CORRECTION

"Greens generate green," an article in Friday's issue of the Hereford Brand, contained incorrect information about private corporate tournaments held at the John Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

The course has been the site of 16 private corporate tournaments since 1996.

The newspaper regrets the error.

'A LIGHT AT END OF EVERY TUNNEL'

Family has tragedy, triumph

BRAND Photo

Mark Phillips has no memory of the accident nor for a couple of months after it; however, while in the coma he would acknowledge Debbie's presence (which he has no memory of), but not by words, by his heart machine. ... Every time Debbie would touch Mark's hand his heart machine would go crazy. The nurses had to ask Debbie to leave the room because she was distracting their monitoring of Mark.

By Julie L. Carlson
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

The famous expression "There's a light at the end of every tunnel" holds true for Minister Mark Phillips of Vega and his family.

July 4, 1994, was a day Mark entered that tunnel and since then, the light miraculously seems to become brighter each day.

Fourth of July is a time for friends and family to join together, relax, eat barbecue and apple pie and watch fireworks. That was the plan on July 4, 1994, for Mark and his wife, Debbie, and their two daughters, Holly and Ashleigh. Mark Phillips, an Amarillo native, was the associate pastor at Abilene's First United Methodist Church, where church members had planned a Fourth of July social — but neither Mark nor the family would attend.

On that Fourth of July morning, the Phillipses took their oldest daughter, Holly, to the church, where she was leaving on a church youth group trip. Afterwards, Debbie and their youngest daughter, Ashleigh, headed for the movies to watch the newly released "Lion King" and Mark went with two of his friends motorbike racing on a track about 12 miles outside of Abilene.

Mark had been racing since he was a teen-ager and had motorbiked on this track several times. He knew every bump, twist and turn of the track. After gearing up and putting on his helmet, he and his two friends started making their rounds. Mark's third time around the track would send him into the darkest imaginable tunnel only to loose site of any form of light.

Mark's bike hit a "whoop-dee-do" (a speed-bump like rise on the track). As his two friends looked helplessly on they saw Mark fly into the air and land, with his bike on top of him. The friends shouted cheers and encouragement for Mark to do another "end-o" (flip), but no response was heard or movement was made from Mark's limp, lifeless body.

BRAND/Julie L. Carlson

Mark and Debbie Phillips have written a book about his near-fatal motorcycle accident and rehabilitation.

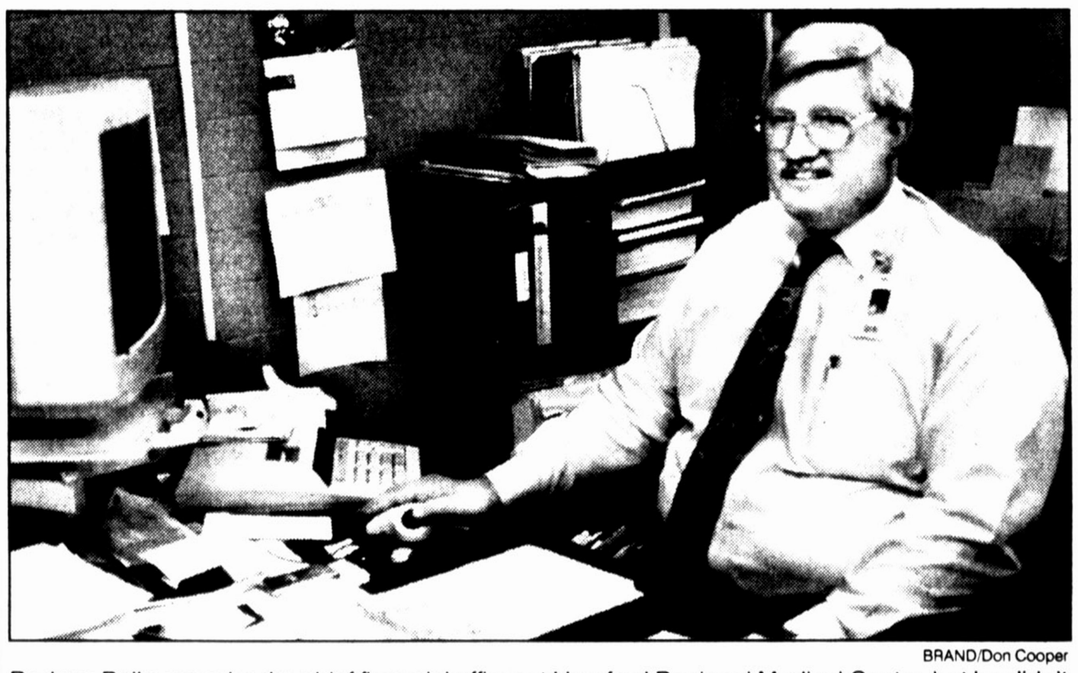

Mark suffered severe brain trauma and was in a coma for two weeks. He was given a 5 percent chance of living once pneumonia set in while he was still in the coma. Then how did this courageous man survive? He modestly takes no credit for his strength and whole-heartedly said: "Mark's not the hero. Two people are — God and Debbie."

Staying at his side day and night, Debbie gave Mark the enormous encouragement he needed, especially during his 14 days in a coma. Mark has no memory of the accident nor for a couple of months after it; however, while in the coma he would acknowledge Debbie's presence (which he has no memory of), but not by words, by his heart machine.

Yes, his heart machine.

It sounds like only something read in a romance novel, but every time Debbie would touch Mark's hand his heart machine would go crazy. The nurses had to ask Debbie to leave the room because she was distracting their monitor-

Rodney Bailey may be the chief financial officer at Hereford Regional Medical Center, but he didn't plan to enter the health care industry when he was an undergraduate student at West Texas State University.

Bailey didn't plan career

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Rodney Bailey may have "stumbled" into the hospital industry, but he's found it to his liking.

Bailey, who has been chief financial officer at Hereford Regional Medical Center for nearly five years, acknowledged he didn't plan a career in the hospital industry when he graduated from West Texas State University (now West Texas A&M) in Canyon.

"I really just stumbled into the hospital industry. I got out of school and was trying to find a job, and High Plains Baptist (now Baptist St. Anthony's) had an accounting job open," Bailey said. "I applied for it and got it."

Bailey is a native of the Panhandle, growing up in Amarillo. He earned a bachelor of business administration degree, with a major in accounting, from WTSU, then became a certified public accountant.

He later would work in Victoria; Carbondale, Ill., where he operated his own consulting firm; and Lovington, N.M.

Bailey stayed at High Plains Baptist for about a year before taking a position with the Northwest Health System in Amarillo, staying there for eight years.

He got his first taste of hospital administrative work during three years with the Family Hospital Center in Amarillo.

"I was the administrator and CFO of a 50-bed facility. Bedwise, that's larger than this one (HRMC). But it was a struggling facility," Bailey said. "The first year, we were not quite at break-even. In the second year, I hired an orthopedic surgeon and we had the best year the hospital ever had. But in the third year, the surgeon died and it went back down."

He would leave the now-defunct facility and worked for Nor-Lea General in Lovington.

The hospital was being purchased by another management group and didn't have adequate books, so Bailey was brought in to set up the ac counts payable, general ledger and payroll.

"But they did have the accounts receivable set up," he said with a laugh, noting the hospital was equipped to col-

Early balloting starts Monday

■ Voters to decide fate of 17 changes to state constitution

Early voting in the Nov. 2 constitutional amendment election begins Monday in the Deaf Smith County Clerk's Office at the courthouse.

The early voting will continue through Oct. 29. Polls will not be open on Saturdays for this election.

Texas voters will be asked to decide the fate of 17 amendments to the state constitution when they go to the polls Nov. 2 – if they do decide to go. Constitutional amendment elections traditionally have low turnouts.

Both sides take a look at Proposition 9, which would set up a commission to determine salaries for judges. — Page A5

In 1995, the turnout was just 7.9 percent for the amendment election; 6.9 percent of the voters showed up at the polls in a property tax amendment vote in August 1997; and, 10.6 percent cast ballots in the November 1997 election, according to figures provided by the Secretary of State's Office.

Because the turnout in Deaf Smith County is expected to be low, all of the county polls have been consolidated into the Hereford city limits. People located in Precincts 1 and 7 will vote at Aikman Primary School; Precinct 2 will vote at the Courthouse; Precincts 3 and 8 will be at Hereford Junior High; and Precincts 4, 5, 6, and 9 will vote at the Hereford Community Center.

Since Texas' Constitution was adopted in 1876, 550 amendments have been proposed, with 377 amendments being approved. Seventeen amendments have been submitted by the Legislature to be voted on in November. The propositions and a summary on each provided from the Lone Star Report include:

Proposition 1 clarifies the succession pattern in the event of a vacancy in the governorship, a situation made more pressing by Gov. Bush's presidential bid.

The current constitution can be interpreted to allow the lieutenant governor to assume the powers of the governor without relinquishing his existing post. Many argue such an arrangement would unduly concentrate power. The proposed change makes clear that the lieutenant governor automatically becomes governor, with the Senate picking his replacement from its own ranks.

Proposition 2 makes changes to conform with federal law regarding the use of reverse mortgages. a "credit agreement under which a lender provides money to a borrower in exchange for a lien on the borrower's home." The borrower "is generally not required to repay the money... until the borrower dies or moves out of the home." Lenders are refusing to make such loans in Texas unless these changes are made.

Proposition 3 strikes "duplicative, executed, obsolete, archaic, and ineffective provisions of the Texas Constitution." The amendment revises 64 different provisions and completely repeals 17 others. A reference to "county poor

Local roundup

HISD schedules College Night

College Night in the Hereford Independent School District will be 6:30-8:30 p.m. Thursday at the administration building, 600 N. 25 Mile Ave.

More than 30 colleges will attend the event, which will provide an opportunity for junior and senior students and their parents to visit with the college representatives and pick up applications and scholarship information.

The public is invited.

Citywide Night of Praise planned

Members of several Hereford-area churches are coming together for a citywide Night of Praise at 6 p.m. Sunday at Frio Baptist Church, south of Hereford.

The service is designed to bring unity to local congregations through prayer, praise and fellowship. The non-denominational worship service is a monthly event and is held at various churches in the area.

The public is invited.

School board schedules session

Members of the Hereford Independent School District board will consider cabling bids for the new vocational building when they meet at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the board room at the administration building, 600 N. 25 Mile Ave.

The board also will:

- Discuss the Deaf Smith Appraisal District ballot;
- Consider class-size waivers for Aikman, Bluebonnet and Tierra Blanca schools;
- Consider changing the date for the January and April board meeting dates; and
- Receive administrative reports.

Banking firm earnings rise

From staff reports

First Financial Bankshares Inc. recently announced record net earnings of $6,533,000, or 66 cents per share, for the three months ending Sept. 30.

Those figures compare to earnings of $5,931,000, or 60 cents per share for the same period in 1998, and represent gains of 10.2 percent and 10 percent respectively.

The holding company also reported total net earnings of $19,132,000 for the year-to-date.

As of Sept. 30, consolidated assets totaled $1.687 billion, up from $1.609 billion a year earlier. Loans totaled $797 million and total deposits were $1.484 billion at the end of September this year.

Kenneth T. Murphy, chairman and chief executive officer of First Financial Bankshares, said the third-quarter comparative earnings improvement was attributable to gains in net interest income and service-related revenue, as well as slightly lower operating expense.

First Financial Bankshares, headquartered in Abilene, is the parent company of nine Texas banks, operating from 25 locations. Those banks include; First National Bank of Abilene, First National Bank in Cleburne, Eastland National Bank, Hereford State Bank, San Angelo National Bank, Texas National Bank, Southlake, Stephenville Bank & Trust Co. First National Bank of Sweetwater and Weatherford National Bank.

The company's stock is listed on the NASDAQ National Market Exchange under the trading symbol FFIN.

farms" would be dropped, and the governor would be relieved of his duty to "protect the frontier from hostile incursions by Indians or other predatory bands." The resolution detailing the affected provisions runs 100 pages.

Proposition 4 allows the legislature to "exempt property owned by institutions engaged primarily in public charitable functions from ad valorem taxation." The current constitution requires such properties to be used "exclusively" for the charitable function.

Proposition 5 would allow state employees to receive compensation for serving on a governing body of a school district, city, town, or other local governmental district. This would enable, for instance, Austin City Councilman Bill Spelman finally to collect his council pay. Spelman, a UT professor, found out after winning a 1997 election that he would have to forego the $30,000 annual salary.

Proposition 6 increases the "maximum size of an urban homestead to 10 acres," making it easier for rural residents to obtain home equity loans. The measure is a follow-up to the 1997 constitutional amendment legalizing such loans.

Proposition 7 represents a major step in a crusade by Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston, to bring alimony to Texas. Thompson created an alimony provision in Texas law as part of 1995's omnibus welfare reform bill. This amendment will allow the garnishment of wages - currently allowed only for payment of child support - for "court-ordered spousal maintenance."

The adjutant general, responsible for overseeing the Texas National Guard and its State Guard counterpart, will serve at the pleasure of the governor if Proposition 8 is approved.

Proposition 9 authorizes the legislature to "create a judicial compensation commission." Nine gubernatorial appointees would suggest what state judges be paid. Their recommendations would become law unless rejected by a majority in either the Texas House or Senate.

Proposition 10 would make the health and human services commissioner serve at the pleasure of the governor. This item also stirred a passionate House floor debate, as opponents asked whether the change shifted too much authority over billions of dollars in state spending to the governor's office.

Proposition 11 allows a political subdivision to buy a policy from a mutual insurance company, and Proposition 12 would let the Legislature exempt from property tax vehicles that are leased for personal use.

Proposition 13 would authorize the state to issue $400 million in general obligation bonds to finance student loans.

Proposition 14 says all state boards or commissions must consist of an odd number of three or more members. The Legislature would have two sessions to "identify and change affected boards to an odd number of members."

Proposition 15 allows "spouses to agree to convert separate property to community property." Any conversion agreement must be in written form and becomes unenforceable if one spouse's cooperation was later determined to have been involuntary.

Proposition 16 raises the population-size brackets used by various counties to determine how many justice of the peace and constable precincts each must have.

The stated goal is to save rural counties from creating positions that may not be needed following the 2000 census.

Proposition 17 changes the investment strategies used by the Permanent University Fund. Capital gains could be figured as part of the fund's total earnings in calculating how much can be transferred to the available university fund for distribution. As of now, only interest and dividend earnings can be tallied. The other proposed switch would abandon the "prudent person" benchmark for evaluating risk and adopt the slightly more liberal "prudent investor" test.

More details on the propositions are online at http://www.tlc.state.tx.us/tlc/research/pubs.htm.

lect money it was owed, but not equipped to pay money it owed.

In assessing his job, Bailey said he likes the way "it's always something new. It's always changing; it's not always the same routine and, ultimately, it helps people get medical care."

However, Bailey said his job is made more difficult by the volatility of the industry.

"There's greater pressure now to find areas that offer opportunities for the hospital to make revenue, and those are few and far between," he said.

"Reimbursement (for Medicare/Medicaid procedures) is wreaking havoc throughout the industry," he said. The problem is aggravated by uncertainty about what guidelines will be adopted by the federal government.

For example, during Fiscal 1998, the hospital had to establish a reserve fund of about $390,000 to pay back overpayments by Medicare/Medicaid, reducing money available for hospital operations. However, the hospital did not have to reimburse the federal program because of a change in the guidelines.

As the Congress considers possible reforms in the Medicare/Medicaid programs, hospitals are uncertain about what procedures will qualify for reimbursement and what will be dropped from coverage.

Another problem at HRMC, Bailey said, has been the instability of administration. During his tenure at the hospital, two permanent administrators — Jim Robinson and John Studsrud — have resigned.

"We have had two permanent administrators and two interims from Covenant — and I was the interim for a while," Bailey said. "I'm not being critical of (interim administrator) J.O. (Lewis) because he is extremely capable and knowledgeable, but he still is an interim."

Because of the turnover, Bailey said he and other department heads have seen their responsibilities increase.

"I have to bear more of the load, from the administrative end, because of the interim situation," he said.

Looking down the road, he said he would like to see a new hospital in Hereford.

"I'd like to see a new hospital for the community; I think the people deserve one," Bailey said. "However, that doesn't necessarily have to mean a new facility. It could be a renovation of (the current hospital). I just see that as necessary.

"The alternative to that is not what I think the community will want or need."

Bailey's wife, Sandra, is a registered nurse and described as "the love of my life."

"We were each other's first love, but we didn't get married until 30 years later. We both had families by someone else," Bailey said.

"She moved to Dallas in the 11th grade. My sister moved to Dallas in '95 — they had stayed in touch — and they got together. She (Sandra) was going through a divorce and my sister told me I ought to come down. I did, and we picked up where we left off 30 years before."

ing of Mark.

Mark quoted a verse from the Bible, Proverbs 31:29, which he says describes Debbie best: 'There are many noble women, but you surpass them all.'

Debbie admits Mark's not the same person she married, but she's come to accept change.

"Even though Mark's recovered, he's not the man I married. Before we married he hated hotdogs and when he came home (from the hospital) he wanted hotdogs two to three times a week," she said.

She says he's only changed in ways the family and close friends would notice, not someone who has met him since the accident.

After 10 months in therapy, Mark was beginning to notice a slight glare on the side of the tunnel. He was on his remarkable way to recovery. Today, his only noticeable sign of his injury is a slight limp with his left leg, which he says has become a conversation piece and has enabled him to share his experience with others. It's a miracle he is able to walk. Mark was paralyzed on his left side for several months and had to learn to walk again.

