeth Primm; and Miss Georgia Michele Nemeth.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bryant Gumbel, who has sniped at David Letterman, Connie Chung and Linda Ellerbee and others, is at it again, this time firing a rocket at fellow "Today" show staffers such as Willard Scott and Gene Shalit.

In a 6-month-old memo made public by New York Newsday Tuesday, he accused weatherman Scott of holding NBC's top-rated morning talk "hostage" to his "bad taste."

He said consumer advocate David Horowitz is a "walking cliché." He said Shalit's movie reviews are often too late and his interviews "not very good."

Medical correspondent Art Ulene's theme weeks were dubbed "boring," and many of New York-based consumer correspondent Betty Furness' reports "too local."

Jane Pauley escaped mention.

Her co-host, who wrote the memo last August when he was negotiating his three-year, $7 million contract, could not be reached for comment Tuesday because he was on vacation.

It's not the first time Gumbel's grumbles have made news. In a September issue of Sports Illustrated, he recounted his disenchantment with Chung, Ellerbee and Letterman, among others.

Even Pauley, who keeps a scrupulously happy face, seemed exasperated by Gumbel's long-time war of words with the host of NBC's "Late Night," which stemmed from Letterman's bullhorn disruption of a prime-time "Today" special. During an interview with Don Johnson and Philip Michael Thomas of "Miami Vice," Letterman shouted from an upper floor of the NBC building, "I'm Larry Grossman, president of NBC News, and I'm not wearing pants!"

NBC's producer later confirmed that the bit had been arranged, though not cleared with the "Today" stars. Pauley said even she wasn't angry at Letterman, and she was the one doing the interview when the disruption occurred, not Gumbel.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Konrad Lorenz, a renowned Austrian scientist who won the Nobel prize for his behavioral studies of humans and animals, died Monday of kidney failure at age 85.

Lorenz was famous both for his groundbreaking research and for the best-selling studies of human and animal behavior that won him a worldwide reputation as a great humanist. In 1973, his behavioral research won him the Nobel Prize for Medicine along with the scientists Karl von Frisch and Nikolaas Tinbergen.

In science, Lorenz was best known for his discovery of a process known as imprinting, or the rapid and almost irreversible learning process that occurs in early childhood, bonding animals to their biological mothers.

But he showed the process could be changed, demonstrating that mallard ducklings, for example, would happily follow a human who greeted them shortly after birth and imitated quacking.

Beginning in the 1960s, Lorenz authored a series of best-selling books including "On Aggression," which was issued in German in 1963 and in English in 1966.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors are investigating allegations that some physicians prescribed excessive quantities of drugs for actress Elizabeth Taylor, the District Attorney's Office said.

The Oscar Award-winning actress is not herself the target of a criminal investigation, spokesman Al Albergate said Tuesday.

Miss Taylor admitted in a 1987 magazine interview that she had undergone treatment for addiction to painkillers and alcohol. A call to Miss Taylor's publicist wasn't answered after hours Tuesday.

Albergate said the investigation involves allegations that at least two doctors during the past year prescribed excessive amounts of various opiates, barbiturates and stimulants to her "without medical justification."

He did not identify the drugs or the doctors, nor did he say when the probe began or what prompted it. Miss Taylor has not met with authorities, he said.

Consolidated ready to close local branch

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

True to its name, Consolidated Federal Bank F.S.B., is combining local operations as part of a statewide streamlining program.

The consolidation, effective at the end of business on March 17, will claim one Midland and one Odessa branch among its casualties. The former Vista Savings branch at One North Park at Midkiff and Loop 250 will close, as will the branch at 5930 W. University in Odessa, according to Wanda Haggard marketing manager for the Dallas-based federal savings bank.

Consolidated customers in Midland will be able to transact business at the remaining branch, the former First Federal Savings location at 4300 N. Midland Drive.

After the March 17 closings, Consolidated will have four Odessa branches — three former Vista locations and one First Federal office. The West University branch being closed is a former Vista location.

The automated teller machines at the closing branches were taken out of service late yesterday.

The Midland closing will put two former Vista employees out of work, said branch manager Wanda Stone, one of the two soon-to-be separated workers.

"Branch office consolidation is part of an overall effort to create a responsive, customer service-oriented savings bank that will focus on both its lending and deposit activities in the communities we serve," Ms. Haggard said.

Consolidated was chartered Dec. 22, 1988 to acquire 15 insolvent thrifts across the state as part of the Federal Home Loan Bank's Southwest Plan. The federal savings bank has a network of 46 branches and $3 billion in assets statewide.

'Point man' sells Bush S&L plan

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — President Bush's point man on the savings and loan crisis urged a group representing smaller banks Tuesday to enthusiastically support the administration's plan for rescuing the thrift industry even though they may have reservations about some aspects.

Richard C. Breeden, who oversaw drafting of the president's plan, told a meeting of the Independent Bankers Association of America that quibbling over details of the plan could dangerously delay urgently needed action.

The administration has estimated the cost of rescuing insolvent or teetering S&Ls at $90 billion and the weak one-third of the industry is losing money at the rate of $40 million a day.

"At $40 million a day, we shouldn't launch into a six-month debate," Breeden told the bankers, meeting at the Anaheim Hilton Hotel. "We simply have a huge problem and we simply have to get on with it."

The president has proposed spending $39.9 billion of tax money over the next decade to finance the bailout. Additionally, savings and loans and to a lesser extent banks would pay more for their federal deposit insurance.

Members of the independent bankers group, which represents community banks with assets of $100 million or less, have objected that higher insurance premiums would place a disproportionate burden on them.

Prices move ahead after slack day

From Staff and Wire Reports

The recent rally in the heating oil pits ran out of energy Tuesday, with futures prices pulling back slightly. However, gasoline futures rose and crude oil prices posted slim gains.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the April contract for West Texas Intermediate, gained 1 cent to finish at $18.15 a barrel.

By midmorning today, the contract gained another 15 cents, standing at $18.30.

Wholesale home heating oil for March delivery fell 0.20 cent to settle at 52.45 cents a gallon.

John H. O'Connell, an analyst at Refco Inc., said heating oil prices have gone up recently due to tight supplies and buying ahead of the expiration Tuesday of the March contract.

March unleaded gasoline rose 0.14 cent to end the day at 50.81 cents a gallon. The April contract gained 0.09 cent, settling at 51.57 cents.

Dollar higher in moderate trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against nearly all major currencies in moderate European trading early today. Gold prices were slightly lower.

Dealers said market participants sold British pounds for dollars in Asian markets before today's release of British trade figures for January.

The pound fell to a three-week low against the dollar on market expectations that the British trade deficit will widen to $3.2 billion from $2.9 billion in December.

The pound fell in London to $1.7350 from $1.7430 late Tuesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.53 Japanese yen to a closing 127.68 yen. Later, in London, it edged up further to 127.80 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $386.50 a troy ounce, down from $386.75 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $386.10.

Silver bullion fell in London to a bid price of $5.84 a troy ounce from $5.86 late Tuesday.

Stock market climbs 8 points

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose Tuesday in what analysts described as a reflex response to last week's sharp decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 8.03 points to 2,258.39.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 911 up, 531 down and 516 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board totaled 147.43 million shares, up from 139.90 million in Monday's session.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market gained $8.42 billion, or 0.30 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 0.54 to 162.49.

Standard & Poor's industrial index advanced 1.24 to 333.48, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.04 at 288.86.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 0.77 to 399.71. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 322.47, up 1.05.

ATC finals ClayDesta Communications buyout

MIDLAND (SWN) — Clayton W. Williams Jr., announced that Atlanta-based Advanced Telecommunications Corp. (ATC) has finalized the previously announced acquisition of ClayDesta Communications, the largest long distance company headquartered in Texas.

Williams received a total of $43 million, $33 million in cash and $10 million in subordinated debentures for ClayDesta, the privately-held company he founded in 1984.

ATC will continue to market in Texas under the ClayDesta name according to Williams.

Amoco, Exxon top Texas oil, gas producers

AUSTIN (AP) — Amoco and Exxon were the top oil and gas producers in Texas last year, the Railroad Commission said Tuesday.

Amoco led oil producers with average daily production of 192,584 barrels, followed by Exxon with 166,976 barrels.

The commission said Exxon was the top gas producer, averaging nearly 921 million cubic feet of gas per day. Mobil was second, averaging 645.4 million cubic feet per day.

R.J. Reynolds scraps 'smokeless' cigarette

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has scrapped its Premier brand "smokeless" cigarette after five months of market testing, concluding that consumers didn't like the product's smell or taste.

The company's move announced Tuesday followed widespread criticism of the cigarette by major health organizations. It also marked the first significant product shift since the parent R.J.R. Nabisco Inc. was acquired by a private investment firm earlier this year for a record $24.53 billion.

FCC chairman seeks AT&T price overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Communications Commission said he will press toward overhaul of AT&T's pricing system despite lawmaker concern the plan will lead to windfall profits at the expense of consumers.

After testimony before skeptical members of the House telecommunications and finance subcommittee, FCC chairman Dennis Patrick said Tuesday the agency will vote on the "rate cap" plan for interstate services on March 16. The plan would take effect July 1 if approved unless blocked by Congress.

Texas Eastern sells E&P for $1.4 billion

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Eastern Corp. said today a British petroleum company has agreed to pay about $1.4 billion for its oil and gas production and exploration units in a deal that would help finance its acquisition by Panhandle Eastern Corp.

The sale to Enterprise Oil Plc includes Texas Eastern's holdings in the United Kingdom and Norwegian sectors of the North Sea, Denmark, Indonesia, the Netherlands and Alaska, the company said.

The holdings include 13 producing oil and gas fields, six fields that are under development and 14 undeveloped fields.

Investors bilked of $150 million in scheme

DALLAS (AP) — Federal investigators say a currency investment program under criminal investigation in Dallas may have taken $150 million from investors in 10 states.

Investigators said the investment plan, operated from last July to Feb. 15 by WWG Investments Inc., a brokerage firm in the suburban Las Colinas development, is the target of state securities investigations or criminal inquiries in Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

The program was banned Feb. 15 by the Kansas securities commissioner after an investigation produced evidence that more than 100 Kansas residents had been recruited for it by a Fort Worth marketing firm.

Principals in that firm, H&O Marketing, filed suit in a Tarrant County court Friday seeking more than $17 million.

Franchise owner criticizes Southland 'sharecropping'

By JENNIFER DIXON

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Watson was home asleep, he says, when Southland Corp. officials, accompanied by two uniformed, off-duty police officers, tried to take his 7-Eleven franchise store "by force" before dawn one Saturday.

Southland had given Watson three days' notice that he was in breach of his franchise contract when company officials swept into the store and tried unsuccessfully to take control of the safe and rip the door to his office from its hinges, Watson says.

A 7-Eleven franchise owner for about 10 years, Watson accuses Southland of "retail sharecropping." He is leading a bitter fight against the giant Dallas-based chain by the Capital Area 7-Eleven Franchise Owners Association.

At issue is Southland's formula for splitting 7-Eleven profits. Watson and other owners contend it doesn't account for the costs of running stores in the inner city, where labor costs more, shoplifting is more frequent and managers have to contend with neighborhood violence.

Southland officials say they have considered the complaints and improved franchisers' terms.

Corporate officials also said they entered Watson's store before dawn to avoid interfering with business. Kathleen Callahan-Guion, manager of the chain's Capital division, said the safe had to be seized because Watson was in a "serious deficit position" and had become a "serious financial risk."

"We were trying to protect our security interests," Ms. Callahan-Guion said.

The District of Columbia City Council and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have been drawn into the dispute, and the owners association plans a Capitol Hill march Wednesday to protest the corporation.

Franchise owners claim they aren't making enough money under their Southland contracts, which give most franchise owners 48 percent of the stores' gross profits.

Out of that owners must pay wages and cover inventory losses from shoplifting and employee theft. Southland is responsible for leases, taxes, utilities and other expenses.

"Sometimes they (franchise owners) are getting 48 percent of nothing," said Fred Rasheed, national director of the NAACP's economic development program.

Ms. Callahan-Guion said the company has been making significant changes to help its D.C. stores, and about a third now get a 52 percent cut to Southland's 48 percent.

But Watson said inner-city owners' shares fall short because of their circumstances.

Sagging sales

Sales of existing homes fell 7.4 percent in January, the biggest decline in two years, reflecting a return to normal buying patterns following a December sales spurt.

