Soviet liberals say plan too weak

MOSCOW (AP) — Liberal Communist Party leaders today attacked Mikhail S. Gorbachev's daring plan for ending the party's monopoly on power as not radical enough to solve the country's pressing problems, participants said.

But Politburo member Yegor K. Ligachev, a hard-liner, called for a careful review of the Soviet president's proposals, which would fundamentally alter this nation's system of government.

Gorbachev on Monday opened a pivotal session of the Central Committee by proposing the party abandon its guaranteed monopoly on power and be forced to compete with other parties for the right to lead the country.

Some speakers at today's Central Committee session criticized the platform, saying it was "based on old dogmas," said Alexander Fomin, a coal miner invited as a guest of the meeting.

"There were not enough radical proposals to solve the party's problems," Fomin in a summary of today's debate he offered during a break in the closed-door session.

He did not detail the objections, and the Soviet media carried no details of today's session.

Another participant, Gen. Igor I. Kurenoi, said Ligachev, who last week came under attack in a newspaper for his conservative views, called in a speech for reviewing Gorbachev's proposals carefully.

The 69-year-old Soviet leader also pointed out shortcomings of the leadership's policies but did not propose solutions, Fomin said.

Gorbachev, as expected, is in the middle of an intense struggle between progressives and conservatives over whether to completely abandon the centralized system of government in favor of a multiparty political system with a more capitalist economy.

The session has taken on crisis proportions because of the worsening Soviet economy and a rise in ethnic unrest throughout the country. It comes on the heels of a breathtaking series of revolts against old orthodox socialist governments in six East bloc nations.

On Monday, Gorbachev told the party's policy-making Central Committee that by letting outmoded ideas govern their policy, socialist countries had during the 20th century isolated themselves from "the general flow of civilization."

But his proposal met with stiff resistance in the largely conservative 249-member body. One participant said committee members did not applaud Gorbachev or anyone else on the first day of the two-day closed session.

Outdoor displays debated

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

A motorist whose car runs out of gas at the Wadley Avenue-Midkiff Road intersection will have little trouble finding fuel.

Four brightly colored service stations, one on each corner, practically beg for customer attention.

Blaine Bushman, owner of Bushman's Exxon on the southeast corner, has been slugging it out with the competition for the past three years.

To make sure motorists know his station is full service and not just another pump-and-run, Bushman, 42, puts out racks of new tires near the curbs and stacks of oil bottles next to the gas pumps.

"Nowadays there are so many stations that are self-serve," he said Monday. "People would think I was self-serve if I didn't put out those tires.

"I really sell a lot of tires. The reason I sell tires is I put them out front."

Whether Bushman and other merchants in the city will be allowed to display their wares in the future is in the hands of Midland planning and zoning commissioners.

Five years after local businessmen and nursery owners complained that a city code unfairly allowed some businesses to have outdoor displays, Midland officials have come up with a recommendation.

Insurance firms win 2.88% hike

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Board of Insurance Monday approved a 2.88 percent overall increase in car insurance rates as board members urged insurance companies to take a harder line on medical costs.

The three board members blamed the $113 million rate increase on the high cost of medical care as well as court costs from lawsuits.

The board also authorized higher rates to compensate for a recent Texas Supreme Court ruling that expanded insurance company liability for underinsured motorists.

In the overall rate case, board member Jo Ann Howard proposed the 2.88 percent increase, saying a 9.2 percent increase in liability costs plus other expenses offset a 6.9 percent decline in property damage costs.

Ms. Howard also called for better medical cost containment. "Instead of just passing these costs on, it's time that insurance companies look at holding these costs down," she said.

Board member Richard Reynolds, who supported the staff recommendation of a 6 percent increase but agreed with Ms. Howard and Chairman Paul Wrotenbery on less than half that amount, said doctors and lawyers were the familiar culprits for the rate increase.

"It's the same two items that seem to keep driving insurance costs up," he said.

Reynolds also blamed the Texas Supreme Court, which in September 1989 ruled that in cases where the liability exceeds the coverage limits of an insured motorist who is at fault, the extra costs may be charged to the other driver who has uninsured coverage.

For the standard coverage of $20,000 per person and $40,000 maximum per accident, the board accepted the staff recommendation for a $10 increase in most of the Permian Basin, including Midland and Ector counties.

Kay Doughty, director of the state Office of Consumer Protection, was disappointed that the board did not cut the rates, as she recommended, but she was pleased the board considered actual expenses of agents as part of the rate base, instead of using budget estimates, as it has in the past.

That change in the ratemaking process will result in savings for consumers, Ms. Doughty said.

Rick Gentry, a spokesman for the industry, which sought a 12.8 percent increase, noted that insurance companies open themselves to charges of bad-faith dealing when they try to hold down medical costs. "We're in a very precarious posi-

Several sites for junior high considered

By DAVID MORRIS

East Midland is represented among five recommended junior high school sites, and District 2 trustee Adela Marmolejo today said it's a step in the right direction.

"It's time for them to get another school on the east side of town," she said. "They are taxpayers, too."

Midland Independent School District officials disclosed five sites for a proposed new junior high Monday which meet school board criteria set Jan. 23.

The board will discuss site selection at a public forum at 5:30 p.m. today at the Midland High School auditorium, 906 W. Illinois Ave.

Sites include three on the western edge of town, one on the northern edge and one on the eastern edge.

East Midlanders have been campaigning since last fall to have the new school built in their area of town.

Western sites are near Wadley Avenue west of Loop 250. Two of the sites, one adjacent to Scharbauer Elementary School and one adjacent to Wadley Avenue, would carry no additional land or development costs. The third, north of Wadley Avenue, would cost $220,450 for roads and utilities, said MISD executive director of auxiliary services Wilson Heidelberg.

Land at the western sites will not cost the district additional money, Heidelberg said. MISD owns one of the sites and has agreed on a swap with SPC Corp., which owns the remaining two.

The northern site, owned by the Abell-Hanger Foundation, is located west of Texas 349 and north of Loop 250. Heidelberg said land, road and utility costs for the site would be $345,500.

The eastern site is bordered by Fairgrounds Road on the east, Cuthbert Avenue on the north and Garden Lane on the south.

Heidelberg said the district owns 10 acres at the eastern site. Costs for 15 additional acres, road extensions and utility hookups would be about $260,000, he said.

MISD Computer Services Director Larry Lusby said the number of pupils in grades kindergarten through sixth within a two-mile radius of the western sites and the eastern site is about equal at 2,300 pupils. About 1,500

Nursing home denies role in man's death

By PATRICK CRIMMINS

The administrator of Terrace West Nursing Home today denied responsibility for the disappearance and death of Edgar Bohling, the Alzheimer's disease victim who wandered away from the facility last September.

"The man had wandered away from several nursing homes and even his house," Russ Rogers said in response to a wrongful death lawsuit filed Feb. 2 by Bohling's family. "And they (the family) didn't tell us about it."

Bohling, 75, had been at Terrace West less than 48 hours when he walked off, Rogers said.

"We have a real good home here," Rogers said. "As evidence of that, there are only three beds available right now. We have a good reputation."

Bohling's body was found Nov. 17, 1989, in a field five miles west of Midland near State Highway 158. Ac-

Clements says SSC aid 'premature'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says it's premature to talk about foreign participation in the super collider until the project has Congress' complete endorsement and the final cost and design are decided.

Although some in Congress have been pressing for foreign money to help build the collider, Clements said the Energy Department is in no position now to seek foreign participants and they are not prepared to contribute, either.

Clements, who met Monday with Energy Secretary James Watkins, said Congress must give the collider its complete endorsement and the project's price tag and engineering design must be decided before foreign countries could be asked to participate.

Watkins has indicated he favors building the collider as originally conceived, which he said would increase the cost the $5.9 billion project by $1 billion to $2 billion.

Clements said he expects Watkins to recommend to Congress that the collider be built at a cost of $7.2 billion, but does not expect serious opposition on Capitol Hill to the higher price tag.

"I think the increase is minimal, really," Clements said.

Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala., chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee with jurisdiction over the collider, however, was adamant last year that DOE come up with a plan to share the collider's cost with foreign countries.

The Energy Department's foreign participation plan still is being drafted but has been classified, spokesman Jeff Sherwood said.

Sherwood said the draft had been classified because it represents the DOE's "negotiating position" with potential contributors.

Clements, who last year questioned the national security implications of allowing foreign countries to share the collider's costs, said Monday he was "really not" concerned about those issues now.

Clements said foreign participants, however, should not be sought "until our plans are very definitive and until the Congress is totally on board with the whole project.

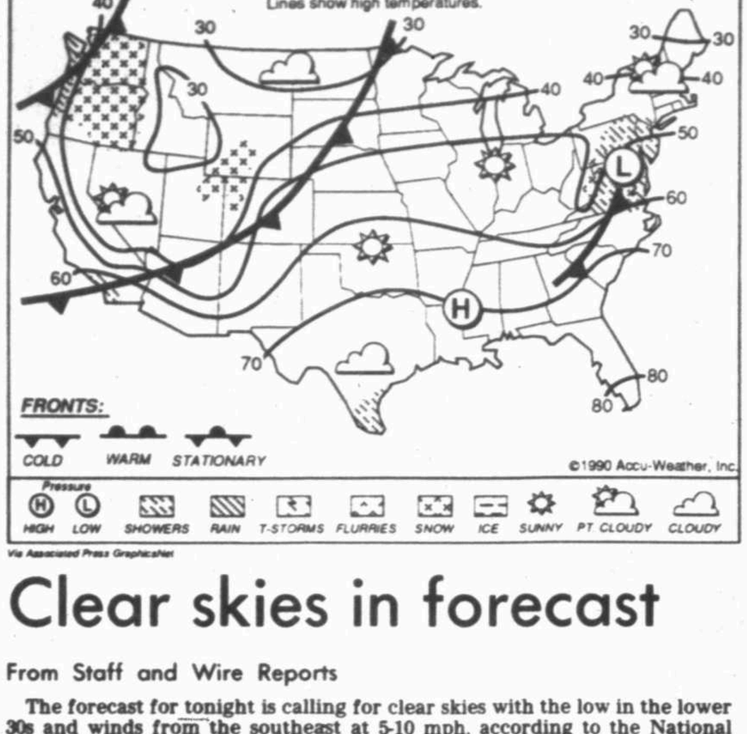

"We're not in a position to ask for it. Certainly no one overseas is in a position to make a commitment for 'X' dollars until they know what 'Y' cost is, and until Congress has completely endorsed the program. And so foreign participation, which everybody likes to talk about, is premature to talk about at this point," Clements said.

Only India has publicly announced it was willing to contribute to the collider, up to $50 million.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who met with Clements later in the day,

From Staff and Wire Reports

The forecast for tonight is calling for clear skies with the low in the lower 30s and winds from the southeast at 5-10 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Wednesday is expected to be sunny and warmer with the high in the lower 70s and winds from the south at 5-15 mph.

Monday's high of 69 was nine degrees cooler than the record high of 78 set for that date in 1951. The overnight low of 36 was 27 degrees warmer than the record low of nine set for this date in 1989.

STATE

Two upper-level disturbances triggered scattered showers and a few isolated thunderstorms over Northeast Texas, along the lower coastal plains and in the Lower Rio Grande Valley early today.

Most of the precipitation in South Texas had moved into the Gulf of Mexico during the pre-dawn hours.

A cold front extended across Texas from western Oklahoma southwestward into the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas early today.

Forecasts called for the showers and thunderstorms to continue tonight across southern portions of the state. It will be mostly clear elsewhere and mostly clear across most of the state on Wednesday.

NATION

Mild weather continued in the upper Midwest today, while rain and snow fell on the Northwest.

A cold front reached across northwestern Montana and California north of San Francisco with clouds, gusty winds and precipitation. Rain turned to snow in the higher altitudes.

The western Gulf states looked for scattered showers today. Rain was due in the Ohio Valley and central Appalachinas tonight, with snow possible in West Virginia's mountains by Wednesday morning.

Balloons enlisted in 'drug war'

By DAN FREEDMAN
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — With the launch of three high-altitude surveillance balloons in Texas this year, the U.S. Customs Service hopes to complete an aerial "picket fence" to thwart airborne drug smugglers crossing the U.S.-Mexico border.

The radar-equipped balloons, floating like dirigibles 10,000 to 15,000 feet above the ground, represent another move in Washington's chesslike battle of wits against drug traffickers.

When all three are up and running, Customs officials say the electronic wall they will form with three other balloons already in place should deter drug traffickers' aircraft, or force them to thread their way through narrow "choke" points along the border. Each balloon's radar sweep covers 300 miles.

"The object is to raise the risk rate for smugglers," said Robert Asack, chief of air operations for U.S. Customs. "The risk rates are going to be enough to cause major deterrence in air trafficking."

But the effort to launch the three helium-filled balloons — known as aerostats — hit a snag on Dec. 28 when a ground cable hooked onto one of the craft broke during a test flight in Eagle Pass, Texas.

As the balloon began floating away, U.S. agents had to deflate it by remote control. It crashed, destroying its sensitive radar system.

At $15 million apiece, the balloons will be spaced 300 miles apart in a kind of "picket fence" along the 1,933-mile border with Mexico. They will be tethered to ground stations manned by Customs agents.

Whether they give Customs the winning edge in the battle against drug smugglers remains to be seen.

As the government's frontline agency for combating drug smuggling along the border, Customs' budget for drug interdiction has tripled since 1983, to $329.8 million this year.

However, U.S. Customs expenditures on aircraft, surveillance balloons, personnel and other radar-detection systems have not dented border drug smuggling. Federal records show seizures of cocaine along the border by Customs, Drug Enforcement Administration and U.S. Border Patrol agents hit a new high in 1989 – 76,000 pounds.

Once all the surveillance balloons are up and operating, any smugglers detected by them could be intercepted by any of 22 U.S. Customs aircraft. An undisclosed number of military planes, on standby if needed, also could be thrown into the chase.

Three of the six balloons for the Southwest border already are flying near Yuma, Ariz., Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and Deming, N.M.

The three for south and west Texas are scheduled to fly soon after officials figure out what went wrong in the Eagle Pass mishap. The other two are to be based in Marfa and Rio Grande City, Texas.

Officials point to three possible causes of the Eagle Pass accident: A lightening strike, a faulty tether, or unusual "harmonics" — a weakening of the cable through wind vibrations.

If the cause is determined to be a problem inherent in the aerostats, launching the three Texas balloons could be postponed for months, said Asack, the Customs official. If the Eagle Pass balloon itself is at fault, he said the balloons could be flying by April.

Supporters and critics alike agree that aerostats are the cheapest way to monitor long, desolate stretches of border territory electronically. But critics question the effectiveness of the balloons' radar coverage and their vulnerability to violent wind, rain and thunderstorms that often rake the Southwest.

"I don't see the aerostats as likely to accomplish much," said Peter Reuter, a leading drug policy analyst who has studied border interdiction for the Rand Corp., a think tank.

In a report last year, the U.S. General Accounting Office, which investigates government programs for Congress, concluded that one of the "principal limitations" of aerostats is that they must be reeled in during bad weather, reducing their hours of operation.

GAO also said surveillance balloons have trouble distinguishing drug traffickers' aircraft from ground clutter. Low-flying planes in mountainous terrain can drop off a radar screen altogether, GAO said.

Because mountains block radar, a smuggler "can get his terrain maps out and see where he's likely to be shielded," said Frank Ault, a consultant to Customs and General Electric, which made the balloons.

Ault compared the round sweep of an aerostat's radar coverage area to the shape of a cookie. Aerostats don't project "nice round cookies," Ault said. "What happens is that because of the way radar energy bounces off rocks, (the radar coverage zones) are raggedy cookies, like somebody scalloped the edges."

Customs' Asack acknowledged that between bad weather and routine maintenance, aerostats are operational 73 percent of the time.

Asack also acknowledged that there are holes in the balloons' radar coverage, which may tempt smugglers to try to skirt them at the edges. U.S. Customs and military aircraft patrolling along the edges of the balloons' radar field could offset this weakness, he said.

Despite these drawbacks, aerostats are a cost-effective deterrent that will force smugglers to recalculate their strategy, Asack said. "If you're looking at a 73 percent chance of being detected, you're not going to accept those odds," he said.

Asack added: "We're trying to fight the air war. We want to get these guys out of the air and on the ground" where land- or sea-based U.S. forces can intercept them.

ter rumors swept the world that he might step down as party chief, Gorbachev on Monday presented a new political program for the Communist Party based on a bill of rights.

"Man and his well-being are put in the center of the party's policy from now on and forever," he said. The speech, released later by Tass, did not detail the rights he wants to enshrine in the party's platform.

Gorbachev did not suggest that the party give up efforts to lead the country. Instead, he said it "intends to struggle for the role of ruling party, but strictly in the framework of the democratic process, rejecting any kind of legal or political advantage."

At some point, he said, growing pluralism "can lead to the creation of parties."

Gorbachev called for an end to a tenet of Leninism called "democratic centralism," which demands strict allegiance by the party's 20 million members to decisions made at the top.

He said the party's views on managing the economy and the government should no longer be pressed on Soviet society.

The Communists have been widely assailed for the dismal state of the economy and for widespread abuses of power.

Gorbachev acknowledged that the country, which suffers severe shortages of consumer goods, has not seen any fundamental improvement from the economic reform program he has championed since coming to power in 1985.

He said key obstacles to those changes were old attitudes and the failure to reform prices.

Transcripts released by Tass indicated Gorbachev underwent immediate, stinging criticism.

In the lawsuit filed in 142nd State District Court, Bohling's family claims the HEA Management Group Inc., doing business as Terrace West, failed to control access to the facility and did not train personnel adequately.

Terrace West also should have installed closed circuit cameras and remote door locking devices, according to the suit.

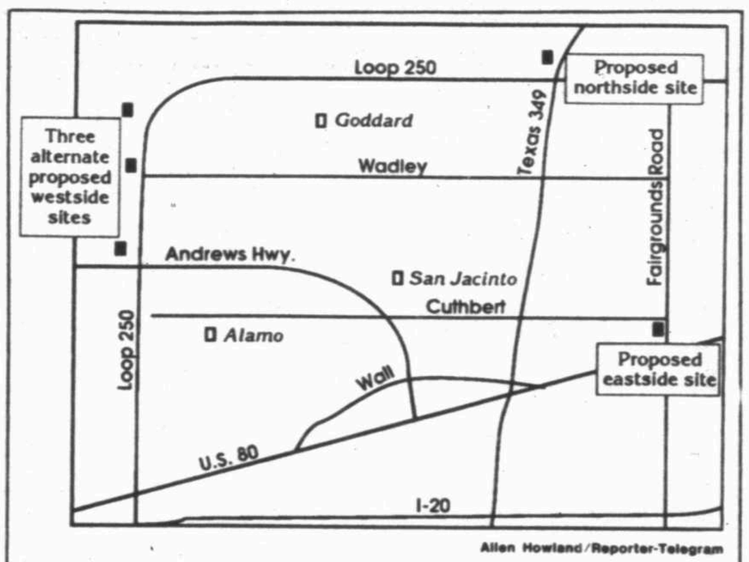

Employees at the home at 2800 N. Midland Drive should have been alert to residents walking away, especially because of "previous disappearances from the premises," the suit states.

The lawsuit was filed by Odessa attorney Jim Osborn on behalf of Ann Bush, Robert Bohling and Jerry Bohling, children of Edgar Bohling.

The suit asks for no specific amount of damages.

The action also maintains that Bohling "suffered severe physical pain and mental anguish prior to his death," and asks for $5,000 in funeral expenses.

Family members have "been permanently deprived of the love, support, companionship, and society which they would have received from their father had he lived," the suit states. "Furthermore, they have suffered emotional pain, torment, and suffering from the disappearance and death of their father."

live in the vicinity of the Abell-Hanger site, he said.

However, little residential development is planned near the eastern site, Lusby said. He said most development was planned for west Midland, and predicted larger numbers of students living in that area in the future.

A denser student population around the new school would mean less busing, Lusby said.

"We know that we're going to need to balance the schools with busing," Lusby said. "But we're interested in not doing any more than we have to."

MISD long range plans call for the new school to be built by fall 1992.

District Long Range Planning Director Joe Cummins estimated that junior high enrollment will grow from 2,000 this year to 3,146 in 1992.

"Divide that by four, and that would give you about 800 students for each junior high school campus," Cummins said.

Based on the number of first- and second-graders currently enrolled, there will be about 3,732 junior high pupils by 1995-96, Cummins said.

The district has estimated the cost of the school at $8 million.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said a bond election for the new school probably will go before voters in May or September.

"We have the opportunity to secure any of the sites," Baressi said. "Before we do that we want to seek the input of the community."

DISPLAYS

The proposal, which addresses the outside sale, display and storage of merchandise, was presented Monday to the Midland Planning and Zoning Commission.

Commissioners and city councilmen during the next few months will study the plan and decide which businesses will be allowed to display their merchandise outside.

City administrators are recommending that certain business owners who want to put their merchandise outdoors must build a wall or fence around the display to obscure it from public view. In addition, the display must not take up more than 10 percent of a business' floor space.

However, David Thurbon, assistant director of city planning, said it is up to commissioners and ultimately city councilmen to decide whether the rule applies to outdoor tire and oil displays at service stations.

Bob Lanham said city officials, citing a zoning code, nixed his idea of opening a nursery and landscape business in 1985 on a commercially lucrative spot near the Loop 250-Midkiff Road intersection.

Lanham, now 35, had to settle for a less attractive area at 1402 W. Loop 250 off Andrews Highway, where the property was also more expensive.

When Lanham and other nurserymen saw that department stores such as Wal-Mart had outdoor nurseries, they joined forces and asked city officials to enforce an ordinance prohibiting the displays.

Wal-Mart, which like other department stores is allowed to operate in a less restrictive zone, was allowed to keep its outdoor nursery but had to screen it from public view.

Thurbon said councilmen at first were to review display requests on a case-by-case basis. But in 1986, the City Council asked planners to revise the display code — which was unveiled Monday.

Thurbon said it took four years to write a new proposal because planners decided to not only address department stores but all businesses which may want outdoor displays.

"We felt we couldn't discriminate against a certain type of merchandise, so we had to look at everything," he said. "There are a lot of people out there waiting to see what will happen with this."

The tradition of service stations keeping their tire and oil displays outside is not immune. City officials, though, are not recommending that walls be built around tire racks and oil bottle stacks.

"We feel, at least on some basis, that gas stations should be treated just a little bit differently," Thurbon said. "It may not be an issue really."

However, he said there is a question whether it is fair to make anyone the exception to the code.

Thurbon said no time frame has been established for finilizing the proposal, which commissioners are slated to review page by page at their Feb. 19 meeting.

The recommendation will go through at least one public hearing before it goes before councilmen at an unspecified date, he said.

Richard Hennessy, planning and development director, said city code enforcers issue a warning for an illegal outdoor display only about twice a year.

The warned business owners almost always bring their stores into compliance without the city having to slap them with a fine, Hennessy said.

The code does not apply to stores setting up seasonal outdoor displays, such as Christmas trees and firewood, he said.

Hennessy said the city needs an outdoor code to maintain its aesthetic quality, making Midland more attractive to business owners and other people wanting to move here.

COLLIDER

said he had been assured by Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., chairman of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee, that a bill authorizing the collider would be introduced soon, possibly next week.

President Bush also is seeking a $318 million appropriation for the collider in next year's budget, which will be considered by appropriations committees in the House and Senate this spring.

Bush last year requested $250 million for the collider, which would be built south of Dallas in Ellis County. Congress voted to give it $225 million.

Clements said Texas, which has pledged $1 billion toward the collider, was prepared to participate in pro rata cost sharing.

"Our $1 billion will be put in pro rata as the federal dollars are put in," Clements said. "We want our money to be in facilities, we want 'em above ground, we want to reach out there and pat 'em and admire 'em and take pictures of 'em and so forth, and we don't want it in a hole in the ground."

The collider, a 53-mile underground ring, will allow scientists to test theories about the fundamental nature of matter by smashing together subatomic particles.

RATES

tion," he said.

"It is an extremely competitive market in Texas and I think the decision will enhance that competition," Gentry said, adding that individual companies will have to reassess their position in light of the board decision.

"Over the last six years auto rates in Texas have increased 6.8 percent," Gentry said. "I suspect that there probably aren't too many consumer products who have seen a similar modest increase in their costs."

While the board action sets a ceiling on insurance rates, only one-third of customers actually pay those rates, as companies can seek approval to deviate from those rates for preferred or high-risk customers.

In 1988, the board reported, 63.3 percent of Texans were charged less than the "manual" rates, while 3.2 percent were charged higher rates.

Wrotenbery agreed with Reynolds that the trend toward litigation and higher medical costs have combined to increase insurance costs, while physical and property damage costs showed declines.

The chairman said he would urge a task force study of the possibility of moving to a no-fault insurance system in an attempt to reduce the costs of litigation.

North's lawyer asks court to overturn ex-aide's conviction

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney for Oliver North asked a federal appeals court today to overturn the former presidential aide's Iran-Contra conviction because of the "pervasive dissemination" of his congressional testimony.

Attorney Barry Simon, in oral arguments before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said witnesses, jurors, prosecutors and grand jurors could not avoid exposure to testimony North gave to Congress.