Mark even had to learn to swallow again and was fed by a tube that went directly to his stomach. His daughters thought it was neat that Dad didn't have to taste his medicine thanks to the tube.

Holly and Ashleigh were power engines for Mark's recovery. The two girls had to grow up fast within the months Mark was still in therapy. The role had reversed; the girls had to babysit dad when Debbie would run errands. This was a huge responsibility placed upon their shoulders and as Mark says about Debbie: "She was mommy and daddy." And, the girls were also.

When asked about the wreck, Ashleigh is quick to say, "I thought it just happened on TV." The recovery has been a daily process for five years now and Holly, the more reserved daughter, says, "Every day you see him getting better."

Mark is a very realistic person and admits he takes things for granted, but the things he doesn't take for granted are being able to walk across the room and turn the light on or being able to take out the trash.

"I still take things for granted, but not as for granted," he said.

Most people would ask the question: "God, why did this happen to me?" Mark Phillips knows what God's answer would be and with a slight laugh says, "God is in control and doesn't owe (me) any explanation." He and his family say they do believe everything happens for a reason.

Mark hasn't ridden a motorbike since the wreck, but not because he doesn't want to. "God took the desire away. I'm not a crusader against motorcycles. The same thing could've happened if I slipped off my front step and hit the back of my head," he said.

His daughters love to ride four-wheelers, but Debbie does admit she gets a little uneasy. "You're very cautious, I have to be careful with my girls. It just changes your whole perspective."

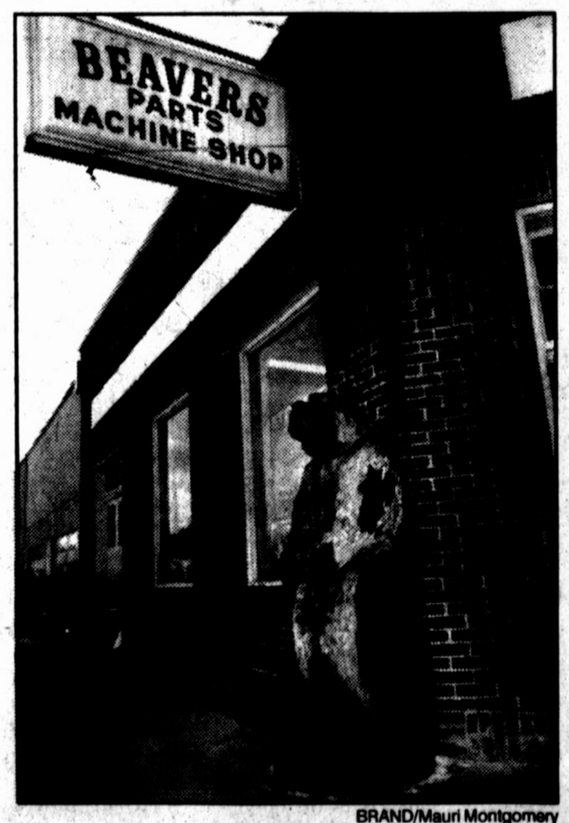

The Phillips made national news when they were featured on the "700 Club" about Mark's wreck and now Mark and Debbie have accomplished yet one more "whoop-dee-do" in their life by writing a book about their experience and the people and power of prayer that has gotten them through so much turmoil.

The book, entitled "The Last Ride: From Tragedy to Triumph," is just one more blessing sent their way. Mark has sent the book to the hit television show "Touched By an Angel" and has also e-mailed Oprah for their book to be featured in "Oprah's Book Club."

Mark and Debbie Phillips enjoy sharing their tragedy to triumph story. They can be contacted at (806) 267-0734.

Eighty- to 85 percent of marriages end in divorce when one spouse has suffered a incapacitating injury. Mark and Debbie have beaten the odds and have proudly been married for almost 19 years.

Mark is living proof there is a light at the end of every tunnel, but he has also seen a rainbow full of color and life!

Not exactly a beaver — Terry Beaver, owner of Beavers Parts Machine Shop, was looking for a carved beaver to put up outside his business when he went to the woodcarver's shop in Ruidoso, N.M. There were no beavers available, so he bought a 7-foot-tall, 1,500-pound carved bear. The machine shop has been in business in Hereford since 1917 and at its 3rd Street location since 1928. BILLY'S GRAVE

Billy the Kid

Lonely,
Even with his pals Tom and Charlie on either side,
In the little cemetery
Where the wind sings its mournful tune,
Calling his name, haunting and mournful as it calls his name.
Does Billy hear it calling?
Can he hear the footsteps
Of tourists tramping along the gravel path that leads to where he lies.
Does Billy hear the clicks of the shutters
as the cameras record the image of his tombstone.
Would he have wanted
to have been buried alone in an unmarked grave,
Alone and known only to the coyotes?
No, not little buck-toothed Billy.
He would have wanted his name boldly inscribed
On a tall marker,
Granite and polished smooth by the wind;
A monument towering higher than any other marker,
So everyone can see where he lies.

Quake jolts L.A. area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A magnitude-7.0 earthquake centered in the Southern California desert shook buildings from downtown Los Angeles to Las Vegas early today and knocked an Amtrak train off its tracks. There were no immediate reports of serious injuries or major damage.

Amtrak said its Southwest Chief en route from Chicago to Los Angeles derailed in the Mojave Desert near Ludlow, a community more than 125 miles northeast of Los Angeles. The passenger cars remained upright.

There were 155 passengers on the 25-car train. Passenger Sharon Kososinski said there was no panic on board.

"Most people were sound asleep," she told CNN. "It was rocking and rolling, back at the sleeper cars ... That's the part of the train that's completely off the tracks."

She said one passenger dislocated her shoulder. Amtrak said it planned to take the passengers to Los Angeles by bus.

Karen Kahler, a seismologist at the California Institute of Technology, said the quake hit at 2:46 a.m. and was centered 32 miles north of Joshua Tree, 100 miles east of Los Angeles. There were multiple aftershocks.

The earthquake was felt across hundreds of miles of Southern California and at least as far away as Yuma, Ariz. With a preliminary magnitude of 7.0, it was more than strong enough to cause major destruction but was centered in a remote area with few structures or residents.

Between 5,000 and 10,000 people lost power in Los Angeles and there were scattered transformer explosions. Downed power lines started small brush fires near Palm Springs.

"That was a bad one. Things are bouncing around all over. But we are all right. I have to go and call the kids," Lucille Manning said from her home in Chino, east of downtown Los Angeles.

The earthquake woke up tourists in Las Vegas, more than 150 miles from the epicenter.

"I wasn't sure what it was," said John Fabian, who was staying on the 18th floor of the Mirage Hotel. "My wife said we've got to get out."

Fabian's wife, Michele, added: "The whole place was shaking like crazy."

Authorities in Las Vegas and the Los Angeles area said there were no reports of serious damage.

Technology fee should be OK'd

A proposed ordinance establishing a Municipal Court Technology fee likely will be adopted Monday night by the Hereford City Commission — as it should be.

The ordinance just makes sense because it will provide needed revenue for the city while not saddling Hereford residents with higher taxes.

During the last session of the Texas Legislature, the lawmakers approved a law giving cities the authority to establish the technology fee to provide a source of revenue for computer hardware, software and technical support in the municipal courts.

Although the amount of the fee has not been decided, the city commissioners already have shown a willingness to adopt the ordinance. The fee would be listed as court costs and would be added to the fines levied in municipal court.

The fee represents a form of "user fee" because the only people who will have to pay are those who "use" the Hereford Municipal Court.

As the mayor and city commissioners said, the only people who will be assessed the fee are the individuals who "make a municipal court necessary."

This "user" fee is a good idea, and we urge the City Commission to approve the ordinance.

The Daily Oklahoman*, on Columbine:

It's enough to make you weep. Hallway tiles commemorating some of the students slain in Littleton, Colo., tragedy are being banned by public school officials because they bear religious themes.

The students' families and school administrators have gone back and forth on the 4-by-4 tiles prepared for Columbine High School's memorial wall. One tile, for example, depicted a red rose and a small yellow cross.

That one and others with religious symbols ultimately were removed for fear of offending someone or worse, prompting a lawsuit.

Indeed, a lawsuit was filed — by families wanting their loved ones' tiles displayed with the others. The pitiful episode reminds again how far government's pendulum has swung against constitutional guarantees to freely express religious beliefs.

Much misinformation being spread about school prayer

Donald Cooper

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof ..."

1st Amendment, U.S. Constitution

Something I don't understand is the fixation some people have on praying in school.

For some of these people, it's become almost a jihad and supercedes any other thing in school, even the three R's.

The prayer issue should not be controversial, but it is, thanks to misunderstanding of what the Supreme Court stated in 1962 and the misinformation being spread by fast-buck televangelists, politicians pandering to the Religious Right and others with their own agenda.

In 1962, the U.S. Supreme Court issued an opinion in a case from New York. The state board of education had written a prayer, a rather innocuous, one-size-fits-all sort of thing, and directed the state's school districts to use that prayer to start the school day.

In its ruling, the Supreme Court declared the state-written and state-mandated prayer to be unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court did not rule students could not pray in school. It merely ruled that state boards of education cannot write prayers and require the use of those prayers.

Students still can pray privately in school — and there's no one preventing them from doing that. What the Supreme Court prohibited, and what I believe should be prohibited, is prayer organized or promoted by the school.

There remains confusion among both sides of the issue about the Supreme Court's ruling. For example, the federal judges on the 11th Circuit ruled that prayers and other religious speech initiated by students is protected by the Constitution, while the 5th Circuit recently required school officials to censor student-initiated and student-conducted prayer at events sponsored by school districts.

Because the two rulings are in such conflict, the Supreme Court will be called upon to reconcile the issue — probably to the satisfaction of no one.

I have always believed prayer to be a deeply personal act, one between an individual and the Deity.

The 1st Amendment and the original 1962 Supreme Court ruling may not have been perfect, but both were fair; serving no zealot on either side of the prayer issue more than the other.

And, it seems that Jesus had some thoughts on the subject:

"And when you pray, do not be like the hypocrites, for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and on the street corners, but when you pray go into your room, close the door and pray ..."

Dead treaty, live political issue?

Walter R. Mears
The Associated Press

With President Clinton accusing Senate Republicans of reckless, blatant partisanship, Democrats are trying to stir the rejection of the nuclear test ban treaty into a 2000 campaign issue.

But even Clinton had to acknowledge that it may not work. He had said earlier that the test ban would not be a huge issue either way, and the polls indicate that probably is so.

Since the end of the Cold War, foreign policy concerns have slipped down the list of voter priorities, dominated by issues at home.

Clinton said the Senate "clearly disregarded the views of the American people who have consistently and strongly supported this treaty ever since it was first pursued by Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy."

Eisenhower proposed a nuclear test ban in 1958, in a different world, challenging the old Soviet Union to agree to stop testing. Kennedy signed, and the Senate approved, a limited test ban treaty in 1963, barring all but underground nuclear tests by the United States and the Soviet Union.

The treaty Clinton signed in 1996 and lost in the Senate would extend an international ban on atmospheric tests to underground testing.

Republican opponents said the ban couldn't be enforced, and was dangerous to future U.S. security. They voted it down 51 to 48 on Wednesday, with four Republicans in favor. Ratification would have required a two-thirds majority, 67 votes, and Clinton never was close to that strength.

"This was a political deal and I hope it will get the treatment from the American people it richly deserves," the president said after the vote he knew he would lose.

LEAFING well enough alone

Mauri Montgomery

Hello, Hereford.

About this time every year, the National Arbor Day Society finds that it has no friend in my mother-in-law. Nor would Al Gore, or anyone else who sports an unfettered love of trees — especially deciduous trees.

There are about 4,000 reasons my mother-in-law doesn't take pause and join the rest of us as we breath in the last throes of summer, to watch autumn's inevitable surrender to winter's uninspiring canvas.

And all 4,000 of them, carried by West Texas winds, gravity and the natural order of things, are beginning their carefree spiral toward her yard — big brown leaves that sully her well-manicured Bermuda lawn.

To know Martha is to know her dread of this season, that this is not the time to wax poetically about the beauty of fall foliage.

Martha hates fallen leaves. She despises them. She worries over them during the day. She frets over them at night, and she has one front yard tree that gives her no reprieve until the first frost ends her misery for another year.

One day last week, Martha confided, almost as an afterthought, that she had gone out in her housecoat and slippers to rake the yard by moonlight.

She has suffered from arboreous-leaf-it-off-is (if it was a real word, it would mean a person who hates having leaves on the grass) for so long she doesn't see anything abnormal about her behavior.

She couldn't go to sleep knowing that tree, with nary a rustle, was quietly laying waste to her pristine yard.

Still, understanding her as well as I do, the picture of her midnight battle against untidiness ranks right up there with the sight of her in gray sweats, baseball cap cinched down to her ears and white canvas sneakers while mowing — mostly vacuuming — around snow banks in the yard during December and January.

"Boy, I hate that tree," she says in her gruffy rote our family knows so well. "It has ugly leaves. Bi-g-g-g brown ones. I would never have planted that tree if they'd have told me it made big brown leaves."

We had heard it all before.

Not yet finished with her malcontent, she looks at me and my wife, "Your leaves are pretty at your house. Mine are ugly. Oh, boy, I hate that tree. Boy!" And, as usual, she also quickly adds: "If my son-in-law really and truly loved me, he would come over and volunteer to get those leaves out my yard."

The comment drew the customary laughs from everyone.

Her son-in-law, even with best intentions, has worsened about completing the little projects of hers that have come his way — always telling himself there's still time to finish them before Judgment Day arrives. Her leaves will then be the least of her son-in-law's worries.

So, the little woman is usually left to her own devices. And, she's crafty.

Under further interrogation, she showed no remorse when she admitted she raked the leaves that dark night and then dumped the evidence, scooting the pile of big brown leaves in a huff and a puff to the center of her street. It was a bit of desperate ingenuity, designed to allow passing cars to carry away the bane of her existence, swishing them down the block at 30 mph and crushing them repeatedly into compost oblivion.

But like many improvised plots, the clandestine operation wasn't perfect.

It seems the most obvious pitfall was that her yard holds some magnetic appeal for the leaves. Some of them swished right back to their favorite resting place — on her yard.

The incomplete kill ratio didn't phase her, or diminish her resolve to win her escalating war against leaf tyranny.

I smirked. "But, Mom, now someone else is going to have to suffer with those big brown leaves traffic plows down the street?"

She shrugged it off.

"Ah huh, but they don't lay awake at night worrying about their leaves like I do," she said. "Boy! I hate that tree. I'm gonna chop it down. One of my bi-g-g-g brown leaves makes 10 of everybody else's."

She wasn't exaggerating too much. I don't know what kind of shade tree she has, but I've seen her Paul Bunyon-sized brown leaves.

I've often thought she might varnish them and turn them into coffee table conversation bowls, though good sense has dictated I keep the nifty idea to myself.

POINT/COUNTERPOINT

Should a commission set judicial salaries?

The Lone Star Report begins a four-week look at the Nov. 2 constitutional amendment elections. Over the next four weeks, the LSR will feature point/counterpoints on several of the higher-profile items.

This week, the focus is on Proposition 9, authored by Sen. J. E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, to transfer primary responsibility for setting judicial salaries from the Legislature to a gubernatorial commission.

Next: Proposition 7 (wage garnishment for alimony).

YES

By Judge David West

Independence, accountability, self-governance, and strength through cooperation and interdependence were the themes of the 14 recommendations issued three years ago by the Texas Commission on Judicial Efficiency after intense study of the Texas judicial system.

Over 50 distinguished Texans served as members of the Commission on Judicial Efficiency (CJE), and in November 1996, CJE issued its finding and recommendations on a variety of matters relating to Texas Courts. One of those recommendations will be on the Nov. 2 ballot as Proposition 9.

Proposition 9 would add a new Section 32 to Article V of the Texas Constitution, authorizing the Legislature to create a Judicial Compensation Commission. Nine other states have authorized and established such a commission. The Texas Judicial Compensation Commissioner would be charged with recommending judicial salaries for justices and judges of the Supreme Court, the Court of Criminal Appeals, the courts of appeals, and the state district courts. The Commission's recommendations would become law unless rejected by a majority vote of either the Senate or House.

Our system of justice is founded upon the principle of the independence of the judiciary. Inadequate funding threatens the integrity of the courts and the impartial administration of justice. The courts' role as a co-equal partner in a tripartite form of government is critical, and adequate funds to fulfill their mission are necessary for them to play their part.

Texans have a constitutional claim to adequate funding of their courts to ensure the speedy administration of justice. Yet the state appropriates less than one-third of one percent of the total state budget to the judicial branch. In fact, Texas now lags behind most other states in terms of overall funding for the judiciary and in judicial salaries.

One possible reason the Legislature has been historically wary of judicial funding is that retirement pensions for legislators is tied by statute to the salaries of district judges. So when the Legislature votes to increase judicial salaries, the members simultaneously increase their own retirement benefits, creating the perception of a conflict of interest and contributing to the reluctance that many legislators have to reviewing judicial compensation on a consistent basis.

Passage of Proposition 9 would allow a nine-member, independent commission appointed by the governor, with advice and consent of the Senate, to review judicial salaries based on a number of specific criteria. These criteria would include:

1. The level of overall compensation adequate to attract the most highly qualified individuals in the state, from a diversity of life and professional experiences, to serve in the judiciary without unreasonable economic hardship and with judicial independence unaffected by financial concerns;
2. The skill, experience, and time required of the particular judgeship;
3. Comparable compensation paid to judges in other states, federal judges, and other members connected with the judiciary; and
4. The cost of living and inflation.