The National Association of Realtors said Tuesday existing single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.63 million units in January following a 5.7 percent rise in December. The decline was expected, given December's sales pace, the fastest in two years.

The decline did not dampen prices. The median sales price rose 3.2 percent from the December level to $91,500.

Largest U.S. retailer gets new prices, look

Associated Press

Employees at Sears' 824 stores across the nation hustled today to complete price reductions on 1.5 billion pieces of merchandise before the nation's largest retailer reopened its doors following a 42-hour facelift.

Workers changed prices Tuesday on everything — including light bulbs, toasters and polished door knobs — as Sears, Roebuck & Co. prepared for a new retailing strategy it hopes will win customers.

By the noon reopening, employees also had to change signs and displays, take inventory and clean up.

"The worst was the screwdrivers," said Chris Skinner, a high school freshman who spent much of the day at the Northland Mall store in Columbus, Ohio, repricing baby booties and toddlers' dresses. "You had to take them all down, clean each one by hand, then put them all back."

Texaco mulls plant expansion

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Texaco Inc. is considering capital expansions at the company's two chemical plants at Port Arthur, a Texaco official says.

James Kinnear, president and chief executive officer of Texaco Inc., would not provide details on the expansions under review, except to say he sees chemical manufacturing as a good value-added business for Texaco.

Kinnear's remarks came Tuesday during a trip to visit employees and express thanks for their support during the company's legal battles with Pennzoil Co. and Texaco's subsequent filing for bankruptcy under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

Texaco sold 50 percent of its Port Arthur refinery, among other assets, to the Saudi Arabian Oil Co. in 1988 to provide cash after it agreed to a $3 billion settlement with Pennzoil.

The Texaco refinery here is now operated by Star Enterprise, a joint venture owned by Texaco and Saudi Arabian Oil.

Kinnear said Texaco has concluded selling assets, adding that a sale of its chemical division would be highly unlikely.

Opening Monday is HONEY & MARY'S BAR-BUE & BURGERS, located in the former Continental Railways station at 703 W. Wall.

Mary Warren, who owns the restaurant with her husband Ellis, says the menu will feature barbecued ribs, brisket, sausage, chopped beef and chicken and hamburgers. In addition, there will be homemade peach or cherry cobbler and banana pudding.

Hours are from 10:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Also opening Monday is MORRIS CAFFY TV & APPLIANCES, which is relocating from 3306 W. Illinois to a new, larger store at in the Western Park Plaza shopping center on Andrews Highway.

Caffy said the move is "in anticipation of more business. Also, we felt we had outgrown the old store and needed more sales floor space, storage space and larger service area." The new store, about 2,000 square feet larger than the old location, is also more convenient and in a higher traffic area, he noted.

He anticipates adding new lines to his current inventory, which includes RCA, Zenith and General Electric electronic televisions and video recorders and Whirlpool, Hotpoint, Amana, Westinghouse and Caloric appliances.

His recent moving sale reduced inventory about 50 percent, he estimated, which means lower moving costs and less chance of damaged goods.

In an expansion mode is WESTERN SIZZLIN' STEAKHOUSE, 515 Andrews Hwy.

Manager Kevin Brown says a considerable increase in business has prompted an approximate 840-sq. ft. addition to the restaurant.

The addition, being done by Ellis & Moore of Midland, will increase the restaurant's seating and salad bar area. In addition, the restrooms will be relocated, as will a smaller private dining room that will seat 25 to 30 people. Two Floridians — Brian Chamberlain and Brian Vaughn of Pensacola — are assisting with the interior woodwork. Brown says the two specialize in interior woodwork for the Western Sizzlin' chain.

Brown estimates the renovations will be completed in 60 to 90 days.

Midland-based KENT LUBRICATION CENTERS has purchased four quick lube centers from AfcoLube of Abilene. Kent will convert the four to AfcoLube Fast Oil Change centers as soon as possible.

The acquisition gives Kent 14 centers in Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Abilene, Big Spring and Wichita Falls. The four AfcoLube centers will accept the Kent Oil credit card in addition to the Afco and West-Go cards, and three of the four will continue to offer Afco gasoline.

Insurance services for the Midland, Ector and Upton counties' FARM BUREAU have been consolidated into a single location at 1346 S. Fairgrounds. This move results from the insurance services coming once again under the direction of the bureau's board of directors.

The sales staff has the same phone number, but the claims staff can be reached at 683-5720.

They also have complained that the president's plan does little to remedy what they see as inequities between regulation of their industry and the credit unions with which they compete.

One aspect of the plan that has drawn little opposition is the president's proposal that federal regulators should rein in what many see as overly aggressive management in the thrift industry. Under the Bush plan, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which oversees the S&L business, would be placed under control of the Treasury, as has long been the case with bank regulation.

"Critical decisions of the bank board over the last decade concerning capital adequacy, capital averaging, accounting rules, chartering standards and other areas of thrift supervision do not seem to have adequately protected the public market-place and the taxpayers," Breeden said.

"As a result, we must instill accountability at the top to help prevent a repetition of this situation."

The president's aide drew sustained applause from the bankers when he reminded them the president wants to spend an additional $50 million a year to prosecute dishonest thrift managers.

"The president is determined to see that those who have caused massive losses to American society through criminal wrongdoing will be sought out, pursued relentlessly and placed behind bars where they belong for a long time," Breeden said.

A congressional study found fraud played some role in up to one-third of thrift failures to date.

SEARS

Sears intends to keep its prices low year-round, instead of marking them up and down periodically for sales. This marks a major change for the retailer, which helped to pioneer the concept of the sale.

Last year, Sears sold 55 percent of its goods at "sale" prices.

The company said it still will run some sales, but for reasons like simply clearing out lawn mowers in the fall. Otherwise, it will use the strategy that retailers call "everyday low pricing."

Sears, in adopting the strategy, joins a growing list, that includes K mart Corp., Dayton Hudson Corp.'s

FDIC proposes regulations on brokered funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. is drafting regulations that would require banks and savings and loan associations to get its approval before seeking so-called brokered deposits in their efforts to expand.

Many experts contend that the deposits put together by brokers in $100,000 blocks — the maximum insured by the government — at above-market interest rates and then loaned out for high-risk ventures such as shopping centers caused some S&Ls to sink into insolvency as the loans went bad.

FDIC Chairman William Seidman told the Senate Banking Committee on Tuesday that the regulations would be proposed "very shortly."

Agency officials said the regulation initially would apply only to the 8,000 banks that the agency supervises until Congress completes legislation proposed by President Bush that would put S&Ls under FDIC jurisdiction.

But Seidman said it would apply to S&Ls then as well. And officials said that they expect Congress to act on President Bush's S&L bailout package well before the FDIC can issue the new brokered deposit regulations in their final form.

Under the proposal, any bank or savings institution seeking to increase its loan portfolio by more than 36 percent a year through the use of brokered deposits or any other means would have to get prior approval from the FDIC, officials said.

"We moved our telephones outside because the drug dealers were dealing on the telephones. We had the telephones taken out ... so that we could get rid of the drug dealers," Watson said.

"These are all the kind of problems that we run into in the inner city. And to walk away with $20,000 or $30,000 or even $40,000 (a year), it's absolutely ridiculous. In some cases, we're putting our lives on the line."

The D.C. franchise owners also complain about Southland's practice of closing stores with 72 hours' notice, although the termination policy is in the franchising contract.

The D.C. City Council approved emergency legislation in January, aimed at Southland, requiring corporations to give franchise owners 60 days to get their finances in order before closing a store.

The owners association said Southland has terminated eight franchise agreements in the district since 1987.

Southland has about 7,000 7-Eleven stores nationwide, with about 3,000 operated by franchise owners and the rest by the company.

In Washington and the Maryland suburbs, 19 percent of the franchise owners are minority members, but they represent 66 percent of the problem stores — those with a high frequency of calls to police for shoplifting, assaults and other violence, Watson said.

The NAACP began trying to mediate between minority owners and Southland about a year ago, Rasheed said, when questions were raised about inventory shortages among inner city minority owners.

Inventory shortages are subtracted from a franchise owners' equity fund, and when that reserve dips beneath a certain level, the company can declare the contract breached and seek to close the store.

"All over the country, franchisees ... were experiencing the same thing — inventory shortages and extreme difficulty in operating in a profitable manner," Rasheed said.

Watson said his business had been stable for years. After he became active in the owners association, Southland audits of his books were turning up big inventory shortages, including an $8,000 shortfall in one month, he said.

"We go back and we look through the books and could not find anything. I'm not saying that they caused these shortages, but I'm saying they can," Watson said.

"They control everything. The only thing we control is our employees. They control our paperwork."

They do the audits," he said. "We're supposed to be independent businessmen, but in essence, many of us are no more than managers with all the responsibilities of owners, because the losses are ours."

Said Rasheed: "It's a bad system. Southland shares in all of the gain and none of the pain."

Southland senior attorney Joyce Slocum Oxley said part of the problem could be that once a franchise owner gets a store running smoothly, the owner decides to try another venture and turns over 7-Eleven operation to a manager.

"He's not in the store, he's not controlling things, the inventory is subject to being pilfered from dishonest customers, and employees can also steal and do a lot of damage to the operation," Ms. Oxley said.

Christopher J. Burke of the Fair Franchising Coalition, a Washington advocacy group for franchise owners, contends Southland's financial situation is contributing to its policies.

The company's founding family borrowed $4 billion to take Southland private in a $4.9 billion leveraged buyout in 1987, and its real estate investments have been shattered by the Texas economy.

The company's $475 million, 42-story Cityplace Center in Dallas will be only half-full when Southland moves its headquarters there this month.

But spokeswoman Cecilia Norwood said the company is achieving every financial goal it has set for itself.

Interest on E bonds cannot be averaged

By BILL DOYLE

Q. The Series E, U.S. Savings Bond, I purchased in 1950 will reach "final maturity" and stop accumulating interest in 1990. And I will then have to pay federal income tax on all that interest. Is there any way that big lump of tax can be averaged over a number of years?

Doyle

A. The only way you can spread that tax over a period of time is by exchanging your E bonds for Series HH bonds. By doing that, you won't have to pay tax on the accrued E bond interest at the time of the exchange. That tax bite will be postponed until you redeem the HHs you receive in the exchange.

Then, you can redeem some of the HHs whenever you choose and pay part of the postponed tax each time you redeem HHs. You will, however, have to pay tax annually on HH bond interest.

Unlike E and EE bonds, on which interest builds up, H and HH bonds pay interest by check semiannually. The HH bonds now being issued pay interest at the annual rate of 6 percent. The federal income tax obligation on H and HH bond interest cannot be ducked or put off.

If you don't exchange your Es for HHs, you will be stuck with a fat tax bill. When Es reach final maturity and are not exchanged, you are required to pay federal income tax on all the accumulated interest — even if you don't redeem those E bonds. That unhappy fact comes as a great shock to many long-term savings bond holders.

E bonds issued before May 1952 reach final maturity 40 years after their issue dates. Your logical move will be to make the exchange right after your Es become 40 years old. The exchange must be made no later than one year after the Es' final maturity and must involve Es with redemption values — original cost plus accrued interest — of at least $500.

Q. I retired recently and need to know where I can go to exchange my E and EE bonds for HH bonds. I haven't found a person at any bank who knows anything about savings bonds, other than how to sell them to me. Can you help?

A. The actual exchange of Es and EEs for HHs is handled by Federal Reserve Banks and branches. The Es and EEs you want to exchange must be sent in, along with a filled out Form PD 3253.

Every local bank gets copies of that form and should be willing to help a customer complete it and then forward it and the bonds to a Fed bank or branch. If the banks you have contacted are run by dunderheads who don't know how this is done, you'll have to make it a do-it-yourself project.

There are 12 Federal Reserve Banks and 25 branches around the country. Get the name and address of the one serving your area from your local bank and handle this on your own.

Found a peanut

Text by Linda Anderson

Graphic by Elizabeth Edwin

What familiar product (A) is used to make cosmetics, (B) is immortalized in song and in print, and (C) tastes great with chocolate?

The answer, of course, is peanuts.

Peanuts have been around for a long, long time. According to information from the Texas Peanut Producers Board, a mummified peanut estimated to be more than 100,000 years old was found in the Republic of China. And South Americans are reported to have grown peanuts more than 2,000 years ago. "The ancient Incan and pre-Incan tribes buried their mummified dead with peanuts to give them 'well-balanced meals' on their long voyage," the board's information continued.