North was granted immunity from prosecution for his testimony before a congressional committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair. Prosecutors said they had not read or seen any of that testimony and had gathered their own evidence. The congressional testimony was carried on live television and reported widely throughout the media.

"In light of the pervasive dissemination ... there are no procedures that could ensure a fair trial," Simon argued.

Attorneys for independent counsel Lawrence Walsh followed Simon in arguing before the appeals court.

North was convicted on May 4, 1989, of obstructing Congress, altering and destroying National Security Council documents and accepting an illegal gratuity.

Responding to questioning by a three-judge panel, Simon said he was most troubled that "a combination of the jurors and witnesses" had been exposed to North's congressional testimony.

"It's something that affects the fundamental fairness of the trial," said the lawyer.

Simon said North's congressional testimony could have been taken "in camera", or privately, "as they did for some from the CIA (Central Intelligence Agency)."

The judges said that could have interfered with the investigative function of Congress. Simon responded, "If Congress chooses to have a public hearing, that is not something that should work to the disadvantage of our client."

Simon said grand jurors hearing testimony that resulted in indictments against North were not instructed to avoid reading newspapers or watching television. Instead, he said, the government's special prosecutor told the grand jurors to avoid "tainted material," or news that related to North.

"They were told they could watch, but if it came to tainted material, then skip over it," said Simon. "You could read, but when you get to an article that is tainted, skip over."

He said the special prosecutor "chose convenience" instead of absolutely forbidding the grand jurors from reading newspapers or watching television.

"The publicity was absolutely pervasive," he said. "This grand jury was not shielded."

The obstruction charge involved a 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran, while the documents that were destroyed showed North's assistance to the Nicaraguan Contras. The gratuity was a $13,800 home security system which North accepted from Richard Secord.

Trial's outcome doesn't worry reputed mob boss

NEW YORK (AP) — The fate of John Gotti and an associate is in the hands of the jury, but the reputed organized crime boss says he isn't worried about being convicted of ordering the shooting of a union leader.

"There's no problem," Gotti said after closing arguments in his assault and conspiracy trial Monday. "There's never been a problem."

When the case began, Gotti said odds were 3-to-1 in his favor.

If convicted, Gotti faces 25 years to life in prison because of his prior conviction record.

The state Supreme Court jury was expected to begin deliberations today after being instructed by Acting Justice Edward McLoughlin.

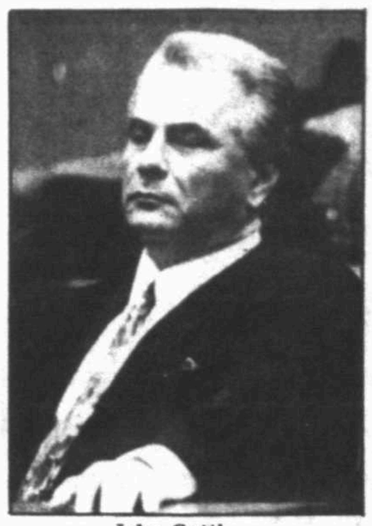

The 12 jurors and four alternates have been sequestered since being sworn in about three weeks ago. Court officials estimate the cost of their hotel, food and transportation at $1,200 a day.

In closing arguments, defense lawyers Bruce Cutler and Gerald Shargel portrayed Gotti as a noteworthy person who is being persecuted by prosecutors because of his reputation.

"In their lust to convict Mr. Gotti, they created a case and they forgot integrity," Cutler told jurors.

"In the Mafia hysteria that they create and perpetuate, they forgot what was right."

But the prosecutor, Assistant District Attorney Michael Cherkasky, insisted Gotti had "the motivation" to arrange the shooting.

John Gotti

He said Gotti, 49, and co-defendant Anthony Guerrieri, 61, had the Westies gang shoot John F. O'Connor, former vice president of Carpenters Union Local 608, on May 7, 1986.

According to Cherkasky, O'Connor was shot because he arranged the trashing of a mob-run restaurant, Bankers and Brokers, which used non-union labor.

The defense ridiculed the quality of the prosecution's key evidence — hard-to-hear tapes secretly recorded in 1986 at Gotti's hangout and in the visiting room at the Rikers Island jail.

The defense says a key sentence, in which Gotti allegedly says, "We're gonna, gonna bust him up," is inaudible. Shargel and Cutler contend prosecutors are making it up to suit their theory.

The defense attorneys also asked why prosecutors didn't warn O'Connor that his life was in danger or why Gotti wasn't indicted in 1986 when the tapes were made.

"When the smoke clears, you will realize one thing — that there is no proof, let alone proof beyond a reasonable doubt, that John Gotti and Anthony Guerrieri had John O'Connor shot," Shargel told the jurors.

Cherkasky explained the discrepancies by telling the jury: "Law enforcement waited to have a case that came together."

Gotti's lawyers disparaged the truthfulness of the criminals who were called to testify, saying they were lying to save themselves.

"We are in America," Cutler said. "That's not how it's supposed to be. People are not supposed to be convicted because of who they are, who their friends are, what their background is."

The principal witness linking Gotti to the O'Connor shooting was James "Studs" McElroy, 45, a former Westies gang member who is serving a 60-year federal sentence.

McElroy testified that he was introduced to Gotti as the Westie who was going to "whack" O'Connor.

Cherkasky said of McElroy: "The simple fact is, this man is not smart enough, not subtle enough to lie."

But Cutler said McElroy testified to help his girlfriend get favorable treatment in a drug case and increase his own chances of getting out of jail.

O'Connor recovered from at least four shots in the buttocks and testified for the defense, invoking his right against self-incrimination several times when cross-examined.

He has been charged with extortion, perjury, larceny and labor racketeering.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your earning power will increase when you set new priorities and stick to them. A former employer could make an attractive job offer. Challenge the competition head-on and you could win big. The best time for a legal showdown is September. Romance plays a special role in your plans. Be sure you and mate are on the same wavelength before making a lifelong commitment. Shared values are essential.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Buster Crabbe, author Charles Dickens, pitcher Burt Hooton, jazzman Eubie Blake.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Others are counting on your good judgment. Avoid unnecessary expenditures and take your time when making important decisions. Your personal life is changing for the better. Charm wins you new friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could emerge a winner today, thanks to your popularity and clout. Curb a tendency to unleash your volatile temper. A loved one offers good advice; follow it and your income will rise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Contact with faraway friends or overseas associates takes on greater meaning. If you feel under the weather, take some time out to rest and relax. Postpone anything you can handle another day.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A certain amount of inconvenience may be unavoidable today; keep your cool. You may be asked to extend a helping hand. Do so if it will not jeopardize your work schedule. Promote teamwork.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance is "loverly." You have important decisions and plans to make. Observe all safety rules if you must drive. When roads are icy, take a cab or stay home. Call an older relative.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Economizing and straightening out any financial tangles are your top priorities. Home repairs may be needed. A cash flow problem is solved when you receive an unexpected check. Romance intensifies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could be involved in a fund-raising project. Speak up if you need help or advice. A wonderful donation comes from an unexpected quarter. A sick child will respond to tenderness. Be patient.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travelers could encounter problems today. Reconfirm reservations and schedules. Family relations improve. Make the best of a difficult situation. A sibling makes an invaluable suggestion. Take the hint.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Find escape from a situation that is making you uncomfortable. Postpone finalizing a business deal until more information is available. A personal relationship responds to tender nurturing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep the momentum going at work. You need to meet a deadline on time to preserve your reputation. Call home if you are going to be working late; loved one will understand.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Review your financial goals. You may need to be more practical; rely on experts for advice. Romance must have time and space to grow. Plan a special treat for those closest to your heart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will have to live up to your own standards if you expect others to do so. A raise or promotion is near. Moving to another city could upset a teen-ager. Talk things over.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	2 ◇	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ◇

On this hand from a team match, South's winning line is poetry itself. That it is not all that easy to spot is proved by the different results at the two tables.

Both teams reached four spades on identical auctions. Since North had considerably more than a minimum with good support for partner's suit, a jump to four spades was clearly warranted. Both Wests led the ten of diamonds and both Easts covered with the jack, conceding the first trick to declarer's king.

At one table declarer ran the jack of spades. East won the queen and shifted to the singleton heart. A trump to the king lost to the ace and East returned a low diamond. In with the nine, it was not too difficult for West to work out what was going on. He reverted to a heart and East's ruff spelled own one. Pretty defense.

At the other table, declarer returned a diamond at trick two! This simple maneuver broke communications between the defenders. East won and shifted to a heart, taken in the closed hand. Declarer also took the losing trump finesse, but here East had no way to get to his partner for a heart ruff. Declarer was able to win any return, force out the remaining high trump and once the last trump was drawn, claim his game.

Because the key to success lies in snipping the enemy communications, this technique has become known in the trade as the "Scissors Coup."

Tell-all Penthouse article worth more to agents, attorneys, IRS

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Debra Murphree, whose liaison with preacher Jimmy Swaggart rocked an evangelical empire, has signed away three-quarters of the $210,000 that Penthouse Magazine paid for her story.

Murphree will receive about $54,000 for the article published in July 1988, said Louis H. Schultz, her attorney. Agents, attorneys and the Internal Revenue Service will get the rest.

Swaggart

Agents and the IRS had claimed they were owed $428,000 by Murphree, a former prostitute who claimed that the Baton Rouge-based television evangelist was a regular customer in 1987.

However, Schultz said their figures were based on inflated estimates of the amount Penthouse owed for the article and a promotional tour and — in the IRS' $217,000 claim — for income from prostitution.

Murphree told Penthouse that Swaggart paid her $20 a visit to strike prurient poses and perform sexual acts.

Swaggart tearfully confessed to an unspecified "moral failure" and was subsequently defrocked by the Assemblies of God. Layoffs and cutbacks followed at his multimillion-dollar Jimmy Swaggart Ministries.

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman who claims the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy implied in his new book that she slept with the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. the night before he was slain has filed a $10 million libel suit.

The lawsuit filed Monday in U.S. District Court names Abernathy; and Harper & Row, publisher of "And the Walls Came Tumbling Down."

Abernathy

"Everyone in Memphis knew that Dr. King had been at my house the night before his assassination," Adjuda Abi Naantaabuu, a beautician in the Tennessee city, said in a statement. "Dr. Abernathy's book has cast shadows on my character. Even my own granddaughter asked me whether I had had an affair with Dr. King."

In the book, Abernathy wrote that he awoke for a nap in a woman's livingroom after a late-night dinner on April 3, 1968, to see King and the woman emerge from a bedroom.

A call to Abernathy's office in Atlanta was unanswered Monday evening. A spokesman at Harper & Row also could not be reached for comment.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Pro rodeo standout Dave Appleton says his sport is a hard sell, and that is why he has hired a publicity agency.

"When I grew up, kids played cowboys and Indians, and were more conscious of western life," said the Texas native. "But it's different today. Instead of taking a toy gun, kids carry their Nintendo games to the rodeo."

Appleton told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the publicity effort seems to be paying off. He appeared last month on "Late Night with David Letterman" and will be featured in a fashion spread in the March issue of Harper's Bazaar.

The 30-year-old Appleton won the all-around cowboy championship at the 1988 National Finals Rodeo.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Singers Willie Nelson, John Cougar Mellencamp and Neil Young are preparing for the fourth Farm Aid concert.

The singers and Gov. Evan Bayh were scheduled to hold a news conference this afternoon to discuss details of the April 7 event at the Hoosier Dome.

Nelson said Farm Aid IV will focus on the ability of farmers to provide safe food at reasonable prices.

Nelson and Mellencamp have raised more than $12 million for the nation's farmers in three previous concerts.

The first Farm Aid concert was held in Champaign, Ill., in 1985. The others were in Austin, Texas, in 1986, and in Lincoln, Neb., the following year.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A scratchy throat limited Paul McCartney's vocal range, but it did not matter to fans who had waited more than a quarter-century for the ex-Beatle to return to Pittsburgh.

McCartney

McCartney performed Sunday at a sold-out show before some of the same fans who chanted "Paul, Paul, Paul" during the Beatles' only local appearance in September 1964.

McCartney's cold affected his upper range on songs such as "Jet" and "Got to Get You Into My Life."

But fans hardly noticedas they sang along with such standards as "Let It Be," "Yesterday" and "Back in the U.S.S.R."

"We used to play Beatles when we were kids, and my cousin always made me be Ringo," said Cindy DiMartino, 33, of Youngstown, Ohio. "But I always loved Paul because he's so good looking."

BOSTON (AP) — Kitty Dukakis, wife of Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, has completed out-of-state medical treatment and returned to their Brookline home, a spokeswoman for the governor said.

Mrs. Dukakis was hospitalized in Boston in November after drinking a small amount of rubbing alcohol. Earlier she had said she had a drinking problem and had been addicted to diet pills.

Spokeswoman Mindy Lubber said Monday night that Mrs. Dukakis was back home and probably would complete a book on her husband's failed presidential campaign, and occasionally accept speaking engagements.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Former Gov. Ed Herschler, a country lawyer who became Wyoming's only three-term governor, died Monday after a long battle with cancer. He was 71.

Herschler, who guided Wyoming through a boom in the energy industry, entered Wyoming politics in 1961 when he won a term in the House of Representatives after eight years as a county prosecutor. In 1970, Herschler lost his House seat, but returned to claim a surprising victory for governor four years later.

Medicare needs to be safeguarded

The proposal by Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., to cut Social Security payroll taxes serves two other major purposes: to show the duplicity by which Washington spends money and to spotlight the threatening bankruptcy of Medicare.

Moynihan shows how Washington has fooled many taxpayers for years by using Social Security funds to pay for other federal programs instead of using the payments to fund the system's future needs. He now proposes to cut such payments but new money would have to be found to fund current federal programs — or reduce them.

President Bush, in the State of the Union message, noted that Social Security must be safeguarded. He also noted the obvious need to control the escalating cost of medical care. What was not said but was implied is that Medicare needs to be safeguarded because as the population grows older, many more Americans will come to rely on it for their primary health care.

Medicare, like Social Security, has a trust fund. Unlike Social Security, it will be bankrupt by the year 2005.

Congress has taken two short-term steps to hold off Medicare's financial collapse. It reimburses hospitals with set fees for various diagnoses rather than simply paying their requests. It also has been tightening payments across the board. Bush is asking that Medicare's projected growth be cut by $5.6 billion.

Lawmakers have considered raising taxes and cutting benefits, but back away because of the political fallout. Increasing taxes would cost them votes and reducing benefits would cause the powerful elderly lobby to attack them — again costing votes.

One proposal deserves attention. That is the plan of former Social Security Commissioner Robert M. Ball. He would transfer a sufficient part of the Social Security tax revenues to the Medicare fund to keep it stable until the year 2020.

There is no plan, however, to meet the needs of large numbers of Baby Boomers who will retire about 2020. Various studies are now being made — to combat rising health care costs, to create alternative financing plans and change the number and types of Medicare services. But agreement is nowhere in sight.

While attention is now focused on Medicare, the real economic culprit in all this is federal deficit spending. In order for all fundamental programs to survive, others must be reduced. The deficit must be brought under control and Bush's budget realistically addresses the deficit.

Timber companies trying to save subsidy

WASHINGTON — Alaskan timber companies are engaged in a frenzied campaign to preserve a blatantly wasteful federal subsidy — $40 million a year to plow roads through a national forest for tree cutters.

Jack Anderson

In 1980, Congress declared a large part of the Tongass National Forest in Alaska to be a wilderness area. At the same time, and without much foresight, Congress ordered the U.S. Forest Service to spend at least $40 million a year making sure that the rest of the Tongass Forest is still accessible to timber companies. Much of the federal money has been spent on building access roads. The $40 million has to be spent each year no matter what the demand for timber.

Sen. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., has introduced a bill to put some common sense into the subsidy — eliminate the dollar quota and give Congress control over how much is spent each year depending on the need.

It makes sense. But the timber companies are reacting like babies deprived of the bottle. Without the money, they say, they may have to close up shop and leave the southeast Alaska economy in shambles.

Alaska Pulp Corp. and Louisiana Pacific have used the federal subsidy to gain a strong foothold in the region's timber market. Now they're fighting to keep it.

Part of the strategy is to present a united front to Congress. Alaska Pulp, with the help of a lobbyist, launched a letter-writing campaign to senators. But not all of the letters come with no strings attached. Alaska Pulp employees have been offered a free lunch for every two letters they write to Congress to plead for the continued subsidy.

Some Alaska Pulp workers told our associate Scott Sleek they are suspicious of the campaign. Although the company says the employees can write anything they want, the letters must be given to management in unsealed envelopes.

An Alaska Pulp spokesman told us that the company isn't censoring the letters, but simply wants to make sure the notes haven't fallen out of the envelopes. Some workers aren't so sure.

The letter-writing campaign has aggravated Alaskan timber workers who rely on the companies for their jobs, but who don't trust those companies. It was only a few years ago that Alaska Pulp was engaged in a bitter labor dispute with its workers. Congress even investigated the company for firing one of its employees after he testified before Congress about problems at a pulp mill. Much of that ill will remains, and some dissidents are afraid to speak their minds.

The timber companies would like Congress to think that big business and small-town America are living in harmony in Alaska, and that all hard feelings have been put aside in a united campaign to preserve the Tongass subsidy.

In reality, that harmony is coerced. The timber companies keep a tight rein on their small-town bases. They provide thousands of jobs and that gives them enormous leverage over a community. The implicit threat is that, if the citizenry doesn't support the timber companies, then the timber companies will pull out.

But the Tongass timber subsidy is hard to justify on any terms. Not only is it a waste of money in years when demand for timber is low, but it threatens the environment of the forest to build roads that are not needed.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Oliver North has sent a plea for money (disguised as a "confidential" letter) to several thousand of his closest friends. Humble Ollie wants to know if he should continue to fight the good fight against an "imperial Congress," an "arrogant army of ultra-militant feminists," and a "left wing-dominated national media." If anyone out there shares Ollie's holier-than-thou attitude, he's willing to take their money and champion the cause. This fund-raising campaign for the radical right can't be taken lightly. If North has one strength, it's hustling money for a cause he believes in. Just ask any Contra.

Triumph turns sour

America's policy triumph in Afghanistan a year ago has turned sour. Washington expected a swift rebel victory when the Soviet Union ended a decade of occupation last Feb. 15. It didn't happen. Now the onus for fueling a murderous war falls on the United States and Pakistan, the main supporters of a quarrelsome rebel coalition. And with the Soviets gone, Najibullah, the leader of the Soviet-installed Kabul regime, presents himself as champion of national sovereignty in a country long hostile to foreign meddling.

This is the essence of a report by John Burns in Sunday's New York Times Magazine. His account should be required reading in the Bush administration, which is finally reviewing its Afghan policy. With little dissent, Washington has rebuffed Soviet proposals for a mutual arms cutoff and a political settlement, and continues to supply $700 million annually to the Afghan resistance.

Standing tough made sense when Soviet troops occupied Afghanistan and when Pakistan felt genuinely threatened by an aggressive Soviet Union. These circumstances have changed; the policy hasn't. The results have distorted American purposes and principles.

Civilians by the thousands have been killed by rebels firing U.S.-supplied rockets into city centers. Now it is American reporters, not Soviet troops, who are asked in anguish: "Why do you do this to us?"

Peter Tomsen, a special envoy sent by President Bush, told Burns that the carnage reminded him of atrocities in Vietnam.

Amid the disorders of war, Afghanistan has again become a major source of heroin, with guerrilla leaders doubling as drug kingpins. At one point, the U.S. envoy to Pakistan authorized discussions with a rebel commander about poppies. The commander said he would suppress his own traffic for a fee: $2 million a week. The offer was refused.

A year after the Soviet pullout, the 15 rebel groups seem able to unite only against compromise. They've failed to seize a single city and have made Peshawar a byword for corruption. Their most fiery leaders — notably Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, the protege of Pakistan's military — would turn Afghanistan into a Khomeini-style fundamentalist state. Yet lower-echelon American officials risk their careers if they send negative reports home.

None of this makes Kabul's Soviet-installed regime more attractive, or removes the stains from Najibullah's hands. Indeed, Moscow is already hinting that his departure is negotiable, if Washington shows some willingness to support a broad-based interim regime. In any case, the Bush administration is right to rethink its entire Afghan policy. That's the first vital step to peace. What conceivable American interests are served by pouring more arms into this dubious battle?

CHARLEY REESE

Latin Americans denied stability, sound economy

I made a mistake and want to correct it. I wrote that while the lists were long and I might have missed a name, it appeared that Nobel Prizes in the sciences had missed Latin American entirely.

Charley Reese

It was I who missed — three names. Since 1901, three Argentines have won Nobel Prizes in the sciences. One was born in France and moved to Argentina. Another was born in Argentina but emigrated to England and won his prize for work done at Cambridge. The third shared the prize with two Americans.

In this business when you don't double check everything, you can become a goat and on this matter, I am a goat. I scanned the lists too rapidly. This provided an opportunity for a Colombian doctor to make a fool out of himself while pointing out my error.

He made a fool out of himself because he made several insulting remarks about America. In the first place, three prizes in 89 years for a whole continent still makes my point. It is half as many as Denmark has won and nothing to boast about.

Secondly, it is foolish for a man who has voted with his feet to knock the place he came to and boast about the one he left. He knows why he left and he knows why he came here.

But I am not going to let one letter goad me into appearing to be prejudiced against Hispanics. I happen to like and admire Hispanics, and anybody who has read my column over a period of time knows that.

My beef is with Latin American politicians. Even the crack about the Nobel Prizes was directed to that point. You can't do the kind of research which wins Nobel Prizes without stability and without an economic system that provides the money to fund the research. With rare exceptions, Latin American politicians have denied both to their people.

With its enormous resources, Latin America should be one of the richest regions in the world. Next to Africa, it is the poorest. And it is getting worse.

Its problems are exactly those I mentioned — pandemic graft, elephantine bureaucracies, factionalism, an exploitive aristocracy, and political violence. In Latin America, nearly always, the Marxist revolutionaries and the capitalists come from the same wealthy strata and neither gives a real hoot about the common people.

Nearly as many Colombians have died in factional violence as Americans died in World War II. Colombia's political violence long pre-dates the cocaine cartel. People cannot prosper in chaos.

The people who rob the Mexican people live in Mexico City. An American president makes about $200,000 a year; presidents of even small Latin American countries often make millions, but the millions are stolen from their own people or foreign banks or the U.S. taxpayers.

President Salinas of Mexico is as touchy as a peacock about his Mexican pride. He ought to be ashamed to show his face among leaders of normal nations. No president or prime minister from Moscow to Beijing would allow a convicted drug dealer to convert a whole floor of a prison into a luxury resort with women, booze and drugs. That's comic opera stuff.

Look at Danny Ortega, Nicaragua's yuppie caudillo. Instead of helping the people of Nicaragua, he has set out to build the largest army in the history of Central America. Who does he intend to invade with his 110 Soviet tanks and Hind helicopters? We can squash him like a bug anytime we choose.

I have no desire to offend the Latin American people. They suffer enough at the hands of their own politicians. It's just that I won't be silent while those politicians berate my country. None of them is fit to shine the shoes of the worst American politician.

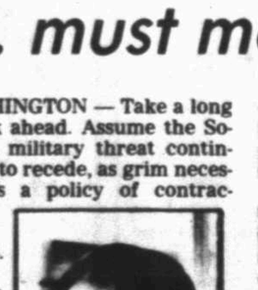

Some Americans think everyone but us are entitled to be proud of their country and their heritage. Some think we must be sensitive to the people who are insensitive to us. I don't belong in that crowd. I am damned proud to be an American and sensitivity isn't my forte.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

U.S. must maintain, enhance economic power

WASHINGTON — Take a long look ahead. Assume the Soviet military threat continues to recede, as grim necessity imposes a policy of contractionism.

William Safire

Assume, too, that U.S. military strength can subsequently be reduced to the ability to take on one and a half downsized aggressors, and to defend our skies against incoming terrorist missiles.

Finally, make the equally hopeful assumption that the United States wants to continue to advance the cause of human rights and free markets in the world, as well as to defend its interests and nationals abroad.

How do we square that last hope with the first two assumptions? How do we remain a superpower in a world in which military strength does not define supremacy?

The answer is self-evident: We have to maintain and enhance our national economic power. Although multinational corporations will abound and stock exchanges will interlock, for the next generation, at least, a few political entities called nations will lay the power lines for the world economy.

Some nation is going to be No. 1; better it should be us, with our tradition of raising standards of living and of not starting wars. And since enlightened capitalists do not treat business as a zero-sum game, our ambition for preeminence poses no danger to any other nation; if we win, nobody loses.

Our superpower competition will be reunified Germany (perhaps together with its European satellites) and expanding Japan (perhaps allied with China, if they can bring that off). Their successful systems are based on central bank-disciplined, government-supported private enterprise.

Grant me that sort of scenario, with the Soviet federation rebuilding and small wars raging here and there, as the world of the millennium.

In that world, the United States will from time to time feel duty-bound to use its muscle. I'm not talking about industrial policy or subsidized consortiums or government research to help U.S. business and labor compete with other superpowers' companies on their terms — that's another subject.

Today's tract is about being able to apply the power of the U.S. economy to change the policy of other countries.