As the citizens appointed to the CJE recommending, creating a judicial compensation commission has several significant advantages over the present system. The commission would remove any perceived conflict of interest by allowing an independent body to review and determine an appropriate recommendation to the Legislature for judicial compensation.

This does not grant undue authority to an appointed body. It creates an impartial review of judicial salaries. The elected legislature ultimately retains final authority because either the House or Senate could reject the commission's recommendations. Nothing prevents the Legislature from changing the commission's recommendations and setting different salaries in the general appropriations act if it wishes. The governor also plays a role in the process by making the initial appointments (subject to Senate approval) and retaining the power of a gubernatorial veto of any provision of the general appropriations act.

Another advantage of a judicial compensation commission is that it allows for a regular, focused study of judicial salaries. If the state judiciary is to serve the citizens of Texas in the most effective and efficient manner, it must be able to attract the most able attorneys to the bench and be able to retain the most experienced judges. Having an accountable, independent commission to advise the Legislature regarding judicial compensation will engender public trust and confidence that Texas has the best judiciary possible.

Judge David West (retired) is a past chairman of the Texas Association of State Judges.

NO

By Rep. John Shields

Proposition 9 is the latest example of a Trojan horse.

The original Trojan horse, carved out of wood, showed up at the gates of Troy one morning in Greek history. The unaware citizens of Troy unknowingly cooperated with the Greek army by bringing the giant horse inside their walled city. Under cover of darkness, Greek soldiers sneaked out of the horse and opened the gates of the city, thereby allowing the rest of the Greek army to invade and plunder Troy.

As Texans head to the polls in the next few days to vote on the proposed constitutional amendments, most remain unaware of the agenda hidden inside Proposition 9. A vote for Proposition 9 will result in unknowing cooperation with an agenda to raise lawmakers' retirement pay without telling the citizens each year, and permanently tying lawmakers' pay hikes to salaries of judges. Forever.

On the outside of this latest example of a Trojan horse, we read about a judicial pay commission. In fact, the title of Proposition 9 says "Judicial Pay Commission." Be aware that Proposition 9 has more to do with hiking lawmakers' pay and keeping voters in the dark than it has to do with judges. Of course, this is not the first time that lawmakers have hidden behind the robes of the judges to get retirement pay hikes. So the judicial pay commission would use a plan that has worked before. The difference this time is that the linkage between the judges' pay and the lawmakers' pay would be made permanent and never get news coverage again.

They tell us that the lawmakers would need to OK the pay hikes recommended by the commission. Not true. That's the reason for trying to put it into the Texas Constitution. Proposition 9 takes power away from the lawmakers elected by the citizens and gives it to unelected bureaucrats. Sure, let's create a new panel of bureaucrats to duplicate with the lawmakers are already elected and paid to do. Right. I don't think so. Why would lawmakers give away some of their power? For a pay hike.

And, what difference would it make if lawmakers could override the commission? How many times do you expect lawmakers to override a panel that is hiking lawmakers' pay. Not often.

They tell us that this is the only way to fix the pay for judges. Lawmakers voted raises for judges just two years ago. They can do it again. Some lawmakers say they took a lot of heat for voting for judges' pay raises. Strum those violins in the background. If lawmakers can't take the heat, they should exit the kitchen. And, they do plan to make an exit — with retirement pay for themselves, if Proposition 9 passes with its hidden agenda.

Now to make sure that Proposition 9 wins, they must keep you in the dark, uninformed of the hidden agenda. That would make for government at its worst: lack of informed consent, misinformation, diverting attention from what's inside this Trojan horse of a proposal. Government ought to take place in the sunshine, in the light of day with full information and debate. Visions of dimly lit, smoke-filled rooms come to mind. This is one of the things people don't like about government. Citizens will find it harder to hold lawmakers accountable for their decisions and votes when they delegate those decisions to non-elected bureaucrats and lawmakers can avoid those hot potatoes.

Proposition 9 violates our historic, tested and proved system of checks and balances as embodied in the bicameral legislative process with presentation to the governor for signature or veto. That's right, Proposition 9 does away forever with the power of the governor of Texas to veto pay hikes for lawmakers. So kiss that one goodbye.

What's the big deal? It is just more stealth legislation. Well-hidden agendas cannot succeed if the word gets out and citizens get informed and exercise the citizens' veto: Just vote no on Proposition 9.

Like the original Trojan horse, lawmakers hope Proposition 9 receives uninformed, unknowing citizen acceptance. Once safely inside the "city walls" on Nov. 2, the hidden agenda of Proposition 9 will begin to unfold and play out in the form of plunder of the taxpayers for the personal gain of lawmakers. If you favor checks and balances, government in the sunshine, truth in advertising, accountability of elected officials, and keeping the governor's veto power in this instance, then vote no on Proposition 9. If you agree that Proposition 9 should get renamed the Judicial and Lawmakers Pay Hike Commission, then vote no.

Rep. John Shields, R-San Antonio, serves on the House Judicial Affairs Committee.

Albuquerque (N.M.) Journal*, on the EPA toughening SUV emissions standards:

In May, the Environmental Protection Agency issued tougher emission requirements for cars and light trucks weighing less than 8,500 pounds, including sport utility vehicles (SUVs).

But automakers have actually boosted the weight of some new SUVs above that threshold, putting giants like the behemoth Ford Excursion and some models of the Chevrolet Suburban under weaker "heavy truck" emission rules.

That's why the EPA deserves support for trying to "close any possible loopholes for the new, super-large SUVs" by wrapping into the smaller-vehicle emissions proposal more stringent controls on sport utility giants (although those proposed are still not quite as tough as those on smaller cars and SUVs).

The Herald* of Rock Hill, S.C., on children's lack of writing skills:

Is the ability to write becoming irrelevant? One might ask that in light of a recent report that only one in four of the nation's students has the knowledge and skills needed to write stories and reports proficiently.

In a test sponsored by the Education Department, 60,000 fourth-graders, eighth-graders and 12th-graders were asked to write creative narratives, reports about events or experiences and persuasive pieces. While more than three-fourths of them showed basic writing skills, only one-fourth of them in each grade level were at least proficient.

That, of course, is an indictment of the teaching establishment. How do students reach the 12th grade without becoming proficient in one of the traditional "three R's"? ...

If only 25 percent of students know how to write, what does that say about the other 75 percent? God help us.

The Times* of London, on the Internet:

In as much as we can look into the future at all, the Internet seems to be the source of huge future wealth. But where is that wealth going to be made?

Not all Internet users on the other side of the Atlantic are the wired heroes of tomorrow's trade world, already baking the first millions from their first start-ups.

But getting familiar enough with virtual reality to become commercially creative is a lot easier in the United States than here. Since American phone companies do not charge for local calls, but just ask a flat fee for line rental, American Internet users on a local dial-up connection can be permanently online at no extra cost.

The result has been to keep America's e-trade years ahead of developments in Britain and Europe. With the Internet trade revolution already well under way, it is time for Europe's governments and telecommunication firms to change their strategy to stop their entrepreneurs falling further behind.

Le Temps* of Geneva, Switzerland, on the 6 billionth person:

The earth is marking a great day Tuesday as it passes the barrier of 6 billion inhabitants. But what's really important in this demographic event is not this new round number but the curve which has led to it. For this new billion, reached in 12 years, is the quickest ever achieved in the history of man.

The import of this event should be weighed against the fear that the population explosion created after World War II when the combination of a rising birth rate and a falling mortality rate produced the most spectacular effects.

The hypothesis at the time was that humanity would soon sag under its own weight, unable to feed itself. ...

Today the perception of the problem has changed. Demographers are studying a new hypothesis. Of course they are still concerned about the thousands of challenges produced by the growth of the world population for another two centuries or more; but they are beginning to imagine a scenario where the whole world would have the birth rate that already exists in developed countries. Slightly worried, they ask themselves what would happen if one day a third of the world's population were over 60?"

She's been waiting for me to refinish a key box and a small storage chest, both entrusted to my care long ago with the promise she'd be able to enjoy them before she was too old to rake leaves anymore.

Yes, her son-in-law's true blessing in the deal is that Martha is too busy vacuuming her yard year-round to worry about those unfinished projects.

Her neatnik preoccupation is in full swing these days. You can't reach her by phone because she's raking leaves two or three times per day now.

And even though she's gaining on the crop, she still has bushels of worries yet to contend with.

So, I deliver this note of caution to Hereford:

Use prudence if you have to travel past 103 Avenue K late at night. Harvest is still underway in at least one residential field.

Very likely, no safety road cones will be erected. And you never know when there might be a sweet little lady, clad in housecoat and slippers, standing in the middle of the street with rake in hand — who is working very hard to gather autumn's bounty and get on with a good night's sleep.

Treaty

Clinton also said that the treaty will ultimately be ratified. But it obviously won't happen on his watch, with Republicans in 55-to-45 Senate control through 2000, and therefore in command of what is brought up for action.

When the Democrats tried to challenge that GOP prerogative, and delay action on the treaty, they lost, on straight party lines.

That doesn't kill the treaty outright. Vice President Al Gore said rejection was "an act of almost breathtaking irresponsibility." He then made it the subject of his first campaign television commercial.

"I believe in my heart this vote does not speak for the American people," the vice president says in the ad. "So why don't we do something about it?"

He asked voters for their support in his campaign, and for a mandate to send the treaty back to the Senate in 2001.

Rival Democrat Bill Bradley also favors the treaty.

Gov. George W. Bush, the Republican frontrunner for 2000, is opposed, as are the other GOP candidates. But Bush says he would continue the voluntary moratorium on U.S. testing that has been in effect since 1992. Britain, France, Russia and, since 1996, China also are refraining from testing.

"Never before has a serious treaty involving nuclear weapons been handled in such a reckless and ultimately partisan way," Clinton said. "This issue should be beyond politics."

But campaign politics is the only arena in which the Democrats can pursue it now.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., who started the process that led to rejection and then couldn't control it, said he doubts they can make a winning campaign issue of the treaty because Americans know it is flawed.

Public opinion polls do show overwhelming support for a treaty prohibiting nuclear weapons test explosions worldwide — 82 percent, according to a 1999 survey the Democrats cite. But in issue surveys, foreign policy in general is cited by only about 5 percent of potential voters as a top priority, and the issue of nuclear weapons ranks even lower.

Clinton said at his news conference on Thursday that he never wanted the treaty to be a political issue, but it might become one now that the Republicans have blocked it.

But he also acknowledged that Americans aren't worried about the nuclear threat as they were in the Cold War era. So he said it may or may not have an impact on the campaign. He wants it to, although he minimized the prospect earlier when he was trying to get the Senate vote delayed, to avoid the defeat he knew was coming.

"This is not going to be a huge issue in the election one way or the other," Clinton said on Oct. 8.

Tap Dogs, an Australian dance troupe, will perform Oct. 25 at the Amarillo Civic Center.

Tap Dogs set Amarillo show

AMARILLO — An unlikely dance troupe will perform at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25 at the Amarillo Civic Center.

Tap Dogs, a troupe of Australian dancers with "irons on their toes," will bring their rhythmic performance to the Panhandle.

The group was formed by Dein Perry, an industrial machinist working near Sydney.

Perry gathered some friends who enjoyed tap dancing and put together a 45-minute act, first known as "Tap Brothers," and performed in a Sydney club.

The original 45-minute show grew into the Tap Dogs.

In recent interviews, Perry said his role model in dance was the late Fred Astaire. He also studied with Gregory Hines in London.

Tap dancing, which was very popular in the 1930s, generally choreographed all steps and movements, including the head and arms. However, Tap Dogs is different because it is choreographed from the waist down and the dancers are free to do what they want with the rest of their bodies.

Although the six dancers are doing the same steps, the various movements of their upper bodies gives the performance a roughness.

The dancers' attire is highly individualized, from cut-off jeans and T-shirts to Australian bush shorts.

From the original act, Tap Dogs has grown into a small industry with three troupes touring simultaneously. The original troupe is touring North America, a second is on tour in Australia, the third is in Europe.

Tickets are available at the box office, 4th and Buchanan streets, or can be charged by phone at 378-3096.

Local economy rebounds

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Hereford's economy rebounded last month, according to the Texas Comptroller's Office.

The city's sales tax rebate payment for October was $85,724.74, up 5.9 percent from the $80,980.62 received in Ocdtober 1998. The October payment was up from the $79,290.29 received in September.

For the year, Hereford has received $880,201.35, down nearly 2 percent from the $897,769.08 for the same period last year.

Deaf Smith County received a payment of $29,716.63, up 4.2 percent from the $28,524.59 received last October. The October payment also was up from the $27,160.21 received for September.

For the year, the county has received $302,565.04, down 1.4 percent from the $306,765.44 for the same period in 1998.

The comptroller's office delivered a total of $175.8 million in monthly sales tax payments to 1,097 Texas cities and 118 counties, a 1.2 percent increase over the $173.6 million allocated in October 1998. Year-to-date payments to cities and counties are running 5.8 percent ahead of last year.

The October rebates include local sales taxes collected by monthly filers in August and and reported to the comptroller's office in September.

The sales tax rebates included $161.7 million to Texas cities. So far this year, rebates to cities are 6.3 percent higher than for the same period in 1998.

Counties received October rebates of $14 million. Year-to-date rebates to counties are about identical to the same period last year. Another $5.5 million went to 44 special purpose districts around the state.

By law, the state collects sales taxes for Texas cities and counties that have local sales taxes. The comptroller's office then returns the portion of the taxes on a monthly basis.

The state charges a 6.25 percent sales tax and local sales taxes can be up to 2 percent above that.

Among the area counties, Castro County received $11,077.73, up 22.1 percent from the $9,071.46 for last year; Hale County's payment of $65,476.62 was 17.9 percent down from the $79,713.48 for last October.

City sets public hearing on trash

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

BOB JOSSERAND

Hereford city commissioners are expected to approve a new "user" fee when they meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chamber at City Hall, 224 N. Lee.

However, this fee won't be collected from everyone. The only people who will have to pay the fee are those who "use" the Hereford Municipal Court.

A law passed during the recent session of the Texas Legislature gives cities the authority to establish a municipal court technology fee to provide a source of revenue for computer hardware, software and support in municipal courts.

The proposed ordinance to be considered by the commissioners calls for a $2 fee to be added to fines levied in municipal court for misdemeanor offenses. The fee would be listed as court costs.

Although the commissioners indicated support for the ordinance at the Oct. 5 meeting, they have not decided what the fee should be.

Mayor Bob Josserand has said the fee is appropriate because it would collected only from the individuals who "make a municipal court necessary."

The commissioners also will conduct a public hearing on the trash problem in city alleys. Residents are encouraged to attend the meeting and provide recommendations about what to do to clean up the alleys.

The city contracts with BFI to collect household garbage. Other trash, such as broken furniture, grass clippings and old appliances, are to be taken to the city landfill; however, some residents have been piling the trash in the alleys rather than transporting it to the landfill.

In other business, the commissioners will:

- Consider a funding request from the Hereford & Vicinity YMCA;
- Consider the city's participation in the combined sealcoat program;
- Consider appointments to the city's Planning & Zoning Commission and Board of Adjustments;
- Hear a request from the Spicer Gripp Memorial Roping Committee; and
- Receive a report from the Hereford Economic Development Corp.

HISD improves web page

Special to The Brand

More news, pictures and information about the Hereford Independent School District can be reviewed easily by staff, students and the public on the expanded version of the district's web site.

The revised web site is produced entirely by district personnel.

The HISD site — http://www.hisd.net — features more news about student activities from inside the classroom to athletic events.

A weekly update on varsity sports, including statistics and photos, will be posted every Monday. The district's newsletter, Hereford Highlights, also has been placed on the web site and will be revised every two weeks or as often as necessary. These items add to the list of information about the district available on the World Wide Web.

Hereford Highlights will help keep the public informed about many daily activities, including student success stories, special awards, schedules and reports from meetings of the HISD trustees and district committees.

Photographs and information about varsity football and volleyball teams has been posted for several weeks and will continue throughout the season. Other sports will be added throughout the year.

Additional information posted on the web site includes the district's mission statement, district offices, contact information, campus directors, academia calendar, sports schedules and HISD employment opportunities.

A special archives section also is included where older stories about the district are stored and can be accessed easily by 'Net surfers.

The site also features a feedback feature, which will enable browsers to send comments or information to HISD personnel.

Questions about the site or district can be addressed to the "Send Email" area on the web site or by calling HISD at 364-0606.

HRMC's Surgical Services...

Hereford Regional Medical Center's surgical staff realizes that surgery, no matter how minor the procedure, is a major event in a person's life. To us it is critical each patient receives high quality, personal care in a familiar setting.

After all, the best medicine should be close to home.

HRMC's Surgical Team is made up of highly trained professionals that perform both inpatient and outpatient services. Some of these services include general surgery, endoscopy and optical surgery.

Obstetrical and surgical patients can now take advantage of the new epidural services at HRMC.

Hereford Regional Medical Center's full line of surgical services allows patients to receive high quality care with the personal attention they deserve.

It also underscores our belief that the best medicine is close to home.

■ Herd Volleyball much improved, but needs more if they want to go to Austin

YURI SOTO

Probably by the time you read this column, the Lady Whiteface volleyball team would have already been crowned District 3-4A Champions.

Coming into the job as a sports editor, I knew the tradition of volleyball was strong.