Spanish explorers are credited with bringing peanuts to Europe and Africa. Peanuts eventually arrived in North America, thanks in part to African slaves, who brought this favorite food source with them.

Although its history is ancient, the peanut has become a 20th century staple, and such a part of today's lifestyle that March has been named National Peanut Month. Chase's Annual Events says the month is set aside "To celebrate America's favorite nut — the peanut!"

And favorite nut it is — even though the Texas Peanut Producers Board states that "Peanuts aren't really nuts at all! Unlike real nuts, such as pecans or walnuts which grow on trees, peanuts are actually a kind of pea or legume ... Because peanuts have pods which develop underground, they are often called groundnuts. Others names for peanuts include goobers, goober peas, ground peas, monkey nuts, earthnuts and pindas."

BUT A peanut by any name still tastes good. Early settlers in this country grew peanuts as hog feed, but their descendants have found more tasty ways to use the little legume. Whether roasted, salted, chopped or ground into peanut butter, peanuts are a useful source of nutrition. Gayle Stephenson, marketing coordinator with the Texas Department of Agriculture, said peanuts are a good source of "protein, B vitamins, iron, potassium and some phosphates."

"Actually, they are very nutritious," she said. "Peanuts are not a complete protein, so it's a good idea to eat a grain source with peanuts to give a complete protein — that's your peanut butter sandwich."

Not only is a peanut butter sandwich a complete protein, it is the one food that saves thousands of picky eaters from certain starvation. Few children can resist a peanut butter sandwich, and those that can resist are usually won over when jelly is included in the sandwich.

"There are about 540 peanuts in a 12-ounce jar of peanut butter," according to Texas Peanut Producers Board information. "There are more than 30,000 peanut butter sandwiches in an acre of peanuts. By the time the average American schoolchild finishes high school, he or she will have eaten 1,500 peanut butter and jelly sandwiches."

Peanut butter was "invented in 1890 by a St. Louis physician seeking a nutritious, easily digested, high-protein food for some of his patients," the board's information said. Peanut butter, which by federal law must contain at least 90 percent peanuts and no artificial flavorings, sweeteners, color additives, vitamins or chemical preservatives, information continued, is "an excellent source of protein (7.8 grams per ounce), contains no cholesterol and the fat (14.4 grams per ounce) is mostly unsaturated. An ounce of peanut butter also contains only 6.4 grams of carbohydrate, making it acceptable for most diabetic diets."

Some people like to get creative with their peanut butter sandwiches.

Ms. Stephenson said she has been told about "peanut butter and mayonnaise (sandwich) — which I'm assured is wonderful." Her own favorite is "peanut butter and onion sandwich. I use Spring Sweet 115 (onions) which come from the Valley because they are very mild and sweet. I use dark bread (such as rye or pumpernickel) which has an intense flavor."

ACCORDING TO The World Book Encyclopedia, "about half of the peanuts consumed in the United States are eaten as peanut butter." But peanut-butter sandwiches are not the only use for the tasty stick-to-the-roof-of-your-mouth spread.

(By the way, fear of having peanut butter stick to the roof of your mouth is called arachibrityrphobia.)

Ancient plant researched for use as new food source

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A Louisiana State University researcher hopes to create a new high-protein food crop from a plant that fed American Indians and grows wild throughout eastern North America.

The "groundnut" or "rosary," formally known as Apios Americana, is a small climbing vine that produces clusters of edible pea-like seed pods and tubers along its roots, says William Blackmon, a professor of horticulture at LSU's Agricultural Experiment Station.

The plant, which contains about three times the crude protein of Irish potatoes, has been eaten by native Americans as far back as 3,000 B.C., Blackmon says.

"Historically, the plant is important because the Indians were eating it and they introduced it to us and very few crops native to North America have been domesticated," Blackmon says.

The plant is found from Canada south through the eastern United States climbing through bushes, over fallen trees and along sandy creek banks.

Because it is a legume, like peas, peanuts and soybeans, the groundnut produces nitrogen and therefore needs less fertilizer than some other food plants, Blackmon said. The plant can survive frost and other conditions unsuitable for many other crops.

"Heavy rain can wipe out a sweet potato crop. It (groundnut) can probably be grown on soil where sweet potatoes and Irish potatoes can't be grown," he says.

"It's most often found in moist areas that get full sunlight most of the day. It competes best there. We're doing some work to see how it will do in waterlogged conditions. Our early indications are that it probably will stand occasional flooding."

The tubers have taste like a cross between an Irish potato and a peanut when boiled, Blackmon says. The seeds are edible, but are a little harder to produce.

Blackmon's research is concentrating on the tubers, which he says can be used in casseroles, corn bread and stir-fry cooking. Work is just beginning to develop recipes and other uses for the groundnut, such as processing it into flour.

Researchers at the University of Minnesota and North Carolina State University have joined the study, Blackmon says. And in 1986, he and research assistant Bertha Reynolds began sending seeds to home gardeners throughout the United States and 16 other countries. So far those grassroots efforts have drawn mixed results.

"It probably was a little premature to send out seeds. These were wild seeds and some of the wild seeds were just not productive," Blackmon says. "A lot of times you'll have a gardener who'll be real clever and will come up with something that's productive."

Blackmon and Reynolds are now trying to develop a plant with a more compact vine and with tubers closer to the stem to facilitate mechanical harvesting.

"As it is right now, the first person who will be able to use it will be the home gardener. He can grow the thing, pamper it a little bit and work with recipes. He can get some satisfaction in that it is one of few native American food plants."

The plant's hardiness makes it versatile in many ways, Blackmon says. Its survivability will give growers more flexibility than they have with other crops.

"I think that in some places it might be very beneficial to the world food supply," Blackmon said. "The thing will stay stored in the ground, (so) you don't have to store it. You can pull it when you need it."

Shopping tips can help stretch family budget

NEW YORK (AP) — Keeping pace with food economics is valuable for shoppers of all ages and budgets.

To help consumers stretch their food dollars without sacrificing quality, the following tips are offered by Zip-Pak Inc., manufacturers of ZIP-PAK resealable food packaging.

■ Clip newspaper coupons: Manufacturers' coupons provide a source of savings. Weekly specials are regularly announced in newspapers and supermarket circulars.

■ Reduce impulse buys: Plan a week's worth of balanced meals before shopping. Make a list of essentials and stick to it.

■ Shop after meals: The temptation to buy non-essentials and to neglect price comparisons and nutritional evaluations is greater when shopping hungry, tired or hurried.

■ Compare unit price: Compare the cost of different brands and package sizes by referring to the unit price, item cost by weight or volume. This price is posted on labels on the edge of store shelves, directly above or below the product.

■ Check dates: Look for expiration or last sale dates on perishables to make sure you're buying the freshest product available. Dates are stamped on tag-closures for bread or muffins, on the bottom or side of yogurt containers, and near the spout on milk containers. Because many marketers rotate their stock and push older products toward counter fronts, particularly in the dairy case, select a product from the back of the shelf.

■ Consider economy sizes: Buy the large economy size or stock up on sale items only if you have space to store them conveniently and can use them before they spoil. This does not, however, apply to certain foods, such as produce and meat. To prevent waste, buy those items in amounts you can use.

■ Check packaging: Food storage is just as important as preparation. Select food items contained in convenient and protective packaging. Unused portions of perishables such as cereal, hot dogs, cheese and potato chips in resealable zippered packaging are better protected from spoilage. Look for other packaging innovations designed for convenience such as squeezable bottles, individually wrapped, single-serving sizes, and foil-lined containers.

■ Check ingredients: Compare ingredient lists and nutritional information on packaged foods. Consult nutrition brochures, home economists, dietitians or your physician for guidelines on acceptable levels of fat, sodium, sugar and calories.

■ Educate yourself: Pick up consumer information brochures and other information available at most supermarkets.

H.R. No. 113

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, Economic diversification is a major component of this state's efforts to increase employment opportunities and moderate the overall effects of a decline or recession in one sector of its economy; and

WHEREAS, To this end, it is the goal of the Texas Department of Commerce and the Strategic Economic Policy Commission to aggressively market Texas as a place to visit and to retire in;

WHEREAS, The mild seasonal climates of Midland and Odessa make the area highly attractive for retirement, which is becoming an important service industry; and

WHEREAS, The Odessa and Midland chambers of commerce jointly have recognized the importance of this attribute of their communities and have combined their efforts along with those of other interested citizens to form the Midland/Odessa Health and Retirement Endeavor (MOHRE); and

WHEREAS, In the first year of its national advertising campaign, MOHRE received over 3,400 inquiries about retirement in the Midland and Odessa area; and

WHEREAS, Locally, MOHRE is responsible for an innovative and successful promotion based on the theme, "Invite Your Parents for the Holidays—or a Lifetime"; and

WHEREAS, MOHRE exemplifies what local economic development programs can accomplish through imagination and cooperation; now,

RESOLVED, That the House of Representatives of the 71st Legislature commend the Midland/Odessa Health and Retirement vacation and retirement location program to promote Texas as a contributor to the area's and state's economic development; and, be it further RESOLVED, That official copies of this resolution be prepared for MOHRE as expressions of high regard and appreciation from the Texas House of Representatives.

Peanuts useful ingredient in different recipes, dishes

The following peanut recipes are furnished courtesy of the Texas Peanut Producers Board:

PEANUT CHICKEN

2 pounds boneless chicken breasts
1/4 cup peanut oil
1 large clove garlic, minced
1/2 cup minced green onion
3 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
Dash cayenne pepper
1/2 cup roasted peanuts
1/2 cup white wine
1/2 cup molasses or honey
1/2 cup soy sauce
1 1/2 cups sliced mushrooms
Hot cooked rice

Remove chicken skin and cut into 1-inch pieces. Heat oil in skillet. Add chicken and brown. Add remaining ingredients, except mushrooms and rice. Cook, stirring until thickened. Add sliced mushrooms. Cover and cook over low heat 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve on bed of hot rice. Makes eight servings.

DOUBLE PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

1 1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
3 tablespoons orange juice
1/2 cup chopped orated peanuts
Peanut butter
Chocolate chips

Stir together flour, soda and salt; set aside. Beat butter and peanut butter for 30 seconds. Add sugars; beat until fluffy. Add dry ingredients; beat well. Beat in juice. Stir in chopped peanuts. Shape into 1-inch rolls. Wrap in clear plastic wrap. Chill thoroughly.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Cut dough into 1/2- to 3/4-inch slices. Place half the slices on ungreased cookie sheet. Spread center with 1 teaspoon peanut butter. Sprinkle with 2 to 3 chocolate chips. Cover with remaining slices; seal edges with fork. Bake for 12 to 15 minutes or until golden brown. Cool slightly; remove to cooling rack. Makes 1 1/2 to 2 dozen.

PEANUTTY COOKIES

1 1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
1/2 cup peanut oil
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
1/2 cup chopped roasted peanuts, divided

Combine flour and baking powder; set aside. Cream together sugar, peanut butter, oil, butter and vanilla. Add eggs, mixing well. Blend in flour mixture. Stir in 1/2 cup peanuts. Cover and chill for several hours or overnight.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Drop dough by teaspoonful into remaining 1/2 cup peanuts. Coat well, forming into balls. Place 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheet. Bake 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from pan immediately to cool on wire racks. Makes 2 1/2 to 3 dozen cookies.

PEANUTS

The candy industry makes extensive use of both peanut butter and peanuts. When combined with chocolate, peanut-butter candy is about as good as it gets. (Ms. Stephenson said the three favorite peanut candies are peanut M&M's, Reese's and Snickers.) The combination of chocolate and peanuts or peanut butter can be so irresistible, in fact, that it is frequently used in fund-raising efforts, with great success — ask any Girl Scout or Camp Fire member.

Roasted and salted peanuts can be poured into soft drinks — a practice that may exist mostly in memory — or eaten by the handful at even the poshest cocktail party. Roasted peanuts can be used as an ingredient in bread, cakes, cookies and some Oriental main dishes. And peanut-butter cookies, according to many students, may be the only edible food to be found in school cafeterias.

Peanut oil is highly prized by many cooks because it doesn't absorb odors very well and it only smokes when high temperatures have been reached. More than 60 percent of the world's peanuts are used to make oil.

Peanuts are used in non-edible products, too. Dr. George Washington Carver is credited with discovering more than 300 uses for peanuts, including soap, face powder, paint, shaving cream, printer's ink and a textile fiber called Ardal.