Suppose our citizens are molested, or our property is illegally expropriated, or a despot sets up a depot for poison gas sales or a haven for drug criminals; suppose a new Khomeini or Gadhafi or Idi Amin emerges to assault a neighbor or wipe out a minority.

"Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead" is less of an option, especially when Raisuli has an off-the-shelf missile with a nuclear warhead.

We need a way to turn up the economic heat, when appeals to conscience or international organizations fail, to foment internal discontent — thereby to put a real cost on tyrannical or corrupt behavior.

Sometimes sanctions are effective and sometimes not; this and a little hypocrisy produce great inconsistencies in policy.

To South Africa, when world economic sanctions combine with an ebbing Communist threat and a gutsy leader to produce progress toward ending apartheid, liberals say we should keep the sanctions on, and add fresh sanctions against China to protest their massacres; but to the Soviet Union, where technology-transfer restrictions have added to the pain that has yet to bring fundamental reform, the same voices cry "take them off."

This proves that economic sanctions — pressures, harassments, denials of opportunity — are presumed to have an effect, if only psychological.

In the future, foreign aid (the carrot) and limited economic war (the stick) will be the primary ways we exercise our power, and will be most effective when other economic superpowers act in concert.

Here we are, then, on the brink of a new era calling for a new way to use American power — and nobody in the White House to my knowledge is coming to grips with it.

We are still organized according to old functions rather than new missions. Shall we apply coordinated economic pressure to achieve a policy aim?

The men from Commerce and Agriculture shake their heads no, the man from Defense nods yes, the trade negotiator other-hands maybe, and on the State Department's seventh floor, eyes roll heavenward. Congress then mixes in.

Needed is a sub-Cabinet council of economic intervention, at first within the National Security Council, to see what muscle we can marshal and what connective tissue will add to its puissance.

New world a-comin', maybe, but not without crises in need of U.S. action. To meet them, a few sophisticated business minds should be put to work to get us ahead of the power curve.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Feb. 6, the 37th day of 1990. There are 328 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 6, 1788, Massachusetts became the sixth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

On this date:

In 1756, America's third vice president, Aaron Burr, was born in Newark, N.J.

In 1778, the United States won official recognition from France as the two nations signed a pair of treaties in Paris.

In 1815, the state of New Jersey issued the first American railroad charter to John Stevens, who proposed a rail link between Trenton and New Brunswick. (The line, however, was never built.)

In 1895, baseball legend Babe Ruth was born in Baltimore.

In 1899, a peace treaty between the United States and Spain was ratified by the U.S. Senate.

In 1933, the 20th Amendment to the Constitution — the "lame duck" amendment — was declared in effect.

In 1959, the United States successfully test-fired for the first time a Titan intercontinental ballistic missile from Cape Canaveral.

In 1978, Muriel Humphrey took the oath of office as a U.S. senator from Minnesota, filling the seat of her late husband, former Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

In 1986, the commission investigating the Challenger disaster opened its hearings into the cause of the space shuttle explosion that killed all seven crew members.

Pilot testifies he smelled alcohol on skipper of Exxon Valdez

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The pilot who helped steer the Exxon Valdez the night it spilled its load smiled at Skipper Joseph Hazelwood, then testified he smelled alcohol on his old friend's breath hours before the ship ran aground.

William E. Murphy, testifying under immunity from prosecution, greeted Hazelwood on the first day of testimony in the fired Exxon captain's trial on charges stemming from the nation's worst oil spill.

But he proceeded to give damaging evidence against the 43-year-old captain.

Murphy recalled joining Hazelwood and two other crew members for lunch in Valdez, where their tanker had picked up its cargo of oil last March.

They had pizza, he remembered, and he and Hazelwood drank iced tea. After lunch, he said he dropped off the captain across the street from a bar called the Pipeline Club, and when he next saw Hazelwood aboard the Exxon Valdez about eight hours later, there was the smell of alcohol about him.

"While on the bridge did you notice any signs that he had been drinking?" Assistant District Attorney Brent Cole asked.

"No," replied Murphy. "Except I smelled something I associated with alcohol on his breath."

Within 30 minutes, he said, Hazelwood had gone below and remained there about an hour while Murphy checked the weather conditions facing the ship in its tricky passage through the Valdez Narrows.

"It's not unusual for masters to leave the bridge," said Murphy, but added, "It wasn't typical to be gone for that long in the narrows."

Hazelwood is on trial in Anchorage Superior Court on a felony charge of second-degree mischief, and misdemeanor charges of reckless endangerment, negligent discharge of oil and operating a vessel while intoxicated. The maximum penalty for conviction on all counts is seven years, three months in prison and $61,000 in fines.

To prove criminal mischief the state must show that Hazelwood recklessly created a risk of damage to the property of another in excess of $100,000.

Murphy, who said he is president of the Southwest Alaska Pilot's Association, was not aboard the Exxon Valdez when it ran aground. Under rules at the time, pilots were required to guide outbound ships to a point just short of Bligh Reef.

The rules have been changed to require pilots, local boat handlers familiar with coastal waters, to remain aboard past Bligh Reef, which the Exxon Valdez struck on March 24, spilling more than 10 million gallons of crude.

Before he left the ship, Murphy said, he saw Hazelwood again.

"I reminded him there was ice reported ahead," he testified.

"Did you observe any indications that the captain had been drinking then?" asked Cole.

"The same observations as previously," said Murphy. "The same smell."

Murphy's testimony came shortly after Cole's opening statement that portrayed Hazelwood as drunk and absent from his post when the Exxon Valdez crashed onto the reef. He maintained that Hazelwood spent the seven hours before the trip in a bar ordering vodka.

Defense attorney Dick Madson told jurors Hazelwood acted professionally and showed no signs of drunkeness before or during the ordeal: "He did not stagger. He did not slur his words. He was cool, calm. ...

"This was a maritime accident," he told jurors. "Captain Hazelwood was not responsible for that accident."

The tanker's hull was ripped open when it ran into rocks March 24. The spill killed thousands of fish, birds and animals and blackened hundreds of miles of shoreline. Exxon has said it spent more than $2 billion on the cleanup.

The prosecution and defense were divided on several key issues. The prosecutor claimed Hazelwood left control of his ship to unqualified crew members who lacked the certification to pilot the vessel.

Bush seeking backing for Pentagon funds

ABOARD AIR FORCE ONE (AP) — President Bush, facing demands from Democrats for steep defense cuts in the wake of the receding Soviet threat in Europe, headed West today on a three-day trip aimed at boosting support for his go-slow approach to streamlining the Pentagon.

Bush

"This should be a very good trip emphasizing some of our defense requirements needs and a little politics mixed in," Bush told reporters shortly after Air Force One departed Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

Bush plans appearances at fundraisers for Republican candidates in California, Nebraska and Ohio.

"We'll be doing more of that this year," Bush told reporters.

He was putting the emphasis on national defense during the official portions of the trip, including his first stop today to address troops and view war games at the Army's National Training Center at Fort Irwin in Barstow, Calif.

Wednesday Bush will visit Livermore Laboratory, the nerve center of Strategic Defense Initiative research where scientists will brief him on the latest development in space-based anti-missile technology.

His itinerary includes a million-dollar fund-raising dinner tonight in Los Angeles for Sen. Pete Wilson, hoping to succeed fellow Republican George Deukmejian as governor of the most populous state; a speech on defense policy Wednesday before the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco and a visit to Strategic Air Command headquarters in Omaha Thursday.

The San Francisco Bay area is home to five of the bases and military facilities on Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's list of 72 possible base closures or cutbacks — a list disclosed the same day Bush sent Congress a proposed $292 billion defense budget for fiscal 1991.

While Bush said his spending blueprint offers a chance to "restructure America's defenses" in the wake of the revolutionary shift toward democracy in Eastern Europe, it envisions troop reductions of only 38,000 in the year ahead and cutbacks in 20 minor conventional weapon programs while seeking $1 billion in new funds for Star Wars research and moving ahead on major weapons systems. After inflation, it amounts to a 2 percent defense cut.

Bush also proposed last week to bring 50,000 more U.S. troops home from Europe but did not set a timetable.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1990 Regional Spelling Bee March 31 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

pi-ro'sis

pyrosis (noun) — If you have eaten some spicy food or are upset about something, you may get "pyrosis." "Pyrosis" is the medical term for heartburn. "Heartburn" is an uncomfortable feeling. It is a burning discomfort behind the lower part of the sternum usually related to spasm of the lower end of the esophagus or of the upper part of the stomach. "Pyrosis" can be traced to the ancient Greek word "pyr" meaning "to burn" or "fire." The "pyr" root appears in a wide variety of modern words dealing with light, burning or heat. Pyrotechnics, for example, is the art of using fireworks.

CONNIE LADD ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

As the mother of two little boys, I am concerned about the drug-related crimes in Midland. I want a District Judge who has the courage to attack that problem head-on--someone who will not be intimidated by the trial lawyers -- someone who will preside with independence and authority. That someone is Nick Taylor. With Nick Taylor we can be confident with our court. Please join me in supporting him for District Judge.

Kindness of strangers helps mother of 5 dead children

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Contributions of clothes and money streamed in Monday for the mother of five of the six young people killed in a fiery weekend car crash.

As the story of Marcella England's tragedy spread, people began calling to ask what they could do to help.

Edna, 16; Clara, 14; Ella, 12; Virginia, 11, and Virgil England, 10, and Edna's fiance, Arthur Brown, 20, all died Sunday morning when their Suburban station wagon hit an icy spot on Interstate 44 east of Mount Vernon, skidded, flipped and burst into flames.

The family was bound for Texas, leaving behind the disappointments they had faced in Watertown, N.Y., where Marcella England, 38, couldn't find a job to match her business school education, and her boyfriend Howard Bouchard dabbled in auto mechanics.

When the accident happened at 7:30 a.m., Bouchard pulled Marcella from the wreckage. They turned back to save the children but saw only the flames inside the Suburban.

Of her six children, Marcella has one left — 19-year-old Tammy, who lives in Denton, Texas.

"I wanted to scream and holler," Marcella told The Springfield News-Leader Monday night. "I admit, I cussed at God. But I guess he wanted them for some reason."

Marcella and Howard are staying this week at the Ronald McDonald House of the Ozarks. The house, normally a home for parents of sick children, was pressed into service because the couple had nowhere else to go.

Melody Esterline was working in the St. John's pharmacy Sunday when she heard about the accident. Soon after, she was collecting clothes for the two survivors. She started a drive that spread to others in the pharmacy department and the husband of one pharmacist who works at Southwestern Bell.

By Monday evening, $400 had been raised and clothing was being taken to Marcella and Howard.

"Melody is the kindest person you've ever known," said co-worker Barbara Wright. "She decided she needed to do something for this family because they were from out of town and had no local ties."

Wright said she talked Sunday night with Marcella and Howard and learned they had no money for bus tickets to continue their journey.

Bouchard told her he would never drive again, she said.

Wright told husband Joe about the situation; he began a fund drive Monday morning at work.

Joe Wright, who works for Southwestern Bell, said he made a few phone calls. Employees of Southwestern Bell and AT&T, and the Telephone Co. Pioneers, a group of active and retired employees, raised more than $400 in less than 10 hours.

The couple's most pressing need is money, said Bonnie Kellen-Engle, executive director of the Ronald McDonald House.

Donations may be made in care of their church: The First Baptist Church, Malone Street, Denton, Texas, 76201. Checks should be made payable to the church, Kellen-Engle said.

Marcella is grateful. The generosity of strangers won't bring back her children, but they live in her memories.

She says Edna was stubborn, and called Clara her veterinarian.

NATION IN BRIEF

Rebel black priest excommunicated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Archdiocese of Washington says it will excommunicate any Catholics who join Rev. George A. Stallings Jr.'s breakaway African-American Catholic Congregation.

Stallings

The archdiocese announced Monday that Stallings and his followers had been excommunicated over Stallings' public break from the Roman Catholic Church.

"By his public declaration that he has separated himself from the church and by his renunciation of church teaching, Father Stallings has excommunicated himself," the archdiocese said in a statement by Vicar General William Kane.

"Any Catholic who would knowingly and willingly renounce his or her Catholic faith to become a full and active member of Father Stallings' congregation would also incur automatic excommunication," the statement said.

Excommunication, which excludes a person from the sacraments and rights of the church, is the Roman Catholic Church's most powerful weapon against defiant members. The statement said members of Stallings' congregation could resume participation in the Catholic Church only if they go to confession and do penance.

Stallings, a dissident black priest, publicly criticized the church's treatment of blacks last summer when he formed his Imani Temple, an independent congregation. He announced his decision to break all ties with the Vatican last week.

Defense budget defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney says his $292.1 billion defense budget provides an "orderly restructuring" of the military, but Democrats call it a weak response to revolutionary changes in Eastern Europe.

The defense secretary said Monday the Bush administration's plan to modernize its strategic forces, reduce troop levels in Europe and cancel some 20 conventional programs "preserves the elements of what we think is essential in terms of protecting the nation's security."

The budget proposal for fiscal 1991 would allow the United States to look back in a decade and say, "we did in fact undertake a build-down, a careful, orderly restructuring of our forces," Cheney told the Senate Budget Committee.

The Pentagon chief and Gen. Colin Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were taking their defense of the administration's military spending plan to the House Armed Services Committee today.

Lawmaker rethinks future

COALGATE, Okla. (AP) — State Rep. Bill Brewster says he is thinking more about the welfare of his family than his political career following a plane crash that killed two of his children and hasn't decided if he will continue with a bid to win a seat in Congress.

"I don't think this is any time to even talk about a political future," Brewster said at a news conference Monday afternoon in Ardmore. "Some time in the next few days we'll sit down and look at that. These are the hardest times of our lives. I don't know how they can get worse."

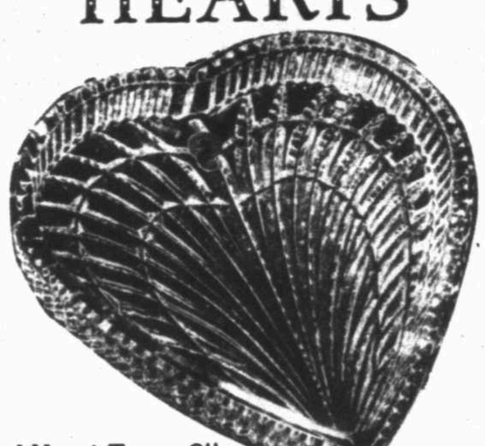

Workers on a backhoe moved the wreckage of the crashed plane Monday to allow investigators to remove the bodies of the aircraft's four passengers: Madill publisher Herb Pate, 32, pilot Jack Kirkpatrick, 43, and two of Brewster's children, Kecia, 16, and Kent, 13.

The plane, which disappeared late Wednesday, was one of three involved in what was to be a 20-county tour to kickoff Brewster's campaign for the 3rd District congressional seat.

TDH suspends Medicaid funding for Odessa nursing home

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An Odessa nursing home's alleged failure to follow doctors' orders has led to the temporary suspension of its Medicaid funding, a Health Department spokeswoman said Monday.

The Texas Department of Health in Austin issued a 23-day suspension of Medicaid funding to New Horizons Nursing Center, 2510 W. Eighth St., after a TDH report indicated problems with the home's procedures in following doctors' orders.

The state Health Department's check of the home began after a complaint was filed Dec. 15, 1989, TDH spokeswoman Charlene Stowers said, but she could not say what it concerned nor what the status of the case was.

The Health Department report said New Horizons was cited for an undetermined number of alleged deficiencies in care that would violate provisions for receiving Medicaid, a joint state and federal health care funding program.

The report recommended that a 23-day "fast track" cancellation procedure be initiated Dec. 23, and that the Medicaid contract be terminated Dec. 29 if the deficiencies were not corrected.

Officials at the nursing home declined comment Monday.

Confirmation of the TDH action against New Horizons followed the Health Department's termination of Medicaid funding for Deerings Nursing Home of Odessa last Wednesday.

That facility was stripped of its Medicaid funding because of a TDH investigative report that uncovered alleged deficiencies ranging from staff training to patient care.

Deerings, located at 1020 West County Road, also is being investigated by the Odessa Police Department and Texas Rangers in connection with a Dec. 31 incident in which a 66-year-old resident of the home was burned during a whirlpool treatment.

Margie Sanders was listed in stable condition today at Medical Center Hospital, a spokeswoman said.

Jean Bohls, disclosure officer of the department's long-term care bureau in Austin, said the cancellation report reads: "Due to the immediate and serious threat to the health and safety of residents, it is recommended that the facility's contract be terminated."

The TDH report on Deerings indicated problems with direct patient care, safety, resident rights, infection control, following doctor's orders, and staff training.

Snake hunters to descend on Sweetwater

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

SWEETWATER — Sweetwater may not have the corner on rattlers.

But the West Texas community boasts loudly about its annual Rattlesnake Round-Up, which it claims to be the world's largest snake hunt.

"This event has grown into the largest Rattlesnake Round-Up and one of the largest events of any kind in West Texas," said Rodney Kinsey of the Round-Up's boosters, the Sweetwater Jaycees.

Hunters are attracted to Sweetwater-area ranches for the sport of hunting rattlers and for the lure of prize money.

"Last year, there was quite a bit of money in it," Kinsey said.

The Jaycees were paying $8.50 a pound for live rattlers and paid $19,338.50 to the five top hunters.

Pat McGough brought in 738 pounds of snakes to win $6,973 in prize money.

"We just don't buy any gassed, burned or damaged snakes," Kinsey said. Snakes may be brought in from outside the Sweetwater area for the contest, Kinsey said, and do not have to be caught during the Rattlesnake Round-Up weekend.

The event is held each year over the second weekend in March in the Nolan County Coliseum.

The round-up was conceived by a group of ranchers and farmers in an effort to "rid the abundance" of rattlers that were pestering them and endangering their livestock, according to the Sweetwater Jaycees. The Round-Up started in 1958.

Despite the hunts, the rattlesnake population is still strong, Kinsey said.

"There are plenty of rattlesnakes," he said, "and they (the hunters) are not deleting the population at all." But in recent years, the incident of snake bites has dropped by 50 percent, he said.

Snake hunting is relatively safe if the hunter takes precautions and "as

Two Odessans die in accident

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two Odessa residents were killed Monday evening in a two vehicle accident south of the city, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Joe Delbosque, 56, and Steven Curtis Hayes, 23, were pronounced dead at the scene of the accident at 7:45 p.m. by Ector County Justice of the Peace R.G. Hungerford, DPS reports said.

Maria Delbosque, 47, suffered cuts and bruises in the accident and was taken to Medical Center Hospital for treatment, according to reports.

The accident occurred at 6:50 p.m. four miles south on U.S. Highway 385.

According to a report of the accident, both vehicles were southbound on 385 when a 1987 Ford pickup truck driven by Hayes struck the 1977 Dodge van driven by Delbosque. Both vehicles skidded and overturned, DPS reports said.

CELEBRATING BLACK HISTORY

Q. What is the most vivid memory you have of Midland?

Coleman

A. "When I came to Midland in 1951, there were separate waiting rooms for blacks and browns in all the doctors' offices and at the hospital.

"The fourth floor at the hospital (now Midland Memorial Hospital) was 'whites only' when it was built.

"In 1951, there were state laws that mandated separate facilities. These (hospitals and health-care facilities) were law-abiding institutions. The lines were much more drawn than they are now.

"I could not join the Texas Medical Association, either; it was a 'whites only' organization.

"Things got better after Brown vs. the Board of Education (the 1954 Supreme Court ruling which struck down the "separate but equal" doctrine which was the foundation of segregation in the South)."

Black schools and clinics were given more money and resources in an attempt to prop up segregation. Whites reasoned that if blacks were given better schools and hospitals perhaps they would accept being cut off from the larger society.

"Everyone wanted to maintain the status quo."

-- Dr. Viola Coleman, a general practitioner of medicine in Midland since 1951

Dr. Coleman, a native of New Iberia, La., has lived in Midland since 1951 and continues to practice medicine. Dr. Coleman holds a bachelor's of science degree from Southern University and a medical degree from Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn. Among her many activities are the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs and the NAACP. She and her husband, Raymond, have two children.

It's A Fact:

In May of 1932, the state sent Anna Mae Mathies, a black nurse, to Midland. She stayed five weeks, inspecting school children, holding clinics and adult health classes and completing a sanitary survey of "black town." Before she left, Ms Mathies appointed a black health committee to continue the work.

In recognition of Black History Month, the Reporter-Telegram will feature brief recollections of local black citizens each Tuesday this month.

Local horse show will benefit National Paralysis Foundation

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

Denise Waldrep of Plano still remembers the day in 1974 when her son, Kent, severed his spinal cord in a college football game.

The diagnosis was quadriplegia — paralysis below the neck.

"It is a very devastating injury," Ms. Waldrep said last week. "It affects not only the one who is injured, it affects the family as well."

Spurred by negative attitudes of therapists and doctors, Waldrep worked hard at physical therapy to try to regain as much mobility as possible.

Then he began working hard at helping to find a paralysis cure.

"When Kent was injured in 1974, there was no research going on," Ms. Waldrep said. "We have seen a lot of changes in the 16 years since the injury, and I'm very pleased and proud that Kent has had a part in those changes."

Waldrep was instrumental in creating two major paralysis research organizations. He is still the president of the National Paralysis Foundation in Dallas, which he founded in 1985.

"We're trying to find a cure for paralysis so that wheelchairs can be eliminated," Ms. Waldrep said. "That is the sole goal of the foundation — to find a cure."

To support the cure quest, the Texas Jaycees adopted Waldrep's foundation in 1986 as a "Priority One Project."

For their part, Midland Jaycees are gearing up for their Fourth Annual Winter Equestrian Show to raise money for the foundation.

The show will feature about 200 riders from West Texas and New Mexico, show chairperson Tami Inman said last week.

Entry fees, admission fees and concession stand profits all will be donated to the National Paralysis Foundation, Ms. Inman said.

The show is scheduled for Feb. 24-25 at the Double C Stables on Cloverdale Road in Midland. Shows will start at 8 a.m. and continue until around 5 p.m. Adult admission is $2; children under 12 will be admitted free.

Show participants will be members of the Southwest Hunter-Jumper Association and the New Mexico Horse Show Association. Riders will take part in 52 different events.

Last year, the horse show raised $3,300 for paralysis research, Ms. Inman said.

"Our goal this year is $4,000," she said.

National Paralysis Foundation reports show that over 4 million Americans are wheelchair-bound due to paralysis caused by stroke, head injury and spinal cord injury.

The foundation estimates that spinal cord injury costs the federal government $5 billion in direct medical costs and that even a partially effective treatment could save the government 20 times what is being spent on cure research.

For more information, contact Tami Inman at 694-0760.

December freeze will be keeping Texas citrus fruit from markets

WESLACO (AP) — Don't look for any Texas grapefruit or oranges for the next year or two.

The stores won't have them.

December's hard freeze killed or damaged so many trees in the Lower Rio Grande Valley that there won't be a crop worth marketing for the next year or two, say citrus growers and scientists who are still assessing the damage.

"There will be a few pieces of fruit out there, but not a commercial crop," said Ray Prewett, executive vice president of Texas Citrus Mutual, a McAllen-based growers' organization.

Texas' 35,000-acre citrus industry is concentrated in three counties at the subtropical southern tip of the state.

December's freeze killed more than half of those trees, said Dr. Richard Hensz, director of the Texas A&I Citrus Center in Weslaco.

Trees that did survive won't recover enough to produce a marketable crop for a year or longer, Hensz said Monday at a meeting to discuss freeze damage and recovery with more than 200 citrus growers from South Texas and northern Mexico.

"There will not be a commercial crop this fall," Hensz said.

December's arctic blast killed up to three-fourths of the trees that survived a devastating 1983 freeze and roughly half the trees planted since then, Hensz said.

Many trees planted since 1983 were just coming into full production this year. It takes four to five years for trees to mature and produce a good crop.

"I would have had a heck of a crop this fall," said Mark McCaleb, who was just getting started in the business.

Rotting fruit lies on the ground under dead trees in a grove west of Harlingen. Experts say there may not be a Texas citrus crop for two years because of December's freeze.

Church members fear minister may have met with foul play

AUSTIN (AP) — Church members say they fear that the interim minister of the First Unitarian Church of Austin, who has been missing since last Friday, may have met with foul play.

The Rev. J. David Scheyer, 61, has been missing since Friday afternoon when his wife talked to him before flying to Boston.

Church members say he failed to join them Saturday for an outing to the Gulf of Mexico coast to look for whooping cranes. He also failed to show up for services Sunday morning, leaving about 200 members sitting in church with no minister.

Church members say it was not like Scheyer to change his schedule without notifying someone.

Members of the church entered the minister's home Sunday afternoon to look for him.

Austin police, church members, Scheyer's family and others were trying Monday to find who might have seen the minister Friday night, and were trying to find Scheyer's two-tone gray pickup. Many believe the interim minister met with foul play.

"Everyone who knows this man believes he was in some kind of major trouble," said church member Derek Howard, who helped search Scheyer's home Sunday. "This man is highly reliable, with no known personal problems, no marital problems, no drinking problems."

"He is very stable, extremely reliable," said Maxine Barkan, president of the church's board of directors. "He would check with me on any change of schedule. He was very reliable about telling us his whereabouts."