Then I looked at the roster for the Lady Whitefaces and it boggled me.

Four seniors. Eight underclassmen.

I certainly thought they were going to have their share of troubles.

Boy, was I proved wrong.

The losses they suffered were against very strong and sound teams, and even bigger teams.

Losses to Lubbock Coronado, Amarillo High and Amarillo Tascosa exposed a little bit of the undersized Lady Whitefaces, but brought in some toughness to the team.

Hereford's last loss, a two-game marathon against Canyon Randall put things in perspective as how Hereford would play toe to toe against the Lady Raiders if they ever crossed paths in the playoffs.

That loss also brought an interesting issue. How would Hereford, as young as they are, recover from that tough loss to Randall and play their district opener at Dumas?

Momentum began on the side of the Demonettes, but by late in the second game, the team got a spark and blew the Demonettes the rest of the way.

From that second game against Dumas, Hereford is on a 14-game winning streak and a six-match winning streak.

The play of the Whitefaces has not only been reflected on the part on Tori Walker, Audra Witkowski and the tough backside. It has been also reflected of the hitters' improving play: Michelle Bernhardt, Sarah Griffin, Toni Eicke, Pam Klein and Ashley Fangman.

In the history of Hereford volleyball, they are the most underrated group of hitters ever to step into Brenda Kitten's Boot Camp.

Their offensive play and play defensively on the net has taken some pressure off the All-World Walker, who early in the season looked like she was taking all the shots from the net.

They look good.

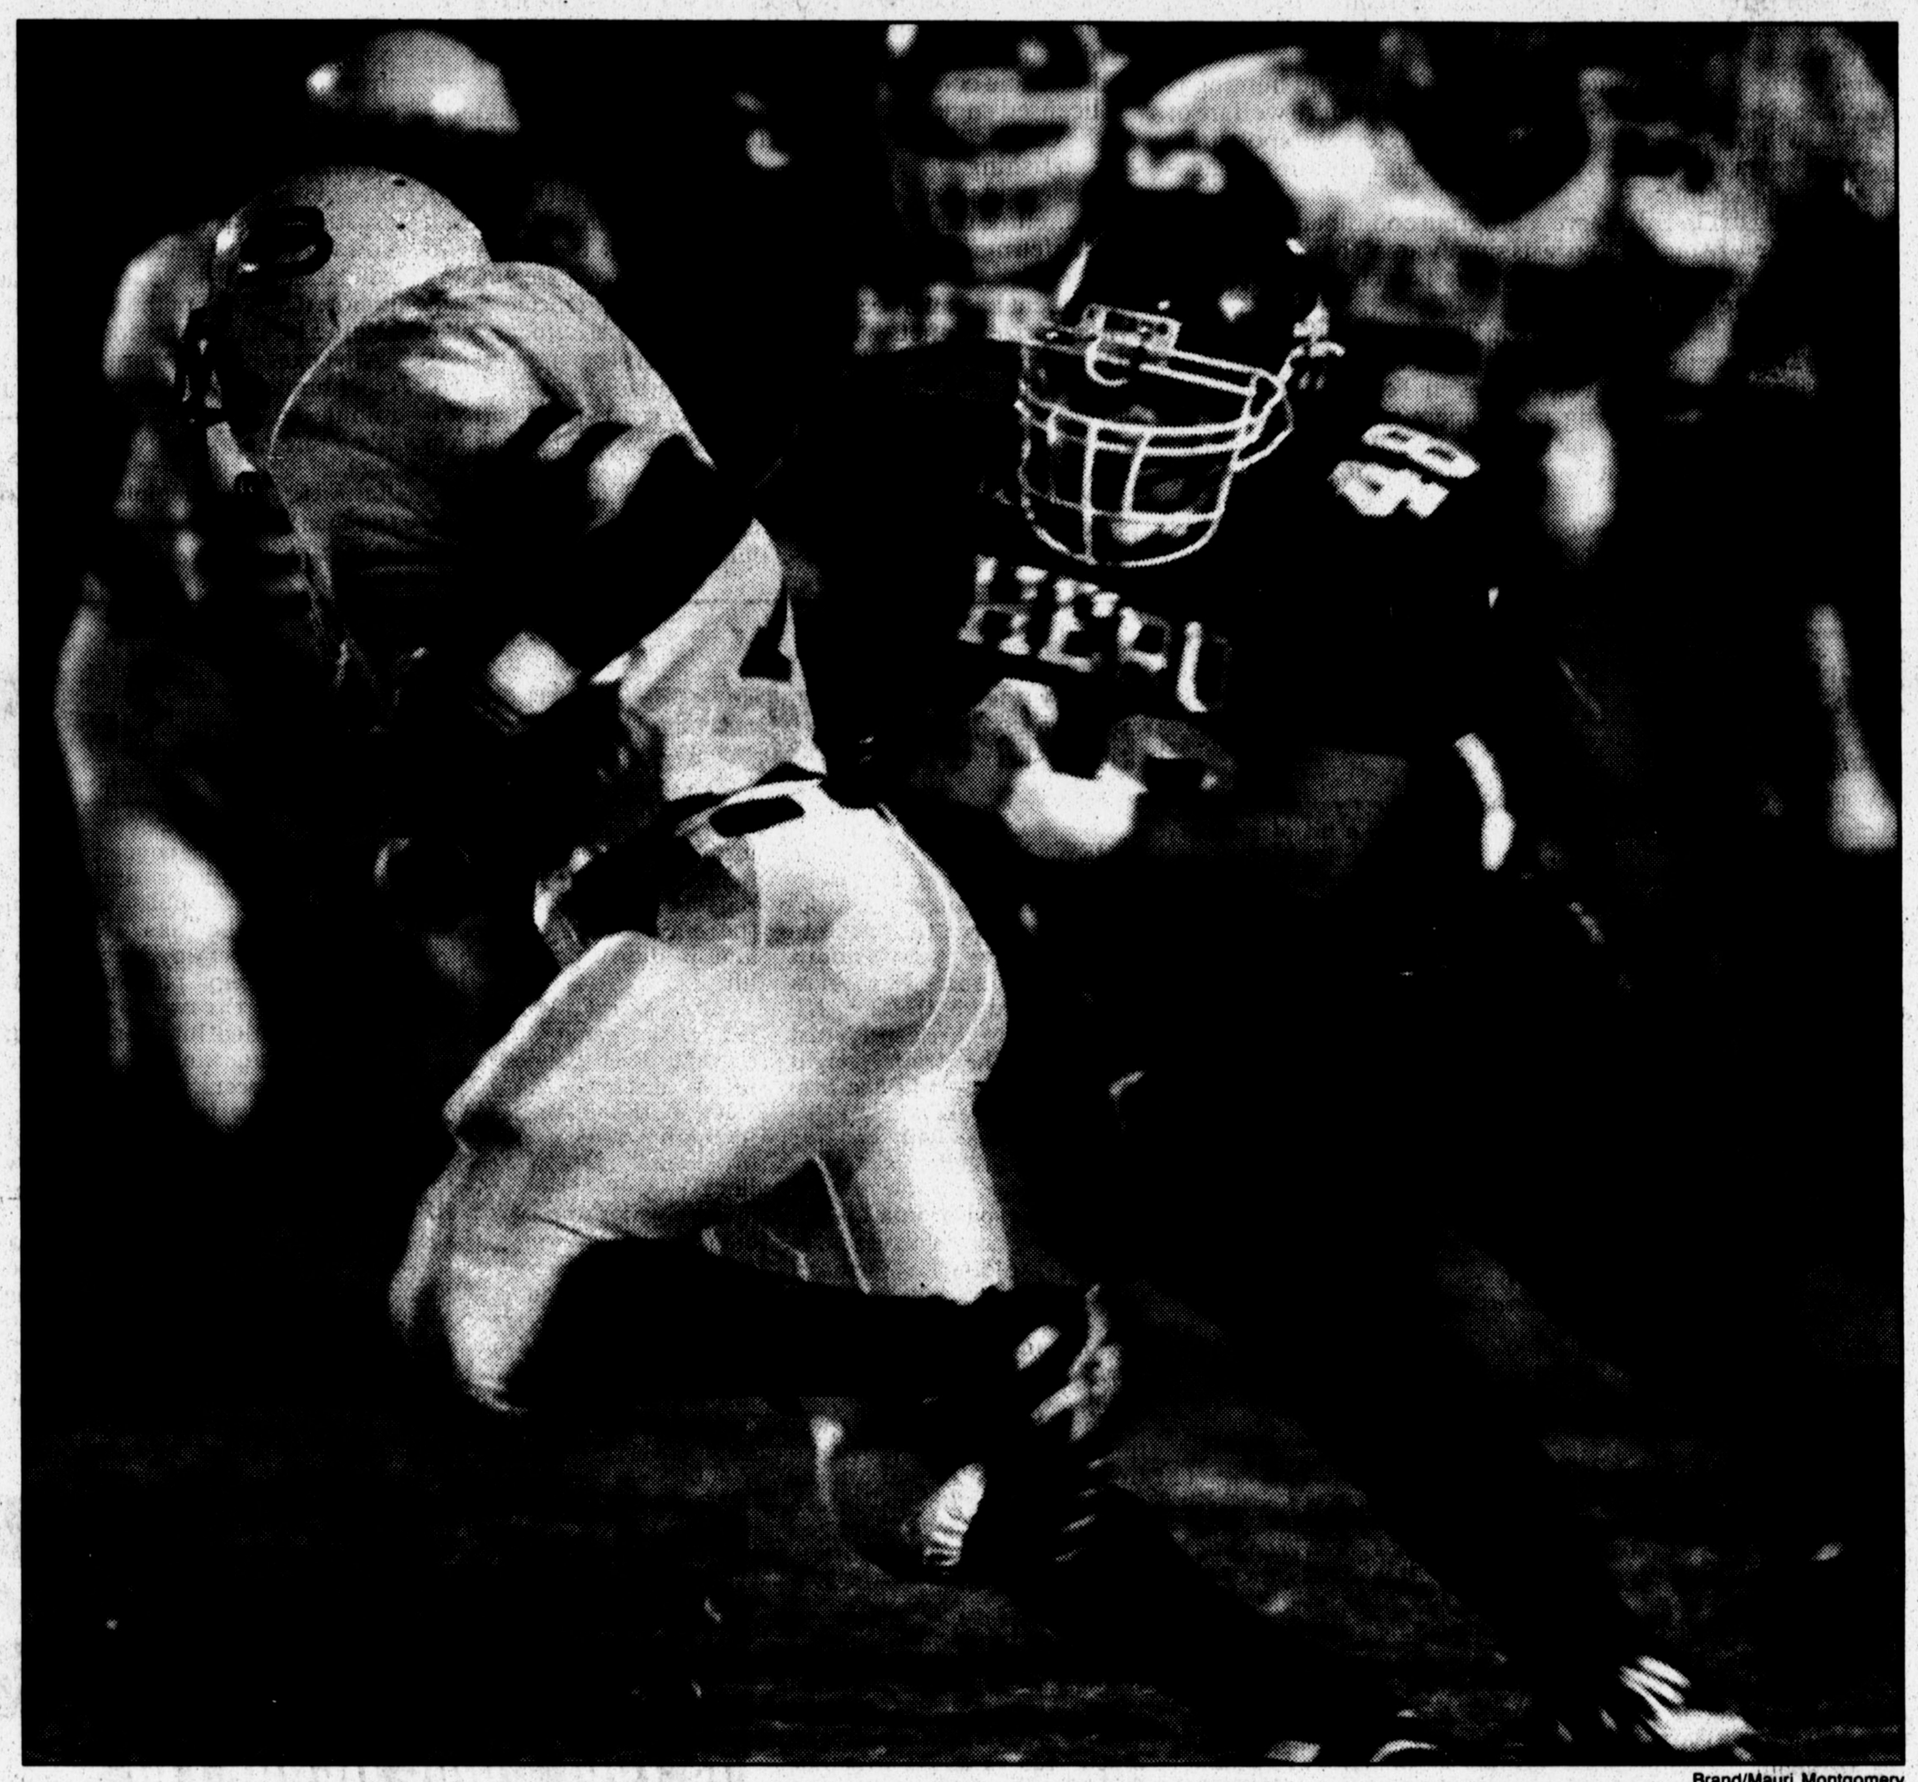

But they need more improvement if they want to play in Austin.

Could it be the youth factor? More consistent play?

Well, whatever it is, they need to get into that playoff level of play if they are going to prevail in the playoffs or make a return trip to the state capital.

Don Dining

Brand/Mauri Montgomery

Coming to get Ya!! — Defensive tackle Johnny Zammaripa is about to grab a Palo Duro offensive player on Friday night during the Whitefaces' 27-7 win over the Dons . Hereford improves its district record to 2-0, 6-1 overall. The defense, always underrated, allowed 107 yards total offense on the Dons.

Whitefaces receive early scare, but bounce back to dine off Amarillo Palo Duro, 27-7

By Yuri Soto
Hereford Brand Sports Editor

The Amarillo Palo Duro Dons came into Friday's game against the Hereford Whitefaces with nothing to lose.

That was reflected by the play of the Dons as they shut down the potent Hereford offense in the first half, holding the Whitefaces to a scoreless tie at the intermission.

But the Whitefaces weren't going to be denied as L.J. Vallejo carried for three second-half touchdowns to give Hereford a 27-7 victory over the District 3-4A foe.

"We were tight, but we just tried to win the ball game," said Vallejo, who carried 23 times for 143 yards and three touchdowns. "I think we'll learn from this game; we came out on our heels and hope we don't do that next week against Pampa."

In the opening drive of the second half, the Whitefaces took the ball 64 yards to their first score as Vallejo scampered in from 15 yards and gave Hereford a 7-0 lead with 6:49 left in the third quarter. The drive was keyed by three long runs, two from Cody Hodges (11 yards, 9) and one from Kyle Artho (13).

Hereford's second touchdown came very quickly.

On third-and-four from the Palo Duro eight-yard line, Don quarterback Eric Mims threw into traffic, only to have linebacker Seth Pietsek intercept the ball at the Hereford 13.

"I didn't even see him throw it," Pietsek said. "I closed my eyes and leaned to the side, and when I opened them, I had the ball in my hands. I kind of screwed up and ran to the side where everybody else was."

Two plays later, Vallejo dove in from the one-yard line and gave the Whitefaces a 14-0 lead with 3:57 left in the third quarter.

"L.J. makes it a key play and scores," Pietsek said. "Our line really picked it up and put it in the end zone."

On the next series, the Whitefaces held the Dons to a fourth-and-14 from their own nine-yard line, but a roughing the kicker call gave Palo Duro another chance.

Hereford's defense, which allowed 107 yards total offense, forced Palo Duro to punt.

The next series was all Vallejo, who ran for 45 yards on the drive in the beginning of the fourth quarter.

"It was a matter of getting our intensity back," Yenzer said of the Whitefaces' resurgence in the second half. "The first half, we stopped ourselves. I wasn't in a big panic; we just had to execute better and get our intensity back."

Herd tailback L.J. Vallejo looks for a seam to run into as Kyle Artho provides some leeway on Friday's 27-7 victory.

Vallejo's last run of the drive, a 27-yarder, resulted in his third touchdown and gave the Whitefaces a 20-0 lead with 8:22 left in the game.

After forcing Palo Duro to another punt, Hereford moved the ball with a 19-yard run by Vallejo and a 12 yarder by Cody Marsh. Those runs gave way to the Double H connection, a nine-yard scoring strike between Cody Hodges and brother Slade. The score was 27-0 in Hereford's favor with 5:05 left.

In all a good comeback for the Whitefaces from a miserable first half.

"In the first half, we got caught in our heels and they came out and fought us," Vallejo said. "In the second half, we came out and took the fight to them."

Palo Duro looked like it was going to succumb early in their first drive of the first half. Daniel Fangman's fumble recovery off Dwight Mayberry's hands at the Palo Duro 44-yard line gave Hereford its first chance.

"They are an outstanding football team," Palo Duro coach Steve Parr said. "We were very fortunate in the first half; we got a few breaks."

Hereford did drive to the Whiteface nine after a 31-yard reverse from Cody Marsh. But a fumble by Cody Hodges killed that momentum as Palo Duro's Brandon Smith recovered the loose ball at the Hereford 13.

"Teams like this really scare me because they have some great athletes," Yenzer said.

Recruiting more anglers is goal of FISH TEXAS program

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

Don't forget, another session in the saga of KidFish will be encouraging local youngsters to take up fishing next weekend. Fall KidFish in Hereford--with channel catfish as the objects of attention--will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Aquatic Center Park pond. The City of Hereford and the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department will have folks on hand who will be serving-up hot dogs during the event. KidFish will also be presenting awards for the longest and biggest fish and to the youngster who raises the most money for the Foundation.

While projects like KidFish have focused attention on youngsters, the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department is now targeting new adult anglers with a promotion encouraging them to take up this sport within the state.

The FISH TEXAS program is a unique giveaway promotion that will offer prizes such as a lifetime fishing license and guided fishing trip to give participation by adult anglers a shot in the arm.

Involvement in the outdoor sports of fishing and hunting is declining, and that has folks interested in the future welfare of Texas' wildlife resources concerned.--Anglers and sportsmen pay the big tab for conservation projects and wildlife management in this country.

According to Dr. Bill Harvey, program coordinator for FISH TEXAS, new fishing enthusiasts simply aren't being recruited. Only about one in ten Texas anglers launched their fishing careers during this decade.