Life would not be the same without peanuts. In fact, peanuts have become so useful that they have become immortalized in song, as in that childhood classic, "Found a Peanut," and there is even a comic strip called "Peanuts," although it has nothing to do with the food. Baseball, Our National Pastime, wouldn't be the same if you couldn't "buy me some peanuts and crackerjacks."

Ms. Stephenson will be in the Midland-Odessa area March 15-17, bringing "information about peanuts as a national favorite" and as a locally grown product, she said. "Gaines County, just north of you, is one of the top producers in the state. Texas ranks fourth in the nation in production of peanuts."

The Texas Peanut Producers offer a recipe booklet on cooking with peanuts, which is available by writing: Texas Peanut Producers, P.O. Box 398, Gorman, Texas, 76454.

1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
1/2 cup shortening
1 1/2 cups firmly packed brown sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup milk
Peanut Butter Frosting
1/2 cup chopped peanuts
m

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine flour, baking powder and salt; set aside. Beat peanut butter and shortening 30 seconds. Add brown sugar; beat until fluffy. Add eggs and vanilla; beat well. Alternately beat in flour mixture and milk; beginning and ending with flour. Spread in greased 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Bake about 20 minutes (center will be slightly soft). Cool. Frost with Peanut Butter Frosting. Sprinkle with chopped peanuts. Cut into bars. Makes 4 dozen 1-inch bars.

PEANUT BUTTER FROSTING

1 1/2 cups sifted powdered sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 to 2 tablespoons milk

Combine sugar and peanut butter. Blend in milk until mixture is of good spreading consistency. Spread on bars.

SUGARED COCOA PEANUTS

2 cups raw shelled peanuts
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup presweetened cocoa powder
1/2 cup sweetened condensed milk

Place peanuts in large shallow baking dish. Microwave on high 10 to 15 minutes or until toasted, stirring every 2 minutes. Stir in sugar and water. Microwave on high 11 to 12 minutes, stirring every 4 minutes until syrup is nearly absorbed. Stir in cocoa and milk. Microwave on high 6 minutes more, stirring occasionally until coating is dry and crisp. Immediately turn into another baking pan. Cool. Store in tightly covered container. Makes about 2 1/2 cups.

PEANUT-HONEY GRANOLA

3 cups quick or old-fashioned oats
1 cup roasted peanuts
1 cup flaked coconut
1/2 cup honey
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup raisins

Mix all ingredients except raisins in large glass bowl. Sprinkled into 12x7x2-inch baking dish. Microwave on high 6 to 8 minutes or until light golden brown, stirring well every 2 minutes. Stir in raisins. Sprinkle onto large cookie sheet to cool. Store in tightly covered container. Makes about 6 cups.

HOT CHILI NUTS

1 pound raw shelled peanuts
1/4 cup peanut oil
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/2 teaspoon red pepper

Place peanuts in 13x9x2-inch baking dish. Pour peanut oil over nuts, stirring well. Microwave on high 6 to 8 minutes or until lightly brown, stirring every 2 minutes. Drain on paper towels. Combine chili powder, salt, paprika and red pepper. Sprinkle over peanuts. Stir until well coated. Store in tightly covered container. Makes about 2 1/2 cups.

Winter vegetables tasty in stir-fry

By NANCY BYAL

Associated Press

For garden-fresh taste, stir-fry flavorful winter vegetables, ready in 5 minutes cooking time.

WINTER VEGETABLE STIR-FRY

1 tablespoon margarine or butter
1 medium turnip, cut into 1/2-inch cubes (about 1 cup)
1/2 of a medium red, yellow or green sweet pepper, cut into thin strips (1/2 cup)

1 medium carrot, thinly bias sliced (1/2 cup)
2 to 3 teaspoons lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon onion salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper

In a large skillet or wok melt margarine. Add turnip cubes. Cook and stir over medium-high heat for 2 minutes. Add pepper and carrot. Cook and stir about 3 minutes more or until vegetables are crisp-tender. Stir in lemon juice, onion salt and pepper. Toss to coat.

Crunchy snack pleases nibblers

Associated Press

Lower in fat and sodium than many snacks, this crunchy mix makes a great after-school or TV nibble.

FRUIT AND OAT NIBBLE MIX

1 cup rolled oats
1 cup mixed nuts
1/2 cup shredded coconut
1/2 cup toasted wheat germ
1/2 cup honey
2 tablespoons cooking oil
1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
1 cup dried apricots, snipped
1/2 cup raisins

Stir together oats, nuts, coconut and wheat germ. Combine honey, oil and allspice. Drizzle half the honey mixture over oat mixture. Toss. Repeat with remaining honey mixture. Spread mixture in a 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Bake in a 300-degree F oven 30 to 40 minutes, stirring every 15 minutes. Remove from oven. Transfer to another greased pan. Cool without stirring. Break mixture into bite-size pieces. Stir in apricots and raisins. Store in an airtight container. Makes 7 cups.

Walnuts tasty, high in unsaturated fat

Copley News Service

Why do walnuts taste so great? Because they're crunchy and high in fat (around 190 calories per ounce). Sorry, folks, that's the way it is.

But here's the good news: Almost all of a walnut's fat is of the unsaturated variety, and this kind of fat may help to reduce blood cholesterol levels. The nuts are also high in B vitamins, iron and phosphorus, and they provide a good dose of dietary fiber.

Walnuts are probably the most-used nut in the North American kitchen. Primarily found in cookies and other sweets, they can add surprise crunch to bland breakfast cereals, or even to a stir-fry.

Try walnuts in your favorite salad recipes: add coarsely chopped walnuts to a shredded carrot salad, a fruit salad, or to a fresh spinach and mushroom salad.

And walnuts are an essential ingredient in the Waldorf salad. If you haven't had a Waldorf for a while, you've forgotten how refreshing this salad is: crisp apples and lettuce teamed with crunchy walnuts and celery, in a creamy dressing — delish!

Or for an easy-to-put-together appetizer, top apple slices with a dab of room-temperature brie (or other soft mild cheese), then press a walnut half into the cheese.

Since microwaved baked goods don't brown, a crunchy topping often adds just the right measure of eye appeal. To make a quick topping, combine finely chopped toasted walnuts with ground cinnamon and a little melted butter. Mix well and sprinkle over batter before microwaving.

To toast walnuts in the microwave, spread about one-third cup chopped nuts on a paper plate. Microwave at HIGH (100 percent power) setting about three minutes, stirring to rearrange halfway through cooking time.

GOLDEN GLAZED CARROT STRIPS WITH WALNUTS

- 1 pound fresh carrots
- 3 tablespoons brown sugar, packed
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- Dash ground nutmeg
- 1/2 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

Yields 4 servings.

Preparation time: 10 to 15 minutes.

Cooking time: 7 to 9 minutes (plus 3 minutes standing time).

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Peel and trim carrots; cut into thin (1/8-inch) lengthwise strips, then cut each of these into 1/2-inch lengths. Set aside.

Combine all remaining ingredients except walnuts in 1 1/2-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover and microwave about 1 minute, or until butter melts and bubbles. Stir well to blend. Add prepared carrots, tossing to coat. Cover and microwave 4 minutes, stirring after 2 minutes. Fold in walnuts and microwave 2 to 4 minutes longer, or until carrots are tender. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving.

COTTAGE APPLE CRISP

- 4 cups sliced peeled tart baking apples
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
- 1/2 cup quick-cooking rolled oats
- 1/2 cup brown sugar, packed
- 1/4 cup all-purpose or whole-wheat flour
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
- Heavy cream or vanilla ice cream

Yields 4 to 6 servings.

Preparation time: 10 to 15 minutes.

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Place apple slices in 8-inch round glass pie plate; sprinkle with lemon juice and toss. Cover with vented plastic wrap and microwave 2 to 5 minutes, stirring gently to rearrange after 2 minutes, until apples are tender. Set aside while preparing topping.

Combine all remaining ingredients in small microwave-safe mixing bowl. Microwave, uncovered, 1 1/2 to 3 minutes, stirring every minute, until mixture is hot and bubbly. Spread mixture evenly over apple slices. Microwave, uncovered, 4 to 5 minutes longer.

Serve warm or chilled with heavy cream or ice cream.

DEAR ABBY

Teacher puts red pen to Abby's column

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A little while ago, I took a break from my job of reading and grading essays written by high school juniors. Their grammar, spelling and punctuation defy description — but with the mail you get, you probably have a pretty fair idea.

Anyway, I relaxed for a few minutes, scanning headlines and reading Dear Abby, and there it was: "Confidential to Eunice: All men do not cheat on their wives. But it's a fairly safe bet that the man who says they do, cheats on his."

Abby, I believe what you meant to say was that not all men cheat on their wives, since what you did say stated that there weren't any men who cheat on their wives, and, unfortunately, we all know better than that.

Forgive me for being so picky, but I used a lot of red ink today. — ADELE CHRISTENSEN, CALIFORNIA SCHOOL TEACHER

DEAR MS. CHRISTENSEN: I forgive you for being so "picky," and regret that my editor lacked the pickiness to pick up on this error.

Thus far only you and another sharp-eyed San Francisco Chronicle reader have written to correct me. He wrote:

DEAR ABBY: There you go again. Perhaps you meant to say, "Not all men cheat on their wives." What you have said is like saying, "All women writing advice columns do not say it that way." (Some do, including your sister.) — JERRY THOMPSON

DEAR JERRY: It figures. We both cut the same classes.

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for your quiz about homosexuality in which you debunked many myths. I am sure you educated many people, but, Abby, you write about gays as though they were another species, as if the reader had never known any, as if there were none among your readers. The fact is, we are your readers. We are also your sons and daughters, your grandchildren, your brothers, sisters, cousins, aunts, uncles, mothers and fathers.

We are your neighbors, your teachers, your supermarket checker, your stockbroker, your plumber, your mail carrier, your nurse, your doctor or your lawyer. In short, we are people you know, and often people you love.

Because people often confuse femininity in men and masculinity in women with homosexuality, most are not aware how many gays they come in contact with every day.

If they knew, and stopped thinking about us as strangers or strange creatures, it would go a long way toward helping solve many of the problems gay men and women face in our society. — GAY IN ALABAMA

DEAR ABBY: How does Surgeon General Everett Koop propose to care for all the elderly people who are going to live to be 100 because they quit smoking?

Is the government preparing for the strain this will have on Social Security and Medicare reserves? Is Dr. Koop really concerned for the public's health or just irritated by a habit that he finds disgusting? — MRS. ROY G. DUNCAN, WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

DEAR MRS. DUNCAN: I cannot answer for Dr. Koop, but his excellent record speaks well for itself. To suggest that perhaps we should encourage people to smoke so they won't live "too long" is both foolish and inhumane. We do know, however, that the quality of life for most people who are not addicted to tobacco is infinitely better.

For 40 Years This Ancient Art Was History.

And then vanished.

Amidst the chaos of World War II, it mysteriously disappeared. And for over four decades, there was no trace of the exquisite calligraphies, the magnificent manuscripts, or the precious paintings created from powdered minerals and gold leaf.

On the next episode of Smithsonian World, you'll learn about the man, his long-lost collection, and how a casual remark over dinner led the Smithsonian Institution to finally uncover it. Watch "The Vever Affair," proudly brought to you on PBS by Southwestern Bell.

And discover the enchanting Vever collection yourself.

Anatomy of a black hole

Stars, when they exhaust their nuclear fuel, may adopt several forms depending on their mass: Low-mass stars may become white dwarfs, mid-mass stars may explode to form supernovas or neutron stars, and those with high mass may crush themselves and become black holes.

As one of these large stars collapses, its size decreases and its weight increases to the point of zero volume and infinite density. The object is then so dense that not even light can escape its gravitational pull. Because there is no way to directly observe a black hole, scientists observe the effects they have on other bodies, as shown in a sample below.

Signs of black hole seen in Milky Way

Copley News Service

BOSTON — Strange signals coming from the center of the galaxy — energy pouring out and a river of gas flowing in — are giving astronomers new evidence that at least one giant black hole lurks at the center of the Milky Way.

This insatiable object has never been seen, although astronomers long have suspected that black holes are the hubs of virtually all galaxies. The gravitational pull of a black hole is so great that nothing, not even light, can escape.

"Nobody's ever seen a black hole directly, but black holes are a good way to explain things that can't be explained any other way," said Crawford MacCallum of the Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque, N.M.