Scheyer's wife, Fia, said she is certain her husband never returned

Railey refuses to disclose ex-lover's address, phone number

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former Dallas minister Walker Railey has refused to give the unlisted telephone number or Orange County address of his former lover to attorneys representing his comatose wife in a divorce proceeding.

Railey

A judge continued the divorce trial for Railey, 42, after a hearing Monday in which attorneys for wife Margaret "Peggy" Railey raised the issues of the whereabouts of Lucy Papillon, the blond psychologist linked romantically with Railey.

Superior Court Judge Luther Callinon indicated he was most concerned with Mrs. Railey's attorneys getting more time to examine community assets and their difficulty of working with a client who can't talk to them.

"I wish that he would have been ready to do the case, because I'm ready," said a disappointed Railey, once a rising star in the United Methodist Church.

Callinon continued the matter to a May 16 mediation session and a trial date of June 4 if mediation fails. The couple, married 18 years, have two children who are in the care of family friends. Custody is not an issue in the divorce.

The 41-year-old Mrs. Railey remains in a Tyler, Texas, nursing home in a vegetative state since being nearly strangled by an intruder at her home in April 1987.

Railey, the former senior pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Dallas, has never been criminally charged in connection with the crime. Railey, who now lives in Long Beach, maintains his innocence.

But Railey was found liable for the attack in an $18 million civil judgment won by Mrs. Railey's parents in December 1988. Over objections by Railey's attorney Margaret Brewer, a lawyer for the parents, Stephen Kolodny, repeatedly brought up the finding in court on Monday.

Mrs. Railey's Los Angeles attorneys are asking Callinon to order the 42-year-old Railey to provide financial support to his wife as a condition of the divorce he is seeking.

Mrs. Railey's parents, Bill and Billie Jo Nicolai of Tyler have said they would not grant Railey's request for a divorce unless he agreed to reveal his assets and pay alimony and legal fees.

The Nicolais have been paying Mrs. Railey's medical expenses, estimated at $3,200 per month, since September, when her insurance stopped.

Railey's former church has established a trust fund to pay the medical fees not covered by Medicare or Medicaid when the Nicolais' money runs out.

Railey said in a sworn deposition last March that he had no money to pay the judgment. He told attorneys he works as a "glorified secretary" for a Long Beach aerospace firm and that his salary is not large enough to cover his wife's expenses.

During the Monday hearing, Kolodny said he had discovered at least $48,000 in pension and annuity funds which appear to be community property.

Kolodny said he wanted to question Papillon about what monies Railey may have spent with her.

"She is important for this court to determine if community funds were improperly used by the reverend during this time," Kolodny said. "(And) so that we can determine what the reverend was doing with assets and property during the time he moved from Texas to California. The reverend would have us believe that every time they met, they shared expenses. I find that very difficult to believe," Kolodny argued.

But under questioning by Callinon, Kolodny admitted he had only a suspicion that some community funds may have been used in the relationship that included hotel stays in Washington and London after the two met in the spring of 1986.

"Mrs. Papillon is irrelevant to the issues," argued Railey's attorney, Margaret Brewer. "The reverend's (previous) testimony has been that he and Mrs. Papillon paid their own way. They went dutch."

During the hearing, Kolodny told Callinon that during a Jan. 29 deposition, Railey said Papillon was living close by in Orange County, south of Long Beach, and indicated through general directions that the street was in a beach city. Railey refused to disclose more and said he has not seen the woman since November.

Railey declined outside court to comment further on Papillon.

"I think if you were in the courtroom you have a pretty good perception of what was behind a lot of what was said...I'm not hiding anything, except I don't go around giving anybody's phone number to anybody else."

Railey also said that none of the discoveries about the additional assets were revelations and he has previously discussed them in other court papers.

"I can show every dollar that was in my hand and how it was spent," Railey told reporters. "I have no desire to keep from Peggy anything that's there for her. I have no desire to renege on any kind of support for her (Mrs. Railey)."

Since the attack on his wife, Railey has attempted suicide and left his church post. He moved to California, living first in San Francisco and then in Long Beach.

Episcopal priest says bishop 'betrayed' him

FORT WORTH (AP) — An Episcopal Church homosexual priest who told a newspaper that he believes Jesus had a romantic relationship with a male disciple said he was "betrayed" by the bishop who ordained him.

The conservative Episcopal Synod of America, based in Fort Worth, has urged Bishop John Spong of Newark, N.J., to resign or face charges from the church's governing body.

Spong ordained Rev. Robert Williams on Dec. 16. The 34-year-old Williams has been forced to resign from his ministry in Hoboken, N.J.

Williams charged that Spong knew about the priest's radical views before his ordination and then "betrayed" him. He has refused to resign and said Spong would have to conduct a church trial to remove him as a priest.

Williams said in Fort Worth last week that he has taught Bible lessons and preached a sermon in Boston three years ago on why he believed "there was a romantic and sexual relationship between Jesus and one of his beloved disciples."

He said there are "equally convincing cases made that Jesus had a heterosexual relationship and was married to Mary Magdalene."

He said he believes homosexual relationships existed between such biblical figures as Christ and Lazarus, Naomi and Ruth and David and Jonathan.

"I did that before I became a priest, and that's considerably more radical than what I said about monogamy and celibacy," Williams told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in Monday's editions. Williams has said that neither monogamy nor celibacy are natural.

Spong was on sabbatical and not reachable for comment. He had denounced Williams after the priest was quoted as saying at a recent church conference in Detroit that "monogamy is as unnatural as celibacy."

To support his contention that Jesus was gay, Williams cited John 11:3, which referred to Christ's raising Lazarus from the dead.

The King James Version of the verse reads: "Therefore, his sisters sent unto him saying, Lord, behold he whom thou lovest is sick."

But a divinity school's professor discounted Williams' view of the verse.

"I find that particular interpretation extremely far-fetched," said David Polk, an assistant professor at Brite Divinity School of Texas Christian University.

CITRUS

His small grove of three-year-old navel orange trees near Weslaco was just maturing until the freeze wiped them out, he said. But he plans to buy another 15 acres and stay in the business.

Trees that survived the December 1989 freeze will not produce much for next fall's crop because the cold killed the tender "fruit wood" that will not grow back for a year or two, Hensz said.

If a crop is produced the next year, he added, "it will have to be a pretty small one."

One consolation, Hensz said, is that more growers have tree insurance this year than they did in 1983.

The Texas Department of Agriculture estimates the damage to this year's citrus crop was $46.8 million, or more than half the crop's total estimated value of $80 million.

Including other fruit and vegetable crops, the Dec. 22-24 freeze caused $138 million in crop losses in South Texas and left more than 17,500 agricultural workers unemployed, according to the TDA.

Long-term damage to citrus trees could reach the hundreds of millions of dollars, Prewett said. Tree damage after the 1983 freeze was about $500 million, but there were twice as many acres planted then.

Hensz said it could be months before some of the trees die and make possible an accurate assessment of the damage.

"The big decision we've got to make is whether these old trees are worth trying to save," said Bob Smith, who manages about 1,000 acres of citrus near Mission. "We won't know that until we wait and see how they recover."

SNAKES

long as you really watch what you are doing and wear high-topped boots, something like Western boots," Kinsey said. "You don't want to go out there in tennis shoes."

Snake hunting is "just an interesting sport — kind of like deer hunting or anything else. It just kind of appeals to people."

In each of the past five years, the round-up has averaged more than 12,000 pounds of live rattlesnakes and has attracted about 30,000 visitors from throughout the nation and abroad.

Last year, about 250 hunters registered to hunt rattlesnakes. Cliff Seekers brought in the longest snake — 64 inches long — and won $300. Marc Neatherlin of San Angelo won the rattlesnake meat-eating contest.

Of the snarled rattlers, about 4,000 pounds of them are skinned, cooked and offered for sale each year. Some say the meat has a chicken taste to it.

"The World's Largest Rattlesnake Round-Up is known worldwide," said Kinsey, and has been featured in magazines and in newspapers from West Texas to New York and London and has been aired over network television.

Last year sports network ESPN gave the round-up prime-time coverage, Kinsey said.

The 32nd annual event offers guided tours of snake hunts and demonstrations of "snake milking" in which snake handlers "milk" the venom from live rattlesnakes. The venom is used in medical research and as an antidote for snake-bite victims, the Jaycees tout.

The round-up traditionally is kicked off by a Rattlesnake Review Parade, which is followed by the Miss Snake Charmer Queen Contest in the Sweetwater Municipal Auditorium, where Sweetwater boosters are prone to boast, rock 'n' roll star Elvis Presley once performed. The 1989 Miss Snake Charmer Queen was Lori McCoy.

The parade and queen contest will be held on the Thursday prior to the March 9 beginning of the three-day Round-Up.

The round-up will feature country-and-western dances on Friday and Saturday nights.

This year, the round-up will feature a wild-game cook-off of 50 cooking teams preparing such entrees as "wild turkey, wild quail, wild pheasant, and wild-beef brisket," Kinsey said. The cook-off will be in the Billy Muncy Arena adjacent to the coliseum.

A two-mile walk and 10-kilometer run are held on the Sunday of the round-up weekend.

The coliseum and nearby barns traditionally are laden with curios, souvenirs, antiques and a gun-and-coin show.

home Friday night because of several tell-tale signs in the house.

"In 25 years in the ministry, he has never missed a Sunday," she said. "Never. Even when he's deathly ill, he's always in the pulpit."

A search of Scheyer's home revealed that Saturday's newspaper was still in the yard and his binoculars had been set out for Saturday's field trip. His camera and tripod were found in the church office. No signs of a struggle or break-in were found, police said.

Scheyer had been at the 400-member church in Austin since mid-August, and was to leave in September.

Police put a description of Scheyer and his truck on a national crime computer, but said Monday evening that they had no additional leads.

Scheyer, 61, is 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs about 165 pounds. He has dark brown hair, hazel eyes and is clean shaven.

The minister drives a silver-and-gray 1989 Chevrolet S-10 pickup with a thin red stripe on the side, friends said.

Whitely named county chairman for Mosbacher

From Staff Reports

Dorothy Whitely has been named Midland County chairman of Republican Rob Mosbacher's campaign for lieutenant governor, campaign officials said.

The county chairman will be responsible for recruiting volunteers, managing the local campaign headquarters and planning special events for the GOP candidate.

Campaign manager Herb Butrum said, "The experience and leadership that each county and regional chairman brings to the campaign is vital to our success in 1990.

Mosbacher, a Houston businessman, is chairman of the board of the Texas Department of Human Services. He is the son of U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher.

Bear leapt to screen heights

In a charming scene in "The Bear," a film from Jean-Jacques Annaud, a bear cub follows and imitates a frog, dancing and jumping across a meadow.

Annaud says he had planned to use a midget in a bear costume for the scene and had actually rehearsed him for three months. But when he put the real cub into the scene with the frog just to see what would happen, the little bear did exactly what he had wanted him to do. (CNS)

Loving has first birth since 1951

MENTONE (AP) — For 39 years, Loving County, Texas, failed to live up to its name — until Amanda Nicole McVay arrived.

The birth of Amanda McVay on Jan. 11 broke a nearly 39-year stretch of no births in Texas' least populous county.

The 8-pound, 21-inch girl was born to Greg and Sharon McVay after the couple decided to give birth at their Mentone home without a doctor's assistance.

County Clerk Juanita Busby said that Amanda is the first baby born in the county since March 15, 1951.

According to Ms. Busby, Loving County's lack of a hospital has usually forced women to deliver their babies in Odessa, Pecos or Kermit.

When the McVays' first baby, Dana, was born in Reeves County Hospital seven years ago, McVay wasn't allowed in the delivery room.

That was an experience the couple was determined not to repeat.

This time, they relied solely on Pecos midwife Delfina Hignojoz, who assured the couple everything would run smoothly.

Mrs. McVay says if she has any more children, she will again deliver them at home.

JOANNE LANGSTON ENDORSES
NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

I am most interested in the well being of Midland's citizens and its economy. In the course of my business and civic activities, I have learned the importance of a competent and unbiased judiciary. Although the average resident of Midland rarely has direct contact with the courts, everyone needs a fair and impartial hearing, full understanding of the issues and faithful interpretation of the law. If we have all of these elements in a judge, the community will be a better place for our families, our businesses, our abilities to retain and attract businesses of all types. I have known Nick Taylor for 16 years and believe he will fulfill the ideals of this community in the office of District Judge. I endorse him and urge you to vote for him for District Judge on March 13, 1990.

Soviet jeans arrive in U.S.

American classic gets Russian 'look'

By KAROL STONGER

NEW YORK (AP) — As U.S. denims continue to command big money on the Soviet black market — Levi 501s reportedly fetch $150 to $200 a pair — guess what's coming to America.

You got it. Russian jeans. Not just jeans with Russian-sounding names, but jeans designed in Russia by Russians.

They're called, very simply, Soviet Jeansware. And for Seattle Pacific Industries, which has the U.S. manufacturing and distribution rights, the timing couldn't have been better, what with the recent rapid-fire political developments in Eastern Europe.

Steve Ritchey, senior vice president of merchandising and design at SPI, spotted the clothing in Europe last summer and started negotiating with The Pantrem Group of Italy, which owns worldwide licensing rights. The deal was signed in late September, and Soviet Jeansware was introduced in 40 department stores in time for Christmas. By the end of January, the line reached 200 stores nationwide, according to Ed Backholm, director of SPI marketing and advertising.

"Time and place is what the fashion business is all about," Backholm says. "With the political thaw and the positive energy associated with it, people are buying and wearing Soviet Jeansware as a statement of support for what's happening in the world."

A team of seven Moscow-based designers provides the illustrations, color suggestions and detailing ideas. SPI, which has been making denims for 10 years under the Union Bay label, does the rest.

In addition to blue jeans, the Soviet collections for men and women include 100 percent cotton knit and woven shirts, jackets, pants and shorts. Colors include brass, mustard, loden and olive as well as black, white and red, chambray and stonewash and wornwash denim.

If the styling isn't distinguishable from other casualwear, the detailing is. There are sewn-on Soviet labels with Cyrillic writing, metal buttons with the Soviet logo, and stars, CCCP and other legends.

The signature item is button-fly jeans with a miniature screwdriver hanging from a belt loop. The screwdriver is utilitarian. It's used to replace a color metal plate on the back waistband with one of two optional ones. The jeans are packaged in a tin embossed with the Soviet logo and retail for $68.

Denim jackets go for $125, but most of the line is priced at $50-$60.

"Denim will play a big role in the '90s," says Backholm. "It comes in three to five-year cycles, and the last time it was a big fashion item was in the mid-80s."

Soviet fashion seeks to catch up with West

N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — Soviet fashion designer Slava Zaitsev admits his colleagues in Paris, New York, Milan and Tokyo have little to worry about in terms of competition from Moscow.

"The low level of materials and needlework in my country will make it difficult to advance into foreign markets," said the 56-year-old Zaitsev.

"Moreover, we do not have a mass production setup that will enable us to compete with other brands. However, I hope the ideas I have in my head will be accepted by those in the fashion world in the West," he said.

Zaitsev displayed some of his work at the Fashion Summit '90 recently held in Tokyo. He is one of a growing number of Soviet designers who, thanks to glasnost, are free to look Westward for inspiration.

According to fashion critics, though many of Zaitsev's ideas are sound, his work suffers from the use of cheap material and from being out of contact with Western designers for so many years. Not only do the coats and dresses lack a sense of luxury, but Zaitsev is unable to produce variations on his form ideas because of a shortage of adequate material.

Fashion design was not even recognized by Soviet society as an occupation until Mikhail Gorbachev came to power, Zaitsev said.

Moreover, like other sectors of the Soviet economy attempting reform under Gorbachev's perestroika campaign, Zaitsev's fashion design work has been hampered by the many years of conservative communist ideology that for generations dominated the nation.

Shortages of material and an underdeveloped production system force Zaitsev to create fashion under conditions unthinkable in the West.

One of the coats displayed by Zaitsev had wide silhouettes and used large amounts of material in vivid yellow and purple, colors not used commonly by Western fashion designers.

A black dress fronted with shiny ethnic decoration included padded shoulders, a feature that has already come and gone in Japan.

While many Western designers experiment with different materials and colors around a single conceptual idea, Zaitsev does not have that luxury because he is never sure he will be able to obtain different materials in the required amounts, he said.

His dresses also left little room for coordination with other articles of clothing and accessories, according to fashion observers.

"Russian women also want to look as beautiful as they can. However, there is a shortage of beautiful items in Russian society today," Zaitsav said. "Even if a Russian woman purchased a fashionable dress, she would probably have difficulty finding a pair of shoes, bag or belt to match."

Zaitsev's works have been sold in the Soviet Union at prices close to the average monthly wage of a Soviet working woman. He has also made dresses for wives of high Soviet government officials, such as Raisa Gorbachev and the wife of Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

However, Zaitsev still sees himself as a designer for the masses.

"I always make sure to explain my fashion to the audiences who come to the fashion shows I hold several times a year," Zaitsev said. "I do it to raise the level of the clothing worn by common Russian women and to convince them of what is beautiful. Even if they acquire beautiful clothes, there may not be anywhere for them to go and they might not know how to properly wear the clothes," he said.

AT WIT'S END

Cold symptoms are sniffles, sneezes, sociability

By ERMA BOMBECK

I have never understood the dynamics of a cold. We all know it carries with it chills, fever, nausea, a runny nose, coughing and headache, not to mention the ability to spread germs. But it carries with it another side effect that is rarely mentioned: A cold makes you social.

Bombeck

I've seen recluses who have not been out of their homes in 10 years. The moment they get a cold, the first thing they do is to drag themselves out of bed, get dressed and go to a crowded theater.

Agnostics and atheists grab their coats and go to Mass daily until their cold is over. The office worker who has such a record of absenteeism that she puts her car in visitor parking shows up early and stays late.

That's why colds are considered the gift that keeps giving.

At a supermarket the other day, I met a friend of mine hanging over her cart. Her eyes were puffy and red, her cheeks were flushed, she dabbed at her nose, and her voice was barely audible through her parched lips.

"What are you doing here?" I asked.

She coughed on my cauliflower. "If I stayed home I'd think about dying," she said. "I might as well be on my feet."

It seems the most cruel and inhumane advice a doctor can give to a cold sufferer is, "Go to bed and drink lots of liquids." Tell a person with a cold that she needs surgery, and she won't bat an eye. Tell her to sleep in and drink orange juice, and she freaks out.

I can just hear her responding: "Let me get this straight. You want me to stretch out on a nice warm bed and sleep and watch TV all day and not spread germs to the entire city? You quack. I'm getting a second opinion. This is my life we're talking about."

The tendency to walk a cold to death and to entertain it at parties, concerts, lectures and restaurants has to be a part of the disease. Why else would the schools be full of children who would skip school if they slept on their hair "funny" but not if they had walking pneumonia? I've seen men and women on the soaps struggle through love scenes sneezing and hacking. That's unnatural.

There's an adage, "You can lead a cold to a bed, but you can't make it lie in it," or something like that. There's little hope that we can get rid of this side effect until we find a cure for the common cold. Scientists thought they had found a vaccine that caused rabbits to develop antibodies in their immune system. Then someone remembered rabbits don't get colds anyway.

Until then, I'd advise all well people to stay in bed, drink plenty of liquids, and let the sickies run the world.

DEAR ABBY

Be ready to lend a hand — make sure it's trained

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Joann Amore, Normal, Ill." wrote to you urging people to learn cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). Ms. Amore and others who have taken CPR are to be commended for their unselfish commitment — unselfish because they learned CPR to benefit others, since no one can administer CPR to himself.

Van Buren

Too many people believe that the rescue squad or emergency medical service is only a phone call away. They fail to realize that time is critical!

The American Heart Association's statistics show that if someone has cardiac arrest and CPR is delayed, every second after four minutes is critical. There are miraculous exceptions — especially in cold-water drowning cases involving children. However, when CPR is delayed beyond about six minutes, there is a very high probability of permanent brain damage.

From the moment a victim's heart stops, it can take more than four minutes for someone to reach a phone, dial the number and tell the dispatcher "who, what, when and where." Then the dispatcher must relay that information to the ambulance/rescue crew. The crew must then get en route and travel. It could take a minute or more after arrival for them to unload their gear and carry it in to where the victim is. Then they must resuscitate the victim!

Don't delay — enroll today! — CURTIS POWELL, NORTH CAROLINA PARAMEDIC

DEAR CURTIS: Right! Since a catastrophe can be only a heartbeat away, everyone should be prepared to step in and give (literally) a helping hand in an emergency.

DEAR ABBY: I am 10 years old. I go to North Kingsville School. My teacher is Mrs. Foderetti.

I wonder, what does "Mind your P's and Q's" mean? — JULIE PRESLINSKI, CONNEAUT, OHIO

DEAR JULIE: According to the Oxford English Dictionary, Second Edition, the phrase "Mind your P's and Q's" evolved from a phrase used in England around 1876. Briefly it means, "To be of prime quality."

There are other explanations, however. The phrase may have originated in the classroom, because of a child's difficulty in distinguishing between the letter "p" and the letter "q" due to their similar appearance.

Another possibility is that it originated with King Louis XIV of France, who advised his formally dressed noblemen that they could avoid disturbing their ornate attire by minding their "pieds" (feet) and "queues" (wigs).

Yet another source suggests that barkeepers may have said, "Mind your P's and Q's" to remind their customers that they had accumulated large bills by ordering pints (P's) and quarts (Q's) on credit.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Assertive and Glad of It," if my husband and I decided to drop in on friends and they gave us any of the excuses put forth by "Assertive," I can guarantee you that would be the end of the friendship!

I would be absolutely insulted if, after I made the effort to visit a friend, I was told, "I'm sorry you didn't telephone first — but we have plans for the evening," or "I'm tired" (poor babies), or, "I have housework to do."

I have had friends drop in when I was trying to do my weekly cleaning, so I just put it aside and waited until they left. I would have considered it a slap in the face to have been given any of "Assertive's" excuses.

I know there are people who do not appreciate drop-in visitors, but I am not one of them. — RUTHELMA DOERR, GARLAND, TEXAS

DEAR RUTHELMA: You epitomize Southern hospitality, and my hat is off to you. But I'm from the "give me a break" school, and I would appreciate the courtesy of a telephone call from a friend saying, "I'm in the neighborhood — is it convenient to stop by?"

Original Rooskie returns to U.S.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A cultural trip to the Soviet Union three years ago turned into a baptism in perestroika for Gene Williams.

Williams is president of The Original Rooskie Trading Co., the only known U.S. importer of the Russian fur hat.

Williams, a Lexington real estate agent, went to Russia to help a friend working on a citizen-diplomacy tour. He became fascinated by the pervasive fluffy fur hats.

He approached officials of one of the country's central distribution centers about selling the hats in the United States.

While the fur hats have been around for decades, they hadn't been sold in America since 1952 because of trade bans. But Congress lifted the embargo with the passage of the Omnibus Trade bill in 1988. That opened the door for Williams to import the hats, but there were problems at the other end.

Mikhail Gorbachev's perestroika, the liberalizing of the Russian economy, wasn't fully understood by Russian businessmen and officials.

"It's truly a revolution," Williams says. "It reminds me of the '60s. We're right on the cutting edge. They're eager to learn about capitalism."

The Russian businessmen wanted Williams to take 20,000 hats because they were used to quick sales in their stores. Williams explained that he needed only 20 for a test market.

The fur hats were first sold in stores in Lexington. Once he learned he could sell them in Kentucky, he says, "I knew I could sell them anywhere."

Retail outlets now include Bloomingdale's locations in New York, Washington and Chicago.

The rabbit fur hats sell for $99 and a muskrat fur hat for $250.

Williams now is trying to import Russian navy shirts, which he hopes to have in the stores by spring.

"I found the people in Russia were lit up," says Williams. "They are totally absorbed in their progress. They're anxious to be part of the world."

SonSilks imaginative gifts, silk florals perfect for your valentine

Remember your precious Valentine this coming February 14 with a unique and unforgettable gift from SonSilks. At SonSilks you will find something very special for that very special someone for Valentine's Day as well as all year long.

SonSilks is conveniently located behind the Andrews Highway Pizza Hut at 2505 W. Ohio. Owned by Bob and Ellen West, it is Midland's most popular resource for imaginative jewelry, silk florals, gifts, decorative objects and wearable fashions.

If you are short on ideas, let the folks at Son Silks help you with some suggestions available in every price category. SonSilks has a wide variety of gifts sure to please even the person who seems to have it all.

The Valentine's Day special is 50 percent off Yuppie Gourmet Elite Treats. Puffs Au Praline is a gourmet melange of buttery caramelized puffed corn with nuts. Chips Au Chocolate are chocolate covered peanuts, and Stix Au Chocolate are delicious, sophisticated snacks. They are truly delicious and addicting and SonSilks will even wrap them for you!

Come on into SonSilks now for a wonderful selection of silk flowers and plants for Valentine bouquets and plant arrangements. The indoor garden is blooming with spring flowers such as forsythias, cornflowers, bluebonnets, geraniums, calivias, bouganvillas, wisterias, irises and begonias.

Also, azaleas, buttercups, wildflowers, lillies, poppies, lilacs, orchids, salvias, dogwoods, cosmos, pansies, zinnias and nasturtiums.