" We have 1.5 million anglers in Texas, but lack of recruitment means attrition is eventually going to take a toll on their ranks. Data on fishing license sales in Texas reinforces the findings; we're not seeing newcomers to the sport. It has occurred to us that one of the problems may be that people just don't know where or how to get started in fishing," says Harvey.

Licensed anglers who take part in FISH TEXAS can qualify for prizes by taking someone fishing. Newcomers to the sport are eligible when they purchase an annual fishing license and go fishing.

The contest is open to two-person teams composed of an angler and a companion who didn't hold a 1998-1999 Texas fishing license, or any license issued by Texas Parks & Wildlife that contains a fishing license.

A licensed angler may enter as often within 12 months as he or she can recruit a new person to purchase their first license and go fishing.

Three grand prize teams will each win a guided fishing trip and a lifetime fishing license. Six first-place winners will each win a lifetime fishing license. Ten second-place winners will each receive an angler's camping equipment package. Fishing equipment bags will be given as third-place prizes.

Grand prize winners will also be featured in a segment of the "Honey Hole" TV series and in Honey Hole magazine.

Guided fishing trips to be awarded as prizes include a two-day bass outing on Lake Fork, a two-day redfish and sea trout trip on the Texas coast, and a fly fishing or spin casting trip on a Texas river.

The angler's camping packages awarded as second place prizes include a cabin tent, four sleeping bags, propane stove and lantern, cooking utensils, four Zebco rod and reel combinations, and an Igloo cooler.

" We've got a lot of youth-oriented programs, such as KidFish, that have been successful in introducing kids to fishing. This is a way to get adults involved, and there's not a better way to kindle a friendship than to take somebody fishing," says Harvey.

The FISH TEXAS contest is underway now, and runs through June 15, 2000. A random drawing of all entries will be held June 29, 2000. Entries must be mailed to Texas Parks & Wildlife Department, c/o FISH TEXAS CONTEST, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, TX 78744. Additional information may be had by calling (800) 792-1112, or the Web site is at www.tpwd.state.tx.us/fishtexas/.

HOMETOWN HUNTER SAFETY CLASS

Received a call last week from a young lady interested in going deer and turkey hunting with her Dad this season, and in need of a hunter safety class. She, and any other youngsters seeking such instruction are in luck. Wesley Rudd will launch just such a class Monday at Hereford Junior High. The four-night session is set to start at 6 p.m. each evening and will provide instruction in safe firearms handling, ethics, and practical skills. Students who successfully pass an examination at the end of the class will be issued a lifetime hunter safety education certificate that is good not only in Texas, but is honored in all 48 of the states and 10 Canadian provinces that require hunter safety education.

All Texas hunters born on or after September 2, 1971 must meet hunter safety education requirements You can get last-minute details on this class by contacting Wesley at 364-7575. It's a rare opportunity to get this instruction at home.

"Palo Duro has some great athletes and a great coaching staff."

On the next drive, the Dons drove to the Hereford 41, where on fourth-and-one, Mayberry was stopped for a one-yard loss by Johnny Zammaripa. Hereford had another chance.

"Their defense is sometimes overlooked because of the outstanding offense they have got," Parr said. "They've got the full package."

The running of Vallejo and crisp short passes by Hodges moved Hereford to the Dons' 36. On third-and-12, Hodges was intercepted by Smith with seven minutes left in the half. Hereford had another scoring opportunity killed at home.

"It's been a long time since I have seen a Palo Duro team play that hard," Yenzer said. "They gave us all they got and finally we got into some things we could handle. I was real proud of our kids' character. They didn't panic."

After forcing the Dons to punt, Hereford again drove the ball deep, thanks to runs by Vallejo and first-down catches by George Castillo and Tony Lopez.

But the Whitefaces were forced to punt, mostly affected on a holding penalty on Hereford.

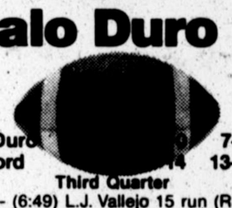

The Whitefaces had 105 total yards offense in the first half, 325 for the game. The Dons were held to 52 total in the half, 107 for the game.

"The defense surrounded the ball and their running back is good," Pietsek said. "We made sure we surrounded the ball and hope to continue that all year into the playoffs."

Dominik Posey of Palo Duro gave the Dons a bit of respect with a three-yard scoring run with six seconds left.

The Whitefaces improve their district record to 2-0, 6-1 overall. Hereford hosts Pampa next Friday at 7:30 p.m. The Harvesters defeated Dumas, 16-0.

Braves take 3-0 lead

NEW YORK (AP) — So much for a Subway Series.

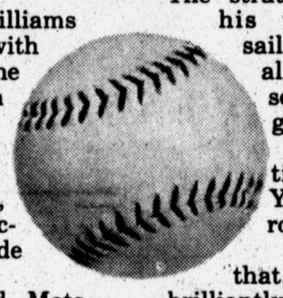

While the Yankees are doing their part, the Atlanta Braves have just about snuffed out that New York state of mind in the NL championship series against the Mets. The trains might be rumbling toward Shea Stadium next weekend, but it's unlikely there will be any fans in the stands.

The Braves, upset in the NLCS the past two years, are taking no chances this season, building a virtually insurmountable 3-0 lead over the Mets when Tom Glavine started and John Rocker finished a 1-0 victory Friday night.

The Mets juggled their lineup, shifting John Olerud from third to second in the order, bumping Robin Ventura from fifth to sixth and inserting right-handed hitters Benny Agbayani and Mora. It didn't help — New York has scored just five runs in the series.

Olerud, Mike Piazza and Ventura, the Mets' normal 3-4-5 hitters, have hit a combined .129 (4-of-31) with one RBI in the series. Ventura was lifted for a pinch-hitter, Pratt, in the ninth.

New York outhit the Braves 7-3, but Atlanta took advantage of a first-inning crack in New York's record-setting defense, which had just 68 errors and a .989 fielding percentage during the regular season. The result was the only run of the game — and it didn't even require a hit.

After Gerald Williams led off the game with a walk, Bret Boone hit a dribbler in front of the plate. Al Leiter scooped up the ball in front of the mound, looked toward second then threw wide to Olerud at first.

Leiter, who led Mets pitchers with four errors during the regular season, stood in front of the mound with his hands on his head, as if he couldn't believe the throw he had just made.

After Jones popped out to second, Williams and Boone worked a double steal on Piazza, who has the most errors (11) of any Mets player. The strategy paid off when his throw to second sailed into center field, allowing Williams to score and Boone to go to third.

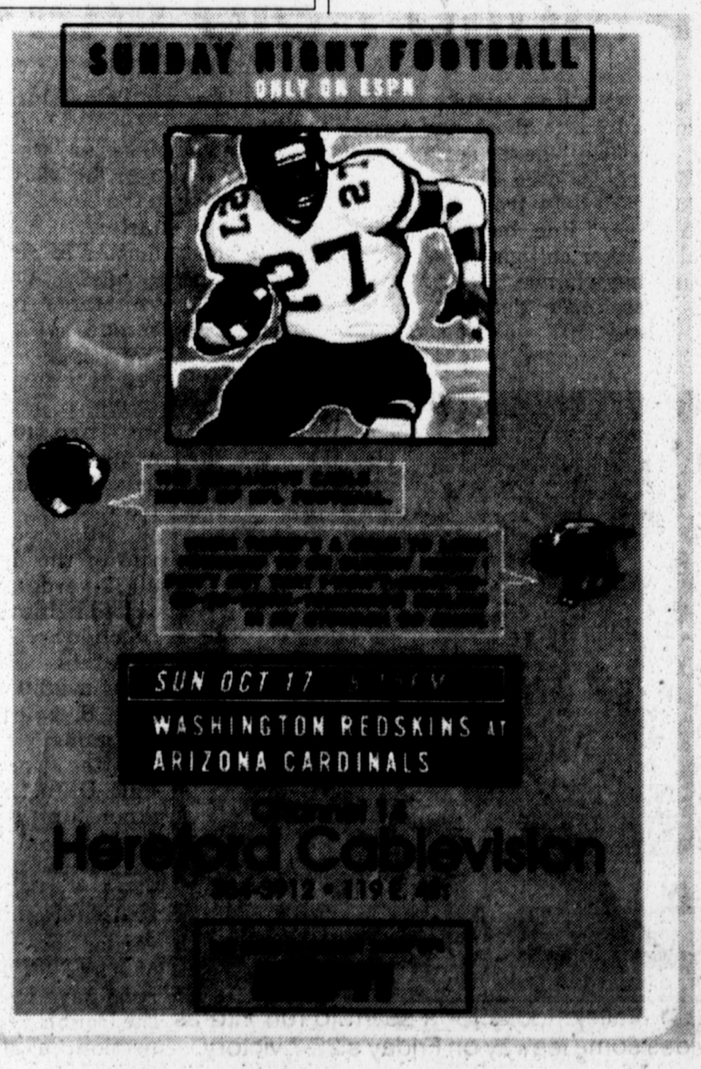

It was the first time all year New York made two errors in one inning.

After that, the Mets played brilliantly on defense. Boone tried to score from third on Brian Jordan's fly to medium center, only to be thrown out at the plate by Mora. Boone bowled over Piazza, who suffered a slight concussion but remained in the game.

Rickey Henderson, who didn't have an assist from the outfield all season, threw out both Jones and Eddie Perez at second trying to stretch singles into doubles. In the sixth, Ordonez made a diving stop on a grounder in the hole, jumped to his feet and threw out Boone.

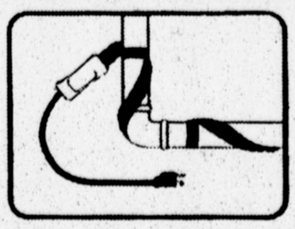

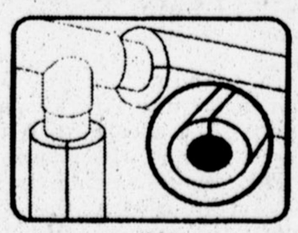

Even so, the Mets have been thoroughly dominated by the Braves, losing nine of 12 meetings during the regular season and 21 of 27 over the past two years.

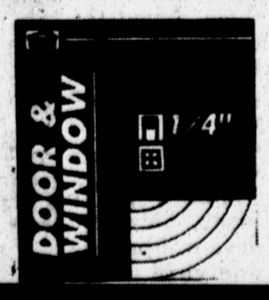

Leiter, who came up big for the Mets in crucial games all year, pitched seven strong innings, limiting the Braves to three singles. But it wasn't enough.

Shirley Intermediate School teachers look back through the years at one of the many displays depicting the 50-year history of their school, the same campus they attended as elementary students. The former students, now teachers, are (from left) Mary Helen Torres, Stephanie Dixon, Vickie Barnes and Imelda de la Cerda.

Shirley School turns 50

Special to The Brand

Special honors await the oldest former staff member and students when Hereford's senior elementary school celebrates its first half-century of service to the community.

Shirley Intermediate School, which first opened its doors in 1949, will have the formal celebration of its 50th birthday Tuesday with a variety of activities.

Activities began at 1 p.m. with an assembly for this year's students, parents and staff. It will be followed at 1:30 p.m. by a reception for the public. The reception will continue until 4:30 p.m.

Principal David Fanning said former staff members and students are encouraged to attend the reception, which he said will provide special recognition to the oldest former staff member and student.

"This school has had some very dedicated teachers over the years," Fanning said. "They provided a good learning situation for the kids. These teachers and students deserve the credit for the success of this school over the past 50 years."

Numerous displays depicting Shirley history will be seen by those who attend the reception. Fanning said many clippings from newspapers, photographs and mementos have been donated or loaned to the school for the special celebration.

Constructed in the late 1940s with a dozen classrooms, the school is named for the late T.E. Shirley, who along with this wife, Virginia, donated the land on which the building stands.

A year after the school opened, student growth had become so great that six additional classrooms were added. Since then, the school has undergone several remodeling projects, the latest being five years ago when the doors and windows were upgraded, the roof was replaced and an air-conditioning system was installed.

> "This school has had some very dedicated teachers over the years. They provided a good learning situation for the kids. These teachers and students deserve the credit for the success of this school over the past 50 years."
> David Fanning, principal

The building was designed so that a second story could be added later; however, that never happened. Fanning said when the most recent renovations were made "you could tell it was a well-constructed, strong building, and it has weathered well during the past 50 years."

When the school opened, there were only 73 teachers and 1,749 students in the Hereford Independent School District. The district today has 330 teachers and 4,159 students, of which 265 are enrolled at Shirley.

Five Shirley teachers once were students in the classrooms of the elementary school. They are Mary Helen Torres, Stephanie Dixon, Vickie Barnes, Imelda de la Cerda and Marlene Watson.

T.E. Shirley and his family moved to Hereford from Kentucky around the turn of the century. He was an active supporter of education, becoming involved with Panhandle Christian College, which was located in Hereford, and Texas Christian University of Fort Worth.

He and his wife, who was a native of Grayson County, Texas, were active with the local school district and saw the donation of land for the school, which bears the family name as a continuing contribution to their community.

Week touts teen reading

Special to The Brand

When was the last time you actually heard a teen-ager ask to read a book just for fun? That's a question the Hereford High School Library hopes will be answered during Teen Read Week and throughout the school year.

Teen Read Week, which begins Sunday and runs through Saturday, is designed to turn teens on to reading. The message is "Reading Rocks – Read for the Fun of It!"

The Hereford High School Library will join hundreds of other libraries, the American Library Association and the Young Adult Services Association in the celebration.

"Teens sometimes get so busy they forget that there's more to reading than just textbooks," says Donna Luther, Hereford High School Librarian. "Teen Read Week aims to remind teens that reading is fun; it's free and can be done anywhere, anytime. We also hope it encourages parents and teachers to promote reading."

During Teen Read Week, the Hereford High School Library will be offering a special program for students called "Caught You Reading."

Students who are "caught" reading materials other than textbooks will be given a coupon which can be redeemed at the high school library for special prizes, such as movie passes donated by Hereford Moovies 6.

Luther says there are lots of ways teens can read for the fun of it:

- Keep a book going all the time by carrying it in a backpack or read on the bus ride to school or extracurricular events;
- Spend a few minutes reading each night before going to bed;
- If you like the movie, read the book;
- Read to a younger sibling;
- Don't finish a book if it does not interest you. Pick up something else;
- Visit the library and ask a librarian to recommend great books for teens.

Free lists of books of good reads for teens are available at the high school library and online from the Young Adult Library Services Association at www.ala.org/yalsa.

XIT is Here to Stay!

At a time most companies are down-sizing, automating and putting as much distance as possible between themselves and the people who do business with them, XIT Communications decided our customers deserved to talk to a person when they had questions about our services, needed equipment or wanted to discuss problems with us. That's why we have XIT Customer Care Centers located conveniently in Dalhart, Dumas, Hereford and Stratford. For service that will take us well into the twenty-first century.

With acquisitions and mergers, other companies may come and go, but not XIT. We are locally owned and operated. Our directors and employees are your friends and neighbors. XIT Communications is dedicated to the concept that our customers deserve the best in service and technology. We want them to hear it today, hear it tomorrow – we'll be around to make sure they do.

We want to be your communications provider!

New van placed in service

By Becky Thorn
Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

Panhandle Transit, a division of Panhandle Community Services in Hereford, has recently placed in service a new 1999 Ford 11-passenger van with wheel chair lift.

According to Celia Serrano, center coordinator, there were a couple of reasons for acquiring the new van.

"Our other van was getting very old and we just needed a new vehicle. Also, we are transporting more passengers for medical reasons, such as dialysis, and these passengers are very fragile," Serrano said. "The wheel chair lift makes the new van more easily accessible and the ride is much smoother than the older van."

PCS has found it necessary to discontinue transporting school children since they have seen such a tremendous increase in the number of medically related trips.

"We recently took over the dialysis route for Hart, Dimmitt and Friona so we transport passengers from those three towns to Hereford for dialysis on Monday, Wednesday and Friday," Melida Pacheco, dispatcher for PCS, said.

With the addition of the dialysis route, the new van is rapidly accumulating passenger miles.

"In one day we had 11 Medicaid passengers and the total passenger miles for that day were 1,318 miles," Serrano said.

In a normal day recently, one of PCS's vans went to Amarillo with five passengers while another made 19 one-way trips in Hereford.

PCS not only provides medically related transportation, they provide local transportation for the general public at a cost of $1 for a one-way trip. Reservations for these trips need to be made 24 hours in advance.

"We will provide transportation anywhere in town for anyone who calls if they give us 24-hour notice. We will take them to the grocery store, or the beauty shop, or to see about buying a car or whatever, if they will call us. The trip is $1 and if they call us and want a ride home that is another $1," Serrano said.

"We try to coordinate trips to certain vicinities in order to get more passengers," Pacheco said.

Pacheco and the drivers, Trinidad Salazar, Nasario Casias and back-up driver Oleta Diller, stay in contact by two-way radio in order to fully coordinate their activities.

For September 1999, Panhandle Transit provided 1,083 one-way trips. This was a total of 342 non-medical trips, 687 medically related trips and 54 wheel chair passengers.

"We feel like the transportation we provide is an asset to the community as well as a necessary service," Serrano said. "Dialysis and the medical facilities depend on Panhandle Transit quite a bit."

Funding for Panhandle Transit is separate from funds received for other programs PCS provides.

In addition to payments for services provided to approved Medicaid passengers, the State Commission for the Blind, the Rehabilitation Agency and even Deaf Smith County pay Panhandle Transit to provide transportation.