In fact, three different teams of astronomers reported recently that they had detected bizarre events at the center of the galaxy, which they say are circumstantial evidence for at least one black hole at the center of the galaxy. They presented their findings at the national meeting of the American Astronomical Society, attended by 1,400 astronomers from around the world.

Crawford's team has detected prodigious amounts of energy streaming from the center of the galaxy, perhaps indicating that a black hole is in the process of digesting stars, gas clouds or other matter.

The energy, called annihilation radiation, is only made in extremely violent events where fundamental particles collide and destroy each other in a burst of energy.

Such energy had been detected coming from the center of the galaxy in the late 1970s and early 1980s, but it stopped mysteriously in 1984.

Astronomers were stumped. They thought they had seen a black hole burp as it consumed a giant cloud of gas, one that had the mass of hundreds of suns. Such an event, they thought, occurred about once every 1,000 years at most.

But much to their surprise, the radiation turned back on again last year and was detected by a robotic balloon test high above the Australian desert near Alice Springs.

"I'd never expected this to turn on again in my lifetime," MacCallum said in an interview. The finding was made by his team of researchers from Sandia, NASA and AT&T Bell Laboratories.

Astronomy professor starstruck by night sky

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Jim Kaler is one of those fortunate people who likes to go to work in the morning — or evening.

In fact, if he didn't make his living studying the stars, he would probably be scouting the skies just for fun.

Kaler has been crooking his neck, looking up since he was about 6 years old. That's when his grandmother pointed out a bright yellow star that he later learned was called Arcturus.

As a teen-ager, he saved enough money to buy a telescope. He studied the constellations and educated himself in basic astronomy.

Today, he's a professor of astronomy at the University of Illinois and an internationally known expert.

Yet, he's an admirer first, a scientist second.

"To me, the sky has always been the most beautiful thing that there is," he said. "Just nothing has ever equaled it in terms of aesthetic beauty."

On a clear night, Kaler likes to lie outside in a lawn chair and admire the constellations, which he says are like old friends.

He's loved astronomy since he was a little boy," said Kaler's wife, Maxine. "There was never anything else he wanted to do."

She recalls Kaler pointing out the heavenly sights to each of their four children. His mother now lives with them in Champaign and she frequently goes outside to admire the night sky with Kaler by her side.

CNS Graphic

Kaler has been a member of the university faculty since 1964. His research has focused on old stars and how they die.

A colleague, astronomy professor John Dickel, said Kaler is one of the world's leading experts on planetary nebulae, clouds of material thrown from stars as they get old.

"Anybody who studies planetary nebulae — anybody in the world — would know Jim and respect him," said Dickel.

David Bright, acting dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and a longtime friend of Kaler, said he also is known as a good teacher. "His reputation in general is that of being a very intense and excited and stimulating undergrad instructor," Bright said.

Kaler has written an astronomy textbook, and another book on stars is coming out this year. Yet another book about astronomy for lay people is in the works.

His reputation earned him a call from national magazine reporters earlier this year, when everyone was talking about Nancy Reagan's interest in astrology. He told the reporters, unequivocally, that he thinks astrology is bunk.

He's also sure UFOs are the product of atmospheric phenomena and ignorance — and not spaceships from another world. It irritates him, he admitted, to think of all the money the UFO and astrology promoters make.

But Kaler said he would like to know if there is life in other worlds. "I suspect it's going to be a long time before anybody finds out," he said. "The universe is just too large to test — so it's possible and conceivable that there is a civilization like us someplace."

Bright said Kaler has become sort of "a popular guru" in astronomy, doing most of the public speaking for the department, answering media questions and initiating a stargazers' telephone hotline that gets about 80 calls a week from people wanting advice on the best nighttime sights.

Flaming color of red peppers belies their sweet taste

Copley News Service

The sweet red pepper has been around forever, but all of a sudden it's turning up in every third recipe in the popular food magazines.

The large, beautiful deep-red peppers that are sweet have become so popular you would think they had just become available.

Red peppers are "nothing more than the mature stage of the green pepper," says horticulturist David Robson. "The color is red so that it gets eaten by animals, and that means the seeds get dispersed."

Anyone who grows green peppers can get red peppers if he leaves them on the vine. Maturing on the vine will eventually turn peppers into a sophisticated red, while at the same time sweetening their disposition and taste.

There are certain risks, however, in leaving them on the vine. Hot weather causes them to get sunburned. Then they develop a "water-soaked appearance. These spots can be cut out but it does turn slimy," said Robson.

During the off-season, red peppers are expensive. They bruise easily (more than tomatoes) because the middle is hollow.

You also can find yellow peppers, purple peppers and a chocolate brown pepper. While they are specially bred for their color, says Robson, they all taste basically the same.

Red peppers have a lot more vitamin A than green peppers — more than 10 times as much. Red peppers also are higher in calories than green peppers. But don't worry. While green peppers have 36 calories, red peppers still have only 51.

Biagio "Rusty" Rusciolli grows his own red and yellow peppers. He got the seeds from Italy.

They have a sweeter taste than American types," said Rusciolli. "Everyone who tasted them, loved them."

HE SAID: "It is important to keep the plants off the ground for best results."

J.L. Honey makes a red pepper butter sauce that he uses with grilled chicken breasts and Cornish hens. His favorite red pepper recipe is for a marinated and roasted version. The roasted peppers are marinated in a good olive oil with garlic.

Sweet peppers can be frozen. It isn't even necessary to blanch them first. According to Barb Cooper, "You should chop them then double wrap them and freeze them. They are a bit too watery for using fresh, but they are great if they have to be cooked."

Cooper puts the chopped peppers on a cookie sheet, then flash-freezes them. Then she puts them in plastic bags. "They keep for up to one year," she said.

Whenever red peppers are on sale at the grocery store, I roast them, cut them into strips and then freeze them in small packages, labeled with that date.

ROASTED PEPPERS WITH OIL

2 or more red peppers
Extra virgin olive oil
Salt and pepper
Some fresh garlic, minced, to taste

Preheat broiler. Broil peppers on rack about 4 inches from heat, turning them every 5 minutes for 20 to 25 minutes, or until they are blistered and charred.

Enclose peppers in paper bag and let them steam until they are cool enough to handle. Peel them, starting at stem end, and discard seeds, stems and ribs.

Cut peppers into strips, put in serving dish and drizzle on a bit of good olive oil and some chopped garlic, salt and pepper.

Serve at room temperature. Keeps at least 1 week in refrigerator. Roasted peppers can be frozen if they are peeled. Defrost before using.

FETA AND RED PEPPER SPREAD

6 ounces feta cheese, crumbled
1/2 cup coarsely chopped red bell pepper
2 tablespoons olive oil

In food processor, blend feta cheese with bell pepper, scraping down sides until mixture is smooth. With motor running, add oil and blend mixture until smooth. Use spread as filling for cherry tomatoes and celery, a topping for sliced cucumbers, or serve with raw vegetables and crackers.

A granita is a sugar-syrup-ice mixture made with a variety of fresh fruits or vegetables. This one is very different, but luscious.