You may buy from the stock or you may purchase a custom design. Hanging and wall baskets are available as arrangements.

Ellen also suggests for Valentine's Day and other occasions when you send roses that you send American Prestige silk roses. Send your lady a dozen of these beautifully crafted, individually designed silk roses. Or, choose one which is especially designed to sit on a dresser or a coffee table. She will think of you all day long, every day! Send one as a nosegay for the mantle, table, bedside or an arrangement. You just can't miss!

SonSilks always has made-up silk flower and plant arrangements on hand for those special times when you need to run in and pick something up. For example, a wreath, topiary or wall basket with poppies, vinca, berries, ferns, pods and birds in nest are a clever idea. This woodsy mix looks as though it is fresh picked from the woods.

If you have been looking for a local source of quality candles, such as Root and Yankee, look no further than SonSilks. Ellen carries a great selection of Root votives, pillars, collenettes and sprays. These are all decorator candles with the famous Root fragrances. Yankee Kitchen candles are available in large or small sizes and sampler jars.

Coming soon to SonSilks is the Candle Nook. The gazebo will be expanded for SonSilks to carry even more varieties of candles.

A beary special Valentine's Day gift is Luvable 'n Huggable Bears. Each has been designed and handmade with love and care. "First Love" comes in a little wooden bench. The little boy bear brings a gift to his sweetheart. The bears are dressed in country French, polished cotton fashions with lots of ribbon, lace and dried flowers.

Coming soon are decorative wire and bamboo birdcages. These can be used like a hanging basket.

Other trendy little gift ideas are potpourri and fragrances, coaster-stone coasters, heart-shaped and individually handcrafted bandboxes, great novelty cotton and cotton/ramie sweaters, handcrafted bunnies, the Heartwarmer inspirational book series and the cutest of T-shirts.

Are you looking for a perfume which is sensual, warm, earthy, scintillating and exciting? Then try L'Dream, a fragrance by Philippe de Grasse.

Jewelry is always a popular gift choice for Valentine's Day as well as year round. SonSilks specializes in carrying unusual, fun jewelry. Just in is "bridge jewelry" — the alternative to expensive jewelry. It stands on its own as a transition from costume jewelry to fine jewelry. These are moderately prices 14 or 18 karat gold overlay, heavy electroplate rings and bracelets. They come with a lifetime guarantee.

Beautiful Austrian crystal necklaces and faux pearls, earrings and bags and accessories by Whiting and Davis round out the SonSilks jewelry selection. SonSilks plans to add belts and bags to its accessory line this year.

One of the many reasons people keep coming back to SonSilks is for the commitment to personal attention and customer service. This specialty shop is adapting to its clients.

SonSilks has grown into a successful shop appealing to those wanting to decorate with quality items and limited editions as well as those seeking one-of-a-kind items or imaginative and creative jewelry.

So, remember SonSilks for all of your Valentine's Day gift needs. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Call 686-2070 for more information.

Mid-West Door & Window now installs own doors, windows, skylights

Mid-West Door and Window Company, a long time supplier of doors and windows in the Permian Basin, has now extended its services to include installation of its complete line of doors, windows, skylights and other miscellaneous products.

In the past, Mid-West Door and Window has offered these services through sub-contractors but with the great demand of door, window and skylight installations, the owners decided to go with their own crews.

Because of this improvement, jobs are done on a more timely basis and you will be assured of the same superb quality jobs you have come to expect.

The professionals at Mid-West Door and Window can do any type of door installation and you can be assured that the door will operate properly, be airtight and beautify your home.

As we all know the first thing people see when they come to your home is the front door, so you want a beautiful door which opens and closes properly.

Mid-West Door and Window offers doors of all styles, including the elegance of beautiful wood with leaded glass, to the Peachtree steel doors for the harsh west exposures.

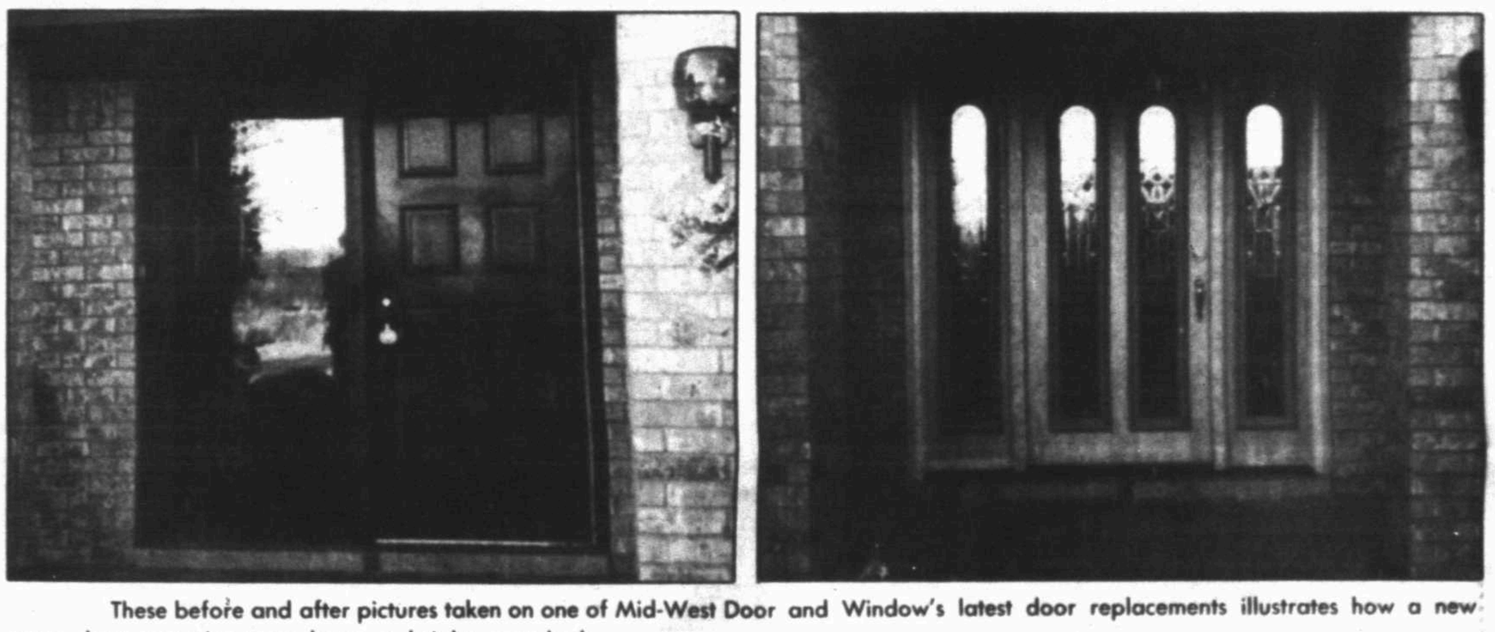

Peachtree doors can be plain and simple, or by installing visador lites with leaded beveled glass they can fit into any decor.

As in the past, Mid-West Door and Window offers aluminum and wooden windows, along with storm doors, storm windows, siding and skylights with installation available on all.

And with spring just around the corner, you'll want to be sure your screens are in good shape so you can keep insects outside where they belong.

You need only one phone call for a complete job. So for clearer, brighter views and more comfortable living, call the professionals at Mid-West Door and Window. They promise you won't be sorry. Free estimates are available.

Call 682-4632 or stop by the Mid-West Door and Window showroom at 2400 W. Front.

These before and after pictures taken on one of Mid-West Door and Window's latest door replacements illustrates how a new entry door can give your home a bright, new look.

Classical Greenery & Floral Design: Midland's newest florist, gift shop

Let the professionals at the newly expanded Classical Greenery and Floral Design help you pick out something special for Valentine's Day. From left are Glinda Duke, Peggy Parkinson and owner Jody Hughes.

Classical Greenery, which has a reputation for beautiful tropical plants, festive gift baskets and professional party decorating, now sports a new name and a new look. Classical Greenery and Floral Design's remodeling and expansion into a full-service fresh floral design and gift showroom is ready in time for Valentine's Day.

Stop by 3323 N. Midland Drive (down from Jorge's Restaurant) and see the myriad of changes, such as a walk-in display cooler. You can actually walk in to this spacious area and make your selection.

Fresh flowers and arrangements are available for all occasions, including birthday, anniversary, get well and sympathy. You can count on terrific arrangements by three premier West Texas designers — Peggy Parkinson, Glinda Duke and Teresa Merritt. Peggy, with 12 years experience, specializes in party work and weddings. Glinda, also with 12 years experience, enjoys working with clients and designing custom arrangements. Teresa is presently supervising the interiorscapes.

Valentine's Day specials include a dozen red roses, arranged, for $29.95. Hurry — supplies are limited. Also, the Sweetheart Sampler basket is a treat which includes six roses, a bottle of Llano Estacado Wine and chocolate mousse truffles.

Grand opening prices are available February 12 through 16.

Other ideas for a special one include balloon bouquets, festive Valentine's sacks and tissue, chocolate candies and truffles and many sizes of delightful Gund stuffed animals.

Classical Greenery and Floral Design carries a wonderful selection of large tropical plants. They receive shipments direct from Florida, and you can be assured of finding a huge selection at a reasonable price.

European gardens are in bloom right now with a colorful display of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils. Cut flower specialties include Holland flowers and exotics such as Hawaiian flowers.

For the best selection for Valentine's Day, remember to order early.

Classical Greenery and Floral Design delivers locally and offers wire service, so you can remember your out-of-town friends.

If you have a hard time visualizing how to decorate with plants for different occasions, let the professionals help. Peggy and her staff specialize in preparing flowers and plants for parties and weddings.

Classical Greenery's designers will come to your home for a consultation on your party. They will also deliver and set up your floral arrangements.

For a small rental charge, you may use for your parties a number of large vases and containers.

Those who enjoy decorating with silk flowers will be pleased with the "affordable elegance" of silks from Classical Greenery and Floral Design. In stock are many of the better quality lines of silks as well as a comparable but more affordable line.

New ideas for a gift basket include "The Bath Basket" — Bella's toiletries, sheif paper, dusting powders, soaps, bath beads and gels. Also popular are baskets which include "elite treats" by Yuppie Gourmet. These delicious specialties are available in Puffs Au Praline, Chips au Chocolate and Cookie Bon Bons.

Displayed creatively throughout the showroom are new, exciting quilted cactus plants, palm trees, birds and flowers. Pottery, crystal vases, potpourri jars and a wide variety of Seasons potpourri await you.

Don't forget Classical Greenery and Floral Designs for your plant leasing and maintenance needs.

MasterCard, Visa and American Express are accepted. Store hours are Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturdays 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Call 699-6410 for more information.

Victim hopes that whoever mailed bomb is caught

HOUSTON (AP) — Lisa Osteen, injured last week when a package bomb exploded in her lap, says she hopes the person who mailed the parcel to her father at the Lakewood Church can be caught and prosecuted.

During her first public appearance after the explosion, Miss Osteen said Monday she remembers little about the package, except that it was a little heavier than the hundreds of parcels sent to her parents at the church. She doesn't recall seeing a return address.

Miss Osteen also told reporters she routinely opens mail addressed to her father, the Rev. John Osteen, pastor of the church, and her mother.

"We receive lots of boxes and packages so it was just a routine thing. When I saw that box it didn't seem like anything unusual about it. I did notice it was a little bit heavy. I sort of wondered what was in it. When I started to open it, I took the wrapping paper off and then I opened the flap. That's the last thing I remember.

"I didn't go unconscious. I was in shock I'm sure. I don't know how I got out of my chair, but I found myself running and screaming. I opened my door and told one of the staff members, 'A bomb exploded and I'm on fire.' I looked down and my clothes were shredded. I really wasn't on fire, but my clothes were smoldering," Miss Osteen, 31, said.

Miss Osteen, director of ministries at the 10,000-member nondenomination church in northwest Houston, underwent surgery last week and said doctors were able to close three holes in her abdomen without skin grafts. Doctors have not indicated when she will be released from The Methodist Hospital.

"I'm feeling a lot better. I'm sorry I couldn't come out earlier.

L. Osteen

J. Osteen

I was weak. Today is the first day I've had real food and I didn't want y'all to see me without my makeup," Miss Osteen, clad in a silk teal and purple robe and makeup, said as she sat in a wheelchair at a hospital conference room.

"I have scars from here to here," she said, using her hands to indicate an area from her upper chest to her knees.

The package bomb loaded with 8-inch nails shredded the office.

"When I think about how loud that bomb was. I'll never forget it. It was like an electrical shock that went through my body. I guess it was my ears but I felt a real loud ringing, a real loud ringing, that went through my body," she said. "When I think about how loud it was, it's just unbelievable that I wasn't hurt more than I am."

The Osteen family reacted with mixed feelings to the news that investigators no longer consider Jeffrey Mack Boggs, a 31-year-old drifter, a suspect in the mail bombing.

Miss Osteen said she would like to see the person responsible punished.

"I would pray because I know that they have problems and I would pray that they would get the help they need," she said.

"Most of all, I'd like to seem them behind bars, I guess," she said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Man says he killed parents

CLEBURNE (AP) — An unemployed Cleburne area man was being held in lieu of $2 million bail in the shotgun slayings of his parents at their home in Johnson County.

Sheriff's department spokeswoman Pam Jetsel said David Hart initially telephoned officers and said his parents were missing and "there was blood all over" the house.

Jetsel said that Hart, 21, later told Sheriff Eddy Boggs and other investigators that he had shot his parents.

Police found the body of Harvey Hart Sr., 53, and Betty Hart, 49, in a van parked near their home.

Hart told investigators that he walked into his parents' bedroom about 3 a.m. Monday and shot his father in the chest. Hart said the noise awoke his mother. He said he shot her in the side an the back of the head when she tried to call for help.

Hart told officers he put the bodies in his father's van, drove them to the highway and walked home.

Jetsel said Hart told officers he planned to say that his parents had been killed by a burglar and were driven away.

Trio sentenced for abuse

CLEBURNE (AP) — The parents and uncle of a 12-year-old Crowley girl have been sentenced to prison for sexually assaulting and beating the child and forcing her to live in an abandoned bus.

Johnson County authorities said the father, Jerry Lee Biddinger, pleaded guilty Monday to aggravated sexual assault of a child and was sentenced to 15 years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

The mother, Phyllis Christine Biddinger, pleaded guilty last week to injury to a child and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

The uncle, Rollie Jack Bigley also pleaded guilty last week to injury to a child and was sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Karen Bigley, the child's aunt, is charged with misdemeanor counts of failure to report child abuse and of endangering a child.

WWII vet receives medal

DALLAS (AP) — More than 47 years after Frank Ryle of Dallas saved the lives of a group of men in the Battle of Midway, he has been honored by the U.S. Navy.

Ryle recently was given a medal of commendation in ceremonies at the Naval Air Station in Grand Prairie.

A citation credits Ryle, 68, with plunging overboard from the USS Brenham after two aircraft carriers were struck by Japanese torpedoes on June 6, 1942, and towing many injured men to safety.

Hawks run over Chaps

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Ask opposing coaches after an athletic contest why things turned out the way they did and you often times get two different answers. There will be some similarities both coaches key on, but lots of times both will give a different answer on why his team actually won and the other lost, or vice versa.

Such was the case Monday night, following Howard College's definitive statement of a victory at Chap Center, 126-111 over the hometown Midland College Chaps in Western Junior College Athletic Conference action.

Steve Green says his Hawks won because the Chaps got dejected.

Reggie Franklin said MC lost because his team was too emotional on offense.

Whatever the reason, the Hawks proved they are for real. They proved worthy of their No. 3 national ranking and they showed they can pretty much score at will whenever they so choose.

Howard moved to 24-0 overall, 9-0 in conference; Midland fell to 15-9, 5-4.

"I don't think we played up to our potential," Franklin said. "We played on emotion on offense. It's OK to play emotional on defense, but when you get to offense, you've got to idle down. If you don't idle down, you'll take the quick shots."

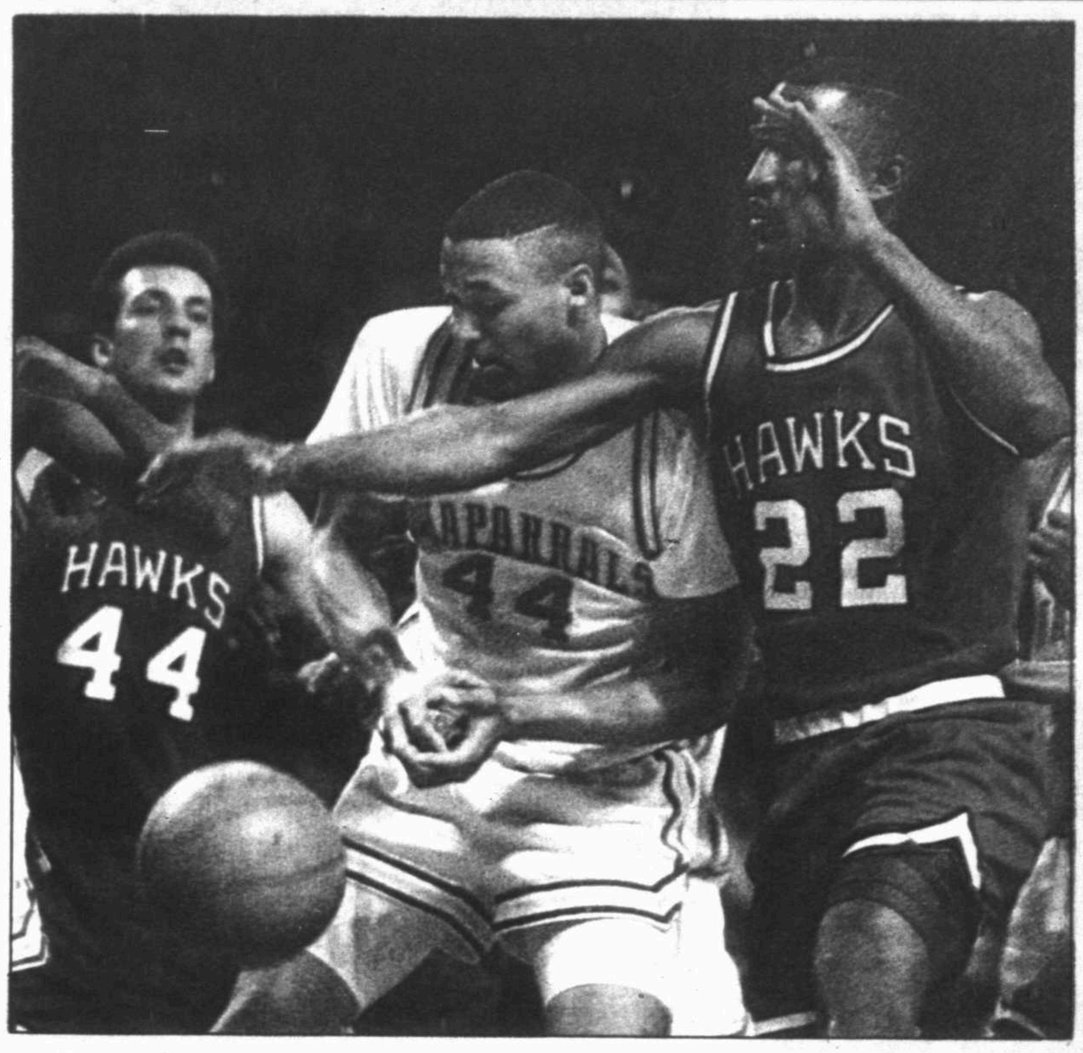

Every time the Chaps didn't take the necessary time to get up a careful shot, the Hawks would take advantage, grab the rebound and zoom back down court.

Gaines headed for Tech

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — On the heels of of his first high school state championship, Gary Gaines dropped a bombshell Monday by announcing his resignation as head football coach at Odessa Permian to take a job as defensive backs coach at Texas Tech.

Gaines will begin work on the Tech campus in Lubbock Monday.

"After a few days of considering the idea, I felt like I was making the right decision. I've never been obsessed with the idea of becoming a college coach, but it was something I wanted to try," Gaines said from his home Monday.

"We're by no means unhappy here; my family and I love it here. We're just making the move for professional reasons."

Gaines coached the Panthers to a 16-0 record in 1989 while Permian claimed its fifth state title, but Mojo only has two returning starters for next season. Gaines' record in four years as Permian head coach was 46-7-1, and his overall record in 11 years of head coaching is 96-34-8.

The Panthers failed to advance to the playoffs in Gaines' first year, but reached the state semifinals in 1987 and 1988. Gaines also spend three years (1979-81) as an assistant coach for the Panthers.

"Gary will be a tremendous asset to our program," former Midland Lee and current Tech head coach Spike Dykes said.

Dykes also hired his son Rick as an assistant Monday.

"He (Gaines) was president-elect of the Texas High School Coaches Association, so that shows what kind of reputation he has. He's proven what he can on the field."

"We obviously hate to see him go, but we're being selfish when we say that," said John Wilkins, Ector County Independent School District athletic director. "Gary is a man of class and integrity, and he had a great program with tremendous results on and off the field. Of course, those are also the qualities that attract other people to him."

As for Gaines' replacement at Permian, Wilkins said he hopes to have the position filled within two or three weeks.

"We obviously want to get the best person we can. There are going to have to be some high criteria met for a person to be considered for the job."

Gaines has recommended his defensive coordinator, Tam Hollingshead, as a replacement. Hollingshead is in his seventh year at Permian and is a graduate of Southern Methodist.

4-5A contenders try to fend off pretenders

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

District 4-5A's boys basketball standing should look pretty much the same after the three co-leaders walk off the court tonight.

Midland High, San Angelo and Abilene High, all 7-1 in loop play, will be favored to win tonight and set up some big battles between the three in the next 10 days.

However, as the old proverb goes, if tonight's opponents did not stand a chance to win, they would not play the games.

MHS will play host to Abilene Cooper at 8 p.m., in the Chaparral Center, while Midland Lee invades AHS and San Angelo travels to Odessa High.

For MHS, 19-9 overall, the main concern may be having to overcome complacency against a Cougar squad that is 6-23 on the season and 3-6 in 4-5A play. AHS (18-8 overall) hosts a Rebel team that is 12-14 and 3-6, while San Angelo (16-11) is looking at a Broncho unit with records of 8-17 and 2-7.

4-5A Basketball

But appearances may be deceiving, as the Bulldogs enters the game against a Cooper team that downed OHS 81-72 Friday. That's the same Broncho squad that gave the 'Dogs fits Jan. 19 in Odessa.

MHS had to post last-second shots to first send the OHS game into overtime, then win 76-74 at the end of OT. The 'Dogs also have received scares from Lee (53-51, 49-43 and 63-59) and league cellar dweller Odessa Permian, 85-83 on Jan. 5.

On the flip side, the first meeting between the Purple Pack and Cooper was a MHS blowout. The last time MHS played the Coogs, Jan. 12 in Abilene, the 'Dogs ran away 82-67. In that game, MHS had five players score in double figures, with Scott Melzer leading the pack with 23 points.

AHS will also need to watch its back, despite Lee's record. The Rebels' last win was Jan. 30, a 57-52 decision over OHS. But Lee always seems to find a way to play with the district leaders.

The Rebs have lost four of the last six games, but in three of those losses the margin was less than three points. Friday, Lee fell on a buzzer-beating shot to San Angelo (52-50) and stayed within one point of AHS, 55-54, on Jan. 12.

Eugene Hicks, a 6-0 junior forward, paced the Rebles in the first game against the Eagles, scoring 17 points. Since his first start three games ago, Hicks has averaged 14.7 points a contest. Also, 6-3 senior David meade has been hot, scoring 15 and 16 points in Lee's last two outings.

Cards shuffle for coach

PHOENIX (AP) — After a search of almost three months, the Phoenix Cardinals have finally found a coach.

The NFL team scheduled a news conference today to introduce the coach, reportedly Washington Redskins assistant Joe Bugel.

WTTG-TV in Washington, D.C., and KTAR Radio in Phoenix both reported Monday night that Bugel will become the 30th coach in the Cardinals' 70-year history and the franchise's sixth since 1979.

Cardinals spokesman Paul Jensen refused to identify the man he said the team would introduce today as its new coach.

Bugel, 49, has been a Redskins assistant for nine seasons and has 15 years of NFL experience. He started as offensive line coach for the Detroit Lions in 1975-76 and coached the Houston Oilers offensive line from 1977-80.

Bugel coached at four colleges, including his alma mater, Western Kentucky from 1964-68. He also was at Navy (1969-72), Iowa State (1973) and Ohio State (1974) before coming to the Lions.

Bugel was among seven finalists for the Cardinals job, which opened when Gene Stallings was fired Nov. 20 in the middle of his fourth season.

Other finalists were San Francisco 49ers offensive coordinator Mike Holmgren, Los Angeles Rams defensive coordinator Fritz Shurmur, Fresno State coach Jim Sweeney, Cincinnati Bengals offensive coordinator Bruce Coslet, New York Giants defensive coordinator Bill Belichick and Cardinals interim coach Hank Kuhlmann.

Shurmur, 57, and Sweeney, 60, both were finalists for the Cardinals job before Stallings was hired in 1986.

Stallings, 54, had a 23-34-1 record when fired after announcing that he would not seek renewal of his contract at the end of the season. He subsequently returned to college coaching when he signed Jan. 11 with Alabama.