"We work very closely with Judy Baker, assistant director of county social services. She is helpful in finding the money so that we can get people to their doctors," Pacheco said.

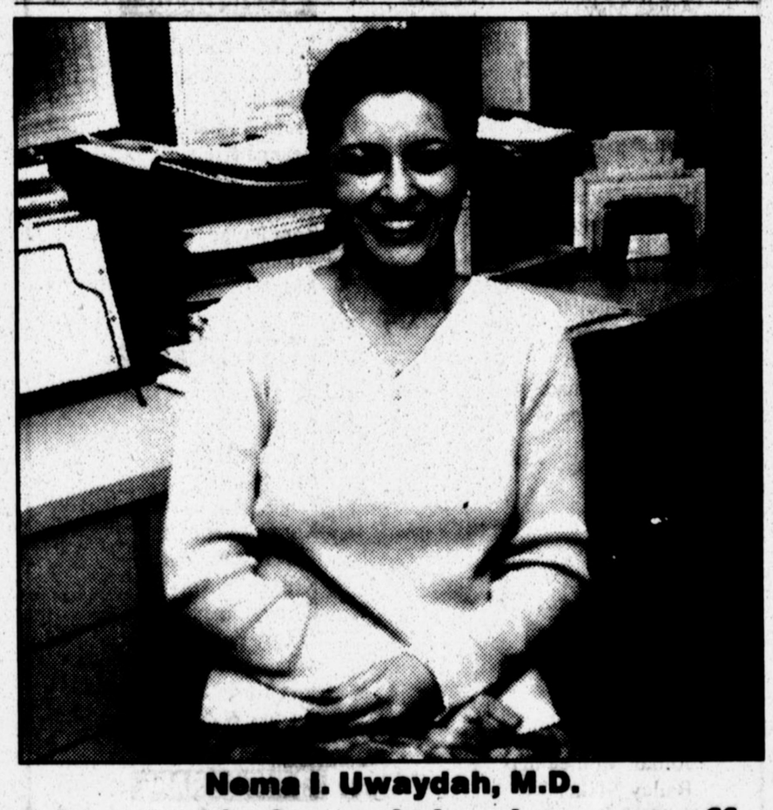

"We provide rides for our housing clients, too, so that they can get from here to the Department of Human Services and take care of the paperwork necessary to keep their housing," Serrano said.

Serrano also has funds that have been provided by local organizations such as AMBUCS and some of the area churches. She uses these funds, she said, to help pay for necessary medical trips for those who have no other assistance.

Panhandle Community Services is a private non-profit Community Action Agency. The mission of PCS is to be a significant influence in meeting the changing needs of Panhandle residents.

Keys to Panhandle Transit's new 11-passenger, wheel chair lift equipped van are presented to driver Trinidad Salazar, front right, by County Judge Tom Simons, front left. Observing the presentation are, from left in back, Celia Serrano, Panhandle Community Services Hereford center coordinator; Melida Pacheco, dispatcher; and County Commissioner Sammy Gonzales.

Nema I. Uwaydah, M.D.

Uwaydah added to staff at Covenant Healthcare

By Becky Thorn
Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

Hereford has been a pleasant surprise for Nema I. Uwaydah, M.D., with Covenant Family Healthcare Center.

Dr. Uwaydah has been associated with Covenant since August of this year.

Though born in Lawrence, Kan., her family moved to Richmond, Vir., when Uwaydah was 5 years old.

She began her college studies at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, graduating Magna cum Laude with University Honors in 1991.

She then did medical research for a year in the Department of Pharmacology/Toxicology at the Medical College of Virginia (MCV).

She pursued her medical studies at MCV from 1992 to 1996, then did her family practice residency at the Univeristy of Kansas Medical Center from 1996 to 1999.

"So this (Covenant) is my first job," Dr. Uwaydah said.

She was actually looking for a job in the Dallas area, Dr. Uwaydah said, since her parents had moved to Houston while she was in medical school, so she "didn't really want to move back to the East Coast."

"But unfortunately, you can't do obstetrics if you are a family practitioner in Dallas. Then a recruiter got a hold of me and said there was a job outside of Amarillo," she said.

Dr. Uwaydah admits she didn't really even know where Amarillo was at that point, much less Hereford. But Dr. Bruce Clarke called her and she agreed to come to Hereford for an interview.

"It's small, but not as bad as I thought it would be. You have your day to day things here, then you have Amarillo and Lubbock, and, of course, you have the airport," she added with a laugh.

Although Dr. Uwaydah hasn't had much time to meet many area residents yet, she said, "It has gone great. Work has been more than I could have expected, it's been really good. And the physicians that are here are really good."

So hopefully Hereford will go from being a pleasant surprise to being a pleasant long-term living experience.

Happy 50th Anniversary

Eluterio & Amelia Mariscal

Following are letters of appreciation from your seven children!

To my Dear Parents,
What can I say about my wonderful parents. You have always been there for us no matter how old we are. For so long as I can remember you have always loved and respected us no matter what came your way. I have admired your love for each other to this day. You have always worked very hard to make sure we had everything we needed. Thank you, and I love you!
Your daughter,
Marta Mariscal

To my Dear Parents,
When I was younger, mom and dad would take us to work in the fields. None of us liked working out there so mom and dad told us that if we did not like working out there, we needed to get an education and do what we wanted to do and not what we had to do. So because of this advice I went to Beauty School and I have been doing what I want to do.
Diolanda M. Alejandre

Happy 50th Anniversary Mommy & Daddy
First I want to thank God for giving me such great parents. From the big book of names and all the little girls to choose from God chose me to be the daughter of Eluterio and Amelia Mariscal. That was my 1st blessing from God. All my thoughts of home are of the great taste of homemade food and the sweet smells of baking. Seeing mommy in her dresses, seeing daddy busting a sag as my children would call it. Not only I've experienced these good times, but my children also. Thank you for being there for me in good and in bad times.
Your daughter,
Anita DeLos Santos

To my Dear Parents,
I would like to say that I am real proud of our parents. They have been my Mom & Dad, my Friends, and my Teachers. They are always there for us in good times or bad. I really miss working with Dad, picking him up in the mornings at the house and Mom saying come in and eat a little (BIG BREAKFAST). We love you very much and HAPPY 50TH ANNIVERSARY!
Your son,
Eluterio Mariscal

To my Dear Parents,
I want you to know that I thank God for making you my parents. You have always been there for me, when I needed a parent's love or correction. For some reason when I was young I thought I was getting more parent's correction than I needed, and that I knew more than they did, because they didn't know what they were taking about. But as I grew older my parents suddenly grew wiser. 50 years in a marriage is an accomplishment. 50 years with 7 children is a greater accomplishment. I believe there is a reward in heaven, because it honors God when a covenant is kept. I hope that when you read what each of your children has written to you, that it will be a reward for the love you've given us.
I love you, your son,
Raul Mariscal

To my Dear Parents,
I would like to say a special thanks to my parents, they have showed us many great things out of life, mom thanks for being there for me during my hard times in life, and my wonderful dad, there are no words that could express what you mean to me, your strong hands have showen me to work hard. I love you.
Your son,
Isreal Mariscal

To my Dear Parents,
Sometimes I don't know how you all raised a family of 7. I guess the years went fast with the last 3 kids. But one thing you'll show us is to work and if you want to do something in life to do it. Never say I can't. Well Mom & Dad you did it, with Gods help, 50 years together. Congratulations and I am glad I am part of your life.
Your daughter,
Janie Perez

Oman, Detten exchange vows in Sept. ceremony

Mrs. Dennis Wayne Detten
...nee Jessica Spurling Oman

Jessica Spurling Oman and Dennis Wayne Detten were united in marriage on Sept. 4 in Bethel Lutheran Church in Ericksdahl.

John Bill and Belinda Oman of Ericksdahl are parents of the bride.

The groom is the son of Ralph and Judy Detten of Hereford.

The Rev. Kent Wallace of Bethel Lutheran Church and Brother Denis Sennett of the Franciscan Order in Graymoore, N.Y., officiated.

Matron of honor was Judith Oman Grotegut of Hereford, sister of the bride. Best man was Doug Detten, brother of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Jennifer Oman Kelley of Yoakum, Johnna Sophia Oman of Stamford, and Ingrid Amelia Oman of Ericksdahl, all sisters of the bride.

Serving as groomsmen were Jeff Ansell of Fort Worth, Rodney Strafuss of Hereford, and Chris Grotegut of Hereford, brother-in-law of the bride.

Ushers were Brad Wieck of Amarillo, brother-in-law of the groom and Tom Kelley of Yoakum, brother-in-law of the bride.

Honorary bridesmaids were Jackie Hein of Bryan, Elizabeth Joy of Angelton, Darla Marburger of Red Rock and Kristina Fritz of Atlanta, Ga.

Organist was Denise Detten Wieck of Amarillo, sister of the gorom and pianist was Diana Detten of Hereford, sister of the groom. She was also a soloist, as was Chris Grotegut.

Krista Detten of Hereford, sister-in-law of the groom, provided scripture readings. Registering guests and handing out programs were Patricia Gerling of College Station and Christine Ohlendorf of Lockhart.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a candlelight gown featuring a beaded bodice with a sweetheart neckline and a removable beaded bolero jacket. The chapel length train was accented with a beaded hemline.

Her fingertip veil had a beaded headband which matched her dress.

Her bouquet consisted of orange unique and leonidas roses with hypericum berries and was attached to a Bible given to her as a child by her late paternal grandmother, Lora Oman Olson.

Bridal attendants wore dark brown knee length sheaths with matching bolero jackets and carried nosegays of Queen Anne's lace, white hydrangea blooms, and baby's breath.

The reception was held at Stamford Country Club. Members of the house party included Misty Kohout Williams of Amarillo, Jill Taylor McCall of Lubbock, Mary Lea Hawkins of Bedford and Catherine Zinser of Amarillo.

Following a honeymoon cruise to the Western Caribbean, the couple lives in Hereford.

The bride graduated from Stamford High School and received bachelors and masters degrees from Texas A&M University. She previously served as Assistant to the Vice Chancellor and Dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Texas A&M University in College Station. She is now employed by Excel Beef, Inc. in Friona.

The groom graduated from Hereford High School and earned a bachelors degree from the University of Dallas and a masters degree from West Texas A&M University. He is a self-employed farmer/rancher in Deaf Smith County.

The Alliance congratulates these winners for the high standard they are setting.

These are the final KUB Award Winners for 1999.

Program offered for Christmas season

Holiday ideas for decorating, entertaining and gift-giving will be highlighted during the "Celebrate" program to be presented by area Extension Agents on Oct. 21 at the Texas A&M Extension and Research Center, 6400 Amarillo Blvd. W., Amarillo.

Advance tickets for the program are now available in Hereford for $6 each from the Extension office, Room 402, of the Deaf Smith County Courthouse. Local tickets sales will end at 4 p.m. Oct. 20. Tickets will be sold at the door on the day of the program at a cost of $7.50 per person.

Beverly Harder, local Extension Agent for Family and Consumer Sciences, will help present two identical sessions of the informative holiday program. The afternoon session will begin at 1 and the evening presentation at 6.

Among the topics to be covered are "Shabby Chic Decorating," offering ideas for the hottest home decorating trends; "Fruity Flare for the Holidays," sharing creative ways to include fruits and vegetables in a holiday menu; and a variety of crafts, concepts and recipes for the upcoming holidays.

A packet of instructions, illustrations and recipes will be given each "Celebrate" participant.

Holiday-motif tables, decorated by each Panhandle Extension Agent, will be on display along with prepared foods. Guests will have the opportunity to sample a variety of main dishes, desserts and appetizers.

The "Celebrate" program is sponsored by the Panhandle District Texas Association of Extension Family and Consumer Sciences. Proceeds from the event help to fund scholarship and enhance educational programming in the Panhandle area to improve quality of life.

For further information, call the Extension office, 364-3573.

Art of massage discussed for Hereford Study Club

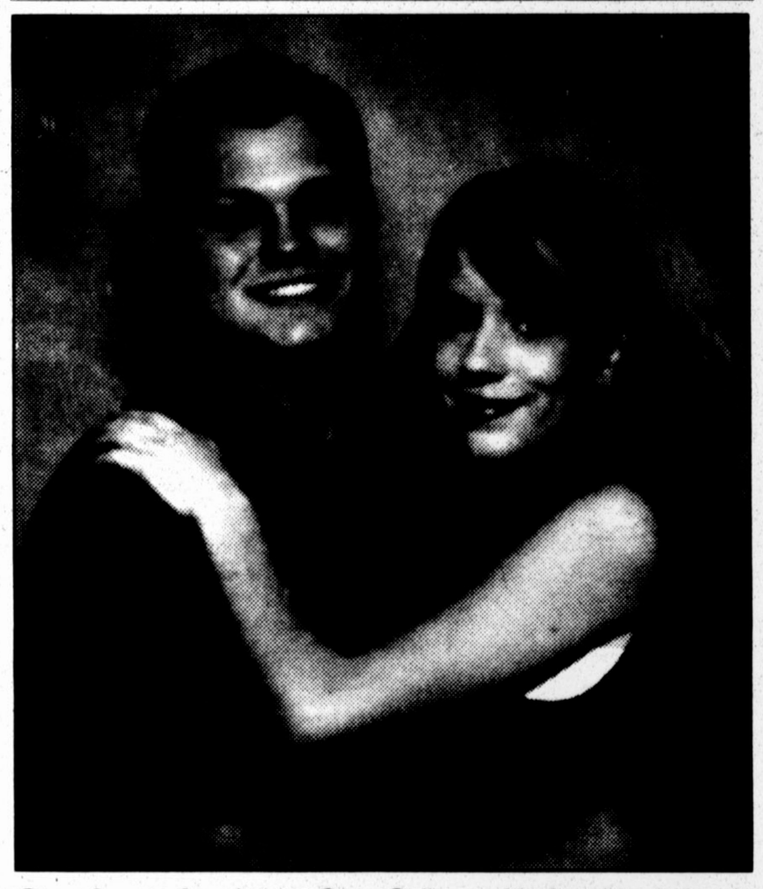

A program on "The Art of Massaging" was presented to the Hereford Study Club by Dianna Kimmel, a certified masseuse.

Kimmel explained the purpose of massage and how it could help patients. A demonstration was given in a special chair with member Joan Yarbro as volunteer. A drawing for a free massage was won by Hazel Ford.

Members then traveled to the home of Betty Martin where refreshments were served. Betty Gilbert was co-hostess.

Martin presided over the business meeting. Helen Spinks announced the November meeting will be with Mary Stoy.

Those present were Doris Bryant, Mildred Garrison, Elizabeth Hellman, Evelyn Wilson, Gladys Setliff, Martin, Yarbro, Gilbert, Spinks and Ford.

Couple wed — Anissa Gaye Sellers, with daughter Lainy Jo Sellers, of Sugarland and Carlos Daniel Rendon of Houston were united in marriage in a double ring ceremony on Oct. 12 in Westway Baptist Church. Pastor Mark Purifoy officiated at the ceremony. The couple will reside in Detroit, Mich., after their honeymoon.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am on Death Row in Texas for a drug deal gone bad. I have been a long-time reader of your column, and hope you will print my letter for your young readers. It may not be too late for many of them.

I cannot find the words to explain the feeling of emptiness I get from the smothering confines of this steel cage I call home. I have been in and out of prison since I was 18 years old, but my problems started long before that. When I entered junior high school, I began smoking dope, cutting classes and hanging out with the wrong crowd. I drifted along, not making any plans for my future. I thought, "Let other people worry about things like that, I'll just have fun." I didn't realize it at the time, but I was headed down a road I never could have imagined in my wildest dreams.

For those who are reading this letter, if you are hanging out with a bad crowd, doing drugs, thinking you will get it together eventually — BEWARE. You are going down the wrong road. Get off that road NOW, and find the strength to change. I was once just a kid in a little trouble, and now, I am on Death Row. It is too late for me to go back and change the decisions that sent me down the wrong path. I only hope it isn't too late for you. — Steven in Huntsville, Texas

Dear Steven: Thank you for a letter that could change lives. You have performed a wonderful service by writing to me. And now, if you don't mind, I'm going to use your letter as an opportunity to speak my piece.

I have long opposed the death penalty no matter how heinous the crime. According to the Chicago Tribune, 125 homicide convictions have been reversed in Illinois over the past 20 years due to prosecutorial misconduct. Nationally, 381 homicide convictions have been overturned since 1963. And this does not include prisoners who were executed but may have been innocent. How does the state make amends for such a miscarriage of justice? In my opinion, no excuse is good enough.

Dear Ann Landers: A recent study I read reports that talking on a cell phone while driving is about as dangerous as driving with a blood alcohol content sufficient to get convicted of drunk driving. Actually, the talker on a cell phone is MORE dangerous, because he probably drives while chatting more often than a drunk drives while intoxicated.

Age, driving experience and cell-phone experience are not relevant. Hands-free phones have not proven to be any safer than hand-held phones. The problem is the diversion of the driver's attention. Why doesn't the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which runs ads urging drivers to use seat belts and warning them not to drink and drive, run a series of ads about the dangers of cell phones? Why aren't cell-phone users charged higher automobile insurance rates? This issue is not about public safety. It's about common sense. — P.T. in Oceanside, Calif.

Dear Oceanside: You've written an interesting letter. I'll go you one better and suggest that it be declared illegal to use a cell phone while operating a vehicle. It should be mandated by law that the driver pull off the road and park on the shoulder to make a phone call.