RED PEPPER GRANITA

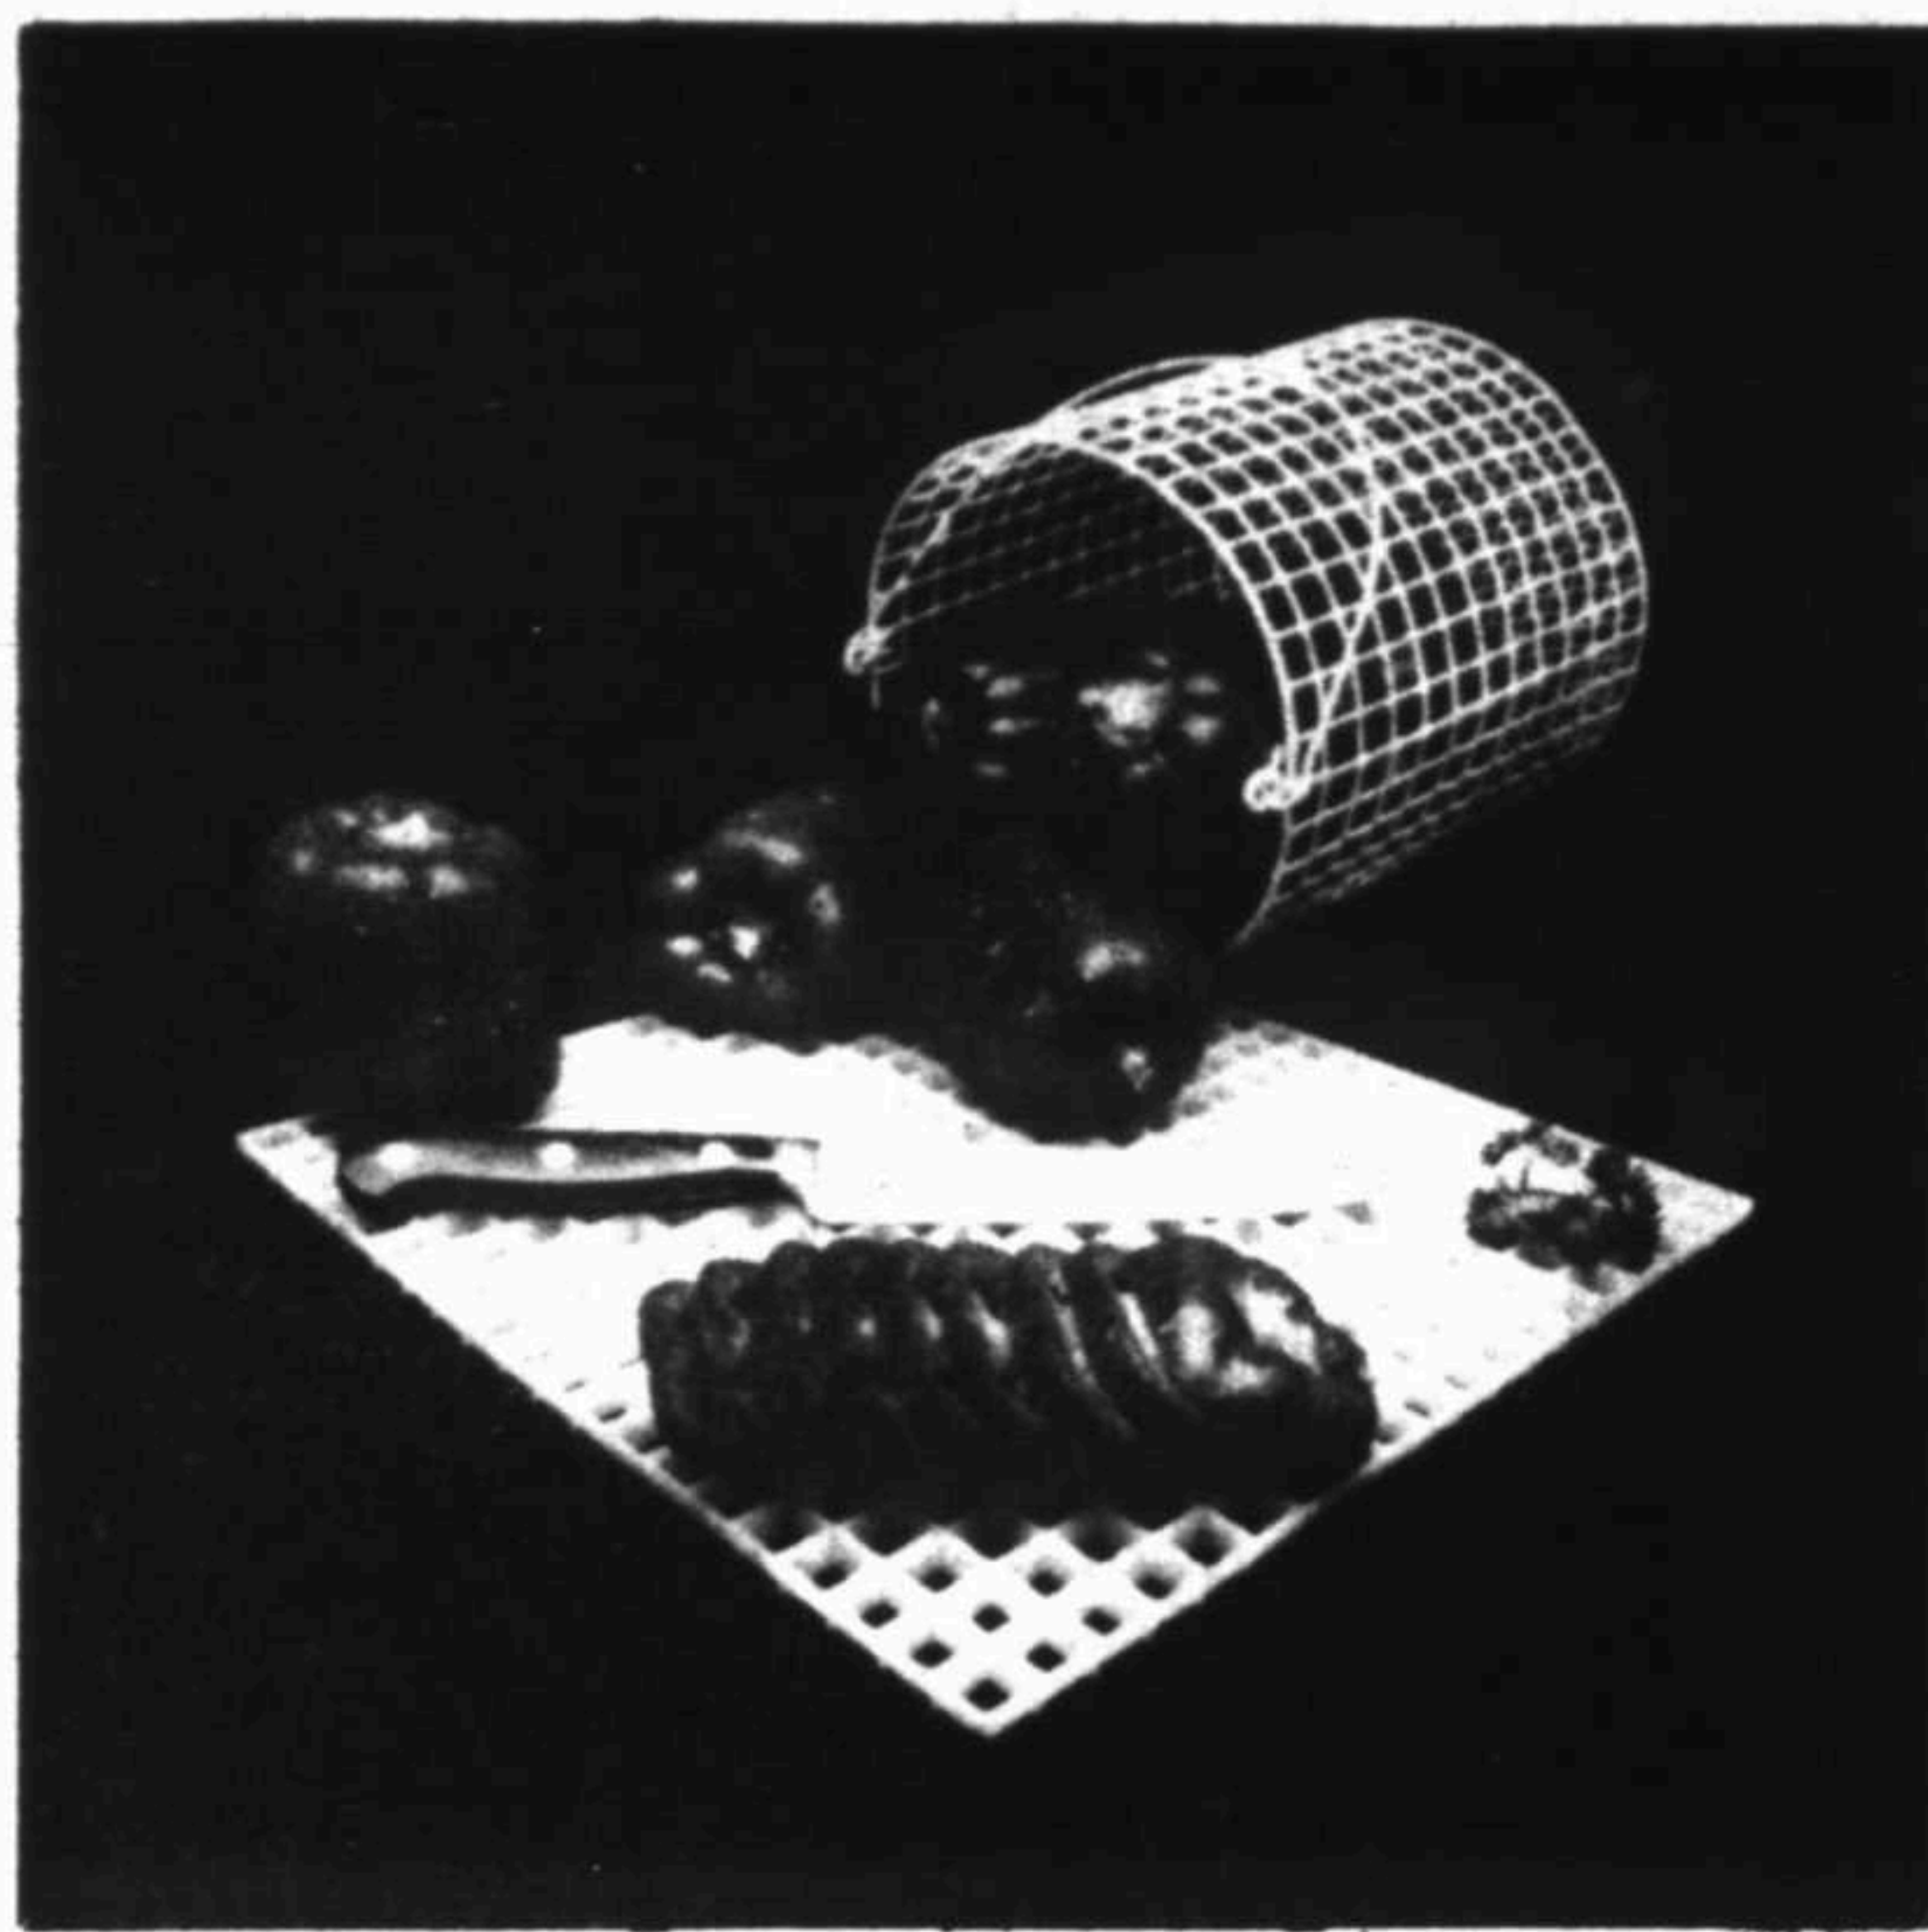

1/2 cup sugar
2 pounds red bell peppers, roasted (reserve any liquid)
1 1/2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice, or to taste
1/2 teaspoon Tabasco sauce, or to taste
Salt to taste

In saucepan, combine sugar and 2 cups water. Bring mixture to boil, mixing it by shaking handle of pan, until sugar is dissolved. Remove from heat and let cool. Do not let it color.

In blender or food processor, puree roasted peppers with reserved liquid, strain, add sugar syrup and blend mixture well.

In bowl combine puree, lemon juice, Tabasco and salt to taste and chill mixture, covered, for 1 to 2 hours or until cold. Can be made up to this point a day ahead and kept chilled.

Stir mixture and transfer it to 2 metal ice cube trays, dividers removed, or shallow metal bowl. Freeze, stirring with fork every 20 to 30 minutes and crushing large lumps, for 2 to 3 hours or until firm but not frozen hard. Mix in food processor until smooth. Or, using fork, lighten mixture until fluffy. Serve as a first course or between courses to cleanse palate.

(Adapted from Gourmet magazine, July 1985).

This is a classic Italian dish. In Bologna, peperonata is served with mixed boiled meats. It's also great with pasta.

PEPERONATA

1/2 cup extra virgin olive oil
2 medium onions, thinly sliced
5 sweet bell peppers, green and red or red and yellow
5 medium tomatoes
1 tablespoon tomato paste
Salt and fresh pepper
1/4 cup red wine vinegar

Chop tomatoes. Seed and cut peppers into strips. Slice onions thinly. Heat oil in large, heavy skillet. Add onions and peppers. Sauté over medium heat until onions are light gold and peppers have softened, mixing occasionally.

Add tomatoes, tomato paste and salt and fresh pepper. Cover and cook over medium heat 30 to 35 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add vinegar and mix well. Cook, uncovered, 10 minutes longer. Mixture will become thick. Taste and adjust for seasoning. Serve hot or at room temperature.

(Adapted from "Northern Italian Cooking" by Biba Caggiano.)

RIGATONI WITH PEPPERONATA

2 cups peperonata (see above)
1 pound rigatoni or any large, grooved macaroni
Freshly ground pepper to taste

Prepare peperonata and keep warm. Or, if it was made in advance, reheat over low heat.

Bring large pot of water to boil. Add rigatoni, bring water back to boil and cook rigatoni uncovered until tender but a bit firm to the bite, 8 to 10 minutes. Drain rigatoni and place in warm, deep dish or bowl. Pour peperonata over rigatoni. Season with pepper. Serve immediately.

For those who like uncooked sauces and uncooked peppers, here is a bell pepper salsa that combines both red and green peppers. This salsa isn't spicy but if you want, you can add some hot red pepper flakes to it.

RED PEPPER SALSA

1 green bell pepper
1 small red onion
3 plum tomatoes, quartered
3 tablespoons fresh lime juice or to taste
1 tablespoon olive oil
1/4 teaspoon salt, or to taste
Corn chips as an accompaniment

In food processor, using steel blade, fine-chop peppers, onion and tomatoes, but do not let them liquefy. You might have to do them in batches.

Transfer mixture to bowl, stir in lime juice, oil and salt, and let salsa stand for 30 minutes. Serve salsa with corn chips as an hors d'oeuvre.

ROASTED RED PEPPER TIMBALES

2 medium-size red bell peppers
3 egg yolks
2 large eggs
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground white pepper
Pinch of cayenne pepper, or to taste
1 cup half-and-half
Creme fraiche (recipe follows) or sour cream
Snipped fresh chives

Roast peppers (as in recipe for roasted peppers with oil). After they are peeled and cooled, puree red peppers, egg yolks, eggs, salt, white and cayenne peppers in food processor. Transfer to bowl.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly butter 6 1/2-cup custard cups. Bring half-and-half to boil. Slowly stir into pureed pepper mixture. Mix well as you pour. Divide red pepper mixture evenly among prepared cups. Place cups in large roasting pan.

Add enough simmering water to pan to come halfway up sides of cups.

Bake until timbales are set, about 30 minutes. Remove from water bath and let cool completely. Refrigerate for at least 1 hour.

RED PEPPER BUTTER

1 red bell pepper, roasted
1 stick (1/2 cup) unsalted butter, softened
2 teaspoons minced shallots
1 teaspoon minced fresh parsley
1/4 teaspoon fresh lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon Tabasco
1/4 teaspoon salt

In food processor using steel blade, chop pepper fine. Add butter, shallots, parsley, lemon juice, Tabasco and salt and blend mixture until smooth. Transfer butter to bowl and chill, covered, for 15 minutes.

Transfer butter to sheet of waxed paper, roll paper around it to form a log, and chill butter until firm. Serve butter with broiled fish or meat or on toasted French bread as an hors d'oeuvre. It is interesting and unusual on cooked corn, too.

CHILLED CORN AND RED PEPPER SOUP

2 red peppers, chopped
1 onion, chopped
2 garlic cloves
3 cups canned chicken broth or homemade, preferably
1 teaspoon sugar
Tabasco to taste
Fresh lemon juice to taste
Salt and pepper to taste
4 to 5 thin lemon slices
Chopped chives

Cut corn kernels from cobs with serrated knife, scrape remaining corn from cobs with back of knife and reserve cobs. Set kernels aside.

In saucepan combine corn cobs, bell pepper, onion, garlic and broth, bring liquid to boil. Simmer mixture, covered, for 20 minutes. Add corn kernels and scraped corn and simmer mixture, covered, for 10 minutes.

Discard cobs, puree mixture in blender or food processor and transfer it to bowl. Stir in sugar, Tabasco, lemon juice and salt and pepper to taste.

Let soup cool and chill it, covered, for 1 hour or until cold. The soup may be made a day ahead and kept covered and chilled.

Ladle soup into chilled bowls and garnish each serving with lemon slice and chopped chives.

HONEY'S RED PEPPER BUTTER SAUCE

1 1/2 cups plus 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 1/2 medium red peppers (about 12 ounces) cored, seeded, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
3 tablespoons minced shallots
2 to 3 tablespoons raspberry vinegar
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/4 teaspoon salt, or to taste

Melt 2 tablespoons unsalted butter in medium saucepan over low heat. When foam subsides, add peppers and shallots and saute, stirring constantly until peppers are soft. This will take about 10 minutes.