Kuhlmann, in his fourth year as running backs coach, was 0-5 after replacing Stallings. The Cardinals lost their last six games to finish 5-11, the club's fifth consecutive losing season.

Kuhlmann was interviewed for the job Jan. 5 by Phoenix general manager Larry Wilson, who was given the authority by Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill to hire a coach.

Wilson spent most of Monday meeting with Bidwill about the coaching search.

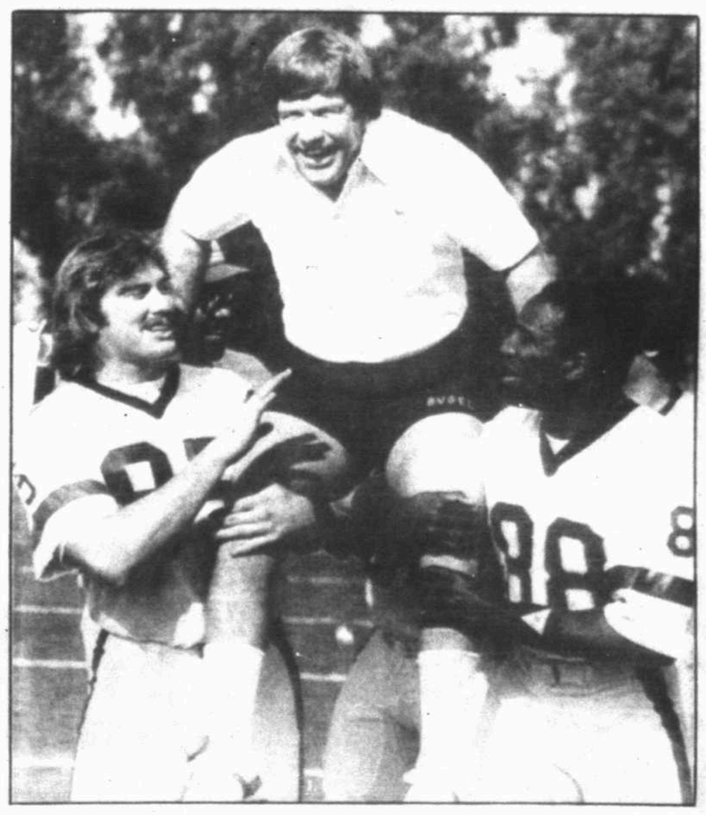

Coslet originally was interviewed Dec. 28, Belichick on Jan. 15, Sweeney on Jan. 22, Bugel on Jan. 23, Shurmur on Jan. 25 and Holmgren last Thursday at Indianapolis during the NFL's National Scouting Combine.

Wilson met again with Bugel on Friday at Indianapolis and on Saturday with Holmgren, Coslet and Belichick.

Holmgren flew with Wilson to Phoenix Saturday night and they met Sunday with Bidwill and toured the team's $10 million training facility under construction in south Tempe.

Holmgren was the last man interviewed because the 49ers would not allow him to talk to other teams about jobs until after the Super Bowl on Jan. 28. He also is being pursued by the New York Jets, who are looking to replace the fired Joe Walton.

However, 49ers owner Edward DeBartolo Jr. said he wants to keep Holmgren on his staff and reportedly is willing to match any financial offer.

Early exit should have earned Richardson techincal foul

Nolan Richardson

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles said Coach Nolan Richardson broke no rules by leaving the court before the end of regulation play in the Razorbacks' game at Texas. The chief interpreter of rules for the NCAA disagrees.

Texas led 84-83 with 14 seconds left when an intentional foul was called as Arkansas' Lee Mayberry stopped a drive to the basket by Texas' Lance Blanks.

Richardson removed his jacket and walked past the Texas bench to the dressing room. Blanks' two free throws put Texas ahead 86-83. But Travis Mays missed a free throw and Mayberry hit a 3-pointer with seconds left to send the game into overtime.

Arkansas won the game 103-96.

"I was right on the edge of getting a technical, and when I get to that point, it's time to get out," Richardson said. "I've told our players that if they take their practice to the game, they don't need a coach. I guess they proved me right."

Broyles issued a five-paragraph statement Monday in support of Richardson, in which he said the coach was within the rules by leaving early.

The game officials called no technical foul against Richardson for the early exit, but Ed Steitz, the NCAA's chief rules interpreter, said one should have been levied.

Steitz, in a telephone interview from his home at East Long Meadow, Mass., told an Austin, Texas broadcaster Monday night that a coach or team attendant may only leave the coach's box to point out a scorer's mistake or if a fight breaks out. Otherwise, he may leave only under an extreme emergency, such as a heart attack.

Steitz said Paul Galvan, the Southwest Conference's supervisor of men's basketball officials, had asked him for a clarification on the rule.

Steitz said Richardson's actions violated both the intent and spirit of the rules. He called Richardson's departure embarrassing for the coach, officials, the Southwest Conference and officiating as a profession.

Texas coach Tom Penders also said Richardson should have received a technical foul for walking onto the court before he left. "If what he did wasn't showing up the officials, then I've never seen anybody showed up," Penders said.

Broyles defended Richardson's action and complimented the team on winning the game.

La Salle star moves up scoring list

Associated Press

The "L Train" just keeps chugging along.

Lionel "L Train" Simmons' latest stop is 10th place on the NCAA career scoring list. The 6-foot-7 senior reached that station Monday night when he scored 26 points in leading No. 14 La Salle to its ninth straight victory, 72-59 over St. Peter's.

Simmons, with 2,845 points, passed Otis Birdsong, who scored 2,832 at Houston from 1973-77.

Simmons needs six points to pass Indiana State's Larry Bird for ninth place.

"I never expected to score this many points in my career," Simmons said. "Every high school player comes into college hoping to score 1,000 points in his career. I felt I was lucky to get 2,000, but I never even dreamed it would reach 3,000."

In other Top 25 games, it was No. 6 Syracuse 74, Seton Hall 65; No. 9 UNLV 105, San Jose State 69; No. 10 Purdue 67, Northwestern 60 and No. 11 LSU 86, Mississippi State 68.

Simmons scored eight points as La Salle (17-1, 8-0 Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference) took a 16-4 lead and never trailed. St. Peter's closed to 44-40 with 14:45 left but La Salle went on a 14-2 run and held the Peacocks scoreless for 5:51 to take a 58-42 lead.

"Our defense turned the game around tonight," Simmons said. "We have to get our defensive intensity up to a higher level and play hard for 40 minutes. When we get a lead we tend to let up. We have to develop more of a killer instinct."

St. Peter's coach Ted Fiore said: "We play a lot of people tough, and against La Salle we have a tendency to play pretty good defense and take away their strengths. But the one strength we can't take away is Lionel Simmons. He just takes over and controls the game."

No. 6 Syracuse 74, Seton Hall 65

Stephen Thompson scored 26 points and Syracuse made seven of 10 free throws over the final 2:23 to extend its dominance over the Pirates to 19 games. Syracuse (17-3, 7-3 Big East) won its fifth straight. Seton Hall hasn't beaten Syracuse since 1981.

Derrick Coleman added 19 points for Syracuse.

Anthony Avent, who led Seton Hall with 21 points, hit a layup with 3:25 left to pull the Pirates to within 63-58. Seton Hall began fouling a team that shoots only 64 percent at the line, but Coleman made three of four free throws and reserve Tony Scott hit four of six.

"We're getting more confidence down the stretch in close games," Thompson said. "They did that to us today and we came up and hit them when we needed them."

"It's just a matter of getting up there and sinking the shot," Scott added. "It's the type of thing that's catching. One guy makes them, then the next guy gets it in his head that he can make it."

Ironically, the Orangemen missed five straight free throws after taking a 57-43 lead with 11:29 to play. They also went four minutes without a field goal to let the Pirates back into the game.

"That's how you're supposed to be able to beat them," Seton Hall's Michael Cooper said. "But the guys we put on the line made their free throws. Over the last four years, every time we foul them it seems they make their shots. When they play against someone else, they struggle."

No. 9 UNLV 105, San Jose St. 69

Larry Johnson had 18 points and 16 rebounds and five teammates also scored in double figures. The Rebels (17-4, 10-1 Big West) opened a 22-point lead midway through the first half and widened the gap to 37 points late in the game with the regulars on the bench.

David Butler and Moses Scurry each added 17 points, Travis Bice had 13, Greg Anthony 11 and Anderson Hunt 10. Anthony also had nine assists. Johnson did his damage while playing only 22 minutes.

No. 10 Purdue 67, Northwestern 60

Stephen Scheffler scored 16 points, including the basket that broke a 59-59 tie. A basket by Tony Jones and four straight free throws by Woody Austin in the closing minute sealed the decision as Purdue (17-3, 9-1) rebounded from its only Big Ten loss, in its last outing against Michigan State.

Northwestern trailed by 11 points in the first half and nine in the second but rallied to go ahead 54-51 before Purdue mounted its own comeback.

"When it comes down to crunch time, everyone chips in," Purdue coach Gene Keady said. "It's the composure of our seniors. We have three seniors wearing two Big Ten championship rings. They understand what it takes."

Scheffler, who leads the nation in field goal percentage, hit all seven of his shots.

No. 11 LSU 86, Mississippi St. 68

LSU had lost five straight to Mississippi State but Stanley Roberts scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half to awaken the sluggish Tigers (17-4, 6-3 Southeastern Conference).

With Chris Jackson and Shaquille O'Neal both having off nights, Roberts picked up the slack along with Maurice Williamson, who scored 20 points. Jackson had 19, well below his average of 28 points a game, and hit only five of 19 shots. Cameron Burns led Mississippi State with 26 points.

Elsewhere:

— Temple's Mark Macon was held to nine points on 2-of-19 shooting, ending his streak of consecutive double-figure games at 29, but Donald Hodge scored 24 points to lead the Owls over St. Bonaventure 81-64.

— Ramon Williams scored 30 points as Virginia Military broke a 16-game, 26-year losing streak at William & Mary with an 86-66 victory while handing the Indians their 11th straight setback, the school's longest losing streak since the 1936-37 team dropped all 17 games.

Mojo's Hill receives award

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Odessa Permian wide receiver Lloyd Hill, considered one of the top recruits in the nation, was named the winner of the 28th Amarillo Chamber of Commerce Texas High School Outstanding Football Player Award announced Monday.

Hill joins such football greats as Tommy Kramer, Earl Campbell, Billy Sims, and Eric Dickerson as winners of the chamber award.

GAINES

But Hollingshead is not necessarliy a shoe-in for the job, considering Permian's reputation as one of the state's premier high school programs. Observers might expect a flood of job applications to land on Wilkins' desk.

"I'm not too sure about that. It's kind of like Miss America — she doesn't have many dates because people are afraid to ask her out," Wilkins said.

Gaines also denied speculation that all-state wide receiver Lloyd Hill, a two-way starter in Permian's title campaign, will be influenced by the the coach's move.

Hill is expected to officially announce his collegiate intentions next week, but reportedly has said he will attend Tech. Hill, who had been recruited by programs from across the nation, had formerly said he had narrowed his choices down to Tech, Texas and Baylor.

In the 19 years since his graduation from Angelo State, Gaines has held down head jobs at Petersburg (two years), Denver City (one year), Amarillo Tascosa (one year) and Monahans (three years). The Crane native has also worked as an assistant at Fort Stockton and Monahans.

Rick Dykes comes to Tech after serving as wide receivers coach last season at Temple. He also has been an assistant coach at Rice (1982-88). In another staff move Monday, the Tech head coach announced that graduate assistant coach Gary Butler will instruct tight ends in 1990.

CHAPS

"They just got dejected," Green said afterward. "(After halftime with Midland up 51-50) they were playing hard and everything was going their way. Then, bang, bang, we're up by a few. That just took the wind out of their sails."

A one-point lead against any team at halftime is not enough to play off of going into the final 20 minutes. A one point lead against Howard means nothing.

After 2½ minutes had elapsed in the second half, Howard overcame the small deficit and had taken a 60-57 lead when Franklin called a timeout, a break which had little effect mentally on the Chaps.

Over the next five minutes, the Hawks went on a 21-7 run and took full control of the game with an 81-64 advantage and just under 13 minutes left.

A series of turnovers by Midland and successful full-court pressure applied by Howard and the Hawks continued to roll, disallowing Midland from again pulling close. With eight minutes remaining, Howard led 101-78 — a 23 point advantage, their widest of the evening.

Chap forward Tim Owens led all scorers with an impressive 39 points, his high point game of the season. Fred Campbell also secured his high point total of the year with 19 and Gym Bice scored an additional 18.

Six Hawks were in double figures, led by Terrence Lewis' 29 points; Greg Christian had 26, and Johnny McDowell, a dominating defensive threat, had 20 points and 11 rebounds.

"I wanted to keep it like 51-50 at halftime," Franklin said. "Keep it in the 80s ... I didn't want to get up into the 90s. I talked to them before the game (Sunday) and said they had to keep Terrence at 18 or 20 (points). And I told them we had to control McDowell on the boards."

As a team, Howard out-rebounded Midland 49-33, grabbing 28 defensive boards compared with 13 offensively for Midland.

On offense, Howard put up an incredible 93 shots from the field, a number worthy of a Loyola-Marymount or the NBA Denver Nuggets. The Hawks converted on 51 of those shots for almost 55 percent. The Chaps also put up high numbers from the field, converting 41-of-77 for 53 percent.

Bice had 10 of the Chaps' 23 assists as the freshman from Andrews dished off some nifty no-look, behind-the-back passes.

"I knew it was going to be an emotional game," Franklin said. "Our guys didn't keep up with the game plan the way I wanted."

Franklin said the Howard press was just like the one applied by Western Texas last Thursday when the Chaps effectively tore through for a win.

"It's the same press everybody uses," Franklin said. "We can score on it."

Green said Howard "tried to take (the Chaps) out of their half-court game, go to the zone press and make them run down and hit shots. And they didn't (hit those shots.)"

Howard's depth off the bench was another telling factor. Three Hawks had amassed three fouls by halftime, but it didn't effect the visitors in the least.

"It hasn't (bothered us) all year long," Green said. "We've got people on our bench as good as McDowell."

Green reiterated that his team is worthy of its national ranking, adding that it's not necessarily a reflection on Howard, but on the talent the conference possess, almost from top to bottom.

CHAP NOTES: South Plains defeated New Mexico Military, 103-72; Frank Phillips visited New Mexico JC, and Clarendon hosted Western Texas; Odessa College was idle ... Midland College leads the all-time series against Howard with 20 wins in 30 tries; the Hawks, though, have won both this season ... Midland hosts South Plains Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Chap Center. The Chaps will try to avenge an earlier 84-58 loss to the Texans. MC won the first meeting of the year against SPC, 86-72, in the consolation final of the 1989 Chap Classic ... Thursday's game will be carried live on KCRS (550 AM).

Sixers' Barkley dodges all stars

NBA Roundup

Associated Press

All of the Philadelphia 76ers are playing like All-Stars right now. That includes injured Charles Barkley, who will be the team's only representative in the All-Star Game — like it or not.

The 76ers extended the NBA's longest winning streak of the season to 12 games Monday night, beating the Utah Jazz 114-89.

Barkley, nursing a strained leg muscle, scored 16 points in 27 minutes. He wanted to pass up Sunday's All-Star Game at Miami to rest, but says the league pressured him into playing.

"They gave me a play-or-else deal. They said I would be suspended next week if I play this week and miss the game," Barkley said. "Obviously, I don't agree with them, but I've got to go."

In other games, Seattle got past Charlotte 101-100, New York beat Miami 116-107, Washington topped Golden State 135-129 and Cleveland defeated the Los Angeles Clippers 100-84.

Hersey Hawkins scored 20 points for Philadelphia and Johnny Dawkins added 16. The 76ers have been particularly successful with their Hawkins-Dawkins backcourt.

"It seems like I know where Johnny is going to be, and he knows where I'm going," Hawkins said. "It seems like that's been happening all during this streak, and I hope it keeps up."

So does Dawkins.

"It certainly is a good feeling," he said. "It's also something that you feel you have to protect like it's the most valuable thing in the world."

Philadelphia scored the last 14 points of the first quarter for a 35-21 lead. The 76ers were ahead 60-43 at halftime and used a 16-2 burst to make it 90-59 after three quarters.

Karl Malone had 29 points and Blue Edwards 14 for Utah, which lost for only the third time in 14 games.

"They were as alive as we've seen anybody else play," Jazz coach Jerry Sloan said of the Sixers. "They've got good shooters and good post-up people."

SuperSonics 101, Hornets 100

Olden Polynice broke a 98-all tie with a foul shot, then scored on a tip-in with 31 seconds left as Seattle handed Charlotte its eighth straight loss.

The SuperSonics won their third consecutive road game after 12 straight losses. The Hornets have lost seven in a row at home and 14 of 15 overall.

Knicks 116, Heat 107

Patrick Ewing scored 24 points and blocked a career-high nine shots as New York improved to 20-2 at home. Charles Oakley added 24 points for the Knicks, who took the lead for good in the second quarter.

Ewing and Oakley finished with 11 rebounds apiece for the Knicks, and Mark Jackson had 21 points and 12 assists.

Rony Seikaly had 22 points and 14 rebounds for Miami, which is 5-20 on the road. Sherman Douglas added 19 points for the Heat.

Bullets 135, Warriors 129

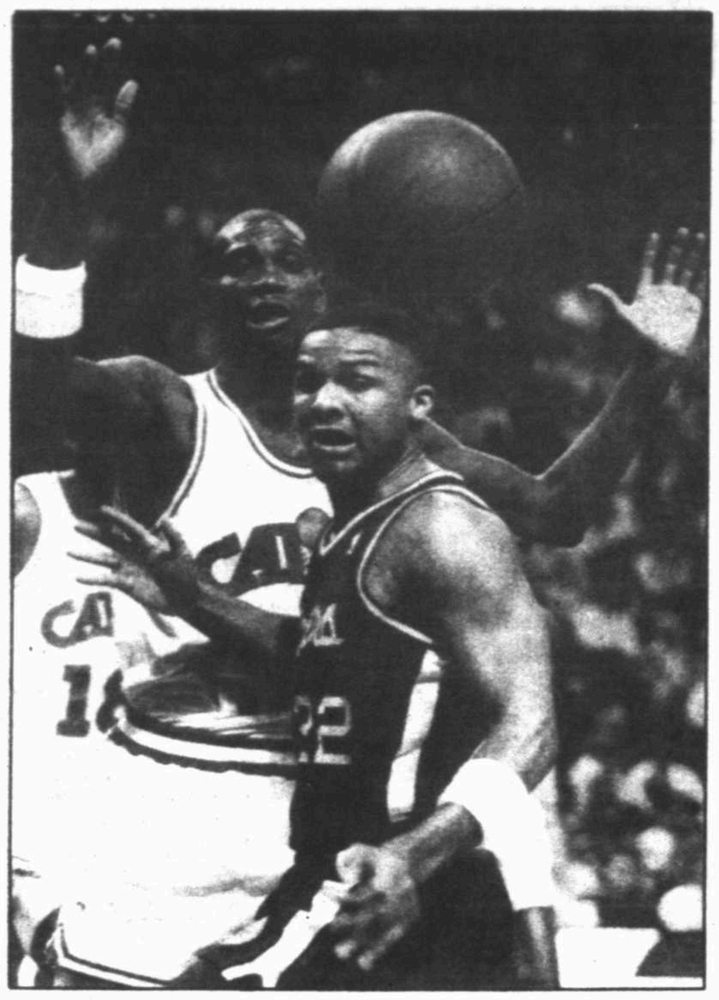

Bernard King got 30 points, Ledell Eackles had 29 and Jeff Malone 28 in Washington's highest-scoring game of the season. Darrell Walker had 15 points, 15 rebounds and 10 assists for the host Bullets, who had lost 14 of their last 17 games.

Cavaliers 100, Clippers 84

Mark Price scored 20 points to lead seven Cleveland players in double figures. The host Cavaliers won for the fourth time in five games and sent Los Angeles to its seventh loss in nine games.

Cleveland, leading 45-43, used a 16-2 burst early in the third quarter to break it open. The Clippers later got within eight points, but no closer.

Craig Ehlo added 16 points for the Cavaliers.

Huskies rise to No. 8

College Poll

Associated Press

Count Coach Jim Calhoun among those surprised by Connecticut's success this season.

The Huskies continued their three-week climb in The Associated Press college basketball poll on Monday, reaching their highest ranking ever, No. 8.

"I anticipated that we were going to be a good basketball team, but did I believe that we would be ranked eighth in the country this late in the season? I'd have to say no," Calhoun said.

Connecticut (19-3) debuted in the rankings on Jan. 22 at No. 20 after knocking off Syracuse and Georgetown the previous week. This week, the Huskies moved up from No. 13.

Connecticut, lightly regarded in the Big East before the season started, is now tied for the conference lead with No. 5 Georgetown. The Huskies play Fairfield tonight and travel to No. 6 Syracuse on Saturday.

"When people look at what we've done ... nine straight wins and victories over Georgetown and Syracuse, I think our ranking is justified," Calhoun said. "It's a nice tribute to our kids and how the team is playing right now."

Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas stayed in the top three spots in this week's rankings. Missouri (21-1) received 58 first-place votes and 1,617 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters while Kansas got the other seven first-place votes and 1,561 points.

Missouri is No. 1 for the third straight week after knocking Kansas (22-1) from its two-week hold on that position. The teams meet again next Tuesday at Kansas.

Arkansas (19-2), which won a wild overtime game at Texas on Sunday to stay unbeaten in the Southwest Conference, remained third with 1,438 points.

Duke, Georgetown and Syracuse each improved one place from last week after Michigan fell from fourth to seventh with a loss to Purdue.

Duke (18-3), the leader in the Atlantic Coast Conference, beat Clemson and Notre Dame last week and had 1,364 points, 27 more than Georgetown. The Hoyas (17-2) won two conference games last week to stay even with Connecticut, while Syracuse (16-3) stayed one game behind them and received 1,281 points.

Michigan (16-4) rebounded from the loss to Purdue with a victory over Wisconsin and the Wolverines finished with 1,113 points, 40 more than Connecticut.

UNLV (16-4) was ninth with 1,061 points and Purdue (16-3), which lost to Michigan State after beating Michigan, rounded out the Top Ten with 1,013 points.

Louisiana State, 14th last week, led the Second Ten with 940 points and was followed by Illinois, Oklahoma, La Salle, Louisville, Georgia Tech, Minnesota, Oregon State, UCLA and Loyola Marymount.

Xavier, Ohio started the final five and was followed by Arizona, Michigan State, St. John's and Indiana.

Michigan State (17-5), which had been ranked 25th for two weeks earlier in the season, returned to the Top 25 with victories over Minnesota and Purdue. The Spartans are tied with Michigan and Minnesota at 6-3 in the Big Ten, two games behind Purdue.

North Carolina (15-7) again dropped from the rankings after sustaining its worst loss in 26 years, 102-75 to Georgia Tech. The Tar Heels were seventh in the preseason poll and had fallen from the rankings for six of seven weeks before coming back last week at No. 25.

St. John's held in at No. 24, falling six spots after losing Big East games last week to Syracuse and Georgetown.

Notre Dame inks television contract with NBC

By BILL CARTER
N.Y. Times News Service

Breaking ranks with other major schools, the University of Notre Dame announced a five-year television deal with NBC Monday, granting the network the exclusive right to broadcast all its football games played at its home stadium.

No financial terms were disclosed by NBC or Notre Dame.

But a television sports executive estimated that the deal provided for payments of $2.5 million a game, or a total of about $75 million over five years.

The contract begins with the 1991 season.

The deal means that Notre Dame, the strongest television attraction in college football, has decided to go its own way, separating itself from the College Football Association, which it helped to found in 1976.

The association was formed by 66 large universities because they were dissatisfied with the way the National Collegiate Athletic Association was administering major-college football.

The group wanted to secure for its members the bulk of television revenue for football broadcasts.

Sixty-four universities participate in the television pool.

In deciding to strike a deal on its own, Notre Dame said it wanted to obtain the most revenue possible from its football games in order to increase financial aid for students.

That concern was of "paramount importance," the university said.

Notre Dame officials also said they were determined to secure the widest national exposure possible for their football team.

ABC, which last month agreed to pay $210 million for the right to broadcast the football games of the College Football Association for five years, will no longer be able to carry any of the six games played at Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind.

ABC will still have the rights to broadcast Notre Dame games played on the home fields of opponents that belong to the College Football Association.

Complaining bitterly about Notre Dame's decision, ABC said it would consider "all remedies" against NBC, hinting at legal action.

ABC said the College Football Association's television board had voted unanimously to accept the ABC deal and that the Rev. E. William Beauchamp, executive vice president of Notre Dame, was a member of the board.

But Dick Rosenthal, the Notre Dame athletic director, said the university had engaged in "nothing but the highest form of business ethics" in making its deal with NBC.

Dick Ebersol, the president of NBC Sports, said the network was confident that it was entirely within its legal rights in signing Notre Dame.

Rosenthal said Notre Dame had never agreed to accept the new television deal between the football association and ABC and had not signed the consent agreement that the football association sent to each member.

Dave Ogrean, assistant executive director of the association, confirmed that Notre Dame had not signed the consent form.