The Journal of the American Medical Association printed a 1997 study showing that talking on a cell phone while driving quadrupled the risk of an accident. Brooklyn, Ohio, a suburb of Cleveland, recently passed an ordinance prohibiting drivers from using hand-held phones while driving (except in cases of emergency), and police have begun issuing tickets. I say hooray for them. I hope others will follow suit.

Is life passing you by? Want to improve your social skills? Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Caneda, send $5.15.)

Amarillo author offers 'biblical historical novel'

AMARILLO, Texas — The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to Philemon is only 25 verses long, and the message is a bit vague. But Jerry McClenagan, armed with such modern-day conveniences as his laptop computer and an ever-present cup of espresso, has brought the ancient characters to life.

"Bondslave: An Epic of One Slave's Struggle for Freedom in the Roman Empire," is McClenagan's first book. He calls it "a biblical historical novel," and the tale is drawn from his 40-year addiction to biblical and historical research.

McClenagan retired 10 years ago from a career in sales and management and decided to learn how to put sentences together. He enrolled in a creative writing course at Amarillo College and joined a writer's group. At first, he produced essays and poetry.

"Three-and-a-half years ago, I woke up one morning and said, 'I'm going to write a novel, and base it on Philemon,' " McClenagan said.

The dictionary in the Thomas Nelson version of the King James Bible describes Philemon as "A Christian of Colosse to whom the New Testament Epistle to Philemon was written by Paul. In the letter, Paul asks Philemon to pardon Onesimus, a runaway slave whom Paul has converted."

The book of Philemon does not tell us how the story turns out. McClenagan supplies an ending that he said "just evolved from the rest of the story.

"There is nothing in history - secular or biblical - no traditions about what happens to Philemon," he said. "The ending I have used leads to a possible sequel, because tradition has it that Onesimus became the bishop of the church at Ephesus."

One reason the Scripture appealed to him was that there wasn't an ending to that story.

"What was the rest of the story here?" he asked. "Where did Philemon go? Was he a good influence in that church, or a bad influence? Paul never mentions him in any of the other letters. Who was this man, and how did he deal with this letter that the Apostle Paul sent him?

"I built his character out of all the historical data I could find. It's like trying to take sawdust and build a board out of it. One of the expressions that has come to be used is 'faction,' a mix of fiction and fact. You have to have an imagination, but when you build at story on history, you want it to be as accurate as possible."

"Bondslave," McClenagan said, "is about reconciliation and freedom, about a master and his slave being reconciled. The only way they could accomplish it was through their personal reconciliation to God."

His book is about "the real roots of slavery," McClenagan said, and about "the multi-faceted religious maze of the Roman and Greek empire in 51 A.D. through 79 A.D. It parallels man's search today. Man today walks through a religious maze, searching for spiritual answers."

McClenagan spent eight months researching the book. Then he started writing - 20 to 25 hours a week for two years. His wife, Martha, was working as a data-processing manager at Western Merchandisers at the time, so he had the house to himself. But unlike some writers, he did not fare so well in a quiet room.

Seeking a modest amount of human companionship, McClenagan took his lap top to the now-closed Cafe in the Park restaurant, where he often wrote from 7 to 11 a.m., and later to Marshall Coffee.

As the book progressed, McClenagan was cheered on by members of Inspirational Writers Alive! and the Amarillo Senior Citizens Association writing group. Fellow members of the Christian Church of God also were supportive, with the possible exception of his pastor, Jeff Booth, who once said to the congregation, "Jerry is writing a novel; I don't understand why, since he could go down to the bookstore and buy one."

McClenagan, the father of four grown children, is an ordained minister.

He and Martha were married in 1955 and moved from Oklahoma to Roswell, N.M., where he pastored a church. He was a full-time minister for 10 years, and since then has had a part-time ministry as a gospel singer and pulpit guest.

"I consider this book a slice of my ministry," he said. "If I can put this story in fictionalized history, I can perhaps get some points across that I have inside of me."

Ancient life is program topic

In honor of Columbus Day and the Discovery Of America Month, there will be a free presentation about Native American life at the Hereford Community Center on Oct. 21 at 6 p.m.

Little is known about the history of the early inhabitants of the North and South American continents that Columbus and the Conquistadors first encountered when they arrived from Spain.

Dr. Rodney N. Dotson, M.D., will discuss the great advances during their peak of civilization in medicine, astronomy and agriculture nearly 2000 years ago along with their Pre-Columbian beliefs and practices.

Dr. Dotson, presently practicing general medicine in Hereford, made his first archeological trip in 1955 to the ruins of Southern Mexico. Since then he has made over twenty trips to a variety of Pre-Columbian archeological ruins dating from 2000 B.C. up to 500 A.D. and has spent five years living in Latin American countries ranging from Argentina to the Caribbean. While in Spain he was also privileged to obtain slides of the Papyrus Codigos in the "Museo de las Americas."

Cancer screenings set at local clinic

The Women's Center of the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center and Baptist/St. Anthony's Health System will conduct a breast cancer screening at South Plains Health Care Providers, Inc., 603 East Park, on Nov. 5.

Participants will receive a low-cost screening that includes a mammogram and instruction in self-examination by a registered nurse.

A minimum of 15 women needs to register in order for the mobile mammography clinic to come to area towns. All exams are done by appointment only.

This clinic is available only to women who need financial assistance. Funding is available through the Texas Department of Health for Texas residents who qualify for assistance.

Call 806-356-1905 or 1-800-377-4673 for more information.

Westway sets annual bazaar

The annual Westway Country Christmas Bazaar is scheduled for Nov. 13 from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. in the Hereford Community Center.

Booth space is now available.

Proceeds from the bazaar benefit 4-H and other community projects.

YOUR EYES

Routine Eye Exams

It's amazing how we'll make sure we make an appointment to have the oil changed in the car, but when it comes to our eyes, we don't always think about having them checked.

Experts agree that between your teens and age 39, you should have at least one medical eye exam. After that, you should have one every two to four years up to the age of 64. And from 65 years on, it's important to have an exam every one or two years.

There are expectations, of course: if you've ever had a serious eye injury or there are eye problems such as glaucoma that run in your family.

Farmers dealing with Y2K

Special to The Brand

Bill Haag of Mandan, N.D., is getting a new computer system at his grain elevator, but ask him about Y2K and his answer is short.

A lot of hype, he says.

"I think they just blow it out worse than it is," Haag said. He doesn't think any of his equipment will be affected.

Cecil Ogelsby, owner of Ogelsby Equipment Co. of Hereford, agrees.

"No, there shouldn't be any problems with any of the equipment. We're not worried," Ogelsby said confidently.

Researchers are not as confident. Those who have studied how the millennium bug could affect farm equipment are urging pork, dairy and grain operations to make contingency plans. And last-minute workshops in the Upper Midwest are planned to spread the word about how to prepare for equipment problems in case the bug bites worse than expected.

Charlotte Meier, executive director of the North Dakota Pork Producers, said she has received no calls about Y2K worries from the state's 750 pork operations.

"At this point, I would say there isn't that much concern," she said. "I think if they know the electricity is going to be running that's all they're concerned about."

Mike Adelaine, an extension specialist from South Dakota State University, thinks farmers should be concerned about more than that. He has put together an Internet list of Y2K-compliant software commonly used in farm operations and is planning a workshop in November for those who get a late start on preparations.

"Basically, what we're going to do is say: 'Hey, folks, be aware of this issue, make some contingency plans and let's see if we can get you through this time period,'" Adelaine said.

Y2K problems could arise from malfunctions in computers that read only the last two digits in a year and mistake 2000 as 1900.

In particular, owners of pork, poultry and dairy operations are being urged to make sure their climate-control devices will not collapse suddenly on New Year's Day.

Producers with livestock feeding or milking systems are encouraged to contact manufacturers to find out how they might be affected. The same goes for producers with any kind of environmental control mechanisms in barns or confined feeding operations.

Producers also should prepare to do farm work manually if automated machinery doesn't work, said Wayne Hansen, who has studied the issue for the University of Minnesota Extension Service.

Electronic scales, moisture testers, grain drying equipment and crop storage ventilation systems used in grain elevators could be affected, he said.

The Y2K bug also could hamper farmers and ranchers who use computers to keep their books.

"We are seeing the medium-size smaller operations that do have the older machines that would need to get up to speed," Adelaine said.

Hansen said earlier workshops on Y2K have not drawn many farmers.

"We don't know if it's because they don't think it's a problem or if it's because they feel like they've fixed everything already," he said.

He does not believe Y2K will cause the devastating problems, but said there's reason to prepare.

"There will be some problems," he said. "We know that for a fact. It's just a matter of how severe they are."

Dennis Newton, Deaf Smith County Extension Agent says there might be some worries, but nothing to fret over.

"There's some concern about modules in tractors, but I'm not too concerned about it. It won't be anything too major," Newton said.

Greenbugs in some fields

A few greenbugs have been reported in isolated wheat fields throughout the area, but none have ben reported from those fields being checked by the AgriPartner Farm Demonstration Assistant. Infestations of 25 to 50 greenbugs per foot of drill row in very young, small grain plants justifies an insecticide application.

Pumpkin growers may be in for treat

COLLEGE STATION — pumpkin growers are in for a treat this Halloween despite smaller yields, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Extension horticulturist Dr. Frank Dainello said Texas pumpkin growers are in a favorable position even though yields are below average.

"The crop is probably a little shorter than we'd like," he said. "But the problems we've been having on the East Coast and in other parts of the country are putting Texas in a pretty good demand situation."

Dainello said pumpkins in the Northeast were damaged by flooding from Hurricane Floyd, and crops in other parts of the country suffered from droughts.

"As a result, Texas growers are in a favorable situation," he said. "I think that's why we did have an increase in pumpkin acreage."

Dainello said 3,000 to 4,000 commercial acres of pumpkins were planted this year in the South Plains of Texas.

He said growers are in a moderate price situation.

"At the farm gate level, they're receiving anywhere between 5 and 8 cents a pound," Daniello said.

He said the yields are lower this year because some of the crop is late to mature.

"We had hail and rain in the Plains where most of our pumpkins are being grown," Daniello said.

He said growers lost several acres early in the season and had to replant.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Equal pay for equal work? Really?

I like to read, and one of my favorite recreational reads is Marilyn vos Savant's column in the newspaper's Sunday Parade magazine. It's called, "Ask Marilyn" and features her answers to reader's provocative questions.

The columns vos Savant writes are witty, insightful and entertaining. I enjoy them though they seldom contain anything about small business.

This may come as a shock to Hillary Clinton fans, but vos Savant is listed in the "Guinness Book of World Records "Hall of Fame as the female with the "Highest IQ." There really is a world's smallest woman. Maybe, Hillary grew up in the wrong village. Sorry, I digress.

Recently, a reader wrote to "Ask Marilyn" with a question about why women are paid less than men for equal work. Here is an excerpt from vos Savant's reply: "Consider this: If their work is equal, why aren't employers slashing their payroll costs by hiring women instead of men? In a free market, businesses are highly competitive, and if they are paying men more than they pay women - by any percentage - there must be a reason."

Think about this

I found the above statement very thought provoking. I favor equal pay for equal work. It's fair, honest and it's common sense.

However, it doesn't always work that way. Gender gaps still exist. The latest figures I recall hearing is that women are averaging between 75 and 80 percent of what men are earning in the same jobs.

There are several possible explanations. One reason may be a woman's willingness to accept less. Some may feel that a job with only average pay is better than no job at all.

Another reason may be that some women have less experience than their associates. For example, women who stay home to raise children, may find that their male counterparts kept current with technology, industry developments and relationships.

A third explanation may be that management is still a male dominated arena. Some managers may just feel more comfortable with other men in leadership roles. I think this is particularly true with managers who are less confident and competent. They may feel intimidated by bright, able and aggressive women.

Another possibility may be the law of supply and demand. As more and more women poured into the workforce in the 70's, 80's and 90's, the increasing supply may have contributed to lower wages.

What is equal work?

While most of us support equal pay for equal work, the tough question is, "What is equal work?" Consider these examples. First, two fourth-grade schoolteachers. Equal work justifying equal pay? In reality one teacher loves the students, spends untold hours preparing special projects and challenges the students daily. The other is just marking time until retirement.

Another example. Two truck drivers, same number of years of service and miles driven. Equal work justifying equal pay? One driver has a spotless record, spends hours maintaining the employer's truck and has driving habits that save the owner nearly 10 percent in fuel cost each year. The other has had two accidents in the past two years and drives the dickens out of the truck. Are both worth the same money?

One more scenario. Two retail clerks with the same experience and education. One is customer service focused, the other is looking for a real job. Are both worth the same pay?

Equal pay for equal work is a good concept that is very difficult to administer fairly. Not all employees are created equal, and not all equal work is equal. Therefore, I think our free-market system has done pretty well. Yes, there is still room for improvement, and we all should work for that.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Martha Russell

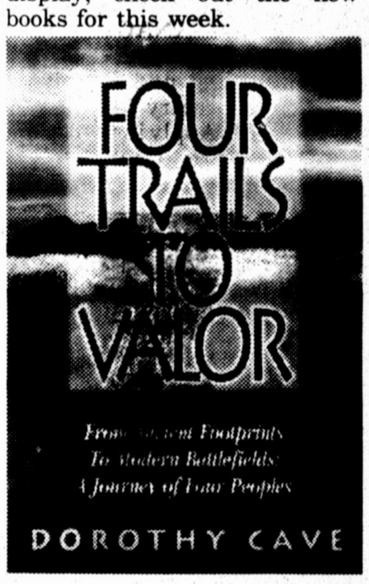

If you haven't been into the library recently you need to drop by and see this month's display. Don Nall, industrial technology teacher at Hereford Junior High, has graciously loaned us some of his handiwork.

Don calls himself a "tinkerer" who likes to recycle. Much of his library display is made up of used horse shoes he gets from a local farrier. Doesn't sound too exciting? You need to come see what he does with those old shoes. We have angels, cowboys, napkin holders, a cross, a Christmas wreath and many more very attractive and creative items on display. There's even a toilet paper holder.

When you see the rusty rasp he got from the farrier, you will find it hard to believe that the shiny knives Don has made used to look just like it. He says that his tinkering and recycling spark creativity and imagination in his students of metal working. Not always an easy task when working with junior high kids.

Don Nall's display also includes a yard swing that is an instant hit with adults and children alike. Everyone must sit in it to try it out. Made with buggy wheels, horse shoes and cedar, it would make an attractive addition to anyone's yard.

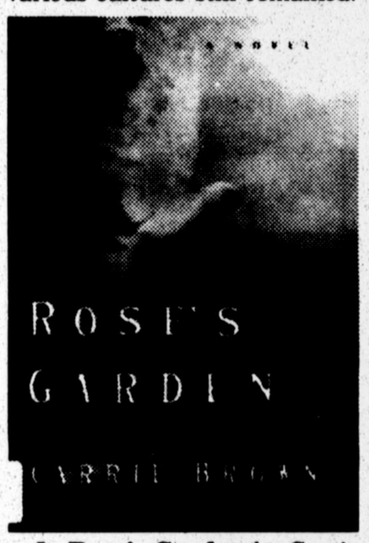

While you are here to see the display, check out the new books for this week.

Four Trails to Valor by Dorothy Cave is the account of four native New Mexico men -- a Pueblo Indian, a Navaho, a Hispanic and an Anglo. Book I follows each boy to manhood in his distinct culture.

Book II follows each as he fights to defend his heritage in World War II. Two of the men fought on Bataan (reflecting the state's unusually high percentage of men in this theatre) and endure the infamous Death March, one to suffer the inhumanity of Japanese prison camps, one to escape to a three-year exile, alone in the jungle, hunted by a remorseless enemy. A third pushed through the sands of North Africa and fought in Italy against Hitler. The fourth became a Marine Code Talker, one of the Navajos whose never-deciphered messages made possible the bloody victories across the Pacific.

Book III sees each man home, to a United States forever changed, but a New Mexico where delicate threads of their various cultures still remained.

In Rose's Garden by Carrie Brown, Conrad has isolated himself from everyone since the death of his high school sweetheart and wife of fifty years. An apparition appearing in Rose's now neglected garden compels Conrad to share what he has just seen. While his description of the encounter falls on some deaf ears, others in the small New Hampshire town are drawn to his story. Much to his surprise, a few people he's known all his married life, but never truly known, come to see him, exposing sides of themselves he would never have imagined.

When a flood threatens the town and its people, Conrad realizes how deeply he belongs and how much he wants to save it all. A loner who found himself all too alone, Conrad learns the precious lesson of reaching out, a lesson Rose tried all her life to teach him.

Between Husbands and Friends by Nancy Thayer is the story of Lucy and Max West and their best friends, the glamorous Cunninghams. Their four children are friends, too, and every August for 10 years the two families have shared a summer house on Nantucket.

When they met in their 20s, Lucy and Kate Cunningham, vivacious young women who found their lives limited as wives and mothers, shared a certain restlessness that led to some wild times that their husbands knew nothing about. Lucy kept Kate's secrets from Chip, Kate's husband. Through the years, the secrets accumulated, and Lucy had some secrets of her own.

Then one summer, circumstances force Lucy to expose what she's been hiding. Now they must sift through the tangle of lies and love.

Elizabeth Gunn's Triple Play, finds newly promoted Chief of Detectives Jake Hines looking for a way out of a Critical Incident Debriefing. Talking about feelings ("spilling his guts in public" as Jake calls it) resulting from high-stress situations is not one of Jake's strong points. He is saved from the ordeal when word comes of a robbery at a bar in the center of the city. It's a place he knows. He worked there once, and, like most of the men and boys back then, he really liked the owner, a woman named Babe.