Add raspberry vinegar to saucepan. Leave heat on simmer and cook uncovered until liquid is reduced by two-thirds. This should take about 5 minutes.

Add lemon juice, white wine and heat to simmering. Simmer until liquid is reduced by half, about 15 minutes.

Remove saucepan from heat. Transfer contents to food processor and, using steel blade, process until mixture is smooth.

Sieve puree into saucepan, cut 1 1/2 cups of unsalted soft butter into 24 pieces. Over low heat, whisk in butter one piece at a time, waiting until each piece is incorporated before adding next piece. Season with salt to taste.

Keep warm in hot water bath up to 1 1/2 hours.

Honey adds the sauce to a baked Cornish hen. After sauce is completed, he adds it to bottom of plate then puts hens on top of sauce to serve it.

March recognized as National Nutrition Month

NEW YORK (AP) — March is celebrated as National Nutrition Month, and the Rice Council of America is providing a nutritional bonus.

Rice contains all eight essential amino acids, has no cholesterol and only 82 calories per 1/2-cup serving.

To boost good nutrition each day, toss some cooked rice into fresh spring salads, add it to soups or stews when the winter chill is still in the air, or just mix cooked rice into your hot vegetables to add texture and eye appeal to your meals.

For a free copy of "Eat Smart," prepared by the Rice Council of America, send a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope to: The Rice Council of America, Dept. ES, Box 740121, Houston 77274.

The following recipes are provided by the Rice Council:

COUNTRY BREAKFAST CEREAL

1 cup uncooked brown rice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1/2 cup fresh cranberries
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1 cinnamon stick
2 tablespoons sugar
Milk or cream (optional)
Honey or brown sugar (optional)

Combine all ingredients with 2 1/2 cups water in 2- to 3-quart saucepan with tight-fitting lid. Bring to a boil; stir once or twice. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 45 to 55 minutes, or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Fluff with fork. Serve with milk and honey, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Nutritional information per serving: 166 cal., 2.7 g pro., 2.6 g fat, 33.7 g carb., 114 mg sodium, 5 mg chol.

ASPARAGUS RISOTTO

1 pound fresh asparagus
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped onions
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup uncooked medium grain rice
1/4 cup snipped fresh parsley
1/4 cup grated Romano cheese

Wash asparagus and cut off tough stalk ends. Boil in large saucepan in salted water 12 minutes. Drain, reserving cooking liquid; cut off asparagus tips. Set aside.

In large skillet over medium-high heat, cook onions and garlic in oil. Add rice, stir 2 to 3 minutes.

Stir in 1 cup reserved asparagus liquid. Cook, uncovered, stirring frequently, until liquid is absorbed. Continue stirring and adding remaining asparagus liquid and enough water to bring total amount of liquid added to 5 cups, allowing each to be absorbed before adding another. Rice should be tender and mixture should have a creamy consistency (it will take 25 to 30 minutes).

Stir in asparagus, parsley and cheese. Serve immediately. Makes 6 servings.

Nutritional information per serving: 182 cal., 6.8 g pro., 3.9 g fat, 30.6 g carb., 423 mg sodium, 5 mg chol.

BROWN RICE AND LENTIL STEW

2 1/2 cup uncooked brown rice
1/2 cup dry lentils, rinsed
1/2 cup chopped onions
1/2 cup sliced celery
1/2 cup sliced carrots
1/4 cup snipped fresh parsley
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
1 clove garlic, minced
1 bay leaf
2 1/2 cups chicken broth
1 1/4-ounce can peeled whole tomatoes, undrained, chopped
1 tablespoon cider vinegar

Combine all ingredients and 2 cups water in Dutch oven or large saucepan; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, stirring occasionally, for 55 minutes to 1 hour, or until rice is tender. Remove and discard bay leaf. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Nutritional information per serving: 252 cal., 10.5 g pro., 1.4 g fat, 50.7 g carb., 917 mg sodium, 1 mg chol.

Down at the half, 'Stangs score 81-67 win

By BILL GRIMES

ABILENE — The Andrews Mustangs used an explosive fourth quarter to secure an 81-67 win over the Burk Burnett Bulldogs in a Class 4A Region I semifinal here Tuesday.

Andrews, 30-4, advanced to the Region I final against Pflugerville at a yet-to-be determined site this weekend. Details were expected to be ironed out today.

Coach Frank Bice's Mustangs trailed 38-34 at half-time, but senior wing Damon Clay sunk a layup, was fouled and converted the ensuing free throw to knot the count at 50-all going into the last eight minutes.

Clay then sparked a 21-7 Mustang run that blew the game open — with ample help from senior Gym Bice and junior Ara Baten. Clay and Bice scored 10 points each in the fourth quarter, while Baten added nine.

The teams traded baskets at the outset of the fourth quarter, but Baten hustled to the corner for a loose ball after missing a free throw, then fed to Clay for the latter's easy layup that put Andrews ahead for good with 6:42 left, after Burk Burnett had led most of the middle two quarters.

"We just got ourselves ready to play," Baten said.

"Coach said they (Burk Burnett) played as good as they could in the first half, and to just stay after them."

Clay said superior physical conditioning may have been a factor in the Mustangs' favor.

"We knew if we kept running, they'd get tired. Then we could take over."

Andrews led most of the first quarter, but Burk's John Starling hit an 18-foot jumper to pull the Bulldogs into an 18-all tie at the end of the quarter.

Burk then got a lift from brothers Brian and Clarence Hightower to take the halftime advantage. Sophomore Brian scored six of his 12 points in the second half, while junior Clarence hit for five of his team-high 14.

The Bulldogs led by as many as seven points in the third period, but Andrews crept back with balanced scoring and the Mustangs' patented full-court press.

Clay said the Mustangs may have been a bit tight in the first half.

"We knew we had to pick up the pace," the senior said. "I just had to take it upon myself to help my team get there."

Donnell leads Rangers

ABILENE — "Relax, play your game, and we'll win it." Those were the halftime words of Greenwood Head Coach Robert Chaney as his team faced a three-point disadvantage in a boys Class 3A area championship game here Tuesday with Bowie.

Chaney's Rangers followed their coaches instructions and rallied for a 64-57 win over the Jackrabbits.

There was no one more relaxed at the Abilene High School gymnasium than Greenwood's Randy Donnell. The senior guard was Mr. Cool, Mr. Clutch and Mr. Perfect from the free throw line, hitting 13 of 13 for the game, and scoring 25 points total.

Donnell was 8 for 8 shooting free throws in the fourth quarter, while backcourt mate Kane Harris was 6 of 6 from the line in that same period, to finish with 16 points. As a team, Greenwood was 24 of 25 from the free throw line, 96 percent.

Donnell was as cool after the game as he was at the free throw line in the fourth quarter.

"We've been practicing on that (free throw shooting) all week and we knew it would come down to free throws," Donnell said.

It was decided in the end by free throws, but the Rangers battled hard with Bowie to reach a potential game clinching situation. The contest was tied eight times and the lead exchanged hands 14 times.

With 2:30 left in the game, Greenwood trailed 50-48. The Rangers would tie the score on a Tom Marvin layup 15 seconds later. Then the parade to the free throw line began for Donnell and Harris. With 1:58 remaining, it was Donnell for two charity strikes. Twenty-four seconds later, Randy converted two more free throws. The Rangers tallied two more with 1:04 remaining on a Tim Flowers layup, his only bucket on the night, to lead 56-50.

Then it was time for the Kane Harris Free Throw Show. Following two free throws by Bowie's Mike Roland, trimming the Ranger lead to 56-52, Harris sank two free throws with 33 seconds left. With 20 ticks on the clock, it was Kane walking to the line for two more.

Golden Tors bamboozled

By GEORGE BRZEZINSKI
MRT Correspondent

LEWELLAND — A stifling, pressing defense took some of the wind out of the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes as they dropped their 3A boys play-off game 74-49 to the Dimmitt Bobcats before a standing room only crowd at the Texas Dome Tuesday.

Dimmitt's tenacious defense forced numerous Lamesa turnovers and created enough havoc in the backcourt to keep the Tors from running their offense.

Emilio Arce hit a twelve foot jumper at 6:45 in the opening period to give Dimmitt a 2-1 lead, one which the Bobcats would not relinquish for the rest of the game. After Mat Bradley's layup gave Dimmitt an 11-4 lead, Tornado coach Wayne Roberts called time to try to regroup. Dewayne Hall's three pointer and Bert Butler's hustle helped tie the score at 13 with 2:03 remaining in the first period, but Dimmitt's strong work under the boards led to an 8-0 run and a 21-13 lead for the 'Cats.

Coach Ken Cleveland's controlled offense and frantic defense kept the Bobcats ahead through the rest of the first half, outshooting, outrebounding and outscoring the Tornadoes. Lamesa hung tough and thanks to back to back three pointers by Lavert Hawkins found themselves only five down at halftime, 38-33.

The Tornadoes found their shooting touch in the second half as Hawkins led the comeback, hitting a bank shot to bring his team within two and then stealing an inbound pass and leading Hall for an easy two, tying the game at 46. After a Bobcat timeout, however, the tide again turned in favor of the visitors as Hawkins missed a dunk which would have given Lamesa their first lead since the tipoff.

Team leading scorers Mat Bradley (19) and Brac Wardlaw took turns forcing turnovers and hitting jump shots, extending the Bobcats' lead to nine at the end of three periods. Lamesa attempted a fourth period comeback, but could only pull within seven with a minute left.

Johnson: 'I'm sorry if I hurt anyone'

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Jimmy Johnson knew it wasn't going to be easy replacing Tom Landry as coach of the Dallas Cowboys. He discovered the degree of difficulty in his first news conference.

Johnson was grilled for showing up in Dallas before the sale of the Cowboys to close friend Jerry Jones had been completed last weekend.

Things got so heated on Tuesday that Johnson said at one point, "This thing has been a grind."

Questions about Landry outnumbered football questions, 2-to-1.

He repeatedly apologized if he offended Landry or the Cowboys' fans.

"I'm sorry if I hurt anyone. I apologize," Johnson said. "I was in Dallas (on Friday before the Cowboys were sold on Saturday) to talk face to face with Jerry Jones."

"The fact I was seen in public apparently offended some people. I'd like to sit down and visit with Tom sometime about it. We'll do it at a time of his choosing."

Jones and Johnson were photographed celebrating at a Tex-Mex restaurant in downtown Dallas on a day Landry had spent studying film and getting ready for the season.

Tournament of Champs hosting strong teams

By JIMMY PATTERSON

In 1988, the first weekend in March brought two things which are not compatible: Snow and baseball.

One will return this weekend, the other won't. No, it likely won't snow, but baseball will kick into high gear with the return of the Tournament of Champions, Thursday thru Saturday at Angel Stadium.

Tournament play begins Thursday at 5:30 p.m. when Fort Worth Southwest meets Midland High. At 8 p.m., Lubbock Monterey faces Midland Lee in Game 2.

Play continues through Saturday night. The T of C is played in a double elimination format; the championship game will be played either at 5:30 p.m. or 8 p.m. Saturday. Saturday's first game begins at 10 a.m.

Friday's action starts at 10 a.m. and concludes with an 8 p.m. game.

Three 1988 district champions and one district runner-up will take part in the tourney. Following is a rundown of this year's teams:

■ Midland High Bulldogs. District 4-5A champs in '88, the Bulldogs opened the '89 season with a doubleheader split against Lubbock Coronado. The 'Dogs are led by Kevin Rychel who struck out 11 in the first game of the double bill with Coronado. Three other starters, including outfielder Tony Perez and infielder Jason Stone, are also back.

■ Midland Lee Rebels. Hampered by a ton of graduation losses, the Rebels, who finished in third place in district last year, look to have a real challenge on their hands for the '89 season. Head coach Ernie Johnson has only two starters — catcher Greg Garrett and outfielder Blaine Ma-cAnally — back from his 7-5 team from '88. Lee opened the season dropping both ends of a doubleheader to Lubbock Monterey.

■ Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen. The Plainsmen were 22-5 and district champs last year, losing to Duncanville in the regionals. Five starters return, including pitcher Gary Henry, 10-1 last season, and catcher Derin Erculani. The Plainsmen are led by 29-year head coach Bobby Meagle and are ranked 10th in the state in the first poll of the season.