NBC said it would not seek to add other colleges to its Notre Dame package.

But Ebersol did not rule out the possibility of signing other universities.

"We did not contact Notre Dame," Ebersol said. "We will not contact other schools about football. We're going to sit back and and examine our options over the next several weeks."

At least two other schools, the University of Pittsburgh and Syracuse University, have not yet signed the association's consent form. Ogrean said he expected that they would.

Sam Jankovich, athletic director at the University of Miami, said he would not rule out a similar plan for the television rights of the Hurricanes, the 1989 national champions.

"Miami did approve the latest television agreement that was proposed by the CFA with ABC, but we have not signed off officially on this proposal," Jankovich said.

"At this point, we're going to have to take a step back and assess today's developments. We will have to look at how the CFA's plan might be accepted and then determine what impact it would have on the University of Miami."

The College Football Association controlled the television rights to Notre Dame home games during the five-year contract with CBS, which expires after the 1990 season.

Ogrean said he was "surprised and disappointed" by Notre Dame's announcement.

Rosenthal of Notre Dame said the university acted independently because under the new ABC contract fewer of its games would be seen nationally.

He said the university wanted a uniform starting time on Saturdays at 1:30 p.m. Eastern time, which the NBC deal would provide.

In order to accommodate network and cable schedules, many football games are scheduled in the late afternoon or at night.

Judge denies NFL request

NEW YORK (AP) — An NFL request for an injunction prohibiting individual players from filing lawsuits against the league's free agency restrictions has been denied by U.S. District Court Judge David S. Doty, sitting in Minneapolis.

"NFL management has been promising the clubs that there was no need to worry about legal challenges by free agents this year. Obviously, they were wrong," Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL PLayers Association, said of Monday's decision.

Last week, 274 players whose contracts expired became free agents, subject to first refusal by their former clubs. In addition, some 490 players who were not among the 37 players each club was allowed to protect under Plan B have until April 1 to sign with another team without compensation to their old team.

Doty also formally dismissed requests by the NFLPA to end the NFL's first refusal-compensation system, the college draft and player contracts.

Williams plans horizontal drilling

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

PEARSALL, Texas — Clayton W. Williams Jr. today announced the start of a massive horizontal drilling program of 150 wells in the Pearsall field of South Texas.

Williams called the horizontal drilling play in the Austin Chalk formation the most exciting thing to happen to Texas in a decade.

"This is a genuine oil and gas boom like the old days that will pull Texas back up," said Williams.

Williams, who has acquired 64,000 acres of oil and gas leases in the field, is expected to be one of the top horizontal drilling companies in the Austin Chalk, according to John Brose, operations manager for Clayton W. Williams Jr. Inc.

Williams said he will drill the 150 wells over a three-year period and that, depending on further lease acquisitions, may drill more wells. He now has two rigs running in the field and expects to have five drilling by this summer. Each rig will drill about 25 to 40 wells per year, said Brose.

Wells in the field are currently being completed in 25 to 30 days and some have been completed for as much as 6,000 barrels of oil per day.

"This is the kind of oil play that tempted me go back into debt," said Williams.

The prolific wells are the result of drilling horizontally across oil-rich fractures in the field.

"Wells don't normally sustain these high production rates," said Williams. "They will come on strong then blow off quickly to 500 barrels or so. But 500 barrels per day is still a heck of a good well."

Most of the wells in the Pearsall field are now classified as marginal, with many producing only five barrels per day.

Williams explained that his company becamed interested in horizontal drilling play in August of 1989 when Oryx applied to the Texas Railroad Commission for an exemption to production allowable rules for the field, and was leasing by September of 1989.

"This is a quick-developing play that waits on no one," said Tom Moore, president of Clayton W. Williams Jr. Inc. "Many of the majors hesitated and got left out of the play."

Moore explained that most of the acreage in the trend has already been leased, and added that leases which were selling for $10 acre a year ago were now going for as much as $400 an acre.

"I consider this the most exciting thing that has happened since I have been working for Clayton Williams," said Jamie Winkle, president of the Williams Companies.

He explained that there would probably be many applications for the horizontal drilling technique in the Permian Basin.

MBCE opens resource operation

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

After months of planning and gathering materials, the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs is ready to open its Business Resource Center.

Robbyne Fuller, president, said at Monday's monthly meeting the center will open Saturday at the chamber's office, 2707 N. Big Spring. The opening coincides with the chamber's fourth anniversary. This anniversary will be celebrated with a party from 5 to 8 p.m. at the offices.

She also announced that Board Member Henry Hammons of Chevron has resigned from the board because he is relocating to San Francisco. She said Chevron was a valued corporate member and will be asked to submit names for consideration as his replacement.

Not only is the chamber celebrating its fourth anniversary in February, the chamber celebrates Black History Month with a number of projects.

A first time project is conducted at Lee Freshman School, reports MBCE Vice President James Fuller.

According to Fuller, the chamber is working with Leonard Monroe, chairman of social studies. Members visit classes and discuss the "New Deal Era" and various contributions made by Afro-americans. Topics in-

Bush paints rosy economic picture

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today the United States is in "excellent economic health" and will experience "strong, sustained economic growth" for the foreseeable future.

Bush offered the rosy assessment in the first annual economic report he has submitted. A summary of the message was released at the White House after Bush signed the document at an Oval Office ceremony.

The report broadly spells out the economic principles that Bush said will guide his administration.

After dispatching the report to Congress, Bush left on a three-day trip to the West in an effort to boost public support for his $292 billion defense budget amid demands from Democrats for steep spending cuts.

In his report, Bush said, "Our excellent economic health will allow us to build on the successes of the 1980s as we prepare for the next century.

"I am confident that the United States can enjoy strong, sustained economic growth and use the fruits of that growth to raise living standards, solve longstanding problems, deal with new challenges and make the most of new opportunities," Bush said.

The president said that since the end of the 1981-82 recession, the United States has experienced the longest peacetime economic expansion in history, with the creation of 20 million new jobs.

"The containment of inflation during this long economic expansion is a milestone in postwar U.S. history," the summary said.

"Despite our successes," Bush said, "we cannot be satisfied with simply sustaining the strong record of the 1980s. We must improve on that record, deal with inherited problems and meet the new challenges and seize the new opportunities before us."

He said his primary goal was "to achieve the highest possible rate of sustainable economic growth."

Bush pledged to try to reduce government borrowing by slowing the growth of federal spending. He said economic growth would raise revenue to balance the budget and then reduce the national debt.

He also said he would support "a credible, systematic monetary policy program that sustains maximum economic growth while controlling and reducing inflation."

In addition, Bush promised to remove federal barriers to investment, saving and innovation and work to "avoid unnecessary regulation."

The president said the United States would "continue to lead the world to freer trade and more open markets, and to support market-oriented reforms around the world."

Productivity increases in 1989

WASHINGTON (AP) — The productivity of American workers increased at 0.9 percent last year in the smallest gain since 1982, while unit labor costs, a major inflation measure for business, shot up 4.6 percent, the government said Monday.

For the October-through-December quarter, non-farm productivity rose a barely perceptible 0.2 percent, the Labor Department said. Productivity rose 2.0 percent overall in 1988.

Meanwhile, unit labor costs, a key determinant of future price inflation, shot up 6.7 percent for the quarter and 4.6 percent for the year. Those costs, which reflect changes in hourly compensation as well as changes in productivity, rose by 2.7 percent in 1988.

"What it says is that business in general got less productive in the fourth quarter while labor costs increased. That's a recipe for trouble," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Co. "It's also distinctly characteristic of an economy when it reaches the end of expansion."

Increased productivity, or getting each worker to produce more for each hour he or she works, is crucial to economic growth without inflation, especially given the current squeeze in the labor market. It also is considered a key to America's competitiveness with Japan and other economic powers.

"Productivity gains have been anemic for several years. It means that our standard of living isn't increasing anymore," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm.

American to announce expansion

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Published reports say American Airlines will announce today a multimillion-dollar expansion of terminal facilities on the east side of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Sources told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the airline's interim solution to growth at the airport is expected to cost at least $200 million and perhaps as much as $250 million.

American, under the plans outlined earlier, will probably widen its terminal concourse in the airport's Terminal 2E, construct a satellite facility for its American Eagle commuter airline operations and build a new parking garage outside the terminal.

When the expansion was outlined in late December, company officials estimated it would cost at least $50 million.

"You can't buy anything in the airline business for $50 million," Robert L. Crandall, American chairman, told the Dallas Times Herald last week. "That's a down payment."

A news conference was scheduled at 10:30 a.m. by Dallas-Fort Worth airport's largest tenant.

The airline says its plans to build a terminal on the airport's west side, at an estimated cost of more than $1.2 billion, have been shelved until the facility's officials commit to build two new runways that American says are essential to justify the project.

Sources told the Star-Telegram that about $170 million of American's funds would go into terminal-area facilities that will serve the carrier for perhaps as few as six years before being abandoned to make room for a new terminal for rival Delta Air Lines.

BankAmerica names new chairman

N.Y. Times News Service

Rosenberg

SAN FRANCISCO — BankAmerica Corp. embarked on a new era by naming a successor to two-time chief executive A.W. (Tom) Clausen and boosting its meager dividend.

Vice chairman Richard Rosenberg, long considered the heir apparent, will replace Clausen, 66, at the end of the May 24 annual meeting. The bank also increased its common stock dividend to 25 cents per share, up from the 15 cents per share paid in the last quarter.

The dual announcements on Monday mark the end of a tumultuous decade — the rise, the fall and then the resurrection of the state's largest bank. Both moves were expected, particularly after the company reported record 1989 profits of $1.1 billion.

Under Rosenberg, one of a cadre of former Wells Fargo executives recruited to revive BofA, the bank is likely to continue to expand its dominant position in California and to expand aggressively in Washington, Oregon and Nevada.

In announcing his forthcoming retirement, Clausen said: "The job I was called back to do, and which I came back to do, is done. The recovery has been accomplished. The turnaround has been completed."

During Clausen's second reign, BofA bounced back from losses of almost $2 billion from 1985 to 1987 by laying off almost 9,000 employees, eliminating its dividend and selling off such prized properties as its 555 California headquarters tower and its Charles Schwab discount brokerage subsidiary.

It also stayed independent, thwarting a takeover attempt by rival First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles.

Clausen said there had never been any doubt about Rosenberg being chosen as his successor.

"There was no debate. He has the most experience and runs the largest part of the bank. The choice was obvious," he said. "If you lined up 20 people in the bank and asked them who should succeed Clausen, they'd all say Rosenberg."

Oil futures sag on technical factors

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude oil futures declined 5 cents per barrel this morning from Monday's close, resting at $22.34.

On Monday, energy futures prices sagged mainly on technical factors with little news to buoy the market, analysts said.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the March contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, dropped 63 cents to $22.39 a 42-gallon barrel after a gain of 32 cents Friday.

Contracts for later delivery declined 58 cents to 51 cents a barrel.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, the March contract for No. 2 heating oil, which jumped 1.52 cents Friday, tumbled 2.31 cents to end at 55.95 cents a gallon. Contracts for delivery through 1990 closed down from 2 cents to 1.24 cents.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for March delivery finished off 1.82 cents at 62.40 cents a gallon. Other contracts closed with losses of 2 cents to 1.65 cents.

Analysts attributed the days losses mainly to technical factors and to selling ahead of Tuesday's inventory report by the American Petroleum Institute.

"There wasn't any news driving the market today," said Jack Unger, energy broker for Merrill Lynch Energy Futures. "Some people might be getting out before the APIs."

Unger said heavy waves of selling by large commodities brokers knocked prices lower in spurts throughout the trading session.

"It made buyers skittish," Unger said.

Randall Rothenberg, futures trader with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said expectations of warmer weather also helped depress prices.

Dollar falls in nervous trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against other major currencies in nervous European trading today.

Gold prices were also lower.

Dealers said European markets were active following Monday's dollar sell-off in New York.

The market sold dollars and bought West Germany marks in response to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposal to end the Communists' monopoly on power in his country.

EXCHANGE RATES

- 1.6591 West German marks
- 1.4736 Swiss francs
- 5.6380 French francs
- 1.8750 Dutch guilders
- 1,231.50 Italian lire
- 1.1865 Canadian dollars

The prospect of further democratization in the Soviet Union fueled expectations that last year's political changes in Eastern Europe are irreversible and will stimulate West German growth.

Although the dollar remains highly sensitive to Soviet political developments, a Milan trader said the currency was close to bottoming out.

"U.S. interest rates are holding steady and I don't see great possibilities for the dollar to drop much further," he said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell 0.70 yen to a closing 144.90 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a lower rate of 144.52 yen.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.7040 to buy one pound, compared with $1.6980 late Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $421.20 a troy ounce, down from $423.25 bid late Monday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $421.40.

In Zurich, the bid price was $421.25, down from $423.00 bid late Monday.

Gold in Hong Kong rose $2.61 to close at a bid $419.47.

Silver fell in London to a bid price of $5.33 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $5.37.

Stocks gain ground in slow trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained more ground Monday, but its modest advance came in the slowest trading of the new year amid worries that interest rates are headed higher.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 16.44 points on Friday, added another 19.82 points to close at 2,622.52. It was the third increase in the market's best-known indicator in the past four sessions.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 838 up, 646 down and 490 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 130.95 million shares, down from 164.40 million in the previous session. That was the lowest trading volume since 128.03 million shares on Dec. 28, 1989.

Prices of blue-chip stocks moved into the plus column early in the session, and held onto tiny gains for most of the day, extending their advance with a spurt in the final hour of trading.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Government offers Milken a deal

NEW YORK (AP) — The government reportedly has offered Michael Milken the opportunity to plead guilty to six felonies and avoid a new indictment, lengthy trial and possible conviction on dozens more charges.

But individuals close to the case said Monday there was no indication Milken would accept or even was considering a plea deal and noted that talks between opposing sides are common in complex federal cases. Milken was indicted last March on 98 counts of fraud and racketeering.

GM boosts stock dividend

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has boosted its Class E stock dividend by 17 percent and split the stock 2-for-1 because of growth in non-GM computer business at the automaker's Electronic Data Systems Corp. subsidiary.

The company's board of directors also said Monday it was maintaining dividends on GM's regular common stock, keyed to the company's vehicle-making and marketing business, and on its Class H stock, which is related to the GM Hughes Electronics Corp. subsidiary.

RJR Nabisco reports losses for 1989

NEW YORK (AP) — RJR Nabisco Holdings Corp. reported losses for the fourth quarter and all of 1989, reflecting the cost of its record $24.5 billion buyout by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. a year ago.

The consumer products giant, the former RJR Nabisco Inc. that was taken private in a deal finalized in February 1989, said Monday it lost $144 million during the three months ended Dec. 31, compared with a $411 million profit in the 1988 quarter. Sales were unchanged at $3.54 billion.

For the year, RJR Nabisco lost $1.5 billion and had sales of $12.76 billion, compared with a $1.4 billion profit on $12.64 billion in sales in 1988.

Stock Market Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — Interest rate worries drove the stock market broadly lower today, as investors waited to see how the first leg of a three-stage Treasury securities auction goes.

Trading activity was moderate, picking up the pace from Monday which was the slowest trading day of the new year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 19.82 points on Monday, was down 23.42 at 2,599.10 at noon on Wall Street.

Declining issues outpaced gainers by a margin of 9 to 4 among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange, with 408 up, 921 down and 490 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 66.70 million shares at noon EST compared with 59.12 million shares at the same point Monday.

Stock prices have risen in three of the past four sessions after sinking for most of the month of January.

But the prospect of rising interest rates has limited the price gains, making yields on short-term Treasury securities more competitive with those available on stocks and dimming chances for corporate earnings growth.

In the credit markets today, rates edged up on six-month Treasury bills while yields on 30-year Treasury bonds rose to the 8.57 percent level from 8.53 percent late Monday.

The financial community has been focused in recent days on the Treasury's impending auction of $30 billion in new securities. That auction begins later today with the sale of $10 billion in three-year notes.

The three-year note sale will be followed by a $10 billion auction of 10-year notes on Wednesday and the sale of $10 billion in 30-year bonds on Thursday.

Among the active issues on the NYSE, Pan Am was up ⅛ at 3⅜, Bank of New England was up ½ at 6¼ and IBM was up ⅛ at 99¾.

American Telephone & Telegraph fell ⅝ to 39⅜, Philip Morris was down ½ at 38⅜ and General Electric was unchanged at 61¾.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Brokerages don't sell CDs

By BILL DOYLE

Q. When my wife and I bought a certificate of deposit at our bank we were told it could be made out in beneficiary form, in case both of us die at the same time. The CD was already in joint names. It was explained this would pass the proceeds to the beneficiary, without going through probate. This we did.

That CD matured recently and we bought two other CDs through an investment firm. We inquired about having those CDs in beneficiary form and got a different story. We were told the CD proceeds would go under the provisions of our wills.

It doesn't make sense that the beneficiary provision would apply in one case and not the other. What gives?

A. You received wrong information at the "investment firm," which I assume is a securities brokerage house.

Doyle

Brokerages do not issue CDs. Instead, they sell CDs for banks and savings and loan associations. Nonetheless, brokers should learn the details of what they peddle.

All CDs can be in beneficiary form — "payable on death" (of the owner or joint owners) to the named beneficiary. That does remove the proceeds from the probate process. The beneficiary becomes the owner of the CD and can cash it, even if the beneficiary is not named in the dead CD owner's will. CDs and other things in beneficiary form pass outside the will.

However, this does not — repeat, NOT — mean things in beneficiary form automatically escape death taxes. If what you leave is large enough to be subject to federal estate tax or state inheritance and/or estate tax, those CDs will be included in calculating those levies.

Q. The bank in which we have monies does not handle foreign accounts. Are there any banks in this area that do?

A. The outpourings of this word processor appear coast to coast. So I can't localize replies. However, your bank should be able to make arrangements for whatever foreign account business you want to transact.

Every bank, no matter how small, has a correspondent relationship with a big city "money center" bank. The large correspondent bank handles many chores, including foreign account transactions, for the small bank.

Go back to your bank and explain what foreign account business you want to do. Unless you have money laundering or some other nefarious scheme in mind, your bank should be happy to accommodate you.

Q. I became 70 years old in May 1989. Do I have to take money out of the individual retirement accounts I have at two banks? I don't need the money and the banks said I do not have to withdraw it.

A. You are required to make your first IRA withdrawal by April 1 following the year in which you reach age 701/2. You passed that milestone in November and must make the required withdrawal by this coming April 1. If you don't, you will be hit with a tax equal to 50 percent of the amount you should have taken out of your IRAs.

It seems you asked the wrong person at your bank. Next time ask for the bank officer in charge of retirement accounts. And get Publication 590 from your nearest Internal Revenue Service office for IRA details. Tables on Pages 25 through 28 show what percentage of your IRAs you are required to withdraw each year, based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary.

Q. After my husband and I pass away, will our children have to pay tax on what we leave? We have over $100,000.

A. You'll have to leave a great deal more than that before there is any federal estate tax, which starts at $600,000.

Whether of not there will be any state tax depends on the statutes of your state. All states except Nevada have estate and/or inheritance taxes. There's not enough space in this column to print all those rules and the point at what level state death taxes start.

U.S. auto sales rise 3.2 percent in January

By PAUL C. JUDGE
N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — Helped by fat rebates that enticed buyers back to showrooms they had avoided for several weeks, sales of cars and light trucks rose 3.2 percent in January, despite a relatively poor showing in the last 10 days of the month.

In late January, sales of domestically produced cars fell 6.5 percent. Sales of American-made light trucks rose 8 percent in the same period.

"It appears the worst of the low sales rates are behind now and the inventory situation is much improved," said Harvey Heinbach, an auto industry analyst with Merrill Lynch & Company.

Cars made in the United States sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.9 million in late January, compared with 6.8 million in mid-January and 8.1 million in the first 10 days of the month.

For the month, the seasonally adjusted annual rate was 7.5 million units, compared with 6.9 million a year ago.

In January, the Japanese auto makers who build vehicles in the United States continued to add customers, eroding the market share of the Big Three domestic producers.

In particular, Toyota Motor Corp. and Honda Motor Co. are gaining market share almost as quickly as they can produce cars in this country.

Honda of America's car sales jumped 18.6 percent last month, while Toyota's car and light truck sales rose 13.2 percent.

In January, the share of the American market claimed by the Japanese auto makers who build cars in the United States, known as "transplants," totaled 12.9 percent. That compares with a total share of 8.6 percent a year earlier.

Despite the gains of the transplant companies, the January results were mixed.

Among the Japanese producers, Nissan Motor Co. lagged, with United States sales of its domestically made cars falling 35 percent and light truck sales dropping 41.5 percent.

Chrysler Corp.'s sales increased 14.7 percent, as a stampede of buyers took advantage of rebates on its popular mini-vans, offseting lackluster sales of passenger cars.

And strong sales of light trucks during the month helped General Motors Corp. post a gain of 5.3 percent in overall vehicle sales.

In January, the Big Three car makers idled 38 of 67 plants in the United States and Canada, most of them for a week or two.

As a consequence, they produced just half as many vehicles in January as they had a year earlier.

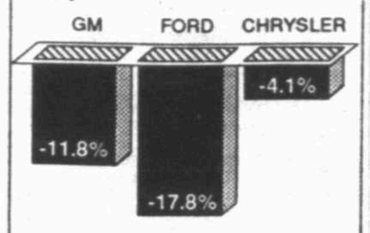

G.M. sold 398,542 cars and light trucks in January, an increase of 5.3 percent. Light-truck sales rose 9.7 percent, to 134,629, while car sales increased 3.2 percent, to 263,913.

Ford Motor Co. sold 5.3 percent fewer cars and light trucks in January compared with a year earlier. Car sales fell 8.1 percent, to 165,764, and light truck sales dropped 1 percent, to 110,906.

Chrysler's overall sales increased 14.7 percent, helped by a 39 percent increase in sales of light trucks, including mini-vans, to 105,168. Chrysler's car sales slumped by 6.2 percent.

SEC probes Simmons' bid for two companies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billionaire investor Harold C. Simmons says the Securities and Exchange Commission is looking into his acquisitions of Lockheed Corp. and Georgia Gulf Corp. stock.

In a filing with the SEC on Monday, Simmons-controlled companies stated that the probe apparently centered on the timing of their filing of public disclosure documents regarding acquisition of the stock.

But Simmons pooh-poohed it all as a routine probe with which he was cooperating.

Simmons said he expected the government's questions to center on whether he intended to mount a takeover of Lockheed from the time he acquired a major interest in the company last April.

On Monday, Simmons launched a $1.1 billion takeover bid for Georgia Gulf and said he planned to dup the Atlanta chemical concern's board.

On Friday, he said he might seek control of Lockheed's board of directors after the Calabasas, Calif.-based defense contractor rebuffed his bid for representation on the board.

In Monday's public filing, Simmons stated the SEC "is conducting a private investigation regarding trading in certain securities" of Lockheed and an undisclosed second company.

Simmons' SEC filing said the agency had issued subpoenas requesting documents and testimony.

SEC spokeswoman Mary McCue declined comment.

In an interview with the Associated Press in Dallas confirmed that the second company was Georgia Gulf.

"I'm primarily the one being investigated," Simmons said.

"We've always filed those (disclosure documents) promptly and told exactly what we knew at the time," he said. "We think this is routine and we think nothing will come of it."

According to the filing, the Simmons-controlled companies that have acquired Lockheed stock — 18.9 percent as of Friday — said the investigation focused primarily on "the adequacy of disclosures in statements" to the SEC and "the timeliness of such filings."

Those filings, SEC forms known as 13-Ds, require an individual or entity to publicly disclose their stockholdings in a company with 10 days after those holdings total 5 percent or more of the company's outstanding shares.

Sears net up sharply in fourth quarter

By ERIC N. BERG
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — Sears, Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, Monday reported a sharp increase in fourth-quarter net income. But after adjusting for one-time charges that depressed 1988 results, operating income for the fourth quarter was up only 1.4 percent.

The uninspiring increase, despite strong results from the Dean Witter Reynolds brokerage subsidiary and the Discover charge card operations, seemed to demonstrate that Sears has not yet proved that it can turn around its troubled retailing operations, some stock analysts on Wall Street said.

These analysts acknowledged that the retailing results were clouded by a general slowdown in durable-goods sales.

Sears's stock closed Monday at $39, up 62.5 cents, on the New York Stock Exchange. Some analysts said that the showing reflected the strong performance by Dean Witter.

"School is still out in making a fair judgment on their progress, as the durable-goods sector remains under pressure," said Samuel Liss, the retailing analyst at Salomon Brothers Inc.

In the fourth quarter, Sears reported net income of $602.1 million, or $1.76 a share, compared with $117.4 million, or 32 cents a share, in the quarter in 1988.

After subtracting a $712.4 million charge that Sears incurred in 1988's fourth quarter to overhaul its retail group in preparation for an everyday low-price policy, operating income rose to $817.7 million, from $806.3 million.

Companywide revenues rose 4.1 percent, to $15.2 billion in the quarter, from $14.6 billion, and operating expenses, structural changes aside, rose 4.4 percent, to $14.4 billion from $13.8 billion.

For the year, Sears reported net income of $1.51 billion, or $4.30 a share, up from $1.45 billion, or $3.84 a share, in 1988.