Rescuing her from the chair she's been duct-taped to is easy, but it's only the beginning; it releases a trail of robbery and murder that leads Jake to places he never expected to have to go.

The Marching Season by Daniel Silva takes place in Northern Ireland during the first uncertain year of the peace process, following centuries of religious and political conflict. On a single night, a renegade group of Protestant extremists tries to turn back the hands of time with three savage acts of terrorism.

Retired CIA officer Michael Osborne is lured back to the Agency after his father-in-law, former U.S. Senator Douglas Cannon, is nominated to be the new American ambassador to London. When Michael discovers that the Protestant gunmen have targeted Cannon for execution, he sets in motion a deadly contest of wits and deception that will determine whether the peace in Northern Ireland will survive and whether his father-in-law lives or dies.

What Michael Osbourne does not realize is that he is a pawn in a much larger game. Once again, his destiny is controlled by the Society, a secret order that uses its power and influence to foster global unrest for financial gain. And, once again, he is pitted against his personal nemesis, Jean-Paul Delaroche, the world's most dangerous assassin, who slipped through Michael's fingers at the climax of The Mark of the Assassin.

Other new books this week are:

The Lamorna Wink by Martha Grimes;

Family Honor by Robert B. Parker;

Bale o' Cotton: The Mechanical Art of Cotton Ginning by Karen Gerhardt Britton; and

The New Solar System edited by J. Kelly Beatty, Carolyn Collins Petersen, and Andrew Chaikin.

Turning point of war on this date

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Oct. 17, the 290th day of 1999. There are 75 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 17, 1777, British forces under Gen. John Burgoyne surrendered to American troops in Saratoga, N.Y., a turning point of the Revolutionary War.

On this date:

In 1931, mobster Al Capone was convicted of income tax evasion and sentenced to 11 years in prison. He was released early, in 1939.

In 1933, Albert Einstein arrived in the United States as a refugee from Nazi Germany.

In 1939, Frank Capra's comedy-drama "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" premiered in the nation's capital.

In 1945, Col. Juan Peron staged a coup, becoming absolute ruler of Argentina.

In 1957, Albert Camus of France received the Nobel Prize in literature.

In 1977, West German commandos stormed a hijacked Lufthansa jetliner on the ground in Mogadishu, Somalia, freeing all 86 hostages and killing three of four hijackers.

In 1978, President Carter signed a bill restoring American citizenship to Confederate President Jefferson Davis.

In 1979, Mother Teresa of India received the Nobel Peace Prize.

In 1997, the remains of revolutionary Ernesto "Che" Guevara were laid to rest in his adopted Cuba, 30 years after he was executed in Bolivia.

Ten years ago: An earthquake in Northern California measuring 7.1 on the Richter scale killed 67 people, injured 2,500 and caused $7 billion in damage.

Five years ago: Leaders of Israel and Jordan initialed a draft peace treaty. Negotiators for the Angolan government and rebels agreed to a peace treaty to end their 19-year civil war.

One year ago: A pipeline explosion and fire in southwest Nigeria killed some 700 people.

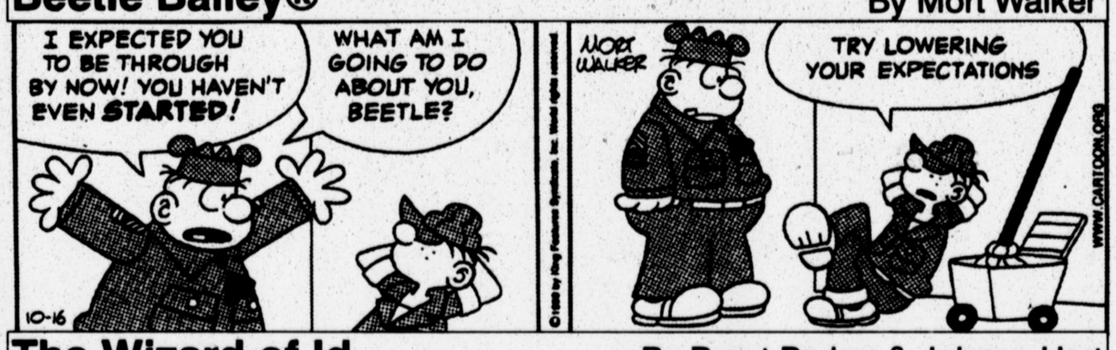

Thought for Today: "Those who nobly set out to be their brother's keeper sometimes end up by becoming his jailer. Every emancipation has in it the seeds of a new slavery, and every truth easily becomes a lie." — I.F. Stone, American journalist (1907-1989).

Writing want ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Phillips scores in a movie with Class

Playing a high-school janitor who becomes a student again, Lou Diamond Phillips puts on a gem of a performance in the sweet new TV movie In a Class of His Own. Based on a true story, the movie premieres Sunday on Showtime.

©TVData Features Syndicate

In a perfect world, a sweet, life-affirming movie like In a Class of His Own would be quietly scoring as a sleeper hit in theaters, like To Sir, With Love three decades ago.

Unfortunately, today's movie industry is dominated by a frenetic quest for the next Titanic blockbuster, so thanks are due to Showtime for finding time for this low-key, uplifting adaptation of a true story. It premieres Sunday, Oct. 17.

Lou Diamond Phillips (Stand and Deliver) stars as Rich Donato, a California high-school janitor who takes pride in his work – and in serving as an informal adviser to the students at the school. Rich is caring but firm with his charges, even going so far as to make them pay a fine when they curse.

His world becomes much more complicated when he gets a letter from the local board of education advising him that he must pass a high-school equivalency test with a grade of at least 81 in order to keep his job. This news coincides with an announcement from his wife, Shari (Cara Buono), that she is pregnant with their first child.

A nervous Rich confides in teacher Linda Ching (Joan Chen, looking as radiant as in her Twin Peaks days as Josie Packard), who works with remedial students. Linda agrees to tutor Rich after school each day but soon discovers that he has a combination of attention deficit disorder and mild dyslexia.

Shari appears before a meeting of the school board and parents to plead on Rich's behalf, but when the parents (one of them is played by the real-life Donato) turn a deaf ear, many of the students volunteer to help Rich.

He eventually takes and flunks – quite spectacularly – the test three times before the school board administrator calls to advise him that, as a 10-year employee, he is protected by a grandfather clause. By now, however, the test has become a matter of self-esteem for Rich, who decides to take it for a fourth and final time.

It's a story of personal commitment and determination that will move almost any viewer, whether he's a high-school student or one who still remembers the constant opportunities for humiliation that venue offered.

Writer-director Robert Munic (the Sci-Fi Channel movie Timelock) stumbles badly only in depicting the story's not-so-bad "bad guys" – why is there no point to principal Skip Jordan (Tom McBeath) being such a complete, cartoonish goofball? – and he skillfully captures the symbiotic relationship between Rich and his young charges.

Somewhere along the way, Phillips has metamorphosed from a merely very competent performer to an actor of surpassing confidence and range. At 37, he is able to encompass the full range of this character's complicated moods with a relaxed and assured style that will have any viewer in his pocket from the first scene.

"I think (this movie has) a wonderful message to send out to America today because everyone wants things instantly," the actor says. "They feel like they're entitled to certain things without working for it, and I think that Rich is an incredible role model to say, 'Be a wonderful person. Be a good person, but do your job.' "

You probably won't hear In a Class of His Own shouted out during next year's Emmy telecast, unless Phillips' understated performance manages to catch the attention of the few who vote on these things, but in a season that needs every role model it can find, this TV movie stands and delivers.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
This week's scenario is highlighted by some big changes in your regular routine. You may be called upon to care for elderly, children or pets. This will require much more of your attention than you first anticipated. Don't dwell on it, just try to enjoy the extra time you get to share with them. New opportunities will offer you some interesting changes to add to your experience.

TAURUS
This week's scenario is highlighted by partnerships, teamwork & working towards mutual goals. You know it is impossible to accomplish anything if you try to do it alone. Bring your leadership qualities to the surface & help organize your mutual efforts. Remember, patience will be necessary for you to gain other's respect and trust. Learn how to relax by sharing secrets with those concerned.

GEMINI
This week's scenario is highlighted by your intuitive yet practical attitude towards your future goals. Sometimes life feels like a real learning experience to you. You'll enjoy heightened intuitive and creative inspiration through music, art, personal hobbies. As the gravity of your goals strikes you, you may be prone to bouts of negative thinking, doubt, worry, and pessimism. Don't let yourself wander, spend time with positive influences & work your way through them.

CANCER
This week's scenario is highlighted by your ability to see past the glitter & shine of someone's exciting news. Use your influence to help others to see true motivations. You may feel pulled in many different directions this week. Don't be too embarrassed to speak your mind, if you are sincere, your words will be understood. Try not to put yourself in a position to have to seek a favor from someone you really don't want to be obligated to.

LEO
This week's scenario is highlighted by your flair for entertaining & organizing social affairs. Keep your timing & schedules on track. Short trips, visits can be a welcomed change from your hectic routine. Keep your edge & take control when everyone around you seem to be losing their cool.

VIRGO
This week's scenario is highlighted by your studious nature & your need to take time to carefully examine situations in detail. Patiently go through all the facts at hand before you state your position. It may be several days before you are ready to articulate your response. Open yourself to new ideas. Security comes to those who are willing to change, not to those who insist on standing still on familiar ground.

LIBRA
This week's scenario is highlighted by schedules, meetings & getting your priorities in order. Your hectic pace needs to slow down to a more manageable level in order for you to focus yourself. Avoid impulsive decisions. You'll shine professionally, take the opportunity to plan some well deserved R&R for your physical & mental fatigue. Allow others to pull up the slack, and give you a little extra time to organize yourself.

SCORPIO
This week's scenario is highlighted by relationships & partnerships. One of the big issues is about values. Your differences with another person are not about who is right, but about alternative views of a situation. Consider bringing in a third party to help you through this matter.

SAGITTARIUS
This week's scenario is highlighted by emotions & how well you deal with other's moods. Perhaps you've been feeling a little ignored, lately. By week's end, you should start to be in a more positive position.

CAPRICORN
This week's scenario is highlighted by opportunities for financial freedom & finding your own niche in life. Demands from both home and work could weigh heavily on your timetable. Try not to spread yourself too thin by taking on too much.

AQUARIUS
This week's scenario is highlighted by domestic & personal affairs. Push yourself to listen to other's problems & try hard to make compromises for them. You may receive news of employment opportunities which interest you.

PISCES
This week's scenario is highlighted by a valuable idea that you may have forgotten. You could even rediscover a talent or gift that you haven't even thought of lately. Pay attention to what you feel, because you may not easily convince others of your views at this time. You may reveal a family secret which may not make you popular with other members of the clan.

IN FOCUS

Farrah Fawcett stars in Silk Hope Sunday, Oct. 17, on CBS.

Fawcett plays flighty Frannie, a woman from a small North Carolina town whose less-than-sterling reputation precedes her.

Her partying ways come to an end when she learns the generations-old farmhouse she grew up in may be lost if her sister Natalie (Ashley Crow) is allowed to sell it.

To save her family home, Frannie must get – and keep – a job and rein in her wild ways.

Goldie Hawn finds herself In the Wild Sunday, Oct. 17, on PBS (check local listings).

Seven years ago, Hawn encountered a blind female elephant in the jungles of India.

She returns in search of the majestic creature in "The Elephants of India With Goldie Hawn."

Through her travels, Hawn says she hopes to raise awareness about the endangered elephant, considered one of the most intelligent species in the animal kingdom.

Roy Firestone hosts Up Close World Series Special With Roy Firestone Friday on ESPN. Players from both World Series teams share their thoughts on the Fall Classic.

Up Close goes deep with World Series special

When baseball Hall of Famer Ted Williams took the field at this year's All-Star game, the last man to bat .400 found himself surrounded by the game's best players of today.

Players accustomed to being mobbed by fans for a hastily scrawled autograph or a quick handshake looked more like Little Leaguers meeting their big-league hero for the first time.

The summer night at Fenway Park reaffirmed the incredible sense of tradition and surrealism surrounding baseball and its players – a phenomenon found in no other sport, and continuing in the 1999 World Series.

ESPN delves deep into that baseball tradition with Up Close World Series Special With Roy Firestone, airing Friday, Oct. 22. Host Firestone previews the Fall Classic by exploring the thoughts and emotions of the ballplayers involved.

"(We) capture the moods, reflections and articulation of individuals' dreams and their stories," Firestone says. "It's a more personal look at their lives."

Statistics are great, strategies are fine, but it's the ballplayers and their World Series feats fans remember, he points out.

They remember Willie Mays' impossible catch, Brooklyn's one and only championship, Don Larsen's perfect game, Carlton Fisk's home-run body English, Reggie Jackson smacking three home runs in three at-bats, or a 1986 Mets team coming back to win the series after being down to its last strike.

"The memories that people have of the World Series are more vivid in baseball than in any other sport," Firestone says, postulating that if you review the greatest moments in American sports history, seven out of 10 will be baseball-related.

From franchises that have been around since the turn of the century to today's newest expansion clubs, teams have always had the same goal: win four out of seven games and go home world champions, he explains.

"There's a lot of tradition in baseball," Firestone concludes, "and there's a unique and classic appeal to the World Series. That's why it really is the greatest sport."

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: Whatever happened to Terry Farrell of Star Trek: Deep Space Nine? –L.F. Evans, Port Charlotte, Fla.

A: She recently began her second season co-starring with Ted Danson in the CBS Monday hit Becker.

Q: Back in the 1950s, I believe, I watched a Saturday program called Circus Boy. Who played the boy? Was it Kurt Russell, by any chance? –Rose M. McSwane, Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

A: A young actor named Mickey Braddock played Corky in that 1956-58 series. If that name doesn't ring a bell, the same actor returned to TV nearly a decade later in The Monkees using his own name: Micky Dolenz.

Q: I recently saw an actress named Lee Purcell on a rerun of The Waltons. Is she not the same actress now playing Miss Parker on The Pretender? –Marian Mosemann, Summit Hill, Pa.

A: No. Purcell, now 42, and Andrea Parker, 30, of The Pretender are two different actresses. Purcell, by the way, had a recurring role as Louise St. Laurent on a half-dozen or so episodes of Due South. You might catch her in the repeats on TNT.

Q: Deon Richmond, who plays Jordan on Sister, Sister, looks like the boy who used to play Kenny on The Cosby Show. Is it the same person? –Ginny Brown, Nashua, N.H.

A: Good catch, Ginny! Yes, Richmond, now 21, previously had a recurring role as Rudy Huxtable's (Keshia Knight Pulliam) outspoken young friend Kenny on The Cosby Show.

Q: My husband remembers a late 1950s or early 1960s show from his childhood called The Littlest Hobo about a German shepherd. No one else recalls it. Do you have any information? –L.C.B. in New Jersey.

Terry Farrell

A: TV historian Alex McNeil reports that this 1963 Canadian series, which was syndicated to some parts of the United States, was "one of the few shows without a human regular." Instead, it focused on a German shepherd whose wanderings kept leading him to people in trouble.

Q: Is former game show host Gene Rayburn (The Match Game) still living? How about Bert Convy (Tattletales)? Panelist Kitty Carlisle?–Marjorie Mathis, Bevier, Mo.

A: Coincidentally, I ran into veteran game show host Tom Kennedy a few weeks ago, and he told me Rayburn, now 81, is currently living in Sherman Oaks, Calif., in "iffy" health but good spirits.

At 85, Kitty Carlisle Hart (Moss Hart's widow) is still quite active, but Convy died of cancer in 1991 at age 58 and was interred at Forest Lawn Cemetery near Hollywood.

SOAP TALK

Sun to set permanently on NBC's Sunset Beach

By Candace Havens

NBC's Another World aired its last episode this summer, and it now appears Sunset Beach is headed for the same fate.

In June, Sunset Beach was given six months to increase its ratings. The NBC daytime drama underwent massive story rewrites, several cast members were let go, and new actors were hired, but it wasn't enough. NBC has canceled the struggling soap, and in several major markets, it has already been replaced by a talk show.

Before leaving Sunset Beach to star in NBC's prime-time series Third Watch, Eddie Cibrian (ex-Cole Deschanel) said he was disappointed to hear the show might be canceled.

"I have friends there, and a lot of people work very hard on that show," Cibrian said. "I know the fans will be as disappointed as we are if the show goes off. Unfortunately, it will come down to a business decision."

Several fan clubs staged protests outside NBC studios and used e-mail and letter writing campaigns to try to keep the show on the air.

There has been speculation that The WB Network or Fox might pick up the show. Aaron Spelling, the executive producer of Sunset Beach, has a healthy relationship with both networks.

NBC has no new soap opera prospects at this time. The 750th and final episode of Sunset Beach is set to air Dec. 31.

Dear Candace: I can't believe All My Children let Raquel (Ara Celi) go. She is so beautiful, and she is a wonderful actress. I hope they know how upset the fans are. –Henry Pinto, New York, N.Y.

Dear Reader: Many AMC fans were sad to see her go, but the writers wanted to move the story line in a different direction.

Dear Candace: Is there anything we can do to bring back Roark Critchlow to Days of Our Lives? I can't believe (executive producer) Ken Corday got rid of him. –M. Jones, Evansville, Ill.

Dear Reader: Corday left the door open for Critchlow to return at a later time. It was Critchlow's decision to leave the daytime drama.