■ Dallas Thomas Jefferson Patriots. The Pats, 22-8 last year, were district runners-up, losing in the first round of the playoffs to Arlington Newman-Smith. Five starters return, including last year's T of C Most Valuable Player, Jimmy Baird. Chad Griggs and Pat Lara, who made the All-Tourney team, are also back.

District champ again fails to land region berth

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

District 4-5A champion Abilene High missed a second consecutive trip to the Class 5A Region I tournament at Chaparral Center Tuesday night, losing an area playoff to El Paso Irvin 70-65 in overtime.

In the other part of the doubleheader, Amarillo Tascosa proved that its 10-point victory over Midland High Saturday was for real with a 79-62 romp over El Paso Hanks.

Abilene High, 26-7 for the year, pulled off a big fourth quarter comeback, erasing a seven-point Rocket lead, only to see 6-2 post Dan Dominguez score five points in the overtime.

Dominguez scored 27 points on the night. He scored 18 points in the first half against 4-5A MVP Cory Lockridge, who is 6-8. AHS put Carl Horton on Dominguez in the second half and he had only four points until the overtime period.

However, Horton got in foul trouble and the Eagles again went with Lockridge on Dominguez and he responded by banking in two quick buckets off the glass to start the overtime and place the Eagles in deep trouble.

"I felt comfortable with the bank shot against the big guy (Lockridge)," Dominguez said. "They put No. 44 (Horton) on me in the second half and he was tough, but I had a lot of success against the big one and had confidence when I was against him in the overtime."

Abilene High coach Gerald Coppedge said, "My kids gave a great effort, especially in the fourth quarter, but inside shooting hurt us early and outside shooting hurt us in the second half. Dominguez is a good player and he had 18 on us in the first half. Horton did a good job on him, but he was in foul trouble for the overtime."

Chaps head for regionals

From Staff Reports

WACO — Midland College plays Grayson County Community College of Denison at 2 p.m. Thursday in the opening round of the Region V men's basketball tournament. The tourney is being held at McLennan Community College, Thursday through Saturday.

As the third place finisher from the Western Junior College Athletic Conference, the Chaps will be facing the second place team from the Northern Conference in the first round game.

Other first round games Thursday match the WJAC champion Odessa College Wranglers against McLennan, the fourth place team in the Northern Conference, at 9 p.m.; South Plains College, WJAC runner-up, against third place Ranger at noon; and Weatherford, Northern Conference champion, against Howard College, WJAC fourth place, at 5 p.m.

Friday's games match the Weatherford-Howard and Ranger-South Plains winners at 7:30 p.m. and the Odessa-McLennan and Midland-Grayson winners at 9:15 p.m. The championship game will be played Saturday evening at a time still to be announced.

Midland College, which is 20-9 and 11-5 heading for the tournament, seems similar to the Grayson Vikings, who posted a 16-13 season mark and were 10-4 in conference. Weatherford nabbed the conference title with an 11-3 mark. Ranger was 9-5, and McLennan 8-6.

Odessa won the WJAC with a 15-1 mark and is 30-1 for the season. South Plains was 14-2 and 27-3. Howard was 10-6 in conference action. This could be called sudden-death season, since losers go home and winners advance from this time on. The Region V winner will play the Region XIV winner for the right to be in the 16-team field at the NJCAA National Tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., March 13-18.

Jacksonville College is the Eastern Conference champion and San Jacinto College is the Southern Conference winner. Those teams will play the best two-out-of-three games to determine the Region XIV representative.

Celtics 112, Hornets 87

BOSTON (112) — Paul Pierce scored 21 points, including a 10-point second quarter, to lead the Boston Celtics to a 112-87 victory over the Charlotte Hornets on Tuesday night.

Pierce's 21 points included a 10-point second quarter, which helped the Celtics build a 20-point lead by halftime. Pierce also had six rebounds and three assists.

The Hornets, led by center Reggie Miller with 18 points, fought back in the third quarter but were unable to overcome the Celtics' lead.

Guard Danny Celaya scored 16 points for Irvin, including 10 in the third quarter with two big three-point baskets. Down by seven, AHS came roaring back as Greg Denman hit nine of his 25 points in the fourth period. He hit a three-pointer in overtime, but the Eagles hit only one of seven in OT.

Tascosa seems to like Chap Center, beating Midland High there Saturday and destroying Hanks Tuesday. Now they hope to play two more Friday and Saturday at the Chap in the Region I tournament.

Tascosa got 22 points from football quarterback Tim Johnson, 16 in the first half, and 20 from Matt Harkins, 12 in the fourth quarter. Oscar Shorten had 17. Hanks got behind by 16 points and had to foul Tascosa in an effort to get back in the game, but Tascosa hit 15 of 16 from the line in the fourth quarter to ruin the Knights' plan.

With one second to go, it was appropriate that Randy Donnell would be back at the line for a double cut of icing on the Greenwood victory cake. His two free throws gave the Rangers their largest lead of the game and advanced them to the Region I tournament this weekend in Lubbock after Brownfield, a 74-49 winner over Littlefield Tuesday night. Brownfield defeated the Rangers earlier this season.

Greenwood trailed 28-25 at halftime when Coach Chaney told his players to relax. It was surprising he didn't have harsher words for his team as they were out-rebounded 16-3 in the second quarter, 13-1 on the offensive boards.

The third quarter proved to be a tough, defensive struggle with the Rabbits clinging to a 36-35 lead entering the final eight minutes.

The fourth quarter would belong to the Rangers and to Kane Harris and Randy Donnell. Harris had 11 points and Donnell 10 in the period. Donnell and Harris were the two biggest stars for Greenwood, but one couldn't forget the inside play of Tom Marvin, who scored 14 points (10 in the second half) to go with nine rebounds, all but fouling out with :54 left in the game.

NATION IN BRIEF

Bookstores to continue sales of 'Satanic Verses'

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Operators of two bookstores where firebombings may be linked to sales of "The Satanic Verses" pledged not to stop selling the book despite the violence, which caused modest damage but no injuries.

Bookstores throughout the country have been threatened if they carry the book that Muslims call blasphemous. The bombings at Cody's and Waldenbooks in Berkeley and at a weekly newspaper in New York City early Tuesday were the first signs of violence in the United States.

At eight bookstores in Santa Barbara in Southern California, employees opening for business Tuesday found crudely worded, poorly typed notes warning that something "bad" would happen to shopowners selling the novel. The notes were signed "American Muslims."

Cody's owner Andy Ross found no such threat, but he said he had little doubt the firebombings were connected to the novel that prompted Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini to issue a death order for the Moslem author, Salman Rushdie, and the book's publishers.

"I can't imagine any other reason why people would be lobbing bombs through bookstores — Cody's or anyone's," said Ross.

In New York, an incendiary device was tossed through the window of the Riverdale Press in the Bronx, heavily damaging the building, authorities said. No one was inside at the time.

The firebombing may have been in retaliation for an editorial in the paper last week supporting the right to read the novel, said firefighter Tom McTigue.

Drug czar explains role

WASHINGTON (AP) — The quality that made William J. Bennett controversial as education secretary may be an asset in his new role as director of drug control policy, the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee said today.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del.,

John Batista, an employee at Cody's Books in Berkeley, Calif., cleans up a fire-damaged bookshelf after the store was firebombed early Tuesday morning for selling 'Satanic Verses.'

whose panel was opening confirmation hearings later today, said on ABC's "Good Morning America" that Bennett is "going to have to be combative, he's going to have to be tough, he's going to have to be a real scrapper."

"The very things that made Bill Bennett controversial as secretary of education are things that may make him particularly useful as the so-called drug czar," Biden said. "He was never afraid of controversy, he was never afraid of being critical."

"This first drug director is going to have to be willing to take on other Cabinet members...and going to have to be willing to be controversial," the committee chairman said.

Biden said Tuesday he wanted to press Bennett on how he'll handle the job the senator worked for eight years to create.

"I'm going to be looking for a clear statement from Bennett that he fully understands what the law says, what it is intended to do, and how he believes he can and will wield his au-

Many children to be poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of poor families with children is growing rapidly, increasing the number of youngsters without proper health care, the National Association of Children's Hospitals and Related Institutions said today.

In a report, the group predicted that by the end of the century one-third of all American children will live below the poverty line, and that youngsters from such families are at the highest risk for poor health.

"The No. 1 key to the poor status of our nation's children relative to their health is insurance, and...we see that 12 million of them, one in every five, do not have insurance, either public or private," William Considine, chairman of the association, said on NBC's "Today" show.

Most senators spurn Hawaii trip offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of Sen. Daniel Inouye's colleagues on a Senate panel have spurned his invitation to join him on a six-nation tour, despite his promise that the taxpayer-paid trip will mix pleasure with business.

Inouye, D-Hawaii, the new chairman of the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee, has invited 17 panel members to accompany him to the Middle East and Europe for an "on-the-scene evaluation of the changes which are occurring in several areas of significance to our nation's defense requirements."

But Inouye's letter of invitation also notes other attractions in Germany, Italy, Egypt, Spain, Israel and Turkey.

"I also intend to make a special effort to allow time for visits to museums, art galleries, and religious and historical sites in the capitals and the countryside of these countries," Inouye wrote.

Citing protocol demands, he suggested that the senators bring along their spouses on "what I know will be a most enjoyable and productive trip."

"Far from being a 'congressional junket,' this trip will take us to areas which I believe we need to visit to understand the dimensions of the problems confronting U.S. national security and to meet the responsibilities we face as members of the subcommittee on defense," he said.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of the letter, which proposes the trip for the Senate's Easter vacation the last two weeks of March.

Only Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., has definitely signed up, although three senators, Arlen Specter, R-Pa.; Bennett Johnston, D-La.; and Jake Garn, R-Utah, are undecided, according to an informal head count. The rest say they have no plans to go.

The itinerary calls for three nights in Munich, three in Rome, two in Istanbul, three in Cairo, three in Jerusalem and one in Madrid.

The route was designed to allow members to see "fracture zones" of the geopolitical world, said Inouye, whose subcommittee oversees spending for the Defense Department and the CIA.

Along the way, the senators would share Easter services with American forces aboard a ship in the Persian Gulf and review fundamental changes under way in the Middle East peace process.

The congressional party will fly on an Air Force jet "to ensure that we accomplish the objectives of our trip and to add a measure of security," Inouye said.

The government picks up all expenses for members of Congress. They receive daily per diem at the same rate as U.S. diplomats abroad. For example, the daily rate is $163 in Munich and $98 in Cairo.

In the Senate, foreign trips on behalf of a committee must be approved by the full committee chairman, while those on behalf of the full Senate must have the approval of the chamber's majority and minority leaders.

Inouye has yet to request formal approval of the trip from Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the appropriations committee, according to Marsha Berry, the committee spokeswoman.

Parties split on deficit panel's plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-level advisory group once seen as the best hope for crafting a bipartisan solution to the nation's budget problems ended up deadlocked, issuing a final report today that splits essentially along party lines.

The seven Republicans on the National Economic Commission and the one Democrat appointed by President Bush endorsed the president's pledge against raising taxes and praised his budget submission to Congress, calling it a "workable plan for eliminating the deficit" by 1993.

However, the six Democrats on the panel who were appointed by the congressional leadership signed a minority report calling Bush's budget "neither theoretically sound nor politically realistic."

The administration's $1.16 trillion spending plan for 1990 "rules out any discussion of additional revenues and relies heavily on harsh and disproportionate reductions in domestic spending," the Democrats said.

The sharply divergent reports ended up echoing the current debate between Bush and congressional Democrats, where both sides remain far apart on solutions to a budget crisis which is expected to produce a deficit of $170 billion this year.

The commission, which now goes out of existence, was a deep disappointment to supporters, who pushed legislation creating the panel through Congress in the wake of the October 1987 stock market crash.

Their hopes were that a panel of the nation's top business, labor and political leaders would be able to agree on a combination of spending cuts and tax increases to solve a deficit problem which has almost tripled the national debt over the past eight years.

But while campaigning for the White House, Bush was openly critical of the commission, which had the backing of his Republican primary opponent, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan. Bush vowed to reject any final report which called for a tax increase.

Both reports called for a goal of not simply eliminating the deficit but achieving surpluses to build up the funds necessary to cover the retirement of the "Baby Boom" generation.

Both reports endorsed the need to reform the congressional budget process with the Republicans offering a detailed list of suggestions, many of them long championed by Ronald Reagan and now Bush.

They include a constitutional balanced-budget amendment, presidential line-item veto authority in spending bills, a streamlined congressional process for making budget decisions and two-year rather than annual budgets.