Revenue rose 7.1 percent, to a record $53.79 billion, from $50.25 billion a year earlier.

Sears's merchandising group continued to turn in a mixed performance. For the quarter, revenues rose less than 1 percent, to $9.6 billion from $9.5 billion.

For the year, merchandising revenues rose 4.4 percent, to $31.6 billion from $30.26 billion.

clude contributions to the arts, of Delta Sigma Theta, corporate professionals, lawyers, educators and entrepreneurs.

"The primary purpose of this project is to create a situation where members of the community can come in and be part of what's going on in the school setting," he explained. "In working with Mr. Monroe, he and I both understand that until the history books tell the true and complete story, we in the community will be charged with teaching historical contributions that won't be recorded in history books for some time."

Another February project, and one that the chamber hopes continues throughout the year, is Story Hour. Chamber members are volunteering to spend some time on Saturday afternoons reading to young people. Story Hour is 2 p.m. Saturdays at the Northeast YMCA.

This, says Fuller, is called the "Grio Experience", based on an African villager charged with learning the history of his village and passing it on the young people so it wouldn't be lost.

Not only is the chamber trying to teach history to the younger members of the community, says Fuller, but also expose them to good storytelling and literature. He emphasizes that this is aimed not just at Afro-american children but all children in the community.

Yet another project of the chamber this month is sponsoring, with the Northeast YMCA, an exhibit of art by Brian Joseph of Austin. He has created "Bydee Art", based on the people of his native Trinidad and Tobago. Along with the drawings, he has created a coloring book and T shirts.

The exhibit will be at the Northeast YMCA on Feb. 16 and is free to the public.

"Art is a growing business, a money-making business," said Mrs. Fuller in noting that the chamber strives to support art as business. "We take the art we do, the things we create, and turn them into a viable business. Brian Joseph has produced coloring books and T shirts and turned them into a good business."

Rosenberg, the a marketing mastermind responsible for BofA's resurgence in consumer, commercial and real estate banking in California, is widely regarded as one of the best bankers of his generation.

"He's high energy, experienced and decisive," said Donald Crowley, a bank analyst with Keefe, Bruyette & Woods in San Francisco.

"He brings far more knowledge about bread-and-butter retail banking to the job than do most new chief executives."

But Rosenberg, 59 — who was elected president of both BofA and Bankamerica, its parent company, on Monday in preparation for his promotion to chairman and chief executive — said little about his plans for the bank.

"At Bank of America, there's going to be a continuation of what we've been doing for a long time," he said. "For the immediate future, it's just better banking service."

Rosenberg also intimated that the bank may become a bigger force in Europe.

Noting that BofA has major branches in Frankfurt, London, Paris and other European capitals, Rosenberg said, "We're in a better position to take advantage of European integration in 1992 than even some European banks."

Analysts also think Rosenberg will have a positive influence on BofA employees.

"For all that BofA's performance has improved it still feels like a cold, bureaucratic institution," said Thomas Brown, a bank analyst with PaineWebber in New York. "But Rosenberg's enthusiasm is contagious. I think BofA will actually become a fun place to work."

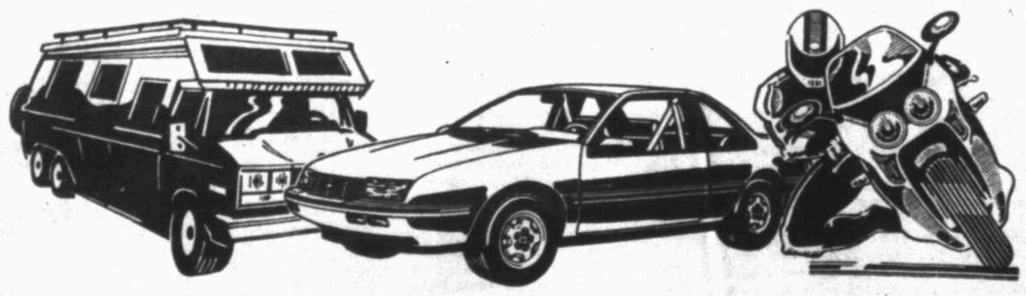

BankAmerica also announced a related series of organizational and management changes.

Rosenberg's California banking group will be split into two parts. Thomas Peterson, previously executive vice president for retail banking, will head the consumer banking group. Allen Sanborn, previously executive vice president for commercial real estate, will will head the commercial, business and real estate banking operation.

ANC not planning talks, leader says

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An African National Congress official said today his guerrilla movement has no plans to open negotiations with the government and demanded that President F.W. de Klerk make additional reforms.

"Nothing fundamentally has changed," Walter Sisulu told a news conference. "There is no question yet of direct discussions with the government."

Also today, Cabinet ministers said Nelson Mandela will be released "very soon" but that the date hasn't been decided yet.

The government officials and some ANC leaders also contradicted a statement during the weekend by Mandela's wife, Winnie, that the imprisoned ANC leader had set conditions for his release.

Thabo Mbeki, the ANC foreign affairs secretary, was quoted as saying after the guerrilla group met in Sweden that Mandela was demanding the end of the government's emergency restrictions and freedom for all imprisoned ANC members, including those convicted of terrorism, murder and other violent crimes.

"He is saying that, to begin the process of negotiations, this climate must be created," Mbeki was quoted as saying. "He has not made the demand that he will only come out once these conditions are met."

Sisulu, an old friend of Mandela's who was freed in October after 26 years in prison, said in Johannesburg that the ANC leadership was not aware of Mandela setting conditions for his release and wanted to contact him for clarification.

He also said the ANC would pursue its largely ineffectual guerrilla campaign despite de Klerk's decision to legalize the group, which had been banned since 1960.

"The armed struggle ... has been part and parcel of the struggle," said Sisulu, who also attended the Stockholm meeting. He described de Klerk's reforms as a "progressive" step, "but unfortunately it was only a half-measure."

He called on de Klerk to completely lift the state of emergency and remove all soldiers from the black townships.

In a speech Friday, de Klerk lifted bans or restrictions on more than 60 anti-apartheid groups.

Romania fighting AIDS in children

WORLD

By EDITH M. LEDERER

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — This country is in the throes of the first known epidemic of childhood AIDS caused by contaminated blood and the constant reuse of needles, a French humanitarian organization says.

Dr. Jacques Lebas, president of the Paris-based Doctors of the World, on Monday urged the international health community to provide Romania with disposable needles and blood-screening equipment.

"We know AIDS from people who take drugs, homosexuals, and heterosexuals in Africa, but for the first time in the history of AIDS, we are confronted with childhood AIDS," he said.

"It's an epidemic," he said. "It's on the level of famine. It's an international emergency."

Doctors said they do not know how many children have AIDS, but that at one hospital alone 33 of the 45 people who have died of the disease since 1985 were young children.

The Romanian outbreak is unusual because it does not involve the transmission of the virus from mother to fetus — the manner in which most children around the world are infected — but from contaminated blood transfusions and needles, he said.

"In the adult population, the incidence of AIDS is very low," Lebas said, adding that more than 98 percent of mothers of infected children do not carry the virus.

Blood transfusions are routinely used in Romania as a treatment for premature babies, sick children and the thousands of youngsters suffering from malnutrition, he said. But needles are in short supply and are routinely used hundreds of times, encouraging the spread of the virus.

Like other East bloc nations, Romania is short of disposable syringes and other medical supplies.

Lebas said Romania's AIDS outbreak was considered a "state secret" under Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, who was toppled in a bloody revolution in December and executed on Christmas Day.

Last month, Dr. Ludovic Paun of the infecticus diseases department at Bucharest's Victor Babes Hospital said 69 people treated there had developed AIDS since 1985, among them 53 young children. He said 33 of the 45 AIDS fatalities so far were children 3 or younger.

Lebas did not have updated statistics on AIDS deaths. But he said an initial screening of 1,025 children up to 3 years old at several hospitals and orphanages found 367 with the virus that causes AIDS — human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV.

Dr. Ion Patrascu, a researcher at the Institute of Virology, said 60 percent of the 283 children with HIV who are hospitalized have full-blown AIDS. The children in orphanages who tested positive for the virus will be checked this week to see whether they have developed the disease, he said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims vulnerable to a wide variety of infections and cancers. A person can carry the HIV virus for years without developing AIDS, but almost all cases lead to the disease.

The children tested were from Bucharest, Arad in western Romania, Focsani in the northeast and the southern Black Sea port city of Constanta, where the incidence was very high. Patrascu said tests would be carried out at hospitals and orphanages in Timisoara and other cities this week.

"This outbreak is unusual in the world," he said. "We need specialists to come here from the United States, France, Britain and other countries to decide what to do."

Doctors of the World signed a contract with the Romanian government on Monday to set up a laboratory in Bucharest to test for pediatric AIDS, he said.

But Romania has no money to carry out a proper epidemiological study to determine the real number of AIDS cases.

American plane crashes in Wales

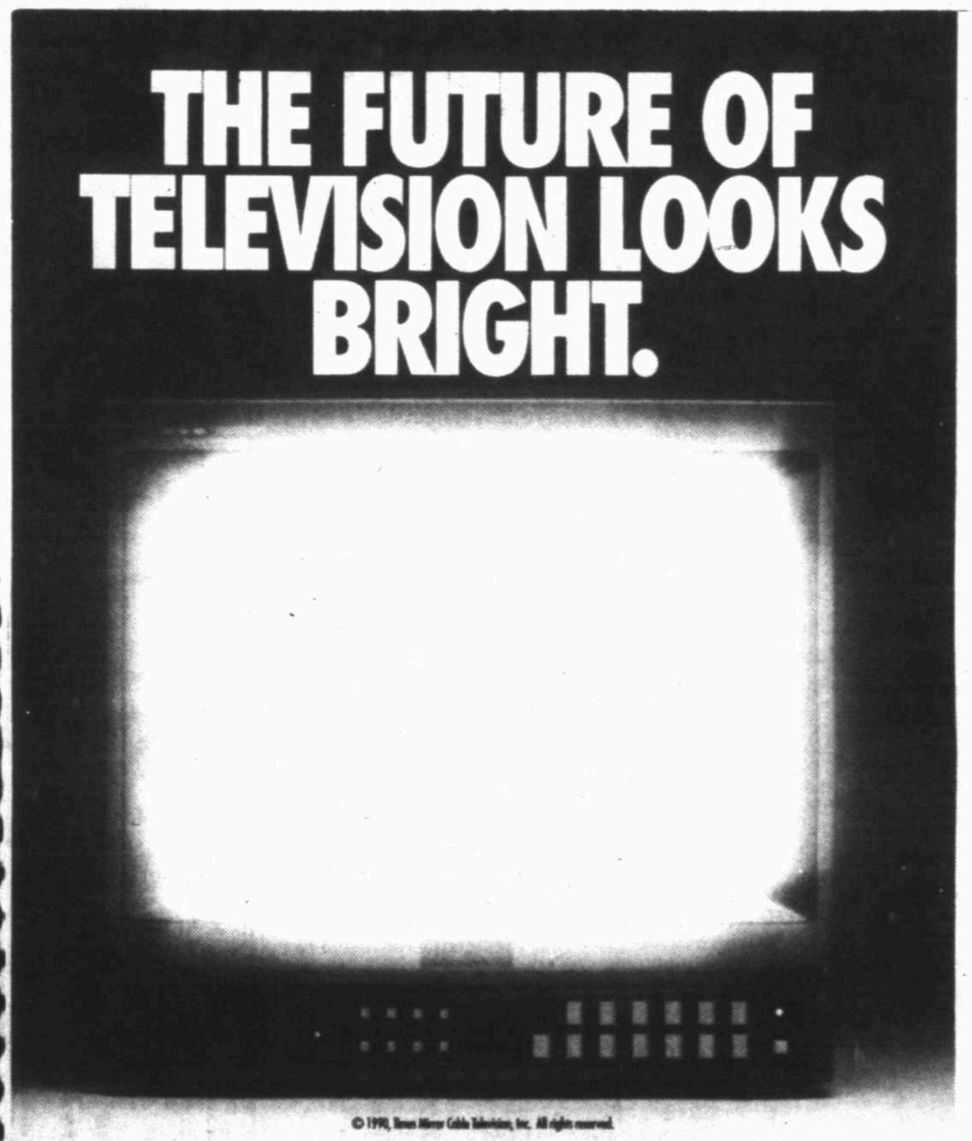

LONDON (AP) — A U.S. Air Force A-10 ground attack plane crashed in Wales today, one day after a USAF bomber crashed into the sea off the east coast, police said.

West Mercia Police said wreckage was found at Capel-y-ffin in the Black Mountains, about 8 miles south of Hay-on-Wye on the English border.

Donald Dick of the 3rd Air Force Headquarters said a search involving helicopters and a mountain rescue team continued for the pilot, the lone crew member.

USAF Capt. Raymond Martell said the A-10 was stationed at Royal Air Force base Alconbury, 20 miles northwest of the university town of Cambridge. He said it was reported missing after it lost radio contact.

The plane is designed to support troops by attacking enemy tanks and other ground targets. It is highly maneuverable at low speeds and low altitude.

Soviet party expected to ease grip, not surrender its power

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY

An AP News Analysis

MOSCOW (AP) — Although the Soviet Communist Party appears poised to give up its constitutionally guaranteed grip on power, it is unlikely to soon follow fraternal parties in Eastern Europe and actually surrender the reins of power.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev proposed to the party Central Committee on Monday that the Communists take the historic step of surrendering the guarantee they have in the constitution of being the country's "leading and guiding force."

Communists, he said, must earn the right to run the country.

In taking that step, Gorbachev acknowledged the power of the pro-democracy movement he unleashed when he began his reform program upon rising to power five years ago.

But he also understands that conditions are far different in his country than they are in other Eastern European nations where communist power crumbled, in some cases within a matter of weeks.

Gorbachev repeatedly has said that no other political forces exist in the Soviet Union that are capable of the wide-ranging activities in which the party engages. For years, the party ruthlessly repressed any effort to oppose it.

In addition, the Soviet Communist Party has been in power much longer than its fraternal former ruling parties in Eastern Europe — which were forced on former satellites by Josef Stalin and thus resented for nationalist reasons by the people of those countries.

Through the years of Stalin's absolute rule, the Soviet ruling party had no written guarantee of political power, and it was only in the last constitution, adopted in 1977, that its monopoly was assured.

Encouraged by Gorbachev's reforms, opposition to authoritarian Communist rule has grown in recent months. But the forces of dissent still are widely scattered across this vast country of more than 100 nationalities.

The most widespread phenomenon is the birth of People's Front political movements that have sprung up to press local demands for more autonomy.

The movements are strongest in the Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. They began there less than two years ago and are now leading to the formation of some small political parties that will contest local elections this spring.

Despite growing contacts between the People's Front movements of various republics and regions, local issues still are paramount to the groups and no cohesive national organization or program has been established.

In the Baltics, the People's Front organizations increasingly are setting their sights on complete independence from the Russian-ruled Soviet Union.

Another organization, the Democratic Platform, has united disgruntled Communists who are close to declaring the party incapable of reform and forming a social democratic party.

Democratic Platform joined with other groups to organize a huge rally in Moscow on Sunday, the eve of the Central Committee meeting, and demanded that the party give up its claim to exclusive power.

Its founding conference in Moscow in mid-January drew representatives from many Soviet cities, but the organization lacks money and access to official media — advantages enjoyed by the Communist Party.

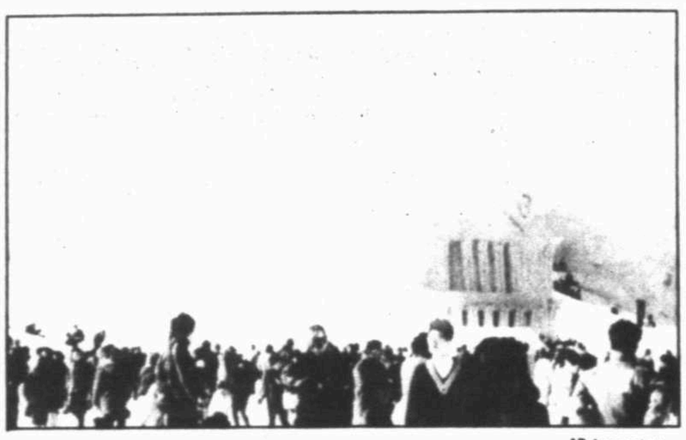

Many Communist leaders are likely to take a drubbing in the local elections this spring, repeating the embarrassing experience of balloting last March that were the country's first contested national elections in seven decades.

However, because of what opposition members called the unfair rules of the game, about 80 percent of those elected to the Congress of People's Deputies were party members.

Communist officials are faced not so much with the prospect of losing power to an organized opposition as they are with losing their cohesiveness and the trust of the people.

They are blamed for the dismal state of the economy, which has wrought widespread consumer shortages, and resented for enjoying a higher standard of living than most Soviets by virtue of their power.

Under Gorbachev's reform program, local and regional Communist officials are going to have to give up the perks and privilege if they wish to earn the public trust.

Fighting continues in Christian enclave

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Christian factions blasted each other with howitzers and rockets today as France tried to halt the ferocious struggle for control of Lebanon's Christian heartland.

Police said at least 22 people were killed and more than 50 wounded in the fighting today between troops loyal to Gen. Michel Aoun and the Lebanese Forces militia of Samir Geagea, bringing the overall toll to at least 299 killed and 1,087 wounded.

Most of the casualties have been civilians caught in the cross-fire.

Aoun's command said its troops had "crushed the last pockets of resistance" among the Lebanese Forces in the northern suburb of Dbaye.

The Lebanese Forces conceded the loss in a communique, saying its fighters were ordered to redeploy north of Dbaye. It said Aoun's "hysteric shelling" transformed Dbaye into "ruins."

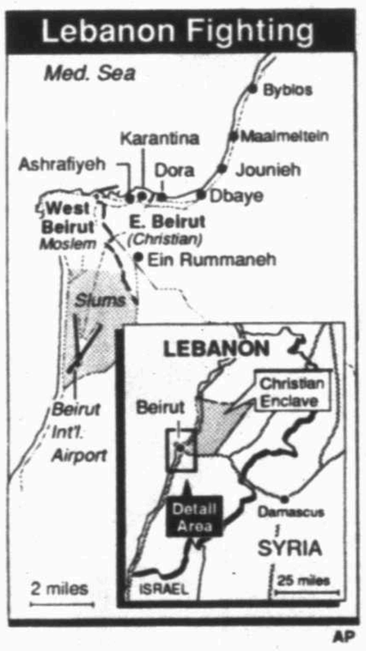

The Hotel Dieu Hospital, the largest in Christian east Beirut, issued a statement saying its morgue was packed with decomposing bodies, and the situation was worsened by a power failure.

"We find ourselves obliged to bury the victims in a mass grave in Ashrafiyeh Wednesday if no one shows up to collect them," the hospital said in a statement broadcast by the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio.

The international committee of the Red Cross, French humanitarian minister Bernard Kouchner and Maronite Catholic patriarch Nasrallah Sfeir issued separate calls for an immediate cease-fire.

Today's barrages targeted the militia-controlled residential districts of Ashrafiyeh, Jemmayzeh, Karantina and Ein Rummaneh, according to the police spokesman.

He said Geagea's gunners were responding by shelling the Aoun-held districts of Sin el-Fil, Furn el-Shubbak, Hazmiyeh and Fayadiyeh as well as the eastern suburb of Baabda, which houses the general' headquarters.

AP

Heavy rains helped put out small fires in east Beirut, but palls of thick, black smoke billowed out over the Mediterranean from blazing fuel and cooking gas depots in the Aoun-held Dora district on the northern edge of east Beirut.

Aoun's tanks stormed through Lebanese Forces' defenses in Dbaye Monday, achieving the first significant gain in the showdown for control of the 310-square-mile Christian enclave, which encompasses east Beirut and communities to the north.

The thud of shell explosions echoed across Beirut.

"The devil is behind these violations," said Archbishop Ronald Abi Nader, a representative of Maronite patriarch Sfeir, who has worked on a series of ill-fated cease-fire attempts.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Romanians get taste of free enterprise

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The interim government is permitting more free enterprise than ever allowed in 45 years of Communist rule under a new decree, but it is for now keeping large enterprises in the hands of the state.

"The development of free initiative ... is meant to improve and develop and vary products and services under free-market circumstances," said the National Salvation Front.

The front's 11-member executive bureau has been ruling Romania since the bloody December revolution that toppled Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

The decree signed Monday by interim President Ion Iliescu, read on state-run television, will allow privately-owned businesses with up to 20 employees. The law, which takes effect immediately, is aimed at improving the living standards of Romania's population of 23 million by offering a wider assortment of goods and services.

Deal for hostages reported

PARIS (AP) — A newspaper has reported that Iran wants France to free an imprisoned Iranian before it will seek the release of American hostages in Lebanon.

Anis Naccache is serving a life term for the attempted assissination of a former Iranian prime minister. The conservative daily Le Figaro reported Monday that President Francois Mitterrand may trim the sentence to 20 years, making Naccache eligible for parole in 1991, when he will have served 10 years.

Le Figaro, citing sources close to the Foreign Ministry, said President Bush told Mitterrand that Iran asked for Naccache's release as a condition for intervening with Iranian-backed extremist groups believed holding the captives.

"President Bush personally telephoned Francois Mitterrand to inform him of an unexpected change during talks that the Americans held with Tehran to obtain the liberation of their countrymen," the newspaper said.

Rooms in two homes sealed

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers sealed rooms in two Palestinian homes today in a new army policy that lets authorities close all or part of houses whose residents are suspected of throwing stones in the uprising.

Another Palestinian was reported killed today when troops opened fire on stone throwers in the West Bank.

The new policy, which could affect hundreds of families in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, drew immediate criticism from civil rights groups and liberal politicians, who said the measure amounted to collective punishment.

In the nearly 26-month-old uprising, the army has razed or sealed hundreds of homes to punish Arabs suspected of fire bombings or serious attacks. But the penalty was not used for stone throwing, the most common tactic of teen-agers at the forefront of the uprising against Israeli occupation.

Ex-official commits suicide

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A former high-ranking Communist official ousted during the November revolution for his part in crushing Czechoslovakia's 1968 reforms has committed suicide, the state news agency said today.

The body of Viliam Salgovic, 70, was found by his wife hanging in the laundry room of his home in the Slovak capital Bratislava late Monday, CTK said. A preliminary investigation suggested Salgovic acted alone, it added.

Salgovic, a former member of Slovakia's Communist party Politburo, was the first senior member of the leadership that crushed reform after 1968 known to have committed suicide following last fall's peaceful revolution.

U.S. endorses German reunification

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The Bush administration today embraced as a "pretty good" idea a proposal by West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher for reunification with East Germany.

A senior U.S. official traveling with Secretary of State James A. Baker III said the French government also seemed taken with Genscher's plan to keep Germany in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but without moving western troops into what is now East Germany.

Genscher's proposal also would permit the Soviet Union to keep forces in what is now East Germany, where some 390,000 are now based. How long they might remain is not clear.

Baker discussed the fast-moving German situation with French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas at a refueling stop in Shannon, Ireland, and then flew to Prague for talks with leaders of Czechoslovakia's "velvet revolution" from hard-line communism toward democracy.

The U.S. official, who spoke with reporters on condition that his name not be used, said, "We think that proposal — in terms of not having NATO forces move farther east — is a pretty good one."

The official said one of the virtues of Genscher's plan is that it would maintain Germany in NATO — a condition set down by Baker on reunification. "We think that is a very positive contribution," the official said.

Asked about Dumas' appraisal of the plan, the official said: "He didn't specifically address that issue, but I'd say from the tone of it, it was positive. He continues to believe NATO has a very positive role" in Germany.

The support given Genscher's approach was noteworthy because, until now, the Bush administration had been noncommittal about the future of the two Germanies.

WE NEED YOUR HELP: VA welcomes comments concerning the condition of our properties. Any improprieties should be reported to the VA Regional Office at 817-757-6869.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers when requested on the Cash Sale Addendum to Offer to Purchase. However, the combined loan discount points, buyers' closing costs to be paid by VA and the discount for cash may not exceed 10 percent of the term list price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 9.5 percent (APR 9.6 percent).

Purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing (Term Sales) must have VA Form 26-6705B, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Verification of Employment/Income, as outlined in Sales of VA-Acquired Properties Manual, attached to their VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale. Effective June 8, 1988, all credit underwriting for purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing is being referred to Miller and Davis PC. All brokers are reminded to refer to PM letter #17-88 dated May 25, 1988, outlining these new procedures. Purchase offers not accompanied by the required employment/income verification WILL RESULT IN REJECTION OF THE PURCHASE OFFER.

Prior approval will be required by VA for the transfer of a property secured by a vendee loan if the loan is not paid in full as part of the transfer. Public Law 100-689 also permits VA to charge a one-half of 1 percent funding fee for the transfer as well as a fee for processing the approval of the transfer.

VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account the $500 earnest money deposit. The Earnest Money Agreement (Exhibit "H") must be signed by the purchaser(s) and submitted along with the VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on all offers. The $500 earnest money deposit will be remitted to Miller and Davis PC upon acceptance of the offer. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the earnest money deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the purchaser will be required to forfeit the earnest money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property prior to submission of an offer to purchase. VA pays 6% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:
